Library of Congress
Photoduplication Service

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol  $\rightarrow$  (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol  $\nabla$  (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Library of Congress

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole  $\rightarrow$  signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole  $\nabla$  signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

It is hoped that this book will be of decided interest and value, not only to the family described upon its pages, but to the general public, and especially to those students of history who lay bare the past, catch clear glimpses of its existence, and acquire a just appreciation of its spirit by following the lines of particular families. By this study they know the motives which influenced the actions and moulded lives of its individual members. It is not to be denied that such studies have a remarkable value in disclosing the evolution of states, and the building of governments.

A clear insight into the formation of some of the earlier colonies, now embraced in the United States, the organization and development of many of their towns, their slow growths, the sufferings of the settlers, the distressing Indian wars, the contest for national independence, the struggle with Great Britain from 1812 to '15, and the mighty battle for national supremacy and existence from 1861 to '65, with many glimpses of the politics of the states and nation, may be had by following and noting the lives of individuals of different generations of the family whose existence is here delineated.

This work has the charm of novelty, and the merit of originality—for never before has any History of the Sinclairs of America appeared.

The family, also, has about it the glamour of romance and antiquity in being the offshoot of one of the most illustrious ones on the other side of the sea. For a thousand years its course can be traced—for a thousand years its members have belonged to the advanced guard of civilization. From the misty Norse-land to the sunny plains of Normandy, France, from thence to England, to Scotland, to Wales, and centuries later to Ireland, Australia, and America, it has helped to conquer, then reorganize, develop and protect new communities. In the United States its members have been active participants in every war. In that respect it has been a decidedly marked and peculiar family.

In America its patriotism has been unquestioned, of the most unobtrusive kind and most valiant order. It has shrunk from no dangers, and has not been appalled at the fearful risks of the most hazardous chances of war. In scouting expeditions against lurking Indians in ambush, in the long and dreary march through wilderness forests, in the rigor of our northern winters in half-sheltered camps, in bivouac, and on scores of battlefields, its members have suffered and endured as only the brave and heroic can, and some of them have rendered the supreme sacrifice of life itself for their country. In relation to them I can say that which might not be appropriate for one of the Sinclairs to utter.

This work has been a laborious and difficult one, as few accurate records have been kept by the family. This deficiency had to be supplied by facts obtained from wills, and records of administrations of estates, gathered in many probate offices in different sections, and from the offices where transfers of land were recorded, by town and church records in various states, by military records published by different states, from manuscript records of the states, and pension papers in the Pension Office at Washington, D. C., and from tombstones in every known locality where the family has lived. All known sources of knowledge on this subject in America and in Europe have been consulted by correspondence or by my personal inspection.

This work is one of infinite detail. Errors will appear, criticisms will be made. But let him who has prepared a work of a similar nature, thereby knowing its difficulties, and whose work is faultless, be the one to "cast the first stone." Silence will become all others as a jewelled crown does the brow of the fairest princess.

For a long time I had desired to know more of the ancient Norman families who settled in England at the time of the Conquest. A special fascination always clung to the Sancto-Claro family, a branch of which lived at Roslin-Castle. Investigations in that direction have led to this volume, which is now given to the public.

The orthography of the name has greatly perplexed me, as the kaledoscopic changes from Sinclair to St. Clair, or St. Clair to Sinclair, were brought to my view, and even before the name settled down to the common form of Sinclair or St. Clair, which is within a century. I have faithfully attempted to follow in the spelling of each individual's name the form adopted by that individual.

Some inaccuracies will probably be found in this book, in the printing of proper names and dates. The responsibility rests largely on the parties who sent me the records, for oftentimes they were written hastily and illegibly. I made great efforts to have the names correct, and the dates full and accurate.

ARRANGEMENT.

The arrangement is simple, and similar to that adopted in many genealogical works.

The pedigree of each head of a family goes back to the emigrating, or first known ancestor. The latter is indicated by the numerical figure 1, meaning the first known generation; and so following down the line, with the ancestor's name marked by a numerical figure denoting the generation in which the person stands.

On the left margins of the pages consecutive numbers are used. Heads of families, as a rule, appear with two numbers, first as a child, with number on the left; while on the right in parentheses ( ) is the number where the person will be found as the head of a family. Turning to that number will be found the person with numbers reversed. At the right of the name in brackets [ ] will be the number of the person as a child. By looking at the numbers back and forth, the plan will be apparent.

Much care and painstaking have been expended in arranging the running titles, the table of contents, the list of illustrations, while against each subject is placed the number of the page where such subject is treated in the book. A most copious index, giving every name in the book, in itself a great work, has been prepared, which makes the work easy for reference, and vastly adds thereby to its value. Any statistical work sent forth to the world without a proper and full index is deficient of one of its chief merits and crowning glories.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

My thanks are due, and are hereby rendered to all who have interested themselves in this undertaking and who have rendered valuable assistance; some must be mentioned by name as their aid was invaluable.

Hon. Charles A. Sinclair, of Portsmouth, N. H., wished to know the history of his ancestors and kindred. He has borne the expense of the preparation of this work, the cost of printing it, and of illustrating it with more than sixty full pages of engravings. Thus has the history of those of Sinclair lineage been placed in enduring form.

I am indebted to Hon. Obed Edson of Sinclairville, Chautauqua Co., N. Y.; Miss Emma H. Sinclair, Brentwood, N. H.; Hon. Charles H. St. Clair, Morgan City, La.; Miss Angeline St. Clair, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y.; the late Charles P. St. Clair, Esq., New Hampton, N. H.; Hon. John G. Sinclair, Orlando, Florida; Prof. John E. Sinclair, Worcester, Mass.; Hon. John Sutherland Sinclair, the present Earl of Caithness, Scotland, and of Lakota, North Dakota; the late Rev. John L. Sinclair of Lake Village, N. H.

To Thomas Sinclair, M. A., Montpelier House, Woodlane, Falmouth, England, I am indebted for permission to use any information in his work, "The Sinclairs of England." Availing myself of this, I rewrote and arranged in genealogical order much of the historical matter incorporated in the first two chapters of this book.

To the late Hon. George E. Hodgdon, late Mayor of Portsmouth, N. H., I am indebted for information of the Hodgdon family. Mrs. Mary Eastman of Landaff, N. H., has aided me with much information of the Clark family. Gen. Jonathan P. Cilley of Thomaston, Me., gave me much of my information of the Cilley family and has my thanks. Gen. Lewis Merrill, 330 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penn., gave me facts and statistics of the earlier generations of the Merrill family.

This work chronicles and preserves much history of another American family from its advent to these shores until the present. It gives information and knowledge to many Sinclairs of a relationship with other Sinclairs of diverged lines of which they never dreamed before. It brings them into closer intimacy and connection, and establishes between them a common and fraternal bond of sympathy and regard. It may lead to regular reunions of the numerous widely scattered, and far separated members.

This work recalls much from the mist of vanished years which existed only in loving memories. Forms laid away in the long-ago it brings back clothed in former loveliness and beauty.

This book is now sent forth upon its mission in the world. Go forth, product of hand and brain, I bid you "Good speed and far going."

HISTORY OF THE ST. CLAIRS OR SINCLAIRS.

CHAPTER I.

ORIGIN OF THE ST. CLAIR OR SINCLAIR NAME.—THE HERMIT ST. CLAIR.—THE HOME OF THE HERMIT.—THE HERMITAGE.—THE CHAPEL.—THE HISTORIC FAMILY OF ST. CLAIR.—ORIGIN OF THEIR NAME.—THE SINCLAIRS OF NORMANDY, FRANCE.—THEIR LINEAGE.—THE PROGENITOR OF THE SINCLAIR FAMILY.—INVASION OF ENGLAND BY WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.—THE BATTLE OF HASTINGS.—DEATH OF KING HAROLD.

IN SUNNY France there is an ancient and beautiful province which strikingly resembles some of the fairer districts of England. It is closely connected with the latter by sympathy and by memories of an illustrious past. There are old towns and newer ones of beauty which will interest the traveler. Every spot seems stamped with the impress of one mighty man—William the Conqueror. Among the lesser of the lovely rivers of Normandy is the Epte, which flows quietly along through pleasant and luxuriant intervales on its course to the Seine. There is a spot upon its shore where a grove of tall trees not too thickly stand, and whose high and leafy tops furnish a protection to the creepers and small undergrowth among them, and a refreshing shade to the visitor upon a day of warmth and sun. A few rods from the flowing river is the "Holy Well" of a martyred saint, whose pure waters, it is said, have for centuries given and still impart a healing power to the eyes, and which the pious and simple people still use, anointing themselves with the sign of the cross. Near at hand is the former place of abode of the pious recluse, where exists a shrine in his honor, and a chapel adjacent thereto where worshippers often gather to listen to their religious teachers and to utter their songs of praise. At an early period a member of one of the noted families of England left his native land and at this place in Normandy made his abode. He was a religious man; lived in a Hermitage. In that remote century, in primitive style, and in great simplicity, he lived. The beautiful lines of the poet are nearly applicable to this saintly man.

"Far in the wild, unknown to public view,
From youth to age a reverend hermit grew;
The moss his bed, the cave his humble cell,
His food the fruits, his drink the crystal well.
Remote from man, with God he pass'd his days,
Prayer all his business — all his pleasure praise."

Though more than a thousand years have gone since then, his memory is still fragrant, the place he trod is sacred, the location of the Hermitage is still to be seen, and thither many pilgrims come to do him honor.

This recluse was fortunate in being a righteous man, and so became a saintly martyr, was canonized by the church, and won immortality.

ORIGIN OF THE ST. CLAIR NAME.

His name was Clare, of Rochester, County of Kent, England. For a scathing review and just condemnation of the conduct of one of the high-born dames of Normandy he was foully assassinated by two of her minions. The church honored his memory, he became a saint; thus the Clare of England became the Saint Clare of France. St. Clair was the name of his dwelling. He stamped the same upon a famous baronial castle, in close proximity, and imparted it again to the town in which he lived, and the latter bears the name even unto this day. The town of St. Clere is situated near and north-east of Vernon, and is some two hours' ride from Paris. By the impress of his patronymic upon a famous castle, and the country about, he gave the family designation to a numerous and illustrious family, of an entirely different blood from himself, whose history will be given. Thus, by his martyrdom, by the celebrity of this castle, and by the knightly deeds of the family of St. Clair, who took their name from the town or locality, his memory has been preserved and will ever endure. On the eve of his departure, as he looked forth on the fair landscape about him, he might well exclaim as he was quitting them forever:

"Farewell ye mountains, ye beloved pastures, Ye dear still valleys, fare ye well."

THE PLACE AND PRESENT APPEARANCE OF THE OLD HOME OF THE HERMIT.

One mile distant from the railway station in St. Clere, France, is the place where lived the Hermit. It is situated on a rich and fertile plain among tall trees on the bank of the river Epte. Passing through the unlocked gate one soon reaches the "Holy Well" of St. Clair, which is surrounded by an iron railing and is some four feet in length, three feet in width, and four feet in depth, with a brick or cemented bottom. Its clear and limpid waters are reached by three stone steps. At one end is a half circular piece of stone masonry, six feet or more in height, surmounted by a ball of stone, and this by a stone cross. Inside of this structure, in a niche two feet from the floor, is a statue of St. Clair, made of the soft stone of the country. In his hands he bears his dissevered head, for he was executed by direction of a cruel woman whose crimes he had sharply rebuked.

THE HERMITAGE.

Passing through another gateway, in a high faced stone wall, his Hermitage is reached. This wall surrounds a plot of ground some fifteen rods in length by eight rods in width. Another wall divides this from a cultivated garden, filled with fruit trees and with vines. This wall separates the land devoted to cultivation from that devoted especially to the honor of St. Clair. The latter is some seven rods in length by five rods in width. At regular intervals there are niches in the walls filled with statues of different individuals. In a recess, with a roof rising from the top of the wall, is the Hermitage. Its floor is of stone rising six inches from the ground. Within is a stone altar two feet or more in height, on which is a representation of the crucifixion and Christ's descent from the cross, while near at hand are his devoted female followers. This is surrounded upon the wall by flying angels bearing a scroll or robe.

On the right of this scene is a statue of St. Clair, with his neck protruding from his clothes, while within his hands is his ghastly head with its upturned face facing the heavens.

In this shrine of the Hermit there is another altar. Some three feet high were often many candles kept burning. On the outer wall are various figures, while upon its front are these words:

"*ICY EST LE VERITABLE HERMIT
AGE, OU LE BIEN HEUREX ST
ET MARTYR ISK. EN L'AN, 884.*"

THE CHAPEL.

This structure faces the Hermitage. It is a one-story building constructed of light stone, and its four roofs come to a point at the top, above which is a bell surmounted by a roof of slate about two feet square, and this is capped by a weather vane—a rooster. The roof of the chapel is of tile.

The entrance is surmounted by a ball of stone and a stone cross. Each corner is capped by a ball of stone at least eight inches in diameter. The two Norman windows and door are of equal height, and the colored glass is protected by iron bars. Inside the chapel there is room for some thirty people.

Facing the entrance is a stained glass window, and also one window on each side. At the end of the chapel, facing the entrance, is an upraised altar, upon which are the crucifix, the holy candles, and vases of flowers. On either side, in niches in the wall, are statues, in front of which are often kept burning candles. All this is in remembrance and in honor of the English Clare, who became a saint, and was the first who bore the honored name of St. Clair.

AT THE CHURCH IN ST. CLERE.

In the church there is the chapel of St. Clair. Upon a pedestal is situated his statue, while his head is plastered upon the front of the upraised platform which holds his statue. The memory of the saintly man lives still in the hearts of men! He won lasting renown.

THE HISTORIC FAMILY OF ST. CLAIR.

The St. Clairs, or Sinclairs, so famous in history, were of a different blood, and following a common custom of the age, took their name from the castle and locality in which they lived. The castle of St. Clair appears to have been the hive of this family. History does not inform us of the manner in which it fell into their possession. It was taking on its name of St. Clair in 894, one thousand years ago, or ten years after the martyrdom. This family, living at the castle and on lands of that name, were early called St. Clair. Though the St. Clairs can in their descent be traced to the Norsemen, and to their home in the cloud land of the north, yet they are only members of the Sancto-de-Claro family, after Rollo came to the rich lands of Normandy, which was one of the fairest, brightest, and most richly historic localities in France. After Rollo's advent there, they appear in history. St. Lo, a strong castle, was besieged and taken by Rollo in 890, and afterward became a home of the Sinclairs. The castle of St. Clair had its name thoroughly established in 912; and it was there in that year that Charles the Simple, King of France, met the Norse chief Rollo, who was then and there installed into the dukedom of Normandy. The castle stood near the church in the present village of St. Clere, but no remains can be seen there to-day. The village is not an interesting one in itself, but, like most places or cities in Normandy, is unclean, and like them, too, is destitute of a really cleanly and comfortable hotel. From the high table-land back of the church, and near where the castle is said to have stood, is an excellent view of the country about for many miles. The landscape looks rich and beautiful, with sloping hills, woods, great fields comparatively free of walls or hedges, with grazing herds, while the light colored roadways thread the country in various directions.

The Sinclairs were among the earliest families to assume a surname, and in that they were fortunate. From their historic stronghold they went to St. Lo and became lords of the fortress there. This citadel gathered about it the important town of that name in the district of the Cotentin, and which from its picturesque situation on steep rocks and frowning hills overlooks to-day the river Vire.

The Sinclairs of Rye, Normandy, were a branch of the St. Lo family. Another offshoot of the blood from the castle of St. Clair were the Earls of Senlis, who had great possessions near Paris. The Sinclairs were now firmly settled in Normandy and their interests were all located there. They were to have their training for several generations under Norman civilization, which was one of the best in the world. Many changes occurred to the family before A. D. 1066, when it loomed up so prominently among the most ardent followers and chivalrous supporters and able leaders of William the Conqueror. The Sinclairs, known as the Earls of Senlis, living near Paris, seem to have given at first little thought to the exploits of the Conqueror, but later they successfully and prominently appear among his supporters.

The chief homes of the Sinclairs in Normandy were the castles of Torignan, of Rye, of St. Lo, other homes of the Senlis branch near Paris, and at the original hive of the family in the castle of the family name in the town of St. Clair. (See map of Normandy, facing p. 17.)

THEIR LINEAGE—PROGENITOR OF THE SINCLAIR FAMILY.

The Sinclair lineage can be followed far back into by-gone centuries for more than a thousand years. It can be traced through the mazes of Scottish and English history for eight hundred and twenty-eight years to the Conquest of England, when the Sinclairs first appeared, at least permanently, upon British soil. Many stalwart knights of this blood circled about William the Conqueror on that battle day at Hastings, Oct. 14, 1066, when the English King Harold was slain, his troops defeated, England subjugated, and the invaders became the conquerors.

By them the family is followed to Normandy, France, where beneath its bright skies their home had been for some two hundred years; and again through the blood of the famous chieftain, Duke Rollo of Normandy, to his early home in Norway. In brief, they were of the same family as William the Conqueror, and were nearly related to him. From the best authorities the pedigree briefly stated is as follows, which for the sake of convenience has been arranged in a genealogical table. For those students who wish for fuller information, which is not consistent with the scope of this work, they are referred to Burke's Peerage, and encyclopedias of genealogical lore, Anderson's Scottish Nation, and to a recent work, "The Sinclairs of England."* Concisely stated the pedigree is as here given. From these works my information has been largely gathered.

This table will commence with Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>, Earl of Maere and Ruamdahl in Norway, considering Rogenwald as the 1st generation, and so marked. He was surnamed "The Rich," and was a great favorite of King Harold, called "Fairhair," ruler of Scandinavia. His wife was a near relative of the king. In 888 he received a grant of the Orkney Islands, and his son Eynar<sup>2</sup> became a permanent prince there, and which his descendants ruled for five centuries.

Prince Rollo<sup>2</sup> (Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>), a half savage chief, was another son of Rogenwald, and of great energy and resourceful in early life. Visions of conquest in southern lands floated through his active brain. So from his northern home he fitted out his dragon ships, and with his adventurous comrades sallied forth in quest of adventurous conquest in England, and finally to the rich, well watered province of Normandy in France. In 912 he met King Charles near St. Clair Castle, and from the weakling king of France, Charles the Simple, upon certain conditions, he received the province. He espoused the Roman Catholic faith, married for his first wife Grielle, daughter of King Charles the Simple, and became the first Duke of Normandy in 912. He married second Papia, or Popée. He abdicated his authority in favor of his son in 917, and died in Normandy in 931.

William<sup>3</sup>, called Longsword, died in 948. He succeeded his father in the dukedom, being the 2d Duke of Normandy. He married a daughter of Count Robert of Vermandon. His other companion was Sprota, a daughter of Hubert St. Clair.

CHILD.

Richard<sup>4</sup>, the 3d Duke of Normandy.

Richard<sup>4</sup>, the 3d Duke of Normandy, married first a daughter of Hugh, Count of Paris; he married second Gonnora, a princess of Norway. He died in 960, and was the direct ancestor of all the Sinclairs and St. Clairs of Norman blood of the earth.

CHILDREN.

Richard<sup>5</sup>, the 4th Duke of Normandy, held the dukedom until his death in 1026. (See below.)

Robert<sup>5</sup>, Earl of Evreux, was the father of Raoul<sup>5</sup>, the constable. He was a gallant soldier and bravely fought against the French king for his relative William, afterward called the Conqueror.
Maiger<sup>5</sup>, Earl of Corbueil, was the direct ancestor of the St. Clairs and Sinclairs. He was first Archbishop of Rouen.

Emma<sup>5</sup>, became the queen of Etheldred, the 2d of England. Her second husband was Canute the Great.

Richard<sup>5</sup>, the 4th Duke of Normandy, married Judith, the daughter of the Earl of Brittany.

CHILDREN:

Richard<sup>6</sup>, 5th Duke of Normandy, died unmarried in 1028.

Robert<sup>5</sup> (Richard<sup>5</sup>, the 4th duke, Richard<sup>4</sup>, the 3d duke, William Longsword<sup>3</sup>, Rollo<sup>2</sup>, Rogenwald 1st generation), the 6th duke, "the devil and saint." He lived in the city of Falaise; at the present time a city of nine thousand inhabitants.† "It is situated on the right bank of the river Ante, a branch of the river Dive, and is an untidy, ill-kept, and disagreeable town; and barring its rare historical associations has little to please the eye, gratify the taste, or awaken the enthusiasm of the traveler. But what gives the place its rare interest is its connection with the life and times of William the Conqueror, and with that of his ancestors. This was the place of his birth. In the early morning my steps turned up the steep street toward the picturesque ruins of the Norman castle of Falaise. It was a fortress of remarkable strength, on a jutting cliff, facing the rocky height of Mont Mirat, and overlooking the little stream which flowed through the valley at its base. It dates back to the tenth century. This edifice shows that the Normans were master builders, and knew how to erect massive and elegant edifices. The castle is surrounded by walls from seventy to one hundred and ninety feet above the base of the cliffs, is garnished with twelve towers no higher than the top of the parapet, and is one thousand nine hundred and seventy feet in circuit. At the entrance the 'concierge,' an old woman, unlocked the gate and conducted me through a fine walk of trees to a portion of the castle. From the walls at the side we looked down the steep decline onto the roofs of the houses in the valley beneath. Then we reached a circular tower, called Talbot's Tower, one hundred and thirty feet high, which rises from the valley below and is a massive and fine work. Farther along we were shown the place in the wall from which 'Robert the Magnificent,' often called, and very appropriately, 'Robert the Devil,' father of William the Conqueror, first cast his eyes upon the fair Arlotta, the mother of William, and daughter of the Tanner of Falaise, as she was washing in the stream at the base of the castle. The abode of her father is still pointed out. Centuries have come and gone and still the women and girls of Normandy wash in the waters from that little stream which flows at the base of the cliffs. - The small chamber

William<sup>7</sup> the Conqueror, born in 1027. He was the 7th Duke of Normandy and became the conqueror of England. He married Matilda, daughter of the Count of Flanders, and died in 1087.

This lineage and genealogy may not be absolutely correct, as a slight confusion seems to prevail among authorities, and besides, over 800 years intervene between us and many whose pedigrees are given; but it is approximately correct.

Important political events had transpired, were then in progress, and were to come about in the near future, which would change the political conditions of England and Normandy, make Duke William the conquering king of England, and raise his relatives, the Sinclairs of Normandy, from their Norman estates to positions of marvelous wealth and power in England and Scotland.

Edward the Confessor, King of England, was a son of Ethelred the king, and his queen Emma, sister of Richard the Second, Duke of Normandy, and of Robert, the father of William the Conqueror. During Edward's enforced exile from the land of his birth, while Canute and others ruled England, he had been brought up in the culture and polish of the court of Normandy. He loved the elegance and refinement of the Normans more than he did the brusque manners, stiffness, and inelegant customs and appearance of his Saxon countrymen. Normans abounded at his court. It is claimed that he desired a Norman to succeed him. It was in 1065 that Hubert Sinclair<sup>4</sup>, Earl of Rye, Normandy, went on his perilous mission as a secret agent between William, the Duke of Normandy, and Edward the Confessor, by whom it was arranged that William, who was his relative, should succeed to the English throne. (History of the Sinclairs of England, p. 9.) On Jan. 5, 1066, Edward, the king, died childless. Then commenced in earnest the struggle for the kingdom. It was "an irrepressible conflict" between Saxon and Norman.

Harold, a brave son of the great Earl Godwin of England, in whose veins flowed no princely blood, represented the Saxon element and was crowned king of England.

William of Normandy was aroused, and in the spring and summer of 1066 his country rang with acts of preparation for invasion of England. His splendid army was safely landed on English soil; the time of conflict for supremacy was at hand. Events would now transpire changing forever the character of the English nation. "Of those lithe, athletic figures in armor on horseback around William, Duke of Normandy, on that famous October day of 1066 near Hastings, nine at least were Sinclairs. With Greek-like ease, familiar from fine expression in tapestry, they moved in the inmost circle of his gallant surrounding." (History of the Sinclairs of England, p. 3.)

It is not improbable, though not susceptible of positive proof, that the Earl of Senlis, with his sons, three subjects of the king of France, and not of the Duke of Normandy, helped to swell the roll of the Sinclairs on that decisive battle day. On that field so fatal to Harold fifteen thousand Angles, and as many Normans, fell.

On the night succeeding the day of the battle, over the identical spot where had waved during the fierce battlestorm the standard of the English king, the successful warriors spread their feast on tables of stone among the dead. At that board the Sinclairs were gathered. The circular depression in the soil of some three feet in depth, and stones, said to be identical, are still pointed out to the visitor to that historic place. Over that place the famous and magnificent Battle Abbey, at Battle, England, was erected to keep green the memories of the victors, and as a memorial of the great triumph of William the Conqueror. Though the latter dedicated it chiefly to the saying of masses for the soul's repose of King Harold, whom he had despoiled of life and his kingly crown, yet it became the abode of his most zealous friends, who had assisted him, among the Norman monks. At that altar were offered his triumphant sword and his kingly robes worn at his coronation. In that same place was deposited one of the most famous historical documents of many centuries, the "Roll of Battle Abbey"—consisting of a record of the Norman gentry who came to England with the Conqueror and helped to swell his victorious armies. On that memorable list, as the representative of all the Sinclairs, was inscribed the name of Walderne, Earl of St. Clare, as the head of this illustrious family.

CHAPTER II.

THEIR HISTORY IN NORMANDY AND BRITAIN.

During these more than eight hundred years since that eventful day near Hastings, those nine Sinclairs, who were about the Conqueror, can be discerned with great distinctness. Their names will now be given; the dates of their birth can not be definitely fixed, but will be approximately stated, and a brief résumé of their lives placed before the reader.

In addition, notice will be taken of other branches of this same family, who became conspicuous on English soil. Over the name of the "nine Sinclairs" and their descendants, and where possible of others, will be placed figures denoting the number of the generation the person is in descent from Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>, the Norseman, and considering him as the first generation of ancestors. For a full account of pedigree consult pages 21-26.

2. Robert Sinclair<sup>1</sup>, called Fitz Hamo, the "Knight of Rye," and Lord of Thorigny, Gloucester, and Glamorgan. He enlarged and extended the castle of Rye, England, named for the castle of Rye in Normandy, the home of his uncle, Hubert Sinclair, Earl of Rye, and is said to be the founder of the Sinclair family of that place. On that bold eminence in Rye his ruinous castle still stands. A dashing, brilliant figure was he among the Sinclairs of England. He was a gallant and successful soldier and gained the highest favor with his sovereign. He conquered a portion of Wales and the castle and town of St. Clears, Wales, and in that district ruled. The village of St. Clears in 1889 was forlorn and disagreeable, with few attractions, situated on the river Tay, and five miles from Langhorne. Its old and historic castle has disappeared, and a circular mound, overgrown with grass, in the lower village in the rear of the dwellings upon the main street, and overlooking the river, is said to mark the place where it stood. Another of his castles, now a picturesque ruin, is in Cardiff, Wales, and is evidence still of its great strength when in its best estate. Other ruined castles in Wales give striking evidence of the power and commanding influence there at one period of the Sinclairs. The magnificent castle at Rochester, England, was once assailed and taken by Robert Sinclair. It is now overgrown with ivy, and is one of the most imposing and beautiful ruins in England. His wife was Sybil Montgomery, and they together owned many estates in Normandy, England and in Wales. He founded the Abbey of Tewkesbury, England, and richly endowed it in 1102. While aiding in quelling an insurrection in Normandy, in 1107, he was wounded and died, and was brought to England and buried in March, 1107, in the Abbey of Tewkesbury.

CHILDREN.

1. Cicely Sinclair<sup>2</sup> was a baroness. Became abbess at Shaftesbury, England.
2. Hawise Sinclair<sup>2</sup> was a baroness. Became abbess at Milton, England.
3. Another daughter<sup>2</sup> married the Earl of Brittany.
4. Matilda Sinclair<sup>2</sup> married Robert Consul, son of Henry I., the king. He was the Earl of Gloucester.

 6. Britel Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [17], born about 1026.
 7. William Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [18], born about 1028 Was founder of the family at Roslin Castle, Scotland.

8. Agnes Sinclair<sup>7</sup>, born about 1030. All writers agree that she married the head of the Bruce family in England. Some say it was Philip Bruce, grandson and heir of William Bruce, Lord of Breos, Normandy, and of Bramber, County of Sussex, England. This shows a close connection between the Sinclairs and Bruces, for William Bruce, just mentioned, married a daughter of Johel Sinclair of Fotness and Barnstaple. Some say that Agnes Sinclair<sup>7</sup> married Robert de Bruis, another of that same great Norman family, so influential and strong in England before it reached the throne of Scotland. Bramber, in Sussex, and Brednock, with its castle in Wales, were the earlier homes of the Bruces in Great Britain. Agnes was superior to the Bruces in family traditions, in blood, and rank, but it was a distinction to be united to so powerful and noble a family. She must have been the Lady of Bramber, Sussex, and perhaps of Brednock, Wales, or of both. (History of the Sinclairs of England, p. 29.)

9. Hubert Sinclair<sup>8</sup> (Malger<sup>8</sup>, Richard<sup>8</sup>, William Longsword<sup>8</sup>, Rollo<sup>8</sup>, Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>), born in Normandy, France, about 1008*, Earl of Rye, a brother of Hamo and Walderne Sinclair, before the conquest of England by William, Duke of Normandy, called William the Conqueror, was in 1047 living at his castle of Rye in Normandy. He was a brother of the Earl of St. Clair, and his early home was at the castle of St. Lo. He was the sworn and loyal vassal of his king. William, hearing of a plot against his life by the rebellious earls of Normandy, only saved his life by an all-night headlong ride. When the morning dawned he was urging his foaming steed by the castle of Rye, when he was seen by the earl, who was standing at his own gate, between the church and the mound on which the castle was built, and he welcomed him to his castle, placed him upon a fresh horse, and ordered his three eldest sons to bear him company and never leave him till he reached his own castle of Falaise. This command was faithfully executed. When William's pursuers appeared he mounted his horse and led them on wrong roads and saved the life of his prince. The scene of this historic event was where the river Vire unites with the river Ouve. The duke fled from Valence, and the ford by which he crossed the river is still called "The Duke's Way." The castles of Torig-nian, the home of Hamo<sup>8</sup>, Earl of Corbueil, and castle of Rye, home of his brother Hubert Sinclair, Earl of Rye, were not far distant. Before the conquest, in 1065, he had fulfilled a most hazardous diplomatic mission to England, and brought back to Normandy the mandates and symbols which made William, the duke, heir of England's crown. He received from the English king, Edward the Confessor, a grant of land at Ashe, in Hampshire. It is situated at nearly equal distance from Andover, Basingstoke, and Kingsclere, near the source of the Tees, whose waters empty into the harbor at Southampton. This was afterwards possessed by his son Eudo Sinclair, the illustrious. In the countles of Essex and Sussex this family held land before the conquest. These acts of loyalty won for him and his sons high esteem in the mind of the prince. At the time of the conquest, 1066, he was in the strength of his manhood, and four stalwart sons, Radulph, Hubert, Adam, and Eudo Sinclair, bore him company on that famous October day, 1066, at the battle of Hastings, making five of the nine Sinclairs who were present on that day. Hubert was generous as well as brave, and gave great gifts to the church of St. Mary's, West Cheap, London, which act has lived as a memorial of him. The dapifership, a position next to royalty, was promised him, but he did not possess it, but it was held by his son Eudo Sinclair. Children born in Normandy, France:

10. Radulph Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [10], born about 1026. Fought at the battle of Hastings. Lived in England after the conquest, 1066.
11. Hubert Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [22], born about 1028. Fought at the battle of Hastings. Lived in England after the conquest, 1066.
12. Adam Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [23], born about 1032. Fought at the battle of Hastings. Lived in England after the conquest, 1066, and aided in the compilation of Domesday Book.
13. Eudo Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [24], born about 1035. Fought at the battle of Hastings. Aided in the conquest of England; resided there afterwards. Held the dapifership, the highest honor under the king.
14. Muriel Sinclair<sup>7</sup>, who married Geoffrey Mandeville. He was from Normandy, where he had land near Valence or Valognes. She was his second wife; and this family of Mandevilles obtained the Castle of Preaux and the other Norman estates of Eudo Sinclair<sup>7</sup>, the brother of Muriel. He received more than a hundred estates in England from William the Conqueror; was first constable of the Tower of London, and was viscount, or sheriff, of Essex, Middlesex, and Hertfordshire. She had a son Osborne Mandeville<sup>8</sup>, who had a descendant by name of Walyein. Osborne<sup>8</sup> was the ancestor of the DeCallis of Normandy, of the Cayleys of Yorkshire and Norfolk, represented at the present time by Sir Digby Cayley, Baronet.
15. Albrede Sinclair<sup>7</sup>, married to Petras, the Lord of Valonlis, who had a son Petras<sup>8</sup>. He was ancestor to the Valence Earls of Pembroke, famous in the history of England; and he had received more than fifty estates in the beginning of William's reign.

where it is probable he often resided. He gave the monks of Castleacre his rights as founder over their monastery, as a free gift for the health of his own soul and that of his wife, with those of his heirs and ancestors. This would go far to prove that he was one of the prominent persons of his day. His Suffolk estates were not far distant, and both were situated in a very strongly disaffected district. He was chamberlain of the king, and the most of his time was spent at Norfolk. He had wealth and position and was among the successful Sinclairs of England. It is supposed that he died later than 1119. He had a son Walter of Medway, and among his descendants were other Richard Sinclairs of position, prominence, and probity.

19. Radulph Sinclair<sup>9</sup> [10] (Hubert<sup>4</sup>, Malger<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>4</sup>, William Longsword<sup>4</sup>, Rollo<sup>4</sup>, Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>). He was born about 1026, in Normandy, probably at the castle of Rye, and was his father's eldest son. He had reached proud manhood's prime on that early morning in 1046, when his father stood at Rye's castle gate and beheld his relative and prince in his rapid flight, and afforded him aid and comfort. He was one of Hubert's sons who bore the future conqueror company in his extremity. Twenty years later he was at the Hastings battle, and was near the king. Afterward he commanded the forces to secure the heart of England. In 1066 he and his father and two brothers returned to Normandy to aid in quelling the Cennannic troubles there, after which he returned to England. He was made Earl of Nottingham, and the magnificent castle was given into his charge and keeping. It was one of the finest castles in the kingdom, and is still imposing in its elevated and commanding position; exceedingly interesting are its subterranean and winding flights of stairs cut in the soft rock, and its chambers without windows. In Domesday Book he held great possessions in Leicester, Nottingham, Stafford, Lincolnshire, Derby. In Nottingham he had eleven houses, and in Nottingham County he had ten manors; in Derby he possessed thirty-seven lordships, Criche being one of them; he had Dalby in Leicester and Gunnebi in the County of Lincoln. The amount of property in his possession and in that of other Norman leaders, followers of William the Conqueror, was enormous. This had been wrenched from the unfortunate Saxons. The name of Radulph Sinclair's wife (he is sometimes called Ralph) does not appear. He had children.

† The St. Clairs of Roslin were hereditary grandmasters of Masonry in Scotland. James II. conferred that dignity upon them. The first grandmaster, William St. Clair, Earl of Orkney and Caithness, and his successors, held their courts in Ayrshire, town of Kilwinning. William St. Clair of Roslin being destitute of an heir, and having to sell his estates in 1736, resigned all claim to the grand-mastership, and the office became elective. He himself was elected to the position, and died in 1778, æ. 78 years. He was the last of the direct male line of Roslin. Upon his death a solemn funeral lodge was held. A poem was composed and set to the air of Roslyn Castle, a couplet of which reads thus:

"Like St. Clair live, like St. Clair die;

CHILDREN.

20. Ralph Sinclair<sup>4</sup>. He distinguished himself in the civil war between Empress Matilda and Stephen. By one writer he is called "a fierce man and a plunderer." Had great wealth. Was successful in war, but was taken prisoner and the surrendering of a valuable castle was the equivalent of his life and liberty. He refused to surrender the coveted prize, and was hanged. His family were greatly overcome by misfortunes, and lived mostly in Normandy.
21. Hubert Sinclair<sup>4</sup>. He appeared not to have flourished greatly, but little appears in regard to his history. He had a sister who married Henry de Cotentin, a Norman lord.

22. Hubert Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [11] (Hubert<sup>4</sup>, Malger<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>4</sup>, William Longsword<sup>4</sup>, Rollo<sup>4</sup>, Rogenwald<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Normandy about 1028, probably at the castle of Rye. He was in his young manhood when William, his prince, in headlong haste, halted at the castle gate of Rye, in 1046, and received hospitality from Hubert's father. He was one of the stalwart sons who went forth hastily and accompanied William, the duke, to his own fortress. The conquest of England opened up a new and brilliant field for the exhibition of his talents and prowess. He was in the immediate surrounding of the Conqueror at the battle of Hastings in 1066, and that night encamped upon the battle field. He accompanied his cousin Richard Sinclair, and wrested the tower of Norwich from the insurgents; he secured things with a strong hand, death and destruction desolated his way; he became the governor and ruled Norwich Castle with an iron hand. He became the dapifer of the half-brother of William. During sixty years this family were rulers of Norwich and its famous castle, but were of the County of Norfolk. The castle still stands, and from its top is a beautiful view of the city of Norwich and the country about it. He held great landed possessions in Sussex, Berkshire, Dorsetshire, Devon, Warwickshire, Essex, Staffordshire, Norfolk, and Suffolk, which the robber king had taken from the Saxons and given to him. At one time, 1066, he was sent by his king to quell the Cenomannic rebellion, and after its accomplishment returned to his possessions in his adopted country. It is said that he married Agnes Todenei, a daughter of Robert Todenei of Belvoir Castle, and either he or one of his sons married the daughter of Rodulph de Bello Sago, who brought West Lexham as a dowry. He had few descendants to keep his a living name or to perpetuate his deeds.

ber, 1066. The king was exceedingly generous in bestowing other people's property upon his friends, and his brother became the richest landholder in England, and Adam Sinclair was of this rank the treasurer and chancellor. Adam had great possessions in Kent and Northampton. His home was at Campes, near Kensing, on the London side of Maldstone, and to this district the Sinclairs clung for centuries. His chief mansion was front of the Hurst forest, which was beautiful and fertile. His capacity was of a high order as well as his education, as is shown by his labor on the Domesday Book. He enjoyed the highest confidence of the Conqueror, and by him was appointed, in 1080, for purposes of state, to accurately reckon up the lands of the kingdom; it was a marvelous work, and it has made immortal the names of Adam Sinclair and his fellow commissioners. A great survey was made of the entire kingdom, which was recorded in the Domesday Book, and which for more than 800 years has been the basis of land tenure in those portions of the country to which it applied. The king's agents traversed all England and got information from every source. Three appraisments were made upon all conceivable property: one as it stood in the days of Edward the Confessor, another as it was when granted by William to his vassals, and the third as it stood thirteen years after the conquest. This vast mass of information was systematized and recorded in two volumes: the first called the Great Domesday Book, a vellum folio of three hundred and eighty-two double column pages; the second the Little Domesday Book, a quarto of four hundred and fifty pages. The survey was accurate and has never been called in question. This great work, with which the name of Adam Sinclair is forever associated, is to-day kept in a strong glass case in the office of Public Records. His success in life was great and overmastering. There is no record of wife or children. His property was inherited by his relatives.

24. Eudo Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [13] (Hubert<sup>2</sup>, Malger<sup>4</sup>, Richard<sup>4</sup>, William Longsword<sup>2</sup>, Rollo<sup>2</sup>, Rogenwald<sup>4</sup>). He was the fourth son of his father, Eudo Dapifer; he was called Eudo Filius Hubert. He was born at the castle of Rye, Normandy, France, about 1035. He was a lad probably of the age of ten or twelve years on that bright morning in 1046, when William, the future conqueror of England, arrived with foaming steed at his father's castle, after his all-night headlong ride, fleeing for his life from his relentless and fast approaching pursuers. He was too young to join his three stalwart and soldierly brothers who, by his father's command, on fresh and vigorous steeds, and heavily armed, were to bear William company to his own castle. He little dreamed at that day how intimately his own fortunes, and his great honors in the future, were linked with those of his relative, the fleeing and pursued duke.

In after years he was the dapifer of William, the Duke of Normandy, which for him was made hereditary. He was in his manly strength and in possession of his full intellectual powers at the time of the conquest in 1066, and was one of the heroic nine Sinclairs who fought bravely and successfully at Hastings, October, 1066. He was in the immediate service of his king and near his person. While his father and brothers were sent on warlike enterprise to Normandy he remained in England. He became the chiefest of them all, and was the most noted, most wealthy, and most powerful and renowned of any Sinclair of England in his or any succeeding time.

In Normandy his chief castle or home was the castle of Breaux, Praels, or Pratelli, and its wide extent of lands. It "is in the arrondissement of Rouen," and "is three leagues north-east of Bayeux." It belonged to him in 1070. Other large possessions were held by him in Normandy. In England he held immense possessions. In the single county of Essex the record of his estates fills three large pages in the Domesday Book, and he owned land in at least nine other counties. But his largest estates and greatest interest were in Essex. He was its most illustrious person, and his fame lives there till the present. He from his offices was the chief subject in England, and at that period was at least one of the wealthiest persons in that country.

Having received great honors from King William, at his death, it was by largely executing the plans which his vigorous intellect had originated, that William-Rufus, the second son of the Conqueror, succeeded to kingly rule in England. Under him he became Lord of Colchester, then the second town of the country in importance, and which is fifty miles from the queen city of England, London. At Colchester he lived much of the time. The palace of King Coel, a former ruler, was in Colchester. On the site of this palace, by orders of King William, Eudo Sinclair in 1076 bulkd the massive and famous castle of Colchester, whose ruins at the present time are among the most celebrated and grand in England, and in which is a celebrated museum, containing among other relics, urns and ashes of the Roman dead. He lived in this princely home with his wife and family, and here were centered all ties of home and political interests.

His mind turned to religious things. In 1096, in September, he commenced, and finally built from his own resources, "the famous abbey of St. John the Baptist," the gate of which alone remained in 1889. In 1097 he himself laid the first foundation stone, and his beloved and loving wife, Rose Sinclair, laid the second, and in 1104 the structure was finished, and to it he gave lands and revenues. It received donations from other Sinclair relatives. The abbey has now disappeared by the ravages of time. He established a hospital for lepers, of which there were many in England at that time. It was outside of Colchester, and was dedicated to St. Mary Magdelene. Under King Henry he was full minister for the United Kingdom.

He was approaching life's sunset. He had been great under three kings of England, who were his relatives. His life had been made supremely happy by his wife, Rose Clair, one of the greatest and

She was married at 14 years of age to him in 1088, and was the daughter of Rose Giffard and her husband, Richard Fitz-Gilbert, of Tunbridge and Clair, called Richard Clair, one of the most famous captains of the Conqueror. She lived before marriage at her father's princely abode, Tunbridge Castle, County Kent, England. She "worshipped" her husband "with wonderful zeal, with wonderful affection," as he did her. The last days of Eudo Sinclair were spent in preparation for death. "He lived according to the Christian ritual of his time." He died in his native Normandy in the springtime of 1120, in his castle of Preaux, France. At his deathbed were gathered his king, Henry of England and Normandy, the Archbishop of York, Eng., and the Bishop of Rouen. By his solemn injunction his body was to be carried to England and buried in his own abbey, so celebrated, at Colchester. His wife was with him in the last hour, being then about forty-seven years of age. She died within twelve months, and contrary to her wishes, was buried at the monastery of Bec, instead of by the side of her husband at Colchester. Walter Sinclair<sup>2</sup>, a nephew of Eudo, rested by her side, and one monument is over them.

CHILDREN.

25. William Sinclair<sup>2</sup>. By some historians he conspired against King William-Rufus, and was executed. There seems to be a doubt in the minds of some as to his being a son of Eudo Sinclair. If so, it was by an early marriage. He was cousin of the king.
26. John Sinclair<sup>2</sup>. He was born about 1085; was known as Sir John Sinclair and was the first Norman Earl of Essex. He lived during the reign of Henry II., which began in 1154. He did not figure prominently in English history, and died leaving few mementoes of his life.
27. Margaret Sinclair<sup>2</sup> married William Mandeville, 2d Earl of Essex and son of Geoffrey Mandeville, the husband of her aunt. She was Countess of Essex, and after a life of prominence and vicissitude, died, and was buried in Walden Abbey, near Walden Castle, County of Essex, England, by the side of her children. - Children:
28. Geoffrey Mandeville<sup>2</sup> became one of the principal men in England. He received a grant of all his grandfather's, Eudo Sinclair's, estates in Normandy, and was made dapifer of that country. He died Sept. 14, 1144. He was twice married, but there is a controversy in relation to the names of his wives. His son, Ernulph Mandeville<sup>1</sup>, did not figure prominently in English history.
29. Beatrice Mandeville<sup>2</sup> married William Talbot, a Norman nobleman. He had displeased her brother; she was divorced and married second, William Saye, of the celebrated family in Kent and Essex.

THE SINCLAIRS OF SENLIS, FRANCE.

30. Randulph Sinclair, or Ralph le Riche, meaning Ralph the Rich, was a feudal chief, in the 11th century, in the town of Senlis, France, which lies between Rouen and Paris. He was known as "The Rich" on account of his wealth. His sons went to England after the conquest.

CHILDREN.

31. Warner Sinclair, le Riche (the Rich), whose surname of Sinclair became lost as he founded a new family name, and was the ancestor of persons of English blood of the surname of Rich.
32. Simon Sinclair, the other son, who was a renowned soldier, and was intimately associated with Ralph and Hubert Sinclair, natives of Rye, Normandy, in warlike expeditions in England. The relationship between them is not stated. Before 1080 he had built the castle at Northampton, and lived there and was its governor. At this time he erected the extensive priory of St. Andrews, near his castle, in the north part of the town, and near the north gate. He was on intimate and friendly terms with the Conqueror, and later was one of the great nobles of Henry I., and was Earl of Northumberland. His life was active; he gave much to the church. He went to the Holy Land in the last year of his life, and died on his homeward journey to England at his French home, in 1115, and was buried in his loved abbey, De Caritate. His wife was Matilda —.

CHILDREN.

33. Simon Sinclair. He inherited his father's titles and most of his estate. He was Earl of Northumberland. He passed a troubled life and died in 1153, and was buried in St. Andrews. His wife was Isabel, daughter of the Earl of Leicester. His son,
34. Simon Sinclair, 3d, succeeded to his titles. He married Alice Gaunt, daughter and heiress of Gilbert Gaunt, Earl of Lincoln. His life was closed without heirs in 1184, and he was buried in the priory at Northampton, called St. Andrews, erected by his grandfather, and which entombed his father.
35. Waltheof Sinclair. He became a priest; was made Abbot of Melrose Abbey, in Scotland, in 1148, and died Aug. 3, 1159. The Norman features of the abbey were thus introduced by him.
36. Henry Sinclair. He became Earl of Northumberland, and perhaps had no family.
37. William Sinclair. He was the Archdeacon of Northampton, and was founder of St. John's hospital in 1542—existing in 1642. (There may be a doubt as to his being a son of Simon Sinclair.)
38. Matilda Sinclair. She married in 1112, Robert Fitz-Richard Clare of the Tunbridge family, and related to the wife of Eudo Sinclair, the dapifer. He was the fifth son of Richard Clare, Justice of England, and on the death of Eudo Sinclair, in 1120, he became dapifer in place of his deceased brother-in-law. Matilda was married three times.

CONTINUATION OF SCOTTISH SINCLAIRS.

39. Sir William Sinclair<sup>11</sup> [See 18d] of Roslin, Sheriff of County of Edinburg, Scotland, for life. He sat in the parliament of Seone, Feb. 5, 1284, when the succession to the crown of Scotland was settled in case of the death of Alexander III. The same year he was one of the commissioners to France to obtain a wife for the king, who was then a widower, which resulted in making queen of Joletta, daughter of the Count de Dreux. In 1292, during the competition for the crown of Scotland, he espoused the cause of Baliol. Later he swore fealty to King Edward of England. He died about 1300, leaving three sons.

He asserted the independence of Scotland in a letter to the Pope in 1320, and was one of the guarantees of a truce with the English, June 1, 1323. His son

43. Sir William St. Clair<sup>13</sup>. He accompanied Sir James Douglas on his expedition to the Holy Land with the earl of King Robert Bruce, and was killed with him fighting against the Moors in Spain, Aug. 25, 1330. His tomb is said to be still seen in Roslin Chapel and it represents the person of a knight in armor attended by a greyhound. He left an infant son, who was also

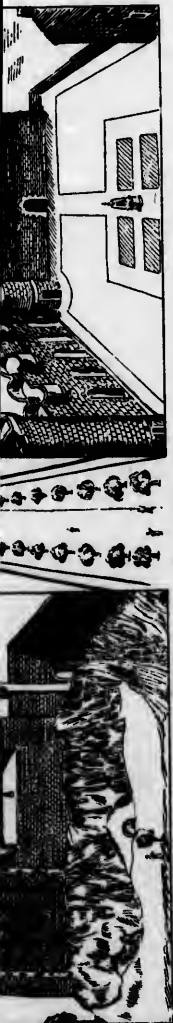

44. Sir William St. Clair<sup>14</sup> of Roslin. He married Isabel, daughter of Malise, Earl of Strathern and Orkney. His elder son,

45. Henry St. Clair<sup>14</sup>, became Earl of Orkney, and in 1379 obtained a recognition of his title from Haco IV., King of Norway. His son,

46. Henry Sinclair<sup>14</sup> was the 2d Earl of Orkney, and Admiral of Scotland and chief attendant of Prince James, afterwards James I., when he was captured by the English at sea in 1405, on his voyage to France. The earl was sent to the Tower of London, and in September of 1405 was permitted to return to Scotland. He died before 1418. His son,

47. William St. Clair<sup>15</sup>, 3d Earl of Orkney and 1st Earl of Caithness. He was the first of his family to enjoy the latter distinction. Many were the high offices held by him, and he had great landed estates and great influence. In 1446 he founded Roslin Chapel and endowed it with various lands and revenues. He was High Chancellor of Scotland from 1454 to 1458. He resided at Roslin Castle.

The baronial magnificence and wide hospitality for which the early knights of Roslin were renowned are said to have been exceeded by Sir William St. Clair, 3d Earl of Orkney, in the reigns of James I. and II. Father Hay, a member of his household, speaks of him "as a prince" who maintained his state "at his palace of the castle of Roslin," where "he kept a great court, and was royally served at his own table, in vessels of gold and silver; Lord Dirleton being his master of the household, Lord Borthwick his cup bearer, and Lord Fleming his carver; in whose absence they had deputies to attend, viz: Stewart, laird of Drumlaurig; Tweedie, laird of Dumferline; and Sandilands, laird of Calder. He had his halls and other apartments richly adorned with embroidered hangings. His princess, Elizabeth Douglass, was served by 75 gentlewomen, whereof 53 were daughters of noblemen, all clothed in velvet and silks, with their chains of gold and other ornaments, and was attended by 200 riding gentlemen in all journies; and if it happened to be dark when she went to Edinburgh, where her lodgings were at the foot of Black Fryars wynd, 80 lighted torches were carried before her."

