MAJOR GEN. HUGHES INSPECTS 132nd BATT.

Companies "B" and "C" and Wireless Company in March Past—Splendid Lot of Men, Says General

The visit of Major General Sir Sam Hughes, and his staff, to Newcastle on Monday, on his tour of inspection of the Maritime Province troops, attracted quite a stir about the C. G. R. depot, many citizens and ladies of the town turning out to welcome Canada's war Chief.

The special train conveying Gen. Hughes arrived about 12.15. "B" Co. of Chatham, Capt. Holmes, and "C" Co. of Newcastle, Capt. Barry, were lined up on the road, and on the arrival of the train they were joined by the men of the Wireless Garrison, headed by their own band, and in command of Lieut. McNaughton, in the absence of Major Cameron.

Gen. Hughes was met on the platform by Lt. Col. Mersereau and staff and escorted to where the men were lined up. To the strains of the "Maple Leaf," by the 132nd band, the General and staff passed down the front line, reviewing the men, the General having a friendly chat here and there, and then up the second line. The scrutinizing eye of the General missed nothing. In apologizing to General Hughes for the muddy appearance of the clothes and boots of the Chatham company, who he explained, had marched up the dusty road, Col. Mersereau received the curt but kindly reply that the clothes did not make the man—if the eye was right, the heart was in its right place, and he was further overheard to remark to the battalion's colonel, that he had a splendid bunch of men.

Passing through B Company, his attention was attracted by a man in uniform whose hair was almost silvery grey, but who stood erect and withstood the steady gaze of the man of iron who stood before him, answering each question with marked precision. The grey-haired veteran was none other than Harry Brobeck, of Chatham.

Headed by the Bugle Band, and the band of the battalion, the Wireless Band and men of the Garrison following in the rear, the men were marched to the Wireless grounds where they were put through the general march-past. The first formation was in column of route order, the second in quarter column and the third facing left advance in column. As the men passed by their every movement was noted by the eagle eye of Gen. Hughes, and here and there his face would cloud, or brighten up with an expression of supreme satisfaction. The writer, occupying a front line trench, is pleased to state, however, that the latter expression was mostly seen upon his face, which is good evidence of Gen. Hughes' entire satisfaction with the men of Col. Mersereau's battalion.

One very noticeable incident that brought a gleam of satisfaction to Gen. Hughes was the coming to "eyes right" of the men of "C" Company and the Wireless Garrison, the officers saluting and the men responding to the order given by the officers commanding the platoons. This military mark of honor was so quickly noticed and admired by Gen. Hughes that in returning their salute he complimented them with the remark, "Well done, men, very well done, indeed." Lieut. Jardine, commanding platoon No. 9, Lieut. Lawlor platoon No. 10, and Lieut. Benn, platoon No. 11, had beforehand been instructed in this particular movement, and in the march past when the proper moment came, the order "eyes right" was given and obeyed with a military precision that brought honor to them and to their efficient officer, Capt. Barry.

After the march past, Major Gen. Hughes made a few short remarks, addressing them to Lt. Col. Mersereau, officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 132nd battalion. He said he had reviewed the companies at Campbellton, Bathurst, and other points along the line, and congratulated Col. Mersereau on having such a fine body of strong, healthy men, men who had been eyes and their hearts in the right place. He also congratulated the North Shore on being able to raise this battalion, as facilities here were not the best. The officers and men were soldiers and gentlemen, and he would see them all in a few days at Valcartier. He wished them all to bear in mind that it was the pride and honor of a soldier that carried him through. Gen. Hughes cautioned the men in using the rifle in their defence against the enemy. With the rifle, he said, one man could shoot down twenty men. The rifle was their best weapon while the enemy was advancing in a charge, but at close range they should then give their bayonet into use. He also cautioned them against advancing on a charging party, but to pick them off until at close range; and then to bring into play the cold steel of the bayonet. With a few closing remarks, he then called upon Col. Mersereau to bring his officers to the front that he might personally meet and shake hands with them. The following officers came forward and were introduced by Col. Mersereau who had a complimentary remark to offer for each one. The first in line was Major Fred Mersereau, second in command, and a son of Col. Mersereau; then came Major Jones, Major Sterling, Capt. Barry, Capt. Holmes, Lieut. Schryer, Jardine and Lawlor, Capt. Davies, adjutant, Quartermaster Duncan, Lieut. McKnight, Benn, Mersereau, Allan, Capt. Burr, paymaster; Lieut. Love and Maher, all of the 132nd battalion and Lieut. McNaughton and De Laparrelle, of the Wireless Garrison.

After a few complimentary remarks to the officers, Major Gen. Hughes called upon the whole body to give three cheers for King George, which was responded to with hearty

Deserter Gets One Year in Dorchester

Private Andrew Sumakeransa, Russian, of C. Company the Offender

A court martial case for desertion from C Company of the 132nd battalion, came up before Police Magistrate Lawlor here on Saturday morning. The offender being Pte. Andrew Sumakeransa, a Russian. The charge was laid by Capt. H. P. Davies, adjutant of the battalion.

Pte. E. Keelin, also of C Company, was interpreter, and sworn, gave the prisoner's answers as follows: Prisoner was asked if he was a member of the 132nd battalion, to which he replied he was.

Asked if he was absent from his company from May 31st until June 9th, said yes, without leave.

Asked if he had any excuse for being away, said no.

Asked if he knew he was liable to be put in jail for being absent, prisoner said he did not know, and answered further that he intended to come back again.

He was then asked how deserters in the Russian army were treated. He said they were made prisoners. This concluded the evidence.

Capt. Davies then addressed the court, saying that prisoner had deserted before and had been let off. He had at one time been a soldier in the Russian army and knew what the offence meant. Just at this time it was necessary to keep all the men they could get, and extremely hard to keep them to their duty. He would therefore ask the court to give the prisoner the extreme penalty of one year in the penitentiary. The prisoner was ordered to serve one year in Dorchester penitentiary.

Boston Comedy Co. Delights Audience

The Ever-Popular Price Webber and Company Comes Back Better than Ever

After an absence of four years, the most widely known and popular comedian of the days gone by, and the present, Price Webber, with his Boston Comedy, comes back, as from the grave, and delights his Newcastle friends both old and new, with one of his most entertaining plays, "The Governor's Wife" in the Opera House on Tuesday night.

His coming was greeted by a crowd of house, only a few seats remaining empty in the front, while a large number stood the play out in the rear.

In fulfillment of the reputation he has always carried with him, his present company is still up to the mark of efficiency, and despite the fact of the age of both he and his ever popular and talented wife, known on the stage as Edwina Grey, they still seem to have not lost any of their old-time vigor, ease or originality, which has always stood them in good stead during the years of their earlier stage life.

These talented people are all the more popular for having been associated with the doings of the Maritime Provinces in the earlier days, and before their advent on the stage. They are very kindly remembered by the remaining few older residents, the others of their acquaintance of the earlier days having crossed the great divide.

In 1875 Mr. Webber came to this province, and when a boy, with the late W. C. Anslow, one of the founders of The Advocate, worked as an apprentice on the St. John Globe. Mr. Webber also served as a printer on the Moncton Times and with the Hon. W. S. Fielding worked on a paper in Nova Scotia. He was also a member of the famous 71st band of Fredericton in the earlier days.

Price Webber and his talented company have again carried away with them the best wishes of the people of Newcastle, and will receive the same royal welcome on the occasion of their next visit.

