Mouth of the Yalu River.

THE MIKADO RULES THE SEA

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The correspondent of the Central News at Tien-Tsin tele-graphs further details of the naval battle off the mouth of the Yalu river as follows: graphs further details of the naval battle off the mouth of the Yalu river as follows:

The work of transferring troops and stores from the Chinese transports to the shore was proceeding rapidly when the Japanese fleet was sighted. Admiral Ting signalled to his fleet to weigh anchor and form in line of battle. In obedience to this order the fleet was formed in a single line with the exception of the cruiser Kwapg-Kai and Kwang-Ting and four torpedo boats, which were formed in a second line at the mouth of the river. The Japanese fleet advanced at full speed while the Chinese columns were forming in line until they came within range, when the warships formed in line of battle, nine of them in the first column and three gunboats and five torpedo boats in the second column. The firing at the outset of the engagement was of an indifferent order, but the Japanese were creeping gradually closer to the Chinese ships and their gunners were improving their aim by practice.

The Chinese barbette ship Ting-Yuen was the first to suffer any severe injury, a Japanese shell bursting in her battery. A ceaseless cannonade was kept up on both sides for an hour and a half, when the Japanese ship Salkio was rendered help-less, and, according to the assertion of a Chinese, sank soon afterwards. Two of the big gans of the battle ship Chen-Yuen were disabled, but she continued to use her smaller guns. The vessels of both fleets worked very easily under steam and the Japanese were constantly manouvring, but the Chinese held their original position the chinese held their original position.

fleets worked very sasily under steam and the Japanese were constantly manouvring, but the Chinese held their original position. Suddenly two Japanese cruisers, believed to have been the Akitsushima and Yoshino, endeavored to break the Chinese line. They were followed by three torpedo boats. As the Japanese ships advanced at full speed the Chinese ships Ching-Yuen and Chao-Yung backed full speed satern to avoid a disaster. The Japanese torpedo boats fired, but their projectiles were stopped by nets. The guns of the other Chinese ships were quickly trained on the Japanese cruisers and they retired after a short time, also help-projectiles were stopped by nets. The guns of the other Chinese ships were quickly trained on the Japanese cruisers and they retired after a short time, also helpless. The Chinese say they were sunk. The Ching-Yuen was several times pierced by shells. The Cho-Yung ran ashore while retreating and became a target for the Japanese guns until she was fact on fire. The Ching-Yuen was in a terrible plight. A shell burst through her decks and she slowly foundered, while flames burst from all parts of her. The Tsi-Yuen withdrew from the first into the second column. The Chinese torpedo boats vainly attempted to put the Japanese on the defensive, but the Japanese on the defensive, but the Japanese remained the aggressors throughout, although two or three attempts were made to break the Chinese line but were repulsed. The cruiser Yang-Wei went ashore stern foremost and met a fate similar to that of the Chao-Yung. After the first three hours of the engagement the firing was intermittent.

first three hours of the engagement the firing was intermittent.

The captain of the cruiser Ching-Yuen fought bravely when his ship was little better than a wallowing wreek, until the cruiser was sunk by a torpedo and her crew engulfed. The scenes at this point are described as appalling. Many guns on both sides were disabled, the battered ships rolled heavily and their steam pumps were kept constantly at work to keep them afloat. During the last hour of the battle some of the Chinese ships ran out of ammunition and some of the Japanese ships threatened to founder. At dusk the Japanese ships moved slowly southward in double line. vard in double line

FATAL RAILWAY WRECK

Fraserville, Ont.

THE TRAIN STRUCK A COW.

Up in a Confused Mass, Beside the Track—The Engineer, Fire-man and Brakeman Were the Victima.

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 24.—On Saturday a special freight train, in charge of Conductor Fred. Russell, ran over a cow when coming near Fraserville. The engine was thrown over on its side, burying beneath it Robert Johnston, the engineer, Nisholas Maloney, the fireman, and George Greensbury, a brakeman. There were 18 cars on the train and every one of them was thrown from the track and piled up in a heap. Some of the cars went over into an adjoining field.

The ill fated special was composed of thirteen cars and a van in charge of Conductor Russell and left for Lindsay at 2.10 Saturday morning. The accident occurred at a crossing about a mile and a half south of Fraserville and was caused by a cow lying on the track. As soon as they struck the animal the engine turned sideways on the track and the 18 cars piled up in a confused mass on top of her. Engineer Johnston, Fireman Maloney and Brakeman Greensbury were found lying together half underneath the boiler. All three were terribly scalded.

