Washington Tragedy

Washington, May 20.—The mystery attending the killing of James Seymour Ayers of Port Austin, Mich.,

a census office clerk, in the Kermore hotel, early Wednesday morning last and which, because of the peculiar circumstances surrounding it, has aroused Washington more than any trag-voluntary confession from Mrs. Lulu

I. Bonine, a married woman and a guest at the hotel that the three shots which ended Ayre's life had been fired in a struggle between herself and Ayres.

Mrs. Bonine, whose husband is a drummer for the wholesale drug house of Dewitt & Co., of Chicago, explained her presence in Ayer's room at 2 o'clock in the morning by saying that he had come to her room complaining of a chad, asking for medicine and had induced her to follow him to his room to talk over some matters of difference that had been between them. She said that she dressed herself in a wrapper and went to his room. He had preceded her and when she opened the door and walked in, he quickly closed it and informed her he had enticed her to the room for his own purposes, and said if she did not submit to his wishes he would kill her

Ayres, she said, was undressed and was discharged three different times, the shots striking Ayres at each dis-charge, the last one proving flatal.

After her statement, which was made to the chief of police and a number of other officers, Mrs. Bonine was placed under arrest and taken to the house of detention, where she will be held pending the result of the coroner's inquest, which has been in session since Saturday, and at which Mrs.

Bonine was to have appeared to-mor-row as a witness.

The tragedy which resulted in Ayre's death, was discovered first about 8.30 o'clock last Wednesday morning, when his dead body was found in his room at the Kenmore, a small family hotel of very moderate rices situated not far from the capi-

Eight Hundred Boers Cross the Orange River - Lord Kitchener's Latest Report of Casualties - One Thousand Additional Prisoners Taken.

London, May 21.-A Cape Town despatch, dated yesterday, says :- Eight hundred Boers have crossed the Orange River from the north-west, and have reinforced the commandoes in the eastern districts. ### THE END NEAR.

London, May 20.—For the first time in months a more hopeful view is taken of the war situation. The correspondent of the Times at Pretoria, who has hitherto been pessimistic, declares that the end really seems near. The first pinch of winter and the fact that a campaign in the bush weldt increases their own difficulbush veidt increases their own difficul-ties far more than those of the British, seem to prove to the Transvaal burgh-ers the hopelessness of the struggle. For nearly two months their sole in-itiative has been confined to attempts at railway destruction by a few desperadoes. Voluntary capitulations continue in a stream daily, and now are spreading to the northern districts of the Orange River Colony. The correspondent asserts that if the results of pondent asserts that if the results of Lord Kitchener's coming activity re-semble those of the last month only a few harried fanatics will remain in the field by the time Sir Alfred Milner returns to South Africa.

A BLACK HERO.

The noble quality of heroism knows no distinction of race, color or birth, and it is well that this is so, that now and then acquired prejudices may be corrected by the natural outbursts of native nobility which come to our knowledge from among the despised, says the St. Thomas Times. But a few days ago, in Indianapolis, two negroes were engaged in cleaning the inside of a large steam boiler. While they were at work steam was unintentionally turned into the boilor through an imperfect stopcock. Their only escape was up a ladder through a narrow manhole at the top of the boiler. Both sprang for The ladder, but the one who reached it first, stepped aside, saying: "You go first, Jim, you are married." He ran up the ladder, pushed through the manhole as quickly as possible, then turned and helped his comrade met. The first man was badly, but not dangerously, scalded, while the man who had stepped aside to give his friend the better chance - because he was a married man - was terribly burned and died within two hours. While he waited for death he made no complaint, only said with heroic simplicity: "It was Jim's right to go first. He is married."

It is not well that only the ignoble deeds of the black man should be given public prominence. A heroic act like this should receive equal publicity, and be commended to the same degree that the other has received disapprobation.

WINSTON CHURCHILL.

