The Cambridge crew scores an easy victory over Oxford in the annual classic on the Thames. The winning oarsmen are shown crossing the line, with the Oxford boat, which became water-logged and almost sank, not even in sight.

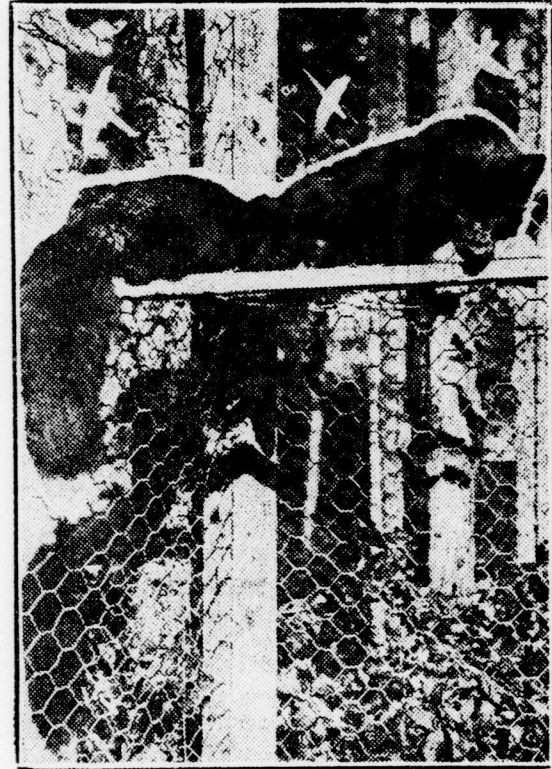

Jackie Coogan, the juvenile star of the screen, poses for the camera with his baby brother, Robert Anthony Coogan, who is already in the film spotlight.

Alf Grenda, shown in the lead, captured the five-mile race which featured the opening of the outdoor cycling season of 1925 in the U.S.

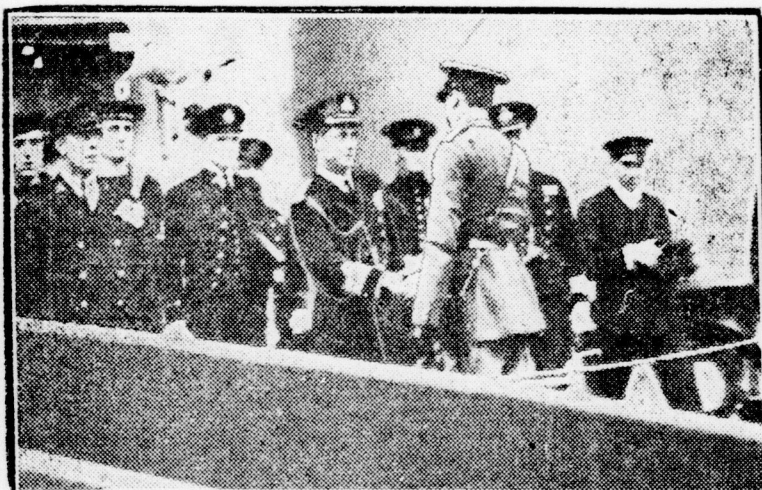

Riotous scenes took place in Paris recently when Royalist students fought a pitched battle with Republican. Fifty-four gendarmes were wounded. This photograph shows an arrest being made.

These photographs were taken on one of the largest silver Fox farms in the world, situated at Southport, Prince Edward Island. On the left are two of the animals in one of the pens provided for them, while in the centre is shown Dr. Leo Frank, director, feeding some that have become tame enough to eat from his hand. On the right, he is holding one of the prize specimens.

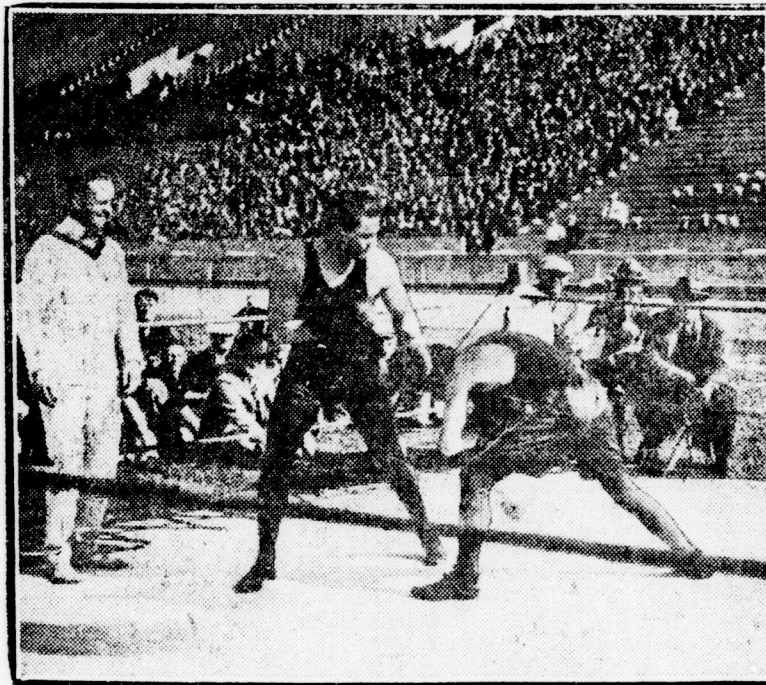

Afternoon and walking frocks from Paris, although supposed to feature modest lines and quiet tones, are supplied with huge bell sleeves to which are added elaborate fringe trimmings.

