HERE are three hints for Saturday shoppers. I.—Soon after breakfast make a list of the groceries and meats you require for Sanday. Don't leave this for twelve hours later. 2.—Send in your order early; you will find it just as easy, and it will help the grocer and butcher to give you better service. 3.—Don't be one of those procrastinators, who leave their shopping until eight, or nine o'clock, then go down street, saunter around, and then when you ought to be in bed, bethink yourself of something you want and expect it to be delivered that night. Don't be thoughtless.

Happy Homes.

How careful mothers should be to make their homes sunny, joyous, bright, and attractive; for on them is built the great fabric of the years to come. The long chain of life experiences and lifetime memories begin there, and thought retravels the path so often, lingering here and there by the way, living over and over again the memories of home, and they are not always sunny.

Words to Drop.

A contemporary appeals for dropping the words "hayseed" and "turncoat" from the Canadian vocabulary, and with reason. It points out that farming is an independent and honorable pursuit which ought to be encouraged instead of attempts being made to bring it into disrepute. As to the other word, it is the rankest injustice to term a man a "turncoat" becauses he changes his allegeniance from one political party to another. More men with sufficient independence to vote according to principal irrespective of party are needed in this country.

Odds and Ends.

Scented geranium leaves placed in a thin muslin bag impart an excellent flavor to jelly. Corned beef and cabbage is a conceited food. It rises on its hind feet and yells "Come on, try me, I'm all right."

That was a fine piece of oratory recently when a lecturer, speaking of the drinking young man, said: "The railroads don't want him, the merchants don't

Then, referring to an advertisement of a saloon-keeper for a bartender who does not drink, "the saloon-keeper does not

"Now girls, do you want him?"

The late Archbishop Ryan was visiting a small parish in a mining district one day for the purpose of administering confirmation and asked one nervous litconfirmation and asked one nervous little girl what matrimony was. "It is a state of terrible torment which those who enter are compelled to undergo for a time to prepare them for a brighter and better world," she said. "No, no," remonstrated her rector; "that isn't matrimony; that's the definition of purgatory." "Leave her alone," said the archbishop; "maybe she is right. What do you and I know about it?"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Changing a Name. The brother of Mme. de Pompadour had at first been created Marquis de Vandieres, a somewhat unfortunate title for a man of such new nobility, for he soon discovered to his profound annoyance that his enemies would persist in calling him the Marquis d'Avant Hier (the Marquis of the Day Before Yesterday).

Mme. de Pompadour, naturally sensitive in such matters, brought the affair before the king and, as a title more or less was a small matter to grant the lady who grasped so much, after due forms her brother became the Marquis de Marigny.—From "Mme. Gaffrin."

WHY THE WIND BLOWS.

The Basic Principle, the Tendency of Hot Airs to Rise.

The wind, like other things of everyday life, rarely invites notice unless it is unusually "high," and rarely do we hear the questions, "Why does the wind blow?" "Why doesn't the wind

What is this wind that rushes "out of the nowhere into the here?" Why should it blow at all, or why some times so gently and at other times with the resistless force of the hurricane?

The wind could have no power, it could not even exist, if the air had no weight, this weight having been shown to be about thirty-one grains for each hundred cubic inches of air. When air is put in motion the effect is like that obtained by throwing a ball against an object. The harder you throw the ball the harder it will strike, and the greater the number of balls thrown at one time the greater will be the force of the blow. When the wind is blowing it strikes what it blows against, and the harder it blows (that is, the greater the speed of the air) the harder it will strike against the resisting object.

What causes the wind to blow or why the air should be in motion is not easy to explain. Simply stated, it is caused by the tendency of hot air to rise and thus to form a partial vacuum into which the cooler surrounding air rushes, in much the same way water will rush downward to seek its level. If the earth were smooth, if it did not rotate and if there were no sun the air would be motionless. the sun shines on a wide space of the earth the air of that region become heated, this great volume of warm air rises and the cooler, heavier surrounding air flows in to take its place. As the earth rotates there tends to be formed a ring of heated and rising air with currents inflowing at the bottom and at both sides. This is the condition that prevails near the equator and causes the trade winds that blow steadily. The rotation of the earth causes the wind south of the equator to flow toward the northwest and that north of this line to flow toward the southwest.-St. Nicholas.