It is the unexpected that happens generally, and nowhere is this truer than in the field of British parliamentary debate, says the Hamilton Post. Probably not twenty people went away from Winston Churchill's more or less well-attended lectures in this country with any idea that he would ever make a great parliamentarian. True he had the tricks of the English member: he kept his left hand in his pocket, and maintained an air of bored indifference to everything, but that is not sufficient or which to base a powerful attack upon one of the strongest governments of modern times. In this country Churchill would have been an absolute failure. It is doubtful whether he could have even entered parliament here while family influences count for so little and His local popularity for so much. pratorical ability is not of a kind to appeal to the public, and no Canadian party would covet him as a Cabinet minister. It is even open to question whether he would much impress that somewhat agrarian and loud-talking body in the big chaimber on the hill at Ottawa, and he certainly would not exercise through them the enormous influence that a man can exercise who once wins the ear and the respect of Westmin-

But the character of the lower house of the Imperial Barliament is unique. By tradition and by instinct it has grown absolutely indifferent to flowers of thetoric, yet it answers immediately to any display of real and reasonable feeling. It does not care an inta about the personal character or manner; of a man (provided he be not a cad, in an English and rather undemocratic sense); and it is at present simply vearning for a little vouth and earnestness and sincerity as a relief from the cynical indifferentism of Lord Salisbury and the fatigued philosophy of Mr. Balfour. The place and the moment were propitious. It may be that Mr. Churchill will not maintain the position he occupies to-day; but he has shown an enormous aptitude for information about any subject in which he chooses to interest himself, a selfreliance, reckless and almost defiant, that reminds one of the old Randolph days, and an oratorical power that defies all defects of voice and delivery. And he is, in sporting parlance, off to a good start.

Trolley Car Telephone For Wrecks

They were almost the only occupants of the swiftly moving suburban trolley which ran from somewhere back in the Jersey hills to the shore of the Hudson, whence the passengers reached the great city by ferryboat. They were husband and wife. You could tell that from the way they talked. One did not have to be a Sherlock Holmes to infer that he was on his way to business and that she was coming in for a day's shopping. Both had been over the same route many times before, so the sameness of the Jersey landscape did not impress them. For some reason or other she turned around in her seat and began to study the other end of the car.

"John, will you look at that?" she exclaimed suddenly.

John looked in the direction indicated, but failed to see anything of startling na-ture. "Look at what?" he demanded.

"There's a telephone back there," she gasped. "Who ever heard of a telephone n a street car before?" There was no mistaking it. The telephone was there, securely fastened to the wall beside the rear door. For once John was not ready with an explanation. "I think it's a fine idea," began the "Just think, if you've forgotten something you can telephone back for it without getting off the car." There was silence for a moment, then she began again: "John, I've forgotten something. I meant to tell Mary to give Cecil that "Cecil hasn't any cough," insisted the husband.

"But I'm afraid he will have. There's so much grip around. I'll telephone to her about it." John knew there was no need of tele-phoning, but he said nothing about it. They had been married a long time, and he had learned a thing or two. His wife went to the conductor without delay. "I am sorry, madam, but it's a private line, only to be used in case we break down and have to telephone for a wreck-ing car," was the conductor's answer to

She did not quite understand, and John went back to ask more questions. The conductor told him that the idea originat-ed in the brain of the general manager of a line out of St. Louis. He showed him two slender wires which ran along the poles at the side of the road. He pointed out a bamboo fishing pole which had two metal hooks at the upper end. Then he

There are dreams and dreams. Some we wake from with a laugh, exclaiming, "How absurd! Such things could not possibly happen." Dream is stamped upon their faces, written out in their curious forms. But there is another sort of dream; and in the morning we say: "Such a is spending real dream!" We rub our eyes, and ents here.

He tells it in vigorous English, and in manly fashion, speaking of his own part but lightly, and no more than between the words the great heroism of his conduct, which refuses to be hid. But he is; and you follow his story with feverish interest, until you hear how he evolves from the seeming character of a spy and the traitor, and ends as he began—a patriot, covered with glory and rewarded with worth-while love.

"THE SMART SET" FOR JUNE. "The Smart Set for June" opens with a $1,000 prize novelette entitled "The Middle Course," by Mrs. Poult-ney Bigelow. The story concerns itself with a beautiful London society woman whose husband is unsympathetic and even brutal, and who becomes sensationally involved, although innocent, with a much-lionized sculptor through a jealous woman's malicious gossip. By this story Mrs. Bigelow at once attains a very high place as a writer of smart fiction. AN ARTIST OF THE LIPS n English Exhibitor Who Has Been Arm of Aubrey Beardsley and a decided atmosphere of William Morris. Artistic wall paper designs, designs for dainty fans, wonderful little water-colors, and striking line draw-ings are on the walls, whilst the young and handsome artist busily paints by means of his-mouth.