But to-day how changed the scene, where the "lordly line of St. Clairs" fared so sumptuously. The castle is situated on a projecting rock overlooking the beautiful valley of the river Eske, and is reached by a bridge over a deep chasm in the rock. It is now in ruins, but all parts are visible, and some apartments are in fair preservation. Through narrow apertures in the wall one can look forth upon the charming scenery in the valley beneath. There can still be seen the kitchen of the castle, but the menu, and the accommodations for its preparation, were rude compared with those of modern establishments.

Roslin Chapel, situated upon a higher elevation, is only a short distance from the castle. It was founded, as stated, in 1446, and is one of the most remarkable specimens of Gothic architecture in Scotland. The carvings on roof and pillar are simply wonderful. The barons of Roslin, clad in armor, lie buried beneath the pavement of the chapel. It was a superstition that the chapel appeared in flames on the night before the death of any of the family of its lordly owners. As Sir Walter Scott has beautifully written in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel":

"O'er Roslin all that dreary night
A wondrous blaze was seen to gleam;
'T was broader than the watch-fire light,
And redder than the bright moonbeam.
It glared on Roslin's castled rock,
It ruddied all the corpse-wood glen;
'T was seen from Dryden's groves of oak,
And seen from caverned Hawthornden.
Seemed all in fire that chapel proud,
Where Roslin's chiefs uncoffined lie;
Each Baron for a sable shroud,
Sheathed in his iron ponoply.
Seemed all on fire within, around,
Deep sacristy and altar pale;
Shone every pillar foliage bound,
And glimmered all the dead men's mail.
Blazed battlement and pinnet high,
Blazed every rose-carved buttress fair—
So still they blaze when fate is nigh
The lordly line of high St. Clair.
There are twenty of Roslin's barons bold Lie buried in that proud chapelle;
Each one the holy vault doth hold—
But the sea holds lovely Rosabelle.
And each St. Clair was buried there,
With candle, with book, and with knell;
But the sea-caves rung, and the wild winds sung,
The dirge of lovely Rosabelle."

The earldom of Caithness was conferred upon him Aug. 28, 1455. He is described as being "a very fair man, great stature, broad

CHAPTER III.

GEORGE SINCLAIR, FOURTH EARL OF CAITHNESS.—HIS ARMS AND CREST—PEDIGREES OF SEVERAL LINES OF HIS DESCENDANTS.—LINE OF DESCENT OF GEN. ARTHUR ST. CLAIR; OF JOHN SINKLER OF EXETER, N. H.; AND OF JOHN SUTHERLAND SINCLAIR, THE 17TH EARL OF CAITHNESS, OF LAKOTA, NORTH DAKOTA.

66. George Sinclair<sup>20</sup> [64]. He was the 4th Earl of Caithness. He was the ancestor of several important branches of Sinclairs and St. Clairs of the present day. He was the probable ancestor of John Sinkler, an immigrant to Exeter, New Hampshire, as early as 1656, and the Sinclairs and St. Clairs, his descendants in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New York, and other states of the United States. He was the ancestor of the John Sutherland Sinclair, a resident of Lakota, North Dakota, and now—in 1894—the 17th Earl of Caithness. He was the ancestor of Gen. Arthur St. Clair of Revolutionary fame. He was the ancestor of Thomas Sinclair, a writer of repute and author of the "History of the Sinclairs of England."

George Sinclair, the 4th earl, was a cruel and vindictive man, although he filled various high offices of trust, and led an eventful life. He was in 1566, by grant from Queen Mary, Justiciar of Caithness, and was one of the peers who sat on the trial of Bothwell. He married Elizabeth, daughter of the Earl of Montrose. The inhuman earl died at Edinburgh, Sept. 9, 1582.*

67. John Sinclair<sup>21</sup> [74], Master of Caithness; he died at Girnigo Castle. The probable ancestor of John Sinkler, who was of Exeter, N. H., in 1656. The ancestor of Gen. Arthur St. Clair. The ancestor of Thomas Sinclair, the author of the "History of the Sinclairs of England."
68. William Sinclair<sup>21</sup>, who was first Laird of Mey, and ancestor of Ulbster.

* For a full history of George, 4th Earl of Caithness, see Earls of Caithness, page 5-82, Vol. 1, of "The Scottish Nation; Or the surnames, families, literature, honors, and biographical history of the people of Scotland," by William Anderson. Pub. by A. Fullarton & Co., 44 South Bridge, Edinburgh; and 115 Newgate St., London Eng.; 1863.

69. George Sinclair<sup>41</sup>, second of Mey, Chancellor of Caithness. He was the ancestor of John Sutherland Sinclair of Lakota, North Dakota; now, 1894, the 17th Earl of Caithness.
70. Barbara Sinclair<sup>41</sup> married Alexander, Earl of Sutherland, and divorced in 1573.
71. Elizabeth Sinclair<sup>41</sup> married Alexander Sutherland of Duffus. She married second Hutcheon McKay, ancestor of the Lords Reay.
72. Janet Sinclair<sup>41</sup> married Robert Munro of Foulla.
73. Another daughter married Alexander Innes, of Innes.

ARMS AND CREST.

Arms and crest of "George, fourth Earl of Caithness, and his wife, Lady Elizabeth Graham, daughter of the Earl of Montrose. Copied from an old carving in Barrowgill Castle."

They form the vignette on the title page of "Notes on Caithness Family History," by John Henderson, W. S.

The arms of the earl, which are two ships and two lions rampant, are on the left of the picture, while those of his wife are on the right. "They are supported by two griffins armed and beaked." Crest is a cock or phoenix surmounting a helmet, wreath or crown. The motto is "Commit thy work to God."

He married Jean, daughter of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell, and had three sons and a daughter. He married second Bessie Gunn, or Bessie Rotison. He is ancestor of Gen. Arthur St. Clair. (See pedigrees later on.) He is the probable ancestor of John Sinkler of Exeter, N. H., in 1656, and his descendants.

 85. James Sinclair<sup>68</sup>, second of Assery. Ancestor of Gen. Arthur St. Clair, being his great-grandfather. He married Elizabeth Balfour (see statement of Mrs. Rachel St. Clair Jacoby, relating to the Balfours, p. 43); and second, Margaret Munroe. His son,
 86. James Sinclair<sup>68</sup> was a merchant in Thurso, and died in 1713. Grandfather of Gen. Arthur St. Clair. His son,
 87. William Sinclair<sup>68</sup>, father of Gen. Arthur St. Clair. A merchant in Thurso, and died in young manhood. He married, probably, Miss Murray. Children:
 88. Arthur Sinclair<sup>68</sup>, born March 23, 1736.
 89. James Sinclair<sup>68</sup>, baptized 1738.

This concludes the account of the pedigree of Gen. Arthur St. Clair through George, the 4th earl. By it his ancestry can be traced for a thousand years or more back to the misty Northland.

The history of this noted man, with that of his descendants, will be found later on in this work, in a chapter entitled "The History of Gen. Arthur St. Clair and of his descendants."

THE PEDIGREE OF GEN. ARTHUR ST. CLAIR, A GENERAL
IN THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The statements concerning his pedigree and the date of his birth have long been indefinite and uncertain, and he apparently left no papers or statements which would throw light upon this subject. A long correspondence with his descendants has failed to solve the problem. The general statement in history that he was born in 1734, mentioning no month or day, is indefinite and unsatisfactory. An examination of public records in Thurso, Scotland, the place of his birth, fails to reveal any reference to the birth of any Arthur St. Clair, but by a personal correspondence and a consultation of the most valuable work, "Notes on Caithness Family History," by John Henderson, W. S., published by David Douglas in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1884, I have found what appears to be, and which is accepted as, the correct date, and which establishes his line of descent. Sinclair and St. Clair are different forms of the same name, and both were often used in connection with the same person.

In searching the Kirk session books of Thurso was found this entry: "On the 24th of March, 1736, William Sinclair, merchant in town, had his son Arthur (who was born about five o'clock of the preceding day) baptized by the Rev. William Innes, minister here." That would make the date of his birth to be March 23, 1736. In a personal letter from Rev. J. Stewart Miller of Thurso, dated July 2, 1891, he gives the date, and says "he had a brother James born in 1738." "His mother's name was probably Murray."

His great-granddaughter, Mrs. Rachel St. Clair Jacoby of Sumneytown, Pa., in a personal letter, dated Nov. 11, 1891, says: "Gen. Arthur St. Clair was very nearly related to the Balfours. Margaret Balfour has always been a family name with us." By the pedigree which is now accepted, General St. Clair's great-grandfather, James Sinclair, second of Assery, married Elizabeth Balfour for his first wife.

General St. Clair was not a grandson of the then Earl of Roslin as is stated in Appleton's Cyclopædia of American Biography, Vol. 3, p. 368, and in other works, as none then existed, but he was a relative, descended from a common ancestor. The earldom of Roslin was not created till 1801, when it was conferred on Alexander Wedderburn, who was born in 1733, a little before the birth of St. Clair. (See William Anderson's Scottish Nation, Vol. 3, p. 373, for Earls of Roslin.) He was not a son of any of the Lords Sinclair, as that title remained dormant from 1723 to 1782. (Anderson's Scottish Nation, Vol. 3, p. 459.)

Upon this subject Rev. William Sinclair, of the Ulbster branch of the family, Chaplain to Her Majesty the Queen, says in a letter dated The Chapter House, St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Eng., March 5, 1890: "The statement that General St. Clair was a grandson of the Earl of Roslin is absurd, because there was at that time no Earl of Roslin; the ancient Lords of Roslin were then on the point of dying out in the person of a bachelor. The earldom of Roslin is an entirely modern title." Archdeacon Sinclair is considered good authority upon Scottish Sinclair history.

Robert C. Winthrop, Jr., says in a letter dated Boston, Mass., Dec. 3, 1891: "Some notices of General St. Clair vaguely describe him as 'the grandson of the Earl of Roslin,' a palpable absurdity, the 1st Earl of Roslin having been a man of Gen. St. Clair's own age."*

George Dallas Albert, in the History of Westmoreland County, Pa., says Gen. Arthur St. Clair "was a son of William Sinclair of the same stock as the then Earl of Caithness."

After great research, I accept unqualifiedly the statement that Gen. Arthur St. Clair was born March 23, 1736, in Thurso, Scotland, and was a son of William Sinclair, the merchant, and was descended from George Sinclair, the 4th Earl of Caithness, through his son, John Sinclair, the Master. (See Nos. 64, 66, 67, 74, 76, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, which give his line of descent.)

PEDIGREE OF JOHN SINKLER, OF EXETER, N. H.

90. John Sinclair [79a], son of Henry, supposed to be John of Exeter, N. H.

Between 1576, when John Sinclair, Master of Caithness, died at Gernigo Castle, and the time when John Sinkler appeared in Exeter, N. H., a number of Sinclairs appeared in recorded Scotch history; their names were mentioned merely, and they then disappeared. It is probable that John of Exeter was one of them; that he left the country of his nativity where the accident of birth and the law of the land gave to the eldest son all the estates of their father, and where the "unfortunate younger sons" usually became wadsetters, i. e., small tenant farmers on leased lands under their elder brother, to seek a home which would be his own in free America, where the law of primogeniture did not prevail. Great exertions have been made to find the ancestors of the emigrant, John Sinkler of Exeter, New Hampshire, but great difficulties were met. Generations had passed away since his coming, two and a third centuries have come and gone; many people who lived when he lived, and since then, kept no family records; many records have been lost or burned; in consequence of the neglect in keeping them, and of the mishaps and casualties of time, there are oftentimes breaks between the records of the family in America and the family in Scotland. It was so in his case, we have no positive connection and we do not know for a certainty the name of his father. Yet many circumstances, traditions, and suppositions point so strongly in a given direction, that in their cumulative force they amount almost to a certainty. It is so in his case, that he was connected does not admit of a doubt. He was a Scotchman, and the same marked qualities have existed in his descendants as have appeared in the parent stock on the other side of the sea.*

A distinguished representative of the Scottish family was Gen. Arthur St. Clair of Revolutionary fame. In 1816 James St. Clair of Albion, N. Y., (see his sketch, No. 150 of the Sinklers of Exeter, N. H.,) visited the General in Pennsylvania, and the relationship between them was discussed, and decided by them, that they were relatives — "cousins" of a remote degree; of what degree they did not state to their relatives. James St. Clair, of Albion, N. Y., was a descendant of the fifth generation removed from John Sinkler (James St. Clair<sup>2</sup>, Thomas<sup>1</sup> Joseph<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John Sinkler<sup>1</sup> of Exeter, N. H.), who was in Exeter, N. H., as early as 1658, and who was born probably about 1612.

It is at about this point that we must look for the connection between the branches. The relationship probably existed not in the direct line, or through the elder son, but through some one of the younger sons of the house of Murkle, or the allied branches.†

It would be with the father of John Sinkler of Exeter that the connection would be made with the present stock in Scotland, six generations from James St. Clair of Albion, N. Y. By running General St. Clair's line back six or seven generations, on his line of descent, one must come near the point of union of the lines. By this we reach his ancestor, James Sinclair, first of Murkle, a son of John Sinclair, Master of Calthness. By running James St. Clair, on his ancestral line, we reach the father of John Sinkler of Exeter, whose name we seek.

In consulting "Notes on Calthness Family History" we find that John Sinclair, Master of Calthness, had a son, Henry Sinclair, who was brother of James Sinclair, first of Murkle, ancestor of Gen. Arthur, six generations removed. (See Nos. 74, 76, 79, p. 41.)

* The Sinclairs of County Calthness, Scotland, were one of the most important branches, as well as one of the largest, of the family. They lived in many different towns and parishes. In Scotland branches of the Sinclairs lived at Roslin, Hermandston, Assery, Murkle, Achingate, Newton, Barrock, Borium, Shura, Brabstordoran, Dun, Dunbeath, Latheron, Durran, Fors, Fusurek, Glase, Greenland, Rattar, Hoy, Oldfield, Kirk, Myreland, Lorn, Lybster, Reay, Mey, Orlig, Sotscaldar, Southdun, Stemster, Stirkoke, Webster, Sutherland, and Swinzie, and other places. They married and intermarried in every direction, making it perplexing to the genealogist.

† Members of the Sinclair family will find the following works of great and special value on the history of the Sinclair or St. Clair family: "Notes on Calthness Family History"; By John Henderson, W. S.; Published at Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1884, by Daniel Douglas, and can be procured of him. "History of Calthness, Scotland"; By James T. Calder; Illustrated; Published 1887, by William Rae of Wick, Scotland; Second edition. "The Scottish Nation: or the Surnames, Families, Literature, Honors, and Biographical History of the People of Scotland"; By William Anderson; 3 Vols.; Published 1833, by A. Fullerton & Co., 44 South Bridge, Edinburgh, Scotland, and 115, Newgate St., London, England. "The History of the Sinclairs of England"; By Thomas Sinclair; Published by Trubner & Co., Ludgate Hill, London, England. And the published works of Thomas Burke; the latter are found in most of the large American libraries.

Henry Sinclair "got a conveyance from his brother, Earl George, of part of the lands of Borrowstone and Lybster with the 'miln and fishings,' and he made a reversion of them to the Earl, Sept. 23, 1606. He died of paralysis while besieging the castle of Kirkwall in 1614. By his wife, Janet Sutherland, he had a son John, and he is probably the ancestor of a family of Sinclars of Lybster, who occur as wadsetters of these lands down to 1670."

On page 144 of this same book is the statement, "Before the rise of the Sinclairs of Lybster in Latheron, there were Sinclairs of Lybster in Reay, dating from at least 1636. Their origin is uncertain, but it is conjectured that they may have been the descendants of Henry Sinclair, who died about 1614. A natural son of John, Master of Caithness, and who got from his brother, the Earl of Caithness, a wadset of Down Reay and part of Lybster. Or possibly this family may have been of the Sinclairs of Dunbeath, who held Down Reay and other lands in Reay."

This second statement throws some doubt on the first, and I have been unable to find any farther record of him than the preceding—and he disappears from Scottish history. What could be more natural than that this John Sinclair should leave Scotland and, seeking a new land, should appear in Exeter, N. H. Some almost assert it to be a fact, and that this John Sinclair and John of Exeter are one and the same. If correct, this would verify the statement of General St. Clair and James St. Clair that they were distant cousins (which would make them fifth cousins), and place the bond of union at the place where we would naturally look for it and where it must probably exist. It would make them both, General St. Clair and James St. Clair, descendants of George Sinclair, the 4th Earl of Caithness (see No. 66), through his son John, Master of Caithness (No. 74); then through his two sons; Gen. Arthur St. Clair, through his son James, first of Murkle (No. 80), and John of Exeter, N. H., through another son Henry (No. 79). The line would run thus:

The common ancestor, John Sinclair, Master of Caithness, No. 67.

| 3. James, son of John, and second of Assery.            | 3. James, son of John, and 2d cousin of James of Assery.                           |

Those of other lines, of course, bear the same relation to General St. Clair. Similarity of looks is a strong evidence of relationship. Among the descendants of John Sinkler of Exeter, N. H., have been many knightly men in civil and in military life, who by their straight and stalwart forms, by their complexion, by their strong traits of character, and by their whole personal appearance have strikingly resembled the Sinclairs and St. Clairs of Scotland, as recorded both "in French and English history." And what does this signify? It proclaims the curious genealogical fact which every discerning family historian has not failed to see, that the mental and physical characteristics of a family are often transmitted for many generations, and for centuries.

The similarity of christian names existing among the Sinclairs of Caithness and the Sinclairs of the New World will not fail to be noticed. There were the Johns, the Jameses, the Richards, the Davids, the Janets, and many others in Caithness which were transplanted to the shores of New Hampshire, and have been honorably borne even to the present by the descendants of John Sinkler of Exeter.

Upon this subject the Hon. Charles Henry St. Clair of Morgan City, La., a great great-grandson of the James St. Clair of Albion, N. Y., so often referred to, and one who has given this matter a great deal of time and vast research, says: "I feel certain that John of Exeter, N. H., was that John who was son of Henry, who died of paralysis before Kirkwall and Janet Sutherland, his wife. I am convinced and shall search no longer." Then he alludes to the business of the family of Henry in Scotland—farming and fishing—and the business of John, his son in Exeter—which was the same. Henry had leased from his brother, Earl George, lands of Borrowstown and Lybster, with "miln and fishings," and throws up a part of it in 1606, and a part of the Sinclair family hold this down to 1670, and are supposed to belong to the stock of Henry. Our John probably quits Lybster Reay, goes to Edinburgh, marries Mary—and turns up in Exeter, N. H., in 1658, and has there a free fishing besides his farm. He alludes to the personal looks and appearance, and mental characteristics of the Scotch and American Sinclairs, which are remarkably alike.

The Hon. Charles Henry St. Clair again says: "In the year 1816 James St. Clair was living with his son James, Jr., in Albion, Orleans Co., New York." In recommitting to his relatives the history of his family he said: "Our first ancestor in America was named John, he came to America from near Edinburgh, Scotland. His father's name was Henry, he was a farmer. We are related to Gen. Arthur St. Clair, and I am going to pay him a visit." The visit was made in 1816; the General was then living at Chestnut Ridge, Pa. He was gone four months, three of which were spent with the General, whom he helped to save his crops, and with whom he had long talks as to their relationship and family genealogy. On his return he reported these things to his family, and from that time wrote his name St. Clair instead of Sinclair, this being the first knowledge he had that the real and true name was St. Clair. In personal appearance (as described by those who knew him) this James St. Clair would have served as a personification of that given by many historians of "William the Seemly," of William St. Clair, the first Earl of Caithness, and Gen. Arthur St. Clair.

Mr. St. Clair and others searched by correspondence and other ways for five years in the United States, Canada, Scotland, England, Ireland, and France to find the point of union of the Exeter immigrant with the parent stock, without success. At length, in answer to a letter of inquiry, Hon. John S. Sinclair, the present Earl of Caithness, of Lakota, North Dakota, loaned to the author of this work and to Mr. St. Clair his book, "Notes on the Caithness Family History." The information gleaned from that is now before the family and the general reader.*

This closes the history of the pedigree of John Sinkler of Exeter, N. H. His history is given in a chapter devoted to "John Sinkler of Exeter, New Hampshire, and his descendants."

PEDIGREE OF JOHN SUTHERLAND SINCLAIR, OF LAKOTA, NORTH DAKOTA.

The pedigree of John Sutherland Sinclair, of Lakota, North Dakota, is as follows. He is the 17th Earl of Caithness:

91. George Sinclair<sup>20</sup> (see No. 66), 4th Earl of Caithness, was his ancestor. The latter was the 20th generation from Rogenwald, who is called the 1st generation, and ancestor of the St. Clair—Sinclair—family. His third son, 92. George Sinclair<sup>21</sup>, second of Mey. He was 1st Earl of Caithness. He married before 1583, Margaret, daughter of William, 7th Lord Forbes, and died in 1616. His son and heir,
93. Sir William Sinclair<sup>22</sup> of Cadboll. He married Katherine, daughter of George Ross, and was succeeded by his son,
94. Sir James Sinclair<sup>23</sup> of Canisbay. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Patrick, Lord Lindores, and died in 1662. His son,
95. Robert Sinclair<sup>24</sup> of Durran. He married in 1678, Anne, daughter of William Sinclair of Rattar. His son,
96. John Sinclair<sup>25</sup> was his successor. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of George Sinclair of Carrock. He died in 1728, and was succeeded by his son,
97. James Sinclair<sup>26</sup> of Durran, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Patrick Dunbar; his second wife was Katherine Brodie. He died in 1793. His son,
98. George Sinclair<sup>27</sup>, writer to the Signet, married in 1775, Elizabeth, daughter of John Sutherland of Forse. He died in 1779. His son,
99. John Sutherland Sinclair<sup>28</sup>, a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Royal Artillery, and died in 1841. His son,
100. James Augustus Sinclair<sup>29</sup> was the 16th Earl of Caithness. He became Earl in Jan., 1890, and died in Jan., 1891. His son, 101. John Sutherland Sinclair<sup>30</sup> succeeded to the earldom in Jan., 1891, and became the 17th Earl of Caithness. He resides in Lakota, North Dakota.

THE SINCLAIRS OF SCOTLAND.—THE PROMINENT MEN OF THE NAME IN SCOTLAND AND IN ENGLAND.—HOMES OF NOTED SINCLAIRS IN SCOTLAND.—HOMES OF THE SINCLAIRS IN ENGLAND, AND NAMES OF ILLUSTRIOUS PERSONS OF THE FAMILY.—PROMINENT SINCLAIRS

SINCLAIRS OF SCOTLAND.

THE Sinclairs of Scotland, descendants of Walderne by his son William Sinclair, are very numerous. The name was one of the fifty most common ones in the kingdom; by the census of 1860, and by official tables, the number of persons bearing it was 9,880.* The county of Caithness is still its stronghold, and the earldom is still its heritage. The family is understood to be a clan, their badge being a branch of whins, and their tartan red. According to an old superstition, no Sinclair will willingly dress in green, or cross the Ord Mountain on Monday; for forty Sinclairs, led by the Earl of Caithness, and clad in garments of that color, marched by that road to the fatal field of Flodden, Sept. 9, 1513, where all were slain, save the drummer boy, who was discharged previous to the battle. In 1745 the Earl of Caithness, the head of the Scottish family, could muster one thousand men.

One of the most celebrated homes of the race in Scotland has been Roslin Castle; another was Sinclair Castle, situated on the southeast side of Sinclair Bay, on a bold neck of land in the central-eastern portion of Scotland, a mile to the west of Nosshead. It was one of the chief strongholds of the ancient Earls of Caithness, of the Sinclair family. It was erected about 1606, and is now in ruins.

In 1612 Col. George Sinclair, a nephew of the Earl of Caithness, and a soldier of fortune, met with a tragic fate, while with a large body of some 900 Caithness men in the service of the Swedish king against Norway. While passing through the Pass of Kringelen, in Norway, a narrow defile, they were beset by the men of the country, who hurled great rocks down the mountain sides upon them, while many were slain with firearms, and almost the entire number perished.

"To Norway, Sinclair steered his course,
 Across the salt sea wave,
 But in Kringelen's mountain pass
 He found an early grave.

 A monument yet marks the spot
 Which points to Sinclair's bier,
 And tells how fourteen hundred men Sunk in that Pass of fear."

SOME OF THE PROMINENT MEMBERS OF THE SINCLAIR FAMILY IN GREAT BRITAIN.

The present Earl of Caithness is John Sutherland Sinclair, whose American home is Lakota, North Dakota. Recently he succeeded to the titles and dignities of the Earls of Caithness, but not to the landed possessions.

Lord Sinclair has seats at Hermandstown, County Haddington, and Nisbet House, County Berwick, Scotland.

Sir John-George Tollemache Sinclair, Baronet of Ulbster. His residence is Ulbster Castle, in Thurso, County Caithness, Scotland. He is the largest landed proprietor in the county, having 60,000 acres of land. He represented his county in the House of Commons for some fifteen years.

Sir Robert-Gordon Sinclair of Murkle, Baronet, near Thurso. He has estates in Counties of Caithness and Haddington. His residence in Caithness is Achavaisdale Lodge, and in Haddington is Stevenston House, Scotland.

Sir John-Rose G. Sinclair of Dunbeath. Residence, Barrock House, near Wick, County Caithness, Scotland.

William Sinclair Thomson Sinclair, Esq. Residence, Dunbeath Castle, Freswick, County Caithness, Scotland.

Major Clarence Sinclair. Residence, Ulbster Castle, Thurso, County Caithness, Scotland.

Rev. William Sinclair, Archdeacon, and Chaplain to "Her most Gracious Majesty the Queen"; is Vicar of St. Stephen's Church, Westminster, London, England.

ARMS OF THE SINCLAIRS.

More than twenty Scotch families of the name have had arms granted to them; and at least thirty English Sinclair families have received arms. (History of the Sinclairs of England, pp. 409, 413.)

PLACES BEARING THE NAME OF SINCLAIR, WITH ITS VARIATIONS.

Sinclair Bay, near Wick, Scotland.

Sinclair Castle, near Wick, Scotland.

St. Clears, Wales.

St. Cleer, County Cornwall, England.

St. Clere, Ightham, County Kent, England.

St. Clair, or its variations; three places of the name are in Normandy, France, and there are many in the United States.

HOMES OF THE SINCLAIRS IN ENGLAND—NOTED PERSONS.

The Sinclairs of England had a checkered career in that land. They attained the most elevated positions. In spite of this their family name was hidden, and undoubtedly lost in many cases, by its members being known by their titles, and in others, following the general custom, received local surnames from the lands upon which they lived. Prominent branches of the name frequently disappeared, which may be accounted for in this manner. Where the sons did not perpetuate the family patronymic, it became lost, as the daughters were merged in other families with which they united their destinies.

The family of the Earl of Rye. Hubert Sinclair, appears to have been the most favored and honored of any of the Conqueror's favorites, or adherents of this lineage. Eudo Sinclair had the famous castle, and great possessions at Colchester, England, as well as his castle of Preaux in Normandy. His brother, Rudolph Sinclair, was Earl of Nottingham, and was the controller of its wonderful castle. Hubert Sinclair, their brother, had the strong castle of Norwich in his guiding hand. These three brothers, so powerful, and being united, could wield, and did wield, a mighty influence in the politics of the time; as Hubert did in the placing of William Rufus on the throne of his deceased father. The castle and town of Rochester were held by Walderne St. Clare and his descendants.

The Aldhams, members of the lineage who took the surname of Aldham from the lands on which they resided, were descendants of Richard Sinclair, the son of Walderne, or Walter, as he is called sometimes. Their old home is now joined with others, and is called St. Clere. It is situated some twenty-five miles from London, in the County of Kent, near Seven Oaks, and two miles from the rare, quaint village of Ightham. Their old hall still exists, as a relic of the interesting past. It is hung with pictures, guns, stags' horns, and many other curious and rare things of days long gone. The newer mansion at St. Clere is owned and occupied by Sir Mark Wilke Collet, and is situated on a gentle slope, surrounded with elegant grounds, green fields, and forests of lofty beeches, dense with foliage, and whose heads reach high into the sky. One would travel far to find a lovelier scene. From there Ightham, Seal, Knockholt, and other famous localities are in view. The home of Adam Sinclair, the Commissioner of Domesday Book, is a short distance to the east. This is famous ground, and celebrated persons frequented it, and important events were there enacted.

Guy St. Clair and wife, Marjory Neville, in 1335, held Wyrun Hall, in County of Norfolk. Either he or a namesake was Constable of Dover, and Warden of the Cinque Ports, the position most prized under the king.

Robert de St. Clair possessed estates near Dover, and the manor of Hastingleigh, near Ashford. He married in 1331, and his sons William, Richard, and Thomas survived him.

Hugo de St. Clare, Minister of the king, and nephew of Hamo St. Clare, the dapifer, had estates near the river Thames, of which Aeslingham, near Rochester, England, was the home.

Cicely Sinclair, daughter of Robert, the Knight of Rye, was Abbess of the nunnery of Shaftesbury. Her sister, Haurise Sinclair, was Abbess of Wilton, in County of Wilts.

Another fine old home of the Sinclairs is near St. Edmondsbury, County of Suffolk, called Bradfield St. Clare. It keeps the memory green of its founder, Gilbert Sinclair, Viscount of Norfolk and Suffolk. The name is still retained.

Grimston Manor, Norfolk, belonged for many generations to the Santo-Claro family.

In the County of Essex the family was conspicuous for hundreds of years. In 1483, when King Edward IV. was, with imposing ceremonies, laid away to sleep his long sleep, Sir Thomas St. Claire had a leading position during the occasion.

In the reign of Henry VIII., up to 1547, Sir John Sinclair was a noted character. Hedington Castle was the home of one portion of the lineage. In leaden coffins in the Chapel at Danbury, five miles from Chelmsford, were buried several knightly Sinclairs who had followed the standard of the cross in crusades to the Holy Land. "The hill of Danbury, Essex, by the Thames, beneath London, is a landmark and a tower to this lineage, as it had been for ages to the world's greatest city; and its chapel will always stand fixed to memory as something notable that has been." Another says of them: "All that was highest in marriage, lands, or office they had in England for nearly a century after the conquest, and the glow of their fame, and their physical and intellectual powers, kept them high for centuries afterwards in a way rare to any one particular lineage."

SINCLAIRS IN IRELAND.

There have been many of the family who lived in Ireland, and numerous representatives of the name are there now. They were early in the Emerald Isle. On a tombstone in Comber, County of Down, Ireland, is engraved the same christian names of Sinclairs as were borne by John Sinkler of Exeter, N. H., in 1658, and Robert Sin-kler of Wells, Me., who was probably his son. The inscription is as follows :

Here lieth these bodies of Robert Sinkler, who died in 1666, aged 71 years; and his wife, Gies Gordon, who died in 1673, aged 74 years; also their son, John Sinkler, who died in 1681, aged 61 years.

Thomas Sinclair is an able, influential, and prominent citizen of Belfast.

PROMINENT SINCLAIRS OF ALL NATIONS.

Sir Andrew Sinclair was a noted figure among the Sinclairs of Denmark, and was ambassador from the Danish court to King James I. of England.

Count Malcolm Sinclair of Sweden was an ambassador to the Porte during the reign of Empress Catherine, and died by violence.

Sinclairs have been in high positions in Russia, Germany, and Norway, and representatives of the family are living there to-day.

Rev. John-Sinclair was a prominent figure at the siege of Londonderry, Ireland, 1688-'89, and there is a family, resident in the Emerald Isle, for more than 200 years of position and influence.

In Australia, Africa, and America are offshoots of the same stock.

In Scotland the name has long been famous, before and since the founding of Roslin Castle, and members of the family have been lords of Roslin, dukes of Oldenburg in Denmark, nobles of Norway, princes of Orkney and Shetland, and earls of Caithness.

A chevalier Von Sinclair was distinguished as a dramatist in Germany.

Cardinal Hugo Sancto Claro, who in the 13th century flourished greatly, first put the Bible into verses and was the author of one of the ablest and longest commentaries upon it, was of this blood, though his name is slightly changed by its Italian form.

From 1600 to 1622 in the University of Paris David Sinclair was one of its most noted professors in mathematics.

In the old hive of the family, Normandy, in recent times, have been noted persons of the lineage, but in all characteristics entirely French. Charles Ferdinand, Baron de St. Clair in 1820, was a colonel of cavalry, and loyal to the Bourbon prince. His military career was remarkable, having been wounded eighteen times during twenty-three years' service, and had gained many decorations. His papers are published in book form.

Thus this family, never so numerous or prolific as some others, yet its members widely scattered, have occupied elevated positions and exerted commanding influence.

The history of the Sinclairs now passes from the Old World to the New.

In the preceding pages the names St. Clair, or Sinclair, have been largely used interchangeably, as they were so found in the authorities consulted. Often both forms of the name were employed in relation to the same individual.

CHAPTER V.

SINCLAIRS IN AMERICA.—FIRST SINCLAIRS IN AMERICA.—SINCLAIRS WHO HAVE BEEN OFFICERS IN THE UNITED STATES REGULAR ARMY AND IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY.—ORTHOGRAPHY OF THE NAME.—ITS VARIOUS FORMS.—SPELLED SINKLER BY MANY.—MANY WAYS OF SPELLING SINCLAIR.—LANDS GRANTED TO SINKLERS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.—CHARACTERISTICS OF THE SINKLERS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.

SINCLAIRS IN THE NEW WORLD.

ENOUGH has already been given to show the origin of this knightly family; the part its valiant members took when they with William the Conqueror invaded England and helped to subdue it. The subsequent career of these Norman Sinclair warriors has been briefly told, and passing glimpses have been hurriedly caught upon other soil than that of Normandy of their descendants.

The princely domains of the Sinclairs in various countries, their homes in feudal castles in England and Scotland, and other lands of vastness, and wonderful strength have been noted and described; and many of the illustrious ones of this race in these countries, with their notable deeds, have been alluded to during the eight hundred years succeeding the Conquest.

It will now be well to turn from the parent families in Europe, whose members have been so familiar with rulers, and mingled so freely in royal courts and in the din of arms, to offshoots of this same race, planted upon American soil, brought up under American skies, developed and broadened under the enlightening and broadening influence of American institutions, and who have become Americans. Their career in a different sphere under different circumstances has been as honorable as that of members of the parent stock, and more beneficial to their brethen,—who are all mankind. For two hundred and thirty years the American Sinclairs have in various ways, as citizens, as gallant soldiers in all wars, as brave, hardy pioneers planting civilization in the waste places of the land, and laying deep and broad the foundation for prosperous communities, have aided in building and developing the great Republic, and as true and loyal citizens they live to-day in all parts of this Western Hemisphere.

FIRST SINCLAIRS IN AMERICA.

Since America was first settled by Europeans many persons by the name of Sinclair or St. Clair have come to these shores. Previous to the year A. D. 1700, however, their coming was as rare as angel's visits. Very few of the family were in the country at the time of the American Revolution, and they were largely the descendants of a few individuals who had settled here a long time previously. From that date up to 1840 individuals of the family occasionally sought a home on this side of the blue sea. Since 1840, or within fifty years, there have been repeated immigrations of individuals bearing this patronymic, and they and their descendants are now found in all our large cities, and also scattered into all sections of the country. Yet, considering the density and numbers of the population, it never has been, and is not now, very numerous in America.

From authentic sources the following list has been prepared of Sinclairs who were early in America, with the time of their departure from the Old World, or the year of their appearance in the New :

1651. Salamon Sinclair* was among the passengers in the ship John and Sara, which sailed from London for America.
1658. John Sinkler was in Exeter, N. H., where his son, James Sinkler, was born July 27, 1660, and his son John and other children soon after that date. He was the progenitor of the Sinklers and Sinclairs of New Hampshire, and his numerous descendants are in all sections of the United States and Canada.
1677. The emigrant Robert Sinclair came to New York. "He was son of James Sinclair, a lineal descendant of the Earls of Orkney and Calthness."
1680. Alexander Sinklaire was a resident of St. Michaels, Island of Barbadoes, and had ten acres of land.
1710. Charles Sinkler, apparently an offshoot of the Exeter, N. H., family, was in the military service of New Hampshire, probably against Fort Royal.
1714. Robert Sinkler, perhaps a son of John Sinkler, the early settler in Exeter, N. H., was a resident of Wells, Me., before March 18, 1714.
1717. David Sinclair died in Boston, Mass., Nov. 9, 1717.
1729. William Sinclair† came to New England. He was born in the parish of Drumbloo, County of Down, Ireland, in 1678. In 1735 he settled in Spencer, Mass., and died there July 4, 1753; had wife Mary, who died Aug. 9, 1765, at 79 years; had daughters: Anna, married John Cunningham. Mary, married May 5, 1738, Jonas Mayes. Agnes, married Dec. 11, 1746, William Breckinridge of Palmer, Mass. Elizabeth, married John Dunn of Northbridge, Mass.
1746. Duncan Sinclair of Boston married Agnes McQueston Aug. 21, 1746.
1747. John Sinclair, a political exile from Scotland, appeared in the American colonies; located in Virginia, and has descendants in Loudon Co., Va., Georgetown, Ky., Springfield, Ill., Ottawa, Ill., and Charlottesville, Va.

* List of passengers is to be found in the Probate office of Suffolk County of Mass., at Boston, Mass. Stated on the authority of George Lincoln, Esq., historian, Hingham, Mass.
† History of Spencer, Mass.

1757. Arthur St. Clair, born in Thurso, Scotland, in 1736, came to America in the latter part of 1757, or the early part of 1758; was a distant relative of the Roslin St. Clairs, and became a general in the American Revolution.
 William St. Clair, a relative, came to America later.
1760. Capt. John Sinclair was in the French and Indian War.
 Sir John Sinclair, a British soldier, was in the French and Indian War.
1768. Thomas Sinclair of Boston, Mass., married Aug. 28, 1768, Constantia Condon.

OFFICERS IN U. S. ARMY AND NAVY.

Between 1776 and 1887 these St. Clairs or Sinclairs have been commissioned as officers in the U. S. Regular Army:

IN THE U. S. ARMY.

Gen. Arthur St. Clair.	Jamea B. Sinclair.
Daniel St. Clair.	William Sinclair.

OFFICERS IN THE NAVY.

Arthur Sinclair.	Arthur Sinclair.	Arthur Sinclair
Charles Sinclair.	Charles H. Sinclair.	Daniel Sinclair.
George F. Sinclair.	Henry Sinclair.	James D. Sinclair.
John S. Sinclair.	Malcolm Sinclair.	William Sinclair.
William B. Sinclair.		Charles Sinkler.

Besides these, many Sinclairs have served in the wars of the country either as privates or officers in the volunteer forces of the several states, as will be noticed in the investigation of this history.

ORTHOGRAPHY OF THE NAME.

The authoritative manner of writing or spelling the name is Saint Clair, or its contraction St. Clair. The name of the earliest known immigrant to America of the family was spelled Sinclare, the second Sinkler, the third Sinklaire. The name of the New Hampshire family was called and spelled Sinkler, and so was a Virginia family which appeared nearly a century after. At the present time the Sinkler form of writing it has almost entirely disappeared, although it does still prevail among representatives of one branch of the family in Virginia.

Within half a century many of the descendants of the first Sinklers, living in various portions of the country, have changed their name to St. Clair or Sinclair, and in some instances have written it Sinclear and Sinclear. At the present time these various forms are generally understood to be the same patronymic, and the manner of writing and pronouncing it have become largely a matter of individual taste. Indeed, in public documents, the same individual's name frequently appears in each form. In the Directory of London, England, both names are inserted under the heading "Sinclair, St. Clair."

Saint Clare, Saint Clair, or its contraction St. Clair, was the original orthography as it came from the martyr Saint Clare, the hermit on the shore of the Epte. He was the first St. Clair. In Scotland both surnames appear to-day, still in the course of centuries, in Calthness, where the family has long been a princely, powerful, prolific, and numerous one, the name is almost universally written and pronounced Sinclair.

While both forms of this surname are now considered as correct, as each is sanctioned by use and the custom of centuries, while each appears in Scotland and England, and in offshoots of the same family in Ireland, and other countries in Europe, in Africa, Australia, the United States, and Canada, still the argument is in favor of St. Clair as the earlier, the original derivation, and the correct orthography of the name.

SINKLER.

JOHN SINKLER OF EXETER, N. H., 1658, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.—ORTHOGRAPHY OF THEIR NAME, AND ITS CHANGES BY DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

The name was spelled phonetically. In New Hampshire John Sinkler, the early settler in Exeter, in 1658, spelled his name Sinkler, and this was the usual method for a long period. The same is true of the Sinklers of Virginia, and of Robert Sinkler (perhaps a son of John of Exeter), who was in Wells, Me., in 1714, and among his early descendants.

Samuel Sinkler<sup>6</sup> of Newmarket, N. H., Nov. 21, 1746, affixed his name to a petition in like manner.

Joseph Sinkler<sup>7</sup>, son of James<sup>2</sup>, then of Newmarket, afterward Pembroke, N. H., June 5, 1745, appends his name to a document as Sinclair. He signs a petition with Samuel Sinkler and others Nov. 21, 1746, as Joseph Sinkler. In a petition from Buckstreet, afterward Pembroke, in 1758, when he signed a petition with his sons, John, later of Essex, Vt., and Thomas, later of Sanbornton (the father of James Sinclair of Barre, N. Y.), he and John append their names as Sinkler, while Thomas signs as Sinckler. He signs another petition Sept. 3, 1767, from Pembroke, as Joseph Sinkler.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF CORRECT ORTHOGRAPHY.

Edward Sinkler<sup>8</sup> of Exeter, or Newmarket, signed a petition in Nov. 25, 1755, with his name properly spelled, which is its first appearance; but his name appears in the Revolutionary rolls, twenty years later, spelled Sinkler.

Nathaniel Sinkler<sup>3</sup> of Stratham, N. H., spelled his name Sinclear in 1755; in 1757 as Sinclair; in 1765, Nov. 21, he signed a petition as Sinkler, and in 1777 he is called Sinkler.

Thomas Slukler<sup>4</sup> of Newmarket, Pembroke, Sanbornton, N. H., and Hardwick, Vt.; while a resident of Newmarket he signed a petition with his father, Joseph Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, and uncle, Samuel Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, Nov. 21, 1746, and signed his name Thomas Sinkler. After his removal to Pembroke he signed a petition in 1758 (as stated before) with his father, Joseph Sinkler, and his brother, John Sinkler, and signed his name Sinckler. On July 13, 1764, as Sinkler, while his brother John, who signed the same petition, wrote his name John Sinsclair. After he arrived in Sanbornton, on the first petition he signed, Jan. 8, 1768, he calls himself Thomas Sencier; on March 29, 1770, it is Thomas Sinclear, a style adopted by some branches of the family at the present. Thomas Sinkler, when he signed the association test in Sanbornton in 1776, signed it as Thomas Sinckler. On the town books as surveyor of highways it was Sinclear. In 1777 he was a member of Capt. Chase Taylor's company in the Revolutionary War, and on the rolls his name is Thomas Sinkler. The name of Zebulon Sinkler, his son, on Revolutionary rolls appears as Zebulon Sinkler, July 7, 1777.

James Sinkler, son of the above Thomas, and the Revolutionary soldier of longest service of them all, and who lived in Pembroke, Meredith, Sandwich, Sanbornton, N. H., Hardwick and Wolcott, Vt., Russelltown, Canada, and who died in Barre, N. Y., Jan. 26, 1836, shared the same experience. He is called James Sinkler in the return of the Meredith Revolutionary soldiers. In the return of Maj. Benjamin Whitcomb's rangers, when he and his uncle Joseph Sinclair of Sanbornton served side by side during the term of his enlistment, "36 months and 7 days," their names appear as James Sinclear and Joseph Sinclear, and on the Depreciation rolls they are called Sinclair. On a petition Nov. 27, 1781, he signs himself James Sinclear. He is called James Sinclear in 1784. In his discharge papers, in the Pension Office in Washington, D. C., in 1788, his name was spelled Sinclear, and he wrote his name in that manner in his application for a pension June 12, 1818. In Sept., 1820, he signed his name St. Clair. His son, James St. Clair, stated that his father in his lifetime signed his name Sinclair. Almost, if not all, of the descendants of this James Sinclair at present write their names St. Clair. The descendants of his brothers Thomas and Zebulon of Meredith, the most of those of Benjamin in Hardwick, Vt., and of his uncle John Sinclair of Essex, Vt., spell their name Sinclair; while the descendants of his cousins, Jacob Sinclair of New Hampton and Noah Sinclair of Canterbury, usually style themselves St. Clair.

The descendants of his son, Lieut. Richard Sinclair, among whom are Hon. John G. Sinclair of Orlando, Fla., and his son, Hon. Charles H. Sinclair of Portsmouth, N. H., write their names Sinclair. The same is true of most of the descendants of his sons David and Joseph, who lived in Perry, Ohio; also while the descendants of his son John have generally adopted the St. Clair form of the name, and the descendants of his son, Maj. Samuel Sinclair of Sinclairville, N. Y., usually write their name Sinclear.

There is hardly a Sinclair of New Hampshire previous to 1790 but what, when his name has appeared upon official documents, has appeared as Sinkler. Barnabas Sinkler of Unity, N. H., appears as Sinkler; Richard Sinkler of Stratham, a descendant of Richard Sinclair<sup>2</sup>, appears as Sinekler March 4, 1775, and as Sinkler June 4, 1777. The Stratham branch of the family now write their name Sinclair.

There seemed to be no authorized manner of writing the name and the Sinclairs themselves, as well as others, wrote it as it was usually pronounced, with the accent upon the first syllable,—thus Sink-ler.

Then, again, each one wrote the name apparently "as seemed good in his own eyes."

SINCLAIR AS VARIOUSLY SPELLED.

Almost the entire number of Sinclairs—St. Clairs—whose names appear upon the town, county, and probate records at Exeter, N. H.; in the state archives in the capitol at Concord, N. H.; in the different town, county, and probate offices in New Hampshire and Vermont, and some in Massachusetts and New York, are the known descendants of John Sinkler, who was in Exeter, N. H., in 1658.

The following are the differing forms in which the name has been written or spelled in the places alluded to, and as copied from original documents, and printed by the state of New Hampshire in twenty-one large volumes of Provincial papers and State papers, in the Reports of the Adjutant-General, in different town histories, and as found in other sources of information:

Cinclair, Sanckler, Sinclaire, Sinclair, St. Clair, Sain Clair, Sant Clair, Senckler, Sencler, Sinckar, Sincklor, Sincklear, Sinclare, Sincler, Sinklra, Sinkler, Sinklee, Sinkler, Sinsclir, Sinklair, Synkler,.

SINKLERS IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Lands granted to the Sinklers by the town of Exeter, N. H., as shown by the town record:

- 20 acres to John Sinkler Jan. 31, 1681. This was probably John Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, son of John<sup>1</sup>, and brother of James Sinkler<sup>2</sup>.
- 50 acres to James Sinkler<sup>2</sup> in 1698.
- 100 acres to "John Sinkler, son of James," on the first Monday of April, 1705. This was Capt. John Sinkler<sup>2</sup> of Stratham, N. H. Stratham was a portion of Exeter till 1716.
- 50 acres to John Sinkler on the first Monday of April, 1706. This was probably to the same person,—John Sinkler<sup>1</sup> had passed away previous to Sept. 14, 1700, when his will was proven. His son John Sinkler<sup>2</sup> then was living in Exeter. The latter had a son John Sinkler<sup>3</sup>, also of Exeter.

In 1725 a committee appointed by the town of Exeter prepared a list of the residents of the town with the amount of public land allotted to each individual. The following is what relates to this family:

- 100 acres to John Sinkler, Sr., in 1725. This was to John Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, son of John<sup>1</sup>.
- 100 acres to James Sinkler in 1725. This was James<sup>2</sup>, son of John<sup>1</sup>, the only James Sinkler of the family at that date.
- 40 acres to Joseph Sinkler in 1725. This was Joseph Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, son of James, as shown in the latter's will. He was of Exeter. The parish of Newmarket was set off from Exeter and incorporated Dec. 15, 1727. He was a resident of what is now South Newmarket about 1751, when he, and his sons Thomas and John, and others removed to Pembroke, N. H.
- 40 acres to Richard Sinkler in 1725. This was Richard Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, son of James<sup>2</sup>, as shown by the will of the latter. He was then of Exeter, but was married soon after, on June 21, 1728, and settled in Stratham, where he died July 9, 1751.
- 40 acres to Samuel Sinkler in 1725. It is uncertain which Samuel Sinkler this was. There were two Samuels then in Exeter: Samuel<sup>2</sup>, son of John<sup>1</sup>, and his cousin Samuel<sup>2</sup>, son of James Sinkler<sup>2</sup>.

Thus far six hundred and thirty-five acres of land had been bestowed by the town upon members of the Sinkler family. Certainly not an amount to be complained of.

It will be noticed that many grants of land to this family occurred in 1725, when a committee of the town reported this amount as belonging to these parties, as their proportion in the final distribution of the public lands of Exeter. But this distribution did not actually occur till several years later.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE SINCLAIRS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE AND THEIR DESCENDANTS.

They loved the mountains and the hills; beneath their shadows or on their summits they built their abodes. They loved the forests, for there they hunted beasts of prey, and gathered sustenance from the streams of water. They held communion with nature, they lived near to her, and ever listened to the multitudinous voices with which she always speaks to those who love her. They were familiar with the lore of the hills and the woods, and never shunned hardship or fatigue. They had strong physiques, stalwart frames, great powers of endurance, feared not danger, were ardently fond of athletic sports and feats of strength or skill. They had much mechanical knowledge which was always employed in the development of new communities, and towns, and states. They also had the faculty of being practical, and could, and would, turn their minds and hands to any necessary employment. In truth, it has during its nearly 250 years residence in this country been an eminently practical family. They have loved the activities and rush of private life, and the experiences of a frontiersman much better than books, much more than the studies of the scholar, or than the achievements of professional life. Always have they been intensely patriotic. They loved the military profession. In every war since they came to America, they have been among the first in the fray, and the last to quit. Their sacrifices have been great, and members of the race have sometimes given life itself for their king and country; and later to establish the Republic, and then to preserve it.

CHAPTER VI.

JOHN SINKLER OF EXETER, N. H., AND HIS DESCENDANTS.*

In the early spring of 1638 a small company of in-voluntary emigrants from Massachusetts appeared in the wilderness about the Falls of Squamscott in New Hampshire, and erected their humble habitations and made their homes. Unlike many in the two previously formed settlements in the state, they did not come from motives of worldly greed, but for the precious privilege of entertaining their own religious tenets, and worshipping God in conformity with them, and not in accordance with the opinions and practices permitted by the powers, civil and religious — mainly one — which existed in Massachusetts Bay.

This made the third organized community in the state; the place was Exeter, and the settlers were Rev. John Wheelwright, who had been disfranchised and expelled from Massachusetts, and his loving followers. This community was continually increasing in numbers and importance by the addition of people from older places, and from the old world.

THE COMING OF JOHN SINKLER.

1. John Sinkler<sup>1</sup>, the founder of the Exeter, N. H., family of this name, appeared in that place, seeking liberty, fortune, and a home, in a score of years after its establishment. — He is the second known person of this patronymic to land upon American soil. He was an offshoot of one of the oldest, strongest, and most renowned families of Great Britain, whose lineage goes back through centuries of history to the sunny land of France, to the castles of St. Clere and St. Lo, and the historic bank of the river Epte, and still farther to the misty North-land. Members of his stock had been famous in lands filled with illustrious men.

