HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

FIRST SESSION—THIRTY-THIRD PARLIAMENT

34 Elizabeth II

VOLUME IV, 1985

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF MAY, 1985
TO THE TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY OF JUNE, 1985

INDEX ISSUED IN A SEPARATE VOLUME

Published under authority of the Speaker of the House of Commons by the Queen's Printer for Canada

Available from Canadian Government Publishing Centre, Supply and Services Canada, Ottawa, Canada K1A 0S9.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, May 13, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—CANADIAN WOMEN

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam) moved:

That this House, recognizing the continuing economic inequality of Canadian Women, demands that the government incorporate into its forthcoming budget the following initiatives, the:

1. reform of the tax system rather than the introduction of further public spending cuts which impact most adversely on women;

2. provision of job creation and training programs targeted to women, and funding sufficient to enable the Canadian Human Rights Commission to enforce equal pay for work of equal value legislation, and develop an effective enforcement mechanism for affirmative action programs;

3. provision of more transition houses and services for women and children who are victims of family violence; and

4. provision of increased funding to ensure access to quality daycare to meet the urgent needs of Canadian parents and children.

She said: Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that we should have this motion today because, quite coincidentally, today is the day of the annual general meeting of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. Indeed, we in the New Democratic Party have just come from our meeting with representatives of the National Action Committee.

As Members of the House know, this is a voluntary umbrella organization of 370 women's groups representing over 3 million Canadian women. Their particular concern this year is the continuing economic inequality of women. Indeed, their weekend debates, although covering a number of subjects, did centre on this issue. They called their meeting a Canadian women's economic summit.

• (1110)

One would have hoped that after the Leaders' debates on women's issues, and above all on women's inequality, which were held last summer and after the commitment then made by the Progressive Conservative Party which now forms the Government to taking strong initiatives in removing the economic inequality of women and indeed all the other inequalities that women continue to face in Canadian society, we would have seen more action taken than has been taken. The Government can, however, redeem itself in the forthcoming Budget and indeed it is in the context of the forthcoming Budget that this motion was moved.

Dealing with the specific area of economic inequality, we can look at job creation, job training and job security. In each of those three areas, we see that the Government has not in fact lived up to its promise of giving equal access to women. Dealing with job creation, for example, the Government has allowed for expenditures of $2.2 billion, only 5 per cent of which is targeted toward helping women and in fact toward helping women and youth. That is only $125 million out of $2.2 billion targeted to women and youth.

Regarding the Challenge '85 summer employment program for students, there is no affirmative action requirement that approximately half of that program's funds should go toward job creation for women students. Indeed, when my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), questioned the Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) on March 5 of this year regarding why a specific affirmative action plan for women was not embodied in the summer employment program, the Minister of State for Youth replied by saying the following:

—when we were working on "Challenge '85", that there was no need for a quota, that women, young Canadian women would themselves seek their due and take the necessary step to obtain their full share of available summer employment.

That is a revelation on the part of the Minister, and indeed on the part of the Government as I expect she does speak for the Government, indicating that there are no barriers to women seeking employment in either the Challenge '85 program or elsewhere and indicating that women started at the same starting gate as men. I had thought that the outcome of the Leaders' debate and other activities which took place last year would have told the Conservative Government that there is not equal opportunity for women and that women do not start at the same starting gate but start well behind. We have documented that time and time again. If, as the Minister was suggesting we do, we simply let nature take its course, women will not have anything like the same number of jobs from any job-creation program. In other words, there has to be affirmative action to ensure that they will be fairly and equally represented in job-creation programs.

The area of job training is the second area in my initial triad of areas of job creation, job training and job security. The Government did in fact end very arbitrarily the program called "Women Into Non-traditional Occupations". Perhaps it was not a very effective program but it was the beginning of the encouragement of women through apprenticeships in non-traditional occupations, and that program was cut last December. Is there going to be anything in the Budget which will once again take that kind of affirmative action to enable women to get into non-traditional occupations? Or is the Government once again simply going to leave it to the market-place and to the employer, which have traditionally given and continue today to give men the advantage?

• (1115)

We have recommended that 50 per cent of all federal training places should be allocated to women. The House will recall that we also advocated that 42 per cent of job-creation funds should go to women, as women constitute 42 per cent of the labour force. As well, we advocate that 50 per cent of training programs and retraining programs should be allocated to women, because women constitute one-half of the population. The Government has done nothing to provide that kind of affirmative action for women in job training and retraining programs. Indeed, as I stated previously, the Government has cancelled the one program which existed. Therefore, we call upon the Government, in the coming Budget, to rectify the past and to consider job training and retraining for women in a serious and affirmative way.

The third matter with which I would like to deal is job security. Job security is incredibly relevant today. What is happening—and Air Canada, a Crown corporation, is an example of it—is that employers are cutting back on full-time jobs and the security which goes with those full-time jobs. That is what the CALEA strike is about. In that case a Crown corporation, Air Canada, is attempting to have more of its employees work on a part-time basis or on contract. That will only lead to lower wages, no benefits and, of course, no security.

Why is this particularly important for women? Because women constitute 72 per cent of the part-time workforce. Almost three-quarters of Canadian part-time workers are women. Women will be pushed in increasing numbers into part-time work if the present trend continues. Of course, this is happening in the private sector as well and the Government has shown no interest in taking the initiative which it could to reverse the trend.

In relation to job creation, training and security for women is the whole concept of affirmative action. We had thought, given the statements which were made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last summer, that very strong federal action would have been taken to ensure the hiring and promotion of women to make up for the past disadvantages which women have suffered. I will concede that the Government has done one thing as a result of the Abella report. It has suggested to the private sector that those companies doing business of more than $200,000 a year with the Government establish a plan of action for the hiring and promotion of women. I agree that this is a first step, but they are given three years to work it out and there is no way yet provided by the Government to ensure that they will in fact work out a plan of affirmative action. There are no sanctions upon the companies if they do not work out a plan and no enforcement requiring them to do so. The Government is really basing its policy on blind trust and good luck, as my colleague stated. There must be an enforcement mechanism and this is what we in the New Democratic Party have advocated. We hope that in the Budget itself the Government will recognize not only the principle of affirmative action but some of the costs in financial terms associated with it, and all of the reasons why only affirmative action will ensure women's equality in the work-place.

• (1120)

Equal pay for work of equal value is another concept which has been with us now for almost ten years or more. Again, much was said about it in the election compaign by the Conservatives and, indeed, by all Parties. Here again one small step has been taken, namely, that new guidelines have been established by the Human Rights Commission for enforcing equal pay for work of equal value. However, the onus is still on those who are not getting equal pay for work of equal value to raise cases. It does seem incredible that federal employees have to be the ones to take the initiative to get the federal Government to do something which the governing Party promised it would do on its own. And that remains the case. Employees must take action against their employer. There is no change there.

There is one step which might actually be retrogressive which seems to suggest, under the guidelines of the Human Rights Commission, that the rights of the individual to complain may be removed and only group rights will be recognized. I hope that the Government will take a very serious look at that implication, if that is in fact what is implied.

What is also needed, Mr. Speaker, is adequate funding for the Canadian Human Rights Commission, which is why we have also included this in our motion. If it is going to be the enforcement agency for the provision of equal pay for work of equal value, it has to have sufficient funds, staff and resources to do the job.

There are other areas where the Government could have taken, and could still take in the Budget, steps which would remove some of the inequalities which women face. In small business, for example, everyone recognizes that women have proved to be in many instances successful entrepreneurs. It used to be one in ten successful small business entrepreneurs were women. It is now one in three. So more women are now becoming successful entrepreneurs, and we applaud and commend that development. Many women in small business do not have access to credit on the same grounds as do men. There is a discrimination against women, which has been well documented, in the provision of credit. Women are still seen as not being quite legitimate in the business world.

• (1125)

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) let the cat out of the bag on March 4 when he was asked by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus), why the Government did not include in the Small Businesses Loans Act a concentration on women and particularly their inaccessibility to credit. The Minister of Finance replied, as reported at page 2691 of Hansard:

Mr. Speaker, unlike the Hon. Member's Party, we have great faith in the ability of women to get credit.

That answer, Mr. Speaker, comparable to the one of the Minister of State for Youth and of other Ministers, simply ignores the realities before us.

We have also suggested that the spending cuts which we see, both provincially and federally, impact most adversely on women. If in the Budget the Government taxes more heavily the middle-income groups, denies universality to all, makes no serious efforts to improve the housing situation, does not raise the Guaranteed Income Supplement, and does not provide for genuinely universal health care, women are going to suffer the most. Already 62 per cent of single elderly women are living below the poverty line. It used to be that 42 per cent of families headed by women were living below the poverty line, but in 1983-84 that number increased to 50 per cent.

Is the Government going to address this most serious situation in our society in the forthcoming Budget? Will it also address child care, family violence, and the increased concerns of women's centres? Will it bring about at least some first steps toward the genuine equality of women in the Budget?

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on the remarks made by the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett). While appreciating the fact that the Hon. Member's heart is in the right place, I have always wondered about the element of ambiguity in her approach to the problem of women's economic inequality. Since it is because of their dependence that many women are living in poverty, I cannot understand why the Hon. Member keeps promoting programs, suggestions, principles and a philosophy that tend to increase women's dependence on the State and to maintain them in their traditional status of second class citizens. It is because increasingly, women of my generation and especially, I believe, women in Quebec, are refusing to accept this dependence that people keep wanting to force on us that I decided to run as a candidate for the Progressive Conservative Party, a party that, first of all, respects the value of the individual. I could be, above all, an individual first, and a citizen on equal terms with every one. Second, my party recognized the fact that inequality is above all an economic matter, and a situation that arises from the attitudes of people in society towards minorities, whether these are large minorities, like women, or smaller minorities on the basis of race or creed or colour. Women experience the same unequal treatment suffered by members of these groups. And that is why, Mr. Speaker, I cannot agree when I hear the Hon. Member suggest that women should again start living in ghettos, the ghettos of quotas, for instance, or the ghettos where someone else is going to decide what their priorities should be. I refuse to accept this, and that is why I fail to understand why a woman, who has worked actively all her life to achieve equality for both men and women, keeps coming back with sugestions that would achieve the opposite of what women need.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I also would like to comment on the fact that the Hon. Member said the Government did not keep its promises. I may refer, for instance, to the amendment to the Indian Act, where native women are given equal rights with native men. There is also the spouse's allowance which has been extended, despite the fact that our economy is in such a deplorable state that it was not possible to do as much as we wanted but in any event, we did it right away. I would also like to mention the amendments to the legislation on prostitution.

I would also like to ask the Hon. Member whether she would agree that the presence of a number of women in Government, in the Cabinet, where six women hold major portfolios, and I am thinking of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney), the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald), the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall), a first in our history, and also the representation of women in the House of Commons—I wonder whether the Hon. Member would not agree that this active representation by women in Government will accomplish far more for women than constantly wanting to put them in ghettos, asking for quotas and insisting on giving them more money and thus increasing their dependence on the State. If some day they manage to work their way out of constantly depending on men, whether these are husbands, fathers, cousins or brothers, the Hon. Member wants to make them dependent on the State. I therefore would like to ask the Hon. Member how she can reconcile these two considerations?

• (1130)

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I have a very brief response. The Hon. Member has not yet realized that the inequality of women puts women in an enormously dependent position. The absence of daycare puts a woman in a dependent position. The absence of maternity leave in many instances puts her in a dependent position. The fact that 62 per cent of elderly women live in a state of poverty puts them in a dependent position.

The whole point of our motion and the purpose of our Party is to ensure that women are not in a dependent position. I must suggest to the Hon. Member that she and the other five women members of the Cabinet, if they are not there already, go over to Room 200 in the West Block to listen to the presentation being made by the National Action Committee on the Status of Women that is addressing the very issues that the Hon. Member raises.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments. The Hon. the Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State.

Mrs. Landry: Among other things, our colleague from New Westminster-Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) expressed concern about training for women. I would suggest that, at Regina, our Government did set forth a policy, a labour market development strategy was unveiled and it included training programs targetted to women. The new training programs feature special measures and objectives for women, and we are preparing a professional program designed for women who return to the labour market. Targets have been set for the participation of women in programs geared to labour shortages. That is the only remark I wanted to direct to my colleague, just so she would realize that the Government is very concerned about and actively dealing with training for women.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I was just pointing out that it falls so short of what is needed that it is merely a drop in the bucket. Women will still be extremely unequal when it comes to securing job training and retraining spaces.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in this debate on the status of women. I am almost tempted to thank my colleague from New Westminster-Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) for giving the Government an opportunity to show to the House and to all Canadian men and women the active steps we have taken since September 4.

Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State (Mr. McLean) and Minister responsible for the status of women is now with the National Action Committee on the Status of Women which, as my colleague explained, brings together 300 different associations representing about three million women. Mr. Speaker, it shows that our Government and the Minister do care about women's interests and that consultation remains a priority.

Mr. Speaker, the Government acknowledges that there is more than ample proof that concrete measures must be taken to eradicate the social and economic disparities suffered by Canadian women. A number of recent studies have shed light on the injustices they suffer in practically all sectors of society. Indeed, in a report made public recently concerning a statistical picture of women in Canada, Statistics Canada came up with dismaying figures on the status of Canadian women since 1970. If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote some of those findings:

> In annual terms, female university graduates earn only $1,600 more than men with secondary education and only $4,000 more than men with less that Grade 9 education. More families than ever depend on a woman's income to make ends meet. Yet women on the labour market continue to be almost exclusively responsible for looking after the children and keeping house. In 1981, roughly 10 per cent of all Canadian households were headed by women, but their average income was 50 per cent lower than those headed by men. Close to half the families whose breadwinner is a woman live below the poverty line.

The report confirms once again that most working women hold low-paid jobs in service industries and office work and that the majority of them work part time, unlike men who earn their living in manufacturing industries and the secondary sector where employment growth is strongest. As a country, we can no longer afford to live in a society where half of the population contributes only part of its potential. We must compensate for all these years during which women were underemployed by embarking on a strategy of women capability development.

• (1140)

Mr. Speaker, that is a responsibility which the federal government assumes very seriously, as it clearly indicated in its Speech from the Throne of last November. As a matter of fact, we have taken concrete measures in this respect. We feel, however, that we could not bring about a profound change within our society without the full cooperation of all our economic partners. With this objective in mind, the government has already started with the provinces and the private sector a series of consultations aimed at initiating the economic recovery which our country needs so badly and reviving the confidence of all Canadians in our system of government.

One of the major objectives of these consultations is to make sure that the recovery benefits all. To this end, we have seen to it that women concerns are fully integrated in the consultative process. As a matter of fact, these concerns were a major item on the agenda of the First Ministers' Conference which was held last February in Regina. A federal-provincial-territorial meeting of the ministers responsible for the status of women had taken place a little earlier to prepare the First Ministers' Conference and determine the issues to be addressed in Regina. The Prime Minister could not have made his stand clearer when he stated in Regina that equity was part and parcel of the economic recovery. I might add that giving women their fair share is not only a matter of justice, but also of economic efficiency.

The federal government did not fail either to put the issues of concern to women on the agenda of the National Economic Conference which took place recently in Ottawa. We were anxious to have women participate as full partners in these important economic discussions with business, union and government representatives. We believe that the integration of women issues to every aspect of policy development is a valuable approach which is already being implemented throughout the government.

I should like to provide a few examples of the way in which this consultation and integration process has brought about legislative changes favourable to women since this government assumed power. Under recently proposed amendments to the Old Age Security Act, all needy widows and widowers who meet the eligibility requirements will be entitled to the spouse's allowance no matter how old their spouses were when they died. Some 85,000 widows and widowers, most of them women, will benefit from this legislation. Under proposed amendments to the Indian Act, discrimination based on sex will be banned from now on. Until now, an Indian woman who married a non-Indian man would lose her status as an Indian and her right to band memberships. Some 16,000 Indian women have lost their status so far because of this century-old legislation.

Thanks to the adoption of a new legislation, the spouses of deceased veterans, most of them women, will be entitled from now on to an extension of the veterans' disability pensions for one year following the death of their spouses. Previously, payment of the disability pension ceased at the end of the month during which the pensioner's death occurred, thus reducing the surviving spouse's income in a very difficult period.

Canadian mothers who are entitled to day-care allowances under training programs funded by the federal government will see these allowances increased. These changes reflect the importance which the government attaches to the program aimed at facilitating the promotion of women to senior positions. Under amendments to the Labour Code, parents employed in industries under federal jurisdiction will be able to extend their paid maternity leave by as many as 24 weeks of unpaid leave.

Mr. Speaker, the Government's response to the Abella Report should not be ignored. That report, entitled "Equality in Employment", was tabled in the House of Commons last November. It contains the findings of an inquiry on the most efficient and fairest ways of promoting equal opportunities in employment. In her report, Justice Abella provided a penetrating analysis of the unique situation confronting too many women. This Government has responded very quickly to that report. In order to eliminate the systemic discrimination too often faced by women in our society, the Government has decided to require from Crown corporations, federal agencies and suppliers of goods and services to the Federal Government that they have equitable employment practices. To that end, Crown corporations and federal agencies having more than 100 employees shall have to report annually to Parliament on their plans for and progress in equality in employment.

With respect to those firms anxious to get $200,000 government contracts, they will have to adopt equitable employment practices or lose their right to bid for such contracts.

Furthermore, as an employer, the Government will not dodge its responsibilities. Indeed we intend to intensify the implementation of the positive action program. Immediate steps are taken to eliminate the systemic obstacles to employment equality that exist in the Public Service classification methods. That is the gist of this Government's response to the Abella report.

Along the same line, Mr. Speaker, the Government has announced its intention to give women easier access to the labour force while at the same time recognizing their family obligations. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) has recently introduced an amendment to the Divorce Act which would among other things strengthen the statutory provisions concerning alimony.

Among the proposed changes, a new mechanism would allow federal and provincial data banks to trace spouses who default on alimony payments. Finally, I would point out that those changes will give the courts authority to garnishee pensions and unemployment insurance benefits wherever the beneficiary defaults on his or her obligations.

In the Throne Speech, the Government undertook to increase its efforts to broaden unemployment opportunities for women within federal agencies, commissions and boards. By ensuring that qualified women have access to jobs involving responsibility and prestige in employment groups that often are non-traditional, the government is setting up an example for business and industry.

I am happy to point out that over the past six months, 23 per cent of all appointees to federal agencies, commissions and boards were women. We are rapidly approaching the 30 per cent goal that was set for the first year of our mandate. Among recent appointments, allow me to mention that of Sylvia Gold as head of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women. This appointment has been warmly welcomed by women groups from all across Canada, and it also reasserts the Canadian Government's commitment to have this organization turned into a strong and independant body which would not fear on occasion to question Government action in matters relating to the status of women.

