IT PAYS TO KNOW.

A woman I know who is a splendid housekeeper has never taught her two girls cooking or any of the household arts. The reason she gives is this: "I don't propose to let my girls tied down to housework their lives the way I have been. I want them to do something better. I had myself and I guess they can earn their own living if they don't know how to cook." But suppose they marry? I asked.

"I hope they won't marry anyone who can't get them someone to do it for them," she said.

"Her woman, I suppose, all that business and false outlook is a reaction against the overdose of drudgery she had herself. Nevertheless, I am sure that it expresses itself in a determination to let her girls grow up ignorant of the essentials of homemaking."

Irma and Eleanor, if they marry, will not be called upon to do their own work for a time at least. But suppose they did marry men who could manage to afford service from the first, or suppose they themselves were able to keep on earning enough money to cover the cost of service, even so, that would not free them from the need to know how things are done if they are to get the best service.

The woman who knows just how things should be done is the woman who will command the best service from a helper. I know a woman who has a dinner perfect both in cooking and service. I said to her husband that she was lucky to get such a jewel in these days.

"Don't be a Slave."

"It isn't the maid," he said, "it's my wife. All her maids are like that after she has had them a while. The person who had this maid before we did, didn't think much of her. My wife knows how things should be done and how to do them herself and she trains the maids and demands results from them."

Another reason that it means a great deal for a woman to be able to run her house herself, even if she has service, is that if she can't do the work herself, and her maid knows she can't, she is in the latter's power. And did you ever know a tyrant who wouldn't abuse a power like that? I never did.

Govt. Ownership Inefficient and Destructive.

(HERBERT N. CASSON, London, in The Efficiency Magazine.)

Speaking quietly, without rage and prejudice, can any one tell why it is that all government departments in all countries are slow, wasteful, and incompetent?

There must be some basic reason for this, as the individuals in these departments cannot all be inferior to the individuals in private firms. Almost invariably an able man becomes disabled when he is placed in a government department.

He becomes timid, procrastinating, non-committal, evasive, and unprofitable. He becomes a mere chattel of routine. Why is this?

REASONS FOR INCOMPETENCY.

The fact seems to be that man simply cannot be competent in a government job, for the following reasons:

1. There is no payment by results.
2. There is no piecework. There is no profit-sharing. A man gets as much for doing badly as he does for doing well.
3. There is no fear of discharge. A man may be transferred, but as long as his conduct is satisfactory, he cannot be discharged for incompetence. Any sort of a fool can hold a job forever in the civil service.
4. There is no possibility of bankruptcy. If the department doesn't pay—very well. The treasury has plenty.
5. There is no danger of losing customers.

A government department does not depend upon its customers, so that it has no incentive to be quick and courteous and obliging.

6. The main thing is accuracy, not success.
7. A government employee has simply nothing to do with success. His aim is to avoid mistakes. The less he does—the fewer mistakes.
8. Time is of no consequence. As all government employees are made into clerks they come to have a clerk's disregard for time. To clerks, as to lawyers, a delay is a relief and a comfort—the more the better.

9. Routine is put ahead of service. In government departments all the workers (if I may use the word) are tied with red tape. They are all the slaves of a system of procedure.
10. There is no enthusiasm. If a man stays in a government job long enough he becomes mummified. He loses all the energy and joy of living that are so necessary to efficiency and success.

These are a few of the reasons why nationalization always has failed and always will.

Just put yourself in the place of these poor automatons. No matter how able you are, how could you be efficient if you had:

- No hope of profits; no fear of failure.
- No competitors; no customers.
- No reason of hurry; and
- No danger of being found out.

Nationalization is not only a destroyer of trade and commerce. It is not only a coral reef built across the harbor of prosperity.

It is worse. It is far worse. It is a destroyer of men. It takes an able man and grinds him down until he is a clerical drudge.

It is the delightful fragrant fresh flavour of Life Savers that make them taste so tasty on a hot day. Try them at the race course Wednesday. You will like them.—1921, E.

MUTT AND JEFF

That Day Will Come.

They never marry it may not matter much though even the unmarried women is frequently faced with a decision where it would be best to deal to her to be able to step in some breach and run a house. But if they marry, the day is going to come when they are going to say: "Oh, how I wish my mother had taught me to run a house."

The supply of young men who can't get their wives someone to do the things for them from the beginning is steadily small. When maids cost a week and their food (perhaps a couple of dollars more), people of the middle class looked upon a maid as a matter of course. But to-day, to keep a maid means anywhere from $12 to $20 a week outlay, only for one who absolutely need service or who distinctly well-to-do, have it.