The Prince of Wales shakes hands with his brother, Prince Henry, just before leaving on his trip to South Africa and South America.

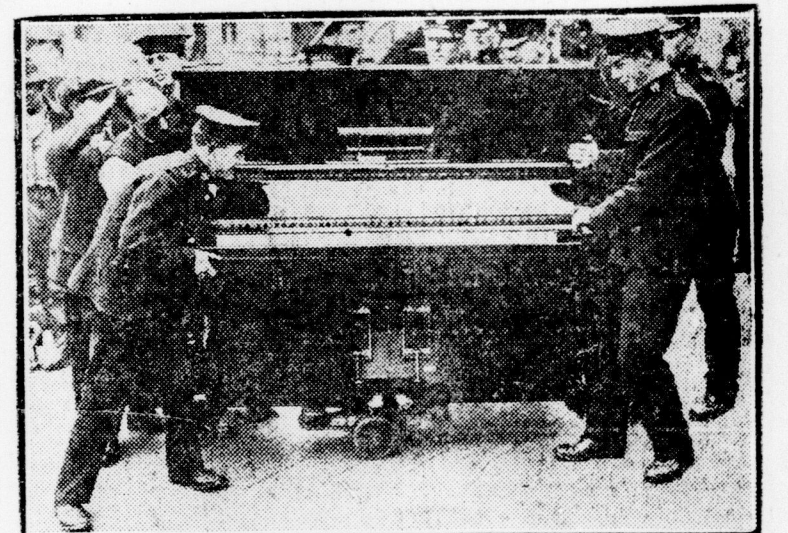

Mrs. Dehra Chichester from Londonderry, one of the two women in the old Ulster parliament, is now the only woman to hold a seat in the new parliament. She has visited this continent on several occasions.

Jack Dempsey made his first appearance in the ring in many months when he boxed Leo Moore several rounds in Los Angeles on April 1st, as part of a show for sailors of the U.S. fleet.

