THE Phantom Lover.

(By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband.")

CHAPTER XX.

He heard the sigh of relief she gave.
 "I'm glad," she said. "Somehow, lately, I have thought that you did know. Mr. Mellows . . . last night . . . I thought I saw him in the theatre last night. I know now that I was mistaken." She paused a moment and looked past him to the window and the cold grey street outside. "I shouldn't have seen him," she said again, as if to convince herself rather than him. "Because he is in Paris—I found out this morning that he is still in Paris."
 "Yes," said Micky. His voice sounded choked. "And so—you want to go out there to him, is that it?"
 Her face brightened.
 "Yes, I should have told June, only she isn't very sympathetic. You see—she smiled faintly—she hates my 'phantom lover,' as she calls him, and so—I know she would only do her best to keep me from going to him; but you—"
 "I am afraid," said Micky quietly. "That I shall try and do the same thing."
 He turned and looked at her squarely.
 "You've never been in Paris," he said. "And probably you can't speak a word of French. You've probably never travelled any distance alone. Miss Shepstone, it's impossible for you to go. I am only advising you for your own good. Why not write to—to your fiance and ask him to make arrangements for you?"
 He broke off helplessly. The poor little letter in which she had already done so lay in his pocket at that moment. It turned him aside to think of the tissue of lies and deceit his own actions were forcing upon him.
 "I—I have asked him," she said almost in a whisper. "But he said he couldn't have me—then! But that's quite a long time ago," she added hopefully. "And I thought if he saw me—if I got there and surprised him—"
 Micky turned away. He could imagine so well what would happen if indeed she found Ashton. He walked over to the window and stood looking into the street with unseeing eyes.
 "Have a little patience," he said presently. "Take my advice and stay here. If he—if he can, he will send for you. I am sure." She looked up quickly, a spark of anger in her eyes.
 "You sound as if you think that will never be," she said sharply.
 Micky met her gaze unflinchingly. "I don't think anything of the sort."

I know—I know if I were in his place, whoever he is—I should be counting the moments till I could . . . could have you with me." He smothered the momentary seriousness of his words with a little laugh. "And now, after that pretty compliment, aren't you going to reward me by taking my most excellent advice?"
 The ghost of a smile crossed her face.
 "I wanted you to say something so different," she told him wistfully.
 "I know—but I'm not going to. Any one would advise you as I have. It isn't . . . it isn't that I'm prejudiced, or anything like that. I would give a great deal to see you happy. I hope you believe me."
 She sat twisting her hands together nervously. After a moment she looked up at him.
 "Thank you," she said.
 She rose and began to pull on her gloves.
 "I hope you don't think it's very dreadful of me to have come," she said deprecatingly. "But . . . but this morning, somehow, I felt I must have someone to talk to—someone one to advise me . . ."
 "I am honoured that you came," said Micky brightly. Her eyes fell before his.
 "And—and you won't tell June?" she appealed.
 He smiled rather sadly.
 "I am not likely ever to tell any one," he said.
 "No, I know. Mr. Mellows—she held out her hand to him suddenly, her fair face flushing—"I should like to take back something I said to you one day. Perhaps you don't remember, but I do, and lately—especially since last night, when you were so kind—I've felt that I wasn't just to you; and so . . . if you will forgive me, I should like to be friends with you after all."
 She was crimson by the time she had finished, but Micky took her hand without answering, held it for a moment, then let it go.
 "I suppose I mustn't offer you anything?" he said with forced lightness. "No coffee—or tea? It's cold out this morning. If you would care for anything, my man would bring it at once."
 She laughed and shook her head.
 "I don't want anything, thank you," she turned round at Micky's luxuriously furnished room. "Isn't it beautiful?" she asked him.
 He smiled. "Do you like it? I am glad."
 "I think it's lovely." She looked up at him. "I seem to have been climbing a ladder lately," she said. "Since I left that awful place in the Brixton Road—where I am now in heaps better than that was, but this—"
 Micky was silent. It trembled on his lips to say that everything he had in the world was hers if only she would take it, but he knew the utter futility of it. Money and possessions counted very little with her. She would not have minded the house in the Brixton Road at all with the man she loved.

 He went downstairs with her.
 "So we're really friends now?" he said when he bade her good-bye. "And you'll promise to let me advise you again when you're not quite sure what you ought to do?" There was a note of anxiety in his voice.
 She flushed nervously.
 "It's kind of you to be interested. It seemed strange to her that after all that had happened they should have so easily got back to their old footing of friendliness. But Micky was not at all happy. When she had gone he stood for a long time at the window staring moodily out.
 When Driver brought lunch, he found Micky poring over a Bradshaw; he spoke to the man with elaborate carelessness.
 "You'll have to take another trip to Paris—to-morrow will do."
 "Yes, sir," Driver smoothed a crease in the cloth. "To post another letter, sir?" he asked expressively.
 Micky looked up sharply, but Driver met his eyes innocently.
 Micky coloured.
 "No; it isn't a letter this time," he said. "It's to buy a fur coat."
CHAPTER XXI.
 "The phantom lover," said June Mason lugubriously, "is certainly turning up trumps."
 It was a week later, and she was giving Micky tea.
 Esther was out. She knew now that it was to see Esther he came. She was quite reconciled to the fact, and had got over her first pang of jealousy, but Esther's indifference to him enraged her.
 "Can't the girl see what she's throwing away?" she asked herself furiously. "What on earth is she made of that she can't see what's waiting for her to take? If Micky had adored me as he adores her . . . well—my name wouldn't have been June Mason to-day."
 But she kept such thoughts to herself and treated Micky very much the same as usual, though unconsciously there was a slight restraint in her manner, especially when Esther was present.
 "I'm beginning to think that I've misjudged our Raymond," she went on laughingly. "Perhaps some one has converted him. Anyway, he's treating Esther handsomely. First the money, and now the fur coat. . . . Suddenly she looked up with sudden interest.
 "Oh, it's come, then, has it?" he said eagerly.
 "Come! It's been here two days. How did you know?" she asked with sudden suspicion.
 "I heard you talking about it. Wasn't it you? No? Then it must have been Miss Shepstone."
 "I dare say," said June easily. "I never saw any one so delighted with a thing as she was with that coat. And it is a beauty, Micky. I only hope it's paid for," she added practically.
 "Why shouldn't it be paid for?" Micky said.
 "Because Raymond Ashton never paid for things if he could help it; and you know he didn't," she told him.
 "However, as he seems to be a reformed character, we'll give him the benefit of the doubt." Suddenly she began to laugh. "And that isn't all," she said again. "This morning a caller arrived for that blessed cat—She indicated Charlie sleeping peacefully on the rug. "A silver collar, too my boy, with Esther's name on it . . ."
 Micky stooped to examine the collar; his face was red when, after a moment, he looked up again.
 "Esther declares she never told him we'd got a cat," June told him doubtfully. "But, of course, she must have done, or else the man's got second sight."
 Micky was drinking his tea; he choked suddenly.
 A feeling of panic closed upon him. Never told him she'd got a cat? Of course she hadn't. What a fool he had been to make such a blunder—what an utter blockhead.
 "I expect she did tell him," he managed to say.
 "Yes, that's what I think," June lit a cigarette and passed the lighted match over to Micky.
 "Anyway, Esther goes about the place stung all day," she added dryly. "There's no doubt at all that she's up in the seventh heaven of happiness. Reams of letters the man writes her. Perhaps, as the novels tell us, love is a wonderful thing—." She looked at Micky with a comical expression in her queer eyes. "I should say it must be it's reformed that man," she added cynically.
 Micky said nothing. He had been very uncomfortable about things during the last few days. As far as he could find out, Ashton had not yet been married. Supposing it had all been bluff when he said he was going to be married—supposing he turned up again in London?
 Micky stayed as long as he could in case Esther came in; it was only when he began to feel sure that June knew why he was dragging his visit to such a length that he said he ought to be going.
 "There's no hurry," she said kindly. "Why not wait till Esther comes in?" Micky shook his head; he said he couldn't spare the time, but in his heart he knew quite well that he intended to wait.

"I suppose she—or she never talks any more about taking a job now, eh?" he asked after a moment.
 "No, I don't think so; that man's word is law to her, you know. I believe if he said 'Come out here and marry me at once' she'd fly off by the next train. As a matter of fact, I'm expecting something of the sort almost daily."
 "I don't think she'll do that," Micky said. He stood back to the fire, with his hands in his pockets, staring up to the ceiling.
 "No!" June watched him quizzically. "Do you know, Micky," she said at last, "that I consider you've altered a lot lately?"
 He swung round at once, and scrutinized himself in the glass over the mantelshelf.
 "For the worse, or the better?" he asked anxiously. "I know I never was exactly an Adonis."
 She laughed merrily.
 "I don't mean your face, stupid, but yourself. You're quieter, you don't go about so much; in fact—she challenged him deliberately—"I believe you're in love."
 "So I am," said Micky stolidly.
 She pretended not to take him seriously.
 "It's no joking matter—I mean what I say."
 "So do I," said Micky. He laughed. He came over to where she was sitting, and stood behind her chair so that she could not see his face. "I've tried to make up my mind to tell you lots of times," he said. . . . He stopped and moved away restlessly.
 June sat very still; presently—"It's Esther," she said quietly.
 "Yes."
 "Poor old Micky! I'm sorry for me; I walked into it with my eyes wide open. I knew she was engaged—I knew it all the time."
 "And Esther . . . does she know? Have you told her?"
 "Yes. . . . She took it as an insult. Perhaps it was; I don't know. You see, I knew she was engaged to that other fellow."
 "An outsider! who isn't worth a thought," June cried indignantly. "Micky, however could she have refused you?"
 He laughed. He looked down at her with a comical expression in his eyes.
 "She's not the first woman who's done that," he reminded her.
 She sat up with sudden haste.
 "That wasn't anything, but this—"
 "This," said Micky, "isn't anything either, except on my side. You always told me that some day I shouldn't be able to have what I wanted. You were right."
 "I should like to slap her!" said June viciously.
 He laughed outright.
 "If you did I should slap you, my dear." He went back to his chair by the fire. "It's only between ourselves, June," he said.
 "Of course . . . and Micky—do you think she will marry Ashton?"
 Micky did not answer for a moment.
 "No," he said at last. "I don't think so."
 June stared at him.
 "Then—then do you mean—." But he would not tell her anything.
 "You've heard quite enough for one day," he said teasingly.
 "Don't worry your head about me! I don't know why I told you—somehow I thought you'd guessed."