Mr. Bertram Hiles was born in Bristol, and was deprived, at the age of eight years, of both his arms through an accident. Before this catastrophe he had developed a strong passion for drawing—so strong that the loss of his arms in no way diminished his ambition to become an artist. Working with courage and enthusiasm, he obtained a "first-class excellent" in the second grade for free-hand (!). drawing within two years of his accident.

At the age of 16 Mr. Hiles exhibited a study in water colors at the Bristol Fine Art Academy, and his career as an artist was fairly begun. But it took him upwards of six years to obtain complete mastery over the muscles of his mouth; yet time and practice made him more ex-pert than ever in freedom and touch.

The young artist has exhibited at the Royal Society of Bristol Artists, the Dudley Gallery, etc., "very nearly," he said smilingly, "at the Royal Academy," and where Mr. Hiles' pictures were accepted it was entirely on their own merits, the hanging committee being quite ignorant of the method used. Deftly a brush was picked up, color mixed and applied with an exquisite touch. by means of the paint-ers' mouth; and even as one representative looked on a rustic child grew suddenly out of the black and white, watching the setting sun.

The artist's delight in his work. and his breezy cheery manner, seem to cast one's pity back; the man who has conquered, noble and patiently, so many and terrible difficulties, asks for appreciation of his work from the common ground of Art rather than from pity for the misfortune which he has so wonderfully overcome.-London Express.

On the returning troopships from South Africa the merry English soldiers are given to pranks. None of the men on the ships recently in had shaved on the voyage till they neared Southampton, when there was a general request for razors.

It happened that there was only one to be had, all the others probably being packed away with heavy luggage in the hold. The owner of the solitary razor consented to lend it round, but on condition that each one should shave half his face only at one turn, the owner then to have first use. He carefully shaved one side of his face and then passed

In due time the razor came back to its owner, who at once trimmed the other side of his face and then tossed the razor into the sea. How they all groaned. And yet they never laughed more than they did after they got over the first shock. When they landed every man seemed to have a bad face ache, to judge from the handkerchiefs and scarfs which were held up, and there was an immediate rush to the nearest barber-shops.

The First British Census. It is significant of the invariable opposition offered to any innovation in this country that when the first proposal for a census was made in Parliament it met with bitter hostility. It was on March 30, 1753, that Mr. Potter, M. P., asked leave to bring in a bill "for the taking and registering an annual account of the total number of people, and the total number of births, deaths and marriages." The ex-Home Secretary's grandfather, Mr. Matthew Ridley, said that the people of Newcastle regarded the measure as ominous, and feared-having regard, perhaps, to the punishment awarded to King David-lest some public misfortune or an epidemical distemper should follow the numbering. However, the bill passed the Commons, and received the support of the Government, but was thrown out by the

In the archives of Pall Mall repose musty schemes for the defence of the metropolis which was thought would be undisturbed until the War Department commenced to move into its new palace. But there are busy men about and as a result new schemes will be forthcoming for the defence of London. Something like 60 batteries of artillery will be al-lotted for the defence, including guns of heavy calibre, 4.7 and 6 inches, which will be mounted in commanding positions, covering a wide, sweeping arc. The mobile force for defence will include nearly 100 15-posinder field guns, and an asmy corps of regular infantry and 100,000 volun-teers.—London Express.

A Troussing for Shakespeare. ### THE EGG AS A FOOD.

Its Importance in Cookery Cannot Be Overestimated.

They Add to the Nutritive Value of Any Dish Into Which They Enter-The Proper Method of Boiling-Some Delicious Modes of Serving Them Which Are Employed by French Cooks.

