TAFT TRYING TO ATTRACT ATTENTION FROM TRUSTS

Wall Street, Unable to Digest Securities Wants New Field For Exploration and Firms Gladly to Prospect of Canadian Reciprocity and Mexican Subjugation

MONTREAL, April 22.—(Special).—A gentleman eminent in the financial institutions of Canada, and who is a close observer of public affairs, made a deliberate statement recently to the effect that the financial world of the United States is in dread of some awful impending calamity. For five years Wall-street, and everything associated with Wall-street, has been trying to evade the situation, whatever it may be, that is impending. It was fondly hoped that the American investing public would eventually come into the market and take up the enormous blocks of Wall-street securities that had been carried on margin, but had been deserted by the people who bought them, and then passed into the hands of the great loaning companies who had advanced the funds to buy them. Every kind of an effort has been made to induce somebody to buy them. They still remain in the hands of the trust companies, loan companies, banks, insurance companies and wealthy men who are in the habit of loaning money in this way. Concurrent with this situation is another serious matter, namely, a dread on the part of the trusts that they will be regulated by law and the monopolies and high prices they now enjoy destroyed or nullified by either federal or state legislation, or the action of the interstate commerce commission.

Trying to Escape.

These two great interests—Wall-street and the trusts—have been occupied for some years in trying to escape these two things, to get rid of the watered stock they hold and to avoid legislation regulative of them and their business.

Instead of conditions improving, they seem to get worse, and there is good reason for believing that some time ago they appealed to President Taft, told him their whole story, and said that disaster was ahead unless something could be done. What Wall-street wants is no interference with the trusts, and it wants some new way found for the exploitation of the natural resources of their own or some other country which will create a fresh batch of rich men, who in their enthusiasm and pride of great profits, will be induced to buy up the discarded securities.

Exploit Canada.

The exploitation of the resources of Canada by Americans would be one way of making these rich men. The subjection of Mexico to the south would do the same thing; and the willingness of President Taft to give Canada almost anything to get reciprocity and to get Canada opened up to American exploitation and his determination to find an excuse—if he can find one—for interfering in Mexican affairs—these are two things that prove incontrovertibly that the president is trying to distract attention from the condition of financial affairs in the United States, and the fear the trusts have of losing their credit.

President Taft, however, is so involved in politics, and the two great political parties are so divided one with the other, and each one within itself, that there is no great likelihood of the president being able to come to the relief of Wall-street or the trusts. Some kind of forced liquidation and a great deal of political struggling seems to be the only way out of the difficulty.

Reciprocity, Then.

In the meantime Taft and Wall-street are anxious for reciprocity, then for the annexation of Canada.

If a great business boom could be created out of Canada and Mexico the day of trouble would be averted in the United States.

Toronto to Have Splendid Memorial To Honor King Edward

Montreal Syndicate Buys Mutual St. Rink for $120,000 and Will Spend $180,000 on It.

Toronto is to have a big new arena. The deal which assures it was consummated at noon on Saturday, when John J. Palmer disposed of the Mutual-street Rink property and the Crawford property to the syndicate, to a Montreal syndicate for $120,000. The property has a frontage of 344 feet on Mutual-street and a depth of 190 feet on Dalhousie-street.

Immediate steps will be taken by the purchasing syndicate to convert the property into an arena which will have a seating capacity of 10,000. It is proposed to spend $180,000 in fitting up the property, and it is expected to have an artificial rink in readiness for next season's hockey. The work of tearing down the old rink will be commenced in a few days.

When the building is completed Toronto will have an arena for events such as hockey matches, horse shows, etc., that will compare favorably with any like structure in the world.

The syndicate is composed of William Wyle, Robert Redford, A. C. B. Claxton, Mr. Boswell and a number of others prominent in Montreal financial circles.

Cadet Contingent For the Old Country

Party of Twelve Will Be Commanded by Captain Shuldham H. Hill.

QUEBEC, April 22.—News was received in town to-day to the effect that Capt. Shuldham H. Hill of the Eighth Royal Rifles has been appointed to command a party of twelve cadets who are going to England to take part in the rifle matches of the Imperial Cadet Association.

The contingent consist of eight seniors and four juniors, and the party will leave on May 3 by the steamer Royal George.

Big Hotel Company Gets Incorporation

Capitalized at $3,000,000—May Operate in Any Part of Canada.

MONTREAL, April 22.—Messrs. Wainwright and Alexander, advocates, acting for the promoters of the proposed Mount Royal Hotel, received yesterday the charter of incorporation. It gives the company the right to build, acquire and operate hotels, cafes and restaurants and do any other business of a similar nature in any part of Canada. The company is capitalized at $3,000,000, of which $2,700,000 stock will be issued.

NO ONE IN NEW YORK CITY JUST LIKE OUR JAMES

Toronto Teachers Leave for Home After a Week of Stint-seeing—Made a Visit to Chinatown Where They Did Evangelizing Work—They're All "Stoney Broke."

nothing there to this. It seems here that every time you start to go anywhere you have to stop and give the first person you meet all the money you have, and then go back for a fresh supply.

These were much impressed with the sights of Chinatown, and they spent five hours last night being accompanied by Police Lieut. Haerle and "White" sightseeing parties thru that part of the city.

Cafes, dance halls, shops and the Chinese joss house were visited, and when the party returned to the Mission in Doyers-street the service had been just begun. The superintendent of the mission announced that the piano player had been sent to Maud Mauthle, one of the teachers, and she volunteered to play. The presence of the party drew to the service a crowd that filled the hall.

The teachers and their chaperon remained in the mission for two hours and a number of them addressed the party. They led in the singing and the orientals sang as they never had before.

And Now It's Sealey.

OTTAWA, Apr. 22.—(Special).—The motion of W. A. Sealey, Liberal M.P. for Wentworth, to strike out of the reciprocity agreement the clauses relating to fresh dried fruits and vegetables, created a fairly lively time in the house this morning, when in committee on the bill, and means, Mr. Sealey claimed that the fruits and vegetable schedules were harmful to Canadian fruit-growers and market gardeners.

Then trouble began. The Liberals claimed that the motion was out of order as it involved the rule which forbids a private member introducing any resolution which would add to the burden of taxation. Mr. Sealey, however, claimed that his resolution was simply an amendment to the government resolution and did not aim at initiating new legislation. Nesbitt, of Oxford, retorted that it tended to increase the tariff by retaining duties which the government proposed renewing.

After a somewhat lengthy consideration of the point, the order at issue, the deputy speaker ruled in favor of Mr. Sealey and admitted the resolution to a vote. It was lost, the vote standing 22 to 7 against Mr. Sealey voting with the Conservatives.

Yankee Peaches Would Swamp Us

Harry Barber of Grimby Talks of Dangers of Reciprocity Pact.

Mr. Harry Baker of Grimby, Ont., one of the largest fruit growers in the Niagara peninsula, in an interview with The World Saturday, gave his opinions on the reciprocity treaty with the United States. He looks upon the treaty with no special favor.

Mr. Baker thought, in the matter of selling strawberries, raspberries and currants, the treaty would not affect the Canadian growers very much, in fact in most cases it would slightly benefit them. The difficulty was very great in procuring a sufficient number of pickers, and as every year they had a considerable waste in small fruits, he did not think the treaty would hurt the Canadian fruit growers to any considerable degree.

As to the fruit that would be imported, Mr. Baker said that the peach industry would be seriously injured because the American fruit means that the coming into Canada at the time when the Canadian growers were shipping their crop, and as the latter are selling at a low price, the Americans would swamp the Canadian markets. The growers in the Niagara peninsula have always received favorable prices for their fruit, and now they would only be able to get prices to meet with the American prices.

Change Packing System.

Another reason Mr. Baker gave for his opposition to the treaty was that the Canadian growers had of late years worked down to one way of shipping and they would now be swamped by the American growers, who could ship their fruits earlier than the Canadians could.

Asked as to the difference in quality, Mr. Baker said the Canadian fruit was far superior to the American fruit, both in quality and value. The ordinary buyer they would appear the same, and only experienced growers could tell the difference. Mr. Baker also said the Canadian packing system is inferior to the American, and now the former would have to alter their system of packing the fruit and would be compelled to pack in crates. "We shall have to open up new agencies," he added. Mr. Baker, "in the States, and just as we may have set up a stone packing system, this treaty is altered in the future, as it may be by a change of government, we shall have to change our system. It is entirely opposed to the reciprocity treaty," said Mr. Baker.

Case in Point.

Mrs. Lilian Black obtained possession and ownership of the Mansford House on William-st. some months ago by the sudden death of her husband. The commission granted the city the license and nothing has been heard of the place until the recent meeting of board, altho' Commissioner Gordon has just completed some alterations to the property.

This year applications for three licenses have been made and it is expected that the effect that one of them was to be favorably considered at the meeting of Mr. E. W. Tilly of the board, but it is possible that the future which has followed in the wake of the meeting will result in a change of the conditions of affairs and that pressure may be brought to bear on the other hand, Sir Alan Aylesworth, minister of justice, will see a lawyer of wider experience review the post, and to that end suggests the name of W. N. Tilly of the firm of Thomson, Tilly and Johnston. Neither side is disposed to give in, and until some compromise is reached the jurisdiction will remain vacant. The name of Mrs. Murphy, under-secretary of state for internal affairs, has only been suggested tentatively, and his commission is not taken seriously.

Deadlock Over Ontario Judgeship

Mr. Murphy Wants Daniel O'Connell and Mr. Aylesworth Prefers Mr. Tilly.

OTTAWA, April 22.—(Special).—The delay over the appointment of a successor to the late Judge MacMahon on the high court bench of Ontario is said to be the result of a deadlock in the cabinet. It appears that Hon. Chas. Murphy, secretary of State, is anxious to have Daniel O'Connell, Pelee Island, as his choice, while Mr. Aylesworth is a Roman Catholic, and his name is said to be popular among the adherents of that faith.

On the other hand, Sir Alan Aylesworth, minister of justice, would see a lawyer of wider experience review the post, and to that end suggests the name of W. N. Tilly of the firm of Thomson, Tilly and Johnston. Neither side is disposed to give in, and until some compromise is reached the jurisdiction will remain vacant. The name of Mrs. Murphy, under-secretary of state for internal affairs, has only been suggested tentatively, and his commission is not taken seriously.

COMMISSIONERS FACE SERIOUS CHARGE

A Member of the St. Catharines Liquor License Board States That Two of the Other Members Have Been Using Their Positions for Personal Gain.

ST. CATHARINES, April 22.—(Special).—The charge made by William Hudson, member of the city liquor license commission for the past six years, that William Dunlop, a member of the board for three years, and chairman for the present year, had endeavored to intimidate a woman who had applied for the renewal of her license for the present year, by telling her that unless she bought her meat from Kenneth Vine, a third member of the board, who is entering upon his first year's service, is causing general discussion throughout the city.

If any of the board members are more concerned and indignant than the Liberals, who appear to be rejoicing because they see something in the fact that the Whitney government may possibly be embarrassed. Altho' when accused of having purchased his way into the chairman's seat by agreement with Vine that they would stand together, and that applicants for licenses would have to purchase their meat from the new commission, Dunlop has denied the charge, but that he was talking to the woman, but that he was talking to her, and not for himself. He denies that he admitted the charge and contends there is nothing in the accusation.

Should Be Investigation.

Dunlop was on the market bright and early with a large load of flowers and vegetables. Before eight o'clock he was agreed with Vine that they would stand together, and that applicants for licenses would have to purchase their meat from the new commission, Dunlop has denied the charge, but that he was talking to the woman, but that he was talking to her, and not for himself. He denies that he admitted the charge and contends there is nothing in the accusation.

Advices of Undoubtedly Trustworthy Character.

It is a known fact that persons holding a license to handle or trade in men's goods have been granted the power to grant or refuse any licenses.

An expression which has sprung into existence since the meeting of the board is gaining circulation. It is a nickname on the commission, "Long Bar, Corned Beef and Cabbage," the commission granted the city the license and nothing has been heard of the place until the recent meeting of board, altho' Commissioner Gordon has just completed some alterations to the property.

Three Killed When Tank Car Exploded

ST. LOUIS, April 22.—An explosion of a tank filled with gasoline here today killed three persons and injured nine others, four of them perhaps fatally. The car was standing on the Wabash tracks at the plant of the Bell Oil Co.

The dead are Mrs. Agnes Dallwitz, her granddaughter, Emma Dallwitz, and Edna Hawk, a Wabash fireman, who was standing near the car.

FLAMES EAT UP APPARATUS OF THAMESVILLE BRIGADE

And There Were No Weapons With Which to Fight Them—Clock Told 13 as Hose Tower Fell—Everything Burned But the Firemen.

THAMESVILLE, April 22.—(Special).—Thamesville's fire brigade are out of a job. This is not by any special dispensation going away with the danger of an visitation by fire, but by reason of an extra special visitation which today destroyed the town hall, in which, beside the municipal office, are located the firehall, the police cells and the Public Library.

The fire started in the engine room and spread rapidly. The volunteer brigade vaulted counters, and quit its various occupations and made a mad and heroic dash for the hose, but the fire beat them to it, and when the first of the fire fighters arrived upon the scene the flames were merely eating up all the instruments generally directed to its own destruction. Every time a fireman reached for a length of hose the flames just naturally up and bit him. The volunteer brigade put up a brave battle, and for the first time in years were compelled to stand idly

Many Senators, Who Fear to Oppose Reciprocity, Will Endeavor to Have It so Amended That It Will Be Unacceptable to Canada.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—(Special).—Opponents of reciprocity are now practically concentrating their efforts upon the insertion of some provisions in the reciprocity bill that will prove disastrous to the Canadians. Lobbyists in behalf of the various industries affected by the agreement are working to secure enough support to get the bill ready for the agreement modified in some important particulars.

For instance, the lumber people are seeking to get the same restrictions imposed around the importation of logs and lumber, that are supposed to be thrown about the importation of wood pulp and print paper. That is, they are seeking to have the concession on lumber closely tied up with the question of provincial legislation in the different sections of Canada.

Want to Make Changes.

Other interests want to see similar changes made, thereby implying the necessity of further negotiations with Canada or the alteration of Canadian legislation in such a way as to make it more difficult to secure the passage of the measure in the parliament of the Dominion. But this kind of work, coupled with the prospect of amendments intended to change the character of the bill, is being carried out by the various interests without making any corresponding changes on the part of Canada, in proposing the passage of the measure to straight-forward members of Congress, who want to see the reciprocity plan succeed as it stands.

It has led to the raising of the question, would it be possible to secure an alteration of the treaty of agreement on the part of Canada should the necessary changes be made in the bill, possibly to be made in the Senate?

Trouble From Canadians.

The Canadians will not lean for a moment to any far-reaching rearrangement of the terms of the bargain. Apparently we must either take the agreement about as it stands or else leave it, with the choice between vote for the agreement as it stands or a flat vote against it which proves embarrassing for senators who do not like the proposal, and yet who are afraid to go on record as opposed to the liberalization of the tariff.

Up to very recently these men had been laboring under the impression that they could evade somewhat and protect themselves by offering amendments. Perhaps the most important development of the past two weeks has been to make it clear that the method of judging will not answer the purpose and that either opposition or else direct support of the reciprocity proposal must be adopted in the course of action.

Shipments of Gasoline Shunted to a Siding Blew Up and By-standers Suffered.

ST. LOUIS, April 22.—An explosion of a tank filled with gasoline here today killed three persons and injured nine others, four of them perhaps fatally. The car was standing on the Wabash tracks at the plant of the Bell Oil Co.

The dead are Mrs. Agnes Dallwitz, her granddaughter, Emma Dallwitz, and Edna Hawk, a Wabash fireman, who was standing near the car.

HEAVY WATER CASK FELL ON SCOTCHMAN

John Barr of Hamburg-Avenue is in Grace Hospital suffering with Broken Leg.

When John Barr, 25 years of age, 26 Hamburg-avenue, a married Scotchman, who drives for the G. T. R., turned his lorry into a water wagon to transport a cask of mineral water to 403 Huron-street, there was trouble with the load.

While lowering the cask from the wagon at that address, it slipped and fell upon John, who was removed to Grace Hospital in the police ambulance with a broken leg.

PLAGUE HAS ABATED

NEW YORK, April 22.—Word came by cable to-day from Bishop James W. Blachford of the Methodist Episcopal Church, that the plague is now extinct in North China, and has been almost entirely stamped out in Manchuria.

Bishop Blachford is one of the general superintendents of the church in China, with residence at Pekin, and he has just returned from a long trip thru Western China, extending to the borders of Tibet.

SEPARATE AND INDEPENDENT COLONIAL NAVIES ARE LIKELY TO HINDER RATHER THAN HELP THE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT—AUSTRALIA WILL HAVE A NAVY COSTING $400,000,000.

NEW YORK, April 22.—A London cable to The Evening Post says: The parliamentary discussion this week about the imperial conference, and letters in The Times, evidently by important personages, reveal an unexpected weak spot in the constitutional theory of the British Empire, namely, the increasing desire of the colonies to have their own foreign policy, irrespective of England.

The empire's attitude towards Japan undoubtedly is the subject of the gravest discussion. The government promises to reveal all cabinet secrets to the colonial premiers "under absolute secrecy." One writer in The Times says that Canada may use her navy to support a policy which England does not want, and that Australia may be threatening Japan when England and Japan are engaged in delicate negotiations about a Japanese alliance.

Australia, by the advice of the British admiral, lent for the purpose, proposes to build a fleet of fifty-two vessels at a cost of $400,000,000.

Insurrectos to Be Forced From Border

Federal Mexican Forces are Anxious to Have Future Fights Occur in the Interior.

CHIEFDEHUARA, (via London), Mex., April 22.—Preparations to fight the insurrectos proceeded here to-day, Gen. Rabago, with a column of cavalry, which had started to engage the rebels at Ojhuaga, was hurriedly recalled, and he, with Gen. Lis and 1000 men, were ordered to proceed to the border, presumably at Juarez.

It is the purpose of the federals to wedge in between the border and the insurrecto force, and if possible drive the conflict back into the interior, out of the way of possible international complications.

The northward march of the federals is directed at Gen. Madero's main force.

Will Ruin Waterfront.

Should the company be permitted to carry out the plans presented, it is the opinion of Controller Church that the whole western portion of the waterfront will be inaccessible for anything but freight and railway complications. He declares that the company is only seeking to gain by the plan, which would be inaccessible for anything but freight and railway complications. He declares that the company is only seeking to gain by the plan, which would be inaccessible for anything but freight and railway complications.

Members of the Scoutmasters' Association Represent the Suggestion That the Organization Be Made a Feeder to the Militia.

Scoutmasters representing branches of the boy scout movement from all over the province held a conference in the city hall Saturday, at which a number of helpful papers regarding the movement were contributed by members of the association. There were also some interesting discussions on the papers read, especially in regard to the relation of the boy scout to the militia.

Upwards of 100 representatives were present when C. J. Stalker, honorary scoutmaster of the 20th district, called the convention to order. The delegates ranged from 18 years up, 18 is the minimum age for assistant scoutmasters and 21 for scoutmasters. When the meeting had been called to order Capt. R. S. Wilson, scout commissioner for Ontario, and A. R. Williams, president of the Toronto Council, welcomed the outside delegates on behalf of the city organization. R. W. Adams, district secretary, from London, read a paper.

The East of Militarism. The first paper, "Scouting and Militarism," by A. E. Coombes, vice-president of the association and principal of the St. Catharines High School, was then read by the chairman. In it Mr. Coombes explained that the organization embodied the best features of militarism. It inculcated habits of discipline, but did not create a desire for war. War was not so popular as in olden times, although it did not have many objectionable features as of old. It was impossible, however, to raise war from the level of the realms presided over by his satanic majesty.

The boy scout, Mr. Coombes said, could well imitate the soldier in his discipline, neatness and soldierly bearing. He could copy from the soldier in his bearing, but he should do this without implicit confidence in his scoutmaster. To put it briefly, the boy scout movement tended to teach the youth how to live for his country, while militarism taught him how to die for it. In the discussion of the paper F. Todd, who has charge of Toronto's second troop, suggested that while the scout movement did not teach its members to die for the country and the empire, it did teach them to be ready to die in its defence. He saw a possible way to evade the objection, which might come some day, by training the boys with a view to having them join the militia, however, that was not to be estimated. This would be of more value than a military training in a time of danger. This had been demonstrated during the Boer war in which others who participated in the discussion were B. W. Ware of London, J. G. Gibson of Ingersoll, George Acheson of Bothwell, H. G. Hammond of Toronto, secretary for Ontario, and C. J. Atkinson of the Broadway Boys' Institute.

Mr. Ware contributed a paper on the government of a large city troop.

and G. W. Tebbis of Hespeler sent in a paper, which was read by the chairman, on "The Lone Patrol." In this Mr. Tebbis outlined the difficulties encountered by the scouts in the small centres, who were unable to find a place of meeting without running the risk of creating religious friction. He suggested that the government should make provision for meeting places in such centres. The attention of the government was called to the fact that the 42nd Toronto troop were reported to have been on the platform of Danforth High School, the Riverdale Conservative smoker on Friday night, and Mr. Stalker intimated that he would tell W. F. Orr, the scoutmaster of the troop, what he thought of the incident if he were only present, as the scouts are prohibited from taking part in political demonstrations.

