He said: Mr. Speaker, the effect of this motion is very simple although it takes a little reading to understand clearly what is being done here. This motion sets out the sections of the present Fisheries Act which are being amended by Bill C-32, and, by the wording, brings them back into effect on January 1, 1987, if no legislation has been passed between now and that time. It is the operative clause which gives effect to what we have euphemistically called the "sunset provision". I understand that my hon. friends understand that this has been received and put forward on the advice of our legal counsel and I understand there is agreement to accept it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question on the new Motion No. 11?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the new Motion No. 11?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 11 agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans) moved that Bill C-32, an Act to amend the Fisheries Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, before we pass Bill C-32 on third reading, I would just like to make a few brief remarks. What has been stated by the Minister is correct inasmuch as we have been able to come to an agreement for this Act to be reviewed and the sunset clause to come into effect, eliminating these amendments, at December 31, 1986. I think there is also an agreement that the Government and the committee will, prior to that date, take the Bill to the West Coast and the Atlantic Provinces to try and bring it more into tune with the realities of the fishing industry as they are today.

The fisheries policy, Mr. Speaker, should always be based on the foundation of consultation with user groups before decisions are made. I have noticed lately that decisions have been made without proper consultation. It is incumbent upon the Minister and the Government to fully consult with those most affected by fisheries legislation and policy before decisions are made. I look back to a decision made in 1979 by the then Minister of Fisheries and Oceans in the Clark Government where large trawlers were allowed in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. This affected the lives of many of our inshore fishermen. That decision was made simply because of pressure, which sometimes comes from political sources. As a result, the fishery in that area was set back for a good many years. I could go on and on about the consultation which should or should not have taken place.

In November the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicated the vessel insurance program was going to be reviewed and there would be increased wharfage fees and one thing and another, but there was little or no consultation with the people who were adversely affected by the changes. Therefore, I am glad that the word "consultation" is used in this Bill so that the interests of the user groups are taken into consideration before new policies are adopted. I take the Minister at his word that this consultative process will be upgraded and we will have the opportunity to consult with all fishermen concerned. I think the Minister should heed Motion No. 3 and, as I said, I am taking him at his word.

"Monitor" is a term which has been used here quite extensively in the last number of days and we will be monitoring the situation in the future to make sure that any changes in policy or practice will be made on the basis of consultation. That includes wharfingers. In the past few months wharfingers have been relieved of their duties and I think the Minister should very carefully consider this sort of approach and not allow wharfingers to be appointed on the basis of political whim.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that over the next year, after the committee goes to Atlantic Canada in the fall, I am hoping that a new or very carefully considered Bill will be brought forward and that the committee will have the mandate to study that Bill along with the people who were involved in the industry. I think it is incumbent upon the Minister and the Committee to travel once again to the West Coast and that the next Bill, after the sunset clause comes into effect, will be carefully written after full consideration of the best interests of the fishing community. Once again, my colleague from Comox-Powell River and I have taken the Minister at his word and we will be monitoring his progress in the future.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, the progress of this Bill through the House of Commons and committee has been a rather interesting exercise. It has consumed a large number of hours in the House, and I think one thing which should be developed as a result is the way in which Bills are introduced in order to improve understanding between the Members concerned and to try to expedite passage.

It goes without saying that this legislation has important effects on a great many people. The Minister's attention has certainly been called, in quite a number of ways, to the problems of many of the people dependent upon this industry and the expectations for solutions that they have. Early on he received a list of five important areas in the form of a letter from myself regarding the additional discretionary powers which will be given to him. As of now, those points have not been dealt with, and the position of the Minister is: "Trust me, I will do a good job. I will live up to the election promises of this Government. I have the serious concerns of the fishing industry at heart". Well, the only reason this Bill is passing through the House today is because of this amendment being agreed to which would give the industry the necessary protection. I thank the Minister for considering it seriously and for providing a safety valve.

After several fishing seasons have passed by, we will be able to evaluate its effect in consultation with the people concerned. Our fear, of course, is that this will be the last opportunity for Parliamentarians to involve the public in consideration of the fishing industry. Should the Minister's Cabinet colleagues or the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) overrule an attempt to do the things which are required, this safety valve would at least present an opportunity for Members of Parliament and the public to provide input.

The Minister said that this legislation provides him more power than he would like to see in the hands of a Cabinet Minister, so that this rather unique sunset clause gives us an opportunity to look at the progress which has been made. Having said that, the Minister must attempt to provide a mechanism whereby the industry can be consulted and a process for making that consultation work can be put in place. There must be a mechanism for resolving disputes that does not end up in civil disobedience or a breakdown of the system. The Minister will have the enormous task of developing that.

There are many problems facing native fishermen and native communities which depend upon the fishing industry. As the committee travelled the west coast, many native fishermen indicated that they had been completely ignored by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans. There is no doubt about that, Mr. Speaker. It was established time and again. The Minister has a major responsibility to ensure that the people who depend on that resource are consulted and given access to the decision-making process.

With regard to amendments, there was an interesting one for which the Minister will have to answer. The Conservative Party chose to defeat an amendment which would provide for sports fisheries within the area of federal Government jurisdiction. In light of some of the statements made in the past by the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser), he will have an interesting job justifying to the sports fishing community why the Government defeated a motion which it allegedly supports. That issue must be resolved.

There are many communities in the country that depend to a very large degree on the fishing industry. Over the years we have watched the centralization of the fishing industry through the movement of processing plants to larger areas and the new phenomenon of trucking salmon from the point at which it is caught and landed hundreds and hundreds of miles to processing plants. That eventually destroys jobs and the economic base of small communities for want of an important infrastructure. Through the actions of the federal Government, a number of other factors have come into play which have made those communities economically weaker.

As the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and the senior Minister from British Columbia, we ask him to study that problem which, as yet, remains unsolved. An example on the west coast is that of the Campbell River Indian Band which requested assistance in putting in a freezer unit at Port Hardy in order to preserve jobs which are now being trucked away to Vancouver. Another example is that of Bella Coola where it is difficult to land and sell fish because the ice plant burned down a number of years ago and the program which provided it has expired. The Minister is aware that those coastal communities are in tough shape after having been through the recession and a number of extremely poor fishing seasons. There is a need to consider those problems over two years.

Those problems are very real. The Minister knows that they exist and he has a responsibility to move during the next two seasons. His actions and those of the Government will be judged by the user group communities which depend on it. I believe we have better legislation due to this sunset facility which allows Parliamentarians and the public to pass judgment in the future on what we presently have.

I know that we have travelled a long and difficult road. I would like to thank my colleagues on the committee and the Minister himself. He has been difficult to convince at times, but I think we have made a very positive move which will yield very positive results.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the remarks made by my hon. friends. It should be clearly understood that Bill C-32 was not intended to be an overhaul of the entire Fisheries Act. I know that the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) knows this to be so, despite what he has said. To argue since March that Bill C-32 should take into account every possible eventuality within the experience of fisheries on both coasts, inland, and in the north, is not an accurate approach to the amendment which has been proposed.

Bill C-32 is an amendment to provide the authority, under law, to the Minister to manage the fisheries of Canada. That authority has been cast in doubt by decisions made on the west coast a year ago. It has been put further in doubt by a court case which is proceeding in the Province of New Brunswick at this very moment. There has been the suggestion that the Government has not consulted enough. I defy anyone looking through my diary for the last eight months, and looking through the diaries of previous Fisheries Ministers, to find any Fisheries Minister who has been to more places and listened to more people than I have during the time that I have been Minister of Fisheries and Oceans.

I have done that because it is my view that one cannot be Minister of Fisheries and Oceans by remaining in Ottawa. One must be where the fish and fishermen are. The vast majority of people involved in the fishing industry in Canada know that someone must have the authority to manage the fishing industry and make decisions for it.

Having said that, I was the fisheries critic for a number of years and I noticed that people within the fishing community have been concerned about decisions that are made in an arbitrary way without real consultation. To the extent that that happened, the interests of everyone may not have been properly taken into account before a decision was made. As a consequence of that, we are in the process of establishing an Atlantic Regional Council in an attempt to focus the fishing community into one place in order to have meaningful consultation. On the west coast we have the Minister's Advisory Committee which, while not perfect, is at least of assistance.

In addition to those formal structures, there is also a wide process of consultation with user groups, fishermen, and fishing communities on the establishment of fishing plans, fishing schedules, and opening dates on both coasts. To pretend that there is no consultation going on now is not accurate. Through this Bill the Fisheries Minister is now mandated to take into account the interests of the user groups, and that must be done on the basis of consultation. I believe that there is unanimous agreement among all three parties that that is an advance which reflects the wish of the fishing community. I want to assure Hon. Members that it reflects my own desire to ensure that the interests of user groups are taken into account through real consultation.

One of our difficulties has been to legislate the requirement for consultation. That has caused most of our difficulty with this Bill. It is extremely difficult to determine wording for consultation if you cannot identify the groups with which you are supposed to consult. In that respect this legislation is perhaps not satisfactory. Perhaps between now and the time when I bring further legislation into the House we can develop a consultative mechanism which can be more clearly defined.

If that is possible, then I most certainly shall put it forward and support it. However, I want to give a word of warning to my friends in the New Democratic Party. A very large degree of responsibility now lies on their shoulders not to come up with vague, rhetorical talk about what would be desirable in a perfect world but rather wording that passes the test of what is good legislation and which can be upheld as a consequence of that wording.

This spring, we sent the Fisheries Committee to the West Coast. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River knows perfectly well that that committee travelled because I was determined that it would travel. He also knows that I may send him, along with other Members of the committee, to Atlantic Canada. I may leave him there for months if he has any difficulty understanding the problems of that particular part of the fishery.

It must be clearly understood that I am going to ask the user groups to send me specific recommendations and to define the wording properly so as to improve this Bill. The search for those recommendations cannot be left indefinitely. I say to the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) and the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River that this Bill has been in the process for a long time—since March. It is my view that while the Bill is perhaps not perfect, it goes a long way to at least establishing some certainty within a legal regime until 1986 and gives us an opportunity to examine the provisions during the interim.

We will do that in order to determine if an improvement can be made. It is not my desire to be an autocrat, but it is my determination to be sure that in the interest of conservation of the fish stocks and all the people who make up the fishing communities in Canada that the fishery be properly managed.

My friend, the Hon. House Leader for the NDP, indicates that he wishes to make a comment. Of course, I would be pleased to give him the floor.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, what I am proposing to ask is somewhat of a departure from the normal practice, but I have had an opportunity to read the amendment that we have passed. Before the Minister concludes—which I know he has not yet done—could he indicate whether I misunderstand the amendment or if it is in fact as I read it to be. The amendment as provided to me consists of two pieces of paper. It reads, "New clauses 5 to 9, page 2".

The amendments which we have accepted say, in essence, that the definition of "fish" as contained in the Fisheries Act is repealed. Repealed is the key word. It goes on to say that a new definition is now in place. The original definition is repealed and a new definition has been put in place.

Subclause 2 indicates that the definition of "fishery" is also repealed and a new definition is now in place. It says that Section 2(1) of the Fisheries Act is repealed, that paragraph 34(m) of the Fisheries Act is repealed and a new section has been added, indicating certain authorizations. Section 4 of the Act is repealed.

Section 9 then comes into force. What I have described so far are Clauses 5, 6, 7 and 8. In each case, the original section was repealed and in three cases new definitions have been brought in. In Clause 5, Clause 6 and Clause 7, there is a new definition and in Clause 8, Section 4 is repealed.

This particular amendment has repealed existing definitions in the main and has replaced them with new definitions. However, Clause 9 says that the new Clauses 5 to 8 shall come into force on January 1, 1987. On the one hand, we have repealed the existing definitions and put new definitions in place but they do not come into force until January 1, 1987.

Mr. Fraser: I can explain it.

Mr. Deans: I welcome the explanation.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the House Leader did not have an opportunity to go over this in some detail.

As the House will recall, I said a few moments ago that this is not particularly easy to understand. If we consider Clause 5 of the motion which the House Leader was looking at, it says that the definition of fish in Section 2 of the Fisheries Act as enacted by Clause 1(1) of this Act—which is Bill C-32—is repealed and the following substituted therefor. What is substituted therefor are the words that presently exist in the Fisheries Act before Bill C-32 has any effect. That is the pattern throughout the clauses.

Mr. Deans: That explains it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: By unanimous consent, shall I see it as two o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY

REQUEST THAT FEDERAL SALES TAX NOT APPLY TO CONTRACTS SIGNED BEFORE MAY 23

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, one of the tax measures announced in the Budget brought down by the Conservative Government on May 23 is having a disastrous effect on the construction industry. Tens of thousands of jobs in the prefab concrete sector will be lost as a result of the federal sales tax imposed by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

This Government has no idea how the construction industry works and has levied a sales tax while failing to give sufficient notice so that contracts already signed can be carried out before the new tax becomes effective. This Government has helped to increase the cost of residential construction, and considering the way this tax is being introduced, it will cause Canadian contractors to go bankrupt and thousands of Canadians will be jobless. In many cases, the 6 per cent federal sales tax is higher than the profit margin of prefab concrete contractors. The Minister of Finance should announce immediately that the tax does not apply to contracts signed before May 23, in order to give the parties concerned a chance to adjust their prices to allow for the new tax.

HUMAN RIGHTS

VANCOUVER SIKH COMMUNITY

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rose in the House on December 7, 1984, and gave a statement about the troubles of the Sikh community in Vancouver after people on all sides told me that they were threatened and intimidated.

I rise today to express the shock and sadness of the Indo-Canadian community in my Province of British Columbia at the tragic crash of the Air-India jetliner.

All the facts on the crash are not in yet so I will not comment on it. However, I want to take this opportunity to tell Canadians that the Indo-Canadian community in Canada is a peaceloving community. The Sikh community is an overwhelmingly peace loving community in Canada.

Sikhs, who believe that human beings are creatures of the supernatural and therefore equal, pray every day in the temples in my city of Vancouver that God will be kind to each and every one. That includes enemies as well as friends.

● (1400)

Whatever the results of this crash investigation, I ask Canadians not to judge a community by a few extremists. Mahatma Gandhi once said that, if you take an eye for an eye, the whole world would go blind.

CRASH OF AIR-INDIA FLIGHT 182—SYMPATHY FOR VICTIMS' RELATIVES

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, mere words cannot adequately express the shock and sense of loss that all Canadians felt at the terrible human tragedy that occurred on Air-India Flight 182.

I know all Members of this House will join with me today to express the greatest sympathy to all of the families and friends of those who lost their lives. On a personal note, I wish to express my deep sympathy to the members of my community in Etobicoke who lost friends and loved ones.

Over the past few days the media have been quick to speculate on the possibility of sabotage aboard the Air-India flight. Extreme caution must be exercised in this situation. A complete investigation needs to be done before an accurate assessment of the cause of the crash can be determined. The last thing we need in Canada is to fuel animosities between Canadians on the basis of, as yet, unsubstantiated facts.

With this in mind, Mr. Speaker, the Government must not hesitate to tighten security procedures at all Canadian international airports. No measure should be ignored that could increase the security and safety of Canadians travelling abroad.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

NORWEGIAN VETERANS' REUNION AT ONTARIO TRAINING BASE

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the 2,000 Norwegian war veterans who trained at "Little Norway" near Gravenhurst, Ontario, during the Second World War. Saturday, June 22, was the fortieth anniversary of the closing of the air base. A plaque was unveiled at Muskoka Airport commemorating the airmen who trained there.

I would like to commend and thank Lieutenant Colonel Svein Aaser, Defence Attaché at the Norwegian Embassy in Ottawa. Colonel Aaser brought greetings on behalf of the Norwegian Government, and a special letter from the King of Norway. It is interesting to note that many of the airmen who trained at Little Norway married Canadian girls and settled in Canada. Originally an international air show had been planned, with various types of aircraft invited to participate or be on display. Unfortunately this participation had to be cancelled a few months ago because of a conflict of dates when Trenton changed its airshow from September to June 22.

Mayor Don Holstock hosted a reception for the visiting airmen on their arrival June 14. All veterans from Muskoka formed a welcoming committee for our Norwegian visitors. The red carpet was rolled out for the visitors by Mayor Jim Lang of Bracebridge, who hosted a wine and cheese party. Mayor Sheila Hatch of Muskoka Lakes greeted the guests at a luncheon in Bala. Mayor Gorden Snell of Huntsville hosted a coffee party. Another highlight for the visiting Norwegian airmen was a boat trip on RMS Segwun, and a tour of the Ontario Fire College.

Mr. Speaker: I must advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

SMALL BUSINESS

EFFECT OF SALES TAX ON NOVA SCOTIA ROAD CONTRACTORS

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the Nova Scotia Road Builders Association represents the road building and heavy construction industry in my provide. Contractors who have a multi-million dollar investment in plant and equipment, and who employ more than 3,500 men and women, are small businessmen, the people the Government has claimed were ignored and unfairly treated in the past, the people the Government wants to encourage and support.

But the Government's actions belie its words. The proposed changes in the May 23 Budget with respect to the 6 per cent sales tax that will apply, among other things, to ready-mix concrete and asphalt paving mix, are a direct affront to the very principles of free enterprise that the Government supposedly espouses. Provincial and Municipal Governments will not pay that 6 per cent sales tax; the burden is falling on the small businessman. The road construction industry in Nova Scotia is one that has been battered by years of recession and is only just now beginning to re-establish any kind of a profit marging. The imposition of this sales tax is the last thing the industry needs at this time.

Already the proposal to implement the sales tax is creating chaos. There is work out to tender; concrete and asphalt will be used. Contractors do not know if they should ignore the 6 per cent sales tax and incur the Government's wrath, or to include it and not get work. A wonderful Catch-22 situation.

Surely the Government of the day can delay these tax changes until January, 1986. In the interim there will be time to get systems in place, and time for contractors to negotiate with their customers on how this tax should be collected and remitted.

DISASTERS

CRASH OF AIR-INDIA FLIGHT 182

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian community with origins in India is transfixed with grief this week. The sudden destruction of Air-India Flight 182 off the coast of Ireland has taken the lives of 329 persons, most of them Canadian citizens of Indian origin.

It is possible that a bomb caused this tragedy. It is all too easy in such circumstances for media speculation to focus on a crime and its perpetrators. It is all too easy for popular emotions to be stirred up. People forget that individuals are innocent in our legal system until they have been found guilty in the courts, and that is is individuals who commit crimes, not whole communities.

The Indo-Canadian community has been living through very trying times. The desire by some to achieve more autonomy for Punjab culminated in the Indian Army's assault, just over a year ago, on the Golden Temple in Amritsar. The assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gradhi last October was followed by several days of fierce anti-Sikh violence in Indian cities and towns. If frustration of Sikh desires for more autonomy lead to militant action by some persons, it is clear that the community generally has paid dearly for these excesses.

Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has aided the Sri Lankan Government in ending the violence that has gripped that neighbouring country. I call on our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to offer his assistance to the Indian Government in ending the violence that India is experiencing.

U.S.S.R.—FLIGHT OF LITHUANIAN, VIKTORAS PETKUS

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, Viktoras Petkus, a member of the Lithuanian Helsinki Group, has been arrested time and again for his visible activities and vocal advocacy on behalf of religious freedom in Soviet occupied Lithuania. Petkus was first arrested at the age of 17 in 1947, and sentenced to 10 years of hard labour for his participation in a Catholic youth organization. He was released in 1953, but was once again imprisoned in 1957 for his part in the distribution of religious books written by Lithuanian emigré writers before the occupation.

Viktoras Petkus continues to be adopted by Amnesty International as a prisoner of conscience because of his non-violent exercise of the right to freedom of expression. The most tragic aspect of the Petkus case is his ever-worsening health. In 1978 the Soviets sentenced him to seven years in prison, three years special regime camp, and five years exile, on a charge of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. Those years of medical neglect, followed by an operation for a malignant tumor on his face, have cost him his health. Petkus is still alive, but in grave danger.

I call upon the House of Commons to direct the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to call upon the Ambassador of the Soviet Union to demand that Petkus be released immediately, and to send a clear reminder to the Soviet Government of its obligations as a signator of the Helsinki Accords.

MINES AND MINING

FIRST ANNUAL WORKERS MEMORIAL DAY SERVICE

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, on June 20, 1984, more than a kilometre below the surface in the Falconbridge mine, a rockburst occurred which resulted in the tragic deaths of four miners.

Last Thursday in Sudbury I had the honour of attending, together with the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton), the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith), the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), and the Hon. Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Darling), the first Workers Memorial Day service. The purpose of this service, organized by local citizens and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union, was to pay respect to and to remember all those miners and others who had given their lives in the production of mineral products. It is to become a national annual event.

Representatives of labour, management, and Government consistently and thoughtfully spoke about the need for accelerated efforts for better health and safety conditions in the workplace.

In the process the Minister of State for Mines described a new, five-year, $4.2 million co-operative research program aimed at eliminating rockbursts, one of the major hazards facing underground miners. The federal Government, the Province of Ontario, Cambell Red Lake Mines Ltd., Falconbridge Ltd., and Inco Ltd., will each contribute $1.4 million. This is a fine example of a partnership in progress between government and industry. The threat of rockbursts will increase as Canadian mines progress to greater depths. This research is thus necessary and timely to ensure safe and highly productive mining practices.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his 90 seconds have expired.

OLD AGE SECURITY

STATEMENTS MADE BY PRIME MINISTER DURING ELECTION CAMPAIGN

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, during the last election campaign, all Canadians heard the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) talking about his roots in Baie-Comeau and his Aunt Jeanne who raised him when he was a small boy. Recently, and especially last Thursday, the Prime Minister went so far as to deny the very existence of the woman who raised him and, as he said at the time, had even changed his diapers. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that Aunt Jeanne does exist, and I had a chance to give the Prime Minister her telephone number so he could apologize for this disclaimer.

Mr. Speaker, we are used to the Prime Minister going back on his promises, but to renounce one's own aunt is simply appalling. And that is why I hope, first of all, that the Prime Minister had the decency to call his Aunt Jeanne to apologize for saying she was dead, and second, the best way to show his gratitude would certainly be to keep his hands off her Old Age Security pension. That is what she wants, that is why she signed the petition and that is what she hopes the Prime Minister will do.

PENSIONS

BUDGET EFFECT—PENSIONERS' COMMENTS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, as my statement today I should like to read into the record comments which I have received from senior citizens living in the riding of Comox-Powell River. Their words say it all. The first one says:

I could not believe my ears when hearing those irrational Conservative arguments devoid of a sense of fairness and justice by those right-wing Neanderthals. Imagine those unfortunate pensioners whose pensions stand between them and destitution—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Skelly: It is extremely funny when about 650,000 old age pensioners live below the poverty line and this is their reaction! The second says:

The Government's blatant display before Parliament and the Canadian people of partisan support for the rich at the expense of the poor reveals an arrogance born of confidence in their ability to crush any opposition no matter how old or frail.

The next one says:

As a senior citizen with the aspirations of reaching up to the comparative luxury of the poverty line, the attack upon indexation comes as a blow. I am not one of those seniors mentioned by the Finance Minister who wishes to bear a disproportionately larger burden in combating the deficit.

A fourth says:

We have already lived through a depression, a world war, the Korean war, a major recession, and now the Government wants us to reduce the deficit.

It continues: "If you are in the position, please tell the Minister of Finance one of your constituents thinks he is a—", and the term is unparliamentary, so I will not use it, "—for picking on old age pensioners . . . If you think"—"is too unparliamentary to be used"—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his 90 seconds have expired.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

ROLE PLAYED BY RENÉ LÉVESQUE IN POLITICAL, SOCIAL, AND ECONOMIC EVOLUTION OF QUEBEC

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to join all those who paid tribute to the Premier of Quebec who announced that he intends to retire from active political life.

Mr. Speaker, no one can deny that René Lévesque has played a major role in the political, social and economic development of Quebec in the last 25 years. In addition to nationalizing electric power utilities in Quebec and founding a political party which in many respects remains a model of good management, René Lévesque has especially helped Quebecers take pride in their origins and be recognized and respected not only in Canada but throughout the world. René Lévesque always had a passionate love for Quebec, and his forthright speech has made him one of the most likable and most respected politicians in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, although his political ideals never materialized, like a true democrat he agreed to go on serving his province.

The day after our party was elected, René Lévesque called this event a great challenge, and I am convinced, Mr. Speaker, that he would be the first to rejoice in the good relations that have existed between Quebec and Ottawa since September 4.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to wish Mr. Lévesque a happy and well-deserved retirement, although we all know he will continue to follow events in his province with great interest and a critical eye.

HEALTH

LACK OF PARAMEDIC SERVICES

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, thousands of people die every year due to heart attacks, car accidents, drownings, and other sudden and unexpected emergencies. Many lives could be saved if life-saving emergency care could be administered immediately at the scene of an accident.

Canadians live with a false sense of security in this regard. On television we see American paramedics in action, whereas in Canada they exist only in British Columbia and Alberta, with limited pilot projects in Toronto and Hamilton.

The first national advanced life support competition was held in Ottawa recently and involved teams of paramedics and emergency medical attendants, many of whom had to learn their skills as volunteers. They represented major urban and rural areas across the country. The ultimate goal of this event was to promote emergency medical services through sensitizing the public, the medical community, elected officials, administrators, and the media, to the fact that pre-hospital emergency care can save lives. I want to congratulate all the competing teams, especially the winners from Toronto who will be competing next month in the United States on behalf of Canada.

CRASH OF AIR-INDIA FLIGHT 182—EXPLOSION AT TOKYO AIRPORT—OFFICIAL CONDOLENCES

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has asked me to express in the House the Government's deep sorrow over the two weekend air disasters. The destruction of Air-India Flight 182 off the coast of Ireland brought untimely and tragic death to 329 passengers and crew, the majority of whom were Canadians. An explosion at Tokyo Airport killed two Japanese citizens and wounded several others.

I cannot over-emphasize the seriousness with which the Government views these tragic and sorrowful episodes.

[Translation]

Yesterday, the Prime Minister of Canada expressed his condolences to the families of those who lost their lives in this terrible accident.

The Prime Minister has announced the Government's firm resolve to do everything in its power to determine the cause of this disaster.

[English]

On behalf of the Government the Prime Minister has expressed his condolences to the families and friends of those who perished in this tragedy, and I am sure that every Canadian shares their grief in their bereavement.

Both of the flights which became the focus of these tragic episodes originated in Canada, one involving a Canadian airline, the other, of course, Air-Indian Flight 182.

[Translation]

At this time, the Government has no evidence that the Air Indian disaster was caused by an act of terrorism.

[English]

There is at this time no direct evidence that either of these episodes is linked to the dark context of international terrorism which appears to have burst out anew in the past few weeks. Nevertheless, the course of prudence would indicate that these episodes be treated in such a context.

[Translation]

The Government has taken steps to prevent a recurrence of these tragic episodes. Yesterday, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) ordered a review of airport security.

[English]

Security measures have been intensified at all Canadian airports, with emphasis on the scrutiny of baggage.

I want to inform the House that we have begun a major investigation, involving the security forces of several countries, to determine whether indeed the two tragedies are the work of terrorists and whether there is a link between the two episodes. If that proves to be the case, every effort will be made to identify and bring the guilty parties to justice.

We will not allow this country to become a killing ground for international terrorism.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: To honour the memory of those who lost their lives in this disaster, flags on all Canadian government buildings throughout Canada and around the world will fly at half-mast tomorrow.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Official Opposition I rise with deep sorrow to express our profound sympathy and condolences to the families of all those who lost their lives, the majority of them Canadian, in the apparent explosion of Air-India Flight 182 from Canada to the United Kingdom.

I would also like to express our sympathy and condolences to the families of those Japanese baggage handlers who were killed or injured in the apparent explosion of a bomb in luggage taken off a Canadian Pacific flight from Vancouver to Tokyo.

In addition, we express our shock not only about these tragic events but also about the strong likelihood that they are the result of terrorist actions. If that is the case, we can only have and express feelings of revulsion about conduct that takes innocent lives in this way.

We call on the Government to do everything possible to assist the families of those who lost their lives in the Air-India explosion, as well as the Japanese families affected by the explosion in Tokyo. We call on the Government to take strong and immediate action to prevent any future incidents of this kind from taking place in connection with flights linked with Canada or with Canadian airports.

The Government must move immediately to determine how and why these tragedies occurred. The Government must join with all nations to take concerted and strong action against all acts of terrorism, not just those involving airlines, and not just after the fact, but hopefully to prevent them from taking place.

Finally, now is the time for all Canadians of every origin to unite with their fellow Canadians of East Indian origin, but not just in sympathy. We must join with them in solidarity and unity in their grief. We must join with them as fellow members of our Canadian family, all of us desiring to live in peace and harmony together in Canada and in the world.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Official Opposition, we want to express our condolences to the families of those who lost their lives in these tragic accidents. We must do everything we can to prevent a recurrence of such episodes.

[English]

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I join with all Canadians in extending our deepest sympathy at the tragic loss of life in the crash of Air-India Flight 182. When this plane, flying from Toronto to Bombay, plunged 9,500 metres into the ocean, it took 329 people to their deaths. The magnitude of the suffering is literally indescribable.

We share the grief and sorrow of the bereaved relatives and friends. Our hearts go out to the families. Many of the victims are members of the Indo-Canadian community. Disaster has shattered their peaceful lives in this their new land.

We share the deeply felt sorrow of parents and grandparents, husbands and wives, children and grandchildren. Many of the innocent victims were on a journey of family reunion, in many instances after many years spent continents apart. The trip of their dreams was tragically transformed into a deathly nightmare.

The cause of this horrible tragedy is yet to be exactly determined. Circumstances indicate strongly that there was a mid-air explosion. I would however, like to mention at this time the heroic efforts of the Irish, British, and U.S. Air Force and Navy rescue teams who, with great will and determination, and attempting to find an answer by searching to obtain the aircraft's "black box" from the bottom of the ocean. This will be the most reliable source of information on the cause of this horrible disaster.

[Translation]

It is not enough to shed tears and express our sympathy. We must all work together on an international scale to prevent a recurrence of this catastrophe. Countries all over the world must co-operate in providing the best possible standard of security for innocent travellers. We owe it to the victims of this disaster to do everything in our power to allay the concerns of Canadians and people throughout the world.

[English]

Steps have been taken to improve airport security. Every nation in the world faces the challenge. Increasing acts of terrorism in Beirut, Frankfurt, and possibly now on Canadian soil, make concerted international action more urgent and pressing. Our nation can and should play a leading role. International terrorism is on the agenda at the 40th session of the UN in September. The political will to fight this international blight must be an urgent priority at that session of the United Nations. We, all the peoples of the world, must see an end to this international monstrosity.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in light of the statements of sympathy that have been expressed, in the usual tradition following these incidents I think you will find an inclination to agree to extend the Question Period for the normal period of time, starting now.

Mr. Speaker: Question Period will therefore last for 45 minutes until 3.12 p.m.

AIR SAFETY

PROTECTION OF CANADIAN PASSENGERS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, as I rise to ask my first question to the Minister of Transport I want to express again on behalf of the Official Opposition our deepest condolences to the families so tragically affected by the terrible incident of Air-India Flight 182. We pray for them, and indeed hope that we can find ways to prevent a recurrence of this horrible disaster.

This leads me to ask the Minister of Transport what steps are being taken to protect Canadian passengers. Can the Minister of Transport guarantee air travellers that his Government has now taken every appropriate measure to protect them?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think first of all we should acknowledge that Canada does have one of the best safety and security mechanisms in place. That has been alluded to by international aviation authorities, by the Canadian Airline Pilots' Association, and by the American Airline Pilots' Association, but I believe it is fair to say that, in view of the activities over the last few days, and particularly the last weeks, it is important that all our security and surveillance systems be re-evaluated.

To that purpose the Prime Minister has ordered a full evaluation of the safety and security of all airports and airlines.

As well, we have put in place new measures to ensure that all checked baggage will be adequately screened or inspected. We stepped up the security with respect to passengers and carry-on luggage. We put a 24-hour delay on all cargo shipments, with the exception of perishables, and we are bringing into, at least our international airports for the time being, new equipment which will assist in the inspection of baggage, which equipment we hope will be arriving before the end of this week.

CRASH OF AIR-INDIA FLIGHT 182

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Prime Minister confirmed that the Indian Government requested, apparently on numerous occasions, in the days and weeks proceeding the terrible event, increased security for Air-India flights, and for Indian diplomats in Canada. What has the Minister done specifically to respond to these pressing requests?

● (1430)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, from time to time there were requests for additional security by Air-India authorities. There were extra RCMP deployed both at Toronto and at Mirabel, as there has been for some time. I should point out to the House that there was no indication that there was a specific threat to Flight 182 and, as a result, the extraordinary precautionary measures were not put in place. However, whenever the Air-India people had requested additional security or assistance with regard to the surveillance of passengers and baggage, and whenever there were any suspicions and such requests had come to us, we responded on every occasion.

STATIONING OF RCMP OFFICERS AT AIRPORTS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, in light of the incident, the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association has requested that the Minister abandon his ill advised plan to remove RCMP security officers from Canadian airports. Is the Minister ready today to announce that indeed he will not go ahead with such a plan, and the RCMP not only will continue to perform at airports but will receive appropriate resources and money to do the thorough checking that they are supposed to do?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, this was a decision that was partially implemented by the previous administration. The Hon. Member will know that there was a review in 1975, 1976, and again in 1981, conducted by the Air Transport Association of Canada, Transport Canada officials, and the RCMP. At that time it was determined that the removal of RCMP from Class 2 airports would not undermine the level of security of those airports. However, I would like to inform the Hon. Member, and all Hon. Members of the House, that in view of the Prime Minister's statement yesterday wherein he ordered a full evaluation of the security systems in place at our airports and the security of our airlines, we are going to defer that decision pending the outcome of this review.

DISASTERS

AIR-INDIA CRASH—REMOVAL OF BAGGAGE AT MIRABEL AIRPORT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Through you, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the Minister that the House notes and appreciates the actions that have already been initiated by the Minister, and the announcement that he has just made.

The Minister knows that several suspicious pieces of baggage were removed from Flight 182 at Mirabel. The superintendent of airport security at Mirabel has stated that Air-India broke a basic rule by not notifying the Department of Transport of the suspicious baggage. Perhaps the Minister could clear up some confusion. He indicated yesterday that, when Transport Canada is notified of these incidents, a thorough investigation of the plane and all baggage on board takes place. On the other hand an official of his Department has said that regularly baggage is removed from planes and flights continue without further investigation. What is the proper procedure to be followed in those circumstances?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I repeat that in this particular case Transport Canada was not apprised of any specific threat against Flight 182. Therefore, the basic normal Air-India precautions and surveillance that they conduct were conducted in their usual manner. I repeat that we did have the additional RCMP security officers deployed as requested.

With respect to the specific question regarding the luggage, I would like to say to the House, and to the Hon. Member, that this is the subject of a very delicate and intensive investigation by the RCMP and others. While there has been a lot of speculation and conjecture, I would hope that the Hon. Member would agree with me that at this point in time, prior to our ascertaining all the facts, it would probably be inappropriate for us to engage in any further speculation. I can assure the Hon. Member that this investigation will be carried out with the utmost of thoroughness and, until we receive more factual information, I would appreciate it if the Hon. Member would agree with me that it would be inappropriate to comment further on that point.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I want to assure the Minister that I appreciate the delicate nature of the investigation with respect to particular pieces of luggage.

ROLE OF DEPARTMENT AND RCMP

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister about procedure. We are told that the RCMP in Montreal were called to investigate the luggage in question while Flight 182 was still on the ground, but when they in fact arrived the plane had just departed a few minutes before. Given the statement of the Minister that Transport Canada, when informed of these kinds of incidents, does a thorough investigation of every piece of luggage on the aircraft, why was there no procedure in place, even though the plane had left, to have either the RCMP or Transport Canada request that that aircraft return to Montreal so that a thorough investigation of all the luggage on board could take place before it continued its journey across the Atlantic?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, once again may I repeat to the Hon. Member that Flight 182 was not designated as a flight with a specific threat. As a result there were no extraordinary procedures implemented at that time. Had there been, that would have been the normal course. Furthermore, I repeat that, to the best of my knowledge, our people were not informed of this until the aeroplane had left.

CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, in light of the statement made by the Prime Minister yesterday, I direct this question either to the Deputy Prime Minister or the Minister of Transport. The Prime Minister said yesterday that there is to be a special investigation. I would like to know from the Deputy Prime Minister, or the Minister of Transport, who is conducting this special investigation. Is it an in-house investigation by the Ministry of Transport, is it a combination of the Ministry of Transport and representatives of airlines, or is it a throughly independent investigation?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is aware that the accident per se is being investigated under the auspices of the Indian authorities, and that is consistent with international convention. Canadian authorities, United States authorities, U.K. authorities, and Irish authorities are also involved in the investigation process. Investigations having to do with security, and any criminal investigations, are being undertaken primarily by the RCMP.

SCREENING OF PASSENGERS AND HAND LUGGAGE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, there has been a standard in place for a long time now, dealing with the screening of passengers and hand luggage. As the Minister well knows, the screening of checked baggage, other parcels, and all other things that are placed aboard aircraft, is left entirely to the discretion of the various airlines. Yet the Ministry of Transport owns and operates the airports in Canada.

I compliment the Minister on the quickness with which he has instituted full security arrangements since Sunday. However, is Transport Canada going to return to the practices of the past, or will the Ministry of Transport now assume its own responsibility for the screening of checked baggage and all other items that are boarded onto aircraft?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would say to the Hon. Member, and other Hon. Members, that, as a minimum, Canada has always fulfilled the standards and recommended practices of international convention. I think the Hon. Member is aware that most of these arrangements are done through international convention. Canada's practices, have always been superior to the minimum requirements advocated by these various international conventions. In fact Canada has been in the forefront in terms of it constantly striving to improve security and surveillance in our airport system. As recently as the Economic Summit in Bonn, Canada played a very major leadership role in trying to improve our security and surveillance in the airport system.

So, Mr. Speaker, to the extent that we can upgrade those standards consistent with the international convention, we are certainly prepared to do so. In fact it will be my intention to attend the ICAO convention tomorrow in Montreal to speak to this very important issue.

REQUEST THAT DEPARTMENT ASSUME RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, surely it is obvious that leaving this matter up to the discretion of scores of airlines which come into and leave our country is not good enough. That is painfully obvious. Will the Ministry of Transport from now on be responsible, in co-operation with the airlines, the RCMP, and other security agencies—without us becoming complacent a few weeks later—for the security, screening, and surveillance of all articles and human beings who enter aircraft on international flights and, in many instances, domestic flights, and not leave it up to the discretion of airlines which obviously try to save money every chance they get? When do we put an end to the saving of money—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There are a number of other Hon. Members who wish to ask questions.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member heard of the very firm declaration made by the Prime Minister yesterday and of his full commitment, and that of the Government, to deal with this very important issue. I think that is clear evidence that the Government of Canada is taking a leadership role, in conjunction with the airlines and the aviation community, to deal with this very important issue. However, I believe it is more important to deal with this matter in a co-operative way rather than simply declaring an edict, with all the inherent difficulties which may occur.

The Prime Minister's commitment yesterday was to undertake a complete evaluation of Canada's airport surveillance and security system and, as well, the security and safety of our airlines. To that end we will be instituting any measures necessary in order to ensure that that is carried out.

EVALUATION OF AIRPORT SAFETY PROCEDURES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport as well. I can sympathize and respect the kind of difficulties the Government has in trying to establish a clear set of directions on this question. But I want to ask the Minister a very important question concerning the proposed evaluation announced by the Prime Minister.

I believe the Minister would acknowledge that there have been a number of quite confusing and contradictory statements and judgments about the various roles and responsibilities of agencies under his jurisdiction, and under the Government generally. I would want to suggest to the Minister, by way of a question, that it is far more important to ensure that such an evaluation be seen as not having any vested interest attached and, therefore, should be totally independent in its point of view.

Would the Minister not agree that it would be more appropriate to have the Canadian Aviation safety Board, which is an independent agency not tied into the Government, undertake the investigation into the security system at Canadian airports, as its mandate allows, in order to ensure that it is an independent study and not one which is done by in-house agencies or organizations of the Government itself?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that we will be relying upon the advice, wisdom, and recommendations which come forth from the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. I think the Hon. Member has presented a good suggestion. However, I want to remind him, and Hon. Members of the House, that in the Prime Minister's announcement yesterday he requested an examination of all aspects of airport and airline security under the auspices of the Secretary of the Cabinet and senior security and intelligence officials.

I think that the element of senior security and intelligence officials surely puts that within the ambit of some independence. However, we will certainly not disregard any recommendations which the Canadian Aviation safety Board should bring forth. In fact we would welcome them.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR INVESTIGATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, we certainly recognized the necessity to have a number of agencies and officials involved. However, the Aviation Safety Board is not only independent but it can make its findings public so that there can not be any ease of security.

I would again ask the Minister if it would not be more appropriate at least to have the direct responsibility for the investigation and evaluation under the auspices of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board so that it can follow its proper mandate, not only to be independent and to be able to draw upon resources, but to also make sure that the findings of that board are independent and not kept within the confines of Cabinet or behind the cabinet door.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it is certainly not the intention of myself or my cabinet colleagues to keep anything behind the cabinet door. I think this is a non-partisan issue which affects all Canadians. It is something we all have to deal with in a collective way.

To the extent that the Canadian Aviation Safety Board is involved in all elements of the investigation of the accident involving Flight 182, I am sure we will not only have a full report on it but any recommendations which may flow from that report will certainly be given serious consideration by the Government.

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance, or to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Minister of Finance will be meeting later this afternoon with representatives of more than one million pensioners with whom I met this morning. They made two basic points about which I would like to ask the Minister of Finance. First, they want indexation restored to all pensions and, second, they want an announcement about the timing of the Government's decision on this important matter, to be made before the end of this week. Considering that the Cabinet met on Friday, is the Minister of Finance in a position to tell the House today the answer to the two important questions to which the pensioners of Canada want answers?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is right, I will be meeting with representatives of a very important group of seniors later on this afternoon. I will be discussing with them their concerns about this matter. As I have said on many occasions in this House, I will take those concerns very much into account in arriving at any decision which might be forthcoming. However, in precise response to the Hon. Member's question, no, I am not in a position to state anything further than I have in the past.

TIMING OF POSSIBLE ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, considering the fact that Hon. Members on the opposition side and Hon. Members on the government side have confirmed that pensioners will be in a state of anxiety over the summer—there are no two sides of that coin; everyone is in agreement about that—and considering that one of the pensioners with whom the Minister will be meeting this afternoon said to me this morning that she would at least like an answer—

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, this is becoming a preamble to a supplementary question.

Mr. Broadbent: —on the question of timing, will the Minister assure the House that before the House rises the Government will at least have the courtesy to inform Canada's pensioners when they will hear an answer to this important question?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, on a number of occasions I have stated that there would be no changes made in the payments to senior citizens until next year, so I think the Hon. Member should be trying to allay the anxiety about which he talks by advising seniors that they are going to see the normal increase in their cheques effective July 1. Again on October 1 there will be another increase in their pension cheques. I would hope that the Hon. Member would try to put to rest some of the anxieties which have been expressed by senior citizens which, I would say, he and other Hon. Members of the House have been trying to fan.

Mr. Broadbent: Appropriately trying to fan.

IMMIGRATION

ENTRY TO CANADA—MEASURES TO STOP PERSONS WHO FACE ARREST WARRANTS

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Following the tragic Air-Indian disaster this weekend, many Canadians are asking questions about Immigration operations, especially in the case of persons sought by the FBI or Interpol.

Could the Minister inform the House what measures are being taken by the Department of Employment and Immigration to prevent persons for whom warrants of arrest are out from entering Canada?

Furthermore, could the Minister inform the House what kind of co-ordination exists between her Department, the Department of Transport and the new civilian security intelligence agency which is responsible for airport security?

● (1450)

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the policy of the Department of Immigration continues. Any investigation of the tragedy involving Flight 182 would be carried out under the aegis of the RCMP, certainly not that of the Department of Immigration.

AIR-INDIA TRAGEDY—SUPPLEMENTARY MEASURES TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. In connection with the same subject, I would like to know what additional measures have been taken by the Minister and what special instructions she has given to prevent a recurrence of these acts of terrorism.

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, once again, this is not the responsibility of the Department of Immigration. If the Hon. Member thinks that what we should be doing at this point is instituting police enforcement at the borders in order to meet a demand which has not been proven, if she thinks that there are certain individuals from different parts of the world who suddenly should be kept out of our immigration stream, then I would say she is badly mistaken.

ANXIETY OF PENSIONERS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He has said, and he certainly knows the Prime Minister has said, that over the weeks I have fairly presented the views of seniors across Canada. I met with a group of seniors in Sudbury yesterday, and 12 provincial seniors' organizations this morning. Will the Minister not accept that it is fair to say that seniors across the country do have a deep anxiety about what the Government intends to do with pensions beginning next year? They fully understand what the proposal is.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says he has fairly presented the views of seniors, and I do not quarrel with that. But what I would ask him is whether he has fairly presented the views of the Government as to the reasons why we have done this.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Let me ask him whether he said to the seniors that the country's debt has been growing at 25 per cent per annum. Is he also saying to them that we are spending—

Mr. Broadbent: No, we didn't tell them that.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Leader of the NDP says no, he did not tell them that. Why didn't he tell them that?

Mr. Broadbent: Because we don't want the pensioners to pay for it, that is why.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Why didn't he spell it all out? Why didn't he put these facts in front of them? I will tell you why, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We started very well today; I would like to keep it that way. The Hon. Member for Beaches.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Minister that I have done that, and the seniors have responded by saying: "We have paid our dues".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Young: Will the Minister, in all fairness, stand in his place and assure the seniors that the Government will remove that anxiety before the end of this week?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me be clear. I am very sensitive to the views expressed by seniors' groups. I have met them on a number of occasions, as has the Hon. Member. As I said many times in this House, as has the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare, we are monitoring the situation. We are going to—

Some Hon. Members: Oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Members opposite say "oh". I suggest that they pay attention to what has been happening in this country. They should pay attention to what happened during the 15 years they were in power. They should pay attention to the fact that we were left with such an enormous mountain of debt that we cannot afford to do all the things—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

DISASTERS

EXPLOSION AT TOKYO AIRPORT

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. A CP wire report which came out shortly after one o'clock says that the Japanese police and Air-India's Tokyo representative said that a Mr. A. Singh and a Mr. L. Singh, which happen to be the same initials as those of the two fugitives from justice earlier referred to, were booked on CP Air flights 003 and then scheduled to transfer to Air-India flight 301 to Bangkok. They are the only two passengers who did not show up, and their luggage appears to have made the flight. Is the Minister in a position to confirm the validity of this report and to tell us whether there may have been some security problem at our end which would have permitted this to have taken place?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that the release is as recent as the Hon. Member says, that being one o'clock, because I myself saw on television last night those two names being mentioned. However, I think he will agree with me that, given the wide ranging investigation that is now ongoing in order to examine every possible facet and detail of the circumstances surrounding the loss of the Air-India flight, it would not be helpful to discuss publicly any details relating to that investigation. I saw the news account on national television last night with respect to the two individuals he named, and naturally, as stated, that is one avenue of the investigation.

SECURITY MEASURES AT AIRPORTS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport has referred to the possible necessity of additional security measures. There are substantial cuts envisaged in Transport Canada, some of them arising out of the so-called Nielsen task force. Could the Deputy Prime Minister assure us that the security measures will in no way be compromised by any cuts which have been or will be announced with respect to Transport Canada, and that the Minister will be given all the resources necessary to enable him to establish that full and appropriate security is in place?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): The Hon. Member asked the question with respect to the task force on program review. I can assure him that I, as chairman of that task force, as well as my ministerial colleagues on the task force, have approached all matters relating to the review process, in so far as they are applicable to the Department of Transport, bearing in mind at all times the need to maintain the very high and excellent standards of security which have hitherto existed in the Department, and give him the unqualified assurance that the safety and security of Canada's travelling public, both here at home and abroad, will always be a top priority with this Government.

WAR VETERANS PENSIONS

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Prior to September 4, 1984, Members used to rise quite regularly and complain about the deplorable delays in war veterans pensions. When the Minister was appointed to his portfolio he promised to deal with this matter. What has he done?

• (1500)

Hon. George Hees (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would first like to thank the Hon. Member for his very excellent and well thought out question. The answer to his question is a resounding "yes". I will be outlining what the Government has done before the meeting of the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs which will meet in exactly one-half hour in Room 269 of the West Block. All Members are welcome.

ENQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL MODIFY PENSION DEINDEXATION PROJECT

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. We cannot let the elderly in this country go on living in their present state of anxiety. We cannot let them wait until September to know what is going to happen. Could the Minister let senior citizens know whether he will be announcing this week or before the end of this session, whether his Government intends to change its plan to de-index Old Age Security pensions?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we are in fact doing a number of things for older people. As an example, the spouse's allowance provisions which were passed in the House quite recently extended the Guaranteed Income Supplement to 85,000 widows and widowers who are between the ages of 60 and 64. I also remind the Hon. Member that many elderly Canadians are being favourably affected by the change in the definition of "disabled". That will affect about 120,000 Canadians in total, so I think we are doing quite a bit.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I asked for short questions and must ask for short and relevant answers.

THREAT TO PENSIONERS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is that which was asked of the Member for Beaches and myself yesterday in Sudbury. Does the Minister think it is fair that his Government should allow pensioners to go through the summer with the threat of deindexation of their pensions over their heads, or does he have to lose another nine points on the Gallup poll before he gets the message?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would not want to ask an embarrassing question of the Hon. Member. However, when the Hon. Member met with the senior citizens in Sudbury did he point out to them that in 1974 the previous Government of Canada—

An Hon. Member: Answer the question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —was spending $1 of every $9 on interest payments?

Mr. Rodriguez: You are supposed to answer the questions, not ask them.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

An Hon. Member: Where is the NDP in the polls?

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Now the Minister may like to continue his answer.

Mr. Rossi: Answer the question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Did the Hon. Member point out to the senior citizens in Sudbury that in 1974 we were spending $1 of every $9 on interest costs?

Mr. Rodriguez: Do I get a chance to answer?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, order! The Hon. Minister knows that I cannot simply allow him to go on asking questions of an opposition Member. The Hon. Member for Trinity.

PENSIONS

INDEXATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Finance. In a few days a sales tax will be imposed and senior citizens will have to pay more for many necessities. They also live with uncertainty about their future incomes. Since I am meeting with senior citizens groups this afternoon, will the Minister give me a firm answer which I can convey to them with regard to the indexation of their pensions?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): I can give the Hon. Member a very firm answer. The reason we are handling this problem in the way that we are is because of the massive debt problem that we have. We are now spending $25 billion on interest costs alone, which is more than the Government is spending on medicare, the OAS, and the Guaranteed Income Supplement in total.

Ms. Copps: What about the oil companies?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Please relax. Please relax. That problem has deteriorated so significantly over the last 10 years that we are forced to do some things that we are not happy about doing. However, we must do this in order to avoid having to cut total programs in the 1990s.

REQUEST FOR EARLY CHANGE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, there are senior citizens in my riding who live in a rent controlled apartment building and are afraid to sign leases for next year because they do not know what faces them. We know that the Government is going to make some change in the program. Why does it not make that change now in order to reduce the uncertainty?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would encourage the Hon. Member to sit down with those senior citizens in her riding and go through with them the numbers which explain the effects of this. She will be able to satisfy them that they can go ahead and sign their leases.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

SIZE OF GOVERNMENT SUPPORT

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. A recent Canadian Press report indicated that he said that government support for science and technology was too generous. This is not my interpretation of what the Deputy Prime Minister said in the House last week, but given the importance of this issue and the importance of science and technology to the economic growth of the country, is the Deputy Prime Minister prepared to clarify the position of the Government in support of research and development?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I saw that account. It displays the importance of accurate reporting. In response to the question I said that the program review has shown that "the Government support system has grown overly generous over the years". The word "system" was dropped from that account. It, of course, addresses itself to the very important objective of the program review to eliminate overlap, minimize duplication, and give some rational direction to all of the programs, which is the ultimate objective of the task force. Any wrong impression that was left was left as a result of inaccurate reporting.

ATOMIC ENERGY CONTROL BOARD

APPOINTMENT INQUIRY

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. On April 15 she wrote to Dr. Ursula Martins Franklin of Toronto, saying:

> I am delighted to confirm your appointment as a member of the Atomic Energy Control Board. Your appointment is effective immediately for a term of two years.

The Minister then went to China and her Cabinet colleagues appeared to withdraw the appointment. Has the appointment been withdrawn and, if it has, why?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that the appointment in fact was not made.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: What does your letter mean?

REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the Minister's letter meant. It says: "I am delighted to confirm your appointment as a member of the Atomic Energy Control Board". This is her letter and her handwriting.

On May 29 the Minister again wrote to Dr. Franklin—

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is becoming a preamble to a supplementary question. Is there a question, please?

Mr. Waddell: Given that Dr. Franklin is prepared to serve, has not refused the oath of secrecy, and is competent, will the Government reappoint her to this position, or will it continue this shameless way of dealing with a distingusihed Canadian scientist?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member rose to his feet I thought he was going to draw to the attention of the House the recent action of Alberta in lowering its royalties in the spirit of the Western Accord.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: As the energy critic I thought he would be interested in that job-creating move. I can only say, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Broadbent: You are sick.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. de Jong: This is becoming a farce.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order! The Hon. Minister may continue her answer.

Ms. Copps: Lower the pensions so you can lower the royalties.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. All that happens when the yelling occurs is that we get fewer questions and fewer answers.

Mr. Broadbent: We don't get any answers.

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, they do not seem to be interested in an answer. This matter was fully discussed when I was in China and I suggest that they look at the record.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

CN-CP LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE SERVICE APPLICATION

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Communications. Rate rebalancing could mean very significant increases in local telephone rates. Since the CRTC will soon be conducting hearings to assess CN-CP's application to enter the long-distance market, what steps will be taken to protect the average Canadian against unfair rate increases for local telephones?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I have previously explained part of the Government's policy in this respect. It is true that the CRTC will be making a decision in the weeks to come with respect to CN-CP, and I have called a federal-provincial conference to examine our telecommunications policy here in Canada.

AIRPORTS

STATIONING OF RCMP OFFICERS AT AIRPORTS

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Acting Prime Minister. Last week the President of Air Canada said in the standing committee that the screening at airports is of the best standards under the guidance and meeting the requirements of the Ministry of Transport, and upon the advice of the RCMP.

In view of the decision made by the Minister of Transport to lay off RCMP security officers in eight airports which handle international chartered flights, will he not now, in view of recent tragedies, reverse these lay-offs—not only reverse them but increase the number of RCMP security staff at these airports?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think I indicated earlier that the question of removing RCMP at Class 2 airports is a subject that is being deferred until the over-all evaluation of both our security system of airlines and airports is fully reviewed, consistent with the statement made by the Prime Minister yesterday.

Mr. Baker: I asked that they be cancelled, not reviewed.

IMMIGRATION

SCREENING OF POTENTIAL IMMIGRANTS

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, in view of another answer given by the Minister of Employment and Immigration to another question, I want to ask my supplementary question of the Minister responsible for immigration. Does she not agree that the Canadian public today are not only asking for a better screening of baggage that leaves this country but also a better screening of people who enter this country and bring their political arguments with them? Does she not agree with that, and what will she do about it?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, that particular position is being implemented. I would like to tell the Hon. Member that the standard policy of the Department of Immigration is to receive alerts from the RCMP about people who are considered to be terrorists or considered to be divisive. That is immediately taken into consideration by the Department of Immigration, and then airports and other entry ports across the country are alerted. That is what we have done until now and that is what we are doing on a continuing basis.

However, I think it is wrong for members of the Liberal Party to use this issue to try to move against certain groups from other countries. I would like to know who it is they would move against.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

DISASTERS

AIR-INDIA CRASH

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to make this statement with great sadness. I am sure that all Members of the House—indeed all Canadians—share with me a sense of sympathy and sorrow at the tragic loss of life resulting from the Air-India disaster and the Tokyo Airport explosion. On behalf of my colleagues and, I am sure, the entire House I would like to extend our condolences to the families of all involved.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) and the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) have previously enunciated the Government's sympathy and regret. However, I would like to repeat our expressions of sorrow and concern at this time.

The explosion at Tokyo's Narita Airport of a baggage cart containing luggage from CP Air, Flight 003 and the tragic crash of Air-India Flight 182 off the Irish coast are both tragic events of extreme concern to our civil aviation system, the Government as a whole and indeed the international aviation community.

Over the last 60 hours, since these tragedies occurred, the Government has moved quickly to ensure the security of Canadian air travellers, to reconstruct and investigate the events leading up to the incidents, and to respond in every way possible to the situation. I would like to take this opportunity to provide the House with as clear a picture as possible of some of the facts as we understand them at the present time and outline some of the actions that have been taken.

I will say that the Government has been co-operating with and has received complete co-operation from all other nations and international organizations involved. Within the Government of Canada, a number of Departments have been actively involved and have been proceeding in a co-operative and coordinated fashion.

I want to reiterate once again to the House, to Canadians and indeed to the international community that Canada maintains high standards of airport and flight security through laws requiring security action by carriers operating aircraft in Canada and through the resources of the federal Government. Under the provisions of the Foreign Aircraft Security Measures Regulations and pursuant to the Aeronautics Act, Air-India and all other carriers are required to develop, implement and table with the Minister of Transport a full security program for their flights. These measures must include the inspection of all hand carried luggage, the control of boarding passes, the establishment of sterile areas, and the maintenance of security on the aircraft. Transport Canada assist in meeting these standards through provision of proper security facilities and the training of security personnel. But ultimate responsibility for flight security rests with the carriers.

Within this context, Canada has performed admirably in the area of passenger air safety. That contention is borne out by the statements of many experts in the field.

I quote Mr. Rodney Wallace, Director of Security, International Air Transport Association. He said:

> Normally, standards in Canada are very high indeed and they're particularly high with regard to Air-India so this requires a very deep study indeed.

Another quote by Mr. Wallace is as follows:

> Canada has had high standards for a long period of time and of course there has been no real perceived threat against Canada and Canadian airlines or even airlines operating out of Canada. In the case of Air-India, they did increase their security a short while ago but that was because of the political situation within India.

The Director of Security for the United States Airline Pilots Association said yesterday:

> Canadian airport security is of the highest quality of any system.

I want to repeat that. He said:

> Canadian airport security is of the highest quality of any system. The new security measures which were implemented on Sunday are the correct response to the perceived threat but any system is vulnerable to terrorist attack, especially the sophisticated paramilitary groups of today.

Norman Foster, President of the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, said in a television interview that he feels Canadian security standards were of a very high order but that, in view of recent events, they should be reassessed. That is precisely what we are doing. I would like to outline also the over-all international requirements governing the safety of air travellers. We are governed by international law, Annex 17 to the Convention of International Civil Aviation which requires that contracting states take the necessary measures to prevent weapons or any other dangerous devices, the carriage or bearing of which is not authorized, from being introduced by any means whatsoever on board an aircraft engaged in the carriage of passengers. The Annex further recommends that Contracting States establish the necessary procedures to prevent the unauthorized introduction of explosives or incendiary devices in baggage or cargo intended to be carried on board aircraft.

As a Contracting State, Canada is in full compliance with both the international standard and the recommended practice.

With respect to Canadian law, Mr. Speaker, the Foreign Aircraft Security Measures Regulations made pursuant to the Aeronautics Act require every owner or operator who lands foreign aircraft in Canada to establish, to maintain and to carry out security measures at aerodromes consisting of one, a system of surveillance of persons, personal belongings, baggage, goods and cargo; two, a system of searching persons and personal belongings, baggage, goods and cargo; three a system of identification that prevents baggage, goods and cargo from being placed on board the aircraft if it is not authorized to be placed on board by the owner or operator, and, fourth, a system of identification of surveillance and search personnel and the personnel of the owner or operator.

Foreign air carriers must provide a description of their security. With respect to Air-India security measures, Air-India has provided the Minister with a copy of the security program of Air-India Canadian region describing the security measures which Air-India has established and its maintenance and the carrying out of those security measures.

The Air-India station manager is directly responsible for the implementation of these security measures.

First, these measures relate to the establishment of sterile areas, the inspection of hand carried baggage, the controlling of boarding passes, the maintaining of security of aircraft, the ensuring of the security of baggage, and the ensuring of the security of cargo. The Air-India security program requires that all carry-on baggage to be checked physically by hand-held devices or by X-ray equipment, and baggage for those passengers who fail to board the flight, is to be off-loaded.

At Mirabel, Air-India's cargo is handled by Mega International in accordance with Air-India security instructions.

Just to outline briefly the sequence of events, Mr. Speaker, much of the information has been provided to Canadians by radio, television and the press, but I believe I should summarize the sequence of events as we know them. I must repeat that. I think that in the course of this exercise we always submit ourselves to some danger in trying to be as forthcoming as possible, but we find that, on re-assessment or re-examination of some of the facts presented to us, sometimes these change and vary from time to time. Nonetheless, fraught with that danger I think it is important for us to try to reconstruct the events as accurately as possible.

Air-India's Flight 182 planned departure from Pearson International Airport, was scheduled for 1845 hours, with a connecting flight from Vancouver to Toronto carrying an unknown number of passengers. The actual departure took place at 2015 Eastern Daylight Time, one hour and 30 minutes late. It arrived at Mirabel at 2100 hours. The flight planned departure at Mirabel was set for 2203 hours. The final departure was at 2218 hours, some 15 minutes late. It picked up 104 passengers at Mirabel. The passenger manifest showed 307 passengers, with 22 crew members. The crash time, as we have been informed, was 3.13 Eastern Daylight Time.

There has been some controversy regarding the events at Toronto and Mirabel. The events established that Canada provided to Air-India all the assistance it requested for its flights during this particular period.

There was extra assistance provided at Pearson International Airport by RCMP constables who were assigned to the ticket counter, the gate and the ramp. The normal pre-boarding passenger screening occurred at the screening point. There was also a secondary search of all carry-on bags and items conducted by Burns Security personnel as monitored by the RCMP.

In the baggage area, the X-ray machine worked for a period of time and then developed a malfunction. It is estimated that 75 per cent of the baggage was X-rayed and 25 per cent was subject to a mechanical explosive sniffer.

We are informed that no bags were opened and searched. The baggage transferred to Air-India from Vancouver arrived at Toronto on a domestic flight and was delivered to the international area. Once there, it went to the checked baggage area which was then screened by security.

Air Canada's security has confirmed that these procedures were followed for Flight 182.

With respect to Mirabel, RCMP officers are dedicated to Air-India flights. There is an officer in a patrol car, one officer at the ticket counter, one at the screening check-in point, one on the arrival/departure level, and one on the mezzanine level who also checks the roof of the terminal.

Normally there would be an RCMP dog master in the baggage area but this dog was away on a training course and a Quebec Provincial Police dog served as a replacement.

RCMP officers were on the ramp, at the ticket counter, at the screening check-in point, on the arrival/departure level and on the mezzanine level.

At Mirabel, all boarded baggage was subject to X-ray scrutiny. Three suspect bags were withheld. Air-India Flight 182 departed without this luggage. It was subsequently determined that no explosives or dangerous material was contained in those bags.

With respect to CP Air Flight 003, the departure from Vancouver International Aiport was 2037 hours Zulu. The planned arrival at Narita, Japan, was 5.55 Zulu. The actual landing at Narita, Japan was 5.40 Zulu, 15 minutes early. The ramp time was 5.47 Zulu. The explosion at Narita, Japan occurred at approximately 6.20 hours Zulu, 45 minutes after landing.

The passenger manifest showed 370 passengers and a 16-member crew.

CP Flight 001 from Pearson International Airport to Vancouver landed at Narita International at approximately 700 hours Zulu.

Flight 003 originated in Vancouver. However, the aircraft had just returned from Narita International, Japan. The aircraft did a turnaround. Normal passenger screening was carried out. Luggage was not X-rayed or searched. This is normal and meets Transport Canada's civil aviation requirements where no threat to a specific flight has been signalled.

As announced on Sunday, Mr. Speaker, we took immediate action to increase security following these tragic events. Increased security measures have already been implemented on all international flights leaving Canada for Europe, Asia and Africa as a result of the Air-India and CP Air disasters.

International authorities have been asked by the Ministry of Transport to introduce similar measures for all flights bound for Canada. In an attempt to ensure that no similar mishaps take place, all baggage on international flights is being security inspected and all international cargo, with the exception of perishable goods from known producers, will be held for at least 24 hours. Twenty X-ray security systems and new explosive sniffers are being purchased for Canadian airports to assist with the new security standards. The first of the new X-ray machines will be operational by Thursday, June 27.

The Government has also moved quickly to ensure full international co-operation in investigations of the Air-India disaster as well as the explosion at Narita Airport.

Representatives of the Department of Transport have been dispatched to London to assist in the investigation of the Air-India crash, and a Transport Canada security officer has been sent to Tokyo to assist in that investigation. Transport Canada is also initiating a full investigation of the quality of airport security measures in place for both flights. Investigations into Flight 182 are ongoing and the Government is taking long and short-term measures to prevent any similar occurrences. The people of Canada will be kept informed of further findings and actions respecting this very important area of government concern.

Before concluding my remarks, I should like to say to all Hon. Members of the House that this is a very serious issue. I appreciate the tone with which Hon. Members across the way have approached it. I do not think this should be a partisan issue. It is an issue which is very grave and something which requires the good will and co-operation of all Hon. Members.

There is a rumour to the effect—and I am not sure whether it has been confirmed—that Air-India will be suspending service to Canada. I understand—and I am not sure whether it has been confirmed—it has been suggested that there will be a temporary suspension of service to Canada and other points because of the lack of equipment. However, I want to reiterate that, to the best of our knowledge, this is merely a temporary suspension and as soon as adequate equipment is made available, I believe the service will be restored.

I hope this will at least partially clarify some of the outstanding and important issues relating to this great tragedy. As I indicated, I will be keeping Hon. Members and the House informed of any further developments as they occur.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, first of all, on behalf of the Official Opposition, I wish to offer my sincere condolences to the families who were bereaved as a result of two tragic episodes involving, respectively, the Air Indian flight to London and the CP Air flight to Tokyo. I want to thank the Minister for the exhaustive statement he made in the House just now.

However, although this is a very serious matter in which political partisanship has no place whatsoever, the fact remains that the Canadian public must be reassured, and that consequently, we on this side of the House have a duty to ask a number of questions, not only concerning the events themselves but also about the procedures in various Canadian airports and the new methods announced by the Minister, in order to ensure that these measures will indeed be effective and provide maximum security for Canadian travellers.

The Minister stated that he had received the co-operation of the authorities of the countries concerned. I am very happy with this decision, but I wonder to what extent the Japanese authorities, especially, are allowing representatives of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board to take part in any inquiries or investigations being conducted at this time concerning the CP Air incident. I am told that representatives of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board have already arrived in Ireland. Are they going to be taking an active part in the investigation to be carried out by the Irish authorities, or will they only be called as witnesses in connection with the investigation? I believe it is essential, in order to safeguard Canadian interests, since so many Canadian families have been directly affected by this incident, that Canada's representatives take an active part in the investigation to be conducted in Ireland.

As for the investigation in Japan, I would like to have some more specific information from the Minister to find out whether or not Canadian Government representatives will be taking part in the investigation to be held in Tokyo.

The Minister referred to our high standards here in Canada. He referred to some very eloquent testimony to that effect by an authority in the aviation field. I agree that Canadian standards are very high. I recognize the Minister's good faith and I realize he is sincere in wanting to find the best way of preventing a recurrence of such incidents. In fact, I would like to congratulate him on acting so quickly as soon as he was informed of these events.

However, Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious matter. It is far too serious for the Government to be on the defensive. From what the Minister said and from my reading of the sequence of events, it seemed to me that the Minister was inclined to defend existing procedures, Department of Transport employees, airline representatives and security officers. I think that is a big mistake, because it is clear there are contradictions.

[English]

To cite a few contradictions, I refer to articles which were published in the newspapers indicating where in fact contradictory statements were made by the Minister and by some of his officials about the two incidents involving the Air-India flight and the CP Air flight. On one hand, the Minister said that the baggage for both flights had been X-rayed. On the other hand, a Transport Canada spokesman said that only the Air-India baggage had been examined under X-ray. This is the first contradiction.

The second contradiction concerns the Minister who supposedly said that if Transport Canada had been informed that three suspicious bags were removed at Mirabel, the flight would have been held until all baggage had been searched. On the other hand, a Transport Canada spokesman said that bags had been removed from flights three or four times a month at Mirabel although planes may take off without further inspection. This statement by the Department of Transport official is frightening. In a sense, it deeply contradicts what the Minister told the press yesterday.

I do not want the Minister to look like a fool. I do not think he is a fool; I think he is a very serious, dedicated Minister. However, the contradiction between what he said and what has been said by his officials requires further independent investigation. I am afraid that if the investigation is exclusively an internal one by departmental officials, the Minister may not be apprised of what really took place.

There is another contradiction that needs to be looked at between the statement made by authorities on behalf of the Government of India and statements that have been repeated here today in the House that contradict what we have been told by officials of the Government of India. We have been told that, indeed, on several occasions prior to the incident, the Indian authorities have apprised our Government of fears, threats, and dangers and have sought the co-operation of the Canadian Government in order to protect Air-India flights and to protect Indian officials in Canada. The Minister today told us that Air-India Flight 182 was not on the alert system. Why was it not on the alert system after all those representations that had been made in recent weeks by the Indian authorities? Not only is it surprising that it was not on the alert system, but after it was brought to the attention of the Canadian authorities that three pieces of luggage were retained because they did not pass the appropriate tests, why was no action taken then in Mirabel to call back the flight or to make sure that before the flight left all the other luggage was properly inspected?

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I say that a complete and independent inquiry must be made, not so we can pin down the guilty person or persons but so that we can make a thorough review of security procedures being used, not just by Canadian authorities but also by the airlines whose aircraft land at Canadian airports. The point is not that individuals did or did not do a good job but that a security system or set of procedures did not work properly and should be reviewed.

The Minister must understand that it is entirely possible that luggage checked in at a small airport might be carried from one plane to another by airport employees, without going through security. For instance, a passenger leaving Windsor Airport could check in his luggage with a small airline which does not have the security procedures existing in large international air terminals. On leaving Windsor, the luggage could go to Toronto, be carried by a handler who does not know it may contain a bomb, be carried from a plane coming from Windsor, Ontario to a CP Air aircraft going from Toronto to Vancouver and ultimately to Tokyo.

There is a strong possibility that individuals who want to blow up a plane would use a small airport where security is not as great and check their luggage through to a final destination, thereby completely short-circuiting the security procedures that exist in the large air terminals. And it is possible that a person who checks in his luggage at Windsor would travel on the flight from Windsor to Toronto but not on the subsequent flight from Toronto to Vancouver and Tokyo, while the luggage containing an explosive device would remain on board the flight for which it was checked in, and so the whole security system has been completely short-circuited.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that the Minister review all these procedures in order to ensure that on all international flights, luggage checked for a specific flight can be matched with the passengers travelling on that flight, that security checks be made before an international flight leaves Canada, and that all baggage on board the aircraft can be identified as belonging to the passengers on that particular flight.

That is why I maintain that surveillance at small airports is just as important as at large airports. I agree with the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association which is asking the Government to reconsider its decision to no longer ask the RCMP to provide for security at Canadian airports.

In reply to a question I asked previously, the Minister said that the decision had been made by the previous Government. In fact, a number of Department of Transport officials had suggested doing this to save money, but I may remind the Minister that the previous administration never accepted this recommendation by Department of Transport officials, and that in fact, the previous Government had been anxious to keep RCMP officers on duty at Canadian airports in order to provide the best possible security.

Mr. Speaker, I would therefore ask the Minister to drop this plan and to keep the RCMP at all Canadian airports for the purpose of providing security, not only at our international airports but also at our smaller airports, because, as I explained earlier, trouble may originate from a small airport and not be identified in time.

Finally, I would like to say that the statements made by the Minister will certainly help reassure the public. I hope that the 20 new pieces of equipment that have been purchased will be in place as soon as possible. The Minister informed the House that only one piece of equipment would be a available by next Thursday, but I suppose we can expect the 19 others to be in service very shortly. In any case, until this equipment is in use, I think we will have to be very careful and provide for both visual and physical checks so that passengers on Canadian aircraft will have the assurance that every precaution has been taken to provide maximum protection.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to make four recommendations.

First, I would recommend that, quite apart from the investigation made by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and others conducted by Canadian authorities on security information, there is still a whole series of measures and security procedures which ought to be implemented in Canadian airports and I think that the Canadian Aviation Safety Board should be asked to investigate security procedures in our airports as soon as possible.

Second, I would want the Minister to do more than check into this and to confirm that henceforth the RCMP will be used at all Canadian airports.

Third, I would want mandatory security measures imposed by the Department of Transport to all airline companies.

And finally, fourth, I would want the Government to act as humanely and as quickly as possible to help striken families, particularly those unsure whether the bodies recovered from the see off the coast of Ireland are indeed those of their own relatives. We have learned that it is difficult to travel to Ireland to make such identifications. In my judgment, the Canadian Government musts do everything in its power to help those families, especially those that are anxious to go to Ireland to identify the victims of this terrible tragedy.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my sincere feelings to those expressed by my colleague, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), and the spokesman for the Official Opposition, as well as expressions of our sympathy and sincere condolences to the families, relatives and friends of those who were lost in the tragedy which occurred last Sunday, as well as to the families and friends, although smaller in number, of those lost, in the tragedy at the Tokyo airport. As well—and I hope members of the Press Gallery are listening—I would like to commend my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), for his statement about the very unfair assumptions and crass speculations made by some, including members of the media, about the possible involvement of one or more members of East Indian or other communities. That, I suggest, is reprehensible. For the sake of sensationalism, headlines, news and 30-second spots on television, those kinds of assumptions and speculations have been overdone, to put it mildly, over the last 50 or 60 hours.

Neither I nor anyone else in the house relishes having to rise to respond to an occasion such as this. However, I would like to point out that when I and other Members of the House raised issues concerning transportation safety and security under the previous administration and the current one, no sensational events were occurring and it was difficult to get the attention of members of the previous Government as well as of this one. It was difficult to get the attention of the media. Canada can no longer-if it ever could before—think that it can stand alone from and unaffected by the rest of the world and the effects of international terrorism. Regardless of the findings of the investigation of the Air-India flight and the CP Air flight, this occasion presents us with another opportunity to examine safety and security arrangements at Canadian airports.

As I said earlier today, I commend the Minister for the fast action he took to put in place substantially greater security and safety measures since last Sunday. I know that he has spent long hours working all weekend. However, and I say this without malice because it is not peculiar to this administration, we must realize that this is another instance of the barn door syndrome. Policy decisions are made and put in place, but complacency will return a few weeks from now. There will cease to be an interest in drawing the line between where saving dollars ends and appropriate measures, no matter what the cost, begin and stay in place regarding matters of safety and security.

I would remind the House that when we debated in the House, in the standing committee and before the Canadian Transport Commission the issue of deregulation, all sides agreed that there can be no compromise on safety at our airports in Canada, and by extension, safety also means security. That was agreed to unanimously even though the previous Government and the present one insisted on proceeding with the deregulation of fares, exit and entry into routes and city pairs. Even though there was unanimous agreement not to compromise on safety in the past four years there has been a move afoot to reduce the number of RCMP officers on duty at Canadian airports and to reduce their presence, both visible and invisible. I was appalled at the unmitigated gall of a member of the Official Opposition, the transportation critic, who asked about the removal of RCMP officers from airports in Canada. I would suggest that the transportation critic of the Liberal Party talk to his seatmate, because he removed RCMP officers from 12 airports in this country—

Mr. Ouellet: That's not true.

Mr. Axworthy: You should check your facts.

Mr. Benjamin: It is true, and there will be eight more from which RCMP officers will be removed this summer.

Mr. Ouellet: This summer, that's true.

Mr. Benjamin: And those eight more airports include Ottawa and Victoria, an international airport. In fact, international charter flights are leaving from the so-called domestic airports on an almost weekly basis during the high tourist season.

There would have been a reliance on private security agents within a few months if it were not for the Minister's announcement today that that move will be put on hold. I suppose it will be put on hold until all this dies down and there are no more crashes or tragedies of this nature. Then the Government will proceed as usual on the grounds that it will save a few dollars.

The point is that the RCMP as well as the trained personnel of the Ministry of Transport must be in place at all times at all airports owned and operated by the Ministry of Transport. There should be no damned question about that.

Without questioning their good will, I have grave doubts about private security agents that are in place who play the only on-site role in security at our airports. They have neither the training nor the authority to deal with serious problems that may arise, whether they be problems with passengers, alerts, anonymous phone calls, hoaxes or threats. They do not have the capacity and the training to deal with a problem, even if it is only a drunken passenger who threatens physical violence. A private security agent who has no training, whether male or female, young or old, will not be able to handle that. The response time of the RCMP and the police in my city and others is 10, 15, 20 or even 30 minutes. That is not good enough. There must be on site at all times properly trained, equipped and authorized people to deal with situations when and if they arise, even though they may go for months without anything arising and it may appear to be a waste of money.

If we are going to get rid of the barn door syndrome, then that kind of an expenditure of money at the cost of taxpayers, airlines and the travelling public will have to be put in place, and I am convinced that the public will accept that and will not agree that it is an area on which the Government can cut back. As the Minister well knows, I have raised this issue on a number of occasions. I am glad to hear that he has put on hold the removal of RCMP officers.

The main problem with airport security and safety and with other issues such as the transportation of dangerous goods is that action occurs after the tragedy has occurred. Then there is a wild scramble to cover backsides, keep skirts clear and put in place all of the things that should have been in place before. There is nothing new about that. I do not condemn this Government only. It has occurred time and time again over the last number of years. Every time there has been a tragedy, this House and various authorities get together to try to do something about it, but within a matter of weeks or months we are back into the same rut.

There is going to be a review of procedures in handling baggage and other airline cargo. We know that in the past there has been little or no security checks on baggage which goes into the hold, in spite of some self-serving statements by some. This has been left entirely to the discretion of airlines. And it has been the case not only under this administration but also under previous Ministers of Transport. How many dozen airlines operate in and out of Canada? They all have different policies and take security measures if and when it suits them. If they receive a threat, they will notify the Ministry of Transport and, Mr. Speaker, there can be no question but that the Ministry of Transport is responsible. It has to be in charge. There can be no other way of operating. I am not suggesting, Sir, that it can be 100 per cent sure. If someone wants to beat the system badly enough, he or she will sooner or later figure out a way. But with the maximum of equipment and qualified personnel in place, it is a lot harder for them to do it. Comparisons are odious, but I do not believe that the system we have in place is any better than others in the world. There are others which do a better job and there are others which do a worse one. But any kind of complacency is out of place at this point in time.

Members of the Committee on Transport met this morning. We discussed the statement made yesterday by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) with respect to a special investigation. A special investigation with respect to these incidents is fine and must take place—

Mr. Mazankowski: It's broader than that.

Mr. Benjamin: —by the RCMP and the Ministry of Transport. But I think that an investigation into present and future arrangements and regulations on safety and security has to be provided by some kind of an independent body. I am not suggesting a two-year or three-year Dubin type of inquiry. We do not have that much time. I would like to suggest to the Minister of Transport that he consider providing an order of reference by this Friday to the Standing Committee on Transport and give it carte blanche in terms of staff, holding hearings, travel and reporting back with its recommendations. If there is any time at which we could support the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons, this is one instance. Failing that, however, there should be an independent inquiry with the broadest terms of reference which would make interim reports as well as a final one. And it does not have to take two or three years.

There is the whole matter of the quality, qualifications and numbers of the personnel of the Ministry of Transport and private security firms at our airports. There is the question of the sophistication, quality and numbers of the equipment.

There needs to be in place a standard for the checking, not only of checked in luggage, parcels, air cargo and air express packages, but of everything and anything that is placed on board an aircraft. I will not go into that issue any further, Mr. Speaker, so as to avoid creating more worry and fear in the minds of the public, but the Minister of Transport knows the areas about which I am referring.

The whole matter of inter-line baggage must be looked into. There is nothing to prevent some nut from checking something in at a domestic airport anywhere in Canada through to a destination in Europe, Africa or Asia, which would get transferred from one connecting flight to another on the same airline, or from one airline to another airline, and still not be inspected. A bomb can originate in Vegreville on a little private charter plane flying to Regina, then be put on a domestic flight to Toronto, to end up on an international flight going somewhere else.

I would like to suggest to the Minister that it is not enough to act just on alerts. I suspect that the alert regarding Air-India had more to do with the imminent arrival within two or three weeks of the President of India to the United States. I hope that was not the only reason for the Air-India alert but I suspect it was a good one. I do not blame the head of state of any country for doing so.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I hope the House and the Government will now seize the opportunity to keep in place, enlarge and replace everything with respect to cut-backs under the previous and the present administrations. They should be put back in place. I believe what the Minister has had to do over this past few days is going to require Supplementary Estimates because he just lost about $300 million out of his Department. But you do not place safety and security in jeopardy because of money. There cannot be any question about that. I hope I will never have to hear again, as long as I am in this House, that in the interests of saving a few dollars we should put into the slightest question the safety and security of our airlines and our travelling public.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I will try to restore us back to the standards established by the Minister. I will not be partisan about his remarks and point fingers and lay blame such as, I am afraid, the last speaker attempted to do, which I believe is not called for in the circumstances. I will try to come to the way in which the Government is handling the matter.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, during the course of Question Period I posed a question to the Minister as to why, in establishing the investigation, inquiry and evaluation of our security measures, the Canadian Aviation Sefety Board was not brought in as the primary agency. I simply want to refer the Minister to the findings of the Dubin Commission in 1981. The Minister at that time was very active in this House in supporting those recommendations. The report suggested that the Bill which was introduced create a board separate from Transport Canada so that the regulatory investigative functions may be seen to operate at arm's length. It stated that removal of this potential conflict of interest should improve the effectiveness of both the regulation and the accident investigation.

I know that things were hectic, harrowing and difficult, but we have established a major improvement in this country's safety record with the safety board. It is a quasi-judicial body, independent, with the power to call witnesses and restore confidence that any finding or judgment would not be subject to conflict of interest. I am not calling into question the integrity of officials, but I am saying that the officials responsible for managing this system should not be responsible for evaluating the effectiveness of that management. I do not think anyone in the auditing business or anywhere else would suggest that one should audit one's own performance. We are all subject to some form of critique that is more independent than that.

I know the Minister is still involved in making decisions, and I think it is wrong to dwell on history, but terrorism is becoming widespread. Therefore, would it not be more appropriate to ensure confidence in the evaluation by charging an independent body with the responsibility of making judgments and assessments of the situation? Again, I make no prior judgment, but I think there is a question of confidence over whether, both internationally and domestically, any new measures would be in full accordance with the requirement of safety and security. Therefore, I ask the Minister, would it not be more appropriate for the safety board to be given that responsibility?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's comments. I thought that my answer to the Hon. Member's question during Question Period left the impression, which I tried to give, that he had a very valid suggestion to make. To the extent that we can use the Canadian Aviation Safety Board in this process, it makes eminent good sense. As was alluded to, we are dealing with world-wide terrorism and I think it would be important to engage the most senior security and intelligence resources we have at our disposal, here and around the world, to evaluate and to ensure that any improvements in airport and airline security will take into consideration any information which can be garnered from a security and intelligence standpoint.

I will certainly take the Hon. Member's suggestion seriously—I have and I will—and to the extent we can integrate the work of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, which I agree is an independent arm, I think it would make eminent good sense and I thank him for his suggestion.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I leave the matter in the capable hands of the Hon. Minister and we will see what arises.

The Minister indicated during Question Period that he intends to be in attendance at the International Civil Aviation Organization meetings on Thursday. IATA is also having meetings on Friday and we will have delegates there. Can he indicate whether Canada intends to put any proposals in front of those bodies concerning the way in which various members of the international aviation community can co-ordinate their efforts? I know there have been a number of discussions in the past. I was party to some of them in my previous incarnation. But we all recognize that security has to be upgraded and improved. Time is short, but I think sufficient work has been done in the past, both in External Affairs and in Transport, concerning amendments to the international aviation code regarding registration, licencing and other procedures. Can the Minister indicate whether we will be making specific proposals? The reason I ask, and I do so out of some concern, is that we all know our country has had an extraordinarily high reputation in this area. It now may be called into question, and I think there have been a lot of comments, and I believe we should take some leadership to show that our system is open and we welcome the involvement of ICAO and IATA in helping us determine improvements in our own procedures. It also should be co-ordinated with other countries. Would the Minister care to respond to that?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, that would certainly be my intention. I think the initiatives we have taken are fairly well advanced. I know that in discussions with American authorities, we have come to the conclusion that the detection devices which have been developed are really not as adequate and proficient as they could be. I think there is a real challenge in trying to accelerate the technology required if it should be necessary to inspect all luggage carried on board an aircraft. I think we all recognize that by the actions we are now taking we are creating long line-ups and delays and perhaps some frustration. While we are bringing on equipment which will facilitate and speed up the process, we have quite a distance to go in developing the technology to put in place that kind of screening device on a massive basis. That will clearly be an issue which will have to be dealt with at the international level. However, yes, I will be making some recommendations which we believe are necessary.

I think all Hon. Members would agree that we are probably entering a new era of reality. Canadians once thought we were immune to the horrors of terrorism and sabotage, but now that it appears to have struck very close to home, it is a rude awakening for us all and we are trying to address the reality of the situation. We will do it in as positive and as straightforward a manner as we possibly can.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I really have only one question and it flows from the statements made in the press regarding the methods currently used to check luggage and the fact that it appears as if it has been very much up to individual airlines to determine the appropriateness of the measures they themselves put in place, and the obvious effect of that kind of policy. The safety of all passengers, employees, indeed all persons in the facilities or in the vicinity of Canadian airports surely must be our primary concern. I was going to ask the Minister two things, bearing that in mind.

Quite clearly, under the present system one airline could choose to have adequate review and check-up procedures, while the airline immediately next to it might not. However, all of the baggage is handled in one general facility and it all goes through one main terminal. Aircraft are parked one beside the other. Notwithstanding what is accepted internationally at the moment, could we in Canada not lead the way and say that every single piece of baggage transported by aircraft must receive a proper check not only through X-ray procedures but also from the point of view of determining whether or not there may be explosives on board a plane.

Let me just preface my second question with a concern. The more things you think up, the more you alert people to a potential, and that worries me. For the first time in my life I can appreciate that it may be necessary to conduct an inquiry of this type in private; that it cannot be handled openly for fear that by the very nature of the questions you raise, new ways of creating an entrée to the system are exposed for those who would act as terrorists. But it is clear that I, for example, could get on a flight in Hamilton with checked baggage and have it directed through a variety of different ways all the way to any place in the world. If it was not properly checked at the first place, chances are it would not be checked at any of the subsequent places either. Therefore, it becomes apparent to me, as a layman, that if protective measures are going to be put in place they will have to be put in every airport. There is no such thing as designated airports. They will have to be everywhere in order to provide the required protection.

I would like to suggest with some degree of trepidation that although airports are the primary targets of terrorists using transportation for their terror, they are not the only places we should be looking. There is quite clearly the option of making threats on and creating terror through any method of transportation. It might be useful, therefore, if the Minister would consider my colleague's good suggestion of some kind of parliamentary review. Perhaps we could discuss what would be an appropriate forum for this. However, there should be some parliamentary review of how transportation is conducted from the safety standpoint and how we in Canada can take whatever steps we can. I recognize that no matter what we do it will not be likely to work anyway, but we can try to provide the safest possible means for as many people as we can subject to the fertile imaginations of the terrorists of the world who always seem to be one step ahead of us.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I will try to respond to the three questions which the Hon. Member has raised. I think it is fairly common knowledge that it is not customary for checked baggage on domestic and transborder flights to be screened through an X-ray or physically checked. Those are the established international standards.

Mr. Deans: It may not be enough.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is a matter that we will have to consider.

With regard to the broader question of the adequacy of the standards, there are minimum standards established by international convention. The level of security of each individual airline is based upon its assessed level of threat. Because of the political developments in India it was determined by Air-India that there was an extraordinary level of threat. As a result, they have been in a high state of alert, which means that their standards are considerably higher than those required. It is based upon their assessed level of threat. For example, their security manual requires searches of baggage by X-ray, hand search, or hand-held sniffers. Air-India was following these procedures at both Pearson International and Mirabel.

When the airline determines that there is a specific threat against any given flight, which I reiterate was not the case with regard to Flight 182, there are Transport Canada procedures which call for full hand baggage inspections. That triggers a completely new process. Again, the information that I have, which has been confirmed by the RCMP, is that there was no request received for special security because of the specific threat to Flight 182. There was a request for additional RCMP personnel, but this flight was not designated as a special security threat. As a result, the extraordinary procedures, which would have been triggered had that determination been made, were not implemented at that time. I believe that probably answers most of the questions that were raised.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I take this opportunity to remind Members that the period allotted at this time is strictly for questions rather than for comments. The Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I have a few questions for the minister. I would like to congratulate him on the clarity of the responses we are receiving to our questions and on the quick manner in which he has acted on behalf of the Government and of the people of Canada. However, there are still a number of questions I would like to raise. The Minister has pointed out again that there was nothing to indicate to the RCMP, Transport Canada, or the Government of Canada that this particular flight required any extraordinary security measures. Are we to assume from that that the only reason a number of pieces of luggage were removed from the flight at Mirabel is that they happened to trip an electronic sensor which indicated that there were metal objects in the suitcases? I will ask the Minister to respond to that and then I would like to continue with another question or two.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, Air-India had been in an abnormal state of alert for some time when all checked-in luggage was examined by X-ray or hand sniffer. It was in the process of that examination that the three bags were detected.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, with reference to this situation, the superintendent of airport security at Mirabel Airport said that, in his judgment, Air-India had broken a basic rule. That basic rule is that when it becomes necessary, because of electronic sensoring devices, to pull some luggage off an aircraft, Transport Canada is informed and the entire aircraft is checked by lining up baggage and people and finding out whether all the baggage on board matches people on the aircraft. I am still a little confused.

I want to ask the Minister about the process. The Minister was quoted in the Ottawa Citizen of yesterday as saying that if Transport Canada had been informed about suspicious baggage on a flight, the flight would have been held until all the baggage had been searched. The same article in yesterday's Ottawa Citizen quotes a Transport Canada spokesman as saying that bags are removed from flights three or four times a month at Mirabel although planes may take off and continue flights without further inspection. I am sure that the Minister will appreciate that there is somewhat of a contradiction there.

I ask whether there was any recognition of any problem on the flight yesterday because Transport Canada, the RCMP, and the airline itself all had the authority to have that plane fully searched. If at any point, even after the plane had left the runway in Montreal, there was any reason to believe that there was anything amiss on that flight, there was nothing to prevent anybody from contacting that airplane and asking the pilot to return. This would have enabled a thorough investigation to be carried out which the Minister suggests would be done when Transport Canada is tipped off that there may be a problem. Can the Minister explain the contradiction between his comment and those of his officials? What is the procedure that is to be used? Why was that procedure not considered in the case of this flight, even in retrospect?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member raising that matter because I can also understand the interpretation of a contradiction. I suppose that I am partially responsible for that in that my statement was made in the context of there being a specific threat against Flight 182. If that had occurred, then the extraordinary Transport Canada procedures would have been triggered. I regret that I may have not made myself abundantly clear on that particular point. My comments were made within that context.

What is the second part of the Hon. Member's question?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to be absolutely clear because the RCMP were called in to investigate the luggage on this aircraft and in fact I am told that they arrived minutes after the plane took off. They checked three bags in question, had a negative reaction from their sniff dogs and the aircraft continued on its way.

I just want to be clear that what the Minister is now telling us is that until that aircraft disappeared from the radar screen there was never any indication or warning whatsoever that anything may have been amiss on that airplane. I am saying that if a plane takes off and authorities in Canada, be it the RCMP or Transport Canada, discover there may be a problem, surely there is nothing stopping us from contacting the pilot as long as he is in Canadian air space and asking him to return to the airport in order to conduct the kind of thorough investigation that the Minister said would be conducted when a warning had been evident. Am I correct?

Mr. Mazankowski: As I indicated earlier, this particular flight was not designated as a flight with a specific threat. Therefore, that procedure was not triggered.

With respect to the larger part of the question, I hope the Hon. Member and others will understand that when we get into that kind of discussion and debate we are engaged in an investigation on the floor of the House of Commons. As I said in my comments earlier, I want to be as forthcoming as I possibly can, but I believe the Hon. Member will appreciate that in our desire to be as forthcoming as possible there are facts that are updated. Sometimes there are contradictions. The Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) alluded to that earlier in his remarks when he indicated that I had been quoted as saying that the baggage for both flights had been X-rayed. That is a misquote, absolutely. It may have been misinterpreted.

The story was written by Richard Cleroux who is a very distinguished reporter. However, I can say here and now that if that impression was left, it was wrong. From the beginning I took the position, and expressed the point of view on many occasions, that the baggage with respect to Air-India was inspected either by X-ray or by a hand-held sniffing device.

With respect to the baggage on CP, it was not customary for that luggage to be examined.

The other misinformation in that same article is the fact that I am quoted as saying:

> Mr. Mazankowski said that he believes dogs were also used at Toronto's Pearson International Airport on the Air-India baggage.

That is wrong. I never did say that. I did say that there were dogs available at Mirabel. I wanted the opportunity to clarify that because in this particular kind of atmosphere these kinds of contradictions should be cleared up as soon as possible.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, we seem to be making assumptions that whatever device was smuggled on to the plane got on through the baggage. However, many Members are often in airports, and I often wonder what security measures exist for access to the aircraft.

When the Minister's investigation takes place, would he investigate the whole question of the security of the plane while it is waiting to receive both baggage and passengers? This includes the food and mail being loaded on to the plane.

We have assumed that only airline personnel have access to the plane. It seems to me that it would be the responsibility of Transport Canada to look at the procedures that airlines have in place for personnel security.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I genuinely appreciate the Hon. Member's comment and regret that in the course of this dialogue we sometimes draw conclusions. I regret that the assumption has been made, first, that it was a bomb or an explosive device that caused the demise of Flight 182. That has not been officially confirmed.

Second, it has not been officially confirmed that if it was a bomb, it was in a piece of luggage. I appreciate the fact that the Hon. Member has brought us back to a state of some objectivity. That is the problem when we become involved in this sort of discussion. In our attempt to be as forthcoming as possible, we sometimes draw conclusions.

Naturally, I think the terms of reference that were outlined by the Prime Minister clearly give us the parameters to examine airport security as well as security of the airlines, which means the airplane as well.

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, earlier this afternoon I alluded to measures that could be taken by the Government to help the families who have been so badly hurt in this incident. There are a number of relatives who are anxiously waiting for news, some of whom are interested in going to Ireland to see for themselves what happened and to take whatever steps they want in order to identify the bodies or dispose of them according to their religious beliefs.

What assistance has the Minister offered to these families, and when can they expect to be accepted in Ireland? I understand that at the present time the authorities have not only not welcomed them, they have imposed what may be called an embargo for some time. Therefore, the relatives must stay home.