It was nearly noon before the unfortun ate men were gotten out of the wreck. Maloney was still alive when taken out, but died a few moments after. He spoke a few words, and said "Good bye" to Conductor Rus ell before expiring.

Johnston formerly lived in Port Hope, but has resided for some years here, and was elected deputy reeve of the town last municipal election. He was a member of Durham Lodge I O. O. F., and leaves a wife and two children. Maloney is a sou of Mr. John Maloney, Port Hope, and was born and brought up there, but his headquarters were at Lindsay. A father, mother, sister and brother (who live in the United States) mourn his loss. His body arrived on the moon train. Both were well known and esteemed among their friends and the embloves of the road train.

mother, sister and brother (who have in the United States) mourn his loss. His body arrived on the noon train. Both were well known and esteemed among their friends and the employes of the road as right good fellows. Greensbury lived in this town.

Flage are flying at half mast over Lindsay and the town is mourning the loss of three good citizens. Engineer Robert Johnston has been a member of our town council for two years, and last year was elected deputy reeve by acclamation. He was a man of fine presence, a good speaker and possessed of a great deal of magnetism. His name has more than once been men tioned as mayor for 1895. A little more than two years ago Mr. Johnston was terribly scalded in a railway accident and was not able to work for some months. In religion Mr. Johnston was a Methodist and in politics a Conservative.

Fireman Maloney will be buried in Port Hope, Brakeman Greensbury in Stouffville and Engineman Johnston in Keene.

Nearly a Fatal Accident.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—What was nearly a horrible accident occurred on Saturday when a motor and trailer jumped the track on the Gerrard street bridge, and nearly went over. The motor, No. 378, in charge of Motorman Davis, with trailer 172 attached, was going east at a fast rate down grade. When they got about 30 feet on the bridge they jumped the track and struck the slight iron railing at the side. Only the weight of the trailer kept the motor car from going clean over. As it was it hung ten feet over the side. There were only three passengers in the motor ear, and they, with Motorman Davis and L. Duncan, another street railway man, who was beside him, escaped undurt. The distance from the level of the bridge to the ground below is 40 feet.

ATERRIBLE SECRET.

lady!"
She is like a creature distraught. There is blood on her right hand; she sees it, and with a gasping cry at the grisly sight, and before they know what she is about, she falls down in a faint in their midst.

They lift her up; they look into one another's pale faces.
"My lady!" they repeat, in an awe-struck whisper. "Murdered!"
"Hore!" onice Ma. H.

"My lady" they repeat, in an awe-struck whisper. "Murdered!" "Here!" cries Mr. Hooper, his dignity coming to his aid, "let us investigate this here. Lay this young woman flat on her back on the floor, sprinkle her with water, and let her come to. I'm going to find out what she means."

They lay poor Ellen stiffly out as directed, some one dashes water into her face, then in a body, with Mr. Hooper at their head, they march off to investigate.

"She was in the day-nursery," Nurse Pool suggests, in a whisper, and to the day-nursery they go.

wingers, in a winder, and to the day of the threshold for a second or two they batt, their courage failing. But there is nothing very terrifying. Only the solemn moonlight, only the motionless little figure in the arm-chair. And yet a great awe the arm-chair. And yet a great awe ds them back. Does death—does murder stand grisly in their midst?

"Let us go in, in the name of Providence," says Mr. Hooper, a tremble in his voice; "it—it can't be what she says. O good Lord, no!"

"it—it can't be what she says. O good Lord, no?"

They go forward on tiptoe, as if afraid of awakening that quiet sleeper whom only the last trump will ever awake now. They bend above her, holding their breath. Yes, there it is—the blood that is soaking her dress, dripping horribly on the carpet—oozing slowly from that cruel wound.

A gasping, inarticulate sort of groan comes heavily from every lip. Old Hooper takes her wrist between his shaking fingers. Stilled forever, already with the awful chill of death. In the crystal light of the room the sweet young face has never looked fairer, calmer, more peaceful than now.

The old butler straightens himself up, ashen gray.

ashen gray.

"It's too true," he says, with a sort of sob. "O Lord, have mercy on us—it's too true! She's dead! She's murdered!"

He drops the wrist he holds, the little jewelled, dead hand falls limp and heavy. He puts his own hands over his face and soby sloud!

s aloud:
'Who will tell Sir Victor? O my mas-"Who will tell Sir Victor? O my master!" yo dear young master!"
No one speaks—a spell of great horror has fallen upon them. Murdered in their midst, in their peaceful household—they cannot comprehend it. At last—
"Where is Miss Catheron?" asksa sombre voice.