Welcomed by City. At the afternoon session Ald. Baird welcomed the association in the name of the city council and said that he thought such meetings were most necessary for the good of the movement. R. Davids, secretary, was the next speaker, taking as his subject "Field Day Ideas." Mr. Davids objected to describing the field day, as a sham fight or a military manoeuvre. He gave the description of the preparation for a field day, as for instance, location of place for operations, installing of the boys in the necessary city of protecting private property, that there should be a settled program arranged for the day, and the scouting should be of the individual patrol tactics, rather than massing in large bodies. The speaker wished the scouts to be considered more as backwoods men than members of a military organization.

During the discussion H. G. Hammond, vice-president, said he didn't care whether they had a prize fight provided the boys were doing something valuable. He thought it would be into the hands of the boys for the first time in years there is a wide cleavage between the policies of the two parties. On the other hand, Sir Wilfrid is not satisfied to leave the house in charge of Mr. Fielding. The health of the minister of finance is not good, and his temper is short. Under the harassing tactics of opposition speakers Mr. Fielding will not be able to maintain order, and it is doubtful if much progress will be made. The prime minister wears an anxious look these days, and an announcement from the treasury benches that the London trip has been temporarily abandoned would occasion no surprise.

CHICAGO, April 22.—Aldo Moro, an Italian vaudeville performer, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the Port Leaveworth federal prison today by Judge Landis, after being found guilty of violating the Mann Act prohibiting traffic in women. In a passing sentence, Judge Landis scathingly arraigned the five-cent theatre as a destroyer of girlhood.

The coroner is practically satisfied that the explosion and fire that followed were due to a gas leak.

High Jinks At Ottawa

Government Forces Reciprocity, Opposition is Ready to Fight to the Last Ditch.

OTTAWA, April 22.—(Special.)—There has been a lack of animation in the house of commons since reassembling after the Easter recess, and save for the hour when George Taylor (Leeds) was holding up to the limelight the amounts spent by ministers, deputies and departmental officials for traveling expenses, cash hire and gratuities, barely a quorum of members have remained in the chamber. No official announcement was made regarding the Liberal caucus held on Thursday, but the question of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's departure for the imperial conference was under consideration, so the Sunday World understands. The premier has booked his passage for May 12, and if the government sets its face towards forcing the reciprocity proposals thru the house before that date, the country will have the pleasure of enjoying a few days of high jinks. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not get away to England as easily as he would want. The opposition are determined to fight the government to the last ditch. On a party division no such government majority will prevail. But the fight of the opposition will have a moral influence on the country. There is no talk of compromise, and for the first time in years there is a wide cleavage between the policies of the two parties.

On the other hand, Sir Wilfrid is not satisfied to leave the house in charge of Mr. Fielding. The health of the minister of finance is not good, and his temper is short. Under the harassing tactics of opposition speakers Mr. Fielding will not be able to maintain order, and it is doubtful if much progress will be made. The prime minister wears an anxious look these days, and an announcement from the treasury benches that the London trip has been temporarily abandoned would occasion no surprise.

THE OLD STORY. Tired and dusty a party were returning by train from a holiday trip. Simpkins, a little bald man, seated himself down to read, but dropped off to sleep. On the track was a ferocious crab in a basket, and when Simpkins went to sleep the crab woke up, and finding things dull in the basket, started exploring.

By careful navigation Mr. Crab reached the edge of the track. Down it fell, alighting on Simpkins' shoulder, and it grabbed the man's ear to steady itself. The passengers held their breath and waited for developments, but Simpkins only shook his head and said: "Let go, Sarah; I tell you I have been at the office all the evening!"—Idea.

SELKIRK IS NOT AGAINST PACT

Bradbury, M.P., After Touching Pulse of His People, Says They Support His Stand in Parliament.

WINNIPEG, April 22.—(Special.)—Geo. Bradbury (Selkirk, Man.), returned here yesterday after ten days spent in his constituency canvassing the situation with regard to reciprocity. Previous to going west Mr. Bradbury had spoken against the deal, and when he reached Selkirk he found his constituents enthusiastic over the stand he took in parliament. A complimentary banquet was tendered him before he returned to Ottawa.

Mr. Bradbury reports that, contrary to stories circulated in the east, he found a strong sentiment in Selkirk against reciprocity with the United States. The opposition is not confined to Selkirk, but extends to other constituencies as well. Macdonald, represented by "Bill" Staples, is another riding that has swung into line against the tariff-fleeing proposals, and word has been received that such border constituencies as Lisgar, South and Dauphin are by no means eager to remove the trade barrier—as easterners have been led to believe. There is a general awakening throughout the country. The sober thought of the people is asserting itself, and the substantial majority of the people are now in a general awakening throughout the country. The sober thought of the people is asserting itself, and the substantial majority of the people are now in a general awakening throughout the country.

Train Plunged Into Deep, Rocky Gorge

Twenty-one Passengers Hurled Two Hundred and Fifty Feet to Death When Bridge Collapsed.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, April 22.—A passenger train on the Kowie Railroad plunged to destruction in a rocky gorge 350 feet deep, thru the collapse of the Blaauwkrantz bridge, 13 miles from Grahamstown, today. Twenty-one passengers were carried down with the coaches and killed. Their bodies were torn to pieces and inextricably mixed with the debris of the cars, which were found to splinter. The Kowie Railway follows the general direction of the River Kowie from the Grahamstown to Port Alfred on the southern shore of Cape Colony. It is 44 miles in length, and was opened in 1884, being owned by a private company. The Blaauwkrantz bridge crosses the deep ravine in one span at a great elevation.

LITTLE BOBBIE' PA.

Wife, pa said, how often have I told you that all the really great men in men with calm from small towns in the west. If you mean really great men, like you & Abe Linkin, sed ma, you have told me about a million times. But why the quater? Well, sed pa, it is this way. There is a friend of mine cumming to the house tonight that has just sold a copper mine out in Arizona. He has sold, pa, sed, by the sheer force of his greatness, with all will & must admit, to the proud position of being a personal friend of mine. Jest wait till you see him. I am not so sure, sed ma, a grate many of the friends that you bring home is of the common or barnyard variety. Wen pa introduced him to ma, he shook ma's hand so hard that it hurt her & sed, weel, pa, how is things? Every body with a pal of mine is my pal, too, sed. Am I right? Certainly, sed ma, she wanted to be nice, but she was kind of mad because he could bet her. Say, pa, sed pa's friend, did you ever see any peacock ore took out of a copper mine? Here, look at this, & then you'll see a lot of funny chunks of stone & threw them on the table. They made the table all over dirt. Pa, sed pa's friend to ma, that is the ore that I discovered after three hard years of prospecting. Half of the time, he sed, I was hungry. Part of the time I didn't have anything to drink. I guess that was a small part of the time, ma, sed. He, sed, pa's friend, you are some class, senoreta. I knew the munit I seen you that you was a thoroughbred, pa, & I am always glad to meet a thoroughbred. They are dying out rapid. Well, sed ma, I wish you would tell us about the copper mine you found. I am always interested about mines. Most folks, pa, sed pa's friend, you see, the sales has so many ways for munny that they have to keep their eyes on mines or something jest as paying. This ore here on the table, he sed, is a tiny part of what made me rich. It is only a fragment of the vast wealth that made everybody call me Rosebony Sam, the terror of the Desert. Believe me, pa, he sed to ma, I have taken as much out of the grate desert & the mountains as they took out of me. I'm three long years, but I made good. Did you ever see a man with stiddy gray eyes like mine that didn't make good? Did you, pa? Pa, sed, pa, you & me can be gone along. There is a rug out in the hall that spells WELCOME, but it is pointed the other way. Husband, sed ma, after pa's friend had went why do you per-sist in bringing all them kind of people to our home? It sent me for me, & it sent me for me, & it sent me for me. Pa always has a good answer.

MOTHER LEAVES BABE IN DEPARTMENT STORE Three Weeks' Old Girl Discovered on Sofa in Eaton's and Taken to Infants' Home.

When the attendant in the ladies' room at the Eaton store went to her room Saturday noon, she noticed a well-dressed but delicate looking woman nursing a pretty baby girl. When she returned from her lunch at 1 o'clock she saw a baby very like the one that the woman had been nursing. It was lying on a lounge. She thought little of this, but later began to cry. Then a woman from west Toronto did a kindly act. She nursed the child and put it to sleep. When no one came to claim the child at 5 o'clock it was sent with Mrs. Whiddon, the police matron to the Infants' Home. It is a three weeks old girl, fair, with blue eyes and very pretty. It is well, almost elaborately dressed, but no marks of identification were found upon its dainty clothing.

ARE PLANNING FOR A GREAT BIG CITY

Calgary Public Enterprises Launched on a Large Scale and Contemplating the Requirements for the Years to Come.

CALGARY, April 22.—(Special.)—They are planning here for a very big city—for a time when Calgary will have a population of hundreds of thousands. Sir Whifrid Laurier, in an address before the board of trade last summer, predicted that Calgary, within a few years, would be the home of 250,000 people. And it is in accord with all such well-founded optimism that the public spirit of the community is displayed in every direction, in ambitious projects which take stock of the great future as well as the live and healthy present.

Here are a few of the big enterprises just launched or in immediate contemplation:

A $350,000 new theatre. Saturday afternoon work was commenced on the new theatre on the old Terrill property, first-street west, and within a very few months Calgary will boast of the best theatre in western Canada and probably in all the Dominion. The gigantic opera house that Mr. Sherman is putting up will cost about $350,000. Mr. Sherman is backed by a number of local capitalists, and the company itself is about the wealthiest in Canada, in the show world.

A $35,000 horse show building. The passing of the bylaw Monday, providing for $55,000 will ensure the early erection of one of the finest horse show and live stock pavilions in Canada. The building will be available for horse show purposes in the spring, for stock judging at fair time, for a horticultural show in the fall and for a curling rink in the winter. The seventh annual Calgary Horse Show has been in progress all week—the horse show of western Canada. This was far and away the best ever held west of the great lakes. If not in all Canada. There were 800 entries, embracing all classes from the native broncho up to the most aristocratic breed in the world.

A new St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, to cost $35,000.

A C. P. R. hotel, to cost $1,000,000.

A Hudson Bay store, to cost $1,500,000.

Street railway extensions, to cost $450,000.

New schools, to cost $450,000.

New parks, the development and maintenance of which will entail big outlays. The park policy of the council is very broad and takes in the requirements of Calgary for years to come. The most recent park project is the acquisition of government land near the General Hospital, a most desirable site, Mayor Mitchell. It is understood, has succeeded in securing this for the city.

The extension of the street railway north to Tuxedo Park is another commendable enterprise, showing judgment and foresight. Tuxedo Park subdivision is a highly favored residential section, bound to attract the home-buider of taste and culture. With its driveways, boulevards, recreation grounds and gardens, it will shortly be one of Calgary's residential beauty spots.

Another Apartment House. J. W. Walker will build a $30,000 apartment house on the west side of Palmerston-avenue, near Lennox-avenue. He secured a permit for its erection from the city architect's department yesterday.

$60,000 FOR WHISKERS

New Orleans Colonel Sues Men Who Sheared Him.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 22.—The federal court in New Orleans was called upon to establish the market price for whiskers. Colonel E. O. Sullivan, a lawyer, filed suit against Paul Felix and W. W. Stiles, for $60,000 damages for cutting off Colonel Sullivan's luxuriant whiskers.

The suit grew out of an election quarrel at Kenner, a suburb of New Orleans. Colonel Sullivan went to Kenner to watch an election and became involved in a quarrel with Messrs. Felix and Stiles. He says they took a pair of scissors and cut off his whiskers.

An Important Auction Sale. Mr. Chas. M. Henderson will sell commencing on Tuesday morning, at 11 o'clock and the following day at the same hour, all the elegant and costly household furniture, pianoforte, china, automobile, etc. at the residence, No. 39 Madison-avenue, under instructions from Mr. J. SPIRIT OF ADVENTURE WHISPERED "RUN AWAY"

But Way Was Long and Full of Bumps and Toronto Boys Were Glad to Get Home.

Adventure swelled large in the hearts of Joe Romanello, 15 years, 207 Church-street, and Vernon Karry, 14 years, No. 412 upon the same thoroughfare. The spring winds whispered many things to these lads, and on Thursday evening they blew. They were possessed of one bicycle and a large portion of the spirit of adventure. Thursday night they made their way as far as Mimico, and there they slept in a railway culvert. The next morning they set out to block the entrance against wild beasts and bad dreams and tucked the spirit of adventure under their heads for pillow.

They awakened with the dawn, stiff but undaunted, and unhitched the bicycle for action. One mounted the seat of the wheel and applied the push to the pedals, while the other sat upon the handlebars and spied out the country in case if not covered, for, he it known of all men, that the road to Hamilton, whither they were bound as their first point of stoppage, is long and full of bumps.

Neither of them knew the way, but this did not trouble them, because no one can know the way when they set out upon a real live adventure. They asked a farmer whom they met how far they must ride to reach Hamilton. "Ten miles," was the laconic reply. The lads rode on for 15 miles and came to another farmer.

"How far is it to Hamilton?" they enquired. "Ten miles," was the ready answer. The boys looked surprised, but rode on. They covered about 12 more miles of bumps and came upon another rustic.

"How far to Hamilton?" they asked in chorus. "Ten miles," take this road," they were told.

Their respect for the rural appreciation of distance was now about zero minus two, but they held ahead for another ten miles, when they again overhauled a son of the soil with which they were now well acquainted.

"How far to Hamilton?" they repeated monotonously. "Ten miles; but you're on the wrong road; you must go back to the fork."

Then they knew that the truth does not dwell away from laid payments, but they turned wearily back over the bumps, where they had lost several large lumps of the spirit of adventure and seemed to have collected other lumps in their throats.

At the fork, where they had been misdirected, they saw another farmer. "Ten miles!" they shrilled at him in decision they pedaled to the city under the hill, and there they set about negotiations for their fare to Detroit, which was the extreme limit to which they had planned. They arranged to sell their bicycle and were looking for a place to rest, which was not far from some really quiet and restful grave, when they were picked up by the Hamilton police, who had been requested by their distressed parents to look out for their wandering boys on any night that they might come across them.

They were taken to headquarters and Detective Wallace set out with a railway ticket, which does away with the need of the spirit of adventure on some lines. When the lads returned he found them on the top floor of the police station munching on pieces of bread. As he ascended the stairs he heard strains of music. He did not recognize the air, for it sounded little like a triumphal chant. It certainly was not "See the Conqueror Heroes." He listened again, and as he opened the door he knew—

It was little Joseph warbling thru a mouthful of bread crumbs that old-time favorite, "Home, Sweet Home."

City Hall Gossip

The unexpected happened at the city hall on Monday. It had become the general belief that the love of certain members of the city council for the discussion of trivial questions and their appreciation of the free lunch preceding the night session precluded the possibility of completing the business of a meeting without an adjournment.

This they actually succeeded in doing on Monday and the few who do not care to listen to aldermanic eloquence were in consequence made happy.

As was expected the appointment of P. W. Ellis as the city's representative on the commission which is to run the city's electrical affairs, was unanimously. Ald. Graham, who moved the resolution which gave the appointment a set-back at the previous meeting of the council, was absent but he sent a letter expressing his change of mind. It was rather amusing to see the general stampede.

The F. C. Burroughes Furniture Co., Limited 647 QUEEN STREET WEST AT BATHURST

Mr. Ellis from the ranks of those who opposed the nomination two weeks ago, advanced by Ald. McCarthy, and the most bitter attack on the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission and the manner in which the legislation for the commission had been put thru. He found refuge behind the excuse advanced by Ald. McCarthy, that he wished to know what the T. E. L. was going to do before the appointment was made. This was slightly at variance with his previous reason, but nobody took the trouble to question his sincerity.

When Ald. Sam McBride goes out after anything he has the persistence of a book agent. He never acknowledges defeat and if he sets his heart on anything he is likely to introduce it to the council in various forms until he gets it. This is the method he seems to have adopted in his effort to get two weeks' holidays for the teamsters who are permanent employees of the street commissioner's department. He was defeated in his attempt to accomplish this at the last meeting but one but was afforded an opportunity of reintroducing it when the motion of Ald. Dunn to make it two weeks' extra pay instead was referred back to the board of control. The recommendation was referred back with instructions to report on the advisability of giving the men either two weeks' holidays or two weeks' extra pay, and Ald. McBride, the champion of the teamsters, believes he will succeed in getting the men the time off notwithstanding the strenuous opposition of the street commissioner who has reported against both schemes, one because of the expense and the other because of the effect it would have on the efficiency of his organization.

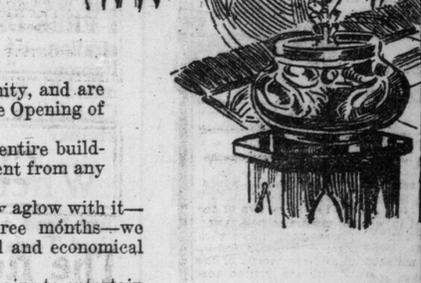

The question of improving the intersection of King and Yonge-streets by rounding the corners, beginning by appropriation of 400 feet of the property of the C. P. R., was temporarily delayed at the request of the company's solicitor. He explained that D. McNeill, vice-president, would have a satisfactory alternative scheme to suggest to the city if given an opportunity for a hearing and asked that no action be taken until such time as Mr. McNeill could appear and make explanations. This was assented to by the council after the bylaw for appropriation had been given its first reading and Mr. McNeill will arrive in Toronto on Monday and tell the board of control what his scheme is.

Mr. McNeill has also expressed a desire that the city come to a decision in the near future as to whether or not it is going to approve the plans for the freight yards on the government house, and adjacent property. This will also be discussed when he meets with the board of control on Monday and there is a possibility that the board will ask for a guarantee that there will be no ugly front to the building along King-street and that there be no smoke nuisance permitted in the yards. They will also try to find some way to eliminate the level crossing at the corner of Spadina-avenue and Front-street.

The fact that the Metropolitan Radial Railway is buying a right-of-way west of Yonge-street in the northern portion of the city has agitated the minds of some of the controllers during the week and fear is expressed that if they carry their tracks off Yonge-street this will leave part of the main thoroughfares leading to the centre of the city without a street railway service. In this connection, however, it is pointed out that when the C. P. R. completed their improvements on Yonge-street there will be no difficulty in getting the Toronto Railway Company to extend their line under the viaduct.

Fifth Anniversary of a Big Store. To-morrow marks another milestone in the history of the F. C. Burroughes Furniture Co. in their big store just east of the corner of Queen and Bathurst-streets, and they have made arrangements for a reception to all their friends.

CANON LAW SAVES RECTOR (Congregation Asks Him to Quit) DISPUTE OVER ASSISTANT

Popularity of Rev. Prof. Jeakins Said to be Cause of Rev. T. Hill's Dismissal of Th Clergyman - Commission Declares Rector Was Within His Rights.

REV. PROF. JEAKINS.

LONDON, April 22.—The dispute between Rev. W. T. Hill and his congregation at the Church of St. John, the Evangelist, which began upon a purely private matter, has become of public concern because of the use made of the canon law by the rector in developing the matter into a matter of very wide interest.

At the present time the rector stands entrenched behind the canon law of the Anglican Church, absolutely refusing to tender his resignation as a majority of the congregation have persistently demanded and practically compelling him to put him out. To accomplish what they desire the congregation has reduced the salaries of its organist and janitor to $30 and $10 respectively and would have made the rector's salary one dollar a year, but again the canon law intervened. This is the situation today, a church divided, a rector asked to resign and declining that he will not and his action apparently upheld by the higher powers of the diocese.

International Press Bible Question Club

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS.

ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON BY REV. DR. LINSKOTT FOR THE INTERNATIONAL PRESS BIBLE QUESTION CLUB. Copyrighted 1910 by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D. I have read the suggestive questions on the Sunday School Lesson, by Rev. Dr. Linscott, in this issue of The Toronto Sunday World.

THE CONTEST.

The most popular and the most practical plan for Bible study, together with a prize Bible contest, is running in The Sunday World. In short, the "Suggestive Questions," and the coupon should be cut out each week and signed, certifying that this has been done. Then any five of the questions that are indicated to be answered in writing must also be answered, and at the end of the term the coupons and written answers, duly signed with name and address, must be delivered to this office. The prizes will be awarded according to the number of coupons sent in, and the merits of the written answers. You can get all the help you want with the written answers.

Go in to win one of the solid-gold medals. If you complete the course, you will get a beautifully engraved Diploma. In three colors, in any event. Get all you can to join us in this course of Bible study.

1. Joshua Repairs the Temple. 2 Kings xii—xiii. Golden Text.—Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly.

(1) What to what extent may we trust the reasoning and deductions of a bright and good boy, seven years of age, upon matters with which he is familiar?