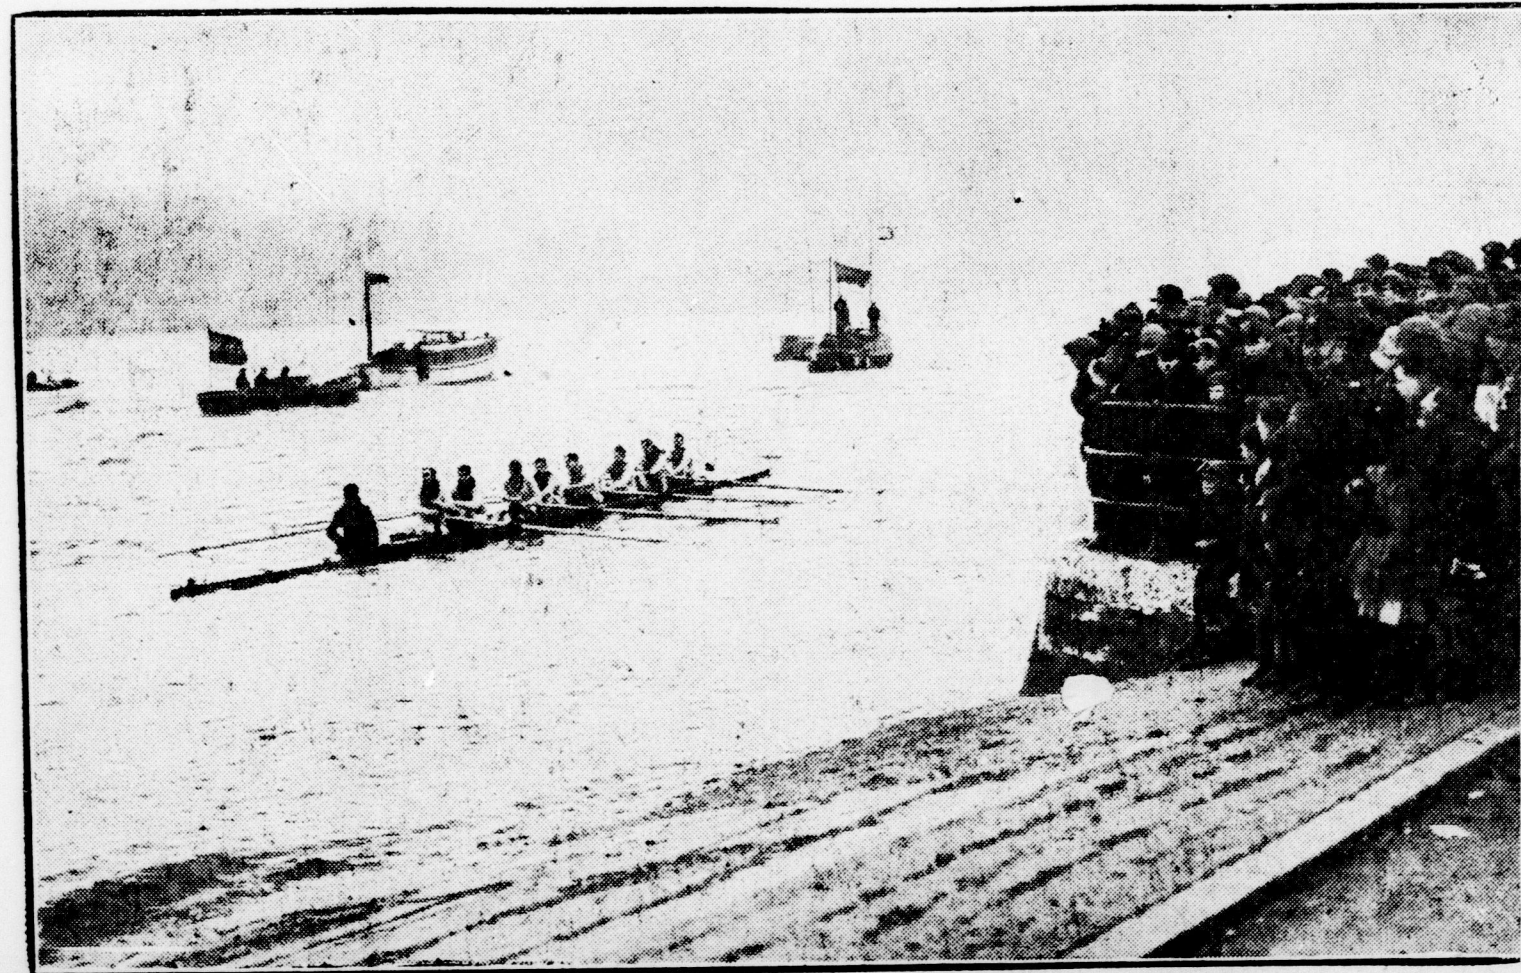

Arthur Hayday, the father of 18 children, Labor member from Nottingham, aroused the ire of Lady Astor in the house recently when he declared that workmen's wives are better than wealthy women, as the former care for their children and the latter for dogs.

Because he is fond of music, a player-piano was included in the special equipment of H.M.S. Repulse, the vessel on which the Prince of Wales is making his home on his African and South American tour.

The longest road yet made by the ministry of transport, called the Southend Arterial Road, was opened by Prince Henry recently, who is shown inspecting the guard of honor at Wainstead, where the first tape-cutting ceremony took place.

Some of the crowd are shown that watched the Oxford challengers going to the starting point for the famous annual rowing classic between Oxford and Cambridge, which the latter won.

Mlle. Irene Laurent, fifteen-year-old French girl, has astounded men of science with the discovery of a new fuel that costs less and gives more miles per gallon than any other known. She is shown with her father.

Will He Try Ottawa?

The story has been revived by several Conservative papers that there is a possibility of Premier Ferguson of Ontario leaving provincial politics to go to the rescue of Hon. Arthur Meighen at Ottawa.

There is no question that Mr. Meighen needs a stronger following than he has with him on the front benches of the opposition at Ottawa. He depends largely on Sir Henry Drayton and H. H. Stevens of Vancouver to assist him in the House, and when the time comes to appeal to the country he will need greater platform force than is at present at his command.

It is doubtful if Mr. Ferguson would bring much strength to the Conservative party in the larger field of dominion politics. In Ontario the premier's personal following is not large. Attorney-General Nickle stands higher in the estimation of many people than the premier; the same can be said of Hon. John Martin, minister of agriculture, and in some degree of Hon. Lincoln Goldie, the provincial secretary.

Mr. Ferguson would not help the Conservative party much in Ontario in a federal contest; he has not made himself acceptable to the rural ridings at all; he is unknown in the western provinces and in the maritimes, and although he has made several moves, particularly in his latter addresses, to win the favor of Quebec, he could not hope to overcome the lack of warmth manifested there to the Conservative cause.

It might be that the Ontario Conservatives would not regret to see Mr. Ferguson leave provincial politics and go to Ottawa. As head of the government he must bear the burden of blame for having put on new forms of taxation: increasing sessional indemnities $86,000 per year; broken faith with the dry majority in the province, and failed to provide the answer as to where commissions went for influencing provincial business on behalf of the Home Bank. All these things will face him if he remains the head of the Ontario Conservative forces for another contest. Were he to leave party managers might consider that part of this adverse feeling would be satisfied.

It may be that Premier Ferguson has no intention of leaving provincial politics, but it is not without significance that reports to the contrary have found their way into provincial Conservative journals quite frequently in recent weeks.

Disregarding the Law.

There is a common belief on the part of many that the best way to deal with customs and immigration laws is to evade them. There have been two cases brought to the attention of local people in the past week that show how such a plan fails in the end, even though it may seem to work in the first place. One had to do with an auto purchased in Detroit and driven over here under the guise of coming on a visit. The owner of the car had to go back to the port of entry, and he paid well for his evasion of the law.

The second case is even more far-reaching in its effects. A young man who had been living in Canada for some years went to United States, telling the authorities that he was going on a visit. That was three or four months ago, and during the interval he has become established in a position in Florida, and is also the owner of a piece of property there. All went well until the other day an officer of the immigration department called on him and asked how it was that he had no papers to show he was entitled to enter United States. Of course he could produce none, and is now trying to get in touch with authorities here to see what can be done to keep him from being deported as a person who entered the country in an illegal way. In his case the conditions are as follows: He will have to come back to Canada in order to make application in person for permission to enter United States. Having been born in Britain, he will then come under the quota of immigrants from that country, and it may be months before he can get in legally.

