MUNICIPAL CHANGES IN ITALY.
ROME, Oct. 9. Mussolini's Cabinet took an important step yesterday in Fascist section of Italy by deciding to revive and modernize a medieval form of government for small municipalities of five hundred inhabitants by the appointment by the central government of a podestata, thus eliminating the present system of government by mayors elected locally. In medieval Italian republics the podestata acted as a sort of governor and had extensive power.

FAILURE TO NATURALIZE RETURN DEER.
OTTAWA, Oct. 9. Failure has attended the attempt to pasture Lapland reindeer on Baffin Land, according to advice from the Arctic Expedition which returned yesterday. Private interests in 1921 took six hundred reindeer there; now only seven are alive.

"HAIR-GROOM"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy, Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drugstore. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; so helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 9.

Attended the landing of 120 head of cattle, 50 sheep, 16 horses, and some pigs from the Canadian Sapper; also 80 head of cattle from the S.S. Hitherwood. The steamer arrived late Saturday morning and as the Sec hem was at the Furness Withy wharf, there was some delay before the cattle were landed, and the steamer had to haul to Harvey's wharf. The captain of the Sapper was very anxious that the cattle should be all landed on Saturday. Mr. Kennedy at the Furness Withy allowed the men to work right on till seven o'clock to get the cattle all ashore, and Mr. D. Courtney the appraiser remained till after seven o'clock, appraising the cattle. The two steamer loads were all taken to pasture by eight o'clock, watered and fed. The Longshoremen under Mr. Bartlett at Harvey's and Mr. Holwell and Mr. Kennedy did their very best to get all the cattle ashore before dark, to whom on behalf of the Society I am very thankful. I was requested by Messrs. Foster & Shield to humanely put to death a horse which had been used by them for some time, and which was getting past its labour. Rather than have it pass into the hands of perhaps some unscrupulous person, they asked me to put it to death and have it buried. I have also ordered in during the week three horses, two with bad feet and the other with a spavin. I noticed one trying to get up over Carter's Hill, I told the driver to take it in, and the other on Casey Street, which appeared to be very lame. I am very thankful to Master Cyril Lester of Topsall Road for the sale of five pictures of "The Horses Prayer." I still have a few left which I should like to dispose of, I am selling them at fifty cents each. I have had several complaints of the condition of the arches, heading from the different wharves. These have all been attended to. I have attended to about forty different calls during the week.

Parcel Post

Once again we refer to the method in vogue for the handling of parcel post between Canada and Newfoundland. We have before pointed out that the transmitting of parcels coming in by way of the Cabot Strait on to St. John's first, before distributing them to their destination usually entail hundreds of miles of unnecessary carriage, days and weeks of delay and often congestion at the General Post Office. Officials to whose notice we have brought this matter personally, have been unanimous in characterizing the practice as an absurdity. In the past we have advocated the assessment and assortment of these parcels at the terminal at Port aux Basques. We now suggest an alternative. Spacious offices for the handling of Newfoundland mail have been provided in the new terminal building erected by the C. N. R. at North Sydney. With the addition of another official to the Newfoundland Postal staff at North Sydney we believe our parcel post could be assorted and assessed at that point, made up and despatched from there to all postal points in the country to the satisfaction of all. With the opening of these offices, which is about to take place we urge the inauguration of this much desired improvement to our parcel post service.—Western Star.

A New Potato

RAYMOND, Sask., Sept. 30.—"Early Queen" is the name given to a new potato originated by H. H. Kimball, truck gardener of Raymond. The tuber is of the white variety, combining earliness, fine flavor, cooks well and is of an excellent keeping quality.
Three years ago Mr. Kimball imported sufficient registered stock of Wee McGregor potatoes to seed three acres. To maintain purity of strain, the grower made application for government inspection. The professional men suggested that a number of hills of "mongrel stock" be uprooted. A stake was driven in the hills designed for destruction. When Mr. Kimball started to dig up the spuds, he was surprised to note that the earth surrounding the vines was forced up until the tubers were showing and all indications point to a heavy yield. They were left until harvest, when the clean, white appearance so attracted the gardener that a test on a larger plot was made the following year. Not until mid-season was the extreme earliness of the "mongrel" discovered.
This year the white potatoes were planted side by side with the "Early King," a pink variety, known for its early ripening. The white potato beat the old favorite by 18 days. This new variety is now fetching $5 a hundred pounds for next year's seedling.

Do Men Buy Style ?

YES---Certainly. But they buy one of two kinds. One kind concerns just so many buttons---certain lines and curves---call it Mathematical Style if you wish.
The other kind is the style of gracefulness--it concerns itself not so much with inches and numbers of buttons--it is the style of good fit, of grace, it is an air of correctness. This is what

Communist in England

Britain is estimated to be in the vicinity of 5,000, inclusive of the palest Pinks and the deepest Reds. It is surprising that such a tiny element in a population of forty millions can create such a great amount of paper talk. I suppose that if all the ink used to describe the "terror in our midst" could be calculated, we would find the quantity ample enough to drown the lot of them. It is another case of the mountain giving birth to a mouse.

"The greatest friend that Communism has in England is the alarmist Press." Mr. Thomas, Secretary to the National Union of Railwaymen, said this and he is perfectly right. Those elaborately spaced and blatant headlines have created more Communists than ever any "Red" agitation did. The old pastime of pulling the lion's tail has nothing on this. The lion of yore never murmured, he just stood as much as he could and then obliterated his tormentors. To-day he has learnt to bark, and to whine if necessary.

Revolution is only possible in England if the "man in the street" begins to air his opinions, whatever they may be, just as it was that public "rap-ry" that made the last war a certainty, years before it burst on an "unprepared" world.

I have seen many Russian agitators and heard them speak. I was surprised at their general appearance and bearing, and I certainly think that whoever is responsible for the selection of these men certainly knows his job well.

A country where such a strange case as "criminal loyalty" can happen, surely need not worry.

The Latest in Goalposts By H. G. Lewis (The Famous Sporting Writer).

Oval-shaped goalposts and cross-bars are the latest novelty in football. West Ham United had them installed for this season to replace the square-shaped posts that the game has always known previously.

"Offside!"