The settlement was weak, to which had come this scion of an illustrious family. Mr. Sinkler appeared in Exeter as early as 1658, for on Jan. 6, 1659, he purchased ten acres of land, and is mentioned in the deed as of Exeter. The following is a copy of the instrument, and is the first deed of land to John Sinkler. It is found upon the Old Norfolk County Records, at Salem, Mass. :

Even in the new settlement the subject of this sketch did not escape the common trials of humanity. Emigrants from other lands brought their selfish desires with them to the new abode. Their hope for the betterment of self was often at the neglect, and sometimes at the sacrifice, of the rights of others. All were not good neighbors then any more than now, which this early resident found to his sorrow.

As there was trouble about boundaries, two of his neighbors agreed to the following:

Know all men: by these presents that Leiftenant Hall & John Warrin have agreed that the line that is between Leiftenant Hall and John Sinkler, which land John Warren sold to John Sinkler, is and shall run from a tree that is fallen a little way of John Sinclers fence, showed this day to Mr. Dudley, John Clerke and William More, and so to run on a strait lyne to a white oake marked, and so to the extent of the bounds, between Leif-

This did not settle the difficulty, for he had recourse to the law for the redress of his grievances, and the case was still in court on Oct.

Norfolk Co. Court Records :

John Sinkler p<sup>r</sup>il, vs. Ralfe Hall, Exeter, in an action of trespass for pulling up of his fence and molesting him in his planting last spring & for claiming of his land and endeavoring to alter ye title thereof wch land lieth neare to Jn<sup>r</sup> Sinkler's house in y<sup>e</sup> town of Exeter, to his great damage. Oct. 8, 1672.

How the suit terminated has not been ascertained.

The following is found, on June 8, 1682 :

It is ordered and enacted by the Selectment of Exeter that Leiftenant Hall and Kingsley Hall have granted to them liberty to erect a gate or a a paire of barra anywhere between John Sinclers and Robert Rowells. upon condition that the gate or barra be made wide enough that a cart and teame to passe currontly, and make a stile for foot men cross the highway.

EDWARD GILMAN,
 JONATHAN THING,
 MOSES LEVIT, Townsmen.

Like all good citizens, he was interested in the welfare, the success, safety, and prosperity of the institutions of government under which he lived, and which afforded protection to all. So, on Nov. 30, 1677, "John Sinkler took oath of allegiance to his Majestie and fidelity to

Land was abundant, and easily obtained as grants from the commons belonging to the town. The first residents of Exeter frequently made application for this, and these grants were frequently voted to them by the freeholders in town meeting assembled. On April 6, 1678, John Sinkler's name appears among the list of applicants.
 He was a sturdy man, with frugality, pluck, and persistence. He strove to add to his worldly possessions. He purchased Dec. 6, 1678, twenty acres of upland in Exeter of David and Elizabeth Robinson.
 They agreed that "s<sup>d</sup> John Sincler shall have y<sup>e</sup> liberty of free ingress, egress, and regress, to y<sup>e</sup> twenty acres of land through any

On Jan. 23, 1680, Exeter granted him twenty acres. The pioneer was prosperous. His acreage was enlarged from year to year; his resources multiplied. But he owed duties to the state and town, whose laws like a protecting canopy were over him, and as a mantle covered him, and gave protection. These duties he did not and could not evade, and was obliged to contribute of his substance for the support of the government.

The political affairs did not run smoothly at that period. The separation of New Hampshire from Massachusetts and its erection into a separate province, when its government went into operation January, 1680, was due mainly to the solicitation, and was largely for the benefit of Robert Mason, the heir of John Mason, the patentee of New Hampshire, who claimed New Hampshire soil as his inherited property. Accordingly, at the request of Robert Mason, Edward Cranfield, a stranger to the inhabitants, and a despotic, arbitrary man, was appointed governor and his administration commenced in October, 1683. His acts were oppressive, and he was held in utter detestation by the people. A small rebellion broke forth in Exeter. Some of the participants were tried for treason, but were afterward pardoned by the king. Public feeling ran high at this period, and a strong petition was gotten up against him which was signed by John Sinkler. His name appears on a petition Feb. 20, 1689-90, to the government. The petitioners prayed for protection against the common enemy (the Indians) and that the military officers of the train soldiers should be chosen by the soldiers of the respective towns. A fac-simile is given of the signature to this petition, although there is doubt of its being a genuine autograph:

John Sinkler

It is not likely that John Sinkler held any public office, as the records make no such disclosure.

This closes the public history, as fully as it can be gleaned from scanty records, of this pioneer of Exeter. He was one of the earliest settlers in the state, and his history has never before been written. He was the first generation of his family in a new country, and the progenitor of a family of pioneers, in many generations. He was the founder of the Sinkler family in New Hampshire, the members of whose diverging lines, as apparent by this book, are numerous as the sands on the shore of the sea, and are scattered widely over the earth. The knowledge of his traits of character, the varying qualities of his mind have passed into oblivion. That he took an interest in municipal and state affairs is plainly evident. That he was not untrue to the sturdy blood which flowed in his veins, and to the love of liberty which he had inherited from a brave ancestry, is evidenced by his signing the vigorous protest against the tyrannical acts of Governor Cranfield. That he was frugal, industrious, and energetic, is shown by his successful accumulation of this world's goods, with which to cheer and bless himself and his family, not only in the tried maturity of their powers, but "in the green and yellow leaf" of life. His abode was on Wheelwright's creek*. Of his home life and domestic relations little is known. He was born in Scotland, probably about 1680, as he was in Exeter and owned land in 1659, and was married about that time, as is apparent by the record of his children.

He m. Mary —, who was living on the 27th of April, 1667, and her death did not probably occur for many years afterward. He m. 2d, Deborah —. She was a good business manager, as she made a business contract with Mr. Sinkler before their marriage. She was a Christian and a member of the church in Hampton, N. H. After the withdrawal of Rev. Mr. Wheelwright and his followers to Wells, Me., about 1642, and the assumption of jurisdiction over New Hampshire by Massachusetts, there was no church organized in Exeter for several years, and for six years they were without preaching. Though regular services were held after 1650, yet many of the residents connected themselves with the church in Hampton and other towns. This may explain the fact of Mrs. Sinkler's membership of the church of that town. In 1698 (Sept. 11), upon the formation of the First Congregational church, thirteen persons were "dismissed in order to their being incorporated into a church state in Exeter." (Hampton Records.) Among them was Mrs. Deborah Sinkler. She was living Jan. 7, 1699-1700, and the time of her death is unknown.

John Sinkler, on Jan. 7, 1699-1700, "being sick of body but of sound & perfect mind and memory," for which he expressed devout thankfulness, did make his last will and testament, which is here given. It was admitted to the Probate Court Sept. 14, 1700, showing that he died between the above dates. He was probably buried, with many others of the earliest settlers in the earliest cemetery, on the "north western slope of meeting house hill," in Exeter, near the site of the first meeting-house. There are no memorial stones to mark the resting places of the quiet sleepers. For one hundred and ninety-four years he has rested in "The lone couch of his everlasting sleep."

Thus closes the history of this early settler of New Hampshire.

* This is a small creek in the eastern part of Exeter, upon whose banks many of the early residents lived. Its head is above the water works. The overflow of the reservoir flows into it, then into the Squamscott river, and later into the Atlantic ocean.

7. James Sinkler<sup>2</sup> [2] (John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., July 27, 1660, and there was always his home. It was near "Wheal Right's creek," and he called himself husbandman. With the interests of his native town he was closely identified and was a loyal citizen of the state. At the early age of 16 years he rendered military service in King Philip's war, in Capt. John Holbrook's company.

He took the oath of allegiance to the state Nov. 30, 1677. In 1682, April 13, his province rate in Exeter was 1s 6d. He signed a paper protesting against the course of the despotic Governor Cranfield, whose tyrannical acts raised a storm of indignation in the state. Like his father and brother, he signed a petition Feb. 20, 1689-90, to the "Bay Government," asking protection against the common enemy, and asking that the privilege of electing their own officers might be accorded to the trained soldiers of the respective towns.

James Sinkler

This is a fac-simile of his autograph as it appears upon the petition. (Mass. Archives, Vol. 35, p. 228.)

He was constable of Exeter in 1694 and in 1697, and was juryman at the Superior Court in Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10, 1703; was selectman of Exeter in 1695, 1700, 1706, and 1721. He was a soldier, and his account of allowance for personal services at Newbury blockhouses in 1704 was £2 18s 6d.

From 1702 to April 11, 1713, "Queen Anne's War" kept New England in a continual ferment, and the New Hampshire colony was in constant unrest and fear, and suffered severely.

The French and Indians hung like fearful clouds about her infant settlements. They pillaged, destroyed the crops, committed vast numbers of dwellings to the flames, massacred the inhabitants, or carried those away who escaped the scalping knife and tomahawk into a captivity so wretched and dark as to be almost worse than death. Men took their weapons to the fields for protection when they went about their daily toil.

Exeter, the home of the Sinklers, had been marked by the enemy for destruction. Only the accidental discovery of the Indians as they lay in ambush prevented a general destruction of lives and property.

SEAL

Yet, in spite of their ceaseless vigilance during these years, between 30 and 40 of her citizens, including many of her bravest and best, had been slain. Scouting parties continually scoured the thick forests, and patrolled the open country, hunting for the wily foe. For thirty years, or since his boyhood, James Sinkler had seen more or less military service; was inured to the dangers of the camp and perils of the field; and had in consequence of great experience and age undoubtedly been promoted to sergeant, as in 1710, in one of these scouting parties was Sergeant Sinkler, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Walton, and was billeted by Samuel Penhallow, commissioner. Was again a juryman Aug. 12, 1712, and on the grand jury Feb. 9, 1719-20; was one of the 215 proprietors of Gilmanton May 20, 1727.

As a rule life flowed along prosperously with him. He mingled freely in the affairs of the community and town. The companion of his life, who shared with him its sorrows, its defeats, and its triumphs, and who by her presence had made joyous "his ain fireside," was Mary, daughter of Richard and Prudence (Waldron) Scammon. She was born May 31, 1673, and was the youngest child of her parents. From her parents she received all the "salt meddle" between Quoboag road and Moore's creek. James Sinkler had been young, had passed life's meridian, and was old. The sun of his life was plunging down the west. On the 23d of July, 1731, when he lacked but four days of being 71 years of age,—in the pathetic language of his will, "being in pain and weak of body, but of perfect mind and memory,"—he made this will, thus disposing of his worldly estate. This was admitted to Probate Court Feb. 15, 1732-3, showing that he died before that date:

WILL OF JAMES SINKLER.

In the name of God amen, the twenty third day of July in the yeare of our Lord God one thousand seven hundred and thirty one. 19. Mary Sinkler<sup>4</sup>, b. about 1719; she was living July 23, 1731, but no further record has been obtained of her.

20. John Sinkler, Jr.<sup>2</sup> [6] (John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1668. His name does not appear in family record of his father upon the public books of Exeter, and in the "Old Norfolk County" records at Salem, Mass.

On Feb. 20, 1689-90, he signed a petition, addressed to the government of Massachusetts, asking protection against the common enemy, and asking that military officers might be chosen by the trained soldiers of their respective commands.

John Sinkler Jr

A fac-simile of the signature as it appears upon the original petition. There is a doubt as to its genuineness. (Mass. Archives, Vol. 35, p. 228. State Dep't, Boston, Mass.)

In 1709 his name again appears upon a petition to the government. He was a constable of Exeter June 5, 1711-12, and served as juror Feb. 14, 1715-16, and at the court which was in session Aug. 27, 1717, and was on the grand jury Feb. 9, 1719-20.

Being prosperous and increased in goods, he purchased house and lands in Exeter of Alexander Magoon, Feb. 9, 1726. On June 20, 1729, he deeded one half of his lands and estate to his "beloved son John Sinkler of sd Exeter." His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Bean, Sr., of Exeter, who was born in that town Sept. 24, 1678, and who survived her husband. Mr. Sinkler reached that period in life when he looked toward its sunset. The sacrifices and the hardships of a new settlement had been endured by him manfully. Of its responsibilities and emoluments he had partaken, and prosperity had attended him. So this man, one of the early born sons of New Hampshire, and one of the founders of the Sinkler family in America, "being weak of body," but with mental powers unimpaired, made his last will and testament on the 28th of December,

CHILDREN BORN EXETER, N. H.

21. John Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [53], b. before June 20, 1708; res. Exeter, N. H.; died before Sept. 28, 1747.
22. Samuel Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [54], b. previous to 1700; m. Sarah Mattoon; res. South Newmarket, N. H., and d. after Feb. 27, 1758.
23. Abigail Sinkler<sup>s</sup>, b. about 1710; is mentioned in her father's will Dec. 28, 1730, and was not married at that time.

24. Margaret Sinkler<sup>s</sup>, b. about 1712; was mentioned in her father's will Dec. 28, 1730, and was not married at that date.
25. Elizabeth Sinkler<sup>s</sup>, b. about 1713; was left a small legacy by her father in his will, and was not married at that period.

26. John Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [8] (James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>). Capt. John Sinkler was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1690, and presumably the eldest child of his parents. In his father's will he is the first child mentioned, and as he received by its provisions only a slight legacy, it indicates that he had previously received his inheritance. On the "Squamscott Patent" he was early a settler. This tract was incorporated into a town called Stratham March 14, 1715-16. He and his wife deeded land there the following year.

Stratham, by its act of incorporation, was to see "that a meeting house be built on the King's great road leading from Greenland to Exeter," and was "obliged to have a learned Authordox Minist<sup>r</sup> to preach in said meeting house within one year from y<sup>e</sup> date hereof." Mr. Sinkler was chosen one of a committee to secure the minister, and also to "set off" the pews.

He served as selectman in 1720, '21, '22, '23, '24. He was elected constable in 1726, but as this position did not satisfy his longings for place and power, or for some other reason, he declined. On June 17, 1727, he bought land in Bow, near what is now Pembroke. Was again selectman in 1728, '29, '31, '32, and in 1729 was on the committee "to seat the meeting house," and on July 13, 1730, he helped to give his brother, Richard Sinkler, his place "in the great congregation." He was a large dealer in real estate.

The people of Stratham were called to the place of worship by a bell in the belfry of the meeting-house. Its sonorous tones had for years summoned them at the hours for prayer and praise. It became damaged and no longer sent forth peals to delight the ears of the worshippers as they wended their way to the sanctuary. So at a town meeting Jan. 18, 1733, Mr. Sinkler was chosen one of a committee to take down the broken bell and to send it to "Lundon to be New Cast Again."

From 1733 to '36 he was in the retirement of private life and in the enjoyments of the fireside and the domestic circle. In 1736, '37, '39, '40, and '42 he served as assessor. In 1739 he is called Lef<sup>n</sup> John Sinkler.

At this period he was a vigorous protestant against the religious legislation of Stratham, which broke in upon the established order of religious worship; which weakened and divided the church, and lessened the good which might arise from the labors of the regular minister, Rev. Henry Rust. He is called John Sinkler, Gentleman, April 13, 1743.

We know nothing of his military career, but he is at length called Capt. John Sinkler. But the active life of Mr. Sinkler drew to a close, and he died in Stratham Sept. 16, 1745.

His home was on the "King's Road," and it was sold in 1749 to Joseph Jewett and Mr. Purmont. The place was occupied by Mr. Jewett, and in 1889 remains in the possession of his family. The Sinkler barn is still standing, but the other buildings have disappeared.

In regard to Mr. Sinkler tradition has died out. As a living personality he has gone forever from the minds of men. But of his mental traits, of the underlying principles which were the basis of his character, we can estimate by looking at his actions, the causes he espoused, the side of great moral questions upon which he arrayed himself, and the public positions which he filled. In all of these he was ever upon the right side, and acted the part of a true man. Such was this early settler of Stratham.

He married Mrs. Anne (Chase) Wiggin, widow of Bradstreet Wiggin. She survived him and was living Feb. 24, 1753. It is probable that in their early married life they attended church at Hampton, N. H., as the only record of the births of their children is upon the records of that town.

31. Joseph Sinkler<sup>d</sup> [9] (James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>d</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1692, as he was of age and doing business on March 23, 1714. He was an original proprietor of Gilmanton, N. H. By the will of his father he received forty acres of land in Epping, which he sold to Israel Gilman Jan. 10, 1743-4. (James Sinkler was a witness.) His name is upon a petition relating to an election in Newmarket, dated June 5, 1745.

Joseph Sinkler

Fac-simile of his autograph. The original can be seen on the petition, in the State department, Concord, N. H.

He was called "Yeoman," and his home was in what is now South Newmarket, N. H. He and his wife Elizabeth sold their home of forty-two acres in South Newmarket, N. H., on Sept. 12, 1751. This included "Ye house and barn and orchard standing and being on sd land." It bounded and touched "on the west side of Smart's creek."

This is the last mention of him in Exeter or Newmarket. The tide of emigration was westward. New lands were being thrown open to settlers, and new settlements were formed. Again, many of the people in this locality became pioneers in the wilderness.

On April 11, 1750, sixteen months before Joseph Sinkler sold his home in Newmarket, the proprietors of the lands purchased of John Tufton Mason, Esq., at a meeting in Portsmouth, N. H., authorized Thomas Packer "to grant 1000 acres to such persons and on such terms" as he should determine upon. He granted this to various persons on the condition of their settling upon and improving said lands. These settlers laid out the land into lots, which were numbered, and a plan was returned to the proprietors. They divided the land among themselves.

Joseph Sinkler was one of those who took advantage of the offer of the proprietors, and located on Buckstreet, in the town of Pembroke, soon after the sale of his home in Newmarket, on Sept. 12, 1751. He received a deed of this land, 59 acres in Lot No. 1, "in the division of land called Buckstreet Lotts," Jan. 14, 1755, and acknowledged Oct. 29, 1765. He lived there, near what is now Suncook, until April 15, 1761, when he sold this property to his son John Sinkler.

On Sept. 3, 1767, with sixty-three others he signed a petition for the appointment of John Bryant as a Justice of the Peace. This is the last time his name appears upon any ascertained record, and as he had reached old age, it is probable that he died about this time. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Lyford of Exeter, N. H. Her father by his will, admitted to Probate Court June 7, 1727, left a legacy to his "beloved daughter Elizabeth Sinkler." The date of her death is not known.

35. James Sinkler [76]; res. Epping, N. H.

36. Samuel Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [10] (James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>l</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1694. He probably served as a scout for three weeks in 1712, as a member of Capt. John Gilman's company. He was a resident of Exeter, N. H., and is called "laborer." On Aug. 28, 1734, for £150 he sold to Lt. Israel Gilman of Exeter all his right "in a 50 acre Grant of land. Granted to my Honored father James Sinkler, dec'd, by ye town of Exeter on ye 31st day of Jan. 1680, and given to me by my father's will."

On Nov. 21, 1746, he signed a petition, with his brother Joseph and his nephew, Thomas Sinkler, for a bridge at Newfields, now South Newmarket. His name seldom appears upon any record, and he died probably in the latter part of 1747.

His wife was Anna —, who, on Feb. 7, 1748-9, relinquished her right of administration upon her husband's estate. There is no record nor any evidence that he left children.

37. Jonathan Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [11] (James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>l</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1700. By his father's will, made July 3, 1731, he only received twenty shillings, which would show that he had previously received his inheritance.

He was a resident of Wells, Me., and was granted by that town fifty acres of upland and ten acres of meadow. He conferred full authority on his father, James Sinkler of Exeter, who sold this land Nov. 6, 1729, to Josiah Winn of Wells.

His name drops from view, and upon no document has it been seen after that date.

38. Richard Sinkler<sup>s</sup> [12] (James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>l</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1705, and on May 20, 1727, was one of 215 original proprietors of Gilmanton, N. H. He was a resident of Exeter as late as Sept. 14, 1727, and was evidently in Stratham, N. H., on June 27, 1728, at the time of his marriage, having cleared up his land and made ready to establish his home.

Forty acres of the town commons was laid out to him in 1725. He received land in Stratham from his parents. On Sept. 14, 1727, James Sinkler and his wife Mary, "for love and affection to their beloved son Richard Sinkler of Exeter," deeded him land in Stratham. This was three miles from Exeter, near the Squamscott river, in the westerly part of Stratham. He hewed his farm from the wilderness and made the desert to blossom like the rose.

Their home was on the westerly end of Quoboag road, on what is to this day known as the "Sinclair place." It remained in possession of the family for several generations. "The Sinkler Path," whose tortuous winding can still be traced, dates back to about 1725, and takes its name from this family. It was long used before the Quoboag road was opened, which gave the Sinklers connection with the main thoroughfare, and was no longer needed. Its crooked track is still seen in the woods. It led across the present farm of Col. Richard M. Scammon, and connected the early homes of the Sinklers and Scammons, who were related.

Sinkler's Reach is a straight place in the Squamscott river, and in 1793 is noted on the map of Stratham.

The name of Mr. Sinkler often appears on the records of Stratham, and he was much interested in the religious affairs of the community. His seat in the meeting-house was assigned to him July 13, 1730, and was "in the horrid Long front Seat below on y<sup>e</sup> men's side."

Richard Sinkler

He was a firm friend of the settled town minister, Rev. Henry Rust, who had been "settled for life" and was supported by the town, and was bitterly opposed to any movement which disturbed the established order of things, and with others vigorously protested upon several occasions. Church and state were then united, and legislation on the subject divided the people and caused great disturbance in the town.

He was tything man in 1741, surveyor in 1748. On April 5, 1748, he and his wife Catreen sold to David Stevens of Stratham for £100 "all right to the estate of our Honored Father Nathaniel Stevens, deceased, within ye township of Stratham and in ye township of Bow in ye Province abovesaid, and the four acres of land that lies upon Railtimber hill."

The marriage of Mr. Sinkler took place June 27, 1728. The partner of his life was Catherine, daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Folsom) Stevens*.

Mrs. Sinkler survived her husband many years. The administration of her estate was granted to her son Richard.

Mr. Sinkler was in the prime of life when sickness laid its wasting hand upon him. He saw the end approaching and he put his house in order. He died July 9, 1751. At his funeral the church bell was tolled. His will was made June 25, 1751; admitted to the Probate Court Aug. 27 of the same year. His executors had an allowance from the estate for two sheep killed by wolves; total value of estate, £2889-10s.

* Nathaniel Stevens was of Salisbury, Mass., Exeter, and long a resident of Stratham, N. H. He m. Sarah<sup>d</sup>, daughter of Dea. John Folsom of Exeter, and granddaughter of John Folsom, the emigrant, who died in Exeter Dec. 27, 1681. The children of Mr. Stevens were:

He was a soldier in Capt. John Light's company, Col. Moore's regiment, Nov. 20, 1745, and was at the capture of Louisburg. He married Abigail, daughter of Jonathan and Anna (Ladd) Folsom. He died 1754; she died before April 3, 1761.

CHILDREN BORN EXETER, N. H.

49. James Sinkler<sup>1</sup> [97], b. Feb. 14, 1737, O. S.; res. in Exeter and Brentwood, N. H.

50. Richard Sinkler<sup>1</sup> [109], b. about 1740; res. in Sandwich, N. H.

52. Benjamin Sinkler<sup>2</sup> [14] (James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1712, and was not of age at the date of his father's will, July 23, 1731. By that document he inherited land in Gilmanton, N. H., which he sold May 18, 1736, to Jonathan Norris of Stratham, N. H. He lived with his brother Ebenezer on Wheelwright's creek until he was 21 years of age.

His home was always in his native town. He was last taxed in 1757. Adversity came upon him and he received public aid. His death occurred previous to March 26, 1759. Nathan Taylor of Exeter dug his grave and tolled the bell of the meeting-house at his funeral. His wife was Elizabeth——, who died in 1766 or 1767.

There is no allusion to any children upon any document.

53. John Sinkler<sup>2</sup> [21] (John<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., before June 20, 1708, as he must of been of age June 20, 1729, when he received a deed of one-half of his real estate in Exeter, which included "Sinkler's Point." By various sales he had disposed of the most, if not all, of this tract by the 11th of December, 1733. He retained his residence in Exeter, and in public documents was called yeoman and husbandman. He was also a seafaring man and is called coaster. His death occurred previous to Sept. 28, 1747, and Nicholas Perryman was appointed administrator of his estate. The appraisal was taken Dec. 28, 1747, and his real estate consisted of 30 acres. There is no mention of wife or children.

54. Samuel Sinkler<sup>2</sup> [22] (John<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born previous to 1709, and by his father's will, made Dec. 28, 1730, he was to inherit, after the decease of his mother, one-half of the homestead on Wheelwright's creek in Exeter, N. H. This was sold by his mother as executrix of his father's will, and himself as a legatee, to Capt. John Gilman of Exeter Dec. 4, 1734.

Mr. Sinkler was one of 215 original proprietors of Gilmanton May 20, 1727. On Dec. 3, 1731, then "of Newmarket in Exeter," sold this land to Matthew Little, which was signed by his wife Sarah (Mattoon) Sinkler. On June 6, 1733, they relinquished to Richard Mattoon of Exeter, for £30, all right to the estate of their honored father, Richard Mattoon of Exeter, deceased. On March 3, 1747-48, he deeded ten acres to Edward Sinkler, "being in ye Parish of Newmarket in the Town of Exeter," and acknowledged by him Feb. 27, 1758. This is the last reference found to him upon the records. The portion of Newmarket in which they lived is now South Newmarket. He married Sarah, daughter of Richard and Jane (Hilton) Mattoon of Exeter. Her grandfather, Richard Mattoon, and her uncle, Hubertus Mattoon, were killed by the Indians while at work in their field July 1, 1706. Her mother was daughter of Edward Hilton, Jr., a prominent and influential man.

 58. Thomas Sinkler<sup>4</sup> [32] (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in what is now South Newmarket, N. H., in 1721, and was the first of his family in New Hampshire to receive the christian name Thomas, which after him was borne so frequently. His mother's father was Thomas Lyford, so the name is probably accounted for. In Newmarket he made his home for many years, and with his father and Samuel Sinkler he signed a petition on the 21st of November, 1746.

Thomas Sinkler

He located in (Buckstreet) Pembroke, N. H., being there in 1758, as his name appears on a petition with those of his father and brother John Sinkler. Henceforth his interests were those of a new locality. At this period the people in all the surrounding country derived a large part of their living from fishing at Amoskeag Falls, now Manchester, N. H. In order to protect the fishing interest a lengthy petition was sent to the state government to restrain fishing certain days in the week. This was signed by Mr. Sinkler and was dated July 13, 1764. The Indians had camped at these falls centuries before the advent of the palefaces, and knew their value. The lamprey eel, so abundant in these waters, has been eulogized by the late poet, William Stark, who speaks of their value to the people of Derryfield:

"From the eels they formed their food in chief,
 And eels were called the Derryfield beef;
 It was often said that their only care,
 And their only wish, and their only prayer,
 For the present world, and the world to come,
 Was a string of eels, and a jug of rum."

Though his interests were connected with this new abode he retained a business connection with citizens near his early home. On Sept. 21, 1764, he purchased of George Jaffrey of Portsmouth a farm in "Ellonstown," to which he moved. This was sold Dec. 25, same year, to Abner Clough and James Kelsoe of Nottingham, N. H.

Sanbornton, N. H., was the next town and settlement that he helped found, and he was not there previous to 1766, but was there Jan. 8, 1768 (and perhaps earlier), when he signed a petition to be exempted from taxation. Among his companions there were Thomas Lyford and Philip Hunt.

Thomas Sinclair

He served as surveyor of highways in 1772, '82, '87, and as tything man from 1773-'76, and signed the Association test in 1776.

Like all of his warlike and patriotic kindred he served in the military arm of his government, being a soldier of the Revolution,—a member of Capt. Chase Taylor's company, Col. Thomas Stickney's regiment, Gen. John Stark's brigade,—and his company marched from Sanbornton to join the Northern Continental Army, but the company went only to Charlestown, N. H. He enlisted July 22, 1777, and was discharged Sept. 27, 1777.

The honor of being constable of the town was thrust upon him March 30, 1784, and he paid his fine and declined to serve. His son James Sinkler, after his return from his long and honorable service in the Revolution, lived in Sandwich, N. H., and to him he sold his farm of 90 acres Jan. 28, 1785, which was situated on Steele's Hill. There he lived from Feb. 1, 1768, to Feb., 1793, or 25 years. The name of his wife has not been ascertained.

Thomas Sinkler had been young, and now was he old; the weight of 72 years was upon him. He had been a pioneer in four settlements,—South Newmarket, Pembroke, Allenstown, and Sanbornton, N. H.,—and there was but one removal more before he went down to his rest. The tide of emigration was sweeping westward. His brother John Sinkler had already settled in Essex, Vt.; his son Benjamin Sinclair was in Greensborough, Vt. The farm in Sanbornton was sold, and he and his son James Sinclair and family removed to Hardwick, Vt., and were near their relatives. There he lived until, as the Hardwick town record says, "Died Dec. 7, 1796, Thomas Sinclair when under the care of James Sinclair, age 75."* His work was done, his race run; they placed him in a coffin made from boards (not dug out of a log as has been stated). It was painted black, and they laid him away to sleep his long sleep. Some of his children, and probably all of them, were born in Newmarket, N. H., as shown from records and information furnished, as follows:

*The names of the earlier members of this family appear on town records and by their own signatures as Sinkler; later records of some of the same individuals have the spelling Sinclair or St. Clair; by 1800 most of them had adopted the latter forms.

66. Joseph Sinkler, Jr.<sup>d</sup> [33] (Joseph<sup>d</sup>, James<sup>d</sup>, John<sup>d</sup>). He was born before May 27, 1736, in what is now South Newmarket, N. H., and when a boy went to Pembroke, N. H., then called Buckstreet, with his father, where he was a resident for several years. On May 27, 1757, he bought sixty acres of land in Allentown, N. H., and he was by the contract to build a house fit for a family to live in, clear ten acres fit for tillage or mowing, or both, and either he, or some one in his place, was to become an inhabitant of Allentown. He is probably the Joseph Sinkler of the French and Indian war, in the same company with Richard Sinkler, afterwards "Col." Richard of Barnstead, N. H., who enlisted in Capt. Jeremiah Marston's company April 20, 1760, and was in the service as late as July 6, 1760, and probably later.

Joseph Sinkler

Soon after he was a resident in Holderness, N. H., and was made fence-viewer, before its incorporation, at a meeting of the proprietors at the house of Mr. John Layn in New Durham, N. H., June 10, 1769. He lived on "South Hill," on a hundred acre lot "numbered 62 in the plan of said townships." This he and his wife Martha sold to Samuel Livermore, Esq., of Portsmouth, July 23, 1771.

He then drops out of the history of Holderness and appears in Sanbornton, N. H., where Thomas Sinkler, his brother, had located three or four years before, and as early as 1768.

When the flames of the Revolution broke forth, it found him ready for the conflict. On Dec. 16, 1776, then of Sanbornton, he enlisted for the war, and was paid Dec. 31, 1779, for "36 months and 27 days service." He was in Maj. Benjamin Whitcomb's Rangers side by side with his nephew, James Sinkler, who died in Barre, N. Y. In 1780, on the Depreciation Rolls, his name appears in Col. Alexander Scammell's Regiment, the 3d N. H. On March 1, 1784, he was still in Whitcomb's Rangers.

He resided in Sanbornton after the war, and there he died. The administration of his estate was granted to James Sinkler July 4, 1792. His wife was Martha ——. According to the best obtainable information the following appears to have been the record of his

67. Joseph Sinkler, Jr.<sup>5</sup> Was a soldier of the Revolution, a member of Capt. Luther Richardson's company, Col. Timothy Bedell's regiment, raised for the defence of the frontiers on and adjacent to the Connecticut river. His term of service was 11 months and 26 days.
68. James Sinkler<sup>6</sup>. He perhaps bought land in Henniker, N. H., of Jesse Nichols of Reading, Mass., July 1, 1789. He m. his cousin Sarah, dau. of Thomas Sinkler, and is believed to have settled in Vermont or Canada.

69. John Sinkler<sup>4</sup> [34] (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in South Newmarket, N. H., in 1738. He went to "Buckstreet" in Pembroke, N. H., as he was but thirteen years of age when his father sold his home in South Newmarket, Sept 12, 1751.

On the 1st day of November, 1759, he signed a petition with his father and his brother Thomas, and objected to paying any of the old claims against Pembroke, contracted before Buckstreet became incorporated with it.

John Sinkler

He purchased his father's home farm April 15, 1761, on which he lived until Nov. 9, 1768, when he sold "one certain messnage or tract of land," "it being the whole of that lot I purchased of my honored father Joseph Sinclair."

He then disappeared from Pembroke, and went forth to help found new settlements. That was his mission, and nobly did he fulfill the purpose to which he was appointed. On the indented shores of Lake Winnepisaukee, now known as Wolfborough, N. H., whose bright waters add to New Hampshire's wealth and make her famous, and whose beauties rival those of Loch Lomond or Lake Lemman, our settler next makes his home. On the 30th of August, 1769, he purchased 86 acres of land there of David Sewall of York, Me. He made repeated purchases and sales of real estate. In this settlement he was a prominent, active, and influential citizen, and often held positions of public trust. The annual town meetings were frequently held at his house, namely in 1771, '73, '74, '75, and '76. He was Selectman in 1771, Clerk in 1773, Moderator in 1778, '80, and '82, Constable in 1779, Surveyor in 1776, '79, and '82, and frequently the Collector of Taxes. He was Auditor in 1774, and Deer Keeper in 1781, and '82. But this did not comprise all his positions of a public nature. He was an inn-holder, and on the 20th of February, 1776, all the training soldiers of Wolfborough met at his house, and he was re-elected Captain. This was one of the "Train Bands." He was mustered into service as a soldier in Capt. Joseph Chandler's company, Col. Daniel Wyman's regiment, Aug. 10, 1776. On Jan. 29, 1778, he sold to Peter Hodgdon of Kensington, N. H., the land he bought Aug. 30, 1765, and Dec. 9, 1769. His last public appearance in Wolfborough was on June 3, 1782, when he presided at a special town meeting. He was called "Captain," and "Gentleman" on the public records. This closes his career in Wolfborough; henceforth his history is connected with other settlements. He was swept in with the west-going tide of emigration. He was in Fairlee, Vt., Dec. 1, 1783, and was in Moretown, Vt., Sept. 24, 1784, when he and his wife Mary sold land in Sanbornton, N. H., to Benjamin Colby of Sanbornton. He was a resident of Essex, Vt., probably in 1788, and certainly by July 1, 1791. There he resided until his death July 19, 1803, aged 65 years, and there his descendants reside unto this day. He married Mary —, who died in Essex, Vt., April 13, 1799, aged 59 years. She was born in 1740. In the burial ground at Essex Center, by the side of Mary his wife, and surrounded by his numerous kindred, and neighbors, and friends of his day and generation, as well as those of later days and generations, to keep him company, with a marble slab above him, with an appropriate inscription, he sleeps well till the day of the great awakening. On his tombstone he is called John Sinclair.

He took the Freeman's oath Sept. 6, 1808; was a farmer and lumberman. Was a soldier in the 1812-15 war, and rallied with the company from Essex, and was in the battle of Plattsburgh, N. Y., just across Lake Champlain, and thirty miles from his home. The cannonading was so severe that the dishes on the shelves in his house were shaken, and were placed upon the floor for safety. During the battle his wife was greatly affected, and wept violently. He m. Mary —, and perhaps m. Betsey — for his second wife.

76. James Sinkler<sup>4</sup> [35] (Joseph<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>). He was born in South Newmarket, N. H., presumably about 1730. By the date of birth of his child it is apparent that he was settled and married at the time that his father removed to Pembroke, N. H., and the sale of his home farm Sept. 12, 1751.

Mr. Sinkler was a housewright and farmer, and was a soldier in the French and Indian war. In the possession of his great-grandson, Prof. Benjamin Davis of Concord, N. H., is the powder horn he and was a soldier in his great-grandson, the powder horn he carried, with this inscription upon it, "James Sincler his Horn mad at fort Edward Nov. 17, 1758." It is unique in form and appearance,—beautifully embellished with artistic designs. A battle scene,—the meeting of hostile bands of soldiers with arms in position, and the words "Present, Fire." There are shown incidents of the hunter's life in the province forest,—the fleeing deer, and the swiftly pursuing hounds, and the wild turkey flying from the sly, cunning foe. This horn came into the possession of his son Noah Sinkler of Canterbury, N. H., and has been preserved in the family.

The Sinkler farm was a small one, of about forty acres, it is said. On Aug. 31, 1754, a highway was laid out by the town of Epping through his land.

His house was the scene of a thrilling adventure. His neighbors, Joseph Smith and wife, one day were walking and carrying their twin children, and when near the Sinkler home they espied a bear, when Mr. Smith dropped his child and ran for his gun. His wife seized the child, and with one under each arm hastened rapidly for the Sinkler house, with Bruin in hot pursuit. No sooner had she reached it and closed the lower half of the door, than the bear was there and springing up placed his paws upon it and looked eagerly in. Mrs. Smith seized the long-handled iron shovel and dealt him a fearful blow on the side of the head, which made him retreat to the road, where he sat for a time blinking his eyes, lapping his jaws, and rubbing his head. After taking time for reflection, he evidently became disgusted at such inhospitable treatment and retreated to the adjoining forests.

The site of the old Sinkler home can still be identified. It is near the Hedding camp-meeting ground, and depot of the Portsmouth & Concord Railroad in Epping, on or near the place known on the map of Rockingham County as J. & J. A. Thyng's farm. A short distance from the meeting of two roads, in a small cultivated field of less than one-half of an acre in extent, some two rods from the highway, there is a depression in the soil. This is the place of the Sinkler cellar. It was filled up, and yearly, above the ancient home, the crops are grown.

By the will of his father he was to succeed to the homestead in Stratham, but if he possessed the same, it was only for a short period, as Richard Sinkler, his brother, soon had it in his possession. He was a signer of a petition for a bridge at the "Newfields" in 1755, and rendered military duty in the French war of the time, being a soldier in the company of Lieut. Hart in the Crown Point expedition, which was previous to March 18, 1757.

On April 19, 1758, then of Stratham, he and his wife Deborah, with Ephraim Green and his wife Abigail, who was probably Abigail Sinkler before marriage, deeded real estate in Epping, N. H.

They were residents of Hampton Falls as early as Feb. 5, 1762, where they lived for several years.

He was a signer of a petition there Nov. 21, 1765, of which this is a fac-simile of his autograph:

He had fixed convictions upon religious matters, and was a firm adherent of the Presbyterian faith, an attendant and member of the Presbyterian church. The curtain soon after falls upon his history for about twelve years, until it is lifted and reveals him to us again amid the glowing fires of the Revolution. After petitioning the government, permission was granted him March 19, 1777, "to export three hundred bushels of corn from Portsmouth to Machias."

He married Deborah —. He may have married the second time as Nathaniel Sinkler of Stratham married Sarah Allen of Portsmouth July, 1782, and no other Nathaniel Sinkler is known at that date. No mention of children upon any known records.

He was juror in 1776. Was a member of the Baptist religious society in 1786, tything man in 1791, and owned a considerable amount of real estate. He deeded his home farm to his son, Richard

He was a farmer and blacksmith, and his life was passed in the town of his nativity, his home being in the westerly part of the town, near the Squamscott river, and about three miles from the village of Exeter. In 1786 he was a member of the Baptist society. He dealt considerably in real estate. His home was sold about 1822 to Paine Wingate. His wife was Elizabeth Pickering of Greenland, N. Was genial in manners, with an abundance of wit, and had a large and generous heart. He accumulated a good property, and at his death he left several thousand dollars in trust, for the benefit of the sick and destitute of his town. He was never married, and died in Stratham Dec. 18, 1879.

before June 15, 1764. He sold Nov. 4, 1765, his "original right or proprietor's share of land granted to me in the town of Sandwich." Of his brother, Richard Sinkler of Sandwich, he purchased his right in land at "Wall's Cove" in Exeter.

In the Revolutionary war he rendered acceptable service. When the Connecticut troops refused to tarry beyond their term of enlistment, Dec. 6, 1775, and thus in the face of a strong enemy greatly imperiled the American cause, New Hampshire was called upon for aid, and nobly did she respond. The men of New Hampshire threw themselves into the breach, having enlisted for six weeks, and were called the "six weeks' men." The 30th company of these, on Winter Hill, was from Exeter or vicinity, and "James Sinkler" was 2d lieutenant of the company. It was commanded by Capt. Peter Coffin, sent to re-enforce Gen. John Sullivan, and was mustered into service at Medford, Mass. He was a captain in Col. John Waldron's regiment on March 6, 1776, which was stationed at Temple's farm. He rendered valiant service to his country; and to his death he bore the title of captain, and was held in general esteem.

109. Richard Sinkler<sup>4</sup> [50] (Ebenezer<sup>3</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., about 1740. He was left a minor by the death of his father in 1754, and Gen. Nathaniel Folsom was his guardian. He was a hatter by trade, and a farmer. He was a resident of Exeter until after Oct. 15, 1765. The town of Sandwich, N. H., had been granted by Gov. Benning Wentworth Oct. 25, 1763, in seventy-two shares, and Richard and James Sinkler each secured a share. Very soon after Oct. 15, 1765, Richard Sinkler, the hatter, removed to Sandwich for settlement, and first lived in a log cabin, some twenty rods distant from the large two-story house which he afterwards erected and which is still standing. His wife was an excellent woman, very quiet, calm under all circumstances, took life as it came, and was not much troubled by the vexations of life. Mr. Sinkler was exactly the reverse: nervous, sharp, prompt, and energetic. On one unlucky night the roof of their cabin took fire; he sprang from his couch, quickly emerged from the domicile, climbed upon the roof and labored mightily to subdue the flames.
Not so his good and worthy spouse; she did not arise to assist her husband; but occasionally raised her head from the pillow and drowsily inquired, "Father, are you like to put it out?" He succeeded:

It was a new settlement. He reclaimed his farm from its natural state. One year his crops had been largely cut off, and they were shortened for the necessities of life. He went to Exeter, and returned afoot, and brought a bushel of meal upon his back. When the Revolutionary war broke forth it found him a patriot, and like his relatives and namesakes, Col. Richard Sinkler and his son, Lt. Richard Sinkler of Barnstead, he too became a soldier, and rendered honorable service in behalf of liberty. He signed the Association Test in 1776. He was a private in Capt. Chase Taylor's company, Col. Thomas Stickney's regiment, Gen. John Stark's brigade, which marched from Sanbornton, N. H., and joined the Northern Continental Army in 1777. Engaged July 22, and discharged Sept. 29, 1777, he served two months and eight days.

The day following his return he enlisted in Capt. Nathaniel Ambrose's company, Col. Welch's regiment, which marched from Moultonborough (two miles from his home) and the adjacent towns, and joined the Continental Army under Gen. Gates at Saratoga, and after the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne marched with the guard as far as Northampton, Mass., and was there discharged.

He was collector of taxes for the town of Sandwich in 1781 and '90. On the 19th of October, 1784, he bought fifty acres of land in Moultonborough, N. H. His home (lately occupied by Ebenezer Tilton) was on the old Toppan road which leads from the Little Pond to Moultonborough, and not far from the line between the two towns. Over forty years he owned and lived upon this farm. On Oct. 5, 1807, he sold it with other lands to his son Jonathan Sinkler, and soon after removed to Haverhill, N. H. He and his wife were now old, and the remainder of their lives were spent with their son in Haverhill, although they occasionally returned to Sandwich to see their old friends, and to visit the familiar haunts where so many of the active years of their lives had been passed. He married —

— They died in Haverhill, N. H., and are buried there.

Before relinquishing Mr. Sinkler to history a pen picture should be given of his home in Sandwich. On one of the most magnificent locations in New Hampshire was his abode. Like the city of Jerusalem as described by the Psalmist, it was beautiful for situation. It was on a high, level tract of land which projects into that valley, remarkable for its beauty, in which much of Sandwich is situated. High hills and grand mountains surround it, whose contour is nearly perfect. The mountain gorges are symmetrical, the hill tops are rounded, and the sides are covered with fields or wooded growths.

In the south, in plain view of his home, was Berry Pond, or Little Winnipisaukee, whose waters glimmered in the brightness of the summer sun. Then there were the Red Hills in a southerly and westerly direction; in a northerly direction were the Sandwich mountains, with the bald, bold peak "White Face" plainly in sight. In the north-east "Cool Chocorua," ragged and rugged peak, pierced the skies, while in the southeast the mountains of Ossipee, with "Black Snout," bound one's vision. Thus living almost within their shadows, the mountains and the hills kept "ward and watch" about him.

118. Edward Sinkler<sup>4</sup> [55] (Samuel<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born as early, probably, as March 3, 1726, as on March 3, 1747-8, he received a deed of ten acres of land from Samuel Sinkler, and must have been of age at that time, and was of the parish of Newmarket. He was still there in 1755, when he signed a petition for a bridge at the Newfields.

On Nov. 14, 1770, then of Holderness, N. H., he bought land of John Shaw of that town. In 1775 he was a resident of Gilmanton, and was one of the twelve men who volunteered to fight against the enemies of his country.

He enlisted May 8, 1775, in Capt. Aaron Kinsman's company, Col. John Stark's regiment, and served until Aug. 1, 1775, three months and one day. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill.

He drops out of view, but he may have settled in Maine. Circumstances point in that direction. He may have been the ancestor of the Sinklers of Blue Hill, Me., mentioned in the latter part of this book.

His father, Samuel Sinkler, was a husbandman and a resident "of Newmarket in Exeter," now South Newmarket, previous to Dec. 3, 1731, as he deeded land at that date. His mother was a daughter of Richard Mattoon. The exact date of Col. Richard Sinkler's birth is not known, but it was about 1730. He was born in Newmarket, was a carpenter and wheelwright by trade, and was a resident of Nottingham, N. H., in 1752. On Nov. 15, 1752, the first mention of his name is found upon the records,—when he sold forty acres of land in Epping, N. H. As he must have been twenty-one years of age at the time, it would make his date of birth previous to Nov. 15, 1731. He was a resident of Newmarket on Jan. 15, 1757, as on that date he purchased one-fourth part of lot No. 4 in Summer street in Nottingham. At this period he dealt considerably in real estate and owned mills, and cut and sawed the lumber upon the same. That was the main business of his life.

The French and Indian war was then in progress, and lasted from the declaration of hostilities by England against France, May 17, 1756, until the conquest of Canada and the treaty of peace in 1763. New Hampshire was called upon for sacrifices, and her sons were continually in the field braving the dangers of the battle and the sufferings of camp and bivouac. In 1760 a regiment was raised for the invasion of Canada, commanded by Col. John Goffe. In this regiment Richard Sinkler enlisted March 28, 1760, in Capt. Jeremiah Marston's company. This force cut its way through the wilderness for a great distance and endured many privations. After the expiration of his service in the army he purchased, on April 27, 1764, land in Canterbury. In November of the same year he became a pioneer settler in Gilmanton, and lived for two years with his family on lot No. 1 in the 1st range of the lower one hundred acre lots. This was in the southeast part of the town, near the Barnstable line. (See map of Barnstead, N. H.)

He was a signer of the call for the first town meeting in Gilmanton, which was held July 31, 1766. In the latter part of that year his life in Gilmanton closed, and he became a resident of Barnstead. On the second day of June, 1767, he purchased of Edward Emerson of Portsmouth, N. H., one hundred acres, it being the "Lot said Richard Sinkler now lives on, and is No. 64, in 2d Division in Barnstead." On the same date he sold one-fourth part of a sawmill standing on Bear Pond stream.

Thus was this early resident engaged in his mill, in buying and selling real estate, and the other duties of life, while the political affairs between the colonies and Great Britain were approaching a crisis, and the great questions at issue were finally to be solved by the dread abatement of the sword. The French and Indian war had developed the military spirit of the people to a high degree, and had prepared them for the greater and grander struggle in which they were to victoriously engage. The Revolution was at hand, and Mr. Sinkler was to engage in it and bear a meritorious part. The great struggle found in him an early participant in its stirring scenes. In various ways he was earnest and active in the cause till the independence of the colonies was achieved and the founding of the great Republic was assured. He held a captain's commission in the 10th regiment, commanded by Col. Joseph Badger. He was a captain in active service in Col. John Waldron's regiment, stationed at Temple's farm, in Gen. John Sullivan's brigade in the Continental Army, March 6, 1776. In 1780 he commanded a company in Col. Thomas Bartlett's regiment, which was raised in June of that year for the defence of the very valuable fortress of West Point. On the 27th of October the regiment was discharged and he returned to his home in Barnstead. It was during this term of service that Arnold attempted to betray West Point into the hands of the enemy and

This expedition closed his military career, but he was earnest in the performance of civil duties and trust. He served as moderator in his town at special meetings and at the annual meetings of 1775, '76, '79, and '82; as selectman 1777, '78, and '80; and as chairman of the board in 1775, '82, '83, and '84; was a surveyor of highways and auditor in 1792.

With others he had rallied in defence of American liberty at the very commencement of the Revolutionary war. On the 26th of April, 1775, the town voted to "Capt. Richard Sinkler, £1-11-6, Lawful money for his and the mens expence for going Down below For the Defence of our Country." He served on the committee to hire money and soldiers for Barnstead, and on the committee of regulation in 1778.

A copy of his autograph as appended to a document June 18, 1777.

At length the war was over, the colonies were triumphant, the republic was established, peace reigned, and the affairs which pertain to peace engrossed the attention of men. All were engaged in developing those things which add to the mental or physical comfort of the people, increasing the resources of the town and state, and thereby enhancing the happiness of the body politic. It was so in the town in which lived the subject of this sketch, and he was still prominent, still a servant of the public.

In one of those great freshets which almost yearly swell the rivers to raging floods, causing them to overflow their banks and bear opposing obstacles away, the bridge had been swept off which spanned the Suncook river, and on the 14th of December, 1784, the town voted to rebuild the same, and Richard Sinkler, Esq., was made "overseer of the hol bridge." On the 25th of October, 1785, he was made overseer of the work, and he received 5 shillings per day for his services as masterworkman, while the others received only 2 shillings and 6 pence.

A meeting-house was to be erected, and Capt. Richard Sinkler, now called Colonel for the first time in the records, was on the 25th of March, 1788, appointed one of a committee to locate the same.

On March-11, 1788, he deeded a one hundred acre lot with sawmill, it being No. 98 in 2d division, to his son John Sinkler, "in consid- eration of love and good will that I bear" to him. On March 23, 1790, he sold 65 acres to his son Richard, Jr., a part of lot No. 64 in the 2d division in Barnstead. He sold the remainder, "about 100 acres," "with all the buildings standing on said premises, it being the same land and buildings where I the said Richard Sinkler now live," to Joseph Cilley April 15, 1791. Thus the homestead of this early settler, which he had bought June 2, 1767, and on which he had lived for almost a quarter of a century, passed out of his possession. (See map of Barnstead, N. H.)

The home of Col. Richard Sinkler, as previously stated, was on Lot No. 1, in the southeasterly corner of Gilmanton, occupied in 1888 by Harrison Carr. He left there in the latter part of 1766, went across lots, through the then wilderness, about a mile distant, and located on the farm lately owned by Rev. Nathaniel Wilson. It was in its natural state and the location was agreeable and pleasant. As time wore away the forests gave way to smiling fields, and instead of the music of the swaying branches of storm-swept forest trees, was only heard the breezes as they bore across the fields of grass, or with rapid undulations bowed the heads of acres of heavily bearded grain.