It may be held that it is a lot of useless red-tape and official action that amounts to nothing, but the real point is that countries pass laws, and they are entitled to do so. The individual who seeks to break them is inviting trouble. If he complies with them these laws are his protection.

Facing Responsibility.

A correspondent, whose letter appeared in The Advertiser a few days ago, made the claim that the city council was evading its duty in asking the senior county judge to conduct an investigation into the fire department. His point was that the city council was elected by the people to carry on the business of the municipality, and that it was quite capable of doing so, therefore it had no good reason to wash its hands of the fire department probe and have it conducted by another court.

There is some point to the argument raised by this correspondent. There has been a tendency in recent years for governments, as well as councils, to seek the assistance of separate or outside bodies to do the things they should be able to do for themselves. In the case under discussion the first thing the council should have done was to be certain that there was a condition existing in the fire department that was so serious or involved that it could not be dealt with by the council or the committee having charge of the fire department. It can hardly be claimed that such was done, because the idea of holding an investigation before the county judge was brought in as a compromise between the factions in the council.

Even if a probe is held before the county judge and a finding given by him containing his recommendations, it will still remain for the same council to deal with the matter in the light of the information brought out in the probe. The council will not be bound to abide by the result, because the conduct of the department will still remain in the same hands as it is now as far as the council is concerned. Taking that into consideration, the probe, if it is held, may not be as conclusive as some of those favoring it imagine.

The council should be able to deal with any matter coming before it; if it cannot, then there is something the matter with the council. All that would be necessary would be the ability to face facts, consider plain, businesslike administration, and determine whether conditions are such as make for the smooth-working and efficient organization that a fire department must be. There is nothing impossible in the case at all. The council should consider seriously before it admits that it is not competent to deal with the situation.

Records That Remain.

"Old-Timer," who has written a number of interesting recitals of the experiences of early settlers, particularly in the district around Pond Mills, a few miles south of London, draws attention in another installment on the third column, of this page to two incidents that are well worth recalling. One deals with Neil McAlpine, known to many as "Captain Storms," a farmer who carried on his operations with marked success. On one occasion he had 3,000 bushels of wheat during a season when nearly all the farmers in the district had lost their wheat in a succession of severe spring frosts. "Captain Storms" had a chance to sell his entire holding for a good price to a dealer, who expected to hold it and sell out at a good profit to the farmers who would require seed wheat. The idea did not appeal to the Captain, and he sent word to all the settlers to come and get seed from him, and when they got their harvest they could return as much as they took for seed.

On another occasion, Thomas Baty, the miller at Pond Mills, had flour for sale in a season when it was a scarce article and when few people had any of it. He refused to sell it to those who came with the money, and caused it to be known that he intended to sell flour only to those who had no money to pay for it. Such records are worth reviewing, not only because they are unusual, but because they reflect in a concrete way some of the characteristics of the age that produced a generation of men and women to whose record we can look back with pride, and who gave to this country the basis of substantial citizenship.

Incidents such as are related above live in the successful farmer or the miller at Pond Mills followed the tendency that is well developed today they would have seen in their possessions an opportunity to make money, and the chances are they might have earned the reputation of being fairly keen businessmen, able to see ahead and be on hand when the time came to reap the harvest of their creative minds. Had they followed that course the story would never have been handed down; relatives or neighbors would not have repeated the incident to their children. Those two stories remain today because they have human qualities that are finer than 100 per cent profit.

Note and Comment.

The crop of Easter hats was very satisfactory, estimates being that they yielded on an average of $11.63 per head.

Hamilton Spectator says: "London fire chief, who refuses to resign voluntarily, has let it be known that they may fire, but never extinguish him."

There has been no announcement made of a federal election. Most of the clamor for a contest comes from the opposition. The government was elected for a period of five years, and it has been in office a little over three. The country needs less whining more than it does an election.

The Renfrew Mercury can see no reason for the claim made by Lindsay that the government should reopen the arsenal established there some years ago. Every center in the dominion would have equal justification for asking that its war-time industries be revived. It would create more of the same sort of prosperity that the country has been trying to recover from.

The Collingwood Bulletin warns Goderich to get its finances fixed at home rather than by an outside auditor. The Bulletin says: "Goderich is the seat of an agitation looking for a municipal audit by a chartered accountant. Go to it they may, but if they knew the experience of Collingwood as to the costs there would be some hesitation and some more time elapse before the suggestion was acted upon. Never again for Collingwood if it can be avoided."

The garden toad is starting to come out of his hibernation. Unlike the robin, he can't get away south for the winter; his method of locomotion is so slow that by the time he got a short distance south it would be time for him to come back. He's a sorry-looking toad when he first comes out—thin, stiff, and about as active as a chronic rheumatic when the wind blows from the east. It may seem very fine to sleep all winter, but getting started again at the serious business of making a living must be tough for the first week.

Findin' It Out

Wherein we speak of one poor Russ who got starvation in his head, he wanted to shed off his fat but he weighin' more instead.

"Russian prisoner, on hunger strike in Kingston penitentiary, gains in weight."

