CHAPTER XXXVIII
FOUND AT LAST.

"An unmistakable case of some," laughs Len. "Why, my dear boy, you must have been walking in your sleep."

"Well, suppose I was," Charley rather reluctantly admits; "but depend upon it, that dream, if it was a dream, was sent to me for some purpose. I mean to see what is behind that panel in spite of all the ridicule and skepticism in the world."

As a matter of course we all laugh at him for his superstition; but Charley is not to be moved from his purpose, and, as soon as breakfast is over, Len and he, armed with hammer and chisel, go upstairs to carry it out, with all the rest of us following in their wake to see what comes of it.

Two or three smart taps from Len's hammer, and a couple of wrenches from Charley's chisel, suffice to displace the worm-eaten old board, that, flying suddenly back from its place on a spring, reveals to our astonished eyes a small cupboardlike aperture in the wall—a roughly finished recess, in the middle of which stands a small tin box, which, on being examined, proves to contain but one article: a large, legal-looking document, with some faded writing on the outside.

"Good Heavens! Why, it is the will—the long-lost will! Squire Rutherford's will!" exclaims Len, who, having been the first to lay hands on the strangely discovered paper, drops it as suddenly as if it were a red hot coal.

"It is the will, sure enough!" exclaims my husband, who, pale as death, stoops to pick it up. Thank Heaven, it has come to light at last!

"Thanks to your dream, old fellow, or whatever it was," Leonard replies, in a bewildered sort of way.

"Thanks to my dream, if it was a dream," Charley returns. "And if it was, who shall say it has been sent in vain? The phantom figure that led me into this room last night wore the features of Squire Rutherford's dead-and-gone sister, Mrs. Erroll, whose portrait is preserved by her son, Mr. Erroll, the master of the Priory. Len, my dear fellow," he adds, less agitated than any of us by what has happened, "let me be the first to congratulate you on your good fortune. You are restored to your rights—the Priory is yours at last."

Strangely as it has come about, it is quite true. The long-hidden will has, indeed, come to light at last. The paper which Len, looking very much more bewildered than elated, stands holding in his trembling fingers, is the very deed by which Squire Rutherford's great property was bequeathed to my mother and her children so long ago.

"It is all right enough," Warden remarks, glancing it over with a professional eye. "There will be no difficulty about proving that; there can be no mistake. Len—the Priory is yours, as, indeed, it always has been."

"How I wonder what Gwendolen Clitheroe—I beg her pardon, Mrs. Erroll—will say to all this?" I remark, with a little burst of womanly triumph, as I think of the humiliation in store for that faithless beauty, who has sold herself to a miserable, decrepit, old man, for the sake of this very position, which, had she only remained true to poor Len, would have come to her now by right.

"I wonder how Mr. Erroll will take it? It will be a blow for him and his son," Len remarks, when, a little recovered from our surprise, we sit down in the long-disused room to discuss the recovery of the will in all its bearings. "Heriot Erroll will be sorry enough to hear of this."

"On the contrary, no man living will rejoice in your good fortune more sincerely than Heriot Erroll," my husband replies, turning toward him with a quiet earnestness in his manner that puzzles us all. "Don't look at me so incredulously, Len," he adds, "for I have a difficult confession to make, as Warden will tell you. Heriot Erroll stands before you!

"Forgive the deception I have practiced upon you all—a deception that was pursued from no unworthy motive, however. And the time has come when I wish you to know me for what I am—the son of the man who has so long usurped your rights—and the grandson of the woman who, there can be no doubt, stole that will and concealed it for her own wicked purposes."

"I don't think so," returned Mr. Chalfont, with a faint smile. "I sized you up the moment you entered the room. I'm not an educated man, as you know well enough; there was no Board School in my young days; but I've got one useful little gift, and that is the knack of sizing a man up within five minutes. It's been a very useful gift to me, Mr. Chalfont, and I've got to believe in it and rely on it. I don't think you're the man to play it low down for a dinner or the chance of getting a parcel of shares cheap. Another thing: I'm not an ambitious man in the ordinary sense of the word; but I don't like making mistakes; I don't like to see ladies and gentlemen I'm thrown amongst sniggering at some little slip of mine. I want some one to teach me the ropes and see that I handle 'em properly, to keep an eye on me and set me on the bee-line when I look like going astray. Now, I want a gentleman, and I know you're one—that I sized up amongst other things when you came in."

"Much obliged," said Jack, simply.

"Yes. Then I was drawn by your name; seemed to me that, though there was no relationship, it would be rather nice to have a man, in a kind of bear-leader, with the same name. Just a fancy, of course; but fancy goes a long way with the cutest of us. Now, I understand you've no occupation?"

"Oh, well, I'm called to the Bar," said Jack, modestly.

"I know that game; there's precious little in it, as a rule. It's a chancy thing, and I'm about to offer you something like a certainty. Look here, Mr. John—"

"Try 'Jack,' Mr. Chalfont," said

"I've been taking chances all my life," said the millionaire, grimly, "and, as you see, they've turned up right. It's you who are taking chances. I may have a devil of a temper. In fact, I have. You might find the job too stiff a one and get 'fed up' with it? Isn't that what you swells say? Come, is it a bargain—Jack?"

Jack swung round and held out his hand. He was an impressive young man, and not a little moved.

"It's a bargain, Mr. Chalfont," he said; "and, of course, if you find that it doesn't pan out as you expected, you'll chuck it."

"Same with you," said Mr. Chalfont, grasping in his great hand Jack's equally strong, but more shapely paw.

"Now, look here. I'm a man of action. What I mean is that, when I make up my mind to do a thing, I do it at once. You go back to your chambers, pack up your duds, or as many of 'em as you can, and send 'em down to Chertson. That's my place in Surrey. Then you come here again at five o'clock, and we'll go down in my car. Your rooms are prepared for you, because I told them you were coming. Oh, yes, I knew you would consent. Well, five o'clock, then—Jack."

To Keep Fit

The best work is demanded from all at this crisis in the world's history. We can't do our best when the system is full of poisons.

The liver and kidneys must be kept active so that the blood will be properly filtered. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the most effective regulators of these important organs.

They will help you to keep well and active and to do your best work.

Jack: "you'll find it easier to pronounce, and I should prefer it. My friends all call me Jack."

"I'm much obliged to you," said Mr. Chalfont, his voice softening slightly.

"Look here, I'm going to make you an offer. You come to me—not as a secretary; I've got a very good chap already, a man like a walking dictionary, complete letter-writer, and ready reckoner all in one. But he's just a machine; I've got machines all round me, and I don't want another one. No; what I want is a friend, a pal, who'll set me straight without sneering up his sleeve at me. You come to me, live with me, I mean, and take a hand in this society business, and I'll treat you—well, like a pal. Of course, you shall have free quarters at my place in Surrey and the other houses I've got—some of 'em I've scarcely been into—and I'll make you an allowance—mind, I don't call it salary!—and I'll treat you, if you'll let me, as if you were a near relation; we'll see how near as we go on."

Jack had grown red, very naturally, at this astounding proposal; he could find no words, and the millionaire continued to explain his proposition.

"I suent a lot of money—I don't know exactly how much—you'll have to spend money, and I'll put the allowance at a thousand a year to begin with; of course, we'll make it more if it's necessary."

Jack rose and went to the window, and, with his back to this strange man, said, with suppressed agitation:

"Look here, Mr. Chalfont, this is an extraordinary offer you're making me. I desay a thousand a year doesn't seem much to you, but it's a very large sum to me, who have just about thirty shillings in my pocket and up to my neck in debt."

"We'll pay the debts; let me know the amount," cut in Mr. Chalfont, laconically.

"And another thing," continued Jack, "you don't know anything about me. Oh, I know you've been making inquiries as to my family and way of life, but with all your cuteness in reckoning people up you don't really know what kind of a chap I am. Oh, I'm decent enough; I shouldn't steal the plate or get drunk, but I may have the devil's temper, and—and the rest of it. Well, what I mean is, don't you think you're taking too many chances, Mr. Chalfont?"

"I've been taking chances all my life," said the millionaire, grimly, "and, as you see, they've turned up right. It's you who are taking chances. I may have a devil of a temper. In fact, I have. You might find the job too stiff a one and get 'fed up' with it? Isn't that what you swells say? Come, is it a bargain—Jack?"

Now, I want a gentleman, and I know you're one—that I sized up amongst other things when you came in."

"Much obliged," said Jack, simply.