(By The Editor of "Answers.") In my young days as a journalist I had to do a good deal of football reporting—all young provincial journalists do. I still take more than a passing interest in the great game, and several times each season you may see me in the grand stand at Chelsea, at Roker Park, at Ibrox, or at New Hampden. I went to a match last Saturday just to see how the new offside rule worked, and my reflections there provided me with the subject of this Editorial.

The main point about the new regulation, it seems to me, is that it should reduce to a minimum the possibility of an unscrupulous player exploiting the offside theory to his own and his team's advantage, for there is accidental offside and there is deliberate offside, and it is of the latter I want to speak.

Sometimes I can't help thinking that, in the tussle between Capital and Labour, between masters and men, between unions and federations, in the great industrial game, which means everything to the nation, there is a great tendency to play the "offside" card for all it is worth. It is a trick which can lead to no good. It is inherently vicious; and it makes bad blood not only between the two opponents, but in the public glands, where the great public are watching the game.

There was a time when the government of the country, the great referee, was watchful and firm. When play was indulged in which was against the common weal, there was no hesitancy. If it meant stopping the game altogether, sending half a dozen players off the field, suspending them for indefinite periods until they learned to play fair, these measures would be taken. There was a time, in short, when governments governed, and did not yield weakly to the call of expediency and the postponement of the "evil day."

denounced him as a thief, who was dishonestly stealing a position of £500 a year and, incidentally, depriving an honest man of the honours and emoluments which were his due. But student honour is a funny thing—and, as a rule, a noble thing, which I would not change.

I believe in playing and fighting to win. I don't say that, when an opponent wants the ball very badly, you must step aside and say, "You can have it, sir, with pleasure." I don't say that when you are labouring in life's scrum you are to refrain from hooking the ball out to your scrum-half, if you get the chance, lest you should thereby deprive the other side of that pleasure; but I do say that the only way to play, or to live, is in the spirit of fairness and self-restraint.

There was a time when the government of the country, the great referee, was watchful and firm. When play was indulged in which was against the common weal, there was no hesitancy. If it meant stopping the game altogether, sending half a dozen players off the field, suspending them for indefinite periods until they learned to play fair, these measures would be taken. There was a time, in short, when governments governed, and did not yield weakly to the call of expediency and the postponement of the "evil day."

I say that any body of men who deliberately hold up the country for their own ends are "offside," and ought to be smartly pulled up and penalized. What is the use of a referee if his word is not law, if anyone can drive a coach and four through all the respectabilities of communal life?

Trifling With Crime

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, of Chicago, has been over to London to attend a prison conference," says the Erie, Pennsylvania, Times. "He made up his mind to find out while there why it is there is so much less crime in London than in his own city, and therefore he gave some attention to courts and the administration of Justice. He stated his impression to the correspondent of the Chicago News, in the course of which the Judge cited the case of a young Englishman who had murdered the butler in an establishment in which both were employed. The slayer was arrested the day after the murder, was placed on trial with in a week, was condemned to death after a trial lasting two hours, and was duly executed.

Such judicial celerity would not at present be tolerated in this country. The populace would regard it as "rail-roading" a man to his death. But undoubtedly the swiftness and sureness of justice is the reason for England's better criminal record compared with our own. Over there, Judge Kavanagh found out, "it is a ten to one chance that if a man commits murder he will be hanged." How is it over here? The Metropolitan Life analysis last year shows that out of every 146 homicides in the country at large, only 69 indictments are found; and of the 69 men indicted, only 37 receive sentences, and only one is executed. One execution for 146 homicides. Instead of the chances being ten to one against the perpetrator of a homicide, as in England, here they are 145 to one in his favor. Strange to say, there is much less leniency shown to the perpetrator of the lesser grades of crime. In New York, the chances are only seven to one in his favor.

Such failures of justice as the Leopold-Loeb and Russell Scott cases would have been impossible in an English court. The nearer we approach the same methods the more will crimes of violence diminish in this country. The criminally minded will take a chance when it is 145 to 1 in their favor, who would not take the chance if it were 10 to 1 against them."

Schooner Bowdoin Makes Sydney En Route Home

THE SCHOONER BOWDOIN, which has been on a voyage of exploration in the north, is expected to return to Sydney on Saturday morning.

The schooner Bowdoin, under the command of Commander Donal MacMillan, U.S.N., F.R.G., arrived in port this morning on her return voyage to Wiscasset, Maine. The schooner left on June 20th last. She was accompanied by the auxiliary schooner, the Bowdoin, bearing the members of the MacMillan Arctic Expedition. The expedition was led by Commander Donal MacMillan, U.S.N., F.R.G., and consisted of a crew of 12 men. The expedition was a success, and the schooner returned with a large amount of scientific material.

Large Red Pimples Itched Terribly Cuticura Heals

"My face became full of large, red, scaly pimples and at times they itched terribly. They spread in great blotches and formed large, sore eruptions that burned a great deal. I was ashamed to go anywhere on account of them, and the trouble lasted about a year. I tried various kinds of ointments without success. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me. I purchased more, and after using three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, together with the Cuticura Soap, I was healed in about two months." (Signed) Miss Mildred M. Breen, Crossstown, Nova Scotia.

ley, who combined in extending to the intrepid explorer both a civic welcome and also the compliments of the Sydney Rotary Club. Commander MacMillan being an honorary member of Rotary International. Owing to delays occasioned by heavy weather in crossing from Greenland to Labrador last week, and the fact that their schedule calls for their arrival in Wiscasset on Saturday next, Commander MacMillan regretted that the shortage of time would not allow him to accept the proffered hospitality of the local Rotarians, who had planned a dance in his honor at Yacht Club tonight, and the Bowdoin will sail again this afternoon about four o'clock. One day's bad weather between here and Wiscasset would mean their late arrival, he said, in speaking with The Post this morning.

Bad Weather North.
Commenting on the result of the expedition, the Commander stated that as far as scientific research was concerned, and considering the bad weather encountered, it was quite successful, although heavy gales, and unprecedented bad weather generally prevented them from getting as far north as in his previous trip in the Bowdoin. During their whole time at the base in Etah, they had less than one hundred hours of real good weather.