Reduced Salmon Pack for 1921.
 Early estimates of the salmon pack of British Columbia for 1921 indicate that the output will be of comparatively small proportions, the ratio running from 40 down to 20 per cent. of normal. Consul General F. M. Ryder, of Vancouver, intimates that some canneries are prepared to put up about 35 per cent. of their normal pack, while others are figuring only on 15 per cent. No "chums" will be canned in British Columbia during 1921, as there are said to be three-quarters of a million cases still in stock without a market. According to Mr. Ryder, canners contend that with Japan putting 500,000 cases of redfish on the British market, Alaska canneries carrying over about 400,000 cases over the end of the year, for the first time in four or five years, and with the pack from the Columbia River and Puget Sound there would be a gigantic total pack all rushing to the British market. Of the 615,288 hundredweight of canned salmon exported from Canada during 1920, the United Kingdom took 310,451 hundredweight—Financial Post.

A Palace of Costly "Junks."
 The Sultan of Koetal's palace at Tangarong, in south-western Borneo stands on a slight rise of ground at a horseshoe bend in the river, a huge, barnlike, wooden structure, two stories in height, which reminded me of a convention hall, writes E. Alexander Powell.
 The entrance, over which are blazoned the arms of Koetal, is reached by a broad flight of white marble steps which debouch on to a wide, shaded terrace of the same incongruous material.
 This terrace opens directly into the great throne hall, an apartment whose proportions would in the royal, though its furnishings are a bizarre mixture of Oriental taste and Occidental tawdriness. From each end of the throne hall impressive staircases, with scarlet carpets and gilt balustrades, lead to the second floor.
 Under one of these staircases was a sort of closet, with glass doors, which looked exactly like a modern edition of a telephone booth in a Canadian hotel.
 The doors were sealed with strips of paper kept in place by wax wrappers, but, peering through the glass, I could make out a large table piled high with trays of precious stones, ingots of gold and silver, vessels, utensils, and images of the same precious metals. It was the state treasure of Koetal and was worth, so the resident told me, upward of a million dollars.
 When we were in Koetal the young Sultan, an amiable looking youth in the early twenties, had not yet been permitted by the Dutch authorities to ascend the throne, the country being ruled by his uncle, the regent, an elderly, affable gentleman who, in his white drill suit and round white cap, was the image of a Chinese cook.
 Upon the formal accession of the young sultan the seals of the treasury will be broken and the treasure will be his to dissipate as he sees fit, but the Dutch controller attached to his court may have something to say as to the manner in which it is expended.
 Upstairs we were shown through a series of apartments, filled to overflowing with the loot of European shops—ornate brass beds, inlaid chiffoniers and bureaux, toilet sets of tortoise-shell and ivory, and a thousand other useless and inappropriate articles; for, when the late sultan visited Europe, the shopkeepers of The Hague, Amsterdam, and Paris

Strike Situation Gloomy.

Efforts to Reopen Negotiations-- General Workers Federation Support Miners -- Coal Companies Seeking Pound of Flesh--Island of Yap Subject of Question.

TRYING TO RE-OPEN NEGOTIATIONS.
LONDON, April 14. Determined efforts are being made to re-open negotiations between the miners and mine owners for a settlement of the coal strike. A deputation from the House of Commons visited Lloyd George about midnight, after Frank Hodges, Secretary of the Miners' Union, had addressed the members of the House and explained the miners' viewpoints. The mine owners have also decided to invite miners' leaders to continue the discussion. Evan Williams, President of the Mining Association, announced at a late hour that the mine owners would extend another invitation to representatives of the miners to deliberate both nationally and in various districts with the object of ascertaining what was feasible to improve the lot of the lower paid miners. The owners then again visited Downing Street in response to a summons from the Prime Minister. New hopes of a resumption of negotiations, therefore, have arisen through this offer of the mine owners to meet the miners' leaders around a new conference table, and also the offer made by Mr. Hodges in his speech to a meeting of members of Parliament. In this the Secretary of the Miners' said, among other things, "we are prepared to consider the question of wages provided they are not regarded as permanently on a district basis, but only of a temporary character." Hodges had a friendly reception, according to the Press Association. The large committee room of the House was filled with Unionists, Coalitionists and Laborites. Hodges exhaustively reviewed the situation and on some points gained the sympathy of his audience. Regarding his offer the Press Association says that it is not without promise of peaceful agreement and will be conveyed to the Prime Minister by Mr. Marriott, Chairman of the meeting. The whole labor movement is aligning itself solidly with the miners against the government. The workers seem to believe that the hour has struck for a final struggle against what they rightly or wrongly suspect to be an organized plan on the part of employers to force down wages. Both sides are engaged in preparations for coming events. The government took possession of Hyde Park and Regent's Park as well as Kensington Gardens. These three breathing spots of London will be utilized as military depots and devoted to insuring London's food and milk supplies. They have been completely closed to the public.

WILL SUPPORT TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Resolutions expressing solidarity with Miners and the Triple Alliance in their present movement, were passed to-night at a meeting of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, the National Executive of the Labor Party and the Parliamentary Labor Party, held at the House of Commons.

COOKS WILL WALK OUT.

LONDON, April 14. The Federation of General Workers, representing 1,600,000 workers in more than 100 industries outside the Triple Alliance, decided to-day to support the Triple Alliance in its strike.

ROY WOLVIN TO APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE.
OTTAWA, April 14. Roy M. Wolvin, President of the Dominion Coal Co., and titular head of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Merger, will be summoned before the Parliamentary Fuel Committee to answer charges aired in the committee this morning, that the coal companies in the merger are holding up the Canadian National Railway, who have offered to buy 900,000 additional tons of coal from the merger companies this year, provided they sell at a price to compare favorably with American quotations. R. C. Vaughan, Vice-President of the C.N.R., told the committee.

AGITATORS HEADED OFF.

LONDON, April 14. Several members of the House of Commons made an attempt in the House this afternoon to precipitate a debate on the subject of the mandate over the Island of Yap and the American position on the mandate question, but Lloyd George headed off the effort with a statement that this subject was under friendly discussion between the United States and Allied powers. "Nothing would be gained and much might be lost by dragging the controversy into the parliamentary arena," he said. At another point during the afternoon's proceeding Lloyd George said amidst cheers, "I am perfectly certain that the last thing the people of this country desire is any misunderstanding with the people of the United States, and anything which will conduce to or provoke a discussion which might lead to that misunderstanding would be deprecated by everyone."

PLAYING THE MAN.

There is a richer treasure than of gold
A fairer fame that glory or renown.
But few can ever wear the victor's crown.
And few the scepter of full power may hold.
Nor can all me in history be told
And have their records marked and written down:
Yet soldier, preacher, artisan or Toller or dreamer, youth or gray-beard old,
Need never sigh for love or fellowship.
The world's approval or the joy of friends,
Each can be kindly and with smiling lip
Welcome the day and all that duty sends:
Each has it in his power to play the man
And this is greatness under every plan.

House of Assembly.

April 14th.

The House met at 5 p.m.

Notices of question were given by Mr. J. R. Bennett, Sir M. P. Cashin, Sir J. C. Crosbie and Mr. MacDonnell.

After answers to questions had been tabled, Sir M. P. Cashin rose to continue his speech on the Address in Reply. He referred first to the Labrador Boundary.

The answer to a question which he received yesterday would, when known, alarm the whole country.

Seven or eight lawyers were engaged in that work, or rather not work, but excuse for a number of vultures to squeeze the life-blood out of the colony.

Could the Minister of Justice justify the amounts tabled on the preceding day? He charged there, on that day, that the late M. W. Furlong, K. C., had done all the work necessary on that question. In giving the figures the Minister of Justice did not tell all.

If one firm alone had received $19,000 and there are something like eight firms included, what will the Colony expect of that Labrador Boundary? If each of these firms was entitled to a retainer of $10,000 it looked as if it would cost $250,000. He would like to know how much of this was still hidden. The signature of the Attorney General cost $5,000. That was one of the principal points in the speech from the Throne. Sir Michael then criticized the paragraph referring to the Revenue. That paragraph was merely a conglomeration of words. We all knew that the Revenue was dropping for our purchasing power was gone. In 1914 our total imports were approximately $15,193,000. In 1915 they were $12,500,000; 1916—$18,500,000; 1917—$21,818,810; 1918—$25,000,000; 1919—$22,000,000; 1920—$20,000,000 and there we stopped. Our exports of dried codfish in 1914 were valued at $8,071,000; 1915—$7,332,287; 1916—$10,384,041; 1917—$12,876,847; 1918—$18,829,850; 1919—$14,318,830; 1920—$22,677,625. In 1921 the exports would be in the vicinity of 4 or 5 million dollars, according to his calculations. The average per qt. would not reach $6. The whole country could guess what our exports were to-day. Yet the Minister of Finance looked for a Revenue of $11,000,000. Where was he going to get it? In his manifesto the Premier promised a reduction of taxation, and said that the Ministry of the time was spending $9,000,000, yet the present Ministry of Finance was going to spend nearly $11,000,000. The present Government forgot their self-respect. They increased the Civil Service allocation by nearly $3,000,000. Sir Michael hoped to hear from the Premier as regards his expenditure, shortly. He was going to stay on the job. There was not one member of the Government who had risen to assist any sort of a programme. Thousands of people were starving in the country and it was his duty to ask the Government what they were going to do about it? Why was the Minister of Marine away from the House to-day? What is the general superintendent of fish in the country? No one could sell fish without his permission. He could have sold a cargo of fish in Montreal last spring but he declined to tell the Minister of Marine and Fisheries all his business. Mr. Hue was sent to Montreal as a fish agent at the Colony's expense. He wired that he could sell 10,000 qts. of Labrador at $3 per lb. He got a reply—'Try for 2 cents. If you get 2 cents the F.P.U. will fill the order.' He couldn't get it. But the point was the Minister of Marine kept that information to himself and not a fish man in town knew it. The whole fish business of this country to-day is dominated by one man. The largest firm on Water Street must make an open and sworn statement to the Fisheries Department before they could ship a qt. of fish. Mr. Coaker, an one of the largest exporters in the colony had held back merchant's fish, whilst he loaded his own fish and accepted the offer at a lower price than the merchant had agreed to. Take Mr. Penny of Rames who loaded a cargo in June and had it held over for three months and it was now ruined and yet Mr. Penny had received an offer whilst it was loading. He was going to serve notice on the Premier that the Regulations had to come off before the House closed. Mr. Coaker had sold cargoes of his own whilst he detained the cargoes of other merchants. The men on the other side of the House were all shipped men. The Minister of Posts was secretary of the F.P.U. and yet he had the check to come into the House in an Executive position. Then the Minister of Education was not the man to represent fishermen in the country. He should have had more pluck to sit there and rust out, because he had a $5000 a year job. Why didn't Burin send an independent man to represent it instead of Mr. Foote. Mr. Winsor was a paid servant of Mr. Coaker's. Mr. Samson, too, was a paid servant of W. F. Coaker. Was this an independent House. Some of the people of this country were boycotted. The Ministers of Marine and Posts take advantage of their positions to use confidential information. The Post Office was a disgrace to the country. Even Capt. Gosse was dependent on Mr. Coaker.

Mr. Gosse replied that he sold his fish to Barr without knowing whose money it was.

Sir Michael said that part of the $500,000 allocation went to Barr and the Minister of Marine sent Mr. Gosse to Barr.