"Yes. Then I was drawn by your name; seemed to me that, though there was no relationship, it would be rather nice to have a man, in a kind of bear-leader, with the same name. Just a fancy, of course; but fancy goes a long way with the cutest of us. Now, I understand you've no occupation?"

"Oh, well, I'm called to the Bar," said Jack, modestly.

"I know that game; there's precious little in it, as a rule. It's a chancy thing, and I'm about to offer you something like a certainty. Look here, Mr. John—"

WAR REVIEW.

The American First Army has carried out with the utmost despatch the initial task assigned to it. This task was the leveling of the famous St. Mihiel salient in Lorraine, and in a little more than 24 hours not alone had the work been accomplished, but General Pershing's men had all the important towns, villages and strategic positions in the sector within their hands, and were standing on the banks of the Moselle River at Pagny looking across the stream into German territory, and the southern outer fortifications of Metz, the great German stronghold in Lorraine, were only four miles distant. Large numbers of Germans had been taken prisoners. More than 12,000 have been counted and others are still on their way back to the prisoner cages. Many guns and machine guns and tons on tons of ammunition and other war stores are in American hands. From Hattenville, situated in the foothills of the heights of the Meuse on the north, across the salient eastward to Pagny, the Americans have closed the mouth of the big sack that extended southward to St. Mihiel, trapping within it by their fast advance all the enemy forces who failed to take refuge in flight when the great bombardment of Thursday morning heralded the approach of the offensive. In addition, along the eastern side of the heights north of Hattenville, the Americans have debouched from the hill region and are astride the railroad running from Commercy to Verdun. Likewise the Thiaucourt-Metz and Nancy-Metz railways are in American hands. Beginning in the northwest and crossing the salient eastward, Les Eparges, Hattenville, Pagny and Pagny and all the ground lying between them, are in American hands. The towns of Vigennes, Thiaucourt, Pont à Mousson and St. Mihiel are far in the rear of the present line. Metz, the dominating height in the centre of the salient, and from which much trouble had been expected, fell without fighting. Among the numerous prisoners taken were men from Austro-Hungarian armies. Although the operation of the Americans has been described as having limited objectives, it nevertheless bears on the future of the war. From the straightened line growing out of the St. Mihiel salient the Americans now are in a splendid position to act with their brothers in arms on sectors eastward when the time is ripe for a stroke on Germany direct. Also they now are aligned on territory from which it is possible to go behind both the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, and thus make null the reported plans of the Germans to stabilize their front along the Meuse should they be unable to hold the Allies in the west in check. Already Allied airmen are heavily bombing the Moselle region around Metz and its outlying fortifications, having dropped many tons of bombs on the strategic railways leading from the great fortress, and it seemingly is not without reason to suspect that with the apparent supremacy in the air, Metz and surrounding country henceforth is to be badly harassed by Allied flying squadrons. Meanwhile the manoeuvres on the west front around Cambrai and St. Quentin should not be lost sight of by the Allies. Here the British and French are daily enlarging their efforts in the process of outflanking and capturing these two important towns, which are all but within their grasp. WAR REVIEW.

The American First Army has carried out with the utmost despatch the initial task assigned to it. This task was the levelling of the famous St. Mihiel salient in Lorraine, and in a little more than 24 hours not alone had the work been accomplished, but General Pershing's men had all the important towns, villages and strategic positions in the sector within their hands, and were standing on the banks of the Moselle River at Pagny looking across the stream into German territory, and the southern outer fortifications of Metz, the great German stronghold in Lorraine, were only four miles distant. From Hattenville, situated in the foothills of the heights of the Meuse on the north, across the salient eastward to Pagny, the Americans have closed, the mouth of the big sack that extended southward to St. Mihiel, trapping within it by their fast advance all the enemy forces who failed to take refuge in flight when the great bombardment of Thursday morning heralded the approach of the offensive. In addition, along the eastern side of the heights north of Hattenville, the Americans have debouched from the hill region and are astride the railroad running from Commercy to Verdun. Likewise the Thiécourt-Metz and Nancy-Metz railways are in American hands. Beginning in the northwest and crossing the salient eastward, Les Eparges, Hattenville, Preny and Pagny and all the ground lying between them, are in American hands. The towns of Vigonville, Thiécourt, Pont-a-Mousson and St. Mihiel are far in the rear of the present line. Metz, the dominating height in the centre of the salient and from which much trouble had been expected, fell without fighting. Among the numerous prisoners taken were men from Austro-Hungarian armies. Although the operation of the Americans has been described as having limited objectives, it nevertheless cannot but have a more important bearing on the future of the war. From the straightened line growing out of the St. Mihiel salient the Americans now are in a splendid position to act with their brothers in arms on the eastern side of the salient. It is a stroke on Germany direct. Also they now are aligned on territory from which it is possible to go behind both the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, and thus make null the reported plans of the Germans to stabilize their front along the Meuse should they be unable to hold the Allies in the west in check. Already Allied armies are heavily bombing the Moselle region around Metz and its outlying fortifications, having dropped many tons of bombs on the strategic railways leading from the great fortress, and it is not without reason to expect that with the apparent suppression in the air, Metz and surrounding country henceforth is to be badly harassed by Allied flying squadrons. Meanwhile the manoeuvres on the West front around Cambrai and St. Quentin should not be lost sight of by reason of the present American offensive. Here the British and French are daily enlarging their efforts in the process of outflanking and capturing these two important towns, which are still but within their grasp. Farther to the north in Flanders the British also are keeping up their encroachments in the region of LaBassee and Armentieres, both of which places are imperilled.

BAGGING THE HUNS.

LONDON, Sept. 13. The Americans are reported to have captured Vigneulle, seven and a half miles south of Livray through which the former line ran. General Pershing's troops also are said to have captured Beney, Hendicourt and the Bois de Thiécourt. If these places really have fallen the neck of the St. Mihiel salient line has been narrowed to less than six miles, and if the two German divisions reported last night to be in the salient still are there, it is decidedly improbable that they will be able to get away. General Pershing's troops so far have captured 9,500 prisoners and have taken sixty German guns. The Germans are now blowing up the ammunition dumps at Hattenville and Domboux, on the west side of the St. Mihiel salient where country is much more difficult and where the German resistance has been more determined. The Americans have made an advance of three miles on a twelve mile front.

PERSHING'S GREAT WORK.

LONDON, Sept. 13. All the villages in the St. Mihiel salient were captured by the Americans and the front in this sector was reduced from some forty miles to a little under twenty miles. The latest news from the St. Mihiel sector is that the battle line runs directly from Pagny on the Moselle River to Hattenville, then along the foot of heights of the Meuse. Pagny is a town on the Moselle River to Hattenville and of Germany. In addition to the 12,000 prisoners who have been counted large numbers of Germans are still coming in. Most of the villages captured by the Americans in the St. Mihiel salient were left in good condition by the Germans. The town of St. Mihiel was practically undamaged. The Germans left the railroad from Verdun to Commercy, Toul and Nancy intact. The operation of the Americans must be regarded as a big local success. All the objectives were reached.

NO TIME FOR RESISTANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 13. General Pershing's forces in their attack on the southern side of the St. Mihiel salient have advanced for a distance of eight miles. The assault was made on a front of fourteen miles. The Americans this morning were making rapid progress in the continuation of their drive. German prisoners say the American attack was expected, but that it was delivered so rapidly that they had no time to put up a stubborn resistance when they were ordered to Pannes, which was energetically defended by the Germans, but was easily captured by the Americans.

BRITISH SUCCESSES.

LONDON, Sept. 13. German troops last night delivered an attack with the co-operation of airplanes on the town of Havrincourt, southwest of Cambrai, recently taken by the British. The attack was repulsed with great loss Field Marshal Haig announced in the official statement to-day. Further south on the front, opposite St. Quentin the British have gained possession of Holmon wood. A German attack opposite Moeuvres on the canal, due west of Cambrai, failed completely. British troops have captured the town of Jeancourt in the St. Quentin sector north of Verdun.

ST. MIHIEL SALIENT WIPED OUT.

WITH THE AMERICANS IN LORRAINE, Sept. 13.—The St. Mihiel salient has been wiped out and the enemy forces are now virtually with their backs on the famous Wotan Hindenburg line with the Americans and French paralleling them closely from Verdun to the Moselle. The line now extends past Norroy, Jaulny, St. Benoit, Hattenville, Hannonville and Herberville.

POST WAR PREPARATIONS.