One thing the expedition has proved, to the satisfaction of Commander MacMillan, is the failure of Arctic exploration as a means of Arctic exploration. The airplanes were not a success, he stated, and in view of the difficulties that beset those taken north on the Peary, he expressed unstinted admiration for the unparalleled exploit of Commander Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer.

Favors Dirigible.
If the Arctic is to be explored by air, it will be done by dirigible, said Commander MacMillan. Airplanes are only feasible up to a certain point, their operation being badly hampered by the uncertainty of finding proper landing places, for flying boats or hydroplanes, owing to the continual shifting of the ice in the bays and harbors, and for land machines because of the condition of the ice-fields in the summer season, they being unusually honeycombed and covered with several feet of rotting ice which would rip the landing gear from the machines and spell practically sure death to any aviator making the attempt. In the commander's opinion, the dog sledges as a means of conveyance in the far north, will not be supplanted by the airplane, at least, not for some time to come, when the perils of landing on unmapped and unmarked terrain will have been overcome.

A Veteran's Opinion.
In this connection the Commander quotes the words of his interpreter and guide, Abe Bloomfield, of Labrador, who has accompanied him on all his expeditions. The occasion was one day when after several chapters of incidents to the planes, the aviators were out on the ice interchanging engines, propellers and wings from dismantled planes in an effort to patch one whole plane out of the lot. Abe, an old dog driver, was standing at the rail, an interested spectator of their work on the big man made birds which were to put an end to the dog team and after sizing them up, and in the light of their failure to come up to the scratch as a means of getting over the country, he turned to Commander MacMillan and observed: "Well, I thought dey was gonna be better dan dogs, but they ain't."

The Commander fully subscribed to Abe's statement and is substantiated, remarked that it took the plane a week to advance the grub supply of the expedition ninety miles, a distance that

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Letter From Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

"Spring Valley, Sask.—'I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement, when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement and this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's Telegram' and wrote you for one of your books. We have no druggist in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since baby came. (She is as good as she can be.) Yours is the best medicine for women, and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it.'—Mrs. ANNE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, Sask."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system so that it may work in every respect as nature intends. All druggists sell this dependable medicine. Give it a trial.

could be covered by the dogs in three days, he said. The planes were objects of awe to the Eskimos, who, when the first bird soared aloft, came, the commander said, "rushing over the hills covered with sweat from their exertions, calling a chorus of 'Takoo! Takoo!' (look at that). Two of them were taken up by the plane and were marked men among their fellows thereafter."

The expedition was primarily for scientific research, and some very valuable data on the flora and fauna of the unexplored regions was gathered. Visited Ancient Ruins. On the return trip from Etah, Commander MacMillan visited the ruins of the ancient Norse settlement sixty miles from Godthaab, on the Greenland Coast. Here he found an old church, built in the early days of the century, if not older, and the remains of what was once a large village. The church was built of stone, and although laid up without cement or mortar, the walls, fifteen feet high, were in excellent condition. The building stands about twenty feet square and faced the settlement. On a plateau in the rear, a grassy plain, were discovered remains of what apparently was a large corral. Numerous photographs were taken. Next year, Commander MacMillan proposes to give more study to these ruins and will also make a side trip to those supposed to be located on the northern Labrador coast.

Bad weather retarded the work of exploration to a great extent. In all his career, invariably accompanied by rain and snow. On one occasion when laying to two anchors in a fjord, in North Greenland, the gale blew them out of the harbor. They were forced to haul their anchors and get under way. For six hours they sailed around the fjord, trying for bottom in hopes of getting a new anchorage, but without success, the water being over a thousand feet deep. Finally, as a last resort, they hooked the land on the windward shore and swung off. Taking a chance of being dashed to pieces against the precipitous cliffs should the wind change, which was not a remote possibility in that latitude, where the winds are variable to an extreme.

On the return from Greenland to the Labrador coast the Bowdoin was called on to show what stuff the Yankee shipbuilders put into her. Half way across Davis Strait she bumped into a howling gale. Slam! Bang! A comb smashed against the starboard rail, and broke all over her filling her deck with water from knight-heads to taffrail. The Commander was lying in his berth fully dressed trying to catch a few winks, when the contents of a bookcase on the starboard side of the cabin piled down on him. He heard the man at the wheel yell "Captain! captain!" and rushed on deck. The wheelman was hanging on to the wheel in a sweeter of foam with two members of the crew who had just reached him in time to keep him from being swept overboard. Snap! The main gaff cracked off, and the mainsail slatted around adding to the confusion occasioned by the vessel falling off into the trough of the sea. The little craft stood up to it and, with the exception of the mate, Ralph Robinson, who was thrown to the deck and injured by striking a box, the ship and crew came out of the blow all shipshape and Bristol fashion. Mr. Robinson's injuries while painful were not serious. A new gaff was shipped at Red Bay. The health of the exploration party, throughout, was good and all appeared to be in the pink on their arrival here. This voyage concludes Commander

Mystery Fish
Kelowna, B.C.—Although J. P. Badcock, deputy commissioner of fisheries for British Columbia, declares that Lake Okanagan's mysterious "demon fish" is nothing but a big sturgeon, those who have seen the monster lurking along the surface of this unusually deep lake swear that it is nothing of the sort. They claim it is something much more mysterious and formidable—perhaps a sort of sea serpent that has lost the way home. James Mitchell, of Summerland, for instance, declares that if it can be shown that the demon fish is just an everyday sturgeon he will eat it. Mr. Mitchell happens to be one of the eyewitnesses of the strange fish. He has also seen sturgeons and he insists that it is nothing like a sturgeon. He is unable to give a thorough description of the fish, because it was too far away, but he says it "wriggled" along the surface quite unlike any ordinary denizen of the lake. Four youths, William Andrews, Alan Butler, Bob Butler and Ken Booth, are willing to agree with Mr. Mitchell. They encountered the serpent—or whatever it is—floating on the surface, evidently asleep. It was about six feet long, they say—that is, the portion they could actually see. When it moved the whole lake seemed to sway and waves washed over their craft. "It must have been as big as a whale," they concluded. J. Mitchell Boyd, of Edging Landing, had the scare of his life when he almost collided with the leviathan while on a fishing trip. At first he took it for a branch of a tree. Then a great head, not unlike that of a sheep, reared itself from the deep. He estimated the length at 20 to 30 feet. And Mr. Boyd declares that on that particular fishing trip he took nothing with him to drink except water.

