THE DYING WIFE.
Sit down, sit down at my bedside,
Ay, husband, sit ye here,
An' fash me, fash me to your heart,
An' kiss me, Robin dear.
The world is cold, the world is cold,
An' ye will miss me sair,
But dinna grieve; I'm better, love,
Awa' frae sin and care.
Ye'll tend the babies for my sake,
The wee lambs at your knee,
Ye'll tell them o' their mither while,
Ye'll speak to them o' me.
It's sair they'll greet when I am gone,
It's lang they'll miss my face,
But I'll be where grief canna come,
Nor sorrow have a place.
O Jeanie, 'wi' your locks o' gowd,
My heart is for your son,
O Willie 'wi' your father's face,
An' see o' bonnie blue,
Come here to me, come here to me,
My bonnie babies twa,
An' tak' a mither's blessin' bath,
Afore I gang awa'.
Ye'll love each other weel, my bairns,
Ye'll never grieve your father's heart,
Nor bow his head wi' shame;
Ye'll live the lives that guid folk should,
The 'ye may struggle lang,
An' think I'm lookin' down on ye,
Whenever ye do wrang.
An' Robin, Robin, when I'm laid
At rest aneath the sod,
Ye'll think o' her that lo'e'd ye weel—
That lang ye next to God;
Ye'll think o' a' the happy times,
Ye'll mind the day again
Ye took me frae my father's house
So young to be your ain.
An' Robin, I have tried to be
A guid wife unto ye;
Gin I'll ever said or done
Ye dinna mind it now,
But ye will tak' me frae free this,
Awa', awa', frae here,
An' lay me where the daisies grow,
Beside my father dear.
I'm faith, I'm faith to leave ye a':
Creep closer to my heart,
An' kneel, ye Robin, down to Him,
An' pray afore we part,
Ay, pray ye a' may see His face,
An' ye may meet again.
Where we shall never ken a grief,
An' never have a pain.

ON A HUSK.
Tom Darcy, yet a young man, had grown to be a very hard one. At heart he might have been all right; but his head and his will had been all right; but these things being wrong, the whole machine was going to the bad very fast, though there were times when the heart felt something of its own truthful yearnings. Tom had lost his place as foreman of the great machine shop, and what money he now earned came from odd jobs of tinkering which he was able to do here and there at private houses, for Tom was a genius as well as a mechanic, and when his head was steady enough he could mend a clock or clean a watch as well as he could set up and regulate a steam engine, and this latter he could do better than any other man employed by the Scott Pails Manufacturing Company.
One day Tom had a job to mend a broken sewing machine and paper, for which he had received five dollars, and on the following morning he started out for his old haunt, the village tavern. He knew that his wife sadly needed the money, and that his two little children were in absolute suffering for want of clothing; and that morning he held a debate with the better part of himself, but the better part had become weak and shaky, and the demon of appetite carried the day.
So away to the tavern Tom went, where for two or three hours he felt the exhilarating effects of the alcoholic draught, and fancied himself happy, as he could sing and laugh; but, as usual, stupefaction followed, and the man died out. He drank while he could stand, and then lay down in a corner, where his companions left him.
It was late at night, almost midnight, when the landlord's wife came to the bar-room to see what kept her husband up, and she quickly saw Tom.
"Peter," said she not in a pleasant mood, "why don't you send that miserable Tom Darcy home? He's been hanging around here long enough."
Tom's stupefaction was not sound sleep. The deed came back to his brain, and the calling of his name stung his senses to keen attention. He had an insane love of rum, but did not love the landlord. In other years Peter Tindar and Ellen Goss had loved and wooed the maiden—Ellen Goss and he won her, leaving Peter to take up with the vinegary spinster who had brought him the tavern, and he knew that lately the tapster had gloated over the misery of the woman who had once discarded him.
"Why don't you send him home?" demanded Mrs. Tindar, with an impatient stamp of her foot.
"Hush, Betsy! He's got money. Let him be, and he'll be sure to spend it before he goes home. I'll have the kernel of that nut, and his wife may have the husk!"
"With a snip and a snap Betsy turned away, and shortly afterwards Tom Darcy lifted himself up on his elbow.
"Ah, Tom, are you awake?"
"Yes."
"Then rouse up and have a warm glass."
Tom got upon his feet and steadied himself.
"No! I won't drink any more tonight."