Let me recall some of the means with which the Government intends to promote the economic and social equality of women: consulting with women groups; integrating women issues into the Government's decision process; appointing women to federal commissions and boards and important positions in the Public Service; enacting statutes to abolish discrimination against women and to enhance their economic and social status; and finally strengthening the role of the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

However, the Federal Government cannot reach its goals in that area without the help and co-operation of the Provinces. Indeed, many sectors of particular interest for women such as education and health come under provincial jurisdiction. The nature and importance of measures to improve the condition of women are not identical in all provinces. It would be impossible to mention the numerous provincial initiatives dealing with the status of women, let alone enumerate the many issues provinces have been unable to deal with up to now.

• (1150)

In order to assist provincial governments ensure equal opportunities for women, the Secretary of State will hold regular meetings with provincial ministers responsible for the status for women. More formally, task groups made up of federal and provincial representatives have been set up to make sure that both levels of government assume their responsibilities with regard to some problems such as battered women and child care.

It is clear that in any speech on the socio-economic equality for women, one cannot overemphasize the importance of federal-provincial interaction. Having said that, the international aspect of the problem should not be overlooked either. The United Nations decade for the promotion of women will be ending this year, 10 years during which Canada has spared no trouble to improve the condition of women within the framework of the United Nations. The decade will reach its climax in July at the United Nations World Conference on Women to be held in Nairobi, Kenya. My government is actively taking part in the planning of that conference which is aimed at reviewing and assessing the progress made and the problems met during the decade and drawing up strategies for the year 2000. The priority of Canada in Nairobi will be to try and achieve positive results by promoting the integration of women's issues in the national and international decision-making process. While the danger of a politicization attempt of the conference is real, we will try to prevent any obvious attempt in that direction. In spite of those difficult circumstances, you can be assured that the vitality and power of the feminist movement throughout the world will be felt this summer in Nairobi. In addition to the official intergovernmental conference, there will be a meeting of non governmental organizations (Forum 85) held in July. Canada knows that the United Nations decade for the promotion of women has been a quite successful period for non governmental organizations, because their concerns became the priority of many national governments and international organizations. We all took advantage of the new spirit of co-operation. Indeed, the government firmly intends to carry on that co-operation so that all our efforts towards social and economic equality for women will materialize.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Outremont.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I was very glad to hear my colleague say that Canada has made every effort in the last ten years to promote women's equality. To say so is to recognize that the Liberal Party has definitely done something, indeed a great deal for the women of this country.

Naturally, the Hon. Member also said that since the election of the Progressive Conservative Government, maternity leave has been extended by 28 weeks. While I commend the Progressive Conservative Party for having extended maternity leave, I would like to ask the Hon. Member what the Conservative Government intends to do about day-care centres. I know that Mrs. Katy Cook was chairman of a task force on day care. The Minister has the report of this task force in her possession for many months and I would like to know what her Government intends to do about day-care centres since no mention has been made of this matter as yet.

Mrs. Landry: I thank my colleague for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) on her very relevant question.

In my opinion, access to quality services is essential to ensure the economic security of women and our Government is well aware of it. As the Hon. Member said herself, the Cook report should be tabled soon, and following this report, our Government intends to create a task force to complete the study on day care, and we shall certainly have a recommendation to make in this regard in the very near future. The Hon. Member can be assured that our Government is very sensitive to the fact that women must have such security to go back to work, as this is certainly her concern.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, today is lobbying day for the NAC women's groups. One of the priorities at this time is definitely the day-care system. I have nothing against the fact that the Conservative Government will set up a task force on day care following the report just mentioned. However, in my opinion, before setting up such a task force, it would be very interesting to see Katy Cook's report to know exactly what she recommends. In addition, it might be better to implement Mrs. Katy Cook's recommendations instead of spending money on another task force, because reference of a question to a committee is very often a way to avoid coming to grips with a problem.

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is well aware that when a report is tabled, it is eventually put at the disposal of officials for further study. I think that the Government has every intention to use the Cook report as a basis for its policy, just as it does with all reports, to study it and legislate accordingly. This report will certainly play a major part when the time comes to prepare a legislation.

[English]

Mr. Belsher: Mr. Speaker, I find it somewhat surprising today that in this motion we are not dealing with the broader concepts, namely equality, development and peace. In her remarks the Parliamentary Secretary addressed the conference which will be held in Nairobi this summer, sponsored by the United Nations, to end the decade for women. Can the Parliamentary Secretary possibly outline a little more fully what our participation will be in this conference coming up this July?

[Translation]

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, I am very grateful to my colleague the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Belsher) for his quite relevant question. As I mentioned earlier, I think that the conference held in Nairobi is of utmost importance for women throughout the world, a conference in which Canada will play a very signficant role. I might add that Canada has indeed participated in all preparatory meetings leading to the Nairobi conference. Considering the high priority this government is giving to the status of women, I think that we must be present at this world conference in order to share with the other participating countries our expertise and experience as a government and to benefit from other countries' initiatives, thereby confirming our resolution and determination. I think, therefore, that the government will play a very active role in Nairobi and will contribute its much sought-after expertise in the area of women promotion.

[English]

Mrs. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment for the Parliamentary Secretary. I know that family violence is of great concern to all Canadians. Indeed, we are becoming extremely aware of the real difficulties being faced by battered wives. A number of women in my constituency have approached me to discuss this problem. They are looking for advice. These women go through very elaborate means to talk with me because they are afraid that their spouses might find out. A reality in the City of Brockville recently has been a home for battered women. I have been very supportive in working with them and in making it a reality. Could the Parliamentary Secretary elaborate on what programs and assistance are available to combat this problem?

• (1200)

[Translation]

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague the Hon. Member for Leeds-Grenville (Mrs. Cossitt) for her question. As a matter of fact, I can advise her that the Minister responsible for the status of women will meet today a number of groups concerning this. I think that it is a major concern of any government. I might add something along the line of what she said to demonstrate to what extent we should be concerned about this problem. It seems that one out of every ten women is a battered wife, and an objective of the program which the Secretary of State has implemented is to help these groups of women get together and meet these problems head on.

Also, there is a federal-provincial-territorial meeting of the ministers responsible for the status of women which will take place in Winnipeg June 5-7 and one of the items on the agenda is precisely the one she has referred to. Also, the Minister of National Health and Welfare is presently involved in consultations concerning this problem. As you can see, this Government is well aware of and very concerned about family violence and will definitely take measures in order to try and help these people.

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State (Mrs. Landry) and deals with the integration of Indian women in reserves.

Is the Hon. Member aware that her colleagues in committee are systematically rejecting amendments to grant a permanent status to the children of Indian women? Is the Hon. Member ready to exert pressures on her colleagues to avoid such discrimination?

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her question. I know that the Bill is now before the committee and this Government is trying to correct through that Bill a glaring injustice to Indian women. At present, I know that there are still some recommendations before the committee. I do not know what the outcome of the debate will be but I understand the concern of Indian women. I think that the committee involved will make the necessary recommendations and the House will decide what amendment should be made if necessary.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in the speech made by the Parliamentary Secretary and I was particularly interested in the Government's response to the Abella report. I wonder if the Hon. Member could tell the House if the Government has yet decided what it is going to do about companies or corporations that do not draw up a plan of affirmative action. How is the Government going to oblige these companies to draw up a plan of affirmative action? Second, if companies do have affirmative action plans regarding the hiring and promotion of women, has the Government yet decided what it will do regarding the enforcing of those plans?

[Translation]

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, I think that the Government position with respect to the implementation of the Abella report was that our views had been stated and that we should trust the various departments and organizations which will eventually submit their projects. A bill could also be introduced to carry out other—

I do not see why we should not trust the departments and Crown corporations. They know how important it is to be fair as far as jobs for women are concerned. It will always be possible later, as a responsible Government, to make some changes to improve conditions if we detect some gaps. I think that our Government has taken a responsible position as far as equality in employment is concerned.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I admire the Parliamentary Secretary's faith. For quite a long time, we in the House have been expecting certain actions to be taken by the Public Service and Crown corporations on affirmative action. Indeed, in the case of many Crown corporations, exactly the opposite has happened.

Could the Hon. Member also address the question of the contractors in the private sector that are doing business with the Government? For the contractors that are doing more than $200,000 per year worth of business with the Government and do have affirmative action plans, has the Government decided yet how it will enforce those plans of action and make sure that the plans are in fact carried out and not just discussed?

[Translation]

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, when my colleague refers to positions seldom enforced in the past, I think this new Government is quite responsible and—

Ms. Jewett: What a dreamer!

Mrs. Landry: We will see. Mr. Speaker, I think that we should trust the present Government which has taken a position. As I said, if we realize in the years to come that our plan was not firm enough, it will always be possible to take further decisions.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments has expired. Debate. The Hon. Member for Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic (Mrs. Killens).

• (1210)

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, the subject before the House today is very aptly chosen, since it gives us an opportunity to ask the Government to consider the needs of women in its Budget next Thursday, especially after the meeting that parliamentarians from all three political parties had this morning with the National Action Committee.

This group, with its membership of three million women, represents 350 women's groups across the country. Varied though its membership may be, the group is unanimous in its recommendations. As is customary, we had a chance to meet them this morning, and I am very pleased to be able to take part in this debate because I want to draw the attention of the Government to the pressing problems of women in 1985.

First, however, I shall go back, if I may, to 1940, when I was still at school and unaware of the fact that my mother, like all Quebec women, did not have the right to vote. Still in 1940, the first woman to study law in Quebec had to pass her bar examination in New Brunswick, because Quebec would not let her do so, and not until 1971 did women in Quebec have the right to sit on a jury.

Mr. Speaker, this means we have had a lot of catching up to do, and before speaking to the matter before the House today, I would like to emphasize the major contribution made by the late Senator, the Hon. Thérèse Casgrain, and pay tribute to the tremendous zeal with which she motivated the women of Quebec to follow in her footsteps. She was one of the pioneers of the women's rights movement in Canada. Throughout her life she stood up for the disadvantaged in society, denouncing social injustice and speaking up for those who were not able to make themselves heard. A native Montrealer, Mrs. Casgrain was the driving force behind a number of social reforms in Canada aimed at promoting justice and equality. She was active in various provincial, national and international organizations.

Mr. Speaker, although like many of my colleagues in this House, I would have preferred to live in a world where the old basic values gave a certain stability to the family unit, as a Member of Parliament I tend to encounter some of the real problems in our society, a society that is daily faced with problems that affect women especially. Three out of five marriages end in divorce. Fifty-two per cent of women in Canada are on the labour market. Most of them are obliged to work, either because they are sole breadwinner or because their salary is needed to bring the family income above the poverty level.

The number one problem in this country is unemployment, everyone will agree to that. However, although last Friday the Prime Minister was proclaiming loudly that he had brought down the rate of unemployment in this country, the fact remains that according to last Saturday's Gazette, 17 per cent of young people between the ages of 15 and 24 are unemployed. Seventeen per cent! A parallel can be drawn between women and young people. However, we cannot take the same approach to dealing with women's unemployment, because women must overcome a number of obstacles that do not exist for men.

The Government therefore has a duty to legislate in accordance with today's reality and needs. For women, it is quite clear there is only one solution: financial autonomy. This means they must have the tool to achieve that autonomy. It is like building a house. We must have tools. Women are very ingenious, and once they have the resources they will manage. To deal with the problem as quickly as possible, the Government should make this a priority. It should have the political will to do so. The Prime Minister, and this is urgent, should take another look at his election promises, and the men and women on the backbenches should be more outspoken in their caucuses than they are now in the House.

This list of problems and obstacles is unending. First of all, supplementary grants for training and upgrading programs are available only to women who have been on unemployment insurance or welfare. Thousands of women in Canada who want or have to work are being denied access to these supplementary grants because they do not meet these two criteria.

Second, the lack of services in daycare centers. If they are to take courses or enter the labour market, women must have the assurance that their children are safe and secure. Incidentally, I might point out that daycare is not a problem exclusive to women; these days, lots of men are responsible for their children, so it has to be considered as a problem for society as a whole.

Third, problems related to part time work, particularly with respect to fringe benefits and pensions. Pensions are a problem primarily for women. Even those who earn an income cannot be sure their retirement benefits will be sufficient. Their wages are low to begin with and, for various reasons, employers do not offer them private pension plans.

The Task Force on Pension Reform made several good recommendations. Some of them were implemented by the previous Government, but everything has been at a standstill since September 4.

In briefs submitted during public hearings, women asked the Government to make the following changes to private pension plans: first, mandatory benefits to the survivor; second, introduction of pensions for women homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan or the Quebec Pension Plan; third, mandatory sharing of benefits when the spouse retires or the marriage breaks down; fourth, payment of benefits to the survivor even after remarriage; fifth, minimal protection against inflation; sixth, request for vesting after two years instead of ten; seventh, request for full portability; eight, mandatory pensions for regular part time workers; and, finally, a proposed ban on the use of different mortability tables.

As to the fourth problem, the Abella report shows that the average annual income of women in 1982 amounted to only 63.9 per cent that of men. For example, average earnings were $25,096 for men and $16,056 for women. Some people claim that we cannot afford to pay women the same rates as men, but it is like saying that women will have to be satisfied with lower incomes until other financial priorities have been met. It is an insult which nobody should tolerate. In Canada it is illegal to pay women less than men for similar work in the same company. Laws on that issue were adopted for the first time in 1951. Ethics and laws notwithstanding, the gap is still there. The policy concerning equal pay for equal work is practically ignored in the private sector and often thwarted where it ought to be in force, the public service.

Fifth, systematic discrimination, a concept which is beyond the understanding of many people. This phenomenon often prevents women from getting better paying jobs, like in nontraditional fields of work, and discrimination also prevent women from being promoted. Let me say by the way that two thirds of women work in service industries where wages are very low. Women are rebelling against a system that prevents them from being appointed to non-traditional jobs where salaries are higher. Here is an example.

According to one application form, a person must weigh 180 pounds in order to do a certain job. That prerequisite was needed when controls were manual, but in the meantime, with the technological changes, those controls have been replaced by computerized control panels with push buttons. The job requirements have changed, but the application forms have not been changed and women still do not qualify.

Sixth, job insecurity resulting from people being replaced by machines, robotics, micro-chips, high technology and so forth. Women over fifty years of age are replaced by younger ones, because it is felt, often under false pretenses, that they cannot be retrained. Those women have no recourse because the majority of women are not unionized—only 35 per cent are—they have nobody to defend their rights, and they are left with 10 or 15 more years before they can get old age security. In this beautiful country, being a woman too often means being poor.

Seventh, the lack of health protection in the work place, as for instance the hazard for pregnant women in working lengthy hours in front of cathode ray screens. Up until now, research findings are contradictory. It is very, very urgent that this Government order further research in that area, otherwise human beings might be handicapped for life.

Eight, the lack of shelters for battered women and their children. The report on family violence shows that 10 per cent of Canadian women are battered by their husbands or companions. In actual figures, that means 2.3 million battered women. There is evidence that the figure is greater still, because statistics are based on data collected only in police stations and shelters. Thousands of other women suffer from fear, silently, for lack of information. The Liberal Government was always concerned with that problem. It had allocated 150 housing units in 1982 to agencies looking after battered women. Before 1982, it had funded 39 projects representing more than 460 beds in half-way houses. But since September 4, the Government opposite, instead of providing the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation with sufficient funding by way of Section 56.1, as the previous Government had done, has already slashed that program, and the Budget does not seem to be more promising.

Ninth, all the problems I have just referred to, also apply to handicapped women, but in addition the latter have to face all the accessibility problems, such as accessibility to transportation, housing and equipment needed for mobility.

Tenth, the difficulty faced by the majority of separated or divorced women in getting their alimony is a further cause of insecurity, in addition to the problems already mentioned. Fortunately, the new Divorce Act that was prepared by the previous Liberal administration and tabled recently by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) contains a clause that will make it easier to get that money.

Eleventh, soliciting by prostitutes, whether men or women, is just one aspect of the wider problem of prostitution and violence that surrounds that sub-culture. This is first and foremost a social problem, but the Government has chosen to solve it through judicial measures. Once again, women will foot the bill.

• (1220)

Twelfth, the abuse of violent pornography is still a concern for women. You will recall that a national campaign led by Canadian women under the leadership of Maude Barlow, of the office of Prime Minister Trudeau, succeeded in foiling the efforts of cablevision channels First Choice and Playboy in 1983. At the same time, the Department of Revenue was pressured to order that videos showing violent pornographic situations be held in customs. The fight goes on in papers and magazines where violent pornography is shown. One question remains: what price should be paid for freedom of expression? Is the freedom of those who want to abuse women more justified than that of Canadians who want to be protected and to protect their family against such a shameful exploitation?

Thirteenth, sexual harassment in the work place. This problem has been kept secret for too long. Women did not want to speak about it for fear of losing their jobs. Although the Liberal Government brought forward guidelines to prevent this kind of abuse in the Public Service and victims are now free to appeal to the Human Rights Commission, the fact is that the problem remains and particularly so in the private sector.

In 1982, the CRTC issued guidelines to eliminate sexual stereotypes in the media. Thanks to voluntary implementation, the issue of sexist stereotypes in the media has been publicized but projected results were not achieved. The funds allocated to Media Watch, a monitoring agency, are not sufficient. As this program will be implemented by states a continued follow up is necessary.

Fifteenth, I hope that the Budget Speech of next Thursday will take into account the new movement of Canadian women who have the courage to start businesses, thus contributing to the development of the small business sector. I hope that the Budget, next Thursday, will give them the push they need.

Canadians who have been following the debates of the House last week may have wondered why the Official Opposition spent a whole afternoon tabling petitions that opposed Bill C-26 under consideration. We have asked hundreds of groups of elderly citizens throughout the country, from Newfoundland to Vancouver, what they thought of Bill C-26 and they are all opposed to its passage. Unless that Bill is amended according to the wishes of thousands of Canadians, it will grant a pension to needy widows and widowers but will refuse the same benefits to others who may be separated, divorced or single.

In reply to a question I asked the Prime Minister barely a month ago about systemic discrimination, he said he knew that type of discrimination against women existed, but he himself is now imposing upon us legislation that will legalize systemic discrimination within his own Government. It is a blatant social injustice to grant a pension to the needy between the ages of 60 and 64 on the basis of their marital status only. Here is an hypothetical case that should show how nonsensical that legislation is. A woman is widowed at age 58. According to the legislation, at 60 years of age, she should get a pension, if she is in need. She decides to remarry at 59 years of age. She realizes later on that she made a mistake. If she were to separate from her husband, I presume she would no longer be entitled to the pension; if she were to divorce from her husband, would she return to the status of a widow or would she be considered single? If she were considered a widow, she would be entitled to a pension. If she were considered a single person, she would get nothing. Has the government opposite reflected on all those details? That is awfully important for a person concerned.