The importance of eggs in cookery can scarcely be overestimated. They increase the nutritive value of any dish to which they are added. Thus it happens that cakes and puddings and bread mixtures that contain eggs are, or should be, of greater nutritive value than the plain breads biscuits made without them. Eggs have a lightening effect and a thickening effect. Two eggs will perform the work of one tablespoonful of flour in thickening such things as sauces. As a substitute for meat, one egg is nowhere near equivalent to a pound of meat, and it is a great mistake to think it is. Nevertheless, eggs are valuable food, easily prepared and a perfect boon for breakfast. In fact, the housekeeper who is forced to leave eggs out of her reckonings because the various members of the family dislike them is the victim of a hard lot. The egg is really the secret of catering made

The boiled egg, so called, shouldn't be boiled at all, or else it should be boiled a long time until the yoke has passed the leathery stage and has turned to a mealy softness. There are as many ways of cooking a boiled egg as there are ways of making coffee, and the exponent of each way insists just as strenuously upon its superiority. There is the cold water process, which consists of put-ting the egg in cold water and letting it heat gradually to the boiling point. This should take about ten The inside, white and then of the consistency of custard. The common method is to put the egg into boiling water and let it cook steadily for three minutes if the egg is to be soft. This cooks the white to an indigestible stiffness and leaves the yolk soft. The proper method says that the egg must not be over the heat of the fire at all. It must be put into a saucepan of boiling water, covered down closely and the saucepan set on the table or at the back of the stove for just six minutes. This cooks the inside to a creaminess that cannot fail to

When eggs are to be poached in boiling water, a tablespoonful of vinegar added to the water will be found an aid. Another plain, everyday sort of way of preparing eggs for the table is the omelet, a foundation upon which all manner of variations may is the be played. Cook books have much to say upon omelets, giving the number of eggs to be used anywhere from two, or three to eight or ten. The perfect omelet consists of three eggs beaten until thick and foamy, salt, pepper and butter. It is far better to make several omelets to supply a number of persons than to attempt one large omelet. Sometimes the egg yolks are beaten first with two tablespoonfuls of cream, a little salt and pepper added, and the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs folded in just before cooking. The omelet pan should always be hot and oiled with butter when the omelet is turned in. As for the mixed omelets those that make use of meats, oysters or cheese have these ingredients scattered over the surface of the cooking egg just before it is folded. Oysters are parboiled, chopped, sea-soned with salt, pepper and nutmeg and moistened with cream before they are added to the omelet. Cheese is grated. Ham, tongue or chicken is minced, seasoned and added. Tomatoes are stewed down to a desirable thickness, well seasoned and spread over the surface of the omelet before it is folded. A mixture of a few chopped mushrooms and tru a few chopped mushrooms and truffles, minced onions and parsley, moistened with cream and seasoned with salt and pepper, is a good addition to an omelet. Hard boiled eggs serve as a basis for many concoctions. For instance, you may cut some hard boiled eggs into halves and mash the yolks. For half a dozen eggs add to the yolks one tablespoonful of finely minced cooked ham, a hash of paprika, two tablespoonfuls of melt-Dr. Spinney & Co ed butter and one tablespoonful of anchovy paste. Finally pour over them a not too thick white sauce to which has been added a little mustard. Cover the top with seasoned crumbs and bake. Sometimes hard-boiled eggs are stuffed and made into croquettes. Cut six eggs in halves. Of late days I have noticed a considerable number of reputed cases of occurrence of live frogs and the in what were alleged to be solid rocks, says a writer in The London Chroniele. This is, of course, an old, old story that apto possess perennial powers pears (like the toad) of revivification. had thought that Dean Buckland (father of the genial Frank) had exploded the toad in the rock myth once for all. The dean inclosed toads and frogs in cells cut in blocks of stone, and buried them three feet deep in his garden. Here the conditions were even less rigorous than those under which the amphibians are reported to survive for ages in the "solid rock." Dean Buckland's were nearly all dead by the end of the first year of entombment and none survived the second year. I have hear stories of live toads be ing found in rocks of an age, geologically regarded, older than those which contain the oldest fossil members of the class. But this "reductio ad absurdum" does not seem to convince the public of the impossibility of even a cold blooded animal, and one possessed of exceptional powers of endurance, lasting without food and air for untold acons. I believe where careful research is made the facts show that a juvenile toad may slip into a crevice in a rock, may grow and may feed on chance insects that come in its way. The rock is split asunder, it is supposed to have been solid, the toad hops out, and voila tout.