"It won't hurt you, Tom—just one glass."
"I know it won't," said Tom, buttoning up his coat by the solitary button left.
"I know it won't."
And with this he went into the chill air of midnight. When he got away from the shadow of the tavern he stopped and looked up at the stars, and then he looked down upon the earth.
"Ay," he muttered, grinding his heel in the gravel, "Peter Tindar is taking the kernel, and leaving poor Ellen the worthless husk—a husk more than worthless! and I am helping him to do it. I am robbing my wife of joy, robbing my dear children of honor and comfort, and robbing myself of love and life—just that Peter Tindar may have the kernel and Ellen the husk. 'Well see!'"
"Well see!" he said, setting his foot firmly upon the ground; and then he wended his way homeward.
On the following morning he said to his wife:
"Ellen, have you any coffee in the house?"
"Yes, Tom." She did not tell him that her sister had given it to her. She was glad to hear him ask for coffee, instead of the old, old cider.
"I wish you would make me a cup, good and strong."
There was really music in Tom's voice, and the wife set about her work with a strange flutter at her heart.
Tom drank two cups of the strong, fragrant coffee, and then went out—went out with a resolute step, and walked straight to the great manufactory, where he found Mr. Scott in his office.
"Mr. Scott, I want to learn my trade over again."
"Eh, Tom! What do you mean?"
"I mean that it's Tom Darcy come back to the old place, asking forgiveness for the past and hoping to do better in the future."
"Tom," cried the manufacturer, starting forward and grasping his hand, "are you in earnest? Is it really the old Tom?"
"It's what's left of him, sir, and we'll have him whole and strong very soon, if you only set him at work."
"Work! Ay, Tom, and bless you, too. There is an engine to be set up, and tested to-day. Come with me."
Tom's hands were weak and unsteady, but his brain was clear, and under his skillful supervision the engine was set up and tested; but it was not perfect. There were mistakes which he had to correct, and it was late in the evening when the work was completed.
"How is it now, Tom?" asked Mr. Scott as he came into the testing-house and found the workmen ready to depart.
"She's all right, sir, you may give your warrant without fear."
"God bless you, Tom! You don't know how light sweet music the old voice sounds. Will you take your place again?"
"Wait till Monday morning, sir. If you will offer it to me then, I will take it."
At the little cottage Helen Darcy's fluttering heart was sinking. That morning after Tom had gone, she had found a dollar bill in the coffee cup. She knew that he left it for her. She had been out and bought tea and sugar, and flour and butter, and a bit of tender steak; and all day long a ray of light had been dancing and shimmering before her—a ray from the blessed light of other days. With prayer and hope she had set out the table, and waited; but the sun went down and no Tom came. Eight o'clock and almost nine.
"Hark! The old step! quick, strong, eager for home. Yes, it was Tom, with the old gait upon his hands, and the odour of oil about his garments."
"I have kept you waiting, Nellie."
"Tom?"
"I didn't mean to, but the work hung on."
"Tom! Tom! You have been in the old shop."
"Yes, and I'm bound to have the old place, and—"
"Oh, Tom!"
And she threw her arms around his neck, and covered his face with kisses.
"Nellie, darling, wait a little, and you shall have the old Tom back again."
"Oh, Tom! I've got him now, bless him! bless him? My own Tom! my husband! my darling!"
And then Tom Darcy realized the full power and blessing of a woman's love. It was a banquet of the gods, was that supper of the household gods all restored—with the bright angel of peace and love and joy spreading their wings over the board.
On the following Monday morning Tom Darcy assumed his place at the head of the great machine shop, and those who thoroughly knew him had no fear of his going back into the slough of joylessness.
A few days later Tom met Peter Tindar on the street.
"Eh, Tom, old boy, what's up?"
"I am up, right side up."
"Yes; I see; but hope you haven't forsaken us, Tom?"
"I have forsaken only the evil you have in store, Peter. The fact is, I concluded that my wife and little ones had fed on husks long enough, and if there was a good kernel left in my heart, or in my manhood, they should have it."
"Ah, you heard what I said to my wife that night?"
"Yes; Peter; and I shall be grateful to you for it as long as I live. My remembrance of you will always be relieved by that tinge of war and brightness."