(2) What immediately preceding events had led up to the boy Josiah (Jehoshaphat) being crowned King of Judah?

(3) Zibiah was the mother of the boy King Josiah, but who was his father?

(4) Verses 2-3.—Is the statement here made that "Jehoshaphat did that which was right in the sight of the Lord all his days," literally, or historically correct? (See 2 Chron. xxiv:17-22.)

(5) Take two men, both previously good, in responsible positions of great tempo, and who have been religiously trained, one having a wife and the other a good ancestry; one of them late in life becomes a bad man—on the law of averages which is it, and why?

(6) Verses 4-5.—What method or rule should we adopt in giving money to the church?

(7) What is the relative obligation upon a man for keeping up his own house and the house of God?

(8) Verses 6-8.—What were the priests bidden by the king to do with the money which the people brought in, and how did they carry out their orders?

(9) Why is it either wise or unwise for a pastor to be the treasurer of his church?

(10) What is your opinion as to what these priests did with the money?

(11) Which is the right, or better, place to collect money for God's cause, the church, or the people or in the church?

(12) Verse 9.—If Jehoiada had gotten up a series of concerts, or lectures, or bazaars, or tea meetings, or had set the women to making quilts and selling them, instead of asking the people to give their money direct, would it or not have been more in keeping with God's plans for financing His church, and why?

(13) What modern plan for paying money to the church, most nearly answers to putting it into a chest at the church door, and what is the advantage of the latter?

(14) How many instances can you recall of dishonesty in handling church funds, and how do they compare with the number you can recall of dishonesty in banking and other business transactions?

(15) Verses 11-12.—Ought a church to gladly pay the regular market value, or should it expect to get work and material for less?

(16) God's Pity for the Heathen. (Foreign Missionary Lesson.) Jonah iii:1-17. Golden Text.—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. Matt. xxviii:19.

(1) Verses 1-2.—When did the Lord command Jonah the first time to go to Nineveh, and why did he not go?

(2) What method did God adopt in speaking to Jonah?

(3) What method does God adopt to-day in giving special instructions to individual men?

(4) Verses 3-4.—Where was Nineveh situated?

(5) How long would it probably take Jonah to traverse the principal streets of Nineveh and deliver his message?

(6) Is it probable that Jonah gave the message just as the Lord had given it to him?

(7) Verses 5-9.—What steps did the king and the people of Nineveh take to prevent their doom?

(8) What effect does repentance, fasting and prayer have in these days in preventing the legitimate and natural consequences of sin?

(9) Are God's rewards and penalties ever absolute, or are they always conditional, and why?

(10) How would you distinguish between the natural and the moral penalty incurred by sin?

(11) Think of our national sins and their penalty, and say what would be the effect upon the latter, if the nation should repent, and fast, and pray as Nineveh did?

(12) Verse 10.—How do you explain this verse which credits God with changing His mind?

(13) What if any evidence is there that nature, as to speak, changes her intentions to inflict penalty, when men change their conduct?

(14) Chapter iv:1-2.—Why was Jonah angry because God did not destroy Nineveh, as he had threatened?

(15) Verse 5.—Why, or why not, should a true Christian who is a physician, depending upon his practice for a living, never be sorry because the people are all well?

(16) Why should those of us who teach the eternity of punishment for confirmed sinners be either glad or sorry, if in the future we learn that we have been mistaken?

(17) Verse 11.—What weight can you place upon a man's truth, or goodness, because he is willing to die in defence of his views?

(18) Verse 12.—Name some of the most mysterious circumstances, and say whether you are angry with God, or in doubt, that would warrant a man in being angry with God? Give your reasons.

(19) Verses 13-15.—What, if any reason is there to think that Jonah still hoped Nineveh would be destroyed?

(20) Seeing that Jonah was angry with the Lord why did God protect, and destroy him?

(21) Verse 17.—Why is it sometimes necessary for God to cause us to suffer in order to teach us lessons of love and mercy?

(22) Verse 18.—Give your reasons for the sake of vengeance alone? Give your reasons. (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Managing Director of Wealthy Dutch Corporation to Inspect Farm Lands.

OTTAWA, April 22.—Representing millions of dollars of good conservative Holland money, which is about to be invested in Western Canada farm lands, Mr. L. Drooghever Fortuyn, managing director of the Netherlands Trans-Atlantic Mortgage Company, arrived in Ottawa to pay his respects to several government officials before proceeding to the west.

Mr. Fortuyn's visit to Ottawa may or may not have any significance, but it is interesting to note that the question of investments by the Netherlands in Canada was the subject of a letter from Trade Commissioner W. T. R. Preston, to the premier, some time ago.

ARMISTICE AGREED TO IN MEXICAN OUTBREAK

General Madero Will Wait to Receive Proposals of Peace From the Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The belief is general here that Mexico will quickly agree to an armistice with Madero, although the action by that government may be taken "unofficially" in order to avoid a public recognition of the insurgents.

The sudden change in the attitude of General Madero, who until late last night was reported as adamant against both armistice and peace proposals, was explained here by the fact that Dr. Gomez, in his numerous messages within the last 24 hours, pointed out the complication that had arisen between the United States and Mexico over incidents on the border.

EL PASO, Tex., April 22.—General Madero has agreed to delay his contemplated attack on Juarez pending peace negotiations, providing the government will, on its part, bind itself to move no troops, particularly in the direction of Juarez.

Hartill Looks Fit to Give Durnan a Tussle

National Sporting Club's Aspirant For Sculling Honors Interviewed by Sunday World Reporter.

Go and find out something about Ernest Hartill the sculler who is going to race Eddie Durnan, said the chief of the World sporting association.

"All right your Honor, but where am I to find him? He's a mystery," replied the sculler.

"Never mind the mystery, try Tom Flanagan he'll know. Now get," thundered the chief. The reporter got up.

"I'll take it up while you go get the sculler," replied the reporter.

"Thank you Mr. Flanagan. I'll find Tom Griffiths," replied the reporter. Then he hung up the receiver.

"Give me some information about Ernest Hartill the sculler," said the reporter. "I've got to get news by 'book or crook," so you may just as well all you know."

"That's just what I want," "Come on then and I will introduce you."

"We went. Suffice it to say that the new aspirant for the sculling honors sculler in Parkville. He was doing training stunts when the reported arrived and was introduced.

"Physician! Hark! Hark! every inch an athlete. In sporting parlance he is a big man in a small compass. Height 5 feet 9 1/2 inches, broad shouldered, well necked, clean-muscled, well set-up, and above all well-knit. Every muscle shows strength and sign of looseness. Anybody in fact he is a most-comparatively bull man."

"What is your weight Hartill?" queried the reporter. "I weigh 144 lbs. but I've nothing to do with it. I've got to get news by 'book or crook," so you may just as well all you know."

That date is an open one in the American League's schedule, and it is believed every manager in the league will agree to send a player or two to face the Cleveland Club in a benefit game, the proceeds to be given to the widow and children of Eddie Joss, the Cleveland pitcher, who died in Toledo last week.

GAMES POSTPONED, RAIN MAY GET RUDOLPH BACK

McCaffery Went to Philadelphia to See McGraw—McWhirter Placed.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 22.—(Staff Correspondence.)—Rain caused the cancellation of the double-header to be played here today. The team left for New York at 4 p.m. The next four games to be played will be at Jersey City, commencing on Monday.

President McCaffery left for Philadelphia, where he intends seeing McGraw, who he referred to as "the New York manager is not willing to let the young pitcher go back to the Eastern League."

At the present time Rudolph would be a most acceptable addition to the pitching staff, as there are at present only five pitchers with the club. In the event of the president failing to secure Rudolph, efforts will be made to secure the best pitching material available.

Kelley is well pleased with the team generally but feels that more or more than the season. The injury to Mueller is a hard blow to the team, as he is the rest of the players, and everybody is hoping the "kid" will meet the team in New York and say he is back.

Killian and Caters both performed well and Backman will be given an opportunity to show just how good Monday's game at Jersey City.

McCaffery having found a place for the local boy with that club. The manager was determined to get a good local boy to carry him through the season.

Corcoran Suspended. BALTIMORE, April 22.—Dunn, decided today upon a shake-up in the batting order. Maise, the local boy, who is played in the lead-off spot, will bat after Schmidt, and Jimmy Walsh will bat the last. Fullerton, who came from the Giants, will cover the hole.

News of the Fighters

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 22.—Some one at Columbia University has suggested an intercollegiate boxing league. If the idea blossoms I suppose in time we will have intercollegiate boxing tournaments just as we have intercollegiate football matches, rowing races and field meets.

It is a commendable scheme and it is to be hoped it will thrive. There is no denying that the colleges always bear the brunt of the expense of amateur sport. Outside athletic organizations which help to the line of ethics established by the colleges always bear the brunt of the expense of amateur sport. Outside athletic organizations which help to the line of ethics established by the colleges always bear the brunt of the expense of amateur sport.

There are no reasons why the line of demarcation between amateur and professional boxing shouldn't be made as rigidly in this country as it is in England, Australia and New Zealand. In the two countries last named, the amateur boxing associations are powerful in the land. There are home tournaments and intercollegiate tournaments involving for the competitors sea, trips and semi-public receptions and for the victors trophies and much distinction. State newspapers which would snort at the idea of giving a line of space to a "profession" of sportsmen, devote columns to the yearly and half-yearly tournaments of the gentlemen boxers. The sport, in fact, is accorded an equal footing with golf, cricket or lawn tennis.

Since an uppercut is an uppercut and a black eye a black eye, whether inflicted or worn by Fitzgibbon, Fitzgibbon or the Northwest Buffer, it is difficult for some people to conceive why the sport of hitting and being hit should be encouraged in one class of men and deprecated in another. Well, like many other things, it is not a matter of explanation and the better solution offerable is that professional pugilism is considered a debased form of boxing, a brutal expression of the human instinct for fighting, that it creates an objectionable environment and continually reeks of chicanery.

In the matter of the associations it stands to reason, of course, that strictly amateur boxing must have a different setting from the professional and the hatching of plots are unknown. Nor must it be thought that professional boxing has come to the end of its tether. In my next article I will offer a few humble suggestions as to how the conditions surrounding professional boxing might be improved.

Wolfgang and "One Round" Hogan to Battle Before New York Club—Ad Will Have His Hands Full.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 22.—Up in Johnson's roadhouse there is a fighting person bearing the ominous sobriquet of "One Round" Hogan, who is busy rehearsing his part of a ten round pugilistic sketch which will claim national attention when it is staged on Wednesday night before the Madison Athletic Club, with the champion lightweight of the world, Mr. Adolph Wolfgang, familiarly known to eastern fight fans as the "Cheese Camp" Wolfgang, familiarly known to eastern fight fans as the "Cheese Camp" Wolfgang, familiarly known to eastern fight fans as the "Cheese Camp" Wolfgang.

Whether either will land a sleep producer during the ten round mill must be left to the battle to decide, but a glance over the pugilistic dope has thoroughly convinced New Yorkers that they are in for a bout which, if Adolph wins, will be a "number" which will at least alter the personal topography of the two principals and result in a mill that will long be the talk of Manhattan's "faded alley."

To turn back a few pages of fight history, to the time when Adolph, under a heavy fire from every sporting writer in the country because of his retirement on the plea of an injured wing, decided to again illumine the arena with the light of his sunny German countenance, we find written in bold print, under a Philadelphia date line, a convincing story of his defeat at the hands of "Knockout" Brown of New York.

All those who witnessed this affair were of but one mind as to the result when he met Brown in a walk and that Adolph, when he saw the tide of the tide setting in against him, pulled all the foul tricks known to pugilism and they are quite a number. His "Cheese Camp," however, claimed that he was the victim of the newspaper critics and pretended to make good when he met Brown in a walk and that Adolph, when he saw the tide of the tide setting in against him, pulled all the foul tricks known to pugilism and they are quite a number.

Adolph's next reputation rehabilitation was a pug by the name of Anton La Grava. La Grava may have been a good fighter, but he was not a fighter. Adolph's next reputation rehabilitation was a pug by the name of Anton La Grava. La Grava may have been a good fighter, but he was not a fighter.

BASEBALL GOSSIP

Eastern League critics are almost unanimous in picking Rochester, Baltimore, Toronto, Buffalo and Newark as pennant contenders. Jersey City looks good on paper, but has not shown any form to date. Montreal has a fair-looking aggregate, while the outlook at Providence is dim.

West End Ball Practice. The West End Y.M.C.A. are holding a baseball practice in the large ring at the Exhibition Grounds on Monday. All West End boys under 14 are requested to attend.

Rival of the Missouri Mule. The rule of Missouri has registered a kick from Chicago about a rival for government service in the United States and the Philippines—the mule of China, which like the pigs and geese of China, is reported to be of high quality. The celebrated draft animal from the United States has invaded foreign countries, shipments even to South Africa having been reported during recent months. In North China the wealthy use mules instead of automobiles, and the finest are employed to pull the "peking carts" normally semi-starvation. It never gets any food but the roughest of grass, the leaves of kao-liang (a plant allied to the American broom corn), and black beans, boiled in water which take the place of grain.

In South Africa specifications require the Missouri grown mule, at least fifteen hands high. It was a long journey to South Africa, seven days on the railroad, thirty days at sea and three more days on the railroad to Johannesburg, and for eighteen days the mules were standing almost knee-deep in water. On one occasion a heavy sea was shipped and portions of the mule's bodies were washed away. "If we could breed mules like those in this country," said

Jim Wiggs, the big heavier set to Oklahoma, is reported to be going to a great clip. The Toronto team, Jimmus showed he was good enough for the Eastern League when he held the champions hitless during a game at Rochester.

Bobby Vaughn, the Toronto shortstop, says that if Pitcher Skillman, secured by the Toronto team, does not make good he will be surprised. Skillman is a "princeton boy," says Vaughn, "and used to come over to the Toronto grounds and work out with the team when I played with the varsity. He has a curve which breaks almost as fast as that of Bob Keefe, now with Cincinnati, and he has a right hander's breaking curve. I ever saw in my three years in the Eastern League."

Adapote is murdering the ball. The Browns got a live wire in this Frenchman, who was never able to get his stride at New York or Boston. Old Cy Young has sprung a new ball, more, the "not water ball," on account of having developed it at Hot Springs. It comes of a peculiar twist of the ball, and is not a "water ball."

Baltimore fans have lost faith in Joe Kelley's old song. "My pitchers are not in condition," he said, "and are now wise to Joe and his methods." The Eastern League team are none too promising. Getting down to hard facts, and in face of McInnity's assertions, the contrary, the team is not as good as last year's aggregation.

Manager Chapin of Rochester says he is out to win ten straight pennants, and does not want any credit until he has turned the trick. But he has forgotten to reckon that the Leafs are very much in the swim this year.

Hobberlin's Ball Club. The house of Hobberlin (Limited) held their annual baseball meeting last night. The following officers were elected: Hon. president—A. M. Hobberlin. Hon. vice-president—H. J. Wilson. President—J. A. Greene. Secretary—M. J. Wickel. Secretary-treasurer—H. W. Holman. Manager—Woods.

The first practice was held Saturday afternoon at Exhibition Park. Any whole sale clothing house wishing to join the league kindly communicate with Mr. H. W. Holman at Hobberlin's.

J 15 Are Champs. There were some tall orders at the Toronto Bowling Club on Friday night, when J 15, in second and third place, respectively, in the first and second series, respectively, in the Toronto League. J 15, after getting away to a bad start, "came back," and nosed out the Toronto team. The Toronto team, thanks to the classy work of second baseman, who collected the good total of 56. The blazer for J 15, J 3 was "Cap" Austin, who started like a world-beater almost as fast as that of Bob Keefe, now with Cincinnati, and he has a right hander's breaking curve. I ever saw in my three years in the Eastern League."

On Saturday morning the employes of J 15 presented the bowling team with handsome lockets, which were accepted by Manager Joe Hays in a neat speech.

Toronto Cribbage League. A most important meeting of the Toronto Cribbage League will take place on Monday at the sergeant-at-arms of the Royal Grenadiers, 77 West Queen street. The most interesting feature of the evening will be the presentation of prizes to those winning the individuals, and to the championship of the league, which won the championship of the league at 9 p.m., and all members of the league are earnestly invited to be present. A meeting of the executive committee will be held at the same place at 10 p.m. All the items of business, the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Color Perception as a Test of Intelligence

Color perception is recommended by Dr. Warrington of Bologna, as a reliable test of intelligence. In his experiments, colored yarns pinned on cards were placed before 1800 school children of various ages, and the percentage of correct naming of the colors rose from class to class, and was invariably highest among the most intelligent children. The tests showed also that certain colors affect eye and mind more strongly than others. A color scale, graded according to the strength of the impression made, is possible, and shows white and black to be easiest to recognize, red, yellow, green and blue following in order, while brown, gray and violet are far more difficult to distinguish. The superior perceptive power of girls, as compared with boys, agrees with statistics proving that two-thirds of the cases of color blindness are among men.

A Loss of Memory

"Uncle Mose" said a drummer, addressing an old colored man seated on a dry goods box in front of the village store, "they tell me that you remember seeing George Washington. Am I mistaken?" "No, sah," said Uncle Mose. "I remember seeing him, but I don't go to get sense 'cause I fined 'de church."—Every-

Leafs Are After the Pennant Play up to Advance Notices

In Fielding, Batting and Pitching Toronto Excelled
Baltimore on Thursday and Friday—The World Man
Reviews the Showing Made by the Leafs.

BY W. J. SLEE.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 21.—(Staff Correspondence).—Kelley's Maple Leafs have made a good start in the battle for the Eastern League championship, having already two victories over Dunn's Orioles team of Baltimore.

They have in every way lived up to the most glowing of advance notices sent from the early training camp. Their batting and fielding has been of major league calibre.

Opening day had all the frills, including parade and band, an automobile ride around town, etc. The Leafs went after Jimmy Dygert, considered by many one of the greatest baseball pitchers in the game, and second only to the great Russell Ford. In the third innings, and, as he stated himself, they hit everything he offered up. He also had difficulty in finding the plate, having six runs scored against him in one inning, and after that he retired. The next man was very easy. A combination of hits, errors and bases on balls gave the Leafs nine runs in two innings, and cinching the game.

Baltimore's fielding looked very bad beside the clean-cut work of Toronto's fielders. Tim Jordan's home-run over the fence in right field, well down toward centre, was a great wallop, showing that the big fellow is still capable of hitting the ball in the manner that made him the talk of the big league.

Phelps particularly lived up to his record, and with him Toronto will be second to nobody in the catching department.

The pitchers used so far have performed excellently, and too much praise cannot be given to Cathers for his cool, steady work in Friday's game. While these games have been the first opportunity to get any kind of a line on him, he certainly covered himself with glory, and there is no reason why his record in the Eastern this season will not be as good as it was last season for the Lancaster Club, when he won twenty and lost nine.

The statistics of the first game are as follows:

The first base on balls was drawn by Shaw from Dygert in the first innings.

The first strike-out was scored by Dygert on Delahanty in the first innings.

The first error was made by Corcoran, when Bradley lined a hot one at him in the second innings.

The first sacrifice hit was made by Willie Keeler in the first innings, when he advanced Shaw to second.

The first hit of the game was made by Vaughn, when he bunted to Corcoran in the second innings.

The first double was lined out to centre by Walsh in the second innings.

The first triple was made by Heitmuller when he hit into the crowd in front of "the bull" in the second innings.

The first home-run wallop was made by Jordan over the right-field fence in the fourth innings.

The first run of the season was scored by Heitmuller in the second innings on a wild pitch by Mueller.

The first double play of the season was pulled off in the second innings, when Dygert hauled in Mullen's pop fly and caught Bradley before he could get back to first.

The first stolen base did not come until the ninth innings, when Bradley was safe at second, altho Byers' throw was good enough to catch him if Maisell had done his part.

Bobby Vaughn continues the good work he showed in the practice games, beating out a cleverly-laid-down bunt the first time up in the opener. His fielding has been of the sensational kind.

Keller batted well in the opener, getting three, and his double on Friday was a line drive to centre.

Delahanty and Shaw are covering a lot of ground and hitting well.

The best of fielding exists thruout the entire club, and they are working well together under the able guidance of Manager Kelley.

President McCaffery has witnessed both games, and is naturally much elated with the team. He was particularly pleased with the showing of Cathers in Friday's game, and, justly so, as it certainly was a great test for a young pitcher just breaking into fast company.

Another of the new men who is playing great ball is Bill Bradley. He plays scientific ball all the time, and his hits are drives of the hard kind that count for runs.

Vancouver Are After the Mug

Con Jones Says He Will Have Greatest Team in Canada—The Players Signed Up.

The costliest team in Canada. That is the description which can be applied to the Vancouver Lacrosse Club when the full enrollment is completed. Only about fourteen men will be carried, and the team as a whole will be the best paid in all this wide and wealthy Dominion. So says The Vancouver World.

Of the fourteen, ten have already been signed, and they look rich in quality, ready to face the Minto Cup holders and give them a rare battle for the honors. A few days since none had been actually signed up. Now the following are on the list of President Con Jones: Bun Clarke, Harry Griffiths, Harry Pickering, Harry Godfrey, Billy West, George Matheson, Archie Adamson, Bones Ailon, Dalton Pheland and Neway Lalonde.