Fashionable Game of "Bridge." "Bridge" is the latest and most popular game of cards, especially in ociety, says The Penny Illustrated It is similar to whist, only more complicated, elaborate scoring being necessary. But it seems that two games can be played at the same by young people fas-d with Bridge. After cards are dealt, as in time cinated whist, the dealer, instead of turning up the last card for trumps, chooses trumps from his own hand; or can, if he prefers, have no trumps at all, or, failing in this can pass the option to his partner. Afterwards their adversaries may double, and, if the dealer and his partner wish, they may redouble, and this redoubling may be carried on indefinitely, though rules advisedly suggest a hundred points should be the limit; so that Bridge offers great opportunities for very high play, and hence has the reputation of being a gambling game, and lends color to a remark in "The Awakening," at the St. James's to play Bridge." When play is commenced, the dealer's partner lays his or her cards on the table and be-comes "Duminy," the dealer playing both hands and the "Dummy" laving down the cards the dealer directs,

The Stanhope gold medal of the Royal Humane Society for 1900 has gone to Mr. William Allen, a Sunderland sailor, who left the sea some three years ago, and has since been engaged by the Patent Fuel Company, Sunderland. On March 15 last word was brought to Allen that three men were overcome by the fumes of tar gas, and were lying unconscious at the bottom of a still. Allen fastened a rope round himself, and dashed into the still, and in few seconds came out with one of the men. A second time he entered, and yet a third, until the three men were rescued. Each time Allen risked his life in the venture. The case was brought before the Royal Humans Society, and at the recent annual general count, Colonel Horace Montague in the chair, it was resolved to award the Stanhope gold medal Allen as "the bravest man of the year" among all those whose gal-lantry in saving life had been brought before the society in 1900. Old Gooseberry for New Ships. It may be ungenerous to dispel popular delusion, but there is no one among the thousands who witness, a launch who does not believe that the beautifully garlanded bottle of wine broken against the stem of a ship is anything but the choicest brand of champagne, drawn from the admirals' cellar. Whenever a ship is launched in a dockyard the admiralty generously allows £40 as the cost of the jubiliation, and included in this sum of £40 is the item of 3 shillings for wine. Hence, it follows that not only is the wine not drawn from the admiral's cellar, but it certainly is not champagne of foreign vintage. English Navy and Military Record.

Curious Decisions in England.

In England there seems to prevait some curious ideas about bigamy. At the Liverpool Assizes the other day a man was brought to the bar for having married two women without waiting for the first one to die. He was sentenced to three days' imprisonment, the judge remarking that, while he had been twice married before a registrar, he had not "profaned any religious ceremony" by what he had done. This singular decision has called forth a stemmed decision has called forth a storm of denunciation, especially on the part of women. It would seem to be bad law, for the Church of England, being a state church, all clergymen are registrars by virtue of their office, and that gives the validity to the ceremonies which they perform, and marriages before registrars not clergymen have heretofore been considered legal.

ONE PLACE WHERE IT BRINGS OUT HIS CHARACTER.

An Old "Chair Warmer" Says That Watching Men as They Cross the Lobby of a Fashionable Hotel Is a Great Study of Human Nature.

"You can tell with probable certainty a man's character, disposition and station in life when you see him cross a hotel lobby," said an old lobby lounger the other day as he sat down in a chair in one of the big hotels.

"Did you ever sit and watch the people pass? It's an interesting study in human character and the result of human experience. Pride, timidity, assurance, weakness, concentration—all walk before you. They say that these things can be told by a man's manner of walking on the street or anywhere else, but start him over the marble corridor and see how all his traits are emphasized and accentu-

Just then two buds of manhood entered the lobby where the lounger sat. They were high white collars. They walked hard and laughed loud. One of them stopped at the cigar stand to light a cigarette and called to his comrade to wait. Then they deliberately walked directly toward the bar. They did not try to conceal the fact that they were going toward the hotel's barroom. They did it openly. Probably they They even advertised it.

were going to get a very wicked drink.
"Do you know," mused the lounger "that there is a certain atmosphere that can be found only in first class hotels? It is an atmosphere of what might be called sporty gentility. It makes men feel ill it ease unless their clothes are good. To enter the lobby of a fashionable hotel causes some men to talk in words and on subjects that are unusual to them-to put on airs, as it were. Men never hesitate to say:

"'I was in the — hotel, you know, when I met So-and-so, and he told me,

"Those two young gentlemen that you just saw enter the bar feel all this. They feel that they would acquire a certain position in the social scale by appearing to be at home in this lobby. But their noisy manner makes it apparent that they wish to advertise their presence, and thus they destroy the impression which they try to create.
"To cross a hotel lobby is something of an event to a man who isn't used to it," continued the lounger, "and that is why personal characteristics stick out all the tronger when he does. Now, the gentle man who is proud of his looks is sure to give a free exhibition of himself as he walks across the smooth floor. He will square his shoulders and hold out his chest and throw back his haughty head and strut like a proud, plumed thing. You can almost imagine that you see hot flames bursting from his nostrils. He glances from right to left to be certain that he is being closely observed. He acknowledges the smile of the cigar girl with a sweeping salute. He raises his hat and bows grandly to the telegraph ter where the clerk stands there is a feel-ing in the lobby not unlike that in the street after the circus parade has passed.

It is a feeling that all is over. "Not so with the timid, modest gentle man. He will walk hurriedly, as though glad to have the ordeal past. He does not dare to look about him, but he will probbly rub his nose or stroke his chin as a man does who walks down a long church aisle. He is ashamed to be making himself so prominent. If you speak to this man afterward, you will find that his voice is mild and his manner self de-

"After all," continued the "chair boarder," "the most interesting sight is that of a man whose feet are at home on grass or plowed ground making a voyage over the marble floor of the hotel lobby. Such a one is impressed with the awfulness of the thing. He is panic stricken to begin with, and, then, the stone is so solid that t gives a shock to each foot as he puts it down, so that he lifts it high with each step, like a chicken walking in the wet grass, and, then, there is the constant peril of slipping. The distance across the lobby seems miles. I have seen a man take it by easy stages—walk first to a chair and sneak into it, and then rise gingerly and grit his teeth and start out again full of grim determination, Such a man is sure to be noticed. Just because he longs to be unobserved unkind fate fastens every one's eyes on him. "There is one type, however," muse the lounger, "that no one notices. He is the man who lives in hotels. He walks across the lobby with as much unconcern as he would into his own house. In fact, I believe that men who have been guests year after year at the same hotel grow to assume a sort of ownership.

"There is another set of individuals whose habits and character are unmisakable when they appear in the hotels. belong to this class myself. They call us 'chair warmers,' 'lobby loungers' and other things. In the summer time we fill the row of chairs on the sidewalk in front or sit with our chairs in the street i front and our feet on the edge of the sidewalk. We are always on the shady side of the building and in the path of a breeze, if possible. In the winter time we are in the lobby, where it's warm. You can tell us by one certain sign. We are always sitting. panorama of the lobby goe on-men who strut fiercely and show that they are petty and vain; men who shy and hurry and show that they are timid and nervous; men who walk anxiously and uneasily, showing that they are new and green; men without concern or thought of themselves, showing that they thought of themselves, showing that they have had experience in such affairs and have business ahead; men who have a hunted look, as though they hadn't paid their laundry bill; young men, who want to be as 'blooded' as the older men; idle men with nothing else to do; bold men, timid men, busy men, vain men, modest men, prosperous men and ne'er do wells—it's a picture that is before me daily as I sit here, an interesting picture that I study and muse upon."

CUSTER'S LAST FIGHT. Version of the Rattle on the

If a story that comes out of the west is true, it is likely that there will be given to the world some interesting picture stories of Custer's last fight, drawn by some of the Sioux who, in June of the centennial year, killed Chief Yellow Hair and every man in his five pet troops, on the Little Big Horn, in Montana. Though Indians lie like sin, theirs is the only account of the extinction of Custer's personal command on that hot Sunday which ever can be given. The more eager the white men have seemed to get the truth of the fight from the Sioux, the more given to romancing the Indians have become. Perhaps it's only human nature for the sole witnesses to mak the most of their chance.

Frank Girard was one of Reno's ccouts on that day. He, another scout and two soldiers escaped in the stampede and retreat of Reno and hid in a hollow, emerging on the following night and joining Reno. Girard recently has been up at the Pine Tree Agency trying to get the Sioux to tell him the story of the fight in detail. Incidentally he saw some pictures of the battle which had been drawn by a young buck with the aid of the suggestions furnished by his elders who actually were there. It is said that these pictures number sixty, and are drawn in water color on the leaves of an old agency book, and illustrate the conflict from start to finish. Girard is the first man not an Indian it is said. that ever saw these pictures, and no white man ever could have bought them. But Girard speaks their tongue fluently, as for nearly a score of years he was a scout in their country, and now that peace reigns they regard him as a great and good friend. So they gave am the book, and according to the story he is going to have it published some day, with an account of the battle, in which the Sloux version will be told. It certainly will be an interesting publication.