PARIS, Sept. 13. A despatch from Geneva states the French government has renounced the Franco-Swiss commercial convention of 1906. It is explained that this is due to the Entente policy to put an end to all commercial treaties in which the most favored nation clause exists with a view to preventing the enemy from benefiting after the war.

PUSHING AHEAD.

LONDON, Sept. 13. (Official).—In Flanders the British made progress pushing ahead west of Auchy in the Lebassee region.

THE PRUSSIAN DIET.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 13. The Government is firmly decided to dissolve the Prussian Diet if no agreement is reached in the franchise reform question according to the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

BASEBALLERS BENEFIT.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 13. The players' pool derived from the world's series will be increased in the near future, by action by the National and American League, members of the Chicago National League said to-day, for the purpose of giving the men a larger remuneration than they received under the agreement framed last winter before it was known how serious an effect the war would have on baseball.

NEXT YEAR'S ARMY.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., Sept. 13. The German people ought to know that if they had dreamed of getting better peace terms from the Entente than those formulated last January they were mistaken, said General Jan Christian Smuts, member of the British Council, in an address on being given the freedom of the city to-day. The American army next year would be bigger than the British and French armies combined, General Smuts declared, and would be employed in a great offensive effort then.

RAILWAY HORROR.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 13. Forty persons were killed and between 100 and 150 others injured to-day in a railway accident near Woop, eight miles southeast of Amsterdam. An embankment collapsed, owing to the recent rain, and almost the entire train fell down the steep side.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 13. Northwest of St. Quentin the British have gained additional ground around Vermande and Jeancourt, and in the region of LaBassee have made further progress according to the official communication issued to-night. In the latter region territory given the British a wide range over the outlying districts has been reached. The text of the communication follows: In the Vermande and Jeancourt sectors northwest of St. Quentin our troops have gained ground in contact with the enemy, and advanced detachments have taken prisoners. Southwest of LaBassee our progress has continued. In spite of the opposition from the hostile machine gunners our troops have secured possession of Fosselebecque and the slag heap adjoining it. This slag heap known as the dump, forms an important local feature giving wide observation over the surrounding country. To the north of it our troops hold the German trench immediately west of Auchy Les LaBassee and are pressing forward into the village. We captured a few prisoners during the night in the neighborhood of Sellobeke Lake.

RUSSIAN PRINCE ARRESTED. LONDON, Sept. 13. Prince Peter Alexievitch Kropotkin has been arrested at Petrograd charged with participating in an English conspiracy against the Bolshevik government, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

Prince Peter Alexievitch Kropotkin, famous as a scientist and geographer, was arrested in 1917 for his revolutionary activity and confined in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, from which he made his escape in 1876. After living in many countries mostly in England the Prince was enabled to return to Russia in 1916 by an amnesty of the then Emperor Nicholas. The Prince has been outspoken in his antagonism to the Bolshevik and early in January of this year a report was received in New York that he had been arrested, but this report lacked confirmation.

YANKS GO OVER THE TOP.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept. 13. (By the A.P.)—The Allied offensive on the western front for the first time is dominated by America, the French co-operating and in a military zone it is regarded as a continuing phase of the battle which began early last summer. Newton D. Baker, American Secretary of War with several other notables, witnessed the beginning of the battle from the vantage point of a French fort. The front over which the attack was made was so extended that the brilliant bands of vivid light soon stretched from far eastward to westward, lighting up the clouds. Soon there began to arise star shells, signal rockets and flares thrown up by the enemy, to betray the Germans should they leave their trenches suddenly to begin an infantry attack. To this general color scheme there was soon added a reddish glow as ammunition dumps exploded and buildings set on fire behind the enemy lines, began to blaze, and an ammunition dump, giving off this color, exploded about 4 o'clock. At 5 o'clock the thunder of the guns accompanying the glare of the light stopped, and in the sudden silence the Americans went over the top. All along the lines could be heard the chattering of German machine guns and then suddenly the thunder commenced again, when a barrage was laid down to protect the soldiers as they approached the German trenches.

LILLE BEING EVACUATED.

LONDON, Sept. 13. Numerous fugitives from the city of Lille are reported by Belgian newspapers to be arriving at Malines and Antwerp, according to a despatch from Amsterdam to the Central News Agency. Apparently Lille is being evacuated by the Germans.

PENETRATED HUN POSITIONS.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 13. (By the A.P.)—British forces in their advance yesterday in the Havrincourt sector, south west of Cambrai, penetrated the German positions in some places for a depth of 2,000 yards.

AMERICANS GOING SOME.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept. 13. (By the A.P.)—General Pershing's troops continued their steady advance against the St. Mihiel salient throughout the night. They reached and even passed the objectives set for them. Prisoners continue to pour in.

LAVY CAPTURED.

PARIS, Sept. 13. The American attacks in the region of St. Mihiel are continuing successfully the French War Office announced to-day.

Neat Work.

Probably not many of our cousins in the south will boast of the St. Mihiel victory that it is "the American way of doing things," but outsiders will confess that there is a characteristic snap about it. We can adopt a simile from the ring. Hitherto only the American lightweights had given an account of themselves, though that a very creditable one! Now for the first time their heavyweights enter the ropes, and before the formal preliminaries are scarce finished sends his opponent sprawling to the floor from a terrific right cut to the jaw. It is not the count-out yet, but the other man is badly shaken.

When we recall how this sharply projecting salient has been for four years an ugly threat against the rear of Verdun, and the scene of more than one costly French failure, we can see reflected in the clean, quick sweeps of the American victory the complete transference of the initiative and striking power to the hands of the Allies. It is true that the salient was useful to the enemy for offensive purposes only, and could be turned—as the event has now proved—into a danger to an army defending itself from attack, but that does not lessen either the credit or the effect of Pershing's achievement. The former will be admitted ungrudgingly by an admiring world, not least by the enemy, who now knows the strength of the new foe he so lately derided; as to the latter there will be much speculation and many theories.

What was Foch's object in ordering this coup, so brilliantly and swiftly executed? The blotting out of the salient and the capture of so many prisoners, guns and stores, gratifying as these are, were probably not the whole or the chief part of it. This morning's message indicates a more likely design, where it points out that Pershing's forces now command the stretches of Meuse and Moselle in this region. The gain is therefore, mostly tactical for the present, but there is also fine strategy in this idea of out-flanking and undermining the enemy's line of defence before it has begun to move towards it.

Military critics will watch this part of the line with interest in the next few days, when Foch's plans will reveal themselves. It is hardly likely that the attack will continue, with Metz as its object, tempting though such a project would be. But it is possible, and if the Allied commander has the necessary forces at his disposal and is confident of his chances of success, we may be seeing merely the initiation of a strategy so broad and daring as to make the observer catch his breath. It is generally accepted that if the Hindenburg line is breached the Germans will retire to prepared defences along the Meuse; but what if Foch is ready to turn those defences when they are reached, or has already done so? Such tactics would be exactly consistent with Foch's methods, which aim, not at using up forces in an attempt to break through, but at separate and distant blows which keep the enemy's line tight and mobile until in the end they disintegrate it completely.

A further and most valuable result can be anticipated from this new move. There has been increasing evidence of late that the Germans, seeing their fine reserves being rapidly exhausted, have been reinforcing the larger points with forces drawn lastly from other parts of the line, that is, from the eastern end. That manoeuvre has received a rude check: there is hardly a single part of the line from Switzerland to the sea which is not now threatened and cannot be weakened except at a great risk. That is exactly what Foch is aiming at, and when the process has been carried far enough the end will be in sight.

LADY-UNION DANCE.—At Thursday evening's meeting of the Ladies' branch, M.I.W.A., arrangements for a dance, to be held Monday night at the British Hall, were made. The T. A. band will furnish music, and Messrs. E. J. Whitty, F. Woods, J. Cahill, Messrs. Bennett and Healey will act as their managers. Tickets are going rapidly, and a large attendance is expected.

How Capt. Rendell Won the M. C.

The following extract from "Honors and Awards" will explain how Capt. Herbert Rendell gained his medal: "For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He was in command of a strong point which was very heavily bombarded. When his trench was entirely blown in, he withdrew his survivors to a neighbouring trench. When the shelling ceased, he led a bombing party, drove out the enemy, and re-established the position. By his initiative and determination he saved a vital position."

Capt. C. Harris

AWARDED MILITARY CROSS.