Fish Millions of Years Old
CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(C.P.)—Fossil fish claimed to be from fifty to a hundred million years old have been brought back from the Gaspé Peninsula in Quebec by Prof. A. S. Romer, of the University of Chicago, who says that the ancient province of Quebec has no idea how old the fish really is.

Mother at 72
The following letter appears in the correspondence column of the Daily Mail:— Sir—Great Britain still holds the record for ancient motherhood, notwithstanding the report from Spain, on May 10, 1776, Ellen Ellis, of Beaumaris, Anglesey, aged 72, who had been married 46 years and had a son aged 45, proclaimed to the world an addition to her family. In Scotland ten years ago three judges refused permission for the "disentail" of an estate on the ground, that the next heiress, a lady of eighty, "could not by any legal presumption be held to be beyond the possibility of child-bearing." Egypt demands the evacuation of the Sudan by Great Britain, and the creation of a semi-independent State under her own direction. She demands that the water requirements of the Sudan, and thus its entire development, should be subordinated to her own needs. Great Britain offers Egypt a defensive alliance, a partnership in the administration of the Nile and the placing of the control of the Nile in the hands of a neutral and international body.—In the opinion of the many thousands of foreigners living in Egypt, who are in a position to form an unprejudiced judgment, England's offer is generous in the extreme.

A MOTHER'S APPRECIATION
The letters of appreciation received from grateful mothers afford convincing proof of the unfailing efficacy of Woodward's Gripe Water as a remedy for baby's stomach complaints and teething troubles. Mrs. Loveday, 73, Banstead Street, Nunhead, London, S.E.15, writes:—"I am so grateful that I had to write and send you a photo of my baby, 5 1/2 months old, weighing 20 1/2 lbs. When very young he suffered badly with wind and I was introduced to your Gripe Water which has been a boon to me ever since. Whenever I see a worried mother I always recommend Woodward's Gripe Water." And Woodward's Gripe Water is equally efficacious in relieving the stomach pains and disorders of older children and adults. Free from opiates and pleasant to take. Obtainable at all Druggists.

WHEN THE CURTAIN FALLS.

Is there anything more delicate, more impalpable and at the same time more impenetrable than the curtain that seems to fall between children and grownups when children begin to pass from childhood into adolescence? And is there anything so sudden seeming as their descent? One day they are children, pressing close to you, speaking out their thoughts frankly, looking up to you with almost complete confidence, charmed always to have you in their games; and the next, it seems they are strangers drawing away from you, keeping their thoughts to themselves, looking at you through veiled eyes, seeing you in a new light, perhaps criticizing you and shutting you out of their pleasures and companionships.

The Locked Arms Of Childhood. Only a little while ago, it seems to you, if you went to walk with your daughter and her chums you were the central figure. They hang on your hands, they asked: "Mother, what's that?" "Why do men lift their hats?" "Mrs. M. do you know what those flowers are?" "Oh, look, mother, what a pretty house!" Now they walk with the locked arms of childhood and you walk alone beside them, or if you try to make one of them, they are constrained and embarrassed, and you feel awkward and old and self-conscious.

When you sneak to them you often feel as if they hardly hear you. Sometimes they pass by your remarks in silence as if they were scarcely worth answering, and again they answer from a distance, absently, uninterestedly. You feel that you haven't reached them or that you have intruded on thoughts much more vital than anything you could say. And you wish, oh so hard, that you might know what those thoughts are.

But I doubt if they are thoughts at all, just feelings, dreams, shyness, birthpangs of an individuality.

Never Try To Pierce It. The only way you can ever know them is by remembering by sympathetic imagination, and perhaps now and then by a momentary lift of the curtain. If you try to pierce through the curtain to them, you will not get through and you may find it changed from a curtain impalpable and delicate and eventually to be dissolved away again, into a wall not so easily gotten rid of.

Do you remember the beautiful cradle song that ends with the touching little appeal:

"Sail, baby, sail, out across the sea. Only don't forget to sail back again to me."

This, too, is a voyage over unknown seas. Your heart aches to see your one time baby set out on it, but you know you would not hold him back even if you could. So you can only make the harbor of your home and heart as fair as possible, keep your beacon light shining and silently make that plea:

"Sail, baby, sail, out across the sea. Only don't forget to sail back again to me."

THE CHANGE.

Just a little while ago He would sputter: "let me blow!" Every time I struck a match for my cigar.

Just a tiny little chap Who would snuggle on my lap. Now he's arguing he can drive the car.

Seems 'twas only yesterday Childish games he used to play. Just a rascal with the mischief in his eye. Now he's shooting frons straight. Taking five when I take eight. As a golfer he is better far than I.

I can scarce believe it true As I see the things he'll do That we haven't any baby any more. That the babe who used to run Is this self-reliant son Who casts a full-length shadow on the floor.

But I'm proud as I can be, Of so many things I see Which console me for the baby that has fled.

I've no tiny little chap Now to snuggle on my lap. I've a chum to keep me company instead.

British Anthracite in Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 1.—(By Canadian Press)—A statement issued by The National Resources Intelligence Service says: "Is the British anthracite coal being received in Canada in increasing quantities a suitable domestic fuel for this country? This is a question that has agitated many life-long users of American anthracite."

"The Fuel Testing Laboratories of the Department of Mines which have been testing various domestic fuels on instructions from Hon. Chas. Stewart, Minister of Mines, report that British anthracite is an excellent fuel to use in domestic furnaces. It possesses a high heating value, a very low content (4 to 5 per cent) and is easy to control. It is somewhat more friable than American anthracite but not to an objectionable degree, and the dust forms an excellent banking material for maintaining a fire throughout the night."

"A phenomenal increase in importations of British anthracite has occurred the last three years. Of this fuel, which is practically all consumed in the 'central provinces' for domestic purposes, Canada imported in 1922 but 165,000 tons; in 1923, 240,000; in 1924, 273,000, and in 1925, to August 31, 341,000 tons. Estimates vary as to the total importations for 1925, but it will, in all probability reach a half million tons."

HAVING FUN.