Sir Michael then started in to read the sliding scale of Government relief that was being doled out in Harbor Grace District, from one in family to fourteen. One in each family received 6 lbs. of flour and one pint of molasses per week and so on in proportion till the man with 14 in family receives 41 lbs. of flour and 3 1/2 gallons of molasses. Mr. Gosse told Sir Michael not to read it as he well knew what was going on over there. Some of the people receiving this had fish and couldn't sell it. Yet Mr. Gosse sold his fish to Barr. Didn't the Minister of Marine send him to Barr?

Mr. Gosse—'No, but I took Mr. Barr's cheque for it.'

Sir Michael replied that there were not half a dozen people in the town to-day who would take Mr. Barr's cheque. What was being done in Harbor Grace. How many were there to-day hungry? Yet their representative was prepared to vote for the Regulations which helped to put the country in its present position. What had Mr. Barnes done to keep his election promises? He was to-day the head of a department which was a disgrace to the colony. He was going to make him get up and talk!

Sir Michael then referred to the herring fishery. Last year he said there was no herring fishery in Green Bay whilst a few years ago it was worth over $1,000,000. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries had never mentioned herring in the House because he was not interested in it. Sir Michael then touched briefly on the cod oil question and the seal fishery. Mr. Coaker had increased the price of seals at Hr. Grace by 36 cents but it costs more than that for the men to have their seals taken to that place.

The Pulp and Paper industry was Newfoundland's only redemption to-day.

Sir Michael then referred to the Escaumont shipment. The fish on that vessel was purchased as a speculation by Water Street merchants who sold it to Rumania. The F.P.U. had 8000 qts. of fish in that shipment. That fish went to Rumania. Mr. Hepburn went over to look after it and when he got to Rumania the fish was rotten. He sold the fish, however, under very un-advantageous conditions, and he received bonds for it. The cargo amounted to $1,250,000 and the Government was asked to guarantee these Rumanian bonds. This the Government refused to do and the British Government did likewise. The fishermen again tackled our Government and he, as Finance Minister was present at the time, and was responsible, in the face of great opposition, turning the proposition down. Mr. Coaker was at this time, sulking in Port Union. Sir J. C. Crosbie who was present at the discussion would confirm his statement that he turned down the proposition of guaranteeing the Rumanian bonds. Water Street was still owed $1,000,000 by Rumania and he was thankful he had foresight enough to see what the result of guaranteeing these bonds would have been. Last year he had sold Mr. Hallyard the Post Office worth $70,000. Was that collected, yet? He was the head of that department and he did not know what to do with it. Whilst the Minister was secretary of the F.P.U. how could he look after his department. Nothing was heard about the Rumanian bonds after the discussion because if anything had been said they would have been minus M. P. Cashin and they couldn't do without him at this time. Sir Michael then told another story. In October the English exchange was low and the Government could have sent the amount of interest due on a certain loan at a great saving, for when they did send it, the exchange had risen and $60,000 was lost to the Colony. Not one man on the Government side of the House knew his business. They were absolutely deficient in intelligence. If they had managed things properly they would be $500,000 better off to-day. Never since Responsible Government had Newfoundland been treated to such a rotten Administration. It wasn't etiquette to give the names of bond holders at the Customs, supporters of the present Government, but it was etiquette to table the names of bond holders in his (Sir Michael's) Administration. The Government was now run by the heads of one of the biggest corporations in the country. It was the greatest scandal known to have the Minister of Marine, head of the F.P.U., using confidential information for his own ends. The regulations must come off before the House closed. The whole country was clamouring to lay against the Government. Sir Michael then dealt briefly and in an ironical vein with the aeroplane. Thousands of dollars had been spent on them and what use had they been. The whole story of the aeroplanes would probably be told before the House closed. Dealing with the Trade Commissioners he said, they were costing $100,000. There was no more money to pay them, so wasn't it time to recall them. The Government was insolvent. What hope would the Premier have now of raising a loan! The per capita tax was now $46 but at the time of the general election the present Premier had said it would be $28. Why hadn't the $250,000 tax been collected from the Nova Scotia Iron and Steel Co? There was not a department in the Civil Service to-day that wasn't a disgrace. The Minister of Public Works was an old political hypocrite. He had handed out $7000 for snow shovelling in Hr. Mala. What was there to show for it? The roads were not now fit for traffic! Wasn't all this proof that the Department of Public Works was rotten. As regards the German Indemnity Sir Michael said we deserved a part of it, but was that the only hope the Premier had to hold out to the country? If so, it was a poor one! Then, what about the National Bank? He had something to say to Mr. Scammell about that, but he was not present now. Sir Michael next referred to shipbuilding and queried as to how much would be lost in that direction. Sir Michael referred to the Premier's denial that he was a shareholder of the Star. The Star is registered at the Registry Office in the names of three men with shares of $10

the Italians whilst we were placed out of the running by the Regulations. The Minister of Marine had hardly left the country before he was betrayed. What did the Premier do when he was in London? He talked a lot but he did nothing. Many an uneducated man has forgotten more than the Premier knows. He (Sir John) knew about the Government guarantee from the first, because one of the men who got it told him. Yet three F.P.U. men landed 400 qts. of fish in his store which was still there. He had given them $4.00 a quintal for it to help them out. His patience was severely tried by what were called fish inspectors. A man sent down 400 cases of Labrador fish to him from the North. The fish was undoubtedly choice, but the inspectors refused to mark it so. He then sent for the chief inspector who, after examining the fish, said he was not an inspector. He was the head of that department and he did not know what to do with it. Whilst the Minister was secretary of the F.P.U. how could he look after his department. Nothing was heard about the Rumanian bonds after the discussion because if anything had been said they would have been minus M. P. Cashin and they couldn't do without him at this time. each. He was going to prove that the Premier was the man who was handling the Star. The Star, in fact, owes the Premier so much money that he owns it. He actually pays the staff of the Star. Was that not undeniable proof of the Premier owning the Star? Mr. Squires might not be the owner of the Star, however, because he might owe to someone else the money that paper owed him. Sir Michael then referred to the amendment which he had moved on Tuesday. He said it had been moved in all earnestness because the Fish Regulations had practically ruined the country. The enormous amount of harm they had done would be felt in the next twelve months. Sir Michael concluded with a strong appeal to the House to pass the amendment, for if they didn't he would take other means to have the Regulations removed. He asked the Government as men to forget their own interests and vote for the amendment. Let that obnoxious Act be cleared once and for all from the Statute Book. It was their duty to act on behalf of the poor fishermen of the island. (Sir Michael was loudly applauded on making his seat.)

Sir John Crosbie rose to second the amendment. He expressed his sympathy with the late Hon. W. B. Grieve. He also regretted the absence of the Finance Minister. He was in a unique position. He had tried to save the Government from themselves, but it was an impossible task. He had objected strongly to the Fish Regulations, and now they had brought disaster to the country. There were men in Conception Bay to-day starving because they could not sell a cod's tail. Mr. Gosse had sold his fish because he had a pull. The Fish Regulations were the most drastic curse ever put on a free country. Why should the Premier be captain of a ship and allow another man to direct her course; 265,000 quintals of foreign fish was sold to the Italians whilst we were placed out of the running by the Regulations. The Minister of Marine had hardly left the country before he was betrayed. What did the Premier do when he was in London? There were men in Conception Bay to-day starving because they could not sell a cod's tail. Mr. Gosse had sold his fish because he had a pull. The Fish Regulations were the most drastic curse ever put on a free country. Why should the Premier be captain of a ship and allow another man to direct her course; 265,000 quintals of foreign fish was sold to the Italians whilst we were placed out of the running by the Regulations. The Minister of Marine had hardly left the country before he was betrayed. What did the Premier do when he was in London? He talked a lot but he did nothing. Many an uneducated man has forgotten more than the Premier knows. He (Sir John) knew about the Government guarantee from the first, because one of the men who got it told him. Yet three F.P.U. men landed 400 qts. of fish in his store which was still there. He had given them $4.00 a quintal for it to help them out. His patience was severely tried by what were called fish inspectors. A man sent down 400 cases of Labrador fish to him from the North. The fish was undoubtedly choice, but the inspectors refused to mark it so. He then sent for the chief inspector who, after examining the fish, said he was not an inspector. He was the head of that department and he did not know what to do with it. Whilst the Minister was secretary of the F.P.U. how could he look after his department. Nothing was heard about the Rumanian bonds after the discussion because if anything had been said they would have been minus M. P. Cashin and they couldn't do without him at this time. Sir Michael then told another story. In October the English exchange was low and the Government could have sent the amount of interest due on a certain loan at a great saving, for when they did send it, the exchange had risen and $60,000 was lost to the Colony. Not one man on the Government side of the House knew his business. They were absolutely deficient in intelligence. If they had managed things properly they would be $500,000 better off to-day. Never since Responsible Government had Newfoundland been treated to such a rotten Administration. It wasn't etiquette to give the names of bond holders at the Customs, supporters of the present Government, but it was etiquette to table the names of bond holders in his (Sir Michael's) Administration. The Government was now run by the heads of one of the biggest corporations in the country. It was the greatest scandal known to have the Minister of Marine, head of the F.P.U., using confidential information for his own ends. The regulations must come off before the House closed. The whole country was clamouring to lay against the Government. Sir Michael then dealt briefly and in an ironical vein with the aeroplane. Thousands of dollars had been spent on them and what use had they been. The whole story of the aeroplanes would probably be told before the House closed. Dealing with the Trade Commissioners he said, they were costing $100,000. There was no more money to pay them, so wasn't it time to recall them. The Government was insolvent. What hope would the Premier have now of raising a loan! The per capita tax was now $46 but at the time of the general election the present Premier had said it would be $28. Why hadn't the $250,000 tax been collected from the Nova Scotia Iron and Steel Co? There was not a department in the Civil Service to-day that wasn't a disgrace. The Minister of Public Works was an old political hypocrite. He had handed out $7000 for snow shovelling in Hr. Mala. What was there to show for it? The roads were not now fit for traffic! Wasn't all this proof that the Department of Public Works was rotten. As regards the German Indemnity Sir Michael said we deserved a part of it, but was that the only hope the Premier had to hold out to the country? If so, it was a poor one! Then, what about the National Bank? He had something to say to Mr. Scammell about that, but he was not present now. Sir Michael next referred to shipbuilding and queried as to how much would be lost in that direction. Sir Michael referred to the Premier's denial that he was a shareholder of the Star. The Star is registered at the Registry Office in the names of three men with shares of $10 each. He was going to prove that the Premier was the man who was handling the Star. The Star, in fact, owes the Premier so much money that he owns it. He actually pays the staff of the Star. Was that not undeniable proof of the Premier owning the Star? Mr. Squires might not be the owner of the Star, however, because he might owe to someone else the money that paper owed him. Sir Michael then referred to the amendment which he had moved on Tuesday. He said it had been moved in all earnestness because the Fish Regulations had practically ruined the country. The enormous amount of harm they had done would be felt in the next twelve months. Sir Michael concluded with a strong appeal to the House to pass the amendment, for if they didn't he would take other means to have the Regulations removed. He asked the Government as men to forget their own interests and vote for the amendment. Let that obnoxious Act be cleared once and for all from the Statute Book. It was their duty to act on behalf of the poor fishermen of the island. (Sir Michael was loudly applauded on making his seat.)