This jailbird reckoned how he'd fast, and leave the eats in jail alone, alarmin' all the jailers so they be a-sendin' of him home. How he would say nay, nay to mush, and turn aside from herring soup, he'd be a martyr so he would a-dwellin' in the Kingston coop.

He climbed upon the weighin' scales and noted how his carcass stood, and then he turned his snout aside when come the time for servin' food. He'd fight his battle all alone, but not with shotgun or a sword, he'd starve until his bony ribs was like slats on a scrubbin' board.

But when they took him out one day when he be starvin' off some days and led him to the scales again and nottin' just how much he weighs—they gave this Russ an awful jolt, they chalked the figures on the door, for he was weighin' ten whole pounds above what he had done before.

This Russ be not the first to find that this be much a fickle earth, that lots of folks was fooled before in judgin' that a notion's worth.

Hi Rickey went along with me to see the horses race one day, Hi holdin' he could place his bets and take great chunks of wealth away—he had been readin' some time back about Green Onion, what he'd do, Hi holdin' he would make the rest look like their feet was dipped in glue.

Hi put his wad upon the nag but when Green Onion hit the track, you'd think to see him limpin' down he be hitched to a four-wheeled hack.

A smooth-tongued lay come to my hut, to sell some oil stock unto me, he showed me pictures of a man with oil a-pourin' to his knee—how if I put my ducats in I be a wealthy happy man I'd take the profits day by day and pile them in the fryin' pan.

Like you poor Russ inside the jail it worked out just the other way, where once I lived on T-bone steak I'm eatin' now thin soup and hay.

This be a fickle sort of earth, we plan to drive a coach and pair, and find we're hitched unto a gig and one lone spavined, wind-sprung mare.—ARR.

When Profit Was Not Worshipped

Old-Timer Tells of the Idea That Was the Motive of a Prosperous Farmer and the Old Miller at Pond Mills.

(By OLD TIMER.)

QUITE early in the settlement of the country there lived near Pingal a man by the name of Neil McAlpine, who being a little richer than his neighbors and having a larger farm was not under the necessity to sell his wheat when the price was low. So it came to pass that one year when there had been a disastrous spring frost, and wheat was in consequence very scarce and dear, that he had 3,000 bushels of wheat stored in his granary. As showing a little what such a frost means, let me tell of my father's crop in the year 1857. His fall wheat that season was specially strong and early, having been summer fallowed and therefore headed out much sooner than that of his neighbors, whose wheat not being headed out, missed the frost which struck his. Being such a strong looking crop he thought it worth threshing, but when it was measured up it yielded less than the seed sown. That was not all, for frozen wheat was almost useless for bread, being soft and soggy and very unwholesome. Why there should have been more destructive spring frosts in the early days we cannot certainly tell, but such was the case. Since 1857 I can testify that there has not been another spring frost to damage wheat, in Middlesex county at least.

He Had the "Service" Idea.

That year of the specially destructive frost this Neil McAlpine, or "Captain Storms," as he was also called, being in St. Thomas one Saturday, was offered by a miller there a very high price for his wheat. "Why," he said to the miller, "you can't afford at that price to grind it into flour."

"I'm not going to," said he, "I'm going to sell it for seed."

"Capt. Storms" broke out in a cold sweat when he thought what that would mean for his poorer neighbors. He did not take the offer. Reflecting deeply over the situation he resolved what to do. The next day being the Sabbath he, like the good Presbyterian elder that he was, went to church and went rather early. Standing at the church door he whispered to the farmers passing him: "If you want seed wheat you can have it from me, and you can return me after harvest bushel for bushel." One can imagine something of the relief such a message would bring to the poor fellows.

When Captain McAlpine got home he thought: "I've only made the offer to Presbyterians and there are Methodists and Baptists, Congregationalists and Anglicans that are just as needy." Towards evening he sent his boys on horseback to these other churches with the same message, "Bushel for bushel after harvest."

Wagons began to arrive the next day and from then on till all the 3,000 bushels were gone there was a continual procession.

This was told by Dean McCallum of Victoria hospital, grandson of Neil McAlpine, as an incident of which he was specially proud.