One of the things an English visitor to this country was especially impressed with was the way people of good income do without service. He said he had seen two homes where the income was at least $10,000 and the wife did not have a maid.

Ernest Shipman Addresses Large Gathering.

PRODUCER EXPLAINS ADVANTAGES OF LOCAL PICTURE.

The Nickel Theatre was filled to its utmost capacity last night when Mr. Ernest Shipman appeared in person and delivered a pleasing outline of the forthcoming motion picture to be made within our Island. Mr. Shipman was introduced by Mr. W. G. Gosling, who is a member of the Board of Directors of the newly formed local film company. As he appeared on the stage Mr. Shipman was immediately accorded an enthusiastic applause. He opened his speech by comparing the studio-made product with the real out doors drama such as his organization produces. He very clearly pointed out that the amusement-loving world are clamouring for stories of God's great outdoors, with its genuine touch of real nature and environment. The great social stories, he stated, have not got an international appeal—they appeal to one another—fall flat in another. But when a real drama with a picturesque natural background is produced it finds ready appeal to all nations. This has been clearly demonstrated in Mr. Shipman's productions of "Back to God's Country," "The Sky Pilot," etc., which were tremendous successes wherever shown. Mr. Shipman continued by saying that his only regret was that he could not speak to the entire Island and tell what is in store for a Newfoundland film on the great moving picture markets of the world.

The Evil Eye.

As ancient as Pompeii and Herculaneum, which have lain in ashes these centuries, and as old as the days of the Latin poet Virgil, who wrote about it, is this strange and dread belief in the "evil eye," which not only persists to this day but is supremely powerful among superstitions. This power of striking fear into any one by a look that flashes from a certain type of eyes is supposed to be possessed, consciously or unconsciously, by persons who have the power to bring misfortune upon whoever falls to their baleful gaze.

That dread of this supposedly uncanny power still holds thousands in its clutches is set forth by such a well known and reliable authority as the New York Medical Journal, which says that "to-day doctors are not in favor of bewitchment but mothers in New York are greatly asserting that falling under the gaze of the "evil cast upon them."

It is the opinion of this medical writer that the belief in this cross superstition "will increase until the public hunger for the sensational is satisfied, and that the idea will find good soil among a swarming alien population."

Charms and amulets are said to be gaining in favor among those who are continually haunted by the fear of falling under the gaze of the "evil eye."

Many persons, no doubt, will laugh at the absurdity of charging anyone having such a power of evil in the glance of his eye, but an ample evidence that this ancient superstition is very much alive to-day, take the Pennsylvania case known as "Witch of Ellwood City." An aged Italian woman, Mrs. Catarlo, was forced to appeal to a judge for protection. She said that the neighbours had threatened to burn her alive. They claimed that she cast spells on their children.

Fortunately, there are to-day laws to protect intended victims against such uncanny powers over another. Men commit murders, which are called "psychic crimes," those prompted by a mind far off that works upon a helpless victim who must perforce kill when told to do so.

Regarding these "psychic crimes," resulting from a belief in the superstition of the "evil eye," a recent medical authority makes this comment:

"It might easily be supposed that such a thing as witchcraft could not occur to-day, but we are living in a tense, nervous condition, which makes us see 'stones in sermons, crooks in printed books, and harm in everything.' Everyone has something to tell of his neighbor. A single case of anything unusual quoted in the papers sets imagination alert, and similar cases swarm and will undoubtedly continue to increase."

It may be added that not only in America, but in certain parts of the British Isles as well—particularly in Ireland and the Highlands of Scotland—the belief in the power of the evil eye is by no means dead. There still lingers a superstition that cattle are subject to injury in this way.

What Do You Think of a Fluid

That will draw roaches and ants out of every hole, crack, or crevice before killing them and not poison food?

That will kill bugs instantly and not leave an unpleasant odor?

That will knock flies off the wall and not harm paint or paper?

That will keep the bedroom, kitchen, or verandah clear of flies, mosquitoes, etc., for several hours after a few sprays?

That will take fleas off a dog and not harm the dog?

That will destroy chicken lice without any injury to your stock?

That applied in small quantities to the exposed parts of the body will insure you from Mosquito bites?

That as a general disinfectant is stronger than the ordinary carbolic solution.

THAT FLUID IS

SAN-O-SPRAY.

No insect can live where San-O-Spray is used. Yet San-O-Spray is not poisonous to man, man beings and can be used with perfect safety in pantry, kitchen, dining room, and cellars, moreover San-O-Spray has an agreeable and delightful odor, removing all fetid or unpleasant odors. In addition San-O-Spray is a disinfectant and germicide. Keeps the home sanitary and free from infectious diseases.