Their names are well known to every follower of lacrosse in the east and west, but just look them over and think awhile of the possibilities about them. They are an aggregation of stars, not in the sense that Regina were an aggregation of stars, because the great majority practically have become thoroughly acclimatized. They may be nearly all easterners, but they won't be easterners in the way that others have been easterners who step off the train after a cross-continent ride and, after a comparatively brief space, take up their sticks and sally forth.

It is to be hoped that the sporting editor of The Montreal Star did not risk his money when he wrote a few days ago:

"It's the one best bet in lacrosse circles that Neway Lalonde, despite his appointment as a traveling salesman for Joe Lally's lacrosse sticks, will be seen in a National uniform again this season, and will be figuring as brightly as ever on the home end of the team when the season opens up at the Maisonneuve grounds.

The option upon them expired this week, by the way, leaving Lalonde and Gauthier free to sign where they pleased.

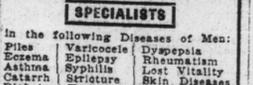

"At the last board meeting of the National Lacrosse Club the directors authorized Mr. A. L. Coston and Joe Cattaranchi to get into touch with Lalonde and see about getting him back for the National team of 1917.

"Correspondence has passed between the National director and the Cornwall player with the result that Lalonde is expected to come to an understanding with the Nationals.

The matter will then be reported back to the National Lacrosse Club and Neway will be tendered a contract for the season.

"Opinion may differ as to what Neway did for the Nationals last season, but there is one thing sure, that when Neway was playing on the home team there was always some lacrosse worth looking at."

Life on H. M. C. S. Niobe

What hot messmates let's shiver our timbers!
While the stormy winds do blow!
And spiced the main or any other braces we have plenty of the dough:
For our gallant barque is as blitheome
as a lark.
A spring up his whistle on the tree,
And we'll drink a brimming toast
To our nation and its boat—
To the Canuck and to Canada's navy.

One of the boys of Canada's navy has written the following account of life on H.M.C.S. Niobe:
The daily routine begins at 5 o'clock in the morning when the bugle sounds for all hands to turn out. After the bugle sounds the ship's corporal goes through the sleeping quarters shouting loudly for the men to wake. The quarter-master then has his turn shouting the orders to lash up and stow away hammocks. It takes only a very short time to lash up a hammock, and when they are finished they are carried on deck and are then restored to the places from which they were taken. The men then have a cup of cocoa, not resembling what "land lubbers" drink, but the genuine article, not mixed up in a hurry. If you were to look in the galley the afternoon before you would see the cocoa in large pots steeping. This is what is served up to the men the following morning. The next part of the routine is to wash up mess-docks. This is done every morning by those who eat in a particular mess, and takes up very little time. This is finished about 7.30 a.m. when breakfast is served, which consists of different victuals according to what day it is. The messes are cleaned up again and time is given for the men to smoke. The smoking time lasts until 9 a.m., when the quarter-master rings, two bells, the bugle call is given, and the band plays, first God Save the King and then O Canada. When the band begins to play every man stops working, drops everything and stands at attention, facing the stern of the ship, while these anthems are being played. After the band stops, the bugle sounds and every man goes to his work, wherever it may be. The work of the ship lasts until about noon, when dinner is served. The messes are again cleaned after dinner, and time is given to smoke. At 1 o'clock work of the ship is resumed and proceeds until 4 o'clock, when the bugle sounds and every man forms in rank on deck, after which they go to lunch. After that, time is at the men's disposal, and all men not required aboard ship are for duty are allowed ashore until 7.30 the following morning.

Pass Medical Test.
When a recruit comes he is taken at once to the surgeon and examined, and by whom he is accepted or rejected according to the state of his health. If he is accepted, he is taken to the master-at-arms, in whose presence he reads a part of a certificate, which is the declaration of his willingness to serve in his majesty's service for the number of years he is required. He then signs this paper, with the master-at-arms as a witness. He is then taken to the ship's store, where he is taught how to lash up his hammock and where he is fitted out with clothes by the ship's steward. The clothing and other articles he receives are of the best quality and could not be bought for a large sum. He then goes to the paymaster and receives his expenses from his home to the ship, which will be entered for him. He is treated with kindness by all. After he is "lashed up," whenever he gets is charged against him, but when he is in the navy for a certain time he is granted a certain sum of money by the government for the upkeep of his kit.
The places for eating in are called messes, of which there are a great number. On each day, two men from each mess are chosen to attend to the food and mess, and to draw the proper rations for the coming day. These men are called cooks of the messes and are supposed to have everything in readiness for the men, when they come up after each meal and have it ready for the next.

After supper time 6.30 p.m. the mess is cleaned up for the rounds, which is an inspection of the several messes by an officer. The wardroom for mess-decks to be cleared for the "Rounds" is given at 8.30 p.m. by the quarter-master and given, when every man makes himself scarce until the "Rounds" is over, after which they return to their messes and either go to their hammocks or wait until 10 o'clock, when every man is supposed to be at bed. The boys are made to go to bed at 9 o'clock and are not allowed on deck after unless under pressing circumstances.
If any sickness spreads or is taken by one man, he or the company is sent to the Sick Bay, where they are attended on by the surgeons and Sick Bay attendants and is not allowed out until he is fit for work.

One day out of a week is set out for what is called general quarters. When the bugle sounds for general quarters, every man goes to his place, where he is to be engaged in a fight. The bugle sounds and goes through the same as if he were taking part in a fight. The gunners stand by their guns, while the gun crew prepares it for action. There is a lot of work to gunning. The gunner does not fire where he is directed by the man in the coming tower, the order which may be changed. It records the distance, range, allowance for the speed of ship, and tells how many rounds to fire. When this is being recorded in the coming tower, it also changes the recorder in the transmitting station, and it is sent from the transmitting station to the recorder on the gun. This takes only a few seconds and the gunners know just where to fire. There are several other parts taken up in general quarters, but space will not allow them to be explained.
Sunday inspection is the inspection of every part of the ship and also of the men. At a fixed time every Sunday morning inspection is piped, when every man takes his place in his rank on the deck. After a while the commander and lieutenant pass down the line and inspect every man. The men are then dismissed and wait for church. At about 10.30 a.m. they are formed in companies, each consisting of all the men belonging to a certain church. They are then headed by the ship's band and march to church. After church they return to the ship.
Form of Punishment.
The imprisonment in the navy is not the mildest, but is the best that can be given under the circumstances. Liquor is not allowed to the men but if the men come aboard ship drunk, they are promptly put in a cell and appear before the captain afterwards. One of the punishments is to be put in cells for a certain time, lose time and pay while in there, be rated second-class conduct, and last, but not least, pick two pounds of oakum out as fine as silk, which makes the fingers ache badly. There are also other punishments, too many and too hard to explain. You ought to see them when you would be surprised to see what hard punishments there are outside the penitentiary or jail.
The officers are all gentlemen and destroy entirely the ideas of men held by some people. Above all, we have a real live lord among the officers of the Niobe, who is a gentleman in every respect and is not as "high toned" as the average lord is. He does not think himself any better than anyone else, or if he does, he does not let it while he denied the principle; in fact he went so far as to declare that the railway companies might be ordered to pay wages to their employees in advance, even as rents were payable in advance. Of course the fact was in the fire. Senators are fond of quibbling and the senator who made the statement Senator Cloran's proposal, one remarking that he had never been obliged to pay rent in advance.

"Well, I know that if a dog that replied the O'Cloran. "I have to pay rent in advance here in Ottawa."
"Oh, that is because they know you."

Echoes From Parliament Hill

When Andrew Brodeur said in the house of commons a short time ago that reciprocity was an ill-favored child born out of due time, he voiced an opinion shared by many others. As one watches the progress of the debate the impression is forced on the mind that Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself is tired of the question and would be glad to be done with it. The prime minister is weary and the session draws on him. The approaching imperial conference is also a disturbing factor. The Canadian premier does not want to face the imperial delegates with reciprocity, standing between the colonies and the motherland to thwart closer imperial union. Imperial preferential trade, the all Red route, and an imperial cable service are all matters coordinating with reciprocity, and Sir Wilfrid's position today negatives all that has been done in this direction. Even as Wellington exclaimed on the field of Waterloo, "Night or Bluecher," so does the Canadian premier seem for some beneficial action that will enable the government to relieve itself of the situation into which it has fallen. There is no doubt that the government took a gambler's chance in dealing with the Washington administration at all. The attempt to pull roasted chestnuts out of the fire has had the inevitable result.

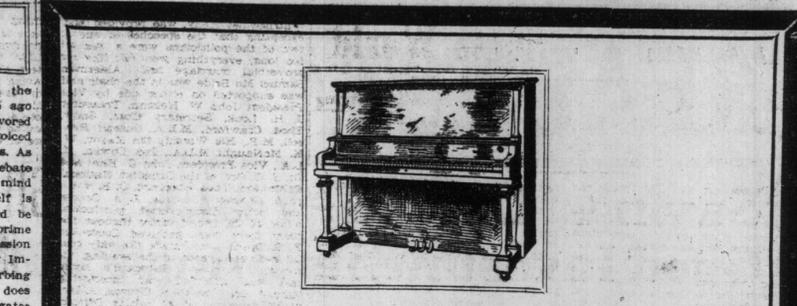

The session so far stands as a colossal failure. The ambitious legislative program contemplated in the speech from the throne has failed to pass. The opposition started strong, but reciprocity swamped the crusade against graft and corruption. The public accounts committee has been a misnomer. The Canada Grain Act, dealing with the grievances of the wheat growers against the terminal elevators, will probably be a farce. The Hudson Bay Railway bill is now in the limbo. Every vestige of public ownership has been abandoned. Progressive legislation is at a standstill. Private bills have gone through, but nothing of advanced character has been accomplished. There has been no audit of the Transcontinental Railway accounts. The divorce committee of the senate had produced the best results of any branch of the legislative machine. It is said that the bill to re-seat the government of the province following redistribution will be disappointing. One close in touch with conditions in Quebec stated to The World that the bill would result in an increase in that province would almost offset the immigration to the west. Thirty-three thousand will be the basis of representation, and Quebec will stand against the dominance of the west.

There is only one thing that will clear the situation—a general election. Since the government has attempted to affect an organic change in the fiscal policy of the country—a departure from the already well established policy of protection—the people might expect from the party in power, would do more to settle conditions. Strong men would come to the front and take up the burden of administration and legislation, and the big issues, moral, economic and social would move towards solution. Whatever the outcome of reciprocity, freight tariffs, reform in telegraphs and telephones, adequate representation and immigration and the like will be forced upon the politicians. The far old, cursed from its acceptance, will pass away.

The traditional animus which exists between the Irish and Dutch since the days of the Boyne sprang into a flame in the senate last week, when a motion was made to approve of a recommendation of the divorce committee. Senator Cloran belongs to that coteries of Quebec representatives who sedulously abstain from voting on divorce bills "for conscience sake." Senator Kirchoffer is chairman of the divorce committee. member for Centre York, is one of the heavyweights of the house of commons. That may be true, for the captain tips the scale at considerably over two hundred. Traveling from Ottawa to Toronto last week Capt. Wallace with another bantam of 260 pounds and three friends—five in all—were sitting in the drawing room of one of the Pullman cars. The porter rapped at the door and asked the 260-pound bantam for his transportation. "Mr. 260-pound fumbled in his pocket with as much freedom as the cramped quarters would permit, and produced the scrip. He looked at his own expansive front, cast a side glance at Capt. Tom, and over the heads of the other three, "That transportation is good for eight," he said, and passed it to the immobile darkey. Intelligence slowly came to the porter, his lips parted and his teeth clenched. "Yes, sah; yes, sah, good for eight I understand. Gosh it would need be," he chuckled as he passed down the aisle.

WHERE ARE THESE FAIRHAVEN LOTS?

FAIRHAVEN IS A SUB-DIVISION ON THE WEST SIDE OF THE CITY where all the manufacturing industries and wholesalers are located. In 1910 there were over 100 wholesalers distributing from Saskatoon, over 60 concerns having built in the city. In 1911 Saskatoon expects, and no doubt will, greatly exceed her magnificent record of 1910. Our building permits last year exceeded $3,000,000

"FAIRHAVEN" abuts on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and plans are being prepared for the erection of a suburban station on the property, 20th street, the King street of Saskatoon, runs clean through "FAIRHAVEN" and if you will glance at the map you will notice that some of the principal streets of the city pass through this property.

CHURCH AND STATE ARE FORMALLY SEPARATED

Portuguese Government Publishes Formal Decree—Confiscates Religious Property.

LEISON, April 22.—The decree of separation of church and state is published. Generally it is received with indifference. The north is perhaps the only part where protests may occur. It is estimated that the confiscation of the Portuguese religious wealth will bring to the government a return of more than $30,000,000.

ST. LAWRENCE OPEN

Navigable Channel Will Be Free in a Couple of Days.

MONTREAL, April 22.—The St. Lawrence River is very open. The first general ice movement began about 10 o'clock last night and, following the jam which occurred opposite the harbor office, the water rose to 32 feet. The ice is passing out rapidly, and it is expected that two days will see the channel free for navigation.

HOW TO BECOME GRACEFUL

You Also Spend an Enjoyable Evening, Full of Mirth and Music.

"If you would become graceful, learn to roller skate," is a saying which would seem to have been accepted almost as an axiom by a very large percentage of the public, and beyond all manner of doubt there is far more truth in it than those who have never indulged in this popular craze would probably believe, for as an exercise on account of the variety of muscles called into play, it cannot fail to induce that lissomness and suppleness, both of which qualities are absolutely essential to true grace and carriage. To enjoy the full pleasure of this popular pastime, patronize the first-class rink that has adopted the latest and up-to-date features. The big improvement of the modern rink is the noiseless skating surface. The difference, between this and the old-style skating floor is noticed at once by the person entering the building, as the loud, deafening roar is conspicuous by its absence. Another feature you want to consider in choosing a place to go skating, is the manner in which the skating surface is treated. The most modern and up-to-date rinks now use a liquid preparation in treating the floor, which leaves the surface perfectly clean and prevents the floor from becoming slippery; this prevents accidents and gives the skaters confidence. On such a surface lady skaters appear remarkably graceful. A rink, before it is considered first-class, must also pay special attention to the ventilation, and the building must be kept in a sanitary condition. Considerable attention must also be paid to the skate equipment; skates should have all the latest improvements, be kept properly oiled, and in a nice, running condition. Parkdale Rink, this city, is probably one of the most up-to-date rinks on the American continent. All the special features mentioned above can be found here, in fact, many of them originating at Parkdale. This is why this skating academy is so highly recommended to the public, who enjoy this popular pastime.

LIBERAL WITH CASH

But Ungrateful Urchins Picked His Pocket Just the Same.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Throwing dimes, quarters and bills to the winds of Broadway, A. P. Ennis, who says he is a mining man, created so much excitement in the theatre district last night that a near riot resulted among the thousand youngsters who collected to gather in the coins. Ennis does not know what he actually threw away, but he does know that he stopped the excitement when his pocket was picked of a $100 bill. Ennis explained that he started out to have a "Good Time" and as he walked down Broadway scattering silver, the jam of street urchins became terrific. Finally one boy pressed up near Ennis and held a paper in front of his face while another slipped his hand into his hip pocket, extracted a $100 bill, and escaped. The police dispersed the crowd and cautioned Ennis not to be so liberal hereafter, but made no arrests. Ennis said he had come here from the west six weeks ago.

SMALLPOX IN THE EAST

Serious Outbreak is Reported From New Brunswick.

MONCTON, N.B., April 22.—A serious outbreak of smallpox is reported at Fox Creek and along the Painesco-road. It is said there are some forty cases in that section, and two schools have been closed. The disease is of a mild type. Moncton has also three cases, which originated from the Fox Creek and Painesco-road district.

OBITUARY

Ernest Lawrence.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lawrence of Mount Pleasant Terrace St. Foye-road, Quebec, will learn with regret of the death of their eldest son, Ernest, which sad event occurred in St. Paul, Minn., on April 14. Deceased young man left Quebec ten years ago for St. Paul, where he was successfully engaged in the jewelry business. Before he left Quebec he took a prominent part in athletics and was quite a hockey expert, and skilled in other manly games. His end might be considered sudden, for in less than 48 hours after his parents received a telegram stating that he was ill with pneumonia, another message announced his passing away. Besides his parents he leaves two brothers and three sisters to mourn his early demise. The funeral took place on Feb. 17 from his parents' residence and was largely attended. The floral tributes were many and handsome, including an anchor from his father's employes. The deceased young man was the eldest brother of Mrs. Graves, 163 Brunswick-avenue.

THE SCHOOL TRUSTEE MUST GO

Editor World: Inspector Odell, in his address at the recent teachers' convention, voiced public opinion in regard to the abolition of the present moribund system of school trustees. In rural districts the work of a trustee is usually so little appreciated that it is almost impossible to get anyone to accept the office. In towns and cities the office can be used so effectively for mercenary or ambitious purposes that their boards show a curious combination of good and bad members. If the outcome of the present judicial investigation into school matters does nothing more than attract attention to the gross defects of the present system, it will have done a good deal. If Toronto's educational in-

MONEY MADE EASY

UNIVERSITY SUB-DIVISION THE ROSEDALE OF CALGARY

The Beautiful West End Residential Annex

Everybody knows what Calgary is. The city of GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES. The ST. PAUL OF CANADA. Most marvellous growth of any Western Canada City. Four years ago a population of 17,000, to-day over 60,000. Will have 100,000 in two years and only in its infancy yet as to growth and development.

This sub-division lies directly west of the city and has sold more rapidly than any other sub-division. A Toronto commercial traveller bought 20 lots after seeing this. Another bought ten and returned a week later buying a whole block. Calgary builders have bought in tens and twenties.

WHY ? BECAUSE it is close to the New University, and you know what that does for residential property. BECAUSE it will be served by an Electric Car Line before the end of this year. BECAUSE it is the best view stuff around Calgary, commanding a beautiful view of the city and of the mountains. BECAUSE we guarantee every lot to be HIGH, DRY and LEVEL. We will stake our reputation upon every statement we make and are willing to back it up with the proofs. BECAUSE Calgary is growing to the west, as all western cities do, and your money will triple quicker there than elsewhere. Everything to make residential property valuable and desirable goes with this sub-division. Invest to-day and watch your money grow. GOOD COLD CASH. REAL MONEY. We want you to make money. We want you as permanent customers.

Mining Stocks Ready to Firm--Crown and Swastika Up

Recurrent Up and Down Moves Will Rule in Mining Market

Profit Taking Opportunities Will be Afforded, But They Will Have to be Seized Quickly.

World Office, Saturday Evening, April 22. Traders and market followers are finding it somewhat difficult to accurately deduce the meaning of the various movements in the mining markets just now. The public interest is apparently of a responsible nature, and the realising movement has, to all intents and purposes, passed its course, still the Porcupine stocks, and these are attracting the most interest at the moment, are not doing very much. The market is about the least that could be desired, for it is the violent fluctuations in the mining stocks that keep the public interested, and the desired pitch, and it is the market that is stirring things up that works out best for all concerned. Yet the gold shares have apparently settled down into a regular course, and nothing could have been more indicative of this fact than the action of the list during the past week.

It does not require any reasoning power to explain the recurrent spurts which are being exhibited by the Porcupine stocks every few days. Prices are down to a point, which in many instances is below the original figures at which the shares were put out to the public, and on every further decline there is enough support forthcoming to rapidly turn this tide. The market has not recovered from its congestion as yet, as is shown by its attitude early this week, and until this is gotten over with, there will be no sustained upward movement. The big volume of day to day transactions must be taken as indicative of the throwing away of stocks by tired holders, but there is a good deal of quiet assimilation going on, and as soon as securities pass into strong hands and remain there, there will be no obstacle in the way of a better market.

As far as the Porcupine camp itself is concerned, things are apt to be quiet for some little time to come. Development work on the surface will be retarded by flooding from spring rains and melting snow, and on this account it may be necessary to abandon work entirely on some of the new gold camps. This will be only temporary, however, and it will not be long before the active summer campaign will be under way. It is altogether likely that seasonal results will be realized in the surface development, and it would not prove at all surprising if free gold were found on many of the claims, which have had no showings whatever up to this writing. Porcupine seems destined to be one of the big gold camps of this decade, and from now on its progress will be rapid.

Cobalts have exhibited definite signs of firmness during the week, and in special instances higher prices have been recorded. This has been the case with both Peterson Lake and Rochester.

Billions of Capital Centred in Few Hands

But Organization of United States is Not the Serious Menace It Might Appear.