It will be kindly remembered that last winter, through illness, Mr. Webber was on the brink of the grave, but through a kind Providence his life was spared, and now today, judging by his fine robust condition, we believe he is a better man than ever, and long may he and his talented wife live to enjoy the pleasures of their happy union.

Mr. D. W. Copeland, a member of the company, is the son of Mr. David Copeland, now of Jamaica Plain, Mass., but who will be remembered by some of our citizens as having served on the staff of the Advocate some thirty years ago. Newcastle citizens welcome the son, in remembrance of the father.

Volunteer Married

The marriage of Pte. Peter Thompson of the 132nd battalion and Miss Frances May Green, was solemnized at St. Mary's Chapel-of-Ease on Tuesday evening by Ven. Archdeacon Forsyth. They were attended by Miss Lillian Green and Pte. McKay Dickson of the 132nd battalion.—Commercial.

Matthews-Ward

Rev. Walter McN. Matthews, the popular pastor of St. Luke's Presbyterian church, Bathurst, and son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Matthews of Chatham, was married at Wakefield, Mass., on Monday last, June 5th, to Miss Alena A. Ward, a former Miss Cou, N. B. girl, who has been engaged in the nursing profession in the States.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Kenneth Munroe of Boston, a class mate of Mr. Matthews at Pine Hill College.

Jack Woods Seriously Wounded

A telegram received by Mrs. John C. Woods from Ottawa this morning says that her husband, Lance Corporal John Woods, was seriously wounded in the left thigh on June 4th. Further particulars will be received later. Jack's many Chatham and Newcastle friends will regret to hear this, and will hope that his wounds will not prove so serious as at first thought. He left Canada a member of the 6th Mounted Rifles, but after arriving in England, owing to his fine physical make-up, he was transferred to the ranks of the bomb-throwers. These men are picked from the most physically fit and their work is of the most dangerous kind. Over there they are known as the "Suicide Club."

Hughes and Fairbanks The Candidates

Roosevelt Declines Progressive Nomination, and The Republican Split is Healed

Chicago, June 10.—Justice Chas. Evans Hughes of New York was today nominated by the Republican Convention for President and Chas. Warren Fairbanks of Indiana for vice-president. On the third ballot the vote was: Hughes 949; Roosevelt 184; others 14.

At the same moment Theodore Roosevelt was nominated by the Progressive Convention, with John M. Parker of Louisiana for vice-president. In view of the fact that Justice Hughes is considered a safe and sane and not too pro-German a candidate, Roosevelt declines the Progressive nomination, and will support Hughes.

CALLERS AT AGENT GENERAL'S OFFICE, LONDON

During the latter part of May the following were among the callers at the New Brunswick Government offices in London: Capt. J. D. K. McNaughton, Chatham, N. B. Private H. A. McDonald, 8th C. F. A., Newcastle, N. B.; Private J. Lynch, 48th Highlanders, Newcastle.

Levi Richardson, Fredericton's oldest citizen, celebrated his 105th birthday on Tuesday.

BULGARIANS OCCUPY GREEK TOWNS

On the 26th May, the Bulgarian troops occupied the Greek forts of Roupel, Gragouin and Spatovo, and were advancing from Demir-Hissar towards Kavalla. Athens newspapers say that the deputation of German and Bulgarian officers, in demanding the surrender of Fort Roupel, explained that its occupation was necessary to secure the Bulgarian left wing against an eventual Entente Allied attack.

COM'R RICHARDS CAPTURES AUDIENCE

Rescue Work of The Salvation Army Graphically Described and The Great Value of The Army Shown

Commissioner Richards, officer commanding the Salvation Army in Canada, visited Newcastle, Friday night, in company with his private secretary and Major Barr of St. John's. A meeting was held in St. James' Hall, Mayor Fish presiding, and Rev. S. J. MacArthur also on the platform.

There was but a small audience, but these were all delighted with the Commissioner's address.

The Commissioner, who joined the Christian mission, since known as the Salvation Army, in 1878, at a time when it meant mobbing and bloodshed for one to identify himself with that organization, and who has commanded the Army in Denmark, South Africa and New Zealand, and the last two years in Canada, held his audience at the closest attention.

Very interesting was his description of the Army's work reclaiming inebriates in Britain. A government officer had reported that 52% of those treated by the Army were permanently cured. Army workers waited in Police Courts, and at prison gates to take charge of unfortunates. In Australia, the whole charge of incorrigibles is given to the Army by the Government.

Dr. C.W. Squires Comes to Newcastle

Will be Pastor of Methodist Church.—Dr. Harrison goes to Marysville

The annual Methodist conference of N. B. and P. E. I. opened at Summerside, on Thursday, June 8th, a ministerial session having been previously held.

Rev. Thos. Hicks was elected president.

Rev. Dr. Squires was elected secretary vice Rev. D. R. Chown, whose resignation after five years faithful service was reluctantly accepted.

The afternoon session was opened at 1.30. The president conducted the devotional exercises. The Rev. Ernest Styles was appointed Journal Secretary and Revs. H. A. Brown and J. B. Gough were appointed assistant secretaries. Conference adjourned at 2.30 to attend civic celebration of the departure of a portion of 105th regiment from Summerside. The conference proceeded in a body to the grounds where the farewell meeting was held.

The feature of Friday's session was the address of Rev. Dr. Birney, Dean of the Boston school of Theology, on "Some Personal Elements of Redemption," dealing mainly with the great influence of personality.

Upon invitation from Moncton, it was decided to meet there next year on the second Thursday in June.

The Laymen's Association elected the following officers today: President, A. C. M. Lawson, Fredericton; vice president, J. M. Lamont, Fredericton; secretary-treasurer, R. D. Smith, St. John; additional members of the executive, C. A. Hampson, Fredericton; Dr. J. M. Palmer, Sackville; William Kingston, St. John; H. T. Pickering, Grandville; I. J. Gamble, Apshequik.

Statistics of the conference show a total membership of 14,824, an increase of 71 over 1915, number of Sunday schools, 212, an increase of 2; total Sunday school force, 16,895, a decrease of 367. Over 120 members and adherents have enlisted.

The funds raised for all purposes from the various districts were: St. John, $53,874; Fredericton, $19,822; Woodstock, $13,992; Chatham, $15,994; Sackville, $54,276; St. Stephen, $8,604; Charlottetown, $26,903; Summerside, $18,623; a total of $211,898, an increase of $14,301.

The station sheet of Chatham District is as follows: Newcastle—Rev. Dr. C. W. Squires; Chatham—Rev. J. J. Pinkerton; Tabusintac—Probationer A. C. Motzer.

Derby—Rev. E. Rowlands; Campbellton—Rev. Geo. M. Young; Bathurst—Rev. F. A. Wightman; Harcourt—Rev. C. F. Stebbings; Richibucto—Rev. A. E. Chasman; Buctouche—Rev. Wm. Lawson.

ment, and after 15 years work there the reports give 72% of the incorrigibles as turned out good citizens, and at a much less cost than the prisons would demoralize and ruin the same people.

In London, S. A. workers gather in hundreds of human derelicts about 1 or 2 a.m., give them a hot breakfast, then let them sleep undisturbed till 9, then hold a meeting and try to persuade them to enter the industrial home and begin to climb up to good citizenship.

At the end of 50 years work the S. A. had 16835 paid preachers, its program was the pure gospel of the Bible. It had no use for German materialism.

Commissioner Richards is a very forceful and pleasing speaker and easily convinced his audience of his intense enthusiasm and sincerity.