Word has just been received that Capt. Chester Harris, son of S. Harris, Esq., of Grand Bank, has been awarded the Military Cross for distinguished service in France. Capt. Harris who is serving with the R.A.M.C., has been in France for over two years past, but recently was transferred to Salonika where at present he is in charge of several wards in a base hospital. Previous to entering the army this officer was a medical student at Edinburgh University, having graduated there in 1915.

City Defeats Grand Falls.

Grand Falls, Sept. 13.—Hall successfully writhed the City to victory to-day against Slocum, by a score of nineteen runs to fifteen. The weather was ideal. In the first half of the 15th innings, with St. John's leading by twelve to five, Grand Falls started a batting feat, making seven runs and tying the score, but costly errors in the 7th allowed the City big leads. The feature of the game was Braxie's taking one three-bagger and two two-baggers.
Mr. J. A. Havermale, President of the City League, received the following message from Manager Montgomery of the City team: "Exciting and fast game. St. John's, 19; Grand Falls, 15. Score a tie in 7th innings.—Daily News."

NEARLY DROWNED.—Early this morning, the watchman at Job Bros., reported to the police station that one of three men, who were drunk on the wharf, had fallen overboard, and had been barely saved in time by his companions in stimulation. Head Constable Peet and two officers went to the scene to find the rescued man comfortably stowed away in the captain's bunk of a heavy vessel. Commercial.

As Canada will shortly put the biggest potato crop in her record on the market, it stands to reason that the prices here, as well as elsewhere, will take a downward tendency. Manitoba alone has 90,000 barrels more this year than last, and Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia will have 50 per cent. more than last year. These potatoes will be for sale in October, and we can expect our local prices to drop down to two or three dollars.

Our importation of flour in St. John's to date for 1918 is short $1,818 barrels. The figures are 103,327 and 135,145.

Our total coal imports to date since the new year is 63,256 tons, as compared with 72,293 for this date last year, showing a shortage of 9,037 tons.

Since August 1st, St. John's exporters have sent out to foreign markets 43,389 quils of new fish, as compared with 57,000 for the same date last year.

Beef importation for this town is short 6,586 barrels. The figures are 19,606 for 1918, and 25,992 for 1917.

The New Menace.

A new menace around town seems to be the allowing of young girls to drive motor cars, especially if they have not gained certificates of competency. Because the owner of a car possesses a certificate is no reason for his daughter or his son to drive said car. And the speed of some of those girls is surely above the 10 mile limit. It is becoming plainly evident that what we need is a motor cycle police. This, no doubt, would make the lives of pedestrians safe.

FOCH'S DRIVE UPSET HUN SCHEME.

AT BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Sept. 13 (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency).—Reuter's correspondent cables: The Germans are being steadily driven from all ground where rearwards might prolong resistance in old defensive works. The First Guards reserve divisions, much depleted, has been identified in the Meuvres sector, and Austrian artillery has been in action astride the Havrencourt-Liescourt Road. Prisoners admit disaffection and indicate line are growing at an alarming rate in the German army and desertions are frequent. Captured maps show that an attack against our First Army front was being organized when Foch's stroke upset the enemy's scheme. It is dated the text of July 10. On the Cambrai front we are maintaining all gains. Further north we captured Fosse 8, which figured in the early fighting around La Bassée. We are pushing through Auchy en La Bassée near which we took the railway triangle three days ago.

BOTH GERMANS AND RUSSIANS DISSATISFIED WITH COMMERCIAL AGREEMENT.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12. German newspapers received in Sweden speak of the commercial agreement between Germany and Soviet Russia in the same general terms as these employed by the Bolshevik press. These despatches maintain the same degree of scepticism concerning the details as that which M. Joffe, the Bolshevik Ambassador, preserved when he made his flying trip from Berlin to Moscow to complete the agreement. The masses in Russia were displeased by the arrangement because they saw it contemplated the sale of goods they badly needed by the Russians, and especially the transfer to Germany of the fabrics which the Soviet Government had confiscated, in great quantities, in Moscow and Petrograd. The Germans are apparently dissatisfied with the agreement because their efforts to ship goods have been so severely restricted, and they believe Germany will have the same trouble in this case that she encountered in the Ukraine; in other words they seem to feel that the Bolsheviks do not expect to abide by their treaty. The Russian public is in the dark as to the gold payments the Soviets agreed to make to Germany; the rumored amount varies from three billion to five billion roubles. The State Bank has not made a complete report since the Bolsheviks usurped the Government and the statements of the Minister of Finance, made so far, are described by Russian bankers as a list of liabilities on one side of the sheet and printing presses on the other.

The Cause of His Success.

In a recent sale of Dickens' autographs in London this letter, written while he was in the United States, appears: "I should never have made any success in life if I had been shy of taking pains, or if I had not bestowed upon the least thing I have ever undertaken exactly the same attention and care that I have bestowed upon the greatest. Do everything at your best. It was but last year that I set to and learned every word of my Readings, and from ten years ago till last night I have never read to an audience but I have watched for an opportunity of striking out or inserting something where. Look at such of my manuscripts as are in the library at Gad's and think of the patient hours devoted year after year to single lines. The weather is very severe here, and the work is very hard. Doby (his manager) having been violently pitched into by the mayor of New Haven (a town at which I am to read next week) has gone off boldly this morning with defiant written instructions from me to inform the said mayor that if he fell to make out his case he (Doby) has to return all the money taken, and to tell him that I will not set foot in his jurisdiction, whosoever the New Haven people will probably fall upon the mayor in his turn and lead him a pleasant life."

Correspondence.

BETWEEN MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES AND CAPT. W. H. BARTLETT, LATE MASTER OF THE GOVERNMENT DREDGE "PRIESTMAN."

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—On August 14th last I was summarily dismissed from the position of Captain of the Government Dredge. My dismissal was not preceded by any investigation, and I know of nothing that would have given the Government cause for such action as they took with me. I therefore requested the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to grant me an investigation of any complaint that may have been made against me, so that I would have an opportunity to defend myself, and know why I had been so unfairly dealt with by the Government. This was denied me, and I enclose the correspondence which took place between myself and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in relation to the matter, which I ask you to publish in your paper for the benefit of the public, who may be under the delusion that my dismissal was for some omission or commission on my part which justified the Government in removing me from my position after six years of faithful service. Yours truly, W. H. BARTLETT. St. John's, Sept. 12th, 1918.

Dept. of Marine & Fisheries, May 8, 1918. Sir—You have been this day appointed Master of the S. S. "Priestman" Hopper Dredge for Newfoundland. You will proceed to Glasgow by the S. S. "Carthaginian," and from there take the train for Milford Haven. Captain M. T. Keough will have to clear the ship. He is to be your Mate after arrival in Newfoundland, as it is necessary to have a mate with a Master's Certificate to clear the ship. The South Western Ice Company at Milford Haven will give you all instructions re the dredge, and any fit out you may require you will get from them. The new boats to be put on board, and I am enclosing herewith a list of stores that you will see are on board. The present Caretaker will give you all the assistance possible and any information which may be useful to you. He is to act as Third Engineer on the voyage across the Atlantic. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, A. W. PICCOTT, Minister of Marine & Fisheries, Captain W. H. Bartlett, City.

Dept. of Marine & Fisheries, August 14, 1918. Sir—In accordance with instructions received from the Government, I beg to notify you to transfer to Capt. Jacob Kean the command of the Dredge "Priestman," together with all stores and equipment belonging to her. On receipt of further orders from the Government with reference to yourself, I shall immediately inform you of same. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, J. G. STONE, Minister of Marine & Fisheries, Captain Bartlett, City.

St. John's, Aug. 15, 1918. Government of Nfld., St. John's. Gentlemen—Considering that I have been replaced, as Captain of the Dredge "Priestman," I deem it only fair in demanding an investigation, and explanation concerning same. Thanking you in anticipation of an early explanation, I remain, Yours faithfully, (Capt.) W. H. BARTLETT.