Pathetic Incident From Which the Use of Black Lines Sprang.

"Every once in awhile," says a prominent comedian, "I am asked by some newspaper or magazine to tell of the actual feelings of a man who is called on to appear before the public as a continuous funmaker. Usually I reply by calling attention to the fact that one of the greatest tragedies of the theater is connected with the clown. "In the time of Louis XIV. there was a famous clown known as 'Fat William' (Gros Guillaume), who held his audiences in the Rue Favari by his wonderful eccentricities of gesture, voice and mimicry. One night, so the legend runs, his wife was dying, and tertain the clanking, clashing, ribald Parisian mob that stood in the pit. It was in the days before there were

Under the burden of his great domestic sorrow he was stupid and slow in his performance, and in order to stir him up his companion on the stage hit him with a resounding whack with a heavy cane. The combination of his sentimental troubles and the physical pain caused Gros Guillaume to weep. As the tears streamed down over his whitened face the aspect was so comical that the audience cheered and laughed itself into hysterics. And ever since then every clown has black lines on his whitened

QUEER STREET NAMES.

One Feature In Which Brussels Outdoes London or Paris.

There are many bewildering street names in European cities, and of these Lopdon presents a bewildering variety, Bermondsey possesses a Pic-kle Herring street. Near Gray's Inn there is to be found a Cold Bath square. Most of the Nightingale lanes and Love lanes are hidden, ironically enough, in the slums of the east end of the British capital.

In Brussels some of the street names are really bizarre. The Short Street of the Long Chariot, the Street of the Red Haired Women and the Street of Sorrows are remarkable enough to catch the least observant eye. The Street of the One Person is, as one might guess, an extremely narrow one. But the cream of the Brussels street name surely belongs to the Street of the Uncracked Silver Cocoanut. Thisin the original appears as one ponder-

The 7.000 inhabitants of the Rue des Mauvais Garcons signed a petition praying that the name of the street be changed. They contended that the denomination of the thoroughfare in which they reside produces a bad impression on those to whom they are obliged to give their address.

This Street of the Bad Boys was, it appears, so named in the sixteenth century because of the noisy character of its inhabitants. But now it needs no such designation, those who reside there being for the most part peaceful and respectable citizens.

Among the peculiar street names in Paris may be mentioned the Street of the Little Windows, the Street of the Mule's Foot, the Street of the Holy Fathers, the Street of the Daughters of Calvary, the Street of the Dry Tree, the Street of the Empty Pocket and the Boulevard of the Good News.-Harper's Weekly.

Albert Hawkins returned home Tuesday after a five weeks' trip to the Western provinces. He left here May 16th, and has travelled during that time over 4,500 miles. Mr. Hawkins says he was 4,500 miles. Mr. Hawkins says he was surprised to see so much rough land, even on the prairie, yet he believes there lies west of Winnipeg the best wheat growing Iand in the world. Farmers there are no doubt making $5 to $1 made by the farmer of Ontario, but the greater part of this he considers is in the increased value of the land, and when that oversteps the speculative period, the farmer in Ontario with 100 acres will have an equal chance with the western farmer with 160 acres, says Mr. Hawking. says Mr. Hawkins.

After a very painful illness of some three weeks' duration, Margaret, the beloved wife of Mr. Peter Cran, 6th line south, passed away to a happier land on Friday, June 23rd, in her 45th year. Deceased was the daughter of the late John Shields, of Warwick, and was married to Mr. Cran about thirteen years ago. From the union she leaves besides her husband Mr. Cran about thirteen years ago. From the union she leaves besides her husband two young sons, Robert and Gordon, and is also survived by one brother, James Shields, of Warwick, and two sisters, Miss Isabella Shields, Warwick, and Mrs. Donald D. Campbell, of Glencoe. Mrs. Cran was an active member of the Presbyterian church. She was a doer of good deeds and will be greatly missed by her associates and friends. She was a kind and sympathetic neighbor, devoted wite and mother, and true friend. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon from the family residence, lot 26, con. 6, S.E.R. to the Watford cemetery and was very largely attended, Rev. E. B. Commons and the present member, Mr. R. J. McCormick as candidate for the Legislature.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. Samuel Bailey, Plympton, President of the East Lambton Liberal Association. Following the nomination of Dr. Fairbank by a standing vote, Messrs. R. Auld Warwick, Dr. Brown, Camlachie, A. J. Davis, Sutorville, J. H. Fowler, London, R. J. McCormick, M.P.P., Warwick, H. Park, Alvinston, H. J. Pettypiece, Forest, and D. White, Bossnquet, were nominated for the Legislature. All these were called upon in turn to declare themselves, with the result that the names of Messrs. McCormick, Pettypiece, and White remained for the ballot. The choice then fell upon Mr. McCormick.