In an eloquent speech praising the Army and its work, Postmaster Jas. M. Troy, moved a vote of thanks to the Commissioner.

This was seconded in another able address by Rev. S. J. MacArthur, and warmly presented by Mayor Fish.

Major Barr thanked the Mayor for the kindly manner in which he had presided.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill.—"While going through the change of life, I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. Sheldon, 6857 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, but with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WILD THINGS OF THE FOREST ROAM IN SAFETY in this land of a thousand lakes

Nature lovers mourn the passing of wild life under the iron heel of industrial progress and the profound concern of these lovers of out-door life would certainly be justified if there were no national reserves within the broad Dominion. Among the most popular of these glorious national heritages of the people is the Algonquin Provincial Park, 1,754,473 acres in extent, situated two thousand feet above the level of the sea, up in the "Highlands of Ontario." This lovely region, set apart by the Ontario Government in 1892, remains today unspoiled, a perfect refuge for the creatures of the forest, and an ideal pleasure-ground for the people.

Hayward, James Stables and H. H. Stuart; (secretary); and Messrs. J. A. Ader and John H. Ashford. Minutes of meetings of April 17th and May 9th were read and confirmed. The latter was a joint meeting with the Women's Institute.

The chairman said that these matters were of the highest importance and it was too bad to have to wait a full year for their inclusion in the school course. Harkins Academy, being endowed to the extent of $1000 a year from the Harkins fund, the very best provision possible should be made by the Board for its pupils. The regular appointment of School Trustees should also be attended to.

Taylor-Richardson
A marriage of interest to the North Shore, as the bride frequently visited friends here, was that on Wednesday, June 7th, of Miss Robena King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Richardson, of Chipman, N. B., and Lieutenant Frank Alexander Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Taylor, of Halifax, N. S., which took place in the Presbyterian church at Chipman, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. E. E. Mowatt. The bride, who was unattended, looked very winsome in a travelling suit of brown taffeta with facings of yellow, and hat to match, and carried yellow and shell pink roses. As she entered the church with her father The Voice that breathed O'er Eden was sung by the choir. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with orange blossoms and potted plants, also with flags in honor of the groom who is of the 63rd Regiment Halifax Rifles, Miss Marion Dunn of Harcourt, cousin of the bride, presided at the organ and rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march, as the bridal party left the church. H. H. Burton and E. St. Clair Alexander acted as ushers. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left by the C. P. R. for St. John 9:30 later will spend some days motoring through the Annapolis Valley on their way to Halifax, where they will reside for the present. Evidence of the bride's popularity was shown by the number of handsome gifts which she received. The out of town guests were Mrs. M. B. Taylor, of Halifax, mother of the groom; Miss Ruth Hurt of Halifax, and Miss Jessie Dunn, of Dalhousie, N. B.

The Union Advocate
THE HOME PAPER OF NORTHUMBERLAND COUNTY

Results have been produced for hundreds of others who have tried our columns, and we can make good for you. There are two vital points in the advertising game. The first is to select the paper YOU KNOW has the largest circulation, and the second is to look after your advertising changing your advt. at least twice a month in a weekly paper. The Union Advocate circulates to all corners of Northumberland County, which no other paper does, and is read by more people each week than any other paper. Is there any reason then why it should not be a better advertising medium than any other paper? If you have any doubts about the above, the subscription lists are open to interested bona-fide advertisers, why not investigate? Is it not worth your while? The Advocate has nothing to hide, and will be only too pleased to prove to advertisers the truth of the above statements. In these war times, particularly, advertisers want the very best possible results to be obtained from their advertising, and unless they use the paper that reaches the most people, they are not getting full value for the money they are spending each year. The of The Advocate each month is steadily increasing. From January 1st, this year, until May 31st, more than 43,000 copies were printed and put in circulation, and this without special editions or extra runs—bona-fide circulation only. Nearly 45,000 circulation in five months! These figures should interest every advertiser and non-advertiser within the radius that The Advocate is covering.

What Results are You Getting?

Are they satisfactory, or do you not think you should be getting more? If you have any doubts, why not investigate, and when convinced, investigate the advertising power of The Union Advocate. This will cost you nothing, and may prove the foundation of a successful business. Country merchants will be wise in taking this matter into consideration. Some have already done so, and have received surprising results.

It goes to show further that only the best grades of stock are used. We are also prepared now to do a very fine class of

THE WAR WITHOUT KITCHENER

When in August 1914, Lord Kitchener in the course of his first speech in the House of Lords after his appointment as Secretary of State for War, he told the country that his term of service was for three years, after which others would take up the work and "see this matter through." It will thus be seen that even then, he had a conception of the British war effort being carried on without his aid. But the time for others to take up Lord Kitchener's work was unfortunately come sooner than any one expected. But in a war of this nature and magnitude no one individual is essential to success. Every agency in the nation is called into service, and there are craft spirits at work which go on despite any personal loss.

But as a contemporary very reasonably points out, the course of this war cannot be seriously affected by the death of any one individual. Any of the great leaders of the various belligerents may die at any time. The fighting or the thinking is all done by mortals. Death is a common enemy, and against Death all are fortified. The present is a war of nations rather than a contest of individuals. It is being fought with the energy of masses and it will end only when the masses are weakened so that one set of nations rises in strength above its enemies. The allies, with their superior economic situation, have a very natural conviction that they will triumph in a contest of this kind. So they will.

Britain will recover in due course from the shock of Kitchener's sudden and tragic fate. The successor of whom he spoke in August 1914 will appear, only sooner than was expected. Germany will not win the war because Kitchener is gone, any more than we would win the war if the Kaiser or Von Hindenburg or any other of the leaders were to go, merely because of the personal loss. Wars are decided by the result when nations crash against nations. No single individual represents the British hope of victory, and the loss of no single individual in a war employing all the nation's energies, military, economic and industrial, can seriously influence the course of events.

THE GERMAN "VICTORY"

The announcement from Germany that the navy's losses in the recent North Sea fight are withheld for military reasons, advertise the absurdity of the German claim of victory. A victory of the kind that Berlin has proclaimed, a triumph in an action with the British fleet engaged, would have meant the appearance of the German High Seas fleet off the coast of England within twenty-four hours. The failure, arising from inability of the Admiralty to make known the extent and nature of the German losses at the time the engagement was announced, naturally caused a certain amount of misgiving, but a satisfactory explanation has since been offered. The enemy losses were inflicted at night, when it was more or less impossible to identify the victims. The seeming confusion of the early details is thus explained.

Never again will the Kaiser and his staff be able to work up a world sensation by false claims following a battle. Just as Germany momentarily gained prestige by the early bombastic announcement, she loses permanently by the final presentation of the facts. It may perhaps be considered that the British naval superiority was invoked rather clumsily, but it was invoked most successfully. With the Reichstag being asked to vote another big war credit and the public appetite created by what it was promised at Verdun, calling for satisfaction, the Kaiser may defend himself against the charge that he is a fool as well as a liar, and yet time may prove that he was both.