Anyone who cares to check the unemployment insurance record about the way women have been treated since this Government came into office, will find out that women have been glaringly discriminated against with the implementation of new rules by the Department of Employment and Immigration. Without giving the matter much thought, the Minister bought the hodgepodge that public servants had tried to sell us when we were the Government. Since March 30, to be eligible to unemployment insurance benefits, a claimant must have used up all the amounts he received in severance pay, vacation pay, repayment of accumulated sick leave, and so on.

To show how this new Government guideline is especially unfair to women, I would like to tell more about the problem experienced by a woman in my riding. This woman, who is 57 years old, a teacher, single, and who suffers from Parkinson's disease, has to stop teaching. She does not qualify for an invalidity pension because her condition is not serious enough. She must wait until 65 before getting her old age security pension. She has no personal savings, and in fact she intended to invest the money she expected to get, but the Government opposite is pitiless and has decided that she and all other Canadians in such a situation will have to spend all the amounts accumulated before collecting one cent in unemployment insurance.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all the delegates to the National Action Committee Convention on Parliament Hill and all Canadian women, I ask the Government not to take part in any arms race escalation or in the star wars project. It is on behalf of future generations that Canadian women oppose star wars. They view nuclear disarmament and star wars as the number one priority.

The Canadian Government should pursue more vigorously the peace initiative initiated by the former Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Pierre Elliot Trudeau, to eliminate conflicts which threaten our national peace.

I would not want to close without mentioning the concern of Canadian women about the threat to the environment caused by acid rain, chemicals and nuclear waste. It is once more on behalf of their children and grandchildren that Canadian women ask the Minister of Finance to include in his Budget next Thursday a budgetary envelope for research and development on nuclear waste disposal. We have created a monster and do not know how to get rid of it.

The Government has a duty to protect the quality of life of the generations to come and it should view this issue as a priority.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but her allotted time has expired. Questions and comments. The Hon. the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Hudon).

Mr. Hudon: Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate my colleague because, in that same twenty minute period, she managed to speak on every subject and raised very discriminatory issues. I have a few questions to ask, so here is the first one.

Mr. Speaker, concerning the case she mentioned earlier, where a teacher could not get her benefits, can my colleague explain how it discriminates against women? She said so but I do not see how.

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Speaker, it does not discriminate only against women, it discriminates against all Canadians. However, this person is single, and a woman's problem is always more complicated when she does not have a husband.

[English]

Mrs. Cossitt: Mr. Speaker, I was interested in the comments which were made by my hon. colleague with respect to UI payments and how support payments to a spouse discriminate against women in that they must be declared as income for unemployment insurance benefit purposes. However, we could look at the other side of the coin. Males might well be in receipt of support payments and those payments would also be classified as income; therefore, that would negate the male from receiving unemployment insurance benefits as well. Therefore, I feel it is not a discrimination against women, as my hon. colleague seemed to imply.

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Speaker, the question is the same as the question which was put by the Parliamentary Secretary. It is not only the woman. However, if we look at the statistics we find that to be a woman and single is almost equal to living to the end of one's days in poverty. So my point is that it is worse for the women but it is also not any better for the men.

• (1230)

[Translation]

Mr. Hudon: I also want to ask my colleague how the change in the pension plan for widows and widowers aged 60 to 64 also discriminates against women? You said this measure discriminates against women.

Mrs. Killens: Here again it discriminates against men as well, but women are always hardest hit. It is discriminatory, and women will suffer more than men because most men have been on the labour market, whereas the women who will be affected by this measure have often been abandoned by their husbands who wanted to marry younger and more attractive women, and they feel rejected in life.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) for a question or comment.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on the question. When we say that women are discriminated against as far as pensions are concerned, it is a fact that women tend to survive their husbands by at least seven years. I must say that I too am concerned about pensions and retirement plans. Among men who do have retirement plans, only 50 per cent of married men have plans that cover their spouses as well. Among the remaining 50 per cent, even spouses who receive a pension will receive only half the amount their husbands would get. So, we live longer, but we do not have any money. In the legislation as it now stands, there is no provision for those who are single. So I definitely think that women, who make up 50 per cent of the population, suffer more discrimination than men. I wish the Hon. Member would ask around in his riding and find out how many men are aware of the fact that their pensions or retirement plans do not cover their spouses. They may be in for a few surprises.

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a comment. Of course, as a Government, we would like to help everyone in our society, but I think we should not forget that we inherited a very difficult financial situation and in spite of all that we did decide to help 85,000 widows and widowers. I think that is already a vast improvement over what the previous Government was doing, and perhaps later on, when the Treasury is not as bare, we will be able to help the rest of our society.

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Speaker, because marital status is used as a criterion, this discriminates against members of religious orders. I do not know whether anyone has really thought about it, but our parish priests and our nuns are not included in this program. These people have contributed to the quality of life in Canada, and when they finally reach the age where they could take a well-earned rest, the Government lets them down.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The time for questions and comments is now terminated. We shall resume debate.

[Translation]

Mr. David Kilgour (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I must say that I rise somewhat hesitantly as the first Member of the opposite sex to speak in this debate, but first of all, I wish to pay tribute to all Hon. Members who spoke this morning, and did so with great sincerity and intelligence, to the motion before the House today. As I said before, I am somewhat hesitant this morning to add some of my own comments.

[English]

The motion states that the Budget which is forthcoming very shortly should contain four initiatives, one of which is, and I quote:

—reform of the tax system rather than the introduction of further public spending cuts which impact most adversely on women;

I would like to try to make the matter a little more human by citing the example, Sir, of someone I know who works about 55 hours a week as a truck driver and earns about $18,000 a year. He is a resident of Quebec and pays $6,000 in federal and provincial income tax, which leaves him $12,000 per annum plus the earnings of his wife which are much less.

The federal portion of his taxes which goes to service our accumulated mountain of debt—now close to $200 billion—is now about 30 cents on the dollar. By the year 2000, Mr. Speaker, if we do not go in new directions as the Government proposes, will it not be 40 cents, 50 cents or 60 cents of each dollar he earns which must go to service our debt? And how much less will be available for job creation, social programs, pensions and for a whole range of programs which all Canadians believe in so strongly?

If we follow the example of the Mitterrand Government of France after 1981—which was a "let'er rip" spending philosophy—as the motion would have us do, it seems to me we would have more unemployment, more taxes, more bankruptcies and more inflation. I remind you, Sir, that the French franc has already had three devaluations since 1981. We would have a general decline in which women, the disabled and the visible minorities would become the first victims. If we followed the route of France, would we then not also have more austerity with all kinds of layoffs in both the private and the public sectors?

What I am suggesting, Sir, is that if we follow the example of countries which have their economies in order, such as Switzerland, Japan and West Germany, it seems to me that women in Canada, along with the disabled and the visible minorities, would be in the best situation. If we can create a rising economic tide in Canada, all Canadians will benefit. In a sinking economy, some Canadians, such as the three groups I have already mentioned, will suffer far more. If I am correct, then women are obviously among the largest group which has the greatest interest in an improving economy.

This Government is acutely aware of the economic problems which are unique to Canadian women. We are determined to bring about economic renewal, and what is economic renewal if it is not of and for the people? We are committed to the direction set out in the Charter of Rights. People come first and will always come first with this Government. Equality in Canada among the sexes was a priority of this Government before April 17 and it will always be a priority of this Government. Expanding employment and creating new opportunities is at the heart of our program for national economic renewal. We are committed to providing lasting jobs for all Canadians who want to work, and again I repeat, including women, the disabled and the visible minorities.

In its economic statement, the Government committed an additional $1 billion in 1985-1986 primarily to help Canadians acquire new skills and find jobs in the private and public sectors. I think it is proper to point out that since September last, 201,000 new jobs have been created, compared with what I am told were 72,000 new jobs created during the same period last year. In the month of April alone, employment in our country grew by 89,000 jobs, the best gain in almost five years. The number of unemployed has declined by more than 80,000 and the unemployment rate decreased by .3 per cent to 10.9 per cent in April, although I certainly agree that is far too high. It is my understanding that new jobs for women have accounted for well over half the increase in employment since the end of the recession, but I do not mean to suggest for a moment that we dismiss any of the remarks made in this debate so far; we are fully aware that the largest group in the workforce to be discriminated against are women.

• (1240)

For example, we all know that over 50 per cent of Canadian women are in the workforce, yet they earn on average only 60 per cent of what men earn. Some two-thirds of the minimum wage earners in our country are women, and the estimates are that over one-half of all Canadian women can expect to be poor.

This is the bleak reality of working women in Canada today, and social policies have to be designed to improve these circumstances. I do not believe the Government has shirked its responsibilities in this matter to date. For example, last month the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) announced the preparation of a report by management and Public Service labour unions on implementing equal pay for work of equal value in the Public Service. The report should be ready within two months. The Minister has stated her firm intention to introduce legislation which will assure all women and minorities of equal access to employment and job training. It is crucial that more women occupy positions of responsibility if society is to benefit from creative leadership, not only on women's issues but all issues. We in the Progressive Conservative Party are confident that such leadership will emerge within the federal bureaucracy as a result of putting men and women on equal footing. It is far too late, but we intend to do something about that particular issue.

The situation for older, non-working Canadian women is an altogether different matter. Older women are shockingly vulnerable to economic hardship. If my memory is correct, two-thirds of Canadian women over 65 years of age have an income of less than $5,000 per year. The Government announced last November that it will extend the spouses' allowance program to all widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64. Some 85,000 low-income Canadians, mostly women, will benefit from this proposal starting this fall. In the Throne Speech of last November the Government committed itself to entering discussions with the provinces aimed at a comprehensive overhaul of the Canada Pension Plan, including such matters as portability, vesting, survivors' benefits, and pension coverage of women. Since then, as you know, Canada Pension Plan benefits were increased 4.4 per cent as of the beginning of this year. In January, federal and provincial Ministers of Finance met in Montreal and discussed, among other matters, the need to reform the CPP. In short, we have not been idle but there remains much to be done.

We must bring increasing pressure to bear on the provinces so they will assume their responsibilities in the areas under their jurisdiction. For example, it is the provinces' responsibility to provide daycare services which are affordable for the majority of Canadian women working outside the home. The same applies to pension reform in the private sector, where 80 per cent of pension plans are under provincial control, including the Quebec Pension Plan. It is true that at times we have to move more cautiously than all of us would like, but we intend to continue to maintain leadership on women's issues.

Let me say something about taxation since it forms part of the motion I have ben asked to deal with. Tax reform is doubtless an essential part of achieving economic renewal, hence achieving more compassionate social policies, and it is a matter of highest priority. We live in an era of accumulating deficits. Our deficit in 1984-85 was $34.5 billion; in 1985-86 it is projected at $37 billion; 1986-87, $34 billion; 1987-88, $35 billion, and so on, up until 1990-91 when it will be $37 billion. This just cannot go on because it will bury us all. That is why we are very concerned about the trend of the accumulated debt.

It is well known, I hope, to increasing numbers of Canadians that the debt is one of the major obstacles to economic growth in our country. But because we cannot accept this debt as inevitable, the Government has charted a new direction for our economy, and I would mention just four principles of this agenda for economic renewal which we all heard last November 8.

First, we have to put our own financial house in order so that we can limit and ultimately reverse the massive build-up of public debt and the damaging impact it has had on confidence and growth from one end of the country to the other. Secondly, we have to redefine the role of government so that it can provide a better framework for growth and job creation and less of an obstacle to change and innovation. Third, we have to adopt policies which foster higher investment, greater innovation, increased international competitiveness, and a positive climate for the birth and growth of new enterprise, large, small, medium-sized and what I call micro-enterprise, which involves one or two people. Finally, we must bring about these changes in a way which is fair, open and consistent with the basic sense of compassion, tolerance and justice which are characteristic of our Canadian community. We will not weaken the basic income support programs which have served Canadians well. Indeed, through greater economic performance we are going to try to provide even greater assistance to those Canadians of both sexes who truly need it.

I think it is the sense of the motion, Sir, that by somehow reducing the deficit we are going to have a lesser regard for job creation. I believe that is a gravely mistaken view. We believe, and I think most of the Canadian people believe, that confidence is the key to growth and job creation, and deficit reduction is one of the keys to rebuilding confidence. The tax system has been one of the principal mechanisms for achieving the economic and social objectives which as Canadians we all believe are important. Seeking to create the best possible tax system for Canada, we must be guided by principles of fairness and equality.

As we embark upon a new direction in economic and fiscal management, the changing economic and social needs and stresses we face have implications for that system. We are counting on it to continue to serve usefully and effectively the economic and social well-being of Canadians. We are determined that the tax system should continue to be responsive to changing demands and new realities. We must harmonize the new direction we are pursuing to attain economic renewal. Given the present tax system, I wonder, looking around the House, how many Members do their own tax returns, or how many, like so many men and women, are obliged to have someone else do them for us.

Mr. Nystrom: Not the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher).

Mr. Kilgour: No, I am sure he does it himself.

Mr. Kellleher: No, I don't.

Mr. Kilgour: May I put that on the record?

Mr. Nystrom: He is so wealthy, that is why.

● (1250)

Mr. Kilgour: In many ways the present tax system is failing to serve current economic needs, such as in investment and deficit areas. The entire area of incentives provided to business investment is one that we have flagged for attention.

We must ask to what degree we can substitute tax incentives for direct Government programs. It is clear that some shift in this direction is needed and desired. Many Canadians in and out of the business community have been increasingly critical of the red tape, public servant discretion, and delay associated with some of the existing grant programs. People have made no bones about their preference for tax-based incentives. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has said that we must deliver Government services more efficiently by relying more heavily on the tax system and less on the grant system. You and I, Sir, being from Alberta, know what the grant system has done to our province's oil and oil servicing industry.

The Government has been especially concerned that the large array of incentives may contribute to the excessive use of tax shelter financing of various sorts. That is why a moratorium was placed on the issuing of so-called "quick-flip" scientific research tax credit investments. I appreciate that many Members will be saying that these are only partly successful. It seems to me that there are other ways of getting around this attempted blockade. That is why the Government has moved to stop advance tax rulings on the use of limited partnerships and other joint venture financing arrangements to flow out unused tax deductions and credits to investors.

At a time when reducing the deficit is so crucial to our goal of economic renewal and growth, the effectiveness of our incentives must come into question. Obviously, the question of levels of assistance will have to be discussed just as seriously as that of changing the ways in which we deliver incentives. In the meantime, we can point to a number of other increasingly evident problems with the current system. For example, the grant programs rely on the discretion of administrators and cause problems, not the least of which is the time it takes to get approval. Time is too valuable. Decisions must be made quickly. We must also recognize that if tax incentives unduly complicate the tax sytem and tax administration, the kind of criticism that is currently directed at grants can also be aimed at incentives.

I will close by saying that benefiting Canadians is the fundamental motivator in all tax reform. As we grapple with the technicalities, the subtleties and the complexities of our tax system, we must never lose sight of the citizens it is ultimately meant to serve. That is what our efforts are all about. The real bottom line is the men and women of Canada. That is the goal of the people meeting with NAC today. I hope the goal of everyone in the Chamber is to make Canada a fairer economy. The economic tide is rising, and when that happens, all boats are lifted, including the economic boats of all Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments? Since there are no questions or comments, we will continue debate with the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my good friend from Edmonton was very concerned about the deficit. I think everyone is concerned about the very high deficit in the country. My concern is that the natural tendency of the Conservative Party will be to deal with that deficit through cut-backs in various social programs.

An Hon. Member: No, we won't.

Mr. Nystrom: One Hon. Member is saying "No". I can hear him from here. I think the rest of them are saying that they want to deal with this through cut-backs. That makes me very nervous. The way to deal with the deficit in this country is to make us once again a nation of producers. We must start producing and working.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: Right on!

Mr. Nystrom: We must make ourselves a nation of producers. We must start producing goods and services to have import replacements. That will be done by concentrating on our base industries; farming, fishing, forestry, mineral resources, and small businesses.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: That is the direction which I wish we would take in this country. The second way of doing it, Mr. Speaker, is through tax reform.

Ms. Jewett: They won't clap at that one. They are not interested in tax reform.

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: There is one Tory who wants tax reform. Are there any other Tories who want tax reform in this House, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Mazankowski: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: There is a second one over there. I think they know that for far too long in the country we have had all kinds of tax shelters of the rich people. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) agrees. Being a wealthy person, he knows all about that.

Mr. Mazankowski: Not as wealthy as you.

Mr. Nystrom: We have all kinds of tax loopholes for very large companies. We have several billions of dollars in deferred taxes. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that if we plugged those tax holes and reformed the taxation system in the country, making the wealthier people pay their fair share, it would go a long way to paying off the deficit in Canada and to saving the social programs that are needed by all Canadians, particularly the women and children of the country. I hope the House will take that direction in the future.

The most important aspect of this debate today is the issue of equality. There is definitely not equality between men and women in this country with regard to occupations or salaries. In many ways that gap is widening rather than closing in this great country of ours. Before Christmas we received the report of Judge Abella called Equality in Employment. I would like to refer to some of the startling statistics in this report.

First, we must understand that the participation rate of women in the labour force is escalating extremely rapidly. In 1966 only 35 per cent of the women in the country were working. In 1976 45 per cent of the women were working, and in 1982 nearly 52 per cent of the women in Canada were in the workforce. With regard to males, in 1966 80 per cent were in the workforce and presently 77 per cent are in the workforce. Therefore, the participation rate of men is dropping slightly but that of women has been going up very rapidly.

Let us examine the kinds of occupations that women are in and the salaries that they are drawing for the work that they are providing to this great country of ours. On page 63 of the English version of this report we see the percentage composition by gender of major occupations in Canada in 1981. The first class listed is managerial, administrative, and other related occupations in the managerial and administrative side. We see that 75 per cent of those occupations are occupied by men, and only 25 per cent by women. In the House of Commons we have a ratio which is even worse than that. With regard to that we will have to make changes in our society and electoral process. In the occupations of natural sciences, engineering, and mathematics, we once again find a tremendous discrepancy between men and women. Eighty-six per cent of people in these professions are men, and only 14 per cent are women.

