A. VOGELER & CO., Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

The people are to be congratulated that the Canal Commission, of least the design of the short in the anticle entitled states adjectives we might use in 1875, committed the almost income ceivably gross blunder of under-ceitanting life distance saved by Ishmian transit three hundred and seventy-five miles, and followed that up hy a report rejecting the Canal, for it has led to an understable of the country and at a fraction of the cost of the proposed Canal. The ceits maked cost of the proposed Canal. The ceits maked cost of the proposed Canal. The ceits maked cost of the Canal and the time of completion to an lose same, in round numbers, than four millions of dollars and the time of completion to an lose same, in round numbers, than four millions of grapes to the second randable of dollars. The interest on thistweive millions of forey, whereas the Ship Rali ways understaining to one hundred and fifty thousand.

The least forey and the same of contributions of planting, as forey special term of the control of th wayundertaking is to cost the country only one hundred and fifty thousand dollars per year, limited to a period of twenty-five years, thus four hundred and fifty thousand dollars per annum, principal and interest are wholly saved to the rate payers of Canada. In other words, it is proposed to construct the Marine Railway at a cost of a portion of the interest on the state of land, now known as cost of a portion of the interest on the state of land, now known as cost of a portion of the interest on the state of land, now known as cost of a portion of the interest on the state of land, now known as cost of a portion of the interest on the state of Pennsylvania, in settlement of a claim of sixteen thousand quence of M. De Lesseps by talling vast tract of land, now known as construct the Marine Railway at a cost of a portion of the interest on the State of Pennsylvania, in settlement of a claim of sixteen thousand pounds due his father's estate from the Canal previous to completion! These enormous gains are results attributable in no small degree to errors of the Canal Commission of 1875, but other important results follow. It is obvious that when the Railway is established at courter of the Railway is established at courter of the Canal contributes a poem entitled at the State of Pennsylvania, in settlement of a claim of sixteen thousand pounds due his father's estate from the State of Pennsylvania, in settlement of a claim of sixteen thousand pounds due his father's estate from the finger of his piercing a boil on the finger of his child. "How you tremble!" said the count: "I tremble at piercing a fester—I who have piercing a fester—I wh follow. It is obvious that when the Railway is established at quarter of the expense of the Canal and is operated at a less cost, one quarter of the traffic that would pay a Canal warrants the construction of the Railway. Engineers of the highest authority have given their assurance that the Ship Railway possesses in all essentials way possesses in all essentials Living in New York, and The Vertistriking advantages over a Canal—

Steam power is superseding the old methods for transportation on canals as elso where, and the use of the steam engine in tugging ships through the Canal is certainly not more expeditions nor economical than the locomotive hauling them on raiss. The time occupied in lifting a vessel out of the water in one bay, transporting her over and letting her down in the other is estimated by the engineers at two hours.

2nd. The canal can only be used while it is free from ice, whereas a late in the fall and as early in the spring as the navigation of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy permitted, at a time when the canal would either be choked with ice or be dry, and from a week to a month earlier than the testing the sediment of the present Period is an address do.

It was in the baptistery at Pisa that Berry first saw her. He had Just entered the door as she fittered a few clear soprano notes, and in moment was awakened that peculiar echo that once heard is never for, got—a seeming multitude of voices in unearthly tender sweetness taking up the strain and watting it to the highest heavens.

Berry bowed his thanks in recognition of the treat in which he had shared. She glanced uneasily to ward her escort, a middle-aged gentleman, with bald, shining head and long gray whiskers, slightly inclined her head in return and spoke two or three words—at least Berry saw her lips move though he did catch the words.

The custode of the bapistery, moved with jealousy of being outdone, must just then show what he could do by throwing down upon the marble floor a block of wood, and the blow awakened the most deafening and howling crash upon crash-

The custode with his block of wood never knew that he lost three francs for his pains. The five francs that Berry would have gladly given in his happiness was but a begrudged franc in his resentment. However, he relented to the amount of another franc when the stupid old man said, as he placed the fee carefully away in his pocket with one hand and motioned toward the vanishing car-riage of the visitors with the other, "Ah! she did sing from her heart— the madonus-faced."

Doubtless the expression was one that he of the baptistery would have gladly bestowed on any fair five-franc donor, even on Miss Miggs herself; though in this case he had been moved by the power of beauty as well as by a lively admiration for a cheerful when the was hungry and had just growled at the delay of dinner. When Giulio quietly appeared on the opposite side of the court, arrayed in his spotless apron, and was about to call 'Dinner is served, sir,' he was struck dumb by Berry's pantomimic demands for his silence. The voice ceased a moment, and was beginning a second aria, when the power of beauty as well as by a lively admiration for a cheerful giver.