ROAD REPAIR AND MAINTENANCE

The time of year has now arrived when the annual operation of "repairing" the roads by the process of dumping the soil and rubbish from the sides into the middle, to make mud when it is wet, and dust when it is dry, will take place. It is about time that those responsible for the upkeep of our highways realized the folly of such a course. The value and durability of a road depends entirely upon the material which is used for surfacing it, and no one but a lunatic will contend that soil and earth will answer this purpose satisfactorily. What is needed is some material, that is hard, tough, and has binding power. Hardness that will resist successfully the abrasive action of traffic which tend to grind to dust the individual fragments of rock which forms the wearing surface of the road. Toughness is necessary to

"The All-Purpose Sugar"

Some Aspects of The World's Greatest War

(By Ernest Drummond)

War like death, brings us all face to face with grim reality. The nations of Europe are interrupting history again, fighting over the old battles on the old battlefields. It is war, time, and to the battlefields hasten the sons of eleven empires. Onward they march through the silent night. The long winding, swaying river of humanity—see them come! Only now and then they stop where the black river to victory, defeat or commanders' voices ring out "Halt! Forward! March!" Still moves on death. What feelings are theirs! Joy mingled with sorrow, thoughts of home and loved ones, of duty and responsibility, as they go to their trenches.

Students have left their books, the farmer his fields, the lover his sweetheart, the husband his wife and home—all classes, high and low, are doing their duty for God and Native Land.

War is now engaged on earth, in the air on the sea, and beneath the waters. Not only do we see the brandishing of swords, hear the tramp of men and horses, the rattle of musketry, the screeching of artillery, the booming of cannon, the explosion of bombs; but war is aided by many and numerous devices never before tested in actual hostilities; as the aeroplanes, the automobile and the submarine.

These devices of war are being tested and greatly improved, but whether or not the art of war has been revolutionized, the world will soon know.

There may be doubt as to who lighted the match that has enraptured Europe in a flame of war, but there can be no question as to what constituted the material of conflagration. It was the grouping of the great powers. They were as a series of powder magazines so connected that when one was exploded, the others blew up. Fire started in the Triple Alliance, set the Dual Alliance ablaze; and the Triple Entente speedily showed that it, too, was highly inflammable.

The verdict of history will agree with the calmest contemporary judgment in holding that, but for these various alliances, these balancings of the nations, these arrangements, treaties, understandings, Europe could not have so suddenly turned into vast shambles.

No Napoleon has forced his neighbors to war. No Bismarck has racked Prussia in order to make Germany. No Agadir incident has set off the match. It is not a war of dynasties or statesman or military leaders. It is not a war of revenge for Archduke Franz Ferdinand. This is a war of peoples not of inter states.

On June 28th a Slav who thought he was a patriot, killed the German Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria. An inquiry was begun in which evidence was produced to show that the assassin's work was part of a plot for the revolt of the Southern Slav provinces of Austria, instigated by Servians, if not by the Servian Government.

On July 23rd however, before the investigation was completed, Austria sent an ultimatum to Serbia, demanding that she use every means in her power to punish the assassin and also to stop all further anti-Austrian propaganda. Austria demanded that she be permitted to have representatives in the work of investigation. Russia joined the little Slav country in asking for delay. Austria refused to grant this. Later Austria informed Serbia that her note was filled with the spirit of dishonesty and charged the Servian government with not seriously determining to put an end to the culpable tolerance it hitherto had extended to intrigues against the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. Russia notified Austria that she could not allow Servian territory to be invaded. The great Slav nation had come to the rescue of its little kinsman. Semi-officially, Germany let it be known that she would not resist fracture under the impact of traffic. Binding power is the ability which the dust of a rock should possess or develop by contact with water, as to bind or cement the larger rock fragments together and prevent their displacement under the action of the traffic. Unless these properties are present in the material intended for repairing the roads, it is very little use looking for any improvement on the surfaces of them.

known that no one must interfere with the Austria-Servian entanglement—an intimation that Germany would back Austria.

To stem the trend towards war, Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, made the definite proposal that mediation between Serbia and Austria be undertaken by a conference of the Ambassadors in London. France and Italy accepted the proposal; Germany and Austria declined.

Later came a crisis when Germany began an advance with troops across French territory, and demanded free passage for her transportation of troops through Belgium. Belgium refused, appealing to England to protect her, and to safeguard the integrity of Belgium. England in accordance with her obligations demanded that Germany respect the neutrality of Belgium. Germany did not heed the warning. Consequently over six million men are under arms, and eleven nations are on the war path.

There exists in Europe a conglomeration of torn treaties, broken vows, trampled obligations, wounded and dying soldiers, weeping loved ones, until we are perplexed and constrained to exclaim with General Sherman, "War is Hell." This war will undoubtedly be the most gigantic struggle in the history of the world—so gigantic that even the Napoleonic wars will seem like dwarfs in comparison. The world will be craped in black.

Like the rain, the penalties of a great war fall alike on the just and unjust; although many are innocent of blame for the present conflict, nevertheless, they have to share in the suffering, that inevitably results from the war, which is not confined to the contesting forces in the field, but extends to the "silent sufferers," the women and children. The widows and orphans suffering amid the tumult and confusion are better entitled

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS EXPRESS TRAINS

A new and vast portion of Canada over 2,000), modern towns with schools, churches, hospitals, electric light, built on lands which only a few years ago were in the heart of an un-known wilderness. Other towns in marking and town sites will be observed. He will cross noble rivers and ride in view of immense inland waters. The opening of such a territory will naturally suggest untold possibilities for the prospector, hunter, trapper and angler—and these possibilities are so varied and extensive as to be beyond human calculation. Already there are competent guides who make it a business to conduct hunting and fishing parties to select camps, while organized canoe trips on the network of rivers, and even on the shores of Hudson Bay, can be arranged. Evidence of the great world war will be seen in the Detention camps at Spirit Lake and Kapuskasing, where foreign aliens are interned. The "National" traveller will pass through the Great Clay Belt for over 400 miles, an area of 16,000,000 acres of level or undulating land destined to be the future home of thousands of settlers. He will cross New Ontario, 33,000 square miles, fully four times the size of Old Ontario, into Manitoba, and reach Winnipeg over a section of great wheat area of that fertile province. And all the time he will be on a railway on which no expense has been spared in making it what modern engineering science demands in an up-to-date railway.

Mention has been made that the railway from Quebec to Winnipeg is a link between the Atlantic and the Pacific. The Government Railways (the Intercolonial) from the Atlantic seaports Halifax, Sydney, St. John, can be arranged. Evidence of the great world war will be seen in the Detention camps at Spirit Lake and Kapuskasing, where foreign aliens are interned. The "National" traveller will pass through the Great Clay Belt for over 400 miles, an area of 16,000,000 acres of level or undulating land destined to be the future home of thousands of settlers. He will cross New Ontario, 33,000 square miles, fully four times the size of Old Ontario, into Manitoba, and reach Winnipeg over a section of great wheat area of that fertile province. And all the time he will be on a railway on which no expense has been spared in making it what modern engineering science demands in an up-to-date railway.

Commencing June 13th, the "Western-National" will leave Quebec at 2:00 p. m. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, arrive Cochrane, Ont., 4:10 p. m. Wednesday, Friday, Sunday, there connecting with the "National" from Toronto, and arrive Winnipeg 4:30 p. m. Thursday, Saturday and Monday. On the Eastern trip the through sleeping car will leave Winnipeg 5:15 p. m. Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, arrive Cochrane 6:55 p. m. Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and the "National-Atlantic" will leave Cochrane 7:15 p. m. Monday, Wednesday, Friday, arriving Quebec 9:10 p. m. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday. This is 49 hours of travel, and the quickest time between the two cities. Observation sleeping cars will be operated, thus giving an opportunity of seeing a new portion of Canada in the marking while travelling in modern railway comfort.