"In my tin can, my link sedan, I gamboled every day; and people cry, as I pass by. He spends his time in play; while others work we see him jerk his wagon fro and to; we others sweat to sidestep debt, but he has naught to do. We ply the hoe and see him go cavorting down the lane; while we cut grass he's burning gas with his innocent wain. Oh, life is tough and fierce enough, you say, when such things be, when some must strive while others drive their boats with pistons three." But in my prime I spent no time joyriding there and here; I labored hard, naught could retard or throw me out of gear. I did my best, I kept abreast of other toiling gents, and when I earned a buck I yearned to salt down twenty cents. My bundle grew as seasons flew; as years went like a streak, the silver heaps, by bounds and leaps, grew larger every week. While others burned the coin they earned in idle, feckless style, my hard earned francs were placed in banks and swelled my goody pile. Now, now I drill along the hill in my tin-plated dray; I have the price and life is nice, although I'm old and gray. So I advise all working guys to save the bright bawbee; then when they find their prime behind, they'll play around like me.

Cost of Seven Quarts of Liquor AT CANADIAN PRICES IS FINE IMPOSED BY NEW YORK MAGISTRATE. New York, Oct. 3.—Finding a plaintiff the cost of "seven quarts of liquor at Canadian prices," Magistrate Glatzmeyer yesterday brought to a close a case which has developed several unusual angles. It all started on August 12 last, when E. H. Goldsmith, an accountant, was handed a summons for speeding on Riverside Drive. The date of the traffic court session he was directed to attend, however, coincided with the meeting of the 'dry voters' League at Montreal, so he went to Montreal. He wired his regrets to the traffic court. Yesterday, however, having returned to New York, Goldsmith, clutching his summons, marched blandly to the traffic court. "I am a little late, Your Honor," said Goldsmith. "I guess you are," said Magistrate Glatzmeyer, "from August 12 to October 2."

New Tango

THE STEPS DESCRIBED—EASE AND DIGNITY.

English dancers find that the steps of the French tango—a welcome change from the monotony of the fox-trots and the waltz—are easy to learn, and that they involve no loss of dignity.

Experienced people consider that the new dance is likely to become fashionable because it is free from posturing or extravagance. In former years the tango failed to attract English people owing to its somewhat theatrical characteristics.

The four steps of the new dance are these:

The Walk—This is similar to a fox-trot walk, except that the dancer steps with a catlike movement, instead of sliding their feet. The knees are slightly bent and the body is relaxed.

The Half-turn—The man's left foot is put forward and the right placed slightly behind. The left is brought back towards the right, which in turn is carried back. The left is then brought to the side of the right, which slides up to it.

The "Link"—The man carries out the first movement of the promenade, turns slightly, places his right heel in front of his left toe, and then steps off with the left. The woman completes the promenade step, but turns in the last part of it.

Broadcast listeners throughout the country last night received a lesson in the dancing of the tango from Mr. Santos Cassani, who, in a studio at 2LD, told how it should be done.

"Tango parties" were arranged by enthusiasts so that they might receive the full benefit of the lesson and check each other's performances.

G. H. Q. of Boxing

NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.
There may be larger boxing clubs than the "National Sporting," but it is the acknowledged world-centre of the Science of Self-Defence, and is so frequently misquoted as "Noble Art." Although only four years old, the National Sporting Club is to boxing what the M.C.C. Club is to racing, the Royal and Ancient to golf.

For contests are adopted all over the world; its verdicts are accepted without question. In saying this I do not mean that the decisions of the referees are never criticised, but the man who wins a championship at the club, or its Kehsington Hall, acquires a title like many foreign ones, is every Boxer's Ambition.

Therefore, one way or another, it is the ambition of every professional to battle for a championship in the National Sporting Club ring. And he will not get there unless, apart from his fighting prowess, his person is good.

The club's fame, however, is not confined to the ring. In fact, it has become London's first headquarters at King Street, near St. James' Park. The building it occupies is historic. It dates from 1727, when it was built for Admiral Boscawen, afterwards Lord Orford, on the site of what was Sir Kenelm Digby's house.

Some years later, in 1698, the first Council in the history of this club was held in the big room of the house. In 1727, the Duke of La Hogue died in 1727, and the house became London's first hotel, under the management of David Low. It was nicknamed "The Duke's" because so many noblemen resorted to it. One evening, it is said, six dukes dined there, not counting the other guests.

Giants of Other Days.
The high respectability of the club is demonstrated by the fact that it is known as "Evans' Supper Club." A hall-room, which is now the National Sporting Club theatre, was added about this time. The "Evans Club" later took possession, and in 1891 the National Sporting Club was formed.

When you take you inside for a moment, the right as we enter, is the waiting-room. Its walls are covered with prints and photographs of boxing celebrities, but its dominant feature is the cast of Tom Sayers' arm, above which hangs the sword of the English Champion, and the American, John Corbett. Hean, fought their immortal battle of thirty-seven rounds at Whitechapel, Hants—not Surrey, as was wrongly stated—on April 17th, 1891.

The hall itself is a large board, which are displayed the names of the winners of "Lonsdale Championship Belts." These famous trophies were instituted by that sportsman of sportsmen, the Earl of Lonsdale, in 1891 and are greatly coveted.

The Sea-dog's Staircase.
A belt becomes the absolute property of the holder if he wins it three times, which need not be consecutive. If, as holder, he is not challenged within three years. An absolute holder becomes entitled to a pension of £100 a year for life after passing his fifth year.

The first boxer to qualify for pension, though, alas, he can never draw it, was the late "Peerless Jim" Driscoll. Since then the following have won the belts outright: Bombardier Dick Smith, Joe Fox, Johnny Adams, Tancy Lee, Pat O'Keefe, Dick Stanley, Jim Higgins and Jimmy Lee.

Pat O'Keefe scored his third victory in the middle-weight class on the night of one of London's worst air raids. He was wearing a "feather" belt, and, moving up, made a feather-weight belt his own for keeps.

Joe Fox, on the other hand, qualified for pension as a bantam, and he added a "feather" belt to his honours. Jim Higgins set up a record by winning the bantam belt outright within one year and nine months. At the back of the hall is a smoking lounge and the billiards-room, where the play is often very "hot."

Now we will ascend the staircase, which members are justly proud of. Admiral Russell is believed to have taken it from the hundred-gun man-of-war H.M.S. Britannia, which was his flagship at the battle of La Hogue. From Ring to Parliament.