The barn which was his was destroyed by fire; his house is gone, and an elm tree more than a foot in diameter grows in the cellar, finding abundant nourishment for itself, while in summer's sun and in winter's storm its stately branches overspread the site of this early home. This place is situated on the "old Province Road," which was laid out and built by kingly authority,

"In good old Colony times
When we lived under a king."

An interesting part of the history of Barnstead is centered in this locality, and on the line of this highway. In a southerly direction, and some three-fourths of a mile from the home of Col. Sinkler, stood the old schoolhouse, where attended school some of the brightest lads ever raised in Barnstead, and among them was his descendant in the third generation, Hon. John G. Sinclair, who then lived with his mother's father, Joseph Norris.

Still following the ancient road in a southerly direction, is the farm first settled upon by Moses Dennett, the grandfather of its present occupant, Oliver Augustus Dennett. Then there is the former home of Dr. Joseph Adams (a relative of President John Adams), now occupied by Mrs. Clarissa Roberts. In the little rustic cemetery close at hand, surrounded and fenced in by a rough wall of unhewn stone, the eccentric physician has long been sleeping. Some twelve rods south of the Adams property, on the opposite side of the highway and in the well cultivated field owned by Hiram Rand, is a depression in the soil which marks an old cellar, now filled up, and over which, yearly, crops are grown. A few pear trees grow near it. This is all there is left to mark the former habitation and home of Lt. Richard Sinkler, son of the pioneer.

Then the elegant farm of Hiram Rand is seen. It was once the property and home of Charles Hodgdon, Jr., a brother to the wife of Lt. Richard Sinkler. Still going south about an eighth of a mile there is a diverging highway. In the corner of the field, made by the junction of these roads, are the marks of another cellar. The journey being continued, another homestead is seen connected with the history of another generation of the Sinclairs of Barnstead, and the home of one of its early settlers. It was originally owned and settled upon by Joseph Norris, Sr., and in 1888 occupied by Fred P. Fletcher. This was the birthplace and early home of Martha Norris, wife of Charles G. Sinclair and mother of Hon. John G. Sinclair.

After leaving the province road soon is met the highway leading from Pittsfield to Barnstead Centre. In the center of the Parade, nearly opposite the church, is a dwelling house occupied by Mrs. Ellen Colbath. This was the home of Charles G. Sinclair and his wife Martha Norris, and the birthplace of Hon. John G. Sinclair, and where his earlier years were passed.

Col. Richard Sinkler rests in an unmarked grave on his homestead. He died July 27, 1813, in Barnstead.* He married in 1752-3 Polly, daughter of Capt. Joseph and Alice (Rawlins) Cilley of Hampton, N. H. (See appendix for Cilley family.) She possessed great courage and strength of character, and endured the hardships incident to the lives of pioneers with a marked degree of fortitude, ever looking forward to brighter and more prosperous days. During the repeated absences of her husband in the military service and in business, the cares of the family fell heavily upon her, but they were borne with womanly heroism. She died in Barnstead; date unknown. Formerly in a little orchard near the dwelling there were two graves in which reposed the dust of the heroic Polly Sinkler and her husband, the veteran soldier of two wars, Richard Sinkler.

129. Ebenezer Sinkler<sup>d</sup> [57] (Samuel<sup>a</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>l</sup>). He was probably a son of Samuel Sinkler<sup>d</sup>. By trade he was a joiner, and lived in different places. He was a soldier in the French and Indian war before 1764.

He married Mary, daughter of Capt. Jonathan Blunt of Chester, N. H., and was a resident of that town before July 5, 1771, when he and his wife sold to John Wilson of Chester the land which was set off to Mrs. Sinkler from her father's estate. On Dec. 31, 1772, he was a resident of Weare, N. H. (then or earlier called Halls Town), where they had inherited land from the estate of her father. They deeded to Samuel Blunt of Chester certain rights in land and building "out of the estate of our honored father Capt. Jonathan Blunt of Chester, deceased."

He is next heard of as a patriotic soldier of the Revolution, having enlisted early in the struggle and serving almost continuously until at the battle of Saratoga he gave up his life. He was a private in Capt. Samuel Richard's company, Col. John Stark's regiment, from April 23, to Aug. 1, 1775. At Bunker Hill his station was with the other men from Weare, N. H., "behind the rail fence" that extended from the redoubt part of the way east to the Mystic river. On March 22, 1777, he enlisted in the Continental army for three years and received a bounty of £22 5s 6d, for which he gave a receipt. He was with his Sinkler relatives from Barnstead, in Capt. Amos Merrill's company, Col. Joseph Cilley's regiment, and General Poor's brigade. Later on the battle of Bennington had been fought, and the American forces were closing in upon General Burgoyne. At the battle of Saratoga, N. Y., Oct. 7, 1777, a detachment of the British marched out of their position upon the left of the American forces. The English force consisted of the grenadiers and light infantry, and six field pieces. They placed themselves upon an elevated point in a cleared field a fourth of a mile distant from the American forces. The three N. H. regiments were ordered to attack them, which they did in brilliant style. The fight lasted for half an hour, when the enemy were driven from their position with the loss of their cannon and some prisoners. Our men pressed forward, attacked the German troops, drove them back, capturing military stores and provisions. It was during these famous exploits that Ebenezer Sinkler, the brave soldier, was killed. He made the supreme sacrifice, that of life itself, for the American cause. His family were left in destitute circumstances, and his widow applied to the state for assistance, which was not granted, though she received help from the town.

His property consisted of 150 acres of wild land in Wentworth, N. H. He had three children, the oldest under 14 years of age; names not known.

d land in Wentworth,
der 14 years of age;

129a. Ebenezer Sinclair<sup>d</sup>. Probably a son of Ebenezer of Weare, N. H., who was killed at the battle of Saratoga in the Revolutionary war, and who was owner of land in Wentworth, N. H., at time of his death.

Ebenezer 2d of Charlestown, N. H., on April 6, 1795, bought of Joshua Gove of Weare, N. H., all the right he had in John Page, Jr.'s land in Wentworth, N. H. Mary Sinkler was witness to the deed. On Sept. 1, 1795, then living in Wentworth, he sold the same to Joseph Sewell.

An Ebenezer Sinclair, apparently the same, was a resident of Barre, Vt., previous to 1804, and was residing there on Dec. 24, 1808, when he disappears from the records. He was frequently at law with his neighbors, and his name often appears in the court records at Chelsea, Vt. It is not known that he had a family.

John Sinclair<sup>d</sup>, or St. Clair, as his family now call the name, appears to have been another son of the Revolutionary soldier. (See his record in the latter end of this book.)

130. Benjamin Sinclair<sup>s</sup> [59] (Thomas<sup>d</sup>, Joseph<sup>d</sup>, James<sup>d</sup>, John<sup>l</sup>). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., about 1750. He was a brother to Thomas Sinclair of Meredith, N. H., who was born in that place.

He was an early settler of Meredith, being there Nov. 2, 1772, and purchased of his brother Thomas Sinclair on Nov. 28, 1772, a portion of Lot No. 19, 2d division.

He bought of his brother Thomas, Dr. Henry Dearborn, and others, Oct. 19, 1774, one hundred acres in Meredith, the original right of Joseph Goodwin, which he sold to Ebenezer Pitman of that town Feb. 20, 1775.

He was a Revolutionary soldier and was a member of Capt. John Moody's company, Col. Nahum Baldwin's regiment, which was raised in New Hampshire in September, 1776, to re-inforce the Continental army at New York. The regiment participated in the battle of White Plains Oct. 28, 1776, and was discharged early in December of that year. Mr. Sinclair was allowed for 320 miles travel, and the amount paid him was £8 13s 4d.

He lived in Meredith in 1780, and on Aug. 18 sold a portion of his homestead to Joseph Robinson of that town.

About the year 1790 he removed to Greensborough, Vt., and settled upon the farm owned in 1890 by James B. Calderwood. It comprised then some fifty acres. He cleared the land from its natural state and there he and his family, the most of the time, lived till his death, which occurred about 1810, at the age of some sixty years. No dates securable. He and his wife and family were much respected people, and were regular attendants of the Methodist meetings, which in those days were holden in barns.

In his old age he moved into Hardwick, and died there. He married Hannah Sanborn, who probably died in Hardwick, Vt. He was buried in Hardwick, Vt.

There two of his children are buried, only a few rods from where the present barn stands. He lived for a while in Canada where his first wife died. He married, second, Rhoda Fay. He sold his farm to Amos Smith about 1825. Was for a while in Hardwick, and finally removed more than fifty years ago to Port Kent, Black Rock, or some other place in New York, and of him or his family no other information has been received.
137. Dolly Sinclair<sup>2</sup>, m. in Greensborough, Vt., Levi Stevens. They died in Greensborough.

141. Thomas Sinclair<sup>3</sup> [60] (Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>4</sup>, John). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., April 14, 1751, and settled in Meredith, N. H., when a young man, being there previous to Nov. 18, 1772, when he deeded land to his brother Benjamin Sinclair, also of Meredith. The land of Constantine Sinclair was adjoining theirs.

The home of Mr. Sinclair was in the Pease school district, near the "Oak Hill Church," and the farm was owned in 1888 by a son of Dea. Thomas Veasey. He was a tall, slender man, with not an overstock of vitality, and disease for several years was upon him. Upon that farm he lived, reared his large family, and died of consumption.

His educational advantages had been few, yet he fully appreciated the value of learning. He attended the Free Baptist church, and though not a member, was deeply interested in religious things, and the reading of the Scripture in his family was his daily practice.

The homes of the people were lighted by tallow candles. Once when reading the Bible aloud,—"The Lord said unto Moses,"—he exclaimed, "Snuff that candle," which made so ludicrous a composition in connection with the words of "Holy Writ" that laughter was with difficulty suppressed among the youthful members of the family. He was emphatically a home man, quiet in manner, gentle by nature, and his attention was more engrossed with his private affairs than with those of a public nature. He married at Meredith Aug. 9, 1774, Mary Meed, b. at Stratham, N. H., Oct. 25, 1755; d. at Meredith Oct. 21, 1790, aged 34 yrs. 11 mos. 26 days. He married 2d Jan. 9, 1791, Nancy Pike of Meredith, who was in her 34th year. She had two children and d. Nov. 26, 1827, aged about 70 yrs.

150. James St. Clair<sup>5</sup> [63] (Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., in 1757. As his father was in "Buckstreet," in Pembroke, the following year, it must have been in that town that the earlier years of his youth were passed. His brothers, Benjamin and Thomas Sinclair, had already located in Meredith, N. H., and there he was a resident in 1776. He early went into the military service of his country by enlisting Dec. 5, 1776, in Capt. Benjamin Whitcomb's Independent Company of Rangers, and served until Dec. 31, 1779. He went as a soldier for Sanbornton, though a resident of Meredith, and received a bounty. During the lull of arms he attended to his individual interests. On Jan. 7, 1779, being then "a Continental soldier," he purchased sixty-five acres of land in Sandwich, N. H., a part of the original right of Benjamin Norris of Stratham, N. H., the brother-in-law of his great uncle, Richard Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, of that town.

When his three years of honorable service were about expiring, his patriotic ardor was not chilled, but with his courage undaunted, and his love of country strengthened by the sacrifices he had endured, he re-enlisted for the war. Was in Major Whitcomb's company of rangers; for a time in Capt. William Rowell's company. He was made a corporal Nov. 1, 1780. Cornwallis surrendered to Washington at Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19, 1781. On the 30th of December of that year was a National Thanksgiving. Peace was at hand.

St. Clair was made sergeant and continued with the army until "the cruel war was o'er." On the 19th of April, 1783, there was a formal proclamation of the cessation of hostilities. On June 6, 1783, his long and heroic service as a soldier of the Revolution closed, and he was honorably discharged at West Point, N. Y., the discharge being signed by General Washington, and he received a "Badge of Merit." It was nobly won. In a family noted for its numerous soldiers, and they attesting their devotion to country by valiant and repeated services, Mr. St. Clair had, by continuity and length of time, surpassed them all, and subsequently was pensioned by the government.

SARAH (HUNT) ST CLAIR.

JAMES ST CLAIR.

Laying aside the arms and habits of the soldier he immediately located in Sandwich, N. H., and earnestly devoted himself to the pursuits of peace. His stay in that town was short. His father, Thomas Sinkler, had become old; the infirmities of age were upon him and he wished for the help and companionship of his son. So James St. Clair, the soldier, on the 28th of January, 1785, bought the homestead of his father near the foot of Steele's hill in Sanborn-ton, N. H., and moved upon it. There they lived until March 17, 1792, he sold his ninety acres, and with his aged father, in February, 1793, settled in Hardwick, Vt., near his brother Benjamin, who was in Greensborough, Vt., and his uncle, John Sinclair, who was in Essex, Vt. He made his influence felt in his new home, for he was active and enterprising. In 1796 he was one of a committee to arrange for the settlement of Rev. Mr. Tuttle in that place. On Dec. 7 his father died in a ripe old age. He dealt in real estate and, in 1801, removed to Wolcott, Vt., where he was selectman in 1802-'3 and '4, and as moderator of the annual meeting in 1804. About 1808 he, with the Northrops and other friends, removed to Russell-town, Canada, where he lived till the breaking out of the 1812-'15 war with Great Britain. It was a great calamity to him. He was loyal to his country and would not fight against her. So he and his family fled by night from an approaching rigorous conscription, the men afoot, the women and children on horseback, and crossed the line into the United States. Save what they carried with them everything was abandoned, farms, farming utensils, stock, household furniture, all of which was confiscated by the enemy. It was a hard necessity which drove him from his home and property, and as old age was approaching, left him almost penniless in the world. They lived in Peru, Union Springs, and Palmyra, N. Y., and in 1816 he removed his family to Vermont, where his friends and relatives, Mrs. James Sinclair, Mrs. Simeon Walton, and Mrs. Isaac Colby, were residing. He joined his son in Barre, N. Y., and about 1817 visited relatives in Ohio, and called upon and visited Gen. Arthur St. Clair of Revolutionary fame, and who was born in Thurso, Scotland. The General was then living on Chestnut Ridge in the Ligonier Valley, Penn. It was about eighteen months before the General's death. His dwelling was a double log house of the western style, which a neighborhood would put up in an afternoon. It was in the vicinity of the large estate which he owned at the commencement of the Revolution. At that time General St. Clair was farming; help being short his visitor, James St. Clair, lent an assisting hand and helped him secure his crop of corn. He staid with the General some three months. The incidents of this visit and the assistance he rendered the General were often related to his family, and afforded him pleasure and delight. The subject of their relationship was discussed by them, and he stated on his return that they were relatives, "cousins"; the degree of cousinship was not stated. (See pedigree of John Sinkler of Exeter, N. H., page 44.)

He returned to Barre, N. Y., where he resided with his family until his death, Jan. 27, 1836. In personal appearance he was tall and commanding, nearly six feet in height, straight as an arrow, with blue eyes, brown hair, fair and light complexion. His mental powers were more than ordinary, and he was very intelligent. In his old age his mind went back to the scenes of his youth, the associations of his boyhood. He often spoke of his brother, Thomas Sinclair of Meredith, and frequently mentioned Zebulon and Constantine Sinclair, and his grandchildren always supposed they were his brothers. When telling of their boyish pranks he would rub his hands with glee and laugh heartily. Thus did he re-live the life of his youth. A notice published at the time of his death thus sums up his life:— "He was at the battles of Monmouth, and Brandywine; was at Valley Forge, and at the taking of Burgoyne. He was at West Point at the time of Arnold's treason, and in the unsuccessful attack on Quebec, and in several other actions of less importance."

He married Sarah, daughter of Philip Hunt of Haverhill, N. H., and later of Sanbornton, N. H., where many of his descendants still live. She was born June 5, 1759, married in 1783, and died in Barre, in the part now Albion, N. Y., March 10, 1834. He spelled his name Sinclair or Sinclear until late in life when he changed the orthography to St. Clair. These are fac-similes of his autographs, appended to pension papers in the Pension Office at Washington, D. C. In his discharge papers his name is spelled James Sinclear. In his application for pension, June 12, 1818, he signed his name James Sinclear.

James Sinclear

In his affidavit asking for the transfer of the payment of his pension from one agency to another, Sept. 4, 1820, he signed his name James St. Clair.

James St. Clair

The latter orthography he followed in the later years of his life, and it is the form adopted by his family and descendants.

163. Zebulon Sinclair<sup>s</sup> [64] (Thomas<sup>s</sup>, Joseph<sup>s</sup>, James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>).
 He was born in Newmarket, N. H., May 22, 1758. (See latter part of James St. Clair's sketch, No. 150.) In personal appearance he was tall and commanding, was fully six feet in height, well proportioned, and weighed more than two hundred pounds, was intelligent, social, and fond of society. He was a soldier of the Revolution, and many were the tales he told of his experiences on scouting expeditions against the Indians, and his dangers in camp and field. While traveling through the forests they went in Indian file, kept continually in motion, and with their dippers, without for a moment stopping, scooped up the water to drink from the flowing streams they passed.
 Thus were they continually on the lookout for the wily foe, who might lie in ambush.

At the commencement of the Revolutionary struggle he enlisted in Capt. Jeremiah Clough's company, in Col. Enoch Poor's regiment, Gen. John Sullivan's brigade, and served one year, from the last of December, 1775, to the last of December, 1776. At this time he was of Sanbornton, N. H., and enlisted there.

He entered the Continental service for the war, and served till April 1, 1778,—one year and three months,—when he procured a substitute and returned home. During this period he was a member of a company commanded by Lieut.-Col. Ebenezer Smith, which on the alarm of July 7, 1777, marched for the relief of the garrison at Ticonderoga, a nine days' service. The expedition was fruitless of beneficial results, as General St. Clair, who was in command, deemed himself unable to check the advance of General Burgoyne, and so abandoned the fort.

Young Sinclair saw honorable service soon after. General Burgoyne having sent a detachment of his army to seize a large amount of stores at Bennington, Vt., was met by troops under General Stark of New Hampshire, and defeated Aug. 16, 1777. Sinclair was in that battle, and continued with the forces which pressed on and joined the American army, which at Saratoga and Stillwater defeated Burgoyne, and caused his surrender to Gen. Horatio Gates Oct. 7.

"Burgoyne, unconscious of impending fates, Could cut his way through woods, but not through Gates."

He was for a time in Captain Addridge's company of rangers, under Major Whitcomb, which was stationed on the frontier of Canada, and was besides in several skirmishes with the Indians.

After the war he lived in Sandwich, and sold his land of 27 acres Feb. 2, 1790, to Hezekiah Webster. Was then a resident of Meredith, where he sold his land of 165 acres and buildings to William Mead Sept. 1, 1801. He sold land in Holderness to Jonathan Towle April 16, 1810. He then lived in Holderness, in that section of the town and on the farm owned in 1888 by Edward Merrill, and occupied by Samuel D. Merrill. The original buildings are now demolished. They stood on a little plot of ground he had reserved on a gently sloping hillside. Late in life, when the infirmities of age had bowed his once stalwart form and greatly reduced his strength, he removed a half-mile distant and spent the last years with his son Zebulon. It is the farm owned and lived upon in 1888 by his grandson, John Taylor Gilman Sinclair, in East Holderness, two miles distant from Squog bridge. He received a pension from the government for his valiant military services.

He was married by Rev. Joseph Woodman of Sanbornton, N. H., to Annie Conant March 1, 1779. She was probably of Newmarket, and was born Dec. 10, 1754. Her last years were ones of much suffering, caused by a severe fall, which made her a cripple and obliged her to walk with crutches.

He died June 11, 1840. She survived her husband till the 22d day of September, 1840, when she passed away. The veteran soldier and his life companion rest side by side in the cemetery at Squog bridge, Holderness, N. H.

Constantine Sinclair bought land in New Hampton March 1, 1781. He married Huldah —, who survived him. But the time approached when this pioneer could no longer fell the forest and convert into smiling fields with abundant harvest the land where only gloomy woods had stood before. Sickness came to him, and in spite of the services of his attending physician, Dr. Beniah Sanborn, he died previous to Sept. 3, 1783.

On that date the administration of his estate was granted to Benjamin Pease of Meredith. Inventory of estate was taken Nov. 27, 1783; the widow's third set off Dec. 8, 1783; and license granted to sell the real estate July 23, 1784. There is no record or mention of children.

173. Jeremiah Sinclair<sup>s</sup> [70] (John<sup>s</sup>, Joseph<sup>s</sup>, James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>). He was born in Pembroke, N. H., in 1765, and his youth was spent in Wolfborough, N. H., as his father was a resident there during those years. He went as a soldier in the Revolution from that town when young, enlisting Sept. 21, 1781, and was discharged Nov. 6 of the same year. He was in Capt. Jacob Smith's company of rangers, raised for the defense of the northern frontiers of New Hampshire, and was under Col. Joseph Whipple and Col. David Page.

He was living in Wolfborough on Dec. 23, 1783, and signed a document and the accompanying cut is a fac-simile of his autograph:

Jeremiah Sinclair

After the close of the war he resided in Eaton, N. H., and bought Oct. 19, 1799, of Eli Glines one hundred and fifty acres, "the land he now lives on," for three hundred dollars. This was one mile from Eaton Centre and near Glines' Hill. Later he removed to Essex, Vt., where lived his father, bought a farm, erected buildings, and there spent the remainder of his life. He was a soldier of two wars, the Revolution and the last war with Great Britain, 1812-'15. He was with the company from Essex, Vt., and with them participated in the fight at Plattsburg, N. Y. He was large, with florid complexion, dark hair, stood more than six feet in height, weighed two hundred and twenty-five pounds, was strong and powerful, and in his youth was fond of athletic sports, and was noted for his great strength and successful feats in lifting, jumping, and wrestling, the games then in vogue at all public fairs and many public gatherings. Was a farmer.

The maiden name of Mrs. Sinclair was Abigail, sister of Col. Eli Glines of Eaton, N. H. She was born in that town in 1765; died in Essex, Vt., Aug. 13, 1826, aged sixty-one years.

They attended and were members of the Freewill Baptist church. Mr. Sinclair died in Essex Nov. 19, 1822, and they and other Sinclairs are buried in the cemetery at Essex Centre, Vt.

He took the Freeman's Oath Sept. 3, 1793. Was a farmer, and owned a highly productive and valuable intervalle farm on Onion River, which was recently in the possession of Erastus Whitcomb. He was also engaged in the lumber business.

His wife was Nancy Calkins, who died in Essex, Vt., Sept. 6, 1842, in her 70th year. He died in Essex July 27, 1833, in his 65th year, and is buried at Essex Centre, with his father and others of his race.

195. James Sinclair<sup>4</sup> [73] (John<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>). His home was upon a small farm in Essex, Vt. From his early years he was deaf and dumb, which fact caused him much sorrow. Was once married, but the latter years of his life he lived entirely alone.

By a severe accident to his ankle he was lame all his mature years. In spite of his great afflictions he was full of wit and mirth and was generally liked. The name of his wife is not known, nor is there any record of children.

During the war of 1812-'15 he was Captain of the Essex military company which rallied to the support of the American cause, and participated in the victorious battle of Plattsburg, N. Y., which carried such joy to the hearts of Americans.

He took the Freeman's Oath early in life, Sept. 6, 1803.

Mr. Sinclair was an energetic and successful business man. Large in stature, he stood fully six feet in height, with dark hair and fair complexion. He died in Essex, Vt., Dec. 2, 1857.

Mrs. Sinclair's maiden name was Polly Thompson of that town, born March 2, 1780.

202. Jacob St. Clair<sup>4</sup> [77] (James<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Epping, N. H., Dec. 27, 1752.

He had just entered young manhood and was laying out his plans for his life work, when the war of the Revolution broke forth and earnestly engaged the attention of the patriotic sons of New Hampshire. He was full of fervent love for his country and immediately engaged in her defence.

Jacob Sinclair

On April 23, 1775, he enlisted for eight months in a New Hampshire company under command of Capt. Daniel Moore, Col. John Stark's regiment, and was stationed at Winter Hill, and participated in the battle of Bunker Hill on June 17th of that year. Before the expiration of his term he re-enlisted for six weeks, being one of the New Hampshire men who took the place of the defected Connecticut troops. He then re-enlisted in Capt. George Reid's company, and Stark's regiment, for one year. After his re-enlistment at Winter Hill he marched to Montreal, Can., thence to Mt. Independence, battle of Trenton, N. J., Dec. 26, 1776, and also in the equally encouraging flight at Princeton, N. J., on Jan. 3, 1777.

According to his sworn statement in the Pension Office in Washington, D. C., he served continuously from April, 1775, till about the middle of February, 1777, having been twenty-two months in the service when he was discharged at Morristown, N. Y. Thus ended his military career. He is called Lieutenant, having filled that office probably in the militia.

On June 16, 1777, he was married to Rachel Clifford of Epping, N. H., who was born Jan. 15, 1759, and on March 24, 1778, he rented of Henry Butler of Nottingham a farm in Epping, which Dr.
 Flisk had owned, and where he died. On this place he lived some
 till 1790. On the 22d of February, 1790, "James Sinclair of Epping, Gentleman," for £100 bought of Andrew Neale, blacksmith, and his wife Mary, formerly of Exeter but then of New Hampton, a farm of 50 acres, with buildings, in the latter town. This farm Neale had purchased July 5, 1777, of Daniel Ward of Moultonborough, N. H., and was situated in that part of Moultonborough called the "Gore," afterwards included in New Hampton. On the 2d of March, 1790, with his teams and loaded goods he left Epping for his new home, at which he arrived on March 5th, and which was ever after his abode. He lived in the log house of his predecessor for nine years, when he erected the large and commodious house, on the same site, which was occupied by his grandson, the late Charles P. St. Clair. The brick for its massive chimney (which took 20,000) he made and burned himself.

Mr. St. Clair was a thrifty settler and soon doubled his area of territory by purchasing the farm of his neighbor, Jonathan Dow, and fifty more acres of Dea. John Rand. He was a tailor as well as farmer, and most of the deerskin breeches and other tailor work of the neighborhood were made by him, for which his neighbors in payment worked upon his farm. Thus was his farm successfully cultivated with but little of his personal labor upon it.

For his military services he received a pension of eight dollars per month, commencing March 5, 1819. The certificate allowing his claim is signed by John C. Calhoun, Secretary of War, and is in the possession of his grandson, as well as other valuable relics of this early settler.

He and his wife and family were constant attendants of the church at New Hampton Centre, and there some of his children were baptized.

The home of Mr. St. Clair was on a high elevation in New Hampton, and the view of the country around is fine indeed. The abode of his relative, Thomas Sinclair, a pioneer settler of New Salem, afterwards Meredith, was two miles away in the east in a small valley. Zebu-lon Sinclair, another relative, was a resident of Meredith till 1801.

In the north, some fifteen miles distant, can be plainly seen the rugged features of White Face; in the northeast are the Ossipee mountains, within sight of which, and almost beneath their shadow, was dwelling his father's cousin, Richard Sinclair, Sr., one of the earliest residents of Sandwich, N. H. With his relatives not distant from him, surrounded by his loving family, the years glided happily past. The rocky, uneven, but richly productive acres of his farm gave them an abundant support. Living to nearly fourscore years of age, he died Sept. 5, 1830, aged 77 yrs. 8 mos. 9 days. His wife was vigorous, and survived him many years. She died in New Hampton Feb. 19, 1852, aged 93 yrs. 1 mo. 4 days.

was a son of James<sup>2</sup>,

He was a resident of Unity, N. H., at the time of the Revolutionary war; was a member of Capt. Samuel Wetherbee's company, in Col. Isaac Wyman's regiment, in the service of the united colonies, sent to join the Northern army Aug. 20, 1776, and received advance wages and bounty to the amount of £9 18s 10d. On the 5th of November, 1776, he was at Mount Independence.

He survived the war, and for many years lived in Unity. In 1790 he signed a petition against the division of that town, and also one on May 23, 1794, to the same effect. His name does not appear upon the records of that town after 1795.

209. Noah Sinclair<sup>2*</sup> [79] (James<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was a brother to Jacob St. Clair of New Hampton, N. H. The light of day first greeted his opening eyes in Epping, N. H., Feb.
20, 1755; by another authority, Feb. 17, 1756. Of his earliest years nothing is known, but when the time approached for the manhood of America to assert itself, he came to the front. He was one of those ready, when the hour came, to resist British aggressions. When the English commander in Boston sent forth a detachment of his forces to destroy the stores of the patriots at Lexington, and which resulted in the battle of that name April 19, 1775, the whole land was aroused.
The troops of New Hampshire immediately prepared for war, and young Sinclair was one of them. He was then of Epsom, being there in 1775. On May 2, 1775, he enlisted as a drummer for 8 months in Capt. Henry Dearborn's company, Col. John Stark's regiment, in the N. H. line. His regiment and company marched to the vicinity of Boston, and was in the battle of Bunker Hill on June 17th. He served his 8 months, and in the last of December enlisted for 1 year in Capt. Amos Morrill's company, Col. John Stark's regiment, and was with the American army at St. Johns, one hundred and fifteen miles north of Ticonderoga, which was the first British port in Canada. There on the 14th of June, 1776; he was severely wounded, by being shot through the wrist of his left arm with two musket balls, which fractured both bones, "by which he lost the use of his hand."
For this he was pensioned by the state and nation.

Noah Sinclair

While this wound unfitted him for much manual labor, and for the ordinary duties of the soldier, it did not quench his patriotic ardor nor dampen his military enthusiasm. He was still zealous to share the dangers of camp and field in the cause of liberty and the defence of his country.

* Many of the facts relating to his military service and experiences were gathered from his pension papers in the Pension office at Washington, D. C., by the author.

After the expiration of his year's service, he re-enlisted Feb. 17, 1777, for three years, under Capt. Michael McCleary, 3d N. H. regiment, commanded by Col. Alexander Scammell. He enlisted for Loudon, and at the time was a resident of Epsom, N. H. He was also a part of the time in Capt. James Gray's company of 3d regiment; was a drummer, and promoted to a drum-major May 28, 1779. During this term of service he participated in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777, where the British troops were routed; was at the battle of Saratoga, where his commanding officer, Capt. McCleary, was killed, and at the final surrender of Gen. Burgoyne, Oct. 17, 1777, he was present.

In the following year, 1778, he was with that portion of the army which hung upon the rear of the British army in their march into New Jersey, and participated in that fearfully contested but successful battle of Monmouth on June 28.

The following season, 1779, he was with his regiment, the 3d N. H., under Gen. John Sullivan, in the campaign against the Indians between Wyoming, Pa., and Niagara, N. Y. They marched through the wilderness, over rocky glens and mountain ridges, through gloomy and hardly penetrable swamps, and forded rushing rivers, ever going "through the unsoiled remnant of a world" seldom or never trod save by the lurking foe. He participated in the successful battle with the Indians at Newtown (now Elmira, N. Y.) Aug. 29, 1779. Indian towns were ruined, and their marvelous fields of corn and grain were everywhere destroyed. Devastation and ruin marked the pathway of our army. The expedition started from Easton, Pa., June 18, 1779, and returned to that place on the 15th of the following October.

Sinclair served his entire term of enlistment and was honorably discharged at Camp Danbury, Conn., Jan. 25, 1780, by Maj. James Norris, of his regiment and a resident of Epping, N. H.

He was at one time a resident of Pembroke, N. H. After his long and arduous service in the army he located in Canterbury, N. H., settling there previous to May 25, 1781; at that date he bought 80 acres of land there of James Glines of Concord, N. H. He became quite an extensive landholder; was called in the records Yeoman and Gentleman. He was a good mechanic, and made all of his plows and farming utensils. Was a deacon of the church, and looked upon with much respect by his townsmen. Was large in size, and 5 feet 10 inches high, weighed 200 lbs., of light and florid complexion, was commanding in his appearance, possessed great strength, and was noted for his athletic exploits. His views were always positive, and he was rigid in their practical execution. His long and useful life was closed in the town of his adoption May 15, 1821,—aged 66 yrs. 2 mos. 25 days.

His wife was Lovina Gault of Canterbury, N. H., who was born there April 27, 1758, and died Jan. 10, 1828, very suddenly while sitting at the table.

266. Benjamin Folsom Sinclair<sup>s</sup> [98] (Capt. James<sup>a</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>a</sup>, James<sup>a</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Brentwood, N. H., Nov. 16, 1761. He accompanied his father for a time in the Revolutionary war, and was his awaiteer for him when at Bunker Hill. He settled in Waterborough, York co., Me., where he purchased a tract of wild land of some 200 acres. He was accompanied to that place by acquaintances and citizens of Brentwood, namely, Trueworthy Dudley, William Gilpatrick, and Samuel Cammett. They were among the very earliest settlers of that town, which was then a wilderness. He was a farmer and miller. He erected his buildings and hewed his farm from a wilderness, and made it one of attractiveness and productiveness. Like the most of his race he also owned a part of a saw-mill, an institution so essential and so profitable in a new settlement. In his personal appearance he stood some 5 feet 10 inches in height, was light complexioned, with dark hair and blue eyes, and weighed some 170 pounds.

He was prominent in local affairs, a man of prayer and an attendant of the Baptist church. The family altar had a prominent place in his family and he was rigid in his observance of religious duties.

He married April 13, 1784, Mary Peavey, who was born in Brentwood, N. H., Sept. 2, 1763, and died in Waterborough, Me., Dec. 12, 1796, leaving five children. He married Dec. 19, 1797, second, Dorothy, daughter of David and Sarah Stevens of Waterborough, Me., who was born in Alfred, Me. She died in Waterborough Dec. 16, 1851. She had light complexion with blue eyes and dark brown hair.

He died in Waterborough, Me., April 9, 1851.

328. Richard Sinclair, Jr.<sup>d</sup> [110] (Richard<sup>d</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>d</sup>, James<sup>d</sup>, John<sup>d</sup>.) He was born in Sandwich, N. H., January, 1766. He occupied a part of the original farm of his father in East Sandwich, on farm now lived upon by his grandson, George Robinson. This house stood some twenty rods north of the home of his father. Was a carpenter and wheelwright. He sold most of his property to his father, Nov. 14, 1803, after his removal to Falmouth, Me. He was in what is now Portland, Me., and carried on business there. He was strongly urged by a certain debtor to accept his pay of him in land, but this was declined. "Had his foresight equaled his hind sight," as Beecher once expressed it, his fortune would have been made, for the land was in what is now the most valuable portion of Portland. He returned to Sandwich, lived and died on a portion of the old homestead, May 28, 1848, aged 82 years, and is buried in "Little Pond Cemetery."

In personal appearance, he was tall, angular, bony, and not remarkable for beauty. His reputation was excellent. Was a very religious man and morning and evening petitions ascended from his family altar to the Council Chamber of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. His observance of the Sabbath was of the most right character, and his family were taught to observe it in the same manner. He and his wife were members of the Congregational church.

He married about 1790 Rebecca, daughter of Nicholas and Judith (Piper) Gilman*, of Gilmanton. She was born July 5, 1769, and died in Sandwich July 3, 1857, aged 88 years.

335. Jonathan Sinclair<sup>3</sup> [111] (Richard<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>1</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born about 1768 in Sandwich, N. H. He was a blacksmith; settled at Moultonborough Corner, N. H., where he carried on business for many years. He lived in a one-story house; it still stands, though another story has been added. It is owned by Dr. Isaac Adams, and occupied by Albion Richardson as a hotel. He was there on July 3, 1803, and was called "Gentleman" in deeds. He became possessor of considerable real estate, among which was the home farm of his father in Sandwich. Before March 30, 1809, he had removed to Haverhill, N. H. Sept. 26, 1810, a deed was acknowledged by him, conveying his shop and land in Moultonborough to Simeon Moulton of that place.

At Haverhill he became a strong and leading spirit. His blacksmith business was managed successfully, as was also his country store. He was also the owner and manager of a hotel. This was in the early years, at least, kept in the three-story brick house owned and occupied in 1888 by Dr. Spaulding. For a number of years he was deputy sheriff, and captain in the militia. He was medium in size, with dark brown hair. He married Feb. 24, 1800 (or July 24, 1800, as Moultonborough records say) Abigail, daughter of George Frieze of Moultonborough Corner; her early home being the place (in 1888) lived on by Stephen Jacklard. Late in life they removed to Newton, Mass.; lived with their daughter, died there, and are buried in Mt. Auburn.

CHILD BORN MOULTONBOROUGH, N. H.

337. Ebenezer Sinclair<sup>3</sup> [112] (Richard<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>1</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H.; baptized Aug. 29, 1762, by Rev. Woodbridge Odlin. He lived on a small farm near the Red Hill, the south part of his native town. The place is owned (1888) by Mrs. Elizabeth Ulman, daughter of the late Isaac Adams. He was a farmer and held in much estimation. His wife was Mercy Hoag of Sandwich, who was born Nov. 30, 1763. They were married by Rev. Jacob Jewell April 11, 1786. She was a most excellent woman; she and her husband were members of the Society of Friends. He fell from a loaded team in the field, and his injuries was so serious that after a few days of great suffering he died Sept. 29, 1815. Enoch Hoag of Sandwich was administrator of his estate; inventory taken Oct. 16, 1815. She survived him many years.

They had an interesting family, intellectually bright, and fine scholars for the advantages they possessed.

348. Samuel Sinclair<sup>6</sup> [113] (Richard<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>3</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He owned a small part of the original homestead of his father, and his house stood only a few rods distant from that of his brother Richard. This he sold to his brother Jonathan, then of Moultonborough, and the buildings were taken down. He was a blacksmith; removed to Moultonborough Corner, and his place of business was a short distance from that of Jonathan's. He sold his premises there April 18, 1800. He resided in Sandwich in 1803, and soon after removed to the north part of the town of Haverhill, N. H.; received a life lease of land there beneath the shadows of the mountains, built a block house, and there lived, died, and was buried in Haverhill. His life was not a successful one, and was marred by some moral blemishes. He was married by Rev. Jacob Jewell Nov. 17, 1791, to Sarah, daughter of Daniel Moulton of Sandwich. Her life was made beautiful by the good deeds she performed, and the patience and fortitude with which she bore the many sorrows and trials which darkened her life. She died in Haverhill, N. H.

John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., March 8, 1754, and resided in Barnstead, N. H. He was early a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and by repeated enlistments was in the service the greater part of the time until his death.

Bradbury Sinkler

He was in Capt. Joseph Badger's company to re-enforce the army supposed to be at Crown Point July 23, 1776; and was a corporal in the same company and certified to Aug. 29, 1776, as a soldier in Capt. Amos Morrill's company, Col. John Stark's regiment, in the Continental Service, mustered into service July 1, 1777.

He shared in the great privations and sufferings of the American army. On the 23d of December, 1777, the army went into winter quarters at Valley Forge, about 22 miles from Philadelphia, where it remained till the following spring. The army lived in huts made of round logs, covered with earth and straw. It was during this distressing winter that this patriotic soldier of Barnstead succumbed to disease, and died in camp March 5, 1778.*

He had been married but a short time. His wife was Sarah Bunker of Barnstead, N. H. They were married by Rev. William Parsons June 26, 1777. After the death of Mr. Sinkler she was married 2d, Dec. 5, 1778, by Rev. William Parsons to Henry Tibbetts of Barnstead.

372. Lt. Richard Sinclair<sup>d</sup> [121] (Col. Richard<sup>d</sup>, Samuel<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>d</sup>, John<sup>h</sup>). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., Oct. 6, 1756, and lived in Barnstead, N. H.

Richard Sinkler

Like his father, brothers, and all his race in this country, he possessed military spirit which found abundant scope for its exercise in the Revolutionary war, which broke forth just as he had attained young manhood's estate. He was an early participant in that struggle, and was a soldier almost continually by repeated enlistments. On July 23, 1776, he became a member of the company of Capt. Joseph Badger, Jr., raised out of Col. Joseph Badger's regiment, and commanded by Col. Joshua Wingate, "to re-enforce the American Army supposed to be at Crown Point." The term of enlistment was short, and on Aug. 29, 1776, he had been again mustered into the same company raised for service in Canada. Our army having retreated from Canada, the regiment finally joined the Northern army in New York. He was a drummer in this company. In his pension papers at Washington, D. C., it is stated that he and his company marched to Ticonderoga, was stationed awhile at Mt. Independence, and that he served in that campaign six months.

He enlisted April 23, 1777, for one year, in Col. Alexander Scammell's company, in the 3d Battalion of the New Hampshire forces. He served his term and enlisted April 23, 1779, for one year in the same company in place of John Mudgett.

*Many of the details of his military experience will be found in the sketch of Maj. Samuel Sinclair, his brother, as he was in the same company and shared in the same experiences up to the time of his death.

LOUISE WATERMAN FOWLER.

When his term of service had expired, in 1780, his zeal was unabated, and he was still a valiant soldier and patriot despite the fatigues and perils of his campaigns. It was a time of great depression and gloom for the struggling patriots. The campaign of 1779 had been almost entirely barren of beneficial results to the Americans. The currency was depreciated. The winter of 1780 had been intensely cold, and the ill-clad, ill-fed, and unpaid American soldiers had endured untold sufferings. Yet the fires of patriotism glowed more brightly, and new sacrifices were promptly made. More men were needed and more men flocked to the standard.

The fortress of West Point, on the Hudson, was of vast importance to the National cause, and more troops were needed for its defence. New Hampshire raised and sent at least two regiments for its protection—that of Col. Moses Nichols, and that of Col. Thomas Bartlett of Nottingham. Richard Sinclair, Jr., enlisted as an ensign in this latter regiment June 29, 1780. He was in the company commanded by his father, Capt. Richard Sinkler, and went to West Point.

This was at an important period in the great struggle. Benedict Arnold became commander-in-chief of the fortress and plotted its betrayal into the hands of the English. Maj. John Andre, a British spy, visited him on the night of Sept. 21, 1780. He was arrested, tried as a spy, and executed Oct 2d, of that year. The traitor, Arnold, escaped to the English lines. Twenty-five days after the execution of Andre this company, in which was young Sinclair and his father, was discharged, and they returned to Barnstead.

This closed his highly honorable career as a soldier. No sooner was he relieved of his military duties than he resumed those of a progressive and public-spirited citizen. He served his town many years as a public officer. He was Selectman in 1781-'82, Surveyor of Highways in 1785, '86, '87, '88, and '91, Collector of Taxes 1783, '84, '85.

He signed a petition for the appointment of Capt. Charles Hodgdon as a Justice of the Peace Dec. 23, 1788. Was moderator of special town meetings Feb. 2, 1789, and Jan. 13, 1801.

He was chosen one of the town's committee Nov. 3, 1789, to settle the boundary lines between Barnstead and Barrington. Soon after he and others successfully petitioned for a higher tax upon the people, so that they might be enabled to build a bridge across the Suncook river. Was a juror May 3, 1794, and a member of a town's important committee March 31, 1795. On June 10, 1802, his cousin, Hon. Bradbury Cilley, bought land in Barnstead of him.

For $1000, on July 1, 1802, he sold to Charles Hodgdon of Barnstead, "all his land and real estate in the town of Barnstead, together with two pews in the Northerly Meeting House in Barnstead, adjoining the Minister's pew so called, and the other write over it in the Gallory, also all my buildings and out-houses to me belonging."

The most of his kindred had left Barnstead. His brothers were in Vermont, Maine, Pennsylvania, and New York. He had the feelings of the pioneer, the western fever was upon him, and about 1809 he left Barnstead and joined his brother, John Sinclair, who, more than ten years before, had located at or near French Creek, Penn., and which was not far distant from their brother, Samuel Sinclair of Sinclairville, N. Y. It is probable that he did not meet with the success that he anticipated, as his family did not join him.

He lived with his brother, and in 1820 left his house and started on a visit to Cincinnati. Was taken sick on the way and died in Ohio.

His wife was Elizabeth (called Betsy), daughter of Charles Hodgdon of Barnstead. They were married by Rev. William Parsons Oct. 27, 1784. She was born in Barnstead in 1762, and was a near neighbor to the Sinklers. Their home was on the Old Province Road and near her father's house. (See map of Barnstead, N. H.) She was pensioned by the government for her husband's Revolutionary services. "She was a Puritan," was much beloved, and died lamented. Her death occurred in Barnstead, N. H., in 1840, age 78 years.

Having inherited a large amount of military spirit, it was early developed, and found abundant room for its exercise in the stirring times in which he lived. He gave the best of his life to arduous military service in the cause of his country. He enlisted early from Barnstead, as a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and served a portion of the time in the same company and regiment with his brothers.

He was a member of the company of Capt. Joseph Badger, Jr., raised out of the regiment of militia commanded by Col. Joseph Badger, which was the 10th New Hampshire. This company was mustered into service July 23, 1776. The regiment, of which this company was a part, was under Col. Joshua Wingate of Stratham, N. H., and was raised to re-enforce the American was mustered into the same company as a fifer. This force was destined for service in Canada, but our army having retreated, it joined the American forces in New York. The terms of enlistment at the beginning of the war were often of short duration.

In his pension papers, now on file in the Pension Office in Washington, D. C., he says that he was a nephew of Col. Joseph Cilley, and was attached to his person.

His bounty as a Continental soldier from Barnstead, was £27 13s 6d.
He enlisted into the Continental army in Capt. Amos Morrill's company, Col. Joseph Cilley's regiment, and served from June 20, 1777, to June 20, 1780, and was honorably discharged at West Point, N. Y. This was the 1st N. H. regiment, and with the 2d and 3d
N. H. regiments formed a brigade, was stationed at Fort Ticonderoga, on Lake Champlain, under Gen. Sullivan, where it remained till July 6, when it withdrew on the approach of the British army under Gen. John Burgoyne.

He was continuously with the regiment and shared its fatiguing marches, privations, and dangers. He was, as he says in his application for a pension, in both battles at the taking of Burgoyne in Oct. 1777. He suffered while living in the rude log huts, in which the American army passed the winter from Dec. 23, 1777, till the following spring at Valley Forge. He was with the army the following season, and was in the battle of Monmouth, on June 28, 1778. It was at this engagement that Gen. Lee, who commanded the American forces, ordered a retreat and for its nearly disastrous consequences received a sharp and stunning rebuke from Washington. Under the eye and direction of the commander-in-chief, the battle recommenced and neither the day nor honor were lost.

Sinclair shared in the campaign of General Sullivan against the Indians of the Five Nations, and was in the engagement at Newtown, now Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 29, 1779.*

After his long and arduous military service in the cause of his country, he engaged actively in the pursuits of peace. He helped to develop business enterprises which had necessarily been neglected and prostrated by the nearly eight years of war.

By trade he was a carpenter, and for a time lived in his boyhood for some years. While there on Dec. 22, 1794, he married Abigail Pattee of that town. She was daughter of Capt. Ebenezer Pattee, a shipmaster, and was born Oct. 4, 1769, in Georgetown, Mass., and was "of slender constitution." They were married by Ezekiel Pattee, Esq.

Their home was afterward in Unity, Me., where he resided many years. His wife died at Bangor, Me., Dec. 5, 1847. In 1834 on the death of his nephew, Charles Grandison Sinclair, he very kindly offered to take his son, now the Hon. John G. Sinclair, and educate him, but the mother would not give up her son and the offer was declined. Immediately afterward Mr. Sinclair went West, and died in a little less than two years, Nov., 1849, at Maumee City, Ohio, where he had gone to live with his son, William Sinclair. Thus another valliant soldier of the Revolution and patriotic son of New Hampshire found a resting place in western soil.

acquired a knowledge of mechanics and a useful trade, which are so essential in the founding of new communities, and which, with frugality and steadiness of purpose, were the foundation and secret of his success in after life. The Revolutionary war was opening when he had attained his thirteenth year, and the times were propitious for the development of his love for the military profession and for active duty as a soldier in a noble cause. At the commencement of the struggle, when too young to enlist as a soldier, he attended his uncle Col. Joseph Cilley as a servant for, it is said, one year. He then served as a soldier in the 1st N. H., regiment, one of the most distinguished regiments in the service and which was successfully commanded by four celebrated colonels. Col. John Stark, the hero of Bennington, was its early commander. It was re-organized by Mr. Sinclair's uncle, Col. Joseph Cilley, one of the bravest and most efficient officers in the American army, who commanded it during four years of active and arduous service, during the most trying period of the war and in its most important marches, battles, and campaigns.

The regiment was next commanded by the accomplished Col. Alexander Scammell, at one time adjutant-general of the Continental army, and who died at Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 6, 1781. It was last commanded by Col. Henry Dearborn, subsequently secretary-of-war for eight years, and a general in the last war with Great Britain.

Mr. Sinclair enlisted for three years into this regiment, in Capt. Amos Morrill's company, June 20, 1777, and was mustered into service July 1 of that year, and was then fifteen years of age.*

He was with the regiment at Fort Ticonderoga when the approach of General Burgoyne compelled the Americans to evacuate. The 1st N. H. regiment struck its tents on July 6, 1777 and marched thirty miles to Castleton, Vt. During five rainy days, the regiment continued its march to the Hudson river, being without shelter and suffering greatly for provisions. On Sept. 19, 1777, the regiment led by Colonel Cilley rendered most distinguished service in the first battle of Stillwater or Bemus's Heights. Bancroft in his account of the battle speaks highly of this regiment. In the second battle, called the Battle of Saratoga, Oct. 7, 1777, Colonel Cilley and his regiment rendered still more valiant service, and it was upon this ensanguined field that Ebenezer Sinclair fell for his country.†

Samuel Sinclair often described the awful silence that prevailed as the New Hampshire troops moved steadily up the slope toward the British grenadiers, who stood in bold relief with their bayonets glistening in the sun. His position was in the center of the company and in the front rank. The first discharge of musketry passed harmlessly over the heads of the men from the Granite State, who rushed forward and carried the eminence, after one of the most desperate encounters of the war. During the conflict Colonel Cilley drove back the enemy and captured a brass twelve pounder, and the British retook it. This cannon was five times taken and retaken during the battle. It was at length retaken by the Americans, when Colonel Cilley mounted the cannon, dedicated it to the American cause, and assisting in loading it he turned it upon the retreating enemy.

Later in the battle, at the head of his regiment, Colonel Cilley marched to intercept a force of the enemy who had advanced through the woods. Mr. Sinclair heard distinctly the words of the British officer in command to "fix bayonets and charge the rebels". Colonel Cilley's clarion voice rang out so loudly his defiant reply as to be heard by the British, "That is a game that two can play at", and resolutely ordered his men to advance and charge. Then ensued a contest which drove the British from the field, and in which Colonel Cilley was slightly wounded.

Ten days later the enemy surrendered at Saratoga, and the 1st N. H. regiment moved slowly southward, and on Nov. 21st joined the army under General Washington, at Whitemarsh, thirteen miles from Philadelphia. On Dec. 13th of that year the regiment marched to Valley Forge and took up its winter quarters. They lived in log huts covered with earth and straw. The sufferings of the regiment while at this place were intense for want of proper clothing and food, and by reason of great exposure, between forty and fifty men of this regiment died during the winter and spring and early summer following its encampment at Valley Forge. Among them was Mr. Sinclair's brother, Bradbury Sinclair, who died March 5, 1778.

In June, 1778, the army moved out of its winter quarters and occupied Philadelphia, which the British had evacuated. It pursued the enemy across New Jersey and fell in with British at Monmouth, and on the 28th of June, Mr. Sinclair with the regiment participated in the battle. The day was fearfully hot. The 1st N. H. regiment left their coats and packs at Englishtown before the fight, which gave them a great advantage over the enemy, who fought in their warm coats. Mr. Sinclair said that on that day he had seen many soldiers lying beside of a stream of water dead, from drinking too much while heated, and with not a wound upon them.