Will the Minister also answer a question concerning an incident that is reported in The Toronto Star? Vern Thampi, husband of Metro's Vijaya Thampi, a Toronto Star employee who was among the dead, said that he has been getting the runaround from Air-India. He told the Star, "I have phoned every half hour but I cannot get through". He told the Star, "My grief is beginning to turn into anger".

Indeed, this is something that is understandable and we should sympathize with these people who are unable to get appropriate information from Air-India, particularly if the company has decided to suspend temporarily some of its activities.

Could officials from the Department of Transport act on behalf of the airlines or assist the people who are seeking information about their relatives?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of Sate for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) has been involved in the kind of discussions to which the Hon. Member refers. I know he met with the Indian High Commissioner this morning. I am sure some of these things were discussed. I think, as was indicated by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) yesterday, the Government is willing and prepared to assist in every way possible and is offering support in a general way and is assisting the bereaved families to travel.

With respect to the specific point made in the quotation from The Toronto Star as well as the general broad issue which the Hon. Member has raised, I will undertake to draw it to the attention of the Secretary of State for External Affairs. There is a co-ordinating group working between my Department, the Department of External Affairs and the Department of the Solicitor General. Indeed the Prime Minister has taken a personal interest in this. I will certainly draw his concerns to their attention.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence in such a serious matter. I appreciate our being able to get into this matter in some detail with the Minister. I will try to put about three questions to the Minister in one and he can make note of them.

I believe the Minister mentioned the number of additional scanners that have been ordered. I did not catch the number. That is a good move. Whatever additional ones are needed, I say get them, and with the latest technology. I invite the Minister to check out what is being done at the airport in San Francisco, which is supposed to have one of the best safety and security arrangements of any in the world. The San Francisco Airport has mobile X-ray scanners. Before a plane takes off or up until its point of no return, it can return and mobile scanners move into action. I want to know whether any of those scanners were ordered.

Second, the Ministry of Transport some time ago was not satisfied with the electronic and/or chemical sniffers developed in England and in other parts of Europe. They did not meet what the Ministry thought our standards should be. The Ministry of Transport commissioned the National Research Council to develop better sniffers which it has done and has licensed a Toronto firm to produce them. I understand they will not be available until this fall. Can the Minister tell us when they will be available? Has he ordered any of those? Will there be any additional dogs trained and available, more than the present four?

I am sure the Minister and all other Members know that one can go through as a passenger with his hand luggage through three scanners in one day. The first one or two let you through and on the third one, even though you have the same amount of keys and coins in your pockets, the bells ring and the lights go on.

When will we get a standard minimum application of these machines so that if I go through a scanner in Regina, one in Winnipeg and then the one in Toronto beeps yet I have the same things in my pockets, obviously there is no uniform standard.

Does the Department have a minimum level at which the scanners must be set, or do airports with a higher risk have a tougher level than those with a lower risk? I would like to know what the score is on that.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that I can answer with precision all the questions which the Hon. Member has advanced. I can assure him that I will get him the answers and perhaps communicate with him either directly or by letter.

With respect to the X-ray equipment, and this again demonstrates the difficulty of being accurate on a day-to-day basis, I think I used the figure of $1.5 million yesterday, but the briefing notes I have today indicate that some $3.75 million is going to be spent on X-ray equipment. System Two will be available within two weeks in some airports, an available System Three by Friday, three certainly, one at each of the following sites: Toronto, Vancouver and Mirabel. There will be five System One units. Smaller carry-on baggage units have been borrowed from manufacturers and will be flown to Pearson International Airport. The estimated cost is some $3.375 million for the time being.

As for the NRC issue, I will certainly get back to the Member with respect to the standard minimum application. I know there is an adjusting device. I am not mechanically proficient enough to respond, as I said, with a degree of accuracy, but I will try to get that information to the Member as soon as I possibly can.

Mr. Benjamin: What about the dogs?

Mr. Mazankowski: With respect to that—

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members seeking to ask questions at this point are: The Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker), the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), and the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson). Assuming that ends it, then I will end at that point.

Mr. Baker: I will be very brief, Mr. Speaker. I want to point out to the Minister the proposal to cut at the eight airports RCMP security force. During Question Period, I asked the Minister if he would cancel that decision, not review it and not put it on hold. I asked him if he would cancel the decision. I am surprised that some Members really did not listen. I suppose that is a problem, Mr. Speaker, of Members listening to the answers and the questions that are given during Question Period.

Mr. Speaker: No comment.

Mr. Baker: No comment from the Speaker. An airport can be classified domestic military, internatinal general aviation or international charter or it can be an international airpot. The point is that most of those eight airports I know of have licences for international charters, international general aviation purposes. That is why the question has been asked over and over again. Why not cancel that particular decision because then the back up security will go to the lowest bidder?

There is not much wrong with that if the low bidder is high enough to be equal to the rest of society, but for the first time in Canadian history we have the federal minimum wage at airports lower than the minimum wage in every province in Canada. A fellow can go to work one week say at the international airport in Toronto for $3.50 an hour and then go to an office building the next week in Toronto and get paid $4 an hour in Ontario, $4.58 in Quebec or $4.30 an hour in Manitoba.

Mr. Benjamin: And sometimes a 12 hour shift.

Mr. Baker: The Minister should tell us whether or not he is aware of this. If he is aware, then he should speak to the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight) to get that provision changed quickly because provincial minimum wages have gone up drastically since January in at least five or six provinces. The main question is that the provision of the equipment in the airport is the responsibility of the Minister's Department. The Minister's Department also pays the salaries of the RCMP officers quarterly to the Department of the Solicitor General. When an airport manager has to make a decision on a cut-back of his local budget, he should not have to make a decision on the cutting back of extra equipment or whether or not who he is going to get to repair it.

Second, the airport security staff at these eight airports should be kept on. There should be no review. There should be a greater presence of RCMP officers than less of a presence.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I repeat again that the decision has been made to defer the withdrawal of RCMP officers from the eight airports in question.

I want to point out once more that there were RCMP personnel removed from 12 airports earlier by the previous administration as a result of the re-evaluation in 1975-76 which was conducted by a joint review committee on Transport Canada, the RCMP and ATAC. The Hon. Member did not get up, holler and scream when the RCMP were being removed from those 12 airports.

Mr. Benjamin: I did.

Mr. Mazankowski: We have stated—and I made it very clear in the House today—that that decision was deferred. We are going through a complete review and re-evaluation of our total airport and airline security system. I think it would be premature for me to make a definitive decision at this particular time, but I can assure the Hon. Member that in light of the new circumstances and the experiences over last weekend, he need not worry.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I spoke privately with the Minister this morning about an issue which concerns me, and I would like to raise it publicly at this point. In the area which I represent and in areas surrounding it, there are at least 10 small airports from which passengers and baggage are ferried into the main terminal airport without going through the security system. One example of that would be the dirt strip in Bella Bella. People picked up on Air B.C. are ferried into the main terminal beyond the security area, providing an opportunity for them and their baggage to be moved directly into any aircraft. Will the Minister's evaluation of airport security include every point of access to main terminals or main airlines.

The people involved in the security which exists—and it is extremely minimal—are generally airline employees who have no training and very little in the way of security facilities. In the summertime, at this point in time, ticket clerks are security agents, baggage handlers and various other things. They are throwing baggage on the aircraft without ever looking at it. They are not able to frisk individuals. When there are late passengers and standby people waiting to board, and the propellers on the place are turning, there is no security. Would the Minister indicate whether they will look into revamping that situation?

In some areas there are security individuals. For example, TWA is one airline which contracted security from people who were former police officers or military personnel familiar with the procedures. Those people have been laid off from many terminals and apparently airline employees have been given temporary authority to do it. Given the fact that deregulation moves will result in more and more small carriers from small airports feeding the mainline and having access to those terminals, will the Minister be looking beyond major terminals and into smaller ones to ensure the presence of trained personnel to do an adequate job with security?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, let me say first of all how much I appreciate this kind of constructive contribution to the debate. The Hon. Member shared with me some thoughts on this earlier. I was looking for the sheet of paper which he presented to me; I assure him that I have it. Of course the evaluation which we will undertake will go beyond international airports. It seems to me that it would make eminent good sense, when we do that kind of evaluation, to do it on a global basis rather than simply on the basis of international, national or regional airports.

In an attempt to respond to the occurrences over the weekend, to deal with what we have perceived as an international crisis, we tried to address it by tightening up the inspection of baggage on international flights both leaving and entering Canada. We will certainly take the Hon. Member's representations into consideration.

Furthermore, the Hon. Member talked about the advent of more smaller carriers getting into the business. I think he will appreciate now, more than ever, the importance of the Aeronautics Act. It really provides a new framework for the implementation and enforcement of the necessary safety rules and regulations, another component of safety and security for the welfare of the travelling public.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have two related questions for the Minister. Both of them are quite short, so perhaps I might pose them together. The first one concerns the announcement in the budget papers of a new management structure for the federal airport system in Canada which will allow for the independent operation of local airports. From the Minister's last answer, can we assume that "independent" does not mean any diminution of safety and that, for instance, baggage loaded at small independent airports will have to meet certain standards so that it is not a hazard when it is transferred in larger airports? My first question concerns the nature of the independence, whether systems will still be compatible and whether there will be some regulation of it.

My second question concerns tax increases. In the space of the last five months there have been two tax increases, so that the Government will now be taking an extra $90 million per year from Canadian airline passengers. In view of the tragic events of last weekend, can we assume that some or all of this money will be earmarked to improve safety and security measures?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the new proposed airport management system, I am consulting with various industry groups, aviation groups, the provinces and representatives of all regions, to examine ways and means of putting in place a more effective management and administrative system for all Canadian airports, while at the same time providing a greater degree of local autonomy or involvement by using the local airport as an important economic tool within the particular region. We think that is a sensible way to go. However, in the course of that it will in no way reflect upon the standards of safety. It will not detract in any way, shape or form from Transport Canada's responsibility to maintain a safe and reliable air navigation system across the country, control towers, light service stations and the like. It will not involve any reduction in the level of safety.

Hon. Members who have been around the House for some time will recognize that I have been involved through many years of my parliamentary career in working and helping to elevate and upgrade the level of safety in our aviation system. It was under my prior jurisdiction that we commissioned the Dubin report. The Canadian Aviation Safety Board was a product of that. The Aeronautics Act, which we recently passed through the House, is a further product of that. We have a very high level of safety in Canada, and we are always striving to improve it.

With respect to the taxes to which the Hon. Member referred, there has been some increase in the level of the ticket tax. However, I remind Hon. Members that the federal Government subsidizes every air passenger on a return trip basis to the tune of $58; in other words, every passenger who flies in Canada is subsidized at the rate of $58. I think we recognize that that is a fairly high level and that the airport cost recovery is at about 35 per cent. It was at 50 per cent in 1980. We are constantly being asked to improve firefighting services and safety, to provide better navigational services and new radar systems. This costs money, and we are attempting to address it.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Minister, but I must make the following announcement before five o'clock.

PETITIONS

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have literally thousands of constituents who have become signatories to petitions, but today I should like to table a petition signed by residents at 30 Sanford Avenue South in my riding, asking the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to respect his commitment in the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexing for old age pensions. I should like to table this petition for Your Honour's consideration.

[Translation]

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from a group of elderly residents of my riding of Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic. Those people are asking the Government to re-establish the full indexation of old age security pensions. The petitioners urge the Prime Minister to honour the commitment he made during the election campaign. The petition has been signed by people who live in various senior citizens' homes, including 165 residents of the Tour André-Grasset, 163 residents of Retrouvailles and 128 residents of the Coopérative La Source. They are asking the Government to reconsider its position and take the necessary steps to redress this injustice against them.

● (1700)

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also have a series of petitions signed by Canadians asking the Government to live up to its election promise in which it promised that the PC Government would once more index the old age pension at the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis.

The petition is from people at Seven Sisters Falls, Beausejour, Pinawo, Lac du Bonnet, White Mouth. All these people are residents of the riding of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), the Minister responsible for the legislation.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also have numerous petitions today, mainly from residents of the Province of Saskatchewan, the City of Saskatoon, the City of Regina, the Town of Norquay, et cetera. These petitioners join with thousands of other Canadians in urging the Government not to proceed with the deindexing of the Old Age Security and to live up to the promise that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) made during the election campaign, and that was to maintain our social security system as a sacred trust.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of groups of petitions to present today. The first is a group of petitions from towns and villages in my riding, Southey Humboldt, Watson, St. Gregor, Muenster, Lake Lenore and Strasbourg who are petitioning the Government to reverse the policy of deindexation and go to full indexation for Old Age Security programs in Canada.

The second petition that I have was sent by the Action Now group which is the main senior citizens' organization in Saskatchewan who are petitioning the Government to point out that seniors will be losing with deindexation $100 in spending power in 1986, $205 in 1987, $315 in 1988 up to $431 in 1989—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that he should be making a summary.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present several petitions. The first is from 275 residents of the Towns of Blind River and Elliot Lake calling on the Government and the Prime Minister to respect his commitment of the 1984 general election campaign in Canada to maintain full indexation of the old age pensions.

The second petition is signed by 175 constituents throughout the communities of central Algoma including Thessalon, Bruce Mines, Desboro, Echo Bay and other communities in that area, calling on the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pensions.

I have a petition signed by some 40 constituents in the communities of the north shore, Massey, Blind River, Serpent River and Spanish calling on the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

I have a petition signed by 350 constituents in the Town of Espanola calling on the Government to maintain the promise of the 1984 general election to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

I have another petition signed by 250 constituents from the communities throughout Manitoulin Island calling on the Government to maintain a full indexation of the old age pension.

I have a petition signed by 100 constituents in the City of Sault Ste Marie, the constituency and the community of the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher), calling on the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the Hon. Member presenting another petition on the same subject or does he simply want to indicate a summary of where they are from?

Mr. Foster: I have one more petition outlining 120 names of constituents throughout the communities of Sault North including Goulais Mission, Goulais River, the Frontenac area, Rupert's Acres and several other communities in that area, calling on the Government to maintain its election campaign promise and maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

[Translation]

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I am dutybound to present to the House these petitions from people in my riding, the first one from residents of the village of Grande-Digue, of Cogagne.

The second comes from residents of the town of Bouctouche.

The third is from residents of the town of Sackville.

The petitioners humbly call upon this House to urge the Government to re-establish the full indexation of old age security pensions.

[English]

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and privilege today to present three petitions, the first of which is signed by 644 residents of the City of Toronto who humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security program in Canada.

The second petition is signed by 238 residents of the communities of Red Lake, Madsen, Balmertown, Emo, Ear Falls and Cochenour and similarly calls upon the House of Commons to call upon the Government to live up to its election promises and reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

The third petition is signed by 548 residents of the east end of the City of Toronto who call upon the Government again to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security program.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a number of petitions pertaining to the question of pension indexing from a substantial number of senior Canadians receiving the old age pension who call upon the Government to live up to its election promises and to ensure that full indexation of the old age pension is maintained. Those residents have come from the community of Campbell River.

The second petition again calls upon the House of Commons to ask the Government to maintain full indexing of the old age pension and that petition again comes from Powell River, British Columbia.

There is a third petition from the community of Courtenay, British Columbia and there is a fourth petition from Royston, British Columbia.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of residents, a majority of which come from Yellowknife, and it also deals with the deindexing of the old age pension, and requests that the Government not move to deindex old age pensions.

NOTICES OF MOTIONS UNDER S.O. 30

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of two Notices of Motions under Standing Order 30.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As anxious as I am to hear about how you would have intended to rule on this matter—and possibly you might be willing to tell me some time later—in view of the fact that we have spent some three to four hours having the Minister and Members of the House deal with a matter which I think we all agree was urgent, I am prepared, with your approval and with the approval of the House if it is necessary, to withdraw my motion subject to reintroduction at a later time, if necessary. I do hope you will let me know how you would have ruled today, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. The notice that I brought to your attention earlier today arose out of our view that we were dealing with a very serious matter, being the subject of our attention during Question Period and through the statement of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). However, we have had a very good initial exchange on this important subject of the safety and security of air transportation to and from Canada. Under the circumstances, I would ask for your permission, Sir, to withdraw my Notice of Motion. Obviously I reserve the right, if future developments require it, to bring forward a similar motion on a later date.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, question No. 327 will be answered today.

[Text]

COST OF CAR AND DRIVER

Question No. 327—Mr. Gagliano:

What is the cost out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund for the car and driver provided to the Minister of State (Small Businesses)?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): From October 1, 1984 to March 31, 1985:

Vehicle	$16,000
Operating Cost	$ 1,974
Driver (Salary Range)	$21,500 to $24,395

Mr. Dick: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been consultations between the Parties with respect to the Bill relating to the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, and while I am on my feet, I might as well address myself to a subsequent Bill dealing with the Farm Improvement Loans Act. These Bills are very straightforward and in effect extend the operation of the legislation for an additional period of time. The present legislation would provide that those two Acts would end and would no longer be available to the people of Canada by the end of this month. Accordingly, these Bills are before us for the purpose of extending the time. We have discussed the matter and, since there seems to be a general agreement with respect to the legislation, it has been agreed to have these Bills brought forward to be dealt with relatively briefly but at all stages so that both Bills will be passed sometime today.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I just want to state that what the Government House Leader has said represents the results of our consultations and, therefore, I readily give consent to that course of action on behalf of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, you will be pleased to hear that we all agree to that. Subject of course only to my good friend and colleague, the very diligent Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), being able to give the Minister some enlightenment as to how the Fisheries Ministry ought to be operated, we will see this matter through today, by God.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) on the same point of order?

Mr. Ouellet: No, Mr. Speaker, I have a question to ask the House Leader regarding a piece of legislation that he has promised to bring forward.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I take it that the Hon. Member is attempting to convert this point of order into the question regarding House business?

Mr. Ouellet: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I do not think that that is appropriate at this time, with respect. I think perhaps the Hon. Member might want to raise the question of business at the normal time in the normal way through his House Leader.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

FISHERIES IMPROVEMENT LOANS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans) moved that Bill C-57, an Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to Committee of the Whole.

He said: Mr. Speaker, first I would like to thank all Hon. Members of the House for indicating their readiness to pass this legislation swiftly. I would like to say to the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party, who indicated that it took some discussion, entreaties and persuasion on the part of the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) to get me to proceed with this Bill with dispatch that if the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River had in any way put up any resistance to this Bill, he would have had a number of fishermen from his own riding knocking on his door asking him why. The reason for that is that this Bill, which has been in existence since 1955, is designed to facilitate credit to fishermen who need money for the purchase or construction of a fishing vessel, the purchase or construction of fishing equipment such as auxiliary boats, engines, winches, electronic equipment, nets and so forth or for the major repair or overhaul of a fishing vessel.

The legislation operates by authorizing the federal Government to guarantee lenders against losses incurred on loans made in accordance with its provisions. The House, of course, is familiar with the Bill as it has been in effect since 1955. I do not think that I need to go into it in any particular detail at the moment.

The Bill is before the House for the purpose of asking the House for an extension of the Bill's effectiveness for another 18 months. In the event that any Members wonder why that is so, it is of course because all programs including this one are being carefully reviewed. In the meantime, I think it is in the interests of the fishing community that speedy passage of this Bill be given by the House. Again, I would express my appreciation to the critic for the Official Opposition, the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson), and the critic for the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few brief remarks to the comments made by the Minister. All Parties did agree to get Bill C-57 through the House in all stages today. I must say that the extension is now over 18 months, from July 1, 1985 to December 31, 1986. I would have liked to have seen the Government put just a little more money into it. I do not know if perhaps there are some dollars there which are not spent, although someone told me just recently that that fund was out of money. If that is the case, we probably would not have enough money for the next 18 months.

There are some other rather interesting aspects of the fisheries as far as dollar allocation for that Department is concerned. Certainly, vessel subsidy programs are under funded. I am not aware of a program this year. Perhaps the Minister could tell me later on.

Mr. Fraser: Small craft harbours.

Mr. Henderson: Small craft harbours. The Minister agrees with me. I wish he could talk to the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret). Every time I rise in this House, Mr. Speaker, I try to tell the Ministers on the front-bench just how insignificant the funds are for small craft harbours. There are some $50 million for all of Canada, which is peanuts. I am here to help the Minister get more money in whatever way I can. I hope the Minister will argue as forcefully behind closed doors within the confines of Cabinet where he should have the full clout of a very superior Minister, not only as the Minister responsible for British Columbia but responsible for all of the good fishermen of this country.

I hope the Minister will raise his voice loud and long before this House adjourns for the summer recess, when that party has its cabinet meetings at Meach Lake, or wherever they are held. I hope he will tell the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the President of the Treasury Board. I hope the House Leader will stand up on his hind legs and give the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) the support which is necessary and most important. The Minister of State is another fellow who could do an awful lot for us. I do hope that those Ministers carry this forward in the chambers of Cabinet and forcefully represent the fishermen the way they should.

I will conclude my remarks, Mr. Speaker, by saying we do support this Bill in all stages. I believe my colleague, the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker), has a few remarks to make before this Bill passes, I am sure with his accustomed brevity, and that the Bill will pass very quickly.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, the Bill is in fact moving forward very quickly today. I believe one of the reasons is because of the Minister's acceptance of putting in the sunset clause. We were then able to deal with a piece of legislation which is largely, I would suggest, a book-keeping item. There are some questions the Minister should probably address before leaving this House, if we do in fact adjourn at the end of the month, which deal with the context in which the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act is developed.

The Minister will know that it is really not the same on the West Coast as it is on the East Coast. We have a substantial problem with a fleet which is too large. Rather than building more vessels, we should be looking at bringing that fleet into manageable size. I wonder if the Minister might be in a position to give this House some indication of what the present status of the buy-back is right now. During the election campaign there were promises of $100 million buy-back. Now we hear the Minister talking about a $37 million buy-back. I believe it is extremely important that something be done in terms of fleet rationalization on the West Coast.

We certainly have a fleet too large for the resource at the present time and there is a major program, and a promise of the Conservative Party, to enhance the size of the resource. During the election campaign, there was talk of a $200 million enhancement program. It is our understanding now that that figure has been mentioned in committee, that there will be a program in the order of $200 million which is currently before the decision-making body of Government. I wonder if the Minister can give the House some indication as to the status of that promise before this House adjourns?

Of course, as I mentioned before, there is the problem of having an improving fishery but, certainly, when small communities which have been dependent on fisheries are being largely taken away from it by the mobile nature of the purchasing agencies, the trucking facilities to major processing operations, and the rationalizing of those facilities in the major centres, we see those communities on the coast of British Columbia being deprived of an opportunity to maintain employment in that industry. It will be useful if the Minister in his summary remarks on this legislation gives us an indication of how the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act is going to work with respect to such things on the west coast as fleet rationalization and the salmonid enhancement program.

The Minister, being aware of the employment and economic difficulties in those communities, should look at supporting infrastructure programs, through his Department, to aid fishing and processing at the local level in order to ensure that employment and economic benefits are retained in those communities. The Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) has numerous projects in his area which require serious concern. The Minister has yet to make a statement on the Campbell River Indian band marina project, the Port Hardy freezer unit, or the Bella Coola ice plants. There are numerous areas in which we need those kinds of attention.

I would also ask the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans for a comment prior to parting from this House on another critical and important issue. I think of justice. A number of individuals who were faced with, I think, indecision on the part of Government, became involved in a civil disobedience situation. It would be hoped that the Minister would be in a frame of mind to consider whether or not the Department should maintain the charges in this matter, and, in the interests of maintaining within the industry a willingness to bargain and co-operate—and there has been an enormous amount of co-operation this year in the absence of strict authority—to bring a fishing plant into place in all aspects and keep it rolling along. It would be my hope that the Minister, prior to this Bill being completed today, would make some summary remarks as we get close to adjourning this House for a considerable period of time while the fishing industry works through its 1985 fishing season, and give these people an understanding of where they stand on some of these important issues.

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I will try to be as brief as the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson). Perhaps it might appear to Hon. Members that on some legislation I am always complaining—

Mr. Lewis: More than you did in the previous administration, or had the nerve to do.

Mr. Baker: —in taking the Minister to task. There is some sound from across the way. I don't know where it is coming from. It is obviously an Hon. Member whose riding is not affected by the Fisheries Improvement Loans. I'm sure that if the hon. gentleman turned around he could speak to two good Newfoundlanders who would be able to enlighten him on the legislation.

Mr. Lewis: Much more than you could.

Mr. Baker: The Bill before us, Mr. Speaker, amends the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act. As the Minister said, it guarantees loans that the banks give to the fishermen. That is an interesting proposition, Mr. Speaker. In the way the Minister said it, it is as if the banks give a loan to a fisherman for a boat or gear and that is guaranteed. In other words, if the fisherman defaults, then the bank has to then go after the federal Department of Fisheries to be paid for the difference. The Minister is shaking his head. "Take security" says the Minister. After the security is taken, it is guaranteed by the federal Government to be paid to the lender if the fisherman defaults. That is correct. The Minister is shaking his head.

• (1730)

Mr. Fraser: Oh, no, I am only—

Mr. Baker: I want to read a brief letter from a bank manager to a fisherman. Fishermen in British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, and part of Quebec are getting these letters. I would like the Minister to listen. It says:

Dear Mr. Elliott,

We advise that the Federal Government is paying no further claims against Fishery Improvement Loans advanced between 1977 and 1980. In this regard, we regret to inform you that your loans are now excluded from the Federal Government Guarantee, and as such, the accounts now revert to your sole responsibility.

We advise that outstanding amounts on your loans are as follows: —Boat Loan, Principal—$9,602.95, Interest to May 28, 1985—$1,504.41; Gear Loan, Principal—$5,661.60, Interest to May 28, 1985—$1,824.45.

Did you notice the dates, Mr. Speaker? May, 1985. The Minister said that this particular legislation would take effect the end of this month because that would allow the Government to guarantee loans to fishermen after the end of this month. I just read a letter from a bank manager to a fisherman which said that loans granted between 1977 and 1980 are no longer guaranteed by the federal Government. This is a very serious matter. We are not really debating a fisheries improvement loan guarantee program at all. Go into the bank and you will see a sign which says "See us for fisheries improvement loans guaranteed by the federal Government". They signed for the loan, they got into trouble because it was a bad fishing season from 1977 to 1980, their gear is seized and sold at public auction, they forgot about it for a few years—the Minister is getting up and going to the phone.

Mr. Fraser: Phoning the bank.

Mr. Baker: Phoning the bank. I can save him the trip and tell him what is wrong.

Another gentleman says he took out a fisheries improvement loan in 1979 which was guaranteed by the "feds" as he put it. He was unable to pay so the bank repossessed his gear and sold it, the proceeds being applied to his loan. That was last week and then he received a letter from the bank saying the federal Government was paying no further claims against fisheries improvement loans advanced between 1977 and 1980 and the account was now his sole responsibility.

What has happened now for the first time, Mr. Speaker, since 1935? I will tell you what happened. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) should listen to what happened. Hidden away in the regulations, unknown to the banks, is a policy which says that the federal Government will only honour an amount of money not exceeding 10 per cent of the total value of the loans guaranteed by that bank in a three-year period. Now, this situation never arose before so the banks did not know about it.

What has happened now? A bank has exceeded the amount indicated and has been informed by the Minister's Department that the Government can no longer honour any more loan guarantees on loans from 1977 to 1980. What do the banks do? They go directly to the person they loaned the money to and say that they owe the banks the money right back to when they got the loan, including interest all along the way.

The Minister can say that was in the regulations, but my argument is this. Two years ago we had the greatest number of claims against this guarantee program, some $4 million or $4.5 million. Last year it was about $1 million. This year I suppose they are projecting it down to maybe $500,000 in claims. My point is, why can the Government of Canada not honour the guarantees that were given to the banks? It is not the bank's fault. They had never exceeded that level before. They did not know the regulation was there. I am asking the Minister, in a spirit of good will as shown by this Bill, to say to the banks that we will honour the loans made from 1977 to 1980 because the fishermen did not know the loans were not guaranteed. They were told they were. The banks did not know they were not guaranteed, they were told they were. There it is in writing.

For the sake of those fishermen, and there may only be a couple of hundred fishermen involved, a couple of hundred families, let the Government do that. Here we have a fellow who has to pay back $18,593.41 for gear that was seized back in 1978, Mr. Speaker. Another poor gentleman here has to pay back $3,740.96. He was charged interest of 11.5 per cent from the beginning of the loan.

As I said, I am not blaming the Government because no action was taken, although I probably should. There are a lot of fishermen out there sitting down with their wives this evening wondering how they are going to pay this massive amount of money which they owe only because they got a loan guaranteed by the federal Government. I will tell you what they are saying. They are saying it is the Tory Government. I have heard it on the phone and I have tried to explain it to them and say no, it is not the Government of Canada at all, it is the division operating under the guarantee. I try to explain it to them. As sure as I am saying this, Mr. Speaker, they are saying it is that Government of Canada, a Tory Government, and that Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. That is what they are saying in Newfoundland. They say "He is from British Columbia, that's him! Now we have to pay all this money because the banks are notifying us in writing that the federal guarantee is no longer any good".

One fellow said to me the other day that he heard the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) say that we may not be able to send out any cheques any more, they may bounce. Well, this could be one of the spin-offs. The Government's guarantee is no longer any good.

My intervention was going to be very short and to the point, but you will have to agree that this is a very important subject, Mr. Speaker, affecting hundreds of people. It is not fair, either to the individual or to the banks. I never thought I would see the day when I said it was not fair to the banks, but it is not. After having introduced this Bill to extend it for a year and a half, the Minister should study this problem on an urgent basis in an effort to respect the guarantees which were signed in good faith by the banks and the fishermen concerned.

Mr. Fraser: I listened with attention to the entire speech of the Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker). I would ask that he immediately send me a copy of the letters to which he referred. I will consider the reason those letters were sent and will report to the Hon. Member tomorrow.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have only a couple of points I would like to make on second reading of the Fisheries Improvements Loans Act.

The Minister had made certain commitments to a number of Members of the House of Commons with regard to improvement of small craft harbours. If these harbours are not improved and upgraded fishing cannot take place. At the meeting of the Committee on Fisheries and Forestry on May 21 a number of Members from Ontario pointed out that we have very high water in Lake Huron and many small craft harbours have been damaged by ice and have become incapacitated due to the high water. Will the Minister give his assurance that his officials will report to those of us who made representations on this matter?

For instance, the Minister made a commitment that he would have the director general look into the matter of the harbours at Little Current and Desbarats, Ontario, and take the necessary action. I certainly hope that the word of the Minister will be good. I have provided the information to his senior officials but I have not had any response.

Harbours in Lake Huron at South Bay Mouth and Meldrum Bay were seriously damaged this past winter and early spring by ice and high water. No action has been taken to carry out the necessary repairs. Before this Bill is passed I would like to have the Minister's commitment that these harbours will be repaired. If these harbours are not in shape for operation the Fisheries Loans Act legislation will not help the fishermen.

The Minister made a commitment to me that he would provide information as to which wharfingers were being changed in the Ontario region as a result of the election last fall. The Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson), who is our fisheries critic, raised the subject of that problem in Prince Edward Island. At that time the Minister told me that he did not think any changes were being made in the Ontario region and that he would be quite happy to provide a list if any changes were being made.

I am not sure that any changes have been made in the wharfingers and harbour masters, but there was a story in the Sault Ste. Marie Star last week indicating that Henry Coyle, the wharfinger and harbour master for that important port, is in fact being replaced. Could the Minister clarify that point? I understand that that harbour master has been doing an excellent job, and that the officials of the department in Toronto and Parry Sound are very pleased with the work he is doing.

Mr. Speaker: With respect, I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member, but we are moving further and further away from what is directly related to the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act.

Mr. Nystrom: It sounds fishy.

Mr. Foster: The Hon. Member suggests that it sounds fishy, but I just want to have the Minister clarify that point. He made a commitment to Members of Parliament that he would provide that information. I understand that the harbour masters and wharfingers may be changed at Owen Sound and Midland as well. If that is true, it will certainly have an impact on the operation of the inland fresh water fishing fleet.

I hope the Minister will respond in a positive way because he made very clear commitments to Members from the Great Lakes region to make investigations and improve the docks. I hope he will make that commitment either at second reading stage or in Committee of the Whole. These matters are of very great concern to people in my constituency, as well as in the other constituencies which I have mentioned this afternoon. I want to have this legislation passed, but I certainly hope the Minister will look after the details which I have raised as well.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the Chair.

The Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-57, an Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act. Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1—

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Chairman, before we move right through this, would the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans take the opportunity, during debate on Clause 1, to respond to some of the questions I raised? The Fisheries Improvement Loans Act does not stand alone as a management tool affecting the fishing fleet. During the election campaign certain commitments were made about buy-back programs. Would the Minister take a minute or two to give us an indication of the progress on such things as government investment in the Salmonid Enhancement Program and what the present status and future prospects are for the buy-back?

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to advise the Committee that with regard to salmonid enhancement and the buy-back I have submitted documents to Cabinet. As soon as they have been dealt with I will be able to advise the Hon. Member on the outcome. I want to assure him and others that I take both those matters very seriously and am pursuing them.

With respect to some other matters raised by the Hon. Member, they are important and I would be quite pleased to discuss those in detail with the Hon. Member. I believe that attempts have been made and that there is some co-operation between my staff and the Hon. Member's office to arrange a meeting on Thursday. Certainly I hope that that will be accomplished.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister take a few minutes to respond to some questions with respect to financial assistance being made available to the Ontario region to make repairs to wharves that are suffering either from ice damage or high water which is affecting many harbours this year? Could he respond to those concerns?

The Chairman: The Chair does not believe that the question is really relevant to the Bill. I do not see the relevance of the question to the Bill before the House.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I cannot imagine what the value of improving or extending the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act will be if we are not getting the proper improvements to harbours to operate at a reasonable level. If harbours are awash and completely unusable, how are the fishermen in the Great Lakes region going to operate? What is the value of having a loan if the Department of Fisheries and Oceans is not prepared to improve the harbours which are not functional in some cases because of high water? Surely we are here to deal with the over-all fishery.

For instance, in my constituency in South Bay Mouth, where a number of commercial fishermen operate, not only the perimeter wharf but all the finger wharves are completely submerged. This requires massive attention. If the fishermen operating out of South Bay Mouth do not have decent harbours from which to operate—they are completely inoperative at this time—what is the point of extending the fisheries loans legislation to them?

I saw that the Minister was prepared to respond to my representation. I am sure there would be agreement for that response to be made now.

The Chairman: The Chair is not convinced of the relevancy of the question. I would ask the Hon. Member to direct another question to the Minister. The Minister may reply at some time, if he wishes.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I have one further point to make to the Minister with respect to Clause I concerning the loans that are made under the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act that are not honoured by the Fisheries Department because the banks involved have gone over the figure that is supposedly stipulated in the regulations. I do not know where the figures are stipulated in the regulation.

Although most Acts are confusing, this is particularly confusing when trying to determine the amount of money the Government will respect that the banks cannot get from the fishermen, after using every method possible to get their money from the fishermen. As I stated during the second reading, the banks try every method possible to get their money and then go after the fishermen as a last resort.

I did not mention to the Minister that the Fishermens' credit has totally gone and the banks have written a second letter, pursuant to Fisheries Improvement Loans Act asking for their credit cards because they no longer have any credit with the bank. The reason is that the federal Government is no longer honouring their fisheries improvement loans. They do not point out that they have surpassed the limit stipulated by the Government.

This system was triggered for the first time in April. The fishermen were notified that they owed the banks the money plus the interest because they no longer had the loans guaranteed by the federal Government. The unfairness is that the claim of the person who took out the loan in the 1970s and worked hard to pay it back by making sacrifices will not be honoured, while someone who quit fishing after finding it difficult will have his claim honoured because he made it first.

The Department of Fisheries has no way now of knowing how many fishermen are involved in the provinces throughout this country. There is no way of knowing, unless there is a mechanism whereby the banks notify the Fisheries Improvement Loans people of the total value of their loans made as of March 31. Perhaps the Minister could then divide that total figure into the total number of fishermen who received loans and arrive at a general figure of the number of fishermen who were so affected.

However, the banks are quite understandably notifying the fishermen that they are no longer covered because they were notified at the end of April by the federal Government that it no longer respects the banks' loans for that period 1977 to 1980. You will recall, Mr. Chairman, that that was a bad year in the fishery.

It is also my understanding that the Royal Bank, the Bank of Montreal and the Toronto Dominion Bank are fast approaching their limit from 1980 to 1983. Again, the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans may have to notify those banks that it no longer respects the claims on loans that were taken out years ago.

We do not know how many fishermen have lost all their credit and must repay up to $18,000 or $19,000 to the banks. The banks are the only ones who know the number of fishermen involved. I wanted to point out to the Minister the unfairness to the fishermen who are really trying to make it in British Columbia, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Quebec. Members of Parliament who represent fishing ridings should be prepared for letters over the summer from fishermen who are stuck because of this particular decision. I wanted to bring that to the attention of the Minister and reiterate the importance of finding a solution to the problem.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Chairman, let me very briefly respond to the Hon. Member for Algoma. As I explained to the Fisheries Committee some weeks ago, there is an application before Treasury Board which I hope will be granted, that will give us more funds to meet some of the obligations which I think are proper to meet. I also must say to the Hon. Member, as I said in committee, that until we can persuade others to increase the funding I do not have enough money to go around. I listened with great concern to what the Hon. Member says. There is nothing that he says that I quarrel with in terms of need for these funds.

With respect to the point raised by my hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate, I haved read a copy of the letter from the Scotia Bank to which he referred and also a copy of the letter from his constituent. I can only say this afternoon that I am not familiar with what has lead to this. I will find out. Since this debate began, I have contacted my Department to find out exactly what the situation is and I will report back to the Hon. Member tomorrow.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I note in this legislation, as far as I can see, that the proposal of a 1 per cent fee put in the Small Business Loans Act last fall does not apply to the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act or the 15 per cent of losses which have to be absorbed by banks under the Small Business Loan Act.

I note that the Bill is being extended for only 18 months rather than the usual five years. Is the Minister planning to institute those fees in this legislation the next time the legislation is being amended? Is that why the Bill is being extended for only 18 months rather than the normal five year period? I think that kind of move made in the Small Business Loans Act has a very detrimental effect on the availability of loans.

The problem with most of these loans is that very often the small businessman, the farmer or the fisherman finds there are no funds available. The banks do not want to provide the funds because they get only 1 per cent above prime in interest and now with the 1 per cent acquisition fee being charged by the federal Government and having to absorb 15 per cent of the losses makes these loans a poor opportunity for the banks. Has the Minister considered that problem, has he rejected it, or is he keeping that open as an option when he reviews the legislation in the next 18 months when the Bill is due for renewal again?

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member will understand when I say that I have presently today no firm views on what changes if any might be made to this Act many months from now. I assure the Hon. Member that I will take note of his comments and pay some attention to the representations that he has made today.

FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture) moved that Bill C-56, an Act to amend the Farm Improvement Loans Act, be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the chair.

On Clause 1—

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I want to express my appreciation on behalf of my colleagues for the co-operation we have received from the two Opposition Parties with respect to the agreement to pass this piece of legislation through all stages. I thought perhaps at this point it might be appropriate for me to make some remarks on the Farm Improvement Loans Act. While we are in Committee of the Whole, perhaps I could respond to questions that more than likely will flow from Members opposite.

I am pleased today to be speaking to this legislation amending the Farm Improvement Loans Act. This Bill will extend my authority as Minister of Agriculture to guarantee loans under the Act for the 18 month period from July 1, 1985 to December 30, 1986. The extension of this Act is recognition of its ongoing importance within the credit system of Canadian agriculture.

These days, as Members will realize, farmers pay close attention to their books as well as to their land. The successful ones are good business people who understand, among other things, how credit matters affect their operations. In examining Government programs in the agriculture credit area, you must keep in mind the farm community's special characteristics. The cyclical nature of farming demands that producers have a good handle on their cash flow requirements. The dependence of farming on weather and market prices means that producers must be highly knowledgeable about methods of stabilizing their income. The tendency to plow profits back into the business means, that, even after being in the business for years or generations, many farmers continue to require a reliable line of credit.

Finally, farming is extremely capital intensive and again has certain credit implications. It is not enough to recognize that farmers need credit. What they need is a flexible range of credit options. Without this, the sort of long-term planning so important to effective, efficient farming would not be possible.

The Farm Improvement Loans Act provides an option that meets a very specific need, that of intermediate term financing to cover capital expenditures.

The Act itself, as many Members will realize, was introduced 40 years ago. It has authorized Ministers of Agriculture to guarantee against losses term loans made to farmers by chartered banks, Alberta treasury branches and other designated lenders across the country.

Producers are able to have several outstanding loans under this program to a combined ceiling of $100,000. The maximum repayment period for loans to cover the purchase of additional land is 15 years while for all other purposes the term of repayment is 10 years. Since its introduction in March 1945, the Act has been amended several times, primarily to effect lending periods.

Just to give some idea of its impact on the farm community since the introduction of the Act until the end of last year, about 1.9 million loans have been approved worth in excess $5 billion. This reflects a sizeable capital investment in the agriculture sector.

During this period some $17 million, that is a fraction of 1 per cent, was paid by the federal Government in claims, of which $2.8 million subsequently was recovered. That is not a bad record. I think it proves farmers generally are a very, very good credit risk.

As further proof, prior to the introduction of the Act, lending institutions were reluctant to extend intermediate credit to farmers. However, during the years following the program's introduction, lending institutions came to realize that producers were indeed good risks. As a result, numerous banks and other lending organizations have entered the field with their own programs for intermediate farm loans. In this sense, the Farm Improvement Loans Act played an instrumental role in expanding the number of farm credit sources open to farmers, as well as raising the level of credit available to them.

I am sure every Member of the House has noted with great satisfaction the over-all decline in interest rates. This trend is reflected in FCC rates, which have dropped from thirteen and three-quarters per cent on five-year loans as of last December, to eleven and seven-eights per cent as of now, the lowest level since 1979. This downward trend is clear evidence that the Government's economic policies are on target. Declining interest rates are a sign of growing confidence in our economy and in the Government's determination to get the deficit under control.

By the way, this trend in interest rates is good news for producers who took out or plan to take out guaranteed loans through the Farm Improvement Loans Act. The ceiling on loans made under this program is equal to the prime lending rate of chartered banks plus 1 per cent. As our economy improves and interest rates reach favourable levels, this program becomes all the more attractive.

I should like to quote a few statistics to illustrate further the significance of the Farm Improvement Loans Act to the agricultural sector.

Looking back on 1984, in excess of 12,000 loans were guaranteed under the program, amounting to more than $159 million in loan capital. During the year loans were made for a variety of uses. The bulk of them, $105 million worth, went toward buying agricultural implements. The remainder funded construction or repairs of farm houses and buildings, land purchases, land improvements and irrigation, livestock purchases and equipment overhauls.

While producers in every province have benefited over the years, historically western Canada has depended more heavily on the program. For example, in 1984 loan capital guaranteed to producers under the Act in the four western provinces amounted to more than $133 million. That was about 83 per cent of the total under the Farm Improvement Loans Act last year.

It is true that FILA does not command the same share of the total farm credit market as it once did. Of course there are a number of reasons for that. For instance, provincial Governments have entered the agricultural lending field and lending institutions have set up their own programs. However, I am sure all Hon. Members would agree that it is in the best interest of the agricultural sector for this program to continue. This is especially true in rural Canada where its termination could truly spell hardship, particularly at this point in time. It is not uncommon in many less populated regions for only one lending institution to serve an entire area. Farmers in these regions see FILA as a vital resource to obtain much needed credit.

By comparison, this 18-month extension is relatively short. Of course there is a reason for it. My Department will be using this time to review the Act to ensure that it is meeting current needs. If necessary, changes will be introduced at the end of the extension period. Among other things, I am interested in examining whether this program could work in combination with existing and future FCC programming.

I suggest to Hon. Members that they would be acting in the interest of Canadian farmers by supporting quick passage of this Bill. I urge them to do so, and I would be happy to respond to their questions.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, we in this Party will be pleased to see the Bill pass in that it provides some assistance to agriculture. I think the Minister referred to the amount of loans last year totalling some $1.5 million.

Mr. Wise: They amounted to more than $159 million.

Mr. Foster: I should like to put that amount into perspective. We should be conscious of the fact that there are something like $20 billion worth of farm loans at the present time, and that the profit from many commodities is not adequate for producers to repay their loans or debts. This is why they are facing the worst economic crisis since the 1930s.

In its report last fall, the Farm Credit Corporation catalogued the depth and scope of the crisis when it indicated that 39,000, or something like 17 per cent of our farmers were in serious financial difficulty, were borrowing more than they were spending on capital expenditures and had equity of less than 15 per cent. Since that report came out, the Government completely fumbled the handling of the EEC beef matter. We now have something like 17 million pounds of subsidized beef entering the country, which will make it that much more difficult for farmers to repay these loans.

When I heard this afternoon that the Minister wanted to bring in emergency legislation, I hoped that he would bring in a Bill to provide for an agri-bond program such as the one recommended by the finance committee. It recommended a $96 million program which would provide 8 per cent loans. The program was recommended highly by the chairman of the committee, an outstanding chairman and government Member. Such an agri-bond program would help solve the financial distress faced by a large percentage of the 39,000 farmers about whom I just spoke.

As I understand it, the prime rate of the bank plus 1 per cent will probably be close to 13 per cent, or an interest rate which is actually higher than the present rate of the Farm Credit Corporation. Although this Bill provides a useful form of farm financing, a minuscule amount is actually available. The banks would not want to give out these loans because they would stand to make only 1 per cent above prime. Obviously they want to allocate most of their funds to other programs under which they make higher interest rates. Although some $825 million was made available through the Farm Credit Corporation last year, that amount has been slashed to some $94 million this year. There is really no hope in that regard.

In addition, producers have to face the prospect of new taxes on farm input costs; of nine cents per gallon on gasoline starting on September 3, and of a new innovation on the part of the Government to tax the harvest of western grains. On January 1, another 1 per cent sales tax will be imposed. All these things make it very difficult for producers to repay their farm improvement loans.

In the last three or four days before the House adjourns for the summer recess, I hope the Minister will take into account the serious difficulty faced by the red meat industry and by the western grain industry, with the United States bonus program, and bring in substantial legislation to deal with the farm debt crisis. Only by doing that will we be able to come to grips with the magnitude of the farm debt problem. Extending the provisions of this Bill for a few months or a year or so, and providing a few guaranteed loans, will not really come to grips with the massive debt problem faced by many producers. As was recommended by the finance committee of the House of Commons, an agri-bond program should be established on an emergency basis. I certainly want to see this legislation passed and extended but I hope that the Minister will be bringing in more substantial legislation to really deal with the larger problem on an emergency basis later this week. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a short statement and then I have some questions for the Minister as well.

This Bill brings up an old question that I am asked, quite often when I go through my riding. Does the Farm Improvement Loans Act still exist? The answer is that it does. Most farmers are still eligible. There are some 350,000 to 500,000 farmers in Canada who would be eligible. They have to be commercial farmers who are attempting to make a living from farming. The rate is prime plus 1 per cent and the Government will guarantee part of the loan, so it should therefore be something that banks are anxious to give out.

I guess the reason they ask about the eligibility is that it extends to virtually all farm activities, anything that a farmer would want to produce on his farm. The loan can be used to purchase the breeding stock, to build buildings and facilities, to buy equipment, even to buy land and make land improvements. The term runs for 10 years on most things and up to 15 years for land purchases.

The reason I think they ask if it still exists is in part explained when you look at this particular amendment we have before us today. It is very much like two previous amendments we have had under the previous Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Whelan. The problem is simply that for the total amount of money available for protection, because really this Bill is a form of protection to the banks, to the credit unions, to the trust companies and the Alberta treasury branches who want to participate in it, the federal Government will provide guarantees that there will be limited losses if the loans are not paid. So it is a federal Government guarantee of the loan to the farmer.

Unfortunately the Bill still reads as it read back in 1980 when I first came here. It was one of the first Bills I had to deal with as a new Member when I came in February of 1980. The Bill at that time extended $1,550 million from July of 1980 to June 30, 1983. You can see, Mr. Chairman, how you get into a problem when you continue to use that same amount of money. Later on Mr. Whelan introduced another Bill that extended it to this June. We now have the current Minister extending it from July, 1980 to December 31, 1986. We have the same amount of money being guaranteed, not for a little over two years but over six years. There is a shrinking amount of money available for new loans as a result of this.

It has to be remembered, as I pointed out, that the loans are extended for as much as 15 years if they are for land purchases. It is small wonder then that in spite of their being something in the order of $1,550 million there in the pool that we only had, according to the Minister's statement, something in the order of $145 or $150 million loaned under the program last year. That is what I would expect, because money only becomes available to be loaned under the program as people pay off their loans of previous years.

It is not a great deal of money. It is somewhere between 3 per cent and 4 per cent of the amount of money that farmers require and use on an ongoing basis. Farmers have borrowed between $20 billion and $23 billion at any one time and this program provides just over $1.5 billion, not a very big chunk of that money.

Back when farm improvement loans meant something to the farming community they made up a much greater portion of loans outstanding. In fact, at one time they made up virtually all of the short and medium term lending that the banks engaged in. Credit unions engaged in some other lending, but banks were pretty much only in the farm improvement loans business. At that time it had been government policy to have government guarantees extended to the banks to take up a big portion of the amount of money that farmers needed.

We are quite obviously trying to shrink both the farm improvement loans through the Farm Improvement Loans Act and the Farm Credit Corporation which extends longer term loans. Along with that there has been companion legislation to attract the banks into the farm loan business, which they and the trust companies have done to some very large extent.

Farmers however have not necessarily been as well served. Those who have been in the business for more than 20 years can recall when they could get a farm improvement loan and were guaranteed both the amount of interest and the term of the interest; that gives pretty good financial control for any operation.

Gradually we got to the point where Section 88 of the Bank Act was used to supplant the Farm Improvement Loans Act. That gave the banks the right, resulting in a revolution in the farm lending field. Under the Farm Improvement Loans Act, when the loan was made the only item given as security was the building or the machine or the herd of cattle or whatever the loan was borrowed for.

Under Section 88 of the Bank Act, came the revolution! A farmer could buy a cow or a combine but he signed on the dotted line giving as security all of his grains, all of his livestock and all of the movables from that operation. We moved from there to the recent Bank Act where now a similar thing is done under Section 176, but in addition to all of this extra security Section 176 the farmer only knows on a weekly or monthly basis what the rate of interest is, and it is due on call. So this has really changed the conditions for loans. It is small wonder that farmers ask with some nostalgia what ever happened to the Farm Improvement Loans Act, because they had a firm rate of interest, they had a certain amount of time in which they knew they had to pay the loan off and the security was only the item that the loan had been granted for.

We have moved a long ways. I think this particular Act effectively protects only those people who still have farm improvement loans. I think that the chance of this particular amendment assisting very many farmers is not at all great. We will probably see a continuation of the situation, with only a few farmers succeeding in getting a farm improvement loan. It will be a somewhat different process than that which is gone through to win a lottery, but for those who make it they will consider themselves about as lucky.

I would close the remarks portion of my time today by asking the Minister if he can give us some information regarding the Farm Improvement Loans Act, and tell us how much of that $1,550 million is outstanding in loans now and how much he expects over the course of the next year to become available for such loans to farmers.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I want to respond to the comments made by both the Hon. Member for Algoma and the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre. First, I would like to indicate to them that in my remarks I did not suggest that I was coming before the House with a great, new, innovative piece of legislation. It is a piece of legislation that has been around for about 40 years.

I can well recall that about three years ago, I was not sitting here but across the way in the opposition benches. In the last 13 years, I have had two or three opportunities to speak to this legislation when it was brought forward by the previous Government for three-year extensions. I really have not changed my view about it. I want to make that point because I want to be very honest, open and frank. I can well recall that when I sat over there and made representations about this Bill, I used to make some of the same comments and observations that have been made by the two opposition critics. My remarks were probably more parallel with the latter speaker than the former.

I can recall that when I was in opposition, there was one major problem with this piece of legislation, and that was that the banks did not participate in it to the extent that we thought they should. I would like to tell my colleagues that I still have some concerns about this. Simply because I have from moved Opposition to Government does not mean that I am now carrying a flag in support of the Farm Improvement Loans Act.

I used to say that many farmers came to me to indicate that when they approached their banking institutions, the bankers had three stock answers: one, they had never heard of this piece of legislation before; two, it was not their policy to participate in loans under this Act; three, it was their policy to provide loans under this piece of legislation but they could not extend any more loans because their allotment had been used up. It is for that very same reason that we are not coming to the House, as the previous Government did time and time again, to simply ask for a three-year extension on the Farm Improvement Loans Act.

We are coming before the House, not having forgotten the problems farmers have with this piece of legislation. We are trying to get an interim extension to this legislation because we want to take a look at it. We want to have an opportunity to assess its usefulness and to determine whether or not it is meeting the needs of today and will meet the needs of tomorrow. We want to determine if it can be approved or amalgamated with some other government program. We want to have time to find out about information of this kind so that we will be in a position to improve the Farm Improvement Loans Act if it is our finding that that is what should be done.

I am not going to take on all of the observations that have been made by the two opposition critics. I suppose I could consider myself fortunate for having the opportunity to sit through the passage of the previous Bill, the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, when the Hon. Member for Algoma got so far off the Act that he began to speak about wharfingers. He did not quite get to wharfingers on this particular Bill but he did go off on an EEC tangent.

Again, I must set the record straight. It was the previous Government that turned its back on the Canadian beef industry and took no action. This Government acted. We invoked the meat import law. To refresh the Hon. Member's memory, that occurred on December 21, 1984. As a result of our invoking the meat import law the Canadian beef industry is protected to the extent that the level of EEC beef coming into this country this year is about 55 per cent lower than it was last year. I think that is a significant protection for the Canadian beef industry. In fact, about 75 or 80 per cent less beef is coming into this country from EEC countries than would have come if we had not moved. I simply make that observation to set the record straight.

The other observation of the Hon. Member was perhaps a little more on track and dealt with farm finance. A few moments ago he indicated that the Government slashed the amount of money that is transferred from the Consolidated Revenue Fund to the Farm Credit Corporation. He left the impression that we slashed that amount of money from $300 million to $94 million. The truth of the matter is that $94 million is what the previous Government contributed from the Consolidated Revenue Fund to the Farm Credit Corporation. If we are talking about slashing, yes, there was a slash, but it was not done by this Government. I wanted to set the record straight on that matter as well.

Some comments were made regarding the usefulness of the program. The Hon. Member knows where I stand on the usefulness of the program. What is our other option? Our other option is to simply terminate the legislation. If the terms of this Bill were to terminate this piece of legislation, can you imagine what we would be hearing from Members opposite, Mr. Chairman? We would be hearing the most negative comments imaginable. We are not terminating the legislation.

I think it is important to recognize that $105.7 million or 66.1 per cent of the $159 million that was lent under this program was used to purchase agricultural implements. We know about the situation facing farm implement dealers today. It is pretty serious. A great many farm implement dealers across the country are having some very great difficulties surviving. Some $14.1 million or 8.8 per cent of that money went for construction, repair or alteration of farm houses and farm buildings. We know that the construction companies and builders can certainly utilize another $14 million. As well, $15.7 million or 9 per cent of that money was used for the purchase of land.

Some $10 million was used for other improvement purchases such as clearing of land, fencing and irrigation. There was certainly some investment in land clearing, tiling and irrigation projects, all of which are certainly in the best interests of Canadian agriculture. We know that some $13.4 million or 8.4 per cent of the money was made available for the purchase of livestock. We know that when a farmer is facing a difficult financial situation, it is important to invest money in good livestock. Everyone who has been in the livestock business knows that only a rich man can afford poor cattle. There was some half a million dollars spent on major repairs and overhaul of agricultural implements.

We are not here today taking great credit, saying that this is a new innovative program which is going to be the end to all of our problems in the agricultural industry. That is not it at all. We are coming here very honestly saying that we are not perfectly satisfied with the program the way it now is, although the previous Government seemed to be. At every three-year interval we would see the same old Bill back again. The Government would ask for a three-year extension for the same old Bill. We are not doing that. We are just asking for enough time to have a look at the program to see whether or not it can be improved.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to hold up this debate, but I want to commend the Minister on what he just said. I believe it is an excellent explanation. I do not think anyone would be happy if we terminated this Bill in spite of all its shortcomings. I was happy to hear the Minister say that during the interim this Bill is going to continue and there will be a review. That is the reason I rise now.

It is not only the financial difficulties which are facing our farmers, many of whom I am not sure are going to survive until 1986. They have high interest rates and foreclosures threatened by banks. In addition, farmers in my riding have winds, drought, grasshoppers and cut-worms to contend with. The increased costs of production are becoming so high that many farmers are almost ready to give up. They do not think they can make it. Can the Minister tell us generally what is going to be included in this review because farming in western Canada is becoming a very serious matter. Many farmers are leaving. They have given up hope. Others are on the verge of giving up hope. We must do something in order to keep our farmers there because once the farmers disappear, I tell you, Mr. Chairman, the city people will know what the price of goods will cost because it is the many farm families who are keeping the price of food down. We in Canada do not appreciate that. We do not appreciate agriculture.

My point is that there are a number of matters which should be reviewed. For instance, if farmers received a price for their produce which included the cost plus a reasonable profit, we would not have very much difficulty. Every year the farmer is receiving less and less for what he grows. He is not even getting the costs back. There is no other industry in Canada in that position. Unless we find some way of seeing that the farmer receives his cost plus a reasonable profit, we are going to lose a lot of good farmers. We are going to lose our young innovative farmers, most of whom have diplomas from agricultural colleges.

Along with a review of this Act, I would suggest to the Minister that we have to review the Bank Act as well. Section 88 is being taken advantage of. Banks have taken and frozen a whole herd of cattle, and that is pretty discomfiting and frustrating. What is entailed in the Minister's review, which I am glad he mentioned? What does he anticipate might come out of that review with regard to keeping our farmers on the land?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member for Bow River raises a number of points and, of course, they are very important and legitimate points to raise during this debate. I would love to respond to all of them, but let me only respond by saying that it is the intention of this Government to review all of the programs which currently deliver services to the agricultural community, and all of the dollars we invest, because we really do not spend money when it comes to food production in this country, rather we invest dollars in the agri-food industry. Of course, those dollars return to the general economy many, many times.

I would just like to indicate to the Hon. Member that as far as this Government is concerned, there is no question about the fact that we recognize the importance of the agri-food industry both in economic terms and as far as employment opportunities are concerned. There are many examples of this during the short period of time we have been in office. The Hon. Member knows that we have taken a number of very major steps. We are not claiming great victory here but we have taken many major steps in the farm credit, farm finance area. Other steps are being considered.

I know there was a great deal of expectation when the Budget was brought forward on May 23 that there would be some special provisions dealing with the farm finance issue. However, I warned Hon. Members in this House and farm organizations across the country that although there would be some very significant measures in the Budget, not to hold out any great hope that there would be any special measures in the Budget dealing with the farm finance issue. The reason for that, of course, was the fact that we have taken a number of steps. I am not going to go through them now—they are all listed and my colleagues will know what they are—except to say that the previous Government did not move in any way, shape or form in this area, but we have moved, and moved in three or four very significant ways.

I would like to indicate why I cautioned that significant measures would not be contained in the Budget dealing with the farm finance issue. Of course, there was a major provision in the Budget for which agricultural organizations have been asking for years and years and which was not provided by the previous Government. That, of course, was the measure of no capital gains. The other measure was the extension of the Registered Retirement Savings Plan. Third was the extension of the small business bond provision.

I received the report of the Bruce-Grey pilot project on May 17. The Budget, of course, came down on May 23. Since that time, I have had the benefit of the advice of both regional and provincial farm credit managers across the country. They have been acting, of course, as an appeal board in many provinces. I am receiving their advice. This week, we have a meeting with the chairpeople of the Farm Credit Appeal Board. We will have the benefit of the advice from the Bruce-Grey pilot project. We will have the benefit of the advice of our regional and provincial farm credit managers, and we will also have the benefit of the advice from the chairpeople of the Farm Credit Appeal Board. We will have to decide, of course, what further measures we can take from the federal point of view in order to deal with the farm finance issue.

I could go on—the Chairman has been very lenient with me to this point in time—but I think that most of the questions centred around this debate which can be properly procedurally talked about are those measures dealing more specifically with the farm credit issue.

In response to the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre, I can tell him that I have charts and charts. I am not so sure whether I have the appropriate chart to supply him with the information for which he asked, but I can assure him that I would be happy to share the information I have. First is Table 1 which provides me with a summary of operations. It goes from the year 1945 on through to 1984 and lists the number of loans and the average loan. The next chart I have is Table 2, Loans and Repayment to Lenders. It goes through that same period of time. Table 3 shows loans classified by province and by lenders. That is interesting information. I know that when I was sitting in the Opposition, I was always anxious to receive that. I would be happy to share that information with all Hon. Members of the House. Table 3 continues for three pages.

Now we get to Table 4, loans classified by province and purpose. I have that information here. We have Table 5, loans for implements, combines, hay bailers, trucks, tractors and others; Table 6, loans for various farm improvement purposes; Table 7, loans for construction, repair and alteration of farm houses and buildings. I have a lot of information here which I am happy to share with the Hon. Member.

I could perhaps answer him by saying that as I recall, and I may be wrong, our losses under the Farm Improvement Loans Act were next to nil, thus the observation that this is not going to cost us a great deal. Farmers are good credit risks. They will make every effort to repay their debts. Therefore, we do not really see this as a great liability. We see it, instead, as another option to provide credit to a certain group of farmers. It has served a purpose over the years. We agree with some of the comments made and that is why we are coming back here today, not to terminate this legislation, but asking for an extension so we can sit down and try to improve the Act to the benefit of Canadian farmers.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, last year some $825 million was made available for loans through the Farm Credit Corporation. This year the estimates showed only $94 million. Is the Government going to be borrowing additional funds as a result because it could not really complement the funding available through the Farm Improvement Loans Act?

I want to point out the urgency of additional credit being made available. A Bruce County independent producers' group report showed 30 per cent of their producers were in serious financial difficulty. It seems to me that, given this drastic reduction and additional funds not being put in place, it will be hard to overcome the losses and foreclosures which have been taking place. Can the Minister clarify just what percentage of the $1.5 billion guarantee provided under the Farm Improvement Loans Act has actually been utilized? Is the entire amount being utilized? That is the problem with the Act in that the banks just do not make these loans available to farmers because they do not make enough profit. It it is not being utilized, then will the Government give consideration to requiring the banks to utilize the full amount? It is useful legislation and if only a small amount of funds are being rolled over each year, then the full amount should be utilized.

In the report that the Minister referred to, one of the problems seemed to be that the FCC were very inflexible. They would not write off loans even if the banks did so. Is the Minister prepared to bring in legislation or adopt a policy which would provide for that kind of flexibility? I also wonder if we could have the Minister, since he referred to a chart, table the statistical breakdown of farm improvement loans and show how much money is being utilized, so it could be made available to all Members?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I have tried to be as helpful as possible. If I had expected questions of this kind, then it would have been possible to have an official seated in front of me so I could receive this information. There is no question about the circulation of the information. There is nothing confidential about that at all. It should be public knowledge and I have no reservation about making the information available to Members of the House.

I have to point out to the Hon. Member that the figure he cites might well be a combination of what the FCC could borrow from the private sector plus what it might be able to receive from the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The fact is that those totals become rather unimportant because the FCC required only $94 million from the Consolidated Revenue Fund last year. Therefore, when you are preparing the Estimates to be tabled, that is the basis upon which you do so; the amount required the previous year.

I have said publicly many times that if we find the demand is such that we require additional funds and we cannot get them in the private sector, then it is possible for me as Minister of Agriculture to go back to the Consolidated Revenue Fund to receive additional money. However, we have to recognize that it is highly unlikely that there will be a great demand throughout 1985 because of a number of factors, with the result that there will be many fewer transactions taking place.

The Hon. Member also indicated that loans last year totalled $1.5 million, but of course that is not correct. It was $159 million. I think the Hon. Member just made a slip of the tongue and did not do it intentionally at all. He also indicated that we might well be restricted because we are limited to $1.5 billion in total. The information I have is that would not be the case. To date roughly $900 million has been extended since 1980. Obviously I would not expect that we would be restricted by the $1.5 billion ceiling. We do have some latitude there.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, the Minister pointed out that something in the order of $159 million was lent under this program last year. That brought the total outstanding loans guaranteed under the Act into the neighbourhood of $900 million while there is $1.55 billion of loan guarantees available under the Act. Could he tell us how the system is monitored? People have gone to banks and been told that there is no more money available through that program. Is each large chartered bank allocated a maximum amount that the Government will guarantee for a certain time, or is the pool of money kept wide open so that any time a credit union, bank, or trust company wants to lend money under this program it can just do so? Surely there must be some form of communication, particularly when they are close to using up the guaranteed funds. What sort of communication system is in effect, or is it just parcelled out to various banks, some of which in fact reach their limit?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is parcelled out in any way, shape, or form. It is my understanding that in the past this Act was administered by the Department of Finance. When the previous Government asked for an extension, the administrative role was transferred from the Department of Finance to the Department of Agriculture. I believe that transfer took place three years ago. This program is now administered by officials of my Department. We are presently considering whether the Department of Agriculture is the appropriate body to carry out that administration or whether it should be transferred to the Farm Credit Corporation.

I have received complaints that there seems to be reluctance on the part of certain bank managers to participate in this program. However, some banks participate readily in the program. There is a bank in my constituency which utilizes that legislation very effectively. In fact, we would probably all be better off if we had the level of participation in this legislation which is exercised by certain banks.

With regard to administration, there are many forms which must be completed. There is a reluctance on the part of the client as well as the bank. After an application has been filled in, the banker would most likely have to seek approval from his head office in order to determine whether the federal Government was in a position to utilize the lending provisions of the Act.

That is a round-about answer, Mr. Chairman, and my terminology may not be exact, but I think you will find that that is the procedure which is followed which enables us to determine whether we have gone beyond the cap.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, would it be possible to make the seven tables referred to part of the minutes of this Committee, or to make them available to Members who would like to have them in order that they will be part of the public record?

My last question is a very simple one. The Minister mentioned a problem that appears to have been created with paperwork. Since 1980 the Minister of Agriculture has been in charge of this program. Is it his intention to simplify those procedures, or is there a policy decision to phase out the program entirely? Farmers and lenders would like an indication of the Government's intention in this regard.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, no final decision has been made with reference to the future of this program. We think this program can be improved and we want to study it for that purpose. We will be considering the possibility of making it less burdensome. I apologize for not making paper flow from my desk to that of the Hon. Member. My problem was that if this left my desk, I would not have anything in front of me from which to respond. I do not use this as a lever to attempt to get this Bill through the House, but if Hon. Members give me an indication that they are reaching the conclusion of the detailed technical questions, I will be happy to give up my only copy and have it copied and distributed.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, the Minister:s answers have been helpful. He has indicated that only $900 million of the total $1.5 billion of the borrowing authority is presently being utilized by the banks. Why are the rest of those funds not being utilized by the banks? Banks are writing off hundreds of thousands of dollars in bad farm loans. If they were taking out loans of up to $100,000, which is the limit of this program, they would be guaranteed by the federal Government. Would the Government consider requiring banks, on a national basis, to provide a certain percentage of their loan funds under the Farm Improvements Loans Act?

With the financial situations of farmers being not as liquid as they should be, this would provide a source of reasonably priced credit. Would the Minister clarify why the full limit is not being utilized and whether the Government would give consideration to requiring banks to use a much higher percentage of the loan guarantees which are available under this program?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I think the Hon. Member knows that according to this legislation we could not direct or unilaterally decree that the banking institutions must fully utilize the piece of legislation. I suppose that if it was the opinion of the government to take such action, that question could be put more appropriately pursuant to other legislation. However, it would appear to me that the Hon. Member is suggesting that if we took this tack, it would be a significant step in dealing with our farm finance problems. The fact is that that is not the case. I did not come to the House saying that this would be a great piece of legislation. I am as critical of this piece of legislation as I sit here as I was when I sat over there, for the very same reason.

However, when we are dealing with the farm finance issue, those old, traditional interest rate subsidies which the previous Government started but did not continue for 1984 for some reason, provide very little help and satisfaction in dealing with the crux of the matter. It is further proof that it is not only dollars that will solve our problems. It is improvements in commodity prices where the dollars really count in providing some real assistance to those farmers who face real difficulty.

The solutions will probably be found through some of the approaches and recommendations that are laid out in the Bruce-Grey pilot project. It will be through some of the recommendations that we will receive from our farm credit provincial managers across the country. It will be through some of the recommendations that we will receive from our farm credit appeal chairpeople who have been in the field. We will be getting some of those recommendations as well. It will not be achieved by those of us sitting here, throwing stones and criticizing the banking institutions in this country. That does nothing whatsoever, as we have already experienced. It serves no useful purpose at all.

It is obvious that banking institutions have changed their attitude, as they should. I believe we can take some satisfaction in that and compliment them somewhat. They are not the same group that they used to be. They are taking some positive steps in the farm finance area today.

As far as the Farm Credit Corporation is concerned, the Hon. Member indicated that there appeared to be a situation in the Bruce-Grey pilot project where the Farm Credit Corporation appeared not to be as flexible as he would like to see it. However, the Hon. Member must respect the fact that this was a pilot project. We were sitting at a table for the first time with clients and a group of creditors. We were in an exercise in which we had to be somewhat cautious.

In the final analysis, we had to be careful when we decided on a case in the Bruce-Grey pilot project because it had to become a national policy which applied across the country. Therefore, it led to an observation that indeed we could have been more flexible in that exercise. While that is a fair observation, those who make that observation must realize that there was a reason. We had difficulties because whatever we agreed to in the pilot project, we would have to make a national program.

Of course, there are costing factors which had to be taken into consideration. I have indicated that one useful mechanism will be appeal boards. The question we are faced with now is that there appears to be an opinion that the most effective appeal boards might not be at the federal level but might well be at the provincial level. We want to provide the best appeal process possible and we are considering very seriously the possibility of set aside, of first offers to purchase and ability to pay and ways of working out many schemes with our clients to keep them on the land if they want to stay there. Those are the directions which we must consider rather than simply dollars and a little bit of unused capital that we have here.

The other matter also deals with the Bankruptcy Bill. I have had conversations with my colleague, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. A very high priority in his legislative program is to amend the Bankruptcy Bill dealing with the farm finance issue. That is the appropriate place for it. It is not with extending the power of write downs with appeal boards, whether they be farm credit appeal boards, federal appeal boards or provincial appeal boards. The real problems develop when you extend the authority to write down and to write off. The proper legislative route to take is the one we are planning in the Bankruptcy Bill.

Mr. Young: Mr. Chairman, I have a brief question. As you no doubt appreciate, there are not many farmers in the east end of Toronto, but I did have an opportunity recently to spend some time in Bruce-Grey county with farmers. I discovered very quickly that the resentment against the banking community largely stems from the difficulty many farmers have in making applications for funds. One reason is the distance.

Another major problem in the community at that time was that the local branch of the bank did not appoint a manager so that there was no one to whom a farmer could make an application for that Government funding. If he wanted to make such an application, perhaps he would be required to travel an extensive distance to do so.

Has the Minister's Department given any consideration to farmers in that situation and attempted to find an alternative when there may not be a branch manager at the bank or even a credit union so that farmers could avail themselves of that fund? As I say, I am not an expert but these farmers were certainly resentful toward the banking community.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the intervention by the Hon. Member for Beaches. He indicated his apologies, to some extent, that he did not have farmers in his riding. He need not apologize because he has many consumers in his riding. I want to remind the Hon. Member to tell his constituents and his consumers that if they eat, they are involved in agriculture. The Hon. Member for Beaches is very much involved in agriculture.

He points to another very legitimate problem. I thank him for focusing on something other than the federal Government or the Farm Credit Corporation. It seems that everyone wants to say it is the Government's fault and that it must come up with the solutions and the money. The fact is that we do not hold all the solutions and have all the dollars.

Some improvements can be made at the provincial level, for example. I made some observations about the appeal boards. It may well be that the more appropriate place for an appeal board would be at the provincial level. The provincial governments, through their grassroots people, have done a great job throughout the country in almost every province. They have been correctly concentrating to a great extent on increasing production and other worth-while special projects over the years. These have paid great dividends.

However, perhaps we have been lax in not recognizing that perhaps we were achieving our goals ahead of time as far as production is concerned. We have been misled, I suppose, by the so-called experts telling the world that in the 1970s we were going to have great days during the 1980s, that input costs would remain low, that we would have shortages and commodity prices at an all-time high. Maybe with those messages coming from the so-called experts, that is why provincial ministries across the nation kept going on production, production and production.

All of those observations made during the early 1970s with reference to the 1980s and beyond turned out to be completely wrong. Input costs have risen and commodity prices have fallen. Shortages are not our problem; surpluses are. They have to direct more attention to the financial problems of farmers, perhaps with business management courses and time spent there. I know that we are trying to do it, at the federal level through the Farm Credit Corporation.

The Hon. Member's observation were directed toward the banking community. I could tell some interesting stories about the observations I have made of some of the shortcomings, the shortfalls and gaps in the judicial banking community as well. I think they have to assume a greater responsibility in providing more people at the local level with agri-food business experience. That will be helpful because the farmer over a long period of time always has looked to his banker as the financial expert for his business. Unfortunately in the past the bank manager might not have had sufficient expertise and experience in the agricultural industry. The Hon. Member makes an observation with which I agree. I added to it a little.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, might I pose a short question to the Minister following up on my colleague from Beaches? I know when I lived at the end of the Queen Street carline it was an awful problem getting farm loans under this Act. I think it was about the fourth concession of Beaches. Could the Minister tell us whether it has improved any?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, we have no problems on that concession at all, I can assure the Hon. Member of that.

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Wednesday, June 19, 1985 consideration in committee of Bill C-51, an Act to provide Borrowing Authority—Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance))—Mr. Danis in the chair.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Chairman, I owe a very deep debt of gratitude to the hon. Government House Leader, the distinguished Member for Saskatoon West for allowing me to speak on behalf of the Government. I am honoured and pleased on behalf of all the constituents of the great riding of Ottawa-Carleton to speak to Bill C-51 this evening. I would like to set this $18.2 billion borrowing requirement in its proper national economic context.

A reporter asked me the other day why I ran for Parliament. I responded by saying, because I love my country and I was concerned enough about its future to want to do something about it. I have lived and worked in the international community and have, therefore, seen Canada through the eyes of foreigners. The land is strong, but the direction in which it was heading was weak. I could see that we were going the wrong way. Therefore, I ran for Parliament and here I am. I am pleased and proud to be a part of the new crew helping to guide the ship of state on its new course through the economic, political and fiscal minefields placed by previous successive Liberal administrations.

We have had a few bumps and bruises in altering our course, Mr. Chairman, but that is part of the maturing process for a new Government. The course is now set. Economic renewal is now well under way, lead by our determination to reduce the deficit and to create an atmosphere for renewed confidence, investment and job creation by Canadian businesses.

I said during the election last year that I cannot live beyond my means, that businesses cannot that no Canadian can. Why then should our Government? I underlined that theme time and time again. Now we are delivering by getting our own fiscal house in order.

I did a survey in my riding last December. I asked a question to which I had 2,244 responses. The question was: "Do you feel that we should take further action to reduce the deficit?" Seventy-three per cent asnwered yes, and so we are. Many people are saying that we did not go far enough soon enough.

Is it not nice to know that we are now rewarding success, instead of subsidizing effort, through the incentive of the elimination of capital gains tax to a lifetime total of $500,000? If one person with a good idea can create some jobs then we will reward that person. That is called incentive, a word my colleagues in the socialist axis do not understand. The Liberals spell prosperity "s-p-e-n-d", we spell it "i-n-c-e-n-t-i-v-e." Imagine, we are rewarding the entrepreneurial spirit, the genius of job creation in the world.

The capital gains exemption will reach all communities, not justs those the Government targets. All communities in all ridings and all Members should be applauding this giant step for Canadians.

To maintain our momentum, the Government needs to borrow some funds as a normal course of action to finance its programs. Bill C-51 is a formal request of Parliament to do that. But I want to let Canadians know that it is not money being wasted. This request for borrowing authority dovetails beautifully into the ongoing Budget debate for the following reasons. After the November 8 economic statement last fall, the opposition leaders cried that we would lose 50,000 to 100,000 jobs as a result. Well, "Holy Moses" and as our son Blair who is just over two years says "Look at that". I would like to give some statistics.

Employment increased by 159,000 in April and May, the largest two-month gain in decades. Since September, 271,000 new jobs have been created, nearly three times the job creation during the same period last year. Since January of this year, 75,000 new jobs have been created for youth. Since September, 112,000 new jobs have been created for adult women and 111,000 new jobs for adult men.

The unemployment rate declined to 10.5 per cent in May, a drop of 1.1 percentage points from September. During the same period last year the unemployment rate rose 0.4 per cent. The 10.5 per cent unemployment rate is the lowest since May, 1982.

Since September, the youth unemployment rate has declined 2.1 per cent to 16.2 per cent, which at this point in time is still unacceptably high; the unemployment rate of adult women has declined 0.6 per cent to 9.5 per cent; and the unemployment rate of adult men has declined 1.1 per cent to 8.2 per cent, the lowest rate since June, 1982.

After the May 23 Budget the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition questioned the impeccable integrity of the Minister of Finance by wondering why the Minister paid as much attention to Miami Beach as he did to Thunder Bay. The answer was quick and clear—Canadians did not have the confidence to invest their money in their own country. We have changed that, and to coin an old phrase: "You ain't seen nothing yet". The net inflow of capital to Canada last fiscal year was over $2 billion, and that has not happened for a long time. That is called confidence. The more Ottawa spent, the more unemployment went up. Short-term artificial job creation has not worked, so we are going another route. We are breaking from the past. We are putting the ball in the people's court, and they are winning.

My colleague, the Hon. Minister of State for Finance, said in a speech in Toronto on May 27 that the Budget would "promote competitiveness, vitality and common sense", and that it would restore "initiative, self-reliance and personal choice". She went on to say:

> One of the things we're trying to do is get out of the routine of making people's investment decisions for them.

The challenge is now on the table. Government will not do it any more. If more government is the answer, then it must have been a stupid question. Eighty per cent of deficit reduction is through imported management, program reduction and enhanced cost recovery. Twenty per cent of reduction is through increased revenue; only 20 per cent, so what is all the fuss about?

It is correct that Bill C-51 is asking for some borrowing authority, but this is a normal course of government business. Let us look at the Western Accord. "Holy Moses", as my son would say. The 1981 Budget and the hideous National Energy Program destroyed this vital Canadian industry and the Liberal Government in the process. Recently I received a letter from Miss Cooley who is with the HUDAC organization in Alberta, in which she indicated that in general the economy in the west was healthier, that the oil patch was all abustle, and that north of Edmonton accommodation was in short supply.

That is good news. An article in the June 10 edition of The Edmonton Journal read as follows:

> Statistics Canada reports the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in Alberta dropped last month to 10.6 per cent. This time last year it was 12 per cent—
> It's the type of economic news politicians, investors and the unemployed have been waiting a long time to hear.

That is also good news. We did not put balls on a Christmas tree for everyone, but what we have and are doing will solidify the future of that tree and allow more Canadians to hang whatever they want on it.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business called the Budget a block-buster, a dose of salts for our constipated economy, a requirement for a national effort to reduce the deficit so that in future years the Government would not have to borrow as much. Let us keep the Budget in its global perspective. If we borrow less, there will be more for everyone else. In economic jargon that is less crowding out of funds. This is the first time in many years that the deficit has been reduced. As an editorial which appeared in The Globe and Mail on May 27 indicated, "the Budget deserves a chance to work". We will remove $78 billion from the national debt by 1990. How can anyone question that? This fiscal year the average cost to a Canadian family will be from $1 to $1.25 per day. That is not too much to ask in order to sustain a strong, stable recovery.

I should like to commend the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan for his strong efforts to help save and fully restore the CBC children's program, The Friendly Giant. He mentioned in a memo to all Members of Parliament on May 22, the day before the federal Budget was brought down, that across the country Canadians were demanding more control of their economic affairs. He is right. We have just given it to them. I invite him to help us sell the new prosperity which we are all starting to enjoy.

I used to live in the riding of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain when I worked as a summer student on shift work for Stelco. He indicated in debate in the House on May 28 that even if we created more jobs, produced more goods and services, where would we sell them? He is right. We all have to go out and sell what Canada has to offer, all of us in all Parties and from all provinces, and the sooner the better. If we create the right environment, Canadians will take the risks of putting some of their own money on the line to build a business. We all have a responsibility to help them do what. We have to be less critical and more positive and stop using fear tactics and vicious, thoughtless comments in the House of Commons to scare Canadians.

I should like to review a few more key economic indicators by comparing Canada with the United States. Since September last year Canada's unemployment rate has declined 1.1 per cent, while the United States unemployment rate has declined only 0.1 per cent. Since September, employment in the U.S. has increased by 1.5 per cent, while it has gone up 2.5 per cent in Canada. Holy, Moses, look at that.

We have done something which has not happened in a long time. We have brought peace to the provinces. We have strengthened our ties with the United States, which is a true sign of friendship. It sure beats kicking one's allies in the teeth. We have made energy deals with the west and with the Atlantic provinces. We have strengthened our commitment to NORAD and NATO. We have introduced the lowest rate of public spending in 17 years. We have created 271,000 jobs since September. Investment Canada has replaced that ugly FIRA feeling. Confidence and investment intentions are well up. Interest rates are down. Unemployment is down. Car sales are up. Housing starts are up. These are key economic indicators. Housing starts have increased for four consecutive months and, at 150,000 units in April, on an annual basis, were 23 per cent above the December 1984 level. There is a pent-up demand for a housing boom in the country. Retail sales jumped 3.4 per cent in March, relative to February, the seventh consecutive monthly increase. These are good signs.

When we took over government, we inherited an economically troubled country. It is now beginning to work. Tory times are employment times. Tory times are now growth times. Tory times are low interest rate times. The list goes on and on. We should not be held back. We are on a roll. What we need is more encouragement, more optimism, more positive promotion of the successes of the Government to date, more talk of the gains Canada has made since September 1984; not doom and gloom scare tactics by the Opposition. The people of Ottawa-Carleton and the people of Canada know that we are on a roll. Business leaders of Canada, small, medium and large, feel a renewed sense of optimism. The only way to build a solid house, the only way to build a solid business, the only way to build a solid country is through a renewed sense of confidence in our ability and in our sense of direction.

I should like to quote the Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. In a speech in Toronto on May 7, he said:

> Canadians should support the federal Government's determination to tackle the problem of the deficit by reducing our demands and by encouraging government to show the same sort of fiscal responsibility and prudence that we tend to show in our private lives. If we do not, we are being unfair to today's youth and are mortgaging the future of generations to come.

Mr. Galt went on to say in his same address, and I quote again:

> We must accept that this means that tough decisions will have to be taken. But if we and our governments are sincere in wanting to be fair to our young people, we can, in my view, demonstrate it no more clearly than by making a determined attack on the growing future financial burden that we have been placing on their shoulders.

Mr. Galt is a man of vision, a man who is looking to the future, a man who is preparing to bite the bullet and help lower our national debt and annual deficits.

When I think of 1984 I am reminded of the successes of Canadian Olympians in Los Angeles. They won gold and silver and bronze because they were prepared. They were determined; they wanted to succeed for themselves and for their country. This new Government is also prepared. It is also determined. It will also continue to succeed so that all our people from all regions will have a healthier, happier, more stable economic, social and political future. That is what you build on, strength and successes, not weaknesses and words.

Bill C-51 is an essential component for continued Conservative creativity. The facts to date that I gave this House, Mr. Chairman, speak for themselves. The future is waiting to speak for us all, so let us get on with it.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, just a few words to add to the subject under discussion. I think it should be kept in mind that the debate over the cut-backs in the indexing of the old age pensions and the savings projected by the Government of Canada as far as family allowances are concerned are only a part of an over-all program of cuts that the people do not want and that the people do not deserve from this new Government.

I would like to highlight a couple of these concerns this evening. We have talked very extensively about the discontinuation of the COSP program, the program that enabled people to get off oil and on to other cheaper forms of home heating, and the discontinuation of the CHIP program. We watched as the Minister of Labour in charge of housing announced, not to the House of Commons or to the people of Canada, but certainly to the provincial Governments, the great number of closures of CMHC offices in Canada last week. Surely, that particular cut highlights an obvious policy on the part of the federal Government to get out of the area of social housing to some degree, because those 31 CMHC offices affected in Canada were the offices that consulted with local non-profit organizations, that consulted with the provincial Governments, that ran the home repair program in a great many areas of Canada, and now we see 16 of those offices closed down right across this country. Unfortunately eight of them are in Atlantic Canada, with some five or six in the Province of Ontario. Surely that means that CMHC as a housing authority that is supposed to look at the social needs of—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Point of order. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Chairman, am I correct in assuming that we are in the period of comments and questions now, and not more speeches?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: No, we are not in the period of questions or comments. We are in Committee of the Whole debating the authority Bill, and we are making 20-minute speeches, or asking questions of the Parliamentary Secretary in this very specific case.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I suppose the hon. gentleman could treat this as a response, as a stretched-out comment on his entire address, because it certainly negates a lot of things that he pointed out in his address.

As I was saying, the closure of the CMHC offices across Canada certainly must signify a change of government policy. What we saw from the Department involved was a change of policy in the first place to cut back on existing programs.

One of the most serious cut-backs that the Minister announced was, as I have mentioned in this House before, the 25 per cent reduction in the home repair program. The CMHC, the federal housing authority, stepped into areas where the local inspectors, the provincial housing authority, the non-profit organizations or the municipalities could no longer afford to operate or deliver the program in that area because of the federal Government's cut-back. CMHC officials then stepped in and did the inspection themselves in order to maintain the program in that particular area.

The hon. gentleman from Nova Scotia knows that down in New Glasgow and down in Sydney those officials would obviously have to replace the municipal authority and the provincial housing authority to operate the program now, because of the reduction. Now what we have is a cut-back in CMHC offices, four of them in the Province of Newfoundland, one on the south coast, two in the central portion of the island and one up in Labrador—the only offices in those areas completely cut, wiped out, closed, doors locked now as of last week's announcement by the federal Minister of Housing.

This goes hand in glove with the policy of the Government to restrict the entry requirement, or the qualification that one has to meet in order to get federal assistance to repair a home, to such a degree that only those on fixed incomes can qualify.

A lot of these people we are talking about today are senior citizens right across this country who are on a long list to get their homes repaired. Where do they now find themselves? They find themselves further down the list, or off the list totally because the program is being discontinued in their area.

Again, it was a continuation of the government policy that was announced last November when the Government of Canada said, those who have worked all their lives are now eligible for separation pay—any moneys at all from their employer—will have it treated as income, that is earnings. That is now going to be stretched out over the entire year, and that knocks people off unemployment insurance that they would normally have drawn for a year. That $12,500 is going to be taken away. The Government of Canada came out in its November statement and said that small pensions are now also treated as earnings, and that knocks people off unemployment insurance for all time in the future, although they have to pay into the program.

It was a part, I believe, of I would not say a concerted effort, but certainly—

Mr. Dingwall: A Conservative effort.

Mr. Baker: A Conservative effort, the hon. gentleman says, to try to save money on the backs of people who cannot afford today to deal with the ever-increasing cost of living. A lot of that cost of living, Mr. Chairman—

An Hon. Member: Liberal mismanagement.

Mr. Baker: Liberal mismanagement, the honourable gentleman says. It is a funny thing that everything that happens that is good he says is the result of a Conservative Government, but everything that happens that is bad he says is because of the dirty old Liberals, years ago. We will be listening to that for the next four years, at least, because this Government will try to stay in power for that long. It will go right to the end of its mandate because it will see that the polls will begin to change and opinion will roll right around. As the hon. gentleman said a few moments ago, it is on a roll, right downhill.

What about some of the incidental measures undertaken by the Government of Canada? I referred a moment ago to the home repair program. As well, earnings are going to be taken into account and if someone receives money after working all of his or her life, he or she will be knocked off unemployment insurance that was given as a gift by the former Government. Now pensions are going to be taken into account as earnings.

Then there are the incidental items. For instance, the Minister of Fisheries who was in the Chamber this evening put through a Bill called the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act Bill. It was not too long ago that the Minister of Fisheries unilaterally cancelled the salmon licence program in Newfoundland. Everyone with a restricted salmon licence who was classified as a part-time fisherman would lose his or her licence. That was the policy of the Government of Canada.

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Baker: I hear an hon. gentleman across the way saying "Hear, hear". Yes, the Newfoundland Government said "Hear, hear". It had been advocating that measure for years. However, just because the Newfoundland Government advocates something for years does not make it right. The Newfoundland Government in this case was wrong. Why was it wrong? The fact of the matter is that there will be a lot of senior citizens who will not even sign the sheet of paper that will get them their money. Why will they not sign the sheet of paper that will get them their money? The answer is obvious. It is because the $750 that they will receive is not only taxable but is taken into account the following year on the income supplement to old age pensions.

When programs like that are announced, they sound great. However, a person who is filling out that form thinks about all kinds of things. He asks how this will affect his old age pension and the Guaranteed Income Supplement of his wife. He checks with the office and finds that his wife will lose $20 per month and he will lose $20 per month. Apart from that, he finds that the payment is taxable. The gentleman asks why he should apply for it. That was the funny part of the whole thing. One had to apply to give up one's licence that the Minister of Fisheries said was going to be taken away.

The Government of Canada unilaterally removed the licences which in most cases were held by senior citizens because they were classified as part-time fishermen. Yet they had to sign for that removal. I could never figure out why they had to sign for it. In committee, someone responded by saying that in order to have the payment made to the individual the individual's signature had to be on a sheet of paper. As I pointed out, the majority of these people were senior citizens and the majority of them would not put their signatures on that sheet of paper. The reason is that the money would not only be taxable but would be deducted next year from their incomes under the Old Age Security Program.

I will conclude because I am sure my hon. friend from Nova Scotia wishes to say a few words. I think it should be kept in mind by everyone who talks about decreasing incomes to people who are on fixed incomes that, depending upon in which part of the country people live, they will be hit in varying degrees. There are parts of this country in which there are senior citizens drawing pensions who have to pay municipal taxes in varying amounts. In some cases, senior citizens are paying for services which they do not receive. In some cases, they pay school taxes, and in the Province of Newfoundland there is the special tax. It is not unusual for me to receive letters from senior citizens who ask why they have to pay, and why they have been taken to court by the municipality. They ask why they now owe $200 in municipal taxes and why they have been taken to court by the school tax authorities. They want to know why they owe $150 to the school tax authorities and what they are going to do.

Now the Government of Canada is going to restrict the indexing of seniors' pensions and it is going to do all kinds of other things through the Budget that will increase their cost of living. The Government is going to increase fuel taxes and make people pay for all kinds of things for which they did not have to pay before. They will have to pay to call the weather office. They will have to pay to do all kinds of things. As I said, the Hon. Member who will be a Minister in the next Government of Canada, I hope, wants to say a few words on this debate.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my colleague from Newfoundland for such a warm introduction. I would like to direct some of my comments on the borrowing authority to where the money is going to be spent. It seems to me to be absolutely absurd that when in excess of 1.4 million Canadians are out of work, and when the majority of senior citizens live below the poverty line, we are cutting back on their benefits while finding lots and lots of money to help the multinational oil companies. In fact, the Government House Leader himself has been part and parcel of the bailout of the multinational oil companies, a bailout to the tune of in excess of $1.3 billion.

What about the absurd program providing money under the capital gains provisions of the Income Tax Act?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What have you got against farmers?

Mr. Dingwall: I have nothing against farmers but I have a lot to say about promoting the livelihood of our senior citizens. If we cannot find the money for the senior citizens, why do we not take it out of the capital gains provisions? There will be $300 million this year, $600 million next year and $1.2 billion in 1990.

The Government has gone a step farther. The cut-backs with regard to the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation affect the provinces across the country in different ways. The average cut with regard to RRAP funding is approximately 25 per cent. In some provinces, the poorer provinces, the cuts are as high as 41 per cent. In the Province of Nova Scotia, Canada Mortgage and Housing offices in Yarmouth, New Glasgow and Sydney are losing staff because there are no programs available to assist those Canadians who in the past availed themselves of those programs because of the benefits of home renovation.

What about the lack of money for small craft harbours? We have heard the Minister of Fisheries make statements before the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry to the effect that much money is needed to maintain and improve the samll craft harbours in this country. Very little, if anything, Mr. Chairman, has happened with respect to small craft harbours. In fact, I charge that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans has abdicated his responsibility. I would not suggest he is negligent, but the Minister did travel across Canada suggesting to the Canadian people that more money was needed immediately and then found himself coming out of Cabinet emptyhanded. I suggest he ought to do the honourable thing, Mr. Chairman; either get the money which is needed to assist under the Small Craft Harbours Act or resign.

This great Government which was elected on its promise of sensitivity towards the different regions of this country has done nothing although it has talked a pretty good game, Mr. Chairman. And we don't need any lessons from those Members of Parliament who happen to represent ridings in the City of Toronto or the outlying regions, because this Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is an absolute jellyfish. He has done nothing for the poor regions of this country. In fact, Mr. Chairman, it was the Premier of Prince Edward Island and the Premier of New Brunswick who said it best when they said about the Tory Government in Ottawa that it is not providing the leadership, or the financial resources in order for the poor regions of this country to survive in difficult economic times. It is doing the exact opposite, I suggest. It is cutting back in those poor regions of the country to the detriment of those Canadians who live in those areas.

Yes, Mr. Chairman, I am aware, as you are, of the provisions of the new Canadian Constitution. It talks about equal opportunity. Where is the equal opportunity when the Government cuts back on regional development and at the same time gives to the multinational oil companies which had profits in excess of $400 million last fiscal year? They are not the ones who need additional assistance. It is the poor regions of this country which need the additional assistance. This Government has its priorities wrong. As Disraeli once said of the Conservative Party, "It is an organized hypocrisy". What better example of hypocrisy Mr. Chairman? The hypocrisy is best evidenced when it comes to our own senior citizens.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Dingwall: It is unbelievable that the sheep in the Province of Saskatchewan would be here to heckle the senior citizens of this country. I find it appalling. This Government said in 1984 that it was going to provide full indexation to our senior citizens, only to break that promise in the Budget of the Minister of Finance on May 23, 1985. The Government broke its commitment to the senior citizens of Canada on that day.

I asked it before, Mr. Chairman, and I ask it again; where is the pride of the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister? Are they proud to say to those Canadians, in excess of 1.5 million, who live below the poverty line that the Government is going to take away 3 per cent more? What it ought to have said to the multinational oil companies is that is wants that money back in order to provide a meaningful contribution towards our senior citizens. But, no, Mr. Chairman, the hypocrisy is evident and clear for everyone to see.