The "National" traveller will note the hardy pioneer has not only blazed the trail, but has commenced settlement, for here and there along this—the most northerly of the eight Trans-continental routes—are already flourishing farming areas. One will see development in the lumber and pulp industry, and the vast possibilities for extension in those directions. He will stop at Lac-Poplar (population over 4,000) and Cochrane (population led to our help and sympathy than any others. They have been deprived by this terrible war of their natural providers, their husbands, sons and brothers having perished in the struggle. War is inexorable. It not only demands the life of its victim on the field, but too often involves the desolation of his home, and the breaking up of his little circle of loved ones, making them outcasts and wanderers.

The present war is the most tremendous conflict, the world has ever witnessed. No calamity to equal it has ever befallen the human race. However this war of suffering has some good effects.

The first beneficial result is the fact that the war has disclosed the weakness of so called Christianity—in the case of the nations. We have called some nations Christian, where in reality they were only in a state of semi-Christian civilization. This will help us not to over estimate and to guard against such deception. Again, looking at the individual, we find that all great calamities, and catastrophes, drive the individual nearer to God, and help him lean wholly on his only refuge—the King of kings.

Another result worthy of note is a wave of reform, that is sweeping like a tornado over Europe. The prohibition and temperance campaign has been the best and greatest success thus far.

Again, one noted reform is a genuine revival of religion. France, which is agnostic in character, a scoffer at religion, is now turning for consolation and guidance in this direction. The churches of France are being crowded. Not since the days of Martin Luther has Germany experienced such a deep sense of religious revival. In Great Britain there is a decided change, and a revival is at hand; Rationalism is on the rubbish pile. Christian bonds and fellowship are and will be marked milestones in the history and outcome of this war. Some have tried to blame Christianity for the dire upheaval of this war, but we must remember, it is the fault, not of CHRISTIANITY but of HUMANITY. Nations now are fighting for their lives—for their existence. Every war (except the Mohammedan war) has been beneficial to the world and it will take the destruction of the Ottoman Empire to give that part of the world religious freedom. This freedom is surely coming.

Every great conflict is attended with bloodshed even the death of Christ on the Cross. At the edge of the sword Holland cut herself free from Spain; at the edge of the sword the "divine rights of kings" were hopelessly and finally beaten down on English soil; at the edge of the sword the better part of the French Revolution got room and chance for life; at the edge of the sword, the American colonies freed themselves from the harsh mother country; at the edge of the sword, slavery was ended in America. Sensation in Chatham

She was a stranger in Chatham on Friday, and she created a mild sensation by parading in coat and gaiters. The coat was short and the gaiters long. There was no evidence of any skirt. She wore a riding hat and carried a swagger stick. She grew weary of the sensation she was creating, declared the town was too small for her, and changed her clothes. She had an escort in the evening. The electric lights went out in the evening. Did the chairman of the light department order them out to save the men from putting their necks out of joint?—World

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fash, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

A sad ending by suicide came to one of our young men, George Burns, son of Peter Burns, last Friday. He came home on Wednesday from St. John, where he had been working for some time. On Friday morning he went upstairs to light the fire to get the dinner. His young wife met him coming down stairs. He said that he had left his watch and some money on the table, and that he would soon be back. Not returning, enquiries were made by telephone to different places, but no one had seen him. On Monday morning about 9 o'clock, Mr. Ronald McDonald, an employee of the Partington Co., was getting some logs in the pond and he noticed what he thought to be a coat floating on the water. Getting a canoe he went to it and found it to be the remains of the unfortunate young man. He got assistance from the men on the pond, and they found he had taken off his collar and tie and put them in his pocket, also his hat. His throat was severed from ear to ear. The remains were tenderly conveyed to his home from where interment was made to St. Raphael's cemetery. The bereaved wife and family have the sympathy of the entire community in this sad case.

Some Aspects of The Present War

ca, and the eckered man obtained his rights.

This mind staggering wreck and conflict, which increases from day to day will not cease until some great revolutionized system for the advancement of civilization has bloomed forth, which will be beneficial to mankind in his world.

History demonstrates that no world progress ever has achieved permanency that did not receive its initiative and potentiality from the clash of nations.

War is a national and necessary factor, under present earth conditions, of progress among the races of mankind. War is not a symptom of decadence, or of barbarism; it is a "travelling in birth" of a new life, a higher life; it is a part of a crisis of world evolution ushering in a better world for posterity.

War breaks up the static and stagnant conditions of a dying past to create from the debris new dynamic conditions for the reconstruction and upbuilding of a new age. Not until this new age is reached is the evolution of time will the period come when the prophecy shall be fulfilled that, "War shall be no more."

It is not by harmful legislation, statemanship, or wisdom, nor by any popular peace propaganda, that the world shall cease warfare. The Hague tribunal and other present movements peaceward are symptoms of the fulfilment of the prophecy, they are not factors.

When shall this war cease? God only knows. The King with His same majestic powers—as in the days of old—will look on the torn hills, bloody waters, and crimson battlefields, when it is time for a righteous peace and settlement, and will proclaim from Heaven, "Peace! Be Still!"

[The writer of the above is a son of Mr. Hugh Drummond, of Chaplin Island Road, and left his studies at the college in North Scituate, R. I., where he was preparing for the Methodist Ministry, to join the "Princess Patricia's," in October, 1915. He has ever since been doing his bit in the cause of the Empire.—Editor Advocate.]

"Madame Butterfly" Shows Mary Pickford At Best

is Star of Famous Players Magnificent Adaptation of John Luther Long's Celebrated Classic.

A new and hitherto unsuspected Mary Pickford is revealed in the Cho-ho-San which she so admirably plays in the Famous Players Film Company's magnificent photoplay version of John Luther Long's classic, "Madame Butterfly," which is the Paramount Picture at the Happy Hour tonight. The great mass of admirers of Mary Pickford who have followed her throughout her motion picture career have been accustomed to see their favorite as a little blonde curly-haired beauty will be astounded to find her a thorough Oriental. It is not a matter of make-up alone, but of real bistrionic ability. From the d-lightful little occidental girl who has flirted, smiled and wept her way through many adventures and romances they found that Miss Pickford had become an entrancing, powerfully emotional Japanese girl whose portrayal of the sufferings, grief and anguish of the deserted wife, though enacted with the utmost dignity and force, is at the same time far above anything that she has ever attempted in sympathetic treatment.

THIRD INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace is stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Inspector Quest, who is a master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartment and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests her murderer, Macdougall. Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped by the death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work of the diamond case, escapes. Quest's assistants, the detective is called in to investigate the theft of the skeleton of an ape, Lord Ashleigh. Macdougall escapes on his way to prison. A string of diamonds is mysteriously stolen from Mrs. Rheinholdt during a reception.

They found their way to the study, which seemed to be the only habitable room. Lenora glanced around at its strange contents with an expression almost of awe.

A small motor car passed the window, driven by Craig. The professor descended. A moment or two later he entered the room. He gazed from Quest to Lenora at first in blank surprise. Then he held out his hands.

"You have good news for me, my friends!" he exclaimed. "I am sure of it. How unfortunate that I was not at home to receive you! Tell me—don't keep me in suspense, if you please—you have discovered my skeleton?"

"We have found the skeleton," Quest announced.

For a single moment the newcomer stood as though turned to stone.

"My skeleton!" he murmured. "Mr. Quest, I knew it. You are the greatest man alive. Now tell me quickly—I want to know everything, but this first of all. Where did you find the skeleton? Who was the thief?"

"We found the skeleton, professor," Quest replied, "within a hundred yards of this house."

The professor's mouth was wide open. He looked like a bewildered child. It was several seconds before he spoke.