Dept. of Marine & Fisheries, Aug. 17, 1918. Dear Sir—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th instant. In reply I beg to say that acting on instructions from the Government I wrote you on the 14th as acknowledged by you. Since I have assumed control of this Department I have no complaint to make as to your conduct personally, or as to the service rendered by you as Master of the Dredge. I must, therefore, refer you to the Executive Government for any reasons which may have influenced them in deciding to transfer you from the command of the Dredge. Yours faithfully, J. G. STONE, Minister of Marine & Fisheries, Captain Bartlett, City. Dept. of Marine & Fisheries, 6th Sept. 1918. Sir—I have the unpleasant duty to inform you that I am to-day in receipt of a communication from the Colonial Secretary, acquainting me that it is the desire of the Government to inform you that your services are no longer required; and in lieu of notice I am requested to enclose one month's wages. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, J. G. STONE, Minister of Marine & Fisheries, Capt. W. H. Bartlett, (Enclosure.) St. John's, Sept. 9th, 1918. J. G. Stone, Esq., Minister of Marine & Fisheries. Dear Sir—Your letter of the 9th came to hand, informing me that my services are no longer required, and enclosing one month's wages in lieu of notice. In view of the statement contained in your letter of 17th ulto., that you had no complaint to make as to my conduct or as to the services rendered by me as Master of the Dredge, I regard my dismissal as wrongful and am not prepared to accept one month's wages in full of all claims and demands. I also request that a full investigation be made concerning the manner in which I was discharged my duties as Master of the Dredge and concerning the facts connected with my dismissal. Your obedient servant, W. H. BARTLETT.

Another Unilectric System!

We have recently finished installing one of our Unilectric Plants for Fred Ayre, Esquire, in his country residence at Murray's Pond. Owing to the fact that the Unilectric machine produces a standard 110 volt current (the same that is used here in St. John's), Mr. Ayre is able to light 4 buildings, a considerable distance apart, without loss of power and without the use of extra large wires. They are also able to use standard electric iron and electric vibrator; also any lamps or fixtures handled in St. John's. The grounds are also lighted with powerful lights on poles. The interior of the bungalow has been lighted according to Mrs. Ayre's direction with drop lights, wall brackets and table lamps with coloured shades to harmonize with the walls and furniture. Mr. Ayre has now the most beautifully lighted country residence in Newfoundland.

We have now 4 Unilectric Plants in successful operation in Newfoundland. Any one interested in country lighting has abundant opportunity to satisfy themselves that the Unilectric has no rival. Perhaps the strongest feature about these machines is the fact that they do not have to depend on storage batteries, but a small cheap battery can be connected at any time to be used in case of emergency. However none of our customers have found it necessary to do so. We are also agents for 3 different makes of battery lighting systems and can furnish anything required in this line, but we do not claim that they could compare with the Unilectric.

A Course in Cooking.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine has recently taken a course in cooking. No she is not a young girl about to be married, and preparing herself (as all brides-to-be should) to properly discharge her part in the partnership. She is over forty, she has been married about twelve years and has kept house most of that time. Moreover she is known as an unusually good cook.

She simply happened to be in a position where she could take a brief course in cooking and thought she would like to add the theoretical and scientific side of this science to what she already knew of the practical.

When I heard she was going to take the course I thought of the excellent meals I had eaten at her home and wondered if the school would really be able to teach her anything.

She Learned How to Boil Potatoes

In the first letter I received from her she said, "I have learned how to boil potatoes. Did you know that one should never put potatoes into cold or even into hot water—the water should be absolutely boiling before the potatoes are put in if you want to preserve the character of the product and make them as nicely as possible. Now I never knew that. Isn't that interesting?"

The next day in speaking of this woman and her course to another woman (who by the way thinks it is all nonsense for her to take the course), I mentioned what she had learned about boiling potatoes.

Her Potatoes Good Enough For Anyone.

"I don't believe it makes the least bit of difference," the other woman said at once. "My potatoes are good enough for anybody and I never bother about the temperature of the water."

And it was plain she did not intend to bother.

And yet the source from which that information came was one of the highest authorities on cooking in this country, if not in the world. Why should she set herself above an authority like that?

Why should she think that someone who had made a life long scientific study of the principles of cooking could teach her nothing.

Why indeed?

Because she was of that type of mind which is not willing to take advantage of what other people have learned by years of intensive study.

Like Walking Across The Continent.

To refuse to accept the wisdom that other people have stored up for one seems to me as foolish as refusing to accept the benefits of some great invention—let us say for instance, walking across the continent rather than in riding in a train.

If it not then good to think for oneself—someone asks. Of course it is. No one who is not constantly thinking for himself will ever get anywhere. If one entirely gave up using one's legs because there were trains one's legs would become paralyzed. But that does not mean one should not use the train when it covers in a few days a distance it would take one a year to walk.

It is ignorant and crude to accept ones ideas about life and philosophy ready-made from other people merely because one is too lazy to think for oneself.

It is equally ignorant and crude not to be willing to make use of the experience which other people have acquired by years of intensive study of some subject.

NIGHTMARE.

Sometimes he wakes up in the night And gives a little cry of delight, And I know when I hear that scream That he has wakened from a dream Of ugly things and fancies men, And I jump out of bed right then And hurry through the inky gloom Of midnight to the youngster's room.

I don't lie in my bed and moan: "There's really nothing wrong at all." I never leave him there alone. Where it's so dark, to sob and moan And tell him to go back to sleep. I quit my covers with a leap And in my gentlest voice I say: "Don't fret. 'Tis coming right away!"

And then I take him in my arms And try to soothe his wild alarms. I put my cheek against his face And my reward is his embrace. I snuggle down with him, and fear is banished when he finds me near. Then close beside him I remain Until he drops to sleep again.

We owe England a cheer for this. The old girl is game. She has, in the nautical phrase of one of her own favorite sons—and ours—laid a point closer to the wind for us than a man could expect of his own married wife. She has stood by at crisis from the start. Her destroyer fleet took the seas before ours were ready and battled the submarine at a time when it seemed that monster might dispute our passage. She sent us coal last winter when thousands of tons of ships were tied up in our harbors for want of fuel.

Let's not forget it. England's been a good neighbour and a good ally right through the time when most of the fowlers were sending down to the footlights were marked for her co-star, la belle France. Let's not forget that she never failed to join her voice to ours in acclaiming that wonderful people—and kept right on doing hard, practical handy jobs for us.

Outrage on Outrage.

The cold-blooded calculation which breeds German war policies with regard for nothing but German advantage, is well illustrated in a development of the ruthless submarine campaign which is attracting close attention in scientific circles. A scheme has been undertaken by the Huns to raise and loot torpedoed ships after the war.

Elaborately, as always, Germany has begun preparations. One feature of the plan is to have U-boats mark each vessel sunk accurately on special maps, and to exert care in sinking ships always in water of as short depth as possible.

It is established by the Scientific American that Germany proposes an ambitious scheme of this nature. The very fact that she should enter upon it now is interesting evidence of German contempt for the victims of her frightfulness on the ocean.

The graves of people sunk by the Huns must not be desecrated by ghoulish crimes. The outrage which destroyed them was bad enough, without piling further outrage upon it. Even after the war, German pirates who attempt to capitalize the murders of the "baby killers" will have to reckon with the Allied navies.

England on The Job

OR THE OLD GIRL IS GAME.

(From the Kansas City Times.)

While we are congratulating ourselves on the showing made by our men in France let us not forget to whom we are indebted for the life in getting them there.

Getting our troops across in effective numbers was a problem that came down to a question of ships and we didn't have them. That is where England came to bat again as she has so many times when a pinch hit was needed. England had some ships, to be sure, but she also had use for them. Ships are England's only guarantee that dinner will be ready at the usual hour. If for any reason they do not keep steadily going between the grocery store and the kitchen door meals are likely to be mighty irregular—England being in this respect like a family without a refrigerator.

England took the risk of interrupting this grocery store delivery to help get our troops to France in time to block the big drive at Paris and the Channel. She turned food ships into troop transports, took another hitch in her belt and told the family that for four months, during April, May, June and July, there would be no meat speaking, be no jam in the larder. When that period is over British ships will have carried, perhaps, half a million American soldiers to France, and it is now probable from statements made in Parliament within the last few days that the lock will be kept on the larder door for another extended period. British ships, in other words, will continue in our transport service as long as they are needed, or until our own tonnage equals the demand, and in the meantime England will go without the honest roast beef of old England, which as everybody knows, comes from Kansas City.

We owe England a cheer for this. The old girl is game. She has, in the nautical phrase of one of her own favorite sons—and ours—laid a point closer to the wind for us than a man could expect of his own married wife. She has stood by at crisis from the start. Her destroyer fleet took the seas before ours were ready and battled the submarine at a time when it seemed that monster might dispute our passage. Let's not forget it. England's been a good neighbour and a good ally right through the time when most of the fowlers were sending down to the footlights were marked for her co-star, la belle France. Let's not forget that she never failed to join her voice to ours in acclaiming that wonderful people—and kept right on doing hard, practical handy jobs for us.

HELPING THE HUN.