After this battle the regiment marched northward with Washington's army, crossed the Hudson and camped at White Plains, where they remained until September. On the 11th of September the 1st N. H. and other regiments moved eastward. On Dec. 2d they took up winter quarters at Reading, Conn., where they remained until April 10, 1779. Then they marched to the Highlands of the Hudson, where they remained until May 9th, when they moved on to Easton, Penn., where they arrived May 18th. They continued their march to Wyoming, Penn., the scene of the Indian massacre of the previous year. On July 31st Colonel Cilley and his regiment marched with the army of General Sullivan against the Indians in western New were joined by the army of James Clinton. On the 26th the forces took up their line of march through the forests of the Indian country.

At Newtown, near Elmira, on Aug. 29th, they found a thousand or more Indians under the "Monstrous Brandt," and some two hundred whites under the two Butlers, and Johnson posted behind a breastwork which extended from the river to the hills. Poor's brigade, including Colonel Cilley's regiment, marched back of the hills in order to cross them and thus gain the rear of the enemy. As they ascended the hill they were fired upon by the Indians, who at the same moment gave a most hideous yell, which resounded through the forest and made the whole hillside seem to be covered with Indians.
The brigade reached the top of the hill under a constant fire. The Indians fled from the hilltop and breastwork and the Americans were victorious. Mr. Sinclair was in this battle as a member of Cilley's regiment. He used to relate among other incidents of the fight, that he saw a rocky place on the bank of the river, where the Indians crossed after the battle, and some canoes which they had used, which were drenched with the blood of the wounded and dead.
This circumstance is referred to, also, in Colonel Stone's life of Brandt.

In the latter years of his life Major Sinclair, when a resident of Sinclairville, often conversed with Indians who had participated in the battle. The Seneca Reservation was only a few miles distant, and parties of Indians often came to hunt and fish along the banks of the Cassadaga creek, and camped near Sinclairville. The more intelligent ones were in the habit of visiting him at his hotel, and often talked of Sullivan's march against their towns. Had this information been kept many facts of interest and importance relating to the battle would have been preserved.

After the battle the army moved forward to the Indian towns on the Genesee river, which they destroyed with their fields of corn.
The Indian country was laid waste and the army returned east, arriving at Easton, Penn., Oct. 15, 1779.

In this expedition Mr. Sinclair went as far west as Painted Post, Steuben co., New York, then regarded as a waste country. Little did he dream that in a little more than thirty years, he would push one hundred miles farther into the wilderness, and found a beautiful and thriving village. Yet such was the case. After leaving Easton the army went into winter quarters Dec. 1st at a place between Danbury and Newtown, Conn. There it remained until April 6, 1780, when he, Mr. Sinclair, was honorably discharged, and was probably at West Point, N. Y., with his regiment at the time.
He was then but eighteen years of age, and had had a remarkable experience for so young a soldier. He had seen three years of arduous service in a gallant and active regiment, under one of the most courageous officers in the army. Four of the Sinclairs were in the same company at the commencement of his three years' service.

Two had died in the service and two, himself and his brother Joshua, who had shared all his campaigns with him, were discharged the same day, and these two returned to Barnstead, N. H.

It is a remarkable fact that so many of a family or connection should be in the service. Mr. Sinclair's uncle, Col. Joseph Cilley, commanded the regiment. Perhaps a little later than his discharge his father, Capt. Richard Sinkler, and his brother, Lt. Richard Sinclair, were in Col. Thomas Bartlett's regiment and were at West Point.

The three years of service closed his active military career. He had rendered effective aid to his country, had endured hardship as a good soldier, and toward the close of his life was pensioned by the government. After his return to New Hampshire he spent some time in Barnstead and in Gilmanton, being in the latter town in 1783. He was a resident of Vassalborough, Me., in 1784, and on April 16, 1788, he purchased land there. This was on the Kennebec river, where he erected sawmills and got out masts and ship timber for market. Before 1795 he had again removed to the borders of settlement in New York and settled at Utica, intending to purchase real estate there. But real estate was rapidly enhancing in value so that he made no purchases. While at Utica he worked upon the long bridge over the Mohawk river. About 1795 he resided for a year at Cherry Valley, N. Y., which had been settled previously by people of Scotch blood from the Scotch settlements of Windham and Londouderry, N. H. He made no purchases of land there as land was too high in price, and he again "moved on." Much of Mr. Sinclair's life had been spent upon the frontier and he was accustomed to its hardships. Being an unusually strong and resolute man, familiar with the expedients of border life and skilled in all its methods, he was inclined by the habits of his life to move with the line of settlement as it extended westward.

Madison county, N. Y., lying west of Utica and Cherry Valley, prior to 1790 was an unbroken wilderness. Soon after, settlements began and Mr. Sinclair became a settler in Eaton, that county, before April 11, 1796, as he received a commission as Captain in the militia bearing that date. Subsequently, while a resident of Eaton, he was by Governor Jay commissioned as First Major of Militia and was ever after known by that title. He was a farmer while there, and owned landed estate on the Chenango river. He was a contractor for building a portion of the turnpike from Cherry Valley, N. Y., through Madison and Morrisville to Syracuse. He was owner of stock in this turnpike, and it was while fulfilling his contract that he ceased to be a citizen of Eaton. On Sept. 12, 1805, for one thousand dollars, he bought fifty-five acres of land in the village of Madison, Madison co., N. Y., and became a resident about 1806. For fourteen hundred dollars he bought, on April 30, 1807, fifty-seven more acres. He cleared this land and erected the first tavern in that village, in which he resided as long as he remained in Madison. But

and his brother Joshua, were discharged the same year.

He was the head of a family or connection with his uncle, Col. Joseph Sinclair, a little later than his discharges, and his brother, Lt. Richards, of the 1st regiment and were at the end of his military career. He endured hardship as a soldier, and was pensioned by the government for the service he spent some time in the latter town in 1783, 1784, and on April 16, 1784, on the Kennebec river, for his services in cutting and ship timber for the borders of settlements, and for his purchase real estate, and for his increasing in value so that he worked upon the long term of 1795 he resided for a year in a town settled previously by the purchases of Windham and others of land there as land was sold to him. "Much of Mr. Sinclair and he was accustomed to be a bold and resolute man, familiar with all its methods, and he moved with the line of

He was a contractor for the town of Cherry Valley, N. Y., and he was owner of the land upon which his contract that he made in 1805, for one thousand acres in the village of Madison about 1806. For the year 1807, fifty-seven dollars was the first tavern in that town in Madison. But now the rich and fertile region of western New York, known as the Holland Purchase, came into market. Where now are several large cities, fifty villages, and half a million inhabitants, was then a dense wilderness of magnificent forest trees, unbroken except by the rivers and lakes, and here and there, at wide intervals, by the clearings that had been commenced by the early settlers.

The land of the Holland Purchase was offered for sale at twenty shillings per acre, while its price in Madison and the eastern counties of the state was much higher. Mr. Sinclair saw that his large family of boys in a few years would demand a wider field for their employment than his narrow possessions at Madisonville afforded. For these reasons, and a natural partiality for pioneer life, he was led to seek a home still farther in the West. Accordingly, about 1808, Mr. Sinclair journeyed through the new and unsettled region of the West to French Creek; in north-western Pennsylvania, to where his brother, John Sinclair, resided, and there purchased lands, after which he returned to Madison county. In 1809 he again travelled through the wilderness to French Creek, intending to prepare for a residence there. Finding his title to the land at French Creek to be doubtful he sold his interest in it, and in the fall of 1809 commenced his journey back to Madison. On his way he stopped at the land office at Batavia, N. Y., with a view of obtaining land at some isolated part for a mill site, somewhere within the limits of the Holland Purchase. He looked over the minutes of surveys and maps of the Holland Land Company with Joseph Ellicott, and without having personally visited the locality he determined from the height of the adjacent hills and the narrowness of the chasms through which a mill stream flowed, where it was intersected by one of the lot lines, that lot 41 (now Sinclairville), in the 4th township and 11th range of the Holland Land Company's land (now Charlotte), was the location desired, and accordingly he took an article of the whole of lot 41, consisting of 360 acres and which includes the principal part of the village of Sinclairville, and also all of lot 63, in the town of Gerry, and either then or a little later a portion of lots 64 and 65 in Gerry, and all of lot 28 in Charlotte, in all 1530 acres. He agreed to pay for these lands at the rate of twenty shillings per acre. He then returned to Madison county.

Upon Mr. Sinclair's return to Madison county he formed a partnership with William Berry of that county in the enterprise of settling and building mills upon the lands he had selected.

At the beginning of the year 1809 the whole population of Chautauque county was scarcely two thousand souls. A wilderness covered its entire extent, broken only by the improvements that the few settlers had made, which consisted of isolated clearings, each generally of a few acres in extent, scattered at long intervals from the Cattaraugus creek to the Pennsylvania line, and nearly all of them within four or five miles of the shore of Lake Erie. Settlement had been made at Mayville, and a few settlers had established themselves upon the shores of Chatauqua Lake, and along Chatauqua Outlet and Conewango creek. The streams through the county were unbridged; the roads were but wilderness paths, little better than Indian trails. As yet no one had ventured to break away from the settlements that were slowly gathering in the northern and more acceptable parts of the county, to penetrate into the woods that then covered its interior. In April, 1809, was commenced a small settlement south of the ridge in the northwestern part of the town of Charlotte; and one a little later in the same season at Charlotte Centre.

Mr. Berry, in pursuance of the arrangement he had made with Major Sinclair, came to Chatauqua county in November of that year and pushed four miles further into the woods south of the Pickett settlement, three miles beyond Charlotte Centre, to the land selected by Mr. Sinclair, and in three days erected the body of a log house; and then Berry, the same fall, returned to Madison county.

Late in the day in the month of March, 1810, Mr. Sinclair, and his son John, and his hired men, and William Berry and his wife, and two children, arrived at the log house built the fall before. They shoveled away the snow from a large birch log and built a rousing fire against it. They then constructed a wigwam, and placed in it and over it plenty of hemlock brush, and, notwithstanding the snow was quite deep, passed a comfortable, yet novel, night. This wigwam they occupied for two days and nights until the log houses were sufficiently prepared to be occupied. The house was the first built in Sinclairville. In it the first schools and first religious meeting of the town were held. During the summer Major Sinclair erected a saw-mill. He then returned to Madison county. Sept. 19, 1810, Major Sinclair, his wife, and family, consisting in all of ten persons, left Madison for Chatauqua county. The family and their goods were carried in five covered wagons, with water pails and tar buckets dangling from their axletrees. They passed over the Cherry Valley turnpike, a leading highway of travel in those days. They crossed the Cayuga lake in a ferry-boat, and traveled over bad roads to Buffalo, then a small settlement of thirty or forty houses and less than two hundred inhabitants. This was before it was burned by the British. From Buffalo they followed the shore of the lake to Cattaraugus creek, passing around the "points" or capes that extend into it. They arrived at Richard William's log tavern in Canadaway, now Fredonia, Oct. 10, 1810. They stopped on their way to measure the great walnut tree at Silver creek, and to view the burning springs at Fredonia. At Fredonia the family remained a week, until a woods road could be cut, by men employed by Mr. Sinclair, fifteen miles through an almost unbroken forest to Sinclairville. This was the first wagon road constructed into the central part of the county. When the road was completed the family resumed its journey and arrived at Sinclairville Oct. 22, 1810. The members of his family, that so came with him from Madison, consisted of his children, Samuel, David, Joseph, Sally, and Nancy Sinclair; his second wife, Fanny, and her first children, Obed, John M., and Fanny Edson. They moved into the log house. Three or four weeks later Mr. Sinclair moved his family into a frame house, afterwards the village tavern, that he caused to be constructed and which was then just completed. These two houses and the sawmill, which Mr. Sinclair built, formed the nucleus for the village, and were all the buildings erected that year. Major Sinclair and his family, and hired help, consisting of twenty persons, remained there during the winter and spring of 1810 and 1811. The cows and oxen that Mr. Sinclair brought with him lived during that winter upon the twigs and the herbage that grew in the adjacent woods, and the deer browsed with them along the borders of the little clearing that had been made. Mr. Berry had dissolved his partnership with Mr. Sinclair, and returned with his family, in the fall of 1810, to Madison county.

In 1811 Mr. Sinclair built a frame gristmill. That year the 4th of July was duly observed, and Mr. Sinclair entertained all the people that could be gathered at a dinner prepared by him. So many actual settlers had taken up land by the close of 1811, in the central part of the county, that a new town was organized on the 1st of June, 1812. It was twelve miles square, and composed of four of the present towns of the county, including the town of Charlotte. At a meeting held at the house of Othello Church for the purpose of giving it a name many favored calling it Sinclair, after Major Sinclair, but it was finally decided to name it Gerry, after Elbridge Gerry, who was that fall elected Vice-President of the United States. At the first town-meeting of his town, held in April, 1813, Mr. Sinclair was elected its first supervisor. He was subsequently repeatedly elected, and served in all six terms as supervisor of the old town of Gerry.

After its first settlement, and until the last war with England, Sinclairville and the adjacent country rapidly increased in population. During the war it steadily decreased. A few settlers came but more went away; some on account of apprehended danger from the Indians, and others to go onto the lines as soldiers and camp-followers. The return of peace did not bring prosperity or increase of the population. The progress of the settlement was slow until the completion of the Erie canal, in 1825, when business revived, and the population again rapidly increased. During all these years, until his death in 1827, Major Sinclair was the leading and most influential citizen of the central part of the county. He brought with him $6000 or $7000, a very large sum for that early day, which he expended in erecting mills and dwellings, and laying the foundation of the village which he had commenced. He was active in furthering the settlement of this part of the county. He drew hither many strangers and assisted them in selecting locations, erecting log houses, and starting them in their new homes. He possessed great physical strength and resolution, and was a natural leader among his fellow men. His integrity and sense of justice, his good judgment and experience in frontier life, made him a much respected and influential citizen in his part of the county.

Judge James Prendergast was in those days the leading citizen in the south part of the county. Major Sinclair became the founder of Sinclairville about the same time that Judge Prendergast founded Jamestown. They often served upon the board of supervisors together, and were personal as well as political friends.

The settlement of Sinclairville was commenced a little before that of Jamestown. The former in the early spring, and the latter in the fall of 1810. Sinclairville continued thereafter to be the principal settlement between Jamestown and Fredonia and in the central part of the county, and Mr. Sinclair until his death was its principal citizen. It was designated in the life time of Mr. Sinclair as the "Major's" or "Major Sinclair's." At his decease in 1827, by common consent, it began to be called Sinclairville.

Lapse of years did not efface the memories of the war of Independence and of his experience as a youthful soldier, yet Major Sinclair had few words for his own achievement. He had great contempt for one that would boast of his own exploits. He took pleasure, however, to have his comrades, the soldiers of the Revolution, of whom there remained quite a number, visit him at his tavern, where they often gathered to relate their experience and recount their adventures.

LaFayette, in his tour through the United States, passed through Chautauqua county, and arrived at Fredonia June 4th, 1825, where the people had gathered in great numbers to welcome and honor him. His arrival was at night, and the village was brilliantly illuminated. He sat down to an entertainment prepared with much taste for a frontier village. He first received the ladies and citizens, and finally the soldiers of the Revolution. After remaining several hours at Fredonia he was escorted by the military, and followed by a large concourse of ladies and citizens in carriages and on horseback, to Dunkirk, where he embarked amid firing of cannon and other demonstrations upon the steam barge Superior, for Buffalo. The Revolutionary soldiers in considerable numbers came to greet him. Among their number was Major Sinclair, who filled an important part on that occasion.

Mr. Sinclair was made a Master Mason in Madison county about the year 1805 or 1806, and subsequently a Royal Arch Mason. The lodge of which he was a member was held at his inn in Madison, county village. It is related that in April, 1807, Hitchcock who was a Master Mason, and a member of that lodge, murdered his wife by poison. That she was buried before the fact was known. That at the urgent request of Major Sinclair a committee was appointed by the lodge for the purpose of thoroughly investigating the grounds for the suspicion that began to exist against him. The vigilance of the lodge resulted in the arrest of Hitchcock, his trial, conviction, and execution.

In 1823 Sylvan lodge of Sinclairville was organized with Major Sinclair as its Master. He was succeeded by James Schoffield, the grandfather of Lt.-Gen. John McAllister Schoffield, whose birthplace was within a few rods of the corporation boundary of the village.

By reason of the Anti-Masonic feeling existing in western New York, the lodge in a few years was compelled to surrender its charter. Major Sinclair died Feb. 8, 1827, and was buried with Masonic honors. All the members of the order there, and many leading members from abroad, were present at his burial, notwithstanding this occurred when the excitement against Masonry was at its height, the esteem for Major Sinclair was such, and the ceremonies were so conducted, as to cause them to be well received, and to leave a favorable impression upon those present. Respect for Major Sinclair drew many to the funeral. He was buried upon ground which he had himself donated to the public for burial purposes, and which afterwards grew into a most beautiful cemetery. His grave there occupies a conspicuous place, and is marked by a headstone cut from the native stone of the county, appropriately and gracefully carved and lettered.

Major Sinclair was described by a citizen of an adjoining town, who knew him well, as having a commanding presence, being six feet high, with a well balanced head, black hair and eyes, a well formed nose, a round chin, full lips, and a mouth of medium size, weight about 225 pounds. His voice was full and loud and when he spoke always commanded attention. His utterance was rapid, but always to the purpose. His face was fair and full, and in the prime of life he was a perfect man in form and feature. He possessed great strength and resolution, and was a natural leader among his fellows. He was one of nature's noblemen and his children, both by his first wife and the second, inherited largely of his physical, moral, and mental qualities. In politics Major Sinclair was a Federalist. He was a Revolutionary pensioner. His long familiarity and rough experience in frontier life, his integrity and sound judgment, made him a respected and influential citizen, and enabled him to contribute much to the settlement of that part of the county. He drew hither many early settlers, assisted them in selecting locations, in raising their log cabins, and starting them in their wilderness homes.

He married at Vassalboro', Me., Feb. 8, 1785, Sally Perkins, who was born May 19, 1768, and died in Eaton, N. Y., May 14, 1804, and was buried there; and she was the mother of ten children. He married 2d, March 14, 1805, Mrs. Fanny (Bigalow) Edson*.

*For the main facts, and oftentimes the language in the sketch of Major Sinclair, and all of the historical matter relating to Sinclairville, N. Y., I am indebted to Hon. Obed Edson of Sinclairville, a thorough historian, writer, and investigator, who placed all of his valuable memoranda relating to Major Sinclair and his descendants at my disposal.

THE EDSONS.

March 14, 1805, in the town of Eaton, Madison co., N. Y., Mr. Sinclair was married to Fanny, the widow of Obed Edson. Her maiden name was Fanny Bigalow, a daughter of Elisha Bigalow, a soldier in the Revowho was, by her 2d marriage, the mother of seven children. She died at Sinclairville, N. Y., Jan. 12, 1852. He died there Feb. 8, 1827. His funeral was attended by almost the entire population, for the town had lost its most respected citizen. The exercises were conducted according to the Masonic ritual. Sixty years have passed away since the death of Major Sinclair, yet his memory is held in much respect and the incidents of his life and the circumstances of the settlement he founded are fresh in the memories of the people. In the charming village of Sinclairville, on an elevated plateau, is the Evergreen cemetery. The protecting hills surround it, adown a sharp, steep wooded declivity of more than a hundred feet, at one of its sides, a river rushes madly along, and its turbulent waters chant continually the requiem of the dead. In that cemetery, in a well marked and conspicuous place, is the grave of Maj. Samuel Sinclair. There the patriotic soldier, hardy pioneer, faithful and public spirited citizen rests till the great awakening.

Engraved upon the top of his tombstone is the open Bible, with the square and compass and other Masonic emblems, and beneath is this inscription;

"How lov'd, how valu'd once avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of Dust alone remains of thee,
'T is all thou art, and all the proud shall be."

lution. She was born at Colchester, Conn., April 7, 1777, and died in Sinclairville, Jan. 12, 1852. She married Obed Edson in Otsego co., N. Y. He was a descendant of the fifth generation of Samuel Edson, who was born in England in 1612, came to Salem, Mass., in 1638 or 1639, and afterwards became an original proprietor and first settler of Bridgewater, Plymouth co., Mass. Obed Edson died in Eaton, Madison co., N. Y., 1804.

The children of Obed and Fanny Edson were:

(1.) Obed, who was born in Otsego co., N. Y., Sept. 11, 1796, was a member of the legislature of Pa.; a canal receiver at Johnstown, Pa.; at one time a judge of Warren co., Pa., and later of Pulaski co., Ill. He died at Villa Bridge, Ill., Sept. 9, 1877.

(2.) John M. Edson, who was born at Eaton, N. Y., July 30, 1801, came with the family of Major Sinclair to Sinclairville, N. Y., in 1810. He was prominent among the early settlers of that locality. He became a judge, and held other prominent public positions, and was until his decease a leading and much respected citizen of Chautauqua county. His relationship and intimate acquaintance with Major Sinclair made him familiar with his history. From him the principal facts of Mr. Sinclair's life have been obtained. Mr. Edson died in Sinclairville, Aug. 21, 1885.

Hon. Obed Edson of Sinclairville is his son. Mr. Edson was born Sinclairville, Feb. 18, 1832; admitted to the bar April 8, 1853. He is a prominent lawyer; was a member of the Assembly of New York in 1874, and is a highly respected citizen. He is greatly interested in antiquarian researches; has prepared valuable historical matter for the press, and it is to him that I am greatly indebted for much of the valuable history of Major Samuel Sinclair and his descendants. He married May 11, 1859, Emily A., daughter of Hon. C. J. Allen, at one time mayor of New London, Conn.; she was born in New London, Conn., Nov. 27, 1835; she is an intelligent, and interesting lady, and devoted wife and mother. Their children are:

1. Fanny A. Edson, b. April 28, 1860; m. John A. Love; res. in Sinclairville, N. Y.
2. John M. Edson, b. Sept. 29, 1861; editor; res. Salome, Washington.

John Sinclair

He was born in Gilmanston, N. H., Jan. 13, 1763. Went to Barnstead, in the same state, with his parents when four years of age. On March 11, 1788, he received a deed of a one-hundred acre lot with a sawmill, it being lot 98, 2d division, from his father, "in consideration of love and good will that I bear to him." He sold one-eighth part of Sinclair's sawmill in Barnstead October, 1791. Barnstead was his home in 1792. During this time he had temporarily been a resident of Maine, and was probably associated in business at Vassalboro' with his brother, Maj. Samuel Sinclair, later of Sinclairville, N. Y. He married May 13, 1785, Abigail Clark, born in Hallowell, Me., July 31, 1768. At the age of thirty years, in 1793, he located in Danville, Vt., then a comparatively new place, and where others of his family also lived. By trade he was a ship-builder and millwright, and so was drawn to new settlements where mills were to be erected and operated and lumber made suitable for human use. In Danville, Vt., he lived till about 1799, when he lived at Black River, Jefferson co., N. Y., which is south of Utica and near Watertown. In 1803 he was living at Harbor Creek, Penn., near Erie, where his stay was short. In 1805 he was a resident of Rockdale, Penn., which was his home for a number of years. Then he located in Perry, Ohio, and owned the farm in 1889 the property of Mrs. Lucy Coolidge.

In his old age he followed his children to new settlements in the West. His death occurred Nov. 4, 1845, of consumption, at Frederick, Ill. Mrs. Sinclair died of bilious fever a Calhoun, Ill., Aug. 22, 1838.

Mr. Sinclair was large in size, rather more than medium in height. His complexion was dark, with black hair and eyes. His mental qualities were acute, and he possessed fine feelings and a generous heart.

distant from the pleasing and interesting locality, known as Danville Green. That was his home until 1826, when he located in the neighboring town of Peacham, Vt., and two years later, 1828, he and his family returned to Perry, Lake co., Ohio, where his brother John had previously located.

He lived on a farm on the North Ridge, owned in 1889, by Henry and John Childs, and occupied by Leo Parmley. This he deeded to his son, Milton Sinclair, with whom he died. He was a visitor at his old home in Danville, Vt., Oct. 21, 1839. He was an ardent Whig in politics. He was an industrious, honest man, and acquired considerable property. In his mental movement he was quick at a retort, sharp and incisive in statement, and had much genuine wit. In physique he was 5 ft. 10½ in. in height, weighed 150 pounds, had auburn hair and fair complexion. He was strong, very muscular, and could endure great hardships. He died in his 80th year, May 12, 1845, and at Perry is buried at the village cemetery, that beautiful "City of the Dead."

The name of his wife previous to marriage was Olive Colbath, daughter of Benjamin and Polly (Bickford) Colbath.* She was born Aug. 6, 1766, and died in Perry, Ohio, Oct. 20, 1838, at 72 yrs. 2 mos. 14 days. They were married in Barnstead, N. H., Jan. 15, 1789. She rests beside her husband in the cemetery in Perry, Ohio, and on the tombstone above her are these words:

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth: Yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."—Rev. xiv, 13.

432. David Sinclair<sup>a</sup> [128] (Col. Richard<sup>a</sup>, Samuel<sup>a</sup>, John<sup>a</sup>, John<sup>a</sup>). He was born at Barnstead, N. H., Jan. 3, 1770. His early years were spent in Barnstead and vicinity, then he followed relatives to Vermont and located in Danville, March 4, 1796, where he lived till about 1816, when he moved to the state of New York. He moved to Leroy, Genesee co., N. Y., in 1816, resided there a year and a half and located in Perry, Lake co., Ohio, in 1818, where he ended his days. He once started to visit his brother, Maj. Samuel Sinclair, at Sinclairville, N. Y., and went as far as Westfield, when the wildness of the country impressed him so unfavorably that he turned about in disgust and went in another direction saying that "Samuel would starve to death in such a detestable country." It was then a dense wilderness, heavily wooded, with no openings save Indian trails, an occasional road, and the rushing rivers which flowed through the primeval forests.

After locating in Perry, Ohio, he kept a hotel, and owned a large farm. He was a fine marksman, a great hunter, kept hounds, and many were the deer that he successfully hunted. When above eighty years of age he would follow a fox all day, and usually with success. In personal appearance he was a tall, large, bony, and muscular man, and of great strength, resolution, and fortitude. He was prompt in business and honorable in his dealings with his fellows, and blunt and brusque in his manners. His death occurred in Perry, Ohio., May 20, 1853, aged 83 yrs., and he is buried in the attractive cemetery in that town.

His wife was Sally Batchelder of Barnstead, N. H., where she was born March 12, 1775. They lived in Barnstead till 1794, and they were married in that town Feb. 5, 1795. Mrs. Sinclair was an excellent woman, a member of the church, and performed with fidelity the duties of her life. She died in Perry, Sept. 27, 1849, aged 75 yrs.

books, and a retentive memory, and became conversant with every volume in the district and town libraries to which he had access, and ancient and modern history found in him an apt student.

It was a Presbyterian community and the catechism was early committed to memory, and the Sabbath was observed with great rigidity. If a person was absent from church, the sharp nosed deacon usually called upon the delinquent on Monday morning, and if aught but sickness occasioned his absence a severe reprimand was given, and a promise required that the offence would not be repeated.

His twenty-first birthday came at length, and donning his "freedom suit", and taking the usual one hundred dollars, he and his brother Asa started for the then West. Stopping only a short time at Sackett's Harbor, he then went to Concord, Erie co., N. Y., purchased a farm, upon which he worked in the summer seasons, and taught school in the winters. He then became a blacksmith. Meanwhile, on the 9th of December, 1816, he married Huldah Townsend, who was born in New Salem, Mass., Dec. 15, 1797*.

With her he set sail upon the sometime uncertain sea of matrimonial life, but a prosperous voyage awaited them. There their children were born and all were educated for teachers. After a thirty-three years' residence in New York he was struck with the western fever and again emigrated, this time to Hartland, McHenry co., Ill., and employed himself as a farmer and mechanic, where he lived eighteen years, also in Revere, Iowa. In 1863, being no longer able to perform any kind of labor, and wishing to be with his only son, he joined him at Hampton, Franklin co., Iowa, where he died ten years later, April 3, 1873, and is resting in the pleasant cemetery in that town. He was always deeply interested in national affairs, was a Whig, and then a Republican in politics. Mrs. Sinclair lived in New Salem, Mass., till she was fifteen years of age, when she accompanied her parents to Erie co., N. Y. After her marriage her interests were always in her home, and she was ever faithful to her duty. In every cloud which darkened her pathway she looked for the "silver lining." She has outlived the most of her kindred, and at the age of ninety-one is in good health, well preserved, and, in full possession of her mental powers, she bids fair to be a centenarian. For the most of her life she has been a member of the Baptist church, and religion has brightened all the way.

Mr. Sinclair was a joiner by trade. He married in Rochester, N. Y., Rebecca Page, who died in Barre, N. Y., July 6, 1831, aged 39 years. He married 2d, in Barre, Polly daughter of Solomon and granddaughter of Solomon Bragg. In 1833 he changed his residence to Petersburg, Monroe co., Mich., where he purchased a farm upon which he lived until 1843, when he sold it and removed to Rollin, Lenawee co., four miles from Hudson, and near Adrian, Mich.; purchased a farm, and resided upon it till his death March 18, 1848, leaving his wife with seven children. Mr. Sinclair was generous and ever ready to assist the poor and the unfortunate. He was a Democrat in politics and a Universalist in his religious faith. He was good looking, of medium size, with light complexion and blue eyes.

Mrs. Sinclair survived her husband exactly eight years. The last portion of her life was spent with her married daughter, Mrs. Polly Hodges. She died at Rollin, Mich., March 18, 1856. Two of the children by Mr. Sinclair's first marriage died nameless.

Early in life he struck for the frontier. He landed at Owl's Head, South Thomaston, Me., Dec. 25, 1803. That was then a new country. He was by trade a joiner, and was engaged in the erection of buildings in Thomaston, Warren, and Union, Me. His brother had settled in Freedom, and Mr. St. Clair bought 96 acres of wild land in Union, Me., some twenty miles east of his brother's home. He built a log house some forty rods distant from the framed house which stood, in 1889, upon the old homestead, and which is occupied by Mrs. Erastus St. Clair. His tenement stood on the sloping side of a hill near its summit, and he soon had a well tilled farm. The land was good and brought forth abundant harvests, and prosperity attended the early settler. The scenery from his abode was fine indeed. On the east were the sharp jutting outlines of Ragget mountain; in the southeast was Pleasant mountain; Meadow mountain in the south; Crawford's Pond, in the southwest, lay shimmering in the sunlight; while in the west, sections of Montville and Appleton were plainly visible.

He cleared his land from the wilderness and wild beasts were numerous. Mrs. St. Clair often frightened the bears from the field as they were breaking down the corn. They often prowled about the house and made raids upon the pens which protected their hogs. He and his wife were devoted christians, members of the Baptist church, and attended church at East Union. "The St. Clair path," which meanders over the hill, still marks the way they trod in going to the house of worship.

He married Sally Wiggin of Stratham, N. H., a sister of George Wiggin of that town. She was born there Sept. 18, 1778, and died Jan. 5, 1868, aged 90 years. He died in South Thomaston, Me., June 25, 1858.

He was dark complexioned, had black hair and eyes, was six feet and one inch in height, and weighed 190 pounds.

507. Thomas Sinclair<sup>6</sup> [144] (Thomas<sup>6</sup>, Thomas<sup>6</sup>, Joseph<sup>6</sup>, James<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>6</sup>). He was born in Meredith, N. H., Dec. 27, 1778. With his brother he early went to Beaver Hill Plantation, afterward Freedom, Me. Was there in 1806, and his name is affixed to the town records in 1813, and there his family names are recorded. He resided in that town until the spring of 1824, when he removed to Dover, Me., going there upon horseback. Dover was at that time a wilderness. Mr. Sinclair at first lived in a log hut, and cleared his farm from its primeval state. He was a man of high character, a consistent and influential member of the Calvinist Baptist church. In politics he was a Whig. He married his own cousin, Polly Robinson, whose mother was a Miss Mead, a sister to his own mother. He died in Dover, Me., July 3, 1844. Mrs. Sinclair was in many respects a remarkable person. In stature she was small, with black eyes; was very active, and had large executive ability, and was a good business manager. She was left with a large farm, and a large family dependent upon her. Four of her children became cripples as they arrived at maturity, and some of them became entirely helpless and continued so for more than twenty-five years. They never complained, and, though entirely dependent, yet the light from a brighter shore illuminated the darkness of their way. They were devoted christians and looked forward to an entrance to that land

And never know death any more."

They were well educated; were teachers; and one was a preacher.

Mrs. Sinclair, with true heroism, bore her heavy burdens till at length her slender frame gave way and they bore her to her rest. She died April 22, 1853. She was born in Meredith, N. H., Dec. 27, 1786. After this event, so sad to her family, their house took fire and, with its contents, was entirely consumed, the members of the family barely escaping with their lives. The eldest daughter, Hannah, who was helpless, saw the fire kindling over her head but was unable to arouse the family. When discovered the clothes of her bed were afire and she was barely saved from a horrible death.

He lived on a portion of his father's homestead. He was a shoemaker. He died suddenly April 15, 1815, aged 32 yrs. 6 mos. 28 days. His wife was Nancy Dow, a native of Meredith, who administered upon his estate, being appointed June 19, 1815.

CHILD BORN MEREDITH, N. H.

528. Thomas Sinclair<sup>7</sup> [1320], b. August, 1807; m. Caroline A. Tracy; res. Brighton, Mass., and died March 17, 1883.

529. Joseph Sinclair<sup>8</sup> [147] (Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>5</sup>, James<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Meredith, N. H., Sept. 17, 1795. In personal appearance he was tall and commanding, and his countenance had a decidedly intellectual cast. His height was six feet and an inch; his weight 250 lbs. By nature generous, he was kind in his treatment of all. Was a careful and successful business manager and increased steadily in property.

Was a farmer, but had good mechanical abilities and with his own hands manufactured all the carts, wagons, and such wooden machinery as was used upon his farm.

He was a great reader, being well informed upon general topics, and quite decided in his convictions. In politics he was a Jacksonian Democrat, but in the latter part of his life was inclined to Abolitionism. This was when slavery was casting its baleful influence over the Republic, and the slave-power had become dominant and domineering.

He was a religious man and contributed generously to sustain the institutions of religion. His family were well cared for; his children taught the proper way in which to walk life's pathway. In his family the Scriptures were daily read, and prayers were daily offered.

There was a sparkle of genuine wit about him, and he was mirthful and loved a joke. This anecdote is related of him:

He was accustomed to take his farm products to the city to sell. Once, while returning in mid-winter, when the fierce winds of this New England season had blown the snow into great drifts, making the roads almost impassible, as he was ascending a steep hill in plain view of a house, the owner thereof started into the road with two pairs of cattle, met him in the drifts, and desired him to "get out." "I can't," said Sinclair. "Why did you come when you saw me in the drifts?" Then straightening his tall and massive form up to its full height, and assuming a threatening aspect, and in a tone of voice which fortified his personal appearance, said, "Now, Sir, if you don't 'get out' I will serve you as I did the other man back here!" The man saw that Sinclair was not to be trifled with and made great haste to get his team into the deep snow, and passed him, but shouted back, "How did you treat the other man?" "I 'got out' for him," said Sinclair.

He married March 27, 1805, Isabel, daughter of John Dockman of Meredith Neck. She was born at the Parade, in Meredith, Sept. 21, 1780. She was one eminently fitted to adorn his home, brighten his life, and bear her part in all its vicissitudes and her portion of its burdens. Was very practical. She was a great weaver and wove the nicest table linen, carpets, and fulled cloth. She spun and wove a nice suit of clothes for one of her sons when he was 21 years of age. She nearly paid for fifty acres of woodland, which her husband bought by her weaving. She was his true helpmeet. Never did she attend school but seven days. She was self-taught, had a strong mind, and a retentive memory. She was an excellent singer and a great reader. Great was her knowledge of the Bible, and large portions could she repeat. Problems in partial payments she would solve quickly and correctly in her mind. In early life she committed to memory a hymn of seventy-two verses of four lines each, which she could repeat when in her ninety-fifth year. She was totally blind for fifteen years previous to her death. At an early age she became a christian and was a bright and shining light in the church. "Her whole trust was in Christ, whom she was anxious to go and see." She died Feb. 13, 1878, aged 97 yrs. 4 mos. and 23 days.

Mr. Sinclair died of lung fever March 2, 1847, aged 61 yrs. 4 mos. 27 days. Their home was in Meredith, N. H., on the homestead of Mr. Sinclair's father.

546. James St. Clair, Jr.<sup>s</sup> [154] (James<sup>s</sup>, Thomas<sup>s</sup>, Joseph<sup>s</sup>, James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>). He was born in Sanbornton, N. H., Sept. 6, 1789, was with his parents in their homes at Hardwick and Wolcott, Vt., at Russelltown, Canada. He fled with them at the outbreak of the 1812-15 war, to the state of New York, as he would not fight against his native country. While in Canada he married March 17, 1811, Patience Matilda, daughter of Caleb and Sylvia (Knowles) Northrop, of New Milford, Conn. She was born at that place Dec. 28, 1794.
By the law of Canada all marriages were illegal unless solemnized by a clergyman of the Established Church of England. When Mr.
St. Clair and his fiancée were ready to marry they made up a party of sixteen persons, and all on horseback rode gaily over the dividing line into New York state, where in Chateaugay, Franklin co., they were married by the Episcopal service and clergyman. For a while they lived in Peru, N. Y. Before they permanently located they visited friends in Vermont, crossing Lake Champlain on the ice. On their return the ice was breaking up, great fissures were there, through which, as they traveled, the water would burst with a noise like the discharge of a cannon. Across these places their strong horses would leap drawing the sleigh after them, till at length they reached the shore. Mrs. St. Clair never forgot that ride. Its horror was stamped upon her soul. Her fatigue and terror caused an illness from which she barely survived.

Mr. St. Clair heard that there was land rich and inexpensive on the Holland Purchase, in western New York, and there he purchased land in Barre, in the part now Albion, and in the spring of 1816 he built his log house, prepared some land for cultivation, and in July brought his family from Palmyra, N. Y., to their new home. This farm was in 1892 in possession of his son, Charles Northrop St. Clair.

The Erie canal, built a few years later, flows through nearly the entire length of that farm. He was a good citizen and an honest man. He was a Whig in politics, and then a Democrat. His mental qualities were more than ordinary, was a great reader, with a retentive memory, was intelligent, and gifted in argument. His fellow citizens conferred upon him positions of trust. His mind was drawn to religious subjects. He was an active member and an elder of the Presbyterian church. In personal appearance he bore a marked resemblance to his father. His death occurred in Barre, N. Y., April 1, 1874. His wife was a member of the Episcopal church. In all of the relations of life she was faithful and kind, and discharged its duties with the greatest fidelity. She was small in stature, with health always delicate, yet she lived to an advanced age. Her hair was a dark brown, her complexion fair, and her eyes of a deep dark blue. Her death occurred March 31, 1878. She was the last of her father's family of twelve children, as Mr. St. Clair had been the last of his father's family of twelve children.

In March, 1826, he joined his brother, Noah Sinclair, in Bartlett, N. H., and in the June following engaged in the staging business, which he successfully prosecuted for many years. His route was from Ossipee to Conway, N. H., which was lengthened till he owned the entire line from Ossipee to Dover. On the introduction of railroad his business was gradually curtailed until 1872, when it was entirely relinquished, after a prosperous management of forty-five years.

He settled on a farm near the railroad station, which was ever after his home. His mind was strong and vigorous, and he was active and influential in his town; was a Republican, and for seventeen years was postmaster. He was a member of the legislature for two years, about the years 1844 and '45, being then a Whig. He died in Ossipee, N. H., Oct. 28, 1889. He married Feb. 23, 1832, Olive W. Kimball, of Wells, Me., who died May 28, 1867. He married 2d, Sept. 18, 1867, Mrs. Addie Winchell (Spencer), daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Durpin) Tasker, of Ossipee. daughter of Benjamin and Rebecca (Pike) Pease, of Meredith, N. H., who was born there Oct. 30, 1779, and died Jan. 3, 1858, in New Hampton, N. H., aged 78 yrs. 2 mos. 3 days. Mr. St. Clair died Oct. 5, 1872, aged 89 yrs. 10 mos. 24 days. He succeeded his father on the homestead farm in New Hampton, and he added greatly to his landed possessions. On the 25th of June, 1807, he purchased 280 acres of Ebenezer Smith in Meredith, a part of the 4th division of land in that town, and on March 31, 1814, he bought forty acres more of Mark Boynton of Boston, Mass., but who died in New Hampton.

He was commissioned by Gov. John Langdon as a lieutenant in the 5th company and 29th regiment of the militia, on the 17th of July, 1811, and subsequently was promoted to a captaincy. Was a Whig in political faith. He was nervous in temperament, and a successful business manager. He was of medium height, with black hair, and dark complexion, and weighed 180 lbs. Mrs. St. Clair was tall and spare, with sandy complexion, above the average in size.

were excellent. Was a great reader, and lover of music, and had rare executive abilities. She was large in stature, with a strong and robust frame.

 720. Frank Carpenter Graham<sup>r</sup>; single; res. Concord, N. H. He was a soldier of the Union, and was exceedingly anxious to participate in a battle, and complained bitterly that no fighting would ever occur where he was. His desire to be in action was at length granted. He entered the battle, when a ball struck him plump between the eyes, passed through his head, killing him instantly.

732. Winthrop St. Clair<sup>1</sup> [219] (Noah<sup>4</sup>, James<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, James<sup>1</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). Was born in Canterbury, N. H., May 7, 1802; succeeded his father upon the homestead; was very genial in his nature, fond of society, and generally liked. Was a colonel in the 3d regiment in the state militia. Was a Universalist in his religious faith, and a Democrat in politics. On March 16, 1839, he sold his farm to his brother-in-law, John Fletcher, and removed to Loudon, N. H., and bought a sawmill, in which he did business a few years. Like many of his race since his first American ancestor located in Exeter, he could not be happy unless he could hear the buzz and rattle of saws and machinery, and see the stalwart trees converted into marketable lumber. Milling business seems to have become a second nature of the Sinclairs, it seems to have run in the blood of the different branches of the family. After leaving Loudon Mr. St. Clair lived in Springfield and East Concord, and finally settled in Richmond, N. H., where he died June 15, 1874. He married Sept. 1, 1834, Martha Maxfield, of Loudon, an excellent woman, kind to all in sickness or in health, who died at Richmond, N. H., May 24, 1883. She was born in Loudon, N. H., Jan. 7, 1815.

H., Jan. 10, 1795; married March, 1820, John Cook of that town, where he was born Jan. 10, 1795; farmer. They lived in Lanark, Ill., for a time, then returned to Sandwich, living near the Centre, where he died June 6, 1887. He was interested in public affairs, was a Republican in politics, and member of the legislature in 1859 and '60. She still lives (1888) at the great age of 93 years.

* Anecdote told by Jonathan Page Moulton of Sandwich, N. H., in 1888, when he was in his 91st year.

Barnstead; born there Dec. 13, 1785. She was a woman of an iron constitution, of a strong mind and sound judgment. She experienced religion and united with the 1st Congregational church in Barnstead, under the ministry of Rev. Enos George. At the time of her decease she was a member of the 2d Congregational church.
Her last end was peace; she said, "I do not fear to die. Death has lost its terrors. My only hope is God. He has been very good to me. Christ is all my hope." She died in Barnstead, March 29, 1870, aged 80 yrs. 10 mos. 17 days. He died Sept. 14, 1861.

935. Charles Grandison Sinclair* [375] (Lieut. Richard?, Col. Richard?, Samuel?, John?, John?). He was born in Barnstead, N. H., May 4, 1793. Descended as he was from warlike ancestors in the New World and the Old, he came naturally by his inherited military spirit. He took a deep interest in the second war with Great Britain, and entered the military service of his country. He was enlisted at Portsmouth, N. H., July 5, 1814, by Lieut. Daniel Henderson, into Capt. P. Lovering's company, 21st regiment, Regular Infantry, where he was made a corporal. From Feb. 28 to May 15, 1815, his name is on the muster rolls of Capt. M. Marston's company, and he was called Sergeant. He was in a detachment of troops under command of Lieut. James Pratt of the 21st regiment, which crossed from Buffalo to Fort Erie, Upper Canada, and joined the American army under Gen. Jacob Brown. Having been at this locality for some time, where he was clerk for General Ripley, he was impatient for active service, and on the 17th of Sept., 1815, while a member of Captain Bradford's company, he participated in the desperate fight with the English called the "Sortie", where he was severely wounded by a musket ball in the right shoulder and was taken from the field to the hospital. Upon his partial recovery he was transferred to Capt. Morrill Marston's company where he remained till the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged. For his wounds and valiant service he secured a pension from the government which commenced Feb. 23, 1830. After the war he became a trader at Barnstead Parade.

Mr. Sinclair was a man of remarkably fine personal appearance; five feet and ten inches in height, and in health weighing about one hundred and sixty-five pounds. His military service gave him an erect carriage, and his appearance was that of an athlete, while his fair complexion, blue eyes, and light brown curly hair, gave an unmistakable evidence of the Scotch race from which he came. As an equestrian he was noted, although disabled by the gun shot wound received at Fort Erie, between his right shoulder and lungs, to such an extent that it was impossible for him to raise his hand to his head, yet the old men of Barnstead still recount his exploits in subduing vicious and unmanageable steeds. He was an expert accountant and considered authority among his townsmen in drafting contracts and other legal papers.

Notwithstanding his robust physique, he died of consumption, July 18, 1834, at the early age of forty-one years, his disease being caused, in the opinion of his physicians, by the wound received in the service of his country. He married Jan. 20, 1825, Martha G., daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Giles) Norris of Barnstead, who was born there Wednesday, Sept. 12, 1798. (See Norris family.) She was of the best type of American womanhood. At the age of thirty-six years she was left a widow in destitute circumstances. The long illness of her husband, and two unfortunate suits at law in which he was involved, and which at his death were undecided, had used up their slender fortune, and though through the efforts of Hon. James Bell, then a young lawyer, these suits were won, the bankruptcy of the defendants made the victories barren of beneficial results, so that Mrs. Sinclair was left with but seventy dollars in money, and a small amount of household furniture, as the worldly substance for the maintenance of herself and her son, John G. Sinclair, then eight years of age.

To that boy and the service of God she devoted the remainder of her life. With her needle she earned their daily bread, and kept her son at school. A devoted Christian, with an unblemished life, she became a member of the Congregational church at Barnstead, then under the ministrations of that venerable, good old man, Rev. Enos George, who had taught the alphabet to her and her son. On removing to Bethlehem she united with the Methodist church, a member of which she was at her death, February, 1880.

At her death she was 81 years of age. Until 1847 her home was also the home of her son; then he married and established a home of his own of which she became a member, and remained as such till the November preceding her death, when temporarily she went into the home of Rev. Charles J. Fowler, who had married her eldest granddaughter. While there, during the absence of her son in Florida, she died, surrounded by his children.

She married Elijah Haswell. He was a farmer, and they resided in Gerry, N. Y., several years, and then went farther West. Mrs. Haswell was a resolute, energetic woman, who cared well for her own household, and was admirably fitted to battle her way in the world. It was while they lived in Gerry that a bear made a raid upon their hogpen. Mrs. Haswell heard the tumult and rushed to the rescue of her hog. She hit the bear a fearful blow on the head with the butt of her musket which killed him. She taught that bear to let other people's hogs alone. She died in Perry, Ohio.

967. John Sinclair<sup>3</sup> [390] (Maj. Samuel<sup>4</sup>, Col. Richard<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>). He was born in Vassalborough, Me., Jan. 6, 1788. In the fall of 1809 he went to Sinclairville, N. Y., and assisted in erecting the first house in that village. In March, 1810, he located there. He was a millwright, carpenter, and farmer, and assisted in building the first sawmill in Sinclairville. His military spirit was aroused at the breaking out of the 1812-15 war with Great Britain, and he enlisted as a soldier from Eaton, Madison co., N. Y., in Captain Seizer's company. After the war he became a resident of Eaton and later of Gerry, Chautauqua co., N. Y., where he died April 27, 1864, though his tombstone erroneously states that it was Nov. 25th of that year. He was very robust, short in stature, weighed about 175 pounds, with sharp black eyes, black hair, and dark complexion. He married Betsey, daughter of Philip and Hepzibah (Washburn) Lee of Madison, N. Y. She died Feb. 2, 1872, aged 82 yrs. 10 mos.

VIRTUE-ELVIRA (SINCLAIR) COLE.

Aug. 14, 1801. He in 1810 located in Gerry, N. Y., and ever after resided there. He was above the average size, of commanding form, features, and voice, with black hair and eyes, had great physical strength, was fond of manly sports, and being an accomplished marksman with the rifle was skillful as a hunter of deer, bears, and other wild animals which made their home in the forests by which he was surrounded. He was lieutenant-colonel of the 212th regiment, of the New York militia. Being a man of strict integrity, he had but few if any enemies. By occupation he was a farmer, carpenter, and millwright, and erected the first framed barn ever built in Gerry. He became widely known for his skill in constructing sawmills, and built a large number of them in his locality, in Pennsylvania, and in Canada. While attending to business at Kluzna, Penn., he was taken ill and died Oct. 22, 1848. The maiden name of his wife was Martha Bucklen, daughter of James and Martha (Aldrich) Bucklen of Gerry, Chautauqua co., N. Y., but who came from Guilford, Vt. They were married Oct. 19, 1819. She was born at Guilford, Vt., June 22, 1800, and died at Gerry, Feb. 28, 1879.

997. David Bigelow Sinclair<sup>6</sup> [400] (Maj. Samuel<sup>2</sup>, Col. Richard<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Madison, Madison co., N. Y., 1807, and died at Sinclairville, Chautauqua co., N. Y., Nov. 8, 1879. He was a man of great uprightness of character, had a rare fund of humor, and was much respected wherever he lived. Had fine mechanical abilities; was a millwright by trade and had remarkable powers in that line, and was the inventor of an improved waterwheel. Possessed great physical strength, power of endurance, and courage, was a noted marksman and hunter, and was fond of and well adapted to pioneer life. During the Indian troubles in Minnesota, at the time of the rebellion of the South, he was on the frontier. His neighbors fled from approaching trouble. He said mentally if not aloud, in regard to his house and possessions, "These are mine, there is no reason why I should leave them. If Indians or others assail me, there will be trouble." So he laid in a stock of rifles and ammunition and awaited results, but was unmolested. In politics a Democrat. He married in early life Sophronia Elliott of Sinclairville, N. Y. She was born July 11, 1811. She resided at Sinclairville in 1889. He died Oct. 8, 1879, and is buried in the Evergreen cemetery at Sinclairville, N. Y.

He was born in Sinclairville, Chautauqua co., N. Y., July 4, 1811. A large part of his life has been employed in operating different milling establishments. He relinquished this business on account of falling health, purchased a farm in Gerry, N. Y., over thirty years since, and upon this has since lived. In his prime he possessed great strength, and enjoyed athletic sports. He has been a noted hunter, an excellent marksman, and in his old age goes almost yearly to the forests of Michigan for a few days of this sport. He married Diana, daughter of Amos Ferguson of Ellery, N. Y. She died May 5, 1836, aged 25 yrs. 8 mos. 12 days. He married 2d Charlotte, daughter of Melzer Sylvester, who was born April 10, 1810; died April 3, 1880.