Men With Real Green Hair. According to Professor L. Lewin, Berlin, distinguished German scientist, the hair of some copper workers is almost certain to turn green sooner or later. The Professer has been studying the subject for the last few years and he tells the result of his invetigation the current number of the Deutsche Mediz -inische Wochenschrift.

"For nearly two hundred and fifty years," he says, " scientists have known that the hair of persons employed in copper works is aptte become green-a curious fact and one which is especially interesting from a biological point of view. The general belief, however, that the hair becomes green after a few days' work in summer is erroneous. Workmen perspire free ly during the summer and the dust from the copper fiaturally clings to their skin and tends o give their hair a greenish hue. This green wever, can be easily washed off, "The true green does not appear in the hair by the use of chemicals can they ever wholly rid themselves of it. I have examined ove three hundred workmen and yet I found that only eight of them had any trace of green is their hair. I examined one man, a brass polisher, who had been twenty-seven years in the factory, and I found his hair of a natura color. On the other hand, I found snothe polisher, who had a green beard. Even animals' hair becomes green under such condi. tions. This was clearly proven to me by the discolored hair of a goat which used to frequent a certain copper factory and which used to drink daily without any evil results the water in which the copper was washed. "In the case of workmen the hair of the head and beard changes color more often than that of the eyebrows, and, 'as a rule, the beard changes first. On men with white or fair hair the change can be noticed more readily than on those with dark hair. Another peculiar fact is that after some years the green may disappear from the hair, prorided the workman is no longer employed at this trade. I knew one old man whose hair which was very green while he was working at copper, became snow white soon after he reased to work. On the other hand, a story is told of a workman whose hair, which was white while he was at work, became gree within five months after he had stopped

"In the cases which I studied the green was spread evenly over the whole hair, which ous in view of the fact that two other scientists who have been studying this subject discovered more green at the roots of the hair than anywhere else. The color itself, I found, varied from the lightest green to the

he Crow's Nest Southern Railway Bill

Ottawa, May 20.-This was probably the last private members' day of the session, and private bills were taken up immediately upon the Commons getting down to business this morn-

BILL WITHDRAWN.

The first order was for the third reading of the bill, "An act to incorporate the Crow's Nest Southern Railvay Company," but when it was called by the clerk, the Premier got up and said:-"I understand that this bill is withdrawn. It may remain on the paper, but I believe it is with-

It was a brief valedictory for measure that set the whole Commons by the ears and occupied more attention on the part of the public while the struggle was going on between the C.P.R. and the Cox-Jaffrey Crow's Nest interview than any bill that has been before Parliament since the Yukon Railway Bill was laid away by the Senate two years ago. The contest therefore in the railway committee on this Crow's Nest Southern Bill was only brought to a termination by Government interference. An agreement was drawn up and passed by the tory. The moment we brought commons by which the Crow's Nest prisoner to Skaguay, for instance Commons by which the Crow's Nest Southern Railway Company would consents not to discriminate against consumers of coal and coke in Canada on a penalty of $3 per ton on every ton sold or carried at discriminatory rates. The Finance Minister announced at the time that there was a "full understanding that unless that agreement was signed or agreed to the bill to incorporate the Crow's Nest South-inspector would not have special jurisdiction in the Yukon only, but over ern will not pass its third reading in this House." The Premier's announce-ment in the House this morning indi-cates that the company declined to be the Dominion generally. The resolution was reported. bound to the proposed arrangement, and accordingly forced the withdraw-al of their bill. NITY.

THE NURSES' BILL. The House then went into commit-tee on the bill to incorporate the Canadian Nurses' Association. $1,000 to $1,500, beginning with the present session. Sir Wilfrid Laurier justified the increase by the example Dr. McLennan (Inverness) led off in opposition to the bill, declaring that t conferred powers on the association which were not enjoyed by other nurses equally capable. Dr. Sproule also opposed the passage of the bill. Mr. E. F. Clarke defended the bill months as in 1873. as reasonable, similar organizations Mr. R. L. Borden supported the re-existing in the United States and in solution on the same grounds. Britain with good results Mr. McCreary protested against the sed association arrogating to itself the right to establish and mainain a universal standard. Mr. Sutherland said that it had been suggested to him that if provisions were made for one uniform standard of examination opposition to he bill would cease. After further discussion Mr. Talbot moved "That the committee rise."