The Wall-street Journal has recently published some figures setting forth in dollars the aggregate of the direct and indirect interest and authority which the so-called Morgan group has obtained in the United States. These figures show that the Morgan group has direct control over $2,000,000,000, in round numbers, of property, and indirect control over $4,500,000,000. These estimates are regarded as probably accurate, and superficial reading of them would instantly suggest that with direct and indirect control over more than $6,500,000,000 of property, the Morgan group could easily contemplate, in the course of a few years, accomplishing that which has been accomplished by the United States government. This would not be merely impracticable; it would be impossible. For much the greater part of the property estimated at a money value of $6,500,000,000 is in fixed capital. This capital is so invested that it is compelled to rely upon the general property of the country for its maintenance and to pay interest and dividends upon it. It could not be converted into money; the total currency in circulation in the United States is only a little over $2,000,000,000. What appears really to be taking place at this time is co-operation upon a large scale, and even if there is, as many think there is, serious menace to the American people in the aggregation in a few hands of billions of capital, fixed and liquid, nevertheless the co-operation between various capitalists or money groups is likely to be less dangerous to the welfare of the United States than the existence of two or three money groups, each engaging in intense competition with the other.

THE HORSE SHOW

SCIENTISTS whose delight it is to define the common objects of natural and animal life in terms utterly incomprehensible to human intelligence inform us that the horse is solidungulate perisso-dachyl mammal of the family Equidae and genus Equus. Without disrespect to the extraordinary knowledge latent in these formidable quinquessyllables the ordinary layman would probably derive more information from the schoolboy's description of the same valuable friend of man as an animal with four corners and a leg at each corner. But after all what collocation of vocables is needed in the case of so well-known a servant of the human race from a time coeval with the dawn of history. In its wild state the true horse, we are credibly told, appears to have been at first confined to the steppe country of Europe and Asia and was probably domesticated in Europe by the men of the stone age unknown millenniums ago.

However, the immortal father of poetry in his celebrated description of the Greek camp by night tells us that

"Champing golden grain, the horses stood Hard by their chariots and waited the morning."

Who does not recall the magnificent verses of Job and the question of the Almighty:

"Hast thou given the horse strength?
Hast thou clothed his neck with thunder."
"He saith among the trumpets Ha,
Ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains and the shouting."

Jacob Grimm, one of the famous brothers who devoted themselves to the scientific study of the German language and literature tells us in his Teutonic Mythology "that in the earliest period the horse seems to have been the favorite animal for sacrifice; there is no doubt that before the introduction of Christianity its flesh was universally eaten." Altho sad to say hippophagists are still to be found in the Fatherland and elsewhere in Europe, human instinct generally revolts against this practice and turns rather to the constant improvement of the king of domesticated animals.

Canada admittedly takes high place among the nations in horse-breeding. No finer spectacle can be offered throughout the world to horse lovers than that offered at the Toronto National Exhibition or the Horse Show graphically illustrated on this page. Happily too none is more popular from the millionaire who prides himself on the quality of his prize-winners to the humble admirer who discusses their points with as much zest and perhaps equal discrimination. But it is a good thing that admiration for the horse is so widely diffused in Canada and despite the advent of the motor car, is more likely to increase than diminish. Useful as the automobile is and replendent as it may be in all the splendor of paint and varnish and silver and brass ornament it cannot compete in beauty with:

"Horse that guide the golden eye of Heaven,
And blow the morning from their nostrils."

United States and Mexico.

Whatever good President Diaz may have done in the way of maintaining a more settled government in Mexico it is apparent enough that his policy has been largely responsible for the discontent that caused the insurrection. Under his administration small land holders to whom their farms had descended for generations have been dispossessed under legislation requiring them to show their titles. The favored few have thus been enabled to build up huge estates while the real tillers of the soil were driven to rebellion. Along with this the government has granted valuable public franchises to foreign concessionaries. Banks, railways and other public services and utilities are all controlled mainly by United States capitalists who have found Mexico a happy hunting ground for the employment of their genius for high finance. It is not surprising that the genuine grievances thus engendered have led to widespread resentment and open insurrection.

There can be little doubt that sooner or later Mexico will pass into the control of the United States. This is inevitable now that vast interests have come into existence and are held by men always in close contact with the United States Government and Congress. The semi-official but authoritative statement issued last month for the purpose of explaining the views and purposes of that government and of the conditions which made the border mobilization necessary while affirming that no invasion of Mexican territory was in contemplation, added that should the Mexican authorities be unable within a reasonable period, possibly six months or longer, to stamp out the warfare, the services of the army would doubtless be offered for purposes of mediation. Intervention is therefore in full contemplation at Washington and when it happens means nothing else than supervision of the Mexican administration. Whether actual annexation follows or not, the inclusion of Mexico within the immediate sphere of United States influence will certainly ensue.

The same official statement represented that should it become necessary ultimately for American forces to enter Mexico they would do so solely for the purpose of restoring order and would doubtless do so upon the condition that a general election must immediately follow that the successful candidate must not be counted out and that the new executive having been duly inaugurated and placed in control of the government the American troops would promptly retire. Mr. Dickinson, the secretary of state for war has given it out that there can be no excuse for intervention unless the Mexican Government proves negligent in protecting the persons or property of foreign residents and that the object in massing troops on the frontier was the enforcement of the neutrality laws. Evidently there are more reasons than one for intervention and it is plain also that it would be hailed with satisfaction by the great majority of the people of the United States. That section of the press which opposes militarism deprecates intervention and some journals ask the government to act in support of the Mexicans who are fighting for freedom. But the weight of public opinion supports the attitude of the United States Government.

Events are shaping towards the extension of the United States to the Panama Canal which a matter of fact is being constructed on a strip in its actual possession. This does not necessarily mean that Mexico or other parts of Spanish America will be incorporated into the union but it will mean virtual annexation and control of their external and internal affairs. It is impossible not to perceive that the natural ambition of the United States looks forward to the unification of the whole of North America. So far as Canada is concerned the process of assimilation will have to be conducted differently from that employed in the south. Canada provides an excuse for intervention of the kind proposed by the United States. The extension of United States influence to it is bound to accomplish through identification of the markets of the Republic and the Dominion. If the politicians of the United States who have engineered the reciprocity deal have their way the interests of the two countries will be increasingly associated and the union will follow as a matter of course and the resources and destiny of Canada will become incorporated with those of the Republic.

The Emancipated Female.

Recently under the above heading we asked a series of questions regarding the extension to women of equal rights with men, especially in relation to the franchise. After the main question referring specifically to the giving of votes in provincial and federal elections to women, we desired to know: "Would giving women equal rights and conferring on them equal responsibilities with men advantage the country and the world?"

Sir Joseph Ward, premier of New Zealand, has lately been with us. In his country women enjoy or possess the right of franchise and he consequently shares with men the responsibilities that every right-thinking voter should consider he or she were under. Sir Joseph says that the system works fully in New Zealand and he advocates its extension everywhere. New Zealand's premier is, therefore, a loyal supporter of the suffraget.

As to Moral Improvement.

The second sub-question in our article on "The Emancipated Female" was "Would the morals of the community be improved by the further emancipation of the female?" At first blush it is hardly to be doubted that the answer to this question would be in the affirmative. But it is not a matter that can be satisfactorily dealt with in the first or any subsequent blush. It is an exceedingly grave question with many ramifications.

That the women would be found generally ranged on the side of moral legislation is certain. Morality is one thing to make rules of life and another to follow them. Women have a weak side for erring humanity. The hardest and hardest have much charity in their make-up. Would then not only better laws be passed but would the administration be improved by the further emancipation of women? It must be remembered that this emancipation would give to women the right to occupy every position that men now fill. Would the country or the world be better for such a state of things? Would not the average woman weaken at the critical point?

On the other hand would not women in the aggregate confine themselves to the betterment of mankind and leave reciprocity treaties and

New Zealand is perhaps the most democratic and most advanced country in the world. The fear has always been among a large section of mankind that if the women had the right to vote they would invariably be found on the side of the rigidly moral extremists. This has not proven the case in New Zealand. There as many liberties are enjoyed as elsewhere and the women have been found rational and reasonable in the exercise of the privileges extended to them.

It would be barbarous to consider that the women of Canada are mentally, or in any other way, inferior to those of New Zealand. It is consequently fair to assume that the question above quoted is answered in the affirmative, so far as experience has gone, and that no harm would result from the extension of the franchise to women and that moral, and, perhaps, in other respects, the country might be advantaged.

At first they might, but once having their hand in it is to be feared there would be few subjects arise in connection with which that hand would not make itself felt. Take the man away and it is doubtful if any family is as well behaved, especially if the girls are the eldest and the boys the youngest. Hence while on paper there may appear an advance of morality thru might work out the other way. Again it is undoubted that the more occupation the woman has outside the home, the less she is inclined to accept the burden of child-bearing.

Thus it will be seen that, from a moral point of view, it is not so absolutely certain that the country would be benefited by the conferring of the franchise on women. Then, the infidel may not work together as well as expected. And added to these possibilities there is the harrowing fear that all the other means on the circuit have strengthened up. "Which makes it something of a problem to tell at this writing just where the bunting is going to land. However, let us hope that everything will turn out right.

Unless!

Toronto, it seems, from the despatches from the front, has the pontant clinched, barring, of course, certain little things that might happen, such as, for instance, the pitchers may not get into shape soon enough. Tim Jordan's leg may not hold out. Deleahy may not get over that tired feeling before mid-summer, if

"The Stick-at-Home"

None of the creatures of the sea could justly charge the oyster with being a "rolling stone." The salmon passed up the river to his breeding place in the headwaters and a season or two later his progeny descending to the sea found the homely shellfish at his old station. The codfish, cruising the coast season after season, discovered the oyster family, stolid, immovable, unchanged in characteristic or position. And the myriads of other restless, nosing, sea-fish passed to and fro over the oyster bed, or poked their noses curiously among the tight-closed shells in eager search of food and came to regard the unlovely bivalves as part of the permanent covering of the floor of the sea, even as were the slimy covered boulders and the foetus and steam swallowed by the greedy waters.

Few of the good things of life came to the oyster. The plainest type of the unmovable conservative, he hustled after nothing and very little came his way. At one time far back at the beginning of his history he had wriggled along in glad and lighthearted fashion at the surface of the sunlit waters; but only for a little while and then he had settled down here on this mudbank, with thousands of others of his own stolid kind. Overhead the graceful fish chased their prey, mounted to the upper waters or attended to family duties in some nest amongst the seaweed forests or beneath some sheltering boulder. But the oyster waited in the darkness at the bottom of the sea for the food that chance eddies brought him. Around him stretched acres of mud, silt brought down the great river at whose mouth he lay and deposited when incoming and outgoing tides met and the water for a brief space became stagnant.

Nor were the oyster's attempts at homemaking conspicuously pretentious. Some of his kind might tunnel the hard-packed sand of the seabed or hew out an abiding-place from the solid rock itself, but he was content to fasten himself to anything protruding a solid nesting-place, a sodden, sunken log, an old tin, a shell, odd boots, all were equally welcome and impartially patronized. And on these unpromising and unattractive spots the Oyster took up his permanent abode. Here he lay day after day, his shells gaping widely as the halibut, porpoise, or shark, or the oyster to open his tightly closed mouth and yield himself up to his unwelcome visitor. Creeping slowly across the muddy flat and then up the nest on which the shellfish was abiding, the prickly hideous thing of death surrounded him with its pointed arms, disgorging its stomach so as to cover the mouth of the shellfish. And then the starfish waited patiently, grim and unrelenting as death itself while its poisonous juices sought entry to the oyster's home, and poisoned the inmate to paralysis. And then the shellfish was wider and the robber feasted without let or hindrance.

There was little or nothing to compensate to the homely oyster for his humdrum existence. Other creatures of the sea were exposed to like dangers, but many of them knew, for a brief season at least some of the delights of companionship and homemaking. Not so the oyster. Season after season he clung to his exposed perch, solitary, unapproached. The female oyster at the breeding season cast her eggs loose on the water and the male set free his fertilizing milt. The vast majority of the eggs were unfertilized and perished or became the prey of hungry fishes. And small chance of life had even such of the oyster's progeny as were born for as food they were even more welcome than the eggs to the creatures of the sea.

The comparatively few survivors after a brief space of free life at the surface of the sea, settled down at some spot on the bottom, grew a shell and finally developed in marvelous fashion into the adult oyster and became subjected to the family perils and responsibilities.

Immigration Shifting

Canada is not only increasing her population rapidly thru immigration, but she appears to be absorbing highly desirable people from other lands, remarks The Christian Science Monitor of Boston. Only recently settlers were reported entering Manitoba at the rate of considerably more than a thousand a day; and those figures represent only a comparatively small portion of the great stretch of country that lies beyond the United States' northern border line. Now comparisons show that at least one strain of immigration is diverging from New York, Boston and other American ports, and flowing strongly to Halifax and St. John. No doubt the shorter passage between Europe and Canada has a bearing, and possibly there has been a large entry to lands in the western United States by immigrants who landed at Canadian ports; but it would hardly seem that facts and figures thus warrant the explanation that the diversion of immigration is entirely one of landing ports and not of places of settlement.

Moreover, there is something particularly worthy of notice in the fact that the standard of immigrants who have entered Canada in the last two years has been higher than ever before. They are mostly English-speaking people, the greater number of them coming from England, Ireland and Scotland. And many of these people are plentifully supplied with money. This latter statement applies especially to the Scotch, one party of whom, including 200 heads of families, brought $500,000 in all when they landed at Halifax recently. Any nation might be glad to welcome such thrifty men and their families, but the lure of Canada evidently attracts them more strongly than the promise in the great nation to her south. It is true that some steamship companies have acted already on the noticeable deflection of immigration from American ports, and have entered the Canadian service. The fact that more than 100,000 persons have landed at Halifax and St. John since last November and that thousands more are said to be waiting in Europe for steamers to bring them across furnished a strong business appeal.

Immigration to the United States frequently has reached proportions and taken on a complexion at times that aroused serious thoughts of imposing more stringent entrance requirements. Meanwhile, Canada, more discriminating, has picked and chosen to a great extent the people she has taken under her protection. And, allowing a wide margin for the immigrants who take up land in the United States after landing at Canadian ports, it is logical to believe that the recent figures from the great northwest show where a large majority of the newcomers are establishing their homes.

CRUSTS & CRUMBS BY Albert Ernest Stafford.

Editor Sunday World:—In your edition of Sunday the 8th inst., Mr. Stafford treats your readers to a very learned article in defense of "reincarnation." Will you permit me to ask Mr. Stafford to furnish us with something more substantial than mere words in proof of his theory? If the theory of incarnation be true, let him tell us how and when "incarnation" effects itself. Does reincarnation effect itself thru the medium of the female egg, or thru the male spermatozoon? Or does Mr. "Incarnation" name around cuckoo-like, until these two elementary bodies have blended their individual lives and built a nest for it or him to occupy? This is just what the materialists of the Stafford type would have us believe. They would have us believe that the female egg and the male spermatozoon, a perfectly organized body of a man or woman and prepare a kind of spare room in some part of its anatomy to be occupied by some body not yet hatched or hatched for centuries! Their cult is too preposterous, and the more the pity when their illusion could be got rid of so easily by procuring a modern work on elementary biology.

A Biologist. Hamilton, April 11, 1911.

I have been favored with the above by the Sunday Editor, and it is well to print it, as an example of the type of mind that objects to studying the question of rebirth. In the first place there is a blessing pronounced on the man that stetheth not in the seat of the powerful, and I fear our Hamilton physician will evade the blessing if he be not careful. The Stafford type, as those who do me the honor to read this column are aware, would not have you believe anything. Rebirth is not a matter for belief but for investigation, and anyone who investigates it will find all the evidence he needs. Our Hamilton biologist has evidently not investigated, and appears not to understand the psychology or metaphysics of the subject or he would scarcely put the questions he does. And it looks as though he had made up his mind beforehand, and did not expect to get any information, or to take an account of it if he had. This is not the frame of mind in which one learns anything. In the last generation "A Biologist's" probably applied the same attitude towards biology, and were equally sarcastic and equally scornful about protoplasm and Bathylbus. Bathylbus is indeed what they are not have, all things considered. The unfortunate Bathylbus was the result of a not unnatural desire to take a business course in life and life and all that pertains to it. But life is not to be simplified after that fashion. The amphibious of "arrastial" existence, as Bathylbus was taken to be, turned out to be merely a simple precipitate of sulphate of lime. Since then modern science has been making discoveries in physiology and chemistry and is not quite sure at the present stage of affairs whether to take as an example of life more complex, but is sensibly hoping for the best.

One would fancy from our Hamilton doctor's slashing style, that he had discovered an ovum and a spermatozoon, and that there was nothing left to explain. He presumes to follow the example of Haeckel, with a view of life in which we have "natural plain there is no need of any 'design.'" The very best never did, or will, across working blindly without aim or purpose, as he presumes to have learned to go behind the molecules of the atom and the ion and the electron, and begin to study the ether, we are truly going over our heads, which are familiar ways to many who are thought little of by such as our Hamilton biologist. Never-the-less truth is always consistent with itself, and discoveries that have been made by those working in mistaken or useless directions will be found to harmonize eventually with the full round of knowledge. There is a text in the gospels that is usually applied to the marriage relation. "I have never heard of any biological or other confirmation of the text in the usually accepted application. Harmoniousness usually become of one mind and heart, and soul; but in other respects they show no disposition to give up their usual confirmation of the text. The subsequent development of the organism thru all its recapitulatory stages.

Another point that has occurred to these insubstantial reincarnationists does not appear to have bothered our biological expert from Hamilton. It is the unquestionable hermaphro-

THE HEARING OF NON-EXISTENT SOUNDS.

Sounds that have no real existence are heard in some forms of ear diseases and a study of them and their connection with the brain, has been reported by Dr. Maraga to the Paris Academy of Sciences. Three classes of sounds are distinguished. First—Noises, including the pitched hissing or whistling; the beating of the pulse, chirping or rustling, and confused rollings or rumbblings; second, musical sounds, such as sleigh bells and other bells, drums, organ pipes and other bells, words or vocal cries, the croaking of a frog, and the note of the cuckoo.

In chronic deafness, sounds are heard chiefly by victims of sclerosis, or hardening of the auditory organs, or hardening of the auditory organs. Among such persons, two-thirds hear whistling alone, whistling combined with other sounds, or other sounds alone, including those of bells, birds, shells and the pulse. Whistling proves to be due to displacement of one of the three small ear bones; other sounds, to persistent excitation of the nerves of hearing. In his treatment, Dr. Maraga has applied the low-pitched vibrations of a vowel-stem to move the earbone slightly into place; high-frequency alternating electric currents to stimulate the blood circulation and thus suppress the pulse sounds; and vibratory massage of the head in other cases—with good effect if the trouble is recent.

dition of the embryo. There is something singularly significant in the fact that the human embryo is the result of an absolute fusion of the quite distinct ovum and the fertilizing sperm. If our biologist knows anything of embryology he is aware that in the human and higher animal species the distinction of sex is not developed until a considerable progress has been made in the growth of the embryo of the great majority of plants and in some of the lower animal forms the male and female organs are developed in the same being. There are many examples of parthenogenesis, as Thomson and Goddard's book on "The Evolution of Sex" record. Taken in connection with the recapitulatory character of the development of the embryo we are forced to the conclusion that "the development of the embryo is a condensed and abbreviated repetition of the evolution of the race." The teaching of the occult schools shows the gradual development of organs; their solidification, and the preparation of each of the organs by simple easy separation from one into two or even several individuals. Then follows a fresh development—the first step to a multiple existence, distinct sexes, the hermaphrodite condition; then again, a kind of parthenogenesis, "virginal reproduction," when the egg-cells are formed within the body, resulting from it in atomic emanations and becoming matured outside of it; until finally, after a definite separation into sexes, bisexual procreation is reached. But evolution will not stop there, any more than it began there. For sexual reproduction is merely a temporary expedient in the process of evolution, and will be abandoned by nature, as all the religious scriptures teach, when it has served the exigency of a certain phase of physical evolution. The same evolutionary process in the various modes of procreation as other animals have; he must have divided himself, then, hermaphrodite have given birth to a progeny (on the immaculate principle) to his young ones; the next stage would be the oviparous, at first without fructification of the element, then, "with the help of the fertilizing sperm," and only after the final and definite evolution of both sexes, would he become distinct male and female.

Microscopic research shows no permanent action of any particular mode of reproducing life. The asexual, "sweet-born," mode of one early human race, and the "egg-born" mode of the subsequent, are indeed very different, but confined to lower forms of life, and among these the same organism may run thru various metamorphoses in the course of its life-cycle. All this is nothing to a biologist who goes on the principle that it is the hands of the clock which move the works. The student who recognizes the monotonous pulse below the surface of things, understands that all these changes of method and metamorphosis are not a reaction from environmental needs, or purposeful adaptation, from within. Our Hamilton biologist has probably not extended his studies into the realm of metaphysics, and the stages of specializing and separating physics from physiology, or he would possibly be aware of forces behind the phenomenal world. These forces do not "hang-around, cuckoo-like," so far as observation has been able to determine, but are very definitely guided by what we call laws, which are the purpose of nature, "that matter be indestructible under organic rather than inorganic forms, and that she works slowly but insistently towards the realization of this object—the evolution of conscious life out of inert material." And this evolution begets a horde of more complex organisms, the realization of this object—the evolution of conscious life out of inert material. And this evolution begets a horde of more complex organisms, the realization of this object—the evolution of conscious life out of inert material. And this evolution begets a horde of more complex organisms, the realization of this object—the evolution of conscious life out of inert material.