Next into the lengthy dining-room, with its magnificent old fireplace. The walls are covered with paintings, prints, and photographs of the great names of boxing history. Here is a fine oil-portrait of Nathaniel Pugh, the only man to beat Tom Sayers, which he did after sixty-one rounds, and another of "Gentleman" Jackson. Near by is a painting of John Gully, prize fighter and Champion of England, who became the Right Hon. John Gully, Speaker of the House of Commons for thirty years.

There are coloured drawings of such present-day National Sporting Club celebrities as Lord Lonsdale, with buttonhole and cigar complete; that wonderfully youthful veteran, Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny; Mr John Douglas, the referee and father of "J. W. H. T." the cricketer; and the National Sporting Club manager, Mr "Peggy" Bettinson, who was light-weight amateur champion in 1882.

An inscription on a fine silver cup tells us that it was won by Tom Cribb, of Gloucestershire, who became Champion of the Ring in 1808.

On the top floor is an interesting reconstruction of "Old London," showing us the shops kept by Bartholomew and Pistol, also a chapel and refectory, now used as a bar.

Up here is a coloured drawing of James J. Corbett, looking far more sprightly than when Bob Fitzsimmons' mighty fist crashed into his "solar plexus" and stretched him impotent on the world's championship floor.

Right downstairs now, and underground to the theatre, which seats nine hundred, and leaves standing-room for another three hundred or so.

Of all the historic contests here the greatest was probably the battle between Frank Slavin and Peter Jackson, the black. The "whitest" negro ever known knocked out the Australian in the tenth round, but practically paid for the victory with his life, for there is little doubt that the terrific body punishment he endured led up to the "galloping consumption" of which he died. Slavin himself was never the same man after that tremendous affray.

For sensation it would be hard to beat Cassius' defeat of Bombardier Wells and Joe Beckett lasting precisely seventy-four seconds.

On these occasions as much as fifteen guineas were paid for a seat. Such prices, however, are exceptional, the usual charge being from one to five guineas.

To prevent any misconception, it should be stated that tickets cannot be purchased by the general public. Visitors must be introduced and accompanied by a member, who pays for their tickets, which include a seat for himself.

Helping the Veteran.

No other club can present such a sight as the National Sporting Club on a "big night," for there are to be seen the world's greatest sportsmen from the Prince of Wales downwards.

It is the most critical assembly in the world, and no mercy is shown to the non-trier or the foul fighter.

But it is also extremely fair and generous. Within an hour or two of Jim Driscoll's defeat by the Frenchman, Charles Ledoux—the most pathetic sight the club has seen—the hat had gone round and been filled with a very substantial sum for the veteran's benefit.

No woman has even seen a professional contest at the National Sporting Club, but the club also stages amateur events, to which ladies are admitted.

Three years ago the club, realizing that its leasehold had only sixteen years to run, quickly raised £25,000 to purchase the freehold of its historic house.

The Cost of Ill-

Health in Canada

LARGELY PREVENTABLE.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 2.—(By Canadian Press)—That 180,000 individuals are every day suffering from disabling illness in Canada, that 54,000 adult males are continuously ill, thereby causing the loss each year of 16,200,000 working days, with an additional probable loss through illness of women workers of 4,800,000 working days; that at least 45 p.c. of all such disablement with its attendant economic loss is preventable, and that the total cost of illness to the Dominion of Canada rises annually to $270,000,000, a sum equal to seventy-five per cent. of the total expenditure of the Federal Government, were some of the facts presented by the Toronto Social Hygiene Council at a public meeting here to-night.

It was stated at the meeting that largely owing to the fact that immigration policies are stressed more than public health measures by Canadian governments, there are 16,000 infants under one year of age who die every year in Canada. Total operative expenditure for Canadian hospitals, asylums and sanitariums reach annually a sum of $50,000,000 exclusive of the costs of private institutions for medical care and the yearly budget for tuberculosis alone is $7,000,000 in Canada.

With a strong health policy at Ottawa it was urged it should be possible to tremendously reduce these costs of illness which are very largely preventable.

Statistics released at this meeting will be put into the hands of every candidate running in the coming election, with a request that he announce his stand on public health questions.

Migrating to Mexico

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 1.—The last batch of the German Mennonite colony which is migrating from Western Canada to Mexico, will be transferred to their new homes so soon as their holdings on the Prairies are disposed of, according to J. F. D. Wiebe, of Herbert, Sask., who is directing the "trek" from the Canadian end.
 "Since we obtained the concessions in 1921, comprising 300,000 acres of land in Mexico, more than 5,000 German Mennonites, who are conscientious objectors, have settled in Mexico. They have received a fairly good crop this year and their stock operations have been successful," Mr. Wiebe declared.
 The Mexican government, he added, has honored its side of the bargain and lived up to the terms of the concession. The newcomers were permitted to have their own schools and churches where the German language was spoken exclusively. The settlers were also permitted to manage their own internal affairs and are exempt from military service.
 In Mr. Wiebe's opinion, the exodus from Canada hardly represents a loss in population. Incoming Russian Mennonites, he pointed out, were taking over the land.

Lame Girl Cured by Prayer

IRON BRACE DROPS FROM LEG AS SHE MAKES NOVENA IN CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

Paralyzed during the ravaging infantile paralysis epidemic in 1916, Mary McIntyre, 11 years old, of No. 59 Otis Street, Cambridge, was cured as if by a miracle when an iron brace broke in two and fell from her leg onto the street almost in front of the Sacred Heart Church in East Cambridge, where she was making a novena to St. Theresa, the "Little Flower of Jesus," for her recovery.

The brace which supported her paralyzed legs is now in the Church of the Sacred Heart before the altar of Saint Theresa, to whom the little girl offered special devotion and prayer, joined by Rev. Hugh F. Blunt, "the poet pastor" of her church.

The sisters of the Order of St. Joseph, by whom she was taught in the Sacred Heart parochial school, and many of the parishioners prayed long and often for the recovery of the little girl.

A novena, which is nine days' devotion, was started by Fr. Blunt, who has a special devotion to "The Little Flower," and has written many poems about the saint, in the Sacred Heart Church recently. Little Mary decided to offer it for the intention of securing a cure, and asked her family to join her.