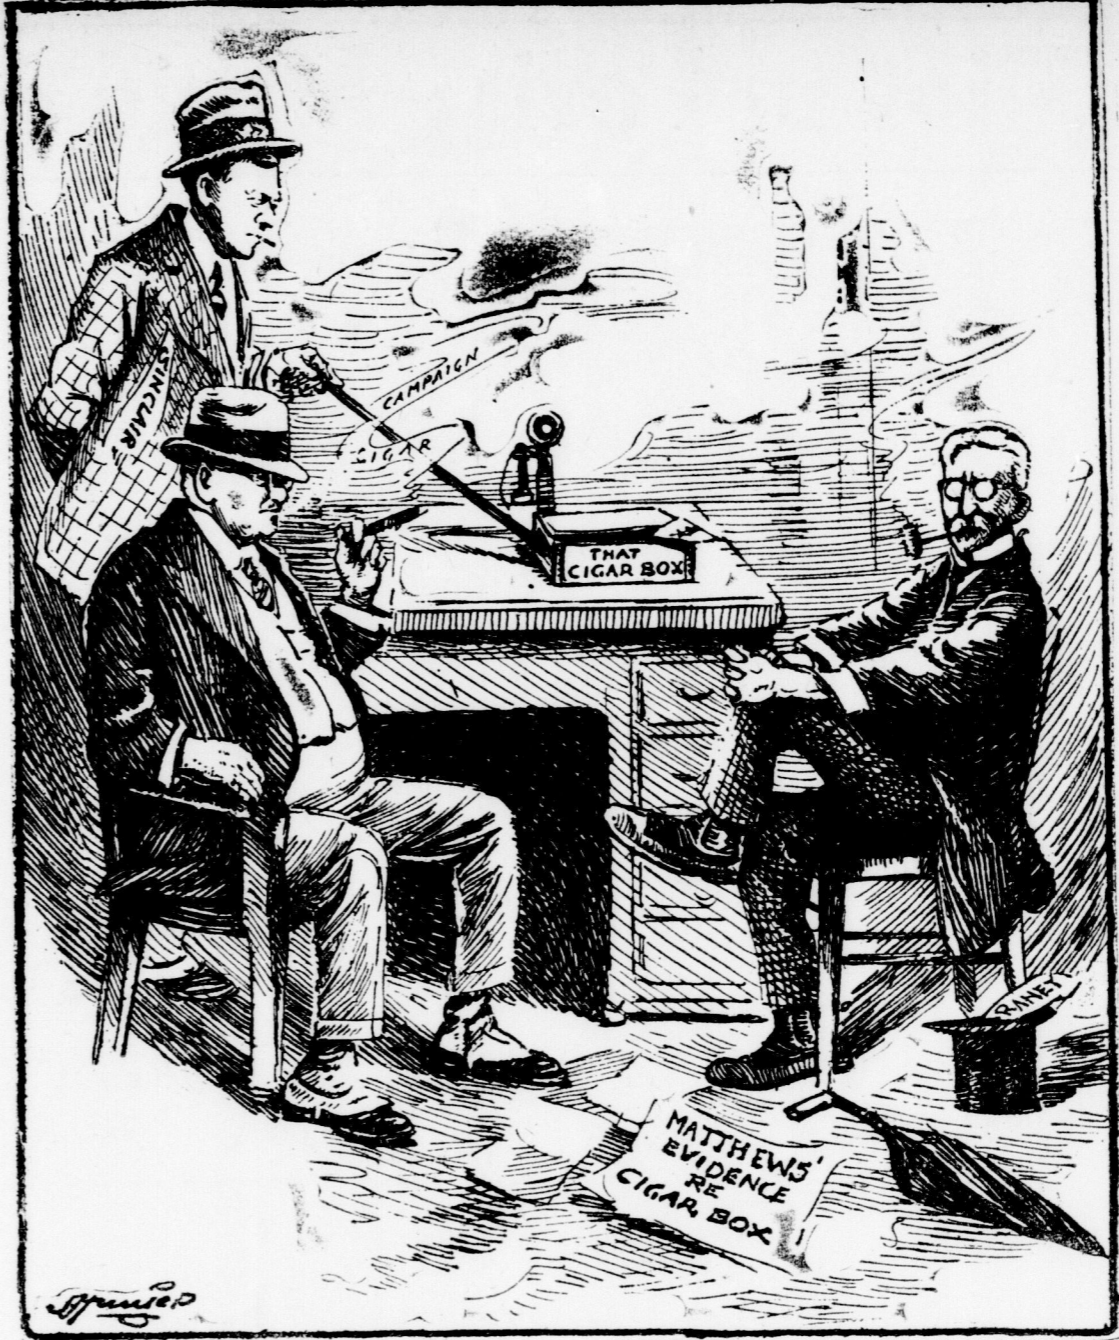

For Those Who Could Not Pay.

It was probably in the same year that Thomas Baty, the miller at Pond Mills, also an elder in the Presbyterian church, had an experience somewhat similar. A man came to buy flour when the miller asked him: "Hast thou the money to pay for it?"

"Oh, yes," said he, "I have the cash right here."

"Weel," said the miller, "thou'll hev tae gang somewhere else for thy flour, for Ah'm keepin' mine for them that canna pay."

"Wasn't I glad," said one we knew as old Jack Hart, though he was young then, "for I had been sent for flour and had no money." We have written about the contests between the Lowlanders and the "Hielanmen" at the barn raisings. It is a very great pleasure to tell of noble deeds in which without knowing other they likewise strove to act the brother's part toward their poorer brethren.

JUNE 13 GUESSED AS DATE FOR BEER

Date of Tax Act Gives Rise To Prophecy—Government Non-Committal.

Special to The Advertiser.
 Toronto, April 12.—At a guess, June 13 may be the fateful day on which thirsty Ontarians will first be legally privileged to toast G. Howard Ferguson in a foaming schooner of 4.4 beer.

The reply to the oft-propounded query, "When do we drink?" is still a closely-guarded secret at Queen's Park. The beer bill received its third reading in the legislature on Thursday and will be given royal assent next Tuesday. But the date of its coming into force is still to be fixed by order-in-council.

The "tip" to the date is found not in the beer bill, but in the measure imposing a tax of 10 cents per gallon upon the beverage. The tax act will become effective 60 days after it received royal assent, which will work out at June 13. And it is regarded as probable that an order-in-council will be issued by the cabinet bringing the 4.4 bill into effect simultaneously, since the tax will be valueless until the beer can be legally sold.