"Within a hundred yards of this house? Then it wasn't stolen by one of my rivals?"

"I should say not," Quest admitted. "Where? exactly did you find it?"

"I found it in a hut," Quest said, "hidden in a piano box. I found there, also, a creature—a human being, I must call him—in a state of captivity."

"Hidden in a piano box?" the professor repeated wonderingly. "Why, you mean in Hartoo's sleeping box, then?"

"If Mr. Hartoo is the gentleman who tried to club me, you are right," Quest admitted. "Mr. Ashleigh, before we go any further I must ask you for an explanation as to the presence of that person in your grounds?"

The professor hesitated for a moment. Then he slowly crossed the room, opened the drawer of a small escritoire and drew out a letter.

"You have heard of Sir William Ramsay, the president of the Royal Society?" he asked.

Quest nodded.

"This letter is from him," the professor continued. "You had better read it."

The criminologist read it aloud. Lenora looked over his shoulder:

ever, she fell backwards into the burning chasm.

The professor bade them farewell, an hour later, on the steps of the house. He seemed suddenly to have aged.

"You have done your best, Mr. Quest," he said, "but fate has been too strong. Remember this, though, it is quite true that the cunning of Hartoo may have made it possible for you to have stolen the skeleton and to have brought it back to its hiding-place, but it was jealousy—cruel, brutal, foul jealousy which smeared the walls of that hut with kerosene and set light to it. The work of a lifetime, my dreams of scientific immortality, have vanished in those flames."

He turned slowly away from them and re-entered the house. Quest and Lenora made their way down the avenue and entered the automobile which was waiting for them, almost in silence. The latter glanced toward his companion as they drove off.

"Say, this has been a bit tough for you," he remarked. "I'll have to call somewhere and get you a glass of wine."

She tried to smile but her strength was almost gone. They drove to a restaurant and sat there for some little time. Lenora soon recovered her color. She even had courage to speak of the events of the afternoon when they re-entered the automobile.

"Mr. Quest," Lenora murmured, "who do you suppose burned the hut?"

"If I don't say Craig, I suppose you will," he remarked. "I wonder whether Laura's had any luck."

They were greeted, as they entered Quest's room, by a familiar little ticking. Quest smiled with pleasure.

"It's the pocket wireless," he declared. "Let me take down the message."

He spelled it out to Lenora, who stood by his side:

Have joined Servants' club disguised as your butler. Craig frequent visitor here. Thursday evenings most likely time. Shall wait here on chance of seeing him.

"Good girl, that," Quest remarked. "She's a rare sticker, too."

He turned away from the instrument and was crossing the room toward his cigar cabinet. Suddenly he stopped. He looked intently towards the sideboard.

"What is it?" Lenora asked.

He did not answer. She followed the direction of his gaze. Exactly in the same spot as before, rested another, but somewhat larger black box, of the same shape and material as the previous one.

"Say, who put that there?" he demanded.

Lenora shook her head.

"I locked the door when we went out," she assured him.

Quest took the box into his hands and removed the lid. It seemed half full of cotton-wool. On the top were a few lines of writing, and beneath them the signature of the parted hands. He read the form out slowly:

Drop all investigation. The hands that return these jewels command it.

Quest raised the cotton-wool. Beneath lay Mrs. Rheinholdt's necklace!

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to Justice Macdougall, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just entered a life-and-death contest with a mysterious master criminal. Engaged by Professor Ashleigh, Lord Ashleigh's brother, to recover the stolen skeleton of an anthropoid ape, hurried to Mrs. Rheinholdt's reception, where her diamonds have been torn from her throat by a pair of hands without arms or body, a black box later appears from nowhere in his rooms and a note contained in it, signed by the armless hands, sarcastically suggests that the Rheinholdt diamonds are the skeleton may be hidden together. While Laura, Quest's secretary, shadows Craig, the professor's valet, and discover there an inhuman creature, half monkey and half man. As the professor explains, the but is set free and the monkey-man and skeleton are destroyed in the flames. In Quest's rooms the Rheinholdt diamonds suddenly reappear, enclosed in a second black box with a note signed by the threatening hands.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

AN OLD GRUDGE.

CHAPTER X.

Sanford Quest was smoking his after-breakfast cigar with a relish somewhat affected by the measure of his perplexities. Early though it was, Lenora was already in her place, bending over her desk, and Laura, who had just arrived, was busy dressing herself of her coat and hat. Quest watched the latter impatiently.

"Well," he asked.

Laura came forward, straightening her hair with her hands.

"No go," she answered. "I spent the evening in the club, and I talked with two men who knew Craig, but I couldn't get on to anything. From all I could hear of the man, respectability is his middle name."

"That's the professor's own idea," Quest remarked grimly.

"We're fairly up against it, boss," Laura sighed. "The best thing we can do is to get on to another job. The Rheinholdt woman has got her jewels back, or will have at noon to-day. I bet she won't worry about the thief. Then the professor's moldy old skeleton was returned to him, even if it was burned up afterwards. I should like to see something fresh."

"Can't be done," Quest replied shortly. "Look here, girls, your average intellects are often apt to hit upon the truth, when a man who sees too far ahead goes wrong. Rule Craig out. Any other possible person occur to you? Speak out, Lenora. You've something on your mind, I can see."

"I'm afraid you'll laugh at me," she began tentatively.

"Won't hurt you if I do," Quest replied.

"I can't help thinking of Macdougall," Lenora continued falteringly. "He has never been recaptured. I don't know whether he's dead or alive. He had a perfect passion for Jew. Is he alive, he would be desperate and would attempt anything."

Quest smoked in silence for a moment.

"I guess the return of the jewels squelched the Macdougall theory," he remarked. "He wouldn't be likely to part with the stuff when he'd once got his hands on it. However, I always meant, when we had a moment's spare time, to look into that fellow's whereabouts. We'll take it on straight away. Can't do any harm."

"Know the section boss on the railway?" Laura asked.

"Then just take the train down to Mountway—that's the nearest spot—and get busy with him," Quest directed. "Try and persuade him to loan us the Jew's handcar to go down the line. Lenora and I will come on in the automobile."

"Take you longer," Lenora remarked as she moved off to put on her jacket. "The cars do it in a quarter of an hour."

"Can't help that," Quest replied. "Mrs. Rheinholdt's coming here to identify her jewels at twelve o'clock, and I can't run any risk of there being no train back. You'd better be making good with the section boss. Take plenty of bills with you."

"Sure! That's easy enough," Laura promised him. "I'll be waiting for you."

She hurried off and Quest commenced his own preparations. From his safe he took one of the small black lumps of explosive to which he had once before owed his life, and fitted it carefully in a small case with a coil of wire and an electric lighter. He looked at his revolver and recharged it. Finally he rang the bell for his confidential valet.

"Ross," he asked, "who else is there here today besides you?"

"No one today, sir."

"Just as well, perhaps," Quest observed. "Listen, Ross, I am going out now for an hour or two, but I shall be back at midday. Remember that, Mrs. Rheinholdt and Inspector French are to be here at twelve o'clock. If by any chance I should be a few minutes late, ask them to wait. And, Ross, a young woman from the Salvation Army will call too. You can give her this check."

Ross Brown, who was Quest's secretary-valet and general factotum, accepted the slip of paper and placed it in an envelope.

"There are no other instructions, sir?" he inquired.

"None," Quest replied. "You'll look out for the wireless, and you had better switch the through cable and telegraph communication on to headquarters. Come on, Lenora."