A NIGHT OF HORROR.
CHARLESTON LAIN DESOLATE.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 1.—Charleston is wrapped in gloom and business is entirely suspended. People generally remain in the streets, in tents and under improvised shelters. The gas works are injured and probably the city will be without light. There are much injury to mansions on the east and south battery. Hardly a house in the city escaped injury, and many are so shaken and cracked that a hard blow would bring them to the ground. In Columbia the shock was also very severe and many buildings were badly wrecked. The inhabitants were panic stricken, and many spent the night in the streets. The town of Somerville, a few miles from Charleston, was nearly destroyed. Another earthquake shock was felt at 5.19 p. m. yesterday. The situation of things is becoming horrible. No trains have departed or arrived in 24 hours, and all leading into the city are said to be crippled. Fortunately the weather has been good, and the hardships are not as severe as they might have been. It is calculated that at least three-fourths of the city will have to be entirely rebuilt if the houses are to be inhabited. The city is literally in ruins, and the people are living in open squares and public parks. Telegraphic communication is cut off with the exception of one wire, which is crowded with anxious private messages. Not a single place of business in the city is open save a drug store, which is busy preparing prescriptions for the wounded. It is impossible to give any correct estimate of the killed and wounded, as bodies are being constantly disinterred from the debris of wrecked houses. One undertaker states that he has furnished eight coffins. Many of the dead are lying uninterred, principally the poorer classes of colored people. Repeated earthquake shocks of a mild character were heard and felt about 11 o'clock, passing to the west of the city. One more severe than any knocked down several houses. Up to the present time it is roughly estimated that 30 to 40 persons have been killed and over 100 injured. The loss to property will probably reach $8,000,000 to $10,000,000.—St. John Globe.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 1.—A singular effect of last night's earthquake was the very general feeling of dizziness that it caused. Nine people out of ten imagined they were sick and many did not know until this morning that the disturbance was in the earth.
The largest building in the city and one of the strongest, the government building, rocked violently with three distinct vibrations. The large clock was stopped and mirrors broken. In large six and seven story flats in the city the vibrations were severe. Dishes were thrown from the cupboards and articles fell from mantles while chandeliers were agitated as if by a strong wind. Probably 20 or 30 meetings of judges and societies were broken up without a motion to adjourn. At the old armory building on Court street the plastering on the ceilings was broken.
The most decided shock was felt in Cumminsville, in the Northern part of the city. Here lights were put out and bottles broken in drug stores.
Throughout the State despatches indicate that the shock was general and that it occurred at almost the same instant. At Hamilton, boarders in the hotel ran from their rooms in fright and the walls were said to sway one and a half inches. At Canton four shocks were observed, motion being from north to south. Half the populace was in the streets talking of the strange experience for a long time after the event. At Newcomerstown, a meeting was broken up in a panic. Coshett felt two shocks.
The same story comes from nearly every town in Ohio. People were badly frightened but no actual damage was done. At Cattlesburg and Ashland, Kentucky, and at Huntington, W. Va., the shock was very severe. People rushed out of the houses with their children screaming in terror.
At Tybee the shock was more severely felt than in the city. The people on the island rushed from their homes to the beach. The oscillation lasted for several minutes. The lantern lenses in the light houses were broken and the machinery of the lamp was disarranged. People on the beach feared that every moment a tidal wave would sweep over them. The water was agitated and the waves rose high on the beach. Houses swayed to and fro and shook as if they would fall to pieces.
The shock burst the mill dams at Langley; 1000 feet of railroad track were destroyed. Telegraph wires were also destroyed. No trains are running. The Western Union Telegraph Co. has started hand cars from Summerville to restore communication. Great damage is reported at Summerville. The railroad is badly broken on both sides of Branchville.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 2.—Capt. Dawson, of the News and Courier, who lives in a massive brick residence in Bull street, says he was in his room on the second story when the first shock occurred. The house seemed literally to turn on its axis. The first shock was followed by a second and third, less severe than the first. The air was filled with cries and shrieks of women and children. From every side of the quiet neighborhood came the cry, "God help us!"