Sir John Crosbie rose to second the amendment. He expressed his sympathy with the late Hon. W. B. Grieve. He also regretted the absence of the Finance Minister. He was in a unique position. He had tried to save the Government from themselves, but it was an impossible task. He had objected strongly to the Fish Regulations, and now they had brought disaster to the country. There were men in Conception Bay to-day starving because they could not sell a cod's tail. Mr. Gosse had sold his fish because he had a pull. The Fish Regulations were the most drastic curse ever put on a free country. Why should the Premier be captain of a ship and allow another man to direct her course; 265,000 quintals of foreign fish was sold to

Footballer-Poet Marries Wealthy Girl

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN ROMANCE

One of the greatest romances of modern times, the marriage of England's richest girl to an obscure Michigan poet, is reported by the "Sunday Express." The bride is Miss Winifred Ellerman, wealthiest and most powerful of shipping magnates, and the bridegroom is Mr. Robert L. M'Almon, an American footballer, who some time ago took to writing verse. Sir John and Lady Ellerman knew nothing of any engagement, and the first they heard of the wedding was a cable announcing that it had taken place and that the couple were coming to England in order that the bridegroom might make the acquaintance of his bride's relatives. They arrived a few days ago, and were met at Liverpool by Lady Ellerman.

Mr. and Mrs. M'Almon are now living at Sir John Ellerman's great London residence in South Audley Street, where the bridegroom is making his first acquaintance with English society conditions as they exist in the home of a multi-millionaire.

The story of the brief engagement and the unannounced wedding reads like that of the hero and heroine of fiction.

Miss Ellerman, who is an extremely pretty girl, 25 years of age, arrived in America last year with Mrs. Richard Aldington, the poetess who writes under the name of "Hilda Doolittle." Mrs. Aldington toured in Western America, and returned to New York last month.

Shortly afterwards Miss Ellerman, according to the New York "World," met Mr. M'Almon, and the marriage took place within a fortnight.

The bridegroom is 30 years of age. Twelve or thirteen years ago his name was well known to the American sporting public as a footballer who was one of the stars of the Michigan University team. Later he edited an aviation publication, and has since devoted himself mainly to poetry.

Sir John Ellerman is the controller of many great shipping lines, and three or four years ago it was said that on a moderate estimate he was worth £20,000,000. He owns a big residence in Eastbourne, and five years ago he bought Salford Castle, from the Earl of Erroll.

Royal Nicknames.

History records innumerable instances of kings and queens who were renamed by their subjects. Because of some peculiarity or virtue they were given a nickname that described their characters or referred to something they had done.

Alfred, king of the West Saxons, was called the Great, because he was a great soldier and a great lawyer as well as a great king who laid the foundations of the English monarchical system. Seventy years after Alfred the Great, Ethelred the Unready came to the throne. His nickname was given him because of his lack of foresight which caused him to lose many of the fruits of Alfred's victories.

In those far-distant days men were very fond of bestowing such nicknames upon their monarchs. Thus we have Edward the Confessor and William the Conqueror. In later days came Henry VIII, who was known as "Bluff King Hal." His daughter Mary, who became queen at his death, was called "Bloody Mary" because of her persecution of the Protestants. She was succeeded by her half-sister, Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen.

In recent times Queen Victoria is remembered as "the Good," and her son, Edward VII, as "the Peace-maker."

Possibly the strongest and one of the least complimentary nicknames ever bestowed upon a king was that given to a Jewish monarch some centuries before Christ was born. We read about him in the Bible (Hosea V-13). King Jereb, as he was called, was known as "King Pick Quarrel." Apparently he was a quarrelsome and contentious man always getting himself and others into trouble. He had an army to back him up. Possibly without his soldiers King Pick Quarrel would not have been so troublesome. Quarrelsome people are often cowardly as well and they are not fond of disturbing others stronger than themselves unless they have "the gang" at their backs. That explains why the school bully ill-treats only boys smaller than himself and why he is careful to behave himself towards his equals.

Although Jereb was a king with an army of his own that might have helped the oppressed, his ill-nature prevented his being an instrument for good. We read that Ephraim and Judah were in trouble. They turned to Jereb in Assyria for help but he could do nothing for them. The reason for this is not given, but one of several causes must have explained his inaction. He may have been afraid, or his quarrelsome nature may have led him into a dispute with the messengers from Palestine. Perhaps his army was not so large as he had boasted. He may have wanted a large sum for his services, more than poor Ephraim and Judah could afford to pay, for bullies and pick-quarrels are always greedy. One thing is quite sure, and it is that quarrelsome and bad-tempered people are of very little use in the world. They seldom want to help from unselfish motives and they are always ready to stir up strife. Their room is always preferable to their company.

London's Haunted Theatres.

The last place in the world where one would expect to find a genuine ghost is in a theatre.

Yet there are three theatres in London and the suburbs which are known to be haunted, says a writer in a London paper.

There is a theatre within half a mile of Piccadilly Circus that contains a box which is periodically haunted by the ghost of a clown. One of the women whose duty it is to dust and clean the auditorium told the writer that when she was alone in front of the house one morning she suddenly had the feeling that somebody was looking at her. On raising her eyes she was startled to see a white painted face staring down at her from one of the boxes nearest the stage.

"I know," she said, "it could not be one of the performers, because it was too early for any of them to be in the theatre. Besides, why should they want to put on such a make-up? I had to keep looking up, for the face fascinated me.

"Then suddenly, I was called by another woman who was 'helping me.' The moment she spoke the thing vanished, and I began to laugh hysterically.

"The other woman made fun of me. She had not seen anything, and the idea amused her vastly. However, I learned from the doorkeeper that several other people had seen the face, and that it had appeared periodically for years.

"Mind you say nothing about it to the management," the door-keeper

Llewellyn Club Enjoys Flipper Supper.

About 100 members of the Llewellyn Club and their friends enjoyed a flipper supper in their rooms last night. The supper was organized by lady friends of the Association. Amongst those present were Rev. Canon Smart, Revs. Williamson, Clayton, Moulton and Legge. After supper had been served and some brief remarks made by the chairman, Mr. L. Colley gave a reading entitled "When the Flippers struck the Town."

Rev. Canon spoke of the work of the Club since its establishment and its steady growth. He also referred to Dunfield Boys' Bible Class, whom he hoped to see members in the years to come. Speeches were also made by Rev. Moulton and Rev. Williamson, the latter's topic being "Brotherhood." For half an hour he dealt with his subject pointing out the great necessity of a Brotherhood and the great Christian duty of helping one another. He asked that the Llewellyn Club join the Brotherhood.

Rev. Dr. Jones, who acted as Chairman, thanked Rev. Williamson for his splendid address and said the policy of Llewellyn Club was the betterment of mankind, and if they could help out any other organization they were always ready to do it. Songs by different members and guests were rendered during the evening and an address was given by Rev. Canon Smart. A vote of thanks to the ladies was unanimously carried after which the National Anthem closed a pleasant evening.

A third theatre is haunted by a yellow cat, which is said to be seen sitting outside one of the dressing room doors before any of the cast fall suddenly ill.

Naval Prize Money.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In reply to a letter of Skipper Rodgers, R.N.R., published in your paper of yesterday's date in reference to prize money, the writer says the Government has not received the prize money. Let me tell you that they have. I was told by the Paymaster of the Briton that the money in question had been paid over to the Government. The Government is only bluffing us. Two years ago we were promised our War Medals and the 1914 Star, but so far we have not received them. Is it that we are not entitled to them? The patience of the sailors is now nearly exhausted and with further delay there will likely be trouble in store for the parties responsible.

Yours truly,
ONE RETURNED.

Clyde's Captain Congratulated.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Permit me space in your esteemed paper to say a few words in regard to C.N.'s items of March 1st. I wonder if C.N. has been out in the ice in Placentia Bay in his motor boat? I venture to say he hasn't, or his fingers would have been too cramped to write. If the Clyde had been at Placentia she would have been jammed. Therefore Capt. Murphy and crew deserve great credit for bringing their ship through without serious mishap, and enabling us to get our mails and freight regularly.

Thanking you in anticipation.
Yours truly,

The Only Solvent Nation.

Sir Patrick McGrath, in his speech at the M. C. L. I. dinner last night, made the marvellous statement that Great Britain, of all the nations of the world, was the only one that could and is paying her way. Besides doing this, she also saved 200,000,000 pounds towards paying off her enormous war debt, a truly wonderful achievement, said the speaker, in the face of conditions as they appertain in the world to-day.

Poor Asylum Inmates Entertained.
The inmates of the Poor Asylum yesterday afternoon were the guests of the ladies of the Mission and two pleasant hours were spent. His Excellency the Governor, whose generous contributions of candy, tobacco and pipes was greatly appreciated, was present in person and received a loyal and enthusiastic welcome. It was a great disappointment to all that Lady Harris was unable, through temporary indisposition, to be with them. A bountiful supply of cakes had been provided and the brief interlude was thoroughly enjoyed. Superintendent Miller is doing good work in the asylum, which is being kept scrupulously clean and as attractive as so contracted a building can be. Many improvements have been introduced, which add to the comfort of the inmates. Mr. Miller is proving a worthy and efficient successor to Superintendent Pridoux, who retired recently owing to ill-health after many years of faithful service. It is pleasing to know that the ladies of the Mission are continuing the activities of previous years and in doing so are receiving the cordial co-operation and good wishes of the Governor and his Lady. Time spent in helping those who, many of them through no fault of their own have been unable to help themselves, is time well spent.—Com.

Thetis in Port.

WITH FULL LOAD.

S.S. Thetis, Capt. W. C. Winsor, arrived in port yesterday at 4 p.m., with a full load of prime young hares. The Thetis struck the patch with the rest of the fleet on March 27th and managed to get 12,000. In the storm over 3,000 seals were lost but Capt. Winsor kept on the track of the herd and under very trying conditions picked up a load. The Seal and Ranger also remained in the patch and got good trips: Capt. Winsor reports that ice and weather conditions were the worst in his many years experience, making it very bad for the men to work, whilst it was almost impossible for the ship to force through the ice barrier. The Thetis has 1800 seals on deck while every space below is filled. The white-coats average 50 lbs. The crew are in excellent health, there being no sickness amongst them during the voyage.

Posthumous Honor.

Mrs. John Fleming of St. Vincent was the recipient on March 18th of a beautiful cross from H. Guthrie, Minister of Militia and Defence, Ottawa, in memory of her late son, Pte. Francis J. Fleming, who in the Great War died for his King and country, and is now resting somewhere in France.