I thought the book-ends in this chamber, Mr. Chairman, would have availed themselves of the opportunity to stand in their places and speak with eloquence, conviction and honour for the senior citizens of this country. I would not expect them to speak against their Government. I would never suggest that. But we are treated to the comments of the Minister of Finance who has repeatedly lectured the veterans who fought in two world wars. He has lectured the senior citizens of our country and told them that they have to submit to further cut-backs in their livelihood. I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that this Liberal Party will fight this measure tooth and nail. We want to see government Members being honourable. We want them to stand in their places and speak for the senior citizens of their country, and insist that this regressive meaure be changed so that full indexation will be restored to the senior citizens.

The Government has taken another step, Mr. Chairman, it has taxed our senior citizens even more. It is going to charge them more for their gasoline. It is going to prohibit them from travelling to visit their relatives and loved ones. It adds up, Mr. Chairman. If one studies the ideology of the Conservative party, one finds it is a Party which wishes to give preference to a select minority of elite in this country. That is very evident when one looks at its measures collectively.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, the economic policies and thrust of this Government can best be described as the "trickle down theory". The theory is that there is no room in this country for weak people, as evidenced by the slashing of the pensions of the senior citizens. The Government also believes there is no room in this country for weak businesses because there is nothing in this Budget to help small or weak businesses. There is nothing for the weak regions of this country. It was evidenced by the cut-backs of November of 1984, and now in the Budget of May 23, 1985, that this Government is operating under the trickle down theory, hoping to God that in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver there will be sufficient economic growth so that somehow it will trickle down to the less fortunate regions of this country. I say to you, Mr. Chairman, and to government Members, that it will not work.

The Government of Canada, whether or not it disagrees with the ideology or policies of previous Governments, has to be an active player in order to assist weak individuals, weak businesses and weak regions in this country. And those Hon. Members of the Government who say nothing about those issues which so greatly affect Canadians are not living up to their oath to represent their constituents to the best of their abilities.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, I would be remiss in my remarks about the borrowing Bill if I did not mention something about Challenge '85. That program is well intentioned. I don't know how many students it employed in Prince Edward Island, but I know in other poor regions of this country, jobs and job opportunities are just not there. No one would argue with Challenge '85 if there were sufficient moneys put into the program. But I suggest there are regions of this country where there is not sufficient industry or an economic base, such as a university setting with research facilities, to go out and hire students who may be pursuing a career in those areas.

There are a great number of young people who, after their first, second or third year post-secondary studies are not overly certain about what they want to do in their adult life. A great number of young Canadians are not overly certain as to which vocation they will choose to earn their living. But this Government has come in with a very restricted Challenge '85 type program and said to those people that if they are uncertain about what they want to do, sorry, we cannot provide you with meaningful summer employment. The unfortunate part is that many students will not have the opportunity to continue their education because they will not have sufficient funds. Yes, Members can argue that that is what the student loan program is available for. But I suggest it is getting rougher and tougher for students to get loans and, when they get them, to pay them back after four or five years in university.

I hope the Government will change its priorities and put money back into the RRAP program, the Small Craft Harbours Division of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans, and the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion; and that it look again at the Challenge '85 program. I know there is a short period of summer remaining, but the Government could upgrade the amount of money and reduce the number of restrictions.

The Government could, as well, change its priorities in order to give our senior citizens full indexation. It is not fair that in 1985/the senior citizens of this country have to bear the brunt of a deficit reduction program while the multinational companies benefit and/a capital gains provision is implemented. It is not fair, and I urge all Members opposite to change that regressive policy affecting our senior citizens. As I said before, this could be used as a partisan argument on our part, but the Government has nothing to fear from changing this legislation as it will be righting a wrong. I say that the Government could take great political pride in restoring full indexation to our senior citizens.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, quite a few points were raised by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-Richmond East (Mr. Dingwall). However, I would like to consider a few that have been mentioned time and time again. I have noticed that both in the House and outside, there has been a tendency to misinterpret certain points, and I would like to clarify one particular point in connection with the capital gains exemption. Increasingly, people are referred to this exemption as a giveaway to Canadians. The Minister is not giving away anything, but that is what has been claimed a number of times. I may add that it is not an expenditure either, certainly not.

[English]

It is not an expenditure or an expense.

I believe that the capital gains exemption is truly perceived by the public as an incentive to investment which is ultimately aimed at creating jobs. Of course, people may not understand how this incentive to investment is going to create jobs. It may be perceived as a foregone source of revenues badly needed by the present Government to mop up the deficit it inherited, that is to say, the cumulative deficit inherited from the previous Government.

As Hon. Members are aware, the Budget contains a proposal for a lifetime capital gains exemption of half a million dollars. This is an important initiative that is aimed at encouraging risk-taking and investment. It is a clear signal and a direct incentive to Canadians to start buying shares. Especially for small-and medium-sized businesses, realizing capital gains will provide the entrepreneurial drive that creates growth and employment which are the basis for our economic security. This measure will clearly encourage equity investment. Subsequent increases in returns on investments will encourage risk-taking. Furthermore, since capital available for acquiring shares in companies will increase as a result of this measure, the balance sheet and financial health of our corporations will improve, and thus have a beneficial effect on the financial restructuring in progress since the recession. Companies will be able to develop and expand as a result of equity investment. Consolidation of their financial positions will be accelerated, and companies will be in a better position to engage in productive investment. This investment will maintain and create employment and will also help to strengthen our ability to compete on highly competitive international markets. I may also add that the full exemption will be available immediately for capital gains realized on the sale of farm property, which will increase assistance to this vital sector of the economy.

An Hon. Member: Who wrote that?

Mr. Lanthier: I will answer that interruption as soon as I have the attention of Hon. Members.

In brief, the capital gains exemption is a clear signal and an incentive to investment. The exemption will apply to various types of property, with few restrictions. It is an incentive that will let Canadians decide where and when they want to invest and create wealth and eventually jobs, without merely relying on the Government, as was the case before.

I am now ready to answer the question. This speech was drafted by your humble servant during the weekend. I am glad of this opportunity to speak my piece, since I did my homework on the weekend, and I can give the Opposition the assurance that if they have any other questions, I will be glad to answer them, especially if they are as straightforward as this one.

To get back to the capital gains exemption—something the Opposition seem to have trouble seeing as an investment—I would refer Opposition Members to an excellent brochure about the 1985 Budget and small business by the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion, published for small businesses.

An Hon. Member: This is Government propaganda!

Mr. Lanthier: It explains how capital gains exemptions can generate increased investment and ultimately create jobs, which is one of the new Budget's three goals, and I will repeat them for the benefit of the Opposition: job creation, putting our finances in order and, of course, controlling our national debt. I would therefore urge Opposition Members who, whenever they touch on the subject of capital gains exemption, fail to understand that this is an investment to create jobs—

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to—

Mr. Ouellet: Would the Parliamentary Secretary be willing to entertain a question?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary may finish his comments. Basically, we have 20-minute speeches, while the Parliamentary Secretary may of course answer and take a reasonable amount of time to do so. However, I am sure the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) will have a chance to address the Chair later on.

Mr. Lanthier: I will be happy to answer the question instead of going on forever about the same subject. However, I decide to prepare a concise and comprehensive speech, and, if the House does not mind, to use the time for debate to reply. I would appreciate it if Hon. Members would give me a chance to speak, and if there are any questions, I certainly cannot listen to them and speak at the same time. So I would be happy to answer any questions the Hon. Member for Papineau may have.

Mr. Ouellet: I have just a very brief question for the Parliamentary Secretary. If he wishes he might continue his remarks afterward.

I would like to ask him whether he realizes that not only real estate speculators but also stock market professionals as well as painting collectors who make it a business to buy and sell works of art are three groups of Canadians who are favoured under the measure just mentioned by the Hon. Member. Those people can benefit from that Budget proposal, make huge capital gains, yet do not create a single job in Canada.

Here is my question: If the Parliamentary Secretary is aware of that, why did the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) not include in his Budget some limits or standards concerning the kind of job-creation investments that might be made in Canada for which investors would be eligible for tax-free capital gains, whereas the three examples I gave him are examples of people who can make huge profits thanks to the generosity of the Minister of Finance, but still without creating a single job in Canada?

Mr. Lanthier: Indeed, Mr. Chairman, this is the kind of question I like very much because I know the answer, at least I think I do.

Mr. Chairman, this was meant to be a simple Budget. at the same time, if you have read it you noted that one of the major Budget consideration with respect to the business community is to simplify as much as possible our tax system and the filing of financial statements required by the Government. I would think that the additional standards set forth—

It is true that some people may indeed take advantage of the new income tax provisions, but I think the Minister took that into consideration in his Budget.

First, a good many of the so-called loopholes found in previous legislation have been eliminated. Because of them, taxpayers had to hire tax consultants or experts to file their tax return. This aspect has been eliminated.

Second, if we want to simplify tax returns, we must not put in additional requirements.

Third, earlier, there was reference to those who dealt in art work and made large capital gains, to those who make profits in real estates and to some third group that I do not recall. However, I remember the first two categories. I was surprised that wines were not mentioned in this group, because I am usually an obvious target as far as the alcoholic beverage business is concerned.

However, I can assure the House that, according to the figures given by our experts last week, 55 per cent of those who claim capital gains in their income tax return have yearly earnings under $40,000. This means that these exemptions will reach a great majority of Canadians. They will not necessarily be speculators.

As concerns the capital gains to be claimed by the owners of apartment houses or other types of buildings, as I was myself involved in the construction industry, I had phone calls from promoters, from people who make our economy work—this term is not meant to be abusive—and I can assure the Hon. Members that they welcomed this Budget because it will reactivate the economy, and the construction industry and trade will certainly follow. If I may, I shall explain once more the great good that this tax incentive will do by referring to this magnificent little brochure which states that the only way to create jobs is through the private sector as the Government has already proven its inability to create jobs, and I believe that this brochure clearly shows that the private sector is all in favour of this capital gains tax exemption.

Naturally, as we have said many times, this Budget might not eliminate every loophole, but you can be assured that the Minister of Finance is well aware of it as he is an accomplished economist, and he will do much more, first to eliminate these loopholes, and second, he will do this without adding a lot of complexity so that tax returns can only be understood by experts or speculators and people who can afford specialists.

Mr. Gagliano: Mr. Chairman, I have a question for the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) concerning capital gains. I would first ask him if he is aware that in 1982, according to recorded statistics, 94 per cent of capital gains listed by Canadians involved real estate, mainly land and highly speculative apartment buildings. This is my first question.

Secondly, you state that you are from the construction industry. Are you aware that as of July 1st, there will be a 6 per cent sales tax applying to prefab concrete, and since you come from the building industry, you know very well that the building industry is not like the food industry or the tobacco industry where you can implement a tax, announce it at 8 p.m. and say it will apply as of midnight on your inventory. Building contracts, and I hope you will tell this to the Minister of Finance because, apparently, he has no idea of the workings of the construction industry, in which contracts are signed well ahead of time and all those contracts that are already signed have fixed costs mainly because often in most cases, it is specified: federal tax included. Therefore, as of July 1st, those 6 per cent will not be rolled back to their customers. Consequently, a vast number of small and large contractors will find themselves in very great financial difficulty. There will be loss of jobs unless the Minister of Finance here, and hopefully soon, can announce a measure or state that the tax will apply to new contracts as of May 23 or, at least, allow an extension until January 1st in order that those contractors may adjust to the new situation. Could you enlighten me on that?

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, this is another good question! Yes, we are aware that 94 or 95 per cent of capital gain tax exemptions involve real estate. Of course, I am aware of those figures. You asked me if I was aware of it in 1982. Yes, we were quite aware of it, and coming from the construction industry, I mentioned this often, this is an area upon which I dwelt somewhat more because definitely most capital gains fall into that category. Needless to say, this is why I am also repeating that this tax is generally well received in the construction industry.

Secondly, you referred to taxes on prefab products. Yes, on the one hand, I am aware of that tax, and on the other I have received representations. I can assure the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) that such a tax is offsetting a competing provision that favoured prefab products, giving them a competitive edge that they did not deserve on top of that, because naturally they were competing with fully-taxed products. Therefore, in that spirit, we developed a balance, and indeed this is stated in the Throne Speech itself. I do not remember the exact wording, but I could give you the reference later. It is in order to provide a balance. It is true that representations were made to the Government by contractors who had carried out some work on a contract basis including all taxes. Since I have done a great deal of arbitration in the construction sector, I think that this is a debatable point. On the other hand, it would be fair to say that people who have undertaken work on a contract basis are now in an economic straitjacket with no way out. There is a legal point of view according to which the owner is then, but I would not venture to discuss a legal matter here, sort of growing rich for no reason. Should he pay tax on the new product or should it be absorbed by the government or taken out of the profits of the contractor himself? That point of view is now being considered by the Department, which was not aware until now that such conditions existed with respect to construction work performed on a contract basis. However, you can be assured that this is now be looked into and further regulations will soon be issued taking into account, first, work performed on a contract basis and, second, our financial needs due unfortunately to our increasing debt.

However, I can assure you, because I am contact with general building contractors, that the capital gains tax exemptions are much more important for job creation and business development than that part of a tax in a specific area which is nevertheless a minor one in the construction field. Prefabrication is very popular in Quebec but it is only a minor aspect of the construction sector. And as is so rightly said in the Budget, that aspect of construction will now be more competitive and will be placed on an equal footing with products made directly on the site.

Mr. Gagliano: As to the matter of the capital gains tax, Mr. Chairman, I was certainly glad to learn from the Parliamentary Secretary that 94 per cent of all exemptions in 1982 were for real estate. He must be aware, therefore, of the financial aspects of the purchase and sale of lands and real estate. He himself admitted that much. It is a speculative industry. I quite agree with you, Mr. Parliamentary Secretary, when you say that most general contractors are delighted with this legislation. I can even tell you that some of my former customers are delighted with it.

But let us have a look at the whole scheme. Nowadays, the Number One problem in Canada is that most people, young and old, are looking for jobs, as I was made aware once more yesterday as I was walking through the park in Saint-Léonard during the Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day celebrations. When you realize that only 4 per cent of Canadian taxpayers declared capital gains last year and that 94 per cent of these gains came from a very speculative industry, you will certainly agree with me that this particular Budget provision is not likely to create many jobs, in spite of the booklet published by the Minister of State for Small Business (Mr. Bissonnette) which you have just mentioned, but I have not received yet; however I will examine it very closely and comment on it at the first opportunity . . . Those in the know, not I, are saying that the only jobs this provision is likely to create are high-paying ones for accountants and lawyers who are tax experts, claiming that with a little imagination and some long term tax planning, they will probably save the rich not $500,000, but many millions of dollars. And instead of reducing the deficit, they will probably cause the government to increase it.

Mr. Lanthier: Let us be clear about this, Mr. Chairman. When I said that some general contractors were pleased with the Budget, I was certainly not referring to those building prefabricated houses. We agree on that.

It is mostly the developers who create projects and keep them going and, of course, create jobs. I must say I agree with the distinction you made. Obviously, the developers are going to endorse the Budget because they stand to profit most. I have nothing against making a profit, since my background is the private sector. We want to create incentives and reward success instead of subsidizing effort. The previous Government was very generous about subsidizing effort. Today, the new Government wants to reward success instead of effort and get together with developers and contractors who are successful. They are the ones who create jobs. Jobs are created by a healthy private sector.

Second, I do not agree with your experts. Our Budget experts do not agree with yours, certainly not. When you said that the experts are, and so on, we are not talking about the same experts. I can assure the Hon. Member that the experts who helped us draft the Budget do not agree with the people who say that capital gains exemptions in the real estate sector do not create jobs. I am sorry but we do not agree here, and as someone who knows the construction industry, I certainly do not agree with that premise.

When you say that only accountants and tax lawyers are going to make money in those areas, I do not agree either. I hope the Hon. Member does not take me for an ally, because what he is claiming is completely at odds with the main goal of this Budget and the measures that were introduced to stop the tax avoiders from taking advantage of any loopholes in the system.

Instead, the new Budget is going to simplify and clarify the tax system in general, as the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) mentioned earlier, in order to close more and more loopholes, but I do not agree that the people you referred to will benefit more under the new Budget. From the telephone calls I received, I did not get the impression that the tax experts and accountants were particularly delighted. I can assure you that these people thought we were reducing considerably the need for relying on their services, since next year's income tax returns will reflect the philosophy which forms the basis for the new Budget, which is to simplify Canada's tax system and get rid of all kinds of red tape and complications and direct or indirect Government intervention which tend to complicate business transactions. We want to rely increasingly on the business sector to create jobs, and this Government intends to reduce its expenditures with a view to controlling the deficit and ultimately reducing our national debt.

Mr. Gagliano: My last question, Mr. Chairman, because I do not want to keep the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) waiting too long. You referred to "your experts", and I just want to set the record straight. These were not my experts. I said these were experts who were quoted in the press, so they are not my experts. However, you said that according to your experts, and now I mean yours, not mine, such a measure would create many jobs because businesses will create jobs. My question is the following: Have you made studies of who is going to create jobs? If so, could the Minister of Finance table these studies so that we in the Opposition could take a look at them? Good heavens, if you create jobs, we will give you a round of applause, but we would like to know whether any studies have been made on the subject. That was my first question.

Now for my last question. You were referring to simplifying income tax returns. I would like to know—and I am very curious—I would like to know where the tax returns were simplified, because personally, I did not find anything about simplifying income tax returns in the Budget, unless it has yet to be announced, but the Budget contains no simplification whatsoever, on the contrary. In fact, with the capital gains exemption, it takes an accountant to figure it all out.

Mr. Lanthier: First, I really appreciated the reference to "your experts and our experts" a while ago. I was myself called as an expert before the courts many times and any reference to "our experts" or "their experts" were avoided. We always referred simply to the experts. We do not want to start a war of experts, especially without naming them. I would not want to wage such a war, especially as you called them experts because it was written in the newspapers. I have great respect for the journalists, but not as authorities on experts. In fact, we have been told that a real expert is someone who borrows your watch and charges for telling you the time. As for the war between experts, we could meet outside and exchange studies.

As a third question, you asked if we had made studies. Naturally, I took part in the general preparatory work for the Budget itself, but the Minister made the final decision on every item included in the Budget. He had choices to make and he made them. Some choices were difficult. We knew that there were alternatives, but we had to make some choices. You now say that you would like to see the studies that were made. For my part, I had the opportunity to see a lot of papers, but the papers I saw last were the ones that you had. If I have heard anything about this year's Budget, it is that this Budget is very complete, and when I sent it to friends, whether tax experts, bank managers, promoters, manufacturers or businessmen, they all congratulated us on the detailed and very complete background information published with it. In my opinion, the budgetary papers include all the information that was used, and I think that it is quite complete.

Third, you spoke about simplifying the tax returns and the tax system. As I am not a tax expert, I shall reserve my answer for a while. I would like to look into this matter. I can promise you to come back with a document, but it is quite late. I cannot promise to have it for tomorrow, but you shall eventually have an answer.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to speak, but as the Parliamentary Secretary has admitted that he is responsible with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) for this disastrous Budget, I would like to ask him whether he consulted senior citizens before committing himself to this Budget which goes really to the heart of Conservative politics in Canada. I would also like to know whether he can confirm in the House that, according to his own Budget figures, a family of four in the highest tax bracket worth $200 taking advantage of this capital gains gift of nearly $500,000 will pay $2,352 less in taxes in 1990 than today, and that a family of four with an income of $15,000 will pay $413 more taxes in 1990. Since the Parliamentary Secretary admitted in the House today that he was responsible for the Budget, is he also responsible for these figures which discriminate against the poorest members of our society to give to those who are less in need of assistance? Is that what makes him feel proud today in this House?

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I am learning by experience; I did not think that I had admitted so much.

Mr. Chairman, when I said that, since my appointment to the Department of Finance, I have had the opportunity to provide assistance to my two Ministers of Finance, it is quite obvious that I did not mean that I was the only one with the Minister of Finance to work on the Budget, as the Hon. Member has suggested. My role was very modest. For instance, I certainly had meetings with the senior officials of the Department of Finance for consultations in the areas in which I have a special interest, either by training or by personal experience. However, I did not make the decisions alone. On the contrary, I was not involved in the decision-making process. The Minister of Finance made all the decisions, as is proper, in my opinion. I would not want to discuss previous cases as I was not involved before. I can assure you that, first, the Minister of Finance is the boss of the Department of Finance. Second, did I consult with senior citizens? I already had an opportunity to answer that question last week, and I will tell you: Yes, I consulted with seniors. When seniors were consulted—

Mr. Ouellet: Before or after?

Mr. Lanthier: They were consulted before, during and upon invitation recently from certain Opposition Members. And I gave evidence on some cases last week and I even identified the people who advised me on that. I clearly identified senior citizens' clubs with which I consulted since then . . . We consulted before, and I myself consulted before. Third, concerning gifts to the rich, again we did not discriminate between investment and expenditure, between investment incentives, and gifts. Jobs will be created by people who will invest in private enterprise. Jobs will not be created by the Government. We have seen how it failed on that. All the Government can create is temporary jobs rather then read ones. Let me give you an example of the programs, because earlier there was a reference to the program Challenge '85.

Mr. Chairman, we have two kinds of Challenge '85 programs. There were those which involved the private sector, and those which rather involved Government, namely municipal administrations, plus all kinds of non-profit organizations. Let me tell you that in my constituency in particular, which I had a chance to monitor, the private sector jumped wholeheartedly on the bandwagon and we were able to create many more jobs per dollar than we had been able to do under the previous program, which had evolved rather along the lines of the previous Government. Let me tell you that with Challenge '85, the private sector got aboard, fully confident because of the positive measures we had taken on November 4. At that point, they saw we were serious, and private business became involved, and let me tell you it is a real success. They contributed their own dollars. I believe that private management under someone who uses his own dollars is much more productive and much tighter than when somebody else's dollars are involved, Government money for instance.

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Chairman, in light of the revelations just made by the Parliamentary Secretary I can only ask him again to what extent he did consult senior citizens and the golden age clubs he referred to before the Budget was prepared. If indeed there were consultations with senior citizens before the Budget was drafted, I am wondering what the Parliamentary Secretary is doing now about the general outcry from people who feel cheated and betrayed by this part of the Budget which savagely deindex the pensions of retired people.

In his remarks a moment ago the Parliamentary Secretary candidly admitted that he was one of the people responsible for this Budget. After the question of my colleague, he reconsidered his position by saying that he did not have too much to do with the Budget.

I can understand that but I simply want to read him a quotation from The Globe and Mail of last June 13:

● (2050)

[English]

Before introducing his Budget last month, Finance Minister Michael Wilson was confronted with figures by his Department indicating that tax increases would hit low-income and middle-income earners harder than high-income earners—

The Finance Department also provided the Minister with figures indicating that the benefits of the tax exemption on capital gains will go largely to the wealthy and will cut the incomes of low-income groups.

[Translation]

That information was therefore known to the Minister of Finance before he tabled his Budget in the House. This document had not been made public with the series of documents tabled along with the Budget, but it has since been released and it is the document to which The Globe and Mail refers. Was the Parliamentary Secretary aware of those documents, and how could he support such generous and favourable measures towards a certain group of businessmen, well-to-do people, and how could he, after consulting groups of elderly citizens, not speak up against such hand-outs to wealthier Canadians and such severity towards the poorest people in our society? Either the Parliamentary Secretary is trying to show off and did not consult groups of elderly people before the Budget, or if he really did I would like him to tell us right now who are those groups of people he consulted before the Budget was tabled.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I am very close to the elderly people of my riding. I had an opportunity to meet with them, and I am trying to remember exactly when I met with three golden age clubs. I recall the names of two I consulted with later and I can identify them for you if Members of the Opposition want me too, for the Hon. Member referred earlier to my candour.

For a while I thought the allegations of the Opposition were founded, so I went to see the people to find out whether there was a general outcry as the Hon. Member suggested earlier. Let me tell you that the people were furious, not because of the Budget itself, but because of the interpretation somewhat—I would not say fraudulent but somewhat biased given by certain Members of the Opposition who are more interested in scoring political points than in telling the truth to the elderly. And again let me tell you that during the last election campaign we began to talk to senior citizens and other people affected by the deficit. Young people were asking for jobs, middle-age people, workers and the unemployed wanted to keep their jobs or find work, but senior citizens were mostly concerned about our growing indebtedness and our ever lasting and ever larger Government deficits. So we did consult with the elderly right from the start, during the election campaign. What concerns them most is not really the 3 per cent, what they want is to keep the major slice of their old age security pensions, the major slice of 97 per cent. The Minister of Finance was quite clear during today's oral questions period, but apparently Members opposite do not want to listen. But I can assure you that I talked to the Saint-Jean-Damascènes Golden Age Club, the Sainte-Catherine-Labouré Club and the Golden Age Club of—I cannot remember the name of the other parish in my region, I mentioned it last week should you care to refer to last week's debates. Mr. Chairman, let me tell you that those three senior citizens' clubs sent me a message that was very common after the Budget. They told me: Be careful not to spend our hard-earned money, do not touch our capital! And they were very worried about their hard-earned money and their capital. And as was said earlier today, and I want to get back to what was so aptly said by the Minister of Finance, if we do not pay attention to general measures, not just the 3 per cent that is mentioned and which is now being considered by the Department of Finance, if we do not pay attention to all the budgetary measures, it will not be the 3 per cent but the 97 per cent we will have to consider as well. The balance is then at stake. In 1990 there will be nothing left.

So I do not think we can be accused of failing to consult. We consulted before the Budget. We did so during the Budget and we did so afterwards. Of course I would like to give people the assurance . . . Earlier, I was accused of bragging. I am sorry but I simply wanted to make the point that I made my own modest contribution to the general consultation process that preceded the Budget. However, I was not one of the main artisans, as others would have me say. If I gave the impression that I was, I think you greatly underestimate the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who is far more competent in this area that I could ever be.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, I heard the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) say that he did a lot of consulting before, after and during the election campaign and before, after and during the Budget. I wonder if this evening . . . after all, we are not in a hurry, we can stay until tomorrow, we are here for the whole evening and all night if necessary, I wonder if he could table in the House the names of the presidents of senior citizens' clubs in his riding who supported the plan of his Minister of Finance to eliminate their tiny pensions by 1990.

I also heard, and I may be mistaken or I may have misunderstood the French, that the Parliamentary Secretary suggested that if nothing is done, all old age pensions will be eliminated by 1990. The Minister of Finance has accused the Opposition of playing on public sentiment and misleading people by suggesting that they would lose 30 per cent of their pension each year, and now the Parliamentary Secretary is suggesting to the House that all old age pensions will be eliminated by 1990 if we do not accept the proposals of his Minister of Finance. I think that is intolerable, and I am waiting for him to inform the House quite clearly today that there is no sword of Damocles hanging over the heads of our elderly, because if he is here to make threats, we in the Opposition are not going to stand by idly and let the Minister of Finance threaten to eliminate all pensions. We are going to continue our fight. So I would like to have two answers: first of all, whether the Parliamentary Secretary, either today or tomorrow, could give the House the name of any president of senior citizens' clubs in his riding who supports the proposals of the Minister of Finance regarding the removal of Old Age Security pensions, and second, whether he can clarify his position on the so-called complete elimination of Old Age Security pensions, as he suggested this evening in his comments?

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I come back to the first question which is easier. Now that I have given the names of parishes, I am asked the name of the presidents and what not. I did not have any petition signed. As I said last week, a petition is not the only way to seek advice. And surely I will not be bossed around by Members opposite who tell me: "Go and fetch me the petition that we have drawn up." Mr. Chairman, I have quoted names, but I have forgotten one, and as I said, you can refer to Hansard. I do not want to dwell on that point.

As far as phasing out pensions is concerned, we are not phasing out pensions as the Minister stated today, and I support his comments because the evidence is quite clear in the Budget and Budget papers. If we do not take care to control our national debt, all our social programs will be in jeopardy in 1990. We are not making any threats. Those are real facts. Our social programs are in jeopardy because of our ever increasing deficit from year to year and our burdensome debt. I do not think this is anything new.

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

PENITENTIARIES—COST OF MAINTAINING INMATES

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, recently I rose in this House to ask the Solicitor General what measures Correctional Service Canada was taking and how the inmate population in Canada is helping to control the national debt, reduce expenditures and share in the economic responsibilities of this nation.

My concern stems from the fact that we are asking Canadians to participate in economic responsibility and I strongly believe all Canadians should be contributing. I believe we have a duty to all Canadians to ensure that Government exercises restraint and cut expenditures, as is being done in many areas.

Six weeks after taking office this Government cut expenditures by $4.2 billion. Various programs are presently being reviewed to determine their effectiveness and areas of duplication. This Government is serious about cutting our expenditures. We introduced measures in the May 23 Budget that will help reduce the deficit by $4.4 billion from the previous projection of almost $40 billion.

I am concerned about the costs of our correctional services. There are various costly expenditures ranging from food and clothing to visitor facilities and building maintenance. I realize that such expenditures are necessary, but they should not be incredibly expensive.

The over-all national average cost to maintain a person in a federal penitentiary rose to $109.81 per day during the year ending March 31, 1984. That is an increase from $103.66 per day for the previous year. On average, Canada spends $39,419 a year for each inmate in a federal penitentiary. Costs have risen substantially since 1979-80 when Canada spent $75.58 a day to house an inmate.

The number of inmates has also increased greatly, from 8,465 in 1979-80 to the 1983-84 total of 10,438. Women make up 2 per cent of this number. A further 1,100 federal prisoners were on parole, probation or mandatory supervision when the count was made. In 1982-83 the total expenditure on prisons cost each Canadian $42.67 a year, or a total of $1.1 billion. By 1983-84 that cost had risen to $49.13 per Canadian, or a total of $1.2 billion.

There are some programs run by the correctional institutions that give me cause to doubt the economic responsibility of the system. The conjugal visiting sessions for inmates serving life sentences does not make sense to me. These are people who have opted not to be part of our society, yet feel it is their right to have visitors with them. The costs of these visits must be borne by the average Canadian who carries on a productive, law-abiding life.

Projects such as the greenhouses and farms that the Honourable Minister mentioned in his response to my question are other programs that I am concerned about. Just how cost effective are some of these programs? We must consider the fact that supplies and equipment must be purchased for these operations, and I consider it vital that we not have the average Canadian paying for inmate activities that are not necessary and self-sufficient.

Further, there are some important questions regarding the costs of transporting inmates from penitentiaries to court houses and back. Such involvement of inmates requires elaborate preparations, a great many security personnel and costs a great deal. There is also the question of the possible danger to the community at large should the prisoner escape, not to mention the costs associated with a search for an inmate who has escaped.

At this time there are no provisions to try an inmate in a court on penitentiary grounds to save the transportation and subsequent related costs. There may be some concerns about this proposal, and some may claim that it is contrary to the Charter of Rights. However, I would like to point out that the prison population has opted not to abide by the law and by so doing have forfeited the privileges of freedom and voting. It is a person's choice and an inmate has chosen not to be part of our free and democratic society. That does not mean that inmates no longer have responsibilities. They must still lead responsible and productive lives while serving time.

I am concerned, and rightly so, that the Correctional Service of Canada is not contributing to the Government's restraint program. Are we asking our inmates to share in cost reductions to help reduce the serious national debt? We should be doing just that. I am not suggesting that we mistreat or abuse the prison population. I am not suggesting that prisoners are the sole cause of our present economic situation. However, I do ask that we consider treating all people on an equal and fair basis so that all people of Canada share in economic restraint.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to respond further to the issue raised by the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) in a question he asked during Question Period on June 10, 1985, with respect to the cost of maintaining offenders. I can understand the Hon. Member's concern, particularly in light of recently published statistics indicating a rise in the average annual cost of maintaining a person in a federal penitentiary.

The Correctional Service is very much aware that the costs of maintaining penitentiaries must be kept to acceptable levels, and is doing much to employ inmates in ways that keep them productively occupied, provide training and contribute to the daily operations and upkeep of institutions. Accordingly, inmates are assigned to cleaning duties, the preparation and serving of food, laundry services, renovation projects, farm operations, industries and so on.

In order to foster a sense of personal responsibility and thrift, inmates are required to save a portion of the money they earn while working, and in this manner funds are accrued to provide the support they need during the critical re-entry phase into the community when they are released. In other words, they can better support themselves while looking for employment and thereby avoid further burden to the taxpayer.

I must make particular mention of the fact that the Correctional Service reduces the cost of maintaining offenders through the operation of five farms and greenhouses, gardens and other operations at several institutions that collectively provide approximately 25 per cent to 30 per cent of all food required, to a total market value of about $4 million annually. Production is being expanded with the development of a sixth farm at Bowden Institution in Alberta. Since Bowden is in my constituency, this question is very important to me. The Correctional Service hopes to eventually improve self-sufficiency to the level of 50 per cent, the upper limit in practical terms given the Canadian climate and the remote location of some of our institutions.

The Correctional Service also operates almost 100 industrial shops and institutions across the country. These shops operate with inmate labour and manufacture goods that are used at the institutions or sold to government agencies and non-profit, charitable or religious organizations. Revenue generated by sales offsets the costs associated with training inmates in marketable industrial skills and the costs of operating the shops.

Finally, I would like to mention that inmates are actively employed in forestry activities carried out at five institutions, and these activities involve the production of about four million seedlings each year, spacing and thinning, log salvage, firefighting, campground development and parks maintenance. A joint venture of the Correctional Service and the Scott Paper Company in Nova Scotia has resulted in a tree nursery operation which provides training for inmates who are paid as Scott Paper employees and who reimburse the Correctional Service for room and board.

As you can see, Mr. Speaker, there are several dynamic and original ways that have been developed by the correctional service to reduce costs, while at the same time providing inmates with training which will help them find jobs when they are released.

SPORTS—BASEBALL DECISION UNFAIR TO CANADIAN UMPIRES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, on June 18 last I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) the following question, and I quote:

> While we are waiting for the day when the world series will be held in Canada between the Expos and the Blue Jays, will the Minister ascertain why Canadians, who have graduated from recognized umpire schools in the United States, are not permitted to umpire in the minor and major leagues in the United States, while American umpires in baseball and American referees in hockey work in Canada? Should this not be a two-way street?

The Secretary of State for External Affairs replied as follows, and I quote:

> I thank the Hon. Member for that very serious question. We are looking into it seriously. We have had discussions with officials of the United States. We are not completely satisfied as yet with the response, but it is the bottom of the seventh inning and we expect that we will win that particular game before the end of the ninth.

That was a very thoughtful answer and I am delighted that we have at least reached the seventh inning. The purpose of my remarks today is to encourage the department to bat a home run with the bases full and finish the game so that qualified Canadians may umpire in the United States in the major and minor leagues, just as qualified Americans may work in our baseball leagues in Canada.

A number of people have asked me if I have any examples. I have and I will quote them. The first example is the case of a constituent of mine who, while in the United States attending a five-week course at the Joe Brinkman Professional Umpires School in St. Bernardino, California, along with another Canadian, was astounded when told that because they were Canadians they could not be hired in the United States. An official of the Harry Wnedlestedt School for Umpires at Daytona Beach, Florida, stated in a letter to my constituent, and I quote:

> Much attention is currently being given what I consider a silly law that exists banning placement of foreign candidates in jobs that can be filled by the country's own citizens. This agreement was forged between Canada and the U.S. during a time of great unemployment in both countries. Only those candidates in what is considered a critical occupation, such as science and medicine, can be placed in jobs in a country of which they are not a citizen. Hopefully if enough people complain to the politicians things will change.

Another example is the case of a young man from Surrey, B.C. who applied to work in the Pioneer League and his request was denied. The story in The Globe and Mail on Saturday, May 11, 1985, indicated that five other Canadians have applied for work visas so they can umpire in the United States and were refused. The Americans have made one exception, a Canadian citizen from Montreal who had a brother who was U.S. citizen was permitted to work in the American league. The story also states that Canadians lost their jobs in the minor leagues after it was found out that they were Canadians.

It was reported that Barney Deary who heads baseball's umpire development program, has also appealed to have Canadians made eligible. He is reported as saying, "I am supposed to be finding the best umpires and right now I am not able to do that". I agree with him, that Canadian umpires are just as highly qualified, if not more so, as American umpires.

Another story that appeared in Referee, the magazine for sports officials, in the July, 1981 edition, told the story of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer living in the Northwest Territories, who in 1974 was one of the youngest umpires working in the Inner County baseball league in southern Ontario. In 1979 he worked at the Canadian National Junior Men's Championship in Richmond, B.C. In 1980 he worked at the Canadian National Senior Men's Championship in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. He was also appointed Deputy Umpire-in-Chief of Canada by National Umpire-in-Chief Ed Bitz. He is a graduate of Bill Kinnamon's Umpire School in St. Petersburg, Florida, where he received a very good rating.

I say again that this should be a two-way street. American umpires and referees may work in Canada. Surely we should have a reciprocal arrangement so that qualified Canadians may work in Baseball and hockey in the U.S.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as one old ball player to another, I wish to assure the Hon. Member that we are committed to developing a mechanism which would permit aspiring and talented Canadians to pursue careers as umpires in professional baseball.

The Hon. Member has rightly pointed out that it has been some time now since major league baseball has come to Canada. As the Hon. Member knows, baseball requires anyone who wishes to pursue a career in baseball to "start at the bottom", to move through the minors into the majors. With specific reference to umpires, the United States' immigration regulations provide for Canadian participation at the major league level through the issuance of H-I employment visas, issued on the basis of merit and ability. Once a Canadian has reached this level he does not encounter any difficulties entering the United States. However, to attain that level an individual must move up through the minor leagues and, unfortunately, this cannot be done solely within Canada, as Canadian minor league teams are grouped in leagues with teams based on the United States. In order to be employed in those leagues, a Canadian requires an H-2 employment visa which can only be issued after the United States Department of Labour has completed a labour market survey and determined there is no qualified and available American to fill the vacancy.

For many years organized baseball has had a program to develop potential major league umpires. This program is operated through the Office of Baseball Umpire Development and involves a screening of initial talent, evaluation and appraisal of development and progressive promotion up to the major leagues. We have urged the United States Department of Labour that the merit principle be incorporated in their decision on labour certification. This would provide an avenue for Canadians who have graduated from a recognized umpire school to begin careers which would hopefully culminate in the major leagues. Negotiations will continue with the United States until an equitable solution can be found.

PENSIONS—STATEMENT BY PREMIER OF NOVA SCOTIA—REQUEST THAT BUDGET PROVISIONS BE WITHDRAWN

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, on June 14 I posed a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) regarding the restoration of full indexation of Old Age Security. On that day I quoted a statement made by, as the Prime Minister would say, a very distinguished Canadian. I wish to again quote that statement:

> —it was a wrong move, I am very disappointed, I am totally against it. It was the wrong thing to do to our senior citizens. That part of the Budget was not compassionate.

That was said by the Premier of the Province of Nova Scotia. The Prime Minister responded that at the earliest possible moment he would make a statement which would be consistent with the intentions as set forth by the caveat placed in the Budget.

I suggest to Hon. Members opposite that the thrust of my question was that this Budget measure was wrong in its substance because of its negative effect on senior citizens. Unfortunately, there are far too many senior citizens in this country who live well below the poverty line. To cause them anxiety or frustration for any period of time, be it temporary or indefinitely, regarding cuts in their Old Age Security is both inequitable and unfair to those who served Canada in so many ways for so many years.

I asked the Prime Minister, as I am asking the Parliamentary Secretary, who no doubt will be answering for the Prime Minister, if the Government is prepared to make a statement forthwith, prior to the adjournment of the House on June 28, that it will restore full indexation to the cost of living, as it was before, and to right this wrong. I say to the Parliamentary Secretary with great sincerity and civility, which is another word used so often by our Prime Minister, that the measure contained in the Budget is not supported by provincial premiers, senior citizens, a vast number of members of provincial legislatures and, I venture to say, a good number of Members of Parliament in this Chamber.

I would hope that since there is no support for this measure, and since it has the possibility of causing further frustration and anxiety for our senior citizens, remedial action will be taken to restore full indexation for our senior citizens so that they will not have to live with this fear over the next number of months. I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary will stand in her place and indicate what the Government's intention is for the next number of days.

If the change is made there may be some commentators within the media who will write some non-favourable things about the Government. However, I suggest that if that is the case, the result of changing back to full indexation will outweigh any political fall-out that the Government may experience for a short period of time. I am quite confident that if the Government changes this measure it will receive the support of senior citizens across the country, as well as that of a large majority of Canadians who believe this regressive measure to be wrong in substance at this time for our Canadian economy.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to deal with the very serious issue raised by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East-Richmond (Mr. Dingwall), and I congratulate him for doing so in a most civilized way.

First of all, I must remind him that the purpose of this budgetary measure is to index the Old Age Security pensions effective January 1, 1986, only for the annual increase in the consumer price index greater than 3 per cent. Mr. Speaker, we feel that this measure is a must if we want to preserve the integrity of our social programs in the years ahead. The greatest prejudice we could cause our senior citizens would be to make it impossible for the government to pay them these benefits by refusing today to make the difficult decision. On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, the government has never intended to ask our senior citizens to make unacceptable sacrifices, and as the Prime Minister himself repeated on many occasions, it was with no light heart that the government was forced to make those decisions. As to the Minister of Finance, on June 21, he was quoted as saying:

> I do not like cutting indexation. But I look at the options that are available to us. I say to myself, to the Hon. Member and all Canadians, that we have tried to address this problem in the broadest possible way so that the load is spread as thinly as possible.

As a matter of fact, that is the reason why the government announced formally in the Budget and my colleagues and I repeated on many occasions that we would closely monitor the situation to see if the benefits were adequate and that he would increase them as resources permit.

In other words, we suggest that this budgetary step concerning the indexing of the Old Age Security pensions should be reexamined in light of its impact on the economic situation of senior citizens.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 9.25 p.m.

INDUSTRY

CANADIAN PORCELAIN LIMITED

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government claimed to have good relations with and would fight for the working community and, in particular, organized labour. However, it was a black day for Hamilton last Friday when the Conservative Government of Canada chose to turn its back on the collective viewpoint of the City of Hamilton Regional Council, workers, area Members of Parliament, federal and provincial, of all political persuasions, who urged the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) and the Government to accept the bid by the workers to buy out Canadian Porcelain and to run that company from the heart and soul of the community of Hamilton.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the Government turned its back on the workers. It rejected their application and, instead, accepted an American application which we believe will lead to the demise of this company and, in fact, the manufacture of that product in Canada.

The Government talks about worker co-operation. Here we have an example of workers who have banded together to save their jobs and to work with the community for the betterment of all. Instead the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion rejected their application.

I call upon the Prime Minister, if he really believes that the little boy from Baie Comeau represents the working people of the country, to overturn the cabinet decision to reject the workers' application for Canadian Porcelain. I ask him to fight—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that her 90 seconds have expired.

HUMAN RIGHTS

SOUTH AFRICAN "FREEDOM CHARTER"—THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, today is the thirtieth anniversary of the South African "Freedom Charter", which reads as follows:

> We, the people of South Africa, declare for all our country and the world to know:
> —that South Africa belongs to all who live in it, black and white, and that no government can justly claim authority unless it is based on the will of all the people;
> —that our people have been robbed of their birthright to land, liberty and peace by a form of government founded on injustice and inequality;
> —that our country will never be prosperous or free until all our people live in brotherhood, enjoying equal rights and opportunities;
> —that only a democratic state, based on the will of all the people, can secure to all their birthright without distinction of colour, race, sex or belief;
> And therefore, we the people of South Africa, black and white together—equals, countrymen and brothers—adopt this Freedom Charter. And we pledge ourselves to strive together, sparing neither strength nor courage, until the democratic changes set out here have been won.

Today, Mr. Speaker, we would talk about sisterhood as well as brotherhood, but the Charter stands as a manifest for all South Africans who care about freedom and justice. The injustice of apartheid continues but the faith in human dignity continues also, and that faith will prevail.

DISASTERS

CONDOLENCES EXTENDED TO FAMILIES OF AIR-INDIA CRASH VICTIMS

Mr. Fernand Jourdenais (La Prairie): Last Friday in my riding, Mr. Speaker, I was a guest at the Centennial Regional High School graduation ceremonies for a number of students.

On that occasion I had the pleasure and honour of giving a 17-year-old pre-medicine student the diploma she so richly deserved. Mr. Speaker, like many other people, including about 20 from my riding, that young girl was among the Air-India Flight 182 passengers who died in this catastrophic accident.

The residents of the riding of La Prairie whom I represent join me to extend their most sincere condolences to the families stricken by this tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, I feel confident that the findings of the inquiry launched by our Government will shed light on this incident, and I also know that our Government will do its utmost to prevent similar tragedies from happening again.

Canada is a pacifist country where peace, freedom and respect for human rights are basic principles. We cannot let anyone, resorting to whatever means, jeopardize this land of freedom, our beautiful country.

THE BUDGET

THE WISDOM OF THE ELDERLY

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, last weekend in my riding, I met with two senior citizens groups—one from Témiscamingue and one from Saint-Eugène-de-Guigues.

I can assure the House that the mood during these meetings was very positive and that discussions took place in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere. Mr. Speaker, when we take the time to sit down with them and speak intelligently and without rhetoric, senior citizens understand.

They understand that our Government is struggling with a gigantic deficit that might become a threat to social programs in the future. They understand that the deficit is a national responsibility and that we must all do our fair share. They understand that between now and January 1986, nothing will change and that their cheques will increase from month to month. They realize our Government is being hard on the elderly, because we introduced the spouse's allowance for persons between the ages of 60 and 64. They understand that starting January 1986, the basic allowance will remain the same and that indexing will be only partially affected, and also that the neediest who are entitled to the Guaranteed Income Supplement will continue to receive the fully indexed supplement. They also understand that the Budget clearly says that if one of these measures proves to be inequitable, our Government will take corrective action immediately.

Mr. Speaker, in the passionate and extreme kind of debate we are seeing today, the elderly are showing a wisdom that many Members in this House would do well to emulate.

HEALTH CARE PRODUCTS—REMOVAL OF SALES TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, thanks to the Conservative Government, pain, suffering, and illness will be taxable in Canada. The list of health care products affected by the removal of the federal sales tax exemption is ridiculous and scandalous. Aspirin and pain killers like Tylenol are to be taxed, which means the suffering caused by arthritis and minor injuries and headaches is to be taxed. The illness which requires medicine such as ASA to lower fevers, is to be taxed. Bandages are to be taxed, which means bleeding from cuts is being taxed. Support for sprains and other minor injuries is being taxed. Antihistamines are being taxed, which means allergies are being taxed. The discomfort of eczema, psoriasis, and other skin conditions is being taxed. Laxatives are being taxed. Sinusitis is being taxed. Items which help relieve minor symptoms of cold and flu are being taxed. Being sick or being in pain is now taxable.

Did the Tory Government stop to think that ASA is one of the primary treatments for arthritis and degenerative bone diseases? Taxing pain, illness, and suffering is cruel, Mr. Speaker. When a Government taxes items used to treat those conditions, it might as well tax the illness. It is the same thing. That is how greedy the Government is. I want to inform Canadians that the telephone number of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is area code 613-997-7—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

HUMAN RIGHTS

POLAND—IMPRISONMENT OF SCHOLARS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw the attention of the House to the imprisonment and trial of three Polish scholars who have been charged with inciting public unrest by discussing the possibility of calling a symbolic 15-minute general strike to protest food price increases. One of them, historian Adam Michnik, had only recently been released from prison after a term of several years for his non-violent protests on behalf of economic, cultural, and political freedom. Obviously his imprisonment and trial mean a step back for those with hopes that human rights can be advanced in Poland through the peaceful activities of the Solidarity and dissident movements.

An international committee of scholars has been formed to protest this violation of international standards of human rights, and it includes 30 Nobel laureates as members. They have written to the Polish President, General Jaruzelski, demanding the release of Mr. Michnik and his two colleagues, Bogdan Lis and Wladyslaw Frasyniuk. I would very much like to associate all Members of this House of Commons with this international human rights effort. The extraordinary efforts by so many Poles today to bring freedom into their daily lives through their schools, churches, cultural and intellectual life, deserve our every encouragement in effort and deed.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

NUMBER OF QUEBEC RECRUITS

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, western Canadians are becoming increasingly apprehensive over the recruiting practices of the RCMP. Five per cent of the force is stationed in Quebec, a province which has its own provincial police. Yet in 1983-84 more than half of our RCMP recruits were from Quebec. On the other hand, approximately one half the entire force is employed by the four western provinces which pay the RCMP to provide provincial policing. In 1983-84 only 11 per cent of our recruits came from the West.

Hundreds of young western Canadians are on a list, still hoping to realize their life's ambition of joining the force. Some have been waiting up to four years for a call after having been told, and I quote: "Your name is on the National Waiting List consisting of people who will, in due course, be engaged . . ." It is time for the RCMP either to change its engagement practices or to come clean, be honest, and tell these western Canadians there is no place for them.

Surely the RCMP can have a reasonable engagement policy which, while recognizing the new emphasis on special language, university, and other skills, can still fairly reflect the input of the regions in which the force is utilized. A responsible policy ought not to exclude an entire generation of young western Canadians from serving in this proud institution.

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

WHEELCHAIR ATHLETE'S WORLD TOUR

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, "Man in Motion" is not only the theme of Expo 86 but of a unique venture of an outstanding Canadian, Rick Hansen. Rick, who is from Vancouver, was paralysed in an accident as a youngster but has gone on to be a world-class wheelchair athlete, winning gold medals at the Pan-Am Games, the Olympics for the Disabled, and bringing honour to Canada. Now Rick has embarked on his dream, to tour the world in a wheelchair taking a message of hope to all who face adversity, and to raise funds for spinal cord research, rehabilitation, and wheelchair sports.

His 25,000 mile tour will encompass six continents, 34 countries, and will end in September, 1986, at the gates of Expo 86 in Vancouver. Tomorrow he will be here in Ottawa, having completed the first part of his tour. I urge Members to meet and support Rick as he demonstrates man's ability to overcome obstacles and create a greater awareness of the potential of disabled people.

I am sure that all Members will join me in passing on our encouragement to Rick as he continues on his difficult journey. I want him to know that we will be keeping him in our hearts and minds as he represents the indomitable spirit of Canadians to the rest of the world.

PENSIONS

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has fewer than three days left before the adjournment of Parliament for the summer to bring back full indexation of old age pensions for all our senior citizens. I understand that he and the Minister of Finance discussed that particular matter at lunch today. I hope the Prime Minister is not even contemplating dividing senior citizens along income lines. I hope he understands that we do not need another means test, and we do not need the Prime Minister breaking another promise, this time being the universality of social programs.

As a result of his lunch with the Minister of Finance, can the Prime Minister clean up this mess and tell us that he is going to bring back full indexation for our old age pensioners?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition talks about making two classes of senior citizens. That is exactly what the Liberal Party of Canada did during the six and five program, and he should know that very well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I can tell from the frown on their Leader's face that he does not like being reminded of that. However, senior citizens know that, are reminded of that, and do not like it.

Some Hon. Members: Bye-bye, Michael.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I met with a group of senior citizens yesterday and we had a very good meeting. We discussed all aspects of this problem. As I have said before, I am sensitive and am listening to this issue. In due course we will have a decision.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT REMOVE NEW SALES TAX ON ESSENTIAL HYGIENE PRODUCTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary for the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker.

The purchasing power of the elderly is decreasing. In less than a week, on Canada Day, to be exact, the elderly will start paying 10 per cent more for bandages, aspirin, antacids and a lot of other essential health care products on which the Progressive Conservatives have now imposed a sales tax. My question is therefore directed to the Prime Minister: Could he eliminate this new regressive tax before Canada Day?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition again refers to some of these matters. Before he starts making these comments and asking these questions he should consider the mess that the Liberal Party left the country in, starting from the time when he became the Minister of Finance until September of last year. If he considers the mess in which he left the country, perhaps he will go into a corner and hang his head in shame for putting the country into the mess it is in.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Bye-bye, Michael!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Bye-bye, Wilson. We won't miss you.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

INDEXATION—REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I assure the Minister that the 2.5 million to 3 million senior citizens of the country are holding him and the Prime Minister solely to account for having attempted to control the public debt of the country on the backs of the pensioners, the weak, and the aged.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I can assure him that it is not a trumped up issue, as he suggests. Over a thousand citizens in front of City Hall in Toronto again place the blame squarely on the head of the Prime Minister, saying that he alone is causing fear and anxiety, and that he has betrayed his promise to the Canadian people.

I ask the Prime Minister once again if he will cancel this mean-spirited proposal? Will he restore full indexation to our old age pensioners? Otherwise, I suggest to him quite strongly that we will continue not to facilitate the passage of the borrowing Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, on a number of occasions the Leader of the Opposition has said that we are balancing the Budget, or cutting the deficit, solely on the backs of the senior citizens . . . Nothing could be further from the truth.

We have introduced a range of measures which will involve spending cuts in every Department of Government.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We have a surtax on upper-income Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: What about the Prime Minister's office?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could we simply listen to the questions and the answers?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It is very hard getting the attention of Members on the other side of the House—

Mr. Lapierre: Give us an answer.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —since they don't like hearing the news that they are uncomfortable about.

Mr. Rossi: Tell us the truth.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I will tell you the truth. The truth is that we have introduced a wide range of fairness measures, and I think if the Leader of the Opposition would get this out, people would better understand the policy of the Government.

Ms. Copps: What about the Prime Minister's office?

Some Hon. Members: Hush!

Mr. Speaker: Order. It would be helpful if we would all listen to all of the questions and all of the answers.

OLD AGE SECURITY

DESIRE OF THE ELDERLY TO KNOW GOVERNMENT'S POSITION ON FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. I realize he is going to talk and pretend he is not listening. That is all part of his strategy.

Mr. Speaker, I have here some petitions from the riding of Baie Comeau, some from the riding of the Minister of National Health and Welfare and one petition from the riding of the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The elderly want to know now what is going to happen, and they are sick and tired of the Prime Minister's shilly-shallying. Mr. Prime Minister, are you going to give an answer, here and now, to the elderly who want to have this information before the summer starts? Are you going to meet your commitment to protect fully their Old Age Security pensions?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is anything very original in the question put by the Hon. Member. I don't think he has an original thought in his mind.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): I think we have heard that one before.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It's true, isn't it?

I would say to the senior citizens of the country that before the House rises this session we will have an announcement to make—

Mr. Nunziata: Aha! You're backing down.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There will be some news that senior citizens will be looking forward to.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary but please address it to the Chair!

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL ANSWER ELDERLY BEFORE SUMMER ADJOURNMENT

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister, since the real Prime Minister refuses to take the floor in the House.

Could the Minister of Finance inform the House, since we seem to be getting our answers piecemeal, that the answer he will give the House of Commons will be given before the House adjourns on Friday? Otherwise, we promise to go on like this for a couple of weeks more this summer. Are the elderly going to get their answer now, before Friday?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I thought I was quite clear. I said that I would probably have an announcement to make before the House rises.

● (1425)

GOVERNMENT PLANS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, we have just heard the Minister of Finance say the Government just might be coming to its senses on pensions. We will see that later.

I have a question for the Prime Minister, just to clarify what the Minister of Finance had to say. Will the Prime Minister tell the House and, more important, will he tell the pensioners of Canada whether we will hear before Friday what the Government plans to do in terms of its pensions provisions in the Budget?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what more I can say to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Broadbent: We know what you can say.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I have said that there will be an announcement before the House rises.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Not probably; will be.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There will be an announcement before the House rises.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Now.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

PLACE OF ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Since it was he who indicated in reply to a question from me not many days ago that when the announcement was to be made it would be made in the House, will the Prime Minister assure the House that the announcement that is to be made will be made in the House of Commons this week? Second, when it is made, will it be an announcement that pensions for all of Canada's pensioners will be fully indexed?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if I could respond to the Hon. Member's question, that statement will be made in the House, and it will be made before the House rises.

APPLICATION OF INDEXATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The Minister of Finance—and I will go back to him since evidently he is going to be answering these questions today—earlier replied to a question from the Leader of the Opposition about the previous Liberal Government's decision to index some pensions but leave out others. The Minister of Finance said, and I wrote down the words, "that senior citizens do not like that". Since he said senior citizens did not like it when the Liberals did it, will the Minister assure the House that the Conservative Government will not do the same thing?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I said I am a very reasonable man.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I am flexible. I listen.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Broadbent: That is it?

AIR TRANSPORT

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT HOLD INQUIRY INTO PASSENGER SAFETY PROCEDURES AT AIRPORTS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport.

In light of revelations that Mirabel Airport safety measures leave much to be desired and are a haphazardous exercise, and even that access to the runways is practically a free-for-all, is the Minister now prepared to agree to an independent and impartial Canadian Aviation Safety Board inquiry into the whole safety system in Canadian airports and on procedures used to protect passengers in our airports?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board is in fact involved in the investigation of the accident. It will be making recommendations and will be presenting observations, I am sure, with respect to any deficiencies that may be in place or may be perceived to be in place. We expect that will be brought to our attention.

The Canadian Aviation Safety Board also has the prerogative of holding public hearings. That is a decision it can make on its own accord. However, I think the Hon. Member would also appreciate the fact that the investigation has just started. Our people are there, on the scene, working with officials from India, the United States, and the United Kingdom. If any recommendations are brought to my attention and to the attention of my Department with respect to improvements in safety, we will certainly look at them very favourably.

PROTECTION OF PUBLIC—REQUEST FOR INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is also directed to the Minister of Transport. We are not concerned about an investigation of the incident. Clearly there will be an investigation in that regard. However, what I am asking the Minister to recognize is that, while this investigation could take time, it is important for the public who use airports to do so with the assurance that appropriate measures have been taken to protect them. What we asked yesterday and again today is for a quick, independent investigation of the current security procedures at airports in Canada.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board can, on its own accord, investigate matters relating to safety and security. If there is any suggestion that safety standards are not up to par, they will certainly bring that to our attention and may very well want to engage in a full inquiry.

To be more specific, and to reply to the specific part of the question, I should like to inform the Hon. Member that the air transport administrator today called in all regional administrators from across the country and urged them to ensure that security is tightened up, especially with regard to the accessibility of aircraft on the ramp, gates, identification passes, doors, and the access leading to the air side of airports. In other words, not only are standards to be maintained, but they are to be scrupulously maintained. As far as the Hon. Member's request for full-scale inquiry by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board is concerned, naturally we will be discussing it—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate the seriousness of the matter, but perhaps this should be a Statement under Motions.

PENSIONS

PRIME MINISTER'S ELECTION STATEMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Since he specifically promised seniors during the election campaign that, on election, the Conservative Party would fully index Old Age Security benefits, could the Prime Minister assure the House that, when the Government makes an announcement prior to Friday of this week, the commitment made to seniors during the election campaign will be maintained?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is not using the time of the House very well. Surely he could demonstrate a little patience.

Mr. Young: I think the seniors have demonstrated great patience with this Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. To be fair, would he stand up and assure our seniors that the promise which he personally made during the election campaign will be carried out? For the sake of the dignity of our seniors, would he not stand up and say that?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, unlike our Liberal friends who claim to be the serene depository of truth and who have already introduced a program whose impact on poorer people in our society proved to be quite disastrous, we have been listening closely throughout this lengthy debate, not only to our own caucus but also to other Members of the House of Commons, including my colleague, of course.

The Minister of Finance has indicated that a statement will be made before the House adjourns—within a few hours or days—and I should think it will likely allay most of the fears already expressed.

[English]

REQUEST FOR EARLY STATEMENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Hon. Members on this side of the House very cautiously welcome the indications of the Minister of Finance thus far today. However, to repeat what my Leader has said: "You cannot solve one problem by breaking another promise".

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Tobin: I ask the Prime Minister and his Minister of Finance to give consideration to making a statement, if possible this afternoon; if not, the first thing tomorrow; so that Hon. Members, and indeed senior citizens, have an opportunity to examine the kind of movement which has obviously now occurred, to see whether the Government has kept its commitment of last November to the principle of universality.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I hate to say this to the Hon. Member because we are going to have to ruin his long weekend—it might not be done until Friday.

PASSAGE OF BORROWING AUTHORITY LEGISLATION

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that today would have been a day of generosity and good spirit.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Tobin: It is obvious that the Minister of Finance had crow for lunch, because he is not in a very good mood. I want again to repeat the words of my Leader—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could the Hon. Member please ask his supplementary question, and not engage in a preamble?

Mr. Tobin: Would the Minister of Finance not agree that he would like to have his borrowing Bill through the House before it rises?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: Would he not agree that it would be wise to make a statement soon, so that parliamentarians of all Parties and senior citizens could examine it to ensure that he has kept his commitments, before we allow the Minister to have his borrowing authority, which we know he so richly needs, provided that he is being straightforward with us?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me caution the Hon. Member that when he uses threats and blackmail he will get absolutely nowhere. The last time the Liberal Party held up a borrowing Bill, it cost taxpayers $15 million, $15 million that we could have used on many other things. Before he starts using blackmail, he should look into his own mind and ask how we could use $15 million more effectively. The Leader of the Opposition knows that as well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

ROYALTY RIGHTS OF DRUG COMPANIES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Professor Eastman was appointed to study the question of the pricing of prescription drugs. He has told Canadians that the system we have had since 1968 worked quite well, and that to give multinational drug companies a fair return on their cost of research they should have exclusive right to the sale of drugs for four years. Why has the Minister indicated that he is prepared to give those companies six years, which will cost Canadians $75 million per year in extra costs?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): In answer to that question, Mr. Speaker, I might simply indicate that we did release the Eastman report in May. We said we intend to consider various solutions so as to give Canadian consumers the best protection possible. Never did I announce our intention to extend protection an additional six years. I said it was a possibility still under active consideration.

[English]

RESEARCH UNDERTAKEN BY DRUG COMPANIES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to hear that the Minister has not made up his mind on whether they would get six years. I hope he keeps in mind the advice of the Chairman of the Science Council of Canada who made very clear that the argument that the companies would do more research does not hold much water, because they never did much research before and they are not likely to do much research in the future.

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that we keep in mind the best interests of Canadian consumers. That is what we intend to do when we announce our policy.

PENITENTIARIES

OFFENCES COMMITTED BY INMATES DURING UNESCORTED ABSENCES

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Solicitor General. A written question a few weeks ago on the number of offences committed by prison inmates while on unescorted temporary absences was answered by the claim that this data does not exist in the Offender Information System.

Will the Minister, in view of the fact that this makes it impossible for any Member of Parliament, including the Ministers, to assess and monitor the temporary absence program, take initiatives to see that this data is added to the Offender Information System?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman's question shows once again what a valuable Member he is in pointing out these inadequacies. The present Offender Information System is under review as a result of his pointing out this inadequate keeping of statistics, and the issue he raises is going to be dealt with. I thank him for bringing this to the Minister's attention.

FISHERIES

ALLEGED POLITICAL INTERFERENCE

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Since the Government took power last September I have had numerous complaints from fishermen across the country of political interference in the fishery, complaints about suspensions being lifted, impounded boats returned, licences granted that should not have been, and so on. It has reached the point where fishermen who are caught for illegal fishing can go to their local Conservative MP and get off the hook. Will the Minister guarantee the House today that he will put an immediate stop to political interference in the fishery?

Mr. Crosbie: Going on for a thousand years under the Liberals.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, what I will say to the House today is that the system whereby the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans is asked to take further steps after a court conviction is, in my view, wrong. I will be pressing the House and colleagues to make sure that the appropriate legislation and regulations are brought into effect to put an end to that practice.

Mr. Johnston: That's a red herring.

GRANTING OF LICENCES

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister thinks it is wrong, why did he exercise his right in a number of occasions on this very issue?

Can the Minister assure this House that no special favours have been granted since last September to individuals because of their PC Party association, in the granting of fishing licences? Yes or no?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that, just as the former Government assiduously was careful to ensure that no licences were granted except where there were proper circumstances, we would follow in that tradition.

THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS

EQUALITY COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. Two weeks ago the Committee on Equality Rights voted to seek a three-month extension of its mandate in view of the fact that no hearings whatsoever could be held within the existing time framework in the Province of New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, the North, Quebec City, and even in the Minister's own Province of Newfoundland. Today the committee learned that they are going to be shut down without any opportunity for people in those areas to have a voice before it. I want to ask the Minister if he is not prepared to reconsider this decision and allow the committee to have an extension as it requested two weeks ago, in order that the views of all Canadians be heard, and not just those that have been heard so far.

Mr. Broadbent: Your part of the country.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that the hon. gentleman has had a conversion on the road to Damascus with this report, because he opposed the setting up of this committee in the first place. He did not want the Canadian people consulted. Now he is saying that he wants an extension of time. The Government has agreed that the time should be extended to the end of September. That gives July, August, September, and I would hope that the committee can get to Newfoundland within three months, and back again safely.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, we have just heard today from our staff that it is absolutely impossible for this committee to function under a deadline of September 30. I ask the Government again why is this committee being muzzled? Why is the Government not prepared to hear the concerns of women's groups, of the disabled, of minorities, not just in central Canada but in Newfoundland and the North and other provinces as well? Why is the Government shutting down this important committee at this stage?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, it was this honourable House that set up this honourable committee and it was to report by, I think, September 7. The opposition Parties did not support with any enthusiasm at all the setting up of the subcommittee. I am glad they have now discovered that it is a valuable exercise, and I hope that by the end of September the committee will have had sufficient time to give us its report. We are prepared to extend it to the end of September, and then we want to take action on these pressing matters that you wanted us to take action on months ago.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INTERPRETATION OF AMENDMENT

Mr. Bob Porter (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Agriculture. Hearings on Bill C-25 concluded last Thursday. Over the weekend livestock producers in western Canada, particularly in Alberta, expressed to me their concern over amendments made to the Agricultural Stabilization Act. There appears to be a wide degree of interpretation of the amendments. Has the Minister received communications from his provincial counterparts and industry spokesmen, and what measures is he taking in addressing these concerns?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I certainly welcome the opportunity to respond to the Hon. Member's question. I want to indicate to him that I have received messages, and telexes from the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. I am really concerned about the fact that there is a great deal of misunderstanding and a great deal of misinterpretation about the intent of the amendment.

This amendment does not back away from top-loading. This amendment recognizes the reality of today. This amendment allows us to deal with all market distortions in the industry.

I challenge the provinces, and I challenge the farm leaders and the producers to come together, to sit down around the table and to work together on something that will provide mid and long-term benefits to Canadian agriculture across the country.

IMPACT ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He will know that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture passed a resolution at an emergency meeting recently which condemned the Budget for having betrayed the farmers of Canada. It has totally ignored the consultation process and has ignored the legitimate needs of farmers across the country. I want to ask the Minister, since he seems to be in a conciliatory mood, if he is willing to bring in new budget measures providing for long-term low interest rate agri-bonds as his Party promised in the election campaign, and as was recommended by the finance committee of this House of Commons.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, can set these out in more complete terms than I can. There are a number of promises that we made in the campaign that are highlighted in the note that he has just released, that I am sure the Hon. Member, as well as the Ontario Federation of Agriculture would like to see, setting out the number of promises that have been kept.

For instance, we said we would do something on capital gains on farms. We said we would do something on the farm fuel taxes and we put a rebate there that gave the farmers $150 million. We said we would make changes in the metric system, of great help to farmers. I could go on and on, but I believe the Hon. Minister of Agricultre could give a fuller answer on that.

EXCISE TAX

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister of Finance had read his own Budget well enough he would know that the only provision in the Budget is to help farmers get off the farm, and there are already too many foreclosures taking place. The Minister mentioned reducing the excise tax by 9 per cent last fall—by 10 per cent actually—but in his Budget—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is becoming a preamble. Is there a question, please?

Mr. Foster: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I am just getting there. I wonder, in view of the fact that the Budget does provide for a 9 cents a gallon excise tax to start the first of September, would he give an exemption to farmers and not impose this so-called harvest tax just at the beginning of the fall harvest.

● (1450)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me tell the Hon. Member about some of the other things that I did not mention in my first answer. We dropped the interest rate on the Farm Credit—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): They do not like to hear the good news. We dropped the interest rate on Farm Credit Corporation loans from 16.25 per cent to, I believe, 12.75 per cent. Interest rates have gone down during the same period of time, providing help to all farmers. The price of gasoline for farmers is going down as well. I think the farmers have a lot for which to be thankful because of the very progressive policies that have been followed by this Government, led by my colleague, the Hon. Minister of Agriculture.

ACQUISITION OF FIRE TRUCKS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Transport a couple of questions. Several months ago the Union of Canadian Transport Employees warned the Government that continued cut-backs and delays would jeopardize safety and security on the ground and in the air, so 75 new fire trucks were ordered for which money was made available over two years ago. The Government seems to be having some difficulty in taking delivery of those fire trucks, and this lowers the standards of the firefighting service one of two grades below the standards set by the Minister's own Department. Can the Minister tell me what the problem is with obtaining delivery of those 75 new fire trucks? I hope it is not because they are painted Liberal red rather than Tory blue.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to advise the Hon. Member that Canada has one of the very highest standards of crash firefighting and prevention services in the world. It is certainly higher than that of Australia and the United States. With respect to the specific question, there may have been a re-profiling of funding, but I am not aware of any outright cancellation as the Hon. Member suggests.

NATURE OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, we are faced with the possibility of 109 of the Minister's firefighting branch employees being laid off while he horses around with trucks. In the matter of the investigation that is being carried on, will he tell us who is making it—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Benjamin: I am not referring to the disaster of last weekend.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member has been recognized on a supplementary question presumably with regard to fire trucks.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister if this investigation will be independent, and if its terms of reference will be broad enough to include safety and security, including fire trucks—

Mr. Speaker: With respect, I appreciate that it is an important question but it is not a supplementary one.

TREATMENT OF SENIOR CITIZENS UNDER TERMS OF INCOME TAX ACT

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Chairman of the Special Committee on Equality Rights under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I would ask the Chairman if the committee will hear evidence with respect to the way senior citizens who approach 71 and hold Registered Retirement Savings Certificates are treated by the Income Tax Act and the way they are forced because of age, as no other Canadians are, to buy annuities from an insurance company or enter into Registered Investment Retirement Funds.

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke-Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, as rare as it is for Members on the back-benches to ask questions, it is even rarer to have questions posed to us. I welcome the question and, on behalf of the committee, I would say yes, although not more than eight or nine minutes ago there was a question put by the Hon. Member for Burnaby to the Minister of Justice with respect to the time within which our committee will be required to report to this House. Given the fact that the committee must already hear from some 600 groups and individuals, we will have to take that under advisement and discuss it in the committee. I will let the Hon. Member know.

SMALL BUSINESS—EFFECT OF SALES TAX

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. In the May 23 Budget the Minister of Finance announced that, as of July 1, a number of new sales taxes will go into effect, so consumers in general, and particularly pensioners, will see their purchasing power reduced, thus putting many of them living under the poverty line. How can the Minister of Finance say that his Budget is fair and helps small business when the new sales tax and the sales tax increase will reduce small business activities, thus reducing the number of new jobs created?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the people representing the small business community, whether they are senior spokespeople from the industry or individuals who work in the small business community, are all very, very supportive of the thrust of the Budget as well as the details of it, after taking everything into account. I think that what the Hon. Member is suggesting is wrong.

I would remind the Hon. Member that Members on his side of the House were saying that the small business community was going to fold up and die as a result of the action taken on November 8. Since then there have been 150,000 jobs created by the small business community. Again, members of the opposition Parties are going around with little black clouds over their heads and are saying that the sky is going to fall in, and that everything will go the wrong way, when actions are proving that everything is going the right way.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL DELAY IMPOSITION OF SALES TAX ON PREFABRICATED CEMENT

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Finance is suggesting that his Budget is really good. I would therefore ask him the following question.

Why does the Minister of Finance put Canadian prefabricated cement companies in a difficult position by imposing à 6 per cent sales tax beginning July 1 without even taking into consideration those contracts that were signed before May 23? Will he grant them a delay until January 1, 1986 to give them a chance to cope with that increase without going belly up?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this is a very good example of how members of the Opposition are both sucking and blowing. I would ask the Hon. Member to speak to his Leader who has said that we must get the deficit under control. I would ask the Hon. Member to speak to other members of his caucus who have said that we have to remove the loopholes and exemptions in the taxation system, and that we have to broaden the tax base. He should think about what his colleagues are saying. That is what we are trying to do with the Budget. It is a broad effort that is shared in a wide way across Canada to get the deficit under control. Those people in the industries that are affected understand the need for that and will be prepared to accept it.

MEDICAL CARE

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER ON DELIVERY OF SERVICES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Is it still the Minister's view, as he has stated to both the Canadian Hospital Association and the provincial Ministers of Health, that the health care system should look to private funding to maintain the level of services Canadians currently enjoy?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am glad the Hon. Member asked that question because I think that that is not the interpretation that should be placed on this particular discussion. What is taking place, in both the hospital structure and the health care system generally, is that, in light of the health care challenges that face us all, we are asking whether or not there are some areas in which we could get better financial return or cost-effectiveness through privatization. For instance, there are services in hospitals which have been privatized, like laundry services. When the Hon. Member and members of the press hear the word "privatization", I do not think that they should draw the long bow by thinking that hospitals as such would be privatized.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, muddling through what appears to be a quite convoluted answer, may I ask the Minister directly—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You're the expert.

Mr. Deans: Thank you. Does the Minister agree with the Prime Minister, who has said that it is not the position of the Government of Canada that the hospital or health care system in Canada should have to seek private funding in order to maintain its level of health care?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, yes, I agree with the Prime Minister, and that is also what I have said. That has been my position all along. If the Hon. Member were to talk to hospital administrators he would find that, in many hospitals across Canada, administrators have been looking at the most cost-effective way of delivering services. That is the responsibility of the administrators, and I do not think that we should reduce their options because they are trying to deliver the very best health care system within the financial situation facing them.

WAR CRIMINALS

ACCESS TO DEPARTMENT'S FILES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister may be aware that I have been invited to assist the Deschénes Commission which is investigating war criminals residing in Canada. In preparation for that task I have asked the Solicitor General if I could review departmental files from my time in office. I have been denied access to those files. Would the Prime Minister direct the Solicitor General to give me that access so that I can prepare to assist the commission?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I was unaware that my hon. friend had been invited to assist the Deschénes Commission. I would have hoped that such a commission could have been established some years ago, and I think it is a great tribute to the Government that there has been a response on this very important matter.

I was unaware that my hon. friend had been invited to assist. I would be happy to look into the question he raises and ascertain the manner in which I could be helpful to that process.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of two, presented by Hon. Members on Tuesday, June 25, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), by filing with the Clerk of the House, also meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the House Leader could confirm the business of the House for today and even beyond that, if he is ready to do so?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think we will commence consideration of the Bill relating to advance payment of crops amendments today. Then I would like to proceed, if I might, to Bill C-25, which is the agriculture stabilization Bill. These are Bills with respect to which we received indication that we would be able to get through third reading on these items of legislation.

As the House Leader of the Official Opposition knows, I had given a list some time ago of legislation we would like to have passed before the House adjourns. The two Bills I mentioned fit into that category. Other Bills include the Bill with respect to the sale of the Northern Transportation Company Limited, which I understand is to be reported back to the House today from the Standing Committee on Transport.

I believe there would be a disposition to complete consideration of third reading of that legislation so that the Senate may also pass it and so that it may receive Royal Assent.

The other Bills I would like to see dealt with before we adjourn the House for the summer recess include the Western Grain Transportation Act, which I think is still before the committee but there is hope that it will be able to report it, if not today then tomorrow. There have also been discussions with respect to other items of legislation, such as a Bill which increases the number of judges in certain provinces at the request of the provinces. It is a non-controversial Bill, I believe. I hope there will be a disposition to deal with that Bill at all stages in the House so that the Senate could also pass it.

As well, Mr. Speaker, we have had discussions on the amendments to Standing Orders to bring into effect the recommendations of the first report of the Standing Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons at the beginning of September. I think we have a consensus among House Leaders with respect to that process.

There will be an amendment to the House of Commons Act, Mr. Speaker, which will create, in accordance with the recommendations of the Standing Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons, the new Board of Internal Economy effective September 9, 1985.

These are some of the items of which I have given a list and would want to have passed before we adjourn. I think I might have missed one or two Bills such as the borrowing Bill, but, as you know, Mr. Speaker, just because I mention that last, it does not mean it is the least. That Bill will have to be passed before Hon. Members can consider going on summer recess. We hope to do that by this Friday. However, I leave that in the hands of members of the Opposition. If they want to be irresponsible and deny the people of Canada the benefit of borrowing authority, which will mean that the people for whom the Opposition purports to speak will suffer, I think that would be awful—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, just by way of clarification of the Government House Leader's very interesting statement, with respect to the first two items he mentioned it is my recollection that I indicated to him in our consultations the number of speakers I thought we might have, which may have led him to the conclusion as to when third reading could be obtained. However, I want to make it clear that certainly while we will bear in mind his desire as to when third reading might be obtained, my comments to the Government House Leader did not go beyond indicating at that time the information I had as the number of speakers.

With respect to the final point the Government House Leader made, I think it should be put on the record that, as far as I am aware, the Government has borrowing authority now until the beginning of September. Certainly, the interests of the senior citizens of Canada have to come before the Government's mismanagement of government finances.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, as to the question posed by the Opposition House Leader, in the course of our discussions—and I do not believe I am disclosing anything out of the meetings we had—it was clearly indicated that we were talking about items of legislation that we thought would be passed before the House adjourned.

In the course of that discussion, of course, I withdrew items that I would have liked to have had passed from that list in order to accommodate the Opposition. But it was on the clear understanding that we would make progress on the modest list I put forward over the course of time left. I very much appreciate the progress we have now made, but the reality is that that list is there and I think we should get through the list and try to make progress on it.

The only effect of not passing the borrowing Bill would be to punish the senior citizens of this country—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to add a comment. I do not think this is leading anywhere. I just wonder if perhaps the Government House Leader might consider calling a meeting so we could discuss these things in the normal fashion.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. To clarify that list, I wonder if the Government House Leader could tell me—because there is some interest in Vancouver—what his plans are for the amendment to the Criminal Code with respect to prostitution. I think that is Bill C-49. Is that on his list or is that to be done in the fall?

Mr. Crosbie: You blocked it, Waddell.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, that is very much a priority on the list. That is one of the Bills to which I referred. I would bring it on except that the House Leader for the Hon. Member's party said that there was no way that Bill was going to be passed. That Bill is a priority of the Government, but the New Democratic Party has blocked it and will not let us pass it before the summer—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —which is going to cause undue hardship in many cities of this country.

Mr. Speaker: What is happening now only suggests that conversations about House business are best conducted somewhere else.

May I interrupt Routine Proceedings. I have a ruling I wish to read into the record. I meant to do this at the beginning.

POINT OF ORDER

RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS IN VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS OF JUNE 20, 1985—RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) rose on a point of order to ask the Chair to review the proceedings of the House on June 20, 1985, on Motion No. 7 of Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act at report stage. I have his request and have examined the record.

• (1510)

The Hon. Member is correct in noting that the Votes and Proceedings do not reflect the sequence of events. However, I would refer him to Citation 149, paragraph 1 of the Fifth Edition of Beauchesne's which states that the Votes and Proceedings record all that is or—and I underline the "or"—is deemed to be done by the House. During consideration of the motion standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus), and subsequently, the House was operating under unusual circumstances in that there was unanimous consent to revert back to report stage and have the motion, which had in fact been carried, rescinded. The record shows that the motion was negatived. Again, I remind the Hon. Members, as indicated by the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), that all of this was done by unanimous consent and, after Motion No. 7 was negatived, the House continued with debate on third reading. To have recorded all of this process in the Votes and Proceedings would have resulted in a very confusing record of the proceedings and would have provided in fact more information than was required to record the final decision of the House. What was recorded was the decision the House arrived at by unanimous consent. I therefore find that the record is in order.

As to the matter of the Mace still being on the Table, I would simply point out that at report stage the Mace sits on the Table; it is only in Committee of the Whole that it rests under the Table.

PETITIONS

FULL INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table some petitions signed by a large number of residents of 920 Ouellette, a senior citizens' apartment building, in Windsor, Ontario. They call upon the Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984, and maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

I have petitions from residents of 120 Oak, another senior citizens' apartment building like the one I just mentioned, in Windsor, Ontario. They call upon the Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 and maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Furthermore, I have petitions from residents of 9150 Wyandotte Street East in Windsor. They call upon the Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 and maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

I also have a petition from residents of 1989 Wyandotte Street West in Windsor. They also call upon the Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 and maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Finally, I have a large number of petitions from a substantial number of people living in various parts of the City of Windsor, Ontario. They all call upon the Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 to maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of 6,560 constituents of the riding held previously by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), that of Central Nova. They indicate they are very displeased with the fact that the Prime Minister has chosen to disrespect his commitment of the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexation for old age pensions. They humbly beseech the Prime Minister to take cognizance of this petition and reverse his position.

I have a petition on behalf of 254 constituents of the federal riding of St. Paul's, presently held by the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). They ask the Prime Minister of Canada to respect his commitment of the 1984 election campaign and maintain full indexation for old age pensions.

In addition, I have a petition signed by 265 residents in the riding of Vancouver Centre. They are very much dismayed by the fact that this Government has chosen to break its promise of the last election campaign. They humbly call upon the Prime Minister to reverse his stand on the deindexation of pensions.

I have a further petition signed by residents of the riding of Saskatoon West, presently held by the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn). They humbly beseech the Prime Minister and Members on the front bench to withdraw their deindexation proposal. They hope this will be done before we rise for the summer break.

I have a further 1,074 signatures on a petition from the riding of Ontario presently held by a Conservative back-bencher. They are very much disturbed by the fact that the Prime Minister has chosen—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I hope the Hon. Member will discontinue stating who holds the seat. It really does not matter. Let us have the petitions.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, we are hoping it will matter by Friday of this week. At any rate, they indicated to me that they are dismayed at the fact that the Prime Minister of Canada has indicated a disrespect for his own campaign promises made in 1984, and they humbly beseech the present Government to take cognizance of their complaints and reverse itself by Friday of this week.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by some 116 residents of the Speaker's own riding in Edmonton. They ask for full reindexation of old age pensions. I know he will take note of that matter.

I have grouped the other petitions so I will not mention every municipality, but I do want to mention several areas because they represent a lot of meetings throughout British Columbia. I have signatures on petitions from Sardis, Abbotsford, Clearbrook, Aldergrove and Surrey, all asking for full indexation of old age pensions. Across the water on Vancouver Island, I have signatures on petitions asking for the same thing. I also have signatures of residents from quite a number of municipalities in the Lower Mainland. I will not read them all separately, but they include Vancouver, West Vancouver, Richmond, Burnaby, Delta and Harwood. They all ask the Government to reconsider its policy and fully reindex old age pensions.

[Translation]

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition submitted by senior citizens residing at 6800 Gouin Boulevard in the great riding of Bourassa, asking the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Hon. Brian Mulroney, to meet his commitment made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984 to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

[English]

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and pleasure to present a petition from some 300 senior citizens at 1920 Power Street in my riding, and from 201 Rumball Terrace, which calls upon the Conservative Government to honour the promise made in the last federal election and fully reindex old age pensions.

I also have from the Town of Capreol a petition signed by 700 residents, who represent some 25 per cent of the population of the city where I live, calling on the Government to honour the promise it made and with which it sucked in Canadians when the Conservatives said they would fully index old age pensions. This petition calls upon the Government to reintroduce indexing.

I also have the privilege and pleasure of introducing a petition from residents of Ottawa who call on the Conservative Government to honour its commitment and promise to the people of Canada made during the election campaign that old age pensions would be fully indexed and that it was a sacred trust. The petition calls upon the Government to maintain that trust.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by about 600 constituents in Ottawa-Carleton whose signatures were collected by Ottawa-Carleton senior citizens. Most of the petitioners voted Conservative, but they said: "Never again"! The petition comes from the Elmvale and Heron Gate Mall shopping centres, and the petitioners ask the Government—

● (1520)

—that we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the Conservative Government to honour its commitment of the election campaign of the summer of 1984 to maintain full indexing of old age pensions.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition from my riding, signed by 75 constituents and residents of Bernard Street who are asking the Progressive Conservative Government to meet its commitment made during the election campaign and maintain full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour of presenting another petition from Queen Mary Street, Prince Albert and the great neighbourhood of Overbrook, in my riding of Ottawa-Vanier. The petitioners from this part of my riding are asking the Progressive Conservative Government to keep its promise and refrain from making the senior citizens of this country shoulder the burden of reducing the federal deficit, and maintain universal indexation of pensions.

The last petition I have for today, Mr. Speaker, comes from residents of my riding, again from the Sandy Hill area, who call upon this House—

—that we the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the Conservative Government to honour the commitment it made during the election campaign of the summer of 1984 to maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a number of petitions. One is from the great riding of Hamilton West, St. John's Place, where there are some very effective spokespersons for senior citizens, including Lorraine Watson. The petition of the undersigned residents calls upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government to live up to its word with respect to pensions. I have several hundred signatures of people from First Place and Sanford Place as well as St. John's Place. These people have worked hard and got the message across to the people of Hamilton.

I also have a number of petitions from the Niagara Peninsula. I have had calls from all over the Niagara Peninsula—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Ms. Copps: —asking me what is happening to Members. I have a petition from the good City of St. Catharines calling upon the Prime Minister to live up to his promise to the seniors to restore full indexing for the pensions of all senior citizens. We will be calling upon him to do that today and tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a number of other petitions from the ridings of Hamilton East, Hamilton West, and Lincoln calling upon the Prime Minister and the Government to live up to the promise made to senior citizens. There are 1,500 signatures on these petitions from Hamilton and the Niagara Peninsula. I urge my colleagues on all sides of the House—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Ms. Copps: —whose constituents have signed these petitions, to join with me in calling upon the Government and the Prime Minister to live up to the promise with regard to senior citizens' pensions.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Ms. Copps: The order in this House is to see the pensions of senior citizens restored, and we will continue to—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Don't you know the rules of this place?

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I too, rise on the matter of senior citizens' pensions. I have a petition signed by Mrs. Chaykowsky who lives on St. Catharines Street in my riding of Vancouver-Kingsway. She has got together with 417 other people, most of whom are seniors. They pray that the May 23 Budget will be changed because it imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security Program. They pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada. I think Mrs. Chaykowsky and the other pensioners.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition from some 1,500 people, most of whom are from Spadina, who gathered in Spadina during the past week. These petitioners ask this House to remember the promise made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last summer that a PC Government would once again index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis. They ask the House to hold the Prime Minister to his pledge and to ensure that full indexing is restored. And as in duty bound your petitioners humbly pray.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present five petitions with more than 400 names from my own constituency and from the constituency of Selkirk-Interlake. These petitioners call upon the Government to live up to the promise that a PC Government would once more index old age pensions to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis and to stop the proposal of deindexing pensions.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition signed by many, many, many petitioners from the riding of Egmont.

An Hon. Member: How many are there?

Mr. Henderson: Oh, there are hundreds of them. They ask that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Government respect the commitment made in the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexing for old age pensions.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table a large number of petitions from pensioners in northern British Columbia, principally from the Prince George area, but also from the constituencies of Prince George-Peace River and Prince George-Bulkley Valley. The petitioners pray that the May 23 Budget proposals with regard to deindexing will be changed to reflect the campaign promise of last year that a PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis. These northern pensioners are concerned at the loss from their pensions of $100 next year and $680 by 1991.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions.

Mr. Nunziata: How many?

Mr. Marchi: Oh, about 20 or 30, each with a couple of hundred signatures at the very minimum.

Mr. Boudria: That's lots.

Mr. Marchi: The NDP laughed. It is not a laughing matter, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Let us get to the petitions please.

Mr. Marchi: The first petition is from a Mr. and Mrs. Sam Guido of 51 Yorkdale Crescent in my riding of York West who went up and down their street. The petition asks the Government to maintain its promise of the 1984 election campaign to senior citizens with regard to the indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

I have a second petition, signed by hundreds of senior citizens from the Federation of Anziani Pensionati Italo Canadese in Toronto urging the Government to index fully the pensions of all senior citizens throughout the country.

I also have a petition from the riding of York West, specifically from the Amesbury Senior Citizens Club, asking the Prime Minister to respect his commitment of the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexation for senior citizens' pensions.

I also have a petition signed by hundreds of members of the Downsview Arena Senior Citizens club at 1633 Wilson Avenue in York West asking the Government to fulfil its commitment by indexing completely Old Age Security pensions for senior citizens.

I also have a petition from the riding of York West from the senior citizens at the Falstaff Harmony Seniors Club asking the Government to honour its commitment—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Marchi: —to senior citizens to index their pensions fully.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Come on, you know the rules.

Mr. Marchi: I also have a petition from the Circolo Anziani and Humber Summit in the riding of York West asking for the very same thing as the other petitioners did, namely that the full indexation—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Marchi: Well, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We heard it the first time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Order, please!

Mr. Marchi: This petition is in order, and if you don't like it you can shove it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, order!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: If you don't know the rules, don't come in here.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order! The Hon. Member has been here now for nine or ten months and he realizes that he cannot carry on in this way. There is no reason for this. I do not care who the occupant of the Chair is, if the Hon. Member has a petition, let him get on with it and let us get it done so that we can get on to the Orders of the Day.

● (1530)

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Could we have some indication from the Chair as to how many petitions an Hon. Member may present on a particular day? If we get some direction from the Chair, Hon. Members—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not consider that to be a point of order but I will check into it and find out while we go through petitions.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I was not abusing parliamentary time. I was trying to read the petitions from senior citizens' clubs that came from my riding. If I can do that, I would like to continue.

The next petition comes from seniors and non seniors from the riding of York West, namely from neighbours from the Falstaff Road community, advocating that full indexation be maintained and fully honoured.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We know in the House that Members are entitled and are duty bound to bring in petitions on behalf of their constituents. That is an honourable and ancient tradition in the House of Commons. The Speaker has made a ruling with respect to the method by which these petitions are to be presented. I think you will recall the ruling that when petitions are of a similar nature, asking for essentially the same relief—

Mr. Nunziata: Order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am simply saying that the point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. The President of the Privy Council has the floor. If anybody wants to rise on the same point of order—

Mr. Nunziata: That is the same point I was making.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The ruling of the Chair has been that the practice in the House is simply to make preference to where the petition came from but not to repeat every petition that is filed or its contents.

The Hon. Member is now taking up the time of the House by reading, over and over again, the content of the petition. I respect his right, and in fact his obligation, to bring forward petitions, but he also has a responsibility to other Members of the House who have petitions and are waiting patiently for their turn to present petitions which they feel are equally important. The more time of the House the Hon. Member takes up, the more he prevents other Members from presenting their petitions.

I think he should read the places from which the petitions come and not repeat and content each time.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. With all due respect to the Hon. House Leader, he is as aware of the rules of the House, as we are. However, I want him to think about Beauchesne, Citation 692(1) which states:

> While a Member may, if he desires, present a petition from his place in the House during Routine Proceedings and before the Introduction of Bills, he may also present his petition by filing it with the Clerk of the House.

That is left up to the Member. Citation 692(2) states:

> When a Member presents a petition, he may not make a speech nor present argument in support of the petition.

The Hon. Member was not making a speech or presenting an argument. I submit that we are following the rules and presenting petitions in the House according to Citation 692.

Mr. Marchi: I rise on a point of order. I detest very much the allegation or suggestion that I was trying to abuse the privileges of the House. In order to allow all Members an opportunity to present their petitions, I would like to keep the remaining petitions.

I think the organizations would like me to present them individually because they have worked hard. I will present them tomorrow.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions with a total of 1,426 signatures. Most of the petitioners reside in the federal riding of York South-Weston.

As you know, the Liberal Party has led the battle to restore full indexation for all senior citizens' pensions in Canada.

An Hon. Member: That is a speech.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Petitions.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, these petitioners request the Government of Canada to—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the Hon. Member still on the same petition, or is this another one?

Mr. Nunziata: I am just beginning, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is this the first petition? Would the Hon. Member please get on with it?

Mr. Nunziata: The first petition reads, whereas the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) made a solemn promise to the senior citizens of Canada and in fact to all Canadians during the election campaign of 1984, and whereas the same Prime Minister has breached that promise to senior citizens—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Would the Hon. Member like to carry on with another petition? He has already mentioned that one. Would he want to go on to another one?

Mr. Nunziata: Therefore, the petitioners request the Prime Minister and the Conservative Government to honour that solemn promise made to senior citizens and Canadians to restore, ensure and guarantee full indexation of all senior citizens' pensions in Canada—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. Does the Hon. Member have another petition?

Mr. Nunziata: I have another petition signed by 440 residents of the riding of York South-Weston. These petitioners are requesting the Government of Canada, particularly the Prime Minister, to honour his commitment made in Sherbrooke, Quebec, in July—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Again, the Hon. Member for York South-Weston abuses the privileges of the House by reading and repeating a similar petition with similar content in each of the petitions.

There is nothing wrong with his saying that he has petitions from a number of constituents or separate petitions dealing with the same subject and referring to each of the groups that have presented a petition. However, what he does, first, is to read the petition, which is against the practice of the House. It should be in summary form. Second, he repeats the content of the same petition for each group. I do not mind sitting here and waiting, but it seems to me that members of the NDP have equally important petitions to present. Those Members are wasting the time of the House and preventing members of the NDP and members of the Government to bring their petitions before the House.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I want to say that the person who is wasting the time, in my opinion, is the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn). If we did not have spurious points of order that are not points of order, Members would be able to present their petitions. The Hon. Member has been summarizing the petition, which he is allowed to do.

Not only are the rules plainly printed in Beauchesne, there is also the practice. Mr. Speaker has ruled several times during this session that Members are allowed to do what they are doing now, that is, to present the gist of the petition one by one.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate the Hon. Member's intervention. Let me read from page 213 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. I am sure that the Hon. Member is a very learned member of the bar and I will not question his ability. However, he will understand what I read and I hope he will carry on to complete his petitions so that other Members can do the same. There are many senior citizens who want to hear the same thing as the Hon. Member is presenting today. If he would co-operate with the Chair, I would be grateful. With respect to the method of presentation of petitions, Citation 692(2) states:

> When a Member presents a petition, he may not make a speech nor present argument in support of the petition.

I am sure the Hon. Member realizes what I am looking for and will expedite the presentation of his petitions.

Mr. Nunziata: Out of an immense respect for the Chair and particularly the present occupant of the Chair, I will refrain from making argument, pursuant to the citation that you have cited. I will proceed to present my petitions in an orderly fashion and indicate the gist of each and every petition that I will heretofore present to the House.

The petition signed by a total of 440 residents of the good riding of York South-Weston in Toronto requests the Prime Minister to honour his commitment made in Sherbrooke, Quebec, in July of last year to guarantee full indexation for all senior citizens pensioners. The petitioners request the Prime Minister to change the Budget to ensure full indexation for all senior citizens.

The next petition is signed by a total of 150 residents of the riding of York South-Weston. These petitioners also request that the Conservative Government honour its pre-election promise with respect to senior citizens of Canada and ensure, guarantee and restore—

Mr. Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth): That is a comment.

• (1540)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not wish to hear any more because that is not a comment. It is a speech, as far as I am concerned. I would hope the Hon. Member would be kind enough to his colleagues, who are sitting there waiting patiently, to allow them to go ahead. Perhaps the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) would like to carry on with his petitions tomorrow?