WALT MASON

You help the Hun if you are prone to dodge food regulations, if you put up a dismal groan whenever you view the rations. The loyal fellow does not swerve from rules laid down by Hoover; he blithely follows every curve and bylaw and maneuver. You help the Hun when you repeat dire stories of disaster; you pick up rumors of defeat, and make them travel faster. It is the Kaiser's standard trick, to keep such "rumors brewin'", to make our hearts and spirits sick through tales of death and ruin. You would not willingly assist this would be Alexander, but thoughtlessly you help. I wist, to spread his propaganda. You help the Hun when you complain of what the war is costing; the patriot who's safe and sane will find no load exhausting. What if demands on you are big? What if you're always busted? While you've a penny still to dig, you shouldn't be disgusted. You're buying freedom with the cash you shell for bonds and taxes, and Kultur's dome you help to smash, as though with battle axes. It's easy work to help the Hun, by snarling and repining, by being stingy with your mon, by beefing and by whining. And legends do it every day whose anger would be royal, if we should point with scorn and say they are not truly loyal.

SUMMER BATHING MISTAKEN.

At no season of the year is the bathing custom abused as in summer. The woman who is perfectly rational about baths the rest of the year plunges into excesses directly warm water sets in. Why she imagines she has greater endurance and can take greater chances in summer than in winter no physician or beauty specialist has ever been able to understand.

Bathe with reason in summer as well as in winter. Do not drop your warm baths and indulge only in cold plunges. You will be more comfortable for an occasional warm bath. And remember that a very cold bath, either in the ocean still water or the tub, can bring on cramps of the stomach and serious intestinal troubles if taken too soon after a hearty meal.

Another folly which most women indulge in when at the shore is to think that after a sea bath she is physically clean. Sea bathing is merely a dip in the ocean. Continued bathing in salt water unrelieved by the fresh sponge is very bad for the skin.

In summer a warm, not hot, bath at night is most cooling and the bath in the morning should be only a quick sponge with cool, not hot water. The woman who dresses in the middle of the day or just before dinner and bathes then, should not bathe just before retiring also. The quick morning sponge and the moderate afternoon or evening bath are quite sufficient for each twenty-four hours.

There are buttons, buttons everywhere assuming all duties of ornamentation.

Some of the new autumn shirtwaists of Georgette have long shawl collars. Long embroidered panels, both front and back, make a plain frock charming.

Full length suit jackets have their fullness gathered on rounded or shoulder yokes.

Mrs. Norman Kennedy and infant arrived from Boston on Thursday night on a visit to friends.

A number of men from Carbonear and Freshwater, who had been working in Boston during the year, arrived home last night, and will spend the winter with their people.

Your correspondent in offering an apology for his silence during the past two weeks, would say that he has been on a visit to Trinity and neighborhood where he received great kindness from all the people he met. His trip from Harbor Grace to Trinity Junction was very much enjoyed as was also the return journey yesterday.

Your correspondent was very much pained at the suspicious nature of the conversations he had with prominent people re the building up of Harbor Grace, which is being so well accomplished by the Shipbuilding Co. He thinks, and in fact he has undeniable evidence that some of the travelling agents of St. John's business firms allow their conversations to be very pointed on this subject, and of course the outpost man would take it all for granted. We would advise business men to notify their agents to stick to business, and when it is time to change the subject with a customer talk fish, farming or other subjects, but not say anything about Harbor Grace or the above company that cannot be proven.

In the above connection I am glad to see that our citizens are now taking the matter up, and if damaging reports are in future circulated, some person will be called upon to "rise and explain."

Mrs. Proudfoot and Mrs. Geo. Stewart went to Bell Island this morning in Stewart's motor boat. Both the above ladies had been on a visit to their parents here.

Rev. F. S. Coffin, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, left town on Tuesday morning for Prince Edward Island, on a visit to his old home. We hope the rev. gentleman will receive much benefit to his health by the change.

Lieut. Sheppard, of the Royal Nfld. Regiment, son of Sergt. J. Sheppard, arrived by Wednesday night's train. All Lieut. Sheppard's friends are pleased to see him.

A Krupp's Man on the Kaiser.

Dr. Muhlon before the war and during its early months was a director of Krupp's, with a salary of £20,000 a year. As such he was in most of the German secrets, though he had no sympathy whatever with German policy. As soon as he possibly could he got rid of his directorship at great personal sacrifice and retired to Switzerland, where he has since been foremost in denouncing the war. A letter written by him to the German Chancellor, Herr von Bethmann Hollweg, in 1917, and a memorandum with important facts as to the German secret council which met at Potsdam on July 6, 1914, and decided on war, have already been published in English.

This Diary, which is now translated for the first time, was kept by Dr. Muhlon, according to his own statements, during the earlier weeks of the war, and is reproduced without alteration. The German Government has denounced him as a "neurassthenic," but it has not attempted to dispute the truth of his disclosures.

The main new points revealed by his Diary are that the behaviour of the German troops was known in Germany to be bad and that the Kaiser himself ordered no prisoners to be taken.

"The German Emperor himself, in a harangue to a party of officers, said in effect that he now has prisoners enough and hopes the officers will see that no more are taken."

What a sequel to the Kaiser's own command in earlier days to the troops about to start on the Chinese expedition: "No quarter will be given!"

An officer told him that in Belgium, in August 1914: "Our soldiers have already taken to looting and pillaging to a very serious extent. The soldiers have become brutalised. As they have incessantly fired upon the population and ravaged ever so many villages, they have pretty well lost all sense of proportion."

The Germans have usually excused their own atrocities by declaring that the Russians behaved just as badly in East Prussia in 1914. According to the Diary that is untrue: "The Commission of Inquiry into the Russian Atrocities has come back without having arrived at any satisfactory results. It failed to authenticate a single one of the reported outrages."

The Commission has made known (not publicly, of course) that the general behaviour of the Russians has been even less unscrupulous than was to have been expected from an invader. The people frequently expressed themselves in terms of praise and gratitude when speaking to the Commission about the conduct of the Russians."

Daylight Saving.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—We have received several letters asking when the time is to go back to the old standard. For general information we shall esteem it a favor if you will kindly publish this short note.

Time is put back one hour in the British Isles September 29th; Newfoundland, October 6th; Canada, October 27th; United States, October 27th.

The Montreal Star says of the Daylight Saving, which equally applies to Great Britain and Newfoundland:

"A SCIENTIFIC GAIN."
"Since April 14th last Canada has experienced daylight saving. In a few weeks the hands of the clock will be put back one hour. Both Canada and the United States will return to the former system at two o'clock on Sunday morning, October 27th."

"Daylight saving, when proposed, met with many varied objections. As experienced, it has been universally popular. It has fulfilled all that its advocates predicted and has caused no such demoralization as its opponents feared."

"The change to daylight saving was a great gain achieved at practically no cost at all, a benefit secured by taking advantage of available light for all the people, just as an heroic explorer in 1492, by a sea voyage, enriched the European world by adding a continent to the known territory of the globe."

"It is instinctive to distrust something that it offered for nothing. An extension of daylight, merely by the twist of the wrist, looked too good to be true. The benefit secured during these summer months by men, women and children from longer periods of recreation or useful and profitable work, may help to remind us that, even at a time of vaulting prices, the wonderful advantages of Nature, provided by a merciful providence, are free and open to all. The Lord did not make the clocks and endow them with arbitrary power to keep the people from living in the health-giving sunlight, nor is there any law, human or divine, to keep the people from enjoyment, constantly, of good fresh air."

"Daylight saving is merely another application of the common sense which has filled the cities with vegetable gardens. And the world rolls on."

Yours truly,
Sept 14, '18. JOHN ANDERSON.

What About These Coal Shares?

The opportunity is a good one. $25,000 worth of stock has been placed on the market, and to the purchaser of each one of these shares three extra shares are given free of cost.

This makes the purchaser of each one dollar share the owner of four fully paid up shares in the company. The company also guarantees that none of the above shares will be subject to any further call.

The opportunity to invest is open to everybody. Get busy before it is too late; no bonus shares will be given after the present allotment is disposed of.

You can't lose. Invest to-day. For every single dollar you invest in this proposition you get four 1 dollar shares in return.