Your grave lies far "Somewhere in France." A place we cannot see. But as long as life and memory last, We will remember thee.—R.I.P. St. Vincent, April 11th, 1921.

Must be Repealed.

"The Fish Export Regulations," said Sir Michael Cashin, Leader of the Opposition in the House of Assembly, yesterday afternoon, "must be repealed. Their repeal is not only a duty that Government members owe their constituents, but an obligation to Newfoundland as well." Incalculable damage, irreparable damage has been done to Newfoundland by the operation of the iniquitous price fixing of fish in foreign markets made law by the present Government; a law which has militated, not only against exporters themselves, but what is infinitely worse, against the fishermen. There can be no half measures in a case of this sort. Honorable members must take one course or the other. They were dragged—least some of them were—into voting for the application of the Fish Regulations drafted at the request of Mr. Coaker, and this afternoon or evening it will be put up to them squarely to either vote for or against the amendment to the Speech from the Throne, moved in the Assembly yesterday afternoon by Sir Michael Cashin and seconded by Sir John Crosbie, the address of the latter not being concluded at the time of writing.

Lest the effect of the amendment to the Address and Reply be under-estimated by those in whose interests it has been made, we venture at the risk of repetition to again give it publicity, in its construction as read by Sir Michael when he rose in his seat in the House on Tuesday last to propose the motion for its adoption:—

"WHEREAS the policy of the Regulations of the marketing of the Colony's staple product," referred to by Your Excellency, was first put into force in November, 1919, by means of Rules and Regulations made and proclaimed by you, with the advice and consent of the present Executive, and subsequently re-made and re-proclaimed under the pretended authority of the War Measures Act;

AND WHEREAS your Ministers claim that the aforesaid policy and rules were the sole issue at two bye-elections to this Assembly, held before the first session, and were approved thereof by the electors;

AND WHEREAS the measure under which so-called Rules and Regulations were made in 1920, and differently enforced until quite recently, was introduced into this Assembly as a Government Measure;

AND WHEREAS the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, speaking on behalf of the Government, declared to a Convention of Licensed Exporters, so called, in September, 1920, that "we consider these rules a part of our policy, we will not waver (in their enforcement) until there has been time to test whether they are good or bad, for this season will prove whether they are valuable or valueless," and "if (after trial) it can be shown they are injurious, or not beneficial we shall say they have been tried and failed, and we will forego any further attempt to control the fixing of the prices of fish for the foreign markets."

AND WHEREAS, as the result of experience gained in 1920, the Licensed Exporters have unanimously requested the repeal of all the Rules and Regulations, and the Codfish Exportation Board, so called, has recommended the repeal, and they have been repealed accordingly by you;

AND WHEREAS, Your Excellency, speaking for the Government, admits that "the practical application of the policy has met with adventures as well as inherent difficulties" and has asked us as legislators to consider that policy in the best interests of the Colony, her commerce and people;

BE IT RESOLVED, that we are of opinion—

1. that the policy has not been beneficial;
2. that any attempt to continue it would be detrimental to the public good;
3. that uncertainty will be most hampering to trade;
4. that while the measure authorizing the making of Rules and Regulations remains unrepealed, the suppliers and exporters of the Colony will be disinclined to venture into the fishing business as fully as they otherwise would, and
5. that, therefore, in our opinion, "The Act to Regulate the Exportation of Salt Codfish" should be immediately repealed.

There is not a fishing hamlet, a fishing settlement, a fishing village, a fishing center, a fishing town in the whole colony of Newfoundland which has not suffered from the altogether illegal operation of these Fish Regulations, made statutory by the application of the War Measures Act, an Act which should have been wiped off the Legal Code six months after peace was declared, but which was resurrected by Messrs. Squires, Coaker & Company to put into operation laws destined to almost ruin and cripple the chief industry of this country, and which have brought her perilously near the verge of bankruptcy. There was no justification for the passage of this Act. Its spirit was contrary to all the laws governing economic conditions and trade relations with foreign countries purchasing our fish products. There was no excuse, no necessity for it, nationally, but in order that an inflated policy might be directed by half a dozen people, who expected and anticipated getting-rich-quick, these Fish Regulations were rammed down the throats of all the exporters of Newfoundland, who were never once asked for an expression of opinion on them as to whether they interfered with their legitimate trade or not. But shortly in the People's House, the People's Representatives will be offered an opportunity of proving whether or not they are capable of asserting their independence, and releasing themselves from that state of political bondage into which they have, apparently, voluntarily gone. So far as F.P.U. members of the House are concerned, they will, volens volens vote on the amendment as their political chief directs. Small blame to them, for they but live, move and have their being through Mr. Coaker, who made them, and who with the same undisputed power at his command, yet unchallenged, can unmake them, and cast them into the outer darkness surrounding all who dare disobey the instructions or orders of the Supreme President. But there are four members of the House on the Government side, representing the great fishing districts of the West Coast: Foote and Cheeseman for Burin; Warren for Fortune Bay and Small for Burgeo & LaPoile. There are also Gosse and Archibald for Hr. Grace. The Minister of Education does not matter. He will vote Coaker anyhow. The repeal or restoration of the Fish Regulations rests, therefore with Messrs. Foote, Cheeseman, Warren, Small, Archibald and Gosse. Will they, when the vote is taken, acquit themselves like men and save their districts and constituents from financial annihilation, or will they go on record as the pawns of Coaker, false to their trust and unworthy of the confidence of the fishermen who sent them to the Assembly to uphold and maintain the rights of a free people. "THE REGULATIONS," said Sir Michael, "MUST BE REPEALED." The gentlemen named, with those of the Opposition have the chance of their political career. WHAT WILL THEIR ATTITUDE BE?

Where the Money Goes.

In answer to a question of Dr. Jones, asking for a statement of Marine Expenditure in Harbor Main District during 1920-21, when it was certain a bye-election was pending, the following information was tabled by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

June 21, Capt. J. Seivour, Gasters	100.00
June 28, Michael Cole, Bacon Cove	50.00
August 26, Richard Hibbs, Fox Trap	499.10
September 10, Wm. J. Butler, Fox Trap	201.09
September 16, Thomas Terry, Chapel's Cove	405.00
September 24, Barnes and Bursell, Topsail	1000.00
November 15, Joseph Dawe, Long Pond	96.81
December 15, J. K. Bursell, Topsail	500.00
January 10, W. J. Butler, Fox Trap	37.18
February 8, J. K. Bursell, Topsail	175.00
Total	$3064.28

The following bill was also tabled:

To E. Colishaw, Fox Trap	480.00
Freight to Wabana	240.00
Freight from Wabana to Fox Trap	144.00
Grand Total	$864.00

The following are the contractors who supply beef and mutton to the Public Institutions:—
Sanatorium—Wm. Casey and Patk. Warren, (half supply each) 30c. per lb. Only tender received.
Poor Asylum—Murphy and Bambrick, 1st 3 months 25c., next 6 months 30c., last 3 months 25c., average 29c. per lb. Lowest tenders.
Penitentiary—Patrick Warren, 29c. per lb. Lowest tenders.
Fever Hospital—William Thompson, 35c. per lb. Only tender received.
Lunatic Asylum—Tender Wm. Campbell, average 28c., tender Peter Casey, average 28c. Awarded Wm. Campbell.
General Hospital—Tender Patk. J. Casey, 31c., tender Peter Casey, average 27 1/2c. Awarded Patk. J. Casey. In the last two cases the highest tenders were accepted. Why? Was it for political reasons that Mr. Peter Casey was not allowed to supply the institutions even though he was satisfied to cater at a lower price. We wonder.

Things Political.

HAD QUIET SESSION.—Everything passed off quietly at yesterday's session and no reference whatever was made to the scene which occurred on Wednesday afternoon. The very best the Government could have done under the circumstances was to allow the affair to blow over, for they were undoubtedly in the wrong and they know it.

PUBLIC OPINION.—Whilst I think everyone regrets the occurrence of Wednesday afternoon, none will say that it was entirely unexpected. For too long now have the people been groaning under the burdens imposed on them by the present Government, and they are not now in a mood for quibbling. Wednesday's affair was merely an inkling of what may happen if the people lose all control.

FOUR MR. GOSSE.—Mr. Gosse was quite angry yesterday afternoon because the Leader of the Opposition dared to accuse him of taking advantage of his place on the Government side of the House to sell his fish. Isn't it a shame that poor Mr. Gosse should take it so badly. I presume the fact that his constituents are not able to sell their fish and are receiving poor relief does not worry the hon. member so long as he is alright himself.

A SPLENDID EFFORT.—The six hour address of Sir Michael Cashin was a splendid effort and never has a Government had to sit still in the face of such forcible criticism. No one could be better informed on public affairs than the Leader of the Opposition and he used his knowledge to full advantage when making his great speech. There was hardly a member of the Government who did not feel the lash of his tongue, and judging from the way they looked they took it very badly.

$19.80.—All our Men's Fifty Dollar Suits at Nineteen-Eighty is the offer at BISHOP'S this week. These English Tweed and Cloth Suits will not last long at this ridiculously low figure. The material would cost you more if you purchase them as pound tweed. Consider again the price, only $19.80.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY & LADIES' AUXILIARY.—St. Andrew's Ladies' Auxiliary Bridge Party, Club Rooms, to-morrow afternoon. Play at 3.30 sharp. At night Card Party and Dance. Cards at 8.30.—apr14/21

Another Bluff Called.

THE OPOTTO IMPORTERS AND THE REGULATIONS.

(Daily News)
A day or two ago the Coaker organ gave prominence to a communication addressed to "His Excellency," the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, while he was in Opotto, which was alleged to represent the views of "some of the codfish importers of Opotto." This communication, thus anonymously signed, represented that the Opotto importers believed that the Coaker regulations were beneficial and commended the work of that gentleman. It may not have been a forgery, but its statements were untrue and did not represent the view of the principal handlers of our fish in that market. Recently copies of the document have been received by the exporters here and with it, a communication signed by all of the Opotto importers, except the International Mercantile Co., repudiating it and attributing it to "some irresponsible person or persons." Their letter, which is certified by the British Vice-Consul at Opotto, reads as follows:—

"An anonymous printed letter addressed to the Hon. W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, St. John's, Newfoundland, and signed 'Some of the Codfish Importers of Opotto,' dated Opotto, February, 1921, has come into the hands of the undersigned.

"As the said letter, composed of a curious combination of English words, may be considered by some to be a protest against the lifting of the Regulations, the undersigned Importers, signatories to the telegram recently sent to the Advisory Board protesting against the Regulations, desire to explain that neither the letter nor the view expressed therein emanated from any one of them and may therefore be disregarded as being a weak attempt on the part of some irresponsible person or persons to frustrate the legitimate aspirations of the real Importers, all of whom with the exception of the International Mercantile Co., append their signatures:—
J. H. Andresson, Succors, Aristides Guimaraes, Laidley & Cia., Lind & Couto, E. A. Lopes & Co., Gullhermo Machado & Co., Martine de Souza & Co., Pala for the Sociedade Importadora de Exportacao, Sociedade Importadora de Balcacao, Sociedade Mercantil Industrial Ld., Uniao Importadora."