I earlier mentioned the need in our country to stimulate the economy in forestry, fisheries, farms, and mining. These are the resources which our country has. As the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) so often says, "You dance with who brung ya", to quote him exactly. We build on what we have. However, in those occupations we find that there is once again a tremendous discrepancy between men and women. In farming there are 79 per cent men and 21 per cent women. In the fishing industry and related occupations there are 95 per cent men and 5 per cent women. In forestry and logging there are 94 per cent men and 6 per cent women. There again we see a tremendous discrepancy which we must correct. I will conclude my remarks at three o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I call it one o'clock, I note that the Hon. Member will have 14 minutes remaining to speak plus the question and comments to follow when debate on the eighth allotted day begins at three o'clock.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock p.m. this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

EMPLOYMENT

DESBIENS (QUEBEC) FILE

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity today to pay tribute to people of a Quebec town called Desbiens. Those people, who for four years have been working to alert public authorities and the private sector to the problems they have been facing since the St-Raymond Paper Mill closed, finally reached their goal Sunday last, and I feel that tribute should be paid to all those who were involved, whether they were members of the Municipal council, people from the labour union or company officials because they finally succeeded, after four years of hard work as I said, in bringing matters to a conclusion that will create some 100 jobs in their community.

Tribute should also be payed to the various participants at the regional economic summit where the Desbiens matter was selected as a priority, and I must pay tribute especially to my former colleague, Mrs. Suzanne Beauchamp-Niquet, and also to the present Member for Roberval (Mr. Bouchard) for the work he has done on that matter. In my view, that success was achieved by every one of those who were involved in the matter over the past four years. Finally, success came yesterday, and I think that right in the middle of the landlocked salmon festival, people in Desbiens certainly got the biggest fish they could ever hope for, and this time they really landed it. I am very happy with their hard work and I hope that this will be a inspiration to many others.

[English]

SPACE WEAPONRY

OPPOSITION TO UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, later today I will table a petition on behalf of a number of petitioners, including McMaster University President Alvin Lee, and over 600 other professors, graduate students, and support staff of that university. The petition strongly opposes Canadian participation in research and development for the United States Strategic Defence Initiative, known as star wars.

They cite in the petition the destabilizing and escalating nature of the star wars scenario, and the fact that it would violate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty between the superpowers. McMaster University members have called upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to refuse the President's invitation to become involved.

Members of the McMaster community may be asked to help research and develop the controversial space weapons plan. Science and engineering professors at the university were the first to sign the petition rejecting Canadian involvement, despite the fact that they themselves would be among the first to benefit. They have suggested that even if the Government should choose to ignore calls to dissociate itself from the star wars program, the 650 McMaster faculty members and students who signed the petition will refuse to co-operate in any research or development the Government might request. That is putting your money where your mouth is.

* * *

THE FORMER ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have just returned from my riding in western Canada where some of our constituents questioned the propriety of those media darlings, the Rat Pack. They have a different name for the rodents. They call them the Gang of Four, four rascals from the Liberal backbenches who are showing up the thinly populated ranks in the front. I must say that many of my constituents were not impressed by the Gang of Four's sanctimonious attitude toward our new Government, especially their new PAW, or Patronage of the Week award.

Western Canada is proud to be truly represented in the new Government of Canada. We remember what the Liberal Government did not do for us. We will never forget those "wilderness years" when the only elected representation the four western provinces had in the federal Cabinet was the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), a man who, I am certain, never knew the meaning of the word "patronage".

But, Mr. Speaker, they say the best way to fight fire is with fire. So, to counter the infamous PAW award, it gives me great pleasure to present the first Schellenberg SOW award—

SOW standing for Survivor of the WEEK. The envelope, please. This week's survivor is former Cabinet Minister, Pierre Juneau, who is still President of the CBC.

There are many more SOWs still out there. Perhaps their existence may prevent the pot from calling the kettle black.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

FORTHCOMING ERDA AGREEMENT WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, last September 4 the people of British Columbia gave this Government an overwhelming mandate. They know that our Party would give all provinces and all regions of the country an equal voice in the decision-making process.

British Columbia is represented in the House by 19 hard-working, responsible government Members, who includes three influential Cabinet Ministers.

Those who have recently attempted to adopt British Columbia as "their province", simply for political purposes, need not pretend to be speaking for B.C. The people of my province know better.

The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and other Members opposite should quit trying to use British Columbia as a political football. The people of British Columbia have had their share of being used by the previous Liberal Government. They want to become full partners in the economic rebirth of the country, and that is what we intend to make them.

When our Government signs a new ERDA Agreement with the Province of British Columbia, as we will do shortly, British Columbians will see a new era of economic co-operation and development dawn in a land of unlimited opportunity.

* * *

[Translation]

EMPLOYMENT

EQUALITY FOR WOMEN

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, Canadian women have been asking for equality in the area of employment for a long time. The measures proposed by the Government in March do not satisfy them very much. But today, I would like to express my views on another aspect of the problem.

Equality on the labour market implies a series of legislative and regulatory measures. Since we consider that society shares the responsibility for children with the parents, maternity benefits are a particularly important program.

There was some talk about the Conservative Government transferring maternity benefits from the Unemployment Insurance Program to general social assistance programs. As we know, these programs are at the mercy of budget cuts at any time.

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women is opposed to such a transfer, and several thousands of women around the country want to safeguard and even to improve the maternity benefits program.

Mr. Speaker, I call upon the Government to listen to them very carefully.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

ANTICIPATED PAY INCREASES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, there have been recent reports stating that the annual pay increases for Canadian Armed Forces personnel were expected to be granted on April 1. This has not occurred.

There have been a number of excuses offered for this situation. One is the anticipated expansion of the Forces. Another is the anticipated decrease in the Armed Forces personnel by way of the forthcoming Budget. There is also the old standard excuse that it is all "tied up in Treasury Board".

Coupled with this is a directive from Winnipeg Air Command dated March 19, removing the 4 per cent limit on increases for goods and services provided to Armed Forces personnel.

A further burden has been placed on Forces' families, for they will be required to pay CMHC appraised rents beginning November 1. Families at C.F.B. Comox, where the B.C. Socred Government has removed rent controls, are facing monthly increases of $100 to $150. The Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen) and the Conservative Government must take responsible action to provide Canadian Armed Forces personnel with affordable housing and services at fair prices.

The Minister of National Defence should rise in his place in the House and explain to the Canadian public and members of the Armed Forces why they are being targeted for such punitive action.

* * *

STATUS OF WOMEN

ACHIEVEMENT OF EQUALITY

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to note that the National Action Committee on the Status of Women held its annual general meeting in Ottawa this weekend.

On April 17 the Section of the Charter of Rights which aims to prevent discrimination on the basis of race, ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age, or disability came into effect. Yet the coming into effect of legislation does not guarantee that the spirit of Section 15 of the Charter of Rights, as well as the letter of the law, will become a reality.

The only sure way to combat discrimination, misunderstanding, and unfair treatment of any person, is through public education and discretion in the courts. It is stereotyping and insensitivity toward individuals in general which contribute to inequality.

• (1410)

Presently a subcommittee of the House is examining the many facets of equality rights. It is the work of this committee, the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, the Department within the Secretary of State, and such organizations as the National Action Committee that continually play a role in ensuring that equality for women is achieved.

* * *

[Translation]

WOMEN

DEMANDS MADE BY WOMEN'S GROUPS

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): As government members, we appreciate very much the work done and action taken by women throughout Canada, and I take this opportunity to congratulate all the Canadian women who took part in the economic summit which was held last weekend in Ottawa, especially as the Decade for Women is coming to an end.

Moreover, as Chairperson of the Sub-Committee on the Status of Women, the mandate of which is to ensure that the recommendations of each and every women's group reach the departments concerned, I can assure the House that my colleagues and I give very serious consideration to the recommendations and requests which we receive and that we have every intention to give Canadian women the opportunities they deserve within our society. Unfortunately, because of the very serious financial situation we have inherited from the previous government, we are unable for the time being to meet all the requests we are receiving, for we must be fair to all Canadians; you can rest assured, however, that we are striving to encourage the promotion of women in the various departments and in the areas under their jurisdiction.

During its mandate, I am sure that this government will make every effort to defend the interests of all Canadian women.

S.O. 21

[English]

CHILDREN

RETURN SOUGHT OF CHILD TAKEN TO TUNISIA

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, on August 13, 1982, a five-year old girl, Tina Lynn Mallette, was abducted from the care of the Children's Aid Society of Ottawa-Carleton. Tina was living temporarily with her foster-mother while her natural mother was ill.

In an attempt to find the abductor, it was discovered much later, after a number of months, that the child was living in Tunisia, and she is still there today. Several attempts have been made by the Department of External Affairs and the Department of Justice to return Tina Lynn Mallette to Canada.

Today, in the House of Commons, I will be presenting a petition signed by 6,795 Canadians who are joining me in asking the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to summon the Tunisian Ambassador immediately to a meeting which will, hopefully result in the return to Canada of Tina Lynn Mallette.

Yesterday was Mother's Day. One mother has not seen her child for three years because of the intransigence of the Tunisian authorities.

* * *

OLYMPIC GAMES

PERMANENT RETURN TO GREECE ADVOCATED

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, it is a well-known fact that the Olympic spirit and the Olympic Games have suffered severe set-backs by efforts either to commercialize the games or to use them for international political confrontations. These moves have degraded the value of the Olympic Games and have distorted their message, which is the consolidation of friendship among peoples, and a positive contribution to a life more humane, more creative, and more peaceful.

The ideals of sports must be reborn, and we must find their true meaning. The people of Greece, rich in traditions and historic contributions, with a unique athletic past, daily confirm their dedication to such ideals.

I believe the Olympic Games could recover their lost meaning. This could be accomplished by the permanent return of the Olympic Games to Greece, their place of origin and birth, so that they can find their true concept again. The Government of Greece is already on record as agreeing to having the Olympic Games on a permanent basis in Greece. Therefore I call upon the Government to give whatever support is needed to bring this about, and to urge all other Governments in the world to do the same.

Oral Questions

STATUS OF WOMEN

DEPARTMENTAL STAFFING

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, this morning the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, NAC, was here to lobby the various political Parties. I use the word lobby in its best sense. They put difficult questions to us on a number of political issues concerning women. The theme of this year's conference is women in the economy.

There were no questions this morning on energy, perhaps because we have the first woman Energy Minister in Canada, an event we all applauded. However, I checked out her Department an an example at noon hour, only to discover that the Deputy Minister is Mr. Paul Tellier, and the Assistant Deputy Minister is Mr. Pierre Perron. The Petroleum Incentives Administrator is Mr. Lazar. The Administrator of COGLA is Mr. Taschereau. There are three senior Assistant Deputy Ministers, and guess what, Mr. Speaker? They are all men—Mr. Reiner Hollbach in conservation, Mr. Len Good in policy analysis, and Mr. Roland Priddle in the petroleum sector.

There are five Assistant Deputy Ministers. In the human resource sector there is Mr. J. Ranger; in the finance sector there is Mr. Mensforth; in mineral policy there is Mr. Hutchinson; in Research and Technology there is Mr. Whitham, and in the earth sciences sector there is Mr. W. Hutchinson.

Ironically, in a Department handled by a woman Minister, all the senior officials are men. Of course that is the same in the oil industry, with one or two exceptions, including Petro-Canada.

I put Pat on notice that I will raise this matter next year—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member from British Columbia that his time has expired.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

INDUSTRY

MITEL CORPORATION—TAKEOVER BY BRITISH TELECOM

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. He will well understand that over the weekend there was a widespread and very deep concern by many Canadians about the numerous takeovers which are now occurring in Canada's high technology industries. Particularly disturbing is the takeover bid by British Telecom of the Mitel firm which in the past received over $35 million worth of federal grants, in return for which it agreed to maintain a high level of research and development, jobs, and capital equipment development, in Canada.

Will the Minister ensure, when the application is to be reviewed and assessed under the FIRA legislation, that those conditions extracted back in 1981 and 1982 will continue to be upheld, that we will continue to insist upon guarantees of research and development taking place, and upon job guarantees in this country, and that the role of Mitel, a leading company in the development of telecommunications, will be maintained?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member, of course I would give him that assurance. I am sure the Hon. Member and other Members of the House would be pleased to know that only this morning the board of directors of British Telecom approved the intent of the deal, that is, to subscribe for approximately 51 per cent of the then issued equity shares of Mitel, which will put some $330 million of fresh equity into that company.

I have been assured by the executive of Mitel this morning that there is absolutely no suggestion of the transferring of technology or the stripping of any assets which are now in Canada. In fact this will make Mitel the main international manufacturing arm of British Telecom itself.

CANADIAN INVESTMENT IN TECHNOLOGY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I find it exceedingly strange that the Minister responsible for the industrial development of Canada would say that we should take great satisfaction in having lost Canadian control of a major Canadian high-tech company to a foreign owner.

I think it is important to look at the anomaly. One of our own Canadian high-tech companies, Bell Canada, is putting up a bid of $1.5 billion for an oil company, but we cannot seem to get Canadian buyers for our own telecommunications industry. What kind of plans and policies does the Minister have to encourage Canadian investment in high technology or telecommunications? Can we expect something very specific in the Budget of May 23 to give Canadian investors encouragement and incentive to invest in their own industry, rather than having to rely upon foreigners? That seems to be the plan and policy of this Minister.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, again in reply to the Hon. Member, I felt that he and other Members would be pleased to learn that there was a fresh infusion of capital into Mitel, bearing in mind that that company has had a rather difficult financial period in the last few months and years. Its shares sank as low as $6 from a high of $48. It has been running losses. In short, the debt it was handling was extremely difficult for it to handle.

• (1420)

This is fresh capital, with no suggestion that the employees, who number 5,000, 50 per cent of them in Canada, will in any way be impacted or that there will be any reduction. It is a very wholesome blending of Canadian technology with fresh capital to create a new international manufacturing concern that will have British Telecom as its sponsor.

BOOK PUBLISHING COMPANIES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, we go back to the original point. It is not just the fresh infusion of capital. It is the loss of control and development in this country that is of major concern to Canadians.

I draw to the Minister's attention another example where the lack of government policy is resulting in new acquisitions in the book publishing industry. Over six months ago Prentice-Hall had an application for a takeover. No decision has been taken. We now have two other proposed takeover bids for Canadian book publishing companies because of the lack of a decision. When can we expect an immediate decision rejecting the applications of Prentice-Hall and Gulf and Western so that we can clearly maintain and control the ownership and destiny of Canadian culture in our book publishing industry? When is he going to give this country an answer, and quit flip-flopping and being indecisive like he is with everything else?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I have already given the Hon. Member the assurance that all undertakings, as far as we are concerned, will be expected to be honoured. Of course, we have to pass, as far as the FIRA operation is concerned, on this new acquisition of equity in Mitel. All I am saying is that the deal has only been agreed to this morning. An application will be forthcoming, at which time we will review it under the present provisions of FIRA. I can assure the Hon. Member that Canadian interests will be very much, as far as we are concerned, preserved in connection with the Mitel deal.

As far as the second reference is concerned, the Prentice-Hall deal, as the Hon. Member knows, that is presently before FIRA and there will be a decision shortly.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

INVESTIGATION OF ALLEGED CABINET DOCUMENT LEAK

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. The Minister knows that the RCMP are investigating a leak of the Nielsen document which recommends a $310 million cut from Indian Affairs programs, that the individual responsible for the leak has now identified himself to the police and given his reasons for what he did, and yet intense interrogation of other officials and others in the Government is continuing.

Will the Minister assure the House that this is a normal RCMP investigation in which the police are not taking orders or directions from the Government, that charges will be laid if the RCMP feel they should be laid, and that in this process the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are not being used politically to intimidate officials of DIAND and to teach a lesson to others in the Government who have custody of classified documents?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I certainly have no hesitation whatsoever in giving my colleague the assurances that he requests.

NATURE OF DOCUMENT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, if that is the case, then to clear the air I think the Minister, on behalf of the Government, should finally identify that a leak has occurred and that the RCMP are investigating a real government document which has in fact been leaked and been made public.

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the representation given by the former Minister, but I should also refer to the dictum of his Leader who suggested, not that many months ago, that it would be very unwise to make any comments or give any information unless and until charges had been laid.

* * *

LABOUR RELATIONS

AIR CANADA—STRIKE BY TICKET AGENTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. It concerns the strike at Air Canada, a strike which involves as much a matter of principle as does the one that is currently taking place at Eaton's, a private corporation. As the Prime Minister knows, two-thirds of those involved are women. The issue at question is Air Canada's attempt to turn well paid full-time jobs into part-time poorly paid jobs. Considering that this involves a matter of principle, namely, the question of equality for women, will the Prime Minister directly intervene and tell Air Canada that it should be taking us forward, not backwards, and that the negotiating stance it has is totally unacceptable?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will recall that there was a task force in 1983 having to do with part-time employment. The forecast at the time was that there would be more part-time employment, and that there was a need and a desire to ensure that working conditions for part-time employees would improve. Having regard to the fact that Air Canada employs a number of part-time people and that there needs to be that required flexibility, there is on the negotiating table the desire to increase the number of part-time workers.

Under the current agreement the part-time workers have no pension provisions, no dental care provisions, no disability or sick leave benefits, and no seniority. All of these issues are being addressed under the terms of the proposed collective agreement that Air Canada is trying to negotiate with the union.

Oral Questions

CROWN CORPORATIONS

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I repeat that the question at stake is every bit as important as a matter of principle as is the strike at Eaton's. That is why I am directing my question to the Prime Minister.

The question I now have goes beyond Air Canada's current strike, and has application to every other Crown corporation and government agency. Considering that the Government announced with great fanfare on International Women's Day its policy of equity for Crown corporations, and considering the Abella commission said that converting full-time jobs into part-time jobs was the opposite of equity, can the Prime Minister assure the House that he will instruct not only Air Canada but all other agencies of the Crown that we are not going to get increased numbers of part-time jobs for women at the expense of full-time jobs for women?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the New Democratic Party made reference to the employment equity plans that were mentioned on March 8. Those employment equity plans will rely on the data that will be forthcoming from the Crown corporations in question, from the companies in the federal sector that are mentioned, and so on. With regard to Crown corporations, employment equity will take effect as of September of this year. For the first time we will have the data necessary in order to see whether the very matters the Hon. Member raises are in fact taking place. That is why we are so pleased that we are moving in this field and we will for the first time do something to protect jobs.

ABELLA REPORT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the way the Government is moving is backwards, not forward. It is taking its advice from Eaton's instead of from the Catholic Bishops. It should be listening to the Bishops for a change.