Mr. Nunziata: I will carry on Mr. Speaker.

I have another petition signed by 475 residents of the Fairfield Senior Citizens' Centre on Lothian Avenue in the City of Toronto. These petitioners protest the Government's proposed deindexation of the Old Age Security cheques.

The next petition I have to present to the House concerns the same issue, namely, the Government's proposed deindexation of senior citizens' pensions. These petitioners as well request the Government of Canada to ensure full indexation of senior citizens' pensions.

The next petition is signed by a number of residents of the riding of York South-Weston as well as from a number of other ridings in metropolitan Toronto. These petitioners request the Right Hon. Brian Mulroney to respect his commitment of the election campaign to maintain full indexation of all old age pensions.

The next petition I wish to present to this House of Commons is a petition signed by a great number of residents in and around—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. Again the Hon. Member is making a speech. I would ask him to get right on to the petition, please.

Mr. Nunziata: This is a petition signed by a number of residents in the City of Toronto. These petitioners request the Government to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

I have another petition. This petition is signed by a number of residents in the City of York in the municipality of metropolitan Toronto. They too request the Government of Canada to ensure that senior citizens' pensions will be fully indexed and will not be partially indexed.

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker. This petition is signed by a number of residents in the City of North York in the municipality of metropolitan Toronto. The petitioners request the Government of Canada to maintain full indexation for all old age pensions.

The next petition I wish to present to the House of Commons has a total of 360 signatories. These signatories request the Government of Canada, in particular the Prime Minister of Canada, to maintain full indexation of all senior citizens' pensions in Canada.

The next petition I wish to present to the House of Commons, Mr. Speaker, is from a number of residents and taxpayers in the City of Etobicoke in the municipality of metropolitan Toronto. These petitioners as well request the Prime Minister to keep his promise to the people of Canada and to ensure full indexation of all senior citizens' pensions.

The next petition I wish to present—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Would the Hon. Member please be seated?

The Hon. Member knows that the Speaker of the House had mentioned at one time that if Members had some petitions in regard to deindexation or whatever they could mention the fact that the petitions all are part of the one topic and that they are all from a certain area. The Hon. Member realizes this. His colleagues are anxious to get on with their petitions today. I hope that he will not tax the Chair or anybody else in this House by the way he is presenting his petitions. I do not think it is necessary. I think the people viewing the Hon. Member realize pretty well what he is doing. I hope the Hon. Member will come to the end of his petitions and allow some of his colleagues in this Chamber to make their presentations.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I will present two other petitions, recognizing of course that I have quite a number of other petitions containing thousands of signatures to present to the House. I will exercise my right as a Member of Parliament and present those petitions, a number of them, tomorrow.

In consideration of other Liberal Members of the House of Commons who wish to present petitions on this subject, I will end my presentation with two other petitions.

The second to the last petition concerns the same matter, namely the issue of partial deindexation of senior citizens' pensions. These residents of 250 Scarlett Road in the federal riding of York South-Weston request the Prime Minister to keep his promises.

The next petition is signed by a number of residents at 80 Shaughnessy Blvd., the City of Toronto. These petitioners as well as others add their names to the hundreds of thousands of people who are concerned about this issue and request the Prime Minister to keep the promises that he made during the election campaign and not to break those promises because, according to his words, they were a sacred trust and the people of Canada have a right—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy).

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I will not embarrass the people nor their cause on behalf of whom I submit this petition.

I have 500 names on this petition added to the thousands that have already come from Windsor and the thousands yet to come. What the petitioners ask is very simple. They pray that the Government will recognize that a promise is sacred and a broken promise is immoral. They would encourage a strong resolve on the part of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his promise now to change his treatment of pensioners with respect to the pension.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions from people in my riding and from various parts of the Province of Ontario. The first is from the Saranac Social Club for Seniors at 3174 Bathhurst Street. The petitioners pray Parliament to call upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to return full indexation of old age pensions to the old age pensioners of Canada.

I have petitions from people from Woodbridge, Downsview, Weston and London, Ontario who also call upon this House through this petition to take into account the anguish which they are experiencing regarding their future and the future of other old age pensioners because of the fact that an increase in taxes is going to take place on July 1 and because of deindexation. They pray the Prime Minister to change the Budget.

I have petitions from 3174 Bathhurst Street in the riding of Eglinton-Lawrence, again calling upon the Prime Minister, through this House, to reindex pensions and to try to bring back full indexation which the Budget of the Conservative Government has removed.

I have petitions also from people in Scarborough, Oshawa, Don Mills, and Whitby, all calling upon the Government, through the Chair, through this House of Commons, to change this policy and bring back full indexation to the senior citizens of this country.

I also have a petition from people in my riding on Bathhurst Street and various other parts of my riding who have asked me to present this petition on their behalf, humbly praying the House of Commons to call upon the Prime Minister of Canada to take into account their concern on behalf of full indexation of the old age pensions for senior citizens.

I also have petitions from other parts of my riding. In order to save time, Mr. Speaker, I will lump them together, which will probably be regrettable in some cases because of the efforts they have made. They are people from Glengarry Street and from various parts of my riding who have asked me to present on their behalf to this House their profound concern, and as petitioners their right to petition the House of Commons, calling upon this Conservative Government, through the Chair, through the House of Commons, to change the Budget and to restore full indexation to the senior citizens of this country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate what the Hon. Member for Eglinton-Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) did. I hope other Hon. Members will take heed of how fast he completed his large list of petitions.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present representations in the form of petitions signed by residents from the riding of Mount Royal, particularly from the Town of Côte St. Luc. These residents are dreadfully concerned, very upset and worried about the impact of the Budget on their particular lifestyle. They beg—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member have a number of petitions to present?

Mrs. Finestone: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Do they all concern the same subject matter, deindexation? If so, would she just name the places and just give us one reading of the substance of the petitions?

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I will certainly follow your direction. However, I think the senior citizens of my riding will be very distressed. Nonetheless, the senior citizens of Côte St. Luc Road, who number over 300, have gone to the effort and trouble to bring to the attention of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), who stated that he heard from all the people and was representing their views in the Budget, that the current Budget does not reflect their—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not know whether the Hon. Member was in the Chamber when I mentioned that we do not require a speech. All she has to do is to say that they concern deindexation or whatever, and just give the street numbers and everything else all together. I am sure senior citizens out there will be hearing the Hon. Member loud and clear.

Mrs. Finestone: It is with respect to deindexing that the residents of 6767 Côte St. Luc Road express their displeasure.

I also draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to a petition from Adalbert, Saint-Ignatius, Plamondon, Kent and McLynn in the City of Montreal, in the riding of Mount Royal. It is addressed to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and to the Minister of Finance. They strongly protest the deindexation of pensions. They urge them to rescind this unethical and immoral legislation.

I also bring to your attention a petition from the Town of Mount Royal, from the streets of Laird and Lockhard——that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) stated that the Canadian men and women he met with after the Budget presentation endorse the Budget, and they fully disagree. I bring that to your attention on behalf of residents of Lockhart and Laird Streets.

[Translation]

From the same area I have another petition signed by people of Powell, Royal and Graham Streets who also expressed their disagreement concerning deindexation.

[English]

I also bring to your attention a petition from the federal riding of LaSalle, represented by the Parliamentry Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier). The petitioners express their displeasure. They do not feel they have a voice in the House, so I bring their voices to the House. They are residents from LaSalle Boulevard, Carrol Street, Tetrault Street—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not intend to interrupt the Hon. Member, but I would like her to get to the point of her petitions. Some of her colleagues would like to present petitions. We have been kind by recognizing Hon. Members. I know they have various things to do this afternoon and that there are members of other Parties who would like to present petitions.

Mrs. Finestone: As I said, I bring to your attention a petition from the federal riding of LaSalle. I add to that another petition from that riding, as well as a petition from the riding of Dollard, represented by another Parliamentary Secretary. The petitioners indicate their disaccord and disapproval of deindexation, as well as the cost of living increases on health products which they have to use. It is from the Streets of Dorchester, Albion and Monk Boulevard.

I also bring to your attention another petition from the Town of Côte St. Luc and also from Graham Boulevard, Powell Avenue and Saint-Michel, in the riding of Mount Royal. I guess there are many people who feel they do not have a voice anywhere else, so they approach the riding of Mount Royal where they can express themselves freely against the Government's deindexing policy.

I have only two more petitions which I should like to present from the Town of Mount Royal, Powell and Touraine, with respect to the Budget—

[Translation]

—the Budget, that they do not endorse deindexation, and from people of Ville de Mount Royal once again on Sherwood, Laird, Roosevelt, Morrison and Sherwood Crescent. Those people are not pleased at all and they absolutely want access to their money so as to buy everything they need.

[English]

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House petitions signed by people from coast to coast, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia. These people exercise their ancient right by petitioning Parliament, particularly the Government. They ask the Government to reverse its decision and to maintain the full indexation of the Old Age Security. Of course, they also recognize that the first attack and rape on Old Age Security was committed by the Liberal Party which knows no shame.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member is a longstanding Member of the House. He knows that he should not be making a speech when he is presenting a petition. I just draw that to his attention. I am sure he will come to the point.

Mr. de Jong: Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. Therefore, it is an honour for me to present 230 names from the Province of Nova Scotia, namely from the City of Halifax.

Moving across the country, it is also an honour for me to present 150-some names from the riding of Nepean-Carleton and some from my home Province of Saskatchewan. The petition contains the names of several hundred petitioners from centres such as Kerrobert, Luseland, Unity, Biggar, North Battleford, Saskatoon, Hudson Bay, and of course my riding of Regina East.

As well, I have some 1,732 names of petitioners from the Province of British Columbia, from such communities as New Westminster, Surrey, White Rock, Richmond, Port Coquitlam, Port Moody, Nanaimo, Burnaby, North Vancouver, Vancouver proper and Haney. They join with thousands of Canadians from coast to coast in requesting the Government to implement and maintain full indexation, not to do what the Liberals did, that is, stop full indexation of the Old Age Security.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions from constituents in my riding of Thunder Bay-Nipigon and from the City of Thunder Bay, containing more than 400 names. They protest that the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing, and that it flies in the face of Conservative promises to restore quarterly indexing. They call upon the House of Commons to restore full indexation. Also, these petitions come from the Town of Red Rock, the Town of Nipigon and from various parts of the City of Thunder Bay, from residents at 120 South Cumberland Street, from residents in the Castlegreen and Superior View Co-operatives and from members of the Thunder Bay Multicultural Association.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to present a petition signed by 162 residents of the community of Rainy River, indicating their opposition to the Government's plan to deindex their pensions. Opposed to these 162 residents, there are two names of people who support the Government's move to deindex old age pensions.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty today to present a series of petitions from my own constituency and also from the constituency of MacKenzie, next door to Prince Albert. These petitioners are concerned about the deindexation of their pensions by the present Government. They request the Parliament of Canada to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House petitions signed by a great many seniors from my riding of Papineau who came to protest here in Ottawa two weeks ago and gave me these petitions, asking me to present them to Parliament today.

Through these petitions they are urging the Government to reconsider its position concerning the deindexation of old age security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I have some more petitions signed by constituents in the neighbouring riding of Montreal-Rosemont who vehemently object to the budgetary measures of the Minister of Finance, and who consider that the Government is being far too generous to the oil companies, compared with what it is doing for senior citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I have some more petitions that—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

• (1600)

[English]

Order. The Hon. Member who has been a Minister of the Crown and has had a distinguished career here for many years realizes that what he is doing is taxing the Chair and also his colleagues. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has been getting up and down, and it is very difficult for him, but I hope that the Hon. Member will try to help in these things.

Mr. Lapierre: It's harder for you.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I don't have that problem, but you are taxing the Chair also, s'il vous plaît.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, as you suggested I will keep these petitions and present them before the Chair tomorrow, since these constituents insist that I present their objections to a Progressive Conservative Budget that refuses to allow full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present petitions on behalf of the people of the ridings of Hochelaga-Maisonneuve and Saint-Jean. These petitioners ask the Prime Minister to meet the commitment he made to them in July, and they will not tolerate broken promises. These petitioners are demanding that the Government reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions, and I repeat, they are residents from the ridings of Hochelaga-Maisonneuve and Saint-Jean.

I have another petition, this time from senior citizens in the riding of Montreal-Sainte-Marie. They too are demanding that the Prime Minister meet his commitment and fully protect the elderly by maintaining indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition, this time from the ridings of Rosemont and Sherbrooke, which is rather unusual. These petitioners are asking the Prime Minister to meet his commitment and protect the elderly, and they object strenuously to this attack on senior citizens.

Mr. Speaker, as for my next petition, I am sure you will agree that it should be presented separately, because it is a very special petition and these are very special people from the City of Baie-Comeau and I am sure they are listening to us at this very moment and they have asked me to present this petition, demanding that the Right Hon. Prime Minister meet his commitments and fully protect Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding, I have another petition here from residents of the riding of Louis-Hébert in the Quebec City area. These petitioners want the Prime Minister to give senior citizens full protection and they want him to meet his commitments.

Mr. Speaker, before I finish, I have another petition from the riding of Montmorency-Orléans. I imagine everyone knows the riding of Montmorency-Orléans, the pride of its residents, and

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I have said to the Hon. Member that if all the petitions are in regard to the deindexing, I wish he would just name the place. No speeches are required. Let him just give us the petitions, s'il vous plaît.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, with respect, I was talking about the people of the riding of Montreal-Montmorency who also want their voice to be heard here in the House of Commons. It is important to remember that the House of Commons is the House of all Canadians, and therefore the people of Montmorency wish to express their objections to the Prime Minister's and the Government's decision.

Mr. Speaker, before I finish, I have another petition presented on behalf of the residents of the great City of Quebec. Considering the fact that the Parliament of Canada is the Parliament of the people, these petitioners, as Canadian citizens and as senior citizens who built this country, also want to have their names put on the record here in the House of Commons, and they demand that the Prime Minister meet his commitment.

Mr. Speaker, my very last petition, another petition on behalf of some very honourable citizens of Canada who helped build this country and who gave us or present Prime Minister, the people of Baie-Comeau, who feel betrayed by the Prime Minister's decision, and petitioners ask the Prime Minister to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I too am pleased to present petitions. One is in the name of residents of Louis-Hébert who gave it to me because they did not know the name of their own Member of Parliament. They asked me to urge the Prime Minister to reverse his decision to deindex old age security pensions and to remind him instead of his promise made in Sherbrooke last July concerning full indexation. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the people of Sherbrooke who were there when the Prime Minister made his announcement also signed this petition—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member knows—he has been here a long time and he has also been a Minister of the Crown—he realizes that if he has a number of petitions with regard to deindexing, whatever the number is, we do not require a speech. Let him please just bring them to our attention. There are still some more of his colleagues who want to be recognized, s'il vous plaît.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I readily acknowledge your wisdom but I must tell you that I am personally committed to perform my duties and present these petitions on behalf of those electors. Among other people, I met a group at the Baie-Comeau "Les amis" Tavern who asked me to present this petition and make sure that the Prime Minister is aware of the fact that even his friends over there insist that he must reverse his decision and honour his commitments.

Mr. Speaker, another group of Baie-Comeau residents, including the Prime Minister's own aunt Jeanne, have asked me to present a petition urging that full indexation be reinstated. Those people are very concerned and they are convinced that the Prime Minister will reconsider his position if they ask him to do so, for he promised them he would listen to them and carry out their wishes.

Mr. Speaker, some people of Hochelaga-Maisonneuve asked me as well to present a petition. Incidentally, they are very proud of their Member of Parliament because he is the only one who had the courage of his and their convictions concerning the deindexation of old age security pensions. As you know, he is the only Government Member who stood up for his electors.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member was the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport and he was very fast on his feet then. I would just hope that he will be just as fast with petitions.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for those compliments but I must say that people of Montmorency-Orléans would be very insulted if I did not present the petition they signed concerning the deindexation of old age security pensions.

[English]

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of three North York senior citizens' groups and many other citizens in my riding of Willowdale, I am honoured to present to this House their petitions opposing the Government's proposed indexing of their Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from several hundred people in my riding from the Villages and Towns of Govan, St. Gregor, Pilger, Alvena, Wynyard and Nokomis who are protesting the proposed deindexation of pensions and ask that the House of Commons reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

● (1610)

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a petition from residents of the riding of Saint-Jacques, which I have the honour to represent in Parliament, and from residents of other constituencies, such as Gamelin, Rosemont, Sainte-Marie and Longueuil.

The petitioners state that the Government initiative to limit indexation of old age security pensions after January 1, 1986, would reduce the purchasing power of the elderly.

They therefore humbly ask that the Government of Canada respect the commitment made during the summer of 1984 to maintain full indexation of old age security pensions.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, thank you very much for having recognized my constituency and my presence.

I have a petition from many residents of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell who are concerned about pensions. I would like to present one signed by 14 residents of Limoges, in Ontario; one signed by 27 residents of Vankleek Hill, in Ontario; another one signed by 55 residents of Limoges; one signed by 34 people in Alexandria; one signed by 70 people of the Club Joie de Vivre in Embrun; one signed by 35 residents of the boarding house Résidence Mon Chez-Nous, in Casselman, Ontario; one signed by 16 members of the Club 60 Sainte-Félicitée of Clarence Creek; one signed by 59 residents of the Place Old Mill apartment in Hawkesbury; one signed by 24 people of the village of Bainsville; one signed by 34 people of Embrun; one signed by 65 residents of the Foyer Lapalme in Embrun; and finally, Mr. Speaker, a petition which was given to me here on this very day by 52 membres of the Club de l'Age d'Or of Saint-Bernardin, in Ontario.

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I ask your indulgence because I have many petitions to present.

The first comes from the people of Shediac, in my constituency; I have two more from the residents of the city of Bouctouche; I also have a few other petitions from Sainte-Marie-de-Kent; I have here another one from residents of Cocagne and Saint-Antoine; I also have a petition from the people of Notre-Dame and residents of Sainte-Marie-de-Kent; and I also have three petitions from the people of Cap-Pelé.

I should point out, Mr. Speaker, that these people are very concerned about the de-indexation measures announced in the Wilson Budget, and the petitioners ask the House to urge the Government to re-establish full indexation.

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, it is also my pleasure to table in this House a petition signed by a group of residents of the federal constituency of Hochelaga-Maisonneuve, who strongly deplore the position taken by the Government as far as pension indexation is concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I have a second petition, this time from the federal riding of Louis-Hébert, in Quebec city, where many people have expressed their total disapproval of the Government decision not to provide full indexation for old age security pensions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SEVENTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF CLASS OF '68

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Today is the seventeenth anniversary of the election which brought the Class of '68 to the House of Commons, those Hon. Members elected for the first time in the 1968 election. At that time they were the "Yuppies" and today they are the "Guppies", the greying upwardly mobile professionals.

The Class of '68 included some Members who became outstanding parliamentarians, some who reverted to other occupations and some who went on to their reward in the other place or on the bench.

The present Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) was a member of that group, as were the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom), the Hon. Member for Cochrane-Superior (Mr. Penner), and the Leader of the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent). The former distinguished Speaker of the House, the Hon. James Jerome, now associate Chief Justice of the Federal Court, came in in 1968 and soon made his mark in this Chamber.

• (1620)

I, your humble servant, was part of the illustrious class of '68.

[English]

Some others who are still here and will remember those days are the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle), the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), and the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault). If I have omitted anyone from that freshmen group of 1968, I am sorry.

It is the opportune time to express to the surviving members of that group the appreciation of the House for the dedication those Hon. Members have carried with them over these 17 years, from the time they arrived as callow Members—all of us did—to the present, now that they have become seasoned and mature in the service of this House and everything it represents.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great interest to that outstanding list of parliamentarians. However, I believe there is one name which modesty undoubtedly prevented you from uttering, that of the distinguished Member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski), who was one of the outstanding members of the Class of '68, who is now occupying the Chair.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to join in the pleasantries and affection which you have expressed to the Class of '68, because it was a vintage year. It was an outstanding group of parliamentarians who were elected at that time and they have distinguished themselves in the House of Commons. Of course, the Hon. Member who sits in the Chair today typifies that in the greatest of ways. You, Mr. Speaker, follow in the distinguished footsteps of the former Hon. Member for Sudbury who was the Speaker of the House for a number of years. I think the greatest tribute to those members of the Class of '68 who are still in the House was paid by Mr. Speaker Jerome at one time where he said, "We are the survivors". So I am glad to join in the Chair's compliments to the Class of 1968.

ADVANCE PAYMENTS FOR CROPS ACT

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture) moved that Bill C-58, an Act to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I took note of your remarks earlier with reference to the Class of '68. I would just like to utilize this opportunity to congratulate those people who were victorious, from all Parties, of course. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that I well recall the year 1968 back in my riding of Elgin. Good fortune did not come our way in the riding of Elgin back in 1968. Two things happened on that day back in 1968, Mr.

Speaker, first, it rained torrents from early morning until late night and, second, when the ballots were counted, our Party ended up with the short stick. So the good days in the riding of Elgin did not take place for us until the election of October, 1972.

On my travels across Canada, Mr. Speaker, in the past several months, I have been asked by many farmers and farm organizations if and when the federal Government would bring forth legislation to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act. They told me it is a good program but it is out of date. It is based on farming costs and commodity prices from almost a decade ago. My answer to those people has always been "very soon". Well, Mr. Speaker, "soon" is right now, before our deliberations end for the summer.

It is in this regard today that I want to introduce for second reading a Bill to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act. Before discussing the proposed amendments, I should first remind the House what the Advance Payments for Crops Program is all about. The object of the program is to assist in the orderly marketing of agricultural crops in all parts of Canada. It does this, as the title implies, by advancing interest free payments to producers for storable crops prior to harvest time. This gives producers the financial flexibility to market their crops over the full marketing season when returns are normally higher than at harvest time. When the crop is sold, the money is repaid to the federal Government. In other words, this program provides farmers with some cash to see them through the period from planting time to the time they are able to sell their crop. In the case of some crops, that can be many, many months. Consider, for instance, the British Columbia apple, the Ontario rutabagas and the Prince Edward Island potatoes which are in the stores now. They were not harvested in June, 1985. They probably came out of the field in September, 1984. Where have they been for the past nine months? Most likely they were not sitting in a supermarket or a wholesaler's warehouse. They were probably stored in farm cold storages across the country. In all that time the producer was not paid unless, of course, he received an advance payment under the very Act which I propose that we amend today.

There have been no changes made to this piece of legislation since it was enacted in 1977. It is now time to amend this Act in order to optimize its marketing potential. The first amendment would double the maximum level of advance payments allowed under the Act in any crop year from $15,000 to $30,000 per individual producer, and from $30,000 and $45,000 for business organizations to $60,000 and $90,000. Under an Appropriation Act, these levels could be raised to amounts fixed by Parliament.

This amendment would bring the maximum advance levels in line with those under the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Program. The present inequities between the two programs has caused confusion among producers concerning the two programs in western Canada. Understandably, producer organizations have been asking Agriculture Canada to eliminate these inequities.

The present maximum levels under the Advance Payments for Crops Act were set in 1977. Over the past eight years, producers' input costs have risen at a much faster rate than their market returns. Thus, a smaller portion of the producer's crop is now covered by the program. Over the past eight years producer input costs have risen at a much higher rate than market returns. Thus, a smaller portion of the producers' crop is now covered by the program. This has reduced the producers' marketing flexibility and therefore his return. But amending the advanced levels will serve no purpose unless the total size of the program is increased. For each of the past three years the total guaranteed amounts approach the present $200 million maximum contingent liability. Thus, this legislation doubles the Government's contingent liability from $200 million to $400 million.

It is only reasonable that the size of the program should double since there is increased interest in it by producers and producer organizations. They see the advance payments for crops program as one which helps them to lengthen the marketing season for storable crops, improves their cash flow positions, and helps defend against variable interest rates. When producers are able to store their crops and market them over an extended period, this helps to expand the domestic market as well as develop export markets.

In the past few years producers have become very involved in the marketing of their crops in order to improve their market return. They have learned that it does not pay to sell to the first buyer who comes along if they can hold their produce longer. Many producers' organizations have compared their returns to producers who participate in the Advance Payments for Crops Program with those who do not. It is noteworthy that the cost of the program is far less than the increased market return to producers.

Not surprisingly, participation in the program has increased considerably in the past few years. In the first year of the program, only eight producer organizations across the country participated. For the 1984-85 crop year, close to $190 million was guaranteed under the program through some 47 producer organizations. More than 18,000 producers benefited as a result of this program.

In addition to doubling the maximum size of this program, the proposed legislation includes several housekeeping amendments which could make the program more flexible. The first of these would clarify the definition of a buyer-broker and would specify who names them. This is necessary to allow producers greater flexibility in developing a marketing system that is best for them. Without that flexibility they tend to develop marketing systems that would make them eligible for payments under the Act.

The second housekeeping amendment would improve the means and fairness of collecting defaults and would permit the federal Government to pay associated legal costs. Under the Act producers' organizations are currently responsible for collecting bad debts or defaults. This means that all participating producers have to pay the expenses for those who default. The proposed legislation would allow the producers' organization to recover the collection costs from the producers who default. Failing that, their legal expenses would be paid for by the federal Government. Any legal expenses, however, would be offset by the savings on the interest charges on outstanding defaults. On this point I want to take a moment to reassure the House that the level of defaults is extremely small. In the seven years that the program has been in operation, the average total of the defaults is less than one tenth of 1 per cent of the total value of all payments guaranteed. The lending institutions consider their percentage of defaults in the agricultural sector as a good rate.

In addition, the proposed Bill includes a number of other housekeeping amendments that will help streamline the administrative process and allow for negotiation of lower interest rates. This should result in significant savings to the federal Government. All of the proposed amendments have been developed in concert with producer organizations and are generally supported by them. At a time when crop producers are under great stress from rising production costs and fluctuating market prices, the Advance Payments for Crops Program is more important than ever. By doubling the maximum advance payment level, the federal Government is providing the producers with a greater marketing tool and greater marketing opportunities. The Advance Payments for Crops Program has proved to be very worth-while and indeed a very necessary program. It is not as useful as it could be. It is a 1977 model which has not kept pace with 1985 market conditions.

It is for all of these reasons that I urge Members of the House to approve this Bill to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister mentioned the Class of '68. He was elected in 1972. As I recall, that was not particularly a good year for our side of the House. However, within 18 months we recovered sufficiently to continue on for another 12 years. I just thought I should draw that to the Minister's attention because I believe he has been here most of the time since then.

In a more serious vein, I wanted to indicate the support of the Official Opposition for the Advance Payments for Crops Act. This legislation was brought in back in 1977 when our Party was the Government. It is good Liberal legislation. Indeed, it was a plank in our election campaign platform last year that would have seen these payments doubled from $15,000 to $30,000, from $30,000 to $60,000 and from $45,000 to $90,000, depending on the number of producers involved. I have had representations on this legislation from the Ontario Soybean Growers Marketing Board in Chatham and the Ontario Corn Producers Association. The have requested in the strongest possible terms that this legislation be passed this year so it would be available for crops in the coming year.

The legislation will provide assistance to non-Wheat Board commodities which are storable. It will help producers to stabilize their prices by not forcing them to put crops on the market during low price periods or to provide cash flow immediately after the crops have been taken off. It will as well avoid the forced sale of commodities, which often reduces the price. I believe it is important legislation. It has been on the books for a number of years, and these amendments will bring it up to date to meet the needs of 1985 and the future.

When the Minister was speaking he indicated there would be an opportunity in the future to increase the total amounts by way of an appropriation Bill rather than by bringing in a new Bill. When we go into committee stage I would be interested in learning the details of that and whether it would be done by a one dollar item, which I thought had been determined not to be acceptable to the Speaker. Perhaps the Minister will be able to explain that during committee stage of this Bill.

Over the past number of years this legislation has promoted development of crop storage facilities, because having the cash available and the interest of the federal Government is of great assistance in that regard. As I understand this legislation, it will increase the number of people to whom a producer can sell his crops. This will codify the existing situation. It is my understanding that in the past producers could only sell to a producer association or a co-operative but not to a neighbour. This legislation will provide for that.

Another important aspect has been that funds were often actually lent to associations such as the Ontario Corn Producers' Association and the Ontario Soybean Growers' Marketing Board. This legislation will assist those producers' associations to recover funds when the advance payment is not properly made. The interest costs under the existing program have been about $6 million a year. I understand that the Government will have to make provision for approximately $12 million a year under this program.

I would like to indicate the support of my Party for this legislation. It is useful legislation although it does not solve some of the major problems facing the agricultural industry in Canada today such as lower prices for many grain crops due to the American bonus plan for their grains. However, it allows producers to withhold from the market, during slump periods, those crops which are being adversely affected by that program in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I want to lend our support to the expeditious passage of this legislation in order that the benefits can be made available to the various producer groups which are affected.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I apologize for interrupting this very important debate, but there have been consultations between the Parties. I think that if you were to ask the House you would find unanimous consent to revert to Motions in order that I could present some Motions with respect to references to committees.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent to reverting to Motions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

That, notwithstanding the practices of this House, if the House is not sitting when an interim or final report of the Committee is completed, that the Committee shall report its findings by depositing its report with the Clerk of the House and that it shall thereupon be deemed to have been laid upon the Table.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have the unanimous consent of the House to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, my second motion also relates to a budgetary reference as it relates to the Canadian budgetary process. If you were to seek unanimous consent I think you would find consent for the presentation of this motion and its acceptance without debate. The motion is as follows:

That the document entitled "The Canadian Budgetary Process—Proposals for Improvement", tabled in the House on Thursday, May 23, 1985 (Sessional Paper No. 331/320), be referred to the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have unanimous consent of the House to introduce this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there anything the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) wishes to say? I know I have been absent for three or four days, but I do understand that when he rises he is only trying to bring something to my attention, and I appreciate that.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, we were all very concerned for the sake of your health and we are happy to see you back. You must accept that sometimes I am like a Pavlovian dog in trying to follow the procedures here. There are certain things to which we are conditioned in the House and the question must be put in a certain way. That is what I was trying to do.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I really appreciate that. My condition is just great and I am honoured that the Hon. Member would bring that up. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

ADVANCE PAYMENTS FOR CROPS ACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wise that Bill C-58, an Act to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to give my Party's approval in principle for the proposal which the Government has brought forward, namely, to double the amount of interest-free cash advanced to producers of agricultural products outside of the Canadian Wheat Board area. This brings the rest of Canada into parity with producers who grow wheat, oats, barley, rye, and oil seeds in the western region. It permits them to make out an interest-free cash advance after harvest to a maximum of $30,000 per farm. It could be up to a maximum of $60,000 or $90,000 if there are two or three major operators on that farm.

As the Minister has pointed out, the losses through this program have been less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. It does provide ready cash for producers and enables them to withhold their products from the market immediately after harvest. They are able to ease their products on to the market over the course of the year.

This Bill does only good things from the point of view of agricultural marketing. It goes hand in glove with other programs of the last 15 or 20 years carried out by the Department with regard to storage of agricultural products. We approve this approach to agriculture and support the Bill heartily.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Mr. Wise moves that Bill C-58, an Act to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations and I believe you will find a disposition to amending the motion as presented by substituting Committee of the Whole for the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

I understand there has been a firm undertaking to deal with this matter expeditiously in the Committee of the Whole so that we can move on to the next item of legislation. With that understanding, we would be glad to proceed to Committee of the Whole now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the Chair.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-58, an Act to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act.

Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1—

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I have a couple of questions. The Minister of Agriculture mentioned in his speech that in future, the limits of the advance payments could be increased by an Appropriation Bill rather than a Bill in the House. How does he propose to do that? Will it be by a one dollar item in the Appropriation Bill?

It has been my understanding that the Speaker has ruled against dollar items being presented in Appropriations Bills. Yesterday we were dealing with a clause by clause study on another Bill. The Minister did not have his officials, but I hope that today he will have his officials with him in Committee of the Whole so that we can get the details on these items.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member refers to a Bill that went through the House yesterday and mentioned the absence of my officials. I think I was able to supply all of the information that was requested of me by Hon. Members. If it has not been supplied yet, I will make certain that it is.

I never professed to be an expert on House procedures on matters of this kind and never will. However, it is my understanding that we go through a process in which there will be a presentation of a Cabinet document, approved by the Department of Finance, allowing us, as we did this time, to go up from $200 million to $400 million.

If we decide in the future that the Act should receive greater utilization than it does now and we require additional contingent liability to extend additional opportunities to producer organizations across the country for the greater utilization of this piece of legislation, we would simply go through the longstanding process that we went through this time. I believe my Cabinet colleagues would go through the same procedure if they found themselves in the same situation that the Hon. Member describes. We would simply seek consultations with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and request that additional contingent liability be granted to us by Cabinet.

I am not exactly sure what vehicle we would use on the dollar items or why the reference was made to an Appropriation Bill. I would think that what I have described would be the normal course that would be followed. In securing an increase in the contingent liability in this case from $200 million to $400 million, as far as I am aware we went through the normal process.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, when the Minister spoke earlier I thought that the Appropriation Bill would be the technique used to increase the levels of the advance payments, to increase the $30,000 for a single farmer to a higher figure, for example. Was he talking about the contingent liability of $400 million or about the maximum levels of advance payments that can be made?

Yesterday he offered to provide a breakdown of the funding under the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the amounts and the provinces where that funding was provided. I hope he will do that soon.

Would he provide a breakdown of how much of the $200 million contingent liability is outstanding now under the present Act? Would he be able to advise the House of the amount that has been utilized by each of the province? I assume it is just Ontario and the provinces east of Ontario because it is not in the Canadian Wheat Board area of commodity items. Could he provide the breakdown for Ontario, Quebec and the other provinces?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I believe when I talked about contingent liability in my opening remarks I was under the impression that I was referring to it in the sense of increasing the amount from $200 million to $400 million. According to my notes, I believe that is indeed correct.

With reference to the information requested yesterday, I asked that the information that I had in my hand involving six or seven tables be made available. It was my understanding that I had requested someone at the Table to table the information and was told that if I did so it would be appended to Hansard. I checked today's Hansard but I do not see it appended. I do not know what went wrong, but I would be happy to do the same today with respect to the details regarding the Advance Payments for Crops Act.

The document referred to is the financial status report of June, 1985. It will not take too long to detail.

There is the B.C. Tree Fruits, dealing with apples, Bartlett pears and Anjou pears; B.C. Vegetable Co-op Association, dealing with onions, rutabagas and potatoes; the Okanagan Fruit Producers and Shippers Association, again dealing with a wide variety of fruits and vegetables; the Island Vegetable Co-op Association, primarily dealing with potatoes. We have the Interior Vegetable Agencies Limited, again dealing with potatoes, onions and rutabagas. We move into Alberta, primarily potatoes. Then we go to the Alberta Honey Producers, the Alberta Beekeepers, the Alberta Wheat Pool dealing with field beans, flax and canola. They would take advantage of the other piece of legislation because we are getting into the Canadian Wheat Board area. We move on to the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, again with canola. In Manitoba we have CSP Foods, sunflower seeds; the Manitoba Vegetable Producers Marketing Board with potatoes, onions and rutabagas. It goes across the country. We have the Manitoba Co-op Honey Producers, the Manitoba Corn Growers Association, the Manitoba Honey Marketing Board, the Manitoba Pool Elevators.

• (1700)

Moving into Ontario we have Blue Water Storage, Norfolk Fruit Growers Association, primarily apples. We have the Ontario Soya-Bean Growers Marketing Board, the Ontario Apple Marketing Commission, the Ontario Burley Tobacco Growers Marketing Board, the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Board and the Ontario Corn Producers Association. I was interested in the representation which the Hon. Member for Algoma was reading on behalf of the Corn Growers of the province. The individual making that presentation was a long time friend, a supporter and a constituent of mine.

Moving into Quebec, we have apples, grains, corn, onions, leeks, rutabagas, cabbage, carrots, honey, tobacco, potatoes. There are a number of marketing co-ops in the Province of Quebec that utlize this legislation.

Moving to Atlantic Canada, all provinces utilizing it, we have apples, potatoes, tobacco, wheat, soybeans, feed wheat, oats, rye, barley. The list goes on and on.

I would be happy to copy this information and to make it available to the Hon. Member and indeed to the House. I do not see when we are in Committee of the Whole, Mr. Chairman, that this cannot be done. I requested yesterday that the information I had should have been made public to Members of the House and that it be appended to Hansard. Maybe it is in Hansard. My first quick check was that it was not there. I ask you, Mr. Chairman, why that did not happen. I am going to give you another chance, Mr. Chairman. I will ask that the same thing be done this time. I hope tomorrow I can see this information in Hansard.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I believe under the existing legislation if there is a default by an individual producer in repaying the advance payment then the producer association or marketing board has to pay the legal fees and as well absorb the loss. I thought when the Minister was speaking he indicated not only would the federal Government provide the legal assistance to the marketing agency or Producers Association to recover those fees, but if the individual producer was in bankruptcy or ultimately was not able to repay the advance payment, then the federal Government would absorb it as well.

Can the Minister clarify if the arrangement is that all the legal fees and any defaults which occur will be absorbed by the federal Government? Can he advise, since we have been going through a rash of foreclosures and bankruptcies during 1984 and early 1985, just what the losses were during 1984 to producer associations and other groups under this legislation?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I want to answer an earlier question put by the Hon. Member for Algoma. I think he requested what percentage or how many dollars were utilized at the present time under the Act providing the $200 million ceiling. My information is that $183 million at the present time is utilized by the 47 producer organizations across the country.

I believe at the moment there is about $1 million in defaults. I think it is about one-tenth of 1 per cent. I have it here in a chart, but I have so many charts it takes me some time to go through them. I believe the information I am supplying is accurate.

With respect to the changes in the Act dealing with the defaults, the current system places full responsibility for collecting defaults, including costs, on the producer organizations. I think this is the observation which the Hon. Member made. This is very expensive for them and these costs are shared by all producers participating in the advance program by way of an administrative fee. The result is producers that repay their advances pay a higher fee to pay the expenses of those producers who default. These amendments will allow the producer organizations to recover the collection costs from the producer. If this cannot be done, the legal expenses will be paid by the federal Government and savings on interest charges on the outstanding defaults should offset any legal expenses that will have to be paid. I believe that should answer the questions raised by the Hon. Member for Algoma.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, the Minister will know that this particular Act applies to everything except wheat, oats, and barley sold under the Wheat Board, and there is a separate cash advance for those crops. There is a certain amount of crop utilization. On the Prairies where we grow some of the oil seeds, we use this Act, and we can still use the other cash advance for our wheat, oats and barley sold through the Canadian Wheat Board.

I am a little curious especially because this Act covers such a wide range of products. Can the Minister tell us what sort of information gathering system is used to make certain that an individual does not exceed the $30,000 maximum? While he is at it, can the Minister tell us whether it is possible for a farmer in my region, for instance, who might have borrowed $30,000 against his wheat, oats and barley through the Wheat Board, to take in addition a $30,000 cash advance on his potatoes? How do you monitor the differences to keep it down to $30,000 each as per the Act?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that one would be eligible to participate in one program or the other. This I believe is correct.

It is my understanding that the administration of both Acts is carried out by Agriculture Canada, and I would suspect by the same people within Agriculture Canada. Therefore, sufficient checks would be in place to ensure that the situation which the Hon. Member described should not happen, as far as I am concerned.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I hope the Minister is not saying that a producer could use $15,000 out of the wheat, oats and barley fund and an additional $15,000 for rapeseed and flaxseed, to get to his grand total of $30,000. I think some farmers are doing that now. However, I am curious to know what sorts of procedure is used for commodities other than Wheat Board grains.

I know from experience that the Wheat Board has to delay the issuance of cheques for the balance of advances for something like two weeks,to make certain that producers have not applied at three of four elevator companies for cash advances. It is possible for producers to take out advances at virtually any delivery point. It is possible for them to obtain half the advance for which they are eligible at three of four different points. The Wheat Board sits on the final issuance of cheques, monitors all applications and decides whether in fact a particular producer is eligible for the final amount.

Is a similar process in place for these advances? Can a participating organization or broker issue half the advance almost immediately, with the balance coming from a central organization through Agriculture Canada? What process is used?

I ask these questions of the Minister because there may be some producers watching this debate who have yet to set up agencies to provide for these advances. My next question will concern how they go about doing this, but I wanted to start with some of the procedures in place so that we would have that information on the record.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we could talk about a few other minute details of the Bill. That would provide me with a moment or two in which to receive the detailed information requested by the Hon. Member, or at least have it sent to me. As I indicated in an earlier answer, if an individual wanted to participate in the two programs, it is possible, providing that he does not exceed the old 15 and the new 30, 60 and 90 levels.

I am assured that adequate administrative requirements are in place to ensure that duplication does not happen. I did not make a note of the Hon. Member's third question because my officials signalled me, indicating that that would not happen and that everything we need was in place for the proper administration of the program.

In the absence of any black and white information, the fact is that the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Program has been in effect for a good number of years. It has worked well. I cannot recall having encountered any serious difficulties with it. The Hon. Member is in a better position than I am to indicate what problems there have been with that piece of legislation, because he represents a part of the country which has received the benefits of that program for quite some time.

This Bill came along later, in 1977. To my knowledge there were only two problems. One was that levels were not high enough and the other was that participating agencies were concerned about some defaults. We are trying to deal with these two problems by increasing the maximum levels and by changing the way in which defaults are collected. We are sharing some greater responsibility in that area by picking up the legal costs.

I should like to indicate some additional information. By reducing the potential liability to producer organizations from 5 per cent to 2 per cent, a better interest rate can be negotiated. This measure will reduce the average interest rate by up to one half or 1 per cent. No producer organization has exceeded the final default rate of 2 per cent over the last seen years of the operation of the program. As I indicated earlier, the average of defaults is less than one tenth of 1 per cent. That pretty well tells the story about advance payments, both prairie grain advance payments and the advance payments for crops with which we are dealing now.

It would appear to me that the necessary mechanisms, administrative personnel and procedures must be functioning reasonably well, or we would have heard about it by now. If the Hon. Member has some specific examples to raise, I would be happy to take notice of them, have my officials check into them and report back to him as soon as possible.

Mr. Althouse: I wonder if the Minister could quickly go through the steps or rules for producers of commodities who are interested in negotiating an agreement for setting up an interest-free cash advance program. What steps would they have to go through? What volumes are required before a group or agency would be acceptable under the program?

Mr. Wise: I cannot give the Hon. Member the detailed requirements to which a marketing agency or marketing commission would be subjected. When the Bill was first brought forward in 1977, the Ontario Corn Council lobbied the previous Government unsuccessfully, to no avail. We took the position at that time that although the Ontario Corn Council was not a marketing board or marketing commission, it had the administrative powers, personnel and so on to take advantage of the advance payments for crops legislation in 1977. However, the Government of the day said no, rightly or wrongly. The Council has continued to lobby and of course has changed its organization. It has met the criteria of the Bill and has been participating in the adance payments legislation for the last two or three years, or about that period of time.

Existing marketing boards and commissions are in a position to take advantage of the legislation. A marketing board, commission or co-op would simply send the information to us. In fact, it could be sent to the Hon. Member, the Hon. Member could forward it to us, and we could take a look at the organizational structure to see whether or not it meets the criteria. If it meets the criteria, then of course it would participate in the program. If we look at the marketing organizations which have participated, they run from co-ops to marketing agencies, commissions and wheat pools. The list goes on and on.

If there is a marketing group or organization—probably not an organization, I think that terminology is a little too loose—we will have a look at it. Generally they have to be legally incorporated and included in the marketing of a crop. They must be able to administer the program and must represent a significant portion of the production in the area. These are general criteria that are laid down by the Bill. Again, we would need to have evidence that they were legally incorporated, included in the marketing of a crop, able to administer the program and represent a significant portion of the production in that area.

That is all the information that I can give to the Hon. Member, so I say to him again, let them contact us and we will sit down with them and find out whether or not they meet the criteria. If they do, fine and dandy. If not, maybe we can work together and change their organization so that they will meet the criteria.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister can give us an approximation of how many such groups have been established since 1977, to which cash advances are now in effect.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I think I touched that in my notes. I indicated that the program had grown quite rapidly over the years since 1977. I believe I indicated that there was a very small number of co-ops and marketing agencies that participated in the program in the first year and, I believe, I indicated that last year we had 47 organizations in the program across the country. In the first year of the program, only eight producer organizations participated, and for the 1984-85 crop year close to $190 million was guaranteed under the program to 47 producer organizations and more than 18,000 producers benefited from the program.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre) moved:

That Bill C-25, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 36 to 39 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"commodities for any period or region bear a fair relationship to the estimated production costs of such commodities for that period or region."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak for a moment on my amendment. During the course of this Bill, we heard representation from right across the country and there was some disturbing testimony, to my mind.

As you will know, Mr. Speaker, from having read the Bill and being thoroughly acquainted with it, this Bill is permissive legislation which sets out an umbrella under which producers, the provincial Governments and the federal Government can go together to strike a tripartite agreement to stabilize farm prices.

One thing that we heard most often from provinces across the country was that they were concerned about going into these agreements without having some feeling of acceptance or right to raise the possibility of variations in production costs from one end of the country to the other. They felt that there should be some way that would enable them to bring to the discussions the question of the particular costs that they have that are particular to their region, to put those on the table and negotiate the kind of system that is needed for a tripartite system across the country.

Because this is a government Bill, and the motivation is here and the expenditure plans that limit what a private member or an opposition Member can do, this is one of the few places where it is possible to bring the question of regional costs into the discussions. It would be under the section of the activities of the board that was established to look at the costing formula, either for those products that come under the program under the old Agricultural Stabilization Act or products which would come under by tripartite agreements between the various producer groups in the country, some or all of the provinces and the federal Government. This is one of the few spots where it is possible to mention the fact that regional costs can be a concern.

This would put a discussion of these various costs onto the table and permit the various groups to discuss costs that are unique to their parts of the country. For instance, there are high energy costs paid by Prince Edward Island farmers who produce hogs or dairy products. These farmers are required to spend a great deal of money on electricity to run the machinery and sometimes even to provide additional heat.

Representatives from other regions of the country mentioned that feed costs were relatively higher in their regions than in other parts of the country, and they said that they would like to be able to discuss this in the negotiations that take place prior to agreeing to a tripartite system. In fact, they mentioned that they would even like to be able to permit some slight variation with agreement from all of the participating groups as part of the final agreement.

In committee, we heard from representatives of the Province of British Columbia, a province which has had the most experience with an income stabilization program. Those representatives told us that when that program began, there was some allowance for regional differences in costs from one valley to another for the various payout levels in the production of tomatoes and other such crops. However, the representatives went on to point out that as time went on, it became obvious even to the producers that some of these cost disadvantages were offset by advantages in other portions of production costs and that eventually regional cost variations were seen to be unnecessary. Therefore, the producers themselves took regional cost variations out of the program.

It is my contention that once producers can see all of the various cost items that producers from their areas and other areas have to face, they will see that there is a real reason for their particular product being produced in their particular corner of the country. There is no doubt that hogs will continue to be produced in Prince Edward Island, Quebec and right across to British Columbia whether or not there is a tripartite stabilization program. While Quebec may have some disadvantages in the area of feed costs, it has an advantage over other parts of the country in labour costs, in the technical programs that are in place and because of the fact that its production units are somewhat superior to those in other parts of the country. That would balance off against the relatively lower cost of grain in Saskatchewan where the production units may not as a general rule be quite up to the competitive standards of those in Quebec.

I maintain that it all evens out. What I am fearful of in permitting this Bill to go through the way it is written without some recognition of regional cost variations is that we will leave the impression on those groups that think they have a particular cost disadvantage that there is no point in coming forward to the bargaining table to participate in the process. The idea behind this particular amendment is to make the umbrella slightly larger so that more producer groups from more provinces will feel comfortable under that umbrella and will begin the discussions preliminary to the establishment of a tripartite program. I think that this amendment sends the message that all producer groups from all across Canada are welcome under that umbrella and that their particular viewpoints and problems will be discussed fully. It will not leave them with the impression that we are excluding some groups while accepting others. That is why I have moved this amendment to the Bill.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) has moved an amendment proposing that the commodities for any period or region bear a fair relationship to the estimated production costs of such commodities for that period or region. In committee, we heard a great many representations regarding regional cost differences. Those from the Maritimes mentioned the differences that exist in input and feed costs there and made very strong representations that there be some consideration for that. It seems to me that there should be some way of taking that into account.

Clearly, if there is going to be hog production in the maritime provinces, one of two things must happen. Either there must be a mechanism in the formula or the Government must come forward with a program of feed freight assistance, perhaps coupled with a program for self-sufficiency in feed grains for the Atlantic provinces, otherwise those who live there will be faced with a sharp disadvantage when producing hogs. Most Altantic provinces, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, do not produce more than what they actually consume in their own provinces and perhaps some produce considerably less than that. I am interested to know if the Minister is prepared to give some assistance in that regard.

It seems to me that the obvious solution to the problem of regional input costs would be an interim feed freight assistance program that would be put in place for a number of years, combined with a feed producing capacity development program so that the disadvantaged provinces would be able to grow their own feed and would not have to depend upon feed freight assistance. This amendment recognizes that in some way, but I do not think it goes the whole distance by providing regional differentials in payments under the proposed red meat stabilization program.

I was not able to move this motion, but as we had very strong representations before the committee, I recommended that we add potatoes to the list of named commodities. At a later time, I will be raising the matter of the possibility of the Government accepting such an amendment.

Other amendments were moved dealing with regional commodities in B.C. There was a strong recommendation from the committee that apples be named as a commodity. There were representations from Quebec Members that pigs be added to the list of named commodities under the Act as well. The Minister has already added a number of items to the list like lamb, wool, spring wheat and winter wheat. With the kind of strong representations that came from the committee, I would hope that the Minister would be willing to consider my amendment with regard to adding potatoes to the list. I believe Hon. Members from British Columbia and Quebec may want to put forward the recommendation of other items as well to be named—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. There seems to be a few conversations going on in the House. I would hope that perhaps those Hon. Members would go behind the curtain so their voices would not carry in here. I am having difficulty hearing the great speech of the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster).

Mr. Foster: I appreciate, Mr. Speaker, you realizing what a great deal of information I was providing to Hon. Members.

The Bill before us today also deals with the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre really puts forward an amendment which the Minister proposed to the committee last Thursday afternoon. No one has been quite able to understand exactly what it means. It does propose to deal with top loading and bottom loading of production and stabilization formulas. Cattlemen are very uncertain as to exactly what the amendment put forward by the Minister means. The Minister claims that his amendment will allow the provincial groups to come into the tripartite stabilization agreements provided that their level of support and stabilization is not any greater than that provided by other participants in the proposed agreement.

I suppose that would take into account the stabilization programs the provinces were running relating to transportation, provided they were not greater than the stabilization or assistance being provided by other provinces, say, for fertilizer subsidization or cheaper electrical rates or, as Ontario does, paying half of the farm taxes. That is the proposal in the amendment, yet when one reads the Minister's amendment, it seems to refer to stabilization provided under a tripartite red meat stabilization agreement as not being greater than that provided to any other producers in the country, whether they be assisted by their provincial Government or provincial marketing agency. There is a great deal of confusion about that amendment.

The four participating producer groups from Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario are not clear what the amendment means so they are very concerned. Since they do not know what it means, they are not in agreement with it. The UPA in the Province of Quebec is not satisfied with the amendment. As far as I know, the provincial Government and groups in Prince Edward Island are also not satisfied. Therefore, we really have difficulty knowing exactly what that amendment means or what the impact would be if the legislation were passed.

The provincial Governments in Atlantic Canada want to see some recognition of regional input costs, especially the costs of feed freight assistance. Perhaps when the Minister speaks he will be able to indicate whether or not he is prepared to put in place an interim feed freight assistance program which will take place during an interim period while the federal Government is assisting the provincial Governments in developing grain input production capacity in those Maritime Provinces.

This is an important Bill. It may be that it is only enabling legislation but once it is in place, the federal Government has a commitment to support these producer groups. There has been agreement for the last year in which the four producing provinces, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario, have agreed to participate in a tripartite red meat stabilization program covering beef, veal, lamb and pork.

It is very unclear whether any of the producer groups in those four provinces will support the legislation as it was passed in the committee, so we are going to have to see whether they will support the legislation and what the prospects are for other groups such as the Quebec hog producers and the Maritime producers. In the interim, the Hon. Member's amendment seems to only take into account regional commodities, and these commodities bear a fair relationship to the estimated production costs of such commodities for that region.

I hope that we will have a chance to vote on this amendment. I would as well like to hear from the Minister as to exactly how he proposes to satisfy and reconcile the various positions across the country with regard to the hog, beef, and lamb producers because they seem very uncertain as to whether the amendments which were introduced last Thursday would have the impact of really destroying the agreement which did exist. At the same time, it does not seem to have satisfied the UPA and the hog producers in Quebec or the producers in Atlantic Canada. The Bill is very unclear at the present time. Perhaps we will be hearing just how those differences can be reconciled.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to the motion presented by the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party. I may say that the Hon. Member's intentions are entirely laudable and that consideration of regional costs is certainly one objective we can all support.

Mr. Speaker, in committee, and especially at the committee meeting last Thursday, Members had a chance to ask some very serious questions about the Government's intentions, and especially about the consultation process initiated by the Government. We were told by Quebec producers that the legislation was tabled without prior consultation and that there had been no formal consultation with the President of the Union des producteurs agricoles.

We also heard that Progressive Conservative Members had tried to persuade the Minister to change his mind about this Bill and delay consideration until comprehensive consultation had taken place, but unfortunately, the Minister refused to consider these requests.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment before the House provides an opportunity to discuss regional differences in Canada, and I know the minister is one of the true believers in the community of communities theory. During the few years when the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) was Leader of the Party and Prime Minister, the Minister supported his community of communities theory. However, it seems the Minister has a very short memory, because now he would like to stabilize poverty, as it were, by providing for uniformity over and above regional differences. However, considering how well the Minister knows the country and its regional differences, I am confident that he will find this amendment acceptable. In committee, the Minister spent some time on this issue, and I hope that today, he will be able to give us a definitive answer and vote in favour of the amendment. In fact, this amendment gives us a chance to reopen the whole debate on the constitutional responsibilities of the federal and provincial governments for agriculture. In this respect, the Bill before the House and even the amendments presented by the Minister in committee are not likely to be satisfactory to the provincial parties.

The Minister is well aware that his Quebec counterpart cannot accept the provisions of this Bill. He knows perfectly well that Quebec producers object to the prerequisites imposed by this legislation. Nevertheless, he insists on using his party's overwhelming majority and the silence of Quebec Conservative Members to impose his vision of uniformity across the country. Mr. Speaker, I still think that the Minister has a chance, today at the report stage and in the next few days at third reading, to show that he has really been listening to his colleagues from Quebec, instead of hoisting their arms and asking them to keep quiet, and that he has been listening to the caucus and as a result will have a far more satisfactory solution to show for it.

Mr. Speaker, we heard from representatives of the UPA, the Federation of Pork Producers, the Federation of Lamb Producers, and people in the cattle industry, and from their testimony before the committee, it was clear they wanted us to recognize two principles.

First, they said they were convinced that it would be better for Canadian agriculture to have income stabilization than price stabilization. Of course there is a very basic difference of opinion on this principle. But they also said, in referring to the provinces that within their respective jurisdictions had decided to implement specific agricultural policies to protect their farmers that they were anxious to see these provinces continue within the framework of the national system, to administer the programs they initiated and were supporting with their tax revenues.

Mr. Speaker, this debate has been going on for a long time, and I am referring to the right of the provinces to make decisions with respect to agriculture policy. The Minister knows perfectly well that for instance, in the case of Quebec, its policy of food self-sufficiency may well be jeopardized by the passage of this Bill. The Minister realizes this and I know his Quebec counterpart has said, and I quote: I am trying to show that the approach you have opted for with respect to red meat stabilization is dangerous and discriminatory.

He is saying: You take a discriminatory approach when, on one hand you refuse to give pork producers the money owed to them or to acknowledge the right of the provinces to manage their own stabilization programs—for fear that the Americans might retaliate—and, on the other hand you give hundreds of millions of dollars to western grain producers. Besides your attitude might very well jeopardize the interests of pork producers and processors in their current conflict with the American Government. The provincial Minister goes on to say: The Canadian Pork Council and the Canadian Meat Council are spending tens of thousands of dollars to hire lawyers to defend them. Those lawyers are trying to prove to the American Government that funds received under stabilization programs must not be considered as prejudicial grants since they are in fact permanent insurance measures partially financed by the farming community and whose benefits must be spread over a long period of time, in keeping with actuarial principles. The Minister is saying: Through your statements you demolish the thesis they defend, you condemn Canadian pork producers even before American and international courts of law have made a judgment. I am drawing inspiration from a document drafted by the Quebec Government. He goes on to say: On behalf of Quebec pork producers we are entitled to expect more from the Canadian Minister of Agriculture whose responsibility is to uphold the interests of Canadian agricultural producers no matter the sector where they try to earn a living or the province where they live. You must stop taking advantage of the current predicament of pork producers to rush this Bill through. That is the key word, and that is what we are witnessing, Mr. Speaker. They are trying to push this measure right through, but I am sure they will be up against stiff opposition in the next few hours and days because we are determined, Mr. Speaker, to use all our parliamentary rights to bring the Minister to his senses or at least convince him to go back to the consultation process.

The Minister knows as well as I and all other Members of the House do that this Bill is unacceptable to the producers of a province and to many others. The list is getting longer every day and we are trying to make him understand that he is being overly hasty. He is acting today against the best judgment of everybody. He may be able to get his own colleagues to stand still for this, but he will not be able to prevent the producers from speaking up. Instead of trying to put them before a fait accompli the Minister should make sure that the producers have their say before he imposes this measure.

After lengthy discussions, Mr. Speaker, the Minister finally introduced an amendment in committee, but I voted against it because it did not satisfy anyone. The Minister came up with an amendment which apparently was quite satisfactory to Department of Justice officials, but they were practically the only ones to feel that way. I have yet to hear from one producer or one organization that would be prepared to support the amendment. I certainly hope the Minister will be able to produce a series of supporting telegrams he received in the last few hours. If the Minister can convince me that this amendment is acceptable to the farmers I represent, I would be prepared to reconsider my position because I think my duty here is to speak for the producers who came to see me and urged me to prevent this Bill from being pushed through. We have nothing against the principle of stabilization, but the Minister will have to show more flexibility if he seeks to rally the various interests. The Minister did not listen to his colleagues and I am afraid he will not listen to Opposition Members either, but he will learn his lesson in the field, Mr. Speaker. If the Minister cannot be more flexible with us, I would ask him to be flexible and almost courageous with his American friends because it does look as though the Government wants to use the pork crisis as an excuse to push this Bill through and make us believe that it has to be the ultimate solution. But, Mr. Speaker, no one in the farming sector believes that this is the answer to everything. The Minister may say that, at the time, the Liberal Government had introduced a similar bill, but that could be one of the reasons why there are now fewer of us on this side. The Minister should learn from what happened after the last elections. He should remember the promises of his colleagues who said that this measure would be amended. Where are those amendments?

The Minister tried to pass off a facsimile of what his predecessor had introduced. At the time, we of the Quebec caucus had officially objected to this legislation because we believed that it was unfair and not quite finalized because there had not been enough consultation and flexibility.

Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the Minister seems to believe he is the only one with the answer. He says that he alone holds the truth: Pass this Bill and we shall see later!

Mr. Speaker, it is not that I do not trust the Minister, because I know that he is an honest man and has a very good reputation, but I am not convinced that I want to give him a free hand. If we pass this Bill in haste and give a free hand to the Minister, we shall jeopardize the existence of provincial programs established under the jurisdiction of the provinces as defined by the Canadian Constitution. Mr. Speaker, as you know, you can be for the Constitution as you can be for virtue and motherhood. In this optic—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. I am sorry, but the ten minute period has expired.

The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead.

• (1800)

Mr. François Gérin (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Mr. Speaker, I would have preferred to spend these few minutes asking some questions to find out whether my colleague for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) speaks the truth or whether he is voluntarily trying to mislead the House by reading such things as a paper which he says comes from Quebec Agriculture Minister, when, to my knowledge, no paper has been released on this issue by the Quebec Minister. In my opinion, the document quoted by my colleague was prepared by somebody else and I believe that it is a trick more than anything else.

If my colleague for Shefford is basing his whole argument—

Mr. Lapierre: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I have the document here and I am willing to table it. The stationery is—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin).

Mr. Gérin: I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for disregarding the comment made by my hon. colleague, because the document which he has shown around and which was in fact never signed by the Quebec Minister of Agriculture but by an unknown departmental official, is clearly nothing more than a proposal. I suggest, therefore, that as such it is entirely worthless.

Under these circumstances, I am somewhat disappointed that the Committee members never had the opportunity to hear the Quebec Minister of Agriculture who could have enlightened them about the best solution for Quebec producers generally and Quebec hog producers in particular.

It is clearly a matter of . . . In Quebec, we have a stabilization program which is considered very good and which is the result of many years of effort on the part of the provincial government. It is a fact that several Quebec producers would like to see at the federal level, a stabilization program similar to the one they have at the provincial level. We must realize, however, that the proposed program will be national in scope and reflects a consensus if not of all, of a majority of provinces and producers. Last Thursday afternoon, the Minister moved in our Committee of Agriculture a major amendment which meets one of the two basic conditions insisted upon by Quebec producers generally and Quebec hog producers in particular.

As for the second condition, I would tell the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) that those are the very words of Mr. Scalabrini, president of the Quebec Federation of Pork Producers and of Mr. Proulx, president of the A.P.U. I consider that, therefore, as an excellent reference.

As for the second condition laid down by Quebec pork producers and farmers before they support the Bill, it was not stated as such in an amendment to the Bill. However, it was given through commitments made by the Minister according to which no stabilization plan will come into effect without a consensus being reached among producers. Such a consensus, of course, would not be reached unless pork producers in eastern Canada give their approval. If there is no tripartite plan on which to reach a consensus, there would simply be no stabilization plan. Only the present provincial plan would remain, but it seems to satisfy Quebec farmers. Under those circumstances, I should add that I would have like to use those ten minutes to put questions to my colleague and ask him to withdraw his comments about the report which was allegedly written by the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, because I made my own inquiries on the matter and the Quebec Minister of Agriculture and his officials have flatly denied having written any official paper on agricultural stabilization.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that it be duly noted and understood by all Hon. Members in this House that there is no statement by the Quebec Minister of Agriculture about that Bill and that we should trust the Quebec Conservative members and the Quebec farmers, who find the amendment moved by the Minister on Thursday afternoon satisfactory as far as one of the two conditions laid down by the farmers are concerned. With respect to the assurance made by the minister that no plan will be approved in the absence of a national consensus, I feel that Quebec farmers and more especially pork producers find it to their satisfaction.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to rise in this debate immediately following the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) and to tell him that I agree with just one of his points, namely that it is most unfortunate that the Quebec Minister of Agriculture was not invited to appear before the Standing Committee to discuss Bill C-25.

Mr. Gérin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) on a point of order.

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) is not justified in saying that for he did not attend the committee meeting, otherwise he would know that the Minister had been invited to appear.

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member just said he regrets that the Minister did not appear. I agree with him we should have heard evidence from the Quebec Minister of Justice because certainly the Minister, had he appeared, would have strongly opposed Bill C-25.

The amendment put forward by my colleague from the NDP should be supported by this House. I do not know what the Minister will decide on this amendment, but I feel he should accept it. It is very important in my view, and I would simply like to quote from an editorial written by Evelyne Dumas in La Terre de chez nous, which deals with the amendment introduced by the Hon. Member from the New Democratic Party. Evelyne Dumas had this to say:

> Ten years ago, Quebec farmers were getting income stabilization programs from their provincial Government.

—very important ones that have been and still are extremely worthwhile and useful to Quebec producers. Now, Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, may seriously hinder those provincial programs, and she said in her editorial that Quebec producers are asked to drop the substance for the shadow. Clearly this is what would happen, and this is what will happen if the Progressive Conservative Government persists in its attempt to push Bill C-25 through.

One of the aspects considered by Evelyne Dumas in her editorial is this:

> That shadow, a possible exclusive federal stabilization program of animal products, we know some of its aspects, however. We know for instance that payments that would be generated would be lower than those provided for under the provincial programs.

This is why, in her editorial, she says that the Quebec producers are being asked to give up a sure thing for an uncertain proposition. How can the Quebec producers be asked to give up a provincial program which is more generous than what the Progressive Conservative Government wants to offer them? The editorial continues:

> Other aspects remain more obscure, but what is known about it is a source of concern for the producers. For instance, there is every indication that the payments would be made only on the basis of product prices and not of production costs. In any case, nothing in the Bill requires that the production costs be taken into account. What is more, it does not contain the least requirement for the partners to consider the production cost variations from one region to the next. As far as pork is concerned, for instance, higher prices in Toronto and lower production costs in the Prairies will contribute to set up a national chart which will not take into account the actual situation in Quebec and, as a result, the compensations under the proposed federal system will be reduced to a minimum.

However, Mr. Speaker, the amendment proposed by my colleague of the New Democratic Party deals specifically with the need to take into account clearly and precisely the estimated production costs of farm products in a given region, and such an amendment is essential. If we want to have a fair program which will satisfy all producers in all regions of the country, the real costs in each region must be taken into account. I am surprised that the Government does not accept this amendment. I believe that it is essential if we really want to have a fair program.

During the few minutes left to me, I would like to come back to the comments of the Hon. Member for Megantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin), who criticized my colleague for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) for having referred to a working paper prepared by the Quebec Department of Agriculture. It is a fact that what my colleague from Shefford quoted was a working paper and not a letter duly signed and sent by the Minister to his federal counterpart, but this working paper, which has been made public, is quite revealing, and I would like to quote just a few words from it to show to what extent this so-called spirit of co-operation between the Governments of Canada and Quebec seems to have dissolved, at least as far as agriculture is concerned. The Quebec Minister of Agriculture had no need to send a letter to state publicly that, in his opinion, the federal Government and especially the Minister of Agriculture have not done a good job in the interests of Quebec pork producers, that he felt the Government of Canada could never solve the problem our hog producers are faced with because this Conservative administration seems unduly concerned about antagonizing the Reagan administration. Ever since it assumed power, this Conservative Government has repeatedly emphasized the need to develop and maintain good and friendly relations with the American President. That is fine and dandy, provided that they benefit Canadians in the long run. A good place to start could have been in respect of Quebec hog producers who have been wronged and completely deceived during the last election campaign by Conservative candidates with a promise of additional cheques. They are still waiting for these cheques from the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) who made this solemn promise to Quebec hog producers, and now the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) would like the House to rubber-stamp Bill C-25 with a total disregard for the objections raised by Quebec farm producers and their own interests.

The document which my colleague the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) referred to needs no comments. For instance: "In order to push through Bill C-25, the Government is bent on creating the impression that the continuation of provincial programs could mean a complete disaster for producers, and that failure to adopt this Bill now before the Summer recess could start a bloody war between the provinces". If we continue with our provincial programs—I conclude my remarks with this, Mr. Speaker—the next move the United States could make could be higher taxes, increased import quotas or even an embargo. That borders on blackmail, and I ask the Minister of Agriculture to show his good faith by delaying the adoption of this Bill in order to consult all interested parties. And if the Conservative Government wants to remain on friendly terms with the current Quebec Government, he should ask the Quebec Minister of Agriculture to appear before our committee and say what he really thinks of Bill C-25. Until then, I think that Quebec producers will suffer as a result of this Bill which will cause them irreparable damage.

[English]

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words about Bill C-25. I have a great deal of concern about the Bill and I must say that I will not be able to support it simply because regional costs are not taken into consideration.

I have with me a telegram that was sent to me by the Minister of Agriculture in the Province of Prince Edward Island, the Hon. Prowse Chappell. The subject of the telegram is the red meat stabilization Bill, Bill C-25. He indicates in the telegram that on June 6, 1985, his Department made a presentation to the Standing Committee on Agriculture regarding the Bill.

He stressed two points at that time of very vital interest to the Province of Prince Edward Island. First, potatoes which is the number one commodity in agriculture production in Prince Edward Island, should be included in the list of named commodities, thereby qualifying our most important commodity for mandatory support under the Stabilization Act.

• (1820)

The importance of potatoes to the Province of Prince Edward Island and the Province of New Brunswick, he goes on to say, would be compared to grains in western Canada, for which we all know separate legislation is in place under the Western Grain Stabilization Act. His second recommendation is that Bill C-25 be amended to permit the recognition of legitimate regional costs in national plans. Regional costs do not exist, and failure to address them on an equitable basis will frustrate—this is what the Minister is saying to me in a telegram—our common objectives, our harmonizing support programs. By way of amendment, P.E.I. has suggested the deletion of Section 8.10.1(3) and the addition of the following Section 8.10.14(A): agreement must specify and take into account regional production costs. That is signed by the Hon. P. Chappell, Minister of Agriculture, province of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Lapierre: He is not a Liberal.

Mr. Henderson: He is not a Liberal, no. But I want to get back to the regional costs. If you have a national program that does not take into consideration—and I hope the Minister is listening very carefully to this—

Mr. Wise: I am always listening.

Mr. Henderson: —the difference in cost of production of hogs, beef, whatever, but certainly hogs in the Province of Prince Edward Island, what use is it? In my province, Prince Edward Island, it costs probably $15 to $20 more to produce a hog than in the Province of Alberta. I see the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) shaking his head.

Mr. Wise: I am not agreeing with you. I am listening.

Mr. Henderson: He says he is not agreeing with me but he is listening. If the Minister is not agreeing with me, then he is not agreeing with the Minister of Agriculture in the Province of P.E.I. either.

Mr. Wise: That could be.

Mr. Henderson: Where is this so-called consultation which this Government has gone on about for so many months and the great harmony between the provinces and the federal Government? The Minister has to admit in this Chamber today that consultation is a one-way process as far as this Government is concerned.

An Hon. Member: Tory arrogance.

Mr. Henderson: It is a one-way process.

Mr. Wise: No.

Mr. Henderson: You are not listening to the Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Prince Edward Island. Therefore, the Minister of Agriculture is not listening to the farmers of P.E.I. or Atlantic Canada.

Let me give an indication of the excessive costs that we have to bear as farmers in Prince Edward Island. First, we have the extreme high cost of electricity. Hon. Members know very well one has to take into consideration electricity costs, transportation costs and feed grains. When one adds up those costs, my province finds it is impossible to compete with other parts of the country when it comes to hogs.

My province and the Government of Prince Edward Island, which is of a blue stripe, has tried to promote the agricultural industry to the point where I think it is crazy to go ahead with the kind of kill and chill plant it is considering. I think most farmers in my province will agree that it is too grandiose for the situation as it is today in Prince Edward Island. It is a legitimate Government and I might say the actions that have been carried on in the last while will not allow it to be the Government for very much longer.

Having said that, it is the Government, the legitimate Government of P.E.I. I am amazed, I am astounded, that the Minister of Agriculture is not listening to the Minister of Agriculture for the Province of P.E.I. Why would that happen? I can tell the Minister something else. Here is a telegram that I have received from Mr. Keith Russell, Executive Secretary, Maritime Farmers Council. It is dated June 24. It reads:

> Please be reminded that the National Red Meat Stabilization Plan will need to reflect regional variations in production costs in order to be useful to Maritime livestock producers.

I guess that says it all. If you were a hog farmer or a beef farmer in Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, then I think you would be very reluctant to get into a program that had as an average cost something far above the cost of your production. Too long have farmers in Canada been producing crops and selling them at below the cost of production.

Mr. King: That is right.

Mr. Henderson: This stabilization program which the Minister is talking about in Bill C-25 does nothing to alleviate that situation. In fact, as my hon. friend just mentioned, it stabilized poverty for those people in those areas. I am amazed my good friend, the Minister of Agriculture, would bring in a Bill at this time that would not reflect the realities of this great country of ours. There are areas where you can produce goods, farm produce at one price and there are areas where that costs more. It is unfortunate that we happen to live in an area in Atlantic Canada that is a little far removed from the mainstream of the population. We are geographically dislocated, if you will, from the market.

Mr. King: What about B.C.?

Mr. Henderson: Yes, B.C. At least B.C. stretches a little north and south, but B.C. as well. I agree with the Hon. Member for Okanagan-Similkameen (Mr. King). I know the great apples his agricultural community produce in B.C. Certainly I do not see anything in this Bill that would do anything for his apple crop.

Mr. Lapierre: Nothing.

Mr. King: That is not right.

Mr. Henderson: I cannot understand my friend. He says it is not right. I hope he will stand in his place and tell me why it is not right because I do not see anything in this Bill that says you are going to get one iota from Bill C-25.

The Minister has brought in a Bill to say that he has done something for the agricultural community of the country. I am afraid it is nothing but a sham. He is not taking into account regional costs and not taking into consideration potatoes, and he is eliminating a number of other situations when it comes to feed grains coming east. The economic statement in November and the Budget sort of alluded to the fact that some of these subsidies may well be dropped. Some of the great benefits that we enjoyed over the last number of years were beginning to erode. Unless the Minister starts to take a fresh view of this, then I think he should scrap this Bill right here today as far as I am concerned and as far as P.E.I. is concerned. He should bring in a Bill relevant for all of Canada and not just relevant to one or two provinces in the country.

Mr. Crosbie: That is nonsense, absolutely flap-doodle.

Mr. Fred McCain (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, agriculture has changed. It has changed on a world-wide basis and on a national basis, but particularly on a national basis. I am sure that my hon. friend from Prince Edward Island is quite aware that there have been pleadings in this Chamber and in committee meetings in the last 15 years that the Government should address the price stabilization programs which it was authorized to operate. The Government of the day refused to do it, and it continued to do that on a declining basis.

Historically, as long as there was meaningful price stabilization action on the part of the federal Government, massive bankruptcies were avoided in the farm sector. Rarely, if ever, did it contribute to profit, but it served as a "stop loss" operation. Those commodities which required price stabilization in a given year may have experienced a 1 per cent or 2 per cent reduction and may have been compelled, by virtue of the fact that there was no profit, to reduce their production. As a result of the nature of that program and without massive hardship, production of agricultural products in Canada was controlled to meet market demands. For most people agriculture was never a supply of wealth, but it supplied an average income for people who persisted in that sphere. Few became wealthy and, historically, few went broke.

However, when the concept of price stabilization was abandoned, we got into difficulty because the provinces of Canada entered the field. When they became involved in the maintenance of the agricultural industry province by province, they were not satisfied with that. Instead, they not only tried to maintain the production of individual commodities, but tried to expand them. That is understandable. Thus we have within this nation a quarrel among the provinces as to who will produce what and how much.

This is the first piece of legislation which has given Agriculture Canada, provincial Ministers of Agriculture and farmers an opportunity to sit around a table and judge for themselves what is in the best interests of various commodities in the long term and how they can find the stable position of production with assured income so that they can continue to farm. If we continue in the interprovincial battle, there is no question that agriculture would be totally dislocated, that geography, climate and soil capability would be ignored, that we would be producing products in some parts of Canada which were never intended to be produced there by nature, and that man would spend a fortune in an effort to produce what nature did not plan. That is with what we are faced.

The first real breakdown in the refusal of the Liberal Party as a Government to come to the aid of agriculture was when the cattle industry asked for a price stabilization program. The initial estimated cost of that program, just as a break even deal, was $300 million. It was rejected out of hand by the Liberal Government of that day. Since that point in time, the red meat industry has been in difficulty and provinces have been competing with one another, using farmers as their tools.

I say to the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) that basically the requests of Atlantic Ministers of Agriculture have been recognized. There is now judgmental opportunity in the hands of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) to consider provincial differences. However, what is more important is the piece of legislation which is in the hands of the Minister of Agriculture. It can properly start negotiations with the producers and the Ministers of Agriculture of all provinces, regardless of their political stripe. The consultative process which this puts in place gives some opportunity for avoiding war between the provinces and disparate conditions for individual farmers and their individual products.

For instance, I refer to the case of apples. The trade picture is not as it was. Trade agreements have been made which allow subsidized products to come into Canada to the detriment of the farming community. Whether it be apples or apple processed products, whether it be red meat, whether it be grapes, wine and wine products, they are coming into Canada on a free access basis, without constraint, as a result of utterly and totally ridiculous international trade agreements which were made against the advice of organized agriculture in Canada for the last 25 years. The policy of the Government of Canada has been: Let us trade off agriculture trading opportunities and let us build the manufacturing industry of Canada. As a result, the Canadian market has been glutted with imported food and we have a $10 billion to $15 billion trade deficit in manufactured products. We lost at both ends of the scale.

The international production figure has changed. No statistic was presented to the committee, as it considered this Bill, which emphasized that any more than the following facts. Fifteen years ago Canada was trading apples and exporting as many as it was receiving. Perhaps in most years it exported more than it imported. Today we are importing many more than we are exporting because of bad trade agreements and because of increased production which is subsidized in such places as the Pacific Rim by the Governments of those areas which no longer need our apples.

The potato industry finds itself in the same position. It is constrained by artificial barriers to trade, as the Hon. Member for Egmont well knows. We find ourselves, commodity by commodity, in a position which is uncomfortable and one which can only be addressed by consultation. We cannot continue any longer without joining forces in Canada on a non-competitive basis, with an urge for a province to own a product and its production.

I have particular fear for Atlantic Canada because it does not have the money to compete with the other provinces. Agriculture will suffer more than it can stand under those circumstances. I believe that the Ministers of Agriculture of Atlantic Canada are not totally satisfied, nor are they totally satisfied in Alberta or Ontario. This piece of legislation does not particularly fit the plan or wish of provinces, but it sets up a framework under which they can all sit around the table to discuss it, something which could never be accomplished before.

I can speak for the Province of New Brunswick and its hog industry because I have consulted with them. The magnitude of the changes to this Act versus the way in which it was introduced does not totally please them. It does not totally please the Hon. Prowse Chappell or the Hon. Malcolm MacLeod. However, it is a compromise with which they can live and which will serve Canadian agriculture better than any other solution which I have heard proposed in my lifetime in this House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Hamelin): The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell has the floor.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, thank you very much for your admirable introduction.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment briefly on the amendment presented by the Member of the New Democratic Party and perhaps take advantage of this opportunity to speak to the Bill in a more general way.

Mr. Speaker, the riding I represent in Ontario is in a region that differs somewhat from other regions across the country, and I am sure that every Member in this House feels the same about his riding or region, which I think is quite normal and quite human.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to elaborate on this issue of regional differences. As you know yourself, Mr. Speaker, since you represent a riding about 100 miles from my own, which is pretty close, the situation in agriculture in Eastern Ontario is not only rather different from the rest of the country but also differs from the rest of the province, and perhaps I should explain. For instance, hog producers in my riding sell their products on the Quebec market, and their production costs are similar to those of Quebec producers. As you know, Mr. Speaker, Quebec is across the fence, as it were, from my riding, since my riding is on the Quebec border, so that producers in the region I represent are quite a distance from Southwestern Ontario, for instance, which grows most of the feed grains for hogs and where feed prices are much lower than in my riding and in Quebec. However, the region I represent does not benefit from the various provincial programs existing in Quebec, which is quite normal because we are in Ontario. So we see the people in my riding, with a market, prices production costs similar to those in Quebec, being offered the very marginal profits available in the province of Ontario. This means that a region like mine can be at a great disadvantage if regional differences in production costs are not considered. In my view, when we are talking about regional differences in production costs—and I do not mean provincial, although in this context, regional is often used to mean provincial—if the region I represent is not accommodated in some particular way within the Province of Ontario, we will again find ourselves at a definite disadvantage, similar to the situation in the Gaspé as compared with the rest of Quebec. So this is a phenomenon we find in certain regions in the outer reaches, as it were, of certain provinces. That is why there must be a mechanism to allow for differences in production costs, as I said earlier, but this mechanism does not necessarily have to apply strictly throughout a particular province. I think there is a case for designating certain regions within provinces, in order to allow for certain situations as is already being done through a number of joint programs on the Ontario side, for instance, where we have the Eastern Ontario Development Corporation which helps farmers make drainage improvements priced at a rate that differs from the going rate in Southeastern Ontario because there are special reasons for doing so. They are providing certain benefits for this disadvantaged region, and my point is that it has created a precedent for doing the same thing in other areas in agriculture and also in other sectors in industry, for instance. What we should do, as I mentioned to the Minister in committee and to his Parliamentary Secretary who is here in the House today, is to accommodate these regions in some way so that producers are not at a disadvantage. One of the problems, and the Minister is probably aware of this, is that it is very difficult to find out what advantages do exist in certain regions, although it may be easy in some cases.

[English]

For instance, if we are discussing top loading programs, it is fairly easy to identify where they exist and where they do not. On the other hand, if some regions offer other programs such as bottom loading and side loading programs and so forth, they are sometimes quite a bit harder to identify. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why such programs have not been as open to countervailing as others and have not been seen as having so many advantages or disadvantages.

I will give you an instance, Mr. Speaker. In the Province of Ontario, rural hydro rates are roughly 20 per cent to 25 per cent higher than urban rates. That is not the case in every Canadian province. If in a province the rural rates and the urban rates for electricity are the same, some people will argue that it costs more to service a rural area. Is that rural area then deemed to have received a subsidy on its electricity, for instance? I would argue not. I would argue that right now farmers of Ontario, through past provincial Conservative Governments, have suffered immensely because of this hydro policy. I see that the Minister is agreeing that the rural hydro rates in Ontario should be equal to the urban rates. I am glad to see that he is agreeing with that. I am sure that the new Liberal Government in Ontario will take note of that approval and hopefully will correct the shortcomings of the previous Tory Government very shortly.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) will recognize in the way that I have explained it, I hope, that it is difficult to determine which areas receive other advantages. It is difficult in some cases to determine the cost of production because not every province at the present time uses the same formula to determine it. It is a difficult proposition and everyone recognizes that. I am sure the Minister does. Nevertheless, the farmers that I represent in the existing situation, where they are losing money every day that they operate, in comparison with others in other parts of Ontario, need to have a mechanism by which their regional differences are accommodated.

One member on the Standing Committee of Agriculture said that is fine. What if somebody wants to start a pork production industry in a totally remote area? Are we then going to accommodate with special subsidies that very remote area which has not been producing before? I recognize that that could potentially be a problem.

However, the area that I represent has been producing pork for some time. Therefore, the problem is not that the area is remote, or new in terms of having that production. The Minister will recognize that the problem is that when times were good our farmers were making less money than others, but they were still making a profit. Now that times are more difficult, other farmers in certain areas are either making just a little bit of money or losing just a little bit and ours, with the disadvantage that is there, are losing even more. That is what puts the farmers of the area that I represent at a disadvantage, and that must be recognized and corrected in any legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on Bill C-25, and of course on the amendment presented by the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker, I shall, if I may—and I think I should, at this stage—digress somewhat and try to put this debate into context. I think we should recall that a month from now, we will be celebrating the first anniversary of the start of the election campaign. At the time, Hon. Members opposite were travelling around the rural ridings, meeting farmers and promising them security, stability and a good future in agriculture.

Admittedly such a commitment may at first have appeared quite challenging and quite attractive. I can therefore understand why a good many agricultural ridings voted for the Conservative candidates, sincerely believing as they did that a new Government would advocate measures and programs designed to stabilize and make more secure such a vital and strategic sector of the Quebec economy as agriculture. That same Government kept repeating during the last few weeks before the election: We are firmly committed to consult all interested parties, we are firmly committed to co-operate with all provincial Governments. Those were very challenging commitments, a sort of preview of what the very important agricultural sector might become.

Shortly after the election the Government introduced Bill C-25. In my opinion, the amendment of our colleague has to do with one of the most important aspects of this Bill. Before the committee and the commission there was a lot of talk about the major obstacles and barriers with respect to diversity, disparities and the fact that the same kind of production cost a lot more in the east than in the west. That is indeed one of the aspects of this Bill which has been the subject of many comments and strong opposition. As to the Minister, he tried to use a problem which is also very important to Quebec, namely the current instability of pork production.

If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote the Minister of Agriculture who I should think is a very reliable spokesman for Quebec's agricultural community. Referring to the attitude of the Government concerning the pork issue, he said that the federal Minister had used this threat—obviously the American approach to this matter—had used this threat to sell a controversial red meat stabilization Bill instead of defending the interests of pork producers. He—still referring to our Minister of Agriculture—used the American threat to defend his own Bill. So the Minister concluded that there is a conflict of interests.

Not long before he said that, Mr. Speaker, the same Minister of Agriculture of Quebec had stated—and this can be readily understood—that the Government had been less enthusiastic in defending the interests of Quebec pork producers faced with the American surtax.

Quebec Agriculture Minister Garon pointed out that this case had been very badly defended by the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) and by the Minister of Agriculture. Naturally this is a current problem which is of major importance to the Quebec producers, so the Minister took that as an example to try to make us believe that with a stabilization measure such as Bill C-25 there would be no more problems with the American administration. Indeed the same Minister said in committee that he had consulted the Americans and discussed with them to try to anticipate what might be their reaction should Bill C-25 be adopted. I find it amazing and quite unacceptable that the Minister of Agriculture of Canada would rather listen to our friends to the south, the Americans, instead of taking the advice of every single APU farmer, an organization which happens to be the main spokesman under these circumstances. The Minister of Agriculture is trying to push through a Bill which is clearly and totally unfair to the Quebec agricultural community, unfair for a number of reasons.

First, everyone is aware of the fact that Quebec has stabilization programs which have been developed, put together, amended and improved throughout the years, to such an extent that Quebec ahas had in recent years good and even excellent stabilization programs which have provided some stability and security to the producers who make use of them.

Bill C-25 expressly and clearly states that, to join the program, it is absolutely essential to forget or to put aside the provincial program. This is completely unacceptable. It seems to me that this Bill could have provided something really interesting, positive and with great potential. If the Government had introduced substantially the same measure while allowing the provinces to keep their own stabilization programs, if the measure had explained how production costs would be taken into account, if, as my colleague from the New Democratic Party would like, some allowance had been made for the diversity which typifies Canada, I believe that we would have had a very acceptable Bill, for the greatest good of agriculture. However, the Minister seems adamant in wanting to have this Bill passed when we know that it constitutes an absolutely fundamental obstacle to agricultural choices in Quebec for many production sectors, such as pork, and to accept and endorse or support this Bill would be an incredible affront to the Quebec farming community. Mr. Speaker, agriculture comes under federal jurisdiction, but no one would dare to suggest that it is exclusively so. The provincial Government shares jurisdiction in this area, and in my opinion, if we want to respect this sharing of jurisdiction, we must recognize the possibility of also having provincial stabilization programs.

Obviously, because of its climate, of its differences as far as certain productions are concerned, Quebec must face substantially higher costs than our Western friends, and I believe that to give a uniform price or to contemplate or hope for uniformity is to discriminate clearly against our producers.

Mr. Speaker, the Quebec producers, of whom many came to meet us and who, I know, have met many of our friends opposite, strongly object to this Bill because it jeopardizes many sectors of the agricultural industry in Quebec. At a time when we need jobs and security so badly, when we need this economic sector to be the most prosperous in the world, we have to support Quebec producers in their requests that they be entitled to a minimum. Everyone recognizes that the purpose of this Bill is not to stabilize income, but rather to stabilize prices, and in this regard, as Canadians, we have naturally a duty to allow uniformity, but only if we take into account individual characteristics which are extremely numerous in the agricultural industry. If the Government was honest and sincere when expounding its desire to operate in an atmosphere of openness, communication and consultation, it can certainly not ignore the consensus surrounding this Bill in Quebec and must take into account what all the members of the farming community want, namely adjustments which will allow them to keep their own stabilization programs, and this for the greatest good of agriculture.

[English]

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to Bill C-25. Like my colleagues who spoke previously, I must say that I have some grave reservations about the content and, indeed, some of the omissions from Bill C-25. I don't like to use the word "errors" but certainly there are some omissions.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) is aware of what the Government of Prince Edward Island has said about the inclusion of potatoes in Clause 1(1)(a). I hope that the Minister will act on his comments forthwith. The Government of Prince Edward Island also went on to talk abouit other sections in the Bill which we find very disturbing, particularly as they affect those farmers who reside and operate in Atlantic Canada.

I am also in receipt of a telegram from the Maritime Farmers Council which expresses grave concern about the lack of content in Bill C-25. In addition, the Federation of Agriculture in Nova Scotia has expressed some deep concerns which I believe are justified. It believes it is imperative, on behalf of the pork producers in Nova Scotia, that Hon. Members oppose the Bill in its present form because it does not allow for regional cost of production or the continuation of its provincial hog stabilization program.

I know the Minister has attempted to embark on a consultative process and that has gone on all across the country with various interest groups. I want to convey to the Minister with sincerity and frankness that the farmers in the Maritime provinces are particularly concerned. There is not very much Clause 8, Section 10.1(3), to protect the livelihood of those farmers in the Maritimes. I think that is an omission. If it is an error, the Minister has the opportunity to right this wrong, but I believe it is an omission which has to be corrected.

It is my belief that the evidence which was given before the Standing Committee on Agriculture by the Maritime Farmers Council clearly indicates it would be supportive of the Bill, but it has a number of caveats which I believe are legitimate. I don't believe it is being partisan. I think it is speaking with the united voice of farmers in the Maritime provinces. I believe Hon. Members of Parliament on all sides of the House should concede to its requests.

The Council has said it is prepared to participate in such a program as outlined in Bill C-25 provided that the program adequately reflects the variation in the cost of production among the various regions of Canada so that its net benefits will be equalized among livestock producers all across the country. That is pretty fair and reasonable. That is something which emanates from the Charter and the new Constitution when we talk about equal opportunity. I know Hon. Members opposite may laugh at that, but it is a pretty serious issue to the Maritime farmers.

I want to say to the Minister that the major factor in calculating the cost of production in the livestock enterprise is the cost of feed. In the Maritime provinces this is particularly evident in the cost of production of pork because hogs are fed on grains and protein concentrates. The Maritimes only produces 42 per cent of our feed grain requirements and less than 5 per cent of our vegetable protein concentrates. The rest is imported from western and central Canada.

The Minister has a proposal before him which is supported by the Maritime Farmers Council and all of its organizations. It is supported by the provincial Governments of those provinces. It has tremendous support among the rank and file who are united in their particular cause, a feed cost self-sufficiency program.

I do not want to charge that the consultation process on which the Minister has embarked is a fraud. I don't want to say that, and I don't want to believe it. I would hope that the consultative process would result in meaningful changes to the legislation. But we do not see any changes, even with respect to potatoes, and that was a recommendation made by the Government of Prince Edward Island. We know what the Maritime Farmers Council is proposing. But the Minister has not acted on it. He can tell us he is going to study it, he is going to review it, but how long does the Minister need? Does he need another two years or 24 months? The Minister says he needs that much time. But he has been telling the farmers in the Maritimes that since the time the Conservatives took office.

The issue is a very serious one, Mr. Speaker. Fifty per cent of those individuals involved are on the verge of losing great sums of money as well as jobs, and all we get from this Minister is a promise that it is going to happen tomorrow or the day after, but nothing gets done. That is totally unacceptable. The Act is totally unacceptable because it does not contain the safeguards which we in the Maritime provinces want.

I heard the Hon. Member from New Brunswick speak very eloquently about this being a good first step. But that is not enough. If the Government can bail out the multinational oil companies to the tune of $1.3 billion, and if it can give $300 million of the taxpayers' money for capital gains—$600 million next year and over $1 billion in 1990—surely to God the Minister would have the courage of his convictions, and the support of his cabinet colleagues, to stand in his place tonight and announce a new program which will provide feed self-sufficiency in the Maritime provinces. But all we get from this Minister is promises, promises, promises.

Mr. Crosbie: Louder.

Mr. Dingwall: We get absolutely nothing, Mr. Speaker. It was worse when the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie) was in the chair of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). We received far less. But I don't know how much more we in the Maritime provinces can take with this Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker. It is not fair or equitable and it is not in the best interests of our region. But I'm not surprised. I am saddened, Mr. Speaker, to see so many Hon. Members of Parliament who attended the meetings of the Maritime Farmers Council and agreed with what was said, when it comes time to vote not voting in accordance with the proposals they are advocating. I find it utterly shameful that this legislation has so many omissions which will affect Maritime farmers in such a devastating way.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is on the motion standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

When shall the Bill read the third time? At the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Might I intrude on the House at this time? The Standing Committee on Transport has concluded its deliberations with respect to the Western Grain Transportation Act amendments. We are very grateful for the hard work of Members from all Parties in this regard.

I have had consultations with Opposition House Leaders with respect to reverting to the presentation of reports at this stage so that the report of that committee could be tabled tonight and Members would have the benefit of it over the course of the evening.

It seems that I have the consent of the NDP to proceed in this fashion and I would ask the House Leader of the Official Opposition whether he is prepared to give that unanimous consent, in the interest of Members of the House of Commons, so that this report could be tabled at this time, and we may in fact proceed with debate on that matter at the earliest possible date—even tomorrow.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I know that there is a great deal of interest in this matter. I think it is for that reason that we should proceed in a calm, deliberate fashion and have the report tabled as provided for by the rules.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move forward with Bill C-49, an Act to amend the Criminal Code with respect to prostitution.

CRIMINAL CODE

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-49, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (prostitution), be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is an unexpected pleasure to have this opportunity to introduce this Bill here tonight. However, I know that sitting opposite we have many people who are familiar with this subject.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: I have no doubt that it is a subject with which they will find themselves busily engaged in the next few hours.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: You are the only John in the House.

Mr. Crosbie: The last time I had much to say in the House it had to do with brothers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order. In the interest of the House, it being nine o'clock p.m., this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 9 p.m.

DISPOSITION OF BILL C-53

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, we have had consultations with respect to the agenda for today. The first item of business would be Bill C-53, the legislation relating to the Northern Transportation Company Limited. You will understand that under the rules, report stage of the Bill coming from committee normally requires 48 hours' notice on the Order Paper. However, I think you will find there is unanimous consent to let that Bill proceed at this time, notwithstanding the fact that we are some minutes short of the 48-hour requirement. We would then proceed with report stage and on to third reading.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I was consulting with a colleague here, so I would ask the Government House Leader to repeat his last few sentences. I think the idea is to start with the Northern Transportation Company Bill but I would like him to repeat the comments he made after that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, just to summarize what I said, given unanimous consent we will proceed to report stage of Bill C-53 at this time. Once that is concluded I think there would be a disposition to move directly to third reading of that Bill. That is all I indicated.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we are always willing to co-operate when there is a good basis for doing so. With respect to Bill C-53, we are certainly ready to give our consent.

Mr. Speaker: There is consent.

NORTHERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY LIMITED DISPOSAL AUTHORIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-53, an Act to authorize the disposal of the Northern Transportation Company Limited and the forgiveness of its debt to Her Majesty and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Speaker: There are four motions on Bill C-53 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I have had the opportunity to examine the motions and they all appear to be procedurally in order. Therefore, Motions Nos. 1 and 3 will be debated and voted on separately. Motions Nos. 2 and 4 will be grouped for debate. A vote on Motion No. 2 will also apply to Motion No. 4.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, regarding the grouping of Motions Nos. 2 and 4, Motion No. 2 applies after the fact, after the sale is completed. Motion No. 4 applies prior to that. They are similar in terminology, but each applies in an entirely different situation. I am not arguing about it.