They left the house, entered the waiting automobile, and drove rapidly towards the confines of the city.

By Quest's directions the automobile was brought to a standstill at a point where it skirted the main railway line, and close to the section house which he had appointed for his rendezvous with Laura. She had apparently seen their approach, and she came out to meet them at once, accompanied by a short, thick-set man whom she introduced as Mr. Horan.

"This is Mr. Horan, the section boss," she explained.

"Mr. Horan shook hands.

"Say, I've heard of you, Mr. Quest," he announced. "The young lady tells me you are some interested in that prisoner they lost off the cars near here."

"That's so," Quest admitted. "We'd like to go to the spot if we could."

"That's dead easy," the boss replied. "I'll take you along on the handcar."

The section boss turned round and whistled. From a little side track two men jumped on to a handcar, and were brought it around to where they were standing. A few yards away the man who was propelling it—a great, red-headed Irishman—suddenly ceased his efforts. Leaning over his pole, he gazed at Quest. A sudden ferocity darkened his coarse face. He gripped his mate by the arm.

"See that bloke there?" he asked, pointing at Quest.

"The guy with the linen collar?" the other answered. "I see him."

"That's Quest, the detective," the Irishman went on hoarsely. "That's the man who got me five years in the pen, the beast! That's the man I've been looking for. You're my mate, Jim, eh?"

"I guess so," the other grunted.

"Are you going to try and do him in?"

"Now then, you fellows," Horan shouted. "What are you hanging about there for. Red Gallagher? Bring the carriage up. You fellows can have a smoke for an hour. I'm going to take her down the line for a bit."

The two men obeyed and disappeared in the direction of the section house. Quest looked after them curiously.

"That's a big fellow," he remarked. "What did you call him?" Red Gallagher. "I seem to have seen him before."

"He was the most troublesome fellow on the line once, although he was the biggest worker," the boss replied. "He got five years in the penitentiary and that seems to have taken the spirit out of him."

"I believe I was in the case," Quest observed carelessly.

"That's so! Now then, young ladies," Mr. Horan advised, "hold tight, and here goes!"

They ambled down the line for about half a mile. Then Horan brought them to a standstill.

"This is the spot," he declared. "Now, if you want my impressions you are welcome to them. All the search has been made on the right-hand side here and in New York. I've had my eye on that hill for a long time. My impression is that he hid there."

"Get on your advice," Quest decided. "We'll spread out and take a little exercise in hill climbing."

"Good luck to you!" the boss exclaimed.

They searched carefully and laboriously for more than half an hour. Then Laura suddenly cried out. They looked around to find only her head visible. She scrambled up, muddy and with wet leaves clinging to her skirt.

"Say, that guy of a section boss told me to look out for caves. I've been in one, sure enough! Only just saved myself!"

She hurried to where she was. Quest peered into the declivity down which she had slipped. Suddenly he gave vent to a little exclamation. At the same time Laura called out. An inch or two of tweed was clearly visible through the stream leaves. Quest, flat on his stomach, crawled a little way down, took out his electric torch from his pocket and brushed the stuff away. Then he clambered to his feet.

"Our search is over," he declared gravely, "and your troubles, Lenora. That is Macdougall's body."

Lenora's face sank into her hands for a moment. Quest stood on one side while Laura passed her arm around the other girl's waist.

Quest glanced at his watch.

"I'll have to get," he said, "but I'll send someone along. Cheer up, Lenora," he added kindly. "Look after her, Laura."

Quest hastened along the road to you a name.

He stooped down to unfasten the straps which fastened the spare wheel. It was one of his rare lapses, realized a moment too late. Almost in his ears came the hoarse cry:

"Hands up, gunner! Hands up this second or I'll blow you to hell!"

Quest glanced over his shoulder and looked into the face of Red Gallagher, raised a little above the level of the road. A very ugly little revolver was pointed directly at Quest's heart.

"My mate's got you covered on the other side of the road, too. Hands up, both of you, or we'll make a quick job of it."

Quest shrugged his shoulders, threw his revolver into the road and obeyed. As he did so, the other man stole out from behind a bush and sprang for the chauffeur, who under cover of the car was stealing off. There was a brief struggle, then the dull thud of the railway man's rifle falling on the chauffeur's head. He rolled over and lay in the road.

"Pitch him off amongst the bushes," Red Gallagher ordered. "You don't want anyone who comes by to see. Now lend me a hand with this chap."

"What do you propose to do with me?" Quest asked.

"You'll know soon enough," Red Gallagher answered. "A matter of five minutes' talk to start with. You see that handcar house?"

"Perfectly well," Quest assented.

"My sight is quite normal," Quest said. "Get there then. I'm a yard behind you and my revolver's pointing for the middle of your back."

Quest sprang lightly down from the road, crossed the few intervening yards and stepped into the handcar house.

Gallagher and his mate followed close behind. Quest paused on the threshold.

"It's a filthy dirty hole," he remarked. "Can't we have our little chat out here? Is it money you want?"

Gallagher glanced around. Then with an ugly push of the shoulder he sent Quest reeling into the shed. His great form blocked up the doorway.

"No," he cried fiercely. "It's not money I want this time. Quest, you brute, you dirty bloodhound! You sent me to the pen for five years—you lagger's mate from penitentiary snouted out a warning just a second too late. With a sudden kick, Quest sent the revolver flying across the room and he for the Irishman could recover he struck him full in the face. Notwithstanding his huge size and strength, Gallagher reeled. The operator who had just begun to realize what was happening flung himself bodily against the two thugs. A shot from the tangled mass of struggling limbs whistled past Quest's head as he sprang to the window which overlooked the track. The freight had already almost passed. Quest steadied himself for a supreme effort, crawled out on the ledge, the steel bridge and poised himself for a moment. The last car was just beneath. The gap between it and the previous one was slipping by. He set his teeth and jumped on the smooth top.

Back behind the tower Red Gallagher and his mate bent with horrified faces over the body of the signalman.

"What the hell did you want to plug him for?" the latter muttered. "He ain't in the show at all. You've done us, Red, he's cooked!"

Red Gallagher staggered to his feet. Already the horror of the murderer was in his face as he glanced furtively around.

"I never meant to drop him," he muttered. "I got mad at seeing Quest get off. That man's a devil!"

"What are we going to do?" the other demanded hoarsely.

"There's the auto," Gallagher shouted. "Come on, old man! I can fix the wheel. If we've got to await for this job, we'll have something of our own back first."

They crawled to the side of the road. Gallagher's rough, hairy fingers were still trembling, but they kept their job. In a few minutes the wheel was fixed. Clumsily but successfully, the great Irishman turned the car around away from the city.

"She's a hummer," he muttered. "I'll make her go when we get the hang of it. Sit tight, you fellows, and hold their job. In a few minutes the wheel was fixed. Clumsily but successfully, the great Irishman turned the car around away from the city.

The inspector made no reply. He had drawn from his pocket a little pass key and was fitting it into the lock. The door swung open. Once more they were both conscious of that peculiar silence, which seemed to have in it some unnamable quality. He moved to the foot of the stairs and shouted:

"Hello! Anyone there?"

There was no reply. He opened the doors of the two rooms on the right-hand side, where Quest, when he was engaged in any widespread affair, kept a stenographer and a telegraph operator. Both rooms were empty. Then he turned towards Quest's study on the left-hand side. French was a man of iron nerve, which seemed to have in it some unnamable quality. He could have kept back the cry which broke from his lips.