There is nothing but incarnation in nature, nothing but the embodiment of the immaterial purposes of the will, which mean great and noble, but all dominated by the one will of the Word made Flesh. To doubt reincarnation is to doubt your existence. To refuse to consider it is to decline the key to all the religious and philosophic and scientific puzzles of the race. But the refusal is well, just as the acceptance of it is. For we are only in gestation in our etheric cells, larvae to whom pre-mature knowledge would be premature life. In due time we shall be "born again," and "know even as we are known."

"Ceiling gazing is a valuable exercise for small, flat, deep-set eyes."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

If your eyes are little, flat-looking and deep set, do not despair. You may greatly improve them by exercises.

"What! Exercise the eyes!" you exclaim. Yes, I assure you that it can be done. And not only may their beauty be improved by the exercises judiciously taken, but the sight may be improved in the same way, since the exercises draw the blood to the muscles of the eyes, and the eyeball itself is better nourished.

One caution before I begin to describe these exercises for making the eyes larger and fuller! Do not continue the exercises after you become tired. Indeed, it would be better if you stopped short in all exercises of becoming tired. But especially is this necessary for the delicate eyes.

The first exercise consists in holding the head perfectly straight, and keeping the eyes front face forward, the only movements being with the eyes. Take also the precaution of sitting or standing with your back to the light, so that there will be no undue strain upon the eyes. You are quite ready. Very well, then. Now, holding the head and face stationary, turn the eyes as far to the right as you can. Then shift your glance forward. Do this from six to ten times at the beginning. As you become accustomed to it, it may be repeated twenty times, but should always be slowly and gently done. If they should be tired after the first two or three movements close them and rest for a few minutes, two to five, before resuming them.

The next exercise is the reverse. It consists in casting the glance as far as possible to the left. Do this the same number of times. Bring the glance to a full front. Let the eyes rest between each shifting of glances for about the same space as the heart rests between beats. Though this time is almost imperceptible, it still gives sufficient space for rest.

A Love Story From Life

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE heroine of this love story, from life, is a woman of sixty. She has four daughters, who are married and gone, and she and her husband find themselves back where they started forty years ago.

Just two, all alone, in a big house. It wasn't lonesome forty years ago. She was a bride and the house was new, like her happiness, and hadn't any memories.

The first tragedy came when her first married and left home, and when the second followed, and the third and the fourth, and the mother's aims were as empty as the house, she seemed too desolate to be desolate.

Her love for children was so overwhelming that she couldn't and she card parties, receptions, women's social and political clubs and similar diversions, a means of venting her grief on her lips.

None came to the first daughter; the second daughter was glad she hadn't any, and the third and the fourth couldn't see where they owed anything to posterity.

All this explains why a suit of a very unusual nature is soon to be filed in the courts: The mother of these four married daughters will sue each for $10,000 for not putting any grandchildren in her arms.

"They have made my old age lonesome and unhappy," she will allege. "I gave the best of my life to them, and they will not give one grandchild to me."

GETTING DOWN TO CASES.
"Papa, what is a confagration?"
"That means a big fire, kid."
"Is it? Well, what do you call a little fire?"
"No word for that. But why do you ask?"
"Well, only because your cottail is afire. What do you call that dad?"

NOT THROUGH SENTIMENT.
"I see you carry a lock of your wife's hair in your pocketbook."
"Oh, I just thought that downtown to try to match it for her."

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

purities and stimulate the growth of eyelashes and eyebrows.

When the herbs have soaked in the water for five minutes thrust the face, with the eyes open, into the bowl. Hold the breath. Keep the face, open eyed, under the water as long as you can hold your breath. Then withdraw the face. Do this half a dozen times. If easier, you can thrust your face into the water while the eyes are closed, then open them in the water and withdraw them before closing.

Dry the eyes gently with a little absorbent cotton, or with a piece of soft, clean old muslin.

Dust or clinders lodged in the eyes are dangerous to their beauty as well as to their sight. No matter how much it hurts, don't attempt to remove these or any other foreign body from the eyes with the fingers. You are liable by careless or nervous movements of the fingers to thrust the clinder or grain of dust deep into the eyeball, permanently injuring it. Close the eyes for a few minutes, keeping them tightly closed. Then open them, and if the accumulated tears do not wash out the intruder draw down the lower lid.

Insert a flaxseed within and let it go in search of the offender. It will snare it and draw it forth. When you finally remove the flaxseed the intruder will come out with it.

Sometimes the eyes feel feverish from strain. I have found that closing them and having my maid pass over them clean little silk sponges saturated with cologne rests them. Or I have had her press ever so gently upon them bits of absorbent cotton that have been dipped in cold tea.

Don't strain the eyes. It should not be necessary to utter this warning to the intelligent girls and women of America, and yet again and again have I seen them rearing on swiftly moving trains, in the crowded subway, that dashes alternately into light or gloom. I have seen them reading while lying on a bed or lounge, and I have seen them wear hideous veils with designs that looked like giant spiders crawling over them, and I have seen them go on reading or writing when the eyes were red-rimmed and the strain showed in fine little lines about the eyes and an unbecoming pucker between them.

Never, as you value the beauty of your eyes and the serenity of your face, strain your eyes.

Shake well on mixing and before using. Bathe the fleshy parts of the body with this lotion before retiring and on rising.

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 121 - EYE GYMNASTICS

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

MADAME CAVALIERI to-day introduces a decided novelty into her instructive and entertaining series of articles on beauty culture. She writes of exercises for beautifying the eyes. She describes these exercises in detail, after warning those who adopt them to stop short, as the discreet do in all exercises, of becoming tired.

"Turn your eyes as far as you can to one side."

"Anoint the skin about the eyes with oil."

"The delicate tissues of the skin about the eyes can be fed by a camel's hair brush dipped in oil."

"Will you please publish an external remedy for reducing fat?" a girl writes me from the State of James Whitcomb Riley, George Ade and David Graham Phillips. The Indiana girl is wise in her request for external remedies for too much flesh. The only safe internal remedy I believe to be smaller quantities of food and a largely vegetable and fruit diet. This lotion has been successfully used by persevering persons, for superfluous flesh slowly acquired is slowly removed.

- Iodide of potassium..... 60 grains
- Iodine..... 10 grains
- Rain water..... 1 quart

Shake well and apply to the half thoroughly once with an old toothbrush. Repeat, if necessary, or until the hair is the desired tint. I have many times said in these columns that I disapprove of hair dye.

A Long Island City girl writes: "Will you please print for one of your many admirers a good remedy for blackheads?"

- Rose water..... 2 oz.
- Carbonate of magnesia..... 1/2 dram
- Zinc oxide..... 1/2 dram

Like all mixtures which contain a sediment, this should be well shaken before using. Pour a quantity of it upon a bit of absorbent cotton and dampen the skin of the nose thoroughly with it. When they have been softened, remove the blackheads by pressing them gently with a comedone extractor, or with the dull side of a paper cutter or the cushions of the fingers, never the nails. Always apply a pure, healing cold cream after extracting blackheads.

A Peckskill matron asks me to rewrite a formula which a druggist has lost. It is for dry hair and is as follows:

- Spirits of wine..... 5 oz.
- Castor Oil..... 12 drams
- Balsam of Peru..... 1 dram
- Resorcin..... 1-6 dram

Shake well and use at least every other night before retiring, rubbing it well into the scalp.

From Chicago comes this request: "Please tell me what to do for cheeks that are too fat. I have no excessive plumpness on any other part of my body."

Try massage. Employ a skilful facial massage.

How to Behave When Presented at Court

London, March 27.

THERE is a lot of speculation among young women of society who will be debutantes at court this year with regard to the correct procedure at the presentations.

The court authorities have made no official statement on the subject, and only the professors of deportment who have had the foresight to made special inquiries at headquarters are qualified to instruct their fashionable pupils.

Miss Lillian Ware, who is training a large number of debutantes, gives the following description of the presentation procedure:

"In the old days the King used to kiss the cheeks of the debutantes, and in Queen Victoria's time the young ladies presented at court had to kiss the Royal hand in addition to making the curtsy. But there was great difficulty in the latter years of her Majesty's reign, because she would pass the duty of receiving the debutantes over to the Princess of Wales—after she had seen a few of them.

"Many of the old elaborate details will be spared this year's debutante. All she has to do is to make a deep curtsy to the King, then a less lowly

Retort Sarcastic

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT, the well-known writer and lecturer, in an address on woman suffrage, said: "A famous editor was arguing with me the other day.

"But," he said, "women can't pretend to be men's equals. Take war, for instance. Suppose a war arose between us and England, or us and Germany, or us and Japan, what would you do then, madam?"

"I'd do the same as you would," I answered promptly. "I'd sit at my desk and write articles urging other people to go and fight!"

A STRANGE CASE.
Wombat never gets more than four miles an hour out of his automobile.

"I thought it was a powerful machine," it is, but he's one of those polite bugs. Every time a woman gets in front of him he slows down and asks her if she won't kindly step aside."

NO NEED TO ASK.
"Does your wife ask you for things she knows you cannot afford?"
"She hasn't asked me for a thing since we were married."

"Great! How do you manage it?"
"When she wants a thing she does not ask me; she tells me."
"Polly want a cracker?"
"Naw; gimme three cards."

STAGE RETROSPECTIVE WITH MUSICAL NOTES

"THE OLD TOWN."
 George Ade has written a merry trifle, and, for some reason that, I confess, I am unable to understand, has called it "The Old Town." There is no reason why it should not have been called anything else. It is almost needless of plot or cohesion—still it is very funny, and it is very funny. They, however, were not the only ones in the show. The whole cast was competent to amuse, and the girl side was conspicuous in this direction, being also, vocally, very near the top notch. There was also a quite special item of dancing, done by a sextet of girls who call themselves The English Pony Ballet (Broncho ponies, evidently) who danced very neatly and whose work was very heartily applauded.

 It is not a particularly clever or strikingly interesting play which George Sidney used at the Grand, but it is a pasty, unexciting and mildly funny. The cast is, indeed, capable of better things. The play, to speak truth, is very weak and it is considerably to the credit of the players that with such feeble material they manage, as they do, to keep large audiences interested and amused. The cast, taken in the lump, is clever enough to deserve a smarter vehicle for its talents.

 The attraction at the Princess Theatre, beginning next Monday, April 24, will be Jos. M. SCENE FROM "GREEN STOCKINGS," IN WHICH MARGARET ANGLIN WILL APPEAR AT THE ROYAL ALEXANDRA THIS WEEK.

persuade her to abandon emotional work and tears, at any rate for a spell. Celia is one of a family of four daughters, having a widowed father. She is the brightest and wittiest of the four, yet she is the only one of them neither married nor likely to be. The old custom of girls unmarried and unengaged wearing green stockings at their sisters' weddings has been strictly observed by their family, and Celia has worn them twice, and is threatened with having to don them a third time, and that shortly. She suddenly springs a surprise. She is engaged, and her fiancé, whom she met at a house party, and with whom it was a case of love at first sight, sailed abroad with his regiment that morning. He is Col. Smith, but he only exists in her imagination. Congratulations are showered upon her, and her mind is racked for details concerning his personality. Celia is equal to the task, however, and emerges triumphantly a formally engaged young woman.

Realizing the necessity of putting an end to the deception, she, after the lapse of a few months, causes the insertion in a newspaper of a paragraph announcing his death in battle in Central Africa. So far, so good, but Celia reckoned without her host, for sooner is the paragraph published, than a dear friend of her lately deceased fiancé appears on the scene—bearing the last dying message of the beloved fellow, and a medley of trinkets for his loved one. Celia's astonishment is overwhelming. How the mystery is cleared up and how Celia is forced to acknowledge that her resentment in being deceived is unfair as the deception was originated by herself, is said to constitute a very delightful comedy. The action takes place at Lumley Park in England, the seat of Celia's widowed father. Miss Anglin's leading man is H. Reeves-Smith, one of the best of our light comedians and others in the cast are: George Woodward, Maude Granger, Ruth Rose and Ruth Holt Boucault. Miss Anglin will only give a Saturday matinee.

 Speaking generally it is unwise to speak generally, but I think I may risk it with regard to the average level of theatricals that is to be seen in Toronto. The musical side, I have noticed, is remarkably high. The drama, itself, and the assisted by music except when some acknowledged artist, with a proved success comes along, usually poor in material and inartistically shown. Toronto is big enough to get really good shows—and doesn't. There is a theory that cities, like individuals, receive what they deserve. If that be an arguable thesis Toronto is more undeserving than its character would lead one to suppose. It seems to be thought by managers that if they put on a show with the principal part played by a well-advertised star, they have provided all that is necessary in the way of attraction. The public endorses this view by going to see the "star." But, almost without exception, either because the "star" will not surround himself or herself with any assistance above the level of utility, or because the only "part" in the play worth considering is that which is "written round" the star, the supporting cast is conspicuous mostly in throwing into strong relief the comparative cleverness of quite an ordinary actor. The thing which needs to be done is to provide a higher average level in the "support." Even if the leading man or woman were always what he or she claims to be, the play, not the individual, is, after all "the thing," and no play that was ever written can depend for the entertainment which it is to give, upon any one character, however cleverly portrayed.

 One of the latest and most successful of musical comedies is "The Honeymoon Trail," which will be the offering at the Grand during the first week of May. In fact "The Honeymoon Trail" will be presented at the Grand for the first time at less than dollar fifty prices.

There can be no doubt that after this sort of confinement any sort of marriage must be something of a relief.

WARM WINDS THAT GIVE THE ALPS VEGETATION. The Föhn is a warm, dry southerly wind of the Alps, resembling the Chinook of the Rocky Mountains. An observer at Innsbruck, the capital of Tyrol, reports that it sometimes blows northward with much force, raising clouds of dust, and that it makes the atmosphere stiflingly hot in the summer and mild and close in winter, occasionally having a depressing influence on the nervous system.

In 25 years Dr. H. von Flicker has noted an annual average of 48 days of Föhn Spring has 17 days, and there are 11 in autumn, and it generally lasts one or two days at a time, but on two visits it has continued eight days. It is this warm wind that gives Alpine regions maize, certain flowers and other vegetation.

Joseph K. Watson With "Buccaneers"

Big Burlesque Attraction at Star Along With Irish Champion Wrestler.

The Buccaneers, with that funny little fellow, Joe K. Watson, is entirely new this season, and owing to its newness, it has all the opportunities to show with all these desirable ingredients which make burlesque popular among those theatregoers who venture to a play house to be amused by continuous hilarity. A big business is therefore expected when the Buccaneers come to the Star Theatre this week. While other companies depend on their established title for patronage, it was up to this attraction to gain a reputation right off the start, when it opened, two years ago. It made a deserved reputation for itself and this season the management have expended a large amount of money which enabled them to secure the best of the very best. This policy has proven to have been a wise one and those familiar with affairs are well aware of the fact that this organization this season has surpassed the keenest anticipations of its management. The company embodies a cast almost twice the size of the usual attraction. It was the chief aim to give the attraction a bright and brilliant appearance to which an abundance of handsome young women were essential. Faded beauties, who only too often make their appearance on the stage, found no favor with the management; neither did the old time slapstick comedian, outlashed scene and electrical effects find a place in this production. With the label, "Everything Best," the Buccaneers, with its funny burlesque, its vaudeville features, its lavishly decorated, artistic groupings, spectacular tableaux, enchanting strains and terpsichorean evolutions, will easily be identified as the attraction par excellence.

As an extra attraction the management has secured Jim Galvin, Irish champion wrestler, who will meet all comers and forfeit $25 to any one he fails to throw in 15 minutes every evening. The Paragon Score Board will be shown every matinee showing all of Toronto's away from home games. Two shows in one. No advance in prices. Every body goes to the Star.

Irwin's Majestics At Gayety This Week

Old Stereotyped Ideas Thrown Out and Bunch of New Stuff In Its Place.

When a manager sets out to improve burlesque, he is not trifling with an easy task. All the old stereotyped ideas must be eliminated entirely. The old trick of the comedy moth eaten stage's horseplay and rough house methods of the slap stick variety must be discarded. A complete regeneration is the required remedy, and Manager Irwin has elected himself as chief reformer for the needed change. He has broken the bands of his boodie barrel, and with a lavish hand made a production for the Majestics that will equal any musical comedy ever presented in the high class theatres. "Everything new" is the watchword of the Majestics, a general clean up, not a bar of music, nor a line of song that you ever heard. Everything used was especially written and composed for the Majestics, and will be seen and heard only in this production. There is a singing stunt called "The review of the operas" that will keep the vocal critic busy searching for sour notes, cast of comedians that have stood the acid test, and a chorus of the class that makes the red coruscates run thru the veins like a tonic. Fifty people is the total count of the Majestics, and not a citron among them.

A description of the gorgeous costumes would over tax the ability of a society script, while the scenic embellishments and electrical effects are the climax of modern stage craft. This is the bonus, but the Majestics will substantiate every word of it. The usual matinee will be given, and no advance prices. Let us see if Manager Irwin is going to fulfill his promise at the Gayety Theatre this week.

Margaret Anglin Pre-eminent on Stage

Remarkable Success of Girl Who Was Born in Ottawa Parliament Buildings.

The immediate future of Margaret Anglin cannot fail to enlist interest on the part of those whose love for the drama of America is sincere, for among the younger generation of players she stands forth pre-eminently. It is therefore matter for congratulation to know that she intends soon to undertake the exploitation of herself in more classical roles than those with which she has hitherto been identified. Another note of pleasure is that for the future she will lean more towards comedy. This be it understood, does not, however, imply that we are to see no more of the tragic side of her consummate art, but rather that in its development and reaching out for the eminence towards which her hopes are set, it becomes necessary for her to undertake and create more varied roles.

Versatility is definitely essential to those who aspire to pronounced and substantial fame upon the stage.

Born in the speaker's chambers of the house of commons, Ottawa, little more than thirty years ago, the daughter of the late Hon. Timothy Anglin, then speaker, Margaret Anglin inherited no precedent in the shape of family theatrical traditions. No member of her family has set the young girl an example, and, in fact, it is said that her aspirations stageward were frowned upon. Be that as it may, her ambitions were realized when she made her debut in a small role as a member of one of Charles Frohman's minor companies in 1896. Her progress at first was by no means phenomenal or rapid, and her descent upon New York, the Mecca of every ambitious actor, was delayed until the late Richard Mansfield cast her for Roxane in his production of "Cyrano de Bergerac." This was at the Garden Theatre. All unknown in the City of New York, the young actress awoke the morning following the production to find the town ringing with praise of her work and flocking to see the slip of a girl with the wonderful eyes and golden voice, who was obviously possessed of dramatic genius; a new potentiality had arisen on the theatrical horizon.

Step by step she advanced in her destiny, first as a member of Charles Frohman's famous Empire Theatre Stock Company, of which, by the way, she was the last leading lady and as such spoke the valedictory address at the company's final performance at the old Boston Museum. During this period of her career, she achieved a striking success in Henry Arthur Jones' play "Mrs. Dane's Defense." In conjunction with Henry Miller, Miss Anglin became a star in 1905, and together they leased the Princess Theatre in New York. This was an altogether discredited house so far as the public was concerned, and had been so for a number of years, but, during the Miller-Anglin regime, its fortunes were favored and there the joint stars successfully produced "Zira," "The Great Divide," and "Brown of Harvard." Miss Anglin enjoys the distinction of having been the means of introducing to the playing world, the late Professor Vaughan Moody and his work. At Easter 1906, she produced "The Sabine Woman," in Chicago at the Garrick Theatre for a few tentative performances. Subsequently, the play was renamed "The Great Divide," and presented in New York, where it was received with flattering approval as elsewhere.

MAY SPEND MILLIONS ON GRADE CROSSINGS

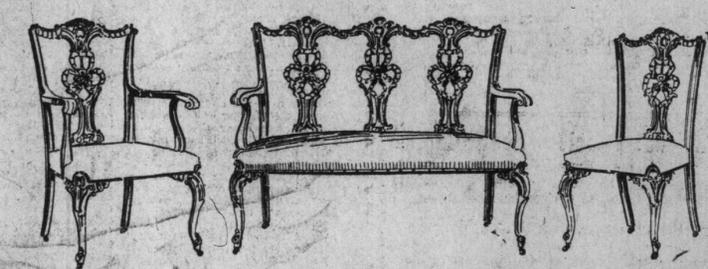

Commission Asks Increased Appropriation to Carry On Work—Two Local Traps to Go.

The New York State Commission that has in hand the removal of grade crossings has asked for an appropriation of $8,000,000 from the state treasury to further its work during the present year. Last year the legislature allowed $3,500,000 for the work, and as the law requires that the railroad pay one-half of the expense and the state and town each one-quarter, a total of $1,400,000 was spent. If the appropriation applied for this year is allowed, it would mean that the sum of $3,500,000 will probably be expended.