Mr. Speaker: We grouped them because in both cases the amendments indicate that the intention is to require publication in the Canada Gazette. Therefore, they seem to be the same thing and the assumption is that it would be desirable. If it is not, we assume it would not be in the second case, and the same vote would apply to the second motion as the principle behind the two motions is the same.

Mr. Benjamin: I agree that they should be debated together, but since they are two entirely different situations there may be a mood to accept one and not the other. Because they are entirely different situations, perhaps there should be separate votes.

Mr. Speaker: The principle of grouping for debate was important, but if Members would prefer separate votes, that is a simple matter. The two matters will be grouped for debate but voted on separately.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-53, be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 17 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"the Minister in trust for Her Majesty, to the Inuvialuit Development Corporation and Nunasi Corporation".

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment, on which I found a large degree of agreement from the Government and the Minister, is to specify in the legislation to whom the Northern Transportation Company Limited is being sold, if for no other reason than to ensure that no one else moves in at the eleventh hour and fouls up the deal. We are in agreement with the legislation only because the company is being sold to the peoples of the North, more particularly, the Inuit. We want that specified in the legislation. Until this Bill passes the two Inuit organizations and the Minister cannot sign the agreement for sale. That is the reason we want the legislation amended in this way. There have been discussions between both sides of the House on the issue.

In the event that something happened at the eleventh hour to cause the deal to fall through, another examination of the sale would have to be made by the Government. When the Government seeks to sell a Crown corporation, to which we are generally opposed on principle but not in this specific instance, Parliament should act only to sell to specific persons, corporations, companies or organizations. I believe the Minister agrees with this principle. I think he agrees that it fits in with the principle of the legislation since he announced publicly and told us in committee that the purpose of this legislation is to make it possible to meet the terms and conditions of the sale and to sign the agreement of sale.

I believe you will find, Mr. Speaker, that there is a mood in the House to accept this amendment. The Minister has told the committee that he certainly has no problem with it.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak to this amendment, I simply want to reiterate the approval that our Party gave to it during the course of the committee hearings. I would remind Members of the House that in the major reform of the Crown Corporations Bill that our Government brought in a year ago, one of the primary objectives was to ensure that there would be parliamentary scrutiny of any sale or disposition of a Crown corporation in order to maintain accountability and a sense of review and assessment about specific proposals made by a Government.

We established that principle on the grounds that this would ensure that Crown corporations were not sold without public interest being properly defended or recognized. Had the original measures in the present Bill been allowed to go through without such an amendment, the Government could essentially short circuit that principle because it would have the right to sell to anyone it chose rather than designating a particular buyer.

When I was the Minister of Transport we had very specifically put forward the idea, as a terms of reference of sale, that it should be sold to native Canadians, particularly in northern Canada. The whole purpose of putting the Northern Transportation Company Limited up for sale was to provide an incentive for economic development and economic self-sufficiency on behalf of native people. That was part of the basic criteria by which any sale would be measured.

If there is no specific enunciation as to who the purchaser would be—as provided in the original Bill—theoretically the vendor, the Government of Canada in this case, would have the right simply to cancel the proposed deal with the two native organizations and sell, as it previously intended, to Northern Industrial Carriers, which had no native participation at all. I am not saying that we mistrust it, but it is very important in this case to establish the precedent by which we deal with the sale of Crown corporations.

Who knows, some day the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), may get around to selling some of those Crown corporations that he promised to sell six months ago. Therefore, it is a very important principle that any Bill dealing with the sale of a Crown corporation should in fact enunciate and specify who is the purchaser and at least what kind of criteria will be established to determine who the purchaser will be.

I suggest it makes good sense for the Bill to provide for the specifics of who the purchase is limited to, and we strongly endorse the notion that this amendment be adopted at this point in time. We think it would not only make the intention of the Government much more clear-cut and entrenched in the statutes, it would also establish an important precedent for future sales of Crown corporations.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I should correct the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). He said that it was the intention of the Minister at some point in time to sell Northern Transportation Company Limited to Northern Industrial Carriers with no northern or native participation. That is the very reason why that deal fell through, because NIC could not get that participation. It was never the intention of the Government to sell NTCL without northern native participation in the ownership. Therefore, that remark is not quite true.

I want to speak against what I see as an unnecessary restriction being imposed on the Minister, were this amendment to carry. We should note that all these amendments were dealt with in committee, turned down in the committee, and have since reappeared on the Order Paper.

The intention of the Bill at second reading was that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) should have authority to sell NTCL without putting any restriction as to whom it should be sold to. That was the principle of the Bill as passed on second reading.

Certainly, it was the case that we were told by the Minister that he has a deal, with the Inuvialuit Development Corporation-Nunasi ready to proceed and it just needed a few "i's" dotted and some "t's" crossed. It is his every intention to sell it to that particular consortium. I think it would be unnecessary to bind the hands of the Minister just because something might happen at the last stage. The supposed purchasers might at the very last minute back out of the deal and then the Government would want to be free, and I would want to see the Government free, to make some other kind of deals without waiting until next September, October or November when a similar Act can again be brought before Parliament.

We were advised by the Minister that these ongoing negotiations between the Inuvialuit Development Corporation, Nunasi and other organizations, other firms, that were interested in participating in the ownership of NTCL, the Denendeh Development Corporation for one. There is a reasonable chance that some agreement might be made in the last few days where, for example, the Denendeh Development Corporation might be brought in as a partner in the sales agreement. Were we to adopt this recommendation, it would prevent that from happening.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) himself when he spoke at second reading debate said it would be a good idea if we could broaden the ownership of NTCL after it is privatized into the whole of the service area instead of just part of the service area where ownership is now to reside, unless other arrangements are made.

It is my contention, Mr. Speaker, that we ought to reject this proposed amendment. In so doing, we would enable the Minister of Transport to make the best possible deals for all concerned.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Would the Hon. Member permit a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That cannot be done unless there is unanimous consent of the House. I gather the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is asking for unanimous consent to ask a question of the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson)?

Mr. Benjamin: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I just want to ask the Hon. Member whether it is not correct that once the sale is completed to the two Inuit organizations, they then become the sole owners and operators of the company with full control over its operations and assets. There is then absolutely nothing to prevent them, subsequent to taking over full ownership and operations of the company, from bringing in any new partners, such as one or more Dene organizations. This amendment in no way prevents that from happening. Once the agreement of sale has been signed by the Minister and the two Inuit organizations, there is nothing to prevent them from taking in one or more other organizations as partners and a certain share of the ownership of the company. Is that not right?

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, that would be my assumption. I have not seen the sales agreement, neither has the Hon. Member for Regina West nor anyone else except for the Minister of Transport. I do not know whether there are any restrictive covenants in that agreement. I would hope there are not, but there might be. That is why I cannot give a definitive answer.

Even if that is the case, it might very well be that you would not want to enter into that further agreement after the sale but, rather, would do so before the sale. There is a distinct possibility that that would happen, and if that is what people want, why should we, by accepting this amendment, stop that from happening?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) on debate.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think the Government has listened with interest to the proposed amendment. It is very clear that what the Member is looking for is an assurance, I think quite reasonably, on behalf of the native groups that would be involved that the outcome of the efforts to sell the Northern Transportation Company would be in the best interests of the area and of the native people there. I think Hon. Members understand his intention, but we can assure him by public press releases that this is clearly the intention of the Government.

• (1125)

Also, it has been made abundantly clear that in trying to tie the Bill in a very specific way, we may in fact limit its eventual positive outcome on behalf of native people and limit the efforts of the Government to dispose of this particular company in a proper manner. With full sympathy for the reasonable intentions of the Hon. Member, it is not possible for us to confine ourselves as suggested in his amendment, so we must refuse it.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I am particularly concerned about the statements of the Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I gather the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) is rising on a point of order, as he has already spoken on the motion. Or, is he seeking unanimous consent to speak again?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Axworthy: Basically I want to direct a question to the Parliamentary Secretary, because I presume he is speaking for the Government. The whole purpose of having Parliament consider a Bill authorizing the sale of a Crown corporation is to provide some certainty as to the conditions of sale, who is buying it and what kind of deal the Government has entered into. That was the intention under the Crown corporations legislation which was brought in last year. We felt that it was a very important matter of public policy. An organization is being taken out of the public sector and moved into the private sector. There has to be a rationale, especially when the criteria have been set. In this case it happens to be a preferred sale to native organizations in northern Canada. However, we are equally concerned about the precedent set by this Bill. For example, let us say for the sake of argument that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) comes in with a Bill to sell off de Havilland or Canadair and says that he will sell it to anybody. It could be Americans, Afghans or whoever, but the point is that he has been given carte blanche. If we allow this Bill to go through, I am concerned that we will have established a very dangerous precedent. If it is simply ministerial discretion, why bother with legislation? They should say that they do not want to have Parliament reviewing it. All we are saying is, simply, that there has to be something to review.

The Minister has indicated that he will sell this corporation to two native organizations. We take that on face value. If that is the case, what is wrong with having it in the legislation? Let us say the Bill is passed today. In that event the Minister could say tomorrow morning: "Oops, I'm sorry, I cannot make a deal with those two organizations. I am going to sell it to some firm in northern Ontario". Bingo, it is gone. I know the Minister would not do that because he is honest, a man of integrity. However, who knows? In Parliament we are not dealing in the area of tea and sympathy; we are dealing in the area of certainty.

The crux of the matter is that in a sense they are making a mockery of the process of bringing in legislation, if they are not prepared to say who will buy it. I think it is particularly important in this case. Members of the committee agreed with the Minister's concern that we should not try to pinpoint it because he had not as yet signed the deal. He said that he could not tell us how much would be paid for it or the conditions of the sale, that we had to take him at his word. That is okay, as long as we have some assurance as to who will buy it. Frankly, I do not know why the Government is objecting to an amendment which makes good sense in this particular case and is very important in terms of any future initiatives taken on the sale of Crown corporations.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I intervene in this debate only for the purpose of trying to provide some background perspective and to see whether I can address the matters and concerns which have been raised by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy).

This particular Bill received consideration on the floor of the House of Commons. It also had a fairly good hearing in committee. The Minister was able to answer questions and discuss the matter with both Hon. Members who act as transport critics for their respective Parties. As I understand it, this matter was discussed in committee and there were some procedural difficulties in presenting the amendment, but it has been presented on the floor of the House. That is an interesting observation in itself. However, the matter was discussed and I think the Hon. member for Regina West would be the first to acknowledge that.

The difficulty is that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), for good and valid reasons that are understood by all, is meeting with ICAO now with respect to matters of air flight security, very important issues. He is a parliamentarian who understands that his priority is to be in the House. However, as a result of this very tragic event, I think all of us understand his not being in the House today.

I address this from the point of view of what has transpired with respect to discussions. The point was debated backward and forward. According to my information, the discussion left off on the basis that while the Hon. Member for Regina West believed his amendment was a good one—and I think it is a good amendment, I am not taking issue with the merits of the case—after discussion with the Minister of Transport the impression was left that the Hon. Member, although somewhat reluctant, was satisfied with this matter not going ahead, not being put in the Bill.

Mr. Benjamin: There was a recorded vote in committee last night.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Yes, but I understood there had been discussions. I simply want to get this clarified. I understood, and even went to the extent of indicating it to the Minister, that this particular motion would not be moved today. I simply rise for the purpose of explaining our reason for opposing it. We had understood that there had been a clear discussion about the matter and that the Minister had indicated quite clearly and unequivocally his preference against this amendment going forward. I am sure there will be, as the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry pointed out, full consultation with Hon. Members with respect to this isolated sale transaction so that there will be full disclosure of the matter which will be done to the satisfaction, not only of the people involved in the area, but also of the opposition Parties.

I do not want this, especially in these last days of June, to develop into a recorded division. I had hoped that we could have this matter go to a voice vote, and I am sure that in the fine tradition of the Minister of Transport, who has shown himself to be straightforward, honest and forthcoming, he will in fact, on his return, engage in discussions with the Hon. Members who are the critics for their Parties to make sure that their concerns in this area are adequately addressed.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy)—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I just point out to the Hon. Member that he has already spoken on the motion and it would require unanimous consent for him to speak again.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gurbin: My understanding, Mr. Speaker, was that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry had unanimous consent to ask a question, to which I am trying to respond directly. In so far as the precedent is concerned, I think he raises an important aspect, and I can understand where he is coming from and why he would be concerned about that. There is a reasonable argument and reasonable logic in suggesting, particularly in this case, that in fact no precedent at all is being set, or if there is, it is a good precedent. There has been a press release and an open discussion has occurred. The Minister has described the clear intention of the Bill in the press release, with good arguments for not wanting to tie as had been made by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), that this in fact has not created a dangerous precedent, that there is full sympathy for the kind of disclosure and clear understanding of any disposal of Crown corporations intended by the Crown Corporations Act. This Bill has demonstrated that we clearly intend to try to give the kind of confidence and assurance and openness that the Member speaks of, and that we have in no way denied that by not accepting this particular amendment for the good reasons that have been established. There is sympathy for the point, but I clearly do not accept the arguments that have been made that we are denying what was originally intended or creating dangerous precedents.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next motion is Motion No. 3, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), which will be debated and voted on separately.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-53, be amended in Clause 4 by striking out line 19 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"Governor in Council, so long as fair value is received."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I guess you could call Motion No. 3 a private enterprise type of motion. It would ensure that the present owners, namely the people of Canada, get value for what they own. Fair value is a common business term and I am sure my colleagues in the Conservative and Liberal Parties know that. Lawyers always use the term "reasonable man" and everyone seems to know what that means, and the term "consideration" refers to getting some money or other value in exchange for something. The term "fair value" simply means what it says. We get what it is worth.

I am sure, I am hoping and I am reasonably confident that the Government would want to get fair value and would work at getting that unless it does not believe in fair value for anything that the Crown owns and is selling. If it believes that, that is a double standard. It might believe that fair value was fine in the private sector but if it is something the Crown is selling, fair value is not okay. Surely no one, and particularly no member of the Conservative Party, would believe that.

Since this is the first sale of a Crown corporation requiring legislation in this Parliament, it seems to me that we should not allow this legislation as it is presently worded to be a model for the sale of other Crown corporations or government assets of any other kind. That is the reason I moved the first amendment and Motion No. 3. I did that because the Bill is so vague that it could serve as a model for the sale of any or all Crown corporations and assets simply by changing the names. Surely we do not want the legislation to be so loose that any Minister could use it. It is not very likely that the Minister of Transport would use it, but I cannot say the same thing about some of the other Ministers. However, any Minister can do almost anything he wants regarding the disposition of Crown corporations or other Crown assets using this legislation.

I think that this Bill as it is presently worded sets a bad precedent. That is why I said at the outset that I had very mixed feelings about it. We are going along with it in this specific instance only because the corporation is being sold to people of the North. If it were not, then as a matter of general principle we would be opposing it right down the line and the Government sure as hell would not get the Bill through by the end of this month. Because it is an exceptional case, we are prepared to agree to it. However, if the Government insists on keeping the Bill as vague as it is now, then it will have a problem.

I hope that no one in this House will disagree with the proposition that the taxpayers who are the owners of the corporation should get fair value for what they own. I would hope that this amendment will meet with the approval of the Government. I hope members will not want to get involved in a long series of rabbit trails regarding the definition of fair value. That would be totally unproductive; it would probably be counterproductive. Fair value in the context of what is reasonable is arrived at by agreement and it ends up in an agreement for sale. What is wrong with putting, in the legislation that allows the Minister to proceed with the sale, the definition of fair value for those assets? If, as and when we are faced with such legislation in the months ahead, I hope that this Bill will not be used as a model for the sale of other Crown corporations or Crown assets.

I hope that my colleagues on all sides would agree that this is a reasonable proposal and that it fits in with the tenets of private enterprise. This agreement is one between the Crown and two native organizations which belong to the private sector, so surely the same principles that apply to the private sector should apply here. I am hoping that this amendment will find acceptance from Members on all sides of the House.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, again the Hon. Member has demonstrated a reasonable attitude. There is no question that we would want to have any sale conducted in a reasonable way and for a fair market price. I believe that this Government would have that perspective as opposed to a great many other Governments, both in the purchase and the sale of corporations.

A fair price is inherent in the entire proposition. It is unnecessary additional wording. It is something that is implicit in the intention of the Government when it deals with this sale in a fair and reasonable way on behalf of both the purchasers and the taxpayers of Canada. We find no reason to support this amendment.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, as we proceed with the debate this morning, I am reminded of the comment that was made by Alice in Wonderland who said that the world is getting curiouser and curiouser. Every time the Parliamentary Secretary rises to shed the sweet light of reasonableness on this Bill, he compounds the problem and raises even more apprehension than existed before.

It is beginning to sound as though the Government were saying that we are supposed to operate through some kind of good cheer and that we are supposed to take the Government as being implicitly trustworthy. It seems to me that that flies in the face of some thousands of years of parliamentary tradition, a tradition which indicates that it is important to put things in law so that we do not rely upon the whims and caprices of individual Governments and individual Ministers. The whole purpose of spending innumerable hours in this Chamber and in committee trying to put the proper words together is so that we will have some continuity in the future.

I would like to give the Parliamentary Secretary and other members of his caucus a little history lesson. The sale of the Northern Transportation Company Limited was initiated by our Government in 1983.

Mr. Crombie: Without insisting on northern participation.

Mr. Axworthy: No, that is absolutely wrong. The Minister does not know what he is talking about. That was clearly in the criteria. The Minister is being silly again and he should know better. I challenge him to change the record.

The criterion we established was that the sale of this particular Crown corporation was justified on the grounds that it would provide new economic opportunities for native people. Even more important than that, we felt that because of the new Crown corporation legislation we passed, it was very important that this be the first sale that would take place under those rules. We felt that it would be a Bill that would establish the guidelines and precedents that other sales would follow.

Frankly, the Government has really screwed this legislation up. It has not treated it as an important guidepost for future sales but has treated it in an ad hoc, sloppy manner without giving it the kind of attention it deserves. Now the Parliamentary Secretary is saying that it is okay because they are good guys and we should take them at their word.

There are some questions related to this sale. There is an outstanding liability to the Crown of some $24.5 million. We have to know if those liabilities will be recovered and if there will be some return made upon them. We do not know that. In committee, the Minister told us that he could not say what the exact sale price would be because he had not finished his negotiations. There is a certain quandary that faces any sale of a Crown corporation, and that is, that we need the legislation before the sale can be made but Parliament cannot be told about the full details of the sale until it is finalized. It is a dilemma. I would have thought that Cabinet would have spent some time trying to figure out how it could be done in a proper manner, as we are now getting into far more complicated sales.

Earlier, I used the examples of de Havilland and Canadair. I would like now to use the example of Teleglobe. It is a major money-making corporation. It had a profit of approximately $70 million last year. However, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said that he would like to sell that corporation. At the same time, the Minister is trying to put deals together which would give foreign buyers a profitable company if they also took a couple of losers. We know about that kind of financial shenanigans. We saw the interesting manipulations of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in the case of the Bank of Western Canada. I will not take that Minister at face value. There are many westerners who are still trying to recover from that peculiar form of financial gymnastics in which he engaged a few years ago. When it concerns that Minister, we want exactly what he intends to do put down in writing. No one in western Canada will take that Minister at face value when it concerns a relationship of trust or integrity.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are speaking from personal experience.

Mr. Axworthy: I know enough people who have had that personal experience. I am glad the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) is here. He is the House master.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: House servant.

Mr. Axworthy: That particular role we have yet to test. However, we have already seen him act as the House master.

This Bill is a precedent. We must accept it as a precedent, because that is the way the House of Commons works. It is the way in which the Chair works. The House has established basic conventions, accepted practices and customs. If the Government thinks it can get away with the bare minimum in this Bill, then I believe it will do the same with other transactions which it proposes. The well-meaning good wishes of the Parliamentary Secretary are not good enough. They do not meet the specific requirements of the Bill and, more important, they evade establishing what kind of practices the Government will follow in successive sales of Crown corporations.

It is apparent that the intent, thrust and purpose of the Crown corporation reform legislation, which was introduced last year to ensure that there would be accountability in sales, is being flouted. I am not saying it is being done in a malicious manner, but I believe it is being done in a sloppy manner. It is not being done with the clear understanding that the Bill will establish a stare decisis.

A correction is at hand. I am not saying that the amendment of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is perfect, but it attempts to clarify the matter. In establishing fair value, it attempts to place a test on the Government as to what is expected of it with respect to the sale. It may be easy to give some assurances with respect to the sale of this Crown corporation because it is reasonably simple. When the Liberal Government decided to go ahead with the sale of this Crown corporation, it decided to use it as a test case. The previous Government decided to use it as a way in which to give proper form, content and procedure which could be followed through the entire process.

There are continuing inconsistencies. When the sale of NTCL was announced last year, the Liberal Government commissioned First Boston to do a major financial evaluation. First Boston had been working with NTCL for a number of years. The evaluation was designed to provide a proper financial view so that the taxpayer had some sense of what would be the real value of the corporation. The Minister said that he could not table that financial study until he had closed the deal. I am not sure that is the right procedure. I am not sure that Parliament should agree to the sale of a Crown corporation until it has had a proper financial accounting of the value of the corporation in order to determine whether the sale price represents a proper deal. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has a list of approximately 10 corporations which he will put on the auction block. We are not sure about the fair value which he will be asking, because he is motivated by ideological reasons to get rid of those corporations rather than making judgments case by case upon market and public interest value. It is important that we get it right the first time.

Mr. Gurbin: What was the fair value of Petrofina?

Mr. Axworthy: I agree with the Hon. Member. The reason for which the Crown corporation legislation was introduced last year was to avoid a repetition of cases such as that of Petrofina. That legislation attempted to establish the requirement of accountability to Parliament. Now we have a Government which wants to establish the way Parliament should deal with it. I must say that the Government has not succeeded in that test as this is not a very good piece of legislation.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it should be noted that Clause 4 does not really deal with the sale of the shares of NTCL. It deals with the authorization which would be given to the Minister by Parliament to direct NTCL to divest itself of certain assets prior to the sale of the shares to new purchasers. It dwells on an aspect slightly similar to that of which the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry spoke.

I agree with the Hon. Member in that whenever any kind of authority is given to a Minister of the Crown there is a potential for abuse. That is a fact of human nature. If we examine the record of the previous Government, time after time we can see instances in which that type of authority was badly abused. Petrofina was one example of that abuse. However, there must be an assumption that the Minister and the Governor in Council will act in the best interests of the nation and will obtain fair value with respect to the sale of certain assets. If a Minister or the Government of the day consistently abuses the power which has been given to them by Parliament, avenues for redress are available. The Opposition can rise every day and ask questions in the House of Commons. Once every four or five years the people of Canada have the opportunity to pass judgment on the Government. The people of Canada did that on September 4. They knew of the abuses which had taken place under the previous Government and they turfed it out. That was the ultimate recourse of the public of Canada against a Government which had abused the powers which had been given to it by Parliament.

I have every confidence that the present Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) will not abuse the authority which has been given to him in this legislation. If he does, those avenues for redress will be available. I would not want to tie him down to fuzzy wording. Who knows what fair value means? Fair value means one thing to one set of people and something else to another set of people. There is no absolute definition. For instance, one can talk about $1 million and everyone knows exactly what that is, but "fair value" is a pretty nebulous concept at best. If we were to adopt the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), I worry about what would happen if a certain asset is sold today for a sum of money which to everyone today would seem to be quite reasonable, but three days later, due to some circumstance, those assets increased in value. The person who received that asset would then have his title clouded because someone would be able to take him to court because he felt he did not get fair value. There can be differences of opinion as to whether or not it is fair value. Under those circumstances, who would want to buy any of the assets contemplated for sale?

My final point, Mr. Speaker, is that there may be occasions when the public interest is best served by disposing of an asset not at fair market value. I can give you illustrations, Mr. Speaker, where voluntary organizations engaged in charitable pursuits have been able to buy a government building for $1. And everyone agreed it was a great deal. The organization is doing something useful for the public and the Government should help it out by selling it a surplus building for a dollar. So there are very good reasons why, on occasion, the Government would want to dispose of an asset belonging to the Crown, either directly or through a Crown corporation, for something less than fair value, but that would be precluded were we to adopt the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Stan Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) began his speech by giving us a history lesson. Perhaps I might give him, through you, Mr. Speaker, my version of that history lesson because I have followed this corporation for some time. As I remember, it was the Clark Government in 1979 which isolated NTCL as a corporation which it was not totally in the public interest for the Government to own. It thought that we ought to investigate whether it should be sold to the private sector. It was the Clark Government which engaged First Boston as the group which would undertake to evaluate the assets, but when the Trudeau Government returned, the then Minister of Transport sat on this advice. However, after many questions were raised about the management of the company, the Minister decided, in the last few months, that it was in the best interests of his Government to begin the sale of that company. He then used the information which was obtained by the Clark Government. I asked the then Minister of Transport at that time a number of questions regarding the management of that company. I put a number of questions on the Order Paper, none of which were ever answered. Some time went on.

The present Minister of Transport, after taking over his position, continued the work he had started in 1979 which was to isolate this corporation for sale. In the meantime, the former Minister of Transport had allowed the Athabasca operation to be discontinued and the transfer of barges across the land from the Athabasca River into the Mackenzie River, which was subsequently charged back to the Athabasca River. He also allowed the figures to be so presented to the CTC in such a manner as to disallow that service. It became very clear that this company was not operating in the public interest of the people who happened to live in that area. The management of the day was doing many things to see if it could put itself in a position perhaps to take over that company. That concerned me a great deal.

When we look at the depreciated value of assets and the suggested amendment of "fair market value", we can ask what the fair market value is of the barges tied up in the Athabasca area right now. As the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) said, it may be only a dollar because they are sitting there rusting. However, if they were put into another position, they may become a very valuable asset. Tying the Minister down to making a decision on that nebulous word "fair value" is not fair. I believe that any Minister, given the authority by this Parliament to act, must use that authority in the best interests of this country. The assumption is that he will get the best possible value for NTCL, I have faith that in fact this will happen. As I said, I had a little difficulty as I listened to the history lesson given to us by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Motion No. 2 and Motion No. 4 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-53, be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 11 at page 2 the following:

"(4) The terms and conditions of the sale shall be made public through publication in the Canada Gazette and by tabling in Parliament".

Motion No. 4

That Bill C-53, be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 30 at page 2 the following:

"(4) The terms and conditions of the sale or disposition are to be made public through publication in the Canada Gazette."

He said: Mr. Speaker, both of these motions have to do with making public certain information regarding the sale. Motion No. 2 would take effect after the sale has been completed, signed, sealed and delivered, at which time the Minister would table in the House the terms and conditions of the agreement of sale. In fact, he would table the agreement of sale as well as publish it in the Canada Gazette. I hope all Hon. Members will agree that the public who owned the assets in the first place have a right to know the terms and conditions of the disposition of their asset.

Motion No. 4 provides that the terms and conditions of the sale only at the time of, or prior to, the signing of the agreement of sale by both Parties would be published in the Canada Gazette. We do not ask and we do not expect the Minister to make all of those confidential details available now. That is not the practice. Although we asked the Minister to let us know what those details were at an earlier stage of the Bill, he persuaded us that it would not be appropriate to make those details known at that point. I have accepted that, but the right of the people is implicit in both amendments. I do not know, it may be possible to get it under the Freedom of Information Act, although I am advised there is some question about that. So I do not want to take any chances.

I do not want this legislation, unless it is more specific than it presently is, being used as a model for every other instance of this kind which may come up in this Parliament. I recall questions and answers and debate in this House regarding Petrofina and the attempts by members of the Conservative Party and the NDP to get information and details on that, and we were totally unsuccessful. I think we still do not have all the details about that deal. Therefore, we should learn a lesson from that. I am not for one minute accusing the Government or the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) of trying to withhold or hide information. I find this Minister to be a lot more forthcoming with Members of the House on all sides than the previous six Ministers of Transport with whom I have had to deal in this place. And I doubt he would want to withhold information. But again, Sir, I cannot have the same confidence in some of his colleagues. I do not mean to cast aspersions on any of them, individually or collectively. But I do know this Minister and I have some confidence in him. Even though I may disagree with him on a lot of things, I have a great deal of respect for him and his integrity. So this is not in any way meant to be nor is it in fact a slight on the Minister himself. But it does incorporate in legislation something which should be there.

I think that the criteria laid down here would serve as an example for every Department and Crown corporation. I wish it could serve as an example for the private sector. I am sure that if a lot of the deals which have been made privately were made known even to the shareholders, there would be some very distraught and upset shareholders in many different corporations in the private sector. Quite often the shareholder is the last one to find out what happened to the assets of which he was part owner. Certainly that should not be the case in the public sector and it is incumbent upon all of us to see that that does not happen to assets owned by the people of Canada. They should have a right to know, and I think that right to know in these amendments is being applied in a reasonable manner. We are not demanding disclosure at this stage; it is a confidential matter between the buyer and the seller. But as the deal is completed, the terms and conditions should be published in the Canada Gazette. Once the deal is fully completed, signed, sealed and delivered, all the "t's" have been crossed and all the "i's" dotted, then the Minister should table that information in the House and again publish it in the Canada Gazette. The reason I differentiate between the two is that during the course of the signing there may be some last minute detailed changes of terms and conditions which were first published in the Canada Gazette. Therefore, once it is finally signed, sealed and delivered it should be again published in the Canada Gazette and also tabled in Parliament so that we and the public can examine whether or not there are any differences between the first instance and the second instance. If there are differences and they are reasonable, probably nothing will be said. But just in case there are some major and significant differences, not only the public has the right to know but Members of Parliament have the right to know so that we can in turn question the Minister and his officials on why the changes were made. Certainly that is only reasonable and fitting with regard to our ability to do our job better.

Again, Sir, I hope this will find approval on all sides because it meets what should be a basic criterion in this legislation. It meets the even broader principle of disclosure regarding the disposal of assets owned by the people of Canada. This is the place where we should be told and the people should be told at least in the Canada Gazette. I could have asked for advertising in every weekly and daily paper in Canada and that sort of thing, but I am trying to be reasonable. This will be sufficient. It will give the public the opportunity, should they want to find out, either by reading Hansard or by reading the Canada Gazette. They have that right. These amendments ensure that they can exercise that right should they choose to do so.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): This may come as a complete shock to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) but in principle I am in complete agreement with him on this one. I think these things ought to be disclosed.

Mr. Benjamin: Maybe I did something wrong.

Mr. Nickerson: The public should know what type of deal has been consummated. I believe the Minister also feels that way because he has already given us his undertaking that he will do precisely that, make the details of this deal known. Presumably he will table the memorandum of sale in the House of Commons or otherwise make it available to the public.

I have some difficulty with the wording of the two proposed amendments. Why we would want to table it in the House of Commons and publish it in the Gazette at the same time, I do not know. If you look at Motion No. 4, I think the Department of Justice could phrase it in somewhat better language. I do not fancy that the chances of the Hon. Member being successful in this attempt are great, but I think it brings to light a very important point. In ensuing legislation dealing with the disposition of other Crown corporations we might very well put such a clause in place to make sure the terms and conditions of the sale are published in a formal sort of manner and to make it mandatory rather than to rely upon the good will of the Minister concerned.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, it may come as a surprise to the Hon. Member but I agree with his agreement. I find it quite curious that the Government is proceeding without following the good judgment and assessment of its own members, to say nothing of that of Members of this side of the House. If it makes good sense and better legislation, why are we not doing it? If everyone thinks it is a good idea to have better disclosure and better precedent, why does the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Dick) not suggest to his Minister that it may be useful to proceed with another piece of legislation while consulting with the Minister of Transportation (Mr. Mazankowski), and then bring this legislation back to have the amendment accepted?

I do not think we should have to be predetermined by rigid scheduling. If all sides of the House agree to an eminently good amendment, we should not ignore it simply for the sake of meeting the parliamentary timetable. There would certainly be a disposition on the part of the Official Opposition, and I am sure there would be no problem with members of the NDP caucus, to agree to complete report stage this afternoon after there has been consultation. That makes sense.

Two or three of these amendments have been improvements to the Bill. That is, after all, the purpose of Parliament. It is not only to engage in partisan exchange, but also to improve legislation. The whole thrust of the committee chaired by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), which reported last week, was to achieve this purpose. Why do we not take advantage of it?

I believe, as do the two previous speakers, that the establishment of the proper steps to be followed by Parliament when considering the sale of a Crown corporation will be very vital in establishing future practices. If we get it right the first time, we will not have to argue about it a second or third time. I suggest that the government Member who is vitally interested in this Bill should indicate that he believes this to be a vitally important amendment. As always when the Government is trying to do something useful, the Opposition is prepared to co-operate. I therefore urge the Parliamentary Secretary to contact his Minister in an effort to gain acceptance for this amendment and a few others which make good sense. I urge the Parliamentary Secretary to take that into consideration.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I will not accuse the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) of having selective hearing, but the Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) in fact indicated that he could easily support this type of proposal in future legislation and that information surrounding any negotiated settlement in the sale of Crown corporations should be public knowledge.

This Bill guarantees in very clear terms in Clause 5(3) that:

> Any debt, obligation, or claim forgiven and written off pursuant to this section in a fiscal year shall be reported, in such form as the Treasury Board may determine in the Public Accounts for that year.

There is some absolute disclosure there, Mr. Speaker.

The second point which is important to note is that there is an absolute guarantee that this information can be available through access to information. There is quite a difference between the fiasco surrounding Petrofina, which was the acquisition of assets by a Crown corporation, and what we are discussing here, which is the first sale of a Crown corporation.

While we are sympathetic with the principle of full disclosure, we feel that the two amendments suggested by the Member are unnecessary due to the clear indication on public record by the Minister that there will be disclosure of the information.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed, please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11) the recorded division on this proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 79(11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at report stage of Bill C-53. The first vote will be on Motion No. 1 standing in the name of Mr. Benjamin.

Call in the Members.

The House divided on Motion No. 1 (Mr. Benjamin), which was negatived on the following division.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There are three other motions on which to be voted. We are prepared to agree that the vote, which has just been taken on Motion No. 1, be applied and recorded as separate votes for the remaining motions, with the understanding, of course, that if one or more Hon. Members want to vote in a different way on the other motions, they will be able to rise in their places and say so, for the benefit of the recording of votes in Hansard.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I certainly associate myself with the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: As much as we like to have opportunities to vote against the Government on these particular votes, for the sake of those Hon. Members who have had their lunchtime digestion interrupted, we are prepared to agree with his proposal.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, the thoughtfulness of the Opposition occasionally surprises me. However, it is a good idea. In response to the suggestion of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), there is probably more possibility of people in his Party changing their vote than there is in our Party.

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, I should like to indicate that for the last two votes I vote with this side.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore the vote will be recorded in the same way, except that the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper), the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin), the Hon. Member for Langelier (Mr. Côté) and the Hon. Member for Cambridge (Mr. Speyer) will be added as voting in the same manner as the people on their right and left.

The next vote is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin).

The House divided on the motion, which was negatived on the following division:

Wise—138.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time?

Some Hon. Members: By leave, now.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Carried, on division?

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Mr. Benjamin: On debate, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: On debate, the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Was the motion carried? If there is to be debate, I should like to say a few words on the matter at third reading.

Some Hon. Members: It was carried.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: If it was carried, I will not—

Mr. Speaker: I was not clear whether the Hon. Member for Regina West was rising to indicate "on division" or to debate. The Hon. Member for Regina West wishes to debate at third reading.

Mr. Benjamin: Yes.

Some Hon. Members: It was carried.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. The Hon. Member for Regina West rose, and I thought it was to indicate "on division". It was my fault. Therefore we are on debate.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I appreciate the co-operation shown in the House, and I understand that the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) wants to address this matter at third reading.

At the outset I should like to indicate that I appreciate the co-operation which has been extended by the Opposition to get the enabling legislation through to allow the sale of this corporation to proceed.

As I indicated earlier, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) would have been here to deal with this legislation. However, he asked me to extend his apologies to Hon. Members. He is attending important meetings in Montreal with respect to air travel safety, which I think he announced on the floor of the House. Accordingly, he asked me to, on his behalf, extend words of thanks and appreciation for the work and the speed which Members of Parliament in all Parties have given to this important item, to the extent of evening sittings, long hours, and leading to having the report considered technically before the time normally permitted under our rules for consideration of this legislation. I simply extend those thanks to the Opposition as well.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief on third reading. I just want to say that I am somewhat disappointed. In addition to the mixed feelings that I had at the outset of the debate and second reading on this Bill, I now have to add disappointment because the legislation as presented by the Minister is so general and vague as to provide pretty well a blank cheque for the Minister to do anything he wants in the disposal of assets owned by the people of Canada.

We attempted in committee and again at report stage to get the Government to accept a very few amendments. We could have moved a lot more, but we held them to a minimum—I think a total of six yesterday, only four today—to try to get the Government to at least put some basic fundamental changes in the legislation because, while I have great respect for the honesty and forthrightness and integrity of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), I do not feel that way about the rest of the Cabinet. This will not be the last occasion in this Parliament when we get legislation for the so-called privatization of assets of Crown corporations on which the taxpayers of Canada have invested billions of dollars, and I doubt if they will get their money back.

The problem we face is that this legislation that we are dealing with now can serve as a model for each subsequent time. I want to say to the Members of the Government right now that as and when that happens they need not look for the kind of co-operation on those occasions that they got from the Opposition on this one. I repeat, Sir, we make an exception to our basic fundamental disagreement with the sale of a Crown asset properly owned by the taxpayers, and particularly when it is a winner and making a profit. The taxpayer, like any other private individual investor, is just as much entitled to an opportunity for a return on that investment as are others in the private sector. The selling off of the winners denies the taxpayer getting back some, if not, all, of the investment he made.

We make the exception in this Bill because it is being sold to the right kind of people. It is being sold to two Inuit organizations in northern Canada. They will have direct say and responsibility not only in the ownership, but in the operations of the Northern Transportation Company Limited and in the provision of adequate and reasonable transportation services in the North.

On behalf of my colleagues, I wish those two Inuit organizations well in their endeavours. I think I can say for all Members that they will have the full support and assistance whenever possible from Members of the House of Commons. We hope the Government will continue to be of assistance, even though it no longer has any ownership in the corporation, in any way it can so that those two organizations can improve upon the operations of the company and even enlarge on the services that are presently being supplied.

The Northern Transportation Company has been and is now an excellent example of what can be done for people in a region of Canada by all the people of Canada. It served as an excellent example of how they are not discriminated against by insufficient or extremely high cost transportation just because of where they happen to live. In the years of start up and development it lost money, but the people of the nation as a whole shared in the costs. If it had had to be paid for only by the people of the North, they would never have started it. That is a good example of where it is perfectly logical to have a publicly-owned Crown corporation in an area that provides an essential service, meets a public need and serves the national interest.

If it was logical to have all kinds of competition in areas that are an essential public service it would be, I suppose, logical to have competing sewer and water systems, competing highways, competing sidewalks, competing telephone lines—and we are faced with that prospect as well—or competing power lines. If the private enterprise principle was carried to a logical conclusion that is what would be attempted to be done, but if anybody tried to do that they would be locked up, I hope.

There are some areas in our economy where it is proper for the public, through the Crown, to own and operate an essential public service, particularly in areas that are, in practice, natural monopolies. In those sectors of the economy it must be a publicly-owned Crown corporation or it could be a joint ownership of the Crown and the co-operative movement, for example. It could be a joint ownership between the Crown and in this instance, for example, the two Inuit organizations in northern Canada. This is why we suggested at an earlier stage in this debate that we thought it would be good if the Crown kept 10, 15 or 20 per cent interest in the company because then it would be able to provide assistance as and when the need is shown. It would have been able to provide access to the kinds of technological change and whatnot the Government is able to get much easier than a small company. However, the Government chose to sell the complete Company. So be it.

I hope that the Government will keep in mind that it cannot have just a mindless, total opposition as a general principle to having Crown corporations, that there should not be any at all. Decades ago the Government of Canada started getting into public ownership, not because it believed in it but because the private sector either failed or would not or could not provide something that was an essential public need in the national interest. Too often the Crown went into ownership of a private sector corporation not because it was right in principle to have it a Crown corporation owned by the people of Canada, but to bail out the investors who were going to lose, in one classic case the formation of the Canadian National Railways, something in the order of one and one half billion dollars on five bankrupt railroads. Canadian national was formed to make sure that the banks, trust companies and bond holders got their money. That was the main reason, but as well, it was in the national interest to keep the railways going. That is not the case in this instance.

As I said earlier, the only reason we are agreeing to this sale is because it is being sold to the people most directly concerned. I hope that the new owners of Northern Transportation Company Limited will be able to meet, negotiate and enter into agreements with one or more Dene organizations and will be able to join with them in partnership in the ownership and expansion of the company. That would go a long way toward creating more co-operation among the aboriginals in northern Canada.

In closing, I would say that we wish the new owners well when the agreement is signed, sealed and delivered. However, I would like to tell the government House Leader that the next time this happens, the Government had better word the Bill a little better. If it does not, it is going to have a problem.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I rise primarily to congratulate the Government for having the good sense to follow through on a major initiative of the previous Government. It is always good to see that even as government Members stumble and fumble around in Budget manipulations, they have some modicum of good sense as indicated by the continuation of initiatives that we began.

I am pleased to see that the basic objective we established over a year ago when putting the Northern Transportation Company Limited up for privatization will be followed as it relates to native organizations in the North. Parenthetically, for Tory Members who are again trying to re-write history, when the Clark administration considered this legislation in 1979, no mention was made of ensuring that the Crown corporation would be sold to native people. It was simply to be put on the block. I would ask government Members to read their history books with an eye for accuracy as opposed to an eye for fantasy.

It is important to ask how we go about dealing with the privatization of Crown corporations. It should not be done in the obsessive, ideological way in which the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) pursues things. It should be done because it is clearly in the public interest. Crown corporations were originally established to serve a public purpose. However, conditions have changed. Public purposes have become altered. It is becoming more important to put these public services back in private hands rather than maintaining them in the public sector.

There were two primary reasons for putting NTCL up for sale. One was that any future expansion of the company would require more equity. In order for NTCL to remain a healthy economic organization, it was going to have to diversify into trucking and other forms of commercial enterprises which really did not justify public investment. To maintain public control and ownership of the company would have meant that it would have stagnated.

In order to provide for the continuation of a healthy transportation unit in northern Canada, the company needed to complement its activities with other forms of economic interests. Therefore, to acquire new forms of equity capital, it had to go on the public market. At the same time, though, it seemed to us that this was a unique opportunity for us to sell a viable, operating company to native people who are now trying to establish their own form of economic development and entrepreneurship. That is why when we announced the proposed sale we stated that preference would go to northerners and native organizations.

Last December, we were deeply concerned when the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) announced that the original sale arrangement was with a company from southern Canada which at that time was not involved with native people. We raised several questions about that, and we are glad to see that the decision has been reversed.

The greatest regret I have about this Bill is that it is a lost opportunity. This Government uses the language of privatization with great frequency. It is one of the hallmarks of the new economic regime. Unfortunately, the Government failed at the first opportunity it had to privatize a company in a reasonably effective and proper way. The Government did not seize the opportunity offered by the sale of NTCL to sell a Crown corporation in a fiscally accountable way. The Bill is sloppy and ramshackled. The Government lost the opportunity to establish proper guidelines and precedents for future sales.

All of the questions that we have been raising over the last several months regarding the intentions of the Government when it comes to privatization have not been answered. Here was a great opportunity for the Government to clearly demonstrate how it would deal with Parliament and the public when coming to grips with the sale of Crown corporations. That is a matter of no small import because we know that there are a number of other Crown corporations, some of great magnitude, that are also being offered for sale.

Many times we asked the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion how they intend to privatize companies and we received no answers. Here was a chance for the Government to put privatization into practical application. However, the Government did everything wrong.

To begin with, the Government totally ignored the board of directors. The board of directors of a Crown corporation has a very important fiduciary relationship with the corporation. Boards of directors are established not simply to provide room for appointments for friends but to provide a very real policy-making role in the running of Crown corporations, yet the Minister of Transport totally evaded any involvement on the part of the board of directors of this Crown corporation. I would suggest that it would be a serious mistake if that practice was followed in future sales.

Second, the Government almost deliberately short circuited what we believed to be a very important step to take before the sale of any Crown corporation, and that was to do a proper financial evaluation and have that evaluation made public so that the Government could put a proper value on what it was selling. Again, the Minister explained that things have been rushed and that there have been renegotiations, but the kind of study that we commissioned last spring has not been brought forward. An Hon. Member said that there was a study made in 1980, but that had nothing to do with it. We commissioned a specific financial evaluation last spring from First Boston, a financial evaluation which has not been produced.

Third, the Government failed on the question of ensuring that there would be proper disclosure and information requirements in the legislation so that when the sale was finalized, there would be a complete accounting before Parliament and the taxpayers. In part, we have been dealing with this Bill under a large haze and the Government has camouflaged what is really going on. I think it is a credit to the Minister of Transport that we would take his word on these matters. However, I am not sure that that is the proper way to do business. To repeat the words of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), we certainly do not intend to do that when the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion brings something forward because he is a Minister of a very different kind. We think that now is the time for the regulations and procedures to be properly established.

We support the Bill, as it was our initiative in the first place. I am glad to see that it has come to fruition. We are pleased that native organizations in northern Canada will have an opportunity to manage a good company. We believe that it is good for public policy purposes. However, we deeply regret the way in which it has been done. We had a chance to establish a very important guide-post for the future. That has been lost. Maybe it is a symptomatic sign from the Government. Where managing public business is concerned, the Government still has a great deal to learn. We hope that it will learn.

An Hon. Member: You never learned.

Mr. Axworthy: The evidence exists. Tory members do not like to hear that, but the evidence exists. The Government has not done a very good job on this legislation. Even its Members have said that the Bill could have been better. The Government still has some time to show that it can do a better job. As always, we will be around to help.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few brief comments regarding the privatization of NTCL. I would like to extend my thanks to the Liberal and NDP members who have been involved in the legislation. For a short time they have set aside their ideological preoccupations and have seen reason. In fact, it was the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) who initiated the process, even though Liberal candidates in the 1980 election ran on the platform of maintaining NTCL as a Crown corporation. That was the Liberal promise of the time. However the Liberals changed their minds, as they often do. This time the change is for the better.

I would like to compliment the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) on the continuing interest which he has shown in the matter. His task is now all but accomplished. There have been many difficulties involved in the process of privatization. It is my hope that those who were involved, and those who are likely to be involved again, will have learned from the mistakes which have been made in the case of NTCL.

I would like to comment briefly on the tendering process. It became apparent during the course of the debate that it had already been established that the majority shareholding of NTCL would be sold to a native corporation. There were other people who placed bids and did a lot of work in compiling their proposals. I have some doubt as to whether those people were given proper consideration. There is absolutely nothing wrong with a formal native organization such as IDC, DDC or others becoming involved, but the normal type of business firm which is made up of people of all ethnic origins, who are not ethnically restricted, should also have been given a fair deal on the bidding. I suspect that did not happen and that the deal was weighed in favour of one particular type of organization from the beginning. Some of the firms which I know were interested were owned by native people and not collective organizations. If that arrangement could be known beforehand, in the future it could be made public in order that people would not waste their time bidding on something for which they do not stand a chance of being successful.

I look forward to a new regime in the Mackenzie waterways, the Beaufort Sea and the waterways on the Arctic coast. We are moving away from the idea of a Crown corporation monopoly on certain types of services. We are moving toward a competitive system in which each shipping firm will be given the same type of opportunity. They will be awarded water licences by the WTC on the basis of free competition. Hopefully, we will move away from the system of having to obtain licences from the WTC to a deregulated system.

I would like to wish the new owners of NTCL all possible success. I hope their venture will be profitable. I know that my friend from Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) wished them all the best. I imagine it is difficult for him to hope that the enterprise will be profitable. However, on this side of the House we have no hesitation in hoping that the business will prove to be very profitable in private hands. The best way for it to be profitable is to provide good service throughout the entirety of its service area.

I would like to be associated with the remarks of the Hon. Member for Regina West concerning the possibility of extended ownership. I hope the new owners of NTCL will be able to properly manage the corporation. They have embarked upon a risky venture. The health of NTCL is dependent upon the health of the northern oil and gas industry and the decisions which will have a great bearing on that industry. Those decisions are as likely to be made in Abu Dhabi with an association of Arab oil ministers as they are in Canada or elsewhere. The owners have certainly involved themselves in a risky venture. It is not expected that they will ask the Government to bail them out if they are not successful. They have made their bed and they must lie in it. I hope they will be profitable, and that people will be properly serviced. I hope that the taxpayers will not be asked in the future to become involved again in the shipping business.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benjamin: On division.

Mr. Speaker: Carried on division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the third time and passed.

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture) moved that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, just before I begin my remarks on Bill C-25, I would like to again thank all Hon. Members of the House, particularly Hon. Members opposite, for their co-operation yesterday in dealing with Bill C-58, an Act to amend the Advance Payments for Crops Act. I would also like to thank Hon. Members for the co-operation they extended to me on behalf of the agricultural industry of the country the day before yesterday when we passed through the House in all stages another piece of agricultural legislation which extended for an 18-month period, the Farm Improvement Loans Act.

During discussion of both those pieces of legislation, I had in my possession some material which was extremely useful to all Hon. Members of the House. I gave an undertaking at that time, with reference to the information I had regarding advance payments for crops, to make it available to the House and to the Table so that the detailed information I had could be printed and appended to Hansard. I also gave an undertaking to provide the same type of detailed information, which I had in my hand at that time, with respect to those provinces and those banks which participated under the Farm Improvement Loans Act. I indicated that I was not an expert in House matters or procedures and was not exactly sure just what the procedure was. Since that time I have been advised—and I appreciate the advice I received from the Table—that it is necessary for me to seek unanimous consent of the House so that it will be possible for me to fulfil my desire to make this information available.

Therefore, I am asking for unanimous consent of the House to make available the information with respect to advance payments for crops legislation. I requested that the information which deals with the report and the information with respect to the Farm Improvement Loans Act. I do not have it at the moment, but I should have it here very shortly. I am seeking unanimous consent of the House that both those documents be appended to Hansard.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I have a question just before we give the Minister unanimous consent to table those documents. Several weeks ago the Minister promised the members of the committee the week by week levels of imports of red meat from various countries into Canada during 1984. I wonder if he would be able to meet that commitment and provide that documentation to the members of the committee who were working at that time on the red meat stabilization program?

Mr. Wise: Yes, Mr. Speaker, as always, when we make a commitment to deliver information, we want to make certain we fulfil those commitments. I believe yesterday, but perhaps it might have been the day before, I had this information sent to my office. I asked that the information be made available to committee members. I think we are talking about two different things here. I am asking that these two pieces of information be appended to Hansard. I hope we can get consent for that. With respect to the Hon. Member's request, I think that Hon. Members would agree that it would be sufficient that this information be sent to members of the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Minister to append to Hansard the documents to which he has referred?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's Note: For above-mentioned documents, see Appendix.]

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, it is certainly a pleasure for me today to speak to third reading of Bill C-25. This Bill has been a long time in coming and its passage will mark the beginning of a new era of farm income stabilization in this country.

The Bill was referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture on May 21 where it received a very careful and extensive review. The committee heard from officials and representatives of most provincial Governments, as well as from organizations whose members in some way could be affected by this legislation.

I would like to make a comment at this point. Yesterday during the debate on the report stage of Bill C-25, a number of speeches were made and there were some interesting observations made by a variety of Members. I am not going to dwell on the motions. I will try to keep my remarks consistent and to the point in dealing with the specific issue at hand. However, there were a number of charges made yesterday, some of which were quite off the mark and some of which were quite false.

With respect to one observation, I think the particular language used might lead people to believe there was some manoeuvring or some attempt to ensure that representations made by certain provincial Ministers or by provincial Departments of Agriculture were avoided. That is certainly not the case. It was very misleading and false to make charges which led people to believe that some attempt was made by the steering committee of the Standing Committee on Agriculture to avoid these representations. I want to assure Hon. Members that every provincial Government was given an opportunity to appear before the Standing Committee on Agriculture. As you know, Mr. Speaker, most of them utilized that opportunity. In some cases where word did not come back, it is my understanding that the Clerk of the Standing Committee on Agriculture made some special efforts to inquire as to whether or not it was the intention of provincial Ministers or provincial Departments of Agriculture to make a presentation. I just wanted to touch on that particular item at this point.

During the course of these hearings, myself and members of the committee learned a great deal about the wide scope of interests within the agricultural community. As a result, certain amendments were recommended. I would like to take a few moments now to explain these amendments, all of which I sponsored, so that Members representing all regions of Canada will understand them very clearly.

The first amendment is to Clause 8 which deals with preconditions to entering into agreements. This amendment addresses the very real concern expressed by certain commodity groups and provinces not only about top loading, but about bottom loading and side loading. The Province of Saskatchewan pointed out quite accurately that top loading is not the only issue. The amendment recognizes this concern by allowing the Minister of Agriculture to consider matters other than just top loading during the course of negotiating commodity agreements.

I believe we get distracted and confused when we start dealing with this piece of legislation because normally when the Government brings in a piece of legislation, the law changes tomorrow. Something happens. A new set of laws are imposed on a commodity group, a sector of the economy or of society. Of course, that interpretation is a wrong interpretation. However, it has caused us some concern and confusion. This Bill does change a number of very important things with respect to the way in which the Act will affect people after it receives third reading, but those are changes from which we can all benefit.

This Act does not impose plans on commodity groups at all. There seems to be a lot of misinterpretation of this legislation, particularly in the media and by certain farm leaders and individuals. Understanding that perhaps we are all to blame for that does not change the fact that we have to face the facts. The amendment, as I indicated, recognizes the expressed concern by allowing the Minister of Agriculture to consider matters other than just top loading during the course of negotiating commodity agreements. The Act provides the legal framework to do certain things that we have to do here in Canada, but it does not impose marketing plans. This clause also recognizes that no agreement resulting from negotiations with the provinces and producers should lead to over-production or have the effect of putting any one region in the position of having an advantage over another region.

The second amendment also reflects the fact that the committee listened carefully and responded to the representations of producers and provinces. Members of the committee found themselves constantly reminded that this program is intended for all commodity groups. It appears we were not only side-tracked by the Bill being a permissive Bill, one which simply involved enabling legislation because it does not establish plans and so on. We got side-tracked into thinking it is only a cow-calf program, or only for slaughter cattle or sheep, when in fact the broad framework of this enabling legislation will allow any commodity group to develop tri-party stabilization programs. I should clarify that by saying "any" is accurate enough. It is a safer word than "all" because it would not allow all commodity groups to form plans, most particularly those commodities dealt with under supply-management. Therefore, we do not have a problem there. Even though this particular clause in the Bill was found to be suitable for red meat, it was found to be too restrictive for horticultural products. Therefore, this amendment to Clause 8 provides greater flexibility for the negotiation of horticultural agreements.

The last three amendments all address essentially the same matter, that of monitoring, and they seek to clarify and broaden the term. The Province of Saskatchewan, along with several other groups, brought to our attention the need for amendments aimed at specifying our intentions for monitoring and administration. The point was well taken because the success of these agreements will depend to a considerable degree upon the quality of their administration. In addition, it was suggested that since each agreement will be unique, the administration agreement for each commodity should also be unique. Therefore, like the Bill itself which provides a framework to negotiate tri-party stabilization plans, these amendments will also establish a tri-party approach to administering those plans as well. They will allow the administrative committee the power to administer individual agreements as specified in each negotiated agreement.

Bill C-25 has been the subject of considerable discussion for a long period of time. It has been spoken to in this House and debated by members of the Standing Committee. The discussions began at the grass roots and evolved to the point where we are today. In fact, this legislation is based on a decade of discussion and the amended version before us today is a result of what we learned in committee. We listened and responded to what we heard.

The time has now come to put this long awaited legislation into effect. To me, this Bill means opportunity. It is the opportunity for us to sit down with the provinces and the commodity groups and hammer out made-to-measure tri-party stabilization programs. It is an opportunity for producers of all commodities to become involved in a comprehensive stabilization scheme. It is an opportunity for Canada to resolve some of its trade difficulties by implementing an insurance oriented stabilization scheme which will be viewed favourably by our trading partners. It is an opportunity to reduce inter-provincial rivarly and the confusing market signals given by the complex assortment of stabilization programs now in place. It is an opportunity to make our livestock industry more competitive. It is an opportunity to do just as the Bill's title implies, bring a greater measure of income stability to the farm sector so that the efficient producer prospers.

The last point is especially important because the agri-food industry directly employs 1.4 million Canadians and brings in more than $10 billion a year in export revenue. Last year it generated about $20 billion in cash receipts while retail sales in the agri-food industry are in the neighbourhood of some $60 billion. Producers are heavily dependent on factors beyond their control, both with respect to natural hazards and market conditions. Crop insurance provides protection against hail, drought, floods and other natural hazards. Stabilization programs are farmers' protection against changing market conditions. That is why we have an obligation to offer producers the best stabilization package possible, and I believe Bill C-25 does exactly that.

I have listened carefully to what producers groups and provincial Governments have said about this legislation. As a result, amendments were brought in but I feel compelled to point out, as I have on previous occasions, that this legislation is only the framework for future agreements. Each plan for each commodity group will be put in place only as a result of negotiation with and consent by the federal Government, the provinces and the commodity group concerned. I am reminded of a statement by a spokesperson for the Canadian Cattlemen's Association when he appeared before the Standing Committee on Agriculture regarding this Bill. He said:

> First, we will give our commitment that we will be at the bargaining table tomorrow if this government wants to take on all the programs, bottom and top-loading, or side-loading or underhand-loading or whatever you want to call them. We will be here to work on them.

This statement epitomizes the attitude that will make Bill C-25 work. I can guarantee the House that, given the opportunity to negotiate which this Bill provides for, we will go to the bargaining table and work out agreements to suit individual requirements of each province and each commodity group. I urge all Members of the House to give the Government, the provinces, the farm leaders, and the commodity groups across the country the opportunity which is so desperately needed at this point in time.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have the opportunity to speak on third reading of Bill C-25 which has been before the Committee on Agriculture for several months. It proposes important changes to the stabilization legislation which is available to farmers across the country. The Minister said that this Bill ushers in a new era in agricultural stabilization. That may be true if the legislation is actually utilized.

When this Bill was introduced, at least four groups supported the establishment of a tripartite red meat stabilization program for lamb, beef, and hogs. I am not sure whether any of the producers in Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, or Ontario clearly understand what the amendments introduced last Thursday afternoon actually mean.

Yesterday I spoke with a senior representative of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association. After examining the clause which prohibits provincial Governments from having stabilization programs and requiring that if they take part in a tripartite stabilization program they would have to phase out their existing provincial programs he said, "Producers are thoroughly confused as to what the amendment means and won't support it because they don't know what it means". He said that the Cattlemen's Association and hog boards of all four provinces had the same feeling.

When representatives of those provincial Governments appeared before the committee, they made it very clear that they did not want any substantive changes to the legislation but wanted it passed as it was. They also wanted to ensure that the tripartite red meat stabilization program would be administered jointly by the three parties to any agreement; the federal Government, the provincial Governments, and the producer groups. Everyone is trying to figure out exactly what the amendment introduced by the Minister last Thursday means, but it clearly puts the Minister in the position of judging what level of stabilization is being provided by the various producer groups involved.

My colleagues and the solicitor for the Canadian Cattlemen's Association also concluded that this amendment allows the Minister to judge whether the stabilization provided actually gives additional benefit to those provided by other bi-partite stabilization programs in any of the provinces not participating. They suggest that the benefits from a tri-partite stabilization program must not be greater than those provided to any producers not party to the agreement.

There is a great deal of confusion on the part of those provinces which did not consent to the original agreement and were not party to it. The Minister has not made proposals or recommendations to resolve their concerns. For instance, the four Maritime provinces were requesting a grain transportation program to be coupled with a program for Maritime Canada which would allow them to operate on an equal basis. We have had no commitment from the Minister that he is willing to do that. Therefore, the concerns of the Maritime provinces have not been resolved. As well, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick have requested that potatoes be designated as a named commodity under the legislation. I put forward such an amendment in committee but it was voted down. That certainly indicates the support which exists for the Atlantic region.

The confusion which has developed in this area leaves the possibility of a red meat stabilization program unresolved. The amendment moved by the Minister did not meet the requirements of the producers in Quebec. Not only has this Bill created great confusion for the hog and beef producers in the four participating provinces, it has also not met the demands of Atlantic Canada, Quebec, or British Columbia which did not originally take part in the proposed agreement.

The Minister's consideration of the representations made to the committee have not met the requirement to have a national program. It is clear that this is enabling legislation, but there is a great need and demand in the country now for a proper national tripartite red meat stabilization program. That certainly has not been accomplished. That is why I find the Minister's comment that this is a new era in agriculture stabilization rather hollow. I do not think it will be fulfilled.

IMMIGRATION

PLAUT REPORT—METHOD AND TIMING OF CONSULTATION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, last week the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) tabled the long-awaited report by Rabbi Plaut on refugee determination. Two long months after the report was handed over to the Government, it was tabled in the House. Was the delay intentional, to prepare the report for a first-class burial, since summer is ideal for that? I certainly hope not.

The Plaut Report was well received in circles concerned with immigration. Rabbi Plaut states that receiving refugee status is not a privilege but a right. That is fundamental, and will, I hope, form the basis for the entire process.

Agencies and lawyers whose concern is immigration are looking forward to the consultation promised by the Minister of Employment and Immigration, so that we can finally have a refugee determination procedure that is fair, humane and efficient. I therefore suggest that the Minister of Employment and Immigration make her announcement on when and how consultation will take place as soon as possible. I sincerely hope that the summer recess will not be used to bury the Plaut Report. Immigration lawyers and agencies expect the Government to do better than that—the ball is now definitely in your court!

SOCIAL SERVICES

PLANNED PARENTHOOD FEDERATION

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, the Planned Parenthood Federation of Canada is a positive, healthy influence in society. This organization promotes responsible human sexuality through information and education.

I have received 243 letters from informed, concerned citizens including individuals, volunteers, professionals and organizations, stating their support for the valuable work that the Planned Parenthood Federation does, and their hope that the Government will make it possible through continued funding for this organization to continue to serve Canadians. Many of these letters, which were addressed in good faith to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), apparently have fallen upon deaf ears. We are four months into the fiscal year and Planned Parenthood has received no indication from the Minister of National Health and Welfare on the status of its funding.

Overhelming numbers of Canadians believe that they have the right to determine the number and spacing of their children. Planned Parenthood organizations throughout Canada believe that information, education, and services should be available to assist individuals to exercise that right in an informed, responsible manner.

Lack of information about funding contradicts the spirit of the 1969 amendment to the Criminal Code which recognized that dissemination of birth control information was a basic human right and guaranteed all Canadians universal access to family planning.

Teenage women are at great risk today.

Mr. Speaker: I regret I must inform the Hon. Member that her time has expired.

DISASTERS

AIR-INDIA CRASH—DEATH OF DR. YELAVARTHY NAYUDAMMA

Mr. William C. Winegard (Guelph): Mr. Speaker, I know that all Hon. Members share the grief of the many Canadian families who lost loved ones aboard the Air-India flight which crashed while flying from Canada. To all those people we extend our deepest sympathy and, in my case in particular, to the family of Mrs. Barsa Kelly, a friend of mine from Guelph for many years.

Also aboard that flight was a most distinguished citizen of India, Dr. Yelavarthy Nayudamma, a scientist of such towering international reputation that his advice was sought by people from all over the world, including fellow scientists.

Dr. Nayudamma was returning to India from Canada where he had been attending one of the regular meetings of the Board of Governors of the International Development Research Centre. He was one of ten non Canadians, all of the highest scientific rank, who served diligently on the board of this remarkable institution, one which is regarded within developing countries as a superb example of Canada's aid program but which, sadly, is less well known in Canada.

A week ago tonight I had dinner with Dr. Nayudamma. It pains me to know that he is no longer available to the developing world and to Canada.

FOLKLORE

THIRD WORLD FESTIVAL IN DRUMMONDVILLE, QUE.

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to invite my fellow MPs and all Canadians to come to the riding of Drummond this summer for the World Festival of Folklore. The festival has something for everyone. There will be folklore groups from everywhere in the world, all keen to show us their traditional way of life through dance, music, and song. Last year the third of these festivals attracted 400,000 people, which gives an idea of how successful is the event.

[Translation]

The World Folklore Festival in Drummondville is being held for the forth time, and this year about half a million people are expected to attend between July 5 and July 15.

Twenty folk dance groups from all over the world, including the United States, France, the Soviet Union and also Canadian participants from Quebec, Alberta, Ontario and British Columbia, will come together for ten days of folk dancing and folklore.

There will be all kinds of activities connected with the festival, including shows in restaurants, an international mass, the Folkothèque and parades during the day and evening. In addition, Radio-Canada will be giving a live broadcast of the impressive opening ceremonies.

Next week, Drummondville will be bursting with sound and colour, and I invite everyone to come and discover our own traditions and those of other countries.

EFFECT ON ELDERLY

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, the Tory Government has betrayed elderly Canadians, and they never expected such treatment. The May 23 federal Budget attacks the well-being of elderly Canadians living on fixed incomes. It increases the cost of living for senior citizens through hidden and regressive taxes on food, drugs, and on personal tax tables which cut future purchasing power of old age benefits.

During the election campaign the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Tory candidates said that they were committed to full pension reform to eliminate poverty amongst retired Canadians and to improve their standard of living. What was the reality? Through deindexing, elderly Canadians will be especially hard hit, losing almost $2 a day of disposable income by 1990.

At the present time 635,000 elderly people live below the poverty line; 450,000 are single and 80 per cent of these are women. Over the next five years the deindexing of Old Age Security alone will add over 100,000 elderly to the poverty statistics.

The Tory Government has tried to justify the unjustifiable—the cutting of old age pensions. Hundreds of Mount Royal constituents have directed me to call upon the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) today to restore full indexation of pensions now so that our senior citizens can maintain their purchasing power and have peace of mind to enjoy this summer.

EFFECT ON TOURISM

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the federal Budget was not welcome news to Canadians in the tourist industry. Almost no consideration was given to the effects of budget measures such as gas increases, liquor tax increases, and other taxes on tourism.

The most recent figures show Canada continuing to fall behind in the international tourist trade. Tourism is a major job creator, but the Budget did not take this into consideration.

Now the Government has decided to remove the $30 ceiling on the domestic air transportation tax, which will take an extra $90 million a year from Canadian travellers, hurting the travel and the hospitality segments of the tourist industry.

Given that the Government has not taken one positive measure yet to assist the tourist industry, other than the signing of agreements to provide funds already budgeted, and has instead used this industry alternately as a punchbag, a doormat, and a milch-cow, the Minister should do the sensible and honest thing by resigning and recommending the dissolution of this obviously ineffective Department. It would appear that we can now hypothesize that there is a "Wilson's law"—those industries that the Government wishes to neglect, it first establishes a ministry for.

CANADIAN HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

CALL FOR REVIEW

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that most Members of the House are aware of the Canadian Human Rights Commission as well as its functions.

According to Chief Commissioner Fairweather, the Commission has received 31,473 inquiries, conducted 1,000 preliminary investigations, and investigated 400 cases that were jurisdictionally sound.

In addition, the Commission has an operating budget of $9 million, which some members of the NDP and the Liberal Parties in the House believe is too low. Even so, of these 400 cases that were completed, each carries a price tag of $22,500, with only a success rate of 31 per cent. With this in mind, I feel the time has come for the Government to give the Human Rights Commission, as it functions now, a second look. Furthermore, it would seem that 400 investigations out of a population of 24.5 million would suggest that major human rights violations in Canada are very minimal.

Canada can be proud of its record on human rights and should serve as an example of tolerance to other countries.

HISTORIC EVENTS

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF NIAGARA MENNONITE SETTLEMENT

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, 200 years ago the first Mennonites came to Canada. The Mennonite community of Virgil-Niagara, with the assistance of Multiculturalism Canada, has published an informative historical documentary textbook commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the first Mennonite settlement in Niagara.

The social, economic, religious, and cultural influence of the Mennonite people in Niagara is deeply woven into the fabric of the whole community, and their contributions are numerous. They have firmly established themselves in every walk of life.

Two members of the Niagara Mennonite community, Mr. Jake Froese and Mr. Bill Andres, served with distinction as Members of Parliament.

This photo-journal is a testimonial to how a people, although simple in lifestyle, yet industrious in nature and committed to strong principles, helped to build our country.

In a world in which whole races of people are persecuted for religious beliefs, oppressed, and even annihilated for the colour of their skin, the world can indeed learn a lesson from the Mennonite community's belief in peace and brotherhood. It is based on the teachings of Christ from the Sermon on the Mount, when he said: "If possible as far as it depends on you, be at peace with all men".

I am proud to be able to make this presentation of "Memoirs: 50 years of the Virgil-Niagara Mennonite Community" to the Library of the Parliament of Canada.

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

CHALK RIVER NUCLEAR LABORATORY

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, I asked how the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) could possibly keep a commitment that he made to my constituents and to the employees of the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratory, in particular that:

"A P.C. Government will not only maintain this facility it will consider providing additional funds to allow greater involvement".

My question asked how could the Prime Minister honour this commitment to the science community of Canada, and to Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, when his Government has stated in the Budget that it will cut $100 million, or 50 per cent of the Government's research and development funding, from Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. The Prime Minister's Government has also taken $70 million of the company's earned savings which were to be used to pay for other AECL debts or accounts. Obviously, no one was answering for the Prime Minister because, for a moment, no one got up to offer a reply. We, and all Canadians, can understand why anyone would hesitate to answer for the Prime Minister's credibility on the floor of this House.

We know that this immediate cut was forced on Atomic Energy of Canada by this Government. We know that AECL asked to be left alone for two years to put its plans for additional revenue in place in order to accommodate the cuts, but nobody was listening. The Prime Minister has proven once again that his level of credibility to the nation is the lowest of any Prime Minister in Canada's history.

NATIONAL PARKS

SOUTH MORESBY AREA OF QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, for years groups of citizens around British Columbia, across Canada, and around the world have been calling on Canada to move and set aside the South Moresby area of the Queen Charlottes as an area of land and marine parks to have a true world heritage park there. It is now urgent that negotiations take place between the Council of the Haida Nations and the two levels of government to achieve this goal.

The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) is on the record as wishing to set this area aside from further industrial development. The Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) on June 29, 1984, as the P.C. spokesperson on environment and parks, stated:

In short, the federal Progressive Conservative Party, if in a position to do so following a federal election, would be prepared to actively participate with the B.C. Government in the establishment of a park at South Moresby.

As a member of the recently established National Committee for the Preservation of South Moresby, I join with Pierre Berton, Dr. David Suzuki, Charles Caccia, Robert Bateman, Freeman Patterson, Andy Russell, Bristol Foster, Gregg Sheehy, Farley Mowatt, and hundress of thousands of Canadians, in saying now is the time to act; the election is over.

The decision on South Moresby is expected from Victoria in the next few days. Inaction, and a lack of political vision by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Premier of British Columbia, mean, to paraphrase Jacques Cousteau: "It will be Canada's Galapagos Lost."

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT REINSTATE FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Finance who is expected to make a statement later this afternoon, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Could the Prime Minister inform the House whether the Minister of Finance is going to reinstate full indexation, not only for Old Age Security pensions but also for family allowance, and when is his Minister of Finance going to stop his hidden attacks on low-income families?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat surprised at the comments made by my right hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition. If I am not mistaken, he was advised that the Minister of Finance would make a statement at three o'clock, as agreed, and the statement will deal with the question raised just now. Perhaps I may recall that, as far as I know, the only time the needy in our society suffered a cut in income was when the Liberal Government introduced its 6 and 5 program which cut Old Age Security pensions.

I know the Liberals would rather not hear this, but it is a fact. You would prefer Canadians to forget, but they are going to remember this for a long time!

As for the point raised by my right hon. friend, I think the Minister will make his statement at three o'clock, as agreed.

THE BUDGET

REGISTERED HOME OWNERSHIP SAVINGS PLAN

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister will force me to deal with that particular issue when the Minister of Finance makes a statement. I want to assure him, however, that in no way were the old age pensioners affected in a similar fashion—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): No way.

—because, Mr. Speaker, the inflation rate during the those two years was almost identical to the 6 and 5 program. They were not affected in any way whatever.

Mr. Chrétien: It was less than that.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Let me tell the Prime Minister, in case he is under any false impressions that whatever his Minister says this afternoon will in any way dilute our criticism of his Budget, that he should be stimulating consumer demand.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Andre: Where is the money coming from?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He has taken $4.4 billion out of the domestic Canadian economy.

Why would the Prime Minister terminate the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan which enables young Canadians to purchase a home for the first time—and I know the Prime Minister believes, as I do, in home ownership for every Canadian—when at the same time he has given money to the wealthy investors who can take a $125,000 cash lifetime bonanza as a result of the capital gains exemption? Why did he do that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the best protection that any Government can grant to those seeking to purchase homes is to reduce interest rates by almost three points, which we have done since we came to power.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: That is the way to build prosperity and homes.

My right hon. friend says that the elderly were not affected in a similar manner as under the 6 and 5 program. He is quite right. The 6 and 5 program cut back on the elderly, and this Government has not cut back one single cent, not a penny.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: You cut back on what went to the elderly people. You are the ones.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EXTENSION OF SALES TAX

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has a faulty recollection of the facts.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: Charlie Brown.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question?

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): In his statement on Canada Day, July 1, will the Prime Minister explain to elderly Canadians why the sales tax has been extended to include hygenic products, medical aid products, band-aids and aspirins? Why is it that this regressive sales tax will be imposed very directly on our older people? Will he devote a portion of his Canada Day speech to explaining that to our older citizens?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I considered including that in my Canada Day speech, but inasmuch as the problem focuses on the Liberal deficit, it would have taken up the whole day.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: My right hon. friend knows full well, as the father of the modern day deficit in Canada, that I would have had to spend the rest of the day dealing with his deficit. He would not want me to do that on such a nice day.

FISHERIES

FISHING LICENCE GRANTED TO ULF SNARBY

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Yesterday, when I asked him if special favours had been granted since last September to individuals because of their PC Party association, in the granting of fishing licences, he replied that no licences were granted except where there were proper circumstances. Will the Minister tell the House what were the proper circumstances which led him to overrule established departmental policy and transfer a fishing licence to Mr. Ulf Snarby?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the circumstances were that Mr. Snarby had a vessel which was not fit for use. He applied to use another vessel for an interim period of time. The conditions set on the use of that vessel were consistent with the guidelines which have been laid down, and were expressed in the telex sent to him. It was a matter of ministerial discretion. The purpose was to put him in business, to employ Canadians and to get on with the job.

ROLE OF GOVERNMENT CONSULTANTS INTERNATIONAL

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Will the Minister verify that a meeting between himself and Mr. Snarby was arranged by a consulting firm, Government Consultants International? Some of its shareholders are Mr. Frank Moores, former Conservative Premier of Newfoundland, and his partner is reported to be Mr. Doucet, a brother of the former chief of staff in the office of the Prime Minister? When was he made aware that a fee was being charged for arranging the meeting?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Snarby asked to see me, as can any Canadian. As a consequence a meeting was arranged. With respect to the latter part of the Hon. Member's question, I heard sometime after the meeting, and after my decision, that there was some suggestion that Mr. Snarby had paid a fee or a charge to a consulting company. I immediately took this information to my officials and made it clear that, under no circumstances, should any Canadian, fisherman, processor, or otherwise, feel that he or she had to engage the services of a consulting company in order to obtain an appointment with me. As the Hon. Member well knows, I have probably seen more people in the last eight or nine months than has any Minister in the last eight or nine years.

TAX REVENUE MEASURES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the budget changes which will be made. It was interesting to hear the Prime Minister debate with the Leader of the Opposition on who was treating pensioners worse, Liberals or Conservatives. We could flip a coin.

Considering that we are about to hear of the great retreat at 3.15 o'clock of the Minister of Finance on the pension issue, and considering that the effects of the Budget by 1990 will result in the poorest of Canadian families, those earning $15,000 or less, paying $650 more in taxes, while those at the upper end of the scale, for example a $200,000 family, will pay $4,500 less, would the Prime Minister acknowledge that that too is unfair—not only the treatment of pensioners—and take steps to make a change in that part of the Budget?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend knows, the Minister of Finance will be making a statement at three o'clock. I hope my hon. friend will agree that it is a helpful one. However, as I listened to him I could understand why his former research director, Jim Laxer, described his economics as a hodgepodge of nonsense going nowhere.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: It is not that I want to give undue influence to the authority, but the Prime Minister ought to have heard what he said about him.

Mr. Mulroney: I am sure; I am sure.

CONCEPT OF FAIRNESS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, always, when the Prime Minister has a question of substance before him, he likes to reduce the argument to some form of rhetoric or abuse. Would he break his tradition and deal with substance at this point in the Question Period?

He called for fairness as a test of the Budget. Given that a family with two children, earning $15,000, will pay $650 more in taxes within five years, and that a $200,000 per year family will pay several thousands of dollars a year less in taxes, is that the Prime Minister's concept of fairness?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, why does my hon. friend not wait for the statement of the Minister of Finance? I know he is in a hurry to get out of here; he has to attend a convention to celebrate another defeat. It will be a big convention; it was a big defeat.

Mr. Broadbent: It was not my Party which dropped 9 percentage points in the polls.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You couldn't; you would fall off the end of the scale.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Oshawa on a supplementary question.

IMPACT ON RICH AND POOR

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, again I ask the Prime Minister to stop the comedy routine and answer the question. Last summer he went around the country talking about the rich needing to pay their fair share. The Budget does the opposite. Does he think that a Budget which reduces taxes on the rich and increases poverty for the poor is a fair one? That is the issue.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, nothing is less becoming than an old specialist in rhetoric indulging in false and specious rhetoric again. The Budget does no such thing. The Budget introduces, for the first time, significant measures of fairness designed to place surtaxes on corporations, taxed on the equity capital of banks, taxes on large corporations, and taxes on the rich. This is the first time that has ever been done. The Hon. Member should stand up and applaud those measures.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Dick: Come on over, Ed.

Mr. Broadbent: There are limits.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is Question Period.

FISHERIES

GRANTING OF LICENCE TO ULF SNARBY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Surely he realizes that his decision with respect to Mr. Snarby and the vessel Osprey will lead fishermen to only one conclusion, rightly or wrongly, about his Department—it is not what you know but who you know and how much you are prepared to pay that get results.

In light of the fact that everyone in the Minister's Department, including the Deputy Minister, the Assistant Deputy Minister for Atlantic Canada, and the licensing section, all refused Mr. Snarby's request for a licence, whose advice, either inside or outside the Govenrment, did the Minister follow in granting Mr. Snarby an unheard of 40-foot extension on his fishing vessel, an unheard of restricted licence, and a 2,180-tonne enterprise allocation which previously did not exist? Whose advice did he follow in making his decision, in that his officials rejected it?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend said that fishermen, rightly or wrongly, may assume influence. I just want to make it clear to my hon. friend that if they assume that, they are assuming it wrongly.

With respect to the application that I dealt with, on the day that I indicated approval the terms of that application had not been turned down by the Department. It was a modified application from earlier ones that were put in.

TERMS OF LICENCE

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Minister says anybody can see him, but the fact remains that, after months of trying, a meeting was arranged within days after this man hired Mr. Moores' company. Is the Minister aware that Mr. Snarby's vessel Osprey, contrary to the terms and conditions that the Minister himself laid down in granting the licence, has sailed across the Atlantic with a shipment of hull-frozen cod for sale directly into the United Kingdom? He has already broken the terms and conditions of an extraordinary licence that has been issued by the Minister. Has the Minister cancelled the licence, is he contemplating cancelling the licence, or is legal action going to be taken?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend gives me information which I have heard by rumour and which has not been received officially within my Department or on my desk. If the information that my hon. friend has is correct and reaches me appropriately, I will certainly take cognizance of what my friend represents and I will consider what action should properly be taken.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister. The track record of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans is not very good on the patronage issue because of the dismissal of wharfingers on the say-so of Tory back-benchers, the granting of a MILAP program worth $5 million to prominent Conservative organizers, and now the move by the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans in granting this licence. Would the Prime Minister undertake an investigation of the office and operation of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans in this matter, and would be further table in this House a list of people who have been referred to the Prime Minister, or to any other Cabinet Minister, by the firm operated by Moores and Doucet?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend from Comox-Powell River talks about the MILAP Program and his complaint is that it has met with overwhelming support in his own riding, including the support of many who worked for him in his campaign.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fraser: My friend refers to wharfingers. I have already told him that if he is not satisfied with the harbour masters or wharfingers in his home riding that he, as the Member of Parliament, can come and see me.

With respect to who has been referred to me by whom, what happens in my office is that requests come in for appointments, and they go in my appointment list. The Hon. Member is quite free to look through my entire diaries since September 17, if he has the time. It is a longer list than any other Fisheries Minister can point to, in seeing Canadians about matters that concern them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REFERRALS BY CONSULTING FIRM

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I would ask to see that diary at the Minister's earliest convenience, but my question again is to the Prime Minister. The firm of Moores and Doucet obviously has connections into the Prime Minister's office. They obviously have a friend in the Prime Minister, and I would like to ask again would the Prime Minister table in this House a list of the people who have been referred to him, or to any other Cabinet Minister, by the firm of Doucet, giving this House the nature of business and the outcome?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I have invited the Hon. Member to have lunch with me tomorrow to discuss a number of matters of importance to his riding. I am quite prepared to discuss this matter further with him, but the suggestion that in some way or other all these hundreds of people whom I have seen in the last number of months have been referred by one firm or another is preposterous. I would remind my hon. friend that every time a lawyer or a union representative, or a Member of Parliament, wants to see me about some matter of fisheries, that, according to my friend, is perfectly legitimate. I see my hon. friend has already left the Chamber, so there is no use in my continuing the answer.

THE ADMINISTRATION

ACCESS TO MINISTERS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question, like the previous one, is for the Prime Minister as well. Earlier in the Question Period he heard his Minister of Fisheries and Oceans confirm that a close personal friend of his, and the brother of another close personal friend, are selling instant access to Ministers, in this case the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. I want to ask the Prime Minister if he considers that a proper role for his close friends to play in his Government.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I can see that the Leader of the Opposition is keeping his applause down for that question. If the Member keeps this up, he is going to give McCarthyism a bad name.

There have been no suggestions of impropriety or any evidence of impropriety at any time, or in any circumstances, related to representations made to me or people associated with me. There is no such evidence whatsoever, because none exists.

CRIMINAL CODE INQUIRY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would direct my supplementary to the Minister of Justice on the question of impropriety, and ask him if he has been following these events and if he has examined Section 110.(1)(d) of the Criminal Code to see whether there is a matter that should be referred to the RCMP or, if he has not, whether he will refer it.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, it is somewhat unusual to have the hon. gentleman address a question to me when I am in the House. I have heard the allegations here and what is in the newspaper, and there is nothing to be investigated that I can see whatsoever. I suggest to the hon. gentleman, if he has a charge to lay against any member of the administration, that he lay the charge and put his seat on the line as he should do.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: He should put his seat where his mouth is.

Mr. Axworthy: Then he would look like you.

Mr. Crosbie: In your case they are both in the same place.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. All the yelling back and forth does not help. Order, please.

THE BUDGET

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL STUDY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact that all the statistics quoted by my Leader a short while ago regarding the impact of the Budget on the poor, namely, the taking from the needy to give to the greedy, came from the study by the Canadian Council on Social Development. Is the Prime Minister saying that the Canadian Council on Social Development impact study is specious and, if not, he is willing now to admit that his Budget is patently and blatantly unfair?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member quotes from his Leader. I did not see Mr. Peterson around today. I am sorry I missed that. The Leader of the NDP, if this is the gentleman you referred to, was predicting a loss of 100,000 or 150,000 jobs last November, and what has happened is the opposite. Two hundred and seventy-one thousand new jobs have been created. That is the way to deal with the immediate impact.

REQUEST THAT STUDIES BE TABLED

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, we all know that the Prime Minister went to help Frank Miller, and we all know where Frank Miller is today.

My supplementary question again is directed to the Prime Minister. If in fact the statistics that we have been quoting with respect to the impact of the Budget on the poor are so off the mark, is the Prime Minister prepared to table in the House the Government's budget impact studies?

● (1440)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I must acknowledge that the Hon. Member is right. I went to help Frank Miller, and what happened? He won more seats than the Liberals and the NDP.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: But the voice of the people was not good enough for the Liberals and the NDP, so they got married. That is what happened.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We might try to stay away from too much politics in Question Period.

Mr. Mulroney: I apologize, Mr. Speaker. There have been nothing but statesmanlike comments coming from the other side.

The question of my hon. friend was in two instances prefaced very clearly as being hypothetical. I suspect it has the same credence as the observations made by his Leader in November.

FINANCE

APPLICATION OF CAPITAL GAINS TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance, but in his absence I will direct it to the Minister of State for Finance. I would like some clarification regarding the application of the $500,000 lifetime capital gains tax exemption which was included in the May 23 Budget. Will the Minister please clear up the confusion which exists as to whether the proposal applies only to residents of Canada or also to non-residents?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the proposed capital gains tax exemption applies only to individuals resident in Canada. It is not designed to apply to non-residents. It is designed to encourage Canadian individuals to take risks with their capital and invest in enterprises that create jobs.

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and it concerns the Moores-Doucet case and the patronage that is going on in government in general. How much longer is the Prime Minister going to allow the continuation of government by cronyism, in which friends and relatives get special treatment from the Government and provide special access to the Government? Is that what the Prime Minister meant when he said last July 9: "We are going to reform this instrument of our national life"?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's statement is absolutely misleading and unworthy, as have been most of the interventions he has made in the House of Commons since he set foot here.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nunziata: The truth hurts, Brian, and you know it.

Mr. Boudria: Not even I would have said that the Prime Minister's statements of last summer were unworthy.

POSITION OF PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, is the Prime Minister leading the people of Canada to believe that had the senior citizens of the country hired Frank Moores and Mr. Doucet, their case would have been over a month ago rather than today?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would not have thought that it was possible for my hon. friend to sink any lower, but he has indeed done so today.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): He will reach you soon.

Ms. Copps: He's getting to your level.

Some Hon. Members: Shush!

Mr. Mulroney: There is nothing—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

MEETINGS WITH MINISTERS—PAYMENTS TO CONSULTANTS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and involves the Moores-Doucet "meet with the Minister for cash" routine. My question is very simple. Does the Prime Minister think it appropriate that Canadians should have to pay consultants money in order to arrange meetings with members of the Cabinet?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the answers to questions put to me earlier indicate quite clearly that it is not appropriate and it is not necessary.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister, because it is about something that I think Canadians would like to know. Does the Prime Minister think it appropriate that Canadians should have to pay consultants in order to arrange meetings with members of the Cabinet?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member has asked if it is appropriate that consultants be paid to seek meetings with Ministers. The answer is absolutely not. Under no circumstances is that appropriate.

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT WANTS TO REDUCE DEFICIT AT COST TO MIDDLE-INCOME FAMILIES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, and before he gives me his answer, I would remind him that Mrs. Denis, who addressed him in no uncertain terms here on the Hill the other day, is here again today to see whether he is going to give the House an intellectually honest answer.

Mr. Prime Minister, could you explain why your Budget, contrary to what the Government promised in its Blue Paper, is taking $15 million in 1985-86 and $40 million in 1986-87 from low- and middle-income families and using the family allowance to reduce the deficit? Why did you do that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, one of the objectives of the Budget was to create jobs, and that is part of the story. I think my hon. friend will agree that job creation is the most important instrument we have to preserve the dignity of our families, especially those on low incomes, and I may add that the 60,000 jobs, that were created in Quebec in just two months, in April and May, are a record for Quebec. I think it is important to recognize this as a landmark achievement. The Budget is part of a comprehensive whole which includes economic recovery and increased assistance to the needy in our society, which is our main objective.

CHILD TAX CREDIT AND FAMILY ALLOWANCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary, still in connection with the commitment made by the Government and the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who should resign if no action is taken.

Can the Prime Minister explain to the House why poor families will lose 6 per cent of the increase in child benefits, namely, 3 per cent on family allowance and 3 per cent on the child tax credit? Why should the neediest families lose 6 per cent, while the Prime Minister's family will lose only 3 per cent of the family allowance increase?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member has retrieved the consultation paper. If he were to look at the Budget Papers he would notice that families with incomes of up to approximately $28,000 per year will see their child benefits increased between 1985 and 1989. Some 325,000 families with incomes below $10,000 per year, many of them single-parent families, will be better off by 1990-91.

I would ask the Hon. Member if he remembers at all the debate we had when we said we wanted to target the child tax credit to those in the lower-income levels. That has been done. If the Hon. Member were to recheck the figures, he would find that that has been achieved. He should applaud that, because he asked for that previously, both in committee and in the House. I would suggest that he return to making his original statements.

SHIPBUILDING

HALIFAX INDUSTRIES LIMITED

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I questioned him a week ago about Halifax Industries Limited in which as many as 700 jobs are threatened by the failure of the Government to assist in resolving financial difficulties. Although I urged speedy action, a week has passed without any announcement about this matter of vital concern to the people of Halifax and Nova Scotia. When will the Minister tell us when he intends to act and whether he intends to do anything to ensure that hundreds of jobs are saved for people who are working on government icebreakers?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will hear an answer to his question very soon.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, people working in the shipbuilding industry from coast to coast are waiting for a response to their problems in general. Does the Minister plan to let months and months more pass before he does something about an industry which is in distress and is baffled by the failure of the Government to act on promises it made during the last election campaign?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): No, Mr. Speaker.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

POSTPONEMENT OF VISIT BY SECRETARY GENERAL OF ARAB LEAGUE

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs and it concerns the visit of the Secretary General of the Arab League to Canada. He was invited in 1983, and reinvited by the present Secretary of State for External Affairs in January. Now we hear that the visit has been postponed. Would he explain to the House why it has been postponed?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is correct that I have reiterated the invitation to the Secretary General of the Arab League. We are trying to work out mutually acceptable dates. So far that has not been done. If we cannot do it before our mutual attendance at the United Nations General Assembly, I look forward to having a meeting with him there.

THE PRIME MINISTER

VISIT TO QUEBEC CITY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Shh.

Ms. Copps: You people can shush all you want because you are not going to shush me up.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: Last May the Prime Minister and several officials flew to Quebec City to attend an NHL play-off game—

Some Hon. Members: Shh.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Neither the catcalls, the clapping, nor the shushing is appropriate.

Ms. Copps: The Prime Minister and several officials flew to Quebec City to attend an NHL play-off game involving the Quebec Nordiques and the Philadelphia Flyers, at a reported cost of approximately $2,600. It appears from press reports that the cost was paid for by someone other than the Prime Minister. Is the Prime Minister prepared to disclose the name or names of the person or persons who paid for the trip?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I was invited by Mr. Marcel Aubut, President of the Quebec Nordiques, to one of the playoff games between Philadelphia and Quebec. It was an important event for Quebec City. I accepted the invitation, I went there and my expenses were paid by my party.

MINISTERIAL GUIDELINES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Prime Minister has provided the information in the House. I cannot help but ask whether his office had such shoddy practices that, contrary to his own—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Perhaps the Hon. Member has a supplementary question.

Ms. Copps: I understood the Prime Minister to say that the Progressive Conservative Party had paid for the trip. Is that what the Prime Minister said? I am glad he said it in the House. I am sorry that he has violated the guidelines—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Ms. Copps: Is the Prime Minister aware that, inadvertently or otherwise, he has violated the guidelines by failing to disclose in the public registry within 30 days of the trip any personal gift or benefit of a value exceeding $200 which is received from any person not connected with him by blood relationship, marriage or adoption, together with the name and the address of the donor? My information this afternoon, from the Assistant Deputy Registrar General, is that the Prime Minister has not disclosed this gift. I would ask him to get his office practices up to scratch and to stop violating the guidelines.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am married to the Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order. Just two more days. Order.

[Translation]

Mr. Mulroney: We are not just living together, we are properly married. I can inform the Hon. Member that I was invited by the President of the Quebec Nordiques. I went there to represent the federal Government at an important event in the City of Quebec. As my predecessors did on several occasions, I let the Progressive Conservative Party pay my expenses, although I did spend some time with organizers of the subscription campaign for Laval University, of which I am Honorary President. I also spent some time with Quebec businessmen who were interested in our recovery programs for Metropolitan Quebec. And although this was important work I was doing for the Government of Canada, I felt that the Progressive Conservative Party should pay the bill, and that is what happened.

TREASURY BOARD

REASON FOR GOVERNMENT AUDITING PLACE GUY-FAVREAU PROJECT IN MONTREAL

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board and concerns cost overruns and large sums of money spent on consultants' contracts in connection with the Place Guy-Favreau project in Montreal. Could the Minister inform the House why he decided to proceed with an audit of this project?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has already answered his question. Delays and major cost overruns led the Treasury Board to ask for a project audit, and we are awaiting the findings of the consulting auditors.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CIA FUNDING OF BRAINWASHING EXPERIMENTS—COMPENSATION FOR VICTIMS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He is aware of the case involving the CIA funding of brainwashing operations in Canada which did very severe damage to nine Canadians? I have written twice to the Prime Minister about this matter.

Considering the intervention on the part of the Secretary of State for External Affairs with U.S. Secretary of State Shultz, appealing for something other than the insulting $25,000 settlement that was proposed by the U.S. and which was rebuffed by the Secretary of State of the United States, will the Prime Minister directly contact the President of the United States and urge that corrective action be taken by the American Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is wrong in his facts. We have not yet received a response from the Secretary of State of the United States. I am seeking that response. The Secretary of State knows the urgency with which I and my colleagues in the Government regard the matter.

SUGGESTED RECOURSE TO INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I can say quite categorically that that reply is encouraging. It means that there is still some hope that there will be constructive action. Given the seriousness of the matter and the justice which all Canadians and all Members of the House desire for the Canadians who are affected, if the United States does not take corrective action will the Government of Canada consider taking this important matter to the International Court of Justice at The Hague?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think we would prefer to take this question one step at a time. In our judgment, the representations which have been made to the Government of the United States have not yet been fully or adequately responded to, and we have some hope that they will be.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

SUPREME COURT RULING IN MANITOBA CASE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. It has now been two weeks since the Supreme Court made a very historic decision related to the question of Manitoba language rights. At that time I asked a question in the House about what was the intention of the federal Government when it came to making its submission in the Supreme Court in terms of the question of the minimum time which would be allowed for the translation of statutes. Has the Government now decided to join the Province of Manitoba in making a submission to the Supreme Court concerning the minimum time, or is the Government also prepared to consider the question of a constitutional amendment, in consultation with the Government of Manitoba and the Official Opposition in Manitoba, in order to save the tens of millions of dollars which this particular ruling will cost?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, we have discussed this matter with the Province of Manitoba. Representatives of the Province and the Department of Justice have met to discuss the next steps with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada in order that we will have a proper procedure for the application which has to be made within 120 days. Manitoba will be making such an application. There is general agreement on how that should be done. We intend to make representations at the same time. If we agree with the facts and the representations which Manitoba presents to the court, we will support them. If we have some reason not to agree, we will make our separate position clear as to what time may be needed. I believe that in the course of this procedure we will discover just how immense the task of translation might be and just what is meant in the court's judgment.