No one knows who speaks; no one seems o care; no one dare reply.
"Where is Inez Catheron!" the voice says again.

Something in the tone, something in the ghastly silence that follows, seems to arouse the butler. Since his tenth year he has been in the service of the Catherons—his father before him was butler in this house, Their honor is his. He starts angrily round now.

"Who was that?" he demands. "Of course Miss Inez knows nothing of this."

No one had accused her, but he is unconsciously defending her already.

"She must be told at once," he says, "I'll go and tell her myself. Edwards, draw the curtains, will you, and light the candles?"

vice; "and please, miss, am I to tell Sir Victor?"

She hesitates for a moment—her face changes, her voice shakes a little for the first time.

"Yea," she answers, faintly, "tell him."
Edwards leaves the room. She turns to another of the men servants.

"You will ride to Chesholm and fetch Dr. Dane. On your way stop at the police station and apprise them. The rest of you go. Jane Pool where in the baby?"

"Op stairs in the night nursery," Jane Pool answers sullenly.
"And crying, too—I hear him. Hannah," to the under nurse, "go up and remain with him. I am going to my own room. When," she pauses a second and speaks with an effort, "when Sir Victor comes, you will receive your further orders from him. I can do nothing more."

"No," she said, between her set lips; "you have done enough."

There has been no direct accusation. but

"Oh, Jane, hush!" Ellen whispers in terror.

There has been no direct accusation, but they understand each other perfectly.

"When the time comes to speak, you'll see whether I'll hush," retorts Jane.

"What was she doing in this room fifteen minutes before you found my lady dead? Why wouldn't she let me in? why did she lie? what made her say my lady was still asleep? Asleep! Oh, poor soul, to think of her being murdered here, while we were all enjoying ourselves below. And if I hadn't took away the baby it's my opinion it would have been..."

"Oh, Jane," as much as you please, it's gospel truth. Them that killed the mother hated the child. When the time comes I'll speak, if she was twice the lady she is, Ellen!"

"Lor!" Ellen cried with a nervous jump, "don't speak so jerky Mrs. Pool. You make my blood a mask of ice. "What is

"don't speak so jerky Mrs. Pool. You make my blood a mask of ice. "What is it?"
"Ellen," Jane Pool said solemnly,
"where is the dagger?"
"What dagger?"
"What dagger?"
"The furrin dagger with the gold handle and the big ruby set in it, that my lady used as a paper knife. I'll take my oath I saw it lying on the table there, shining in the moonlight, when I took away baby. Where is it now?"
The dagger the nurse spoke of, was a curious Eastern knife, that had belonged to Sir Victor's mother. It had a long, keen steel blade, as sim handle of wrought gold set with a large ruby. Sir Victor's wife had taken a fancy to the pretty Syrian toy, and converted it into a paper knife.
"I saw it on that there table when I took away baby," Jane said compressing her lips; "it would do it. Where is it now?"
"Gone," Ellen answered. "Oh, Jane do you think—"
"She has been stabbed, you see. right through the heart, and there isn't much blood. That deviliah little glittering knife has done the deed. There it was ready for its work, as if Satan himself had left it handy. Oh, poor lady—poor lady! to think that the toy she used to play with, should one day take her life!

While they whispered in the death room, up in her ohamber, while the hours of the dreary night wore on, Inez Catheron sat, crouched in a heap, as Hooper had found her, her face hidden in her hands. Two hours had passed, an awful silence filled the whole house, while she sat there and never stirred. As eleven struck from the turret clock, the thunder of horses' hoofs on the avenue below, came to her dulled ears. A great shudder shook her from head to fote—she lifted her haggard face. The lull before the storm was over—Sir Victor Catheron had come.

"He is too true, my lady—the Lord have merey upon us all. It seems too horrible for beitis, but it is true. As he he yas defect to be the but it is true. As he he yas defect to be the but it is true. As he he yas defect to be the but it is true. As he he yas defect to be the but it is true. As he he yas defect to be the profit human form stabbed her through the heart, my lady—Dr. Dene may one blood thit, and that dath must have been instantaneous. So young as a week, and so lovely. Oh, hey would not be here "I feel as though I were guilty in some way myself, the housekeeper want on." If you would not be here "I feel as though I were guilty in some way myself, the housekeeper want on." If you would not be here "I feel as though I were guilty in some way myself, the housekeeper want on." If you want the window, or anything! I know the monater whoever he was, got in through the window, or anything! I know the monater wiped her eyes suddenly, and "I want will he looks he gives, and the hints she drong are almost worse than the murder itself. You can see as—clear as day that she as a ports—Miss Inex." And the looks here yet any the laboration of the true window, or anything: I don't say it—I don't think it—Heaven forbid !—it's only that wicked, spiteful nurse, Pool. She heave a way like beaten ourself, and the point of the poin

"Sir Victor is in there—with her said faltered.
"Yes, my lady—like a man all struck stupid. It frightens me to see him. If he would only speak, or cry, or fly out against the murderer—but he just sits there as if turning to stone."