Every morning before the altar Little Mary, with her father and mother, offered prayers for her recovery. Monday morning, Sept. 28th, assisted by her mother, as was usual, with her school chum, Isabella Kennedy, she started for school. Almost opposite the church she cried:

"Oh! Ma! my brace is hurting me!" She almost dropped in the street, but was caught by her mother and chum.

Mrs. McIntyre says that at that time a strange feeling came over her—a feeling that she had never experienced before. She inspected the brace and found that it was broken just below the knee. There was no trace of an imperfection in the iron, according to her mother.

Mrs. McIntyre said to her daughter, "You will never wear it again. St. Theresa has cured you."

The child left the brace off and has not needed it since. This morning she walked to church and received communion unassisted.

Mr. John Byrne, son of Head Constable Byrne, in a letter to his mother verifies the story as told above by a Boston paper. He lives near the McIntyre family and is acquainted with the little girl. At a service following her cure she was seated inside the Sanctuary rails, and over three thousand people crowded the church to see her.

In the Fire Fiend's Grip

THE SMOKE OF A FOREST FIRE IS AS GOOD AS A DINNER INVITATION TO THE WATCHFUL HAWK.

When a travelling menagerie caught fire near Bedale recently, the only animal that could not be rescued was a kangaroo, which fought so furiously with the men who tried to drag it out that it had to be abandoned.

While most living creatures fear fire they do not all behave alike in case of a sudden outbreak. Some bolt madly away; but to others there is a fascination in flame, and they will actually walk into it.

Horses in a burning stable are extremely difficult to handle. They go crazy with terror, and kick and plunge and scream. It is next to impossible to get them out, the only way being to blindfold them. Then, and then only, will they submit to be led out. Yet even horses can be trained to overcome their terror of fire. The writer has ridden a Texan pony through miles of grass fire, and everyone knows how steady were the horses that drew the old-fashioned fire-engines in all the glare and heat of a great City conflagration.

Nine Lives Useless.

Cats behave oddly in case of fire. Instead of running away, a cat will often hide in the corner of a burning room, and so perish. In such a case the animal seems stupefied. There are, however, notable exceptions, for cats have been known to rouse their owners when fire has broken out during the night.

Dogs are almost the only animals that keep their wits in an outbreak, and, unless penned behind a closed door or in an upper room, a dog seldom loses its life in a fire. There are scores of cases of dogs giving the alarm of fire by barking, or even by jumping on their masters' beds and scratching them awake.

Cage birds are paralyzed by fire; but the hawk tribe seize upon a common or forest fire as an occasion for a feast. They hover above the smoke, ready to seize upon any unfortunate small bird that is blindly trying to make its escape.

St. George is Exposed at Last

The editor of the Maidstone, Sask. "Mirror," in giving his reasons for wishing to discard the Union Jack in favor of some other design, says that "Saint" George was a low parasite who got a paying contract to supply the army with bacon; that he was a rascal and informer; that he became rich through notariety dealings; was eventually dragged to prison (none too soon it is apparent) and eventually got his just deserts by being lynched.

So there you are. Another dream of our youth knocked into a cocked hat. Of course we are quite unable to follow the editor of "The Mirror" in this matter, for we can be candid to the point of stating that we have been unable to decide who St. George was

Lloyd George's Land Scheme

In 1849 the British Isles grew food for 24,000,000 people; to-day their produce feeds only 15,000,000. In these other countries, lands which are not fit for agriculture have been afforested and the forest area has increased in all of them in recent times. In this country you have at least 9,000,000 acres fit for afforestation. If this area a little over 2,000,000 is under trees, and the afforestation which has recently been put forward will increase that area by three-quarters of a million. But there will still be over 7,000,000 acres unplanted.

Now, let us try to see what is wrong with the present system. A committee have, during the past two years, together devoted time and thought and energy to a thorough examination of the problem. This completed and brought up to date the great inquiry carried through in 1910-13. As a whole, it is the most thorough and comprehensive inquiry into the rural land problem ever made in this country, or, I believe, any other.

Their full report will be published in the course of the next few weeks. I cannot in the course of a single speech give you in detail the whole of our proposals, but I am going to lay down a few general principles which may indicate to you the line upon which we have been proceeding.

We have come to the definite conclusion that it is useless to attempt to make the best use of the soil of Britain as long as we preserve the existing system of agricultural tenure. Subsidies, grants in aid and credits standing alone only help to prolong the life of a system doomed to perish. It is true the landlord has hitherto returned out of his rents a large and often a major part of the capital. He supplies the buildings and the repairs, and provides the cost of drainage or the material for drainage. Before the war a considerable number of landlords discharged this function, some adequately, some liberally, others much less so.

But since the war landlords cannot afford any longer to continue their pre-war contribution to the land without abandoning most if not the whole of their rent. The enormous increase in taxation owing to the war has deprived the landlord of the means for discharging his essential part as a capitalist. Landlordism has therefore completely broken down, and nothing has been set up to take its place.

If it is right that the State should resume its authority over the land for the purpose of burying the dead, it is surely also right that it should exercise its ownership where it is necessary it should do so to feed the living.

It is proposed that it should do so, not in order to cultivate the land itself, except for the creation of forests or waste lands, but for the purpose of giving the necessary security to the cultivator of the soil, that he and his children shall reap the full harvest of their labour and enterprise.

Compensation.

When I come to the question of compensation, let me say it is no part of the scheme of the committee of which I am a member that the existing partnership shall be dissolved without paying the departing member the full value of his legitimate interest.

It means that he should be compensated for the real value of his interest in the business and not for deprivation of the unjust power he now possesses by the exercise of this monopoly, artificially to force up value to an extortionate and unremunerative level.

By this scheme the community and the cultivator are therefore only called upon to pay the real productive worth of the land, and not the fictitious and sterile value which comes from the exercise of an unjust monopoly.

On compensation there is another point which is important—that it should be paid not in a capital sum, but in the form of an annual payment. A capital sum would involve the raising of huge sums of money in a market already overcrowded with Government securities for capital sums borrowed by the State. It is fair that the landlord should be secure of the same net income in respect of his land as he is now enjoying—the net, after deducting charges now borne by him for management and repairs.