With respect to the latter part of the hon. gentleman's question, we have not as yet discussed any constitutional amendment. I believe that that ball is really in the court of the Government of Manitoba. But we are prepared to discuss that with the Government of Manitoba at any time it might wish to take the initiative—

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is potentially becoming a Statement under Motions.

PROVISION OF TRANSLATION ASSISTANCE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): I have a very short supplementary question which I would like to direct to the Minister of Justice. In the May, 1983, accord the whole question of providing assistance to Manitoba on translation was tied to the question of services in the two languages. Is it still the position of this Government that such help in translation is still tied to the question of services?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, we are prepared to assist the Province of Manitoba, as the Prime Minister has said, technically, by helping to assist it with provision of interpreters and the like, so that it can carry out the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada and serve the Constitution as quickly as possible.

The other matter about which the hon. gentleman asks will have to be considered in the context of 1985, and of this judgment, once the Province of Manitoba wishes to move forward, or suggest that we move in that direction.

THE BUDGET

PENSIONS—STATEMENT BY MINISTER OF FINANCE

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —on May 23 I had the honour of presenting this Government's first Budget to this House. It was a comprehensive strategy designed to end the greatest social injustice in this country, the tragic lack of meaningful jobs. It introduced measures to encourage the economic growth we need to finance social and cultural progress. It outlined a balanced and realistic plan to regain control of our spiralling debt, a compounding debt which threatens government programs in the future.

During the past month my colleagues and I have had the opportunity to discuss the budgetary strategy with many Canadians. I am pleased to report that our plan of action has been generally well received.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Canadians agree that economic renewal requires job creating investment, private initiative and fiscal responsibility. However, it has become clear that a great dead of confusion and anxiety has arisen over our proposals regarding elderly benefits. The purpose of this statement is to outline the position of the Government concerning benefits for the elderly.

Last November, in the document Agenda for Economic Renewal, the Government stated its belief that social programs must be improved based on the twin tests of social and fiscal responsibility.

[Translation]

Social responsibility demands that limited resources be channelled first of all to those in greatest need, so as to maintain a minimum level of adequate income support at all times for all Canadians.

This is a fundamental right that must be protected.

[English]

Fiscal responsibility implies that job and wealth creation is necessary to finance social progress and that control of the spiralling national debt is essential if we are to avoid threatening our ability to support social programs in the future. Since November the Government has acted on a number of fronts to lay the foundation for social progress. First, we broadened the social safety net to ensure greater fairness and to promote social justice. We have expanded the eligibility for the spouse's allowance, benefiting 85,000 younger widows and widowers who had previously not qualified for benefits.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1510)

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Veterans' benefits have been improved for some 140,000 Canadians. Tax assistance has been extended to 185,000 disabled Canadians, many of them senior citizens. As proposed in the Budget, survivor benefit rules in private pension plans will be improved. Measures have been taken which will ensure social justice for native women. Additional equalization payments have been extended to less advantaged provinces to assist them in maintaining their social programs. New training initiatives have been implemented to address the tragedy of youth unemployment in the recognition that the best income security for our younger Canadians is a job.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, that is a record of this Government's action and it is a record of which I am very proud.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The cost of these new initiatives will total $2.8 billion over the next two years. Total social spending will rise by $4 billion to $46.7 billion over the same period, close to half of total government spending. The evidence is clear: This Government's emphasis on social programs is increasing, helping those who need it most.

The second part of the strategy was to implement major reforms to the private pension system to ensure that Canadians have a fair and equal opportunity to save for their own retirement.

The third part is to put the Canada Pension Plan on a sound financial basis. I have commenced discussions on this subject with provincial Ministers of Finance, and we will be discussing this important issue again this fall.

The fourth and critical element is to regain control of our spiralling national debt. As I have stated on many occasions, the financial position of the Government of Canada has worsened at an accelerating rate over the past decade, particularly over the past two years. Previous Government decisions have created a structural budgetary imbalance which has contributed to ever-growing annual deficits and a compounding national debt.

[Translation]

It is important that all Canadians realize the size and urgency of our financial problem and understand why we have taken measures to deal with it in the Budget. Mr. Speaker, I cannot repeat this often enough.

[English]

It took 100 years for successive Canadian Governments to accumulate a debt of almost $20 billion. Less than two decades later our debt is now $200 billion and it is doubling every five years. The reason for this rapidly growing debt is simple. The Government is borrowing additional funds each year to cover the interest charges on past debt.

Let us look at these figures carefully. In the early 1970s our annual interest payments on the debt were about $2 billion. In the late 1970s those interest charges had risen to $8 billion. This year they will total $26 billion, and if we fail to change our ways, interest charges at the end of this decade could approach $50 billion per year. Some Canadians have asked what harm deficits do to them. Well, there is harm. The growing interest charges to finance those deficits are crowding out worth-while programs, programs which benefit many of us. We have to take control of our debt or those interest payments will simply overwhelm us.

There is another aspect which directly affects our senior citizens. Over the past 15 years, high inflation caused by rising deficits and mounting debt literally wiped out the savings of our sernior citizens. That was a time when there was real cause for concern among our seniors.

[Translation]

It is our concern for the future of Government programs and for Canadians that led us to take action in the Budget and in my November economic message, in order to cut back spending in all Government programs and all departments.

[English]

We started at the top. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and all Ministers took a cut in pay. Within weeks of being sworn in we launched the most comprehensive review of government programs ever undertaken in this country. This ministerial task force on program review is identifying areas for eliminating waste and inefficiency, which could lead to significant savings.

[Translation]

We proposed changes in the automatic indexing of pensions of public service employees and Members of Parliament. We proposed a surtax that would affect Canadians with high incomes and large corporations. We also proposed a new tax on large banks and trust companies, and elimination of a number of tax loopholes.

[English]

We are imposing a minimum tax on wealthy Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: When?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It will be effective January 1, 1986.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Order!

An Hon. Member: Displays in the House.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure Hon. Members in the back row know that such displays are entirely out of order.

Some Hon. Members: Throw him out.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is the same respect—Order! It is the same respect to which the Hon. Member for York South-Weston is entitled. May I therefore ask the Hon. Member to refrain from any further displays. I make it very clear what will happen should another one occur.

Mr. Mazankowski: Sleaze.

Some Hon. Members: Where is the Leader of the Liberals?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Turner set it up.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as required by the traditions of this House I have to move a motion in this regard. It is disappointing but I have to inform you that I have to keep a number of copies of this motion in my desk to take care of Members of the Liberal Party. I would have thought the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) would have some control over his Members. This is disgraceful! Disgraceful! It's a disgrace to this House. I therefore move:

That the Hon. Member for York South-Weston be suspended from the service of this House for the remainder of today's sitting.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) on a point of order.

• (1520)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I just want to draw to the attention of the Speaker that the Member named in the motion has withdrawn from the House. I respectfully suggest that, therefore, the motion is not necessary.

Some Hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. Deans: Let's finish the statement.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order.

Mr. Speaker: There is no point of order.

Mr. Ouellet: What do you mean?

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on a point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, we all realize it is the end of the session and I am positive that we could get unanimous consent to proceed as is since the Member has withdrawn. The Member will not come back. Therefore, I do not think it necessary to put the motion to the House.

Mr. Speaker: Nothing further is achieved by further noise. Order, please. When the motion is put the Member will find that he has a way of achieving what he seeks.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I have heard the point raised by the House Leader for the Official Opposition. I think we can resolve this by simply passing the motion without any further debate and without having you read the motion. We could then carry on with the proceedings and get back to business.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn) agreed to.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to continue, after that atrocious display from the other side of the House, with a little bit more respect in this place.

Mr. Ouellet: Get to the point.

Mr. Chrétien: Get to the point.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I will get to the point if I can have a little respect from the other side of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: Earn that respect. You earn it. You have lost the respect of this country. You are a lousy Minister, so earn that respect.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, we have taken action across the board because we must save money wherever we can in the 1980s in order to save programs in the 1990s. In the Budget we committed ourselves to increase payments to those elderly citizens who have inadequate pensions as resources permit and in light of future circumstances. At that time I was confident that the Government would gain additional resources in the future so that it could indeed increase payments to the elderly. The recent performance of the economy has strengthened my conviction.

More than 271,000 jobs have been created since the Government came to office. Consumer confidence has been strengthened. Interest rates have fallen. Economic growth in the first quarter of this year was much higher than generally expected. Investment intentions have also risen dramatically. These trends, coupled with the investment initiatives in the Budget, should give us all confidence that we are on the road to economic renewal.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Despite our confidence, both then and now, that government initiatives and economic growth would result in increased resources, it has become clear that our commitment to increase payments as resources permit has not allayed the concerns of senior citizens, particularly those with low incomes. I realize that the concern is real and I know that I speak on behalf of all my caucus colleagues when I say that we have recognized the anxieties which have been raised.

We have met with many senior citizens. We have listened carefully to their views on this matter. I know I speak for all my Cabinet and caucus colleagues when I say that we have been impressed by the concerns they have expressed. It was not the intention of the Government to cause uncertainty for anyone, least of all those who most need assistance. Several options have been proposed to us. The guiding principle of the Government is to act responsibly and fairly and, above all, in a manner that is responsive to the genuine concerns of Canadians. I have considered these options carefully over the past few weeks and I have proposed changes to my Cabinet colleagues which they have accepted.

Therefore, I am announcing today that Old Age Security payments will remain fully indexed to the Consumer Price Index.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): As a result of this decision, the deficit projections contained in the May 23 Budget would be increased by $15 million this year and $245 million next year. However, we cannot allow these additional costs to be financed with still more borrowed money. This decision in no way lessens our determination to reduce our annual deficit and control our national debt. The threat to economic growth, to employment, and to future social programs remains. We must deal firmly with that threat.

Accordingly, I am announcing two actions today in order to offset the increased costs in the next two fiscal years. As a first step I am announcing today a change in the budgetary proposal to place a deficit-reduction surtax on large corporations. The term of the surtax will be extended from 12 to 18 months.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): This surtax will now match the surtax on high income individuals. The measure will yield an additional $200 million next year.

To help meet the continuing cost of fully indexing old age pensions, I propose to increase the excise taxes on gasoline and other motive fuels by an additional 1 cent per litre effective January 1, 1987.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): This measure will yield an additional $450 million annually. In my Budget I brought forward a clear and realistic medium-term plan to control our debt. It is a plan which requires strong actions, including both expenditure reductions and tax increases. It is a plan that will reduce the annual deficit by $20 billion by the end of the decade and cut a total of $75 billion from the projected increase in the public debt.

That plan is maintained. The additional money required to finance old age pensions later in the decade must and will be found. I will be announcing, in future Budgets, details of measures that will ensure that the dangerous trend of rising debt will be controlled.

Canadian society faces a major challenge in the future as our population ages. We must all, Governments and individual Canadians alike, plan today so that we can meet that challenge tomorrow. Our senior citizens can only be truly secure if we have a financially responsible Government and a healthy expanding economy.

• (1530)

I would like to table Notices of Ways and Means covering the measures that I have announced today.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I must say that I regret at the outset that the Minister did not give me and, I presume, the Leader of the NDP, the usual courtesy—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You were offered it. You turned it down.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The House Leader says we were offered it—only if we were not allowed the usual courtesy of putting questions to the Minister on a ministerial statement. This is the first time that I can recall on a statement of this importance that the Opposition was not given the courtesy of an advance copy.

I might also say, while dealing with procedural matters, that when the Minister announced some additional taxes, he did so when the markets across this country are still open. I find that to be a highly unusual budgetary precedent. We will examine in due course what the effects of that may or may not be.

An Hon. Member: Thirty minutes.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Thirty minutes is enough to make or lose a lot of money on the stock exchange. I draw that to the attention of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I will ask all Members to show the proper courtesy to another Member when the Right Hon. Member is making his speech.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): In case the hon. lady does not know, the markets on the West Coast are open for a number of hours yet.

Mr. Speaker, only the Conservative Party would applaud a Minister of Finance who has just put senior citizens through anxiety, sleepless nights and personal torture for over a month because he failed to come to this decision as soon as he and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) realized that they had made a fundamental mistake in this Budget.

The senior citizens of this country will not forget that it was the intention of the Minister and the Prime Minister to reduce their purchasing power over a period of years in a clandestine, secret, sneaky and hidden fashion, by way of a massive tax increase and reductions of 3 per cent a year so that if this measure had been left intact, by 1989 every old age pensioner in the country would have received $30 less per month.

I do not know why Members on the government benches are applauding the reversal of a decision that never should have been taken in the first place. The Prime Minister apparently took a very intimate personal interest in this Budget, which involved two very strong commitments made by the Leader of the Government during the last election campaign. The first, made in Sherbrooke on July 17, last year, was that old age pensioners would be fully protected against the ravages of inflation by full indexation. We have read that statement over and over here in the House of Commons. It was categorical, it was clear, and it was an absolutely unqualified commitment.

Of course, the other commitment was the universality of our social programs and their delivery. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that it is unfortunate that this statement has taken so long when the error was pointed out so quickly to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance after the Budget was delivered.

I have heard that feeble, economic justification for the reversal of the decision. The Budget was presented only a month or so ago. Either the Minister's projections are out of date one month later or the projections are not worth much. In any event, those projections and that economic excuse will not impress the country. Everyone in Canada will know that the Minister was searching for some flimsy hook upon which to attach an absolute retreat from an unfortunate mistake.

Let us look at the taxes which the Minister has imposed. He is extending the corporate surtax, which puts it into proper synchronization with the personal surtax. There is an increase in the excise tax on gas as of January 1 of one cent a litre, or five cents a gallon. He has not told us, but that item is worth about a billion dollars a year. We would like to see the full impact of that because it is another tax on the consumer. There is two cents, beginning September 3 and another one cent on January 1, hitting at the Canadian consumer and the tourist industry.

Mr. de Cotret: 1987.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It is a tax right on the farmer. I point out to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) that every farmer in this country burns 14,000 litres of gas a year, which adds another $180 a year to the farmer's bill. Every fisherman uses 4,800 litres of gas a year, which is approximately another $90 a year for every fisherman that has been added today.

We need not repeat here what we have tried to say to Your Honour, to the House and to the country over the past month. The scheme to attack the most defenceless in our society—those who are retired, cannot rearrange their income, cannot recoup wages and those who cannot scale by way of bargaining with their employers any protection against inflation were left defenceless in the Budget. We said on Budget night that it was harsh, cruel and sneaky, massive and hidden.

[Translation]

—there are 1,700,000 seniors who live on the poverty line or even below. Our senior citizens are entitled to a better treatment from the Government. Once this matter is resolved, the Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) personally will have lost some of their credibility and the confidence of the public.

Why did the Prime Minister appear prepared to disregard his promise in the first place?

[English]

The action taken today in no way comes close to salvaging this Budget. Those promises of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance made in September and November in the House were clear and categorical: old age pensioners were not to be touched; indexing was to be left alone and sacrosanct. Those promises were broken. The fact that they are now repaired is not only the result of the efforts of this Party and the efforts of this side of the House but because public opinion from business communities, from the professional community from one coast to the other and three million senior citizens said no, we will not lie dead and take it. They rose up from one end of the country to the other in protest.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, we told the Minister on several occasions that we understood his desire to reduce the public debt and the annual deficit of the country. However, we asked him why he should do it on the backs of the aged, the backs of those least able to protect themselves, the backs of the unemployed, the backs of the handicapped and the backs of the outlying regions of the country. Why do it that way? I suggest that he has recognized part of that situation.

I hold in my hand the Budget that I brought forward in the House of Commons when I had the honour in 1972 of holding the portfolio which the Minister holds. We indexed old age pensions because we believed that our pensioners had a social contract with this country. Having paid taxes and having worked a lifetime, they were entitled to have the increment fixed in that Budget.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): In 1973 I had the honour to present another Budget in which we indexed the brackets in the Income Tax Act as well as the deductions. We protected the average family in this country. We protected the average taxpayer from the erosion and the interaction of the progressive tax system and inflation so that only real increases in income were taxed at higher rates, not inflationary increases. Yet the Minister of Finance has withdrawn that protection from inflation for every family in this country by 3 per cent a year. He has withdrawn the protection to family allowances by 3 per cent a year as well as every deduction under that statute.

That Budget was supported on this particular item wholeheartedly by the Prime Minister's predecessor, Robert Lawrence Stanfield, and the rest of the Conservative Party at that time in 1973.

It is our opinion that this Budget continues to be incompetent and irresponsible. In the way the taxes were imposed through deindexing, they were hidden, delayed and clandestine. The hon. gentleman may not understand that word, but I will give him a good Anglo-Saxon word for it that dates back a thousand years. The word is "sneaky". It was a sneaky, sneaky Budget.

● (1540)

We still have the deindexation of family allowances; we still have the deindexation of the tax brackets; we still have the sales tax on health and hygiene products. We still have the elimination of the Registered Home Ownership Saving Plan, and the Budget remains an unbelievable singular attack on the middle-class in this country. The Budget is unfair because it taxes the average Canadian family from $350 to $500 a year all told and it gives a cash bonanza as a result of the capital gains exemption—not targeted to Canadian small business, not targeted to businesses owned by Canadians listed on Canadian stock exchanges—to anyone who wants to invest in Florida real estate, in a hotel in Hong Kong or in European art.

Mr. Chrétien: Or horses.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): For $500 a year the average family sees those 4 per cent wealthy enough to qualify for a capital gains exemption untargeted, getting a lifetime cash bonanza of $125,000 a year. That is not fair.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

An Hon. Member: That is Tory economics.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): As for deindexation, and this is reinforced by the figures of the Department of Finance which neither the Department nor the Minister have denied as being valid—we can see that over five years the average family earning $15,000 a year gets a cumulative 36 per cent income tax increase; a family earning $30,000 a year an 11 per cent increase; a family earning $100,000 a year a 4 per cent increase; and a family earning $200,000 a year a 2 per cent increase. You add back that capital gains exemption so a family earning $200,000 a year is ahead 2 per cent, 3 per cent or 4 per cent. Is that a fair Budget, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Chrétien: Not at all.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That has not been changed today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Budget was unfair on the afternoon of May 23. It is still unfair, Mr. Speaker. The Budget was sneaky on the afternoon of May 23, and it is still sneaky and it is still a no jobs Budget. It takes $4.4 billion out of the economy. It will affect demand and the purchasing power of Canadians to enrich the prospects of every small Canadian-owned business in the country.

[Translation]

From an economic standpoint, Mr. Speaker, raising taxes at this time is a stupid move. It is unacceptable that they should seek to reduce the deficit at the expense of the weak, the poor, the sick and the unemployed. It is shameful that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) would want to be congratulated for having given in under tremendous public pressure to stop attacking low income elderly Canadians.

[English]

I think, Mr. Speaker, and I submit it was an absolute disgrace which took almost a national outcry by a group of citizens who never were politicized before who always trusted their Government, who always thought that a social contract meant a social contract, who always were at ease with their Government because they thought the pension which they were guaranteed would remain a Pension and would remain protected against inflation. We had a national disgrace, and it took a public outcry and the work of the Opposition in Parliament to obtain this statement today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, this announcement we have just heard by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) constitutes a triumph for the pensioners all across Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I want to say that I try to act without illusions in spite of what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) may suggest from time to time. Notwithstanding the important efforts that have been made by my colleagues in the New Democratic Party and by members of the Liberal Party in opposition, I will also say that on this issue I am under no illusion that the Government today would not be backing down on a grotesquely unfair proposition had not the pensioners of Canada got the message through.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: In the past four weeks I have talked to a number of people, not simply the pensioners. One of the most moving exchanges I had on this very important question occurred in Saskatoon with high school students who were gathered from all over the province for a regional conference, interestingly enough on the subject of justice. What was very interesting about those young people, high school students, was the conversations they had. If I recall correctly, the motion they passed pointed out that as young Canadians they did not want to see our senior citizens so unfairly dealt with. That was very moving for me.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I do not want to take up a lot of time of the House today but I want to deal in a sense with two parts of what the Minister had to say. On the one hand he provided an elaborate justification for what he has just announced that really reflects the heart and soul of the Minister of Finance. He is a man with integrity, and as I understand him, a small "c" Conservative individual. What he said was a clear giveaway about the priorities of his Government. He said, and I took down the words, that before we could have social progress in our nation, before we could have change, there had to be growth in the economy, there had to be the sign that jobs were being created. Nothing could better distinguish a Conservative approach to politics from a social democratic approach than that notion.

We believe you must have justice, whether or not you are having growth in the economy.

[Translation]

For the benefit of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), I would emphasize that growth is desirable in the economic sector, there is no doubt about that. But at the same time there are poor people in this country, not only retired people, others whose income is not very high. Given that context, we must now have a fair Budget. That is the point, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Second, the Minister as part of his elaborate justification for introducing this one element of fairness in his Budget, referred to his fixation—I can only describe it that way—with the deficit problem. I am sure the Minister wakes up in the morning and goes to bed at night thinking of nothing but the deficit. He talked about the growing deficit. I would like to point out to the Minister, and I suspect he knows his figure well, that the reason we have had a growth in the deficit in the last few years—not the only reason but the principal economic reason—is that a downturn in economic growth and a downturn in employment levels occurred. When that happens, even a Conservative Minister of Finance should know that revenues drop because people are not paying taxes. Instead, they collect unemployment insurance, and companies not making profits, do not pay taxes. I repeat, the reason we have had an increase in the deficit is that the economy has not been growing. The way to deal with that is not a short run preoccupation with the deficit now but to get the economy growing and deal with the deficit later.

I want to come now to the Minister's two proposals. The first was to get additional revenue. He said the surtax that has been applied to corporations is to be extended for another six months. I think that, to say the least, that is quite reasonable. We looked at the Budget, and the net effect of his Budget over five years showed that the corporate sector in Canada would be paying $2 billion less at the end of five years while taxes by ordinary individuals would be going up by over $4 billion. If the Minister is now going to extend that surtax by six months, let him not expect us to applaud a lot for this elementary introduction of another degree of fairness. I will not belabour the point, because we agree with it.

I do want to say to the Minister though that we do not agree with his other proposal, the 1 cent a litre increase in the price of gasoline in 1987, which is when I believe it will be applied. This means only one thing, that all Canadians will be affected, rich and poor alike. The Minister knows that that has a negative effect on the economy in terms of our competitive position. It also puts a regressive additional burden on everyone.

Since the Minister addressed the issue of alternative sources of funding, and since we will be dealing with Budget Bills when we return in the fall, we are hoping that this is not the only change of mind experienced by the Government on its Budget. We are pleased that the Government has changed its mind on this issue, but we will fight hard to get the Government to change its position on other unfair aspects of the Budget.

It was interesting to hear the Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) talk about all the regressivity and tax unfairness in the Budget, as if it were not the Liberal Party which reduced taxes on the rich in 1982 by almost $2 billion. The Liberals are always good social democrats when they are in opposition, but they are Conservatives when they are in power. That is the problem with the Liberal Party of Canada.

An Hon. Member: A pox on both their sides.

Mr. Broadbent: We will see about that. When we get around to debating the Budget Bills, we will have to look at alternative proposals. In terms of the part-time surtax on incomes over $40,000 per year, people can avoid it because it is on federal taxable income. If they use the loopholes, as the Prime Minister knows well, they could end up not even paying it. I say rhetorically to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and to the Prime Minister: Why not restore taxation levels to upper income Canadians, the marginal tax rates, to what they were before the Liberals cut them in 1982? That would give them $1.7 billion, year in and year out, to redistribute downward to the poor people of Canada.

There were good aspects of the Western Accord on energy. We in this Party were pleased to see the producing provinces, particularly Alberta and Saskatchewan, obtain a larger share of the revenue. However, we saw no economic sense or economic justice in providing some $400 million to $500 million in additional revenue to multinational oil companies for oil which they had already discovered.

Mr. Orlikow: And they want more.

Mr. Broadbent: They want more, that is correct. If the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister are looking for additional sources of revenue, why impose a one-cent per litre tax on gasoline at the pumps which affects ordinary Canadians? Why do they not go after the multinational oil companies and get them to pay their fair share of taxes?

I want to conclude with two points. The first one concerns a very important question. The principle of universality was at stake in this issue. If we had gone the route of the Budget, and if we had followed the thinking of the vast majority of members of the Conservative Party, as I understood it and as it was expressed in the debate, we would have established a two-class system for pensioners, and a few years down the road the basic pension would have had marginal significance for the people of Canada. We on this side of the House are pleased, not simply with a political victory, although I think it was a political victory, but for the sake of the history of our country. For the last 30 years, we have been gradually building up—and we thought it was an accepted notion in the minds of members of all Parties—a social security system in this land of ours which says that everything is not a market-place commodity. When it comes to medical services, education and pensions, it does not matter if one is a doctor, a lawyer, a logger, a banker or a very poor person; eveyone is entitled to a basic program of that kind.

In conclusion, the Government backed down, not because of a newly perceived sense of fairness, but because there was opposition to a perceived unfairness in the Budget. I pay particular tribute to the older people of the country, from Halifax and St. John's in the east to Victoria in the west, who were not the passive creatures about whom some people like to write in modern society. They were men and women who perceived that the Government was going in the wrong direction and got their message through. We on this side of the House did our job. There is no doubt about that. It shows what can be done in a parliamentary system, even when the Government has a large majority.

I conclude by expressing my appreciation to the pensioners of Canada for fighting their cause, for fighting a just cause and winning.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) has dealt with the issue of fairness, but I wanted to direct a question to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) with respect to the fundamental economic asssumptions upon which the Budget proceeds, especially with respect to the sales tax that will be imposed in some respects on July 1, and of course the additional gasoline tax about which we learned today.

Specifically, as the Minister knows, the Economic Council of Canada conducted simulation studies about two years ago which showed that a reduction in sales tax would decrease the rate of inflation, would increase consumer demand and would increase jobs. I think the Minister of Finance would agree that in the long term his deficit problem has to be resolved by growth, not through cuts in taxes. Next year alone he shows only a $1 billion reduction in the deficit. Has the Minister conducted simulation studies, not on the effect of increasing taxes, but on the effect of decreasing taxes? If he has done so, could he table them in the House so that we could compare them with the scenario presented to us in the Budget?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am always amused by these probing questions from the Liberal Party, the Party which says that it would control the deficit. When we look back and see what happened over the past 10 or 15 years, starting from the time when the Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) held my portfolio, we know that all these questions are a lot of hot air. They do not have any idea what they would do. The Leader of the Opposition said that he would have cut the deficit by $15 billion if he had remained in the job of Prime Minister. I ask him and I ask the financial critic of the Liberal Party: If they do not like the way in which we propose to cut the deficit, let us hear what they have to say. We will have four months of consultation in the fall of this year, leading up to the next Budget. I would be delighted to hear what they have to say about how we can get on top of the deficit problem.

When the Leader of the Opposition was Minister of Finance, the spending of the Government rose 30 per cent in one year, and he says in a righteous way: "Show me the impact of what you have just done".

The impact of what I have just done is that we will maintain control of the fiscal problem, so that we will not have the runway deficits which we have experienced over the past four years, where deficits went from $14 billion, to $23 billion, to $30 billion, to $35 billion. That is what we have to stop. The sooner the Hon. Member gets that through his thick skull, the better this country will be.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I intended to pose my question in a serious way and tried to be helpful to the Minister of Finance. We recognize his dilemma and we recognize the dilemma faced in this Budget document when he shows us that, with all this pain and suffering, the deficit between 1985-86 and 1986-87 comes down by $1 billion, from $33.7 billion to $32.7 billion. Magically, by 1990-91, he tells us, it will be down by $20 billion. Would the Minister show us the calculations for those intervening years, which we have not received and which were not included in the Budget documents? That is one point.

My other question is in direct response to his question when he asked what we would do. Has he considered the opposite scenario? If he has, can we see the simulation? He told us on March 1 that increased taxes would dampen demand and that there was room on the expenditure side. His seat-mate, the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen), is chairing the committee looking at the expenditure side. We have not seen results of any concrete nature from that exercise. I say to the Minister of Finance: Let us look at this documentation in the course of the debate to see if there is a better way to go, because we believe that there is. This is not an expansionary Budget and expansion is required if this country is going to pull out of its deficit. It is not going to come about, I suggest to the Minister, by these kinds of taxes and these modest cuts that he has come forward with.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have heard this argument before: Let us hope for growth and growth will solve all our problems. Let me remind the Hon. Member that last year in the United States I think they had growth of 6.9 per cent, and what happened? The deficit went down $15 billion. In Canada we had growth of 5 per cent, a pretty good growth rate. What happened to the deficit in the country? It went up about $6 billion. This is the sort of thing that shows there is a little bit of hokum in the argument that the Hon. Member puts out on the floor of the House of Commons.

Let me just put the numbers back to him. We are spending this year $26 billion on interest costs; we are spending $9.4 billion on defence; $2.1 billion on overseas aid. Which of those does he think he can cut? We have major statutory programs, unemployment insurance, family allowance, benefits for the elderly, EPF, the Canada Assistance Program. We have $31.6 billion in all the programs of Government, apart from those. That is why we have to be looking at some other ways, as we have outlined in this Budget, to come to terms with the deficit problem.

I will go back to what the Leader of the NDP—probably he is more the Leader of the Opposition than the current one is—said, that we will have our social programs and then we will borrow money to pay for them. If we borrow $1,000 to pay for part of a social program, in seven years' time in today's earnings that will be $1,000 that we will have paid in interest costs and we will still not have paid the money back. That is the problem that we have to get over. I think the Hon. Member knows it but either he is not admitting it or what he is saying is, "I don't know how to solve the problem and I am very happy that I am in the Opposition". I say to him, we are very happy he is too and all Canadians are happy because we cannot have any more of the type of runaway spending that we have had over the past 15 or 20 years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, these questions are not mischievous. I have sympathy for the dilemma that faces the Minister of Finance and I know the numbers that he is faced with. I also know that he said on March 1 that taxes would have a dampening effect on the economy. He has told us in the past that taxes are not the way to go. He also said as recently as March 1 that there was room on the expenditure side.

Is he telling us today and did he tell us in the Budget, perhaps based on the advise that he received from his seat-mate, that he could find no room on the expenditure side and that he has decided that, notwithstanding the dampening effect of taxes, that is the way to get at the deficit? If that is the way to get at the deficit, how does he explain how the deficit is to be reduced by $20 billion by the year 1991 when it will only come down $1 billion, by his own numbers, by the year 1987?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, let me ask the Hon. Member to go back and read the Budget again, if he ever did read it. Seventy-five billion dollars is going to be reduced from the accumulated debt between now and 1990-91. That is in the Budget papers. Eighty per cent of that is on spending cuts. Only 15 per cent is going to be found through tax increases.

We have gone through all Departments of Government. My colleague, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), as the Hon. Member points out, is the chairman of the task force looking at programs, and there will be more spending cuts, more efficiencies and less waste as we go through the process of this task force.

I remind him that 80 per cent of what we will be doing over the next five or six years will be found on the expenditure side. That demonstrates the amount of waste, the amount of inefficiencies, the lack of attention that the previous Government allowed to go on. If we could find that amount of money, surely they could have done a slightly better job when they were in power. That is the sort of difference we are facing here with this Government in power and not the previous Government.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I have three questions that I would like to put to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). The Minister of Finance will be aware, as my Leader has pointed out, that one of the reasons, perhaps one of the major reasons why we have an increasing deficit today is that personal sales tax and corporate tax simply are not flowing in to Government as we had expected and experienced in the past, as a result of the economic downturn and the economic malaise. He will also know that it is sound business practice that to make money one has to invest money. In other words, to gather sales tax and corporate and personal income tax one has to invest to see that that happens. Would it not make sense in terms of deficit reduction for the Minister of Finance to take steps to encourage economic development in a direct way? I will use two examples. The mayors of Canada indicated that there are $14 billion of necessary municipal works that must be conducted in the country. Can the Minister of Finance think of a better time to get those kinds of projects under way? Reforestation projects are needed in virtually every province in the country, much more than the rather small step that was taken as a result of some of the ERDA agreements that were recently signed.

I would like him to comment on that. In other words, if he is serious about economic development, why not take some stimulative steps to ensure that it takes place?

Second I want to ask the Minister of Finance what he thinks about the proposal put forward by my Leader in terms of deficit reduction when he said, why not return to the tax levels of 1982 that were changed in the MacEachen Liberal Budget. That would result today in an inflow of taxes of about $1.7 billion per year. Again, this is just a practical example. The Minister has indicated he wants to hear some specifics.

Third, I want to ask the Minister of Finance if he has confidence in his Budget, in his economic statement and the economic policies therein. When I asked him in the last two or three weeks to provide me, through the Access to Information Act, with the impact studies flowing from the Budget in terms of its impact on unemployment, on regional economic development and similar kinds of impacts, the Minister of Finance signed a letter to me saying that that information would not be available. If the Minister has confidence, why not provide that material? My Leader has indicated contrary evidence in terms of the impact of the Budget and has indicated some very negative results in terms of economic development and employment opportunities. If the Minister has faith in what he is doing, why would he not share this? Is he trying to keep it secret because he does not have confidence in what he is doing, or is he pulling some kind of a double-cross on the people of Canada and not providing them with that kind of fair information? What is he trying to hide?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I ask the Hon. Member what he meant by "a double-cross on the people of Canada" not giving him information that is provided as a Cabinet confidence to me. What sort of double-cross is he talking about?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I would remind the Minister of Finance that there were two other questions.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): You are not going to get an answer until you answer that one.

Mr. Riis: My question to him is this. The Minister says to the people of Canada that the measures in his Budget will create economic growth, reduce unemployment, reduce interest rates and the like. I say that his Department has information that measures the impact of his Budget. Can he think of a better way to generate confidence in the investment community, in the people of Canada generally, than to say, here it is, the best information possible to the people of Canada will be the impact of my Budget policies? When he refuses to share that with the people of Canada, how can we be confident in what he is doing if he is not prepared to share the impact of his own policies?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I am waiting for the answer to the question, where is the double-cross to the people of Canada in my not giving the Hon. Member the informatian that is a Privy Council confidence?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the double-cross is simply this. He says this is going to happen. Virtually every other study that has been made public since the Budget was presented points out reactions to the contrary. The Minister is saying one thing, but is not prepared to demonstrate the realities of that. It is double-talk. He is saying one thing and doing something else. He tells us to have confidence in what he has done, but he is not prepared to share that confidence. What is he trying to hide? Why is he afraid to share this with the people of Canada?

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I noticed that the Minister will be imposing a one-cent per litre gasoline tax in January, 1987. Yesterday in the House I asked him if he would give consideration to a tax exemption for agriculture and primary producers on the tax that will be imposed on September 3.

During the election campaign, the Conservative Party said that it would remove all excise taxes on farm fuels and primary-producer fuels. The two taxes that have already been announced go a long way toward reinstating full excise taxes for primary producers. In the spirit of the commitment that was made during the election campaign which the Minister fulfilled last fall in the economic statement, the Minister should consider his actions.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) made a speech at Inuvik about two months ago. At that time, she indicated that she would put in place a new petroleum incentive program to replace the PIP program. We have heard reports that the program which she plans to bring forward this fall regarding incentives for drilling, exploration and development of oil and gas in the Arctic areas and offshore will cost two cents a litre as well. I wonder if the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) could comment on that and tell us whether or not there will in fact be an additional two cents per litre added later this fall or next winter to cover the incentive program for exploration and development.

As well, I wonder if the Minister would give consideration to providing tax exemptions for the primary producers and particularly for farmers who will be facing serious difficulties in the upcoming year.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I think that what the farmers have received from the Government has been demonstrated very, very clearly by my colleague, the Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). In November, we gave a fuel tax rebate on taxes that were levied at that time. We have reduced interest costs at the Farm Credit Corporation. We have gone off the metric system so that farmers are able to avoid the problems that they had measuring quantities of fertilizers. There are many ways that we have helped the farm community, and I think the farmers of this country realize that. Not the least of that help is the relief on capital gains tax which we promised and delivered.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct two questions to the Minister. The Minister talked about imposing a minimum income tax as of January 1 of next year. Could the Minister assure Hon. Members of the House that that tax will also apply to those over 250 people who had incomes of more than $200,000 and did not pay any income tax and to the 7,000 people who had incomes of over $50,000 per year and were able to avoid paying income tax because of the special measures in the present income tax law which permit them to make deductions and thus avoid paying all income tax?

Similarly, the Minister announced that he was extending the special tax on corporations. Surely the Minister knows that many of the large corporations have not paid any corporate taxes at all in recent years because the taxes they should have paid went into the deferred corporate tax column. Can the Minister assure us that when he brings in these measures, both wealthy individuals and large corporations will be required to pay taxes just like the small business people and individual Canadians who pay their fair share of income taxes?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, the minimum tax that I have said will be put in place as of January 1 next year is a minimum tax—

Mr. Orlikow: Will it be for everybody?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I am sorry?

Mr. Orlikow: The question I am asking, Mr. Speaker, is whether or not that tax will apply to all of those people who have been able to avoid paying income tax in the past just like the American tax system does.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, one of the proposals that is in the discussion paper was designed following the American system. I would encourage the Hon. Member to come to the meeting of the Finance Committee when this discussion paper will be the subject of its consideration to provide his view as they would be very much appreciated. We put forward three different proposals. We are trying to come up with the best proposal so that it will be fair to Canadians in its application.

The Hon. Member made reference to corporations not paying taxes. Some of those corporations are not paying taxes because they have been losing money. Surely the Hon. Member is not suggesting that we levy taxes on companies that have been losing money. That would be the fastest way to get those companies to lay off more people or even to go out of business. There has to be a balanced approach. What is needed is an understanding of the impact of taxation on these companies or else we will not be able to develop the government revenues required to support the social programs that both his Party and my Party are very anxious to see preserved.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) for his courage, his determination and his sincerity in listening to the senior citizens of this country and particularly to his colleagues in caucus.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Does the Minister feel that the decision to eliminate the deindexation of Old Age Security payments from the Budget will contribute to the ever increasing levels of confidence that Canadians have in their country?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is quite right. That is what this is intended to generate. I would like to draw the Hon. Member's attention to the last paragraph of my remarks in which I said that elderly Canadians can only feel secure if we have a financially responsible Government and a healthy, growing economy. That is the fundamental basis for the social programs on which elderly as well as disadvantaged Canadians rely.

The Leader of the New Democratic party said that he wanted to draw a very clear distinction between the policies and the philosophies of the New Democratic Party and the Conservative Government. I would agree very much with what the Leader of the New Democratic Party has said. We understand that it is essential that we have a healthy, growing economy to support the range of government services and programs that are in place today. The Leader of the New Democratic party is telling us to spend now and perhaps we will still have money later. He is asking for an act of faith. He is saying that sometime in the future the money will be in place. That was the policy followed by the previous Government for 15 or 20 years. It cannot go on. Surely the message must be getting through the members of the Liberal and New Democratic Parties that we cannot go on spending and borrowing at rates of interest of 10 per cent or 12 per cent while expecting that everything is going to be all right.

Let me draw to the attention of members of the Opposition the fact that each year, because of its structure, some 60 per cent to 65 per cent of our debt rolls over each year. The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) has a big smile on his face. Let me remind him about what happened in 1981-82. Interest rates rose about 10 percentage points in that year. That 60 per cent of debt amounts this year to $120 billion and 10 per cent of that is $12 billion. Surely the Hon. Member can think of a better way of spending $12 billion than by giving it to the banks and other investors.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Government did not consult with senior citizens before this measure was introduced in the Budget in the first place.

I would like to ask the Minister of Finance a question. He said that he is looking for ways to reduce the deficit. There is one item in the Budget which outrages most Canadians. That item is the $500,000 capital gains exemption. It has created a tax shelter. There is no question that it is good as far as capital gains on family farms or homes are concerned, but, surely, the Minister can make provisions and restrictions to ensure that the speculative efforts of entrepreneurial Canadians do not escape the tax man. When it concerns speculative investment in art, horse racing, et cetera, surely it is not beyond the ability of the Government to set up a restrictive system in order that the tax shelter will not be used for that kind of wealth creation. Why could the Minister of Finance not tackle that? We are the only industrialized country in the western world which does not tax capital gains. The articles that I have read which were written by economists indicates that they doubt whether that tax provision will create jobs.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the Hon. Member that economists said the November statement would result in the loss of between 50,000 and 100,000 jobs. The Hon. Member should realize that economists talk with one hand and they talk with the other hand. A year later, they choose the hand from which they want to speak. The point that I am making is that if the economists of the world were running government policy, we would be in a lot of trouble.

Mr. Lapierre: What about your economists?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member would listened, he might learn something. The economists of the world are always saying: "I have got to see what the little black box tells me". They have to know what the econometric model says. That is not the way in which this country works. People respond to incentive and the motivation of an opportunity to make money for themselves so that they can give something to their kids which they did not have when they were younger. That is what makes the country tick. We are trying to motivate people to build for the country. That is what will create the jobs.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) one question. The Minister told the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) that the farmers of the country liked his Budget. Is the Minister aware of the resolution which was passed by the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture which I read in the House a week ago? It reads in part:

> Whereas Mr. Brian Mulroney during the last election campaign made a written promise to provide agriculture with long-term financing—
> Whereas farm financing was not addressed in the recent Budget, . . . we, the members of the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture jointly demand that the Prime Minister of Canada fulfil his campaign promises—

The resolution continues, but I will not read it in its entirety as it has been tabled in the House under Standing Order 21. Is the Minister aware of the resolution? If so, how can he say that the farmers of my constituency and others like his Budget when two out of the three most important promises were not fulfilled? Only one promise was partially fulfilled.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would allow me to read a few things into the record. We said that we would abolish the imposition of capital gains tax. We have done that as far as farms are concerned, up to a lifetime maximum of $500,000. We said that we would reduce the price of farm fuels by not collecting the current excise tax. That was done in November. We said that we would extend the small business bond program. We did that in the Budget. The Hon. Member for Wetaskawin (Mr. Schellenberger) has a Private Members' Bill on the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act which has been referred to the standing committee. The Farm Credit Corporations interest rate conversion program has helped 5,600 producers who were locked into high interest rates. Those interest rates have dropped from 16.75 per cent to 12.75 per cent. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) has expanded the mandate of the Farm Credit Corporation appeal boards. The debt review boards which were set up by the Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey (Mr. Gurbin) are working successfully on a private sector basis with the banks. The Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty) has dealt with the whole question of Section 31 in a way which improves the administration of that section. I think the Hon. Member realizes—

Mr. Boudria: I was on the committee.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member would listen, he might learn of the range of things which we have done to help farmers in his riding. I want him to know so that he can tell them that the Government is acting in the interests of the farmers of Canada and, in particular, the farmers of that riding.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Amendments to the Advance Payment for Crops Act are currently being drafted to double the size of loans for advance payments. The Western Grain Stabilization Act was amended earlier this spring to enable a $450 million interim payment for the 1984-85 crop year. On April 29, the Minister of Agriculture announced $6.5 million for renovations and construction of the Ontario Veterinary College at Guelph. A new animal pathology laboratory will be constructed near Guelph. A joint Canada-Saskatchewan research program on raising beef cattle was extended for five years. Mr. Speaker, I could go on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I would like to recognize the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, one of the most important features of the statement which was made today was that in order to pay for the maintenance of senior citizens' pensions a tax of one cent a litre on gasoline was imposed as of 1987.

Will the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) rule out any further tax breaks for oil companies? They have received a $5.6 billion PGRT tax break as a result of the Budget and the Western Accord. They also received some tax breaks for windfall profits. However, the newspapers today indicate that the oil companies want more money and more tax breaks.

First, will the Minister of Finance rule out any further tax breaks to oil companies? Second, given the fact that the major companies received approximately $400 million to $500 million as a result of windfalls from old oil going to world price, why would the Minister not put a windfall profits tax on that? I suggested a tax of 50 per cent. That would have represented $200 million and it would have paid for the indexing of the senior citizens' pensions. If he had done that he would not have had to place further taxes on gasoline. I am sure the Minister knows that the average price of gasoline in Canada right now is 51.5 cents a litre, which is about $2.34 a gallon. I am told that in the United States the smaller American gallon costs about $1.28. That is $1.71 in Canadian funds. There are growing discrepancies. We wonder how much more the motorists can pay at the pump. How much more in taxes are we going to put on?

To summarize my question, will the Minister rule out any further tax breaks for the oil companies? And why did the Minister not consider putting on a 50 per cent windfall profits tax where he could have raised $1 million and would not have had to levy that one cent a litre at the pump?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, let me respond to the Hon. Member's question in the same way I have responded to him before on this subject. If the Hon. Member goes back and compares the tax regime before the NEP and now, he will see that the oil companies in Canada are not as well off. I have never heard the Hon. Member acknowledge that. I have never heard him congratulate either myself or the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) for doing this.

What we have tried to do is to provide a taxation regime for the oil industry which is comparable to tax regimes in other industries. The Hon. Member knows what happened in the industry because he and I were both energy critics at the same time. He knows what happened to the oil and gas industry in western Canada. He knows about the companies which were shut, the stores which were boarded up and the motels which went out of business because people were not travelling through the foothills of Alberta. What we are trying to do is to remove a discrimination which was hurting an industry in Alberta and also other parts of Canada where there are major suppliers to the oil and gas industry.

One cannot have it both ways on this whole question of taxation or economics. If we want to have jobs created, we have to provide the taxation regime and the economic environment to encourage people to go out and invest money in new projects and create jobs. If we take that away, if we remove that environment and develop a tax system in such a way that it takes away from those companies, those jobs are not going to be created. Either the Hon. Member wants to put people out of jobs or he goes along with it.

Since September 4, 271,000 jobs have been created, so something must be going right. Something must be going right in this country if we are able to see that sort of performance here. That is what we want to try to reinforce.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) that we have been talking about this problem for a month had a half, and it took him a month and a half to correct his injustice towards the elderly. I can appreciate that, from a human standpoint, it is difficult for the Minister to admit his mistake today.

Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Minister that his Budget still contains an injustice concerning families and I dare hope he will not wait until we prove it to him by having families and children demonstrate against it on Parliament Hill.

With respect to the poorest families in Canada, I wish the Minister would tell us why he chose to cut 3 per cent off family allowances and the child tax credit, with the result that the poorest families are faced with a 6 per cent income loss, whereas well-to-do families have to cope with a mere 3 per cent reduction.

I wish the Minister of Finance would tell us just how much money he expects to recoup at the expense of Canada's poorest families with that 3 per cent reduction. Perhaps this time the Minister will have the honesty to admit that in 1982 the Liberal Government did not touch the child tax credit and maintained full indexation. I know that the Minister—and I will not hold it against him—has already answered a question I asked him. He told me that the tax credit was fully indexed. I would urge the Minister of Finance to read page 47 of his document. I would like him to tell us whether he intends to change that part which is a direct attack against the poorest families.

[English]

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, the premise of the question put by the Hon. Member is wrong. If the Hon. Member would look at page 44 of the Budget papers, he would see that right now if a family is earning $10,000, the family benefits amount to $1,484. If the family is earning $20,000, they amount to $1,673. If the family is earning $30,000, they amount to $1.621. Surely it is not fair that the low-income Canadians receive less in family benefits from the Government of Canada than those who are earning $20,000 and $30,000 a year. What we have done by enhancing the child tax credit over this period, is to bring up that $1,484 for the low-income Canadians to $1,812. For those families who are earning $30,000 we have essentially held that flat during that period. These are real figures. Surely the Hon. Member can see that these are real figures. That is what they will be paid in 1989.

They will receive $1,812 instead of $1,484. That is a very good increase.

I would ask the Hon. Member to give us a little credit and tell us that we have done the right thing by taking out that hump whereby the lower-income Canadians receive less than the $20,000 or $30,000 earners, so that in 1989 they will all receive the same. That is progress.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I have two questions for the Minister. First, I did not hear him mention, nor have I heard many questions in the House, about all of the unpaid taxes which are owing in Canada. At one time, several years ago, people used to say that the outstanding taxes, particularly corporate taxes, were pretty close to the amount of the deficit. Could the Minister comment on what is the state of affairs in that respect? And why has the Minister not really stressed that as one pretty generous source of income?

My second question has to do with social policy and family allowances. Many, many senior groups to whom I have spoken—and I have been in many communities over the last two weeks—have told me that universality is really important in itself. They have worked for these programs over the years. When I raised as well the question of family allowances, they told me pretty unanimously that the same principle applies to children. Unfortunately, children do not have the same political clout as do senior citizens. They do not vote and they only receive the family allowance for a short period of time in their lives, and it is not a huge amount of money, not nearly as much as the cost of old age pensions. Why has the Minister not done something about reindexing family allowances? Because he has not, does that mean that he really does not believe in universal family allowances?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There are two questions there, Mr. Speaker, but let me respond to the first question which, I believe, would be more appropriately put to the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty). I cannot give the Hon. Member the numbers off the top of my head—

Mr. Waddell: $24 billion.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) says $24 billion. That is totally wrong. It is quite a bit lower. However, the important thing is that the Minister of National Revenue has taken very clear action arising out of the November statement to encourage a faster payment of taxes, and that is starting to pay off. There is also an item in the Budget itself which protects the Crown in the event of a bankruptcy so that those taxes which have been withheld from employees would be paid to the Government of Canada. Previously, when a company went bankrupt, we lost those taxes. We believe that if this provision is passed, we will be able to gain access to those taxes.

• (1640)

The second point relates to family benefits.

Ms. Mitchell: Family allowances.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Family allowances. Certainly my children have never received the family allowance. My wife does, but the children do not. I do not know whether the children in Vancouver East get the family allowance but they certainly do not in the Toronto area, so she is wrong there.

Let me get to the substance of the question, which is whether what we are doing here is taking away from universality. Everyone will receive family allowance cheques.

Ms. Mitchell: It erodes it just the same.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member says what we have done will erode the family allowance cheques. I ask her to read page, I think it was 43 or 44, the one that I just read out in response to the previous question. Surely she understands that there are limited resources. Does she agree with that?

Ms. Mitchell: You do not have to take it off the backs of children and families.

Mr. Gottselig: Drop that old line. Let it rest.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Spend, spend, spend, and instead of $200 billion worth of debt and $25 billion—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The last question, the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I note that one of the measures the Minister is proposing to use to recover the revenue is increasing the excise taxe on gasoline.

He also made reference to the need to create employment, with which we all agree. There are some puzzling features in the Western Accord which gave billions of dollars to the oil industry. At the time and since, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) described the oil industry as an engine of growth. She gave us some very large figures concerning the expected number of jobs to be created. Subsequently we saw industry figures which were lower, and economists had figures which are lower still. Since there are a lot of people in this country who see the oil industry as capital rather than labour intensive and who see money invested in manufacturing as producing six times as many jobs as the same amount invested in the oil industry, will the Minister show us what he based this decision on? Will he show us the projections for job creation?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Let me be brief on this because the Speaker apparently wants to move on to something else.

Mr. Lapierre: It is not the Speaker, it is the House.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The House wants to move on. You are slowing me down again.

If the Hon. Member will look at the investment intentions as shown in the April study by the Department of Industry, she will see that the oil and gas industry have increased their investment this year by 18.7 per cent. At the same time there is a substantial increase in investment intentions by the manufacturing industry, which she referred to, by some 33 per cent. I suggest that those two increases are closely linked because the acitvity in the oil and gas industry generated by the Western Accord is starting to spill over into increased activity in the manufacturing industry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I am sure we could go on all day with questions with regard to the Budget, but at some point I have to make a judgment that the matter has had a proper airing, and I do so now.

PETITIONS

INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY PENSIONS

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, it is with pleasure that I now table some more petitions on the indexation of pensions. While the Minister has decided to come back to his senses, I am still very happy to have petitions from the people of Shefford, from over 1,000 people from Sherbrooke, from people in Brome-Missisquoi, where hundreds of people and many senior citizens club have signed these petitions, and from people in Saint-Elie-d'Orford, who did a very job and who even went as far as Magog. I have about 4,000 signatures and I am very happy that the Minister has reversed his stand because we would have had thousands more.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the wishes of my constituents and my duties as Member of Parliament require me to table on behalf of the residents of Green Valley, Manoir Fatima, Manoir MacDonald, Manoir Victoria, Russell Manor, Manoir Bélanger, Queen Mary Court and Place Charlotte senior citizens' homes in my constituency a series of petitions which I hope will provide very strong support to the gesture made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) today and will give him the courage not to take such action in the future.

REQUEST THAT CUTS NOT BE MADE IN UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Ms. Carole Jacques (Montreal-Mercier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table today before this honourable House the petition signed by the constituents and residents of the riding of Trois-Rivières who ask this Government not to make any cutbacks in unemployment insurance.

[English]

STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition today signed by some 400 university professors, mainly from the University of Toronto. They beseech the Government to not enter into any agreement with the United States with respect to research into SDI.

INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY PENSIONS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have two petitions on two different subjects. The first one provides backing and reinforcement for the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his statement today. It is signed by 90 some people from the City of Regina who petition the House of Commons and the Government to maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

NUCLEAR WEAPONS-FREE-ZONE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition with over 400 names on it. It concerns the mothers' appeal for world peace from the Congree of Canadian Women, Edmonton Branch. I say with all due modesty that they humbly petition the House to enact Bill C-218, an Act to declare Canada a nuclear weapons-free-zone, presented by Mr. Benjamin, MP for Regina West. I humbly pray as well.

INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY PENSIONS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table before this House a petition I received today and which is signed by about 100 senior citizens of my constituency. In this petition, they ask the Government to reverse its decision to de-index the Old Age Security Pension Plan. They deplore the fact that this decision would force the elderly to help restrict the federal deficit and that the weak would be victimized while the well-off are showered with gifts. I believe that it is very appropriate to table these petitions today.

[English]

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by 600 residents of my riding requesting that Parliament reinstate full indexation of old age pensions. Since the Minister's statement today, I have heard from some of these signatories who would still like the petition deposited in case the Minister's resolve should falter.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a number of petitions. I notice most of them are from the east end of Toronto and one of the streets is where I lived when I was—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that the opportunity here is to present a summary of the petition and the petition.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, the petitions are from the east of Toronto and they seek the end of deindexing of the old age pensions. I am sure they will be pleased the Government has announced that today.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a number of petitions concerning the deindexation issue. I will keep it short and just say that there are 600 signatures on one petition, 100 on another petition, and 200 on a third petition, all from groups in the riding of York West in Toronto. There are about 40 signatures from the riding of Brampton-Georgetown, 40 more from the City of East York, 35 signatures from the City of Etobicoke and signatures from members of the Club Anzioni, le Caravelle de Toronto. All of these petitioners are happy that the Government gave in to their requests to fully index their pensions.

● (1650)

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions that I would like to present as well with regard to the indexation of pensions. I am sure that my constituents, who worked so hard, would want me to table them even after the announcement which was made today. There are 32 signators to this petition from the Club L'Amicale of L'Orignal, Ontario—

There is also a petition signed by the 52 residents of Hawkesbury, one signed by 63 residents of the Saint-Jacques home in Embrun and another one signed by 40 residents of Casselman, in Ontario. I am certain that these people will be pleased by the decision made by the Minister today.

[English]

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition to present signed by 332 residents of the communities of Devlin, Dryden, Fort Frances, Kenora, Nestor Falls, Rainy River, and Sioux Narrows who, I am sure, would join me in thanking the Government for the sensible decision of today and who pray for the reinstatement of full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, to commemorate the occasion of today, I have before me a petition with 2,140 names from across Essex county calling for the Government to make the very decision which it has made today. Today represents their victory and I am pleased to deposit these petitions.

PARITY PRICING FOR AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present a petition which deals with the issue of parity pricing for agricultural products. A Bill has been passed to committee. The petitioners request that the committee give urgent consideration to this Bill and hold hearings across the country.

INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY PENSIONS

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the pleasure to present a petition to this House signed by about 800 people, mostly from my constituency, and more specifically from the cities of Brompton, Weedon, Windsor, Richmond, Danville and Asbestos, 800 people who are probably very happy about the decision of the Minister of Finance and very proud to have contributed to this reversal.

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition with well over 1,000 names of people who were asking the Government to reconsider its decision to deindex OAS. I am sure they are pleased now that the Government has listened to them. It is my pleasure to present the petition on their behalf.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions this afternoon from 1,600 constituents in the riding of Algoma from the communities of Elliot Lake, Espanola and area, the North Shore area of Lake Huron, central Algoma, Manitoulin Island, Sault Ste. Marie and area, and Blind River and area. I also have a petition from the Seaforth area of Southwestern Ontario calling on the Government to reinstate full indexation. Mr. Speaker, I think it is safe to say that it is petitions like these, and millions of petitioners—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions on the issue of the deindexation of pensions signed by people who are probably celebrating today. I have here some 3,000 signatures which are part of over 15,000 signatures, some of which have not yet reached my office, which were collected in the City of Windsor.

CDC DATA SYSTEMS INC.

Question No. 4—Mr. Ellis:

1. Is CDC Data Systems Inc. a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Canada Development Corporation and, if so, did it acquire a 56 per cent controlling interest in Savin Corporation of Valhalla, New York, in March, 1982 and, if so, what was the total purchase price?

2. Was Savin Corporation encountering financial difficulties prior to its purchase by CDC Data Systems Inc. and, if so, what (a) were their nature (b) steps did Savin Corporation take to rectify them?

3. What is the present financial condition of (a) Savin Corporation (b) CDC Data Systems Inc.?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): 1. According to the 1982 Annual Report, CDC Data Systems Inc. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Canada Development Corporation (CDC). In the first quarter of 1982, it purchased 57 per cent of the voting equity in Savin Corporation for a total purchase price of $75 million (U.S.).

2. Canada Development Corporation is not an agent of Her Majesty or a Crown Corporation. Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, Citation 357 (dd) applies.

3. Please refer to part 2 above.

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER

Question No. 243—Mr. Boudria:

1. How many people are employed (a) directly or by contract (b) full time and part time, in the Office of the Prime Minister?

2. What is the expected yearly cost to the taxpayers for this service?

Mr. Len Gustafson (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): 1. As of January 31, 1985: (a) 14 persons were employed on contract; and (b) 111 persons were employed full-time.

2. The expected annual cost to the taxpayers is $4,623,336.

FUNDING TO TRIBAL COUNCILS IN ONTARIO

Question No. 290—Mr. Parry:

1. In 1984-85, did the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development's Ontario region commit funds to tribal councils or groups of bands and, if so, to which ones?

2. For 1985-86, was any application for funds from the Shibogamau tribal council (a) received (b) accepted (c) rejected?

Hon. David Crombie (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. In 1984-85 funds were provided to Georgian Bay Tribal Council, Windigo Tribal Council, Kayahna Tribal Council, Petahbun Tribal Council and the United Chiefs and Councils of Manitoulin Island. Kayahna Tribal Council received funds only for economic development purposes.

2. An application for funding has been received from and discussed with the Shibogama Tribal Council. Bearing in mind that this is a newly formed tribal grouping, no commitment to funding was possible pending a review of available resources.

SBLA—ADMINISTRATIVE COST OF LOAN

Question No. 301—Mr. Gagliano:

What is the average administrative cost to the lending institution of a loan made under the Small Businesses Loans Act?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): The Department has no specific data on the average administrative cost of a loan made under the Small Businesses Loans Act (SBLA) nor does the Canadian Bankers' Association. Since SBLA loans represent only 1.5 per cent of bank assets and 2.4 per cent of bank loans to business, their related cost is evaluated in terms of the average cost of other loans.

CONTAMINATED RADIOACTIVE SOIL

Question No. 337—Mr. Heap:

1. Is there contaminated radioactive soil on McClure Crescent in Malvern, Ontario and, if so, what is the estimated cost of excavating this soil?

2. Has the Government considered buying the homes from the residents who live on this crescent and, if so, at what estimated cost?

3. To date, what have been the legal expenses incurred by (a) the Government (b) AECL, in attempting to remove the contaminated soil and place it in other sites and, in each case, what was the cost?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): 1. On 39 residential properties on McClure Crescent in Malvern, Ontario, there is soil with concentrations of radium somewhat higher than normal background levels for that area. Radium is a radioactive element which is present to some extent in all soils.

The cost of excavating the soil and re-landscaping the affected properties is estimated at $552,000. The cost of storing the soils (an estimated $400,000), as is contemplated in an agreement between Canada and Ontario, will be borne by the province.

2. The possibility of the houses being bought by either the provincial or federal Government has been analysed. To buy the 39 properties directly affected would cost approximately $2.7 million. However, this action would likely not satisfy the concerns of owners of neighbouring properties which are not contaminated. A number of these owners are involved in litigation, claiming substantial damages, together with owners of directly affected properties. To buy all 104 houses on McClure Crescent and an additional four backing on to the Crescent would cost approximately $8.1 million. Even then, there may be some who feel the line has been drawn too closely. To purchase all houses within a zone equivalent to the uninhabited area around the temporary storage site for the soil proposed by the Province of Ontario would involve an expenditure of tens of millions of dollars.

3. (a) and (b) There have been two legal actions relating to proposed relocation of the soil. The first was an action by the Townships of Essa and Tosoronto to prevent relocation of the soil to Canadian Forces Base, Borden in 1981. The legal costs incurred by the Atomic Energy Control Board, which was the proponent of that move, were $5,000. In addition, an estimated $2,000 of an AECB official's time was involved in defending the action.

There is currently an injunction action before the Federal Court, in which Waste Not Wanted Inc. is seeking to prevent Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. and the federal Government from relocating the soil to a storage site provided by the Province of Ontario in a sparsely populated area of Scarborough under an agreement with the federal Government.

Expenses incurred by AECL and the Government in defending this action are approximately $250,000, in addition to the time of the AECL, EM&R and Department of Justice staff involved in defending the action.

RENOVATIONS AT CBC, MONTREAL

Question No. 343—Mr. Desrosiers:

Did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation renovate the tenth floor of the Dorchester Street building in Montreal recently and, if so (a) at what cost to the taxpayer (b) who authorized the work?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

No. No "renovations" were carried out on the tenth floor of Maison de Radio-Canada in Montreal. A routine building maintenance operation was conducted. The commercial-quality carpet that was there is meant to last no more than 10 years. This carpet was 13 years old and went back to the opening of the building. It had holes in it and was in such a pitiful state that the accident prevention department had indicated that its replacement should be regarded as a priority. The paint had not been done in six years and the vinyl covering on some of the walls had not been changed since the construction of the building. Since the tiles in the ceilings of Maison de Radio-Canada have not been manufactured for the past seven years, the hanging ceiling on the tenth floor was therefore changed and the intact tiles were saved to be used as replacements in other areas of the building.

(a) The cost of this work was $32,312.

(b) The work was authorized by local engineering management and local administration management.

CBC—STAFF CUTS IN MONTREAL

Question No. 344—Mr. Desrosiers:

Did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation shuffle the staff of the Engineering Department on Côte St. Luc Street in Montreal recently and, if so (a) how many employees were moved from the (i) second to the third (ii) third to the second floor (b) at what cost to the taxpayer (c) was the telephone system relocated under the floors and, if so, who authorized the relocation and any other related expense?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

No. However, as a result of the recent budget cuts, the staff in Accounting at Engineering Headquarters, located in another building, was reduced considerably. Almost all the remaining employees from this Department were relocated in the Côte St-Luc building and the space was reallocated to consolidate services. By vacating premises in the other building, the Corporation will save $325,000 on rent. (a)(i) 12, (ii) 6.

(b) The cost of the new arrangements was $288,000. This will be recovered as a result of the $325,000 saving on the rent for the partially vacated building.

(c) Yes. The sinking of the telephone system below the floors, which will save Engineering Headquarters about $211,000 a year in operating expenses, was done by means of pipes and ducts already in place. In view of these savings, the system will pay for itself in a little over three years. The work was done in accordance with work orders signed by members of Senior Management duly authorized to sign such documents in the CBC.

Order Paper Questions

CBC—ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT IN MONTREAL

Question No. 345—Mr. Desrosiers:

Is the (a) Director, Building Services (b) Chief Engineer, Electrical Section (c) Chief Engineer, Mechanical Section (d) Chief Architect, Building Department (e) Senior Architect, Building Section (f) Senior Engineer, Building Section (g) Supervisor, Mechanical Section in the Engineering Department and of the Canadian Broadcasting Coporation located in the Côte St. Luc Street building in Montreal (i) bilingual (ii) unilingual, and do they all have an assistant?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

Engineering headquarters is attempting to ensure bilingual replacements, and the incumbents of the four professional positions it has filled since 1983 in the building section are all bilingual. Only the Director, Building Services (a), is backed up by a bilingual Assistant Director. None of the incumbents of the other positions mentioned has an assistant. One of the three senior architects in the building section (e) is bilingual. The other incumbents are not. Most of the incumbents of these positions are employees of long standing, who have performed their present duties for an average of 10 years. Some of them are expected to retire in the near future.

CBC—REPORTING OF TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

Question No. 346—Mr. Desrosiers:

Does the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation lease an aircraft for reporting on traffic conditions in the Montreal area and, if so (a) what type (b) who owns the aircraft (c) was a leasing contract or other arrangement entered into between the two parties and, if so (i) as of what date (ii) on what date will the contract expire (d) were tenders called and, if so, on what date and in what manner (e) what is the leasing cost of the aircraft?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

Yes. The CBC French Radio services in Montreal, as is the case with many other broadcasters, leases an aircraft for reporting on traffic conditions five days a week in the Montreal area.

(a) Trade mark of aircraft Cessna—model RG-117 Cardinal.

(b) Andrair Aviation.

(c) The contract was signed September 3, 1984 and is valid until the end of August, 1985.

(d) Yes, tenders were called during the summer of 1982. Subsequently, the contract was renewed.

CBC—CONSTRUCTION OF RAMP AT STUDIO 42

Question No. 347—Mr. Desrosiers:

Was a contract awarded by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for the construction of an extension ramp for the handicapped, at Studio 42 in Montreal and, if so (a) were public tenders called (b) who was awarded the contract (c) at what cost (d) were restrooms built?

Order Paper Questions

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

No. The CBC used its own personnel to build a ramp enabling handicapped persons to have access to Studio 42.

(a), (b) and (c) Not applicable.

(d) No. Nor does the CBC plan to provide restrooms specially for Studio 42 since there are already some in the area that can accommodate handicapped persons.

CBC—COMPUTERS

Question No. 348—Mr. Desrosiers:

Did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation provide its French network television and radio directors with computers and, if so (a) were public tenders called (b) who was awarded the (i) sales (ii) service contract (c) what was the purchase price for each computer (d) how many computers did the corporation purchase?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

No. But the CBC at Montreal, as do many other broadcasters, uses a central computer to prepare and broadcast its programs.

CBC—REUSABLE SETS

Question No. 349—Mr. Desrosiers:

Does the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Montreal burn or destroy its decors after use and, if so, what was the amount allocated for such purposes in the fiscal years (a) 1983-84 (b) 1984-85 (c) 1985-86?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

Reusable sets are kept in storage. Some set elements, such as furniture and accessories that have not been used for a long time and which are not likely to be used in the short or medium term, are sold. However, it is more economical to destroy, rather than store, set elements that cannot be used again or sold. Reusable elements, including doors, handles, hinges, kitchen cupboards and counters, windows, stairways, floor tiles, curtains and draperies, backdrops, cycloramas and orchestra platforms, are recovered and stored.

(a), (b) and (c) No funds are allocated specifically for the destruction of set elements.

CBC—"LE CHEZ-NOUS DES ARTISTES"

Question No. 352—Mr. Desrosiers:

1. What were the (a) production (b) direction (c) distribution costs of the gala performance "Le chez-nous des artistes" on December 16, 1984?

2. How many performers participated in the gala at the Place des Arts?

3. Were the performers paid the same fees and was it agreed, orally or in writing, between CBC and the performers that their culture fees would be paid to La maison des artistes, a non-profit organization?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

1. (a), (b) and (c) Program expenses are not broken down in this way. The costs of this special program were as follows:

Performers' fees and other direct expenses	$476,618
Indirect expenses	$234,064

2. There were 211 performers.

3. No. The fees paid to each performer were in keeping with the role played in the gala and with the standards of the Union des Artistes. All performers who were asked to participate in "Le Chez-nous des artistes" were verbally invited to contribute their fees to the Fondation du Chez-nous des artistes.

CBC—FRENCH TV NETWORK

Question No. 353—Mr. Desrosiers:

Who is the programming manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation French TV network and is this a (permanent full-time) position?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

Strictly speaking, there is no longer a programming manager for the French Television network. The position was abolished in April, 1985, and the French Television network underwent a change in its administrative structure; this resulted in a reduction in the levels of management.

CBC—READING COMMITTEE

Question No. 355—Mr. Desrosiers:

Does the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation have an anonymous reading committee and, if so (a) are its members permanent or contract employees (b) do they have offices at the Corporation or do they work at home?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

No. For several years, various people have been asked to evaluate the scripts submitted to the Corporation's French networks in Montreal (in particular to the Drama Programs Department and the Script Bureau). Whenever a drama competition is organized by the French television or radio networks, the CBC invites writers and actors/actresses to be members of the jury. Routine affairs are handled from inside the Corporation by employees of the departments concerned.

CBC—ENTERTAINMENT AND DRAMA DEPARTMENTS

Question No. 356—Mr. Desrosiers:

Is the head of the (a) entertainment (b) drama department of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation French TV Network a permanent or contract employee and, in the latter case (a) what is the termination date of his or her contract (b) does CBC intend to renew the contract (c) did the contract employee inform CBC whether he or she would like the contract renewed?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

The heads of the entertainment and drama departments for the French Television Network are both permanent CBC employees.

CBC—PROGRAM AVIS DE RECHERCHE

Question No. 358—Mr. Desrosiers:

Was there more than one Canadian Broadcasting Corporation director in charge of the daily program Avis de recherche?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

Yes. Avis de recherche is a daily program produced five times weekly for 39 weeks, for a total of 195 programs. To ensure the smooth running of this program series, which consists of studio elements and inserts shot on location, the crew is made up of one producer, one executive producer and two production assistants. In addition to producing a few programs, the executive producer must make plans weeks in advance to invite guests to the program.

CONSCIENCE CANADA INC.

Question No. 364—Mr. de Jong:

1. Did Conscience Canada apply to the Department of National Revenue for designation as a charitable organization and, if so (a) on what date (b) was the application approved and, if not, for what reason?

2. Have there been any groups who for reasons of conscience been exempted from the payment of taxes?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): 1. (a) Conscience Canada Inc. applied for charitable registration on December 22, 1983.

(b) The organization was denied registration because it was the Department's view that its resources were not being devoted to exclusively charitable activities as required under the Income Tax Act. Conscience Canada Inc. is appealing the Department's decision.

2. I am not aware of any instances where groups were exempted from the payment of taxes for reasons of conscience.

[English]

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Parliamentary Secretary why the Government is unwilling to answer a very simple question which I put on the Order Paper on February 28, 1985. I have another question asking if the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) went to Jamaica on March 6, 1985, and other questions like it. I know that this must be terribly embarrassing, but surely there must be a way for the Government to answer other questions in my name, such as Nos. 349, 400, 388 and Question 313. Why will the Government not answer these questions?

Mr. Dick: I know that the Government will be pleased to answer these questions and will get around to answering the questions. The problem to date is that there are so many silly questions put on by that Hon. Member.

Mr. Boudria: The people of Canada have a right to know.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. That is the kind of remark that draws blood over here. The Parliamentary Secretary was doing very well, thank you very much, until he made that silly remark.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wise that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned for Question Period, I was speaking to Bill C-25. I pointed out that the amendment to Clause 8 introduced by the Minister last week broke the harmony that existed with the producers, the four provinces and the federal Government, which had agreed to a red meat stabilization tripartite agreement.

The producers have told me that they are totally confused by that amendment to Clause 8. It removes the provision that provincial Governments must phase out any existing stabilization program when they participate in the tripartite stabilization program. The Minister's amendment does not seem to have satisfied the concerns of the producers in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and British Columbia.

This Bill does not take advantage of the harmony that existed in those four provinces. In fact, when I spoke to a representative of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association yesterday, he said that producers are thoroughly confused as to what the amendment means and will not support it at this time because they do not understand it. The Minister has created the worst of all worlds.

There is another matter of great concern to the committee. According to presentations from organizations like the Canadian Pork Council, the Alberta Government and other provincial Governments, the parties to the original agreement want the Bill passed in the form in which it was presented. The Minister is not only confusing that situation, but has not met the demands of the Maritime provinces when they asked that the Minister establish a grain feed freight assistance program as well as a program which will allow them to become self-sufficient in feed grains over the short run. I think those are a very great concern, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister said this Bill offers an opportunity to resolve our trading problems with the United States. Before the committee the Minister as a witness said that the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, John Block, in the meetings he had with him over the course of the spring months while the Bill was being discussed and studied, was hardening in his position. The question is as to whether or not stabilization payments made under a tripartite arrangement are subject to a countervail. The countervail which is in position now is apparently to be confirmed on the twenty-fifth of the month. Most of these payments seem to be subject to the U.S. countervail.

The question is how do you gain by stabilization payments through a tripartite arrangement if they are going to be subject to countervail? The Minister has to be prepared to go to Washington and to negotiate with the Secretary of Agriculture. If tripartite agreements are put in place in the future, they should not be subject to countervail, otherwise the whole Bill and exercise is really futile.

We see many non-tariff barriers. They tell me in the last two or three days we have had two or three more loads of Canadian cattle going to the United States turned down because of technical mechanisms that some States are using which is, from all I know, totally illegal. During the last couple of weeks we have had some 30 loads of cattle coming into the Toronto market from the United States. We have to ask our trading partner is this free trade thing for real or it is just a one way free trade which the Minister and the Government have been talking about? During the committee study, the Minister kept referring to a London Free Press article on June 17 in which he seemed to be saying to the farmers of Canada, at least the article says, referring to the whole problem of countervails and stabilization payments that, and I quote:

> The best solution would seem to be a stabilization plan administered by the Government but entirely financed by the farmers who choose to participate.

That is the final paragraph of the article.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, it is not the Minister's policy that we are going to have the Government administering the program but not making any contributions. I do not know why he would continue to refer to that. It is not the policy of this Government. It is not the policy of this Government to have stabilization payments in total made by the federal Government.

Mr. Wise: Read the first paragraph for us.

Mr. Foster: I hear the Minister talking about the first paragraph of this article.

Mr. Wise: Just read it, please.

Mr. Foster: During the committee studies, the Minister continued to refer to farmers sort of providing all the stabilization. I thought what we needed was a stop loss program where the federal and provincial Governments would contribute to assist hard-pressed producers. At the same time, the Minister seemed to be speaking a great deal, even during the course of the study of the Bill, about the possibility of a tripartite stabilization program where we have four provinces in agreement to it. He continued to speak about the possibility of a national hog marketing agency. Those recommendations during the course of debate on the stabilization program only confuse the situation.

This Bill provides retroactive arrangements for payments which are not made within the crop year. This Bill would be very beneficial to groups like the Alberta Sugar-Beet Growers who have suffered incredible hardship this year. This is the first time in 65 years that they have not been able to produce a crop, the plant will not run and beets will not be seeded. This Bill provides for retroactive payments where one grows a crop one year, markets the produce the following year and payments are made at the end of that year or in subsequent years. This Bill makes provision for that and is an important part of the Bill.

Unfortunately, the Minister was not prepared during the committee studies to make a commitment that the $10 million or $12 million, which is owed to the Alberta Sugar-Beet Growers, would be paid. That is most unfortunate because they have suffered a great deal. The situation is one in which the producers are very uncertain as to whether this legislation can or will be used. I think we have to put it in the backdrop of the over-all agriculture situation.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) when speaking this afternoon outlined his total ignorance about the farm financial situation in Canada today. In January he brought down a White Paper on farm taxation issues. It outlined how great and how rosy things were on the farm scene. In that statement, the Minister pointed out that farmers earned twice as much as the average Canadian, but they pay one-quarter as many taxes and are worth eight times as much. I put a question to the Minister about an exemption on the gas tax which he is to impose on September 3, which will reinstate about one-half of the excise tax taken off last fall. By the time he is through imposing the tax on January 1, 1987, the situation will be that much worse.

It is really sad that the Minister of Finance does not seem to be aware of the concern when he brings down a budget. He starts reeling off a number of items, but he does not realize now much anguish, hardship and difficulty there is in the farming community.

There is a strong recommendation from the Finance Committee that we position a major agri-bond program which would have provided long term low interest rates of 8 per cent over a number of years. Apparently the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) was not able to convince the Minister of Finance in his Budget that he should have had a positive program to assist the 17 per cent of farmers who are in serious financial difficulties.

I should like to refer to a resolution which was passed by the directors of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture which indicated that the Government had betrayed Canadian farmers, that it ignored the consultative process and its recommendations, and that it ignored the legitimate needs of farmers. It seems to me that we should have received more action from the Government in terms of providing retroactive payments under the stabilization program. Sugar-beet growers of Alberta will be eligible once the bill is passed, yet the Minister is not prepared to make those payments even though they were dealt with in Committee of the Whole.

The Minister talked about a new era in agriculture. Many people are very concerned about the new tripartite era. If we look at the document entitled: A New Direction for Canada which was tabled last fall, particularly at the section dealing with agriculture, we see that the federal Government will opt out of many support and stabilization programs in which it is now involved. For example, on page 60, it is noted that out of the $1.35 billion budget of Agriculture Canada, some $700 million is devoted to price and income supports. In part it reads:

> The federal Government must examine its involvement in the sector to ensure that it is directed at maintaining a strong, efficient, and competitive Canadian agricultural sector, and that it recognizes its special challenges. It will be important to determine whether existing price and income support programs are still appropriate for present-day conditions and to ensure that they are not causing structural inefficiencies in the industry.

The next sentence is the key one, and it reads:

> The new tripartite approach to red meat stabilization may be a good example of how both levels of Government and the producers themselves can co-operate to develop improvements over former arrangements.

Is the federal Government looking to the possibility of having crop insurance programs instead of federal-producer programs with the provinces administering them? Is it planning under the tripartite stabilization legislation to have the province pick up a third of the cost of crop insurance? Is it planning to have provincial Governments pick up a third of the costs of the western grain stabilization program? Is it planning to have provincial Governments and producers pay a third each of the costs of the dairy stabilization program? In total, the dairy program would cost some $300 million.

A New Direction for Canada, under the Tory Government, suggests that the tripartite arrangement is what the Government has planned. If so, it will be a great revelation to hard-pressed producers and provincial Governments. For instance, if they each had to put up $100 million under the dairy support program, it would not only be the cause of great revelation. I wonder whether that is what the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) has in mind.

The Budget has provided that for each year, for the next five years, there will be a $50 million reduction in the funding of Agriculture Canada. I assume, from reading A New Direction for Canada, that it will come out of the $700 million devoted to price and income support.

There is great uncertainty in the agricultural community as to whether the amendments of the Minister will allow the red meat program to go ahead. In fact, the Bill does not provide for the concerns of the Maritimes or the Province of Quebec. We should not only look at the immediate concerns in the red meat industry, but we should look ahead at the demands which the Minister and his Government will make on producers and provincial Governments to pay a third of the costs of stabilization programs for many other commodities which heretofore were either totally, or to a large percentage, paid by the federal Government.

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wise that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, in closing the debate on this particular Bill, I should like to sum up the position of my Party. For several weeks we have been discussing an amendment to the Agricultural Stabilization Act, an Act which has been around since 1957-58. It was offered in response to a need in agriculture which had been expressed by farmers for ages, a need to come up with programs which would permit them to remain in business during the tremendous price cycles which occur in agricultural production and pricing.

We in Canada have approached this question from two directions. For some commodities we offered the possibility of national marketing board legislation. Most of the commodities which we produce, other than those under the Canadian Wheat Board or the current national supply-managed marketing systems, have been exempted from the ability to apply under that particular legislation. For example, a red meat producer cannot knowingly set up a national meat marketing agency because there is no room under the umbrella legislation for producers of beef or pork to do so. As an alternative, Governments of the past offered agricultural stabilization programs which in effect took an average of the ups and down of prices over five years and guaranteed producers approximately 90 per cent of that floating or moving average.

This particular set of amendments came about in response to several initiatives which were taken outside the House. The first amendment included a change to designated products. I must point out that there are two sets of products under the Act. Some farmers realize that there are named products, for which the stabilization program and formula are automatic, and that there are designated products that are usually less widely produced products, over which the Minister has some discretion in designating as products. The Minister can decide on the level of pay-out for a particular commodity over a period of time. There has been some difficulty in that regard, in that the old Act suggested that pay-outs had to be based upon the prices of the past year. They ran into some legal problems, thus a minor change was made to make the year a retroactive one so that pay-outs could be made legally under the Act.

The amount of named commodities has been enlarged and extended somewhat with these amendments but mostly what the Act is purporting to do, if we listen to the Minister and some of the witnesses, is to take care of a fear that is in some parts of the farming community that our farm production will be Balkanized because of the interference of some provincial treasuries in the subsidization of agricultural products in their province. This is legal under our constitution, but creates some interprovincial trade problems. That fear was carried forward and provided with some impetus by the fact that some of our trading partners have now begun to interfere with and react to the kind of stabilization policies we have in this country. In particular, the United States of America has moved, through its Commerce Department to put on a countervail tariff of 5.5 cents a pound on pork and about 4.4 cents a pound on live hogs.

The argument that is offered for changing the Agricultural Stabilization Act is that if we have a national program whereby producers can only collect under a national program that somehow or other, through some magic that has never been totally explained, the U.S. will stop their countervail.

However, we should point out, as was pointed out through the witnesses and during the investigation of this Bill, that the U.S. has, during the course of its countervail, countervailed almost equally against provincial programs as it has against federal programs. It does not seem to provide any immunity to federal programs. We are operating very much on faith if we think that these particular changes will change the minds of the U.S. regarding the countervail of pork. I expect if it behooves them to do so, they will countervail equally against us when we come in with a beef program and it all depends under what sort of political pressure producers in the United States put their Government. They have a procedure that permits them to act and get a countervail much quicker that most countries have. In a matter of a few months, they were successful in having the countervail on pork and they, I think, would move equally as quickly if beef producers in the United States felt that their markets were being jeopardized as well.

We heard about a lot of frustration in the committee from producers of pork in particular because they thought we had a free trade agreement with the United States in pork. It is not too many years ago when Canada accepted between 14 and 15 per cent of our total pork consumption from the United States. While there may have been some grumblings, we realized that we had a free trade agreement with them and, therefore, if that was going to be any good, we would have to accept their pork when their product was cheaper than ours and could find a ready market in Canada. When the tables were reversed, however, with less than 3 per cent of the American market for pork being taken up by the Canadian product, the Americans moved a countervail action in an attempt to stop Canadian pork going into their market.

It is very difficult to see the justice in that and very difficult to see that we have in fact a free trade arrangement with the United States when we will accept between 14 and 15 per cent of their product and they move unilaterally against us when we take up 2 or 3 per cent of their market. There was a lot of frustration and we had two points of view—there were probably far more than two points of view but there were certainly two distinct schools of thought—in the information that appeared before us.

I pointed out because of the formula that Canada has adopted for stabilization programs when we get into a period of rapid inflation that is not matched in the market-place, as has happened with red meats, the 90 per cent of the five-year average does nothing to stabilize the industry. It does nothing to assist producers to stay in business.

We have in the late 1970s come through a period when interest rates virtually tripled, fuel prices tripled and a great many other production costs also went up very rapidly, but the price of beef and pork only went up a small part of the increase in cost. The 90 per cent of the five-year market average fell far short of covering the actual cash cost of the producers. As a consequence, a great many of the provinces, in order to maintain production and to assist the maintenance of farmers in their provinces, came in with bipartite stabilization programs based on a cost of production formula rather than on a market-pricing formula. They experimented, I think quite successfully, with the cost-based formula. They pioneered the programs where producers were able to recoup all of their cash costs and part of their investment costs each year through a program to which the producers contributed approximately one-half of the insurance premiums and those premiums were shared by the provinces.

Many of the producers who had experience with these programs had been agitating for these kinds of cost-based programs to be presented at the national level and that the contributions be done by farmers, provincial treasuries and the federal Treasury. These proposals seem to have been largely rejected by the Government. There is some mention of costs in the new formula but it is only used to arrive at a factor or an index and that then becomes part of a calculation.

The cost being the main source of triggering a pay-out is not going to be part of this particular program that we have offered to us here. They have come a little ways so that costs can make up part of the formula, but it is still basically a market-oriented program. When market prices fail to meet the cost of production, it simply locks in a situation which many of the producers who appeared before us describe by saying that it stabilizes poverty or it stabilizes bankruptcy.

During the course of hearing the witnesses on this, we also saw some changes to the political lexicon and redefinitions that will, I hope, not become part of the political dictionary of this country because prior to the changes we had some of the provinces attempt to come up with a tripartite agreement that was suitable to them, to the federal Government and to some of the farm groups within these provinces. Remember, Mr. Speaker, this is in a confederation of Canada which has taken pride in surviving with 10 distinct provinces and two territories for more than a century and has taken pride in recognizing the need for some recognition of differences for regions in the different areas of the country.

In spite of that, we started hearing about the majority of provinces which, when one understands the lexicon, means the four provinces that produce most of the livestock, and then we heard about the minority of provinces which turns out to be the six provinces that have most of the farmers. I am afraid that we ended up, by my assessment, listening to the livestock rather than the farmers.

The Minister attempted to bring in some amendments which he feels address some of the problems. The major amendment is one that I find very difficult to accept, and I voted against it in committee. I would like to talk about it for a few moments because I think the amendment misses the whole purpose of a tripartite scheme.

As we read the Bill initially, most of us thought that a tripartite scheme as presented by the Bill would be the establishment of a framework under which producer groups, provincial Governments and federal Governments could meet to bargain, discuss and negotiate to arrive at a proposal which would provide a stabilization program that would cover the agreed to commodities in those agreeing provinces. The federal Government would participate by paying one-third of the premiums. However, the most noteworthy amendment put by the Minister in an effort, we were told, to go some way toward meeting the problems of the so-called minority of provinces, was a different proposition. As when the original Bill went through the House at second reading, it permits the tripartite discussions to take place, but the Minister has added something that he feels will look after everything. I will read this amendment into the record so that you may make up your own mind about it, Mr. Speaker. It reads:

> The Minister may enter into an agreement with a province in respect of an agricultural commodity only if he is of the opinion that such an agreement
> (a) would not give to the producers of the commodity who are to be parties to the agreement or for whose benefit the agreement would be entered into, a financial advantage in the production or marketing of the commodity not enjoyed by other producers of the commodity in Canada.

Reading that, I realize that for every dollar a producer puts up in premiums, the province will put up a dollar and the federal Government will put up a dollar. This means that for every $1 put up, two more come into existence. That sounds like a bit of an advantage for those who participate in the plan over those who do not. However, the Minister may veto the program if it suddenly hits him when he looks at the plan that this is what is does.

Not only can the Minister have that kind of discretion. His motion goes on to say that the Minister could stop the plan if in his opinion the agreement would be an incentive to the producers of the commodity who are to be parties to the agreement or for whose benefit the agreement would be entered into to over-produce the commodity. We know by the very nature of the agricultural community that according to economists, the economic reason for market lows is over-production. If we are going to have periods of time when there are low prices, the Minister can call it over-production and veto the program.

I have great difficulty understanding the Minister's explanation of these words. When I read them, they seem to be very clear. I think that—

Mr. Wise: That's because you and I are not lawyers, Vic.

Mr. Althouse: My lawyers tell me the same thing.

Mr. Wise: That's not what my lawyers tell me.

Mr. Althouse: I think the proposal has to be tested simply because of the force of the all Members against everyone else. However, I do not think it will be effective in responding to the trade war initiated by the U.S. I do not think it will properly address the problems that exist interprovincially. I think that we have only stirred up the hornets and the nest is now broken. We will simply have to live again with an Agricultural Stabilization Act that does not do what farmers expect it to do.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to be on my feet for very long. However, there are some things that I feel should be said about this Bill.

First, I would like to remind the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) that this Party was in power for 10 or 15 years. When his Party was in power, we never heard about any of these new ideas he is now suggesting. Now when the Party is in opposition, Liberal Members suddenly have a great many new ideas that they are bringing forth. Why did they not bring them forth during the years they were in power? It makes me think of something somebody said which goes, "Don't do what I do, do what I say".

This Government is doing something about the problem. The Bill may not be perfect but the problem is being tackled. The Minister is putting his neck on the line and his head on the block and he is trying to do something for agriculture, the backbone industry of this country that has been neglected for 15 years. That in itself is a great step forward.

The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) took such a negative view of the Bill I was surprised, because normally he has some pretty good ideas about agriculture. He is a practical man of the land. Today he reminded me of the fellow who, when he held up his whisky bottle, said, "My God, the thing is half empty". Another fellow looked at it and said, "Good, it's half full". We are doing something about the problem. I do not like the idea of Members saying that it is a failure before it even gets started. I would like to give it a chance.

I would like to deal with some of these items. First I want to say that we live in a wonderful country. I am proud to be a Canadian. I was proud to wear a Canadian uniform. Wherever I go in the world, I find that people recognize and appreciate Canadians. However, Canada is a vast country. It is far flung. One time a fellow said, "I think Canada is far flung but sometimes it's flung too far".

When dealing with problems from the Pacific to the Atlantic and from the 49th parallel to the Arctic Ocean, Ministers must get an overwhelming feeling. Each province has its own beauty and its own differences. Each province has its own ideas. Agriculture is important to every province and Territory in this country.

I do not want to leave the impression that we will not do anything about the differences between the provinces. I do not want the provinces to be all the same. However, I would like to use the differences to show that we can strengthen our nation by recognizing and dealing with our differences.

The point I would like to make is that we must recognize that Canada is composed of a lot of provinces. I am a Canadian. I come from Alberta and I was born in Alberta. When I die, I hope I will die in Alberta. I know every province. As a former Minister of Highways for Alberta it was my pleasure to spend two or three days with Ministers of Highways from every province of this great country. From that I learned that every province has its own objectives and ambitions. All the provinces want to make Canada a united and greater country. When I decided to run federally, I hoped that I would be part of the solution, not part of the problem.

I want to deal with the matter before the House today with the view of trying to solve the problems which face our agricultural industry. The bottom line in the Bill is that producers in each and every province must be treated fairly and equitably. I do not know of a farmer in Alberta who expects special treatment. I do not know many farmers in Quebec or the Maritimes, but the few I do know have never said that they want special treatment. They all want fair and equitable treatment in order that they can survive and make a living. That is the bottom line of the Bill.

This Bill is not exactly what the people of my province or I wanted. I would have preferred a straight red meat tripartite stabilization bill. For many years we spoke about that. However, that would affect only four provinces and there are six other provinces that have something to say about the matter. The committee accommodated and listened to people from each province. Then it attempted to address the problems of each province. There had to be some compromise. During the meetings of the Standing Committee on Agriculture it was argued that the original Bill, while it would have been very helpful to red meat and pork producers in Alberta, would have destroyed the agricultural industry in the Maritimes. I do not want the agricultural industry in any province to be destroyed. I want the agricultural industry in every province to have the opportunity to survive and to contribute to this great nation.

I would like to deal with the matter of subsidies. We know what EEC subsidized beef meant in Canada. It almost destroyed the beef industry in Canada. During the Liberal administration nothing was done about it. It was dumped into Canada, subsidized to the hilt and almost destroyed our industry. The beef producers of Canada could not compete against subsidized beef from another part of the world. Therefore, it reduced the standard of living of our farmers. We know what subsidization means, when a farmer cannot compete against government subsidies. However, now the shoe is on the other foot.

We have subsidized pork in every province except Alberta. The Alberta pork producers have a double whammy. They do not have a provincial subsidy, as do farmers in other provinces, and they also have to deal with U.S. countervailing duties. The Alberta producer must compete interprovincially against government money. The provincial Governments of British Columbia, Quebec, Saskatchewan and every other province pay a subsidy for pork. That subsidy varies in accordance with the reasoning of the industry and the Government of each particular province. We must decide whether we want subsidies or want to remain an exporting nation. Already we are seeing that we will lose part of our market because the United States has told us that their farmers cannot compete against subsidized pork from Canada, just as we cannot compete against subsidized beef from the European market.

What is the solution? Alberta thinks that all provincial subsidies should be eliminated. That would do it, but many provinces are not prepared to do that. I would like to have seen a clause in the Bill stating that there would be no top loading, underloading or side loading. However, that was not satisfactory to six provinces.

Are we going to give special treatment to one province? I complained about special treatment being given to any province in a number of areas, as an MLA and as an MP. Therefore, I cannot say that I want special treatment for my province. I do not. Neither do the cattle producers, the pork producers or the Government of Alberta. I want equal and equitable treatment to be given to Alberta, Quebec, the Maritimes and Ontario. That is building a nation.

The Minister has come up with a "no financial advantage". That replaces the top loading-underloading. We have a responsible Minister who wants to build the country, not destroy any province. Therefore, he came up with the best way in which he could get agreement. I do not particularly like it, but I am a Canadian. I do not think that my province should have the whole say. If I did, we would not be a nation. It is the best the committee could do. The Minister has told us that he does not want top loading or bottom loading. How fairer can he be? The Minister made it very clear that he did not want producers in one province to have a financial advantage over producers in another province. Is there something wrong with that? I do not see anything wrong with it. The Minister has made it very clear.

It is not only the wording of the Bill which counts, it is the administration and the interpretation. We have the Minister's interpretation. When the agreements are entered into, the Minister will have the final say as far as the federal Government is concerned. The Minister wants to give fair treatment to every agricultural industry in every province of Canada. The agreements will be signed by the provincial Governments and the federal Government. Surely at that time the details can be worked out. I have every hope that this legislation will meet the problems. We have a Minister who is agriculturally-minded and determined to build Canada, not destroy any part of it.

Agriculture takes in a lot of fields. My interest is in grain, beef and pork. I do not have much to do with blueberries. There are a few honey producers in my riding. My interest is to ensure that the hog producers, beef producers, honey and grain producers in my riding have a chance to compete in Canada and in external markets. If they can do that, I will be happy.

We are on the way. I think this administration and the Minister will be a tremendous boost to agriculture in Canada. I will not go into other examples of how the law was interpreted by other administrations in such a way as to destroy provinces, because our Minister will do the very opposite. It is a case of building within the framework of this Bill. The Minister believes this law is right. It will indeed stop bottom loading and or top loading or, in other words, stop provincial or federal subsidization. It will be up to the provincial Governments to decide whether we are to go into this tripartite agreement and stop subsidization, or we are going to keep subsidization and take the chance of losing our markets. We cannot go on with subsidization and still have our markets in other parts of the world, because that subsidization will be resented in the same way as we resent the subsidization of European beef. The bottom line is that producers in every province must be treated fairly and equitably with special favours to none. Alberta producers want to stand on their own feet. They want fair competition because they cannot compete against government subsidies.