My question is for the part-time feminist or the election time feminist, the Prime Minister, and involves a basic question of equity. Does he agree with Judge Abella when Judge Abella pointed out that when you convert full-time jobs to part-time jobs, instead of advancing the cause of women you take women backwards? If he agrees with that, will he stand up and say he agrees with it and state that he will make sure that Air Canada reverses its bargaining position, and will make sure that no other agency of the Crown does what Air Canada is trying to do?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the NDP seems to think that he has a monopoly on any kind of virtue floating around. His remarks about part-time commitments to equality for women are deeply unfair, and he knows it. He is looking at a Government which has appointed a record number of women to senior Cabinet offices, a Government that responded promptly and equitably to the Abella report, which introduced progressive divorce legislation, and which increased handsomely the number of appointments of women to senior roles in the public service.

• (1430)

We made a genuine commitment to enhancing the rights of women across the nation, and we shall do so, notwithstanding the snarky remarks of the Leader of the NDP, who is a part-time politician in this regard.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

CONDITIONS IMPOSED ON EVENTUAL ACQUISITION OF MITEL—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In 1980, the Government of which he was a member at the time awarded Mitel a grant of several million dollars for expansion projects. The decision to award the grant was conditional on following requirements being met: purchase of Canadian capital equipment, production in Canada of 75 per cent of the company's micro-electronic products, and finally, a priority option for the Canadian Government to purchase shares of the company. Could the Minister give the House the assurance that the conditions imposed on Mitel by his Government at the time will also be imposed on the future buyer of the company?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I already answered that question. I believe it was the lead question put by a member of the Official Opposition. We are well aware of the undertakings that were given by Mitel at the time to which the Hon. Member is referring and we intend, of course, to make sure that those conditions are met and honoured.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT'S APPARENTLY CONTRADICTORY ATTITUDE

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. Considering that the Minister has already endorsed the British take-over, I think he is making it very difficult for FIRA to do its job.

How can the Minister say that they want to set conditions for potential buyers, when he seems to consider the acquisition and take-over as a foregone conclusion and has already given the company his blessing?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member obviously underestimates the gravity of the situation with respect to Mitel.

This is a company that was finding it difficult to survive. It was finding it difficult to maintain the some 2,500 Canadian jobs that are presently being maintained by that company. Its debt load was very, very severe.

It has recently had an offer from the British concern to put $330 million of fresh equity into that company, with the establishment and the technology remaining in Canada. This is being done with a view to making the company a genuine northern telecommunications company in relation to the British Telecom operation, but on an international basis. Surely the Hon. Member will give us an opportunity to look at the details and to make sure that, within those parameters, the conditions to which the Hon. Member is referring will in truth be met.

* * *

LABOUR RELATIONS

AIR CANADA STRIKE—EFFECT ON WOMEN WORKERS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister says that the Government has a genuine commitment to enhancement of the rights of women. I am sure he does recognize that the effect of the dispute going on with Air Canada at the moment, if Air Canada were to win, would be to reduce further the economic opportunities for women to work full-time in the work-place at reasonable salary levels with reasonable benefits. With that in mind, will the Prime Minister move to suggest, by way of a directive given to the Departments and agencies of Government, that until this matter is resolved the departments and agencies should not purchase airline tickets from Air Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it very clear to the Hon. Member, and to all Hon. Members of the House, that the proposal that Air Canada is offering regarding job security is unparalleled in the airline industry. Furthermore, it is the wish of Air Canada to treat full-time and part-time employees on a more equitable basis and to ensure that they are entitled to pensions, dental plans, and seniority.

The allegation that full-time employees will be laid off to make way for part-time employees is untrue. The fact of the matter is that, under the proposal that is being negotiated at the present time, seniority will govern any future layoffs if they should occur, a policy which heretofore has not been in existence.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER INTERVENE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. Given that the Minister of Transport does not appear to understand that what is being offered by Air Canada is a reduction of the number of full-time positions and an increase in the number of part-time positions which pay a lower hourly rate, and therefore undermine the economic stability of the women who are employed in those positions, will the Prime Minister show leadership and put some kind of commitment behind what he says he believes, by telling Air Canada that the Government will not deal with it until it meets the Government's requirements regarding equality for women?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member does not have to engage in the collective bargaining process. He can certainly phone his friends to give them that advice. The fact of the matter is that the unions themselves have recognized the need for more part-time workers. They have agreed to increasing the level of part-time workers to 30 per cent. Air Canada has a somewhat different view, but that principle has been accepted. It is simply a matter of the detail that has to be negotiated further. I think the best thing that could happen is that, rather than debating this issue on the floor of the House of Commons, the Hon. Member should encourage the union leaders to get back to the bargaining table. Perhaps it is time for some enlightened leadership on their part.

* * *

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

MODIFICATIONS TO SYSTEM—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

In his paper "A New Direction for Canada", on page 78, the Minister of Finance said that the Government might also give consideration to more far-reaching changes to the unemployment insurance system. The Minister wondered, for instance, whether maternity benefits should be reconsidered. The reason given by the Minister of Finance for transferring the program was that he wanted to make things easier for small businesses. Women object to the fact that maternity benefits are considered a social program. They do not want these funds to come from the Government's Consolidated Fund. They are opposed to maternity benefits being removed from the unemployment insurance program. Could the Prime Minister give the House the assurance that he will see to it the program is continued?

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has posed a question that has been raied in the House on several occasions. The response that has been given is that the Unemployment Insurance Fund is in fact going to be reviewed at the request of all of those involved in the Unemployment Insurance Fund, including employers, employees, women's groups, and labour unions. That over-all review will take place. Until that review is completed, no changes of the nature to which the Hon. Member alludes will be made.

[Translation]

INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT HAS STUDIED PAYING EMPLOYERS' SHARE

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, that was not a very satisfactory answer. I shall direct my second question to the Prime Minister.

Since the reason given by the Minister of Finance for transferring this program was that he wanted to take some of the pressure off small businesses, could the Prime Minister inform the House whether he has considered having the Government pay the employer's share?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for her question. I think she will agree that answers to such questions would appropriately be dealt with in the Budget.

* * *

WOMEN

PROTECTION OF PERSONS WORKING WITH VIDEO DISPLAY TERMINALS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the President of the Treasury Board. It concerns the Government's dealings with its own employees working with the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women.

The Council will not accept the standards proposed by the employees' union for the protection of persons working with video display terminals. Is the President of the Treasury Board now ready to assure this House and Canadian women that he will allow the Advisory Council to provide for those standards in the collective agreement for the protection of women?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the Advisory Council unfortunately has had very few meetings over these last twelve months. There was a meeting quite recently, and I have received recommendations to which I will respond in the weeks to come.

• (1440)

[English]

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, that was an incomplete answer. Does the Minister recall that the previous Government, which did not have a very enlightened policy toward its employees, but was a little post-Dickensian, accepted such a clause and, indeed, a clause on technological change? Not a large number of people are involved, but the principle is very important.

Would the Minister agree that the Government has the responsibility to show some leadership in these crucial areas; that women who work for the Government should get the best conditions; that we should work together to get them generalized, and that the Government should not be using the private sector as an excuse for very poor working conditions for women?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the Hon. Member that that is exactly what we are trying to do in all our relationships of that nature. We are trying to show ourselves as the leader in such relationships, and we will continue to do so. The issue is under active consideration. We will not try to use the Public Service as an excuse, but quite the opposite. We will try to give an example to a broad spectrum of Canadian businesses on how they should deal with these kinds of issues.

* * *

FOOD AND DRUGS

BAN ON SALE OF HERBAL PRODUCTS

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. As the Minister is no doubt aware, over the past few months officials of the federal Health Protection Branch have ordered the removal of certain herbal products from sale. Can the Minister advise the House why the departmental officials undertook this action? Is there any consideration being given to permit the sale of these products pending the results of the advisory committee's recommendation?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, what the Hon. Member has mentioned is correct. The problem has developed with the Health Protection Branch and distributors of certain products, namely, that the products, in and of themselves, are distributed in other forms as well. That is where the first difficulty arises. But certain claims are made by some distributors as to the medicinal effects which those products have, which cannot be substantiated.

We have met with herbal distributors, including those in his home province of British Columbia, which resulted in the establishment of an advisory committee. That committee is expected to report between the middle to the end of September. There is no doubt in my mind that we will have to change some methods regarding the manner in which these products are approved. I thank the Hon. Member for the question.

* * *

STATUS OF WOMEN

UN DECADE FOR WOMEN—ATTENDANCE AT CLOSING CONFERENCE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. It concerns not the issue of part-time feminists, but vacation-time feminists.

We were shocked to learn last weekend, through the media, that the Government will send 10 Ministers, no critics and no women's representatives, on a July safari to mark the closing of the United Nations' Decade for Women. The cost of first-class airfare, alone, for the ministerial junket will be $46,420. Does the Minister not believe that these funds would be better directed toward real change for women instead of the parliamentary air bussing of Cabinet Ministers who have shown in the past eight months that they have no interest in changing the status quo for the women of Canada?

Hon. Walter McLean (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well that there are two groups going to Nairobi to the conference which will mark the end of the UN Decade for Women. With the support of Government and other sectors, it is estimated that there will be over 30 leaders of national women's organizations at the voluntary forum. The official government delegation has not yet been named. Cabinet has not yet reviewed the matter.

WOMEN'S REPRESENTATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): It's about time the Government learned that the women of Canada do not want a two-tier status.

[Translation]

I would like to ask whether the Government is at least ready to replace the safari holidays for Progressive Conservatives with a women's delegation at the Government level, that is women like those on the National Action Committee, women who are ready to go on with their work upon returning to Canada, rather than simply going on holidays in July as 10 ministers of the Mulroney Cabinet have chosen to do?

Hon. Walter McLean (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is not telling the truth. This is not true. The truth is the Government will appoint a delegation, a widely representative delegation from the Government with officials and also other Canadian representatives.

* * *

[English]

SOCIAL SECURITY

SOCIAL SERVICE SPENDING

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Minister will recall that during the election campaign her Party talked about jobs, jobs, jobs, and especially jobs for women. In British Columbia cuts in social service spending in the last year have increased the unemployment rate for women by some two percentage points, while at the same time the unemployment rate for men dropped by two points. In light of the result of those cut-backs in social spending, could the Minister assure the House today, in the absence of the Minister of Finance, that no cuts will be made in social service spending in the Budget?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I really do not believe that the Hon. Member expects me to tell him, right now, what is in the Budget or what is not in the Budget. I can tell him quite honestly that I do not know what is in the Budget. If I did, it would be a Budget leak. But I will tell him that in the last month some 47,000 women found jobs. That was the biggest month-over-month increase in employment for women in the last five years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: That came about because of the confidence which is being restored in the economy of the country, and because of the kinds of programs which we are introducing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, the Minister evaded the question. I was asking about women, and I used British Columbia as an example.

In a paper which was presented last fall to an international conference, the Government said:

> Government funded jobs that have maintained women's employment levels . . . are likely to disappear as restraint policies take hold.

In light of that, will the Minister abandon any plans to cut social service spending in the Budget? Can she give a commitment to the House, as Minister of Employment, that there will be a target to reduce unemployment for women by 2.5 per cent in the next year? We had a six and five program for inflation. What about a target to cut the unemployment rate for women?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I too was talking about women when I said that 47,000 women who did not have jobs before found jobs last month.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: I also want to tell the Hon. Member that in all the labour market strategies, job programs, and training programs, for the first time women are being brought into the programs on a full and equitable basis. They will receive the same amount of funding and the same considerations. That is something which has not happened before. Previously, women were hived off into separated programs, put into ghettos, and not given the same kind of equality which existed elsewhere.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Oral Questions

STATUS OF WOMEN

IMPROVEMENT OF CONDITIONS—GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State who is responsible for the status of women. This past weekend the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, representing 360 member groups from across Canada, met in Ottawa to discuss the economic integration of women into Canadian society. Job creation, job security, training, and affirmative action were identified as the key issues of concern.

In view of the fact that these issues affecting women were neglected by the previous administration, would the Minister tell us what specific action this Government has taken to address these concerns and to advance the status of women in Canada?

Hon. Walter McLean (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, shortly after the Government took office I had the opportunity to meet with the President of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, and her executive. The question of the integration of women's issues was fundamental in their representation to me. The Hon. Member will recall that at the First Ministers' Conference in Regina, women's issues were integral to that discussion. In addition, women's representatives were present at the Economic Summit. The Hon. Member will also know, as the Prime Minister has said, that a number of significant appointments have been made at senior levels in government. Those appointments were made by this Government.

● (1450)

Let me also indicate to the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker, that at this moment the House Leaders are negotiating for the establishment of a joint parliamentary committee on the status of women.

* * *

[Translation]

HUMAN RIGHTS

SPOUSES OF ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL SERVING OVERSEAS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. On April 17, 1985, Section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms came into force, guaranteeing full equality to all men and women. All women except wives of Armed Forces personnel serving overseas. The later are considered dependant, the same way as children—they are called "D.W.'s" for "Dependent Wives". This designation follows them everywhere. When they are admitted to a hospital, they have to use as I.D. their husbands' social insurance card, because they have none. They are "D.W.s". Does the Minister intend to give instruction to correct that situation?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that is a matter which is being addressed by the subcommittee which is studying equality situations arising out of the Charter. But I might just reflect for a moment in general, in response to the Hon. Member, that we are very actively trying to rectify a number of these horrible legacies which were left by the Liberal Party when they were in government.

[Translation]

DEPENDENT WIFE—REQUEST THAT EXPRESSION BE REMOVED FROM ARMED FORCES ADMINISTRATION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, maybe the Minister of National Defence could then suggest that Armed Forces personnel should appear before the Committee on Equality of Rights, because they have not yet agreed to do so.

Also, since the Hon. Member is aware of the situation of the wives of Armed Forces personnel, can he now commit himself before the House that the designation "D.W." will be dropped from the Forces' terminology?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, certainly, Mr. Speaker, as I just indicated a moment ago, that kind of terminology was put there by the Party of which the Hon. Member was a member when it was in office. That, and other matters of equality, are being addressed in a very aggressive way before the subcommittee.

I want to clear up a misapprehension that the Hon. Member may have unintentionally left with Hon. Members of the House. There has been no refusal of any of the officials of Defence, or of myself, to appear before either the subcommittee or the main committee studying these matters, and arrangements will be made to address the equality issues in the fullest possible way to the satisfaction of all Hon. Members of the House.

* * *

INDUSTRY

TAKEOVER OF MITEL CORPORATION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. British Telecom is a regulated monopoly under British Government legislation, effectively controlled by British Cabinet Ministers. The British Government has already used its control to block a joint venture between British Telecom and IBM. Does the Government believe that it is sensible to place Mitel, an important, dynamic, and innovative Canadian private enterprise, under the control of a foreign, state-controlled monopoly?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I only wish our socialist friends would at least keep up with the times. The fact is that British Telecom was one of the most successful privatizations in world history.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised at the Minister for thinking that I would not be aware of that.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: I looked at whose footsteps he is following. The point is, Mr. Speaker, that 49 per cent of that company is still state-controlled—

Mr. Broadbent: Exactly. Controlling interest.

Mr. Langdon: —and given that the British Government is by far the largest shareholder, that makes it in effect in charge of that company.

Mr. Broadbent: Laugh at that.

Mr. Langdon: In addition, Mr. Speaker, legislation exists which dominates the company and sets its policy. Does the Minister not realize that it is partly his own commitment to selling off TeleGlobe, the commitment which is taking up—

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a question? Quickly, please.

Mr. Langdon: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Is the Minister prepared to turn off this slide out of private enterprise control putting Mitel under the control of, in fact, one of the most powerful state corporations in the world?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: It's true.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am certainly pleased that our socialist friend was not as far behind the times as I thought he was.

Mr. Broadbent: He is right on.

Mr. Stevens: But he is still pretty far behind. I can only say to the Hon. Member that when we have an opportunity to review this transaction under the provisions of FIRA, we will have a much better opportunity and information base on which to answer the type of question the Hon. Member is raising.

Ms. Jewett: You mean you don't know now?

Oral Questions

CANADA PENSION PLAN

HOMEMAKERS PENSION PROPOSAL

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He knows that he has accepted to be the keynote speaker at the Canadian Pensions Conference on June 5 in Toronto. Can Canadians assume, from the fact that he has agreed to be the keynote speaker, that his Government is, therefore, prepared to act on the election campaign promises which he and his Party made last summer on the inclusion of homemakers in the Canadian Pension Plan and on improvements to the private and public pension plan system? Or is this going to be another speech of platitudes whereby we are going to set up another round of negotiations?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Hon. Member that many of the points he raised in his question were covered by the task force on pension review in the former Parliament. The Hon. Member also knows that, along with many changes in the Canada Pension Plan, those matters obviously must have the agreement of the provinces. I point out to him that there have been meetings between the Finance Ministers on the premiums, and tied in with that, at the next stage, will be any changes in terms of benefits. So the matter to which the Hon. Member refers is well in hand.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of National Health and Welfare well knows that after seven months of negotiations there has been a consensus package arrived at. In those negotiations are he and his Government demanding the inclusion of homemakers in the Canada Pension Plan as part of that agreement?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is well aware that in these negotiations, the various points we want to have discussed will be discussed with the Ministers and not bargained on the floor of the House of Commons. But I say to the Hon. Member that the matter of the homemakers pension, which we committed ourselves to in the last election campaign, and which is now a commitment of this Government—we want to see it included. I would hope we would get the same kind of support from his Party. While the Hon. Member has given his support individually, I have not received the same support from members of his own Party.

* * *

EMPLOYMENT

CHALLENGE '85—PROGRESS REPORT

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. She announced earlier this year a program called Challenge '85. I am wondering if she can report to the House, or tell us now, how many jobs have been created under that program.

Some Hon. Members: Order Paper.

Mr. Blenkarn: What is the success of the program?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am always very happy to talk about Challenge '85. I did give some figures on Friday when that matter was raised. I am pleased to say that the success of the program has brought in, not just government funding from the federal Government, but funding from the various provinces and, in addition, something in the vicinity of $100 million from the private sector, all of which will go to create more jobs for young people this summer.

* * *

INDUSTRY

MITEL CORPORATION—OPTION TO PURCHASE SHARES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, this must be the only Parliament in the world where the Minister responsible for regional industrial expansion stands up and says that the second largest telecommunications high-tech company in the country has been sold to foreign buyers, and gets applauded by members of his own Party. When the original agreement with Mitel was entered into, there was a clause in the agreement which said that the Government would have an opportunity to purchase shares in the Company at an appropriate time. Is that clause still in effect and, if so, was that offer made to the Canadian Government?