There must be no increase in rents due to borrowing transactions in respect of the taking over of the land. A fair rent is the first condition of success for any cultivator.

I must here say a word about the thousands and tens of thousands of farmers who have been compelled by post-war conditions and the breaking up of estates since the war to purchase their land when prices were high and to pay in addition monopoly prices in order to save themselves from eviction.

Many of them have been very hard hit. The capital which they ought to have been in a position to put into their business has been absorbed by these extravagant prices. It must be an essential part of a great national scheme of cultivation that exceptional measures should be taken to relieve the sufferer and paralyzing burdens now being borne by the class.

Building Value.
Special provision would have to be made also for cases where land has a real building value. It is essential that the public should have complete power to regain possession of all land it needs for either housing the people, for municipal or national needs, for the necessities of industrial expansion, and that all building values created in the future by the community should ensure to the benefit of the community.

What is our next proposition? That the State must step in and assist liberally in providing the landlord's part of the investment. If the standard of cultivation is to be raised to the level of that of Continental countries there must be capital expenditure on a very considerable scale. But you cannot have credit without security, and there is less security in agriculture than in any other industry in this country. No banker or any other business man would risk investing his capital on such a precarious security as is afforded by the present system of land tenure. The precariousness of tenure has had the sure and certain effect that men have not taken the same risks or displayed the same thought and enterprise in the development of the resources of the soil as they would in the pursuit of some other trade or business.

The first condition, therefore, of increased production from the land is to terminate this vicious and unbusiness-like system of land tenure. But it follows that if the State gives credit and security it is essential that you should not permit indolent, inefficient, and careless cultivators and their children to entrench themselves in the land with complete impunity, defying all interference. Good cultivation is the condition rightly demanded by the nation if it is to grant real security, and especially must it be a condition to the according of liberal national credit to the cultivator. The dogs who use the manager for sleeping-in must be pulled out by the ears.

So much for the cultivated land of England. But there is far too large an area in this country which ought to be productive but which is not—land of a kind which, if it had been in any other country of Western Europe, would have been yielding wealth to the nation.

I am told that there are at least one million acres of water-logged land which could be drained and brought into cultivation. That is a task which you cannot leave to any individual landlord, but the State can usefully and profitably undertake, or assist in draining the area as a whole.

The Labourer.
A national policy of cultivation must fail unless you retain labour on the land and attract labour to the land. During the last 50 years labour has been driven from the soil by bad housing, wages which compare very unfavourably with those paid in other industries, and, above all, by the complete absence of a prospect of advancement for the more intelligent and enterprising among the workers.

"Getting on" for a countryman does not mean getting on to the land. It means getting out to the towns. This is the only country of which it can be said that the vast majority of those who are engaged in the cultivation of the soil constitute a landless class.

There is nothing that irritates the intelligent labourer more than to see acres of excellent land miserably cultivated by an unthrifty farmer while the labourer himself has not even an acre of his own, however much he desires it. The percentage of bad farmers may not be high, but it is high enough to present the community with an excellent opportunity for improving the cultivation of the soil by increasing largely the number of small holdings; and it would pay the State to incur the initial expense of putting the land in order.

This could often be done by forging the anomaly for some years, until the small-holder had been given time to bring the land into profit.

"Cry of Despair."
I am told that there are many engaged in re-planting or cultivation who say, "Why not leave us alone?" They have ceased to expect Protective tariffs, they are not asking for subsidies, and they have all they can hope to obtain for some time in respect of grants in aid of their rates. Therefore, why not leave them alone?

That is a cry either of selfish contentment or of unintelligent despair. It is right that each man should ask himself—landlord, farmer, labourer—"Is this scheme just and fair to me?" But let them also ask themselves. Is it just and fair to my native land to perpetuate a system that is responsible for so much waste of its most valuable treasure—a system which enables the foreigner to beat us in the most important national industry?

A few years ago we put the honour and greatness of the country we love above interest, wealth, and life itself. I appeal that these proposals should be examined, and, if found to be wise, adopted and carried out in that spirit of high and fear less patriotism and resolution which lifted this nation to such heights of endeavour and success but seven years ago.—Daily Mail, Sept. 18.

"Cry of Despair."
I am told that there are many engaged in re-planting or cultivation who say, "Why not leave us alone?" They have ceased to expect Protective tariffs, they are not asking for subsidies, and they have all they can hope to obtain for some time in respect of grants in aid of their rates. Therefore, why not leave them alone?

That is a cry either of selfish contentment or of unintelligent despair. It is right that each man should ask himself—landlord, farmer, labourer—"Is this scheme just and fair to me?" But let them also ask themselves. Is it just and fair to my native land to perpetuate a system that is responsible for so much waste of its most valuable treasure—a system which enables the foreigner to beat us in the most important national industry?

A few years ago we put the honour and greatness of the country we love above interest, wealth, and life itself. I appeal that these proposals should be examined, and, if found to be wise, adopted and carried out in that spirit of high and fear less patriotism and resolution which lifted this nation to such heights of endeavour and success but seven years ago.—Daily Mail, Sept. 18.

October Investment List

A new investment list, containing offerings of securities of Canada's Governments, a number of her important cities, other municipalities, and a list of odd amount bonds is now ready for distribution.

The securities of the Dominion her Provinces and Municipalities are a most satisfactory type of investment, giving a maximum of security. There are, in addition, a number of attractive corporation securities included in the list, which give the investor larger incomes.

The yields vary from 4.25% to about 7.12%.

Copy of investment list on request.

the best all round TONIC and BLOOD BUILDER that is on sale in the country to-day. If you feel "run down" or suffer from lack of energy, get a bottle at once and see how quick it will help you. It will certainly give you a good appetite—THE ONE WHO TAKES IT MUST EAT.

A Good Tonic

is what most people need at this time of the year, as the weather being so changeable, it is hard to avoid colds and other diseases that are prevalent unless your system is kept in good condition.

Thousands of bottles have been sold in the country, and there will be thousands more sold this Fall and Winter. We have our first shipment just in of over 1,500 bottles, with four or five shipments to follow during the month, and can supply all you need.

BRICKS TASTELESS can be purchased everywhere, and if you want results insist on getting BRICKS when you ask for it.