I think one would find that the farmers and producers in every province say the same thing. They want fair treatment. Keeping Canada together is important. I am sure in the minds of most Canadians when they elected this Government was the thought that we would try to keep Canada together. The Progressive Conservatives were the last hope of many people in this country. When this Bill is passed it will be demonstrated to all Canadians and to the world that we want to be fair to every part of Canada and keep all of Canada together.

I want the producers of every province to be able to compete and produce fairly and equitably. I want the beef and pork producers of Alberta to have an opportunity to survive, grow and contribute to a prosperous and united nation, and I want the same for every other province and every other producer. If this administration fails to acomplish that, then we can still do something different—at least we are trying. I have no intention of stopping an effort by saying it has failed before it has even started.

The red meat industry is important to me, to the Minister, to the people of Alberta and to all of Canada. I am sure that the goal of fair treatment will be accomplished.

We are a trading nation, an exporting nation. We cannot afford to lose our markets. Agriculture must decide whether to exist with its government subsidies and lose its market or forego government subsidy and live good and increasing markets. That is what I hope this Bill will accomplish. No subsidies, provincially or federally, will invoke fair trade in this country. We want to show other parts of the world that we are not asking our produces to compete against government money.

International law must not be used as a back door to come in and destroy some of our industries. So I also urge the Government to take a look at these international laws and GATT agreements so we will not have unfair treatment to our agricultural industry in any part of Canada. That has been too evident in the past.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that this Bill may not be perfect but it will give Canadians a chance. It will give the whole industry, including the beef and pork producers in every province, an opportunity to grow and prosper and to contribute to a greater and better Canada and to a better world.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I was very happy to hear the speech by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). His eloquent defence of Canada as a nation was very interesting but hardly appropriate, since he was talking about unity in connection with a Bill that is so divisive and on which it has been impossible to get any consensus. Telegrams are pouring in for the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise), announcing that most intervenors are against the Bill. When the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) talks about national unity and Canada's great virtues as a nation, he should realize that this measure has divided the Canadian agricultural community more than ever. I think the Hon. Member would be doing farmers a favour if he recognized this country's diversity as well as its unity.

Mr. Speaker, I think this Bill is a mistake in that it fails to recognize the diversity of this country and of Canadian agriculture. The Hon. Member gave an example of a situation in his province. I have a great deal of respect for his province, but the practice there is entirely different from the situation in other provinces. Of course he sees the Bill as an advantage since there is no such program in his province, but, and he said this earlier, there are other farmers who already have vested interests. There are farms across the country, in other provinces, who have made sacrifices to set up stabilization programs. There are provincial governments that have already made sacrifices and have used some of their resources to set up a stabilization instrument.

The Hon. Member refuses to admit that not all Canadian provinces are in the same situation. Nor will the Minister admit it, and that is why there is so much concern about this Bill.

The Minister is oblivious of the fact that for several days, Quebec farmers have been going from Member's office to Member's office, trying to persuade Members to stop the Minister and tell him: We need more consultation and more guarantees. And up to now, the Minister has refused to listen. He was at the committee sitting when the UPA president was there with representatives from other federations, but I wonder whether he was really listening, because none of their representations were incorporated in this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister will have to recognize that there is disagreement on this Bill. He will have to, and I am thinking of the editorial in "Terre de chez nous", where François Côté says: "Instead of taking a vigorous stand against this manœuvre, the Canadian Government seems to want to use it as an excuse to justify the adoption of Bill C-25. It is a constraint that is unacceptable for two reasons." And then we get comments on the pork issue, and I will get back to that later. Mr. Côté goes on to say: "Adopting Bill C-25 would mean adopting institutionalized hypocrisy, because from the strictly economic point of view, increasing income or reducing costs produces exactly the same results".

Mr. Speaker, it was in all the newspapers, and I just quoted an example from a Quebec newspaper, but I could also quote from the Calgary Herald, which says:

[English]

"Agriculture Bill appears to be waste of effort".

[Translation]

And he comments in great detail on the Bill. Mr. Speaker, no one at this time seems to think the Bill meets their needs and expectations.

The Minister claims there is no risk involved and that the Bill is just going to be a kind of testing ground. I have the impression the entire Bill is some kind of test balloon. Lately, the Minister has been unable to convince his fellow Members from Quebec that there is any justification for this Bill. He only managed to twist their arms, Mr. Speaker.

I was very pleased to hear the Parliamentary Secretary wonder about last night's voting. He must know that the Whip had to go down and make Members go upstairs, because they were not very keen.

Mr. Speaker, unless the Hon. Members who confirmed this had shaky knees . . . All I can say is, I am convinced that this Bill has created considerable concern within the Conservative caucus. And if it is not real, that means Hon. Members are not doing their job and that they are not properly representing the interests of their own producers.

The Minister should realize the responsibilities and mandate given to his Quebec colleagues by their electors. One of those responsibilities is to represent them with dignity in this House and they certainly would not be assuming those responsibilities if they were to cave in under ministerial pressure.

Mr. Speaker, the issue of regional production costs has been the main topic since debate began on this Bill. A few minutes ago I was talking to farmers who told me: It is impossible, it is illusory to think that costs are the same throughout Canada. In their brief they asked for the establishment of a system acknowledging the existing cost difference. Last night our colleagues introduced an amendment which would have accomplished that to a point so as to take regional concerns into account, but the Progressive Conservative Members voted against it, Mr. Speaker. Once again that is what I call the tyranny of the majority. But the Minister will have to live with the consequences of his action, just as he will have to explain next July 25 his failure to convince the Americans not to impose the surtax. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to bet that the Minister will again lose the last round to the American authorities.

I can tell you as well that the Minister will have to chose his words very carefully if he hopes to hide from Canadian and Quebec farmers the fact that his departmental budget is to be reduced by $50 million. He will also have to skate in circles once he starts tinkering around with the dairy policy. He should not forget to sharpen his skates.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, this Bill does not meet the legitimate aspirations of Quebec producers. As an example I told the Minister about one of my constituents who last year got $24 through the provincial pork stabilization program to which he has contributed. He was offered another program, a federal program which I describe as "stabilization of misery"—$6.54 to boot—except that APU members did not get it. It was promised to him all right, but he is still waiting, so given the difference can the Minister blame the producer? Can the Minister blame the producer who would rather keep his own program? Surely the Minister understands and agrees with me that the producer wants to keep the benefits and advantages he already has. As the saying goes, a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush!

As a producer himself the Minister would certainly opt for the provincial solution if he were in the same dilemma. I am sure of that. But he is the Minister responsible, he has his marching orders, so I understand he is forced to ignore this legitimate request but I do find that unacceptable. As a result, Mr. Speaker, it is as though the Minister is attempting to rewrite the Canadian Constitution, for he takes it upon himself to have the last word with respect to agricultural stabilization. Only the Minister will have the right of veto. In fact we have just witnessed the creation of a federal right of veto over everything connected with stabilization in Canada.

That is the kind of power the Minister wants to assume, yet agriculture is a joint federal-provincial jurisdiction under the provisions of the Canadian Constitution. The Minister will have a lot of difficulty when he attempts to explain his reasoning to Quebec producers.

I deplore the fact that the Minister did not see fit to consult more, for I am sure he might have been able to come up with a more realistic and more understanding amendment.

The Minister himself was forced to issue a rather half-baked press release on the meaning of his amendment, trying to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. But by doing so no one was satisfied and it is my view, Mr. Speaker, that over the coming weeks, and the coming months, and the coming years probably, the Minister will realize that his program does not interest many people. What will happen unfortunately, is that producers who will be counting on what they already have will be penalized by the federal stabilization program. Those people also are federal taxpayers, and under Bill C-25, if they do not meet the Minister's requirements, they can never get federal funds, which is not good enough in a confederation such as ours. It is not good enough that the program should have no flexibility. Mr. Speaker, the Minister could tell us that in the past we have had similar examples. Well, we did, and indeed we paid dearly, and I thought the Minister would have learned their lesson from last year's Bill C-54. I thought the Minister would also learn his lesson from other programs. In fact, other designated products could be covered by that and it would mean that producers who did not meet the Minister's requirements would have no access to any part of the federal funds, and there is the dilemma, Mr. Speaker.

We have seen over the last few days a number of farmers oppose this Bill. Some Members acted as if they opposed the Bill and, Mr. Speaker, I will never forget last Thursday when Quebec's great champions on the Committee were nuzzled around the noon hour, those Progressive Conservatives Members from Quebec, and in the afternoon they disappeared when the time came for the vote. But I say to the Minister: This may work this time, you may have succeeded in convincing your colleagues to trust you. But you will need to deliver, and I am convinced that the way the program started you will never deliver. I am sure also that the Minister will not deliver because of the American surtax, and I am sure that by the end of the summer there will be disappointment after disappointment, and what he saw with the senior citizens is nothing compared with what he will see this fall if he has the same attitude. If the Minister keeps scoffing at producers who have legitimate claims, if he will not defend them, because as Minister of Agriculture, he is the farmers' spokesman in Cabinet rather than a Cabinet spokesman for dealing with the farmers, and although the Minister was a good Member of Parliament in opposition he might even have done a better job had he stayed there longer, farmers now are under the impression that unfair provisions are forced down their throat. This is the perception that is evolving, just as senior citizens had the legitimate perception that they were being had, as you were forced to recognize belatedly, and it is my forecast, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister will be forced to do exactly the same thing. He will be forced one of these days to backtrack because of this country's diversity. We may refer to unity within diversity, but diversity must be emphasized in a legislation such as this.

In that sense, I am sure that what with the coming events and the failures on the horizon, unless the Minister knows from the horse's mouth, unless he can tell us that he succeeded in convincing the Americans, but since this issue started he admits from week to week that special advantages are granted, he used the plight of pork producers as a rationale for Bill C-25, and he would have us believe that the granting of federal funds, federal stabilization is more acceptable than provincial stabilization. This is what he would have us believe. This is what he tried to tell the committee, that this Bill would be very well received by the Americans. Indeed, he did not consult the representatives of Canadian producers before introducing his Bill, but he did consult the Americans. This is what is incredible. The UPA people told us that they had not been consulted, and one week later, the Minister admitted that he had his Bill checked by the Americans. This is what he admitted to us, that this measure would not embarras them too much, and that if it made then happy, it might work. This is what the Minister admitted in the committee, Mr. Speaker, that the Americans had been consulted.

Mr. Speaker, I do not understand his reasoning. Why would his Bill not create the danger of surtaxes while provincial money would be dangerous? Something is wrong in his reasoning. This is why, for the moment, we think that this Bill is premature in view of the lack of consultation and consensus.

The Minister has received telegrams in the last few days. I challenge him to table a single telegram of support. All the copies of telegrams that we saw were from people who said: This will not work. If the Minister has any that say something else, I think that it might be useful to the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) to know what support his Government has in this country. However, during the last few hours, my colleagues from the Maritimes have shown us some negative telegrams that they have received. We from Quebec have also received negative messages. People from the West have also sent negative telegrams and I am simply wondering whether the Minister is the only one not to have received any. In my opinion, this legislation will have to be reviewed and the Minister will realize that his standardization or stabilization of poverty is unfortunately utopic and that, in practice, there is so little consensus that his scheme will not work. In the interests of the producers I represent. I can only say that I wish that he does realize it because he is now jeopardizing stabilization instruments which were developed by the provinces following epic battles by the farmers. These programs were not given gradly. They were the product of numerous fights to assure at least some income stability and some survival in this sector.

Mr. Speaker, we have only to look at pork, beef, grain or lamb production to realize that Quebec producers are slowly gaining. There have been setbacks in pork production and there will be even more because of the grovelling of the Government before the Americans. However, on the whole, I believe that we had developed valid instruments. In any case, because of the tyranny of the majority, as I said earlier, the Minister will have his Bill in spite of what everyone says. However, I trust that, in the weeks to come, the Minister will use his time off to reflect on the lack of any practical options in his Bill, and I personally invite him to come and meet the farmers of my constituency. I would be very happy to meet the Minister, and I think that it would be in his interest to go also to the riding of Brome-Missisquoi, and I see my colleague for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand), who would be very happy to welcome the Minister. We could have him meet real people, real farmers who would tell him what they think. I am certain that he would come back with a whole new perspective in the fall. I find this Bill really regrettable, Mr. Speaker, because I believe that the intentions of the Minister are good. The problem is in applying these intentions to reality and I must unfortunately oppose this Bill which, if it were properly amended, could be useful to the people I have the honour to represent. Unfortunately, the Minister has not deemed it appropriate to listen either to his colleagues from Quebec, or to the representatives of certain provinces, or to the members of certain federations, and also—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I am sorry. Questions and comments.

● (1820)

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I am indeed quite pleased to take part in the debate on third reading of this bill. I cannot help remembering the summer months last year when Quebec farm producers were very concerned. Rightly or wrongly, they had the brilliant idea to meet with the various party candidates who were hoping to represent their respective constituencies. The discussions focused on a number of problems faced by the farmers. We heard quite a lot about the unpaid $31 million, as well as the $450,000 to sheep producers. We heard also a lot about their problems with the Farm Credit Corporation. We were told about the long term dairy policy, the concern of the retiring farmer about the future of his farm, the problems of research, as well as all the other problems stemming from those I have just enumerated.

Overriding these problems, Mr. Speaker, we could see as a sort of common denominator the very deep concern Quebec farm producers had about their future, and what lay ahead. Well, I felt it was quite normal and proper for these farmers who, for the most part are businessmen, to inquire and possibly find out what the future and the various political parties had to offer.

In reply to these questions, various candidates, including some hon. members who unfortunately are sitting on the government side, told Quebec farmers what they wanted to hear. They promised an era of stability. They promised them security. I repeat, they told them what they wanted to hear. Hardly a year had elapsed when the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) introduced Bill C-25 which is an unbelievable insult and a denial of the farmers' well deserved aspirations, a total disregard of Quebec farmers' concerns, and an end to the very good protection schemes they had devised for themselves over the past few years.

My colleague from Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) pointed out a few minutes ago that for pork production, which is extremely important in Quebec, the provincial stabilization program has paid over $20 per pork unit, while the federal program has paid slightly more than $6. For that reason, it is quite normal, fair and reasonable that Quebec pork producers want to keep what they have obtained, set up, built out of nothing and paid for, because those payments are not a godsend, Mr. Speaker, they come from the producers' contributions.

Now in Quebec, and I think that our colleagues opposite should know that a number of decisions were made in Quebec in the past few years: the decision to promote certain types of production and to support producers; the decision to intensify production in certain sectors. And in my opinion, those are quite legitimate decisions, because the provinces are allowed to make them under the Canadian Constitution.

In that connection, I should like, if you allow me, Mr. Speaker, to quote from an editorial published in La Terre de chez nous which says:

> Under the Canadian constitutional system, agriculture is a shared responsibility, and the federal government has no right to prevent any province from supporting its production and developing its agriculture through means deemed to be the soundest and the most appropriate by that province.

That was precisely, Mr. Speaker, the decision and the step taken by Quebec farmers a few years ago, and now with Bill C-25 they are told: "Ladies and gentlemen, if you want to take advantage of this legislation—which, by the way, is indeed less generous than the legislation now covering them—you will have to give up in the first place the system which you have set up and your yearly contributions." This is rather unacceptable, it seems to me, and I can easily understand that all farmers without exception are up in arms against the federal measure. I also understand why the unions and producers' associations so fiercely object to Bill C-25.

As a result of the uncertainty, discrimination and inequity, they feel prompted to ask: "What do you have to offer in return?" Producers have the right to wonder what the Government is ready to offer as an alternative after denying them what they have so dearly paid for throughout the years. What is the Government entitled to offer as an alternative, what is it entitled to give them? Unfortunately, Bill C-25 does not provide any answer to those concerns, and here is another interesting excerpt from La Terre de chez nous:

> Bill C-25 does not specify on what bases the stabilization payments will be calculated nor what will be the contribution of every party to those agreements.

Two items which, rightly so, as you will agree, Mr. Speaker, are extremely important. This legislation provides that the formula for computing stabilization payments and the contribution of each party shall be agreed upon by the three parties. Finally, he concludes that part by stating:

> In this, the Progressive Conservative Government is following the same strategy as with all other issues. It shies aways from decisions by minimizing the opportunities for confrontation.

On that item, Mr. Speaker, not only are farmers just as concerned, there is simply utter confusion, total and absolute uncertainty. One thing that is still more frustrating, still more unbelievable is the fact that the Minister is using an extremely acute problem, a most difficult problem now faced by farming in Quebec, the countervail that was slapped on pork products some time ago. At that level, there is ample talk that any direct or indirect subsidy would be liable to be met with that kind of countervail, which sooner or later would do considerable harm to farming. Again, that attitude, those comments are definitely and absolutely refuted by an article that sounds quite interesting to me, in which it is stated, Mr. Speaker, that——this is only a pretext, because the Provinces have found over the years a number of loopholes.

In cases where indeed there is no direct subsidy, they find a way to subsidize farmers in respect of fences, ditches, a number of items which as such, are perhaps not direct subsidies to any specific industry but which considered indirectly are a subsidy, to the point where the implementation of Bill C-25 would change absolutely nothing, would simply result in somehow institutionalizing a number of loopholes with the result that the unity or consistency aimed at by the Minister would in no way be reached.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, to me this legislation seems quite simply a piece of utter discrimination against all Quebec commodities and producers. Remember, Mr. Speaker, how this Government supported those great principles of consultation, openness, forthright and honest discussion with all parties involved! Do you remember all that talk about how this Government would definitely be a model of communication and consultation with provincial Governments? It is rather amazing that on this issue that is so basic to Quebec farming, all producers, all farmers, the Minister of Agriculture, all organizations, all unions unanimously and strongly opposed, and have been pressuring the Government for a long time to postpone or to further consider the consequences seen to be absolutely harmful to Quebec farming.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I ask the Minister of Agriculture to recognize that basic reality in Canadian farming, that the Quebec Government, the Province of Quebec and all Quebec farmers ferociously oppose the Bill. We urge the Minister and all Hon. Members opposite who made the same points, who met the same producers, who are aware of the same problems, to please beg the Minister and ask for a fair and just bill that will protect what Quebec farmers have gained over the last few years.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions, comments.

The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin).

Mr. François Gérin (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was anxious not to miss this last opportunity to speak to the Bill before the House, a Bill that is so important to agriculture both in Canada and Quebec. After listening to two Liberal Members from Quebec on this Bill, I must say that I did not altogether like what they said about the Quebec caucus, Mr. Speaker. But I suppose it is because they do not have a Quebec caucus, in fact never had one because it was not much use in the past.

I think it would be appropriate to recall what has transpired in connection with this Bill, and so correct a number of statements made by the two previous speakers, the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) and the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif). First of all, I think there was full and adequate consultation. I am sure we could have gone on consulting for two years, but I also think that everyone who wanted to be heard on this Bill had that opportunity.

I may recall, first of all, that there were 12 days of hearings before the committee, from May 28 to June 21. There was always at least one Quebecer present on each of those days. There was always one Member of the Quebec caucus of the Conservative Party at each of those hearings. Thirty-four associations were heard. A number of briefs drafted by people who did not come in person were submitted, but nevertheless, 34 associations took the trouble to come here, be heard, make suggestions and comments, and give constructive criticism, not like what we have just heard from Liberal Party Members who only want to be negative and kill this Bill.

In fact, we heard a lot of constructive criticism. Four provincial Ministers of Agriculture came to Ottawa to testify before the Committee. There were two representatives from other provinces, representing provincial Departments of Agriculture, and of course we had officials from Agriculture Canada as well as the Minister of Agriculture who came several times to answer questions put to him by the committee.

From Quebec alone and I am going to name only a few because Quebec belongs to practically all Canadian agricultural associations, such as the Canadian Pork Council, the Canada Sheep Council, the Retail Council of Canada, the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, the National Farmers' Union, and I could name most of the 34 associations I referred to earlier there were six which are particularly important to Quebec producers and these were the Union des producteurs agricoles du Québec, whose President, Jacques Proulx, appeared before the committee, and I will talk about Mr. Proulx a little later. We had the Fédération des producteurs de porc du Québec, represented by their president, Yvon Scalabrini, who lives in the great riding of Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead, about five miles from my home, and for whom I have great respect—he is a remarkable man. We had the Fédération des producteurs de bovins du Québec, with their President, Mr. Gilles Saint-Laurent who came to testify before the committee. We had the Fédération des producteurs d'agneau et de mouton du Québec, which testified through Mr. Gauthier. We had the Office des producteurs de porc du Québec, the Conseil de la production intégrée du porc and the Fonds de recherche porc sain.

Mr. Speaker, how could anyone say this Bill is being adopted without consultation? This is consultation beyond one's wildest dreams!

Mr. Lapierre: Window dressing!

Mr. Gérin: It was not window dressing, to quote the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre), who is interrupting my speech. This was full consultation. These people came to tell us what kind of legislation would be the best according to them. And we saw a number of regional interests. Everybody always looks after his own, and we saw, for instance, that produces from British Columbia took one position and producers from the Maritimes a different one and Western producers another position again, and of course there were some differences. Following these discussions, the Minister of Agriculture, after all witnesses had been heard, tabled a major amendment that responded more or less to what the producers, the pork producers wer asking, half—

An Hon. Member: More or less.

Mr. Gérin: —half of the basic demands of the UPA, half of the basic demands of the Fédération des producteurs de porc du Québec which correspond with the demands of the Canadian Pork Council. I have it all here:

The CPC members from the other provinces, British Columbia, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, support the position that the Bill be amended to delete the requirement that provincial plans be dropped as a precondition for the respective provinces to participate in a national agreement and that the terms for this provincial participation—

—that is, both producers and provincial governments—

— be elements to be negotiated in the development of any national agreement.

That is exactly what the Minister's amendment added. So it cannot be said that we are not meeting one of the two conditions.

The other condition refers to production costs. It says here:

The basic position of the members of the Canadian Pork Council is that there are in fact major differences in the costs of production in the respective provinces and that a single, national support level, based on a national average of prices and costs, so far as the latter are and would be used in determining the support level, fails to recognize their cost and price situations.

● (1840)

In addition, any payment based on national average costs and prices would be an advantage for regional producers whose costs are lower. According to the members, the fact is that agriculture in Canada is a joint federal-provincial responsibility and provincial Governments now have a wide range of policies and programs whose consequences vary appreciably, so the federal legislation under which producers might be eligible for participation ought not to exclude the producers in certain provinces for the only reason that a provincial support program already exists.

They maintain that this enabling legislation must not be a way to redress injustices stemming from provincial agricultural programs or policies. So here is the amendment introduced by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). And the statement goes on to say:

"Canadian Pork Council members think that Bill C-25 should be amended to delete the requirement that provincial programs be abandoned prior to participation in a national agreement, yet keeping in mind that equity and balance in the way producers are treated under the various provincial stabilization programs would still be the subject of serious negotiations in the preparation of agreements."

Therefore I fail to see how the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) can say that this Bill—and that is a reproach he voiced—evades the issue by avoiding confrontation. Of course not! It is a general legislation seeking to achieve consensus. Will we have consensus? I do not know. Nobody here can predict that.

No, Sir, we should not necessarily refrain from drafting a piece of legislation simply because we are not yet sure the producers will go along with it. But we do have a general legislation as it is and it makes it possible for pork producers of all regions of Canada to regroup, consider what might be the best formulas, and recommend to the Canadian Minister of Agriculture and to the provincial Governments a stabilization plan which they could live with.

This is how I understand that piece of legislation and how I see that it does give pork producers a fighting chance to improve their industry.

The leaders of Quebec pork producers had an opportunity to appear before us, as reported in issue 25 of the Votes and Proceedings of the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

If I may, I would like to quote a few comments made by the president of the UPA, Mr. Jacques Proulx.

As concerns the first point, namely the fact that he objected to the Bill because it deals with price stabilization and not income stabilization, he said: "—even though Bill C-25 appears to create openings for income stabilization programs based on production costs—". He therefore admitted that this Bill is an improvement and aims at providing stabilization based on production costs.

You can read the whole text if you like!

On page 25:8, he said the following: "In our view, this desire on the part of the federal government to penalize provinces that have their own stabilization scheme is illogical in terms of its content and unacceptable in terms of its underlying principles." However, at that time, the amendment which Quebec producers have found entirely satisfactory had not been proposed.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Proulx then added: "We agree that, at the national level, there should exist a tripartite stabilization program of the most beneficial and flexible type possible. We also believe that there should continue to be complimentary income stabilization schemes based on the priorities and objectives of each province. There should also be co-ordination between the two levels of government, and the governments should conduct such co-ordination through ongoing consultations aimed at adjusting their policies."

He then said on page 13: "Given the hog surplus in the United States and elsewhere in the world, it is not the only solution.

● (1850)

There is another solution, and it may be to reduce our production, or in any case, attempt to do something along those lines. Whether it is federal stabilization or any other kind of stabilization, I have the feeling that if we continue to produce more and more, we will come to a dead end."

All this was said by Mr. Jacques Proulx, president of the UPA. In the same issue, we find similar comments by Mr. Scalabrini. I do not think that anyone can say that Mr. Scalabrini is not representative of his sector. He said the same thing.

After all these representations, Mr. Speaker, the very next week, on June 17, the Conservative Members of Parliament from Quebec asked for the support of the Federation of Quebec Pork Producers and asked Mr. Scalabrini, among others, to appear before the Standing Committee on Agriculture to help analyse possible amendments which would be acceptable in Quebec.

Following two full days of hearing on June 17 and 18 all Conservatives members, regular and substitute alike, sitting on our Standing Committee on Agriculture, together with Mr. Scalabrini and Mr. Pélerin, the new President of the Quebec Hog Producers Federation, tried to convince their committee colleagues and the Minister of the need for an amendment acceptable to Quebec. On Thursday morning, since the committee did not sit on Wednesday, we had made sure that the Farm Producers Union appeared once more before the committee to examine again with us a number of potential amendments, and on Thursday afternoon, the Minister of Agriculture moved an amendment which fully met one of the two requirements of the Quebec hog producers. And you can read all the testimonies.

That is just how effective the Quebec members of the Progressive Conservative Party can be! Contrary to what used to happen in years gone by under the previous government, they know how to present their views to the various committees, and to the House as well. This piece of legislation is quite good. What we have here is a framework legislation which will make it possible for the federal government to consult with the various provincial governments and hog producers organizations for the purpose of stabilizing the industry.

Mr. Speaker, hog producers . . . How long do I still have left, Mr. Speaker? Five seconds or five minutes? Five minutes. The hog producers in my riding are well aware that agriculture is a difficult industry. They know about the overproduction problem. They know that we produce more milk than we can use, more hogs than we can eat, and that we must export a large quantity of farm products. They know that our exports are no longer what they used to be. The countries which used to buy from us have either improved their own agriculture, or they cannot afford any longer to do so. Mr. Speaker, the farm producers in my riding are aware of these problems. They are also aware of the need to find new solutions and develop a new approach. I do not think this new approach would be for hog producers to say: Let us limit our production to the needs of the domestic market, and let us forget about exporting to other countries. Quite the contrary. I feel that Canada must seek export markets and, to this aim, that the government should set up programs to promote our exports, provided that we develop a healthy and positive attitude, not a negative one.

Quebec hog producers have suggested that a meeting with all the other Canadian hog producers, the various organizations of hog producers in Canada might help devise a scheme to be submitted later to the Federal Government and the various provinces, a scheme that might help save this imperilled industry. It is not this bill which is likely to jeopardize in any way the hog industry in Canada, but the overproduction and the dissensions between hog producers.

And it is my felling that sooner or later the Canadian pork producers will have to sit down together, and the Canadian Government can then join them in the talks because we will have provided a blanket legislation that will allow those talks.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions, comments. The Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre).

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I listened very closely to my hon. friend for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin), and I am sorry to tell him that he understood absolutely nothing about the stabilization program. He set out to prove that we needed the stabilization program to help exports, but the Minister can tell that the stabilization program is altogether worthless where exports are concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) to clarify his view and tell me what impact the stabilization Bill now before us will have on the level of our exports, because if he read the Bill correctly, he knows it is strictly for domestic production.

The other point . . . when the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead—

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I believe the Hon. Member would like to answer your first question.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: This is because basically, Mr. Speaker, he is merely asking questions for the fun of it, for the pleasure of hearing his own voice rather than wanting to get an answer.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member is entitled to a short preamble and a comment and a fast question put succinctly.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. First there is the impact of the legislation on the level of exports; second, he said that UPA is totally dissatisfied with the amendment. I will tell him, for the record, that UPA's amendment has no common denominator with the amendment tabled by the Minister. Therefore, I would ask the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead to tell me who, from UPA, confirmed that he was totally satisfied. I would like to have his name, and certainly we can then have the reaction of that person. And, secondly, the impact of the legislation on exports.

Mr. Gérin: First, Mr. Jacques Proulx, UPA's president. The first thing he had to say before the Standing Committee on Agriculture was that Liberals, for 11 years, had promised them a legislation but never could come up with one. He recognized this legislation was a serious effort—

An Hon. Member: We stood up.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

Mr. Gérin: At any rate, Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member for Shefford will agree with me that in the pork industry, exports are vitally important. There is no way the pork industry in the current situation could be restricted to domestic consumption. I think we should have a broad mind, we should go beyond the scope of this legislation when looking at the problems with agriculture. This Bill helps, but it will not solve all the problems faced by Canadian farming, that is a sure thing. I say to you please try and have a broad mind; you Liberals, try not to be partisan. You often brag that you are trying not to be partisan. But make an effort not to be, in actual fact. How can we offer pork producers their present high volumes if we have no exports?

That is the problem, the big problem. Mr. Scalabrini and Mr. Proulx came to us and said this was one of their big problems. Surely they will have at some point to get together with producers in other Provinces, they will have to sit down, agree on what the industry will do. We have trouble with our exports to the United States and other countries; we have trouble exporting our commodities. We produce more than we eat; what are we going to do? Mr. Scalabrini said: Could we not have some kind of national plan to increase Canadian consumption? Could we not . . . For, as he knew very well, Mr. Scalabrini said: There will have to be some consensus among pork producers. The beginning of the end will come when all Canadian hog producers can sit together at the same table in an effort to really try to solve this problem. In this endeavour, they can rely on the support of all Progressive Conservative members. Can they rely also on the support of the Liberal members?

An Hon. Member: Absolutely not!

Mr. Gérin: I really do not know, because all that Liberal members are trying to do is to cause trouble. It is clear that a solution will not be found in an atmosphere of dissension and trouble. On the contrary. So let us be logical. Let us be practical. And let us promote these meetings. Personally, I tell the farm and hog producers in my riding that they can rely on me to promote a meeting of hog producers from across Canada, so that they can all sit together and find a solution.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I was—

• (1900)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Excuse me. Your colleague would like to ask a question and there is only five minutes left.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had no intention to deal with this issue, but when I heard these remarks from my office, I was shocked. How can the hon. member who spoke before me tell us that Quebec farm producers support this legislation, when right outside this House representatives from farm organizations from all over Quebec are telling us that they are against it? How can the hon. member tell us that to our face, when there are people at the door who are telling us something entirely different? Personally, I should like to hear the hon. member tell the truth!

Mr. Gérin: I am quite surprised the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is here tonight, because he was supposed to celebrate or, rather, attend a party in his honour. Nobody knows exactly what for, but anyway.

A while ago, I met the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who had come to the House to support this bill to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, and he told me that—

An Hon. Member: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gérin: —he had met this afternoon with the Quebec hog producers who had indicated to him that they could live very easily with this bill and that they would seek the consensus the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) mentioned a while ago.

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, I must admit that the comments made by the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) show he has some courage, and I mean the courage to rise in the House. Unfortunately, his comments also proved beyond a doubt that he is toeing the party line to a shocking extreme. He said earlier that we had no caucus. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's predecessor at least had some backbone, and when he spoke in the House, he was not concerned about party lines.

I would like to ask the Hon. Member what he thinks about the credibility of the UPA, considering that the Nicolet UPA had a delegation here yesterday, knocking on the doors of all Progressive Conservative Members to show its complete disapproval of Bill C-25.

Mr. Gérin: So you knew the Hon. Member I defeated at the last election? The pork producers in my riding went to see him at the last election, and he had a nice little pig he brought along. Maybe the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) was there. Well, let us not talk about that. Let us get down to serious matters. Look at what Mr. Scalabrini says, a guy from my riding you can trust, speaking of pork producers. I would say the problem in the pork industry is not necessarily stabilization, whether federal or provincial. The problem is overproduction. The warning light is on. It is time to stop and try and get a nationwide consensus to see where we are going, perhaps reduce our production or find some other solution. Pork producers want to meet and discuss these problems together. Help us help them. Let us make it unanimous so we can all try and help them find a solution. That is what we are asking you to do.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period provided for questions and comments has now expired. Debate. The Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet).

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak at the third reading stage of Bill C-25. I see the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council is surprised at my presence in the House during a debate on agricultural legislation. I may remind him that since 1972, I have had annual meetings with representatives from the agricultural industry in the province of Quebec. Every year since 1972, the first year I attended a convention of the Union des producteurs agricoles du Québec in Drummonville, where I did not have the pleasure of meeting—

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin), on a point of order.

Mr. Gérin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I think the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) should talk about the future instead of the past.

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I have plenty of time. If the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) wants to raise frivolous points of order, he is just diminishing the impact of his speech. I was about to say, when the Hon. Member interrupted me, that Quebec's farm producers, and especially the UPA representatives I have met on many occasions, realize that year after year, together with our fellow members from the rural ridings of Quebec, we have fought major battles to protect the interests of Quebec's farm producers. The reason we have a large and prosperous dairy industry, an industry and a policy that are the envy of dairy producers all over the world, is because Quebec Liberal Members have been working for years to ensure that this dairy policy is both fair and generous to dairy farmers. Quebec has experienced unprecedented expansion in the agricultural sector because Liberal Party Members, and especially Liberal Members of Parliament, have been fighting for years to ensure that producers in Quebec and Eastern Canada are able to obtain sufficient quantities of feed grains at competitive prices, to help them maintain their production and compete not just with other Canadian producers but also with foreign producers on Canadian and world markets.

In this debate on third reading of Bill C-25, I cannot help referring to the document tabled by the Progressive Conservative Government, entitled: "A new direction for Canada". A program for economic renewal, that in pages and pages of text contains only a few paragraphs, not even a whole page on agriculture. I am sure that all farm producers in Canada, whether they are from Quebec or the Maritimes, from Ontario or Western Canada, have read this document published by the Progressive Conservative Government which discusses a new direction for Canada and provides an agenda for economic renewal, while showing so little concern for the problems and demands of our farmers.

As I said, hardly one page on agriculture, but how dangerous and how significant it is, Mr. Speaker, and I will quote briefly one of those paragraphs:

> Canada is a leading force in the world agricultural marketplace. Agriculture is a pillar of the economy in the west, and the mainstay of many communities in the east. The sector has demonstrated its resilience in responding to change to an extent probably unmatched by other industries.

Fancy words and compliments for the farmers of Canada. But where this gets serious is when the Progressive Conservative Government states, and I quote:

> However, government involvement, both federal and provincial, is significant. In addition to substantial regulatory intervention, annual federal budgetary allocations to the sector amount to some $1.35 billion through Agriculture Canada. Of this, some $700 million is devoted to price and income supports.

So what is the meaning of that, Mr. Speaker? It means that, in its economic statement, the Progressive Conservative Government acknowledges the vitality of the agricultural sector. It acknowledges that Agriculture Canada does spend a lot of money each year for the Canadian agricultural community. In other words, this Progressive Conservative Government admits that the previous administration did well. They admit that the Liberals, the predecessor of the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. Eugene Whelan, did much for Canada's farmers and that considerable funds are earmarked each year to help Canadian farmers.

But if that was all they are saying we could congratulate the Progressive Conservative Government, but it goes farther and that is where we are concerned and must talk about it. I take this opportunity to voice our concern: In an underhanded manner they want to put a stop to this assistance and those grants to Canadian farmers. This is an economic document which states that the federal Government wants to reduce the deficit, that the federal Government wants to intervene less directly in the economy, and that by every means it seeks to cut down its expenditures. So in this economic statement, in those short few sentences about agriculture the Canadian Government is telling all farmers: We give you too much money, we are now giving you about $700 million under price and income support programs, that is too much, we want to cut down a little. That is what has me seriously worried. I am not surprised to see that the various agricultural organizations are beginning to be quite concerned about the position taken by this Government.

Obviously the Government wants to take a new approach, and it says so: The new tripartite approach to red meat stabilization may be a good example of how both levels of government and the producers themselves can co-operate to develop improvements over former arrangements. What does that mean? It means that the Canadian Government now wants to make the provinces pay part of the bill and make the farmers pay part of the bill, while the Government will only pay one-third and probably reduce its assistance and subsidies to support prices and incomes in the agricultural industry.

I want to ask a question to the Minister of Agriculture. Will the next program to be affected not be the dairy policy? Is the Minister of Agriculture getting ready to cut back the $300 million or so which have been allocated for many years, year after year, to support the Canadian dairy policy? Is the Minister of Agriculture not getting ready to put an end to this assistance which is absolutely essential for all industrial milk producers who, throughout the years, have received the assistance of the Canadian Government, not only to earn a decent living, but also to work in a sector where they could at least have some returns?

The document published by the Canadian Government entitled A New Direction for Canada: An Agenda for Economic Renewal suggests that the Government is getting ready to cut back its agricultural support programs and I find this quite unacceptable. I would like to say this to the Minister of Agriculture: You are about to rush Bill B-25 through the House in spite of the opposition of Quebec farmers and of several provincial governments who said that they did not approve this Bill. However, I am telling you that if you touch the Canadian dairy policy, you have seen nothing yet. The protests and opposition provoked by your proposal to deindex pensions is nothing to what you will see if you try to touch the dairy policy.

Mr. Speaker, I do not understand this Government which, after its victory on September 4, said that we were beginning a new era of good relations and cooperation between the Canadian Government and the provinces. Why is it that the Minister of Agriculture wants to rush Bill C-25 through against all this opposition before the House adjourns? Why is it so urgent to adopt this Bill which has met with so much opposition?

The Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) referred briefly earlier to those who appeared before the Parliamentary committee to make representations. I do not question the figures he has quoted and he named accurately some of the witnesses who appeared before the Parliamentary committee. However, I must point out to him that consultation means dialogue, that you speak to each other, that you ask each other questions and that you try to understand each other.

What consultation seems to mean for the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) is that the Government gave its opinion when introducing its Bill, all the witnesses who appeared before the committee raised objections to this Bill, but in site of all that, the Government seems satisfied that it has consulted everyone. They introduced the Bill. All those who were consulted told them: It is no good. But the Government now says: We have consulted and we are going forward with our Bill without making any substantial amendments.

Earlier, an amendment presented by the Minister in committee was mentioned, but this amendment was rejected by Ministers from the Western provinces. We have been informed that the Alberta and Saskatchewan Ministers of Agriculture are against this amendment and that, in their opinion, it means absolutely nothing and does not meet their basic objections.

This amendment which so impressed the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) does not have the agreement or the approval of the Quebec Union des producteurs agricoles either. This amendment is much too timid and only creates confusion which will allow the Minister of Agriculture of Canada (Mr. Wise) to decide arbitrarily and alone how the tri-partite program will work. It does not allow the provinces to take part in the final decision. The Minister of Agriculture of Canada will decide alone whether or not a provincial program will be maintained or whether it will have to be abandoned even though doing so would be to the disadvantage of the farm producers of that province.

This is not a satisfactory amendment. It means that each farm producer in the provinces with existing programs are at the mercy of the whims and the fancy of the Minister of Agriculture, and this is totally unacceptable.

Mr. Speaker, since the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead referred to it, I can only underline that this Bill has been rushed through this Parliament. In fact, second reading of this Bill began on May 17. On that date, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais) introduced the Bill on behalf of his Minister. And when I refer to Hansard of that day, those who took part in that debate were members of the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party, but no other Tory Member from Quebec spoke.

An Hon. Member: Shame!

Mr. Ouellet: The only one who spoke was the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

An Hon. Member: He could not figure out what he was reading!

Mr. Ouellet: The debate resumed a few days later on May 21, and then a rather remarkable thing happened, the only one to speak before the Bill obtained second reading was the Official Opposition critic on agriculture, and he was the only Liberal Member with a NDP Member to take part in the debate at that time.

An Hon. Member: It was fortunate that he was there.

Mr. Ouellet: The Minister did not speak on the 17 nor on the 21.

An Hon. Member: He was ashamed until then!

Mr. Ouellet: The Bill came back yesterday with amendments for our consideration and which . . . I still have—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): About a minute.

Mr. Ouellet: A minute, thank you. The Bill came back yesterday and once again, unfortunately, only our NDP colleague took the floor, along with a good number of Liberal Members and the Minister still remained silent. Does he really want to have that Bill passed? One wonders. I think, Mr. Speaker, and I am coming to an end, that this Bill has not been fully looked into in this House. I think that there is too much opposition as well in the Maritimes. Yesterday, my colleague from Prince Edward Island mentioned a telegram he had received from the Minister of Agriculture of that Province objecting to the Bill. We know that dozens and dozens of farmers' organizations object to the Bill and that other provincial Ministers of Agriculture also object to it. I wonder why the Minister is bent on having that legislation passed in a hurry before the summer recess, a legislation which does not meet the legitimate aspirations of Canadian farmers. The Liberal Party will surely fight to the end against that Bill and we will surely vote against it, because it is prejudicial, not only in the short term but also in the long term, to Canadian farmers.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions, comments or debate? The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria).

[English]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to participate in this very important agricultural debate. I note a certain sadness on the face of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). It is no doubt caused by the assault which was perpetrated on the farmers earlier by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) when he imposed a one cent a litre tax on gasoline. I know that the Minister of Agriculture, like myself, is very worried about the effect that will have on the agricultural industry in Canada. I do not blame him for being disappointed. Members representing agricultural constituencies are also disappointed with a Government which gives so many breaks to the rich and so little to the poor and the farming communities of Canada.

A few days ago I made a few remarks in the House concerning Bill C-25, and for the benefit of Members who were not present on that day I would like to repeat those remarks.

An Hon. Member: I missed something.

Mr. Boudria: The Hon. Member opposite said that he missed something, so I will repeat it for his benefit. I know that the Member opposite is on the Standing Committee on Agriculture and is very interested in the well-being of farmers across Canada.

I would like to draw to the attention of the House the minutes of the Standing Committee on Agriculture, Number 39 of June 18, 1985. The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) asked the Minister a very important question in committee. He was talking about agricultural stabilization and, in particular, pork. He asked what effect this Bill would have, in the event it was passed, in establishing stabilization in the pork industry. Much of the debate over the last few days in this House has surrounded the whole area of the pork industry because we know the terrible condition of that industry. I outlined to the committee and to this House the fact that this industry has been diminishing in numbers and amount of production every year for the last five years in the constituency I represent. I know the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), who is listening very attentively, will be interested in hearing this, as he usually is. I would just like to quote something the Minister of Agriculture said. He said the following in Committee:

If I were presented with that decision today, and recognizing the extent of the percentage and the impact and the importance of the size of the hog industry to one or two or three provinces, I can assure you, given the conditions today, that I would not be recommending that we go forward with a hog plan.

We are in a situation, Mr. Speaker, as we discuss hog stabilization, with the Minister saying we need this Bill right away in order to help the agricultural industry out of a difficult position. Of course, in my own riding that is very much the case. We are in a very difficult position. On the other hand, a large number of the people in my own constituency are hog producers who need these measures, yet we have no assurance that they will be helped in any way, shape or form. So we wonder what the rush is to pass a Bill which is not going to be of assistance to a large number of those who need the assistance.

Furthermore, there are confusing interpretations about some of these situations at the present time. For instance, the Minister of Agriculture was quoted in a London Free Press article of June 17, 1985. The article describes how subsidies invite retaliation such as countervails, and so forth, from other countries. I would like to quote part of the last paragraph of the article in the London Free Press. It states:

The best solution would be a stabilization plan administered by Government but entirely financed by farmers—

But if a plan is going to be funded only by the farmers, that is no plan at all. Our farmers need help at this point. And if the farmers wanted a plan of their own, it would be administered by themselves. If you were one of those farmers, Mr. Speaker—recognizing the neutrality of your position—would you trust the Tories with your money? Obviously not, Mr. Speaker. We can see that you would not trust the Tories with your money.

Mr. Boyer: Let the record show the Speaker nodded.

Mr. Boudria: Of course, neither would the farmers. Like yourself, Mr. Speaker, they would be very reluctant to get into that kind of proposition.

My distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), referred to the Agenda for Economic Renewal proposed by the Government last fall. He explained very well some very important questions he wanted answered. I invite the Minister to take note of those questions, as I am sure he did.

The Government seems to be of the view that tripartite is the way of the future in providing assistance to agriculture. In its Agenda for Economic Renewal the Government states in part:

The federal Government must examine its involvement in the sector to ensure that it is directed at maintaining a strong, efficient, and competitive Canadian agricultural sector, and that it recognizes its special challenges.

It states further on, and I quote:

The new tripartite approach to red meat stabilization may be a good example of how both levels of Government and the producers themselves can co-operate to develop improvements over former arrangements.

What does that mean, Mr. Speaker? Does it mean, for instance, that there would be tripartite in the dairy industry in the future? I ask you, Mr. Speaker, does it mean that? Of course, in that case the Canadian farmers would be worried that the Government would withdraw from its present responsibilities.

Obviously, Canadian farmers are upset. They are in a difficult situation. They have been promised a lot by the present Government and have received very little. Just to outline to you, Mr. Speaker, the frustration of the Canadian farmers at the present time, I would like to read a resolution passed by the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture. It states, and I quote:

Whereas Mr. Brian Mulroney during the last election campaign made a written promise to provide agriculture with long-term financing at stable and affordable rates and

Whereas farm financing was not addressed in the recent budget,

Therefore we, the members of the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture jointly demand that the Prime Minister of Canada fulfil his campaign promises and be it further resolved that we demand that the cuts of $60 million in the Agriculture programs announced November 8, 1984 and the proposed $50 million cut in the May 23 Budget be cancelled and that full funding be immediately restored to the Agriculture Department.

I bring this to your attention, Mr. Speaker, so that you will understand, as I am sure you do, the difficulty facing the agricultural industry of our country.

The Bill before us has generated quite a bit of controversy. We know that some Conservative Members from Quebec, and other areas where the cost of production in certain commodities is higher than in other regions, want to have provincial programs which will bring those producers into a more advantageous position. That, of course, is very important to the farmers of those regions.

As I said the other day, the farmers of the regions I represent are located right near the City of Montreal in eastern Ontario. They compete against the Quebec farmers. They receive little or no programs in Ontario which could help them because the previous Conservative Government of Ontario did nothing for the farmers. So they are selling on the Quebec market in competition with the Quebec farmer who has a larger provincial subsidy. The difficulty with this, of course, Mr. Speaker—and I am sure you have recognized it by now—is that it leaves them a lot less profit.

At a time when agriculture was somewhat more profitable—not that it was ever very profitable but it was more profitable than it is now—the farmers of my constituency still made money, even though others made more. They managed to make ends meet. But at a time when the margin of profit has decreased, so much, or does not even exist, they are in a losing proposition. Therefore, the farmers I represent in eastern Ontario want a regional component, but "regional" not necessarily meaning provincial. In other words, there should be smaller regions within the provinces so that the farmers of my riding, and others in similar circumstances, could be assisted.

The Minister has brought forward an amendment. As far as we are concerned, Mr. Speaker, it brings more confusion and less clarity to a Bill which is already controversial and difficult to understand. Let me read briefly, Mr. Speaker, Clause 8(3)(a) of the amendment. It states, and I quote:

● (1940)

The Minister may enter into an agreement with a province in respect of an agricultural commodity only if he is of the opinion that such an agreement

(a) would not give to the producers of the commodity who are to be parties to the agreement or for whose benefit the agreement would be entered into, a financial advantage in the production or marketing of the commodity not enjoyed by other producers of the commodity in Canada;

Let us say two provinces have an agreement with the Federal Government, and a third province with a lower cost of production wants to join in that same commodity agreement. That province would, of course, be in a financially advantageous position vis-à-vis the production and marketing of the commodity. Would that mean that the province would be excluded from a previously implemented plan? If that is the case, I wonder what the amendment does other than nullify the Bill in its entirety. I am at a total loss to understand why the Government is proceeding with the Bill in this manner.

It is obvious that we have to get more agreement from producers and redefine what we are trying to do. Everyone wants stabilization. Everyone wants our farmers to be assisted. But we do not want the farmers of one part of the country pitted against the others. We do not want farmers of the same province but in different parts to be pitted against each other. That is not why we are here. What we all want is to assist the farming industry.

We can do something tonight for that industry. Let us get together and withdraw those gas price increases for the farmers of Canada. Let us do that right now. I am sure if you would seek unanimous consent of the House to withdraw that ridiculous tax increase you would get it.

Mr. Gottselig: Dream on.

Mr. Boudria: You see, again I over-estimated the Tories. I will never do that again. I thought at least some were in favour of farming, but perhaps I was wrong. Well, after the next election the new Liberal Government can take care of farmers, because obviously the Tories refused to do it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: That is very unfortunate. I am sure that if I spoke to my colleagues on this side they would want the farmers of Canada to pay less in gasoline taxes. I am sure all Liberals would agree with that right now. That is a good Liberal policy. But the Conservatives, while they are proceeding with this legislation, are creating this atmosphere of difficulty.

Mr. Wise: You are creating it.

Mr. Boudria: The Minister says I am creating that atmosphere.

Mr. Wise: Sure you are.

Mr. Boudria: He has repeated it. I am sure you have noted it, Mr. Speaker. I am sure he is aware that there are many commodity groups across this country—

Mr. Wise: That is right.

Mr. Boudria: —who appeared before our committee, some of whom were for and some of whom were against the measure. We even had one group come up with two resolutions, one saying they wanted top loading and the other saying they did not, and this from the same group.

Mr. Parry: They must be Liberals.

Mr. Boudria: What this Government should do is postpone this Bill, we should hear more from the farming community and obtain that very valuable consensus that the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) referred to earlier. We should spend the summer listening to their concerns, so that when we do something we do it properly. Meanwhile, if we want to do something constructive tonight and tomorrow, let us reduce the gas taxes which the Minister of Finance is attempting to raise on the backs of the farmers of this country. That would be a good and constructive move at the present time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments.

Mr. Hawkes: I sat in this House in 1980 when the Government was defeated on the Budget over a gasoline tax. The Liberals came into government and transferred that tax burden to home-heating fuel which hurt the senior citizens of this country. Is that what the Member is proposing we do, increase taxes on home-heating fuel instead of motor vehicles, just like they did for so many years?

Mr. Boudria: That is an excellent question. The Member is asking where I propose to increase taxes. Well, I don't.

Mr. Towers: Then move over to your left.

Mr. Foster: I just wanted to ask the Hon. Member whether he thinks the Government should be plunging ahead with this Bill when the Alberta and Saskatchewan Ministers of Agriculture have expressed their concern and opposition to it. Many producer groups say they cannot understand the amendment the Minister has put forward. Does the Hon. Member feel it is wise to be plunging ahead with this Bill when there is no consensus?

As well, I am very conscious of the Hon. Member's concern about the two cent a litre gas tax which the Minister is going to impose in September. In the west they call that the new Tory harvest tax. The Hon. Member from Saskatchewan over there is very nervous because he knows that although the Liberal Government promised a $16 million assistance program for northeastern Saskatchewan, the Tories only delivered about $8 million. So he is obviously very nervous.

Mr. Taylor: The Liberals destroyed the west.

Mr. Foster: He also knows that the imposition of a 9 cent a gallon tax on farm fuels during the harvest this fall will be very bad.

Mr. Scowen: It is your tax, don't forget that.

Mr. Foster: I asked the Minister yesterday whether there was going to be an exemption for farmers and he said there is no exemption for farmers. The Tories were very proud last fall to announce a reduction in excise tax for farmers, but they did not say anything about the 9 cents a gallon tax they were imposing in September. I asked the Minister if the additional 4 cents or 5 cents a gallon tax announced today was going to be imposed on farmers and he as much as said yes. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources made a speech at Inuvik about two months ago saying that she was going to put in place a new petroleum incentive program. The discussion in her department is that another 2 cents a litre tax is going to be imposed on Canadians some time next fall or winter.

I wanted to comment on the speech by the Hon. Member because he certainly touched on those points where the Tories are really putting pressure on Canadian agriculture.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to the comments of my hon. colleague. The amendment proposed by the Minister resembles an economic forecast. It could be interpreted about 45 different ways and there does not seem to be a consensus even on what it means. He issued a press release to explain what he means, but reading the press release and then reading the amendment is like reading two different things. That has a number of people worried.

The tax increase on gasoline for farmers, the harvest tax if you like, perpetrated by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and put up with by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise), undoubtedly with a lot of reluctance, is shameful indeed. The Conservative Party pledged so much to the farmers last summer. I have a list of Tory promises, 20 of them specifically for the farming sector.

Mr. Wise: Sixteen.

Mr. Boudria: Well, there are 20 here. That is the problem with the Tories; they promise things and then they forget, or they try to forget. But we are here to remind them. None of the promises which I have here say, "Vote for us and we will tax you more". If this is such a great idea, why did they not advocate it last summer when they were seeking the votes of farmers across the country? The reason is obvious, Mr. Speaker. They did not talk about it because there were no votes in it. That is the trouble with that Party. It has made too many promises to too many people and cannot live up to the commitments it made. That is called breaking promises or breaking sacred trusts.

● (1950)

Mr. Caldwell: You are breaking my heart.

Mr. Boudria: I don't know if I am breaking the Member's heart, and I don't really care. I care about the farmers of this country and that is what is important. Maybe the Member across will stand and speak on behalf of the farmers of his riding. That is what he should do. He should stand up to the Minister of Finance and tell him that he cannot tax the farmers out of business, as the Government is trying to do.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) on a speech that was right to the point, and ask him to comment on one aspect of this Bill which has raised major concerns across the country, not only among provincial representatives but also among many groups of producers. It was said, more specifically, that once a province had signed an agreement, it would no longer have the right to plead variations in production costs that would necessarily occur, and they will necessarily occur across the country. We cannot expect costs to be the same for a farmer in Western Canada, a farmer in Ontario, a farmer in Quebec and a farmer in the Maritimes.

According to the parties who appeared before the committee, some way must be found to enable a province, once it has signed the agreement, to raise the issue of costs specific to a certain region and make it possible to negotiate the kind of system that will be required to make the tripartite system suggested by the Conservative Government function satisfactorily across the country. To resolve this problem, yesterday the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) presented an amendment that would allow for cost variations and would make the legislation a little fairer and a little more equitable. I would like to know what the Hon. Member thinks of the Government Members' incredible refusal, especially those Members from Eastern Canada, an area where costs vary considerably. Why did Conservative Members from Eastern Canada not support this amendment?

Mr. Boudria: As you would know, Mr. Speaker, I made a speech in support of the amendment described by my colleague the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet). Frankly I too was very surprised to see that the Conservative Members did not at least express an opinion in favour of this amendment, as they should have done if they really represented their ridings.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what is happening is that not only do costs differ in certain provinces, as my colleague the Hon. Member for Papineau so aptly described it, but they sometimes differ within the same province. For instance, production costs in a given region of the Gaspé area might differ from those in the Eastern Townships, and the same thing goes for Eastern Ontario which I represent, costs are not the same as those in the southwest. It is obvious that an amendment such as the one proposed by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) should have been unanimously endorsed by all Members of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart).

Agricultural Stabilization Act

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I believe that this is the first time I rise in this House to speak on a Bill which deals with the farmers.

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malépart: I think that everyone knows that I represent an urban constituency. Why did I rise this evening to speak on a Bill whose purpose is to defend Quebec farmers? Yesterday evening, at the door of the House of Commons, members of the UPA came to see me and told me: "Mr. Malépart, you have to join the battle for Quebec farmers!" I told myself that it had to be serious if representatives of urban centres were being asked to become involved in a battle to defend farmers.

Mr. Lapierre: The Conservatives are not there!

Mr. Malépart: That is true. My colleague for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) has given one of the reasons for this. Unfortunately, the Progressive Conservative Members in Quebec are mostly from rural areas and they are behaving like cowards, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Jelly-fish!

Mr. Malépart: Second, these people told me: "This will affect your constituency because food prices will increase and the low- and middle-income people of Sainte-Marie who will be the ones to pay the bill.

Another reason why I wanted to speak about this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is that I do not understand the reasoning of these Progressive Conservative Members who should have learned a lesson today from the Official Opposition. One month ago, this whole gang of Quebec Conservative jelly-fish, the 58 silent Members, said after the Budget: This is excellent for senior citizens. Today, they all looked like dummies. They all looked humiliated, and once more, the representatives of Quebec are telling these Members: Wake up, you have found the rest-rooms in Parliament, get down to the issues which concern us, stand up! Mr. Speaker, since September 4, Quebec has been ripped off four times by this Progressive Conservative Government Mr. Speaker, today—

Ms. Jacques: Come on!

Mr. Malépart: The Hon. Member for Montreal-Mercier (Ms. Jacques)—

An Hon. Member: She never speaks in this House!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, since September 4, how many promises have been made by the Prime Minister to Quebec men and women throughout the province? Yet, this same Government is shamelessly deceiving the population. Are we going to have to find another Mrs. Denis in the farming community? Who will come on Parliament Hill to shake up the Prime Minister?

Mr. Speaker, I would like the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) to listen to us.

An Hon. Member: It is very sad!

Mr. Malépart: The Minister of Agriculture does not understand Quebecers. He saw his Minister of Finance eat crow today and reverse his decision. I can tell the Minister of Agriculture not to depend on the representatives of Quebec in his own party, because if ever the Quebec farmers, the men and women from Quebec, come here, the Minister of Agriculture will have to do what the Minister of Finance did today and retreat, Mr. Speaker!

Quebec was ripped off by the tax, by de-indexation and by the $2.5 billion giveaway to oil multinationals to create jobs in the West and increase consumer taxes in Quebec! The housing sector in Quebec has been ripped off as far as the RRAP is concerned and these 58 silent Progressive Conservatives did nothing! You are aware of this, Mr. Speaker! Sherbrooke will become a subsidiary of Longueuil for social housing! Trois-Rivières will become a subsidiary of the City of Laval! Fortunately, Montreal is represented mostly by Liberals who hold together and do not lose the Budget battle.

Mr. Speaker, I could list all the commitments made by the Prime Minister which have been forgotten since September 4. For one month, we kept after him, we gave him a little lesson, we shook him up just a bit, and today he retreated, but he does not know how hot it will be next fall. I have been a Member of the Quebec National Assembly. At 12, I went on strike as an altar boy. I shook up the parish priest, and I can tell you that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise), if we get involved, will be shaken up and will realize that we Quebecers know how to go about all that.

Mr. Speaker, there is something else. Last week, our very dear Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the bright kid from Baie Comeau, the life citizen of Westmount, will meet Quebec's Premier. And he solemnly swears, as he can do so well with his grave and mellow voice, to recognize Quebec's special status. He goes along saying whatever comes to his mind. To wit: his Members from Quebec, with him taking the lead, have said concerning agriculture, and it is written in black and white, in an editorial, that Quebec farmers want a special status. Why not support that amendment?

Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister—this is a childhood sickness, do not worry about it, there are ways to cure that—says anything, uses any word, but in actual fact, it is Quebecers who are had. Luckilly, Quebecers can count on my colleagues from Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) and Shefford (Mr. Lapierre), who have expertise in that area and who know how to defend the industry.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this would be a golden opportunity for the Prime Minister and his Conservative

Members to show their intellectual honesty on that issue, and to say: "We are ready to take up constitutional negotiations, we are ready to recognize a special status for Quebec." Let us start by granting Quebec a special status as far as agriculture is concerned, to provide what Quebec farmers need. Our 58 speechless—we had in Quebec a leading pump attendant and we expected him to put oil multinationals in step, but now, Mr. Speaker, we have absolute silence. Among Quebec Members, two have shown courage, the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) and the Hon. Member for Rouyn-Noranda. But all the others are just cowards.

I think they will have time to think the legislation over during the summer recess. Because as I recall, when I was MLA in Quebec and farmers were not satisfied with the provincial Government's policies of the time, things went rough. Manure flew over the lawns. There were a number of activities, and I remember that Members for those areas stood up after that, but it was too late. Where are those Quebec Members? We see here Mr. Proulx, representing UPA. We crumble under new taxes. In the federal budget, the bill is steep: "UPA opposes the Bill on red meat."

Faced with American threats of tariff barriers, Garon, the Quebec Minister, supported the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine), a Conservative, during the last elections. He must be rather sorry that the latter should have betrayed him here today. Garon, in Ottawa, failed to defend pork producers in this country. Oh yes, a headline we saw every where: "Mulroney promises to defend pork producers". He made so many promises that guy. But we see no action.

"Red meat stabilization. Quebec farmers press for the Bill's withdrawal". Can you read? Do you understand anything, Members from Quebec? Can you speak? You should stand up a little. Another newspaper report: "Pork returns. UPA calls for general mobilization". The Hon. Member for Richelieu (Mr. Plamondon) never rises to do anything. It is about time he woke up over there. He was here to vote on his knees for Mr. Reagan's party. How many millions did that cost for the Conservative gang, to go there on their knees: "Mr. Reagan, we are going to fix all that?" The next day, Quebec farmers took the loss. The very next day, Canadian producers incurred losses. The balance sheet for hogs is as follows: for the Beauce area, a loss of $4.5 million. Where is our brave member for Beauce (Mr.Bernier)? Where is he hiding? Has he left for the pigsty? Come on, that is unacceptable.

From the Editor . . . François Côté: Bill C-25 and the US imposed countervailing duties on Canadian hogs. Mr. Speaker, I think everybody should read this. Two major events are occurring now within the agricultural community. Each of them is very complex, but the link between the two is even more complex which makes the whole situation for most people understandably confusing. That is the perfect image of our Prime Minister. On the one hand, there is the Federal Government who has introduced in the House of Commons bill C-25 and who, while seeking to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, is in fact trying to get rid of the provincial price and income stabilizing schemes which exist in Quebec and several other provinces.

Mr. Côté continues: Bill C-25 provides that producers involved in a provincial stabilization scheme could not benefit from the federal one. Which means that because Quebec is helping farm producers, the Federal government will keep away. Once again Quebecers are being stuck in the middle! Again from Mr. Côté's article: The bill provides that producers—that is worth repeating—who benefit from a provincial scheme will be penalized by the Federal scheme. If adopted, this legislation would confirm the government's refusal to pay Quebec producers $6.54 per hog for 1983-84, in line with its refusal a few years ago to pay sheep producers. I thought the Minister of Public Works had promised a cheque during the election campaign, but there is a problem with his cheque: it is worthless for lack of sufficient funds. Mr. Speaker, it is a shame that such things should happen.

I continue quoting from Mr. Côté's article: The decision to stop the various provinces from implementing top-loading plans does not make any sense at all in view of the fact that nothing prohibits the provinces anxious to help their farmers from subsiding them indirectly by reducing the difference in costs or from adopting policies aimed at providing farmers with services more cheaply. To pass Bill C-25—and it is important that all Members of this House hear this—would be to systematize hypocrisy and I will say it over again, Mr. Speaker, in case someone failed to understand: To pass Bill C-25 would be to systematize hypocrisy, because from a strictly economic point of view, to increase revenues or reduce costs amounts exactly to the same thing.

I quoted part of an editorial signed by Mr. Côté, a well-known authority on agriculture in Quebec and a highly qualified man.

Mr. Speaker, in the past week of two all the Liberal Members in this House have been trying by every possible means to sensitize the Members of this House, mainly the Quebec Members, and convince them that Bill C-25 should be geared to regional needs at the provincial level. Such a request, Mr. Speaker, would be consistent with the comments made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) during the election campaign in Quebec and with the same comments repeated when the Quebec Government requested constitutional amendments, as well as the comments he made at his meeting with the Quebec premier this week.

What producers are asking is quite simple. They want the same thing the Prime Minister wants but in fact refuses to give. They want programs that are regionally adapted that acknowledge the specific nature of agriculture in Quebec. They do not want promises, they want action to harmonize federal stabilization programs with the programs the provincial government makes available to farmers, including subsidies, and that in return, the federal Government will not withdraw its programs but continue to maintain the same kind of action to help Quebec producers.

It seems to me this is very simple and easy to understand. I do not know what the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) can be thinking.

Unfortunately, the most shocking aspect of this question is that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture is from Quebec. Often, for a mere $8,000 more as Parliamentary Secretary, some people are willing to sell out anyone. And that is exactly what is happening with respect to the agricultural sector in Quebec. I do not think the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais) who comes from Quebec, is being paid a salary to sell the Minister's policies to Quebec farmers and to put his fellow Members to sleep. His role is to defend the interests of Quebec farmers. And the same definition of a Member's role applies to those Conservative Members in this House who since September 4 thought they were elected and paid to sell the policies of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to their constituents. Meanwhile, they are not doing the work they should be doing, which consists in representing and defending the interests of their constituents in Parliament.

Mr. Lapierre: Pensions!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) is referring to the last debate we had on de-indexation of Old Age Security pensions. How many Conservative Members in the House—Mr. Speaker, I am about to finish my speech—have said: Canadians agree, I saw my constituents and they approve? I see the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mrs. Bertrand) who on some occasions,—I have heard quite a few debates—also defended the Minister's policies. Today, the Prime Minister dropped the whole gang to save this skin. He saved his image, but it makes the rest of his Members look very foolish.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I hope that after this humiliating experience on the issue of Old Age Security pensions, Hon. Members opposite, and especially new Members, will stand a little straighter and now they have some backbone and defend the interests of Quebec farmers. And I hope these people will have the guts to talk to the Minister of Agriculture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre).

● (2010)

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, first I would like to pay special homage to my colleague from Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). I think that as a Member from an urban riding he has shown that he can defend the interests of the people who have elected him, and his oustanding intervention proved that he can also defend the interest of all Quebecers. I find it admirable on his part that he would want to take part in a debate which more directly concerns rural Members. Thanks to his co-operation and his participation, we had at least an input from Quebec in this discussion, particularly since the rural Members of the Government chose to remain seated. He did point out that Members were silent. I see the Hon. Member for Richelieu (Mr. Plamondon) is in the House. I salute him, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to hear his views. I see my neighbour riding representative, the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand), who has as many pork producers in her constituency as I have in mine. She has yet to say a word in this debate. That is regrettable because, frankly, Shefford is not the only riding where pork producers are experiencing difficulties. Our neighbours of Brome-Missisquoi do have problems and I find it rather discouraging that she quite simply refuses to join in the debate and defend the interests of her electors. It is a shame that the electors of Brome-Missisquoi cannot have their say about what is for that agricultural community a very basic issue. Thanks to people like my colleague from Montreal-Sainte-Marie, Quebecers have someone to speak up for them in the House, and I commend him for that.

Still, Mr. Speaker, I have a question for him. Does my colleague from Montreal-Sainte-Marie not think it is a bit ridiculous that this Government, which since the beginning of its mandate and throughout the election campaign talked about nothing but new harmony, consultations galore and consensus, now finds itself in a dilemma—there is no consensus nor harmony with respect to this Bill? The Minister is all by himself, no partners. I would ask the Hon. Member whether finally his riding . . . Considering the battle he has won today about the old age security pensions, I certainly want to congratulate him. He must be thinking about Quebec farmers, the intransigence of the Minister of Agriculture, his lack of understanding and his incompetence when dealing with the Americans. We know now that a permanent surtax will be facing Canadian farmers as of July 25 and we are also worried about his approach to the dairy policy. I think we will need the support of the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie to launch an attack when the session resumes and to make sure that, once again, after weeks and months of efforts we will be able to stir our Quebec colleagues so that we might at long last have some Quebec input in this House. I want to ask my colleague whether he thinks that it might be the only way to wake up those Members?

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to tell my colleague that, in my opinion, we should not wait till September to mobilize Quebec farmers to put pressure on the Minister, and I am not speaking of putting pressure on the Conservative Members because it would be useless as we saw in that other matter, but to put pressure on the Minister of Agriculture and the Prime Minister. We should start as soon as August to tour the constituencies like we did for the old age pensions, to meet the farmers in each town and each village to develop an action plan to force the Minister of Agriculture, and if he does not want to listen, to force the Prime Minister to respect his commitments to provide a special status for Quebecers.

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, with your permission, I would like to join my colleague for Shefford in paying a special hommage to my colleague for Montreal-Sainte-Marie, who, because of his involvement, has succeeded in defending the interests of Quebec farm producers and who has just fought and won an historic battle for all Canadian men and women.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to hear what my colleague for Montreal-Sainte-Marie thinks of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) who, earlier this evening, showed how the Quebec Members had submitted most shockingly when he said in his speech that farm producers agreed with the intentions of the Government to pass Bill C-25.

I would like to ask my colleague for Montreal-Sainte-Marie, whom I understand met with UPA representatives from Nicolet yesterday here in Parliament, what was the reaction of these farm producers and what they asked him to do as a Member for an urban riding.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, my colleague asks what I think of the comments made by the Conservative Member whom I do not know by name or by constituency as we hear so little from these people. I am told he is from the Eastern Townships.

It was the same for the old age security pensions. All the Conservative Members learned a single sentence. Like in Russia, they are briefed to say a certain word.

Everybody repeats the same thing, nobody knows what it is all about but it does not make any different, we have met the people and they agree. However, I must say to my colleague that when I met the APU representatives yesterday, they told me the same thing. They did not say what the Tory Members and the Miniser of Agriculture are saying in this House. However, those people completely disagreed and urged us to make a similar request to the Tory Members and bring pressure to bear so that the Bill would not be passed. They want that Bill to be delayed so that the Minister of Agriculture and all Members of this House, especially those from Quebec, may visit their constituencies during the summer recess and sound out the farmers and the people, because I think it is important, as a Member from Montreal, that my colleague from Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), my colleague, the Member for Langelier (Mr. Côté), the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, who represent urban ridings, state their views, since the decision of the Minister of Agriculture will have an impact on the increase in food prices.

So, I think that all Members of this House should do their utmost to prevent the passage of this Bill so that the Canadian peopel may be consulted.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The period for questions and comments has now expired. Resuming debate? Question?

● (2020)

[English]

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my Quebec colleagues have asked me to say a few words on this particular Bill. It certainly does not have the acceptance of producers in the Province of Quebec. In fact, having listened to the debate, I would say that it does not have the acceptance of producers in eastern Canada or in the Maritimes. Now we have discovered that it does not have the acceptance of producers in some western provinces.

I listened to the comments of the Minister when he introduced this Bill, in particular to his remarks regarding statements made by opposition Members, particularly Members from the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. One gets the feeling that perhaps the policy of this new Government, in terms of dealing with Bills which concern primary producers and the stability of their incomes, does not mesh with what the Government said prior to being elected.

Perhaps the most blatant example of this can be found in the statements of government Members concerning provincial agreements. This Government was supposed to be the Government which would answer all disputes with provincial Governments. From now on, everything would be hunky-dory. There would be no objections. The federal Government would become suddenly benevolent and the provincial Governments would say: "Isn't this wonderful; look at our wonderful system".

What has happened along the way as a result of this Bill and other ones? The Province of Saskatchewan and the great Province of Alberta are not very happy with this particular Bill. In fact, the Maritime provinces are saying that they need one of two things, either a substantial subsidy on their feed in the east or some sort of buoying up in the form of top loading on what would be in existence under this Bill.

We have seen provincial Governments accepting the actions of this Government for some time. They accepted them and looked the other way. Along came the cuts in November, and the provincial Governments turned a blind eye and said that things would change. As time went on they saw this Bill, the legislation affecting the fisheries, FIRA legislation, as well as other legislation, and then the Budget. At that point they could no longer accept what the federal Government was offering and saying.

For example, the Province of New Brunswick said no to the fisheries Bill, that was an intrusion into its area of jurisdiction. The provincial Governments are now asking what will be the end result of the Minister's amendment. It leaves things at the discretion of the Minister, and when one looks at the amendment, one understands why there is some concern. I remind the House that the amendment indicates that the Minister may, only if he is of the opinion, stipulate the stabilization and may allow additional subsidies on top of what the Bill will provide, if they do not exceed the general subsidy given by another province covered under the legislation.

One can understand why the provincial Governments are objecting. They should be objecting. They should have been objecting all along, ever since the new Government of Canada took office. They should have objected when a measure was passed by the Government which drastically affected the people of their provinces, but they turned a blind eye. This is a good example of a provincial Government saying that it does not agree with what the federal Government is doing.

I should like to refer to another area of great concern to me. The Government made promises in terms of trade with the United States.

Mr. Fraleigh: Stick to the Bill.

Mr. Baker: I hear the Hon. Member. When I mention trade with the United States, the Hon. Member should realize that it is one of the pertinent points which should be discussed when dealing with this Bill. We have seen the Government of the United States, under the guise of its Department of Commerce and under the guise of the International Trade Commission, act in such a way as we have never seen before on a variety of items, including hogs. Tariffs have been imposed on many items. Some Hon. Members would disagree, but if our exporters to the United States are required to post bonds, I consider that to be the imposition of tariffs.

When we look at what has happened under the International Trade Commission and the U.S. Department of Commerce to other primary producers in Canada, we can understand why producers in the Province of Quebec are objecting. For example, in one of our primary products, that of fish, the Government of the United States through those mechanisms imposed a bond structure. In fact, our hog exporters have to put up bonds, blank cheques, promissory notes or whatever when exporting their products to the United States, which are called due when the final decision is made. When they post bonds they are really posting money in financial terms. It is a hardship on them and they have to consider then what the result would be if that was called by the U.S. Government.

So we have seen the U.S. Government now for first time in Canadian history taking a crack at all kinds of items from lumber to footwear to saltfish to raspberries and now to hogs. One wonders, as a primary producer, as a farmer, as a person involved in agriculture in this country—one would have to wonder—where the end is going to come, and what is going to happen when those bonds are called. What is going to happen if the decision that is brought down is going to be in favour of the initial judgment of the International Trade Commission who had to examine documents, had to examine books, had to come up with some good rationale for the imposition of the posting of the bond in the first place?

On those two items the people of Canada are wondering what went wrong. What went wrong with this great relationship that was supposed to emanate automatically when this new Government of Canada came into power? What happened to this marvellous trade relationship that it was going to have with the United States of America? What happened to all of those meetings that were supposed to have taken place between the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the president of the United States when each of these items came up for public debate? When people knew that there was a possibility of a tariff on a product they automatically complained, they went to their provincial Governments who automatically asked the federal Government, through the Department of External Affairs, to intervene.

The point of the matter is that the answer from the Department of External Affairs has been the same as the answer from the Prime Minister's Office; "Well, we will make representations but we really cannot interfere at this point in the negotiations". Primary producers have listened to that, with saltfish, with the Prime Minister down in his own riding prior to the Quebec Summit, and the Prime Minister said "yes, I am going to take this up with the president of the United States". The producers went home and they figured that if the Prime Minister of Canada is going to take this up with the president of the United States then surely a solution is going to be found. Then all of a sudden the axe came down and when that axe comes down it is an interesting axe because it cuts in many directions. It ultimately cuts each province and each exporter differently. Tariffs could range from 2 per cent to 22 per cent, and they call that a 12 or 13 or 14 per cent average.

On those two questions of dealing with the provincial Governments, the Governments duly elected by the people of the provinces, everything was supposed to be fine and dandy, and everything with U.S. trade was supposed to be great.

There is just one other item that I wanted to bring to the attention of the House concerning what appears to be, on the part of this Government, an inevitable desire for the Minister in charge of the Department to always have unlimited power under the Act, even after decisions are made. We see it in this Act and in this particular amendment.

Fishermen, such as those involved in the saltfish industry, farmers, people who are involved in forestry and those who raise hogs, are faced with tariffs. They are asking the Government of Canada what it will do about it. Who is going to pay the tariff to be imposed on hogs under this legislation? Who is going to pay the difference of 12 or 13 or 14 per cent? Is it going to be the farmer? Is it going to be the producers' organization? Is it going to be the provincial jurisdiction responsible, or is it going to be the federal Government of Canada?

I would suggest that this Bill and many other Bills before this House, and many other actions of this Government since they have been elected, be sent back to the drawing-board for more discussion, more consideration and more consultation with the people affected, the provincial Governments affected and the producers' organizations affected.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I have a very brief question for the Hon. Member who just made a highly interesting contribution. I would like to advise him that the former Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Dubois), who was Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture under the Trudeau administration, has been calling us over the telephone in the lobby reminding us about the strength and determination with which he, as a Liberal Member from Quebec, used to defend the interests of the Quebec farmers when he was a Member here. He reminded me that the work he did with all the Members of the Quebec caucus sitting on the sub-committee on Agriculture bore fruit, because when the Government had intended to put forward a similar bill, Members from Quebec, at the request of representatives from the Quebec Union des producteurs agricoles, were able to make representations to the Government so that the Bill would not get approval in the previous Parliament. Our friend Jean-Guy Dubois was wondering over the telephone a few minutes ago why the present Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay) did not rise in this debate to defend the interests of farmers in his area, and I would like our colleague who just spoke, who knew our friend Jean-Guy Dubois well, to tell us how much he has been disappointed at the lack of responsibility of those Members for rural constituencies in Quebec and Eastern Canada who yesterday opposed the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) who wanted to make sure that regional interests of farmers in rural areas would be safeguarded by Bill C-25.

[English]

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I do not know for the life of me why every single Member of Parliament has not spoken at some point or other on this particular legislation, not only in the House of Commons or in committee but to the Minister and the Prime Minister and every single Cabinet Minister in his caucus, no matter which one it was. I cannot understand how since last fall we have seen the Government of Canada bring in measures like this, that nobody agrees with, that affected those primary producers and those farmers and those fishermen and those lumbermen, in such a way as has never been done before.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please! The Hon. Member for Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine (Mr. Gray) on a point of order.

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, there is one thing that is being steadily ignored this evening.

[English]

With our new Government, we want to put some order—

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order! I am sorry but this is not a question, nor is it a point of order. It is a point of debate.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I hope the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Lapierre: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to see the Hon. Member for Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine (Mr. Gray) has come in. Since the beginning of the debate he has not uttered a dam word. It is time he say something!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): If there will be two, there will be three, as we say in French.

[English]

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, my point is very clear. The Hon. Member from the Opposition was saying that they could not resolve the problems with the Bills. We will with our Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. The Hon. Member knows full well that that is not a point of order.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member did get on the record saying that this is a new order. Yes, this is a new Government and a new order. It taxes the poor people. It taxes the farmers. This new order allows the United States to impose tariffs on the farmers and the people who are trying to sell products to the United States. This is the new order that is now picking a fight with the provincial Governments on practically every bit of legislation that it is introducing—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. I call the Hon. Member to order on a question of relevancy.

Mr. Baker: Getting back to the relevant question asked by the Hon. Member concerning the input of Members of Parliament, this is a very, very important subject. No matter on which side of the House one sits, there is a mechanism to effect legislation. Unfortunately, on this side of the House the only thing we can do is hold up legislation. When one is on the government side, one can apply the appropriate pressure and make the appropriate threats that need to be made on behalf of the primary producers of this country. One can make those threats to the Cabinet and one can be heard. Of course, no one outside the caucus room knows what is said inside, but I would predict that there has been a great deal of discussion and argument, not only on this issue but on other issues. If the original legislation as it was presented was not acceptable, then what would we do with the Minister's amendment to the original Bill? Then certainly it becomes doubly unacceptable to anyone, because that amendment is what caused the uproar with the Province of Saskatchewan, the Province of Alberta, the Maritime provinces and the producers of Quebec.

You will notice, Mr. Speaker, that I said with the producers of Quebec. I said this because I think that the point of the producers in Quebec is being made more in this Chamber than it is at the provincial Government level. I think that that is a fair statement to make. Hon. Members from Quebec have been very vocal on this issue. They want the producers of Quebec to be heard. They want the people of Canada to know that they are being hit with that quota. They want the people to know that they have to post a bond every time they export to the United States.

An Hon. Member: Who caused the bond?

Mr. Baker: Who caused the bond? I can tell you what caused the bond on the hogs, Mr. Speaker, because I have examined the issue. It was caused by inaction by the Government of Canada when making representations to the United States Government and the President of the United States, as the Prime Minister stated he did. There was no formal representation made. If one was made, that does not say very much for the Government of Canada because the United States Government did not listen.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions, comments. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, my colleague for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) mentioned earlier the excellent job done by our colleague Jean-Guy Dubois from Lotbinière.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recall that if—

[English]

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the speaker who has the floor has already spoken on this debate. The Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) did not make a speech. He is not the Member being questioned.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): If I recognized you, it is because I wanted you to continue. I do not intend to reply to the argument of the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes).

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I want to state emphatically that this bill would have never been passed if our colleague Mr. Lapointe, the former member for Beauce, had been here. My old colleague, Mr. Leduc, the former member for Richelieu, would have been up on his feet defending farm producers. If Mr. Gourd, the former member for Argenteuil, had been here, he would have argued the case of the farm producers. If Mrs. Céline Hervieux-Payette, our former member for Montreal-Mercier had been here, she would not have been satisfied with free travel passes as a reward; she would have spoken in support of farmers and consumers. If Mr. Campbell, the former member for the La Salle riding, had been here, he would have put up a defence for the farmers and consumers in his riding, instead of—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please! The question and comment period has now expired.

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT 1985-86 (No. 2)

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Tuesday, June 25, 1985, consideration in committee of Bill C-51, an Act to provide Borrowing Authority—Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance))—Mr. Charest in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority.

[Translation]

When the committee suspended its sitting at 9 p.m. on Tuesday, the 25th of June 1985, it was dealing with Clause 2 of the bill and the amendment moved by the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker).

[English]

Shall Clause 2 carry?

On Clause 2—

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, the amendment before the House was put forward by the Official Opposition, and it was a very important amendment. Because the Government of Canada wanted to remove three percentage points from the indexation of senior citizens' pensions, we as the Official Opposition demanded that the Government of Canada take a 3 per cent cut on its borrowing authority.

As we witnessed today, the Government finally relented, because of a number of things. First and foremost were the objections from senior citizens, and from all people, regardless of age, in the country. The Government also relented because it had a feeling that the Official Opposition would not permit it to have its borrowing authority unless it brought in closure. Then we would have debated that. That was the purpose of this particular amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker: If Hon. Members opposite start making remarks, I will speak until after nine o'clock. That is fair. If I talk until after nine o'clock, the Government will be forced to come back to the House tomorrow on Bill C-51. At that time I will speak again, have someone interrupt, and continue all day long.

I would like to return to my original point. The Government of Canada has now changed its policy. That was accomplished by the people of Canada who opposed the terrible measure to be imposed upon them by the new Government. It was an accomplishment. Those of us who objected should all take pride in that. A headline in The Citizen of Ottawa reads: "The Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister Split Over Pensions". We know who won. The people of Canada won against the decisions of both those gentlemen.

My colleagues have advised me that we wish to seek unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment we are now discussing. I am going to do that in a minute.

However, let us not forget that this Government has whacked another tax on transportation fuel. The people of Canada will not forget that. That is in addition to the other taxes which were imposed in the Budget. Let us not forget that the Government has also imposed a sales tax on items which all Canadians use. That tax was extended for the first time to include additional items, and it was increased.

Let us not forget what the Government has done since it took office. It has selectively given to certain groups, such as the oil companies, billions of dollars. Then the Government turned around and whacked taxes on the ordinary people of Canada. That is what the Government did. That is how the books are balanced by the Government of Canada. The people of Canada will not forget that. They will not forget the actions which have been taken by the Government. Never again will the people of Canada trust the words of the Government.

With those words I would respectfully ask all Members of the House for their unanimous consent that I withdraw the amendment is presently before the House.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain on a point of order.

Mr. Deans: First, I would like to offer the consent of this Party to withdraw the amendment. I am sure there is unanimous consent. However, it may require that the Speaker be in the chair in order to facilitate what I am about to request. I would like to ask that the committee rise now and report. Then with the Speaker in the chair I could make a suggestion regarding this legislation and two or three other pieces which are still before the House.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I rise and report progress?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, I gather that there is unanimous consent. We in this Party certainly appreciate the gesture made by the Hon. Member in withdrawing his amendment. If we could have it declared that the amendment is now removed, Mr. Chairman, then you could proceed back to the chair.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, in the spirit of co-operation, we agree with the proposal which has been made and we will give our unanimous consent to have you reoccupy the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I rise and report progress?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, certain discussions have taken place over the course of the day and we have agreed to pass certain legislation this evening in order that Royal Assent can be obtained. In addition to that, an understanding has been reached that at the end of tomorrow's Question Period the House would rise. Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to seek the unanimous consent of the House not to see the clock this evening until such time as the legislative package which has been agreed upon has been completed, and until such time as Royal Assent has been sought and received.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I understand what the House Leader for the New Democratic Party is attempting, but I would like him to give us the list to which he has referred so that all Members of the House would be aware of what we are talking about. Secret deals have taken place, without any consultation, to my knowledge, and I would like to participate.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, if there has been secrecy, I am about to do away with that secrecy. In my usual way, I would like to inform the House, and the people of the country who are all glued to their television sets watching this as opposed to the Blue Jays or the Expo games, what we intend to do.

The legislative package which we had discussed was to obtain third reading of Bill C-51, which is the borrowing Bill and third reading of Bill C-44, which is a Bill respecting amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act. We also discussed legislation which must be dealt with before the House rises for the summer. That legislation included amending the Judges Act and other statutes concerning additional judges in certain provinces, at their request. New provisional Standing Orders have been circulated to opposition House Leaders which will come into effect when Parliament reconvenes next fall. They are in response to the first report of the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons.

● (2100)

We also have a Bill which I introduced for first reading today, which would go through all three stages and receive third reading. It:s an amendment to the House of Commons Act, the main purpose of which is to establish a new Board of Internal Economy. That also takes effect on the recommencement of Parliament.

I am reminded by my Parliamentary Secretary that I should now seek agreement that we should not see the clock until we finish our arrangements. I would ask for unanimous consent so we could continue, and I can complete my dissertation.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would second the motion that you do not see the clock, Mr. Speaker. However, I would like to clarify the shopping list put to us by the Government House Leader. We are going to get to third reading of Bill C-51 in a few minutes. Bill C-44 is the next item of business, or is the Government House Leader going to talk about the motions? Is he going to talk about the House of Commons Act? Is that the order in which he is going to call the Bills? Because that changes what I was told.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, in my own hand I gave to the Hon. Member's Deputy House Leader the listing. It is Bill C-51, Bill C-44, the Judges Bill, the Bill with respect to the House of Commons Act and the Standing Orders. There is a good reason for that, Mr. Speaker.

The Senate has preconsidered the first items to which I referred up to Bill C-44. The House of Commons Act is a Bill which the Senate has not preconsidered, but it only affects the House of Commons. I thought I would leave that until the end because it is something that the Senate could leave and deal with, I think, rather expeditiously. I do not want to presume that, but I think the Senate would be inclined to understand that this is something affecting only the House of Commons.

The understanding would be, of course, that the arrangement about adjourning tomorrow is conditional upon obtaining Royal Assent tonight. I will not get into the details but, obviously, if we do not get Royal Assent, we will have to sit tomorrow and continue on until Royal Assent is obtained. However, I believe it is possible to get Royal Assent tonight, in which case we can convene tomorrow.

I would be quite prepared to accept the suggestion of the House Leader of the New Democratic Party. I think I should put this in context. The House Leader of the New Democratic Party asked me for this particular move—as the Whip for the Official Opposition will understand—because that Party has its national convention here. It is on the basis that those Hon. Members are meeting in national convention that we would agree to this proposition, and only on that basis. It is a courtesy extended to the New Democratic Party in respect to its national convention. I want to make that perfectly clear.

I think I have given the undertakings and understandings as requested by the House Leader for the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I take it that the items enumerated by the Government House Leader will be made an order of this House and that we will protect the rights of Hon. Members of this House to have their late adjournment debate.

Mr. Benjamin: Are they here?

Mr. Gauthier: I do not know, but I am protecting their rights as an Hon. Member of the House. I think we should protect those people. I do not know who they are.

The Government House Leader is telling us that in the spirit of co-operation with the New Democratic Party, we will adjourn the House after Question Period tomorrow. Is that what I understand?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I would say after the Question Period and after Routine Proceedings because, as the Whip of the Liberal Party will understand, there are a number of requests which have come from his Party with respect to changes in membership of committees which will be sitting during the course of the summer. There are various items. I think Routine Proceedings would be the end. We will adjourn before Orders of the Day would be called, if that would be to the satisfaction of the Whip of the Liberal Party.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, since I seem to have started this mess, let me finish it. I want, first of all, to say that the understanding as outlined by the Government House Leader is exactly the way I understood it to be. I appreciate the intervention of the Whip for the Official Opposition.

I want to thank both the Official Opposition and the Government for agreeing that tomorrow we could rise at the end of Routine Proceedings in order that all of my colleagues and myself could be in attendance at the national convention.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent that the Chair does not see the clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I also take it that the late show will be held?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Speaker wishes to thank you.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport) moved:

That Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, be amended in sub-clause 1(1)

(a) by striking out line 7 at page 1 and substituting the following:

"(D) nine Members who shall be",

(b) by striking out line 16 at page 1 and substituting the following:

"Manitoba four representing the pro-".

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I thought that was my amendment, not the amendment of the Minister of Transport. I filed it earlier this day.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): With respect to the point of order of the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), he has brought a similar motion before the House, but to be able to present the motion he would need Royal recommendation. In this case he does not have it. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) does have Royal recommendation.

Mr. Benjamin: We went through this yesterday in the Transport Committee. It makes no difference in terms of the Royal recommendation whether an amendment is moved by the Minister or by an Hon. Member of the Opposition. The point is that this amendment, whether moved by the Minister or myself—and I submit that my amendment was in first, but that does not matter—the Royal recommendation covers a lump sum of money which he is allowed to spend under the provisions of Bill C-44. The Bill in no way specifies how much will be paid to each member of the advisory committee. If the Minister or myself increase the number of members on the committee, with the consent of this House, and if it was originally conceived that the per diem was $100 a day, given the amount of money available to the Minister under the Royal recommendation, and the number is increased from eight to nine, that may mean the Minister pays the members only $90 a day in order to pay that one additional member. There is nothing in the legislation which specifies how much is going to be paid to the members of that committee. I submit that the Royal recommendation does not enter into this because the Bill itself does not spell out what shall be paid to individual members on a per diem, or any other basis. It only spells out the amount which the Minister has available.

I submit that it makes no difference whether the Minister or I present the amendment. That has nothing to do with the Royal recommendation presently before the House. If it does, the Minister and the Government House Leader will have to come back and ask for unanimous consent to have the Royal recommendation changed. Either that or my amendment or that of the Minister is acceptable now. You cannot have it both ways. My amendment, or a similar amendment proposed by the Minister, does not mean any extra expenditure by the Government under the present Royal recommendation. We do not need to go through that nonsense again.

By the way, you should know that this has been the result of much consultation and meetings in the committee and other places, and there need not to be any more nit-picking about Royal recommendations because the Minister has the authority to pay 8, 9, 10, 12 or 100 members with the amount of money already in the Royal recommendation.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong this debate, nor do I want to deny the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) the credit for initiating the amendment you are now dealing with. It clearly is his amendment. There is no question about that. The advice we received both from the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and my legal advisers was that this did require a change in the Royal recommendation. I know the Hon. Member is making an argument tonight similar to what he made in committee. To in effect do what he is suggesting would mean that all members of the Senior Grain Transportation Committee who are presently members would receive a lower per diem allowance as the result of the addition of another member to represent the Province of Saskatchewan.

The fact that we have a change in the Royal recommendation now gives the Minister the prerogative of adding additional funds to pay for the person who is going to be added to the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. It was in the spirit of ensuring that the amendment would be incorporated in the legislation that we took this extra precaution.

I in no way want to assume credit or authorship for this amendment. I will simply give the Hon. Member for Regina West full credit and full marks for bringing the amendment forward and making a strong case. We agreed. We discussed it at some length and I certainly wanted to incorporate the desire and the wish he enunciated in an earlier amendment. it is only to ensure that the amendment is incorporated that it was brought forth in this fashion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I can see the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) rising again, I presume on the same point of order, but if he will permit me, I think it is the Chair's turn. I might clear this up by pointing out to the Hon. Member for Regina West, who is a very experienced and learned Member of this House, that in this case the Minister of Transport is not bringing in the amendment on the original Royal recommendation but on a separate Royal recommendation which I have in hand now. It says:

Her Excellency the Governor General recommends to the House of Commons that Bill C-44, An Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, be amended in subclause 1(1)

"(d) nine members who shall be"

(b) by striking out line 16 at page 1 and substituting the following:

"Manitoba four representing the pro-"

It is the same in the French language version. I hope that clears up the matter as far as the Royal recommendation is concerned.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, may I make it perfectly clear right away to the Minister and yourself that it is not a matter so much of who is moving the amendment. I would like to point out to the Chair that once the Royal recommendation has been amended it makes no difference who moves the amendment. However, I am prepared to give way. The amendment can be in the Minister's name, and God bless him. But I think the Chair errs. Once the Royal recommendation is changed, then any Member can move an amendment on that matter. I am not going to argue about it; I just wanted to leave that with the Chair. If you want to accept the amendment from the Minister, so be it; I will support him on it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is that agreed?

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I want other Hon. Members besides the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), myself and the rest of us in the NDP to understand what is happening here. Originally I proposed an amendment to make this read "10 members" and the Minister and I agreed that we would go along with nine. The reason for the amendment is that the Province of Saskatchewan has as many grain producers as the other two provinces and the Peace River district of B.C. put together. In addition, the Province of Saskatchewan grows and ships as much grain as the other two provinces and the Peace River district of British Columbia put together. So all we are trying to do is equalize the membership on this committee, having regard to the number of producers and the volume they produce and ship. If you were really going to equalize it, Mr. Speaker, and I am doing this for the record, we would have the number "10" in there instead of the number "9". There would be five members from Saskatchewan. That would equalize it. But the Minster and I have agreed that we will make it four instead of three and I have given way, he has given way, and I want to give him credit for recognizing this.

I would remind the Chair to look again at the advice he has received about once a Royal recommendation is changed and who can or cannot move amendments. To be accommodating, I am glad the Minister moved the amendment in order that we can have this change made.

• (2120)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Mazankowski moved that the Bill, as amended, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is another motion at report stage moved by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus) on Clause 5 of this Bill, which motion was filed several hours ago. We had two amendments which were properly filed with the table. There is one more amendment to be dealt with.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent to revert to report stage of Bill C-44?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The House reverted to the consideration of Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, as reported with amendments from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan) moved:

That Bill C-44, be amended in Clause 5 by striking out line 38 at page 2 and substituting the following therefore:

"repealed, and the following paragraphs are added:

(B) a person who in his opinion represents the Port cities of the Eastern Division; and

(C) a person who in his opinion represents the Port cities of the Western Division."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I will not take much time. I know that all Members of the House would like to finish our business and get on to enjoying the summer. I moved this amendment to this very important Bill in an effort to ensure representation from the many communities in the east and the west which owe much of their economy to the movement of grain through their ports. I feel very strongly that ports, whether the port of Vancouver or the port of Prince Rupert on the west coast, or the port of Churchill or Thunder Bay on what we refer to as the east coast of grain shipment, have a right to representation, at least with observer status, in order to keep track of the decisions being made and to have some input.