Mr. McCormick reviewed his career in the Legislature and claimed that some of the useful legislation of the Whitney government had been introduced at his instignation. There had been talk in some quarters, he said, that if he did not get the nomination of the convention he would run anyway, even as an independent. He wanted to deny any such appre-

He had been thrust aside at various times in the past, and had gone right on working for the party as if nothing had happened, but he was not dropping out now unless the convention wanted some other man. He defended his own part in the "salary grab," He had been against it from the first, he said, but when the Government passed the thing he could do nothing further. When the salary came, I took my salary, and I brought it home with me. However, he thought that he had done something for the province by his opposition, for he had delayed the increase oue year, and by his opposition the amount was reduced from a proposed $1,500 to $1,400.

East Lambton Farmer's Institute

The annual meeting of the East Lambton Farmers' Institute was held in Watford on the afternoon of June the 15th.

Although the number of members present was limited, owing to the pressure of farm work, yet the reports showed a most successful Institute year. In all there were, 24 meetings held at 12 different centres in the district during the winter at which 69 addresses were given, the attendance being 2,880. The membership for the year was 476, showing a large increase over last year's figures, which gave 22 meetings at 11 different points, with 40 addresses given, 1,810 of an attendance, and a membership of 316. Much of the past year's success was due to the hearty co-operation of the Women's to the hearty co-operation of the Women's

The Voice of Mary Etta

It Proves a Safeguard In Time of Need

By CLARISSA MACKIE Copyright by American Press Asso-ation, 1911. Copyright by American Press Asso-ation, 1911.

"Never mind, Ben," encouraged Mary litta as her husband shrugged into his overcoat and picked up his hat, "everything will come out all right in the end. All the other farmers in the county have met with the same failure that we have, only you've got the best of most of them. You've got your trade to fall back on."

The sullen expression deepened on Ben Madison's handsome face. "It

Ben Madison's handsome face. "It isn't so easy going back to work under a foreman after being my own boss for five years," he said bitterly.

Mary Etta winced. "I know it, dear. But suppose you didn't have a trade and couldn't make up this winter for your losses of last summer. Mr. Fray has promised you steady work at $2.50—that's $15 a week. Why, it will pay the interest and taxes for a year, besides paying all our living expenses and giving you a splendid start for and giving you a splendid start for the spring. You might be able to buy another cow."

"I know all the advantages," said Ben impatiently. "But you don't un-derstand how I feel about it, Mary Etta! It's sort of admitting I've failed on the farm, just as your father said I would."

His wife's eyes flashed strangely. "You don't understand father, dear. He has already admitted he was mistaken in his estimate of you, for you have done splendidly—no one can deny that—and who could prevent the long drought we have suffered? I know he'd think it was splendid of you to pitch in and make the farm pay by doing everything you could this winter."

Ben turned away, a discouraged

droop to his shoulders. Of course Mary Etta didn't know that he had gone to her father the night before and asked him for a loan of $500 to tide them over the winter and spring—in fact, until his crops would begin to pay along in May and June, for his mar-ket garden and forcing house had proved a very paying branch of the Madison farm.

He reddened resentfully as he re membered how old Peter Lloyd's white eyebrows had lifted incredulor ly when his son-in-law asked for the loan. "No, Ben," Peter had said slowly; "I'm not saying I ain't got the money, for I have, but I guess I'll keep it awhile longer. If Mary Etta was a widow, now, and needed my help would only weaken you to borrow this money of me. Find a way out your-You'll be the better off for it in the end, and I wish you good luck. If you was sick or there was an accident of some kind I'd be the first one on hand to help you out. As it is, you and Mary Etta have started out for yourselves, and you're both capable of fighting it out to the end—same as the rest of us have to do."