Burning Their Boats.

WHEN STEAMERS RUN SHORT OF COAL THEY USE QUEER FUELS.

Usually, a ship has a bit more than her cargo of coal for ordinary steaming purposes in case she meets very bad weather, for should she run short of fuel her owners may possibly have to meet a salvage bill.

Recently the steamer West Damaris, while steaming between two American ports, ran into very severe weather. She had no cargo at the time, and after a few hours' steaming against mountainous seas, her coal bunkers gave out.

At once the captain ordered all loose woodwork to be felled to the furnaces. This gave the vessel a slight pressure of steam, enough to keep her head to wind. Then wooden fittings were torn up, but even this was not enough.

Firing Furnaces With Sugar. Then the captain did a queer thing—he ordered all his boats to be burned. A speed of four knots was maintained by this measure, and the West Damaris managed to reach port little the worse for her buffeting.

Meeting a tremendous storm on her voyage between Cuba and New York, the American liner Marro Castle was forced to heave to and her fuel began to run short.

The question of tearing up her decks and all wooden fittings was discussed, but the captain decided that at the present cost of repairs this would be a very expensive safeguard.

He therefore broached the cargo and contrived to get enough pressure of steam to ride out the storm by burning hundreds of sacks of Cuban sugar. The last fifty tons of coal were carefully preserved to get the ship into port, and she crawled into Newport News on the sweepings of her bunkers without having to pay a penny for salvage service.

Burning 1,000 Tons of Grain. The Norwegian steamer Skogland, while voyaging from New Orleans to Christiania with grain, met a series of south-westerly gales off the Irish coast. All the way she had had bad luck, and had kept up a speed of only six knots owing to the poor quality of her coal. This finally gave out, and the Skogland had to sacrifice one thousand tons of good grain to reach the nearest English port, where she filled up her bunkers.

The British steamer, Loch Doon, ran completely out of coal while steaming to England with ore. Woodwork was burned, but in vain. She could make scarcely any headway.

Then she came up with a schooner homeward bound with a cargo of cotton cake. Signals were exchanged and eventually some hundreds of tons of cargo were transhipped. This makeshift fuel enabled the Loch Doon to reach port.

The schooner's owners claimed salvage money, and the judges found that the sailing vessel had indirectly saved the steamer and awarded costs accordingly.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Boy Won.

A small boy was playing with an iron hoop in the street, when suddenly it bounced through the railings and broke the kitchen window of one of the areas. The lady of the house waited with anger in her eyes for the appearance of the hoop's owner. He arrived.

"Please, I've broken your window," he said, "and father's come to mend it."

Sure enough the boy was followed by a man, who at once set to work, while the boy, taking his hoop, ran off. The window finished, the man said:

"That'll be three shillings, mum."

"Three shillings!" gasped the woman. "But your son broke it. The little fellow with the hoop. You're his father, aren't you?"

The man shook his head. "Never seen him before," he said. "He came round to my place and said his mother wanted her window mended. You're his mother, aren't you?"

And the good woman could only shake her head. For once words failed her.

Tennis in a Diver's Helmet.

This is how they play tennis in the South Sea Islands.

Ralph Stock, the famous author, saw a game played on Thursday Island. He describes it in his fascinating travel-book, "The Cruise of the Dream Ship."

Play usually commenced in the alleged "cool" of the evening. The players wore shorts and a vest, nothing else, and with inch-thick rubber glued to the soles of their shoes by way of protection against the heat and hardness of the courts.

In five minutes everybody would be a mere dripping rag of profuse perspiration. But no matter. It was tennis, though arguments about the nets seemed the players' strongest point. One of these resulted in a bet as to who would win a game played in diver's helmet and boots respectively.

It was put to the test with the utmost gravity, and resulted in a dead heat, the man in the helmet being unable to see through his thick glass windows quickly enough to take the ball, and the booted competitor being unable to move.

Witnessed the Murder.

The indictment is published of Edouard Braem, aged 49, native of Courtrai, but latterly resident in Antwerp, in connection with the murder of a woman whose mangled body was discovered under a bed in a house in Brownlow Street, Liverpool, on June 20 last.

According to the indictment, Braem confesses that he was present when the murder was committed, but declares that it was a certain Fischer, and not he himself who actually committed the crime. He declares that his reason for not informing the police immediately was that he had a number of stolen articles in his room at the time, and he was afraid of being arrested for theft. The indictment says the British police have been unable to trace anyone named Fischer answering to the description given by the prisoner. The accused's explanation as to how he came into possession of certain stolen articles, including the murdered woman's purse and ring, was that he had been asked by the man Fischer to sell them.