Opotto, 8th March, 1921.
British Consulate, Opotto.
I hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy of document which was presented to me, and which I have returned to the presenter after having marked it with the letters "C. D.", and initialed it.

HANOVER GRANT,
Vice-Consul.
Opotto, March 19, 1921.

Accompanying the above were copies of the messages that passed between the Opotto Importers and the Opotto buyers in regard to the regulations which will be read with interest. At the time it was reported that the Opotto concerns had cabled the Advisory Board that if they were compelled to buy through the International Mercantile, as Mr. Coaker was said to have arranged, they would refuse to have anything further to do with this country. This is now proved to be a fact, and doubtless was a big factor in bringing about the request made by the exporters for the removal of the regulations as they applied to that market. The messages referred to are as follows:—

Copy of Telegram Received From The Advisory Board on 11th February.
"Are assured by Coaker no monopoly created for Mercantile. Arrangement with them merely ensures financial assistance for benefit of all your importers as well as our exporters. It is temporary arrangement made merely to overcome conditions at present existing in Portugal, due to difficulty securing sterling exchange. Also to regulate shipments according to market requirements and thus avoid necessity of importers cutting prices among themselves and making losses of shippers heavier than they necessarily must be. Arrangements only applicable last year's fish. We ask your support under circumstances as arrangements have been approved here by practically all shippers as only means to save serious losses. Sales will be made by Smith and prices subject our approval."
—ADVISORY BOARD.

Copy of Telegram Sent to Advisory Board on 12th February.
"Full meeting importers held; consider your telegram only aggravates position. Your statement that no monopoly created for Mercantile does not agree with our information received from Saint John's shippers. Importers here resent suggestions that they require financial assistance, is absolutely untrue. There is no difficulty here in securing sterling exchange. Present position congestion of market undoubtedly due entirely to Coaker's misguided regulations, otherwise cargoes now here would have been disposed of long ago at better prices than now ruling. Regulations have only benefited Norway and Iceland to detriment of Newfoundland. Importers resolve unanimously and strongly emphasize they will only deal direct with

C. L. B. CADETS.

OUTERBRIDGE SHIELD COMPETITION.

The C.L.B. Cadets held their best parade for the season last night, over 140 all ranks, being present. The following officers were present in kit: Lt.-Col. Goodridge, Capt. Henry, Miles, Outerbridge and Snow, and Lieut. Rendell, Winter, L. Hayward, H. Hayward, King, Mitty and Perlin. After prayers had been read by Rev. J. Brinton, the Outerbridge Shield Competition was held. This Shield is presented to the best all-round section and is held for a year when it is again competed for. A great deal of friendly rivalry is generated by this competition and it is always a keen one. The contest was judged by Lt.-Col. Goodridge and the names of the winning section will be announced shortly.

Following are extracts from orders for the week ending April 21st: Orderly Officer for week, Lieut. L. Hayward; next for duty, Lieut. A. B. Perlin; Duty Section, No. 2 F Co.; Duty Chaplain, Rev. J. Brinton. Sergeant-Major A. Hammond, Royal Nfld. Regiment, is taken on the strength and is attached to the Gymnasium as Instructor, and is granted the rank of Co. Sergeant Major Instructor, to date 16th April, 1921.

The C.L.B.C. Athletic Association is now getting down to work and arrangements are being made to bring out a wrestling tournament on May 28th and, and the indoor sports on May 3rd. The wrestling tournament will be called the "Staford Championship" and competitors will be arranged in the various weights and open to all comers. There will be gold medals for winners and silver cups for the champions in each weight.

The Officer's Mess held their regular monthly meeting last night. A resolution of condolence was passed to Mrs. J. W. Withers on the death of her husband, who was always a true friend to the Brigade. The Secretary was also directed to draft a letter of thanks to F. W. Hayward, Esq., for so kindly presenting a cup to be awarded to the Mess ping pong champion each year. The matter of the annual dinner was discussed and was left in the hands of the Mess Committee. A meeting of the Mess will be held next Thursday to receive the report of the Kit Committee.

"Ruddigore".

The year 1921 will count amongst its many successes the production of "Ruddigore". And though dull times have come upon us generally, yet crowds are attracted nightly to the Casino to spend three hours of perfect happiness—no worries when eyes are riveted on the youthful performers of Ruddigore. Last night's rendition was faultless. The bridesmaids looked prettier than ever, whilst their voices rang the hall with a "tunefulness and sweetness" that was entrancing. The Murgatroyd legend was splendid. Dame Hannah voice and action were at their best. Rose added new laurels to those of the previous nights. Richard stepped the Hornpipe to deafening applause, and in the duet with Sir Despard the audience went wild with enthusiasm. Despard and Robin played their parts in wonderful style, and never have we seen such harmonious madness and clever acting from "teens" as from Mad Margaret, who has just entered them. The Ghosts play a great part in Act II, and did it well, whilst their leader, Sir Roderick, showed that were it not for the Witch's Curse he would be the "gentle and artistic" Baronet of Ruddigore. The ballad of "The Great Oak Tree" by Hannah and Roderick is harmonised with "genuine" pathos and sentiment in "Hey knock a-day". The final chorus is a brilliant finale to a charming opera. The orchestra is well rendered by the talented musicians, who circle around Professor Hutton. The opera will be repeated to-night, and on to-morrow the curtain will rise for the final performance.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

UNDERSTAND YE.
By your leave I am going to paraphrase a familiar injunction from the highest source to-day.
The injunction in its original form is: "Bear ye one another's burdens."
My paraphrase is: "Understand ye one another's burdens."
I don't mean that I mean to substitute my injunction—just to suggest it as an addendum.
It helps to be understood.
Even when we can't bear one another's burdens we can often help by understanding them—and showing that we do, instead of wilfully misunderstanding and under-rating and depreciating any burden that the other fellow has to bear.
I think this habit of misunderstanding the other person's burden is very common in families.
The wife thinks, "If I could only get away from here the way my husband does! He thinks he works hard but he would find out what a snap he has if he spent a few weeks at home with five children to look after and the cooking and mending and cleaning to do."
While the husband thinks, "It's a pretty serious thing to have the responsibility of a family of seven on your shoulders these days. Suppose I should lose my job? My wife thinks she works hard, but she doesn't know

Strange Tribe of Women

Among the startling discoveries made by Mrs. J. R. Forbes, the well-known woman traveller, who lately returned after wandering for several months from Morocco to Syria, was a tribe of women who live underground. They are to be found in caves in the Tripoli mountains, and come up only once in the course of their lives. That is when they marry and change their abode for that of their husband. Being continually in their underground caves, a remarkable change takes place in their appearance. They become very white in the face, and their eyes become dark and brilliant. As they grow older they are seized with a passion for dyeing their hair with henna. In the daylight these women are almost blind; in fact, they stagger about as though under the influence of drink. Their houses are spacious enough for them to keep all their live stock below the ground, including their camels.

SWEAR OFF TOBACCO

"No-To-Bac" has helped thousands to break the costly, nerve-shattering tobacco habit. Whenever you have a longing for a cigarette, cigar, pipe, or for a chew, just place a harmless No-To-Bac tablet in your mouth instead, to help relieve that awful desire. Shortly the habit may be completely broken, and you are better off mentally, physically, financially. It's so easy, so simple. Get a box of No-To-Bac and if it doesn't release you from all craving for tobacco in any form, your druggist will refund your money without question.
The grey and brown varieties of enamel wares are the most durable.

World Brotherhood Federation.

Under the auspices of the above federation the Rev. I. W. Williamson of Toronto, Canada, has recently concluded a visit to Brigus. During the week evangelistic services were held at night in the Methodist Church, and meetings for men in the afternoon at the Academy Hall. The man and his message gripped the large audience. A vision was received of what is being done to unite men in a constructive programme for human welfare, such as will remain in the lives of many who listened. Mr. Williamson is a strong and eloquent speaker. He is a group of psychology. His evangelism has a satisfactory social emphasis. It is brotherhood evangelism. The last night in the series of meetings was given to a special address dealing with the origin, purpose and programme of the Brotherhood movement, and the part the movement is taking in maintaining half a million Serbian children. The speaker took us from the first meeting thirty years ago, when seven enthusiasts organized the F. S. A. services up to the Congress in London, England, September, 1919, where such leaders of thought and action as Lord Robert Cecil, Arthur Henderson, Sir Gilbert Murray, Lloyd George, Dr. Clifford and the Bishop of London were fired with a united effort to forward the spirit of brotherhood among men. The speaker's description of the different men and the one emphasis was fine. Leaving this portion of his address he turned to the Serbian Relief. The country and its people lived before us. Thousands of little children we saw with their hungry faces turned toward us for bread. The offering taken ran close to one hundred dollars. Every community should try to secure the services of Mr. Williamson. He lifted us above our parochial mindedness and reveals some of the sacrifice and suffering which has saved our empire and our homes.—Com.

Curiosity.

A child learns by asking questions. Men and women learn in the same way. Curiosity is the mother of knowledge. Sometimes a child's curiosity is repressed, silenced, much to the detriment of its mental development. "Don't ask too many questions," is the frequent injunction of parents to the child whose mind is being subjected to the impact of stimulating forces from every direction, and to whom questions are just as inevitable as the sparks which shower from the white hot iron under the blacksmith's hammer. An idiot, child or man asks no questions. It is the awakened intelligence which asks—What? Why? How? Whence? Whither? and runs through the whole gamut of interrogations. In maturer life we become more discriminating regarding the questions we ask, some we recognize as foolish or unwisdom, but all through our days curiosity is largely the measure of our intelligence. Many of our questions are not formulated into words, but every time we consult a dictionary or encyclopaedia; every time we pick up a newspaper or a book; every time we turn an introspective eye upon our own minds, or challenge the facts of the world about us;

TRAINED HEADS.

I think it wise to train our domes to think of pleasant things, of works of art and high class poems, fair brides and wedding rings. When some old gossip comes along to spring a low down tale, I think about the peaks of song, where scandals don't prevail. All thoughts a habit more or less, as in our groove we trot, and if we think about distress, distress will be our lot; and if our thoughts are full of fear, instead of hope and gladness, they'll make our brief existence here a painful thing to see. When I fall sick of mumps or gout, my thoughts are dark as sin, until I force the dark ones out, and let the bright ones in; and I have found this can be done, however great the pain; when one is thinking of the sun he doesn't think of rain. When one is thinking of the hills where sunshine goes to waste, his thoughts are lifted from the pits that have a mildewed taste. I try to think that life is good, however harsh it seems, that all the troubles I've withstood were merely seen in dreams; and, thinking thus, I find that life is wool and two yards wide, and I invite my aunt and wife to take a silver ride.
Brick's Tasteless is the best preparation known for children who are delicate. Taken in half to one teaspoonful doses it works marvellous results. Try a bottle and convince yourself.—Jan 27, 21.