Y., May 20, 1813. She married at Mayville, N. Y., Jan. 22, 1836, Dr. Charles Parker. He was born April 6, 1812, in Burlington, Otsego co., N. Y.; settled in Ellery with his parents, Benjamin Parker, a native of Providence, R. I., and his mother was Mary (Davis) Parker, daughter of Ebenezer Davis, and a native of Hartford, Conn. ; was educated at Fredonia academy, and later became a physician and surgeon. He practiced his profession at Ashville, Fredonia, Jamestown, Forestville, and Panama, in Chautauqua co., N. Y. He conducted for several years a sanitarium at Forestville. His failure of health led him to abandon his profession and devote all his time and strength to his farm in Harmony (P. O. address Panama), N. Y. His wife, Mrs. Orlinda (Sinclair) Parker, was more than medium in stature, of graceful and agile step, and when young took great delight in the amusement of dancing. She was intensely sanguine in temperament; her complexion was florid, and the tint of the rose oft was upon her cheeks. Her eyes were dark, and hair was jet black and

Having a cheerful, hopeful disposition she shielded with the mantle of her charity, her erring fellow mortals, and her heart “ was soft with sympathy for all her sorrowing, struggling, sinful race.” She was reared in a pioneer settlement and her advantages for education were quite limited, yet her large share of good common sense (which is the best kind of sense), and a shrewd, keen knowledge of human nature made her always welcome in the best of society. After her father's death, which took place when she was hardly fourteen years of age, she soon relied upon herself for success and a livelihood. She learned the trade of a milliner, which she successfully followed till her marriage. Early in life her mind was called to religious subjects, and she sought and found Christ, who was the foundation of her hope of immortality and eternal life. This hope she fondly cherished, and clung to with unwavering grasp for several years before she made a public profession of religion. She united with the Baptist church, which she aided by her personal effort, and by pecuniary assistance.

Her residence after marriage was for a number of years in Mayville, then at Ashville, till her death. But few are blest with the vigor, unbroken health, and strong constitution which Mrs. Parker possessed until the winter of 1849, March 17. Then her home was destroyed by fire, and her system received a shock from which she never recovered. Her youngest son was born soon after. The strong, vigorous, athletic form gradually wasted away in the space of eighteen months. Her decline was attended with great bodily suffering and her spirit underwent painful experiences, as she felt the relentless hand of the destroyer upon her and she realized that she was fading away from her dear friends and family, for whom she so ardently cared. Shortly previous to her death, she summoned her brother, Hon. J. M. Edson of Sinclairville, and spoke to him substantially as follows: “ You see what is left of my once strong and vigorous frame. In the prospect of what is so near at hand, I have endeavored to set my house in order, and be in readiness to make a journey to an unseen realm. I have sent for you to offer you one of the brightest and most precious gems of my heart, my youngest

The offering was accepted. Her mind became settled and tranquil in the near approach of death. She committed her dear family and all she held dear and precious on earth to her loving Father's care. She yielded her soul to her Saviour, in whom she had trusted for so many years, and her death was peaceful.

She died at Ashville, N. Y., Jan. 28, 1846, and is buried on the east side of the village cemetery. Her grave is marked with a marble slab, engraved with an appropriate inscription. She was the mother of five sons, to whom were imparted strong constitutions and good mental endowments.

Dr. Parker married 2d Elizabeth Ann, daughter of John James and Tryphena (Lomiss) Atherly, an intimate friend of his first wife. She was born in Fenner, Madison co., N. Y., Aug. 24, 1824. 1088. Calvin Sinclair<sup>6</sup> [436] (David<sup>5</sup>, Col. Richard<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Danville, Vt., April 13, 1802, and settled in Perry, Ohio, when it was a wilderness. He went there with his parents, being about nine years of age. Their household goods were in covered wagons and drawn by oxen. Mr. Sinclair possessed great physical strength. When twenty years of age he fell sixty feet from a tree, struck upon his feet, was made insensible by the fall, and received such injuries that made necessary the amputation of one leg below the knee, thus making him a cripple for life. Resided Perry, Ohio. He donated the land to the Church of the Disciples on which to erect their house of worship. He married May 24, 1837, Nancy, daughter of Nehemiah and Wealthy (Jones) Gray of Perry. She was born in Ellery, Chautauqua co., N. Y., June 27, 1819. Mr. Sinclair died March 21, 1852, aged 52 years, and is buried in Perry's beautiful cemetery. An open Bible is engraved upon his tombstone, while beneath are the words of Holy Writ:

30, 1824; resided in Camden, Me.; ship carpenter and farmer. He was employed upon the homestead farm in Union, Me., till nineteen years of age. From the time he was twenty-one years of age till 1877, or thirty-three years, he was employed in the ship timbering business or as ship carpenter. First at the ship yard in Thomaston, Me., then at South Thomaston, at Camden, and in Portland, Me., and has aided in the construction of many vessels. Those at Portland were built during the great Rebellion and were gun boats for the national service. For nine winters both previous and subsequent to the war he was in Maryland and Virginia in manufacturing ship timber for the northern market, and was also at different times in various portions of Maine in the same avocation. In 1870 he purchased the "Mt. Pleasant Farm" in Camden, upon which the family moved in September of that year from Rockland, which had been their home for 20 years. His new home is pleasantly situated at the base of Mt. Pleasant, a wooded mountain. In the east the abrupt and ragged sides of Ragged mountain rise high into the sky. Near its base in plain view is Grassy Pond, a body of clear and sparkling water. In the northwest is an unobstructed view for 25 miles, and Bowlen mountain in Montville can be distinctly seen. Portions of Appleton and Union are plainly discernible, while in another direction 20 miles away, Waldoborough, Me., greets one's vision.

Since 1877 Mr. St. Clair has devoted all his time and energy to farming. In politics he takes a deep and abiding interest and is a pronounced Republican. Is intelligent, and well read upon the general topics of the day. He married Dec. 25, 1845, Leonora Helen, daughter of Col. Asa and Hannah King (Hewett) Payson of Hope, Me. She was born in that town Sept. 6, 1826, married early in life. Her life as a teacher in private schools was short. She is intelligent, active, and energetic, with much executive ability. She is an attendant and member of the Baptist church.

tation, Me. (now Freedom, Me.), before its incorporation. His early life in Dover, to which he came when young, was spent in a log hut, and on the farm which he reclaimed from a wilderness he spent his life.
His farm lay beside that of his father and that of his brother Ahira.
He was a rare man and such a one as blesses a community. He was an exemplary christian, and his deeds of kindness and affectionate words of counsel will live after him. For more than 40 years he was deacon in the Baptist church, and was one of its main supporters, being always at the post of duty. His faithful service as superintendent of the Sabbath school was greatly blest. For many years he was selectman of the town, and was a member of the Farmers' Grange, of which he was grand master. He died of pneumonia March 26, 1888, after a four days' illness of great suffering. He was greatly respected by all, and at his decease he was much lamented.
On June 23d following, memorial services were held in his honor, and his grave was decked with the sweetest flowers of all the field.
He married Sept. 17, 1834, Hannah Baxter of Vassalborough, Me., who died at South Dover, Me., Oct. 8, 1860. She was daughter of Richard and Rebecca (Priest) Baxter. She ably seconded her hus-

1333. John Langdon Sinclair<sup>r</sup> [531] (Joseph<sup>s</sup>, Thomas<sup>s</sup>, Thomas<sup>s</sup>, Joseph<sup>s</sup>, James<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>). Rev. John L. Sinclair was born in Meredith, N. H., July 10, 1809, near the "Oak Hill church," on a farm owned in 1888 by a son of Dea. Thomas Vasey. His boyhood was spent upon the farm, where he acquired habits of industry and frugality, and developed his strong constitution and stalwart frame. He desired a collegiate course, but was educated in the district school and New Hampton academy, by private instructors and private study. Was a teacher. He joined the church at Meredith, N. H., and commenced his life work as a preacher. His heart was full of love and tenderness, his exhortations were powerful, and his labors were greatly blessed. He was licensed to preach April 18, 1832. In 1833 he supplied a church in Lowell, Mass., one in Dover, N. H., in 1834, and in July, 1836, he helped organize one of fifteen members in Lynn, Mass.; was in Contoocook, N. H., in 1837, and Manchester, N. H., in the fall of 1839, and helped organize a church there in November of that year. Soon after he spent three years of labor in West Buxton, Me. He labored in several New Hampshire towns. Was five years in Sandwich, N. H.; five years at Strafford, Vt., and four years in Belmont, N. H., and again labored four years in Sandwich. This was his last pastorate, and he then removed to Lake Village, where he lived until his death.

As a financier Mr. Sinclair had few equals. He saved to give, and he loved to give. He aided students preparing for the ministry; gave $1000 to the Freewill Baptist church at Concord, N. H.; the society at Lake Village $500; Hillsdale college $1000; the Sinclair Orphanage in Balasore, Bengal, India, $1000; to Storer college he gave $10,000, and educated at his private expense a native youth in India, who took the name of his benefactor, and who now, with his wife, is a teacher at the English Bible school at Midnapoar, Bengal, India. Mr. Sinclair was tall, massive, had dark hair and complexion, and his heavy, shaggy eyebrows overshadowed a kind, benevolent face remarkable for strength, and eyes which often twinkled with mirth. He was always young and never grew old. He died at Lake Village Aug. 16, 1888, aged 79 yrs. 1 mo. 6 days, and is buried in the City cemetery, Concord, N. H.

The maiden name of Mrs. Sinclair was Olive Eastman, daughter of David and Mehitable (Hilton) Haynes of Deerfield, N. H., born there Aug. 17, 1812; married Mr. Sinclair Aug. 19, 1837. She most faithfully seconded her husband in all benevolent work; in his labor she sustained her part of the burden; bore her part of the sacrifices in their united career. With the weight of 76 years upon her, in feebleness, yet with heart filled with precious memories, she lives at Lake Village, N. H., knowing it will not be long till she joins the loved ones upon a brighter shore.

1350. Henrietta Marie (called May) Whitney<sup>o</sup>, b. Eagle Harbor, Orleans co., Y. N. The subject of this sketch showed unusual mental gifts at an early age. When three years old she could read and write, and in her ninth year wrote her first poem, "The Outcast," published in the Orleans Republican of Albion, N. Y. It attracted the attention of the editor, Mr. Calvin G. Beach, a writer of rare merit, who with his wife became greatly interested in the young aspirant, and much of her immediate success was due to the kindness of her friends, who loaned books otherwise inaccessible to her. In her tenth year she wrote "Thistledown, An Autobiography," a novel of marked dramatic power and artistic unity in construction and technique incredibly beyond a child of her age. The publication of the book was delayed by lack of money and she meanwhile began to publish in the popular newspapers and magazines, poems, stories, sermons, essays, and humorous sketches which would have been considered marvels had the age of the author been known. All were signed "Egypt," a nom de plume chosen because of the child's extreme admiration for all things Oriental or Egyptian. The New York Independent, The Chicago Advance, The Northern Christian Advocate, The Christian Leader, The Home Journal, The Rural New Yorker, The Waverly Magazine, The New York Mercury, The Ladies' Repository, of Boston, were all publishing contributions from her versatile pen before her fourteenth year ended. During this period the artistic gift began to furnish evidence, and she was soon ardently drawing and painting, at first with common house paint, as more refined pigments were beyond her reach, and the walls of her old home and birthplace are still adorned with the work of those first years of promise. Landscapes, old castles, flower pieces, portraits, and an imaginative religious work, embodying the sentiment of the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee," are among the productions shown as the work of her hands between the ages of ten and sixteen. To increase her funds and facilities for study, she taught a private school in her own village, in her thirteenth summer, and at the summer's close received a 1st grade certificate from the school commissioner, who did not know her age. The following winter she taught a country school and "boarded round" near the shore of Lake Ontario, wading through snow drifts knee high, sometimes a distance of a mile and a half to her post. So great was her success as a disciplinarian in this school that three neighboring districts offered their schools to her before the winter term ended. The big fellows whom she had conquered (as only a woman can), never dreaming that their "Little School-ma'am" was only fourteen years old. A summer of teaching followed, after which, fearing that a teacher's life was too arduous for so sensitive and delicate an organization, her friends induced her to remain at home with books, and brush, and pen. At this time through the influence of friends, Miss Willard offered the gifted girl a half free tuition in the college at Evanstown, Ill., but paternal opposition prevented her acceptance. In the same year the Le Roy Female seminary made a most generous offer of entire tuition free to the brilliant young author and artist who was already becoming known to the literary world as possessing rare gifts if not actual genius. Again parental opposition prevented acceptance. Toward the end of this year a gentleman of much culture and an agent of D. Appleton & Co., became interested in her work and offered to educate her, but the offer was refused, as was a similar one made the same year by a well-known physician of much literary ability, who included in his offer a four years' course in art study in Europe. But this proud, ambitious, self-reliant descendant of semi-royal Scandinavian and Norman ancestors, nothing daunted by poverty and obstacles, full of impassioned ardor and faith in the work she wished to do, could not brook the galling sense of obligation which such gifts entail. In her sixteenth year, with the assistance of her pen and brush, she went to Ithaca, N. Y., and became a special student there, with the best instructors and libraries at hand. The same year saw a completion of her second novel, "The Battle of Life," concerning which a well-known Washington divine said: "It has genius and power enough for twelve healthy human books." When not yet eighteen she entered the Academy of Design in New York, where she won every prize then in the hands of the society to give to a woman. With four or five companion students she helped to originate and organize the school known as the Art Students' League of New York, the most advanced art school in America, or perhaps in the world, where women may enjoy absolutely equal opportunities for study with men. She was one of this school's incorporators, and for three years one of its managers. Her health suddenly failing, she was compelled to abandon all mental pursuits and spent a year in the West, resting and regaining health. She then returned to New York to renew her art and literary work, and continued there until October, 1882, when she contracted a marriage with Nathaniel Waldo Emerson, M. D., of Boston, Mass., to which city she removed. 1887 and '88 were spent with her husband and infant son in Germany, where she again took up her literary and artistic work wholly laid aside since marriage. Some of her most valuable work was done during this period, but the limits of this sketch will not permit an extended notice of it. Returning to America in 1889, she found that her matrimonial venture had met with shipwreck, and she was compelled to secure legal freedom from an unfaithful husband. She immediately plunged into historical and genealogical research; organized and brought into working order the "Society of Sancto Claro" numbering many hundred members, of which she is secretary; entered the lecture field with two papers which have proved eminently successful on "Our Norse Discoverers," and "The Origin and History of the Norse Arvel Cup, or Holy Grail." At her instigation the St. Clair clan met in Chicago, July 17, 1893, where they commemorated the discovery of America in 893 by the kinsfolk and ancestors of the family, holding a ten-days' meeting of rare interest, with representatives from nearly every state in the Union, and from Canada, Ireland, Norway, Iceland, Denmark, Scotland, and England. Mrs. Emerson's present home is in Washington, D. C., where her time is wholly occupied with authorship. Unlike many literary women she is an adorer of woman, and is never without close intimacies with some of her sex. She is a member of nearly all the leading associations of women, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Woman's National Press Association of Washington, the Pacific Coast Woman's Press Club of San Francisco, the Art Club of Chicago, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Short Stories Club, and many others. In character she is singularly self-reliant and self-centered, yet eminently self-sacrificing; ambitious to a degree impossible to most women, yet caring little for the personal gain and notoriety usually sought for, the universal good attained by ambitious effort being her first consideration. From this quality arose the fact that she for more than twenty years wrote under no signature, and mainly without remuneration, choosing subjects which were in line with what she deemed the trend of moral progress. To abolish capital punishment; to diminish the frightful and far-reaching cruelty of the human to other animals; to place woman in a position of independence so that she need never sell herself in marriage or out of it; to give women the right to be legal guardians of their own offspring; to stimulate universal love, charity, pity, kindness, tenderness, between all animated existences; these have ever been the flaming torches of her inspiration. She is intensely proud of her ancestry, is impassioned and ardent, yet reserved in manner, except to intimates, quick to resent intended affront, quick to punish offence, unflinching and unforgiving, as a Norman's descendant might well be, yet never revengeful. An adorer of truth, she abhors hypocrisy as the chief sin of the age, and cruelty as its twin and complementary crime. Neither Orthodox nor Transcendentalist, Athelst or Spiritualist, she holds with Shelley that it is still possible to produce a millenium on earth if only one could inaugurate a reign of charity rather than of faith. She is a passionate lover of children and animals, and a firm believer in the reign of absolute law, accepting even misfortune as a part of the infinite and unerring justice of God, which should be met with courage, and endured in silence, with perfect faith in future compensation.

talent, and became an excellent performer on several instruments, and was a composer and writer of music. His mechanical skill was exhibited in the manufacture with his own hands, of violins, guitars, and violoncellos of a high order. At twenty he was captain of the Orleans Grays, one of the finest military companies in that section of country. By that title he has ever since been known. At one period of his life he owned and commanded boats on the Erie canal and running from Buffalo to New York City. He chose farming for his business and to that he devoted his life.

He married June 10, 1833, Elmina Baldwin, daughter of Joel and Elizabeth (Wood) Turrell of Pleasant Valley, Dutchess co., N. Y. The young couple built for themselves a home upon a portion of the St. Clair estate, and with bright hopes, true love, and vigorous health they entered upon their new life. At different times he left the farm and engaged in business, sometimes with success, at others with loss. Finally he settled upon the farm, and entered zealously upon the task of beautifying his home for the coming years. The observing stranger who passes along the state road one mile west of Albion, N. Y., will see a six gabled Gothic building whose sharp roof and dormer windows show most attractively above the dark green of the fir trees and the Norway pines in which it is embowered and surrounded. This is the home he built, and which he occupied. It is where his children grew to manhood, and to which they turn with loving eyes, for every tree, bush, flower, and whatever else adds a charm, was planted and tended by their parents or themselves. Within the house in later days one would hardly have recognized in the gray haired old man the once dashing athlete and captain of the Orleans Grays, nor in the smiling matron the early belle of Pleasant Valley, yet they were the same. Their faith changed not and their hearts did not grow old. The home life of Mr. St. Clair and his family was particularly pleasant and inspiring. Being passionately fond of music, he played the clarionette, each of his sons played upon some instrument, and as they played together the influence of home grew stronger. All were fond of books and the habit of reading aloud by turns each evening gave pleasure to all and made home very attractive. All of their sons were baptized in the Episcopal church and their religious training was strict, but softened and endeared by precept and example. Mr. St. Clair and his wife were members and attendants of the Episcopal church. They celebrated their golden wedding in 1883. Mr. St. Clair died in Albion of paralysis Oct. 29, and was buried in Mount Albion cemetery Nov. 1, 1893. She resides at Albion, N. Y.

1358. Caleb Northrop St. Clair<sup>7</sup> [549] (James, Jr.<sup>6</sup>, James<sup>6</sup>, Thomas<sup>6</sup>, Joseph<sup>6</sup>, James<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>6</sup>). He was born in Barre (in the portion which is now Albion), N. Y., March 23, 1818. There he received his education and grew to manhood. He was tall, handsome, straight as a southern pine, with blue eyes, light curly hair, and fair complexion. Graceful and easy in his manners, he was an entertaining companion, and fond of society; music was his delight, and often would his father find him seated beneath some shadowing tree deeply absorbed in some book of adventure or travel, and the result was that he failed to heed the strongly expressed desires of his friends to remain near them. Early in life the home fireside was forsaken by him to mingle with the jostling world, and as he said, "to have a little adventure myself." For several years there is no record of his wanderings and adventures, but later he engaged in steamboating on the Mississippi and its tributaries, with headquarters at St. Louis or New Orleans. When the war with Mexico broke out the old warlike spirit of his ancestors was aroused in him and he volunteered from New Orleans and went to Mexico and served under Gen. Zachary Taylor, and other commanders. On April 18, 1847, he was in the successful battle of Cerro Gordo, on Aug. 20, in the battles of Contreras and Cherubusco, on Sept. 8, in the action of El Molinos del Rey, on Sept. 13, he was in the successful battle at Chapultepec, which opened the gates of the Mexican capital to the American forces. He was desperately wounded in the storming of Chapultepec, and for a long time was in the city of Mexico before he fully recovered. During hard campaigns he had shared with the victorious forces their battles, sieges, and fortunes.

While in the city of Mexico, he met, loved, and married a beautiful and wealthy lady of Spanish blood, Marie Lucie Avilla. She died at the close of the first year of their married life. After her death Mr. St. Clair returned to New Orleans and resumed his former business, with an occasional visit to Cuba. On March 25, 1850, he married Anna Maria Morris of New Orleans, daughter of Robert Morris. She died of cholera or yellow fever at Natchez, Miss., Sept. 7, 1853. She was born Dec. 13, 1825. He married April 5, 1861, Mrs. Isabel (Bjerkerton) Murray, who was born in 1835, at Milnathort, Kinross co., Scotland. Her husband had previously died in New Orleans, of yellow fever. Capt. St. Clair was an active supporter of the Confederate cause during the Rebellion, and died at his post of paralysis, upon the Confederate transport steamer Frolic, in the Red river at Alexandria, Jan. 10, 1863. He was first officer and had been employed in carrying Confederate soldiers and supplies from the east to the west of the Mississippi river. He was buried in the cemetery at Pineville, opposite to Alexandria, and a monument has been erected to his memory by his nephew, Hon. C. H. St. Clair. He combined most manly traits with a generosity and goodness of heart seldom found in those who have experienced such rough friction with the world.

During the war, in battle, and at the exchange of prisoners, he and his nephew, Charles H. St. Clair, met, though they were upon opposing sides, and had faced each other when the leaden hail was falling. Though each believed his cause just and each would have died in defense of his cause and convictions if necessary, yet they never wavered in their friendship for each other. The nephew loved and admired the uncle who had named him, who had watched over him in yellow fever, and whose heart and purse were always open to him; while the uncle took pride in the skill and daring of his pilot nephew, which led him to take the U. S. ship Westfield to attack the famous rebel ram, W. H. Webb, while convoying the Frolic, and to put them both to flight. When they met they laughed over the matter, and the uncle said, "Never mind boy, he who fights and runs away, will capture you some other day." Mr. St. Clair had collected much memoranda relating to a history of his family which was lost by his absence from home and sudden death. After that event Mrs. St. Clair married Mr. Robert Hay, who soon died. She is now a widow, and resides in New Orleans, La. No children.

and lost a fortune. In 1851 he returned to Illinois via Mexico, Central America, Cuba, and New Orleans. He located in Mt. Pulaski, and became a merchant. He there married Nov. 6, 1851, Eliza Ellen, daughter of James H. and Mary Ann (Casady) Neal of Rochester, Ill. She was born in Bourbon county, Va., in 1830, and died at Rochester, Ill., Sept. 27, 1854, leaving one child. He married in Lancaster, Ohio, Oct. 7, 1858, Catherine Ring. She was born in Lancaster, Sept. 7, 1833, is the granddaughter of Joseph and daughter of George and Susanna (Ludwig) Ring. Her father was born in Essex, Mass., Jan. 2, 1787; died in Lancaster, Ohio, April 6, 1862. Mr. St. Clair rendered valuable services in the cause of the Union during the war. He enlisted in company G, 35th regiment, Illinois infantry, March 1, 1862; was promoted to a 1st lieutenant and detailed as brigade quartermaster; subsequently was appointed "A. A. Division Quartermaster, 3d Division, 4th Army Corps, Army of the Cumberland" and held that position till the close of his term of service. He participated in several battles, at Corinth, May 28 and 29, 1862.

He was highly complimented by his superior officers for his efficiency in building breastworks and fortifications, for his discipline, and commendable care for the health and comfort of his men. While acting as division quartermaster, he was continually in the field transporting supplies, and had many thrilling adventures and narrow escapes from being captured by the enemy, but he never lost a train, often assisted in laying pontoon bridges and crossing his trains under the fire of the enemy's guns. Was at one period in command of Georgetown, Ky. He was skirmishing continually during that memorable march to Atlanta, Ga.; was frequently detailed by General Thomas and by General Sherman to execute hazardous marches for forage and supplies, sometimes into and through the enemy's lines. His train was held as near the front as possible, with rations, ammunition, and sanitary stores, and he was one of the first to enter Atlanta. On the evacuation of that place, he returned to Nashville, in General Thomas' command. During the last battle at Nashville, Tenn., he was on Gen. T. J. Wood's staff, and was one of the first to scale the intrenchments, and during this battle the explosion of a caisson caused him the loss of the use of one ear. He participated in the battle of Franklin, and was soon after discharged. After "the cruel war was o'er" he resided at Mt. Pulaski, Ill., then at Decatur, and in 1871 removed to Belle Plaine, Sumner co., Kansas, and pre-empted 160 acres of land, and fenced it with hedge fences, had valuable orchards, and a fine park. His farm was a model and his time was devoted to raising fine stock, fruit, and vegetables.

His public record has been one of honor, and of which any man might be proud. He was once coroner of Logan co., Ill., and in 1875 was elected to the state senate of Kansas, from the 25th district, comprising 13 counties, by a majority of over 6000. For eleven years he was a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and vice-president of the board in 1880, '82, and '83. For several years was a member of the State Horticultural society, and took a decided and intelligent interest in the development of all those special industries and fruits beneficial to agriculturalists. For twelve years was statistical and crop reporter for the national and state governments; was appointed by the governor as agent to the Philadelphia and New Orleans expositions, and twice appointed as a member of the Farmers' congress. Is a republican in politics and as a delegate has attended the National Republican convention at Chicago, Ill. Has also been a delegate to the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at San Francisco, Cal., St. Louis, Mo., and Columbus, Ohio. He has aided materially in the development of public enterprises, not only those of a local nature, but those having a wider influence for good upon the body politic, and those which are enduring in their nature. Has been active in Illinois and in Kansas in the locating and building of railroads, and for years was a director in some important ones. As an active advocate and helper in the building of school houses, churches, and the founding of colleges, he has benefited the public. He has for many years been identified with the Masonic fraternity, and with the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. St. Clair's life has been one of great activity. He is strong and vigorous. Is now in his 70th year and his usefulness is not yet at an end, and to use his own words, he stands ready "to assist in developing another state, to wit, Oklahoma." In the summer of 1889 he struck again for the frontier and located at King Fisher, Oklahoma, where he now resides.

 Jan. 2, 1818. He spent a short period of his life in Exeter, the remainder was passed in Brentwood, where he was engaged in the lumber business and in trade. Mr. Sinclair was more than an ordinary man. He had a strong, active mind, a hopeful temperament, was thorough in business methods, and pursued with unswerving loyalty his convictions of the truth. At the age of 22 he united with the Baptist church, and to the end of his life was an active and consistent member; for 15 years he was its clerk. The various town offices from selectman to representative were filled with acceptance by him. During the war of the Rebellion he was chairman of the board of selectmen and had the charge of raising the town's quota of men. He married Dec. 10, 1839, Hannah, daughter of James and Betsey (Folsom) Robinson, who was born in Epping, N.
 H., Sept. 12, 1816. She is a person of intellectual strength and culture; resides in Concord, N. H. Mr. Sinclair died at Brentwood,

He attended the district school till 15 years of age, then was two years a student in Phillips academy, and increased his scanty income by working during his vacation. He then, at the age of 17, left Exeter, and with financial aid from his brother, Jonathan Marston Sinclair, entered the Chandler department of Dartmouth college, where he graduated in 1858. He then taught for several months in the High school at Adrian, Mich. In the winter of 1859-60 he accepted a position in the preparatory department of Washington university, St. Louis, Mo., where he remained till he accepted an assistant professorship of mathematics in the Chandler department of Dartmouth college in 1865. In 1866 he received the appointment to a full professorship, and remained as professor till 1869. During this period he spent one winter in England and France, but mainly attending lectures in Paris. In the summer of 1869 he was elected to the professorship of mathematics in the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, when he removed to that city, and where he now lives. Washington university conferred the degree of A. M. upon him in 1863. Dartmouth college also conferred this degree upon him, and on the 25th anniversary of his graduation, in 1883, gave him the degree of Ph. D. He married Dec. 24, 1864, Isabella Aiken, daughter of Hon. John Ware and Nancy Aiken Noyes of Chester, N. H., where she was born March 17, 1838. She died at Hanover, N. H., Sept. 11, 1868, leaving two children. * Notice of the death of Deacon Enos G. Bunker, from a Minnesota paper:

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." He died at Mantorville, Minn., Sept. 10, 1871. "Deacon Bunker was born in Barnstead, N. H., Aug. 31, 1819. In the spring of 1855 he came to Mantorville, Minn., and his family came in the autumn of the same year. He leaves a wife, two sons and four daughters to feel the stroke of Divine Providence. We say to feel the stroke! Who would not feel the loss of such a fond husband, and such a tender and affectionate father as he? Whatever Divine Grace may do for us, it was never designed, we believe, to supplant the natural affections of the human heart. It may comfort and support, but the cleaving stroke must be felt, and felt much in proportion as we are able to prize the object sundered from us. In this event not only a private family but a church is bereaved. Mr. Bunker was one of the seven original members of the Congregational church in this place. It was organized in his house.

He is a deacon in the Congregational church, and proprietor of the Hillside House, Bethlehem, N. H.; resides Bethlehem, N. H.

For the last five years he held and honored the office of deacon. He was a faithful and conscientious Christian, both in his family and in the church. He recompensed no man 'evil for evil,' but rather provided 'things honest in the sight of all men.' He was a very conscientious observer of the Sabbath, and a liberal supporter of the means of grace. Verily, he was a pillar of the church, and 'an epistle known and read of all men.' But he has gone from the church militant to the church triumphant. He was among the first settlers of this town, and will long be remembered by after-comers for his hearty welcome, his hospitality and deeds of kindness. He will be remembered also as loyal and faithful to his country. Another honored soldier has fallen, but the victory is won. He entered the service of his country in 1862, and served one year and a half. For eight years he carried a ball in his right leg, suffering intensely therefrom at times and never free from pain, yet he patiently endured, and faithfully labored till the Master called. Now he has finished his course, and entered into rest."

1633. John G. Sinclair<sup>r</sup> [936] (Charles Grandison<sup>s</sup>, Lieut. Richard<sup>s</sup>, Col. Richard<sup>s</sup>, Samuel<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>). Hon. John G. Sinclair was born in Barnstead, N. H., March 25, 1826. He married Oct. 29, 1847, Tamar Merrill Clark, who was born in Landaff, N. H., Sept. 2, 1828, and was daughter of Col. Daniel and Mary (Merrill) Clark of that town. She was a person of a retiring nature, of modest demeanor, and of rare intelligence and good judgment. She was ever true to her ideas of right, was a faithful wife and mother, a helpful and sympathizing friend; was a member of the Methodist church, and died in Littleton, N. H., Feb. 10, 1872. Mr. Sinclair married 2d, July 10, 1874, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth (Pierce) Blandin, widow of Willard A. Blandin, and daughter of John and Rebecca (Cushman) Pierce of Bethlehem, N. H. She was born there April 9, 1837. She was a member of the Orthodox Congregational church in Bethlehem, and upon her removal to Orlando, Fla., her church relations were transferred to the church in that place. She is an earnest worker in the church, and for charitable objects.

As a youth Mr. Sinclair was an industrious student, a bright and successful scholar. Nature gave him a strong, muscular frame; his health was robust, he possessed much animal spirits, was full of wit, and a great lover of athletic sports. But life's duties pressed early upon him, and at the age of thirteen years he entered the employ of some merchants in Landaff, N. H., with whom he remained six years. He prepared for college at the institution at Newbury, Vt., and reluctantly gave up a collegiate course, which he greatly desired, and engaged in business. He was first in business in Manchester, N. H., then in Lawrence, Mass., and having accumulated some means, he located in Bethlehem, N. H., as proprietor of a country store, and a manufacturer of starch. Quickly he won the confidence and favor of the community. He was called into political life, and represented Bethlehem in the legislature in 1852-53, '54, '55, '62, '63, '76, '77, '78, and was a member of the convention chosen to revise the Constitution of the state. In 1873, while a resident of the adjoining town of Littleton, he was elected to represent that town in the legislature. In 1858 and '59 he was a member of the New Hampshire Senate. There were some brilliant episodes in his career during his long and active legislative history. He was acknowledged to be one of the most daring, most aggressive, and

In 1866 he was the Democratic candidate for Governor, but failed of an election. In 1867 he was again the standard bearer of his party, and in obedience to the instructions of the convention which nominated him, and which knew his powers, he issued a challenge to a joint public discussion of the question at issue to his dashing oratorical competitor, Gen. Walter Harriman, the Republican nominee. It was accepted, and then ensued one of the most interesting, exciting, and brilliant campaigns in the history of the state. They were warm personal friends. They traveled together, and were each other's guests in their respective towns. Both were fine orators, and great throngs of people attended their discussions as they journeyed through the state. Their speeches attracted great attention in and beyond the state, and editorials in the leading journals criticised the arguments of the intellectual athletes. The contest was sharp; a heavy vote was polled, and the Democratic banner again trailed in defeat. But Mr. Sinclair still retained his leading position in the councils of his party, and was again renominated in 1868. In 1868 he was the chairman of the New Hampshire delegation in the National Democratic convention. During the administration of Governor Baker he was appointed bank commissioner, and retained the office until the Know-Nothing party rode into power in the full flood of the tide of popular favor. He was the candidate of the Democrat. for speaker of the House, and was the nominee of his party in the legislature in 1876 for United States senator. His long public career as a citizen of New Hampshire drew to a close in 1879, when he left his home beneath the shadows of the towering mountains and established himself in a new abode in the sunny South, locating in Orlando, Orange co., Fla. There he has organized a large and lucrative real estate business, and is engaged in other enterprises. He is still vigorous in mind and body. His intellect is unclouded, his wit is as keen as in earlier days, and his tongue has not forgotten its power of eloquent utterance*.

He was born at Gerry, Chautauqua co., N. Y., May 9, 1822. He received a common school education in his native town. He then spent several years in a country store and post office, and taught school one season. In the spring of 1840 and in 1841 he went with his uncle, Mr. Bucklen, with rafts of lumber which were floated with the current, where he gained much knowledge of the lumber trade. In September, 1841, through the influence of his friend, Norman Guernsey, formerly a merchant in Gerry, he was offered and accepted a position in the business department of the New York Tribune in New York City, where he remained until the end of 1872, having filled successively the positions of bookkeeper, cashier, and publisher. The latter office he filled for 13 years previous to 1873. To a large extent he was instrumental in building the enormous circulation as well as the large advertising business of that great journal, and to him are the readers of the Tribune indebted for the broad columns and large type on which that newspaper is printed. For several years Mr. Sinclair was the largest owner of the Tribune. He lived in New York City from September, 1841, to January, 1873, since which time he has resided at Croton-on-Hudson, on the farm which he purchased in or helpless, he was gentle as a woman, and generous as gentle. He was true to his friends, and no day was too long or night too dark for him to serve them. He was a public spirited citizen, with a large, warm heart. He died March 23, 1887.

He was born in Mayville, Chautauqua co., N. Y., Dec. 22, 1836; died at Panama, N. Y., Sept. 1, 1866, aged 29 yrs. 8 mos. 7 days. He was buried in the Ashville cemetery, a few feet distant from and west of his mother's grave, and above him is a monument with a proper inscription thereon. Until 21 his life was spent at home, at school, and work. Three years were then spent in the West, a portion of the time as clerk on a steamer on the Mississippi river. In the summer of 1859, in New York City, he enlisted into the 4th U. S. infantry. This force occupied a post on the Columbia river in Oregon, until 1861, in the summer it was summoned to Washington and united with the Army of the Potomac, where he served till the close of the war. He was transferred into the volunteer force and received a captain's commission in the 20th regiment, New York state militia. While the army was lying at City Point he was detailed to command he received a severe injury to his lungs by the running away of his horse, from which he never recovered. He was discharged and returned to his father's home in New York, where he died of consumption. He loved military life, and endured great privations and suffering that the nation might live. He was never married.

Mayville, Chautauqua co., N. Y., April 24, 1838. After the usual schooling he was a clerk in mercantile business, then he went to Texas, where he was living when the war broke forth. He was compelled to leave the country, or engage in the Rebellion. He chose the latter and became quartermaster in a regiment of cavalry that did service under General Price in different parts of the South. He became a captain. When the Rebellion was over he went to St.
Louis, Mo., and was a commercial traveler in the South. At this period the Ku Klux Klan existed in all those portions, committing fearful depredations and murders. In Arkansas he engaged as a detective with orders from Gov. Powell Clayton. He cornered a gang of these criminals, when to save themselves they foully assassinated him. Two of the criminals made a full confession, three others were subjected to a mock trial, and were acquitted by a jury in sympathy with the murderers. He was killed at Seavy, White co., Arkansas, in August or September, 1866, and his body rests in Southern soil.*

Ashville, Chautauqua co., N. Y., Dec. 25, 1842. Till the breaking out of the great Rebellion his life was mostly spent in attending school at home. He enlisted for three years in April, 1861, in company D, 72d New York Volunteers. In the autumn was detailed as clerk and had charge of the mails of the regiment. Having devised an excellent plan for army postal service he was assigned to the superintendency of the mails of the brigade, then the division, then the corps, then to the center grand division of the army, and then to the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac in the winter of 1862-63.
Was then commissioned 2d lieutenant at the request of Gen. Jo.
Hooker, in the 72d regiment, New York Volunteers, and assigned to duty as A. D. C. and superintendent of the mails for the Army of the Potomac. At the expiration of his enlistment in 1864 he was commissioned captain in the 120th New York Volunteers. Was

then, on June 11, 1864, appointed by Postmaster-General Montgomery Blair a special agent of the post office department. Mr. Blair made this appointment on an order from Abraham Lincoln, written on the back of a telegram from Gen. U. S. Grant requesting it. A detail was ordered to report to him, and Mr. Parker was to continue as superintendent of mails for the armies operating against Richmond. He continued in this capacity till the close of the war, when he reorganized the mail service in Virginia. In March, 1869, President Grant appointed him U. S. Marshal for Virginia. This he resigned in 1874, and became chief post office inspector, which office he held until June, 1883, when he resigned. He was appointed postmaster at Washington by President Arthur, which he declined in order to accept a lucrative place in the Bell Telephone Co. Was superintendent at Boston, Mass., three years, and later a director in each of the seven telephone companies doing business in New York. He is president of the New York Heating Co., and is connected with other corporations. He resides on a farm of 850 acres in Cold Spring, Cattaraugus co., N. Y., P. O. Randolph, N. Y. He married Dec. 23, 1867, Victoria Anna Howe, born Towanda, Cattaraugus co., N. Y., May 15, 1847, daughter of Hon. Chester and Matilda Elizabeth (Torrance) Howe. Her grandfather was Jaazaniah Howe of Rutland, Vt.

Charles Henry St. Clair<sup>8</sup> [1353] (Charles Northrop<sup>7</sup>, James, Jr.<sup>9</sup>, James<sup>8</sup>, Thomas<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, James<sup>2</sup>, John<sup>1</sup>). He was born Aug. 8, 1836, at Albion, Orleans co., N. Y. From the fourth to the twelfth year of his age, he lived with his grandparents, Joel and Elizabeth Turrell at Pleasant Valley, Dutchess co., N. Y. Then he returned to his home and completed his education at the Albion academy when 18 years of age. After spending two years in Union Springs, N. Y., Bloomington and Rochester, Ill., he went to New Orleans, La., in 1858, and he entered the medical college, and subsequently he engaged in the business of steam boating on the Mississippi river. He secured his license as a pilot of the first-class when the war broke out in 1861. He made a daring escape from the Confederates and became pilot of and aboard of the U. S. ship Harriet Lane, under Commander Wainwright of Admiral Farragut's fleet. Was before Vicksburg, Grand Gulf, and Port Hudson. When Farragut's fleet left the Mississippi river he piloted the entire mortar fleet over the S. W. Pass bar and out to sea. The fleet consisted of 13 schooners each carrying an 11-inch mortar. With high testimonials from his commander he was ordered to join the Mississippi squadron under Admiral D. D. Porter, at Cairo, Ill., and was assigned to duty on the steamship General Price, and served on the lower river till the close of the war. He had many vivid experiences, and hair breadth escapes. He was selected as pilot for exposed wooden steamers, transports and despatch boats. With an open transport steamer, he as pilot towed the great ironclad Essex and others into position before Vicksburg, Port Hudson, and other places, and in the exposed pilot house of the ram General Price he rammed an opening through the obstructions in the Red river, cleared away the torpedoes, and towed many of the ironclads through the channel. During these times often the leaden hail fell thick and fast about him and the sailors used to say, "it rained lamp posts," for the long 18-inch conical rifle shells as they came near them seemed to scream out the words, "Where is he? Where is he?"

* In Admiral D. D. Porter's book, "Incidents of the Civil War," pages 244-45, he says: "I mention this simply to show the kind of experiences to which the navy in the West was subject, and the courage which the officers and men exhibited. Think of being pursued day after day by a party of bushwhackers, watching from behind trees a chance to pick you off. One can hardly realize the danger to which pilots of the squadron were exposed. I have seen a pilot receive a bullet in his brain the instant his hand touched the wheel. The pilots were targets for the enemy to shoot at, and he who could boast he had killed one was a popular man. The pilots were worthy western men by birth, but passing their lives on the Mississippi river brought them into intimate relations with the southern people, who looked upon all who were loyal to the Union as traitors to the

After the war Mr. St. Clair resumed the business of steamboating on the Mississippi and other rivers. On Oct. 30, 1866, he was married in Trinity, La., to Mary Alice, only daughter of Capt. Isaac and Sarah J. (Buchanan) Johnson of New Albany, Ind., and granddaughter of Abraham Johnson of Barre, N. Y. She was born in New Albany, Ind., Oct. 26, 1847. During their wedding tour, while he was in New Orleans, the steamer was blown up and all save two of her officers were killed. At the earnest solicitation of Mrs. St. Clair, he gave up that avocation and went into business in New Orleans, La., where he remained till 1872, when he removed to Morgan City, that state. He was elected city treasurer in 1873, elected mayor in 1874, and served for eight years. Was elected a member of the General Assembly in 1879, for the parish of St. Mary, and served on many important committees till 1884. Then he was re-elected, but being a Republican was denied his seat. He is in business in Morgan City, La., where he resides, and has for many years held places of trust and honor in different orders and societies. A writer, Nathan W. Goodale, says of him: "Always honored, respected, and beloved, his courage and tireless labor during the awful yellow fever epidemic of 1878-79, for his people has endeared him to them more than words can express, and will for a generation to come cause his name to be spoken of with heartfelt blessings by those who knew him personally and by reputation."

He was born in Barre, N. Y., June 27, 1838, and received his early education in Albion academy, where his intellectual qualities and scholarship were shown to be of a high order. He graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York City at the head of his class of nearly two hundred, and won the celebrated "Dr. Valentine Mott prize." He entered the practice of his profession as a physician in partnership with his uncle, Dr. James Julius St. Clair, at Marquette, Mich., where they also established a large drug store. The death of his uncle closed the partnership, when he carried on alone the combined medical practice and the business store. He entered the army as 2d assistant surgeon of the 1st Michigan cavalry, and soon was made chief operator of the brigade, then was assistant surgeon of the 5th Michigan cavalry, and later surgeon of this regiment with the rank of major. South. I never knew one of these men to quail in the presence of danger and when I have beheld them passing batteries with balls flying all about them, I have been struck with the calmness they displayed. I think there is a magnetism in a ship's wheel in time of action which is communicated to the pilot. He feels that the lives of all are in his hands, and I never knew a pilot faithless to his trust."

of the war he was surgeon-in-chief of the brigade under General Stagg. Notice of his remarkable surgical operations while in the army are recorded in the "Medical and Surgical History of the War of the Rebellion," by Charles Smart, major and surgeon United States army. At one time he was a volunteer to recover the body of General Wadsworth, the Union general, which was in possession of the Confederates. Being supplied with a flag of truce he started for the enemy's line, and although under a heavy fire reached them with only a few scratches and the loss of his horse. He was made a prisoner, blindfolded, and taken to the headquarters of General Lee, where he made known his mission. He returned to the Union lines with the body of the dead general, and for this service received a most complimentary letter from General Meade and his staff.

He participated in the following battles, as appears upon a record: "Hanover, June 30, 1863; Hunterstown, July 2, 1863; Gettysburg, July 3, 1863; Falmouth, Va., Aug. 15, 1863; King George Court House, Va., Aug. 25, 1863; Pain Conway, Va., Sept. 13, 1863; Raccoon Ford, Sept. 14, 15, 16, 17, 1863; Summerville Ford, Va., Sept. 20, 1863; Madison Court Hourt, Va., Sept. 22, 1863; Bailey Mills, Va., Sept. 23, 1863; Robertson's River, Va., Sept. 24, 1863; Hartwood Church, Va., Nov. 4, 1863; Morton's Ford, Va., Nov. 15, 1863; and Morton's Ford, Nov. 26, 1863." He served till the close of the war, when he resumed the practice of his profession at Marquette, or Clarksburg, Mich.

He married at Marquette Oct. 22, 1867, Henrietta A. Smith of Caledonia, Livingston co., N. Y., a sister of his business partner, Dr. A. K. Smith. Their married life was short, and he died of consumption, caused by army exposure, April 20, 1868. He was a member of the Episcopal church and of the Masonic society. He was buried in Mt. Albion, N. Y., where a broken marble shaft marks the peaceful rest of one of the brightest and most gallant members of the St. Clair family. He was finely proportioned, six feet in height, straight, with clear blue eyes, light hair, and light complexion, and was said to bear a striking resemblance to Gen. Arthur St. Clair. His widow married 2d Mr. Kingsley and resides in Los Angeles, Cal. Dr. St. Clair had no children. This is the history of a short, brilliant life. "He was a true man, a soldier, and a Christian."

department, with which he has ever since been connected, and in 1892 was chief of the Consular Bureau, his appointments being in the following order: he was appointed temporary clerk Nov. 12, 1865; appointed class 2 June 7, 1870; appointed class 3 June 22, 1871; appointed to class 4 July 1, 1874; appointed temporary chief June 7, 1881; appointed permanent chief of Consular Bureau Nov. 1, 1881, and served till recently in that capacity. He has practised his profession to some extent outside of his official duties. In 1881 he was sent by the U. S. government on a tour of inspection of the consulates of Canada; in 1882 on the same service to the West Indies. In July, 1890, he was sent by the government to preside over a convention of United States consuls to be held in August of 1890. It was a position of honor, trust, and responsibility, which his long service in the State department admirably qualified him to fill. He was the accredited agent of the United States to present in Bristol, Eng., in the name of the President, a gold watch and chain to Charles Jarman, a valorous British seaman, as a reward for his bravery in the rescue of the crew of the American schooner T. A. Lambert. During Dr. St. Clair's stay in Edinburgh, Scotland, a Masonic lodge meeting was called, attended by many dignitaries, at which he was present, and was the recipient of honors, as other St. Clairs had been in the past.

It is said that he is able to give without hesitation the name of this government's representative in any port in the world. He is a Mason and an attendant of the Episcopal church. He married Nov. 1, 1866, Lella Cecelia Dent, daughter of Col. John B. Dent of Maryland. He has prepared an attractive home in Maryland, near Washington, where he hopes to pass the closing days of a busy life. In personal appearance he is short, stout, with blue eyes, and dark complexion. No children.

Joel Fuller Turrell St. Clair<sup>a</sup> [1856] (Charles Northrop<sup>b</sup>, James, Jr.<sup>c</sup>, James<sup>d</sup>, Thomas<sup>e</sup>, Joseph<sup>f</sup>, James<sup>g</sup>, John<sup>h</sup>). He was born in Barre (now Albion), N. Y., Sept. 14, 1841, and was educated at the academy at that place. At the commencement of the war he left the fields he was cultivating as a farmer and enlisted as a private in the 151st regiment, New York infantry sharpshooters and became a sergeant. In the battle of Mile Run, Va., he was desperately wounded. After falling upon the field his knapsack and canteen were literally shot to pieces, no less than eight minie balls having passed through them and his clothes. He was carried to the hospital at Alexandria, Va., and the minie ball which entered his leg at the knee passed upward and lodged in the hip, was not extracted till nine days after he was wounded, nor was the wound dressed until a week had elapsed. His brother, Dr. Arthur K. St. Clair, surgeon of the 5th Michigan cavalry, devotedly tended him and his limb, and perhaps his life was saved by his skill and attention. After a time he was furloughed and returned to his home in Albion. After months of pain he recovered sufficiently and returned to his regiment and served till the close of the war. Then for a time he was in the

In business and railroad circles he is one of the most active and prominent men in New Hampshire. He is a large owner in the Boston & Maine railroad, and was a director in that great corporation for several years. Much stock of the Worcester, Nashua, and Rochester railroad is his, and he was president of that road for several years. He, with others, built the Hereford railroad, the Upper Coos railroad, and the Upper Coos Extension railroad, making in all about one hundred and ten miles of road. Of the Manchester & Lawrence railroad he is a large owner, and for several years successively has been annually chosen its president.

He is the founder of the Morley Button Manufacturing Co., the largest industry of its kind in the United States. The Portsmouth * Mr. Sinclair is the 10th generation in descent from Richard Kimball<sup>1</sup>. Richard Kimball<sup>1</sup> with his wife, Ursula, came from Rattlesden, county of Suffolk, England, and arrived at Watertown, Mass., in 1634. In 1637 their son Benjamin Kimball<sup>2</sup> was born, and married April 16, 1661, Mercy Hazeltine. They lived in Bradford, Mass. Their son, Jonathan Kimball<sup>3</sup>, was born Nov. 20, 1673, and on July 15, 1696, he married Lydia Day. Their son, Benjamin Kimball<sup>4</sup>, was born May 16, 1697, and he married Mary Emerson. Their son, Jonathan Kimball<sup>5</sup>, born April 14, 1720, married Aug. 22, 1738, Elizabeth Little, and their son, Benjamin Kimball<sup>6</sup>, who married Sally Little. Their daughter, Tamar Kimball<sup>7</sup>, born at Plaistow, N. H., July 6, 1766; she married, 1784, Abel Merrill of Atkinson, N. H., lived in Warren, N. H., and had thirteen children. Their daughter, Mary Merrill<sup>8</sup>, born Warren, N. H., March 28, 1792; married Col. Daniel Clark of Landaff, N. H., where she died Feb. 3, 1874. Their daughter, Tamar Merrill Clark<sup>9</sup>, was born in Landaff, N. H., Sept. 2, 1828. She married Oct. 29, 1847, Hon. John G. Sinclair, and their son is Hon. Charles A. Sinclair<sup>10</sup>, previously mentioned.

Shoe Co. was founded by him, of which he is the largest owner. It is the largest shoe manufactory of its kind in the world, and employs about twelve hundred hands, with an annual pay roll of over five hundred thousand dollars. He is a director in several banks and trust companies. A newspaper has also engaged his attention. Of the Portsmouth Daily Times, published in Portsmouth, N. H., he is the owner and publisher.