Ben Madison thought of this conversation with increasing anger as he trudged down the frosty road that led to Fray's planing mill. The only alternative left to him had been to seek a job at Fray's, where its owner had told him there were sufficient orders ahead to keep a good workman like Ben busy all winter making sashes and blinds for the spring building trade. he would take the job. There were others waiting for the opportunity, but Fray had promised Ben the first

then walked slowly on, head down, then walked slowly on, head down, moodily thinking. At last he came to the railroad station, where a few loungers awaited the passing of the noon train. Ben looked down the shining length of track that led to the city beyond. There might be opportunities for other work than that he had left behind when he married Mary Etta five years ago. He had hated the bench work, the long hours and the carrying of the dinner pail. They chafed his Madison pride. Ben was the last of his family, and all the pride the last of his family, and all the pride of the Madisons seemed concentrated in this young man with the strong, broad shoulders and the bitterly drooping mouth, who imagined he had made a failure of life.

As the whistle of the approaching train shrieked from some distant crossing Ben Madison seemed to make up his mind to some course of action. He glanced quickly at the loungers congregated about the station stove and stepped out of the station house and walked up the track to the raised plat-form where there was a little heap of baggage. He pulled his hat down over eyes and muttered under his breath: "I just can't go back to the beach again. I'll get something to do in the city and send for Mary Etta to come. I can write to her when I get there and tell her how it is. She'll understand."

When he was in the train he tried to persuade himself that Mary Etta would understand just how he felt and look on his decision in exactly the same manner that he did. Mary Etta had pride too. He had taken her from a comfortable home, where as the only daughter of a well to do farmer she had had little hard work and many luxuries. All of these things she had gladly given up to marry the man she loved, and Ben prided himself on the fact that by the work of his hands

Mary Etta had not had to do as much drudgery as many of his neighbors' wives. She had help in her house cleaning, and whenever there was extra work to be done she had a woman to do her washing and ironing and scrubbing. And yet Mary Etta look-ed very tired this fall. Indeed, there was a faded look about her usually blooming face that Ben did not understand and secretly worried about. And yet his anxiety was not so great as his pride. He could support his wife, but he would do it in his own way. They would board all winter in the city where he could get fine wages, and in the spring they would return to the farm.

Once in the city streets he did not know which way to turn to look for work. By the time he had bought a work. By the time he had bought a morning newspaper and hunted its col-umns in vain for advertisements re-quiring the especial services he had to offer he was ravenously hungry. When he had appeased his healthy appetite he was troubled at the inroads made upon his little store of money, and this money had been a sum that Mary Etta had produced from some secret hiding place, for their money in the savings bank had been drawn upon to meet necessary expenses.

Mary Etta was a wonderful manager he thought as he left the eating place and walked aimlessly down the street. She had planned and contrived all through the autumn months while the dread of going back to the bench still hung like a dark cloud over him.

He paused in front of a gaudily, painted doorway and read the posters of a moving picture show. In a few, moments he had yielded to the temptation to enter and found himself seated well down in front in the long, narrow theater. At the moment there were being produced the pictures of a thrilling rescue from flames as a tall tenement house burned.

Ben watched breathlessly and cheered as heartily as the rest when the last picture faded away. He did not look at the card announcing the next production. The theater was warm, and he was removing his overco

When he looked up he heard the faintly familiar sounds of an organ reproduced from a large phonograph on the stage, and there flashed into view, on the curtain a scene that took his breath away and left him sitting in stunned silence while it lasted.

Before him was the interior of the village church at home, rows and rows of familiar heads, while up in the pulpit the thin, angular form of the new minister sat stiffly on the red velvet sofa, while the choir grouped on his

He saw his own grave face beside young Harry Fray, the tenor. He saw Mrs. Phillips, the pastor's wife, and Mary Etta. Mary Etta, looking very sweet and girlish, was singing, and the others should have been joining in the refrain, for their mouths were opened. But it was only Mary Etta who sang, her sweet, high voice rising like that of an angel to the very roof of the church even now as it was reproduced from the phonograph and floated above the heads of the mixed audience, who hung breathlessly upon every word she sang. Now and then there was a strangled sob as the mean-ing of the song was borne to the hearts of the hearers and touched some tender chord.

Ben listened, seeming to hear the broken irill of a robin from the church-yard outside, as had happened the last time Mary Etta had sung that old Scotch hymn "My Ain Countrie."