His aunt covered her face for an instant with both hands, heart-sick with all these horrors; then she looked up, and moved forward.

orward.
"Where is she?" she asked—"in which room?"

"In the white drawing room, my lady;
the doctors brought her there. Sir Victor is with her, alone."

Lady Helen slowly advanced. At the door she paused a moment to nerve herself for what she must see; then she turned the riveted upon that ineffably calm face with a vacant, sighless sort of stare that chilled her blood.

"Victor "! she cried out, in a frightened voice; "Victor speak to me. For pity's sake den't look like that?"

The dull, blinded eyes looked up at her, full of infinite, unutterable despair.

"She is dead," he said, in a slow, dragging sort of voice—"dead! And last night I left her well and happy—left her to be murdered—to—be—murdered."

The slow words fell heavily from his lips—his eyes went back to her face, his dulled mind seemed lapsing into its stupefied rival had not softened her heart.

"He will survive it," she answered, in the same half-contemptuous tone. "Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love."

"Inez," said her aunt, suddenly coming a step nearer, "a rumor has reached me—is it true?—that Juan is back—that he has been here?"

"It is quite true," her niece answered, without turning round; he has been here. He was here on the night Lady Catheron first came."

He was here on the night Lady Catheron first came."

"There is another rumor afloat, that there was a violent quarrel on that occasion—that he claimed to be an old lover of Ethel's, poor child, and that Victor turned him out. Since then it is said he has been seen more than once prowling about the grounds. For everybody's sake I' hope it is not true."

Inex faced round suddenly—almost fiercely.

Inez faced round suddenly—almost fiercely.

"And what if I say it is true, in every respect? He did come—there was a quarrel, and Victor ordered him out. Since then he has been here—prowling, as you call it—trying to see me, trying to force me to give him money. I was flinty as usual, and would give him none. Where is the crime in all that?"

"Has he gone?" was Lady Helena's response.

for what she must see; then she turned the handle and went in.

It was one of the stateliest rooms in the house—all white and gold, and dimly lit now by wax tapers. Lying on one of the white velvet sofas she saw a rigid figure, over which a white covering was drawn; but the golden hair and the fair, marble face gleaming in the waxlights as beautiful as ever in life.

He sat beside his dead—almost as motionless, almost as vold, almost as white. He had loved her with a love that was akin to idolatrous—he had grudged that the eye of man should rest on his treasure—and now has at beside her—dead.

If he heard the door open, he neither moved nor stirred. He never once looked ap as his aunt came forward; his eyes were riveted upon that ineffably calm face with a source. So, in the chill gray of the fast-coming turn at the earliest possible moment tomorrow.

So, in the chill gray of the fast-coming morning, Lady Helens, very heavy-hearted, returned to Powyss Place and her sick husband's bedside.

Meantime matters were really beginning to look dark for Miss Catheron. The superintendent of the district, Mr. Ferrick, was filling his note-book with very ominous information. She had loved Sir Victor—she had hated Sir Victor's wife—they had led a cat-and-dog life from the first—an hour before the murder they had had a violent quarrel—Lady Catheron had threatened to make her husband turn her out of the house on the morrow. At eight o'clock, Jane

From the St. Louis, Mo., Chroniele.

As September 26, the date set for the $5,000 battle between Dan Creedon and Bob Fitzsimmons, grows nearer its uncertainty grows greater and the interest of the sporting world increases. While Fitzsimmons will no doubt be a hot favorite in the betting, yet the truth of the matter is, that but very few have got a true line on Creedon, While the wise men of the ring who have come in touch with him, are saying but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' following but little out loud. D. Hopkins, by a Chronicle reporter, and among other things unbosomed himself regarding the "muscular rheumatism" story:

"In December last" (he laughed when the subject was broached) "I was giving sparring exhibitions with a variety and athletic company. We played a week's engagement in Boston. During Christmas week it was bitterly cold, the theatre in which we played was miserably heated behind the curtain. The dressing rooms were so cold that you could actually see your breath. My contract with the manager stipulated that I was to box two bouts of three rounds each, one of which was to be "try-out" with any local fighter possessed of an ambition to make me "bite the dust."