The date on which the gasoline tax will come into force also remains to be fixed by order-in-council.

The haunted house

TALES about it were as numerous as its dark, broken windows. Oaks shadowed it thickly; winds sucked through its halls. The shutters sagged and were ivy-eaten—the windows giving in to an emptiness at once foreboding, dreadful.

Excitement ran agog when the place was bought. School children huddled to watch the rooms renovated. A sign swung out: "Stop here for tea." Lights sprang up. It became a frequent pleasure to drop in of evenings. In time, the towns-people loved the place. The inviting sign, the cleanliness, the light banished fear.

NEW AIR-DRIVEN DYNAMO IS BUILT ON ROTOR BASIS

Machine Invented by German Scientist For Generating Power.

PLANT IS PORTABLE

Has Wing Spread of 4.5 Metres—Develops 14 Horse-power Easily.

By MAJOR KURT BILAU, BERLIN. Special To The Advertiser.

Berlin, April 11.—Everybody who has been out on a boating trip, has had the experience of sudden turmoil on otherwise placid waters, when a large steamer passed in the vicinity of his small craft. The steamer pushes along a small mound of water, which is followed by relatively deeper hollow. Our little pleasure boat responds but slightly to the pressure of the mounting wave, whereas the sucking action of the back-wash produces a mighty commotion, causing the boat to rock violently. Here we have a case in which the action of the suction is greater than that of the corresponding pressure.

The properties of water currents are generally known, because they are visible and can easily be followed by the eye. Apart from the difference in weight the movements of air currents are governed by precisely the same laws as those of water; but since air is invisible, they have, until recently, received but little attention, and not much research has been applied to the elucidation of their properties.

Motion of Air Balls At one time or another, everyone has quite unconsciously dabbled in aerodynamics. For instance, we are standing on the top of a tree, and our gaze wanders over a field of corn swaying in the breeze. The waving tops remind us of the sea in motion. In the course of a single minute we count about 25 wavelets, just go ripping over the end of the field. How can we account for this phenomenon? This is the answer:—

Air does not travel with uniform flow. It is easily compressible, and when in motion is constantly broken up and squeezed into a number of balls each about as large as a ball of wool. In every minute, then, 25 of these balls, "pulsations" in scientific terminology, go tumbling over the edge of our corn field.

If we now move away from the top of the hill, walking against the breeze we feel the wind pressing against our chests like a heavy weight. Actually, the air, like any other gas, ponderable matter. Its weight was first determined by Torricelli, who balanced a column of mercury in an inverted tube against the weight of the atmosphere.

Measure of Pressure A cube of air one metre long, i.e., one cubic metre in volume, weighs about one and three-tenths kilograms. If the velocity of the breeze on our walk amounts to three metres per second, then three such cubes press against our chests in every second.

On our stroll we have at last reached a board-fence in the shelter of which there is a dead calm. Where then have our air cubes got to? Indeed, they press just as heavily against the fence as previously against our bodies. They cannot suddenly disappear, and by the aid of a barometer we can ascertain that before the fence there is a greater pressure, and behind it less than in the open field. Behind the fence there is a partial vacuum, technically known as a "sog", which is greater than the excess of pressure in front of it. We notice here an exact parallel to what occurred in the water in our

SEVEN ACCIDENTS OVER WEEK-END

Toronto Motorcyclist and Daughter Removed To Hospital After Crash.

Seven motor accidents, all of a minor nature, occurred in London over the week-end. Five of the mishaps were collisions at street intersections. Two people in a motorcycle, colliding with an automobile, were badly cut. They were brought to Victoria Hospital, where their injuries were attended. Five other people, travelling along the Lambeth highway in a closed car, narrowly escaped serious injury when their car turned turtle in a ditch. Another narrow escape was reported when a sedan on the Dundas highway lost a wheel and missed turning into a ten-foot ditch by a few inches.

John Edward Barret, of Toronto and his daughter, Mary Ellis, 21 years old, travelling through London from Detroit to Toronto in a motorcycle and side car, collided with an auto driven by Reginald Wizeslow, 188 Emery street, at the corner of Maitland and Dundas streets shortly before 8 o'clock last night. They were thrown from the machine. The police ambulance was called and the injured people were taken to Victoria hospital. Mr. Barret is badly cut about the face. Miss Barret suffers from a broken nose and other facial injuries. They were reported to be resting comfortably last night, however, and their condition is not serious, as serious. Dr. Percy Banhart rendered medical aid. Wizeslow was not injured.

Driving north on Waterloo street at 11:20 o'clock yesterday morning an auto driven by James M. Donnelly, 501 Waterloo street, collided with the rear of a motor driven by George Hare, 109 Maitland street, at the York street intersection. Mr. Hare's car was upset, and his wife was hurt. She was taken to her home after being attended by Dr. John Wishart. Her injuries were not serious, she suffering only from bruises.

Marjory Campbell, 11 years old, of 65 St. George street, was struck down and injured by an auto driven by Douglas Shepley, 341 Avenue, Detroit, at the corner of Clarence and Dundas streets, shortly before 11 o'clock Saturday morning. She was hurt. She was taken to her home after being attended by Dr. John Wishart. Her injuries were not serious, she suffering only from bruises.