I am far free my hame, an' I'm weary aftenwhiles

For the langed for hame bringing an' my Faither's welcome smiles,

An' I'll ne'er be fu' content until mine een do see The gowden gates o' heav'n an' my ain countrie.

When the last note had died away when the last note had died away amid a silence that was more eloquent than the noisiest applause Ben found his way to the management of the the-ater and was sent to the people from whom the picture films had been pur-chased. There, after many explana-tions and some delay, he was informed that the assists had gravited recovering that the pastor had granted permission for the picture to be taken from the back gallery the spring before and that Mary Etta had been approached and asked to sing the song into a phonograph. This she had at first refused to do, and then, tempted by the money offered, she had consented and had made several trips to the city to sing many other well known songs to be reproduced for the entertainment of the public. That explained to Ben Madison how, it was that in spite of the scant re-turns from the farm that summer there had always been plenty on his table, while his store bills had been prompt ly met. The shadow in Mary Etta's face was probably the reflection of her troubled conscience, for her gentle heart must have suffered at deceiving her proud young husband.

Thrilled with self contempt, Ben Madison hurried home on the last train that night and awoke the astonished Mr. Fray from his early sleep. Then he went on to his home, where Mary Etta was waiting anxiously for his return.
"Hurray!" cried Ben joyously.

got the job all right, Mary Etta. I'm going to work tomorrow morning. You got something for my lunch?"
"Lots," said Mary Etta, smiling through her tears. "Do you mind going back to the bench, dear?" she asked Then it was that Ben told her of his day's experience. "Gee, Mary Etta," he said in wonder as he concluded, "I don't see how you stood my foolish pride as long as you did! But you're the stuff. My pride's changed to another kind, and I'll work my fingers off one way or another till we pull out."

"Why, I loved you, Ben," said Mary contentedly. "That's why it was easy to do."

"You'll see how much I love you, then." threatened her husband happily.

A Sumptuous Private Car. Argentina has provided for its president, Dr. Jose F. Alcorts, one of the most elegant and sumptuous private cars in the western hemisphere. This car was built in Birmingham, England. It is seventy-eight feet long and is mounted on two six-wheeled trucks. It contains a handsome observation room, with a bay window effect at the end, and is furnished in mahogany and equipped with a marble fireplace. There are three bedrooms and baths en suit and servants' quarters. The exterior is of steel, painted a cream white with gold trimmings. The entrances are in the middle of the car. and the ends are rounded.

New Supreme Court Room. Throughout the session of congress the supreme court has been crowded with auditors, and many hundreds of members of the bar have been crowded out. This revives the demand for plans to erect a new supreme court building or department of justice, where adequate quarters can be provided for the hearings of great causes before their final and definite settlement. There is talk of building a tribunal as a companion structure to the handsome library of congress .- Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Lake Taal's Volcano. Mount Taal, the volcano in the Philippines whose eruptions caused a tiwave that destroyed five towns and carried death to not less than 300 people, rises from the middle of Lake Taal, a body of water about fifteen miles in circumference and thirty-four miles from the city of Manila. Taal's height is 1,050 feet and its crater is 7.650 feet in diameter. Its last severe outbreak was in March, 1900, and it has overflowed many times, with great loss of life. The volcano is the second in importance in the island of Luzon.

Device to Disarm Submarines. The French are experimenting with

THE CURIOUS TADPOLE.

Maybe He Turns Into a Frog and Then Maybe He Doesn't.

If a tadpole cannot get to the top of the water when it is at the time of life when it is breathing by means of its gills, like a fish, it will not become a frog. It will then always be a tadpole

Keep a tadpole in cold water and in the dark or away from the light and it will be years getting to be a frog. Left to the course of nature, says Browning's Magazine, the tadpole be comes a frog in from six to eight weeks, although it will have been two years arriving at that chance to change into the mature frog.

The tadpole's mouth is so tiny that it would be difficult to insert a pinhead into it, yet it has horny jaws and a sharp, biting beak, with three rows of teeth on the upper jaw. A hood grows down and incloses the gills on the right side, leaving them open like a spout on the left side.