The motion carried by 43 to 33.
This killed the bill. A standing vote only is taken in committee, the his constituents were opposed to the omes not being recorded.

QUESTIONS BY MEMBERS.

KING'S MEMBER. Replying to a question by Mr. Stephens, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, said that representations had been made that representations had been made to the Minister of Justice that Mr. Justice Robertson, of Ontario, was physically infirm through deafness, and that many barristers refused to take cases before him. "But ap to the present time," added the Premier, "he doesn't seem to realize what is apparent to the profession and the apparent to the profession and the

To Mr. Blain, the Premier said the price added for labor upon the twine made in Kingston during the past two or three years averaged $11.58 per 100 lbs. This did not include wear and tear of machinery.

Replying to Mr. E. F. Clarke's question about the proposed Montgomery monument in Quebec, the Premier said the Government had not been asked by "The Sons of the Revolution," of Boston, for permission to erect a monument to Gen. Montgomery in Quebec, but he was aware that application had been made by a comapplication had been made by a committee of that society to the City Council of Quebec to erect a tablet on the spot where Montgomery fell in 1775. As the parties interested had made the application to the munici-pality it was assumed that the tablet was to be erected in municipal prop-erty, in which case the Government had no power to interfere. The cliff on which a signboard has been exposed for years bearing the words, "Here Montgomery fell," is Govern-ment property, the Premier said.

PENITENTIARY INSPECTION. In moving a resolution for the ap-pointment of a second inspector of penitentiaries at a salary of $2,600 a penitentiaries at a salary of $2,000 a year, Sir Wilfrid Laurier explained that the necessity for a second inspector arose from the fact that in addition to the five regular penitentiaries in Canada it was found necessary to maintain a penitentiary of long term prison in Dawson City. "We cannot," he said, "at the present bring a convict from Dawson to the British Columbia penitentiary, except through territory that is in the hands of the United States authorities and claimed as American terri there is no doubt whatever he would be released from our authority. As soon as the labors of the Joint High Commission are resumed, which I think will be this year, we are in hopes of getting the treaty extended so as to cover the transfer of prisoners of one country through the terri-tory of another under the proper surveillance." The Premier said the new

Mr. Murray, Liberal, Pontiac, was not going to oppose the indemnity, he said, but hoped it would result in an agitation for reduction of representa-

Mr. Gourlay, Conservative, Cumberland, opposed an increase of $500 as hin insult to members of Parliament. It was an insult to a member to offer him $1,500. He had been among his own people for the past two weeks and found most of them under the impression that the indemnity was $4,000 Hear, hear. "No man," said he, "was fit to be in Parliament who would be indemnified with $1,500 a session. He ought to be turned out. At this the House shouted, laughed, and the resolution was put through two stages in half a minute.

Company's Latest Publication Shows Art in Advertising.

Art in advertising is a feature that the Grand Trunk Rai way Company, does not lose sight of when issuing any of its advertising matter, and it can be safely said that the publications issued are second to none. The best of printing material that goes to make up a handsome tout-ensemble is used and every particular as regards the execution of the works is carefully looked after. This is practically demonstrated in the new pub-lication, issued by the advertising department, relative to the unrivalled service from the West to Portland, Me., in connection with the transatlantic service given by the Dominion line of steamships to Europe. The brochure is entitled, "Across the Atlantic via Portland, Me.," it is printed in five colors on enamelled coated pa-per and gives an exhaustive and accurate description of the trip from Chicago and other Western points points over the Grand Trunk to its eastern points over terminus at Portland. The cover is a very fine piece of half-tone engraving depicting a scene in the harbor of Portland, reproduced from a view taken from the shore of South Portland and showing one of the Dominion line steamers leaving port. The large elevators belonging to the Grand Trunk show up prominently in the design, and with Mount joy hill looming up on the left, a rea-listic picture is presented. The illustrations are printed in the luxotype process, a unique style of printing introduced by the Grand Trunk, and which has been found most affective in enhancing the lights and shadows of the half-tones.