• (1500)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure whether there was such a clause. If there was, I can tell the Hon. Member that, to the best of my knowledge, no offer or request was made to the Canadian Government with respect to the purchase of shares of Mitel. I can, of course, tell the Hon. Member that when Mitel got into severe financial difficulties, they did approach the Canadian Government for further assistance. That was still under review, and presumably, if this British Telecom deal falls through, this would still be the plight of Mitel. They do have financial difficulties at the present time.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) on Friday, May 10, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

[Translation]

I have the honour to inform the House that the petition presented by the Hon. Member for Richelieu (Mr. Plamondon) does not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

JUSTICE AND LEGAL AFFAIRS

PRESENTATION OF FOURTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge-Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the fourth report in both official languages of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs dealing with Bill C-27.

* * *

PIONEER TRUST COMPANY

TABLING OF COPIES OF LICENCES

Mrs. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, in conformity with Standing Order 46(2), I have the honour to lay on the Table copies in both official languages of the licences for Pioneer Trust issued by the Department of Insurance, pursuant to a commitment I made in this House on May 6.

* * *

PETITIONS

STAR WARS RESEARCH

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition, together with some 600 letters of support, signed by the McMaster University President, Mr. Alvin Lee, along with some 600 professors, graduate students and support staff. The petition strongly opposes Canadian participation in research and development for the U.S. Strategic Defence Initiative known as star wars, and these petitioners have indicated that they themselves would wish not to benefit from any research undertaken as a result of the Canadian Government participating in such a program.

TINA LYNN MALLETTE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a petition signed by over 6,000 people from the National Capital area, asking the Government of Canada and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to immediately intervene in the case of the abduction of Tina Lynn Mallette, and to summon the Ambassador of Tunisia to a meeting which would hopefully result in the safe return to Canada of Tina Lynn Mallette.

* * *

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENTS RESPECTING ABORTION PROVISIONS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-238, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (abortion).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to repeal those provisions of the Criminal Code relating to abortion, provisions which have denied access to safe, therapeutic abortions and have resulted in lengthy delays and complications for thousands of Canadian women. The Bill would ensure that the decision on abortion is one that is to be made by the woman involved in consultation with her doctor.

Finally, I call upon the Government to make more funds available for sex education and birth control awareness and accessibility.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

* * *

WAYS AND MEANS

INCOME TAX ACT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions between the Parties and I think you will find a disposition in the House to accept the following motion:

That the Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the statute law relating to income tax and to make a related amendment to the Tax Court of Canada Act laid upon the Table on Thursday, May 9, 1985, be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs for examination; and

That the Committee report its findings and recommendations to the House no later than September 30, 1985.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have the unanimous consent required to put his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House willing to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall all questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I simply rise on a point of order to designate Wednesday as an allotted day.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—CANADIAN WOMEN

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Ms. Jewett:

That this House recognizing the continuing economic inequality of Canadian Women, demands that the government incorporate into its forthcoming budget the following initiatives, the:

1. reform of the tax system rather than the introduction of further public spending cuts which impact most adversely on women;

2. provision of job creation and training programs targetted to women, and funding sufficient to enable the Canadian Human Rights Commission to enforce equal pay of work of equal value legislation, and develop an effective enforcement mechanism for affirmative action programs;

3. provision of more transition houses and services for women and children who are victims of family violence; and

4. provision of increased funding to ensure access to quality daycare to meet the urgent needs of Canadian parents and children.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, before lunch I had a chance to say a few words about the motion before the House today in the name of the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett). It calls for certain legislation and action to clear up some of the inequality between men and women. I talked earlier this morning about some of the tables in the Abella report which showed the participation rate for women going way, way up in the last 15 or 20 years. However, in the major occupations which pay well, women are still a very, very small minority. As well, in some of the other big and important occupation groups such as farming, forestry and fisheries, the number of women is very, very small.

Another very interesting point is that the discrepancy between salary levels for men and women in this country is very, very wide.

[Translation]

I have here the French version of the report of the Abella Commission of Inquiry on Equality in Employment for women. Table No. 10 shows the income gap between men and women. As everyone knows, Mr. Speaker, women have always been paid a lot less than men. The table shows that the percentage of average income for women as compared with the income of men was only 60.5 per cent in 1971. Six years later, in 1977, the average income of women was 61.7 per cent of the average income of Canadian men, and four years later, in 1981, it was 63.5 per cent. In ten years, the average salary increase for Canadian women was only 3 per cent.

[English]

And here we are now in the 1980s and we still find women in this country earning only 63 per cent or 64 per cent of what men earn. So I think the basic issue before the House today is that of equality; equality between the sexes, equality in the workplace, equal pay for work of equal value, equality in pension plans, training plans and things of that sort.

Looking at the unemployment level in this country, we heard the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) boasting that the unemployment rate dropped a little bit last month. But the unemployment rate for women in this country has been higher than 11 per cent ever since the election of the Government across the way. It has never gone below 11 per cent in the seven or eight months the present Government has been in office, and I say it is really much, much too high. My concern is that, given the Budget which comes down in a couple of weeks' time, and this Government's cut-back on social services, it will be the women of Canada who will be hit the hardest.

A good example is British Columbia. The biggest reason for the increase last month in unemployment in British Columbia was that women were being laid off. In fact, in the last year, because of the restraint program of Premier Bennett in that particular province, the unemployment rate for women went up by 2 per cent, while at the same time it dropped by 2 per cent for men in that province.

● (1510)

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the status of Canadian women is an issue with a number of very significant aspects. This afternoon I would like to speak briefly about the matter of training and the need to spend more money in this country on federal programs for Canadian women.

Second, I want to mention as well the important question of part time work. Mr. Speaker, 73 per cent of part time workers in Canada are women. Right now we are witnessing a serious labour conflict at Air Canada, and there is also the strike against Eaton's which began shortly before Christmas.

Mr. Speaker, I am seriously concerned because I think I detect a new economic trend in this country: part time work is on the increase and there are fewer full time jobs for Canadian men and women.

Third, Mr. Speaker, there is also the problem of homemakers, because there are still many Canadian women who stay at home to raise their children, and of women who work on the farm with their husband, and there is much discrimination against these women.

Mr. Speaker, there is also the matter of women working in small businesses. They are subjected to discrimination, they have no pension and they are not entitled to investment credit and such things without the signature of their husband.

Besides, there is a group which is almost forgotten in our country, Mr. Speaker, and that is the group of women between 60 and 64 of age. It is the group of Canadian women which is most often overlooked by the Parliament of Canada as well as by Canadian legislators in all provinces.

And finally, Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about social programs. As I said in the House this afternoon when I directed a question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald), I am concerned about the future of social programs in Canada. Just before Christmas, we held in this House a debate on family allowances, on other social programs, on the future of medicare in Canada and all other similar programs affecting women more than men.

[English]

In many ways, Mr. Speaker, it all comes back to the question of employment. It comes back to the principle of equal pay for work of equal value and to recommendations made in this report by Judge Abella for employment equity and affirmative action. It comes back to Parliament having the courage to legislate in this country affirmative action in the private sector and through contract compliance with companies that do business with the federal Government in the amount of billions of dollars each and every year. I do not think we have done enough in terms of forcing the Government and the private sector to implement legislation to provide equal pay for work of equal value. We must move now and move quickly if we are to have equality.

Let us look at the Government's record. Today the Minister spoke about women and jobs for them. Only 5 per cent of the money which has been set aside for employment-creating projects has been specifically earmarked for young people and women in Canada. About 42 per cent of women are now in the workforce. Yet we do not have a commitment, even in the Canada Employment and Immigration centres, to ensure that at least 45 per cent of the people placed in jobs are women. When we got the figures from the Minister just before Christmas, we saw that the number of women placed in jobs in the country was well under 42 per cent.

We must move quickly to ensure parity in this very important area. We need affirmative action as well as specific goals and targets. In two or three places in her report Judge Abella told us clearly that we will not have affirmative action or resolution of the problem of lack of equality unless we have specific targets and goals and timetabling to ensure that there is compliance by the federal Government, Crown corporations and the private sector. She was very clear in that particular recommendation.

[Translation]

The Abella report clearly states on page 215 that a voluntary program is not effective at all.

[English]

We need some mandatory regulations. If we do not have that, I do not think we will have any appreciable increase of fairness and equity in jobs for women in this great country of ours.

Another point which I am concerned about is that of enforcing employment equity in the country. The Government is saying that the Human Rights Commission can do that. Where is the money to come from for the Human Rights Commission? It presently has a backlog of cases. Is Parliament willing to vote a substantial increase in funding for the Human Rights Commission to undertake this important work? I do not get the indication that it is.

I mentioned as well the important issue of training. It is important to ensure that we have more positions in federal Government training programs for women. I suggest that 50 per cent of those positions should be filled by women. Fifty per cent of the funding for training should be for women in the country. That is the type of affirmative action we need for the Canadian female majority. However, that is not happening in our country today.

Another issue which concerns me is that of the elimination, since the election of the present Government, of the program of non-traditional occupational training. That program was eliminated in the Budget cuts of last November. That program should be reinstated to give women a better opportunity to receive an education or technical skill in a job which is seen as non-traditional. In my remarks before one o'clock I gave two or three very good examples in that particular field.

Another issue is part-time work. I said in French that I think this is a growing tendency in the country. It will hurt women much more than men because 73 per cent of part-time jobs are held by women. We must take a very strong stand to attempt to preserve full-time jobs where possible rather than letting them be eroded into the field of part-time work where there are very few or non-existent benefits. We must ensure that benefits in part-time jobs are prorated with regard to health care, dental care, pensions, sick leave, and maternity leave.

I would like to conclude by asking the House to keep a commitment made in the last election campaign. For the first time in the history of our country we had a debate on women's issues which was organized by the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. The leaders of the three Parties in this country spoke in a very positive way about the need to remedy and eliminate the inequalities which exist for the women of Canada. I see no significant evidence that there has been any move by the Government to change that since September 4.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we now have the opportunity to amend the Canadian legislation to provide equality to Canadian women. Mr. Speaker, there is much discrimination and unfairness in our modern society and it is time we do something about it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments. Debate. The Hon. Secretary of State of Canada (Mr. McLean).

Hon. Walter McLean (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege for me to take part in this debate.

● (1520)

[English]

I am pleased to have the opportunity today to reaffirm my Government's commitment to the achievement of full equality for women in all aspects of our society. Just six months ago this session of Parliament opened with a Speech from the Throne that did more than any previous Government's statement to recognize the needs of women. Members of the House will recall that we made a commitment at that time, which we have sought actively to maintain, to take a comprehensive and integrated approach to improving the status of women.

[Translation]

This approach was clearly demonstrated by our commitment to implement the economic renewal strategy which is so badly needed in this country.

[English]

Key to the economic renewal and equity for women is a co-operative process of federal-provincial consultations. In this vein, I have pledged to work closely and consult regularly with my provincial colleagues—my fellow advocates with Governments of this country—on behalf of women. Their assistance is vital to improving the status of women in areas under their provincial jurisdiction. I am referring here to areas of health, education and, perhaps most important of all, the delivery of employment programs.

In order to assist in this process of consultation, last December I invited my provincial and territorial counterparts to Ottawa for a special and extraordinary meeting. At that time we discussed how we could best address the issue of equality for women within the context of a debate on the general economic policies of the Government and the nation. We will continue to address these themes when we gather again in Winnipeg in June for our annual meeting.

Our Government also recognizes that inviting women to join as full partners with business, labour and Government in all major economic decisions is essential to ensuring that Canada and Canadian women achieve their full economic potential. Women have long baked the nation's pies; the time is overdue for women to sit at the table and share in the eating of that pie. To this end, we have made a special effort to ensure that the concerns of women were represented both in last February's First Ministers' Conference on the economy which was held in Regina and then at the National Economic Conference that was held here in Ottawa last March.

One thing that has clearly emerged from all of these discussions is that women's issues are essentially economic issues. They are bread and butter issues.

Women are an integral part of the economic process, yet they suffer the most from major economic inequalities. Over the past few decades, women have continually increased their contribution to the national economic effort. They contribute in their presence in the labour force and also increasingly as entrepreneurs. Today, 60 per cent of all Canadian women aged 15 to 64 are in the labour force. This percentage increases each year and it is expected that by the end of this century the participation rate of women and men will be at the same level, with about equal representation of both sexes in the labour force. Today, women make up 41.7 per cent of the total workforce but the full potential of the Canadian economy will be achieved only through the best use of all available resources.

[Translation]

Women have always been on the same footing as men in assuming many economic burdens. However, they have rarely been able to earn the same recognition and the same remuneration.

[English]

Women's rightful claim to equality has been met with a built-in systemic barrier in our society. As a result, women's economic activity has been confined to a narrow range of sectors or occupations. Women's unemployment rate has historically been higher than men's. Added to this, structural changes which are currently taking place in the economy threaten a whole range of other jobs traditionally held by women. The productive potential of Canada's women is therefore largely underutilized, depriving women of a much needed income for the provision of their family and their own economic security.

I believe that society pays a double price for the underutilization of half of its population, through welfare payments to families and individuals and through a less than maximum level of general activity.

Policies to address the unequal economic situation of women in this country have, until now, generally been of a collective nature. They have been oriented toward social rather than economic objectives. These policies all tend to compensate for the perverse effects that our economic system has on women.

Through years of application they have been progressively refined. Yet their mutually reinforcing effects could have been considerably enhanced if they were challenged through an integrated framework. It is just such a framework that my Government has begun to build.

Need I remind the House of the quick action the Government took in responding to the recommendations of the Abella Inquiry into equality in employment. We have adopted employment equity as a priority for this Government.

The employment equity principle brings together measures related to equal opportunities, affirmative action, equal pay for work of equal value and supportive measures in the areas of training and child care. It is a principle that has strong potential to change the status of women in the workforce.

Employment equity is not a new idea. Previous Governments have paid lip service to the concept of labour force equality. It has been talked about, worried about and studied but it was not until this Government was elected that anyone took action.

We have taken the first step. We have moved to require Crown corporations, federally regulated businesses and contractors providing goods and services to the Government to implement employment equity. My colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald), has been discussing these measures with representatives of business and labour and with those whom the measures are designed to benefit—women, members of the visible minority groups, native people and disabled individuals.

In attending some of these briefings with her, we have been impressed by the desire to work with us to find a meaningful application.

[Translation]

The legislation required to implement these initiatives will soon be introduced in this House. Once more, this is only a first step in tackling the many barriers to equality in the work place.

[English]

The Government's commitment to the concept of equal pay for work of equal value was clearly stated in the Speech from the Throne.

Legislation guaranteeing equal pay for work of equal value has been on the books since 1977. But legislation by itself, of course, is not sufficient. It must also be effectively enforced. The previous Government relied on what might best be described as a fire-fighting approach. As complaints were made, Treasury Board worked with the Human Rights Commission on a resolution. What was lacking was a positive approach.

Our Government has moved to ensure that the principle of equal pay for work of equal value is applied in the federal Public Service.

As an employer, the Government intends to take a proactive stance to ensure the principle is fully implemented. We have established a senior level, joint union-management committee to do a detailed study on implementing equal pay for work of equal value. The committee's preliminary report is expected at the end of next month.

We expect that our efforts to implement equal pay for work of equal value will be a model for the private sector and other levels of Government. At the same time, we have taken additional steps to encourage private sector compliance with the legislation.

The Canadian Human Rights Commission has developed draft guidelines to assist employers in implementing the equal pay for work of equal value section of the Canadian Human Rights Act. The Human Rights Commission has also pledged to take action against employers dragging their feet in complying with the guidelines.

• (1530)

As was recognized in the Speech from the Throne, the Government recognizes that measures to improve and expand skills training and retraining are essential elements in a sound approach to providing job opportunities and coping with rapid technological change. Trends in labour market supply and demand indicate that training will need to be more varied and better targeted in order to help prepare the unemployed and those displaced by technological change for future work and to create the skills base needed for a competitive economy.

Of course, training is of major importance to the expansion of women's occupational options. It is also a priority instrument in achieving women's equality in the economic sector. The federal Government and the provinces have agreed to a new medium term strategy designed to increase the work capabilities of the current and potential labour force. New orientation will better address the scope and needs of women in relation to the labour market. These needs are diverse, reflecting the diversity of the situations experienced by women in Canadian society today. Persistent high unemployment and rapid technological developments are major challenges facing our Government over the coming years. They are also factors which affect women in particular. We are firmly committed to meeting these challenges through the development of a skilled and highly competitive labour force where women occupy their rightful place. To that end we have taken steps to ensure that women constitute a special target group in all federal job-creation and training programs. We have placed major emphasis on training for women entering the workforce for the first time and for those re-entering the workforce after a lengthy absence.

We have already implemented measures to make it easier for women with young children to take training courses. We have pledged to investigate means by which we can ensure that women who wish to improve opportunities for themselves and for their families through training and retraining are not penalized through our income support systems.

[Translation]

At the provincial level, we have urged the provinces to review some of their policies, for instance, in cases where medical or dental care coverage is reduced or cancelled when mothers on welfare also receive additional training allowances.

[English]

I am firmly convinced that the new labour market strategy will address the scope and nature of the needs of women in relation to the workforce, but economic policies and economic strategies are not enough. They must be supplemented by effective social policies.

The influx of married women into the labour market in recent years has been nothing less than dramatic. In fact, between 1975 and 1983 the labour force participation rate of married women rose by almost 11 per cent, more than twice the rate at which single women entered the labour force. At present, one of every two women with children works outside the home. In view of this, I cannot over-emphasize the importance of providing adequate support systems for families where both partners work.

We know for a fact that many more families would be living below the poverty line if both partners were not working. Unfortunately, changes to our social structures have not kept pace with this fact. For too long women have borne the double burden of family and their work responsibilities. Studies have shown that women in the labour force average almost four hours each day on domestic and child care duties, compared with six hours for women not in the labour force and only two hours for men. The federal Government cannot pass legislation to force men to do the vacuuming or to wash the dishes. Many men may heave a sigh of relief that we cannot. However, it is high time that we recognized the role that we as legislators can play in providing the necessary support systems for working parents.

We intend to address this issue through the establishment of a parliamentary task force on the future of child care in Canada. The terms of reference of this task force are currently being drafted and will be announced in the near future by my colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). The parliamentary task force will undertake public consultations on child care. My Government feels strongly that such consultations by parliamentarians will help raise the level of public awareness of the important issue of child care in Canada. We hope that many groups and individuals will become involved in this public discussion of a most serious issue. Of course, the parliamentary task force will benefit from the research already conducted by the task force on child care headed by Dr. Katie Cooke. I expect to receive Dr. Cooke's task force report this fall. It will contain recommendations on the role of the federal Government in the development of quality, affordable, accessible child care.