It was suggested in committee that the groupings were very vague. Presently an individual is a voting member of the group but is in effect representing all of the trade unions involved in the movement and handling of grain. I believe that if the Minister could select an individual, mechanisms could be found to ensure that both eastern and western ports have representation as well. I believe that the existing representative could be from either the east or the west. They have no distinct loyalties to any one of the ports and have some participation in them. The same thing applies to the railroads.

I urge the Minister to give consideration to, at the very least, providing observer status for the ports in order that they can lobby on behalf of their citizens to ensure that their ports are used to the best possible advantage.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I follow the argument of the Hon. Member. However, I am having some difficulty with the wording of the proposed amendment. I have great difficulty trying to determine how this particular amendment would fit in with Clause 5, because that clause says "Paragraph 10(3)(b) of the said Act is repealed". The motion says:

That Bill C-44, be amended in Clause 5 by striking out line 38 at page 2 and substituting the following therefore:

"repealed, and the following paragraphs are added:

(B) a person who in his opinion represents the port cities of the eastern division; and

(C) a person who in his opinion represents the port cities of the western division".

I suspect that part of the problem is that we do not have a printed version of the Bill as it was amended in committee. That may have some bearing on it. I wonder if that could be explained.

While I appreciate the purport of the Hon. Member's motion, to suggest that one should appoint a person representing the port cities of the eastern division and western division is fairly broad. In reality it is poorly drafted and I am not sure whether it would be found acceptable by the legal draftsmen.

For example, in British Columbia, which could be referred to as the western divsion, there is a port in Vancouver, North Vancouver, New Westminster, Roberts Bank, and Prince Rupert. There would be a lot of discretion left to the Minister. Quite frankly, I think the Hon. Member may want to reflect and probably withdraw.

I believe that what the Hon. Member has said has merit. I believe he is really thinking about getting some assurance that the port of Thunder Bay will have some representation on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee, either as a representative or as an observer. I think he would also expect, as a balance, to have someone representing the western ports, either Prince Rupert or Vancouver. Quite frankly, I think his suggestion has merit. Notwithstanding the disposition of this particular motion, I would certainly undertake to explore ways and means to bring forward representatives, perhaps in the form of observers for starters. We will be going through a complete review of Bill C-44. We may be able to accommodate the thrust of his motion in that respect.

If he would be willing to accept it on that basis, perhaps he might agree to withdraw the motion. I repeat that the review of Bill C-44 will take place, commencing the crop year 1985-86, at which time there will obviously be further amendments as the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) suggested yesterday. I will certainly take into consideration very seriously the valid arguments that he has made tonight.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for his comments. Assuming that we have unanimous consent to withdraw the motion, I would be very happy to do so.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I presume that the Hon. Member is rising on a point of order. I cannot let him take the floor under any other circumstances.

Mr. Angus: I am rising on a point of order to indicate to the Minister that I would be more than happy to withdraw my motion because very clearly he has indicated his willingness to ensure there is representation in the organization. I look forward to working with him to ensure that that happens.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. The Minister raises a valid point. It may be that the amendment moved yesterday was on the wrong line and on the wrong clause. That happens to all of us. I only want to add what my colleague for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus) said. I will confess right now that we made a slight error and should have said "grain handling ports" which would have eliminated a number of ports on the West Coast in particular that do not handle one bushel.

I simply want to make it clear to the Minister that we want someone there, whether it is an observer or a voting Member, to represent Prince Rupert and Vancouver in the grain handling operations and Thunder Bay and Churchill in the grain handling operations which is the western and eastern directions in the context of the language used by the Canadian Grain Commission, the Canadian Wheat Board and others.

When we talk about Eastern Division, that goes as far as Thunder Bay and slightly east. That is the point we want to make to the Minister. We are concerned about the Western Grain Transportation grain operations from Thunder Bay west. It would be one person for Thunder Bay and Churchill and one person for the West Coast grain handling ports. Whether they are observers or become voting members later on, we welcome the Minister's undertaking and my colleague is prepared to withdraw the amendment, as he indicated.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Angus) withdraw.

Hon. Don Manzankowski (Minister of Transport) moved that Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, as amended, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Western Grain Transportation Act

Mr. Mazankowski moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I want to spend approximately three or four minutes—

Some Hon. Members: Too many.

Mr. Benjamin: All right. I will make it two. I believe that under the rules I have 30 minutes, but I promise not to take that long.

In winding up the debate at third reading of this legislation, I want to remind the House and the Minister that there were other amendments that were not accepted or defeated which will crop up again in another year or two.

I also remind the Minister and the Government that, as I said in December of 1983, the Crow may be sorely wounded, but it isn't dead. Therefore, I say to the Minister that we are pleased that he accepted one amendment tonight and one yesterday. I believe that he probably sympathizes a great deal with many other amendments but could not persuade his Cabinet colleagues to accept them. If he wants our help at any time in the coming year or two, we will be glad to provide it.

I remind the Minister that according to the amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act in this Bill, during the review process in the next two years there will be no application before the Canadian Transport Commission for variable rate implementation, no moves either by legislation, propaganda or press releases about changing the method of payment while the review process is going on. I will be glad not to make any speeches on that matter if the Minister will agree to do the same thing out in western Canada.

We are not letting this go through because we like it. We still have mixed feelings and the Minister's amendments so far have not done any more harm to the statutory grain rate provisions for western grain producers. However, I want to serve notice on him now than in a year or two he better keep in mind what occurred in 1983 and what has occurred in the past week with this legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I should like to follow the good example set by my colleague and deal rather briefly with third reading of Bill C-44.

The Official Opposition has agreed that the report stage be immediately followed by Third Reading, so that this Bill to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act might be passed tonight. But as I said in committee, these amendments are only the very first of a whole series of amendments which the government will have to introduce within the next few months, if not within the next few years.

As members of the Official Opposition, we are going to watch very closely the whole review process in the case of the Western Grain Transportation Act. It is vital for Canadian producers that this review be carried out most objectively, so that they get a fair deal whether they live in Western Canada or Eastern Canada. It is clear that Quebec producers in particular are seeking a fair deal for all, and if they are somewhat concerned and apprehensive it is about the government's intentions with regard to payments, and whether they will be made to the railways or directly to the producers.

I cannot help being concerned about the intentions of the Minister and this Progressive Conservative government. The Hall report has now been made public; the Minister of Transport who has it will have to make a decision within the next few weeks or months, before introducing new amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act.

I want to make sure that the Minister of Transport fully realizes the importance of giving a fair deal to all Canadian producers from coast to coast.

Mr. Darryl L. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, I think it is only fitting as Vice-Chairman of the Transport Committee that I thank Members of Parliament who took part in the discussion of the Bill which the Transport Committee discussed. As the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) said, he gave assurances to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) that he is a competent person and will in the years to come look after the transport situation and our farmers.

Let me say, and pardon the expression, Mr. Speaker, a virgin of truth, that as a new Member of Parliament I do not wish to go on record as being a blabber mouth but whether we are Conservatives, Liberals or New Democrats we cannot play politics in transport. I think the Minister has expressed that with what he has done in this Bill. I look forward to the co-operation of Members in years to come and I thank them.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

JUDGES ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-61, an Act to amend the Judges Act, the Federal Court Act, the Canada Pension Plan, the National Defence Act in relation to judicial matters and to amend an Act to amend the Judges Act and the Federal Court Act in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He said: I think by unanimous consent we had agreed to have the matter after second reading referred to a Committee of the Whole, concurrence, third reading and all stages so that the Senate may deal with this matter. If the motion could be deemed to be a reference to a Committee of the Whole, it would receive unanimous approval.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, the statement just made by the Government House Leader is acceptable to Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Mr. Robinson: We, too, concur, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada), seconded by Mr. Côté (Mr. Langelier) moves that Bill C-61, an Act to amend the Judges Act, the Federal Court Act, the Canada Pension Plan, the National Defence Act in relation to judicial matters and to amend an Act to amend the Judges Act and the Federal Court Act in consequence thereof be now read a second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) rising on debate?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the motion carried. I suggest in the interests of efficiency of time that Hon. Members who wish to participate in this debate do so in Committee of the Whole and we will all listen with rapt attention.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the Chair.

On Clause 1—

Mr. Speyer: Mr. Chairman, I will attempt to be as eloquent in Committee of the Whole as we all were with respect to second reading.

Many provinces desperately need judges. In Alberta, for example, there are four positions to be filled. The provincial legislation has been passed, the Judicature Act, but cases have had to be cancelled because we have not had enough judges. In the Province of Manitoba there has been created by provincial statute a senior associate chief justice position but that position cannot be filled until this Bill is passed by Parliament. In Quebec there has been provincial legislation to add six new judges. Unfortunately, that cannot be done until this Bill is passed.

This Bill will add a total of 38 judicial positions to federal and provincial courts, 19 of which have been filled in the past two years by draws from the pool of positions authorized by the provincial, superior, district and county courts by Section 19.1 of the Judges Act. All but three positions will be allocated to courts in eight provinces pursuant to requests for additional judges to handle increasing case loads in these courts. The pool will be restored to its full strength and will be restructured to authorize the appointment of up to 20 trial judges on provincial superior courts.

Over the past two years, provincial requests have been heavy with respect to this category of judges resulting in the rapid depletion of the positions allocated by the pool for trial judges as set forth in Section 19 of the Judges Act. While the total number of positions will remain unchanged, the restructuring should permit the pool to meet the needs of the provinces over the next three to five years.

Other features of the Bill, very quickly, are restoration of the former one-third ratio of judges required to be appointed to the Federal Court of Canada from the bench or bar of the Province of Quebec. This measure is designed to assure to the courts sufficient judges trained in civil law to hear the increasing numbers of such cases being heard by both divisions of the Federal Court. It will require that a least eight of the 25 judges of the court meet this qualification. There will be an addition of two members of the court to the Pension Appeals Board. This will bring membership on the Board to 12 and, again, is in response to increasing workload. Finally, there will be a provision for the disposition of all matters, short of an appeal by a single judge of the Court Marshall Appeal Court of Canada. The National Defence Act presently requires a panel of not less than three judges to determine any matter before the court.

In summary, let me just say that although these amendments are of a technical nature, they are certainly essential. This Bill has nothing to do with compensation for judges. I am happy to hear of the agreement of all Parties that we receive expeditious passage.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to report to the House that the Parliamentary Secretary had consulted with me on behalf of my Party in connection with this Bill. I have no objection to it.

I would like to indicate that I was surprised to notice in the allocation that there was a very small increase proposed for the Province of Ontario. I understand the principle followed for proposing the increases in the legislation was the request for increases by the provincial Government. It is a legal maxim or a popular maxim that justice delayed is justice denied. I know there is a backlog, no less in the Province of Ontario than in the Province of Quebec. However, it appears that the former Government of the Province of Ontario did not request any increase in the number of judges in that province, and that is why this legislation proposes no increase. I regard it as a priority to increase the number of judges in the Province of Ontario, but the expense of supporting the court and building courtrooms is that of the province. Now that we have a sensitive Government in power in the Province of Ontario, I hope there will be a recognition of the fact that more judges are needed in that province. I hope the new Attorney General of Ontario will request an increase soon.

• (2150)

As the Parliamentary Secretary indicated, that request for an increase will not need legislation by existing legislation, which I think was introduced 10 or 12 years ago by the former Government. We will be able to fill Ontario's needs, if the federal Government is disposed to do so, out of the allocation of available appointments. I want to point out to the people of Ontario that their interests are covered in this new legislation, even though there is no official plan to allocate positions to the requirements for additional judges and courts in that province.

[Translation]

I would also like to add a comment on the issue of judges' appointments. We know that during the last election campaign, this Government promised a new system of appointments that would perhaps involve parliamentary participation, and what we are giving the Government today is the right to appoint a further seventeen or eighteen judges, if I am not mistaken. I am not making it a condition of our approval of the legislation that the Government introduce a new system of appointments to become effective with this legislation, but I would like to remind the Government of the promises it made to the Canadian people during the last election campaign.

[English]

I want to remind the Government that it will now, as a result of the unanimous consent being given to it, have the opportunity to appoint new judges to the bench. During the last election campaign we heard much about a new system of appointments which would involve parliamentarians and would confirm the judgment of the Government by some broader parliamentary participation. We are not making it a condition of our approval that the Government deliver on that election promise. However, I remind Canadians that that promise was made. As proud as we are of the judges who are serving the people of Canada today, this Government promised that it would have a more accountable system. I look to the Government to deliver on that promise. With its new authority to appoint some 17 or 18 new judges, I look to the Government to live up to its campaign promises.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to rise to say just a few words on this Bill and to confirm the remarks of the Hon. Member for York Centre with respect to the consultation which took place before the Bill was actually tabled in the House. It is for that reason that we are in the position this evening of being able to facilitate the passage of the Bill in the spirit of co-operation which has characterized the House today in most respects.

I want to make a couple of comments with respect to the legislation. As has been noted, it adds some 37 judicial positions to federal and provincial courts. I would hope, in making these new appointments, appointments which in some cases are long overdue, the Government would be particularly sensitive to the fact that more women and more minorities must be appointed by the federal Government to the bench. The excuse made in the past was that there were not enough qualified women. Fortunately there are many very capable women who have put in the minimum of 10 years required before appointment to a federally appointed judgeship. I hope the Government takes this opportunity with these new appointments to appoint a very significant number of women, as well as minorities, to these important positions.

It is essential, in an era of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms which gives a significantly enhanced role to judiciary, to ensure that those judges are sensitive to the concerns of minorities and to civil liberties. I hope the Government looks very seriously at changes to the appointments process itself to involve Parliament, at least in the appointments to senior levels of the judiciary in Canada, including the Supreme Court of Canada. The Canadian Bar Association, to its credit, has conducted a major study. I believe its results will be made public in the month of August. As I understand it, certainly it will look at a number of important changes to the appointments process for judges.

Coming from the Province of British Columbia, I should like to indicate that we are very proud of our judiciary at all levels. However, the process of appointments is one which is long overdue for re-examination. As has already been noted, this Bill responds to the concerns of a number of provinces. There are shortages in British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick and several other provinces, which have resulted in delays. In some cases it has resulted in serious delays in the delivery of judicial services. As the Hon. Member for York Centre said, justice delayed is justice denied. It is in that spirit of co-operation that we are supporting the passage of this Bill this evening.

When we talk about the courts and the judiciary, it is essential to recognize that the poor and the powerless must also have access to the courts. In many jurisdictions legal aid programs, which are at the core of accessible courts, are seriously underfunded. I hope the Government makes a major commitment to federal funding of legal aid programs in Canada in order that there might be access to the courts for all who seek justice, not just for those who can afford to do so. Also, I hope the Government lives up to its promise to establish a fund to assist those who wish to make challenges under the provisions of Section 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the equality rights section. In fact, the subcommittee on equality rights decided unanimously to report to Parliament upon the need for such a fund. As this House is rising for the summer, certainly the sentiments of that committee should be conveyed to it, and I am pleased to have the opportunity to do so in the context of this debate on the Judges Act.

There remains a number of inequities with respect to certain elements of the treatment of judges who have left the bench. I believe the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice and perhaps the Government House Leader are sensitive to the concerns which have been raised by a very distinguished gentleman, a former judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, Tom Berger, about the provisions of the pension plan for judges who have served our country and our bench with distinction. I hope the Government looks seriously at recognizing the existing inadequacies in that pension scheme and moves forward to correct the existing problems which have affected judges such as Tom Berger.

Those are the remarks I wish to make at this point. We are supporting the legislation. Certainly we hope that the Government appoints a large number of women and minorities to the bench at this time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AMENDMENTS TO STANDING ORDERS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the Government's response to the first report of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons, I have the honour to table the proposed amendments to the Standing Orders which will I am sure go a long way in making the House of Commons and committees more effective. There have been extensive consultations with both of the other Parties and with the Table officers respecting the drafting of these amendments. These are for tabling.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PROVISIONAL STANDING ORDERS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, therefore I believe there would be unanimous consent for the following motion to be put at this time and passed with limited debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Does the Hon. President of the Privy Council have the unanimous consent to move his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved:

That, notwithstanding any Standing Order, the proposed amendments to the Standing Orders, laid upon the table earlier this day, be deemed to have been read, adopted and made Provisional Standing Orders of this House;

Provided that, unless otherwise ordered, the Provisional Standing Orders shall be in effect during the period commencing at 11:00 o'clock a.m. on Monday, September 9, 1985 and concluding at 10:59 o'clock a.m. on Monday, September 12, 1986; and

That the Clerk of the House be authorized and instructed to print a revised and renumbered edition of the Standing Orders integrating the Provisional Standing Orders and making any necessary amendments in consequence thereof.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have just a brief word. I want to say that when I had the opportunity of stating the response on behalf of the Government to the first report of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons, that response took place after there had been full and, I think, fruitful consultations and discussions with my colleagues, the House Leaders of the opposition Parties. As a result, I think you will find that these new Provisional Standing Orders are based upon a mutual understanding and a mutual respect for the House of Commons and a mutual concern that the recommendations of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons be made to work.

When we reconvene next September 9, Mr. Speaker, it will be on a slightly different basis insofar as the rules respecting the election of the Speaker are concerned, although you, Mr. Speaker, will not be affected until by some stroke of fate you decide to offer yourself up for election in this House. This does not apply to the occupant of the chair at the present time.

I think that one of the most interesting parts of the proposals will be with respect to the concept of legislative committees. It will be a new endeavour on the part of the House.

We will try to make these rules work for the benefit of Members of Parliament and for the benefit of the people of Canada.

There are other changes that will take place in terms of Standing Orders to place the management of Private Members' Bills with the Table as opposed to the office of your humble servant, the Government House Leader, who has in effect had the responsibility of arranging the Private Members' Business. I can only say, Mr. Speaker, as much as I enjoyed that very distinguished task of serving my colleages in the House, this will allow me to sit back and enjoy the speeches more, rather than rushing around and finding out who is up in the Private Members' hour at any particular time. I think that will be an interesting and a desirable change to the procedure, because it will put Private Members' Business with the Table and not with a representative of the Government. I think that is at least one move forward in the interest of free debate on the part of Private Members.

There are other items in the Standing Orders that we will be dealing with, which I suppose are important, but these are only, I think it is fair to say, the first steps on the journey toward parliamentary reform because we have the second and third reports to respond to.

I see the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) sitting here, the distinguished vice-chairman of the committee, who will understand that on the basis of those reports, and particularly the final report, the recommendations in respect to the committee system are very interesting, and very innovative and will mean quite a change if adopted in the way in which things operate in the committee system in this House.

I conclude with these few remarks simply by saying once again that I appreciate the co-operation I have had from both opposition House Leaders and, if I may be permitted to say so, by the officials at the Table who, as usual, have been oustanding in their co-operation and outstanding in the quality of work that they deliver to us on behalf of the people of Canada.

● (2210)

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak very briefly to the amendments to the Standing Orders proposed by the Government House Leader. First, I would like to thank him for the understanding and co-operation he extended to all Members of the McGrath Committee which presented this first report. Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind Hon. Members that the amendments being proposed today, in addition to being the subject of an unanimous recommendation by representatives of the three parties of this House in this Parliament, are also identical to amendments proposed in the previous Parliament by a committee chaired by Mr. Tom Lefebvre, now Senator Lefebvre, amendments which also received the unanimous approval of representatives of all three parties in this House. This means, Mr. Speaker, that today we are approving amendments to the Standing Orders of the House that have been approved unanimously twice in two successive Parliaments by representatives of the three political parties in this House.

I express the wish that these amendments contribute to improve parliamentary proceedings, but more particularly that those amendments contribute to highlight the role of ordinary Members, those who are commonly called back-benchers. If this parliamentary reform is to be valid, I think it is essential that the extraordinary talents of parliamentarians on both sides of the House be put to continuous and efficient use.

Too often men and women who had the confidence of their electors came here and before very long they felt frustrated. They realized to what extent our parliamentary system denied them the opportunity to make a valid and useful contribution to the administration of public affairs. I think that the Government is quite justified to launch this parliamentary reform project. Quite rightly, the Government House Leader pointed out that this is only the first report we are adopting today.

Over the next few weeks, of course, the Government will have to consider the second and third reports drafted by the committee under the chairmanship of the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) who has done an excellent job and has directed the work of the committee like a real professional. And since I have an opportunity to say it in this House, I paid homage to him at the last sitting of our committee, I want to do so again in the House as we are about to adopt these amendments which confirm the soundness of the recommendations of the first report. If we had to pay homage to a parliamentarian who particularly distinguished himself among all parliamentarians on the Government side, I would say that, far ahead of even the Prime Minister or several Ministers, the Conservative Member who has been the most outstanding during the first session of this Parliament is the Hon. Member for St. John's East.

I hope that during the summer the Government will give particular consideration to the recommendations of the second and third reports. Mr. Speaker, I have no hesitation in saying that this parliamentary reform can be truly worthwhile only if the Government fully endorses not only the first but also the second and third reports.

I think the Government is to be commended for its wisdom in taking this first step and accepting the first report. I dare hope that before the end of 1985 we will all be able to rejoice about having accepted the very important recommendations which complement this first report and which the Government can find as well in the second and third reports presented by the committee on parliamentary reform.

I therefore want to congratulate the Government on its action today and say that we are impatiently waiting for its favourable reaction to the other recommendations that have been made to overhaul our parliamentary proceedings and give a leading role to the Members of the House of Commons in the administration of Canada.

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Government House Leader for his resounding applause. First, it is necessary for the House to recognize and fully understand the work done by this committee. In my opinion, it has been one of the hardest working committees that has ever been structured by the House of Commons. The committee devoted countless hours, and I do not think anyone appreciated it, to looking at matters that many people take for granted. Without the care and deliberation of the members of that committee, the intricacies of the House of Commons would be impossible for most of us to understand.

I would like to pay particular tribute to the Chairman of the Committee, the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath), as did my colleague, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet). The Hon. Member for St. John's East, when given the responsibility, took it with vigour and with dedication. He saw his task as being one of great significance and he lived up to it. I might say that he elevated the entire committee to his own level of concern and hard work.

I would also like to say to the Hon. Member for Papineau and to my good friend and colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie), who co-vice-chaired the committee, I know from having read the committee report and having watched the work of the committee that their leadership was of vital importance. They showed a capacity to rise above the normal partisanship that exists in politics to recognize the House of Commons for what it really must be. I hope that the good sense that was displayed throughout the deliberations of this committee will someday become the good sense that will be displayed within the House of Commons. I hope that the co-operation that the committee was able to develop will, through its reports, become the order of the day for the operation under normal circumstances of the House of Commons itself.

The committee's report was reported on in various ways by the media. Certain members of the media saw it as being a great step forward, while others were less inclined to see it that way. Those who were less inclined to see the importance of the committee's report did not understand that parliamentary change by necessity must be slow but steady. That is what has happened over the course of the last few years.

The changes that have taken place in the rules and procedures of Parliament since 1980 have transformed Parliament itself. This is not the same Parliament that was operating in the early part of the 1980s. Perhaps new Members have not yet recognized the changes, and I appreciate that the changes have not yet been fully implemented and perhaps not even understood all that well by many of the older Members. Nevertheless, Parliament has changed dramatically. The way we do business has changed dramatically. The emphasis on individual Members of Parliament will become even greater with the adoption of subsequent reports, but this report in itself, with its greater emphasis on committees, will give Members of Parliament who are not privileged to be in Cabinet or to be the more prominent players the opportunity on a day-to-day basis to participate as they have never participated before.

From the point of view of Members on this side of the House, we look forward to these rules being put in place. We recognize that you, Mr. Speaker, and others who will fill the chair will have to be patient with us, because we will not all pick the rules up as quickly as will the Chair and the Table. Perhaps from time to time we will make reference to rules that no longer exist. I hope that the Chair and Table Officers will be lenient in dealing with us in September and October. I anticipate and expect that each Member, on receiving a copy, will take it home and make it necessary bedtime reading in order that we can come to grips with the intricacies of Parliament, and in order that we can serve our constituents better, as these rules intend.

HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council) moved that Bill C-63, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act be read the second time and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into Committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the Chair.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-63, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act. Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, this Bill is an amendment to the House of Commons Act. It will give effect to one of the key recommendations of the First Report of the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons. It will establish, for the first time in the House, a Board of Internal Economy which will not only have representation from the government side, but also representation from opposition Parties. Members of the Opposition will be selected to participate in the management of the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The content of the Bill was recommended by the Special Committee and I am honoured and pleased to sponsor the passage of the Bill through all stages tonight.

There is an amendment which I have discussed with the House Leaders of both opposition Parties. Mr. Chairman, I think that you will find unanimous consent for the acceptance of the amendment.

As the Bill is presently structured, upon dissolution the positions of Speaker and Deputy Speaker would not continue for the purposes of the Board of Internal Economy or for the purposes of the administration of the House of Commons during the course of an election campaign. It is our intention that the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker will continue to occupy their offices until a new Speaker and Deputy Speaker have been selected under the new Standing Orders. In addition, I would point out that upon dissolution of Parliament, the Board of Internal Economy will continue to function, with the Speaker as Chairperson and the Deputy Speaker acting in committee.

Therefore, I move:

That Clause 1 of Bill C-63 be amended by striking out lines 18 and 19 on page 3 and substituting the following:

House of Commons Act

"Economy and the Speaker and Deputy Speaker shall be deemed to remain in office as such, as if there had been no dissolution, until another member is appointed in his place".

The Deputy Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Chairman, I would like the Government House Leader to clarify something for me. Clause 18 reads:

On a dissolution of Parliament, every member of the Board of International Economy shall continue in office—

It seems to me that "every member" includes the Speaker, the Deputy Speaker, two members of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, the Leader of the Opposition or his nominee and four other members. That is the composition of the Board which is found in Clause 15(3). I am wondering why the Government House Leader has to repeat on lines 18 and 19 of Clause 18 on page 3 the names of the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker. I believe that is redundant. The previous lines state "every member", including the Speaker and the Deputy Speaker. I would like the Government House Leader to clarify that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to provide an explanation. That matter was raised with me in a different context. I read the Bill and thought, along the same line of reasoning enunciated by the Hon. Member for Papineau, that there would not likely be a problem. However, Clause 15 states:

(1) There shall be a Board of International Economy of the House of Commons, over which the Speaker of the House of Commons shall preside.

That was one reason for which I thought there should be some provision for the Speaker to continue in office, notwithstanding dissolution, so there would be no question as to who would be the Chairperson of committees. In addition, if the Hon. Member would look at the present House of Commons Act, we are deleting from that legislation a provision which has the effect of keeping the Speaker in charge of the administration of the House after dissolution. My judgment was that I should bring forward this amendment, out of abundant caution, to ensure that there would be no question upon dissolution that the Speaker would remain in charge of the administration of the House and as Chairperson of committees. I share the logic and the reason of the Hon. Member, but I was persuaded, out of abundant caution, that we should move the amendment.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say two things. I agree that the amendment is redundant, however, I do not see that it would do any harm. With that in mind, we would be prepared to pass the amendment.

I can remember when I was elected to the House of Commons and we were involved in a discussion on the Board of International Economy. It struck me as passing strange, coming from the Ontario Legislature where opposition Members had been a part of the administration of the Legislature, that the House of Commons did not have opposition participation on matters which were not only government, but matters which affected every Member of Parliament.

I recall one evening speaking in the House on that very topic. I felt it would be appropriate at some point to amend the Board of Commissioners to include Members of the Opposition in order that everyone could feel, as decisions were made, that they had some input into the decision-making process which affects every day of our lives.

I want to say that this change is one which I believe, and certainly hope, will be of benefit to every Hon. Member for the first time, without passing any judgment on the capacity of those who served before. For the first time individual Members of Parliament will be represented on the Board of Internal Economy of the House of Commons. The concerns of individual Members will be able to be brought to that board. I anticipate—in fact, I expect—that the board will operate in a totally non-partisan way, that it will operate on the question of merit and not on the question of politics, and that the decisions made by that board will be seen by every Member of Parliament to have been made without consideration for the source of the suggestion or whether it was presented by the Opposition or by government supporters or by the Cabinet. I am sure that the Cabinet itself will come to live with the new reality that while those Members continue to be the Government of Canada, Parliament itself has its own administration representing all Hon. Members. I think this is a truly great step forward.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, I just have a few comments and perhaps one question. I fully endorse the comments made by the House Leader for the New Democratic Party. There is no doubt that this is a great improvement to parliamentary affairs.

I would just like to reiterate that I take it that all members of the Board of Internal Economy will have the same status, that some members will not have more status than others. Of course, under the Financial Administration Act, that may be a little difficult to reconcile but, nevertheless, I take it the House Leader will confirm that there will not be some members of that Board of Internal Economy who will be of, say, advisory status rather than some others. That is, the Ministers will not impose themselves, as they sometimes do, by their presence and their authority.

Perhaps the President of the Privy Council can answer this question. Clause 18(1) of Bill C-63 reads:

On September 9, 1986, Sections 15 to 18 shall stand referred to such Committee of the House of Commons as may be designated or established for the purpose—

I take it there is no time limit attached to when the committee must report to the House after its review of the operation of these new amendments, is that correct? There is no time limit attached to the review process?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the first question, there will be no first class or second class members. There will be only one category of members and they will be full participants.

I was interested in the comments made by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain. I take his comments and thank him for the compliment he has given to us. I think all Hon. Members felt that this move was one which had to be taken in the House of Commons in order to allow Members of Parliament, and not only Members of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada, who are part of the Government, to be involved in the internal economy of the House of Commons.

Indeed, I recall very vividly the rather dramatic point of order raised—my first challenge—by the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce-Lachine East who interrupted the very benign proceedings which usually take place here on the opening day of Parliament with the election of the Speaker. He thrashed away at the Prime Minister because of the fact he had appointed the usual Commissioners of Internal Economy by the usual motion. I had to point out to the Hon. Member at that time that we just did not have quite the time to change the Act, that it was only the first day. However, I am glad to say that before we adjourn this summer we are able to do that.

With respect to the observation of the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier concerning the review of the operation, there are two courses of action we could have taken. I had originally suggested that we have this on a one-year trial basis to coincide with the Standing Orders which will be used provisionally for a period of one year. At the request of the Hon. Member's House Leader, I was quite prepared to have this review of the legislation not terminate but will carry on.

The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap speaks day in and day out and here it is my chance to speak and he is making a gesture that he wants to go to the Senate. I don't understand this.

I conclude only by saying, Sir, that, yes, this is only a provision for review. We want to have the matter of the operation of the Board of Internal Economy reviewed by an appropriate committee. I would hope, along with the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain, that the Board of Internal Economy would operate not only on a non-partisan basis but I would hope it will be able to operate on a consensus basis, that it would not be necessary to have a division on questions put to the committee. I would hope that there would be a discussion and a give and take which I think would benefit the operation of this House. It is going to require the co-operation of all Hon. Members in the spirit of collegiality on that particular board because I believe the people who will be on that board will represent their caucuses and the members within their caucuses. I think the people, therefore, will be people who love the House of Commons and understand it as an important institution. These responsibilities will make it easy to avoid becoming involved in partisanship.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, in his comments, the President of the Privy Council said that the Clerk was to be authorized to reprint the Standing Orders. As he knows, since 1983 we in this House have been working out of a 1982 edition with some glued-on pages. I wonder if the President of the Privy Council could, through his good offices, ask the Clerk if we could have these printed before we come back on September 9, that is, sometime in August.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Chairman, I have just two or three questions. Can the President of the Privy Council tell us when the new composition comes into effect?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: September 9, 1985, Mr. Chairman, on the day that the House will reconvene for the next session.

Mr. Hawkes: Thank you. As I work through the Budget in part, and having just read the changes to the Standing Orders where legislative committees or standing committees must submit budgets, I could not see the tie-in as to how those budgets would end up in Treasury Board hands and have money voted by Parliament. It talks about staff control by the Clerk. It talks about staff control by the Sergeant-at-Arms. Where is the mechanism which takes the committee budget and puts it through the hand of the Treasury Board Minister and gets voted by Parliament?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, I have a brief answer which I hope will be sufficient for the Hon. Member. We are moving and have been moving under this Government to have more accountability with respect to the expenses of committees. The Hon. Member will know that the Speaker has written to all chair persons of standing committees requesting that they submit to him and, thereby, to the present Commissioners of Internal Economy, their budgets with respect to extraordinary expenses.

Under the new regime, the new Board of Internal Economy will, in fact, review all committee expenses and I believe they will be putting in place a system under which the committees will have allocated to them certain basic start-up funds. Then the committees will be expected to outline to the new Board of Internal Economy their requirements for their activities.

It will be up to the board to decide on each of these budgets and there will be an obligation on the part of the committee concerned and on the chairperson in particular. When you look at some of the other recommendations of the third report the logical conclusion is carried through. We want to start now on accountability and make sure that people are getting value for money and there is some control over the expenditures in committee. The Hon. Member will know there has been some very substantial bills run up by certain committees, albeit quite inadvertently and with the best intentions. We want to have some control and give leadership through the accountability concept over the operation of our own affairs.

The Hon. Member will undoubtedly have read the third report and will understand that if the provisions regarding the transfer of control over spending to the committees are accepted, the committees will have greater independence. They will have to justify their budget, but once they have it they will be in a position to spend the money without further reference to the House.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Chairman, if I may clarify one of the things which concerns me, earlier this morning we changed the Standing Orders. They say that the committee chairman shall not incur any expenses until the chairman of the committee or the member acting for the chairman has presented a budget and so forth to the Board of Internal Economy. What I am concerned about is the legal position of the committee chairman. I am a committee chairman and if we call witnesses during the summer and incur expenses, am I left in some kind of limbo where I have no authority to incur expenses until the budgets are presented? Is there a mechanism which enables committees to function between now and September 9?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, these provisions do not come into effect until September 9 for a good and valid reason. We do not want to affect anything going on this summer. The Hon. Member can rest assured that he will not be incarcerated for misappropriation of funds if he carries out his mandate. He has the authority and will continue to have that authority. When we come back there will be a new regime which will involve a mechanism, which is now being worked on, about how to operate this system. I think it will satisfy all Members and I alluded to it earlier. It simply provides that, for example, committees will have a basic amount allocated to them equivalent to what they will have available to carry on their normal operations in Ottawa. They will then simply have to make a presentation to the board with respect to any other activities, whether it involves travel or extraordinary investigations. All that will be subject to justification to the board which will be sitting on a frequent basis so that committee members will not be inconvenienced by having to wait for adjudication on their budget request.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Chairman, as an ordinary private backbench Member, so that the House Leaders are not patting themselves and the committee on the back, I want to extend congratulations to the committee and the three House Leaders for what they have accomplished. With one small caveat. I worry that when all three House Leaders agree on something like now we operate down here, does that mean less work for them and more for us?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You bet your life it does.

Mr. Ellis: Mr. Chairman, I want to briefly deal with this legislation. There are some things in it which I have a great deal of difficulty with.

Mr. Benjamin: Not at this hour of the night.

Mr. Ellis: Yes, at this hour. The Hon. Member for Regina West kept us here for hours talking about things that some of us had very little interest in so another two or three minutes on this will not be too bad.

I want to put on record that Clause 16 of this legislation reflects legislation which was prepared by the Lefebvre Committee and does not reflect the reforms put forward by the Auditor General in his 1978 report. The fact is that the Clerk of the House does not and has not for many years prepared any estimates. The Sergeant-at-Arms does not and has not for many years prepared any estimates. The estimates have been prepared by the House administration. In addition, when those estimates have been looked at by the Speaker or given to him, they are then referred to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services for their scrutiny as they have been for many years, before they go back to the Speaker.

I am not going to get into the things that happened in committee, but I tell you that there are four Speakers who are on record as supporting that type of administration. There are three Auditors General who have studied the system and are on record as supporting that kind of system. I only say to you, Mr. Chairman, that I do not intend to make a motion to change this piece of legislation tonight. It comes at almost the eleventh hour of our sitting, literally as well as figuratively. I do know that legislation such as this can be changed and I think that with the putting in place of new rules for the Commissioners of Internal Economy that it in fact should be and perhaps will be.

Clause 1, as amended, agreed to.

On Clause 2—

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, Clause 2 deals with the date on which the Act shall come into force. It is evident that this Clause was drafted by someone who did not know whether this Bill was to be dealt with before or after September 9. It is now quite evident the Bill is to be dealt with before September 9. Therefore, unless there is some good reason why we should retain the present wording, it would be my suggestion—and unless I get the explanation it would be my intention—that we make the necessary resolution to reword Clause 2 to say that this Act shall come into force on September 9.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Is 1985 okay?

Mr. Nickerson: Nineteen eighty-five.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, Parliament lives! There is a legislator who reads legislation. In deference to that distinguished Parliamentarian I accept his suggestion and I therefore move:

That the words

", or be deemed to have come into force," be deleted.

The clause would now read:

This Act shall come into force on September 9, 1985.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 2, as amended, agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn moved that Bill C-63, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act, be read the third time and passed.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Government House Leader for his co-operation in agreeing to amend the House of Commons Act, especially as concerns the Board of Internal Economy. I would remind this House that this was one of the major recommendations of the Committee on Reform of the House of Commons and one on which there was unanimity from the start. Not only we were unanimous at the time, but we had even proposed in our first report an amendment which corresponds word for word to that introduced by the Government House Leader, except for section 18(1) which has been added. On behalf of all members of the Committee, and especially our Chairman, I therefore want to thank the Government House Leader for approving this proposal and introducting this Bill today.

I believe that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) said earlier that, since 1980, we had witnessed a lot of changes in Parliamentary procedure and the way Members of Parliament view their work. In my opinion, he is absolutely right. I would like to remind him that the relationship which had evolved among the then Government House Leader, the Hon. Justice Pinard, the late Hon. Walter Baker and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain himself greatly contributed to the improvement in the conditions offered to Members of this House. I especially recall when we decided to stop sitting in the evenings except on rare occasions like tonight. We are these new Standing Orders which allow us to have a more normal and more decent way of life to the co-operation of these three House leaders in the previous Parliament. In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that we would not have been able to bring about these changes, especially the changes to the Standing Orders which were agreed to earlier this evening and in this Bill C-63, without the understanding and cooperation of the three present House Leaders. I therefore want to thank the Government House Leader. I wish to thank the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray), House Leader of the Official Opposition, and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain, House Leader of the New Democratic Party, who appeared together before the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons, which had never been done before. I would like to thank the House Leaders of the three parties for their co-operation and understanding in trying to improve the conditions for all Members of this House. I am very happy that Bill C-63 is before us this evening and I hope that it will receive unanimous approval.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all Members who gave unanimous consent earlier this evening to sit late. I want everyone to understand that it was at my request that we sat late this evening in order to allow my colleagues to attend the convention of the New Democratic Party tomorrow here in Ottawa. Anyone who wishes to attend will be most welcome. They might in fact find it enjoyable. I hope they would. In any event, I thank the Members who had to sit late this evening in order to accommodate my desires.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of amity and friendship I will not even comment on what I am going to be doing tomorrow, but I do not think I will be at the NDP convention, as much as I would love to be there.

Mr. Deans: But you will miss so much.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Since we have concluded the business which we agreed to conclude today, I would like to make a motion that the sitting of the House be suspended to the call of the Chair. When we receive a message from the other place, you might be good enough to ring the bells or let us know in some other way that you want us back in the Chamber. We can then, receive Royal Assent and then adjourn for the evening.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to join with all Members in wishing the New Democratic Party a very good and, hopefully, a very fruitful weekend. We agreed with the proposals of the New Democratic House Leader in the spirit of objectivity, knowing how he would appreciate it.

I would like to ask a question of order of the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn). I heard the suggestion he made that the bells be rung to invite the Members back to the Chamber when the Senate is ready to proceed with Royal Assent. Is that the suggestion which I just heard? I kow that some Hon. Members are very impatient to go home. Do we have any idea of when the Senate will be ready to receive us?

Mr. Speaker: As the House knows, the information systems around here are circuitous. On my way in I was informed by a gentleman in a blue shirt and a hat that it would probably be in 20 minutes. I have learned that one can trust those systems. The House has heard the suggestion. I suspect that not all Members who are present will return for Royal Assent. I simply wish those who have stayed a happy summer. Since so much has been done today in an amicable way, this seems an appropriate time to say something that is important to me personally. I am now a new boy who feels comfortable. It has been an extraordinary eight or nine months for me. That is just something I have been waiting to say.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the suggestion of the House Leader. Is it the wish of the House to suspend the sitting to the call of the bell?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

At 10.58 p.m. the sitting of the House was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

At 12.25 a.m. the House resumed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

THE CONSTITUTION—SUPREME COURT JUDGMENT—CONSULTATIONS WITH MANITOBA GOVERNMENT AND SOCIETY OF FRANCO-MANITOBANS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, first of all, since it is already 12:45 in the morning, I want to thank the House staff for their patience. I do not intend to use up the full seven minutes I am allowed, but I think the matter is sufficiently important, Mr. Speaker, to discuss it at this time. I simply wanted to make sure the Government would have an opportunity to keep an election promise it made with respect to a very important program which provides court challenge assistance, a program that expired on April 30 of this year.

I also wish to point out the presence of one of my good friends, the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), who is at my side this evening, at this late hour, and who has always shown great dedication to the cause of Canada's linguistic minorities.

Mr. Speaker, my question on June 13 of this year to the Minister of Justice concerned the recent decision by the Supreme Court, dealing with a referral aimed at emphasizing minority rights and especially at enshrining Section 23 of the Manitoba Act on the same terms as the generous interpretation given Section 133 in Quebec since Confederation, that is, for over 100 years. The Supreme Court has confirmed beyond a doubt that the wording of Section 23 of the Manitoba Act has the same effect as Section 133, and that today we are to understand that for over 100 years, the intent of this section was that laws, statutes, regulations and all matters arising from the powers of the Manitoba Legislature should have been drafted in both official languages, that is in French and English.

Editorial writers were quick to comment on this historic decision by the Supreme Court. In the newspaper Le Devoir, we read: "One hundred years lost". Le Devoir said that this clear and forthright decision by the Supreme Court restored a measure of justice which, however, could not bring back to life what had been buried by 100 years of injustice. The decision in itself would not be enough to make amends and give back to this minority that part of itself that was oppressed by the particular form of madness that has surrounded and will always continue to surround Francophone minorities in Canada, a country where violence is supposedly non-existent.

Mr. Speaker, in this connection, and to save time, now that the Supreme Court has spoken categorically and clearly on the interpretation of Section 23, today, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) was saying in the House:

● (0045)

[English]

In answer to a question from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said that they had discussed the matter of translating all statutes and all documents of the Manitoba Legislature since 1870 or 1890 when, by some legislative fault, English was made the official language of that province. That fault has now been corrected by the Supreme Court and gives Canadians a challenge to meet, a challenge with which we must deal in the next few months if we want to justice done, and be seen to be done.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said today in the House that the Government of Manitoba would in effect be making a submission to the Supreme Court, as required, concerning the minimum time to be allowed for the translation of all these documents.

[English]

The question of translation is not one that I would like to address. The question I would like to address in the few minutes that I have is the question of helping to assist those who, in my view, have over the years sustained an injustice and require assistance. The courts will, of course, hear the Manitoba case regarding the minimum time required to translate all the statutes. I take it from the answer of the Minister of Justice today that the Government of Canada will also participate in that process.

Tonight, I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary if the Government will now reconsider its position on the court challenges program and put forth a generous program which will give minorities that will be invited by the courts to present their arguments the necessary assistance, be it financial or a matter of human resources.

[Translation]

I simply would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary whether his Government is prepared to establish a program to support linguistic minorities, and especially in Manitoba. I am thinking of the Franco-Manitoban Society, the Federation of Francophones outside Quebec and Alliance Québec, and that these people should have access to Government funds to help them draft and submit their arguments regarding the minimum time to be allowed for translating all these statutes.

I am very well acquainted with the position of the Minister of Justice, who said in the House on May 15 of this year—

● (0050)

[English]

I would like to quote from an article quoting the Minister of Justice as saying, "Charter challengers don't need federal financing". He was talking of the citizens and groups which can apply to the courts if they believe they have a cause under the Charter. He said those people—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his seven minutes have expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we entirely agree with the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) about the historic character of the unanimous judgment on the use of French language delivered by the Supreme Court of Canada on June 13 last.

However, we would like to make a few relevant comments on that epoch-making decision which has clarified and removed any ambiguity from the constitutional requirements in connection with the Manitoba laws and parliamentary procedures.

[English]

The Supreme Court has upheld the Constitution of Canada while preserving the rule of law and avoiding legal chaos in the Province of Manitoba. We can only be impressed by the rigour and wisdom of the court's reasoning in coming to that decision, particularly with regard to the primacy of the Constitution and the rule of law, as well as the role of the judiciary in upholding these two fundamental principles of our system of Government.

[Translation]

However, that is not all Mr. Speaker. Each and every Canadian has something to learn from that major decision which confirms the sacrosanct character of minority language rights in Canada, that point of honour which has always been upheld by our valiant Canadian Prime Minister. However, it is imperative to quote a brief excerpt of that judgment delivered by the Supreme Court in this matter and I quote:

[English]

> The importance of language rights is grounded in the essential role that language plays in human existence, development and dignity. It is through language that we are able to form concepts; to structure and order the world around us. Language bridges the gap between isolation and community, allowing humans to delineate the rights and duties they hold in respect of one another, and thus to live in society.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, our Government is seriously committed to protecting minority rights wherever they exist, as stated in the throne speech and the unequivocal commitment of our Government to improve and monitor such an important aspect of a truly national life.

[English]

With regard to the legal procedures leading to the resolution—

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid I must advise the Parliamentary Secretary that his three minutes have expired.

Mr. Prud'homme: On behalf of those who are sleepy-eyed, I would like to thank you very much for your patience.

Mr. Speaker: Before I adjourn, I would like to thank the staff for a job extremely well done.

It being 12.53 o'clock a.m., this House stands adjourned until eleven o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 12.53 a.m.

APPENDIX

(Documents tabled by Hon. John Wise, Minister of Agriculture)

Operations under the Farm Improvement Loans Act
During the year ended December 31, 1984

40th ANNUAL REPORT

The Farm Improvement Loans Act came into force in March, 1945 for an initial period of 3 years and was subsequently amended from time to time to remain in effect for additional lending periods. The current lending period expires June 30, 1985.

The purpose of the Act is to encourage the provision of intermediate term and short term credit to farmers for the improvement and development of farms and for the improvement of living conditions thereon. To this end, the Act authorizes the Minister of Agriculture to guarantee, against loss, term loans made to farmers by chartered banks, Alberta Treasury branches and other lenders designated by the Minister, for a wide range of farm improvement projects.

The main purposes for which Farm Improvement Loans could be made during 1984 were:

—purchase of agricultural implements and equipment;
—general works for the improvement or development of a farm, including clearing and breaking of land, irrigation systems, farm electric systems, fencing and drainage works;
—construction, repair or alteration of farm buildings;
—purchase of livestock;
—purchase of additional farm land;
—major repair or major overhaul of agricultural implements and equipment (including equipment for beekeeping) where the cost of such repair or overhaul is not less than $400.

A borrower may have several guaranteed loans outstanding at any one time up to a maximum combined amount of $100 000.

The repayment term of a loan depends largely upon the amount borrowed and the particular circumstances of the borrower. The maximum repayment period is 15 years where a loan was granted for the purchase of additional land, and 10 years for all other purposes.

Farm Improvement Loans must be secured and borrowers are required to provide a certain portion of the cost of a purchase or a project from their own resources.

The maximum rate of interest on loans made under the program is equal to the prime lending rate of chartered banks, plus 1%. This maximum, which varies with the prime rate, applies to both new and outstanding loans.

Review of 1984 Lending

During the year, 12 037 loans were made, amounting to $159.9 million. The average loan made during the year was $13 288. The total amount lent was borrowed for the following purposes:

—$105.7 million or 66.1% to purchase agricultural implements;
—$14.1 million or 8.8% for construction, repair or alteration of farm houses and buildings;
—$15.7 million or 9.8% to purchase land;
—$10.5 million or 6.6% for other improvement purposes such as clearing of land, fencing, irrigation and similar projects;
—$13.4 million or 8.4% for the purchase of livestock;
—$0.5 million for major repair or major overhaul of agricultural implements and equipment.

From the inception of the program to December 31, 1984, approximately 1 904 200 Farm Improvement Loans were made amounting to approximately $5 152 million. During the same period, payments were made to lenders under the guarantee provision in respect of 7 177 claims amounting to approximately $17.0 million, while recoveries were effected of about $2.8 million.

Appended to this Report are the following tables showing in detail the lending operations for 1984:

Table 1. Summary of Operations

ENERGY

GOVERNMENT'S CONSERVATION POLICY

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to bring to your attention the fact that the Government has abandoned energy conservation and increased our dependence on diminishing oil supplies. This pattern emerged last November when cuts of $32 million were made to the energy division of the National Research Council. Bill C-24 followed, which eliminates programs which encourage switching to energy sources other than oil, and to energy conservation, respectively. Then came the May 23 Budget which wiped out the federal sales tax exemption for home insulation, energy conservation products, and alternate energy equipment.

The Government seems to be insensitive to the necessity of conserving Canada's oil supply and the necessity of reducing our reliance on this form of energy. Furthermore, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) just said that a federal subsidy may have to be instituted to assist oil companies with exploration activities in frontier areas.

Instead of financing high risk activities in the Arctic, we should encourage better reuse of the oil already in the marketplace. For example, the removal of federal sales tax from recycled oil sold in Canada would not only help the Canadian re-refining industry that is in the forefront of world technology, but would also reduce the need to explore for oil in the expensive and high risk frontier areas. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, with appropriate—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his 90 seconds have expired. The Hon. Member for Brant (Mr. Blackburn).

SPACE WEAPONRY

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—KROEGER REPORT

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, it is unbelievable that the Government plans to keep secret Arthur Kroeger's report on the U.S. invitation to participate in the Strategic Defence Initiative. This makes a mockery of the commitment of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) for public debate and consultation in matters of foreign policy. Apparently the Government agrees with Ken Lewis, the retired general who is now on the payroll of Canada's defence contractors. You remember General Lewis. He is the one who said that ordinary Canadians should not debate star wars because that is like grade six students discussing surgery.

The aerospace industry thinks Canadians are too stupid or ignorant to make decisions for themselves. I guess the Government wants to keep them that way. However, I have news for the Government. Canadians will not be fooled by its attempt to stifle debate. They will be out in force to debate star wars whether the Government likes it or not. They will speak from an intelligent and informated point of view.

For example, yesterday I had the pleasure to table a petition in the House from over 400 academics, mostly from the University of Toronto. Such distinguished Canadians as George Ignatieff and Northrop Frye are telling the Government that Canada should have no part of star wars. Will the Government listen? I do not know. It certainly seems reluctant to discuss the matter with Canadians. It even wants to keep the Kroeger report secret. In that respect it is the Government of Canada which is behaving with a grade six mentality. The citizens of Canada, on the other hand, continue to distinguish themselves with their thoughtful contributions to the star wars debate.

DISASTERS

AIR-INDIA CRASH—DEATH OF LEGISLATIVE ASSISTANT COLETTE ALLARD

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, scores of families across the nation are mourning friends and loved ones lost when Air-India Flight 182 plunged into the North Atlantic Sunday morning. Prayer services have been held in temples and churches throughout Canada. Many memorial and funeral services remain to be scheduled pending identification of the 131 bodies now recovered. It is an agonizing time for the families whose grief is suspended or compounded through not knowing.

One such waiting family is the Allard family of Ottawa and Hull. Stephanie, David, and Harold are the three teenaged children of Colette Allard, a warm, intuitive lover of music and life, who served this House as my Legislative Assistant and, for two terms previously, on the staff of the Hon. Marcel Lambert. She was never unkind.

Colette Allard was on summer vacation on her way to hike the Himalayas in the company of Rachel Castonguay, a friend from the Department of Indian Affairs. I spoke with Colette on the phone on Friday and wished her a safe trip. She replied: "I embrace my fate". Colette will be greatly missed by my staff, myself, and her many other colleagues and friends on the Hill. To her family, and the families of the other victims of Flight 182, we extend our deepest sympathy.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TRIBUTE TO PAGE STAFF

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure to rise in the House today to pay tribute to 40 great young Canadians, many of whom are sitting right beside me, who have worked as pages with all of us in the House of Commons during the first session of the Thirty-third Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Ravis: These young ladies and gentlemen have competed to come to Ottawa from all provinces and the territories, to work in the House of Commons while at the same time carrying on full-time studies at a university in Ottawa. These young people are of the highest calibre and represent some of the best junior leaders, achievers, and young academics in our country.

I want to compliment them specifically on the manner in which they cheerfully and generously served the Members in all Parties and assisted Members in making our jobs easier.

Some of the pages will travel abroad and some of them will remain in Ottawa, while others will return to their home towns to take up their studies at a university in the fall. Wherever they go, I wish them all the very best of luck on behalf of all of my colleagues in the House of Commons. I want to thank them again for their excellent service and dedication. I hope that many of them will return to work for the Government of Canada, and possibly to represent a constituency as a Member of Parliament in this great House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SENATE COMMITTEE REPORT ON RELATIONS WITH MIDDLE EAST COUNTRIES

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, June 27, 1985, Senator George C. van Roggen, chairman of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, tabled the committee's final report on Canada's Relations with Countries of the Middle East and North Africa. The report is the result of a detailed study during which the Senators heard from 63 witnesses. In addition, a sub-committee held high level meetings with leaders and officials in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Jordan, and Israel. Senator van Roggen said the report provides a balanced assessment of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

I deeply regret that the Canada-Israel Committee has attacked the Senate's Committee Report as "ill-considered" and "misleading". I urge all Canadians to read the report. I extend many thanks to the chairman, the Hon. Senator van Roggen, and the vice-chairman, the Hon. Senator Heath Macquarrie, for a job well done.

IMMIGRATION

MINISTER'S RESPONSE TO COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I commend the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration on having initiated, for the first time in years, a public discussion on immigration policy, and I also commend the Minister on the response she tabled on Thursday, which is straightforward and positive toward immigration.

However, I am seriously concerned by a characteristic of the Minister's report, namely, a strong parternalism, or maternalism. For example, first, the committee report asks for a Standing Committee on Immigration to review immigration levels within a population policy, and report to Parliament each May with projected levels. However, the Minister instead prefers a secretariat, that is, retaining initiative with the bureaucracy.

Second, the Minister proposes to handle the contentious issue of family reunification with more distant relatives "in a managed way". This strongly suggests increasing the already dangerous level of arbitrary decisions by the bureaucracy, as against the Canadian people's demand for clear guidelines uniformly administered.

Third, the Minister's report omits reference to the landing of persons who claim refugee status in Canada. This reinforces the hints that the bureaucracy wishes to close Canada's doors.

Fourth, a new category is proposed, "immigrant workers without relatives", suggesting that Canada skim skilled workers from other countries but avoid having them become rooted in Canada. Is it intended to enlarge the policy of "migrant workers" with little or no right of permanent residence?

Fifth, the Minister rejects the committee's recommendations for an annual report on how well Canada succeeds in employing immigrants without disrupting the employment of others.

The Minister's reply is a stimulating mixture of promise and danger.

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT'S ACHIEVEMENTS DURING PAST TEN MONTHS

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, today our Government ends a session which will prove to be very important for the future of Canada. Over the past ten months we have made every effort in an attempt to correct and lighten the heavy burden left behind by the previous administration.

After ten months of work, Mr. Speaker, our Government is proud of its outstanding performance. Among other achievements I might mention the settlement of the Mirabel expropriation issue after 16 years of consecutive failures; the reopening of many VIA Rail passenger lines; the signature of federal-provincial agreements on industrial development, tourism, communications and forestry; pensions for widows and widowers aged 60 to 64, just to name a few.

Our Government has also paved the way for the proposed parliamentary reform designed to give all Hon. Members the opportunity to participate actively in Government decisions. I had the privilege of sitting on the special committee presided by the Hon. James McGrath, and I hope that the reform will become reality at the beginning of the new session.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the House that I am very proud and honoured to represent the constituency of Argenteuil-Papineau. My constituents realized that a young Government having to cope with a legacy of unemployment and public debts could hardly have done more in only ten months.

I have confidence in the future and in our Government. I am convinced that the people of Canada strongly support our policies aimed at reducing the deficit.

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

CROSS-CANADA "WALK FOR THE BLIND" BY BRITISH COLUMBIA GRANDMOTHER

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, it is for good reason that many of Canada's most outstanding individuals and national heroes come from my home province of British Columbia. It is a land of rugged individualism, with people as tall as the mountains. Terry Fox and Steve Fonyo are two names that come to mind.

Last night, Mr. Speaker, you warmly welcomed another B.C. hero to Ottawa, wheelchair marathoner Rick Hanson.

Today I would like to call the attention of the House and our nation to another rugged individualist from British Columbia, a 57-year old grandmother, Hildegard Buschhaus, of Coombs, a small town in the middle of my riding.

This summer Hildegard is walking across Canada to raise funds for the visually impaired. Her "Walk for the Blind" began on March 20 at Tofino on the Pacific Rim of our nation. Today she has reached Sault Ste Marie, and on July 22 Hildegard will reach Ottawa. By autumn the good people of Newfoundland will welcome her to their shores.

The "Walk for the Blind" intends to raise the awareness of Canadians to the plight of the visually impaired. Hildegard Buschhaus needs your support and our support. On behalf of my colleagues may I say: "Bonne chance, grand-mère, bonne chance".

THE ADMINISTRATION

MAJOR ACTIVITIES AND POLICY OF GOVERNMENT DURING PAST TEN MONTHS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): This being the end of the session, Mr. Speaker, I would like to go over the recent past and sum up what has happened since September 4 and since November 5 when the House resumed its sittings.

Most people will recall that House business before the holiday season had to do with universality. Again the Government had failed to live up to its promise, but it had to reverse its decision as a result of strong opposition from the Liberals and the New Democrats.

The major activities of this Government and this Parliament after New Year's Day were highlighted by scandal—the Hatfield-MacKay scandal; the scandal related to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and his brother-in-law; the scandal related to Clark and his brother; and the scandal of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) and his children.

The second incident which drew attention was again a promise which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) wanted to break concerning the deindexation of old age security pensions.

To mark the end of the session, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister thought he would offer a gift to all Canadians, so as of July 1 candies, medicine, soap, tooth paste, everything will be subject to a 10 per cent tax. That, Mr. Speaker, is the balance sheet of this Government since September 4.

THE BUDGET

NEW GASOLINE TAX

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I have the indulgence of the House to echo what the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East stated in his opening remarks, and to add my words of congratulation and praise for the pages of the House of Commons who have studied here at our two universities, Carleton University and the University of Ottawa, during their tenure. I congratulate them on the very fine service they have given to Members on all sides of the House, and wish them well in their future careers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It might also be appropriate to wish Members and yourself, Sir, a good summer, some rest and relaxation and, in certain quarters of the House, perhaps some renewed wisdom after Members return to their constituencies. Let me also add those good wishes to members of the Press Gallery who participate so intimately in our deliberations.

[Translation]

In the absence of the Minister of Finance, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Why did the Minister of Finance introduce new taxes yesterday, especially the new tax on gas, thus adding to the most massive and underhanded tax increase in this country's history? Why did he introduce taxes that are going to cost Canadians far more than the Government needs to finance full indexation of Old Age Security benefits? Why this new sleight-of-hand?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of Finance announced a surtax that will be levied on Canada's large corporations to help us finance our programs. He also announced a tax that will become effective on January 1, 1987, and we think it is a reasonable way to try and finance our social programs and, of course, reduce the deficit.

That being said, I would like to add my own words of praise to those expressed by my right hon. friend for the staff of the House. I want to thank them and wish them a very pleasant summer.

[English]

EFFECT ON ECONOMY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, at his press conference this morning the Prime Minister admitted that the Budget in very serious respects had violated what he called the rule of fairness, particularly as it related to our pensioners. Would the Prime Minister now agree that the Budget, using words well chosen, will have a restraining effect on the economy, that the net increase in personal tax burden will slow consumer spending, and there will be an increase in inflationary pressures as a result of the Budget? Would he agree with those words?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I indicated this morning, without any hesitation, that in our judgment, as brought to us by the Minister of Finance, that in one instance the Budget violated the notion of fairness, and that we could have done one of two things faced with that. We could either give Canadians a hearing or give them the finger. The Liberals always gave them the finger. We gave them a hearing. We listened to them and we acted, having heard Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CONFIDENTIAL DOCUMENT PREPARED BY TRANSPORT ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister just cannot resist resurrecting the past in a very unattractive way.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): If he wishes to contribute and to lead the civility in this House, I recommend that that is not the technique which will prompt the best response from all quarters in the House.

The damning analysis which I recited to the Prime Minister in my first supplementary question comes from a confidential document, prepared by the Assistant Deputy Minister of Transport, for the eyes of the Minister of Transport. That document goes on to say that "incentives for business" are "insufficiently strong", and that most provinces in Canada will suffer employment loss in 1986. If the Prime Minister will not believe me, will he believe the advice which his senior officials are giving to his Ministers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is not through any lack of respect for my right hon. friend that I, from time to time, take views on the economy different from his. One of the reasons is, for example, on November 8 or 9 he was on his feet in the House of Commons predicting that there would be a loss of about 150,000 jobs. Since this Government came to office, 271,000 new jobs have been created. I know that it is my right hon. friend's job to preach doom and gloom, but he had better be careful; he is in the process of making a career of it.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We will see.

REQUEST FOR NEW MEASURES

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the document to which the Prime Minister did not refer, read by the Leader of the Opposition, was from the Department of Transport. It said that the Budget would increase inflationary pressures through sales and excise taxes, taxes on fuels and construction goods. Everyone in the country knows that this crushing tax burden is the wrong way to go. The Prime Minister knows it, the Minister of Transport knows it, and all their colleagues in the House know it.

Will the Prime Minister instruct the Minister of Finance, or his successor, to return to the drawing-board and bring forward an alternative scenario which will basically decrease inflation, increase consumer demand, and increase jobs?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I realize that it is a little early in the day. My hon. friend says that this is the wrong way to go. The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition says that he will cut the deficit by 50 per cent in a modest period of years. I realize that it is early in the day, but at some point in time Canadians will ask them what they have in mind. All they have had in mind so far is criticism and negativism. That is not selling, because what the country needs is prosperity and hope—and it is getting it from this Government—designed to create new jobs and new wealth. They are going to be asked what they stand for.

SALES TAX INQUIRY

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, since the Prime Minister has invited such a response, would he consider asking the Minister of Finance to look at the prospect of a sales tax cut, which the simulations of the Economic Council of Canada have shown effectively would decrease inflation, would increase demand, and would increase disposable income? In that manner he will get his deficit down. Would he consider that scenario?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, if that scenario is valid, why didn't you argue that with Mr. Lalonde when he imposed sales tax increases? You were a member of the Government and you remained silent. That is the problem. They are impaled on their own contradictions.

EXTENSION OF CORPORATE TAX

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I should like to begin by extending the best wishes of my colleagues to the pages of the House of Commons who have performed their task very well for us. We wish them well in their future pursuits.

I am not sure whether their experience with us gave them any lessons in civility. I am not sure whether they learned anything about the real world, but maybe something about the real world of politics. We all wish them well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1125)

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, now back to the real world of politics. I would like to ask the Prime Minister a question, and maybe he will be a little more co-operative today than he was yesterday. It pertains to the change that the Minister of Finance announced yesterday extending the corporate tax for another six months.

My question is simply this. When one of my colleagues proposed such an extension about ten days ago, the Minister of Finance thought it would be ridiculous. Such an extension of corporate tax, he argued, would be a disincentive and he would not make the change because he said that that would lead to fewer jobs and not to more jobs. If this was the case ten days ago, why was it not the case yesterday?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it always help to sleep on it. The Minister of Finance has indicated, and I confirmed as much several times during the press conference this morning, that we are not here as emperors but as servants of the people. Our duties include the obligation to listen, and we listened to what the people had to say on an important issue. I do not think anyone can fault us for doing that.

[English]

OIL INDUSTRY TAXATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister said night brings wisdom. I thought the pensioners were just badgering him during the daylight hours. I hope during the summer at least he will get some sleep on that issue.

There is another aspect of the Budget that does cause us concern, and that is the 1 cent per litre increase in tax that the Government has announced which will be very negative for consumers, and very negative in terms of the competitive position of Canadian industry. Since he could have obtained almost exactly the same amount of revenue by imposing a windfall profits tax on the oil companies, on the profit that they would get for the old oil that had already been discovered, a windfall profit not being new in this country or in other countries, instead of going after the consumers to pay the additional revenue why did he not bring in a windfall profits tax on the oil industry to get the same amount of revenue?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, one of the things we have been trying to do, and I think, with at least a modest degree of success, is to resurrect an industry in western Canada, namely, the oil and gas industry, that had been devastated and savaged by the Liberal Government. We are trying to resurrect that in the interest not only of western Canada but of all Canadians, because of a dollar spent in western Canada in investment, 50 cents approximately thereof find their way back to the rest of the country in terms of job creation.

It is vital that the energy-based industries in western Canada and off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador be given an opportunity to become the engines of growth, of job creation, that we know they can. After four years of having been crippled by a Government in Ottawa, we are now getting that industry back to the point where it will bring new prosperity to the West and to all Canada, and I know my hon. friend would want to support us on that.

IMPACT ON FAMILIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I repeat to the Prime Minister we are not talking about normal profits, we are talking about windfall profits. It is quite clear that the Government has no intention of getting the oil companies to pay their fair share.

I want to ask him one other question that he did not deal with yesterday. He did say in reply to a question from the Leader of the Opposition a few minutes ago that the only aspect of the Budget that was unfair was the proposal as it affected pensioners. Does he regard a Budget that, over five years, will result in a net reduction in taxes in excess of $4,000 for a family earning over $200,000 on the one hand, but increases taxes by over $600 for a family earning $15,000 a year, as being fair and, if he does not, when he comes back in September will he change that as well?

● (1130)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, again I say with respect that I think we have all learned to listen carefully to my hon. friend, but when he deals with mathematics or job creation, most people tune out. The numbers the Hon. Member put forward in November and December have turned out to be absolutely false. Job creation is at a record high, because the Hon. Member was wrong and the Government happened to be right.

THE BUDGET

TRANSPORT DEPARTMENT'S ANALYSIS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister of Transport before he leaves the sinking ship and goes off to greener pastures in Alberta. The Prime Minister has indicated that the Budget will have a wonderful job-creation impact, yet a report prepared by the Minister's own Department, the Economic Analysis Section of the Policy Co-ordination Unit, has said that the federal Budget of May 23 is assessed by the Economic Analysis Unit as having the potential to slow down economic growth and will provide little stimulus to transportation activities. Further, it says that there is an expected loss in 1986 of 20,000 to 50,000 jobs.

Does the Minister of Transport agree with the assessment that was prepared by his own economic forecasters? Has he shared this assessment with the Minister of Finance? Does he stand by the figures prepared by his own Department which predict that the Budget will, in fact, have the effect of a direct job loss for Canadians, contrary to what the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister have been saying?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the Hon. Member would fail to acknowledge the fact that there have been 271,000 new jobs created since this Government took office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: That fact is contrary to the speculation that was made by the Hon. Member, by the leader of his Party, and indeed by the Leader of the New Democratic Party. I suggest that the comments he is trying to read into the record are of a similar nature.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I find it curious that the Minister of Transport is now denying the forecasts made by officials of his own Department. This is not speculation, it is hard figures and forecasts made by senior officials of his Department who go on to say that, in fact, there will be a major—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think the Hon. Member is embarking on a preamble. Could he please ask a question?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I will ask the Minister of Transport directly once again if he has conveyed the results of this economic report, prepared by his Department, to the Minister of Finance, and if he will take some action in his own Department to restore the kind of stimulus his own Department says is needed if the transportation industry is not to be hurt over the next four years.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I know that when the Hon. Member was Minister of Transport he chose to ignore the advice of his Department on a number of occasions. He had his own views on certain aspects of transportation policy contrary to the views of his own departmental officials. I have not seen the document to which he is referring, so I am not sure what it is. However, assuming that it is a Transport Canada document, I would say to the Hon. Member that there may be different points of view, as has been acknowledged by the Hon. Member himself.

INQUIRY WHY CHILD BENEFIT PROGRAMS NOT IMPROVED

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I was delighted to hear this morning that he and his party have decided to listen to people. He should have done that before the Budget was brought down. It would have made matters a lot easier.

Mr. Prime Minister, this morning during the press conference, you admitted that the Budget had infringed the principles of equity and justice with respect to the elderly. Could the Prime Minister inform the House why the Governemnt is not changing budgetary measures concerning family allowance and child tax exemptions? Do you not think the Budget has also infringed the principles of equity and justice with respect to Canadian families with children?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, a careful examination of political history would show that the one and only time the elderly in Canada suffered cutbacks in benefits was when the Liberal Government cut those benefits in 1982. This, among other things, was in fact admitted by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, who is on the record as saying in Hansard: Yes, we did proceed with de-indexation of senior citizens' pensions. That is what the Hon. Member . . . He may be trying to impress his "co-leader" here today, but that is what he said.

Instead of refusing, we had the option of listening to the elderly and that is what we did. We listened to senior citizens, and unlike the Liberals, we took action to correct the situation.

REQUEST FOR CHANGES TO BUDGET

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker, the kind of charade the Prime Minister indulges in . . . he did the same thing after the Budget was brought down, with respect to senior citizens, and yesterday, it was the Minister of Finance who looked foolish. Could the Prime Minister be sincere, for once? Will you admit that in your Budget, you are making the same mistake with your policies for families with children as you did with senior citizens? Are you going to wait until families with children come and demonstrate on Parliament Hill to make changes in your Budget? Do you intend to change these measures as soon as possible?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asked that question of me yesterday. At that time I gave him figures that showed very clearly that the least well off in the country will see their payments under the child benefit program increase quite substantially because of the increase in the child tax credit. He knows that very well, but he is persisting in putting out the wrong impression because he knows he cannot justify his figures after seeing the absolute figures. The increases in the child tax credit over the next five years will be very significant.

THE ADMINISTRATION

APPOINTMENTS WITH MINISTERS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Will the Prime Minister confirm that the consulting firm run by Moores and Doucet has set up, for substantial fees, meetings for their clients with members of the Conservative Cabinet other than the Minister of Fisheries?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have no knowledge of what private companies do. I gave the indication yesterday of my view, which is that any such activity would be inappropriate and unacceptable. I have no knowledge that it has ever taken place, nor has the Hon. Member. In fact I think I can tell the Hon. Member that yesterday I was informed that the President of the Privy Council received a group of business people on behalf of a lobbyist who is a former press secretary to the Leader of the NDP.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, since there are no regulations in our country concerning lobbyists, would the Prime Minister agree that he has a responsibility to investigate thoroughly the matter of this consulting firm of his good friends Frank Moores and Gerald Doucet, and report the results of that investigation to this House? Further, would he agree that he should create a list of individuals who have been clients of that firm and who, for a substantial fee, have been given privileged access to Cabinet Ministers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no one has been given privileged access to Cabinet information of any kind or under any circumstances. I think it can be said fairly that many people of Liberal persuasion, Conservative persuasion, and NDP persuasion, earn their living in this town by representing clients in various Departments of Government and making what I understand are legitimate representations. If the Hon. Member thinks that that is an inappropriate or an illegal way for anyone to conduct himself or his business, then he ought to say it. As I understand it, the people with whom we have dealt—former prominent members of the Liberal Party, members of the NDP, and even a couple of Conservatives—have always conducted themselves very honourably in representing their clients before government agencies.

MARINE TRANSPORT

TASK FORCE REPORT

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Minister has recently received the Report of the Task Force on Deep-Sea Shipping. Its recommendations frustrate the hopes of many Canadians, including those who sail the seas, that we shall see Canadian-owned and registered merchant vessels on the high seas. Will the Minister indicate whether he plans to accept the recommendations of the task force, or does he appreciate that Canada could use its very large export trade to develop a large merchant marine if only we had the right policies?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think the task force has brought forth a number of good recommendations. I think it is realistic in view of the times. We are examining it very carefully. There are a number of proposals which can be accepted by the Government which will serve to strengthen Canada's influence and participation in the international shipping community.

TAX LEGISLATION RECOMMENDATION

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister giving any consideration to the dubious recommendation that tax legislation should be used to create Canadian-owned international shipping corporations, whose ships would remain registered elsewhere and sail with foreign crews, under the lax laws of foreign countries?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Hon. Member that we are looking very seriously at creating a climate which would be conducive for the Canadian shipping industry to grow so that it would be treated taxwise in a manner more consistent with that of the international community. Discussions are ongoing with my Cabinet colleagues, and we hope that we will be able to provide a more favourable climate in order that the very important shipping industry in Canada can flourish.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADA-ISRAEL RELATIONS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. A report on Canada's relations with countries in the Middle East and North Africa was tabled in the other place this week. My question to the Prime Minister concerns what I believe to be an unbalanced and misleading report. What effect, if any, will it have on Canada's policy toward Israel, and the search for peace in that vital area of the world?

Mr. Prud'homme: Did you read it?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis asked if I had read it. No, I have not yet had an opportunity to read it.

Mr. Prud'homme: No, not you, him.

Mr. Mulroney: I want to make it very clear that Canada's policy toward the Middle East is based on an unshakable commitment to the integrity and independence of the State of Israel. Nothing will cause the Government of Canada to waver in its long and steadfast support for Israel's security and well-being. We will continue to support credible efforts at all times with moderate and thoughtful nations in the area, to secure for the region a just and endurable peace.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

THE BUDGET

CHANGES TO FAMILY ALLOWANCES

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Since the Prime Minister stated this morning that the budget proposal to deindex senior citizens' pensions violated the principle of fairness, will the Minister agree that that applies equally to the proposed changes to family allowances?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker. I think the proposed changes to the family benefit package have been very fair, very progressive, and will result in those families who need the help the most receiving a greater amount of support as these changes are phased in over the next three or four years. The child tax credit will increase significantly during that period. I believe it will increase by approximately $140 a year. There will be some shift in the resources because of the child tax exemption which currently favours those in upper-income brackets. That will be phased back so that we can direct more support to those most in need.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST FOR REVIEW

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the very poorest will receive marginal increases, but if a family is barely above the poverty line they will lose benefits and they will face higher living costs because of the increased sales tax. Will the Minister agree to review further this matter over the summer, and try to bring back a fair proposal in the fall?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I believe the proposal is very fair, and it is widely regarded as being fair. I would ask the Hon. Member, over the course of the summer, to spend some time understanding the financial position of the Government. The reason some of these changes had to be made is because of the mess in which the Liberal Party left the Government of Canada. The previous Government had 15 years of profligate spending which started when the Leader of the Opposition was the Minister of Finance in 1974-75. At that time government spending increased by 30 per cent. That is when the problems started, and that is why we have to take these measures.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CLOTHING INDUSTRY

INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT PREPARED TO START EMERGENCY ACTION PROGRAMS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. My consultations this week with the unions and employers of the clothing industry in Montreal indicate that the Government has done nothing to support this industry in spite of the 100,000 jobs threatened by the creation of third world cottage industries.

Is the Minister willing to initiate an urgent action program to support this industry based on commitments by the major retailers to guarantee at least 60 per cent Canadian content in their clothing sales?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I would like to assure him that the Government of Canada is quite concerned with respect to the plight of the clothing and textile industries in Canada at the present time. The situation is actively under review, and I believe that we will be able to come to a position very shortly. I am very pleased that I have been able to talk to both textile representatives and to clothing and apparel representatives. If the Hon. Member would like to be more specific on how we could secure that 60 per cent portion to which he referred, naturally we would be interested in any representations which he would like to make.

LABOUR ADJUSTMENT BENEFITS PROGRAM

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the people in Montreal to whom I have spoken—employers and unionists—feel frozen out of the negotiation.

My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Labour. In view of the problems within the textile industry, will the Minister commit himself and his Department to renew the Labour Adjustment Benefits Program for textile workers, clothing workers, and footwear workers, which is due to expire in August and about which, again, the workers involved have said that there has not been consultation—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is very long.

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Hon. Member that I have met with both union and management representatives in the textile and clothing industries. As he is aware, the Labour Adjustment Benefits Program is due to be reviewed. The expiry date of that program is August 18, and the Cabinet is considering the review. In due course an announcement will be made.

PUBLIC WORKS

CANADA PLACE PROJECT IN EDMONTON

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. Six months ago Edmonton Members of Parliament recommended the Canada Place Project go ahead. The Minister's Department concurred. But to date nothing has happened. Hundreds of workers are waiting to work. Would the Minister tell the House why construction has not begun, and who is holding up the project?

[Translation]

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I believe that we have done a lot in six months when we consider the importance of this project and the interest shown by Members of Parliament from the Edmonton region. If I may reassure the Hon. Member, we had anticipated to begin work during the summer, and as far as I know, there is every reason to believe that the work can begin as expected. However, in view of the scope of this project and its importance for construction workers, there are still a few details to finalize between the developer and the regional Public Works office in Edmonton. Things are going very well. Work will begin and the project will go forward, Mr. Speaker.

FISHERIES

APPOINTMENT WITH MINISTER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to return to the Prime Minister with questions about the Moores-Doucet project. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River asked a question which gave the Prime Minister the opportunity to define the legitimate role of a lobbyist. I would remind him that that is not what happened in this case. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans himself indicated that absolutely no representations were made to him by Moores-Doucet. The only thing which was done was that a meeting was set up, access to Ministers, on behalf of friends of the Prime Minister, for cash.

Does the Prime Minister hold to the view he expressed yesterday that there was nothing inappropriate, no impropriety, in that kind of activity by his friends—it's not lobbying, it is simply setting up meetings for money?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has heard quite clearly in this House and, no doubt, has also heard statements I made surrounding this situation, to the media and to Hon. Members. I repeat to my hon. friend that I said yesterday that if—and it is an "if", because the company may well have done other services for Mr. Snarby—anyone should suggest that they have to pay a fee to anyone to get an appointment with this Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, that is inappropriate and unacceptable, because we have an open door policy, and it is something which is completely unnecessary.

TIMING OF MEETING

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I ask the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, in view of that answer, whether he denies the story which is reported and well documented in The Globe and Mail, that a citizen, Mr. Snarby, tried for two months to have a meeting with the Minister unsuccessfully, and that within five days of entering into a deal with friends of the Prime Minister, for no other services which are disclosed, he had a meeting? Is the Minister contradicting that view?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I do not speak for Mr. Snarby. Mr. Snarby may have his version of what he thinks happened or what he says has happened. I have made it quite clear that if someone wants to ask Mr. Snarby what he did, they can go and ask him. What I know is that Mr. Snarby's application was in the Department and was brought to me in the usual way. In December, on the basis of what he was proposing, I turned it down. Some weeks later, on the basis of a changed proposal, I accepted it, with certain conditions.

If the Hon. Member does not want to accept that, then he must go to see Mr. Snarby and find out what Mr. Snarby says. But, I repeat, there was no need for anyone to be led to believe, nor is there any need now for anyone to think that, to get to see this Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, anyone has to pay a fee to anyone.

YOUTH

KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Katimavik has been a program much praised for its benefits to thousands of Canadian youths. Nevertheless, expenditures this year have been cut from $50 million to $19 million. Open House Canada is another program which benefits Canadian youth. Can the Deputy Prime Minister assure the House that his ministerial task force has not been the author of further cuts to Katimavik, and that Open House Canada is not at risk as well?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to tell the hon. gentleman that the Katimavik Program is continuing along quite nicely and doing the job which is expected of it.

FUTURE OF PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, will the Deputy Prime Minister assure the House that his committee will not have been the author of the cancellation of Katimavik at the end of IYY?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the Hon. Member that the programs for youth he has mentioned have taken this morning, I should say, a very dramatic and positive step forward. This morning the Government announced its job strategy in which there is one program, Job Entry, which is specifically designed for young people and which will involve some $350 million this year. It is for young people—hundreds of thousands of young people—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: —who are going to be able to go from school, or those who have dropped out of school, and be assisted to go into the work force with training which will lead to permanent long-term jobs—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Given the question, I think that is a slightly long answer.

REFUGEES

PLAUT REPORT—PROCEDURAL DELAYS

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Plaut report, tabled last week by the Minister, noted lengthy delays in the current refugee determination system. This causes hardship for genuine refugees but, more important, it invites unscrupulous individuals to misuse the system and prolong their stay in Canada, as was the case of which I have given the Minister notice. What steps is the Government taking to speed up the process to help the deserving, and remove those who abuse the system?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member made reference to the Plaut report and I could say on behalf of the Government that it is a very thoughtful and profound study of this very troublesome area. I have also indicated that we will be giving it priority attention. We tabled it just the other day. It is very complex.

What we had proposed in the interim was to bring into the House legislation to increase the Immigration Appeal Board so that it could meet the requirements of the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada to provide oral hearings to every one of the some thousands of persons in the backlog before the Immigration Appeal Board. Unfortunately, and I say this with profound regret, the Liberal Opposition would not allow that Bill to go through so that many people in the system will not be able to be assisted this summer through the months of July and August, and through the fall, until we can deal with the Plaut report. If people want to find out about delays, ask the Liberal Party.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

TRANSLATION OF MANITOBA LEGISLATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In 1983, the Prime Minister and his party supported a resolution of this House on the Manitoba issue to the effect that, in exchange for certain services, we would agree to translate a limited number of statutes.

Yesterday in this House, the Minister of Justice reversed his stand on this issue by saying that these services were no longer committed under a federal agreement; according to him, 1985 is not the same as 1983.

I would like to ask the Prime Minister, who is well aware of the federal expertise and the services provided in both official languages, whether he is still willing to offer such services to Manitoba in exchange for a reduced number of statutes to translate.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, what we want is to provide integral protection for the rights of the French-speaking minority in Manitoba. French-speaking Manitobans must be treated as full citizens, and this has always been the stand of the federal Government.

The Manitoba Premier has shown himself willing to open a dialogue, and I can assure you that, both as concerns the English-speaking minority in Quebec and the French-speaking minority in Manitoba and elsewhere, the federal Government is there as a friend, as a supporter, and all our resources and potential will be used to promote the cause of our French-speaking or English-speaking minorities wherever they may be.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, in that case, I wonder whether the Prime Minister could tell us why the Court Challenge Program has not been maintained, why minorities must show more patience and when the federal Government will re-establish this very essential program so that we may obtain from the federal Government the expertise, technical assistance and funds required to bring before the courts the cases which we believe must be defended?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that my friend may have misunderstood. There has been no change in the position of the federal Government. On the contrary! In view of the fact that we now have a ruling by the Supreme Court, we are willing to examine with the Manitoba authorities any action that might bring about quickly a fair and equitable settlement for Franco-Manitobans. We are willing to sit down at any time to bring justice to the French-speaking minority in Manitoba. I believe that it is a national duty for the federal Government to be open and generous with all its minorities, and this is—

[English]

Mr. Berger: A lot of hot air.

Mr. Mulroney: A Liberal Member objects to that. Such is the hypocritical position of the Liberal Party. You are opposed to French-speaking minorities. Such is the hypocrisy of the Liberal Party!

PETITIONS

ACID RAIN

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by nearly 500 people of the Cité des Jeunes Secondary School in Kapuskasing, in Northern Ontario, concerning the acid rain problem. They ask the various levels of government to work harder than ever before to solve the acid rain problem.

DEINDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by a number of my constituents who call on the Government to stop the deindexation of old age pensions. I am sure they are happy the Government has listened to their advice.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, as a further support and back-up for the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), I have the duty to present a petition from 40 old age pensioners in Regina who ask that the full indexation of old age pensions for 1986 be restored and continued.

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, on January 25 I was prepared to present this petition on behalf of my constituents from Fraser Valley East. They were concerned about possible financial hardships for pensioners. They requested that the Government reconsider its proposal. In light of the Minister of Finance's statement of yesterday, those concerns have been addressed.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I have two petitions from the riding of York West. The first one is from 25 senior citizens living in the Stanwood Road area, and the second is from 125 petitioners from the Latin American Senior Citizens's Club in my riding. They advocate retention of full indexation of old age pensions. We are certainly pleased that the Government heard the message.

[Translation]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have also a number of petitions concerning the Old Age Security pensions, including one signed by 27 people from my own riding.

I have another petition signed by 34 residents of the fine village of Hammond in the Glengarry-Prescott-Russell riding.

I have another one from Saint-Albert, signed by 16 people. I invite you, Mr. Speaker, as well as all Hon. Members to visit these beautiful villages during the Summer months.

[English]

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have two sets of petitions concerning the deindexation of old age pensions. The petitioners reside in Hamilton. I also have several from my own riding.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present what I suppose will be the final batch of signatures on petitions requesting the Government to do what it did yesterday. I take great pleasure in tabling these signatures and complimenting all senior citizens in my riding and elsewhere who helped in yesterday's victory.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in spite of the fact that deindexing was changed yesterday by the Government, I still think it is in order to present to the House a petition from residents of my riding who protest the deindexation proposal.

CHANGES TO UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): I also have a petition from the employees of the Canada Employment and Immigration Union from Manitoba and Newfoundland. They call upon the Government to reverse the changes it made to the Unemployment Insurance Act whereby severance pay would be used in calculating unemployment insurance benefits.

I have one other petition from residents of Castlegar, British Columbia, also protesting those changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

DESCHÊNES COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present to the House today a petition on behalf of the many individuals who have written to my office, sent telegrams and made numerous phone calls, in order to voice their concern over the issue of the evidence presented by the Soviet Union being considered by the Deschênes Commission of Inquiry. Their concern is with regard to the very real possibility, based on past history, that the evidence the Soviet Government is likely to produce is likely to be fabricated to serve the purpose of destroying the credibility of individuals who have been active and vocal in their criticism of the Soviet system.

• (1210)

I have a second petition from a number of Canadians from Montreal who have requested the House not to admit Soviet evidence in the Canadian courts and suggest it would be tantamount to recognizing the legitimacy of the Soviet legal system which has imprisoned thousands of human rights activists on manufactured evidence.

I have a third petition which is also from Montreal, Mr. Speaker. The petitioners ask the commission to expand its mandate to include Soviet war criminals who perpetrated atrocities during World War II.

DEINDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, as the co-chair person for the Task Force on Pensions, I have the honour to present petitions on behalf of Canadians across Canada. They come from Newfoundland, Grand Prairie, Alberta, and from Prince George. These petitions contain 200 signatures from Operation Solidarity representing unions across British Columbia. There are over 2,000 signatures from my riding of Vancouver East in addition to others submitted earlier. There are over 1,000 signatures from many municipalities in the Lower Mainland and the islands of British Columbia. I congratulate them all.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present seven petitions from throughout the Algoma constituency from people protesting the cut-backs in old age pensions. Their efforts have obviously been very instrumental in the change in the government policy. Those petitions come from Manitoulin Island, the north shore communities of Lake Huron, Blind River, Central Algoma, communities of Elliot Lake, Sault Ste. Marie and area, and Espanola and area.

As well, I have a petition with several dozen names from Medicine Hat, Brooks, and other communities in southern Alberta also protesting the cut-back in old age pensions. Obviously these petitions were very instrumental in changing the Government's position.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty today to present a series of petitions which support the decision of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to reinstate indexing to OAS. These petitions come from the constituency of Prince Albert, Mackenzie, and The Battlefords-Meadow Lake.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-246, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act (leave of absence).

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the Hon. Member shall have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, the reason for the introduction of this Bill is to allow any individual elected to the House of Commons to have a leave of absence from employment. That leave of absence would continue for as long as the individual continues to be re-elected to the House of Commons.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-249, an Act to amend the Canada Pension Plan (survivor's pension).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have the leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to correct a provision in the Canada Pension Plan Act which I think is highly discriminatory. It relates to age discrimination. The provision requires that the spouse of a person who is receiving the Canada Pension and dies must have reached the age of 35 before being able to collect the survivor's benefits. I want that age stipulation to be removed from the Bill in order that the spouse receive the death benefit irrespective of age.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

LOBBY REGISTRATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-248, an Act to register lobbyists.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, this Bill flows naturally from the recommendations of the Special Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons. The Bill provides for the registration of lobbyists and a declaration by them stating in whose interests they are working. It also imposes a fine and a disqualification from lobbying for those convicted of evading the provisions of this Bill.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND NATIONAL DEFENCE—CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the Parties with respect to three particular matters. I will deal with them seriatum. I think you will find that there is unanimous consent of the House to receive a motion at this time and to accept it unanimously at this time without debate.

The first motion is with respect to the Committee on External Affairs and National Defence. It is: that the third report of the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence, tabled on Thursday, June 27, 1985, be concurred in.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) to put on the record of the House what the motion refers to. Does it refer to the interests of the committee in travelling to France?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Yes.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I want the Government House Leader to confirm that there is some shortening of the period involved for the travel such that it would involve only five sitting days of the House. Was the motion put in those terms? I did not think the original motion was in those terms.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the House Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Gray), is correct. The motion does not provide for the understanding that has been arrived at among the Parties. I will confirm now that, notwithstanding the report of the committee, the duration of the visit will not exceed five sitting days. This is the only method in which we can proceed at this point in time, the report having been tabled. As suggested, there was a clear and firm understanding among the Parties. That is quite satisfactory to us. We will allow the committee to travel to France at the request and invitation of its counterpart in France. It will arrange its affairs in order to deal with the business which must be dealt with while ensuring that its members are not away for more than five days. However, it may extend over a weekend. In that way they will be able to accommodate their agenda.

Mr. Speaker: Does the President of the Privy Council have unanimous consent to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Shall the motion carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

MULTICULTURALISM—ORDER OF REFERENCE OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): The next motion relates to the new standing committee. I think you will find unanimous consent to receive this motion and it will pass without debate. It is an amendment to the Standing Orders related to the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism:

That Standing Order 69(1) be amended by adding the following new sub-section:

"(u) Multiculturalism"

PERMANENT ORDER OF REFERENCE

That the permanent order of reference for the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism be as follows:

That the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism be empowered to encourage and monitor the implementation of the principles of the federal multiculturalism policy throughout the Government of Canada, and in particular,

(1) to encourage the departments and agencies of the federal government to reflect the multicultural/multiracial diversity of the nation; and

(2) to examine existing and new programs and policies of federal departments and agencies to encourage sensitivity to multicultural concerns and to preserve and enhance the multicultural/multiracial reality of our nation; and

That the Committee be authorized to select and initiate subjects for investigation within their jurisdiction and to prepare background papers, reports and research in this regard.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I just want to put on the record that we certainly agree to this motion to set up the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism. We will be very interested in participating actively in the committee. Our critic on multiculturalism, the Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), had spoken on our behalf in actively seeking the establishment of such a committee. Therefore, we are pleased to give unanimous consent at this time.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the New Democratic Party, I concur. While the negotiations were difficult at times, we will accept this committee as proposed.

Motion agreed to.

JUSTICE AND LEGAL AFFAIRS—EXTENSION OF REPORTING DEADLINE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have a motion with respect to the subcommittee on Equality Rights of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs which has also been the subject of consultation. I believe that you will find that this motion will also be received and passed unanimously without debate. It is as follows:

That pursuant to the Committee's order of reference dated Tuesday, February 26, 1985, the deadline for submitting the final report of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs be extended to October 15, 1985.

Motion agreed to.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND NATIONAL DEFENCE—AUTHORIZATION TO TRAVEL FOR STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have another motion specifically to empower the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence to travel to France. Of course, the undertaking and understanding would apply to this motion. It reads:

That the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence be empowered to travel to France during the month of September, 1985.

Motion agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

MOTION TO ADJOURN

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, you will be aware of the fact that an arrangement was entered into with respect to the business of the House. We had obtained our legislative objective yesterday evening. Indeed, this morning at approximately 1.30 a.m., Royal Assent was given to the Bills that we had dealt with. The understanding has been that the House would adjourn after Routine Proceedings today.

Before moving the appropriate motion, I want to extend to you, on behalf of all Members of the House of Commons, our thanks for your patience and diligence in pursuit of your responsibilities.

Also, as is the custom of the House when we adjourn for a recess, I want to extend our particular thanks to the officials at the Table and to all employees of the House of Commons who serve us so well and very often do not receive sufficient and appropriate praise that they really deserve.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I also want to join in the glowing praise for all the pages who are gathered here now, ready to bolt through the door and flee the Hill. Summer vacation is here and the pages will be leaving this place. There is a sense of regret to see them leave because they have been exemplary and very diligent in performing their duties. They all deserve our heartfelt praise because they are an outstanding group. We wish them the very best in the future and look forward to seeing some of them back here, sitting in this chair or the one next to me.

Some Hon Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I was interested to hear the Government House Leader say that he was willing to move a motion to adjourn the House forthwith because the Government had achieved its legislative objectives. I just want the record to show that the Bill amending the Immigration Appeal Board referred to by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) during Question Period clearly was not one of them, therefore her remarks about the Liberals preventing the Bill from going forward were quite unwarranted. Also, groups working with the immigrant community have said that her Bill is deeply flawed.

Having said that, I want to associate myself with the Government House Leader in extending our thanks to the personnel of the House for their help and support. I also want to extend personal thanks to you, Mr. Speaker, for your efforts often in very difficult times. I want to extend particular thanks to the pages and wish them well for the future.

I want to say, as our Leader said in his first question, we hope that the summer will assist in the development of further wisdom and, in this case, I hope particularly it will be so for the Government because of its responsibilities. I repeat that I associate myself with the good wishes to all concerned and I hope we will do well over the next few months, come back here refreshed and ready to do our best for the people of this country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I too want to associate myself with the remarks made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) in extending our best wishes to the pages, except for the fact that they ate all of the sandwiches yesterday. You know what it's like trying to fill the hollow legs of young people! We will have to make bigger lunches next time.

On behalf of our Party, I also want to extend my compliments and thanks to the Chair and those at the Table. We know that nobody is perfect, but the Chair and those at the Table did very well—except in two instances of bad rulings on my amendments. In any event, we can argue about that this fall.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, that being said, I move:

That the House do now adjourn.

Mr. Speaker: Before I put the motion, may I simply wish everyone a happy summer. I think everyone here has earned it, particularly all our families who are looking forward to repairing relationships that often get battered in this life.

May I also thank all Members for their comments on behalf of the excellent work that is done by our Table Officers and officials of the House.

May I say one or two special words about some of the unsung heroes. None of you know what it is like to try to interpret a statement made under Standing Order 21 that goes at 250 words a minute. There was an article published about it recently, and I think I am going to say, therefore, a special word of praise to our interpreters who have an enormously difficult task.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: To our security staff, our broadcasting staff—way up there—very special warm words. These are the people who help us—and the bus boys, says the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), our warmth and affection.

Finally, as you would expect, the Speaker has a special place in his or her heart for all the young men and women in black and white. It is a custom that I am honoured to continue to wish all our pages a happy summer and, a marvellous future. They have served us better than they know and maybe in some ways better than we deserve.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn) agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The House, therefore stands adjourned.

The House adjourned at 12.31 p.m.