Two motor cars were badly smashed on the Dundas highway last night. One was owned by W. J. Elements, 587 Grosvenor street, and the other by John Pennecott, 30 Stanley street. Pennecott was arrested on a drunk charge and later bailed to appear in court this morning.

F. B. Smith, 432 Ontario street, reported to the police that while driving west on Queen's avenue his auto was struck by a motor owned by Robert Brownlee, 341 Elizabeth street. His car was slightly smashed, the fenders and hood being torn.

A man and woman and their three small children narrowly escaped being injured when a wheel fell from their auto as it was travelling along the Dundas highway at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The car was thrown sideways, skidding on the edge of a 10-foot ditch. The windshield and glass windows were broken. The car was towed into the city.

A closed car, bearing five occupants, turned upside down in a ditch along the Lambeth highway last

NOTHING IS FOUND BY LONG GRILLING

Hamilton Accountant Questioned Again—Await Nickle's Return.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, April 12.—George R. Harris of Hamilton, who figured prominently in the public accounts committee's investigation into the administration of the highways department under F. C. Bizkes, former minister of highways, and whose admitted falsification of the books of the Provincial Securities Company led to his evidence being referred to the attorney-general, was questioned for a further two and a half hours at the parliament buildings on Saturday afternoon without, however, any sensational developments ensuing.

Deputy Attorney-General Edward Bayly and Major A. E. Nash carried forward the investigation of the bookkeeping methods of Mr. Harris, who had with him his solicitor, John A. Rowland, of Toronto, and his partner, A. G. Browning, K.C., of Hamilton. No statement as to progress was forthcoming.

Further developments, if any, probably will come on the return to the city of Attorney-General W. F. Nickle. It is unlikely, however, that he will be back in Toronto tomorrow, which is a holiday at the parliament buildings. In the meantime it is undecided whether Harris will be further questioned.

RIDDLES CHICKEN COOP AND HUMAN OCCUPANT

Stamford Township Resident in Jail at Niagara Falls.

Canadian Press Despatch. Niagara Falls, Ont., April 12.—Patsy Fraill is in jail charged with intent to do bodily harm, and Dominick Guaino is in hospital with several shots through his body as the result of an affray in Stamford township early today.

Fraill claims he was aroused by a noise proceeding from his chicken-house. Seeing a man moving there he emptied his revolver, five shots striking the man, who fell. The man, who was later identified as Guaino, was found in a pool of blood in the chicken-house. Guaino has one wound in the stomach and four flesh wounds.

FAST EXPRESS TRAIN DERAILED BY WASHOUT

Mail Clerk and Fireman Seriously Injured Near Syracuse.

Associated Press Despatch. Syracuse, N.Y., April 12.—Three men were injured, two seriously, when the Montreal express of the Adirondack division of the New York Central was derailed by a washout a mile north of the Beaver river station and the engine and two cars went into Beaver river this morning.

A hundred feet of track was washed out. The engineer, seeing the condition of the road before reaching the point where the rails were under water, was able to slow up, so that the passengers escaped with only a shaking up. Telegraph lines were carried away as the train left the rails, causing delay in sending out word of the accident.

LABOR BODY IN ONTARIO IN COMMUNISTS' HANDS

Officers Elected

Place Their Candidates in President's and Vice-President's Chair.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, April 12.—The Communists scored a victory in the election of officers at the convention of the Ontario section of the Canadian Labor party here yesterday. A. E. Smith, a one-time Methodist minister in western Canada, was elected president over Harry Kerwin, the candidate of the trades unions, by two votes in a convention of 160 delegates.

The Communists also elected their candidate, John McDonald, as vice-president and secured control of the executive committee.

A resolution presented by the Communists, providing that the five delegates from the Canadian Labor party to the gathering of British Empire labor parties in London next year be instructed to move that the colonial and semi-colonial portions of the empire have complete independence was adopted.

An amendment to have "self-determination" substituted for "independence" failed.

Wm. Irvine and J. S. Woodsworth, members of the federal parliament, and James Simpson, Toronto, are among the delegates chosen to attend the London conference.

In addition to naming executive officers the communists were successful in placing at the head of the poll four of the five delegates to the Dominion convention, which meets this year in Ottawa, while the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada is in session.

The fifth delegate was James Simpson, secretary of the party, who secured 54 votes.

The communists reared the elections as a clear-cut victory, and stated that their next step would be an attempt to gain control of the Dominion convention of the Trades and Labor Congress.

Clothing was found near the falls, and an officer stated that he saw a man answering Parker's description in the vicinity.

Special To The Advertiser. Detroit, April 12.—When John Stark of Petrolia, Ont., saw the name of his 19-year-old daughter Mabel in a list of marriage licenses issued here as the bride of her uncle, Frederick Griffin, 57 years old, he came to Detroit and asked that a warrant be issued for Griffin.

Anna B. Carmichael, assistant prosecutor, recommended the warrant.

Dr. Georges Scelle, Herriot's Appointee, Resigns—Caused Strike.

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, April 12.—Dr. Georges Scelle, professor of international law at the Sorbonne, Saturday sent his resignation to the minister of education, who accepted it.

The appointment of Dr. Georges Scelle to the chair of international law at the Sorbonne and the insistence by the Herriot government that he retain his position gave rise to the recent rioting by students in Paris, and to the students' strike which spread throughout France. A condition plan near here made necessary morning.