A few feet away from the door was stretched the body of the secretary-valet. On the other side of the room, lying as though she had slipped from the sofa, her feet fallen on one side in hideous fashion, was the body of Miss Quigg, the Salvation Army young woman. French set his teeth and drew back the curtains. In the clearer light the disorder of the room was fully revealed. There had been a terrible struggle. Beyond the window's door there was suddenly a piercing shriek. The inspector turned quickly around. Mrs. Rheinholdt, who had disregarded his advice, was standing on the threshold.

"Inspector!" she cried. "What has happened? Oh, my God!"

She covered her face with her hands. French gripped her by the arm. At that moment there was the sound of an automobile stopping outside.

"Keep quiet for a moment," the inspector whispered in her ear. "Pull yourself together, madam, and stand by the side of the room. Don't look. Stay there for a few moments and then get home as quick as you can."

She obeyed him mutely, pressing her hands to her eyes, shivering in every limb. French, stood back inside the room. He heard the front door open, he heard Quest's voice outside.

"Where the devil are you, Ross?"

There was no reply.

The door was pushed open. Quest entered, followed by the professor and Craig. The inspector stood watching their faces. Quest came to a standstill before he had passed the threshold. He looked upon the floor and he looked across to the sofa. Then he looked at French.

"My God!" he muttered.

The professor pushed past. He had looked around the room, and gazed at his two bodies with an expression of blank and absolute terror. Then he fell back into Craig's arms.

"The poor girl!" he cried. "Horrible! Horrible! Horrible!"

"Know anything about this?" Quest

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Rheinholdt welcomed the inspector with a beaming smile as he stepped out of his office and approached her automobile.

"How nice of you to be so punctual, Mr. French," she exclaimed, making room for him by her side. "Will you tell the man to drive to Mr. Quest's house in Georgia square?"

The inspector obeyed and took his place in the luxurious limousine.

"How beautifully punctual we are!" she continued, glancing at the clock.

"Hands Up, Gunner!"

with your cursed prying into other people's affairs. Don't you remember me, eh? Red Gallagher?"

"Of course I do," Quest replied coolly. "You garroted and robbed an old man and had the spree of your life. The old man happened to be a friend of mine, so I took a little trouble to see that you paid for it. Well?"

"Five years of hell, that's what I had," the man continued, his eyes flashing, his face twitching with anger.

"Well, you're going to have a little bit more than five years. This shed's been burnt down twice, sparks from passing engines. It's going to be burnt down for the third time."

"Sounds remarkably unpleasant," Quest admitted. "You'd better hurry or the boss will be back."

Gallagher finally slammed the door, and then pressed the button of the two men as they turned toward the section house. He drew a little case from his pocket.

He opened what seemed to be a little mahogany box, looked at the ball of black substance inside, closed it up, placed it against the far wall, untwisted the coil, stood back near the door and then pressed the button. The result was extraordinary. The whole of the far wall in front of and for some distance in front of the ground was furrowed up by the explosion. Quest replaced the instrument in his pocket, sprang through the opening and ran for the tower house. Behind him on his way to New York he could see a freight train coming along. He could hear, too, Red Gallagher's roar of anger. It was less than fifty yards, yet as soon as he reached the shelter of the tower the thunder of the freight sound in Quest's ears. He glanced around. Red Gallagher and his mate were racing almost side by side towards him. He rushed up the narrow stairs into the signal room, tearing open his coat to show his official badge.

"Stop the freight," he shouted to the operator. "Quick! I'm Sanford Quest, detective—special powers from the chief commissioner."

The man moved to the signal. Another voice thundered in his ears. He turned swiftly around. The Irishman's red head had appeared at the top of the stairs.

"Drop that signal or I'll blow you into bits," he shouted.

The operator hesitated, dazed.

"Walk towards me," Gallagher shouted. "Look here, you guy, this will show you whether I'm in earnest or not."

A bullet passed within a few inches of the operator's head. He came slowly across the room. Below they could hear the roar of the freight.

"This ain't your job," the Irishman continued savagely. "We want the cop, and we're going to have him."

"Get on the wheel as quick as you can," Quest directed. "Here, I'll give

"You Don't—You Don't Suspect Me of This?"

"Inspector, I am so excited at the idea of getting my jewels back. Isn't Mr. Quest a wonderful man? I used my pass key and entered. This is what I found."

Quest stood over the body of his valet for a moment. The man was obviously dead. The inspector took his handkerchief and covered up the head. A few feet away was a heavy paper-weight.

"Killed by a blow from behind," French remarked grimly, "with that little affair. Look here!"

They glanced down at the girl. Quest's eyebrows came together quickly. There were two blue marks upon her throat where a man's thumbs might have been.

"The hands again," he muttered.

The inspector nodded.

"Can you make anything of it?"

"Not yet," Quest confessed. "I must think."

The inspector glanced at him curiously.

"Where on earth have you been to?" he demanded.

"Been to?" Quest repeated.

"Look in the mirror!" French suggested.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Editor of the Advocate, Newcastle, N. B.

With reference to the item which appeared in the editorial column of the Chatham World on Thursday the 8th inst., and which was copied in the Globe on the 9th inst., under the caption, "Northumberland's Failure" which stated that there could be no issue of Northumberland Patriotic Bonds this year, by reason of neglect on the part of the Council's Committee in failing to secure necessary legislation, we feel bound by a sense of justice to our county, as well as to ourselves, to ask you to publish the following facts:

First—That at the last session of the legislature, an act was passed authorizing any municipality in the Province to issue bonds for patriotic purposes.

Second—That in accordance with this legislative authority, the Northumberland County Bonds have been approved and signed by the Auditor-General of the province.

Third—That these Bonds are not interest bearing until July 1st with which date they have been inscribed by the Auditor-General when they will be ready for the market.

Comment is unnecessary other than to observe that Mr. J. L. Stewart, the editor of the World, might do well to at least acquaint himself with the Acts of the Legislature of which he is a member, before devoting his patriotic zeal towards the publication of statements which are absolutely false and without foundation and which do his county a very grave injustice in the eyes of the province. Thanking you for the space, Mr. Editor, we are

Yours truly,
G. PERCY BURCHILL,
JOHN W. VANDERBECK,
LAWRENCE DOYLE,
Northumberland Patriotic Bond Committee.

Handkerchief Shower for Miss Molly Morrissy

A handkerchief shower in honor of Miss Molly Morrissy was given by Mrs. T. H. Whalen Friday night, on the eve of Miss Morrissy's departure for New York to enter St. Catherine's Hospital, as a student nurse. About thirty people were present and a very pleasant evening was spent with cards, dancing, etc. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Morrissy, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Durick, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McCarron; Mesdames F. J. Desmond, Geo. F. McWilliam, J. H. Brown, W. W. Cormier, D. P. Doyle and P. J. McEvoy; and Misses Clare and Josephine Wheeler, Alma LaBilliois, Lou McEwen, Dorca Blaine, Mollie Hennessy, Rita Buckley, Yvonne Buckley, May Morrison and the guest of the evening, Miss Morrissy; and Messrs. Belliveau, J. T. Morrissy, Jack Colton and Alyre Arsenau. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion. Little Miss Marguerite Dunn acted as usher. A tempting lunch was served at 11 o'clock, after which a shower of handkerchiefs was on behalf of the company, let fall over Miss Morrissy by Miss Hennessy. A number who were unable to be present sent in their gifts. The merry party dispersed with Auld Lang Syne and best wishes for Miss Morrissy's success in her new calling. Miss Morrissy left for New York on Monday.