C. E. I. vs. Star.

There was a fairly large attendance at last night's football match, when the C.E.I. defeated the Stars in the opening game of the extra round by a score of 1 to 0. The game which was fast throughout was little rough in places, tripping being practiced a little too freely. The C.E.I. who had the best of the game all through, scored a goal in each half, the first counter coming from Burridge, who sent in a scorcher from the left wing. The ball dropped safely behind Clare. Just before the close of play, Chafe sent in a beauty which the Star back division were unable to cope with. Mr. W. J. Higgins was referee and the players were:

C.E.I.—Lush, goal; Reid, Tait, backs; Drover, Hallett, Stick, halves; Burridge, Stick, Jerrett, Chafe, Hennebury, forwards.

STAR.—Clare, goal; Sullivan, Kavanaugh, backs; Hart, Bell, Duggan, halves; Evans, McGrath, Maddigan, Power, Jackman, forwards.

L. A. Clare, the substitute goal tender for the Star played a rattling game and through his cool play saved the Stars from greater defeat.

Burridge, the bird man for the C.E.I. who played on the left wing, was as fleet as a deer.

Tait, Hennebury, Chafe and Jerrett all worked hard but were slack on shooting.

Duggan, Hart and Evans worked hard but lacked support from their team.

Tommy Hallett, who started to play football in the back again; is still going strong, and last evening was a whole team in himself.

Britain's Four Years of War Effort.

GLORIOUS WORK OF THE NAVY.
(By Harold Begbie in the London Chronicle.)

A Frenchman has said of England that in this war she is fighting to prevent the collapse of her moral universe.

England, says Andre Chevillon, is fighting not only for herself but for her faith in a law higher than human laws, for her English religion of the absolute distinction between right and wrong.

This is true. But how has she fought? She came slowly and unwillingly into this fight, struggling to the last hour to preserve the world's peace; but once in, driven by honor, how has she fought?

Has the British Commonwealth, in its life-and-death struggle with Prussian Brutality, fought with all its heart, mind and soul, fought with a full honesty of sacrifice, fought with an utmost energy of all its myriad forces, or has it fought shirkingly, doing as little as possible, nursing itself to reap the commercial advantages of a Prussian defeat?

As history answers this question so will be our character in the world for the next hundred years.

We say that Belgium saved the world at Liege. We say that France saved the world at the Marne. We say that the noble self-sacrifice of the American people during the last year saved the world by feeding Germany's enemies. But neither the heroic and chivalrous action of Belgium nor the sublime glory of France at the Marne and at Verdun, nor the exquisite hearted American people, could have averted anything, could have averted the final and absolute triumph of Brutality, if the guns of the British fleet had looked away.

How Britain Saved the World.

Britain saved the world in the hour of the world's supreme peril. Her battleships stripped for action to prevent the collapse of her moral universe, and with that one gesture, even had she done nothing else, she saved the whole world. Germany might prolong the struggle, might strive to wear down the patience of her enemies and to hoodwink the neutrals; but one thing she could not do, and that was to achieve her purpose. Britain had uttered her Nay!

Four years ago everything precious to free nations, and everything dear to the heart of domestic man, hung upon one single thread—the power of the British Navy to destroy or to paralyze the second greatest fleet of the world.

This was the superlative task laid upon our seamen.

In comparison with this duty every other consideration in the World War was, in and ever shall be, of secondary importance. Between the world and its ruin there was only one shield; between Germany and the dominion of the world only one absolute obstacle. The destruction of the British Fleet would have disarmed every soldier of the Entente, and denied bread to every nation that disputed her supremacy.

Look more closely into this matter. The second greatest sea-power in the world was reduced to impotence, the oceans were made free for the peaceful commerce of honorable nations, and the military victories of the mightiest War Machine of which history tells were rendered vain by a little body of British seamen less in number than the first British Expeditionary Force landed in France. French's contemptible little Army was almost lost in a line of a few hundred miles stretching from the Channel to the Vosges; but an even smaller force was sufficient to save our freedom, our honor, our lives, on the wide and stormy seas of the whole huge world. The romance of the Fleet is its littleness; and the glory of the Fleet is its unchallengeable quality.

A pressure, a compulsion, "whose silence when once noticed becomes the observer the most striking and awful mark of the working of sea power," was exerted on the first day of the war by 145,000 British seamen. Under that pressure the warships of Germany fled to the protection of their shore batteries; under that pressure over 800 German merchantmen were swept from the seas; and under that pressure the life of Germany was saved.

In all winds and weathers, and for a long stretch of four years, the British Fleet, working in all the seas of the world, has watched 290 miles of German coastline; and is still watching, still waiting, and every day that it watches and waits it is fighting the German submarine far and near, and every day and every night it is saving the world. It has not contented the Royal Navy to defend these British Isles; it has flung its shield over the whole world.

many was driven behind a locked door. And because of this pressure, which was felt in every sea of the world, the British Armies could cross without a casualty to France, the far flung Dominions could send their sons to Europe, the Allied nations could import goods from the other side of the world, and the honest neutral could fly his flag on the seven seas fearing no man.

Navy's Double Task.

The British Fleet saved the world, and secured the freedom of the seas for all honorable nations by containing the German fleet. History will say that this service was incomparably the greatest rendered by any one nation to the common cause. But the British Fleet is now doing that which never before has any one navy been called upon to do. It is conducting at one and the same moment two major operations. It is containing the German navy and it is fighting the German submarine. To the historian neither of these two operations will appear more critical than the other. Both are of vital importance; failure in one would mean failure in the other. And the invisible enemy at any moment of the night or day may suddenly throw the whole weight of its sea power into one attack or the other.

To meet this menace the British Navy has increased its men and tonnage. The four million tons of the Fleet have become six; the glorious host of 145,000 has grown to over 400,000—every man a volunteer.

This Fleet, working in perfect amity with the fleets of the Allies, has denied to 160 million people in Central Europe the necessities of human existence. Every day of the week it transports over 7,000 men from England to France, and 30,000 tons of stores. Every day of the week it carries ammunition and stores to its own ships scattered all over the seas of the world. Every day of the week it is working with British Armies in Egypt and Mesopotamia. Every day of the week it is defending its own 7,700 miles of coastline and ceaselessly patrolling the vital 600 miles of sea which stretch from Scotland to Ireland. And every day of the week it is transporting from the New World to the Old almost the whole of that vast host of fighting men (300,000 a month) which is likely to deal the last land blow to Kaiserism.

It has done things, too, of which the general public has so far heard little. It gave the hospitality of Malta to a considerable portion of the French fleet, and there refitted it in a space of time which was incredibly short. When the Mediterranean was in peril it lent hundreds of vessels to the Italians. It fought for Russia in the Baltic, and is still the hope of a Russian resurrection. America will one day tell the world what the British Navy has done for her.

But these services, and many others, are all minor to the two supreme duties which it is the glory of the British Navy to discharge. The pomp and majesty of the mighty German fleet is as useless to that hungering and blockaded nation as a catapult with only one fork; and the blow of the submarine is parried. This is the chief contribution of Britain to the common cause, and it is made by 400,000 volunteers, and it is made with such heartiness of good will and with so fine and noble a modesty that never for a moment has there been the least friction between the British Admiralty and the Admiralties of our great-hearted Allies.

The World's Debt to the Navy.
Only in one way can we realize the world's debt to the British Navy. Imagine that it had failed us. If that had been, there is not one nation or race or country which would not be lying helpless at the foot of Prussian Brutality.

We do well to remind ourselves of this foundational fact of the World War, and to tell ourselves every day we live in the enjoyment of our freedom, lest we grow indolent in our confidence, that the German fleet is still a force of gigantic power and the German submarine a weapon of the deadliest peril.

In all winds and weathers, and for a long stretch of four years, the British Fleet, working in all the seas of the world, has watched 290 miles of German coastline; and is still watching, still waiting, and every day that it watches and waits it is fighting the German submarine far and near, and every day and every night it is saving the world. It has not contented the Royal Navy to defend these British Isles; it has flung its shield over the whole world.

These destroyers, which form only a part of America's fleet in European waters, escorted 121 troopship convoys, consisting of 773 ships; in that period. At the same time they es-

LONDON, August 12, 1918.

THE LONDONER'S FOUR WAR YEARS.

The last four years of war take their place in the surface of the Londoner's mind through the friendly visions that colored the railway stations and streets. The first year was the year of the Belgians, the refugees, that strange fellowship—nuns in silent chat excited groups gathered around their superior, workmen who looked as though they had just thrown down their tools, Brussels dandies with white spots and damaged silk hats walking jauntily with burst brown-tan parcels containing their all, the feature of the next year was the grim faces, their slouch coats, some with feathers, and long storks like cavaliers—queer figures for the statue of Charles the First at Charing Cross to look down on. Here also we had the coming into the strong light of London of the South African soldiers who were great fighters and who frequently spoke a language which, when we overheard it, we put down as Cape Dutch.