Lecture Postponed. The Lecture by Miss Cunningham, to be held in the Community Nurses' Room on Tuesday, August 1st, has been unavoidably postponed. By order,

Beauty Without Grit Without any harm to the teeth

Don't try to whiten teeth with grit that scratches the enamel. That's harmful. Use a soft polishing agent—the Pepsodent agent. Then combat the dingy film twice daily in this new, effective way.

That's what millions of people the world over are doing, largely by dental advice. Look about you and see the beautiful teeth that result.

Clouded by film. Teeth are clouded by a film. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. Stains enter it, then the film, if left, forms the basis of dingy coats. That's why teeth lose luster. Film is also the basis of tartar.

Most tooth troubles are now traced to that film. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germ's bred by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Stays on teeth. Under old methods, much of that film remained on teeth. It made teeth cloudy. Night and day it threatened serious damage. That's why so many brushed teeth discolored and decay. Tooth troubles have been constantly increasing.

Now dental science, after long research, has found two film combatants. Able authorities have proved their efficiency. Now leading dentists almost the world over are urging their daily use.

A new-type tooth paste has been created, based on five modern requirements. The name is Pepsodent. These two great film combatants are embodied in it for daily application.

Old ways wrong. Pepsodent also aids Nature in two essential ways. It multiplies the starch digester in the saliva.

We urge you to see and feel these effects, then judge how much they mean.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch these delightful effects in a few days and you will always want them. Cut out the coupon now.

Ask for the test. We send to every home that asks a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Send the coupon for your family's sake, then watch the delightful effects.

Who Beheaded King Charles I?

NOBODY WAS THE EXECUTIONER. There is an old riddle still asked, "where did the executioner of Charles I have his dinner that day?" And the answer is: "He had a chop at the 'King's Hotel' in Westminster."

When Charles II came to the throne, among the twenty-nine people tried for bringing about the death of his royal father was a man, William Hulet, accused of having struck the fatal blow.

And yet, of all those twenty-nine, he was the one man who escaped the death sentence.

Implored the King's Forgiveness. Before the execution of the King, Hulet had been a sergeant under a Colonel Hewson. Three days before the execution the colonel sent for thirty-eight of his men, including Hulet, and after swearing them to secrecy, asked who would volunteer to be the king's executioner, the reward being £100 and promotion.

To a man they refused, and that seemed an end of the matter as far as that regiment was concerned.

But one of the thirty-eight men, in giving evidence afterwards, stated that, when watching the execution, he recognized Hulet by his grey beard, despite the mask he wore, and by his voice when he fell on his knees and implored forgiveness of the king before beheading him.

After the execution Hulet was promoted to the rank of captain-lieutenant, and in his regiment he was henceforth known as Father Greybeard.

Reprieved After Verdict of "GUILTY." Another witness at the trial against Hulet swore that nine years after the execution Hulet confessed to him that he had performed the duty of headman. Hulet at once denied this, and claimed most strongly that if the opportunity was granted him he would be able to prove an alibi for the time of the execution.

A further witness, Colonel Axell, himself condemned to death, stated that Hulet and a man named Walker were on the scaffold at the time. Walker delivered the fatal blow, and Hulet picked up the head to show to the crowd.

Hulet himself, in giving evidence, swore that, for refusing to behead the king, he, with nine other sergeants, was imprisoned, and pleaded that they might be brought forward to support him.

The jury to a man brought in a verdict of "guilty," but almost immediately the court had him reprieved without giving any explanation.

So the executioner of Charles I remains unknown to this day.

Synthetic Gold.

A considerable sensation was recently caused by a rumor that a German chemist had discovered a method of producing gold from another metal—possibly copper. Later reports proved that it was only a rumor; the great secret of making gold is still undiscovered.

As most of us are aware, the chemists—alchemists as they were called—of the middle ages spent their lives in searching for methods of manufacturing gold from cheaper or baser minerals. Fifty years ago their efforts were regarded as merely ludicrous by the scientists of the day; but our views have widened, and today it is realized that it is only a matter of time and research before the transmutation of metals is an accomplished fact.

So long ago as 1907 that great chemist, Sir William Ramsay, did actually affect a transmutation by means of a gas evolved from radium. Only in this case, what he did was to degrade copper down to the first member of its group of metals, namely "lithium."

About the same date three members of the French Society of Modern Alchemy were announced to have succeeded in making a synthetic thesis of gold. In other words they had built up gold out of its constituents.