We are also working closely with the provinces on the issue of child care. A working group of officials was set up following last year's meeting of federal-provincial-Territorial Ministers responsible for the status of women. The mandate of this group is to develop initiatives and proposals to address the concerns of availability and affordability of child care, with special attention to the question of the financing arrangements which support child care.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to deal with one of the most serious of all family problems in this day and age.

[English]

Violence is a part of life for thousands of women and children. It is estimated that one in ten women who is married or living with a man is battered by her husband or partner.

Wife battering is found in all communities and cultures and at all economic levels. Women of all ages are abused. A battered woman is not simply the victim of a single abuse incident but is enmeshed in a repetitive cycle of violence which can involve physical, emotional and sexual abuse.

The Government takes seriously its commitment, as stated in the Speech from the Throne, to provide additional assistance to victims of family violence. We are backing up this commitment with continued funding. The federal Government at present is funding 911 beds in more than 50 transition houses established through the non-profit program of Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. We are assisting with the salaries and with the staff for transition houses through the job-creation programs of the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission. We are funding projects to help battered women through the women's programs of my own Department, the Secretary of State. Through the Canada Assistance Plan we have agreed to share with the provinces the cost of providing services in transition houses on a fifty-fifty basis.

In conclusion, let me indicate that steps have been taken to address the whole issue of family violence in a comprehensive and coherent way through the establishment of a special federal-provincial-Territorial working group. This group has examined many aspects of the problem including improvements required to the criminal justice system, social services and public educational programs. The working group will report to my provincial counterparts and to me at our meeting next month on the implementation of initiatives already undertaken and on new measures required to improve our response to the problem of batterred wives.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this Government recognizes that there is considerable work to be done to improve the status of Canadian women.

[English]

Yet we look upon our accomplishments to date with pride. We believe we have laid the groundwork for further action in the days and months to come. As Minister responsible for the status of women, I give the House my commitment to continue to act until all Canadian women have the opportunity to participate as full and equal partners in all aspects of our society.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

● (1540)

[English]

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister who is responsible for the status of women could inform this House whether he agrees with the position taken by his colleagues, Conservative Members of Parliament, who told the Canadian Human Rights last week that constitutional protection for disadvantaged groups like women in minorities threatened the rights of individuals? In particular, does he agree with the statement by the Tory Member of Parliament for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy), who is opposed to affirmative action programs because he believes that all capable people have equal opportunities in the workplace and there is no need for affirmative action programs? Does the Minister agree with the statements of his colleagues to the committee hearings?

Mr. McLean: As the Hon. Member will know, Mr. Speaker, the intention of parliamentary committees is to have a public discussion. Members of Parliament on both sides of the House have a wide range of opinions. The policy of the Government in this regard is laid out clearly in the Throne Speech. The Hon. Member will know that in the actions following the Throne Speech and the decisons that have been taken subsequently by the Government, it speaks in terms of its commitments in these areas.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a couple of particular questions to the Minister, whose goodwill is well known, but who has treated us to vague generalities in the precise points of action. First, I would like to ask him about the situation of women in the United Nations Organization, particularly Canada's promise made in the plan of action five years ago at the Copenhagen conference which he attended at that time as critic of the Conservative Party.

A number of proposals were made, such as that there would be equality for women in appointments under government jurisdiction and in particular in the area of communications where women are very disadvantaged and the portrayal of women is still very much a problem. Very specific proposals with regard to equality were made in areas where the Government has the opportunity to make appointments, such as the CBC and the CRTC. We have not yet come close to equality. Does this mean that the Government is reneging on that commitment made by the previous Government, or is this something we will see implemented very soon?

Further the UN in itself, in its own bodies, was to increase the representation of women, which we have not seen. Has our Canadian delegation pressed for that? If it has, we certainly have not seen any results. I might note that our Canadian delegation has a very poor representation of women. Has the Minister made any representations to improve that?

That is one area of questions on the UN. I would like to ask another question about the Abella report, if I may. Is the Minister aware that the National Action Committee at its conference this weekend came up with a much more scathing reaction to the Abella report? Specifically, it condemns as inadequate the planned legislation in response to the Abella report and urges the federal Government to introduce programs and practices through affirmative action, including mandatory requirements and enforcement mechanisms with numerical objectives and deadlines. Will the Minister give some commitment to these very precise measures, and not just the first reaction of the Government to the Abella report, which was a very weak one indeed?

Mr. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her questions. Her knowledge and interest in this subject are well known to all Canadians. We appreciate her continuing interest.

In the matter of the response to the UN in relation to the plan of action, we have been consulting. As the Hon. Member knows, our response in part requires a federal-provincial response. Our delegation, in reporting at Nairobi, will include provincial representatives. This Government, in terms of its appointments and of our own response, as was indicated, has already moved up to 24 per cent. We hope within the short-term target range to have that number increase to 30 per cent of women in government.

In relation to the important matter of sex stereotyping and communication and the importance of regulatory agencies and the CBC, I have intervened personally on that matter with the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) and with the President of the CBC internally since becoming Minister. We will continue to watch that, despite the necessities of the deficit, in any alterations that must be made within the CBC, for example, women are not in any way disproportionately affected, as they may well be since sometimes they are in the most vulnerable situations.

I thank the Hon. Member for raising the question of women's representation at the United Nations. When I met with the Under-secretary General in New York some months ago, I raised with him the specific matter. As the Hon. Member knows, within our world there are varying attitudes toward equality for women. He indicated to me that he was appreciative of the position Canada has taken historically and continues to take and that it is a priority for the administration. I have also spoken with our ambassador, Mr. Lewis, about that matter. When I was in Vienna for the preparatory meetings before Nairobi, I stated that this is a matter of particular importance to Canada. Therefore, I thank the Hon. Member for her sensitivity to that issue in the larger window.

On the question of the Abella report, the question of mandatory implications was discussed at the time. There were a number of comments at the time when the Government made its response. Generally there was a very favourable response. My attitude is that while I understand that perspective, as Judge Abella says, there has not been movement in the last 10 years. What is now being signalled is a three-year time frame after which, if there is not that type of movement, the Government will have to go back to the drawing board in a relatively short time and address the particular concern that was raised over the weekend.

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, concerning the Nairobi conference, the Minister will recall that at the Copenhagen conference there was a delegation of about 14 people. Both he and I were on that delegation. About half the delegation consisted of members of the Conservative and New Democratic Parties, either provincial or federal parliamentarians. Only about half were government people. Since we were the beneficiaries of this enlightened policy, actually he and I even found occasion to congratulate the Government of the day. I understand that this time the delegation will consist of between 35 and 40 people. I am speaking now only of the official delegation, not the NGOs which, as the Minister knows, do their own thing. Will the Minister follow that precedent and ensure that close to half of the official delegation, including both members of the Parliament of Canada and of the provincial legislatures, be made up not just of government people, but of members of other political Parties?

Mr. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her representation. As I mentioned in Question Period, decisions regarding the make-up of the official delegation have not yet been discussed at Cabinet. Therefore, speculation about the size of the delegation is merely that, speculation. Given the cost involved and also the availability of accommodation, it is likely that the number will be smaller rather than larger. As the opposition critic, I appreciated the opportunity to be in Copenhagen. I will be encouraging my colleagues to see the wisdom of that situation. Although this is clearly a government responsibility, there is a precedent which warrants looking at.

• (1550)

The make-up of the official delegation, as Hon. Members will know, will be the same as the make-up of a delegation to any major United Nations conference. It requires those who are officially appointed by their Governments, either federal or provincial, as well as officials who bring with them expertise. Therefore, the make-up will include people with knowledge of the UN system and particularly the knowledge of women in development and health as well as other areas. We are now discussing the appropriate make-up of that delegation.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period provided for questions and comments has now expired. The Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin).

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I wish to support the motion before the House today, a motion that censures the Government's action with respect to the economic status of women. Mr. Speaker, I beg to disagree with the Minister who spoke previously. The economic inequality of Canadian women has not diminished since September 4, and it is because the requisite legislation and regulations have not been adopted.

The Progressive Conservative Government's record on women's issues is nothing to write home about. Let us go back to last summer. During the election campaign, the Prime Minister made a formal commitment to deal with the problems facing women on the labour market. Speaking in deep and solemn tones, which he likes to do to show how seriously he means what he says, the Prime Minister told women who interviewed him that the status of women was a priority both for him and for the Progressive Conservative Party. Mr. Speaker, I think that from now on we will do well to be wary of the Prime Minister when his voice drops a few octaves and he starts speaking very slowly. His solemn tones are no guarantee of serious commitment to an issue, although he is constantly trying to have Canadian men and women believe otherwise.

During the last election campaign millions of T.V. viewers were treated to the party leaders' debate on the status of women. It was the first time the feminist lobby managed to organize a televised debate of this order. A first, not only for Canada but in fact a world première the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, of which I was president at the time, initiated the negotiations with the C.B.C., and once the framework was established we handed over to the N.A.C., which was responsible for everything up to the televised debate.

This brief success did not have a sequel, and we have every reason to believe it was because the Progressive Conservative Party came to power. However, before the television cameras, the Member for Baie-Comeau (Mr. Mulroney), promised us everything: funding for daycare centres, for shelters for women and children who are victims of family violence, affirmative action programs with provisions for monitoring and evaluation, programs to prepare women for technological change, support programs for businesswomen, and so forth. And what has the Progressive Conservative Government done since it came to power?

Last fall, after hesitating for a long time about whether it was going to maintain the unversality of social programs—in that debate the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) did not come out the winner in Cabinet, to put it mildly—the Government decided to do nothing. Indeed, attacks by the Opposition and the pressure of public opinion managed to shake the convictions of those in the Prime Minister's circle who firmly believed that Canadian men and women had given them a mandate for a shift to the right in economic and social policy. However, Mr. Speaker, that is not quite the case. During the last election campaign, the Progressive Conservative Party tried to give as little indication as possible of what it was going to do, and in conducting its campaign, it tried to please everyone. However, Canadian women managed to get some commitments out of the Prime Minister, and I will get back to these in a minute.

This Government, which has been trying so hard to govern by consensus, should realize that one of the issues in Canada on which there is the broadest consensus is that of the economic equality of women. Since the Government came into office, it did not do much for women, very little even with respect to appointments. I heard the Minister saying earlier that 22 per cent of appointees were women. It is rather interesting since my calculations markedly differ from his, beginning with the number of women who have been appointed executive assistants in the various departments. I would also like to know how many women have been appointed political assistants in various offices. I think our figures lead to quite different conclusions.

Last March, on the occasion of International Women's Day, the Government put up a good front when it introduced measures to ensure employment equal opportunities for women, native people, visible minorities and disabled persons. Compliance is voluntary. As you may recall, voluntary compliance on the competitive labour scene is synonymous with inefficiency. This has been demonstrated in many research projects, the least important of which is certainly not Judge Rosalie Abella's work.

On page 217 of her report, Judge Abella writes:

> It is difficult to see how voluntary programs might appreciably improve employment opportunities for women, native people, disabled persons or visible minorities.

Judge Abella goes on to say:

> Given the seriousness and apparent immutability of discrimination in employment, it would be totally unrealistic and excessively naïve to rely solely on good will, however necessary in voluntary programs, to guarantee equality.

Not only does the Conservative Government not want to define what it means by equality, but it must be noted that no coercive measure is provided should Crown corporations fail to establish an over-all plan to reach equality targets in employment. The Conservative Government does not want to urge private companies to set up employment equality programs. Apparently it does not follow the same logic with respect to work and women in the public service, Government agencies and Crown corporations on one hand, and in the private sector on the other hand.

We know that employment equality measures apply to the public sector and to private companies that get Government contracts. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) said she was positive those measures were effective because the maximum use of manpower resources—and therefore the hiring and promotion of women—were one of the basic factors of efficiency in the work-place. If the Minister really believes that, she should encourage private firms to set up job training programs, which could be perfectly suited to the particular conditions of every firm. The employment legislation must have teeth in order to be effective.

On March 27, 1985, in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal, a few hundred women who met there under the auspices of the Progressive Conservative Women's Caucus were told that without concrete measures such as those recommended in the Abella report, practical results in the area of women equality in employment would be a long way off. But Canadian women are anxious to get what the Hon. Member for Baie-Comeau promised them during the last election. Will we have to wait for another March 8 in order that a further timid step be made along the road to economic equality for women? The Conservative Party's book of promises included certain statements concerning women in the economy, and I would like to recall them just in case our friends opposite might forget about them.

In a press release dated July 26, 1984, it was stated that the Conservative Party wanted to implement positive action programs, with monitoring and evaluation measures in the Public Service, Government agencies and Crown corporations. The Conservative Party also claimed it supported the development and implementation of efficient programs to prepare women for the technological changes and new careers by way of a combination of fiscal incentives, grants and other means. The Progressive Conservative Party even promised business women, if it were elected, to ensure the availability of various information and support programs in the area of economics and financing for business women, women in small and medium-sized businesses and women associates. There is no need to add that we are greatly concerned about the upcoming budget, because judging from all those promises, I am sure the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will have a special program for women getting into business and for small and medium-sized businesses.

• (1600)

I want to emphasize, Mr. Speaker, that after nine months in power, I appreciate that all this is not fully implemented. However, since almost nothing has been undertaken, which makes us wonder whether the promises made by the Right Honourable Prime Minister were only hot air, although the Government has put forward timid proposals for equality in employment for women, it does not seem ready to look at women's work in a more general context.

The Progressive Conservative Party often has the unhappy habit of looking at problems through the wrong end of the telescope. Solving women's labour problems does not mean restrict its effort to the work-place as such.

It is a well known fact that working women very often assume by themselves the responsibility for the children. Day care is not a luxury but sometimes a basic organizational necessity today. Canada does not have even half the number of places in nurseries requested by Canadian women. We know that in the year 2000, 90 per cent of Canadian women will be on the labour market not as a luxury or for their comfort but out of necessity. That is why day care is a priority. Once again, we hope that in the budget, a week or two from now, there will be a specific provision on day care.

Mr. Speaker, I will remind you once again if I may a promise made by the Progressive Conservative Party during the last election campaign concerning day care: The party undertakes to find quickly some realistic and efficient answers to that emergency. Our party will play a leadership role to improve the sharing of responsibilities between mother, father and society. With the co-operation of business, unions and provinces, the party will promote the development of innovative programs, especially in the working place.

As we mentioned earlier, we are still expecting the report of Mrs. Katy Cook and government members have told us that there is a special task force on day care. I am quite willing to have a special task force on day care, but it is still more important to read the report and recommendations before setting up another task force.

Mr. Speaker, Canadian women are eagerly waiting for the Prime Minister to show the leadership he promised. Apparently, the Canadian people did not elect a passionate champion of day care on September 4 last but rather someone who likes to bargain to such an extent that he took the liberty of advising presidents Reagan and Mitterrand in Bonn.

If the Prime Minister is not a passionate champion of day care, he does not support more eagerly transition houses for battered women and children. This is perhaps too far outside his concerns. I heard the Minister responsible for the status of women say a while ago that there would be a meeting of federal and provincial ministers on violence in the family. I quite agree but I would like to add that all those federal-provincial meetings on the status of women were initiatied by the Liberal government. Well, the Liberal government can be accused of every defect, but I think that as far as the status of women is concerned, the Liberal government can boast many substantial accomplishments.

Well, Mr. Speaker, let me quote to you what Canadian women were told during the last election campaign concerning these shelters:

> The Progressive Conservative Party will make improvements to and increase the effectiveness of all federal programs dealing with public information, transition houses, accommodation and support of victims of family and social violence, whether they are battered women or abused children.

I hope, therefore, that during the forthcoming federal-provincial meeting, the federal Government will lead the way, failing which we would be very disappointed and get the impression that although he was very good at making promises during the last election campaign, the Prime Minister of Canada is not very good now at fulfilling them.

Mr. Speaker, I think that in his speech, the Hon. Member from Baie-Comeau misrepresented reality. When we consider what is happening in the case of Indian women, as our committee is currently dealing with Bill C-31, we realize that the Government has decided that Indian women will be reinstated on the bands' membership but that their children will not, a situation which is entirely unacceptable. Also, I think the divorce legislation is quite good, but this is again a Liberal initiative. Concerning prostitution and the Fraser report, Mr. Fraser had emphasized during a press conference that the Government should not single out a particular recommendation and implement it; yet, that is exactly what the Government is doing, interpreting as it pleases and implementing the recommendation on soliciting, which I find also entirely unacceptable, in spite of the fact that the President of the Progressive Conservative Party in British Columbia stated last weekend that prostitution is very important and that the desire to procreate being so strong, men absolutely need prostitutes to satisfy it and also get rid of the violence they feel for one another. In view of all this, I seriously wonder what will be the destiny of this Bill in the House. There is also part-time work. It is a fact that the majority of women have part-time jobs. We also hope that the next Budget will contain a special recommendation that women be given fringe benefits proportional to the number of hours they work. It is a fact in 1985 that 72 per cent of part-time jobs are held by women, but with the new technology, men will also be affected by technological change and will have to work part-time. However, at the present time, because of the economic situation, 72 per cent of women have part-time jobs and the Government must certainly deal with this problem.

As for planned parenthood, we learned three weeks ago that the Department of National Health and Welfare had closed down its Family Planning Division, with the result that we can no longer obtain any family planning information from the Department, which poses a threat to the funding of all planned parenthood clinics in Canada. We have to wonder about the decisions of the Government because we know that, while there is not even a birth rate plan for the country and teenage pregnancies pose a problem, there are no services available at this time, because if the Family Planning Division disappears, our young people as well as adults, but especially our young people, will be deprived of educational services, since the major problem is that of teenage pregnancies and absolutely nothing is being done about it.

Of course, I would also like to say a word about pensions for people between the ages of 60 and 64 other than widows or widowers. The Members opposite will tell us that 85,000 people receive the pension for widows and widowers in Canada. This is all very well, but the majority of people are separated, divorced or single. We know—

Mr. Speaker is telling me that I have only one minute left. I shall therefore complete my comments.

In conclusion, I would like to say that true economic equality for women will not be attained in three years or in 25 unless corrective action is taken immediately. Yet, the problem is not a lack of research. The Economic Council of Canada has just published the proceedings of a seminar on the economic status of women in the labour force called For a Fair Share. If the Progressive Conservative Party does not change its attitude towards women, 52 per cent of our population might lose patience.

• (1610)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions and comments. The Deputy Whip and Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly).