But while so actively and so extensively engaged in these various business enterprises, he has not forgotten nor neglected those public interests which should engage the thought and attention of every true citizen. An active and leading part has been taken by him in the politics of his native state. No other young man of his party has been so prominent. He was a member of the Senate of New Hampshire from 1888-1892, and was one of its readiest speakers and most influential members. During one of these sessions he was, as his father had been before him, the standard bearer of his party for the United States Senator against the successful Republican nominee, Hon. Jacob H. Gallinger. He was elected a member of the New Hampshire House of Representatives from 1892-94, and in 1893 was for the third time elected State Senator for the term from 1894-96, an office he still holds. During the last session of the legislature he was for the second time the candidate for the Democratic party for United States Senator against the winning Republican incumbent, Hon. William E. Chandler. In all these contests he has received the strength of his party.

He married in November, 1873, Emma Isabel Jones, the niece and adopted daughter of Hon. Frank Jones, and resides in Portsmouth, N. H. In that quiet city, on the shore of the blue Atlantic, is his beautiful home. Surrounded by his interesting family, amid works of art and those embellishments which wealth can bring, he finds pleasure and delight. In that charming retreat his friends are always welcome, and there he dispenses a generous hospitality. He is now in the prime of life, in perfect health, with a robust and stalwart frame, full of activity and ambition. His mental powers are of the best quality. His mind is strong and clear, his opinions positive and pronounced, and he possesses great courage. His past has been a success, and the coming years can hardly fail to bring greater honors and promotions at the hands of his fellow citizens.

Y., Dec. 22, 1858; was educated in the public schools of Brooklyn and at the military academy at Bethlehem, Penn. Having a strong love for the sea, at 17 he shipped on a sailing vessel and made several voyages. He abandoned that business and entered Cornell college at Ithaca, N. Y., and nearly completed his course when an accident prevented his graduating. He for five years was in business with his father in New York city. He then studied law, but failing health obliged him to seek another and milder climate. He purchased a fruit farm, mostly oranges, in Lugonia, southern California, where he located in 1887, and where he now lives in excellent health. This place has been united with Redlands as a city, and he is a Republican in politics, and is one of the five trustees with a term of four years in the city government. He is director of the Water company, and director and manager of the Fruit Growers association, and is thoroughly identified with the growth and development of that section. He married Jan. 4, 1882, Agnes Munson Rowley, daughter of Elizabeth and Margaret (Judkins) Rowley, born Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 1, 1861.

Mrs. May Whitney Emerson (No. 1350) writes as follows: "The Viking of a thousand years ago, 'Terror of the world,' as Charlemagne called them, give us by direct descent from Odin and through Charlemagne's granddaughter, all members of the Sinclair clans in America. Among their myriad descendants, not Sinclair by name, were several of the brave Vikings of 1893 who crossed the North Atlantic to attend the World's Fair. Captain Magnus Anderson, commander of the Viking ship, was a descendant of Berdon Seilstad, who shot Col. George Sinclair at Kringelen Pass (see latter part of page 49) with a silver button bitten from his uniform; 'for,' said Seilstad, 'ye can not kill a Sinclair with lead.' Johan Ericson was lineal descendant of Red Erise's son. Alfred A. Holm, secretary of the Viking ship of 1893, was descended by the Einar from Rogenwald. At a banquet given in Chicago, July 19, 1893, by Mrs. May Whitney Emerson to the Vikings, a health was drunk in one cup to the memory of Berdon Seilstad and Col. George Sinclair by descendants of the slayer and the slain. A romantic love-marriage was the result of this banquet. Miss Gladys Maud Seymour of La Cross, Wis., was one of the twelve young ladies to lead the twelve Vikings to dinner. To her lot fell Mr. Alfred A. Holm of Christiania, Norway. From that hour they were inseparable. On the 1st of March, 1894, they were married, and the happy pair are now at home in Christiania, on the very land owned a thousand years ago by their ancestor Rogenwald."

CHAPTER VII.

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN G. SINCLAIR.

In that memorable contest which attracted so widespread interest at the time, and which has become historic in the political annals of New Hampshire, Mr. Sinclair delivered the following speech in the joint discussion with Gen. Walter Harriman at Littleton, N. H., Feb. 12, 1867. Reported for the Boston Post by William B. Smart.

Mr. President, Ladies, and Gentlemen:—

It was well understood by my friends that at the time of my nomination by the late Democratic convention, on account of multiplied and pressing engagements of my own, my inclination was to decline the nomination then tendered me. I desired also to take that step because I believed then as I now believe, that there was in that convention a distinguished soldier, and eminent citizen, who having been long withdrawn from active participation in political struggles would command a larger vote than any other gentleman within the state. I need hardly say that I refer to Gen. John Bedell, a man of courage never questioned, of probity beyond suspicion, of capacity beyond cavil, and of character beyond reproach. I wish to say here and now, that my own convictions as to what is best for our state, and what may be a necessity arising out of my private affairs, may lead me to fulfil before the second Tuesday of March, this desire and purpose. I have, however, felt it to be my duty, as it certainly is my pleasure, to yield to the command of the convention which nominated me, and meet Mr. Harriman before the people at the times and places agreed upon and already published in the papers of the state. Now, Gentlemen, I ought in addition to these remarks to state to you what other action I have taken with reference to meeting the conservative men of this state in an effort to subserve its best interests. To merge narrow attachments merely to party in a broad, true, and earnest devotion to the permanent and highest interests of the state, to defend and uphold the constitution, to guard with vigilance the finances of the state, to return to the severe economy of former years, and thus gradually to pay our debts, instead of increasing them. To see to it that places of high public trust and responsibility be filled by men of probity, beyond suspicion, and of capacity and character without taint, to utter our indignant protest against the tricks of scheming partisans being allowed to thwart the determined will of the people. To guarantee that party organizations be maintained for the public good, and never for the mere gratification of place men, who are always ready to serve their country when and where they can best serve themselves. I hoped that these and other objects calculated to promote the honor, dignity, and prosperity of the state would be bravely, earnestly, and persistently promulgated by the recent convention called ostensibly to put Onslow Stearns in nomination for Governor, and I further hoped to encourage and actively join in action, looking to these results. It was communicated to Mr. Stearns and many of his friends, that in my judgment if we would save anything worth saving, if we would restore harmony to the land, if we would relieve ourselves and our children from pecuniary embarrassment, if we would check extravagance and speculation, if we would revive the old tone and patriotic fervor, past issues might well be held in abeyance for the time, and that I was willing to grapple manfully in conjunction with them, with the momentous issues which are upon us, which are in fact at this moment upon our very threshold. You know what was the unanticipated result of the last of the three conventions held at Concord on the 29th ult., composed of men who, independent of higher ground, had publicly proclaimed that the Gubernatorial nomination of the man who is now on this platform was for various reasons not fit to be made. Now, Gentlemen, we are left to enter upon this struggle with all our energies and I believe with as elevated motives as ever have, or can animate us. In order that the momentous issues which are now upon us might be fairly met and discussed, I prepared some interrogatories, comprehending those issues which I read and submitted to the candidate of the Republican party at our first meeting at Colebrook, that he might have ample time for their consideration, pledging myself to consider and answer any and all questions involving the issues of the present campaign which he might see fit to put, or promptly acknowledge my inability to do so. These questions were in part as follows:

1st. Are you in favor of the impeachment of Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, and can you state any constitutional cause for his impeachment?

2d. Are you in favor of reducing sovereign states, North or South, to the condition of territories?

3d. Are you in favor of allowing sovereign states the right of representation in Congress, and do you believe it to be not only the right but constitutional duty of each state to have such representation? If no, on what ground?

4th. Do you believe in the right or power of Congress to assume the powers of either the Executive or Judicial department?

5th. Are you in favor of the regulation or interference by Congress with the elective franchise of the several states?

6th. Are you in favor of unqualified Negro suffrage, and would you make a distinction in favor of the Negro and against the Indian?

7th. Did you approve at the time of its passage of the Crittendon resolution, and do you approve of the same principles now?

8th. Do you hold that the general government is one of limited power, and confined by those expressly granted by the constitution, and that all powers not so granted are reserved to the people, and the states respectively?

9th. Would you abide by the theory and form of government framed by the founders, Washington and his associates?

10. Do you hold that the interference with the elective franchise in the states by Congress is usurpation?

11. Are you in favor to the fullest extent, and unabridged in every particular of the sacred right of trial by jury, and do you support and approve the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, guaranteeing this right wherever the courts are open and organized?

12. Do you believe either in the right or expediency of the introduction of test oaths, or of any obligation other than that of faithful support of the National and State Constitution as provided in the fundamental law of the land?

Although these questions are now agitating Congress and the country, they have been declared by the radical candidates to be dead issues and not now before the people, but the issue he makes is one of personal fitness. He and the organs of his party claiming the suffrage of the people on the ground of his distinguished military services. I meet the issue here and now, and as before with questions. Are the charges and specifications preferred against you by Maj. E. W. Farr and other officers of your regiment true? If not, in what particular do you deny them? Did you at the time these charges were preferred acknowledge their truthfulness and beg of Major Farr to allow you to resign, and did you resign in the face of the enemy rather than abide the result of a court martial?

At the time you were taken prisoner was any other member of your regiment, officer or private, taken with you? Was there at that time an order issued for your arrest or muster out of service?

Charge 1st. Deserting his post while on duty before the enemy. Specification, in this, that he, Walter Harriman, Colonel of 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, having been while in command of his Regiment posted on picket duty, in front of the enemy near the city of Fredericksburg, Va., the night of Dec. 14, 1862, did on the next night after having been posted as aforesaid, desert his post ordering his men to follow him, and he, Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, did then march his Regiment away from their post, through the city of Fredericksburg, and back across the Rappahannock river, without having been relieved by any one or having received orders to do so from the commanding officer of his Brigade or from any superior officer whatever, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. This at the city of Fredericksburg, Va., on or about Dec. 15, 1863.

Specification 1st. In this, that he, Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment, N. H. Volunteers, had copied a letter by Frank E. Haynes, Company D, 11th N. H. Volunteers, as an anonymous production in which letter was the following language, to wit: "Colonel Harriman who is never to be outdone in acts of courtesy, responded for the Regiment nobly, feelingly, and in terms of such patriotic fervor, as to cause peal after peal of applause to wake the echoes through the vast hall. The Colonel never fails wherever you put him." To the prejudice of good order and military discipline. This at Camp Sterling, Ky., on or about April 5, 1863.

Specification 2d. In this, that he, Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, did while in camp with his Regiment at Mount Sterling, Ky., write and have copied by a private of his Regiment and published in the Manchester Mirror, a paper printed in the city of Manchester, words and language as follows, to wit: "Having no teams of our own the Colonel of the 11th before leaving Paris sent out Captain Cogswell and Lieutenant Briggs with twenty armed men who went to press into the service, teams, men, and rations, to transport us to this place. They went to armed rebels and obtained with some difficulty the necessary teams, drivers, etc." Thereby representing with his own pen that he had issued the above order, when in fact and in truth it was not issued by him, but by Colonel Clark of the 21st Mass. Regiment, then in command of the Brigade. This at Camp 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, at Mount Sterling, Ky., on or about April 5, 1863.

Specification 3d. In this, that Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, did while in camp with his Regiment at Newport, Va., and at that time, he, Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment

H. Volunteers, when in truth and in fact there were 10 pounds instead of 15, and the butter was made by his wife at her house at Warner, N. H., and it was brought by herself to Washington, D. Volunteers, then Brigade Forage Master, said grain to be divided between all the private horses of his Regiment, and did say when he, Walter Harriman, Colonel 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, was asked by Quartermaster James F. Briggs, 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, for said grain, that it might be distributed to the several officers entitled thereto, that it was his own property which he had bought of said Joshua Smith, private of Co. B, 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers, and paid him the sum of fifty cents therefor, which statement was false and untrue. This at the city of Fredericksburg, on or about Dec. 12, 1862.

EVARTS W. FARR,

Stanford, Ky., June 2d, 1863.

Witnesses: Brig.-Gen. Edward Ferrero; Evarts W. Farr, Major 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers; George E. Pingree, Captain Co. G, 11th Regiment N. H. Volunteers; James F. Briggs, Quartermaster; Frank E. Haynes, Private Co. D; Nathan E. Storer, Private Co. A; M. M. Collins, Lieutenant-Colonel.

I will now proceed to present to you such considerations as I think are entitled to weight, and should bring us to victory. Allow me to say that I am here to compare considerations with the candidate of the Republican party with regard to what is best for the interests of the citizens of New Hampshire, and what is best for the entire country. I shall not attempt to entertain you with tropes and figures, or with anything other than facts and reason. It is vain to recur to the past, except so far as the lessons of the past may guide us for the present or the future. If I were disposed I could quote from the candidate himself as to the causes which inevitably produced the terrible Civil War through which we have passed, and the means which, when it was upon us, should have been resorted to for its avoidance. I lay down as a fundamental principle, recognized and endorsed by Mr. Lincoln in his messages and proclamations, what has been denominated as the Crittendon resolution, in these words:

"Resolved, That the present deplorable Civil War has been forced upon the country by the disunionists of the Southern states, now in arms against the Constitutional government, that in this National emergency, banishing all feelings of mere passion and resentment, we will recollect only our duty to the whole country, that this war is not waged on our part in any spirit of oppression, or for any purpose of conquest or subjugation or purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of these states, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several states unimpaired, and that as soon as these objects are accomplished, the war ought to cease."

Now it is not necessary to repeat what everybody knows, that the doctrines and opinions of that resolution were adopted by the United States Senate and House of Representatives with almost entire unanimity. Will the candidate pretend that with vitality given to that resolution, we should not today be a happy, prosperous, and united people?

With every state performing its Constitutional functions, and enjoying its Constitutional rights. Now, with these declarations of Congress what had the South, what had men North or South who possessed the least regard to either honor, consistency, or truth, the right to expect? That ten states of this Union were to be reduced to the condition of territories? That in violation of the most obvious principles of the Constitution they were to be subjected to taxation without representation, and to the control of a government in which they had no participation? If that be not despotism will the candidate tell us what constitutes despotism? Not the republic of 1789, under the constitution, but the very identical despotism against which our fathers, who framed that Constitution, fought at Lexington and Bunker Hill. Are you willing to either advocate, endorse or excuse this line of conduct? If you are, which I cannot believe, let me ask your attention to another view of this subject. How such action must inevitably affect your interests here at home. The debt of the United States government is today reckoned by thousands of millions of dollars, every state groans under its burden of state indebtedness, every county, every town has its credit strained to the uttermost. The interest, at least, of this immense indebtedness must be annually paid. To what source and from what means must the American people look for the payment of the taxation inevitable from this condition of things? You answer at once that our sole reliance must be upon energetic and speedy development of the gigantic resources of our land, that development can only follow the condition of the country contemplated by the Crittendon resolution upon the cessation of hostilities, and yet how different is our condition from that contemplated in that resolution. For nearly two years our armies have been "disbanded," war has ceased, the laws of the United States have their legitimate force from one end to the other of our extended domain, slavery has been abolished by the adoption of the Constitutional Amendment by the South itself. The Rebel debt has been repudiated, the authority of the United States everywhere acknowledged and nowhere resisted, and yet we have the very recent authority of Mr. Stanton, Secretary-of-War, that at no time within the past five years has the country been in a condition either so critical or so dangerous as at the present moment.

Now, what causes and what constitutes this impending danger? Why in the second year of absolute peace are ten states of this Union kept in a condition almost of disorganization, with their productive resources paralyzed, and their people held in a state of absolute want? Why is it that the cotton and wheat crop of the South are reduced in this second year of peace to about one twentieth of their former amount? Why is it that the markets of the South are practically shut to the New England manufacturer? Why is it that the old annual contribution of $500,000,000 from the cotton crop is cut off in this our time of need from the National resources? Is it because we have "banished all feeling of mere passion and resentment, and recollect only our whole duty to the whole country?" Is it because there is no "spirit of oppression or subjugation, or purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of

Constitution and to preserve the several states accomplished, the war

Is it because of a stern determination to "maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several states unimpaired," or is it because all these pledges and principles, and rights have been violated, and spit upon, and trampled under foot for the low purposes of personal ambition, partisan malignity, and political aggrandizement? Does the candidate deny the soundness of the Crittendon resolution? Does he deny the soundness of the theory of Mr. Lincoln's messages and proclamations based upon the principles of that resolution? Now, instead of the clear patriotic, aye Christian sentiments and pledges of that resolution, what are the propositions today before the country, and what the surrounding facts?

1st. It is claimed that ten states, under various pretexts, are out of the Union and therefore require to be reconstructed, or in other words, are mere territories and require readmission.

2d. That being in the Union they have by their participation in the Rebellion placed in abeyance the right guaranteed to the states of representation in Congress. As to the first proposition, they have been recognized as states in the Union by every department of the government, the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial. By the Executive department in the messages and proclamations of President Lincoln and the subsequent corresponding action of President Johnson. By the Legislative department, in the concurrent action of both houses of Congress at the commencement of the war, and always by their reference of the amendment abolishing slavery to their state Legislatures, by the admission of the members of Tennessee, and by various other acts. By the Judicial branch, in the consideration of suits by the Supreme Court between citizens of those and other states. Now, let us see, if these various recognitions are well founded, what are the palpable facts of history within the clear knowledge and personal recollections of every one within the sound of my voice. In 1860 the Southern states claimed that they had the right to secede and attempted to put that right into practical execution. The North, in possession of the government, denied the right and war followed upon this exact issue. The South fighting for the right, and the North fighting to prevent its exercise as avowed by every department of our own and the so called Confederate government, and the question was decided by arms that no matter what the theory, secession was a practical impossibility. What then was the condition of things? They had said that they had the right to secede or go out of the Union, and would exercise it. The North said that they had no such right, and should not exercise it. The South having failed, where were the states left? The South had not taken them out, for they were unsuccessful in their attempt, where were they then, except in the Union? The North fought to keep them in, and if they are out then was the issue of war decided against, and not in favor of the North.

If then, the cessation of hostilities left these states in the Union, they are entitled to all the rights of sovereign states, and under the plainest provisions of the Constitution, entitled to the right and subject to the duty of representation in Congress, for no one will be so bold as to assert that each state is not the political equal of every other state, and entitled to equal rights. If a state has no individual right of secession, is there any power to turn a state out of the Union? The right of state secession has been claimed by extreme states rights men from the first adoption of the Constitution, but when and where has the claim ever been made, up to the last year, of the right of Congress to turn a state out of the Union, or deprive it of any of its rights? Where is the clause of the Constitution which justifies it or even recognizes the contingency either expressly or by implication. But the candidate may say it would be dangerous to allow the South its constitutional rights. I reply, first, that there is and can be no danger so great as a plain, palpable violation of the great fundamental law. If it be dangerous to obey the Constitution, then our whole theory of government is a fraud, and worse than a farce. Suppose that a majority of Congress should fancy that it would be dangerous to allow New Hampshire representation in Congress, what would be the obvious answer? Would it not be, Gentlemen, our right of representation, thank God, does not rest upon the real assumed opinion of Congress as to whether it would be better for us to have representation, but is an absolute right, guaranteed by the Constitution, of which no power on earth can rightfully deprive us, which cannot be determined by any real or fancied danger, for it is a right the existence and exercise of which does not admit of discussion, without insult to the fathers who guaranteed that right without possible exception.

But, suppose for the sake of argument, that it is admissible, under certain circumstances or exigencies to palpably violate the Constitution, and every principle of popular government, to have taxation without representation, government without constituency or consent of the governed. What are those exigencies? Why, the candidate says it would be dangerous to allow the South to participate in the affairs of the government. Dangerous to what, and to whom? Does he seriously assert that the six millions of the South would out-vote and control the twenty-two millions of the North. The former impoverished by the terrible realities of a four years devastating war waged upon its soil, its people suffering almost for the common necessities of life, and the latter rolling in boasted wealth. It is impossible to heighten the absurdity which the mere statement of the case, as it exists, carries with it. But the gentleman says, would you allow Rebels to participate in the affairs of the government? I answer, disfranchisement of political communities is neither a legitimate, proper, or legal punishment, for crime is only to be punished by the means and in the manner provided in the Constitution by indictment, trial by jury, with all the safeguards for the decision of questions, both of law and fact, which that sacred instrument provides. Individuals, not communities, commit crime under all free governments, and specified punishments provided in advance, follow trials and convictions under our Constitution. Not ex-post facto punishments, expressly forbidden, not only by common sense and justice, the world over, but by the clearest provisions of our fundamental law. Dangerous to abide by the Constitution and the plainest principles of the common law is it, dangerous to permit the population of the ten states of the Union to participate in the affairs of the government? If this be dangerous, who can estimate the danger which would be the natural and inevitable result of their exclusion, by teaching by the most impressive and fatal lesson possible to be taught to six millions of people, that they are under and not of the government, that they are a proscribed race, that the doors of political position, aye, of decent livelihood, are forever closed to them, that they are the Irish of England, the Poles of Russia, the Hungarians of Austria, and the Christians of Turkey, compelled to learn the lesson of undying hatred themselves, and teach and transmit it with increasing virulence to their children and their children's children.

Was the object of the late terrible strife not to restore the Union, and sustain the Constitution, but to show with how much malignity and how little of conciliation both may be destroyed? England has her Ireland groaning under oppression and misgovernment, yet English malignity has never yet been found strong enough to suggest the deprivation of common political rights to communities who have engaged in unavailing Rebellion.

Leaders have been indicted, tried, and in some instances punished, but where are the instances of English governmental shafts levelled at whole communities? Hungary unsuccessfully rebelled, Kossuth fled, and a very few of the leaders were punished and the conciliation and the confirming of new political privileges followed. Russia ground Poland to the dust but the sparks flashing under the iron heel of the oppressor generated revolution after revolution, till conciliation became the ruling policy of the Russian Empire.

Does the gentleman believe that six millions of people, descendants of those men who stood shoulder to shoulder with our fathers through the war of the Revolution, bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, can be made political outcasts with safety, or that either Christianity, humanity, honor, or statesmanship does not spurn the idea as shocking to the moral sense of mankind? Are the American people prepared to drown all sense of honor, of principle, of humanity, or statesmanship to engraft upon six millions of their own race the desperation of Ireland, the discontent of Hungary, and the despair of Poland? Have the teachings of Christianity given place to the low, groveling sentiments of partisan malignity, and to accomplish this, must the plainest provisions of the Constitution, and the most palpable principles of free government be trampled upon, and disregarded? Are we to go back to the fatal errors of the past? Are we to endeavor to go on without any constitutional restrictions or guaranties? Are we to be deluded with the idea that we can establish in the first place a consolidated Republic to end as all history assures us in a consolidated despotism, the whole theory of the government changed, and a great central despotism, erected upon the last hope of mankind?

God forbid, men of New Hampshire, whatever others may do, that your hands should be stained with this terrible iniquity. Can unprincipled insolence go farther than to suggest that the descendants of Langdon, and Stark, and Pierce, and Poor, and Scammel take part in this contemplated outrage, that the sons of those in whose midst the great expounder of the Constitution was born and reared, shall trample in the dust both his teachings and their subject? In God's name and for decency and consistency's sake, let the record of New Hampshire's early history and the teachings of the fathers, as embodied in our glorious Bill of Rights, be blotted from existence and all memory thereof annihilated beyond all hope of possible resurrection, before any degenerate son of New Hampshire shall dare breathe the suggestion of such unparalleled outrage. But the suggested outrage stops not here. Not only is it proposed to disfranchise substantially the whole white population and deprive them of all part or lot in the government, but by usurping the right of every sovereign state to place the political power and the destiny of the South in the hands of an inferior and ignorant race, only one step advanced, and that through the institution of Slavery, from the lowest depths of barbarism to repeat here the history of Jamaica and Hayti. What is that history? I quote from a work recently published in London, entitled, "The West Indies, Their Moral and Social Condition," the author of which, E. B. Underhill, was sent out under the auspices of the Baptist Missionary Society of London, and though a thorough-going Abolitionist at the start was obliged to give the following:

"We passed by many or through many abandoned plantations, the buildings in ruin, the sugar mills decayed, and the iron pans strewn the roadside, cracked and broken. But for the law which forbids, on pain of confiscation, the export of all metals, they would long ago have been sold to foreign merchants. Only once in this long ride did we come upon a mill in use, it was grinding canes in order to manufacture the syrup from which Tafia is made, a kind of inferior rum, the intoxicating drink of the country. In the time of the French occupation, before the Revolution of 1793,

'thousands of hogsheads of sugar were produced, now, not one. All is decay and desolation. The pastures are deserted, and the prickly pear covers the land once laughing with the bright hues of the sugar cane. The plow is an unknown implement of culture, although so eminently adapted to the great plains and deep soil of Hayti. A country so capable of producing for export, and therefore for the enrichment of its people, besides sugar, and coffee, cotton, tobacco, the castor-bean, spices, every tropical fruit and many of the fruits of Europe, lies uncultivated, unoccupied, and desolate. Its rich mines are neither explored nor worked, and its beautiful woods rot in the soil where they grow. A little logwood is exported, but ebony, mahogany, and the finest building timber, rarely fall before the woodman's ax, and then only for local uses. The present inhabitants despise all servile labor, and are, for the most part content with the spontaneous productions of the soil and forests."

The degraded barbarous condition of the negroes of Hayti is well illustrated in a description given by Mr. Underhill of what is known as "The religion of Vandoux, or Serpent Worship." The object worshipped is a small green snake, and the custom is a purely African heathenism. The negro has always a predisposition to it.

"The Vandoux", says Mr. Underhill, "meet in a retired spot, designated at a previous meeting. On entering they take off their shoes, and bind about their bodies handkerchiefs in which a red color predominates. The King is known by the scarlet band around his head, worn like a crown, and a scarf of the same color distinguishes the Queen. The object of the adoration, the serpent, is placed on a stand. It is then worshipped; after which the box is placed on the ground, the Queen mounts upon it, is seized with violent tremblings, and gives utterance to oracles in response to the prayers of the worshippers; a dance closes the ceremony. The King puts his head on the serpents box; a tremor seizes him which is communicated to the circle. A delirious whirl or dance ensues, heightened by the free use of Tafia. The weakest fall, as if dead, upon the spot. The bacchanalian revelers, always dancing and turning about, are borne away into a place near at hand, where sometimes under the triple excitement of promiscuous intercourse, drunkenness and darkness, scenes are enacted, enough to make the impassible Gods of Africa itself gnash their teeth with horror."

Such is the revolting picture presented by that race under the influence of emancipation from slavery; go now to Africa, from whence came, a few generations back, the negroes of the South. Witness the native population sitting upon the sands of the sea shore, basking their naked forms in the rays of the sun, living upon the spontaneous productions of the soil, bowing down to the worship of idols, and tell me if you men of New Hampshire will make the negro the political equal, no, not the political equal, but the political master of the white race; and the negress the equal, ay! the superior of the unfortunate, unoffending white woman of the South and the very men who to-day prate to you of negro equality and negro franchise; are they whose party in New Hampshire was founded upon the idea of depriving Irishmen and foreigners of the right of suffrage, because, as they claimed, their education and appreciation of republican institutions would not warrant their being trusted with the ballot. But how is it proposed to accomplish this enormity, this absolute destruction of the reserved and sacred rights of the states, this overthrow of the fundamental theory of the Government? Why, the means proposed to be employed and now in process of development are well worthy the object to be attained: What are those means? Simply the impeachment of the President, the destruction of the Supreme Court, and the absolute usurpation by one of the co-ordinate branches of the government of the constitutional powers of the other two co-ordinate departments. The President, bound by his oath of office to preserve this glorious Union, protests against its destruction, and impeachment by reckless partisans stares him in the face, with revolution, its attendant. The Supreme Court decides that civil rights are guaranteed to American citizens, that test oaths find no authority in the Constitution, that trial by jury is a sacred right, and forthwith the destruction of that august tribunal is resolved upon as an insurmountable obstacle to the schemes of mad men, with whom the Jacobins of France would bear a favorable comparison. What are the excuses for keeping the country in a fever of excitement, its business and financial interests deranged at home and abroad, its future clouded, and the eyes of the world attracted by the amazing spectacle of the proposed impeachment of the Chief Magistrate of the American Republic. One or two brazen men, shameless with regard to their own or their country's fame, intimate that Andrew Johnson procured the assassination of Mr. Lincoln. Does the candidate believe this? Does a man in Congress or out believe it? If he does, why are not the necessary steps at once taken for the arrest, indictment, trial, conviction, aye, hanging of Andrew Johnson, by the means provided in the Constitution for the punishment of crime, whether committed by the high or the humble, the rich or the poor, those in official life or in private life? If Andrew Johnson has committed murder or been accessory thereto, he is as much answerable to the law as the man who murdered your Franconia neighbor.

Gen. Walter Harriman then made a speech after his peculiar, eloquent and forcible manner, and at its conclusion Mr. Sinclair closed the debate as follows:

In rising to close the debate, he said he seemed to be remarkably unfortunate in the selection of questions, which he had submitted to his opponent. The first of the series was: Are you in favor of the impeachment of the President, and can you state any constitutional clause for his impeachment? The gentleman tells you, my fellow citizens, that it is a dead issue; also that the questions of the reconstruction of the Union, the denying of the right of the States to representation in the Congress of the United States, the reducing of States to the condition of Territories and Negro Suffrage; these, my friends, are all dead issues. If that was true, he was obliged to accept the issue forced upon him by the Republican State Central Committee, and in doing so he had propounded other interrogatories to the gentleman, which perhaps were not dead, but on the contrary were altogether too lively for the gentleman. He did not believe the fact of his nomination for governor by the Radical party a sufficient reply to the charges made by as brave and as truthful an officer as ever trod the field of battle, who had his arm shot off at Williamsburg, and who said to the Governor and Council; "If you will allow me to lay the evidence before you, if I do not prove every one of these charges and specifications to be strictly true, I will agree that my remaining arm be severed from my body." The only assumption that can be made is that every charge is literally true.

The gentleman says the Democratic party of New Hampshire is disloyal. Disloyal to what? To the Constitution? There is not a clause of that sacred instrument that they are not ready to swear with uplifted hands to support and obey. Is it to the Union? There is not a state from Canada to the gulf, or between the shores of either ocean, which their patriotism is not broad enough to embrace; its dead repose on every battlefield of the Union. Who of the many officers who went forth from New Hampshire was best entitled to be called the bravest of the brave? Who first in the deadly charge — last in retreat? What recent monument in our midst, inscribed with the names of twelve battles, points most proudly to heaven? What manly form, scarred by eleven wounds rests beneath it? A New Hampshire Democrat; in the language of the candidate here, a New Hampshire Copperhead, Col. Edward E. Cross. Let the candidate go stand by that monument, read the record there inscribed—compare it with his own, then tell us when and where he earned the right to denounce the party to which he, to the hour of his death, was proud to belong. That party to which the candidate himself at its State Convention of 1861, after the secession of some of the states in the exuberance of his love exclaimed in the language of Ruth to Naomi: "Entreat me not to leave thee, nor return from following after thee; for whither thou goest will I go; where thou lodgest will I lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me and more also if aught but death part me and thee." While in the same breath he exclaimed that the secession which had already taken place was the inevitable result of the Constitutional and damnable heresies of the Republican party which, when predicted by him, they had laughed to scorn, but that levity upon such an occasion struck upon his ears like the laughter of the inebriate at the bed of death, or the fiddling of Nero at the burning of Rome.

The candidate tells us that the Constitutional Amendment is a proposition for reconstruction. By whom has that proposition ever been made, and what guarantee has the South that it will be restored to its Constitutional rights, even though that amendment be adopted? None whatever. Even now, Phillips and Sumner and their coadjutors proclaim that amendment to be unsatisfactory. See how it stands, when the ravages of the war were at the worst they were told: "You bring your infictions upon yourselves, you have nothing to do but lay down your arms, disband your armies, return to your peaceful avocations, acknowledge the authority of the Government of the United States, and resume your place as States in the Union, clothed with all your rights, and secure in all your privileges."

This language was used not only by the President, but substantially by both houses of Congress, and with these declarations fresh their arms were laid down, purposes of obedience to the Constitution and laws of the United States were declared, ordinances of secession were repealed. The condition not suggested by Mr. Lincoln, but required by the present President to be fulfilled, was complied with: Slavery was abolished, the rebel debt repudiated, and now, with ruin and want in every hamlet, when they claim the right of representation by loyal men in Congress, they are told that they have no right to participate in its deliberations, to present their wants, or speak of their woes. Mr. Sinclair closed in the following words:

Men of New Hampshire, who come from beneath the shadows of those mighty hills to which the patriotism of your fathers gave the names of Washington, of Jefferson, of Madison, of Monroe, of Webster and Clay, will you endorse such intrinsic wrong and flagrant fraud as this? Will you not rather swear that so long as your eyes shall be permitted to behold one green tree growing upon their bases, or a living stream come leaping from their sides, so long will you be true to the Constitution and the Union as our fathers made them.

Three cheers were then given for the Union and the crowd dispersed.

CHAPTER VIII.

OTHER SINKLERS, SINCLAIRS, AND ST. CLAIRS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, MAINE, AND VERMONT.

1952. Charles Sinkler's name appears among the soldiers of New Hampshire. In the roll of Col. Shadrach Walton's men the name is spelled Sinkler. "The account is for sixty men from July 21 to Nov. 8, and for ten men from that time to Nov. 14. The year was not mentioned but it was probably 1710, on the expedition against Port Royal, which resulted in the capture of that place."

SINKLERS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

1953. George Sinkler<sup>1</sup>. The indications are that he was a near connection of the Exeter family, and was probably a son of James Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, No. 7, or John Sinkler<sup>2</sup>, No. 20. Born as early as 1707, as he was doing business in 1728, and was presumably 21 years of age. He first appears upon the records as of Exeter, N. H., Sept. 17, 1728, when he contracted to settle upon and carry on land in Nottingham, N. H., belonging to Aaron Morrill of Salisbury, Mass., for which he received a deed of said Morrill of ten acres of land in Nottingham. He was a resident in that town on Jan. 8, 1733-34, when he sold 40 acres of land there to Nathaniel Gilman. He had lots Nos. 38 and 40, in King street. On May 8, 1734, "now of Exeter," he bought land in Exeter of John McCrelis. He was a resident of Haverhill, Mass., on July 21, 1743, when he purchased one-third of two hundred acres in Nottingham of Aaron Morrill of Salisbury, Mass., the original right of James Calfe. He was of Kingston, N. H., Nov. 28, 1761, when he purchased land in Hampstead, N. H., of David and Mehitabel Hale. By trade he was called "Tayler." He resided in Hampstead till his death, which occurred between April 10 and May 27, 1767, as his will was made on the former, and probated on the latter date. He married Hannah ———, who survived him.

JOHN ST. CLAIR OF STRAFFORD, VT.

1967. John St. Clair<sup>1</sup> of Strafford, Vt., was without question an offshoot of the New Hampshire family of that name. There is strong reason for supposing that he was a son of Ebenezer Sinclair, the martyr soldier of the Revolution (see No. 129), though there is no positive evidence. He had land deeded to him in Strafford by Ashael Chamberlain. In personal appearance he was tall, straight, and finely proportioned. His date of birth was Jan. 18, 1778, and he died in Burlington, Vt., July 4, 1817, and is buried there. Mrs. St. Clair was Rhoda Merrill, a sister of John Merrill of Claremont, N. H. They were married Sept. 18, 1797. She was born Oct. 14, 1777. After Mr. St. Clair's death she married for her 2d husband, Oct. 18, 1817, Simeon Green. Her death occurred May 31, 1844. Her children by 2d marriage were: Alpha Green, born Jan. 30, 1819; married June 4, 1849, Samuel H. Bachelder, and died Sept. 20, 1866. Alba Greene, born Nov. 19, 1820; married Aug. 26, 1844, Apphia Clogston. He was a Union soldier, and died in the hospital at Alexandria, Va., Dec. 20, 1863.

Royal Burnham of that town. He made his home with that family until he attained his majority. Late in life he was second agent of the Copperas Hill Mining Works, and filled the place acceptably for many years. In 1836 he went to the city of New York, and was connected with the establishment of the Croton water works. He returned to his native town and in 1840, became owner and manager of a hotel at South Strafford, where he died June 27, 1853. He

CHAPTER IX.

ROBERT SINKLER OF WELLS, ME., AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

1989. Robert Sinkler, in the old records, was an early resident of Wells, Me. The relationship which existed between him and John Sinkler the first of Exeter, N. H., is not known. It is probable that he was a son of the aforesaid John of Exeter, although there has been found no evidence of this in any will or other record. Many wills and deeds in former times were never recorded at the county offices, and were ultimately lost. It was not an uncommon thing for one to deed to his son in land what he considered would be that son's portion of his estate, and then make no mention of said son in his will. This may have been the case with John Sinkler of Exeter, in relation to Robert Sinkler of Wells, Me. The distance between the places was not great, many citizens of Exeter had settled in Wells, and the latter place was an outlet for the older settlement, and furnished a home for its surplus inhabitants and sons of its older residents. There it was that Rev. John Wheelwright and his colony found a refuge when they fled from Exeter. The communication between the citizens of the two towns, as evidenced upon the records, was very close and intimate, and transfers of land from the citizens of one town to the citizens of the other were continually taking place. It is not unlikely, indeed it is extremely probable, that Robert Sinkler of Wells had received land there as his part of his inheritance, although such deed of conveyance may not be on record. There are several evidences of close relationship between John Sinkler of Exeter and his supposed son, Robert Sinkler of Wells. The age of the latter was right for him to be a son of the former. The same christian names have for generations been perpetuated in either branch; the habits, customs, and occupations of persons of the two lines have been largely the same, and at this day there is a strong family resemblance between representatives of the diverged and diverging lines.

From the earliest record John Sinkler of Exeter was a pioneer, and struck out upon the frontier of civilization, and through all generations to the present, his descendants have been pioneers, and have loved frontier life. Many of them have been mechanics, the owners of sawmills, and other kinds of manufactories. It seemed as though one of the race could not be happy unless he was converting the vast trees of the forest into manufactured lumber, thus making it serviceable to man. All of these characteristics have been prominent in the descendants of Robert Sinkler of Wells. They, too, have been frontiersmen, mechanics, owners and operators of mills and manufactories. Jonathan Sinkler, a grandson of John Sinkler of Exeter, and himself a native of that town, was an owner of land, and a resident of Wells, Me., in 1729. Robert Sinkler, his supposed uncle, was there much earlier, although the records do not state the exact time. He was there early in its history, for that town in a public town meeting on March 18, 1812-14, voted him a grant of 100 acres, and 10 acres of meadow. The latter remained in the possession of his family until May 20, 1734, when it was sold by his son. Whom he married is not known. He died previous to April 28, 1718, and on Dec. 10, 1734, his son in a deed alludes to him as "late of Wells, deceased." His wife was Elizabeth _____, who on April 28, 1718, married 2d Peter Rich of Wells, and several times in deeds she and her husband relinquished power of thirds and right of dower in Robert Sinkler's land.

1991. John Sinkler<sup>2</sup> [1990] (Robert<sup>1</sup>). He was born as early as 1713, probably in Wells, Me., as he deeded land May 20, 1734, and must have been of age. He was a resident of Wells, Me., in what is now Kennebunk, near the old Larrabee Garrison on the bank of the Mousam river. In an old deed he is called cordwainer. On May 20, 1734, and Dec. 23, the same year, he deeded away land which had belonged to his father. He bought land and two-thirds of a sawmill Feb. 1, 1738. On March 17, 1841, he sold his dwelling *Rye, Normandy, France, in 1046 and earlier, was the place where Hubert Sinclair and his stalwart sons lived in a strong castle.

Rye, Sussex co., England, twenty years later, and after the Conquest in 1066, had received its name by the Sinclairs for the old Norman home, and was the abode of a brother of Hubert's, Hamo Sinclair, who built its castle, and of his famous son Robert Sinclair, who fortified and strengthened it.

Rye, Rockingham co., New Hampshire, U. S., six centuries later, took its name from the English town. Two and one-fourth centuries later and 843 years after the first union, still the name of Rye and Sinclair were again associated as Hon. Charles A. Sinclair represented Rye, N. H., in the Senate of New Hampshire.

The situation of these towns is similar in some respects. Rye, Normandy, France, is near the sounding sea, but the castle has vanished away. Rye, England, was one of the Cinque ports, the nearest sailing point to France. While in the quaint old city, on the side of a hill, the old castle the home of the Sinclairs still stands. Rye, New Hampshire, U. S., is on the sea coast, and the entire length of the town is washed by the briny waves of the Atlantic ocean.

unless he was converted lumber, thus making characteristics have been Sinkler of Wells. They, Sinklers and operators of Wells, a grandson of John Sinkler at town, was an owner of Wells in 1729. Robert Sinkler, though the records do not mention him in its history, for that matter in 1812-14, voted him a member. The latter remained in Wells in 1734, when it was sold to him. He died previous to 1734 in a deed alludes to him as Elizabeth Sinkler, daughter of Wells, and several other names of power of thirds and

He was living in Arundell, Me., Sept. 5, 1744, and soon after removed to Boston, Mass., where on Aug. 19, 1748, he sold land in Arundell, Me. He had military experience like most of the Sinklers, and volunteered as a soldier from Wells, Me., under Capt. John Storer, and was in the expedition which captured Louisburg on June 28th, 1745. This was the strongest fortress on the continent. The troops sailed from Boston, Mass., March 24, 1745, and forty-nine days were spent in the reduction of the place. Was again a resident of Arundell, when "for not frequenting the public worship of God on the Lord's day for six months, from Jan. 1, 1749," he was brought before the court and fined. He lived in Arundell, Me., until about 1770, when he removed from the town, or died, probably the latter. He married April 19, 1739, Mary Wakefield. From information furnished me the following were his 1994. Adoniram Sinkler<sup>d</sup> [1992] (John<sup>d</sup>, Robert<sup>d</sup>). He located in Lisbon, Me., about 1760, and was among the earliest settlers of that town. At that period it was a wilderness, thickly wooded, with no roads, and none of the appurtenances of civilized life. His nearest neighbor lived several miles away. That neighbor was old Master Bibber, and his wife and Mrs. Sinkler often exchanged visits, going back and forth through the forests, finding their way by marked or blazed trees. The nearest gristmill was fifteen miles away, at Bath, Me., and to that mill Mr. Sinkler frequently went carrying a bushel of corn upon his back to be ground, and bringing it back to his home in the same manner. He took his land in its wild state and made a highly productive and beautiful farm. It was situated in the north part of the town, six miles from Lisbon Falls, and is still known as the Sinclair homestead. Mr. Sinkler, his descendants say, was a son of John Sinkler of Wells and Arundell, Me., which appears to be a correct statement. He was not a religious man till a few years before his death, when he was converted and became an earnest and devoted follower of the Master. Thrice each day did prayer ascend to the Heavenly Father. He married Elizabeth Joy, and she and her husband were members of the Baptist church. He died when about 90 years of age. Mrs. Sinkler died when about 75 years of age. They died and are buried in Lisbon, Me.

THE RICHE FAMILY.

the feudal chief of Senlis, near Paris, France, in the 10th century. His son, Warren le Rich went from Normandy to England with William the Conqueror in 1066, and was the ancestor of the English family of Rich. (Sinclairs of England, p. 123.) In this instance and in that of Elizabeth Sinclair, widow of Robert, No. 1989, who married Peter Rich, the long diverging lines of the same family, Rich and Sinclairs, are again united.

the homestead, when he went into the lumbering business at Little River Village, now Lisbon Falls. He had an interest in a sawmill, and later owned a shingle and clapboard mill, and transacted business till they were destroyed by fire in 1852. After this heavy loss he engaged in the grocery trade at East Auburn, Me., for three years, when he purchased a small farm in his native town, where he lived till his death, Sept. 28, 1883, aged 76 yrs. 6 mos. 14 days. He married June 5, 1846, Lucretia Totman Higgins of Lisbon, Me., daughter of Zaccheus Beal and Mary Linscot (Totman) Higgins. He was domestic in his nature and his life seemed bound up in his family, and for them any sacrifice was cheerfully made. He was noted for his kindness and generosity, and possessed rare qualities of mind and heart which drew men to him. During his last years he dwelt beneath the shadows, and his mind was oppressed with melancholy, from which he could with difficulty arouse himself, except when he realized that it caused sadness to others. Mrs. Sinclair resides East Rochester, N. H.

William Webber, who was born in Chatham, England, Oct. 1, 1805. He went to sea as a cabin boy when 12 years of age, and was a follower of the sea all his after life. He acquired a good education on shipboard. He was master of many coasting vessels which ran between New Orleans, La., and Pensacola, Fla., previous to the war. He was a skilful navigator, and for 45 years was master of a ship. He enjoyed the confidence of all. He died June 20, 1881, at New Orleans, La.; she died Jan. 30, 1877.

2080. Everett Moses Sinclair* [2058] (Moses*, John*, Adoniram*, John*, Robert*). He was born in Lisbon, Me., Aug. 16, 1848. He received a common school education, and in 1863 entered the employ of the Androscoggin mills at Lewiston, Me., as picker boy. Was afterwards in the Worumbo Woolen mills of Lisbon Falls, Me., and in 1867 he accepted a position in the Pondicherry mills, at Bridgton, Me.

In 1872 he took charge of the weaving in the Coheco Woolen mills, East Rochester, N. H. Was subsequently employed at Antes Fort, Lycoming co., Penn., and at the Knowles Loom works at Worcester, Mass. In 1884 he was elected superintendent of the Coheco mills at East Rochester, N. H., which position he still holds.

His life has been one of close attention to business, and his success has been won by honesty, steadfastness of purpose, and that persistency which usually merits and generally brings success.

In 1873 he united with the Methodist Episcopal church and has taken a deep interest in the moral welfare of all. Was superintendent of the Sunday school for several years. He has served his town some time as a member of the Board of Education, having the supervision of the public schools. In politics, a Republican. He has written many articles upon mechanical and local historical subjects. He is a member of the Masonic order.

He married Jan. 30, 1870, Eleanor Perry Hill. She was daughter of John and Helen (Stavart) Hill of Langholm, Scotland, of which place her father was a native. She was born July 5, 1848, in Selkirk, Scotland. Langholm, the home of her parents, is a most romantic town of 3,000 people. Its streets are narrow, the murmuring Esk flows through it, and high and wooded hills and mountains almost shut it in from the outside world. It is near the English border, in a section of country picturesque and beautiful, and made forever famous as the scene of border exploits. Only a short distance away were the Hollows Tower and the place where stood the castle of "Gilnockie" Armstrong, the famous chief of his clan, the Robin Hood of the border, whose fame still flourishes in the Scotian song. In a valuable museum, filled with many relics of bygone centuries, is the long, ungainly sword, "Gilnockie". In this town and charming locality, where every foot of territory is historic, the first five years of Mrs. Sinclair's life were spent.

Then her parents came to America; were for a time in New York City, then in Ontario, Richland co., Ohio, where her mother died Feb. 15, 1861, when her father removed to Dexter, Me. In 1865, while living with an aunt in Bridgton, Me., Isabella Fairgrieve, she married Mr. Sinclair. She died April 21, 1878, leaving two children. He married 2d, May 23, 1880, Carrie Mary, daughter of Charles Edwin (son of John Manson) and Mary Ann (Foss) Manson, who was born at Rochester, N. H., June 5, 1859. She lived with her parents in Wolfborough, N. H., and was educated at the academy in that place. In 1878 her parents removed to

DESCENDANTS.

2086. Thomas Sinclair<sup>1</sup>. He is said to have been born in New Hampshire, but is more likely to have been an offshoot of the Vermont branch of the New Hampshire family. About the year A. D. 1800 he settled in Robinston, Maine, where several of his children were born. He was a farmer. He removed to Columbia, Me., and was killed there about 1830 while stoning up a well.

He married Dolly, or Martha, daughter of Gideon Allen, who died in that town. They were attendants and perhaps members of the Baptist church. It is said he was a soldier in the 1812-15 war with Great Britain.

JOHN SINCLAIR OF VIRGINIA AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

2124. John Sinclair<sup>1</sup>, the founder of this branch of the Sinclair family, was a Scotchman and came to the American colonies in 1747 with the families of Douglass, McDonald, Shepherd, and others. They were political exiles. They had united their destinies with the house of Stuart, and when the fortunes of that family went down in darkness and in blood on the terrible field of Culloden Moor, April 16, 1746, their native country was no longer a place of safety, and they fled to America, for the victorious King George II. showed no mercy to his adversaries.

Mr. Sinclair located near Leesburg, Va., on the Potomac river. He was a planter and led a life of quietness, sobriety, and honesty. The name of his wife is not known. His family was large, and he died upon his estate about the year 1800. The larger part of the members of the family in Virginia are members of the Baptist church, while those who reside in Illinois are members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

IN WAR OF THE REVOLUTION.

2178. George Sinclair on the 18th of September, 1777, at Philadelphia, Penn., enlisted as a seaman on frigate Washington, commanded by Capt. Thomas Reed; then enlisted for one year on Hell Cat, commanded by Captain Robert French. The vessel was burned at Mud Island. Was then a steward on ship Repulse, commanded by Capt. Peter Brewster. This vessel was burned by the Americans. He enlisted May, 1778, at Mt. Holly, Burlington co., N. J., in Capt. Samuel Riddings' company, 2d Regt., commanded by Colonel Shreve, and served till March 1, 1783; then drafted into Capt. Abel Wyman's company, Colonel Ogden's Regt., the 1st, and discharged June 3, 1783. He was in the battles of Monmouth and Springfield, N. J., and was at the capture of Lord Cornwallis and the British army Oct. 19, 1781.

He was a resident of Hanover, Butler co., Ohio, July 17, 1820, and was 66 years of age. It is thought that his descendants are still in that place.

OTHER SINCLAIRS. — CAPT. JOHN SINCLAIR. — 1812-15 WAR.

2179. Capt. John Sinclair had in the 1812-15 war with Great Britain been an under officer or seaman of Capt. Thomas Shaw, who commanded the privateer Portsmouth, "The Dandy of the Seas." This craft had sailed from Portsmouth, N. H., and had made great havoc on the British merchant ships on the high seas.

Mr. Sinclair had been with Captain Shaw throughout all the cruises of the ship, aided in capturing its prizes, and shared in glories of those conflicts and successes. He succeeded Captain Shaw in the command on November, 1814, and on that day put out to sea from Portsmouth harbor. On Nov. 13, when near Cape Sable, he recaptured the schooner Nancy of Newburyport, Mass. On the 28th he captured the British Ocean with timber for Glasgow; they took out provisions and burned her. On same day he captured the brig Langton from Richebucto, N. S., with timber for Scotland. He parolled the crews of the two vessels and gave up the latter one, after obtaining £700 sterling as ransom. He had a variety of adventures till Dec. 14, which is the last we hear of him.

WAR OF 1812-15.

2180. George St. Clair<sup>d</sup>, born at New York, N. Y., about 1761; enlisted Sept. 28, 1812, in Capt. George McGlassin's company, 15th Regt., U. S. Infantry. Was wounded in the battle of Little York, Upper Canada, April 28, 1813; discharged May 28, 1815.

2181. Samuel Sinclair was a private in Capt. Joseph Smith's company, of the 4th Regt. of Detached Militia; enlisted Sept 14, 1814; served 18 days. Regiment was stationed at the Rope walk in Portsmouth, N. H., near the Arsenal.

TION.

September, 1777, at Philadelphia. He commanded the frigate Washington, commanded for one year on Hell. The vessel was burned by the Americans. He was captured by the British at the battle of the Clouds, N. J., in Capt. Mifflin's company, and was returned by Colonel Shreve, to Capt. Abel Wyman's company, and discharged June 3, 1781, at Springfield, N. J., and the British army. He died at Cincinnati, Ohio, July 17, 1820, and his descendants are

JOHN SINCLAIR OF NEW YORK.