MURRAY-KAY, LIMITED JOHN KAY COMPANY, Limited

Furniture of Sterling Worth A Notable Assemblage From Leading Makers in Canada, England and the United States

Dining-Room Furniture For the dining room, mahogany perhaps takes first place in public favor. Its rich color and the exquisite markings of the finer grades are shown to great advantage, especially in the larger pieces of furniture.

Stimulated by the improvement of public taste in regard to the furnishing and decoration of the home, cabinetmakers on this continent and in Europe have been giving special attention of late to the production of furniture not only pleasing to one's taste for things artistic, but in the highest degree useful and convenient.

Bedroom Furniture With the immense assortment displayed on our third floor to choose from, the selection of tasteful and appropriate furnishings for any bedroom should not be difficult. Mahogany, birdseye maple, Circassian walnut, oak and white enamel are all represented.

Living-Room Furniture The furnishings for this important room should, of course, be of a substantial character, made for use and comfort rather than for show. We devote a whole floor to a comprehensive exhibit of just such furniture—Davenports, Morris chairs, arm chairs, lounges, card tables, writing tables, bookcases, secretaries, etc., in Tudor Craftsman and other admired styles.

IN OAK there is even wider choice than in the more expensive wood. Prices commence at $25.00 for a cleverly designed buffet, and rise by easy stages to $350.00 for a rarely handsome sideboard in the Elizabethan style. Tables, chairs, cabinets, etc., to complete the suites are, of course, also on hand. Period designs—"Elizabethan," "Jacobean," "Flanders"—are represented in the collection by many carefully selected examples.

Drawing-Room Furniture A large and carefully chosen assortment of upholstered furniture for the drawing room and living room occupies our spacious and well-lighted top floor. It embraces mahogany and gilded suites, and individual sofas, arm chairs, reception chairs, rockers, lounges, etc., in Period and modern designs. Davenport sofas also—big, deep-seated, luxurious—some stuffed all over, others showing a massive framing of mahogany; also club easy chairs in leather or denim—all in large variety of size and price.

Hall Furniture In a great many houses the hall is now a wide and roomy apartment, and the furniture, of course, should be in keeping with its character. For the furnishing of halls of this type nothing could be more suitable than the quaint, high-backed chairs and settees assembled on our second floor. These for the most part are copies of antiques, reproducing not only the ancient designs, but the time-stained color of the oak, and of the canework in seat and back. Tables are also shown, as well as the necessary hall mirrors, umbrella holders, etc. Altogether a most interesting exhibit, and one that should not be overlooked.

Inlaid Linoleums and Cork Carpets. This is just a reminder that a stock of Inlaid Linoleums to equal ours will be hard to find. Block, tile, mosaic and conventional designs are all represented in wide variety, together with a number of simply marvellous imitations of hardwood and parquet flooring. Prices, per square yard, 75c, 85c, 95c, $1.00, $1.10, $1.25, $1.35.

Lady Duff-Gordon Describes the Newest Frills and Graces from Paris

A Charming Hat of Straw Covered with Ostrich Plumes, Deep Red Binding.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile").

THERE was a day—and it was in this same week too—when the advent of Spring was not only chronicled in the calendar, but also actually and delightfully realized by the weather. So that it became a positive pleasure—as well as a promised duty—to start out in search of novelties in the way of sunshades.

First of all, then, I must tell you that the promised predominance of very tall-crowned hats has been provided for by the introduction of an entirely new shape in sunshades, whose high domed effect will prevent any difficulty of adjustment and any damage to the towering plumes and aigrettes and bows which adorn these already tall hats.

The black velvet sunshade is the successor of the velvet umbrella, which provided a passing sensation in Paris last season, my own opinion being that for both purposes this particular fabric is completely and hopelessly unsuited, but more particularly, perhaps, for the sunshade. For imagine what would be the appearance of such an expanse of velvet after it had been outspread for even half an hour, during every moment of which it had attracted, and permanently attached to itself, every stray speck of dust! Even the mental picture would hardly be conducive to your choice of such a sunshade, while this would be much less unattractive than the reality.

But even freaks of fashion are interesting to hear about, and so I will tell you that the model I saw was lined with the faintest shell pink nixon, so that it would at any rate have a most becoming effect on the complexion, while to its flat, tapering handle there were attached two long, bracelet-like loops of black velvet ribbon, which had practical usefulness as well as decorative effect to recommend them, seeing that one or other—or both—could be slung over the wrist, so that the hand would be left quite free and the sunshade at the same time be quite safe. Similar additions, in wide satin ribbon to match the covering, are to be noted on many of the new models.

Another scheme for simplifying the carrying of a sunshade, and, moreover, for making it a very decorative addition to the toilette, is to provide it with a sword handle, modelled in most faithful imitation of this martial accessory, in softly tinted horn, and duly provided with very handsome silken cords and tassels. This particular design is, of course, confined to the plain sunshades of gros-grain or taffeta silk, as it would be obviously out of keeping with the more frivolous fabrics and schemes.

Another dress detail of which you will do well to make note, is the introduction of entirely uncurled ostrich feather boas, which are to be worn when the accompanying hats display plumage of the same somewhat dishevelled variety.

The next most interesting item of news concerns the ribbons which, as I duly forewarned you, are to be used on everything we are going to wear this season. One new pattern, which I am sure you will love, divides fine-line stripes of black and white silk with broader stripes of satin in, say, old rose, or emerald green, while there further figure in their twelve-inch-wide expanse, two broad bandings of white silk, over which shadowy bunches of little roses are scattered. The almost inevitable black and white stripes also figure as borderings for a China silk ribbon, where, on a white background, many bunches of flowers are connected by trailing blue bows. Another new scheme reverses this order and brings the stripes into the centre, while on either side, the white silk is patterned with bordering trails of wild forget-me-nots and central cretels of roses.

New Model Plentifully Embroidered. Hat of Rough Straw Crown Half Covered with Ribbon.

A Pompadour ribbon, too, is lovely in white with single blossoms alternating with prim little posies in its design, and bringing together soft shades of blue, and pink, and mauve, and yellow, while the satin edging is either in black or blue, mauve or rose. But of all the new designs—and dozens seem to be introduced each day—I have a personal preference, I think, for an exceedingly smart black and white checked effect (the tiniest of checks, too, it is) with a quarter inch edging on either side of flame color.

Royal blue or vivid violet, though it has a rival, I admit, in a line-striped variety whose coloring (as first patterned on white) is eventually repeated in the black satin and a stripe of white embroidered with the color. No wonder ribbons are being used by the mile.

The Dainty Things to Eat I Make with Honey—By Mme. Maeterlinck

Madame Maeterlinck on Her Bench in Her Bee Garden.

MADAME MAURICE MAETERLINCK, wife of the world-famous "Belgian Shakespeare" likes honey. It was because of this fondness that Maeterlinck was prompted to write his extraordinary analysis of the bee. Here Mme. Maeterlinck gives some of her favorite recipes for cooking with honey.

BAKED APPLES WITH HONEY.
LARGE apples are chosen and cored, the cavity is filled with honey and they are baked thus, a little butter being added on top of each.

OAT MEAL BREAD WITH HONEY.
TO a cup of rolled oats add three cups of hot water, half a cup of honey, a tablespoonful of butter and some salt. When cooled to blood heat add a yeast cake dissolved. Stir in flour till a suitable dough for kneading has been made. Raise over night and make two loaves. Raise again and then before placing in the oven to bake, brush over the tops with one teaspoonful of honey and two of milk blended.

HONEY CHEESE SOUFFLE.
PLACE two cups of milk in a saucepan and when heated mix into it two cupfuls of finely grated cheese and two cupfuls of bread crumbs, stirring constantly until smooth; then add first the beaten yolk of an egg and last the stiffly whipped white, stirring it in quickly. Serve hot with honey.

HONEY, SOUR MILK GINGERBREAD.
BLEND together one cup of honey, half a cup of butter, half a cup of sour milk, two eggs well beaten, two cups of flour, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, the same of ginger, half a teaspoonful of salt and one and three-quarters of a teaspoonful of soda. Heat the honey and butter together and just before it reaches the boiling point remove from the fire, then add the sour milk and eggs, etc. When cool coat with a thin icing.

HONEY-CURED HAM.
TO every fifty pounds of ham use a brine made of four pounds of coarse salt, an ounce of saltpeter, two pounds of honey and two gallons of water. Blend well together, pour over the hams and let them lie in it for six weeks.

HOT RICE WITH HONEY.
WASH a cupful of rice in many waters till all cloudiness is removed. Drain and plunge into a quart of boiling water, adding a teaspoonful of salt and a bit of lard the size of a filbert. Boil for twenty minutes. Remove and drain and mix with two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter. Pour over all as

Some Unusual Recipes by the Wife of the Great Belgian Writer.

Much honey as the taste requires. Some prefer Madame's way of heating the honey as she always does for rice and for use on pancakes, or griddle cakes.

EGGS POACHED IN HOT HONEY.
THE honey is placed in a saucepan and is sufficient to cover the eggs well. When it is thoroughly hot the eggs are slipped into it, and as soon as they are set are removed. A very generous sprinkling of cheese is added as they are served.

FRENCH CHESTNUTS IN HONEY.
THIS is a very delicate dish. The large chestnuts are shelled and placed in boiling water for five minutes, when the skin falls off easily. A pound of these blanched chestnuts is then placed in a saucepan, covered with creamy milk and simmers till the chestnuts are tender. They are then mashed with a spoon and sweetened with a quarter of a pound of honey and well mixed. The mass is then pressed through a sieve or put through a vermicelli masher.

It is then heaped on a dish and surrounded by a mass of whipped cream.

DELICIOUS HONEY MOUSSE.
BEAT well the yolks of four eggs and then beat with them gradually a cupful of strained honey. Heat gradually until thick, stirring constantly. Remove and cool and then add the whites of the four eggs that have been whipped to a stiff froth. Then add a pint of whipped cream and blend all together. Pack in ice and salt, and freeze without stirring.

HONEY PRESERVED FRUITS.
PLUMS, peaches, figs, mirabelles and other fruits are like new conserves thus done with honey and gooseberries with honey are most delectable. I make many cooked sauces with honey, each quite different from the others, and I merely follow out old recipes, save that I substitute honey in place of sugar, an ingredient which I never use for myself, and only have it in my cuisine to accommodate the tastes of others.

These are but a few of my recipes, and besides cooking with honey I use it in all manner of ways. For example, I stir several large spoonfuls of it into a glass of milk and drink it. I sweeten my coffee with it instead of sugar, and use it on puddings and on fruit, besides eating it straight from the comb—which is a delight in.

A Valuable Witness. A southern lawyer tells of a case that came to him at the outset of his career, wherein his principal witness was a darky named Jackson, supposed to have knowledge of certain transactions not at all to the credit of his employer, the defendant. "Now, Jackson, said the lawyer, "I want you to understand the importance of telling the truth when you are put on the stand. You know what will happen, don't you, if you don't tell the truth?" "Yassir," was Jackson's reply: "In dat case I expects our side will win de case."—Harper's.

Are Your Walls In Style

Kalsomine and wall paper are hardly up-to-date. Tinted walls are now the vogue. And by far the most popular are those tinted with Alabastine, the sale of which has doubled during the last two years. Alabastine tints possess that soft, velvety, restful effect considered so desirable by fashion authorities. With the 21 tints and white, any desired color combination can be produced quite easily. Mix Alabastine with cold water and apply with a flat bristle brush. Anyone can do it. Alabastine is an Alabaster rock cement. Its colors are permanent. It won't rub off. You can redecorate any time without scraping or washing off the previous coat. The most sanitary, durable, economical and stylish wall decoration.

TUXEDO PARK—CALGARY

Calgary Will Buy Tuxedo Park Monday

Tuxedo Park will be offered for Sale in Calgary and Toronto for the first time on Monday, April 24th, at 9 o'clock a.m. Thousands of Calgary purchasers are there eagerly waiting this opportunity, and scores of them are home-builders. Understand this property is now practically built up to and around and the proposition for investment must not be classed with the hundreds of Western Sub-divisions far removed from the City proper.

Tuxedo Park is a beautiful residential property located on the two mile circle and directly adjoining a thriving residential section, whose growth has heretofore been retarded on account of not having Street Railway facilities. This Summer will mark the Street Railway and Water Main Extensions through this Section and traversing Tuxedo Park to Tuxedo Gardens. The property will be built on rapidly, not in a few years, but this year. No waiting for events to transpire—they are transpiring in Calgary every day and the center of this record movement is on the North Hill up to, beyond and around Tuxedo Park. Calgarians will pick up the greater portion of the Sub-division, consisting of over 2,700 Lots the first sale day. Thousands of Toronto investors have frequently regretted their misfortune in not being able to secure good, safe, investments in Calgary; Monday, the opportunity presents itself. You who buy will profit. We guarantee every statement made in our advertising and invite the most thorough investigation of our claims. Wire your Calgary friends, learn what they say. They'll confirm our statements; in other words, "Ask the Man from Calgary."

Toronto Will Buy Tuxedo Park Monday

Myriads of inquiries from Toronto investors to our Calgary office prompted us to so arrange the sale of Tuxedo Park by offering the property in both cities upon the same day. As stated elsewhere in this advertisement, scores of Calgary purchasers, many of whom are Home Builders are eagerly awaiting the date of sale. The entire property could have been disposed of to Calgary purchasers, but we, wishing to expand our operations into eastern fields concluded this was the opportune time by offering a property which would make the purchasers a splendid investment. Understand Tuxedo Park is now well-built up to and around, and the proposition must not be associated with the scores of Western Farm Land Sub-divisions. Street Car lines and Water Mains are now being extended through the property. The Sub-division is ideally located on a commanding plateau, overlooking a portion of the City and river, in addition to the magnificent view of the snow-capped Rockies in the West. Such attractions as these, coupled with the transportation services, are the means through which Home Builders select their sites. Built on property means rapid increase to surrounding lots. This Sub-division will be built on at a rate which will be a surprise to even Calgary, the City of Surprises. The prices given below and the terms upon which the Lots will be sold are easily within reach of every one seeking Real Estate Investments. Investigate and buy and profit! Call at our office in the Kent Building, Monday.

 Own a piece of land. The poorest tract may prove a fine investment. A man bought a little piece of swamp land for $11 once. Everybody said he was stung and he hadn't lived there overnight till he knew he was. Mosquitoes! Well, a kind neighbor told him that coal oil would kill mosquitoes. So he bought gallons of it and poured it wherever he thought they might be breeding. A few days later a capitalist called on him. Owner showed him over the place and in an hour the capitalist had given him five times what he paid for the land. The investor was and was happy. He wondered why the capitalist is drilling wells all over the place now, but he is satisfied.—Boston Traveler.

STAGE NOVELTIES.

This year's "Superba" is a new comedy and pantomime under an old name. The story, which is the most interesting, is not lost sight of in the jumble of fun and strange inventions, that defy all efforts to discover their mechanism. "Superba" has been known to the patronage of the play house for over twenty years, but those who see the performance this year will find an entirely new company and a new story, together with songs, dances, new mechanical devices etc., that have never been viewed here before. It is said that over five million people have seen "Superba" at different times, but the performance that the company is giving this year is said to please better than ever before. Younger generations, also, who have never viewed this class of entertainment, always have a great surprise in store. Robert Rosaire will again be seen as Pico, the clown, after an absence of several seasons, and will be ably assisted by a strong cast of pantomimists. The specialty feature includes, Rosaire and Doreto, Robin in feats of jugglery, and Bess Ross, a singing and dancing soubret. Entirely new ensemble numbers, together with an almost endless chain of novelties are promised with costumes and scenic effects more dazzling and elaborate than have ever been seen before in a Hanlon production. One of the features is a conservatory scene with a magnificent arrangement of flowers that appear to be alive and blooming. Another and probably the greatest transformation scene ever produced on the stage is that in which a novel battleship effect is offered. The first Tableau shows the "Origin of Our Navy," the second, the "Modern Dreadnought" and the third in the "White Squadron" with the jolly tars on their way home. The third act is given over principally to a brilliant and spectacular forest scene, alive with animal life and in which the White Hunter is surrounded by lions, tigers, elephants, leopards, monkeys, and other denizens of the tropics. Hanlon's New "Superba" this season has two cardrads of scenery and special effects and a vast number of people are employed in the production.

Beauty and the Beast

Mlle. Mistinguette with her ringed Hindu servant and her pet monkey at dinner.

How the Beauties of Paris Surround Themselves with Grotesque, Ugly, Misshapen Servants and Hideous Pets to Accentuate their Own Loveliness.

It is the fashion among Parisian beauties just now to heighten their charms by having some very ugly animal for a companion. The effect of contrast makes the beautiful creature seem more beautiful and the ugly one more ugly.

Quaint, delightful Mlle. Mistinguette has the ugliest monkey she could find for a pet. It is a horrid beast, with a red and blue face and all sorts of unpleasant habits. When you are asked to take afternoon tea with this charming person you must admire the monkey enthusiastically and not expect much attention yourself, for Mlle. Mistinguette professes to be devotedly attached to "dear Boni," as she calls her pet.

While making himself very polite to Boni, the visitor must be equally careful not to step on Sad, Mademoiselle's tame box constrictor. She has grown extremely fond of snakes as pets, and declares that she hopes to have a house full of them.

Snakes are very affectionate and companionable creatures, she says, but you must be careful not to shock or surprise them, because they are nervous, sensitive creatures.

To complete the bizarre effect of this beauty's home there are dusky, dangerous-looking Hindu attendants, who dress in their picturesque native costume.

Mlle. Manon Loti, an equally celebrated beauty, has hit upon the novel idea of having very ugly dwarfs to wait upon

CASUAL COMMENT

Mrs. Annie Ham of Malvern charged her husband with not supplying the necessities of life for herself and their baby.

A provision store had large placards in its windows, just before Lent, reading "Fish in Tuna."

And a tailor advertises "we make to measure"—ignoring the obvious fact that they "measure to make"—clothing, and a trifling profit.

I believe that it is not a fact that after the close of the Canadian Artists' Exhibition, when the exhibits were being taken away, one of the workmen said to another: "Sort of Biography, you are, Bill, ain't it?"—"Huh?" enquired the other—"What I mean is you're Moving Pictures."

Isn't this intake pipe question taking up considerable time without very much happening? Lenten it was said by one councillor that "Sand is coming out in a large volume." Why not get it out in several large volumes—like Georges Sand?

In Saxony they have been trying an aeroplane for scouting purposes in mimic warfare. The Aviator, Oswald Kahnt, was able to keep in touch with his commanding officers by electric signals and inform them of the position of their opponents.

Oswald is the sort of aviator who has learnt to be useful on the aeroplane plan. It is not a bit of good to think or say that Oswald Kahnt.

For Oswald very obviously Kahnt.

The Mail had a racy little account headed "Would-be burglars produced dreadful discords at armatures." Naturally I wondered why such generally shy birds as burglars should advertise their presence by attempting harmony while otherwise professionally engaged. I had read the whole account before I discovered that there were no burgars—only buglers, practicing.

Perhaps it is just that the proprietors of the Triangle Waist Co. in New York, are to be tried for manslaughter of their employees who were burned to death in the death-trap where they worked, but, to the thinking unprejudiced man anywhere, it must occur that every one of the Civic Board who are in any way or degree responsible for seeing that such death-traps do not exist, and who failed under that responsibility with such very lamentable results, should be included in the same charge. These officials are appointed for the purpose of seeing the law as to the availability of exits, and safety appliances generally, is carried out, and, as it seems quite clear that the regulations in these matters were altogether disregarded, the official neglect or indifference is by many degrees greater than the fault of the proprietors. The officials who should have seen to it that the law was not evaded, and did not do so, should, it seems clear, be alongside the proprietors in the dock.

Miss Jack May arrived at St. John's Newfoundland by the "Empress of India," attired (Miss Jack—not the Empress) in "male costume, consisting of leggings and tan boots and a short skirt that was not visible under a man's overcoat." So says a contemporary—but it seems a curiously inadequate set of garments for the ordinary male bird. Where were the 12-member jury who was stopped by the report says, she looked like a man, but you don't often see a man walking around in the costume described, I believe. Pretty cold this weather without the—oh, well it's nothing to do with me. But—

I should think a man would need 'em when it's cold as it is now. Were they only of the pattern known as "sharons."

The latest deserter from the ranks of English peaches to woo Bohemian pleasures by accepting a stage position, is the Honorable Helen Cecil Douglas-Scott-Montague, daughter of Baron Montague of Beaulieu, who is shown above as she appears when in her street costume after participating in the performance of "The Girl in the Train," now playing in London.

single pair of trousers I should wear 'em—most distinctly I should wear 'em.

Nowadays it cannot be an altogether rollicking thing to be a criminal. The authorities do not seem to think that there may be times in the life of the professional lawbreaker when he yearns for a little rest quite innocuous and undisturbed. Here is a diabolical scheme suggested by a French surgeon for identifying criminals. He proposes to inject a small quantity of paraffine under the skin of a convict, over the shoulder-blade, and says that this will form a "small hump" which he keeps all his life, and which looks like a natural excrescence.