At this stage of its transformation the tadpole breathes like a fish, taking water through the gills into the mouth and spouting it out on the left side. Its tail is what the tadpole feeds on by absorption of the white corpuscles of the blood during the molting and mouthing epoch in its life, when it is fasting. When it is ready to eat again the tail and the horny beak are gone, the wide mouth of the mature frog having taken the place of the latter.

There are forty species of frogs, only one of which is in South America. Australia has no frogs. Of all those forty species only one is edible—the Rana esculenta—and nowhere is this one more plentiful than in America, although that eminent naturalist St. George Mivart declares that the edible frog is unknown in America. A frog that is common in France will mew like a cat if its thigh is squeezed and emit the odor of garlic. For this it has to go through life bearing the name of Pelobates fuscus. species of frogs will not take anything in the way of food that is not a live, moving thing or something with the semblance of life and will starve to death among a million creatures if none obliges the frog by moving.

Dickens as a Reporter.

Dickens once described the condi-tions under which he pursued the calling of a reporter—conditions, he said, of which his successors could have no adequate idea. On one occasion he transcribed his shorthand notes of important election speeches, he said, on the palm of his hand, by the light of a dark lantern, in a postchaise and four galloping through a wild country at the dead of night at the then surprising rate of fifteen miles an hour. He once, in the castle yard at Exeter, took an election speech of Lord Russell in the midst of a lively fight.-Westmnister Gazette.

TESTED BY TIME. - In his justly-celebrated Pills Dr. Parmelee has given to the world one of the most unique medi-cines offered to the public in late years. Prepared to meet the want for a pill which could be taken without nausea, which could be taken without nausea, and that would purge without pain, it has met all requirements in that direction, and it is in general use not only because of these two qualities, but because it is known to possess alterative and curative powers which place it in the front rank of medicines.

REAL ESTATE AS AN INVESTMENT

BY A. D. M. HONE

matter serious thought it is apparent that real estate as an investment has not received the attention it deserves.

There is no commodity which offers such safe and sure returns or the money invested in it as does real estate, and yet so far as the general public is concerned, real estate is about the last thing that is considered when making investments. The public invests millions of dollars annually in stocks and bonds of railways, industrial corporations, mines and the like, and no form of speculation is too visionary but what some people can be found who have faith in the promises of its promoters and will put their money

The average man of small mean thinks only of providing himself with a home and seldom considers the possibilities for profit in the intelligent buying and selling of real propertp. This too in the face of the enormous fortunes that have been made solely by trading in real estate. The average man has a hazy knowledge that many great fortunes like those of the Astors, Russel Sage, and Hetty Green are the products of investments in real estate, but he seldom sees the application in his real estate when bought right.

The writer has convincing evidence of the truth of these statements and would be glad to present these interesting facts to readers of the Guide.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The Reeve Replies.

EDITOR GUIDE-ADVOCATE : Answering the communication of R. C.M. in Guide issue of 16th instant, which is not fair to the Council or citizens as there stated, it is to be regretted that our friend takes it to be his duty to instant, which is not fair to the council or citizens. form the citizens in respect to the present system of lighting and what is sought by the Council in the new contract, and in doing so, to utterly misinform them. Admitting there may be a disappointment in the new lights to some of the citizens, yet he only makes the statement without any proof. Under the present system we have 1400 candle power of lighting on our Main street and under the new system we great to have 1200 candle power and we are to have 1200 candle power and very much better distributed, and placed as the Council desires so as to give a better light. As to the cost of the old system to the village our contract called for $1123,00 and in 1910 we actually paid. $1100.93, the difference being deducted for lights that were so often out. Under the new contract we pay $810.00 and have a service until midnight, and instead of 17 lights over the village under the old contract, we will have 55 lights-over the village under the new contract and at a reduction in price of $313.00 which on an average rural assessment will pay for a number of ice creams. This is not a frivo ous matter but a matter of business in the interests of the citizens in general, and one in which the Council as a body are desirous of giving the citizens a better and more generous distri-bution of lights at a cost much less than should have done if he desired to en-lighten the citizens in general was to-have presented the facts fairly and given some proof that the lighting will be in-ferior to the present system and not a-bare statement which any individual can-readily make. The Council are only too. readily make. The Council are only too-glad to have the citizens take an interest in the we fare of the village by personal discussion at any mesting of Council or through the press, and will be very pleased to adopt anything that will be of service to the village as a whole in this-or anyother matter.