Though my task was not a severe one from a scientific point of view, the work was hard and monotonous and the perspiration streamed from my pores as I scampered from the stage into my cold, damp-dressing room. I resisted the shock of these sudden changes until the night before we closed our engagement, when, as I was dressing preparatory to leaving the theatre, a sickening chill pen trated my back, my legs ached and I suddenly became sick at my stomach. I drank two hot whiskeys in a neighboring saloon, hurried to my hotel, and huddled up in bed.

"On the following morning on awakening, my right ankle was stiff and sore, and the muscles of my arm were swollen and pained excruciatingly." "I rapidly grew worse. My physician ordered hot water bags for my

"I discharged my physician in despair and tried enough so-called rheumatic cures to stock a fair-sized drug store. By the advice of Col. John D. Hopkins, my manager, I purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Col. Hopkins had read so much in the papers of the marvelous cures made by Pink Pills, and being a victim of periodicals attacks of rheumatism, gave them a trial.

ing but little out loud, it is a well-known fact that Fitzsimmons' followers are finding in a quiet way all the Creedon money they want.

Personally Fitzsimmons has always believed that Creedon was easy game. But then, Creedon has improved almost beyond belief since he came to this country. The instruction he received while helping to train Corbett for the Mitchell fight did him no end of good, while his method of living and manner of taking care of himself has greatly improved his condition.

Some time ago it was reported that Creedon was a victim of muscular rheumatism and that his days as a fighter had passed. This has no doubt taken many of the sporting fraternity over to the other side.

San Franciso, Sept. 22.—The big British ship Sengal is at the bottom of the Pacific somewhere in lat. 30.17 n., long. 119.08, for it was about that locality that C. Olsen, a sailor on the schooner Mary Russ, saw her red light go out one stormy night at sea.

The Senegal was bound for San Diego to Taccoma with loose sand for ballast. She was a large iron ship of the latest design and was considered one of the best in the English marine service. The captain was accompanied by his young daughter and the crew consisted of 27 men. It was early in March when the vessel sailed and the orly tidings was when Captain Thompson, of the schooner Mary C. Russ, wrote from San Diego, a fewweeks ago, saying that he was in company with her on the night of March 18.

Olsen was on the deck of the schooner during the whole of that night at sea and he says that the storm that tossed the little ship about was the worst that he had. experienced in the score of years that he had spent on the ocean. The Senegal, he says, was sighted just as darkness was closing in, beating up against a freshening north-cast gale. By midnight the gale was at its height.

in, beating up against a freshening north-cast gale. By midnight the gale was at its height.

Olsen said he soon began to watch for the gleam of the Senegal's light. It seemed to him, in his dread of a death at sea, like a ray of hope. Sometimes she missed the light when his vessel rode the crest of a wave; but the Senegal was then down in the trough of the seas, and the next mo-ment it would appear. The dauger in-creased, and every man hung on for dear life.

Just before daylight the red light of the big ship appeared for the last time. The Senegal rose on the crest of a wave, as a squall more severe than its predecessors came down upon them. The red light gle med, then went out for an instant. It appeared for a moment, then was lost altogether. In vain the crew of the schooner watched for it. It had gone out forever and with it went the lives of all her crew. When day broke about an hour afterwards the big ship was nowhere in it. It.

nayor of the city. In 1863 Mr. Rochester appeared as candilate for the Commous in Carleton but was unsuccessful and did not seek the suffrages of the electors until 1872, when he was elected. He continued to represent Carle ations for the union of counties, after which it was resolved that this inspectorate adopt the Uniform Promotion Examinations, and that the treasurer of this inspectorate be notified to pay the proportionate expenses for the same.

After discussion as to the Teachers Library, the following resolution was passed: That fifty dollars of Institute funds be appropriated for purchasing additional library books, and that Mr.

Graham, M. A., Mr. Linksher and all spector Johnston act as a committee for selecting said books. It was further resolved that the subscription of fifty cents on the part of each teacher of the Inspectorate be sufficiently supplemented by the Treasurer that cach teacher may obtain the Educational Journal for one year.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mr. Dunn: Sec.-Treasurer, Mr. Cook; managing committee, Misses Jones, Knowlton, and Mesars. McNally, Wilson, Rhodes; Librarian, Mr. Linklater. It was decided that the next meeting would be held in Gananoque.

Mr. Houston then took up some additional points in composition and showed that essays should be written twice, and in a book for that purpose. He afterwards dealt with grammar. He said that grammar is a science, but not an art. He also claimed, and with group reason that it is the science of founteen vears in penitentiary.