The third year had many features, some of the Londoner's thoughts filled with the thought of a great deal of sea and the torpedoes and the sinking of food ships. The fourth year has been the year of the American. He is a different figure from the Canadian (who was with us so soon and so gallant war picture, and one does not think of him separately) or the French, but nearer them than he is to the American in khaki and in blue, almost in possession of London. Yet there is only a small glimpse of him in the first year there was a legend of a mythical army of 50,000 Russians marching through on their way to fight France, and we all thought it wonderful and believed it. In the last year, many hundreds of thousands of Americans are actually passing through England to fight in France. Nobody makes it wonderful, and few realize it as a stranger pilgrimage.

"FLYING" VISIT TO WEST-MINSTER.
The circumstances surrounding the appearance of Major-General Davidson, the new Member of Parliament for Fareham, at the House of Commons last week, when he took his seat for the first time, being generally known among the members his progress to the floor of the House would have been marked by a bigger ovation than he actually received. General Davidson, who is attached to British Headquarters in France, desired to take his seat before the Recess, but he could not get leave for more than a few hours. An aeroplane was, however, at his disposal, and after breakfasting at Headquarters he flew over to a point near London, touched with some friends at Westminster, took his seat in the Commons, and immediately flew back to France and his military duties.

That dashing British Army leader, General Sir Henry Rawlinson, who has had "another chance of his life" in the recent splendid push and has made such excellent use of it, is "Rawley" to his intimates and to many of the rank and file. This has been a year of rapid changes for the popular commander, but we may take it for granted that he will count himself particularly fortunate in his timely restoration to the leadership of the 4th Army, which he held as early as 1916. Last February he succeeded Sir Henry Wilson as British military representative at the Supreme War Council at Versailles. After the first German offensive in the spring he gave up this appointment to resume command in the field, and was subsequently transferred from the 5th Army to the 4th. He has a complete understanding of staff work, and it is no military secret that Field-Marshal Haig was delighted to have Sir Henry back at General Headquarters as his right-hand man. He is not unlike Lord Kitchener, and has just celebrated the fifty-fourth anniversary of his birthday. Among our soldiers General Rawlinson is popularly known as the Hammer General. He commanded the troops which captured Neuve Chapelle in the spring of 1915. In the autumn of that year it was again his 4th Corps which captured Loos. Then in the spring of 1916 it was Rawlinson who was appointed to the command of the new 4th Army that bore

the brunt of the battle of the Somme, which lasted continuously for the next five months of that year. He was in command of the whole battle front when the offensive opened on July 1st, but on the third day handed over the two northern corps to Sir Hubert Gough's reserve 5th Army, in order to concentrate on reducing the formidable defences of Contalmaison, High Wood, Delville Wood and Guillemont. Again, when the German retreat began in the spring of 1917, Sir Henry Rawlinson led the southern part of the British advance. It was his men who entered Peronne and fought their way to the gates of St.
Quentin.

WOMEN MEMBERS OF PARLIA- MENT.

The law officers of the Crown have advised the Government that in their judgment women are not eligible for members of Parliament as the law stands at present, although women may vote in Parliamentary elections.
This, of course, is simply counsel's opinion, and has nothing to do with the personal opinions of the law officers as to whether women ought to be admitted to Parliament or not. Indeed one of the law officers, the Solicitor General, Sir Gordon Hewart, has long been, and is now, strongly in favor of admitting women to the House of Commons. Probably a short act will be put through enabling women to sit as members if the pressure in support of this movement is strong enough.

A ZOO BANQUET.

Surfeited with war rations of dog's flesh and horse flesh, which had become distinctly a matter of skin and bone, the occupants of the lion house at the London Zoological Gardens have had a rare banquet this week which should present them in prime condition to the gaze of thousands of holiday visitors. It is an ill wind that brings nobody good, and even the close atmosphere of the Dog Days may have advantages in certain directions.
A consignment of beef which was particularly high in flavor and therefore condemned for human food has given the lions, tigers, leopards, and jag-uars a most acceptable change of diet. They have feasted royally on the fat which they used to discard, and their coats have now an almost pre-war thickness and lustre.

TOO MUCH TO EXPECT.

A Member of Parliament received a whimsical complaint from a constituent that war whisky was so weak that "he could not get drunk" on a tumblerful of it. "I'm sorry," said the M.P.'s reply, "but you can't have the Kingdom of Heaven and a war at the same time."

AN AMAZON IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A remarkable visitor appeared at the House of Commons last week as the guest of Mr. Hazelton. This was the famous commander of the Russian Women's Battalion, Marie Bochkareva.
She was in a man's khaki uniform, that of a lieutenant in the Polish Regiment, and wore a row of medals.
The racial type was very interesting.
The very straight black hair, cut short at the neck in the American fashion, the pale complexion, and the mould of the facial features strongly suggested a Mongolian or Tartar race.
One might have mistaken her for a Red Indian. The Women's Battalion was formed during Kerensky's regime, when Commander Bochkareva organised a force of 2,000 women selected from 15,000 volunteers. The Women's Battalion went into action at Smorgeny in July last year. The women were placed alternately with the men during the battle, and they helped to take three lines of German trenches and many prisoners. During the retirement following the successful counter attack the commander was wounded. She has been wounded five times altogether, and relates that she has been taken prisoner twice and escaped each time.

THE RUSSIAN SITUATION.

News from Russia heralds interesting developments. The Allied force which landed at Archangel on August 2nd has since pushed rapidly south along the railway towards Volodga, at the junction of the Archangel line and the main Petrograd line. A successful pushing on the part of the population of Archangel against the Bolshevik authority preceded the Allied landing, which was accomplished—practically without opposition, no casualties being inflicted on the Allies. White Guards facilitated the landing. The hostile forces consisted of 5,000 workmen, 1,500 Maximals, 900 seamen, and 400 Letts, making about 8,000 in all. Large quantities of rolling stock and stores and two heavy batteries of 3 inches and 5 in. guns have fallen into the hands of the Allied force. As to Murmansk, the German forces north of the Gulf of Finland are now estimated to consist of 50,000 men, reinforcements having been received.
These are additional to the Finnish troops. There has been a certain amount of skirmishing along the Mur-man Railway, enemy patrols having been driven back. In the east great efforts are being made by the Bolsheviks to overthrow the Czechs before Allied aid is forthcoming. It is understood that an agreement has been arrived at between the Germans and Characters.

A certain official at the local Food Office advertised for an office boy. His choice fell on a bright lad.
"Well, my lad," he said, "I like your appearance. Did you bring a character?"
"No," said the boy, "but I can get one."
"Very well, come back in the morning with it, and if it satisfactory
I will engage you."
Later that afternoon the official was surprised by the return of the applicant.
"Well," he asked cheerfully, "have you got your character?"
"No," was the reply. "But I've got weakness and I ain't coming."

BRITISH BRAINS IN TRADE.
Lord Sydenham, in opening the British Scientific Products Exhibition at King's College, Strand, recently, said that our "key" industries will never again be in German hands.
"With regard to dyes," he added,
"Germany looked after the dyeing industry not from any aesthetic concern but with an eye to explosives. As to optical instruments and optical glass, we somehow fell into the habit of getting most of these things from Germany, but we are now independent of Germany."
"Germany had a monopoly of the hard porcelain essential for certain electrical fittings; we have discovered the secret and have an industry which we can, if we like, keep to ourselves."
Specially popular were the aircraft section, the steel exhibits of Messrs.
Hadfield, the display of textiles which have beaten the Germans in what was for them a highly profitable exporting industry, the surgical, electrical, and
X-rays exhibits, and the dyes, glass,
and pottery.

Lloyd George's Stick.

Mr. George Graves, in his favorite role of war auctioneer, was a distinct success at the Coal Exchange, London, when he raised a considerable sum
for them a highly profitable exporting
industry, the surgical, electrical, and
X-rays exhibits, and the dyes, glass,
and pottery.

DEATH SENTENCE COMMUTED.
The sentence on Lance-Corporal
Joseph Dowling, of the Connaught Rangers, who landed in Ireland in a collapsible boat from a German submarine, was promulgated recently.
The court-martial found him guilty on all charges of aiding the enemy and pronounced sentence of death by shooting, but the King, acting on the recommendation of his advisers, commuted the sentence to one of penal servitude for life.