2193. John Sinclair<sup>1</sup>; was first called Peter. His mother died when he was quite young. His father's Christian name not known; married again and they had one daughter. Peter Sinclair was bound out to service when quite young, and was treated so unkindly by the people with whom he lived that he ran away from them and to escape detection changed his name to John Sinclair, by which he was ever after known. He was a soldier in the war of 1812. Tradition says that he was born in New Hampshire, and that his father, whose name is said to be John Sinclair, with a brother came from Scotland, and lived in New Hampshire. This John Sinclair served in or through the Revolutionary War—according to tradition. Appearances (but no proof) indicate that he was a descendant of John Sinclair of Exeter, N. H., and it is not improbable that he was an offshoot of one of those New Hampshire Sinclairs who migrated to Essex, Vt., and vicinity, of some of whose sons we have no account.

The subject of this sketch married Phebe, daughter of Major Quigley of the Revolutionary army, a resident, perhaps, of Trenton, N. J., and had nineteen children, fifteen of whom lived to mature life, married, and had families. Mr. Sinclair lived in Allegheny co., N. Y., and in Seneca county, and other places. Mrs. Sinclair died in Branch co., Mich. He was a farmer, and died in Allegheny co., N. Y.

CHAPTER XII.

DESCENDANTS.

2229. Gen. Arthur St. Clair* was born in Thurso, county of Caithness, Scotland, March 23, 1736. In that most northern town of the mainland of Scotland, swept by some of the fiercest and chilliest of ocean winds, he spent the years of his childhood and youth. "His father, being a younger son, possessed neither lands nor title, and died at an early age from the effects of a life of idleness and pleasure." In his other parent (whose maiden name is believed to have been Murray) Arthur St. Clair was more fortunate, as she supplied not only the affection and tender care of a devoted mother, but also the aid and counsel which had been due from the father.

He was educated at the university of Edinburgh, Scotland; was indentured to the famous physician, Dr. William (or John) Hunter of London, but inheriting the martial spirit of his race, he abandoned medicine. His mother died in the winter of 1856-57, and immediately after he purchased a commission as Ensign in the Royal regiment of Foot, bearing date of May 13, 1757. He was then twenty-one years of age. He came to America with Admiral Edward Boscawen's fleet. He served under Gen. Jeffrey Amherst at the capture of Louisburg, July 26, 1728, and under Gen. James Wolfe at Quebec, Sept. 30, 1758, and under the latter commander in the victorious battle on the Plains of Abraham, Sept. 13, 1759. He was made a lieutenant April 17, 1759, which position he resigned April 16, 1762.

After the siege of Quebec he obtained a furlough and repaired to Boston, Mass. He had formed an attachment to Miss Phebe, daughter of Balthazar and Mary (Bowdoin) Bayard. Her mother was a half-sister of Gov. James Bowdoin, and granddaughter of James Bowdoin, a wealthy citizen.

*His father was William Sinclair of Thurso, Scotland, son of James of Thurso, son of James Second of Assery, son of John First of Assery, son of James First of Murkle, son of John Master of Caithness, son of George Sinclair, Fourth Earl of Caithness. See pedigree, No. 89, pp. 43-44, by which his ancestors are traced for more than a thousand years to Rogenwald.

On May 14, 1760, they were married in Trinity church in Boston, by Rev. William Hooper, rector. By this marriage St. Clair received £14,000 from his wife's grandfather*, James Bowdoin.

Mrs. St. Clair was born in Boston in 1743, and died at Chestnut Ridge, Penn. He lived for a time in Boston and its vicinity, and he bought, May 20, 1760, land and buildings on Hollis street, in Boston, of Francis Brindley of Roxbury, Mass. He soon after was a resident of Braintree, Mass., and was residing there on Aug. 16, 1763, when he sold 19 acres of land on Boston Neck and all interest in the Old George Tavern, so called, to Meletiah Brown of Boston. (From Suffolk County Mass. records, in Boston, Mass.) Resigning his British commission in 1764 he and his young wife removed to Bedford, Penn., and later to a fine landed estate in the picturesque Ligonier valley of western Pennsylvania, where several Scotch families of consequence had already settled. Here he had a great tract of land of 10,881 acres, 8,270 acres lying in Westmoreland county. (From the St. Clair papers, pp. 7 and 8.)

On May 21, 1766, he and his wife were living in St. Mary's co., Md. They returned to Pennsylvania, and he filled various offices. On April 5, 1770, he was appointed surveyor for district of Cumberland, and a member of the Governor's council the same year. After 1779 he lived at Plattstown, Penn., for several years.

At the opening of the Revolution he was appointed Colonel in December, 1775, in the American army. On Jan. 3, 1776, he became Colonel of the 2d Penn. regiment, and being ordered to Canada, joined Gen. John Sullivan after the disastrous affair at Three Rivers, and aided in saving the American army from capture. On March 9, 1776, he was made Brigadier-general, and joined General Washington in November, and was appointed to organize the New Jersey militia, and participated in the battles of Trenton and Princeton. On the 19th of February, 1777, he was appointed Major-general. He succeeded Gen. Horatio Gates in command at Fort Ticonderoga. This place he subsequently evacuated. As General Burgoyne bore down upon him with a superior force, a part of his force was attacked and defeated at Hubbardston July 7, 1777. His reverses were a serious loss to our cause and deep

*Gen. St. Clair was by marriage a nephew of Gov. James Bowdoin of Massachusetts, as his wife's mother, Mary (Bowdoin) Bayard, was a half-sister of the Governor. The latter had an only son, Hon. James Bowdoin, the diplomatist, and an only daughter, Elizabeth Bowdoin, who married Sir John Temple, bart, and had two sons and two daughters. Her eldest daughter, Elizabeth Bowdoin Temple, married in 1786, Hon. Lindall Winthrop of Boston, Mass., and had a very numerous family, of whom the late Hon. Robert C. Winthrop of Boston was the youngest, and was long the only surviving son. Thus the wife of General St. Clair was an own cousin of Mrs. Sir John Temple, the grandmother of Hon. Robert C. Winthrop of Boston. The latter, many years ago, found among the papers of Gov. Bowdoin, a letter of General St. Clair, written to the Governor in 1777. It is one of interest, and published in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1863. (From a personal letter of Hon. Robert C. Winthrop.)

chagrin to General Washington. He remained with the army, and at the battle of Brandywine, Sept. 11, 1777, he acted as voluntary aid to General Washington. In a court martial he was honorably acquitted of all charges against him. He assisted General Sullivan in preparing his expedition against the Indians. Was a member of the court martial which convicted Major Andre. He commanded at West Point in 1780, and aided in 1781 in suppressing the mutiny in the Pennsylvania troops. He joined Washington at Yorktown just previous to Cornwallis' surrender. In November of that year he was made commander of a body of troops; joined Gen. Nathaniel Greene, and was in the South till 1782.

He was a delegate to the Continental Congress from Nov. 2, 1785, to Nov. 28, 1787, and its president in 1787. In 1789 he was made Governor of the Northwestern Territory and served till 1802. The last words of Washington on his departure were: "Beware of a surprise." He made a treaty with the Indians at Fort Hamar in 1789, and in 1790 he fixed the seat of justice of the territory at Cincinnati, Ohio, which he named after the Society of the Cincinnati, of which he was president of the Pennsylvania branch from 1783 to 1789.

He was appointed commander-in-chief of the army that was operating against the Indians on March 4, 1791, and moved against the enemy on the Miami and Wabash rivers, suffering so severely with that aristocratic disease, the gout, that he had to be carried on a litter. He was surprised near the Miami villages on November 4th and his force was defeated by the savages under Blue Jacket, Little Turtle, and Simon Girty, the renegade. Washington refused a court of inquiry, and on the 5th of March General St. Clair resigned his commission, but a committee of Congress exonerated him from all blame for his disaster.

President Thomas Jefferson removed him from the governorship Nov. 22, 1802. He retired to a small log house on the summit of Chestnut Ridge, Penn., where the rest of his life was spent in poverty. He endeavored in vain to effect a settlement of his claims against the government. In 1813 the Legislature of Pennsylvania gave him an annuity of $400, and a short time previous to his death he received $2,000 from Congress, in discharge of his claims, and a pension of $60 per month.

He published "A Narrative of the Manner in which the Campaign against the Indians in the Year 1791 was Conducted under the Command of Maj.-Gen. St. Clair, with his Observations on the State-ments of the Secretary of War." (Philadelphia, 1812.)

He was now an old man. His once valuable property had largely melted away; "It was forced to a sale, and the old soldier and his family were reduced to want. In a log house on a bleak ridge by the side of the old state road from Bedford to Pittsburg, and almost in sight of the broad acres which once were his, Lewis Cass found him at the age of four score supporting his family by selling supplies to the wagoners who traveled that way. One day in August, 1818, when 82 years old, he was discovered lying insensible by the side of a rough and lonely road where he had fallen from his wagon while on the way to a neighboring town to procure some flour and other necessaries. He never rallied from the shock and died Aug. 31, 1818."

In personal appearance General St. Clair was tall, dignified, with chestnut hair, handsome, with blue-grey eyes, and blonde complexion. He was accomplished, and an interesting conversationalist, and possessed honorable principles. During his long life in America he kept up a correspondence with relatives in Scotland. Among his correspondents was Sir John Sinclair of Ulbster castle in Thurso, and in Edinburgh. The home of Sir John at the castle was less than a mile from the early home of General St. Clair.

It is related by his descendants that in his poverty stricken old age some wealthy relatives in Scotland graciously invited him to return to his native land and they would care for him. He gently declined the offer, saying, he had made his choice, had fought against his native country, had cast in his lot with America, and must abide the result, and could not return to Scotland. He is buried at Greensburgh, Penn. The inscription on his monument with an inaccurate date* of age is as follows:

"The earthly remains of Gen. Arthur St. Clair are deposited beneath this humble monument, which is erected to supply the place of a nobler one due from his country.

"Died Aug. 31, 1818, in the 84th year of his age."

On the reverse side of the monument are these words:

"This stone is erected over the bones of their departed brother by the members of the Masonic Society in this vicinity."

2287. Daniel St. Clair<sup>a</sup> [2231] (Gen. Arthur<sup>1</sup>). Capt. Daniel St. Clair was born 1764; married Rachel Shannon in 1789. She was born Feb. 25, 1771*. He resided at Penn Square, Montgomery co., Penn., where he died Jan., 1833, aged 68 years, and is buried at Evansburg, Penn. He was a Justice of the peace, a lawyer, and a captain in the war of the American Revolution. Mrs. St. Clair was born near Penn Square, Penn., Feb. 25, 1771; died at Penn Square, Penn., Oct. 15, 1821. She was daughter of Dr. Robert and Sarah (Dewers) Shannon. Her father was born near Norristown, Montgomery co., Penn.; resided near Penn Square, and died at White Marsh, Penn., about 1820. Mr. St. Clair was a generous man and liberally aided his less fortunate relatives.

He resided in June, 1828, in Norristown, Montgomery co., Penn. He was a lieutenant and then a captain in the 2d regiment Penn. Line, commanded by Col. Thomas Craig. He served from 1777 to the end of the war. In the fall of 1807 he lost his commission as captain with other valuable papers, which were in a chest or trunk, by sudden freshet of the Ohio river. He was pensioned by the government, and on the 17th day of April, 1818, he was allowed twenty dollars per month, the pension certificate being signed by John C. Calhoun, Secretary of War.

In his declaration, claiming a pension, dated June, 1828, he signed his name D. S. Clair (not St. Clair). (From original papers as seen by the author in possession of Rachel St. Clair Jacoby.)

He and his sister, Mrs. Louisa (St. Clair) Robb, were administrators of his father's (Gen. Arthur St. Clair's) estate. On the 30th of August, 1818, he received of the Treasurer of Pennsylvania three hundred and fifty dollars of pension money due his father at the time of his death from the state of Pennsylvania, and four hundred dollars more on Nov. 24, 1818, from Richard M. Crain, Treasurer.

2265. Louisa St. Clair<sup>2</sup> [2234] (Gen. Arthur<sup>1</sup>). She was born in 1772. Professor Hildreth in his Pioneer History (p. 262, which is quoted in Vol. I., pp. 160-161, of the St. Clair papers) describes her as "a healthy, vigorous girl, full of life and activity, every way calculated for a soldier's daughter; fond of frolic, and ready to draw amusement from all and everything around her. She was a fine equestrienne, and would mount the most wild and spirited horse without fear, managing him with ease and gracefulness; dashing through the open woodlands around Campus Martius at full gallop, leaping over logs or any obstruction that fell in her way.

"She was one of the most rapid skaters in the garrison; few, if any, of the young men equalling her in speed and activity, or in graceful movements in this enchanting exercise. Her elegant person and neat dress showing to much advantage called forth loud plaudits from both young and old. The broad sheet of ice on the Muskingum, near the garrison, for a few days in the winter afforded a fine field for this healthy sport. She was also an expert huntress; and would have afforded a good figure for Diana in her rambles through the woods had she been armed with the bow instead of the rifle. Of this instrument she was a perfect mistress; loading and firing with the accuracy of a backwoodsman, killing a squirrel from the highest tree, or cutting off the head of a partridge with wonderful precision. She was fond of roaming in the woods, and often went out alone into the forest near Marietta, fearless of the savages that occasionally lurked in the vicinity. She was as active on foot as on horseback, and could walk for several miles with the rapidity of a ranger. Her manners were refined; her person beautiful, with highly cultivated intellectual powers, having been educated with much care in Philadelphia. Born with a healthy, vigorous frame, she had strengthened both her body and mind by these athletic exercises when a child; probably first encouraged by her father, who had spent the larger portion of his life in camps. She was one of those rare spirits so admirably fitted to the times and the manners of the day in which she lived."

In her eighteenth year she exhibited a disposition of bravery rarely equaled in the history of brave women, and her reported ride into the camp of the famous Indian chief Brant in 1788, and among his warriors, was one of the most romantic and daring episodes of the Indian war.

Young Brant, son of the famous chief of that name, came down the Tuscarawas and Muskingum trail in 1788 with two hundred warriors and camped at Duncan's Falls, nine miles below Zanesville, Ohio, and by a runner informed General St. Clair that they desired the treaty preliminaries to be negotiated at that place. The General suspected this to be a plot to make him a prisoner, and so sent word back to Brant that he would soon reply to him by a ranger. Hamilton Kerr was dispatched to reconnoiter and to deliver St. Clair's letter. A short distance above Waterford Kerr discerned tracks, and creeping cautiously to a bluff, he heard the merry laugh of a woman. With speechless amazement he saw Louisa St. Clair dressed in Indian style, with a short rifle slung to her body, and mounted upon a pony. She assured him of her fixed purpose to visit Brant at Duncan's Falls. Expostulations failed to change her purpose. That night she ate her supper of dried deer's meat, and slept seated

sued their way the following morning and came in sight of the Indian camp. She took her father's letter from the ranger, telling him to hide until her return, dashed off upon her pony into the Indian camp, and was soon a prisoner. She asked for Brant, who appeared in war panoply, but was abashed at her presence. She handed him the letter, remarking they had met before,—he as a student on a visit from college, and she as the daughter of Major-general St. Clair at school. He bowed, being educated, read the letter, and evinced much excitement. Louise St. Clair, perceiving this, said she had risked her life to see him, and asked for a guard back to Marietta.
Brant replied: "I guard the brave and will accompany you home."
On the evening of the third day they, with Kerr, arrived at the Fort, where she introduced Brant to her father, and related the incidents of her journey, till then unknown to any at the Fort. Brant, after some hours was courteously escorted out of the lines, and soon after with his warriors went up the valley without a treaty, but deeply in love with the brave and beautiful Louisa St. Clair, and it is said that he wished to marry her. It has been asked: "Had General St. Clair given his daughter in marriage to Brant, would the alliance have averted war?"

She was her father's secretary in 1791-92, while he was Governor of the Northwest Territory. She lived at Ligonier, Penn., in her married life. She married Samuel Robb in 1795. Her father lived with her in the last of his life. She died there May 27, 1840, aged 67 years.

Another has thus written of her: "The brave patriotic spirit of her ancestry imbued the whole family." Four of her sons served in the Union army in the late war. Her devotion to her country was second only to her devotion to her God and her unbounded charity for all. Of all upon whose heart God laid His hand and sacredly ordained to motherhood, none filled the measure of their duty more completely. Of all the tired, weary souls whom God calls home, none ever found sweeter rest.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE SINCLAIRS OF NORTHUMBERLAND CO., PENN., AND THE SINCLAIRS OF TIRRE, ARGYLESIRE, SCOTLAND, OF PENNYCUICK, SCOTLAND, AND OF NEW HAVEN, CONN.

THERE were four brothers and one sister of this branch of the Sinclair family. Their names were Duncan Sinclair, Neale Sinclair, John Sinclair, Archie Sinclair, Margaret Sinclair. They were all born in Scotland; their native place is not known, as their old Sinclair records have been lost. The father of these children had but one brother. The Sinclairs fled from Scotland to the north of Ireland to escape religious or political persecution. They went there about 1762 and lived some twelve years, when the two eldest sons, Duncan Sinclair and Neale Sinclair, came to America in 1772, just previous to the Revolutionary war. John Sinclair, a son of Neale Sinclair, a few years ago lived near Milton, Penn. John Sinclair, Archie Sinclair, and their sister, Margaret Sinclair, who it is believed was then married to a Mr. Robert Johnson, a teacher, came later. Mr. Johnson was a native of Scotland; settled in Washingtonville, Penn., and was a teacher and farmer. He died about 1801. He had two daughters and a son. Their youngest daughter married her own cousin, Robert Templeton Sinclair. (See his family, No. 2323.)

2321. Duncan Sinclair<sup>1</sup>, one of the five children, was born in Scotland, place unknown, in 1753. By trade a weaver. He came to America with his brother, Neale Sinclair, in 1772, when about 20 years of age. He served 3 years as a volunteer in the Revolutionary war, General Green being his division commander. He crossed the Delaware river in the night preceding Washington's victory at Trenton. After the war he settled in Pennsylvania, at or near Derry, or Washingtonville. He lived in Northumberland co., Penn., and in 1799 he removed to Ontario county, that portion which is now Livingstone county, in New York. He was one of the first members of the organized Presbyterian church in the town of Geneseo; was one of the first elders, and held the place for many years. He married in Pennsylvania Hannah Templeton. He died in Geneseo, N. Y., Jan. 5, 1833.

THE SINCLAIRS OF TIREE, SCOTLAND.

The Sinclairs of Tiree, an island in Argyleshire, Scotland, came from the county of Caithness, and their pedigree can be traced by Rev. Brevard D. Sinclair of Seattle, Washington, back to the early Sinclairs or St. Clairs in Scotland.

2332. Donald Sinclair<sup>1</sup> lived in county of Caithness, but removed to the island of Tiree, where he was factor for MacLean of Kingerloch, who owned the island. He had a son:

2333. Donald Sinclair<sup>2</sup>, also of Tiree. Donald had a son:

2885. Rev. John Campbell Sinclair<sup>d</sup>, who was born in the island of Tiree Aug. 15, 1797. He studied in the universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow, Scotland, and graduated at the latter place as a ripe scholar. He studied theology under Rev. John Dick, D. D. In 1838 he and his family emigrated to Pictou, Nova Scotia, and he became a minister of the Presbyterian church, where he was one of its most popular clergymen. He preached at Roger's Hill, Middle River, and Little Harbor, N. S. Resided at Little Harbor. He preached at Alberton and West Point, Prince Edward Island, from 1843 to 1852. In 1852 he removed to Newburyport, Mass., and soon after located in Pittsburg, Penn., and labored among the foreign population successfully. In 1858 he received urgent calls to the churches of Galatia and Langstreet, N. C., which he accepted. He labored with great acceptance among the people who had come from the Highlands of Scotland. His fluency as a Gaelic scholar and preacher made him very attractive to thousands of his Scotch countrymen, and their descendants. After the war he labored among the Freedmen until 1869, when his voice suddenly failed, caused by outdoor preaching. After 1870 he lived with his son, Rev. Alexander Sinclair, and son-in-law, Rev. D. A. Cunningham, D. D., in Wheeling, West Virginia, where he died on Tuesday morning, April 23, 1878.

Mr. Sinclair married at Scalastil House, in the island of Mull, Argyleshire, Scotland, in 1822, Mary Julia McLean, daughter of John and Margaret (McLean) McLean. She was an orphan and lived with her cousins, on her father's side, at Scalastil House. Sir Archibald McLean and Sir Hector McLean, Major-generals in the British army, were her cousins. She died in Pittsburg, Penn., May 24, 1854, and is buried in the Allegheny cemetery.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE CILLEY, SEALEY FAMILY*.

AMONG the earliest settlers of New Hampshire were the Sealeys or Cilleys of the Isle of Shoals. Jenness, in his "Historical Sketch of the Isle of Shoals," thus speaks of them:

"The three brothers, William, Richard, and John Sealey, were also among the more distinguished of the early settlers there, where for many years they occupied chief positions as magistrates, constables, deputies, and merchants." They were early upon that island in the sea, and are presumed to be sons of Capt. Robert Seeley of Watertown, Mass., who was in that town in 1630. A supposed companion emigrant of Winthrop to America, who afterwards settled in Connecticut, and whose estate was administered upon in 1668.

It is evident that they came from the same locality in England that Capt. Robert Seeley came from, and, like him, were strongly opposed to the church of England, and apparently were in full accord with the faith of the Puritans, as shown in the language of various petitions.

This name, like many others, has undergone some changes. Sealey and Cilley are different forms and ways of spelling the same patronymic. While Sealey was the form adopted by the members of the little community on the Isle of Shoals, yet Cilley was the form adopted by a descendant of one of the brothers, Gen. Joseph Cilley of Revolutionary fame. He was a grandson of Thomas Sealey of Hampton, N. H., and in his will spelled his name Cilley, and this form has been adopted generally by the family. Of the three brothers

1. John Sealey's<sup>1</sup> name is first mentioned on the 28th of the 8th month, 1647. He died before 1670, and his estate was administered by his brother, William Sealy. He had been only a short time at the Shoals, then one of the most flourishing portions of New England, but he had previously lived in Essex co., Mass., "in Newbery, Mass.," and in Portsmouth, N. H.

2. William Sealy<sup>1</sup> probably lived upon the island until his death, which occurred between Aug. 1, 1671, and Dec. 13, 1671. He acted as an appraiser on the estate of Phillip Babb Aug. 1, 1671.

*I am indebted for the most of my information of this family to Gen. Jonathan Prince Cilley of Rockland, Me., who has published a "History of the Cilley Family."

He was "grand jurymen" June 30, 1656, July 5, 1660. "Was constable ye Isle of Shoals 25th of June, 1665." Had several suits in the courts of justice at Saco and Wells, Me., on July 5, 1661, July 6, 1661, July 7, 1664, and Oct. 12, 1669, and was called Ensigne in a petition.

3. Richard Sealey<sup>1</sup>, the last of the three brothers, appears twice upon the records; once on a petition to the Court of Boston, Mass., March 3, 1653, and once as a magistrate, May 18, 1653. He left the Isle of Shoals and removed to Hampton, N. H., probably before 1660. There he fixed his home.

7. Thomas Seally<sup>2</sup> [5] (Richard<sup>1</sup>). He was a sea captain, and lived at Hampton Falls and Nottingham, N. H., and at Andover, Mass., with his son Thomas Seally for a time, and died at the home of his son Joseph Seally, in Nottingham, whither he had gone from Andover on a visit. He married Ann, daughter of John and Mary (Bradbury) Stanyan.

14. Joseph Ceilley<sup>3</sup> [11] (Thomas<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>). Capt. Joseph Ceilley of Hampton, N. H., married Alice Rawlins* of Exeter, N. H., in 1729. She was born in 1701, and died in the winter of 1801. In 1729 or '30 Captain Ceilley removed to Nottingham, N. H., with whose interests he became intimately associated. He was one of its early settlers. Was a farmer, an agent for the proprietors of the grant and a captain in the militia.

* She was daughter of Benjamin<sup>3</sup> and Elizabeth Rawlins of Exeter, N. H. Her father was one of the original proprietors of Glimanton, N. H., in 1727. His will was made Sept. 7, 1736; proven April 30, 1740. This Benjamin Rawlins<sup>3</sup> was son of Thomas<sup>3</sup>, who lived at that part of old Dover called Bloody Point, now Newington, and removed to Exeter after 1668, where he lived till his death. Rebellious blood flowed in his veins, which caused him trouble, and he was once charged with high treason. He married about 1670 Rachel, daughter of Moses and Alice Cox of Hampton. (Moses Cox was born 1594; died at Hampton May 28, 1687, aged 93 years.) He died before Nov. 7, 1706, when his inventory was returned. ## CHAPTER XV.

THE RICHARD CLARK FAMILY.

1. Richard Clark<sup>1</sup> was, according to tradition, born in Greenland, N. H., in 1693, and his father came from England it is said. On Oct. 27, 1717, he purchased land in Exeter, N. H., of John Wedgewood, Sr., of that town, and lived in that part of Exeter which is now Newfields, N. H.

The town allotted him forty acres of land in 1725. He was an original proprietor of Gilmanton, N. H., May 13, 1727, and on Nov. 13, 1732, he added to his landed possessions by a purchase of twenty acres of John Wedgewood, Jr., in Newmarket, which was still farther increased by a grant of ten acres from the town of Exeter Aug. 9, 1738.

In November, 1746, he signed a petition for a bridge at Newmarket. In January, 1766, he, with his sons Richard, Jr., Caleb, and John Clark, signed a petition for a bridge at Newfields. There was a close connection between him and the Wedgewood family. It is claimed that his mother was a Miss Wedgewood.

Mr. Clark was a farmer, and his life closed in South Newmarket in 1784. He married Dolly Marston, who died Sept. 19, 1767. They had the following children, and probably more.

5. Richard Clark, Jr.<sup>2</sup> [2] (Richard<sup>1</sup>). Dea. Richard Clark, Jr., was born in Newmarket, N. H., in 1726. He resided in Newmarket until 1772, when he removed to Canaan, N. H., and settled on the farm owned in 1885 by John Currier, and later on the Heywood farm, where he died in 1816, aged 90 years, and is buried in the Wells cemetery. The infirmity of being a cripple prevented him from entering the army in the Revolutionary war, as did his brothers, and as he desired. He was a deacon in the church, and never failed to give earnest testimony of his faith upon all proper occasions. As a citizen he was held in high respect. He married Elizabeth Burley.

8. Elphalest Clark<sup>2</sup>; lived on a farm in Canaan, N. H., owned once by Levi Hamblett; removed to Boston, Mass., and d. there. Two of his sons were brokers in that city. Columbus Clark<sup>1</sup>, his son, was there recently.
9. Lydia Clark<sup>2</sup>; m. Reynold Gates, a Revolutionary soldier, and res. in Canaan, N. H.; was a most estimable lady, and d. about 1796. Among her children were:
1. Samuel Jones Gates<sup>1</sup>; d. Canaan, N. H.
  2. William Gates<sup>1</sup>; settled in Durham, Canada.
  3. Columbus Gates<sup>1</sup>; d. in Canaan, N. H.
10. Caleb Clark<sup>2</sup> [3] (Richard, Jr.<sup>1</sup>). He was born about 1730. He lived in Newmarket, N. H., the larger part of his life. About 1773 he settled in Canaan, N. H., and was a near neighbor of his brother, Richard Clark, and built the house long occupied by Bailey Welch. He was an efficient soldier in the Revolutionary war, and held a captain's commission. As a counsellor he was safe, and had a large amount of influence during his twenty years' residence in Canaan, N. H., where he died October, 1793, aged 69 years. Name of first wife not known. He married 2d, Nov. 12, 1782, Mary Lathrop, daughter of Thaddeus and Anna Lathrop, all of Colchester, Conn., born Nov. 4, 1762, and died Aug. 27, 1783. On the oldest stone in the ancient cemetery near Newmarket Junction is the record of the death of his child Susanna.

CHILDREN.

11. Susanna Clark<sup>2</sup>; d. in Newmarket, N. H., Feb. 13, 1752, aged 2 yrs. 1 mo.
12. Joseph Clark<sup>2</sup>; probably did not live in Canaan, N. H.
13. David Clark<sup>2</sup>; settled in Canaan, N. H., in 1772. In 1806 he removed to Durham, Quebec, and d. of spotted fever Jan. 19, 1810, aged 44 years, leaving a family there. His wife was Mary Basford.

14. Prescott Clark<sup>3</sup>, b. in 1768; settled in Canaan, N. H., in 1773. He removed to Durham, Quebec, in 1800, and d. of spotted fever Jan. 11, 1810, aged 42 yrs. His wife was Polly Burford, dau. of John Burford of Orange. Six of his children were b. in Canaan, N. H., and two in Sutton, P. Q. Among his children were:
1. John B. Clark<sup>4</sup>; d. Jan. 8, 1888, aged 88 yrs. 8 days.
  2. Henry Clark<sup>4</sup>; was living at Durham, Quebec, recently.
- 14a. Betty Clark<sup>3</sup>, b. Newmarket; m. Dec. 10, 1776, John, son of James Jones of Canaan, N. H.; 10 children.

15. John Clark<sup>2</sup> [4] (Richard<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Newmarket, N. H., about 1735. During the war of the Revolution he rendered true and valiant service in the cause of his country. Early he went to Landaff, N. H., being there in 1782, and was one of its first settlers. He lived on a fine farm in the westerly section of the present town, one and a half miles from the village of Lisbon. It is one of the most pleasant and attractive portions of the town, and is now owned by Luke Chandler. The frame of the original house, more than a century old, still stands, but has been removed to the opposite side of the highway, and is occupied by Midas King.

Mr. Clark was a prominent and leading spirit in that little band of pioneers. The annual town meetings were often called to meet at his house. The first was summoned by a warrant from Moses Dow, Esq., a justice of the peace at Haverhill, N. H., March 4, 1783, and the meeting was held March 20, 1783, at his home. Subsequent meetings were held there in 1784, '86, '87, and '93. Elected as the first town clerk, he served in 1783 and '84. Was chairman of the first board of selectmen in 1783, and re-elected in 1784.

It is interesting to watch the proceedings of that first annual meeting. There many of the citizens of Landaff took the oath of allegiance to the state, as required by the law passed Nov. 28, 1781.

He served as town treasurer, constable, and collector in 1787. Was fence viewer in 1790, and the five previous years; was surveyor of lumber, and often served on special committees of the town. Was a justice of the peace in 1782 and later, and often performed the marriage ceremony. For many years previous to his death he was totally blind. His death occurred at the home of his son, Levi Clark, about 1820, and he is buried in the cemetery at Landaff Center.

His wife was Esther Weeks of Newmarket, N. H., and died many years previous to the death of her husband. They were members of the Methodist Episcopal church. His children were probably all born in Newmarket, N. H.

29. John Clark, Jr.<sup>3</sup> [17] (John<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>). He was known on the town records of Landaff, N. H., as John Clark, Jr. His home was in the easterly section of the present town of Landaff, in one of the back districts known as the Scotland school district, on the farm now owned by John C. Atwood. His farm was situated on a sloping hillside, and many of its hard and unproductive acres have been turned out to pasture, while a sugar orchard covers another portion.
The house of Mr. Clark is still standing. He and his wife and family were regular attendants of the Methodist Episcopal church at Landaff Center. He married March 20, 1783, Eunice Jewett, who was born April 24, 1767. They died at the home of their sons in Fairlee, Vt.

33. Jonathan Clark<sup>s</sup> [18] (John<sup>s</sup>, Richard<sup>s</sup>). He was born Dec. 23, 1761; married Hannah Huckings of Bath, N. H., or of Topsham, Vt. They lived in Landaff, in the westerly part, near the town line of Bath. The house is demolished, the farm cut up and sold to different parties. Charles Sherman is owner of one portion of the farm. Mr. Clark was active in town affairs, and in his last years was greatly interested in religion. His wife was a devoted Christian. Fifteen years before her death she was violently sick, and death was apparently very near. She felt that she could not leave her children, and earnestly prayed that she might be spared, if it was the Lord's will. To her inner consciousness came a voice which said to her, as was said to the King of the Jews: "Behold I have added unto thy life fifteen years." She related this experience, recovered, and lived fifteen years. On the day that the fifteen years expired, she said to her nearest neighbor, Mrs. Hutchins, that she had no lease of life after that day, and felt that she might die. She attended a prayer meeting at a neighbor's house, and while talking with great earnestness to the young people upon religious things she fell in a swoon, was laid upon a bed, and expired before the dawning of the morning. She died Oct. 7, 1821. Her date of birth was June 29, 1772.

Mr. Clark married 2d Mrs. Hannah (Morrill) Clement Noyes, widow of Enoch Noyes, March 27, 1823, who survived her husband many years, and died at Warren, N. H., Jan. 18, 1862. He died Oct. 3, 1837, aged 77 years.

87. Daniel Clark<sup>4</sup> [45] (Ebenezer<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>5</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>). Col. Daniel Clark was born in Landaff, N. H., March 19, 1789. His life was spent in his native town, at the center, on the farm lately occupied by his son-in-law, Oliver Dodge Eastman. In his personal appearance he was of medium height, about 5 feet and 9 inches, weighed some one hundred and sixty pounds, with dark brown hair, dark complexion and blue eyes. His qualities of mind were much more than ordinary. He was intellectual, a great reader, with strong common sense and excellent judgment, and was one of the most influential men in his locality. His abilities and integrity were recognized and appreciated, and he filled many offices of trust. Was overseer of the poor in 1839 and '44. Was selectman in 1819, '20, '21, '22, '24, '25, '27; clerk in 1829; school committee in 1822; member of the Legislature in 1827. Was chosen a town agent in 1830, to prosecute law suits for the town, and to defend the town in all lawsuits. Was constable and collector of taxes in 1832, '33, '39, and '47; auditor in 1841. Was a justice of the peace and many cases were tried before him. Was postmaster for many years.

In business he was farmer, surveyor, hotel keeper, and merchant. The military profession had a great fascination, and he filled various military positions till he was at length Colonel of 32d Regt. N. H. militia.

His wife was Mary, daughter of Abel and Tamar (Kimball) Merrill of Warren, N. H. (See Merrill record, No. 12.) She was born in Warren, N. H., March 28, 1792. Was an energetic and most excellent woman, with a heart full of "charity for all," and "with malice toward none," and performed well all the duties of wife, mother, friend. She was of medium height, brown hair, light and fair in complexion, and stout in her last years. Together they cared 128. Ebenezer Weeks Clark<sup>5</sup> [89] (Daniel<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Landaff, N. H., March 11, 1819, and till he was eighteen years of age was employed upon his father's farm and attended the district school. Then he entered upon, and completed in 1841, a four years' course of study at the Seminary and Collegiate Institute at Newbury, Vt., then under the charge of Rev. O. C. Baker, D. D., afterwards a bishop of the M. E. church. One year was spent in teaching in Alabama, but he relinquished his profession on account of ill health, and spent the time till 1844 at his old home in Landaff, when he resumed teaching and had charge of a private school at Delta, N. Y. From 1847 to '49 he was in the mercantile business at Landaff. Was clerk at the Fabyan House in the White mountains from 1845 to '52. In the latter year he engaged with Mr. Paran Stevens of the Revere House, Boston, Mass., where he remained as clerk till his death of typhoid fever March 30, 1853, aged 34 yrs. and 19 days. He was greatly esteemed by his acquaintances, and much lamented in his death. Was unmarried.

129. Ellen Noyes Clark<sup>5</sup> [90] (Daniel<sup>4</sup>, Ebenezer<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>2</sup>, Richard<sup>1</sup>). She was born in Landaff, N. H., Sept. 2, 1820. Her parents tenderly reared and educated her. She was a teacher in her youth, and early developed those qualities of mind and heart which during all her life endeared her so strongly to her friends. In her twenty-fifth year, on the 6th of Feb., 1845, she was married to Clark Hayward of Haverhill, N. H. This marriage was a peculiarly joyous one, and Mrs. Hayward was happy in her home and family. It was the place around which gathered many warm friends, and was the center of strong attachments. The influence of her habitually pleasant demeanor extended to a large circle of acquaintances. The sweetness of her spirit and her generous hospitality were recognized and appreciated. Her mind was of high order, and disciplined and cultivated by extensive reading, so that she was well informed upon the general topics of the day. She was an excellent woman, a true wife, mother, friend, and possessed the truest womanly qualities. During the absence of her husband and her daughter, Mrs. Haines, in California, she was stricken with pneumonia, of which she died May 19, 1886, at her home, 594 East Madison ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Hayward was born in Weathersfield, Vt., Nov. 20, 1815. He was son of Nathaniel Hayward, who was born April 14, 1792, in Springfield, Vt., and Mary (Durant) Hayward, who was born in Keene, N. H., Dec. 20, 1795.

Mr. Hayward was a merchant in Bath, N. H., till his removal to Lexington, Mich., in 1857. He became largely interested in pine lands in Huron county, and was engaged in the lumber trade for many years, and was the proprietor of several stores. Was post-master in Lexington under President Buchanan. On Feb. 6, 1870, he and his wife celebrated their silver wedding in Lexington. In June, 1872, they removed to Cleveland, Ohio, which is still his home. He continued in business till the spring of 1887, when he retired, and the lumber company of C. Hayward & Co. closed out its business.

Mr. Hayward has had a successful business career. He possesses good judgment, is a deep, careful thinker, is conservative, and distrustful of hazardous enterprises. Is an extensive reader, and his remarkable memory enables him to retain a large amount of information on many subjects. He is well versed upon historical topics, and his moral character is above reproach. He has been happy in his home, and tenderly has cared for his wife and children. He now resides at 594 East Madison ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE HODGDON FAMILY.

Alexander Hodgdon, Sr., was among the soldiers who garrisoned the old fort of William and Mary at New Castle, New Hampshire, in 1708. He was taxed in Portsmouth in 1713, and was excused from its payment by the government because he was in the military service. An assessment was made against him in that portion of Portsmouth, which is now Greenland, in 1714. Large tracts of land were bought by him near Welehman's Cove in Newington, N. H., where he subsequently lived, and where he served as surveyor of highways in 1724. He married as early as 1716, and probably some years previous, Jane ———, and facts point strongly to them as being the parents of John Hodgdon, Jr., born in 1708, the ancestor of the Hodgdon family of Barnstead, N. H.

Alexander Hodgdon, Sr., had a son Alexander Hodgdon, Jr., who was the progenitor of many of the Hodggons of Rochester, N. H., and of Philadelphia, Penn.

John Hodgdon, Sr., of Newington, N. H., was contemporary with Alexander Hodgdon, Sr., and is supposed to have been his brother. He had a son John Hodgdon, Jr., born at a different date from John Hodgdon, Jr., ancestor of the family of the name in Barnstead, N. H.

1. John Hodgdon, Jr.<sup>1</sup>, progenitor of the Hodggons of Barnstead, N. H., was born in 1708, and his home was in Newington, N. H. He married Jan. 30, 1729, Mary Decker, who was born in the year 1711.

70. William Augustus Hodgdon<sup>4</sup> [50] (Charles, Jr.<sup>3</sup>, Charles<sup>2</sup>, John, Jr.<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Barnstead, N. H., March 27, 1825, and is the only living child of his parents. He prepared to enter the Sophomore class at college, but bodily weakness compelled him to relinquish a college course. He possessed a natural aptitude and a strong love for music, and making that his profession he devoted himself to it,—and as a teacher it became his life work. In 1854 he was the supervisor of music in the public schools of St. Louis, Mo., where he remained until the breaking out of the rebellion in 1861, when he returned to his native state and located in Concord, N. H. He was elected city clerk, and held the position for four years, when he resigned and accepted the supervisorship of music in the public schools of Ft. Wayne, Ind., which he held until 1877. Then he resumed the duties of his former position as supervisor of music in the public schools of St. Louis, Mo. Res. St. Louis, Mo. He married Mary W., daughter of Capt. William Knowlton of Pittsfield, N. H., who died Sept. 1, 1851, aged 24 years. He married 2d at Concord, N. H., Aug. 30, 1856, Abbie Amanda, daughter of Capt. Charles and Hannah Amanda (Stevens) Sanderson of Pittsfield. She was born in Lowell, Mass., Dec. 20, 1836.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE JONES FAMILY.

ABOUT the year 1770 two brothers by name of Jones came from England, but were of Welch origin, and settled in Kittery, Me. One, whose Christian name is unknown, soon after went to sea and was never heard from. The remaining brother,

1. Pelatiah Jones<sup>1</sup> was born March 10, 1748; settled in Kittery, Me. He married Dolly Lewis of that place, who was born Feb. 11, 1748, and who died Jan. 30, 1834, aged 86 years. He died in Kittery Feb. 23, 1820, aged 72 years. They lived in an ancient looking house. It had a huge chimney in the center, and a long, sloping back roof, after the manner of houses of that period.

12. Thomas Jones<sup>2</sup> [8] (Pelatiah<sup>1</sup>). He was a farmer, and owned and lived upon one of the best farms in Barrington, N. H. There he brought up his family in habits of economy, thrift, and industry. In those days it was the custom of farmers to work upon the land in the summer, and in the winter to be engaged in lumbering. All this business was familiar to his sons from their early years. He married Mary Priest Nov. 22, 1821, who was born March 22, 1801. He died in Barrington June 22, 1852.

19. True William Jones<sup>2</sup>, b. May 13, 1843; res. South Boston, Mass.

20. Frank Jones<sup>2</sup> [17] (Thomas<sup>2</sup>, Pelatiah<sup>1</sup>). Hon. Frank Jones was born in Barrington, Strafford co., N. H., Sept. 15, 1832. His boyhood and youth were spent upon his father's farm. At the age of 17 years he entered the employ of an elder brother, who was a hardware merchant in Portsmouth, N. H. He was in his employ for four years, when he purchased an interest in the business, and soon after became the sole proprietor, which he successfully managed till 1861, when he sold it to a younger brother.

For many years he individually, or in company with others, was engaged in business enterprises of magnitude. But larger activities were opening up before him, wider fields of a public nature, which demanded the exercise of his great business capacity.

In the political affairs of his adopted city and of his native state he took a deep and abiding interest. He was chosen mayor of Portsmouth in 1868, and was re-elected in 1869. His administration was marked by many progressive improvements. His salary for the first year he gave to the city to hold in trust, the interest annually to be devoted to the purchase of books for the High school library. He placed in the hands of trustees his second year's salary, on the condition that five thousand dollars more could be raised in five years, when he would add another thousand dollars for the purpose of establishing a public library to be presented to the city of Portsmouth.

In 1875 Mr. Jones received the Democratic nomination for Congress and was elected, although the Republicans had carried the district at the previous election. In 1877 he was renominated for Congress. The Republicans made a determined effort to carry the district, and selected as their candidate the gallant Gen. Gilman Marston, who had won fame in his three terms in Congress and military renown in the war. The contest was sharply contested by each side, but the popularity of Mr. Jones was so great that his opponents were unable to accomplish his defeat, and he was elected over the formidable candidate who had been pitted against him. In Congress he was one of the most efficient committeemen in the House. Mr. Randall said of him: "He was a faithful Representative, an honor to himself and the country, bringing to the discharge of his duties a business knowledge that made him very valuable as a committee member." Mr. Jones positively declined a third nomination to Congress.

In 1880, with an unanimity of his party never before equalled, he was made its candidate for Governor. The party was doomed to defeat, but he received a larger vote than had ever before been given to the candidate of any party in a state election. In two presidential elections Mr. Jones has been a Democratic candidate for elector.

He is eminently a man of business and enjoys to engage in great enterprises. In the construction and management of railroads he has been very prominent. The building of the Dover and Portsmouth railroad was largely due to his persistence and push, and he was for many years, and is now, its president. He was a director in the Eastern railroad and in the Wolfborough railroad. Of the latter he was one of the projectors. He is a director in the Worcester, Nashua, and Rochester railroad, and of the Upper Coos railroad; and president of the Hereford railroad. He was for three years president of the Boston and Maine railroad, and his administration of its affairs was of a high order.

He is the builder and owner of the Rockingham hotel in Portsmouth, and of the Wentworth at New Castle. The former is his especial pride, and is without an equal east of Boston. The Wentworth is three miles from Portsmouth, is very extensive in its proportions, and is finely equipped. Its situation is beautiful, commanding a view of points of historic interest, of the ocean, and mountains.

In his personal bearing he is genial, easy, and affable, and is easily popular. He is a ready and fluent conversationalist on a great variety of subjects. His great wealth, his genial manners, his business and political successes have given him many warm friends and great prestige and influence in business and political circles. His home is one mile from the city, at "Maplewood Farm," a fine landed estate of a thousand acres, stocked with fancy herds of cattle and horses, and laid out with elegant parks, gardens, and lawns, on which are numerous greenhouses.

He married Sept. 15, 1861, Mrs. Martha Sophia (Leavitt) Jones, widow of his brother, Hiram Jones. His niece and adopted daughter is Emma I. Jones (see No. 16). Resides Portsmouth, N. H.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE MERRILL FAMILY.

1. Nathaniel Merrill<sup>1</sup>, with his elder brother John Merrill<sup>1</sup>, came, it is said, from Salisbury, England, in 1633. They located in Ipswich, and a little later in Newbury, Mass., and were among its first settlers. It is claimed that the original name was Merle, and that the family is of French origin.

John Merrill<sup>1</sup>, the elder of the brothers, had but one daughter, Hannah Merrill<sup>2</sup>, who married Stephen Swett, May 24, 1647.

Nathaniel Merrill<sup>1</sup> thus became the common ancestor of most of the Merrills. He married Susannah Jordan; resided in Newbury, Mass., where he died May 16, 1665. He had seven children. His child,

2. Abel Merrill<sup>2</sup>, born Feb. 20, 1644, in Newbury, Mass., and resided in Newbury, Mass. He married Feb. 10, 1671, Priscilla Chase, daughter of Aquilla and Ann (Wheeler) Chase. He died in Newbury, Mass., Oct. 28, 1689. Had eight children. Child,

4. Abel Merrill<sup>4</sup>, born March 20, 1698, in West Newbury, Mass., and lived in that part of Plaistow, N. H., which is now Atkinson. He married Ruth Kelley, and died in what is now Atkinson Dec. 25, 1788. Had twelve children. His child,

5. John Merrill<sup>5</sup>, born Aug. 15, 1737; married Mrs. Mary (Emerson) Stevens. He had six children. His child,

6. Abel Merrill<sup>6</sup> (7), born Atkinson, N. H.

7. Abel Merrill<sup>6</sup> [6] (John<sup>6</sup>, Abel<sup>4</sup>, Abel<sup>3</sup>, Abel<sup>2</sup>, Nathaniel<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Atkinson, N. H., Nov. 19, 1763; removed to Warren, N. H., in 1789, and was chosen selectman the following year. He served in that office in 1790-96, '98, '99, 1801-02, '03, '04, '05, '07, '10, '11, '14, '15, '16, '17, and '23. Was town clerk in 1805, '07, and '08, and member of the Legislature in 1801, '08, '09, '10, '11, '25, and '26. Was moderator in 1796, 1802, '03, '05, '07, '10, '12, '13, '14, '15, '17, '18, '19, '20, and '25. He was a member of the State Senate. Was one of the side judges of the Court of Common Pleas for several years. His abilities were excellent, and he was amply equipped for the performance of the varied duties. He was affable in his manners, pleasing in his address, and popular with his fellow citizens. He married Tamar, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Little) Kimball, who was born at Plaistow July 6, 1766. He married 2d his wife's sister, Mrs. Abigail (Kimball) Noyes of Landaff, N. H. She was born in Plaistow, N. H., and died June 8, 1847, aged 75 years, and is buried at Landaff Center. He died March 23, 1838.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE NORRIS FAMILY.*

1. Nicholas Norris<sup>1</sup> was the progenitor and immigrant ancestor of this family. Was born probably about 1640. Was an early resident of Hampton, N. H., and by occupation was a tailor, planter, farmer. He sold his house and land in Hampton Sept. 29, 1766, and appeared in Exeter the same year, which was ever after his home. He took the oath of allegiance in 1677; desired the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1690, and was a soldier in garrison from Aug. 3 to Aug. 31, 1696. He married Sarah Coxé "11 mo. 21st day, 1663." He deeded away land June 10, 1721, which is the last mention of him found upon the records. He had been a resident of Exeter for fifty-seven years, and disappeared. He had several children; among them was his child born Exeter, N. H. :

2. Moses Norris<sup>2</sup> (3), b. Aug. 14, 1670; m. Ruth Folsom.

3. Moses Norris<sup>2</sup> [2] (Nicholas<sup>1</sup>). He was born in Exeter, N. H., Aug. 14, 1670; married March 4, 1691, '92, Ruth, daughter of Samuel and Mary Robey Folsom of Exeter. He received land from his father "on road to Hampton Farms" April 9, 1698, and his home was always in the town of his birth. From Aug. 31, 1696, to Sept. 28, 1696, he served as a soldier. On the 2d of February, 1720, '21, he gave a deed to his children, to take effect after the decease of himself and wife which virtually settled his estate, and the date of his death has not been ascertained. His child :

On Oct. 22, 1774, he bought land of James Cram of Chichester. After he made these purchases, and before he occupied them, he died. This locality was taken off of Chichester and made a portion of Pittsfield when that town was incorporated, and there Mrs. Norris and her family resided after Mr. Norris' death. He died before May 29, 1776, when the administration of his estate was granted to his widow. Ithiel Gordon and John Carr, Jr., were her sureties, and his brothers Jeremiah and Joseph Norris were among his creditors. Mrs. Norris married 2d Nathan White; resided in Pittsfield, N. H., and died Oct. 23, 1824. Her date of birth was Oct. 30, 1743.

His political career commenced in 1837, when he was chosen to represent Pittsfield in the Legislature. From that time until his death he was almost continually in the public service. He represented Pittsfield in the House in 1837, '38, '39, '40, and was elected Speaker in the latter year. Was a member of the Governor's council in 1841. Was again a Representative from Pittsfield in 1842, and was elected to Congress by the democracy in 1843; re-elected in 1845. Again represented Pittsfield in the Legislature in 1847, and was elected Speaker. Was re-elected Representative in 1848, and in that year was elected United States Senator, to serve for six years from the 4th of March, 1849.

He took a strong interest and an active part in the legislation of his native state, and in the National Congress. He was a strong partizan. His native vigor of intellect, improved by study and reflection, never failed to show in his conservative action. Upon life he looked with careful eyes, and his judgment was ripened by

17. Mrs. Rachel St. Clair Jacoby<sup>4</sup>. (See No. 2278, p. 360.) She married Aug. 12, 1893, James S. Miller of Sumncytown; reside Montgomery co., Penn. She asserts that Capt. Daniel St. Clair (p. 355) married Rachel Shannon, as given. While another branch of this St. Clair family say he married Rachel Knight. Both names are now given, and descendants and relatives can take which they choose for an ancestor or relative.

Mrs. Miller asserts that Arthur St. Clair<sup>2</sup>, son of Capt. Daniel<sup>2</sup> (see No. 2238, p. 355), married Mary Fitzwater instead of Sarah Pugh. On many other points there is conflicting testimony and great confusion in the records sent me by different members of the Sancto Claro family.