There are many good reasons why you should "KLEAN UP" your house. HERE ARE A FEW—
 Paint preserves wood from decay. A painted house will outlast an unpainted one. People are judged by the appearance of the house they live in, a shabby looking house is a reflection on the people who reside therein. A house which is painted every 4 or 5 years expresses in a forceful manner the cleanliness and character of its occupants. Buy enough "KLEAN UP" Paint now to improve the appearance of your house.

Carson Urges Rivalry in Irish Parliaments.

"Let North and South start their new parliaments with earnest rivalry to demonstrate one to the other how early, generously and honorably they can each treat the minority within their respective jurisdictions and thus remove forever the standing mistrust of centuries, which has kept them apart," said Sir Edward Carson in a statement prepared for Lloyd's Weekly on the eve of the creation of the two parliaments in Ireland. "A start may be difficult," he adds, "but it is only by an effort that the goal will ever be reached." "It is, of course, evident," says Sir Edward, "that we will not start our parliament under the best auspices, having regard to the condition of Ireland at the present moment. But I am no pessimist and I have a great belief in the character and enterprise of the community that will be governed by the new parliament. I think their great ambition will be in the first place to show that it is possible to maintain even closer connection than heretofore with Great Britain, while at the same time solving their own local questions.

"But this will only be possible if we have confidence shown to us, and if there is no interference with our efforts by politicians. I have very little doubt that Mr. Uster is given a fair chance to show an example of just and honest government toward all creeds and classes and will be proud to work with those who have hitherto been in different camps, for the general good of all.

"I only wish that some representative man of the majority in the south and west would attempt the same policy for the southern parliament, and we might then by mutual confidence demonstrate that the ultimate object to be achieved is a constitution which will enable the whole of Ireland to be governed for Ireland's benefit.

"What is taking place to-day in the south and west is no hope or help in solving our difference, but drives us further apart. Every murder committed is really an additional obstacle to any real feeling of brotherhood between those who should be working together for the common good.

"If the northern parliament proves a success and shows what can be done by men who strenuously endeavor to solve their local problems, it may be that contagion of success will permeate the whole country. The tragedy of the situation is that men will not see that in the present condition of affairs in Ireland and in the face of the long history of divisions, historical, political, and religious, it is only by making a start that you can by degrees build up the edifice which should be the ideal of every Irishman.

"We hear a great deal about conferences and self-determination, and it seems to be entirely forgotten that the Government of Ireland Act itself provides for the best means of real self-determination in the powers conferred upon the council of Ireland of meeting together when elected and framing any different legislation which may be acceptable to all interests concerned.

"This is the only true solution, because any other would mean necessary coercion on one part of Ireland by the other. I have seen no proposal so logical and so likely to bring about mutual understanding."—Ex.

"I only wish that some representative man of the majority in the south and west would attempt the same policy for the southern parliament, and we might then by mutual confidence demonstrate that the ultimate object to be achieved is a constitution which will enable the whole of Ireland to be governed for Ireland's benefit.

Radium Never Wears Out.

The word radium, to the average lay mind, has heretofore conveyed only the vaguest of meanings, the general conception being that it is a strange substance, derived from ore by some mysterious means; that it has some magic powers; that it has been used by medical science to fight cancer; that diminutive quantities of it are used in radio-lum watches; that it is a substance almost impossible to secure and that the world's supply is exceedingly small.

In the main this conception is correct, but only partly so. There is nothing mysterious about the process of obtaining radium, and while the present supply of the world is small, the fields of production have scarcely been touched.

For curative purposes the same radium can be used times without number. In expending power it does not lose power except at the rate of about one twenty-fifth of 1 per cent. a year, which means that the metal would lose only half of its potency in 1,500 years.

Joseph M. Flannery, president of a Pittsburgh chemical factory, told medical scientists at a recent clinical congress in New York city that the world's entire annual production of radium is one ounce, which could easily be held in an ordinary table-spoon. For all of this there is a ready demand at an aggregate selling value of three million dollars.

To produce each gram of radium, however, it is necessary to handle 500 tons, or one million pounds of carnotite ore, and 1,500 tons of various chemicals, coal and water, so that the world's annual production involves the use of 50,000 tons, or 1,400 carloads of raw material in the complicated process of refinement to procure enough metal of the desired kind to fill one tablespoon.

In the United States practically all of the carnotite ore is mined in Colorado over a district of approximately four hundred square miles and shipped 2,500 miles to the manufacturing plant in Pittsburgh. As the scientists have scarcely skimmed the possibilities of radium, so the manufacturing companies say they have scarcely begun to touch the available supply of ore. As the precious substance has been proven to be virtually indestructible, it has also been found to be easily recovered by the use of electrical instruments, and in instances where it has been cast into furnaces inadvertently, even in minute quantities, it has been saved from the ashes without any damage.

Unit of Measure.
 The unit of measure of radium is the milligram, about one twenty-thousandth part of an ounce. In practice surgeons generally use a minimum of fifty milligrams, costing $6,000, but in some cases much larger quantities are applied in treatments. In bulk, fifty milligrams is about the size of the head of a parlor match.

Radium treatment of cancerous growths is simply the projection of the rays of the magic metal upon the diseased tissues, which the rays penetrate and destroy. For application, a tiny quantity of radium is shaped into a circular bar the size of the lead of a pencil, this being incased first within a glass capsule hermetically sealed, which in turn is inserted in a silver casing open at one end then in a third cylindrical holder of brass.

The rays are directed upon the human tissue through a screen of rubber, which, strangely, seems to lend discrimination to the radium's power as it results in the rays acting only upon diseased tissue, leaving healthy flesh unaffected. This tiny bit of radium is handled by the surgeon with silver forceps, as radium has the power to penetrate to a depth of three inches in solid lead and its handling with bare fingers results in painful burns.

Good Curative Results.

Few Independent Papers Left in British Islands.

ONLY FOUR DAILIES SAID TO BE PAYING THEIR WAY IN LONDON. (From the March Issue of The Fourth Estate.)

Owing to the frequent demands for increases in wages, and as frequent concessions on the part of the Master Printers' Federation, it is said that there are only four daily papers paying their way in London, and a few, if any, of the weeklies.

A number have already stopped and more will presently. Not only are old-fashioned and respected publications being stopped, but those which remain are being debased, says the Saturday Review of London.

Another important journalistic event is the disappearance of the Western Daily Mercury, and its absorption by the Western Morning News, which will now dominate the great peninsula made up of Cornwall, Devon and Somerset. This is another Coalition gain, as the new proprietor is Sir L. Harnsworth, M. P.

The Western Daily Mercury has explained its position.

"This step," it says, "has been forced upon us by a recognition, belated and reluctant, of the hopelessness of the struggle to establish a parity between the expenses and receipts of the Journal, in other words, 'to make it pay.'"

"Throughout its long history of nearly 61 years it has never returned one single copper to its proprietors by way of dividend, so far as we can ascertain. We mention this fact in no whitening spirit of grievance, but as some sort of justification for now giving up the struggle."

"Throughout this long period expenses have always kept ahead of receipts. This distance between the two—always disconcerting to the proprietors—has considerably widened during the past few years, and with increasing pace."

"The amalgamation of the Western Daily Mercury with the Western Morning News is a portent, even though it is probably a good business move," says the Westminster Gazette.

"Every journalist knows that there is no truth in the popular idea that wars are good for newspapers. They are more frequently disastrous. As a consequence of the European war newspaper expenses have grown beyond all precedent, and revenues have not increased in the same proportion."

"The newspaper to-day is the cheapest article that any man can buy. The amount paid for it frequently does not cover the first cost of the white paper upon which it is printed. This is not a healthy condition of affairs."

"It tends to limit the number of newspapers and consequently the expression of different shades of opinion on public affairs. It must lead to the concentration in fewer hands of the most powerful force in state organizations."

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A doctor's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6224 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Fortunate woman adds her testimony to the long line of those who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary.

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female troubles, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. Was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHAW, Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful. It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only recourse, but most of the common ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths. Although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

The Aged King of the Serbs.

Peter I. King of Serbia, and since the peace settlement King of Jugoslavia, formed by the union of Serbia and the other southern Slav states, is almost seventy-seven years of age, but not only with the weight of years, but also with the weight of heavy physical infirmities. Reports sent out from Belgrade, his capital, state that he is totally deaf and that he spends his time in bed or in an invalid's wheel-chair. Only the Crown Prince and Princess Helene, his widowed daughter, are permitted to visit him. He lives in a little stone house outside Belgrade, and besides his son and daughter, his only attendants are his physicians and his personal servants.

After a combined Austrian-German-Bulgarian force had overrun Serbia in November, 1915, King Peter and his Government found refuge in Corfu. They waited for the restoration, which was brought about by the victories of the Allies in France and Belgium, and the peace arrangement not only restored Peter to his throne, but enlarged the kingdom over which he reigns. He returned to Belgrade and actively took up the work of reorganizing his war-worn country. Failing health soon compelled him to seek retirement, and his son, Prince Alexander, became Regent.

Early in 1919 the King was removed to a quiet retreat near Athens, Greece, where he lived for a year or more in a small six-room house overlooking the Bay of Phaleron.

To meet his long-cherished wish that he might die on his native soil, the Serbian authorities late last year brought the invalid King back to his beloved Belgrade.

Household Notes.
 Wash dried fruits, dry in oven, and place in glass jars ready for use.
 Sweetened whipped cream is delicious served on slices of sponge cake.
 If an oil stove smells, drop a small piece of gum camphor into the tank.
 Use another egg if your custard is not stiff enough to turn from a mold.

Larkins Says He Had No Idea Tanlac Could Fix Him Up Like It Has—Eats Hearty, Sleeps Good And Feels Fine Every Day.

"I'll admit I tried Tanlac more out of curiosity than anything else for I didn't think it would help me, but it's a fact, five bottles have the same made me all over again," said Michael Larkins, 408 Montcalm St., Montreal, recently.

"I had a stubborn case of indigestion that cheated me out of many a good meal. My appetite did not feel hungry, and it seemed that my stomach stayed sour and upset all the time. I would blot up with gas so bad I thought sometimes I would lose my breath entirely. My head ached a lot and my nerves were all undone. I couldn't sleep much and was run-down all over and weak and played out all day long.

"If anybody had told me Tanlac would fix me up like it has I would not have believed a word of it. Why, it took me by surprise the way I began to pick up, and I kept improving until now I couldn't ask to feel any better. I'm in the best of health—eating hearty, sleeping good and sound and feeling fine. I'm convinced that Tanlac will do what they say it will and from this on it gets my recommendation every chance I have."