"God save us!" "Oh, my God!" It was worse than the worst battle of the war. When the first agony was over it was found that the ceiling of every room in the house was cracked. A big cistern was broken apart and a huge tank in the attic was pouring its flood of water into the bedrooms. In the parlors the statues had been wrenched from their bases and thrown to the floor. In the hall a massive lamp had actually been turned around. In front of the house a large porch, with heavy pillars and solid marble steps, was swept away.

What was Capt. Dawson's experience was the experience of hundreds of others in Charleston. The sidewalks in the street were dotted with mothers, wives and daughters, with their protectors awaiting in anxious expectation still another agony.

To add to the prevailing terror, seven or eight fires broke out simultaneously, but luckily they were soon extinguished. Another slight shock was felt this morning, but so far as learned no additional damage had been done.

A pathetic appeal for aid has been issued by the citizens.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. will send free all money and messages pertaining to relief of the sufferers.

SOME BIG SALMON.

In weight the salmon of the Canadian rivers average between 20 and 25 pounds. A 30 pound salmon is very large, and a 40 pound salmon will be talked of throughout the season, although it is said that salmon weighing 50 pounds have been caught in the Restigouche, one, indeed, was said to weigh 54 pounds. The Princess Louise, the daughter of the Queen of England and the wife of the Marquis of Lorne, the former governor-general of Canada, caught a 40 pound salmon in the Cascapeal river, in the province of Quebec a few years ago. Last summer I employed one of the two canoe-men who were with the Princess at the time, and he had a great deal to say about her skill in handling that salmon. I don't think he cared much about other members of the royal family, but "The Princess sir, she was a good un with the rod." Salmon weighing 90 pounds are taken now and then in Scotland, and a few years ago in England still yield large fish. Sir John Hawkins speaks of a salmon caught in an English river in April, 1788, which was 70 1/2 feet long, three feet round the body, and weighed 70 pounds. There is a story told of a Highlander who hooked a salmon in the River Awe, and played with the fish for hours, until night came on without his being able to tire it out. Then, as the fish was sulking quietly at the bottom, he lay down and went to sleep. The Highlander slept and the salmon sulked until 3 o'clock in the morning, when some friends of the former came to look for him. With their help he managed to land the fish about day-break, and it weighed 73 pounds. That was certainly a giant, but a salmon weighing 83 pounds is reported once to have been sent to the London market.

FACTS ABOUT FISH.

Some of the fish stories told in Portland and Gloucester, and those sent out by Brit enemies of Canada from Ottawa, intimate that New England fishermen go where they please in Canadian waters and catch fish at will, within the three-mile limit. If that were the case we should not hear so many complaints from New England. We are also told by Brit free traders that Canadian fishermen suffer great loss by being compelled to pay duty on fish sent to the United States, except on fresh fish for immediate consumption.