When the enterprising burglar goes a stealing, And, later, finishes serving out his "time," His one ambition's sure to be concealing That he's nothing but a bungler in crime; His sensitiveness surely should be studied.

For he hates to hear his "pals" describe him "chump" It'll hurt his feelings after he's been "quodded" If he's still to cart around the "bloomin' hump" And I think he'd likely tell you plain and plump What he thinks of this suggestion of the "hump."

I do not pretend to know why The Mail and Empire in recording the death of Madame Judic describes her, in the heading over the item, as Madame Judic.

Tenders are invited for the installation of a system of hot air in school at Windsor. One would hardly be surprised to find Col. Sam Hughes among the tenderers.

Captain Tuttle, of Dunkirk, owner of the American fishing tug "Eagle," may be, indeed was, in the beginning of this little incident properly liable to some fine, and punishment by confiscation of his boat and gear. He was found last week poaching on the Canadian side of Lake Erie opposite Lorain, Ohio. The Canadian revenue cutter gave chase, and got so warmed up in the excitement that she burst into flames. It appears she might have become, so to speak, a Tuttle if Tuttle had not come back, instead of escaping, as he could easily have done, he had the cutter, and cut a big figure in extinguishing the fire. The gratitude of the Canadian revenue department took the form of returning the confiscated boat and nets in consideration of Tuttle's services.

I should fancy the majority of those who read of the occurrence will think that, in view of the fact that he had largely helped to save the cutter, a piece of government property of some little value, they might have permitted the $500 fine also. But they didn't.

CONTRARIWISE.

Witness—"I never argue with my wife. I simply tell her to do something, and she tells me, afterwards, why she hasn't."—Police Court Report.

This is the Rule for the Simple Life. If of worry you wish to be rid, Go, tell your wife, "Do not do THIS, dear."

And she'll, later, explain why she did. Don't argue, just whisper "Say, Beesie, "D'you think that that course is quite good."

You COULDN'T do THAT, dearest, COULD you? Ah, well, you'll soon find that she COULD.

Keep smiling—don't run out of patience. Be quite gentle and kind with her. Say "YOU WON'T do THAT, darling—now WILL you?" She may HINT that she won't—but she WILL.

This is not, oh! believe me, my sisters, A feat which I wish to findit. You may often reject mere male wisdom—

And, more often than not, YOU ARE RIGHT. . . . There seems to me to be more than the usual appropriateness in the prize given at the Kennel Club's show for the best trio of poodles. It was one package of perfume.

Some canines, like the bloodhound, who are kept upon the scent. Capture collars for their prizes, and they don't 'em— Poodles are less offensive if the scent be freely spent Upon 'em.

Is this a little bit of reciprocity on account, so to speak? A telegram from Ottawa tells us that "the contract for printing a special issue of postage stamps to be known as the coronation issue has been awarded to the American Bank Note Co. One would have thought that a little domestic festival like this could have been properly tackled, even down to the printing of a few postage stamps, by a British firm with British capital and British labor—and done in that way in a style that no other nation knows how to approach.

I forgot last week to show how many men "I" in little letters spell "Love." It is this way: L O V E 5 0 9 5 1...50,961.

Having cleared this up, I have another little problem, which struck me on reading an advertisement. The accepted rule is that you cannot increase anything by multiplying it by nothing. This can be proved to be incorrect. Try multiplying nothing by nothing—anything but the product is something. What is it? I will not fail to give the answer next week.

The End of Lent By Nell Brinkley

My Lady—who, such a short while ago, in sombre clothes and a proper face of solemnity, went in the front door of the church, leaving the gayety of the world behind—now steps through the back door, gorgeously clothed, with a wicked gleam in her eye, to enter again upon the old life of frivolity and pleasure.

Our Weekly Short Story THE TEMPTATION.

Zoska Lutwinka had nothing in the world except in the clothes she wore on her back. These things she had earned working as a servant on a farm while still a little girl. A servant in Poland does not get much either; thirty forins a year and her board. For these wages she had to arise at four in the morning, clean ten pairs of shoes, scrub the floors of eight rooms and make breakfast for the other servants. Then she had to carry the dinner to the workers in the fields.

If things were to be ordered from the town ten kilometres away, she put on her shawl and walked there and back on her bare feet. During the spring and summer she was always digging in the garden, working harder than any man, and in winter she put in her spare hours, chopping wood.

One day Zoska got an excellent position. She no longer sleeps in the stable and takes the cows to the pasture. She stays indoors and looks after the fire and helps the new cook, who has come all the way from a Leipzig. This cook is an old girl who is always sighing and who wears real features in her hat, big feathers which make the peasants laugh at mass. Madame and Monsieur are never seen in the kitchen. Zoska no longer polishes shoes, nor scrubs floor.

The cook has a friend who cooks for the priest and these two old girls have many interests in common. They both suffer from toothaches and are both interested in the same kind of books, which they lend one another. One Sunday evening the cook came home with a little book bound in white. It was the life of Saint Zytka, the patron saint of all servants. She had read only a few pages when she could no longer keep her enthusiasm to herself. In the kitchen she found Zoska.

"Zoska," cried the cook, eager to give expression to her feelings, "listen."

"What is it?" "Do you know anything about Saint Zytka?" "No." "She was a servant like you and me."

"Stuff and nonsense," Zoska replied. "As if the saints walked about in petticoats and aprons like you and me, Marynia, and did not walk upon the clouds with crowns on their heads and hilts in their hands among the angels!"

Marynia showed her the little book: "It is written here. Saint Zytka was a servant. She stayed thirty years in one place and behaved so well that she was made a saint."

Zoska laughed. "That is not true. A saint would never milk the cows or peel potatoes."

"It is written here." But Zoska had contempt for books. "I wonder what kind of fool wrote such nonsense."

"Nonsense yourself!" replied the cook, indignantly. "It is the priest himself who lent me the book. Zoska is beaten. She takes the book which the cook hands her. She can read, but it is slow work. She would rather listen. Perhaps Mademoiselle Marynia would be so kind. The cook answered: She reads how Zytka was chaste, humble, tireless, patient and devoted to her mistress. Here the cook raised her finger. "She never quarrelled."

"because nobody teased her, I suppose," replied Zoska. "Why of course they teased her." But she saved everything to use Lord and she even did the work of others. "Did she do the cook's work too?" "Yes, she did the cook's work, too. And she pleased the Lord."

The little book performed a miracle. Zoska listened to the very end and all night she thought of the servant who became a saint because of her virtues. Zoska pondered. Was she not, too, a poor servant girl? But what had she done to acquire eternal happiness? "No, she did not do that," said the cook. "She was a good girl, and she was a good girl."

Zoska began with the little things; a piece of cake which she gave to a poor child. Rice by piece she gave away her few belongings, and every day she saw signs of heavenly grace? She leant against the door of the church and it opened. Zoska knew what such a thing meant and was almost angry with her master who suggested that the book was nothing but an order. One day she was brushing a cooly fur-lined coat on the veranda. She brushed, signed and prayed. A bell was sounded and she heard the sound floated across the ice-covered pond. "And the world became flesh," Zoska murmured. "And dwell among us," replied a coarse voice. Zoska leant forward and on the road she saw an old beggar clad in rags, blue and shivering with cold. "Give me a little, good girl," he begged. Her first thought was to let him go. Then Zoska had a revelation. An angel would come to her, was whispered into her ear. Zoska threw the coat over the railing to the man below. "Take it in the name of the Lord," she cried, and ran back into the kitchen. For two hours Zoska was in a state of delight. A miracle was about to happen. It would have been a sin to doubt this. But suddenly she received a terrible blow. "Did you finish brushing the fur coat," the cook asked. "No." "Did you put it back into the closet?" "No." "Master is going to Sontch tomorrow. See that it is ready when he wants it."

Zoska was peeling potatoes feverishly. She tried to calm herself, to tell herself that the good God, who knows everything, must also know that her master was going to Sontch, next morning, and would not let her suffer. The angel would surely come, perhaps to-night or at the very latest at dawn. When everybody was in bed, Zoska left the house and walked down the path leading to the road. It had been snowing all day, everything was white, trees and fields. Zoska knelt and prayed. She is waiting for the angel who is to appear in a robe of light. He is to have golden hair and a crown of flowers, perhaps roses, perhaps lilies. Nobody is out at this time of the night; there is not a light in any of the houses. The dogs are barking, the moon is hiding behind the clouds. The clock on the church strikes one, two, three, and still no angel! She tries to pray, but the words fail her. The day is breaking. Zoska feels now that no angel is going to come. She will lose her position and perhaps be sent to jail. The angel did not come, the fur coat was missing and the police took Zoska to Sontch.

How Artificial Furs Are Made. The raw pieces of pelt are frozen, and the skin carefully shaved off, thawed and sent to the tanneries to be made into leather. The frozen fur which remains is allowed to thaw slightly at the bottom, so that a small part of the hair is freed from ice. This thawed portion is then covered with a solution of rubber, which is allowed to set. The result is that large seamless pieces of fur are obtained much cheaper than those which come with the natural skin. These same artificial furs are said to be more lasting than the real, because they are immune from the attacks of moths—La Nature.

A Nebraska Function. What has been described as one of the most pleasing social affairs of the season thus far in Grand Island transpired at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. There was a quality about the function, the social amenities were so well rendered, the friendly intercourse so evenly dispensed, and everybody was so companionable and hospitable, that there was not left the tiniest bit of room for anything which might savour of uncouthness or selfishness—Grand Island Independent.

I received a fairly level lot of last lines for last week's Competition. I have judged that the best three are the above: The verse was: "I've heard of a farmer at Lynn, Whose wife was abnormally thin, With a waist like a rifle, And a nose like a knife,"

- THE PRIZE LAST LINES ARE: 1—Still she's proud of a hump! urchin, (bump in her chin.) 2—"Mutt"-ered "Jeff"—Gee! My lost sister twin. 3—If she drank thru a straw she'd fall in. I had put aside a few awful examples, but it does not seem to serve any useful purpose to publish them. So, applying myself to next week's competition I have evolved the four lines which follow:—

Curie, who has shocked all Paris by her demand that her daughter, now sixteen years old, whom she is training for a scientific career, be admitted to the classes of the male students of the Lyceum Lakanal, one of the foremost abodes of learning in France.

Co-education is unknown in France and this demand of the famous woman scientist has caused the gravest disturbance among members of the government's educational experts, whose chief, the minister of education, will probably be brought into the controversy, thru the threatened appeal of the militant scientist to the government.

IN THE WOODS

This is God's house—the blue sky is the ceiling, This wood the soft, green carpet for His feet.

And here His friends come, clouds and soft winds sighing, And little birds whose throats pour forth their love.

And here come sunbeams thru the green leaves straying, And shadows from the storm-clouds overdraw.

Sweet hour of God, sweet earth so full of pleasure, I enter at thy gates in storm or calm;

And every sunbeam is a joy and treasure, And every cloud a solace and a balm.

—From "Poems," by Frederick George Scott.

Pastimes of the People

Lacrosse and Baseball.
Once more the excuse made for giving more prominence to baseball than to lacrosse or any other British game is that the people demand it. The answer to that is that it is the place of a newspaper to lead and not to follow. What originally gave the prominence to the alien game that it enjoys? The newspapers, and having created the appetite they are evidently determined to maintain it. However, my contention is not that baseball is too popular but that the attention given to it is disproportionate. Also, that it is carrying a reputation altogether too high, and alien hirings are exalted into petty gods and their every movement and ailment elevated into a matter of importance by six papers prior to the opening of the season. When play is on in earnest if the game appears worthy to the editors, proprietors and managers they will give just such space as they like—it is their privilege to exercise the judgment and to use their own as they see fit—but to sacrifice pages and pages to the game prior to the opening of the season is an unnecessary and unprofitable waste of space. I would like to know from the different papers if any of them have ever published the opinions of their readers in the premises. The argument that the reason more space is given to baseball than to lacrosse is that the latter cannot be played every day as the former is, is understandable, but it does not affect my protest against the overwhelming amount of space given in advance of the season, nor does it make plain the fitness or appropriateness of things.

The C. L. A. Convention.
Relieved of elements by expulsion that might have led to acrimonious discussion, the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Canadian Lacrosse Association held on Good Friday was an eminent success. It was the most businesslike and most orderly meeting of the kind yet held. Good work was done. Few changes were made in the rules but a most important one was made to the amateur definition. Some trouble may be experienced in enforcing it but there is material in the new definition that warrants great expectations. The attendance of delegates was hardly as numerous as it has been in times past, but that was due partly to the fact that there was no competition for the chief offices and partly to the admitted fact that there has been a decrease in the number of affiliated clubs. This need not decrease the usefulness of the association, providing a vigorous and consistent policy is pursued. It is apparent some gratification is commotion occasionally. It stirs matters up, exposes weaknesses and makes men resolve to do better. All the same the "hullabaloo boys" and gaffer clubs of bygone days were, in the least, a bit rough on "Fergus" Craig and "Laird" some gratification. A. S. two of the quartet of past presidents out of the two dozen who enjoy the privileges who were present and who were the "hullabaloo boys" of the boys and the days that that paper in its bubbling enthusiasm repudiated. The contest between Messrs. Craig and Lennox for the presidency was a green in memory as long as life lasts. It was then that paper clubs were made by the score and bakot stuffing and illegal voting were rife. Mr. Wagner's motion to emasculate the past presidents so far as the franchise was concerned failed to find an acceding voice. It is apparent some gratification and a bit of wisdom remains in man. But, perhaps, the magnitude and indignity of disfranchisement of the honorary past president will ramble in the memory of the usually dauntless gentleman who was to have led the attack. My opinion, however, still remains unchanged that past presidents might be allowed to speak but should not be allowed to vote.

Formation of the O. L. A.
On the evening preceding the C. L. A. convention the Ontario Lacrosse Association was duly organized according to the constitution. It does not appear at present to be overly strong in membership, although a dozen is not bad to start with, but strength may come with wisdom and courage be watched with interest. One thing is tolerably certain, namely, that if the honorary president, J. Ross Robertson, can be induced to take the same interest in the new association that he does in the O. H. A. its success is assured. At any rate it has as much right to existence as any other body that as a would seem, has aroused the C. L. A. to better things. The Ontario Lacrosse Association has already been organized, and a Toronto club is responsible for the movement that led to the creation of the new association, there has been no rallying around from this city. On the contrary all the affiliated clubs, excepting the Young Toronto and St. Simon's Athletics, hail from outside towns, including Fergus, J. J. Craig's home town, Woodbridge, Brampton, Brantford, Elora, Galt, Bracebridge, Guelph, Orangeville and Hanover.

Not Going to Henley.
Amongst those who watched the training of the university crews at Henley recently was George, president of the Winnipeg club. He is a great personal friend of Tom Sullivan, and acted as referee for the Towns and Galt races. Mr. Galt manifested the keenest interest in the work of both sides, which he followed from "The Sporting Life" launch. In the course of a conversation with the rowing correspondent of that paper he made the announcement that the Winnipeg R. C. would not be sending any competitors to Henley Regatta this year. The supporters of the club were delighted with the success of their four last summer, but Mr. Galt emphasized the difficulty in getting four men to keep together who come away from their business at the same period of the year. Mr. Galt, however, expressed the hope that the Winnipeg club would again be represented at Henley in the near future.

Oxford and Cambridge.
Oxford and Cambridge universities are having a fine struggle this year for all-round sporting supremacy. So far the tide favors the dark blues. Cambridge won in athletic sports, but Oxford won at chess, golf and rowing. As to the last mentioned, it is interesting to note that the Cambridge University Boat Club was founded in 1827-8 and the Oxford University Boat Club no fewer than eleven or twelve years later. The first boat race was rowed in 1829, and the Westminster Putney course adopted in 1834. In 1845 the present Putney to Mortlake was decided by the crews first used in the inception of the racing. In 1855 it was abandoned owing to frost interfering with the crew practice. 1857 saw the inception of the present Oxford and Cambridge system was adopted on the Cam in 1862. In 1869 Cambridge sank during the race, and in 1877 the memorable "dead-hull" resulted. A desec of necessitated the postponement of the race in 1880. Keelless boats and round sterns were first used in 1887, and sliding-seats first introduced in 1873. Outriggers were adopted as far back as 1846. This year's race was the best yet rowed in the history of the series. Oxford secured a 35 wins up-to-date. Cambridge 29, and there has been one dead-heat. Twice the history Oxford have accomplished "five years" sequence of wins— from 1861 to 1869, and from 1890 to 1898 inclusive. The Cantabs' longest run was for five years from 1870 to 1874. The record time for the race is 18.47. This was accomplished by Oxford in 1899, and by Cambridge in 1900. The record for the course in 1871 was made by the Oxford eight of 1909. The representative crews have also met in friendly fray five times at Royal Henley, and the "heaviest" crew yet engaged in 1844. In the aggregate, Oxford scored 4 wins to 2. The last appearance of the "Varsity" crews at Henley was in 1889. The heaviest crew yet engaged was the 1909 Oxford Eight. J. J. Toogood (Oxford) scaled 208 lbs in the 1909 race. The heaviest crew yet engaged, another Oxonian, C. R. W. Tottenham, boasts the unique honor of having steered five winning crews— those from 1868 to 1869. No crew has yet rowed in five winning crews, but numerous Oxonians and Cantabs have taken part in five races—the expediency of which procedure has again been hotly discussed during the present season. No stroke has ever set the record for the course, consistently winning crews either. Many have done so on three occasions, the last being D. C. R. Stuart (Cambridge), from 1906 to 1908.

Donald Dinnie.
Probably Dinnie, taking one thing with another, is the ablest athlete ever lived. He has won 11,000 contests and was an adept at wrestling, throwing the hammer, putting the stone, long jump, and the various heavy weights, feats of strength with dumb-bells and weight lifting, running at various distances, hurdles, jumping, etc. He was for well over fifty years a competitor at athletic gatherings, and during that period figured twice at Calcutta and once at London. His wonderful list of successes includes wins in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and the United States, in addition to the numerous victories in the United Kingdom. When in his prime, his feats of strength and agility were such as to excite the admiration of athletic gatherings attracted crowds from over a wide area, especially at Highland gatherings. When only sixteen years of age he became champion of the championship of Scotland, and was never afterwards beaten when competing for it. It is interesting to note that the fact that Dinnie was the inventor of the present style of hammer throwing by the "fair stand" professional style. Freestyle, or "figure 8" style, with very short, stiff handle. Dinnie could beat all comers except our own "Bobby" Maclean by many feet, but he found the present method so great an improvement that he introduced it in Glasgow in 1857, and two years later it had become generally universal. His career has been a series of triumphs, and he made a considerable sum of money, but unfortunately for him he lost the whole of it in the land boom and bank failures in Australia. It is now proposed to present the ancient Scot with a testimonial, and it has been suggested that there are some in Canada who would like to contribute. If so, the secretary, R. S. McEwan, 2 King-street, Maryhill, Glasgow, Scotland.

France to the Fore.
Britain is in hard luck. She is being beaten at all her favorite sports. In boxing, notwithstanding the hundreds of contests that take place daily, she is behind the record, in cricket her supremacy is challenged, in rugby-football she has gone down before the All Blacks of New Zealand, in billiards the Australian Gray has paralyzed her, in horse-racing France is knocking at the door and America would be except for Mister Hughes, in athletics it is Scotland, then Ireland then the United States and Canada showed her the way. In the aggregate, France has won an international race in which the pick of Great Britain competed. It was a team race, and Britain won the aggregate, France being fourth, Ireland second, Scotland third and Wales fifth, but Boulton was the first in leading the English team, hitherto, according to London Sporting Life, has been their youthful nature—when the first team competed for the British National nearly all the men were between 17 and 20, and had all the men of that day kept up their training like the Brits, France would be well to the fore.

Three Years of Aviation

Wonderful Progress Made in Aerial Navigation in 1908, '9 and 10—Something About Records—A Monster Combine Formed.

LONDON, Eng., April 15.—The phenomenal progress made in the science of aerial navigation in the last three or four years has reached a stage far beyond the fondest anticipations of those who from the very outset had implicit faith in the future utility of this form of aerial motion for naval, military, commercial, or pleasure purposes. It is generally recognized that the aeroplane during the past three years, more particularly where it concerns the distance, duration of the flights made, and also in the matter of heights and speeds, attained.

Even the most enthusiastic votaries of the heavier-than-air machine had been astounded. Figures provide the most reliable guide, and in the following facts will be found some striking illustrations of the forward march. In 1908 the record for a distance flight was 77 miles, and stood to the credit of Wilbur Wright. In 1909 Henry Farman flew 144 miles, and last year Maurice Jabouteau travelled no less than 362 miles in one continuous flight. In regard to the length of time aeroplanes have been able to remain in the air, the progress has been equally great. In 1908 Wilbur Wright held the record with 2hr. 20min. 23sec., but in 1909 Henry Farman remained above the earth 4hr. 17min. 35sec., and 12 years later he had nearly doubled this time by flying continuously for 8hr. 12min. In connection with speed, one of the most important developments of the aeroplane when its practical and commercial uses are being considered, the record in 1908 was held by Wilbur Wright with 69.5 miles per hour.