House of Assembly.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Mr. Bennett.—To ask the Honourable the Colonial Secretary if the Food Control Board have in contemplation the importation of an additional twelve hundred and fifty barrels of Sugar, if such Sugar has been purchased, and if so, from whom and at what price, and state if other dealers have been asked to quote prices on this Sugar.

Mr. Bennett.—To ask the Honourable the Prime Minister to lay on the Table or the House a copy of any circular or letter issued by the Poor Commissioner to relieving officers in the outports prescribing the amount of flour, molasses, tea and other articles of food to be given as poor relief to those in distress and to ask if the opinion of any Medical man has been obtained as to whether the ration provided is sufficient to maintain the vitality of the recipients and if not, whether the Government will take steps to ensure such an increase in the quantity as will suffice to keep body and soul together.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if any negotiations are in progress between the Government and the Marconi Company for a series of wireless telephone stations to be located at different points on our coast, and what progress is being made in connection therewith; also to say if special provision has been made for the stations on Signal Hill and Port Union to communicate with each other, and what is the special necessity for communicating with Port Union rather than any other point around the coast; and to lay on the Table copies of all Order-in-Councils, correspondence and other documents in connection with this whole matter.

To ask the Honourable the Prime Minister, in the absence of the Honourable the Minister of Finance and Customs, from what source the $10,000 shown in a question tabled yesterday to have been paid to Messrs. Burn & Berridge for services, etc., in connection with the Labrador Boundary was obtained; (a) from the Treasury, or (b) from any other fund; and to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the Order-in-Council providing for the payment of the said $10,000.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if the salt conveyed by S.S. Tuckahoe to Port Union last year and landed there was German salt or Russian salt and from whence it was obtained; also if it is of a quality altogether unsuited for curing fish, being in blocks which have to be broken up, and if also it harms the fish and likewise the hands of the men who have to use it and whether it is intended to use the balance of this salt the present year or not.

Sir M. P. Cashin.—To ask the Honourable the Prime Minister to lay on the Table of the House a statement with reference to his interview with the Presidents of the Dominion and Nova Scotia Steel Companies in Canada last December in regard to the securing of increased work on Bell Island during the winter and spring and to state the number of men now employed there, and

(a) Whether operations on an enlarged scale will be undertaken during the coming summer; (b) Whether the present number will be continued and if not, whether there will be any curtailment, and if so increase in the number employed is proposed, whether the Government can take any steps to secure an enlarged operation in view of the great need of employment for our people owing to the existing depression.

Sir J. C. Creble.—To ask the Honourable Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House the total amounts of Grants for the District of Port de Grave and how expended since December 31st, 1918, to March 31st, 1921, and the names of all parties who received Grants.

Mr. MacDonnell.—To ask the Honourable the Prime Minister, in the absence of the Honourable Minister of Finance and Customs

(b) If he has been so employed, what is his salary, and what is the nature of his duties?

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, April 15.
Cantharidine Hair Tonic is a Newfoundland product, the product of native skill and native labor, and it compares well with any similar preparation coming from abroad, as it stimulates the growth of hair, keeps the scalp in a really healthy condition, and preserves, and restores, the natural color. If your hair be thin, or inclined to turn gray, or the scalp full of dandruff, you will find Cantharidine of great value. Try a bottle. Price 35 and 60c. a bottle.

As a general spring tonic Gault's Cod Liver Oil Compound ranks high. It will make you wish for meal time to come round. Large 16oz. bottle, price $1.

To the Women of Newfoundland.

Last Spring, as you know when the Woman's Franchise Bill was brought in, the members of the Opposition voted solidly for, and the members of the Government solidly against it. The latter's reasons for so doing were that the women of Newfoundland were not ready for the vote, but that if in six months' time the women still wanted it, there were members there who volunteered to bring in the bill and support it. They all admitted the justice of the women's demand.

Now it is nearly a year since our bill was first presented and the Women's Franchise Bill is coming up again. The women of Newfoundland have shown their determination to obtain this measure, and are far from letting it drop. The number and strength of its supporters have increased beyond all expectations.

Since 1914 one hundred and forty-five million women have been given the franchise! Does any one imagine that the women of this country are still going to be balked of their rights Newfoundland is now the only civilized country in the world where the women have not the vote and in what way are the women of this country inferior to those of other countries?

The members of the Opposition have proven themselves friends to the Woman's Bill by voting for it last spring. The members of the Government can, of course, go back on their promises and turn down our bill and so go down in history as reactionaries but will it make them any more popular?

The Woman's Suffrage Movement is here to stay. The Government that gives the women the Franchise will have many staunch workers and supporters. The Government that continues to ignore the women's just claim, and remaining blind to present day conditions, tries to keep its women classed with criminals and lunatics, will make thousands of powerful enemies.

Changing Customs in China.

Ignorance, which breeds superstition and holds it wrong, is not confined to China, but it has found Christian education in that nation its worst enemy. Many of the gods of yesterday have been tumbled into the ash-heap to make way for the school-boy with his books, and what was religion to many yesterday is useless superstition to-day.

Customs that were respected hitherto are now despised. For centuries little children have been bound at the altar of a painful old god. Preaching and protest went unheeded until the Christian girls' schools demonstrated that big-footed women were the queens of the land, not its slaves. Students now in government schools are announcing that they will not marry girls who have not natural feet, and girls with bound feet parade the streets with their little feet in big boots.

The reason is evident. Big feet and brains have come to be synonymous. Government schools are refusing admission to bound-footed girls, and the better class are in the big-foot crusade. Women in useful service have come with the new order.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Mr. G. Stewart's motor boat "E. L. Stewart" arrived in port on Saturday from Bell Island with passengers and returned again Sunday afternoon, several taking passage by her back to the island again.

W. S. Goodwin, D.D.S., spent some time during last week at Carbonear attending to business in his line. He returned to town again Saturday.

S. S. Sagona arrived here from the icefields at 2.30 Monday afternoon. We learn her catch is said to amount to 7,000 seals.

Mr. R. F. W. Strong arrived from the city by Friday night's train on a short visit to his home.

The brethren of the Masonic Lodge intend holding a social evening in their hall to-night, Tuesday. An enjoyable time is anticipated by all who hope to be present.

Miss Sadie B. Hayes, accountant at Messrs. Archibald, Ltd., left by Monday afternoon's train for the city en route to Boston on a holiday trip. Her many friends extend to her their best wishes for a very enjoyable time.

The schr. Minnie Maud, owned by Mr. E. Simmons, went on dock Monday afternoon to have some painting, etc., attended to, preparatory to taking up the spring's work in the coastal trade.

The appearance of the second sealing steamer, viz: S. S. Seal, making her way in the harbor at 6 p.m. yesterday did indeed look cheering to even some of our chronic pessimists, and some of us felt like blossoming into poetry with "Jimmy" Murphy and shouting, "Pork and cabbage won't be in it when the flippers strike the town." Our minds went back to the good old days when everything was humming in the old town of Harbor Grace and in season the sealing ships would arrive with their bumper trips; but we must not strike a disparaging note for ye olden times are coming again. The Seal is reported to have a full load of 15,000.

The Ladies' Branch of the Industrial Society intend holding a sale of work in the Town Hall on Thursday afternoon next. Quite a lot of useful articles of clothing, etc., have been made up from time to time, and as all the goods will be sold at cost price, all thrifty housewives will do well to call in and have a look around. We trust the ladies will meet with much success in the sale of their goods.

About two years ago, in June 1919, the old Church of England School on the South Side, which had done duty for many years, was closed and it was decided to build a new one. This has been done, and the new school, after much labor on the part of some of the men, has now come to a finish. The work was completed on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock and at 8 the first public meeting was held, when a goodly number were present to hear Rev. Dr. N. S. Facey make an eloquent appeal, with the aid of some very interesting lantern slides, on behalf of Queen's College, St. John's. Dr. Facey in his opening remarks paid a high tribute to those who by money and labor had completed such a fine building for the education of the C. of E. children of the South Side. We may say the work of building of this school has been under the superintendence of the Rev. W. E. R. Cracknell, Incumbent of St. Peter's Church, South Side, who was the chief promoter and who has a keen interest in educational matters, and we congratulate the gentleman, together with his noble band of workers, on the success of their efforts for such a worthy cause.

Rev. Dr. N. S. Facey, Principal of Queen's College, St. John's, occupied the pulpit of St. Peter's Church, South Side, on Sunday morning, and in the evening at St. Paul's. Rev. H. V. Whitehouse, of Carbonear, occupied the pulpit of St. Paul's Church in the morning and at Christ Church in the evening. Both speakers addressed the St. Paul's Bible Class on Sunday afternoon.

A number of young ladies intend holding a dance in the Orange Hall and are almost inclined to forget the bad treatment of the weather man and think he's not such a bad old fellow after all.

Can we allow ourselves to believe that the storms of winter are over? To-day is such a beautiful one, with all the brightness of spring, that we are almost inclined to forget the bad treatment of the weather man and think he's not such a bad old fellow after all.

Rev. Fr. Walker of St. Brendan's is in town to-day.

MINERS WILL HELP.
LONDON, April 15.
Frank Hodges, Secretary of the Miners' Union, in a letter to the London Times, says the miners are prepared to make substantial contributions to industry in the direction of wiping out the present deficit, by agreeing to a uniform reduction of wages throughout the country. The letter is largely devoted to emphasizing the need for a national pool, and in supporting miners' opposition to district settlement. It charges that the Government is responsible for the crisis and there is a lockout of members of the Federation.

CONDITIONAL.
LONDON, April 15.
British mine owners and representatives of the National Federation of Miners have accepted an invitation, extended by Lloyd George, to renew negotiations for a settlement of the miners' strike. The acceptance of the miners, however, was subject to the sanction of other Unions making up the triple alliance.

FORCED OUT.
LONDON, April 15.
Persistent rumors that Frank Hodges, Secretary of the Miners' Union, had resigned, were current here shortly after noon, and it was said he relinquished office because of opposition to his statement before members of the Commons last night, in which he favored a temporary adjustment of wages.

Sagona's Turnout.

Sagona, which ship discharged at Harbor Grace is as follows: 7,601 young harps, 143 bedlamers, 49 old harps, making a total of 7,793 with a gross value of $14,368.58 Less $40.00 for damaged seals and one full share of $105.36, the net value for distribution was 14,223.22, the crew's share being $4,741.07. The crew of 136 men shared each $34.86 cents. The average weight of young harps was 48 lbs.

Do your gums bleed? Do you suffer from Pyorrhoea? Have you abscesses on your teeth? Listen! Pus pockets form at the roots of these teeth and poison the whole system by the discharge of virulent germs. Many headaches are due to this gradual poisoning; joint troubles, such as rheumatism, have been traced to this source; heart affections, often serious, follow this so-called "rheumatism". Good teeth are priceless, but a tooth with a pus pocket at its root is almost as vicious as a cancer. Pyorrhoea is not painful usually, and one is apt to let it go unnoticed. Watch for these bleeding gums, they are your warning. apr5, tu, th, s, f