Now let us try to prove that New England fishermen do not catch many fish in Canadian waters, and the Canadian fishermen are better off as regards the United States markets than they were while the treaty was in operation: We have before us some marked reports of salt mackerel at Gloucester, the first for August 13, 1885, the second for August 21, 1885. The following are the prices for barrels of 300 pounds:

Extra No. 1	1885	1886
No. 1, fine fish	$12.00	$11.00
Extra No. 2	8.00	8.50
No. 3	3.25	6.50

The increase in price is 85 per barrel on Extra No. 1;

the highest terms of Dea's prowess with the oar. Teemer says Dea is the best sculler he has ever seen. He says, "Dea can beat Hanlan easily and so can Gaudin. I will row Hanlan for any amount of money he can put up."

Hanlan will sail for England as soon as practicable to row with Dea, on account of which match $500 has been placed in Hamilton Dea's hands. The race will be rowed over the course of four miles on the Tyne for $2,500 a side.

BEACH WILL NOT ROW HANLAN IN ENGLAND.—NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Hamilton Dea, Hanlan's rival, received a cablegram from London to-day, saying that Dea will only row Hanlan on the Parramatta river in Australia.

THE FISH TRADE. The position of the market for mackerel is a very remarkable one, and it is a curious fact that the trade generally is not just waking up to the point. The Boston Fish Board's report says that the total catch landed by the New England fleet up to the present time is but 40,082 fish, against 27,333 fish for the same time last year.

TERRIBLE WATERPOUT. CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—A despatch was received at the City Hall this afternoon from the Mayor of Belle Plaine, Iowa, advising that an artesian well, four feet in diameter, burst when a depth of 180 feet had been reached in boring, and instantly a volume of water was forced into the air to the distance of several hundred feet. This gradually increased in size and volume until a stream of water, fully 10 inches in diameter, was formed, and the upward force of this stream is equal to the power of powder or dynamite.

THE SEIZURE OF CANADIAN SCHOONERS. The seizure of the British schooner in the Northern Pacific has become a question more difficult of settlement than that arising from American deprivations on the Eastern coast. On the Atlantic coast the contention of the Americans is wrong, and they know it; their claims could not, of course, be admitted by any nation having a shadow of self respect.

ILL-FATED CHARLESTON. CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 5. Charleston is quiet to-day. Hardly a church in Charleston is considered safe for occupancy and the ministers of the different denominations have, for this reason, held their services in different public parks and in grounds adjoining the churches. There is no doubt that the estimates of loss by the earthquake are far below the actual amount. The city preacher, who has gone over the whole city and is familiar with the value of property, estimates that it will cost at least $5,000,000 to put Charleston in a position as good as that which it occupied only a week ago.

LATE DESPATCHES. CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 6. It is rumored that in accordance with advice given by the three friendly powers, Turkey is making military preparations on the Asiatic frontier. It is also said orders have been given to supply the army in Ezeroun and along the border with additional guns, stores and munitions. This activity is due to the movement on the part of Russia, which is supposed to be making efforts to gauge the military and naval strength of Turkey.

FOR SALE. The property presently occupied by Mr. High Park, in the parish of Derry, if not sold previously will be offered by Auction in the Registry Office, Newcastle, on THURSDAY, the 1st day of October next, at 11 o'clock. Terms at Sale. R. HUTCHISON, Douglas-st., 7th Sept. 1886.

attention in Europe will divert it from Asia. Thus we will require time to render the Russian machinations in Asia harmless. LONDON, Sept. 6. The Daily Telegraph says: "Everyone for himself is the new motto of European concert, and the result is dissonant notes or less veiled. We are a maritime power, looking to a dark lowering future, and we cannot too soon take all careful steps and rely on ourselves."

SIR JOHN'S WELCOME HOME. OTTAWA, Ont., August 30.—Sir John and Lady Macdonald arrived here this morning, having been fifty days away. During that time they travelled 8,500 miles, received and replied to hundreds of addresses of welcome, and attended to scores of delegations. From start to finish it was a triumphal proceeding.