Gold, of course, is still considered to be an element; that is, a simple substance which cannot be broken up. But scientists are beginning to have their doubts as to the so-called elements, and to believe that they are all built up out of one primal substance.

Three Fours are Twelve.

It was Sunday morning, and Mr. Newlywed, as a tribute to his new-found state of bliss, insisted on going downstairs before his wife and preparing breakfast, but the little bride descended to the dining-room, and there found breakfast, hot and steaming, waiting for her. One gentle, graceful movement with a knife severed the shell of an egg and laid bare its contents. Mrs. Newlywed paused, and—

"My dear John," she gasped, "what have you done to these eggs?"

"Boiled them, of course!" retorted John, somewhat nettled.

"Yes; but for how long?"

"My dear girl, I carried out your instructions to the letter."

"Nonsense! The eggs are as hard as bricks!"

"Well, I only boiled them for twelve minutes!"

"Twelve minutes!" exclaimed Mrs. Newlywed. "But I told you that three minutes was long enough for an egg."

"I'm quite aware of that," retorted her husband proudly. "Accordingly I allowed twelve minutes for four eggs."

Where Everyone Owns a Still.

Prohibition stories have been a hit ever since of late, but the following—which Mr. H. G. Wells was originally responsible—is good enough to be reproduced.

An Englishman, tired and very thirsty, struck a small town in Kentucky as the shades of evening were beginning to fall.

He knew, of course, that prohibition was the law of the land. But he had heard also that the law was frequently evaded.

So, approaching a long, lean Kentuckian who was holding up a fence outside a corner grocery store, he said in a low voice:—

"Excuse me, but is there any place round about here where a chap can get a drink?"

The Kentuckian looked the Englishman up and down. Then he pointed to a building some little distance away.

"See that church over there, stanger?" he said.

"Yes," replied the Englishman, "I see it. But you don't mean to tell me you can buy a drink in a church?"

Was he Caned?

"Once again my orders have been disobeyed," said the master in a certain school, sternly. "Who is the miscreant?" Not a soul answered, and a tragic silence prevailed. "This matter shall be settled once and for all," he went on, in the same icy manner, "and if none will tell, every boy in the class shall be thrashed."

Every boy, therefore, was duly terrified, but not one would breathe the culprit's name, until suddenly, as the last boy was about to receive his share of punishment, the cane was withheld. Fixing a keen eye on the lad, the master said, "Now, if you will tell me who did this action I will not punish you."

"All right, sir, I did it," came the hesitating reply.

A New King of Game.

Miss Norma Talmadge, the famous movie star, claims to have discovered the champion girl swimmer.

She was a newcomer at the studio and, during one of the many long waits inseparable from screen productions, a male member of the company started to engage her in conversation.

One of his first questions was, "Do you golf?"

"I love it," she replied. "I play at least thirty-six holes a week."

"And how about tennis?"

"I won the women's championship at our club."

"Perhaps you cycle?"

"Oh, yes, I hold several medals for long distance and trick cycling."

Evidently her perfection in sports palled at this point, for he suddenly switched to literature.

"Do you like Kipling?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, indeed! Why, only yesterday I kiplipped for more than an hour," she answered, without hesitation.

The Guard Scored.

A fashionably-dressed young lady sat in a Scottish train, tenderly holding a little poodle.

"You cannae hae yer dog in here," said the guard as he looked at her ticket. "It's against the rules."

"I shall hold him in my lap all the way, and he will disturb no one," she replied.

"It dinna matter," answered the guard. "Dogs must gang in the brake-van. I'll fasten him a' richt for ye."

"I will trust him to no one," said the lady excitedly, and, with indignant tread, she marched to the van, tied up the dog, and then returned to her seat.

At the next station, when the guard came along, she asked him: "Is my dog all right?"

"I'm sure I couldna say. You see, you tied him in a van that was shunted at the last station."

Household Notes.

Serve seeded raisins and chopped green peppers marinated with French dressing on crisp lettuce leaves.

Canned wild fruit, such as blueberries and huckleberries, make delicious winter pies and puddings.

If melted paraffin is poured over the cut end of a ham, it will not mold and will keep indefinitely.

Both the stems and the leaves of Swiss chard are excellent for canning. They are generally put up separately.

Old cloth makes very nice aprons for kitchen and laundry work. Tape can be used to bind the edges.

A long-handled soft brush is best for cleaning wall space out of reach, and it removes dust without rubbing it in.

Upon opening your canned products if there is the slightest indication of spoilage, do not risk using them.