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to remind the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin) of the past but since she is doing it herself and seems delighted to do so, I must stand up and speak out as well. I think that the Hon. Member for Outremont was involved in the issue of the status of women because of the Axworthy case, when the minister responsible for the status of women in the former government told women who wanted equality that they had better postpone their intervention on the Constitution and the Charter of Rights so as not to undermine the political standing of his party. I had the privilege, Mr. Speaker, to attend that conference and . . . I see some other women across the way who were also present . . . and fortunately, in spite of the fact that the previous Liberal minister wanted to establish priorities that were not in line with those of Canadian women, we still have been able to do our job.

As a second reminder of the past, since she is pleased about it again, the federal Government has imposed its will on the provinces, it argued with them, did not respect their independence and their responsibilities and their rights, though they represent the Canadian citizens as much as the federal Government; because of this lack of respect for another level of government, progress has been slowed down on many issues, including women's issues. The Hon. Member, for instance, refers to the amended legislation on the rights of native people saying that despite the efforts of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie), the children of some native women who will at last be equal under the law will not recover their rights. But she forgets to indicate that this responsibility falls upon the Native Nations themselves and not the Government. Those nations will decide what the status of people living on Indian reserves will be.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted to point out those inconsistencies and oversights, some of which are certainly unintentional. Moreover, I wish to refer to another inconsistency. The Hon. Member said that the Minister had got his fingers burnt when he met with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and vice versa. She should make up her mind. Well, if it is so, it is because something has changed. I also want to remind her, since she has reminded us that amendments to the Divorce Act were brought about in part by the previous administration, although most of the new provisions are very different from the old ones, I want to remind her that it is the Clark Government which, in 1979, introduced the new concept of spouse's allowances and that this government quickly moved, after its election, to extend this benefit to widows and widowers between 60 and 64 years of age. We would certainly want to give much more to all the elderly poor, but it is a spouse's allowance. It would amount to extend family allowances to older people because they are poor. Our programs must be consistent.

Second, the previous administration had not earmarked any funds for the elderly, so that we had to establish a fund in an attempt to offer at least this allowance.

Therefore, I wish that in her passionate effort to defend the achievements of the previous administration, the Hon. Member really remembers where all these things came from. Mr. Speaker, I also want to ask her whether when she was appointed to the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, she found the job more pleasant than Mrs. Doris Anderson did when she was there.

Mrs. Pépin: I welcome this opportunity to reply to my colleague because I feel that anyone who indulges in personalities at this time cannot have much to say for women. We are here to pass legislation on women's issues, not to make personal remarks on each and every one of us. However, I am very happy to tell you that, as regards Section 15 of the Charter of Rights, I can still claim that we worked very hard at that time to have it adopted, and the Council played a very important role. The Council is also responsible for having Section 28 passed and for organizing all provincial and women's groups so that pressure could be brought to bear on all three parties.

This is how Section 28 was passed and I am most pleased about it. Besides, when you say that I recall the very important things the Liberal government did for women and that I take pride in them, I would simply remind you that Canada is one of the largest countries in the world with the most important legislation for women. We are one of the few countries to offer so much legislation about women. Therefore, as I said earlier, we may be considered as the culprit in everything that may have gone wrong but as far as the status of women is concerned, I think Canada has a pretty good record.

Mrs. Mailly: At the provincial level!

Mrs. Pépin: The provincial level is no concern of ours. Legislation sometimes overlaps in this field, but I am talking about the federal Government.

Third, about Indian women, it is a matter of what stand your caucus or mine takes. When you say we must let Indian governments decide for themselves, you are stating your position. And yours and mine on Indian issues differ greatly, and I have no intention of changing mine. I think the children must absolutely be reinstated in their rights; if the women are made members of Indian bands again, the children must also be granted their native rights. It all depends to which party you belong.

I must say that you seem to be well informed on pension issues. On all the others, unfortunately, having to dwell in the past and to deal in personalities shows how little you know about women's issues.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments? Debate. The Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald).

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Government is blamed today for its policy related to Canadian women. We are asking for concrete measures aimed at improving the status of women. Indeed, the Conservative party, when they were in opposition and especially during the last election campaign, promised such measures. Yet they have not kept their promises since then. On the contrary! Their policies since the election have been prejudicial to women. Let us first consider tax reform. This Conservative Government has maintained the federal tax increase proposed last year by the Liberals. This Conservative Government has found billions of dollars for oil companies, including multinationals. The Conservative Government did not fill the loopholes in the tax system, which benefit private corporations. The Government has even admitted that the most recent loophole with regard to research expenses is costing Canada more than $1 billion each year. Yet the Government could not find money to meet the needs of Canadian men and women. The old age security benefits, for example, could have been increased with that amount of money.

To pay for those hand-outs to private corporations, the Government had to save elsewhere. In fact, the Government has chosen to cut in the budgets of departments and Crown corporations like the CBC. Given that situation, women are those who get laid-off. Women who just recently got a job are laid-off. For instance, the budget cuts in research on the environment, ill-advised to start with, have particularly cost women their jobs.

This Government has a policy or rather an ideology favouring the private sector at the expense of the public sector, no matter what the consequences are for Canadian men and women. It follows that some jobs in the public sector are cut in favour of private sector growth. The growth of the public sector favoured women in Canada. This sector has been growing and giving good jobs to women since the Second World War. The men-women salary differences are smaller in the public sector. Social benefits are better, pensions, union protection, etc., are better. Now, women's jobs are threatened the most by the present policy of the Conservative Government. Unfortunately, the Government is blinded by its ideological concerns. Women are more practical and less interested in ideology. They are interested in the quality and the value of the jobs involved rather than in which sector they fall.

• (1620)

[English]

Women who came before the NDP job action group talked to us very specifically about this point. They talked about the need for good jobs, the fact that these jobs had developed especially for women in the public sector. Unions had fought for women and got better working conditions and salaries, and because of the ideological preoccupations of the Government these are the jobs that are cut back. The Government does not realize that there are particular implications for women in a policy which might seem to be gender-free. A policy of protecting the private sector and attacking the public sector has very serious implications for women.

The National Action Committee on the Status of Women in Canada is very aware of these difficulties. Indeed, one of its major recommendations resulting from its conference this past weekend concerned precisely this point. I would like to read that recommendation to the House. It reads:

> Whereas the value of tax concessions allowed by the federal Government is between 30 and 50 billion dollars per year according to the Auditor General; and whereas these tax breaks benefit large companies and high income tax payers the most; and whereas this situation is largely responsible for the deficit; and whereas the deficit is now being used as an excuse to cut public spending; and whereas women are the first to be hurt by such cuts; be it resolved that NAC lead a campaign strongly recommending that the deficit be reduced through reform of the tax system and not through public spending cuts.

This is precisely what the NDP has been urging, along with many other organizations. I note the Economic Council of Canada, not known to be a great supporter of the NDP, recommended that this approach be taken rather than cuts in public spending.

I want to go on to some more specific matters in the resolution before us today concerning job creation and job training programs. We in the NDP believe that these must be specifically targeted to women. We do not believe that the laws of nature are favourable to women in that sense. We have seen that neglect means that the status quo continues. Women are disadvantaged in the labour market right now and, without precise means of intervention, that disadvantage will continue. For that reason we recommend that in job-training programs paid for out of public funds, sponsored by Government, 50 per cent of the places be accorded to women. Young men and young women come into the labour market in roughly equal numbers, and for training purposes women should be getting half those places. For job-creation projects involving public money, women make up roughly 42 per cent of the labour force, a growing percentage at that, and jobs should be reserved for women in that proportion. That is only fair. Unfortunately, to date we have seen the Government take the view—and I am sorry to say the previous Government had the same view—that the real jobs are men's jobs. The construction job which ends with some kind of physical object, be it building a bridge or what have you, is a more real job than a service job providing daycare and nursing or educational services. The kind of jobs women do in communities have not been valued as being worth much and women have not got as much support in job-creation programs. To prefer these capital-increasing projects over human resource-oriented projects seems to be a gender-free approach, but in fact it is not. It means that men's jobs are preferred to women's jobs.

We recommend that the Government develop effective action programs. By "effective" we mean programs with numbers, goals and deadlines. The Abella reforms, which were practical and fairly modest—one certainly cannot call them revolutionary—have only been partially respected in the Government's response. It has not gone far enough. I point out that the National Action Committee recommended a much more vigorous approach to the Government's response to the Abella report, and indeed the NAC condemned as inadequate the planned legislation in response to that report. The NAC instead urged the federal Government to introduce programs and practices through affirmative action with mandatory requirements, enforcement, numerical objectives and deadlines to bring about equality under federal jurisdiction.

Why do we need to have numerical quotas and deadlines and very precise measures? Because it has not worked otherwise. We have had kind words about affirmative action, plans and programs for action. As arts and culture critic, let me refer you to one in my own area. The CBC is a Crown corporation. Back in 1970, the Royal Commission on the Status of Women in Canada recommended that Crown corporations have a special responsibility and that they design their own program for improving the participation of women. That was 15 years ago. Well, they were not forced into doing it, there were not numerical quotas, and eventually, after a great deal of pressure, they came up with vague plans. But of course there has been very little change in the proportion of women in management or producers' roles, and there has been even less change in the portrayal of women on the screen. The record has not been good because there has not been accountability, and I think we have to say, enough of plans for action, enough lip service, we want some real action. We want evaluations, and if they are not satisfactory, then fire the people responsible and we will replace them with people who will take equality for women as a serious objective.

Regarding evaluation, I can recommend the McDonald "no fudge factor". This is a statistic which I think all of our government Departments and Crown corporations, and indeed private corporations with contracts with the Government, should be required to publish. Specifically, this would mean that each Department would publish the proportion of women on the payroll. This of course could be pro-rated for part-time workers and the proportion of the payroll they get. If we see that in a certain area women were 60 per cent of the payroll but they got only 40 per cent of the pay, we would know that most of that payroll was going to the smaller number of men who had the supervisory jobs or jobs which were evaluated at a higher level. Then we could have year after year that same proportion and we could see very objectively if the proportion of women in those jobs was improving. It would not just be up to the government Department to talk about how good its attitude is toward women and how much it was proposing to do but in fact not doing.

I would like now to turn to the question of equal pay for work of equal value, a very important and integral part of any kind of job equity plan for women. We have it at the federal level on paper. We have the Canadian Human Rights Commission enforcing it, and I would like to say that it is doing the best enforcement in Canada on this principle. Unfortunately, I cannot say that it is all that great because there have been numerous delays, it has not been vigorous in the pursuit of some cases, its guidelines are a little backward and out of date, and I think it could be making further progress.

If equal pay for work of equal value had been vigorously implemented at the federal level, it would show up in the statistics. We could look at the industries regulated at the federal level, and the regulations have been in place for about seven years now, and we would see over the years declining differences in wage and salaries within industries at the federal level. Unfortunately, statistics do not show such a trend. Implementation has still been haphazard and based on a case by case complaint system, and it still takes years for cases to be resolved. I would point to the Bell Canada case and that made by the communications workers of Canada. The Canadian Human Rights Commission has not been vigorous. It has accepted excuse after excuse on the part of the employers. We have seen no progress despite quite a bit of pressure from women's organizations in support of the women who are being discriminated against in these particular places of employment.

• (1630)

The guidelines of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, which have recently come out, show some improvement in some respects, but they are inadequate in others. It is a step forward and a step backward. I would like to point out a few of the deficiencies. It is very important that small and large groups be compared for the purpose of dealing with actual cases. The fact that a woman with a complaint is in a badly outnumbered job category is no reason why she should not have her day in court or before the Canadian Human Rights Commission. It is no reason to deny her coverage by the Canadian Human Rights Act. Complainants need more information and cases should be more speedily processed. There should be a flexible definition of establishment. There have been improvements here, but it is still not good enough.

Of course that only opens up the question of extending this coverage of equal pay for work of equal value to the private sector and to all companies which are under provincial jurisdiction but which do business with the federal Government. This is an enormous opportunity because the federal Government is a major purchaser of goods and services of companies of all sizes across the country. This is an opportunity for the Canadian Human Rights Act to have a much greater impact. It can tell companies that if they want to do business with the Government they will have to pay people according to this principle. That must apply to all contractors rather than only a small number of them.

I am pleased to see that this issue was raised in the Ontario election. It was interesting to see the Ontario Conservative Party, under the pressure of an election campaign, suddenly decide that equal pay for work of equal value was a good idea, as least for government employees. It would not go so far as to say that it was fair for all employees. Its time has come, Mr. Speaker. It is a matter of elementary justice that women's jobs be fairly evaluated. Simply adhering to the old market principle is not good enough. Women have been discriminated against for far too long in the job market. Equal pay for work of equal value is the way to address the problem of ghettoization and the downgrading of women's jobs. Objective criteria must be the basis for comparisons, to have fair rates of pay.

I would like to address one further matter which is raised in our motion today, that is the provision of transition houses and funding for them. It is absolutely essential that there be regular funding for transition houses. Violence against women exists. We would like to stop it, it will be some time before this does happen. It is an ongoing problem for which there must be a regular means of funding. The voluntary sector puts much time and effort into keeping these transition houses alive. In serving women in crisis, they are always in dire need themselves. There is always some problem of funding. They spend much of their time rushing around trying to keep the organization together and the service going for women who suffer enormously in our society. It is time we had regular, decent funding, making it possible for these groups to provide the services needed without having to fight for their existence every fiscal year.

I will close by simply pointing out that equality for women is a real challenge for us today in Canada. Providing equality for women in the workforce requires a certain amount of intelligence but, more than that, it requires a lot of political will. We know what needs to be done. Lack of implementation rather than lack of ideas is responsible for the fact that we are not making adequate progress right now. Token appointments and vague promises are not enough. They are totally inadequate. There are enough women to share equally in the work of our major regulatory agencies. There is no reason why they should remain at the 24 per cent level when women make up 50 to 52 per cent of the population. That is the level they should be at. That should be the case now rather than in the future.

We have seen that vague promises have not worked in the past. We want concrete measures with implementation, deadlines, and evaluation. The barriers do remain. It is the responsibility of Government to act vigorously to reduce these barriers. They are not going to go away without us taking our responsibility seriously, bringing in better legislation, and providing adequate funding for the necessary services. Equality for women is a question of justice. Canadian women want to play their full role in society. Canadian women want equality in the family and in the economy. We are far from achieving it. Let us move toward it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Are there questions or comments?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson)—Finance—Bulk fuel dealers—Reimbursement of sales tax; the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald)—Cultural affairs—(a) Special initiative fund. (b) Eligibility criteria; the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre)—Mines—Construction of cartographic institute at Sherbrooke—Government position.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—CANADIAN WOMEN

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Ms. Jewett:

That this House recognizing the continuing economic inequality of Canadian Women, demands that the government incorporate into its forthcoming budget the following initiatives, the:

1. reform of the tax system rather than the introduction of further public spending cuts which impact most adversely on women;

2. provision of job creation and training programs targetted to women, and funding sufficient to enable the Canadian Human Rights Commission to enforce equal pay for work of equal value legislation, and develop an effective enforcement mechanism for affirmative action programs;

3. provision of more transition houses and services for women and children who are victims of family violence; and

4. provision of increased funding to ensure access to quality daycare to meet the urgent needs of Canadian parents and children.

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to speak to the resolution before the House on the continuing economic inequality of Canadian women. The resolution points to a situation that is well known and fully acknowledged by all Members of the House and by all sectors of Canadian society. The economic inequality of women in this country is a reality that none of us are proud of. Lower average income, the ghettoization in occupations that are low paying or threatened by technological or economic change, inadequate pension coverage, and unequal opportunity in hiring, promotion, and training are barometers of economic inequality.

This is not to denigrate the important gains which women have made in recent years. These, such as the equality clause in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, are quite significant. However, many of these gains are still in the pioneering stages. The first doors have been opened and the first toe-holds gained, but the vast majority of women have not yet been touched. In fact, in difficult economic times there is a dangerous temptation to roll back the progress which has been achieved. I can assure my colleagues that the Government is committed to resisting that temptation and to pressing forward with the changes required to achieve equality.

Today's debate affords a very useful opportunity to acknowledge and applaud the efforts of those working to make equality for women a reality. Thousands of women across the country are devoting their time, energy, expertise, and in many cases their hard-earned dollars, to ensure that this necessary work gets done. They are working through organizations and as individual citizens. They are doing valuable research and analysis, often breaking new ground for the rest of Canadian society. They are developing an understanding of the causes of inequality and arriving at workable solutions to overcome these problems, thus leading the way for public and private decisionmakers. All of this lays the groundwork for our deliberations here in this Chamber.

The Government applauds and supports the work of these organizations. Many of them have been meeting here in Ottawa over the past weekend under the auspices of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women. NAC is well known to the Members of the House. Many of us went to hear it this morning. That afforded us an opportunity to hear the views of this umbrella organization. Although NAC is not always in agreement with the policies of the Government, as we heard this morning, its views and opinions are always a welcome contribution to the democratic process. I might say that groups such as that can be most effective if they put forward their views in a civil and co-operative manner. Through NAC and many other large and small organizations across Canada, men and women from every walk of life are working for economic equality. I believe that the vast majority of Canadians support their endeavours.

● (1640)

However, there are always some difficulties with progress and some temporary bumps in the process as we smooth out the transition period. I know that a few Canadians are opposed to equality. They are nervous about change and uncomfortable with society's inexorable progress toward equality. This is a natural human response to uncertainty, but it is no reason to balk at the task. Our Government is fully committed to full equality for women, as we believe most Canadians are, and we will not stray from that commitment.

The resolution before the House speaks to several aspects of economic equality for women. There are also many other elements that we have heard raised in the debate today that are important to this discussion. One of the most useful instruments for achieving economic and social equality will be the equality rights clause, Section 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. This Charter is helpful as a yardstick for legislators to remind us of our obligations in all legislation that we deal with and to ensure fair and equal treatment of all Canadians, regardless of sex, race and other grounds.

As Members know, and as I certainly am becoming aware, it is not a simple task. Legislation, regulations, programs and policies which, on their face, do not appear to be discriminatory may in fact have different impacts on different segments of the population. In addition, the time honoured practices of discriminatory treatment may appear to many of us, by force of habit, to be logical and sensible, whereas, in fact, they are unconscionable.

We must be clear that many sacred cows will be gored in the horns of the equality clause, but they will clear the way for a more fair and equitable Canadian society.

To assist the process of revising existing legislation, much of which will have a direct impact on women's economic equality, the Government has launched a process of consultation with Canadians. I am pleased to be a member of that special committee which will open its hearings across the country in several weeks. Already we have been hearing from organizations here in Ottawa on a wide range of issues which are being put to us. I am sure that the House will consider all of the views which we put forward in our report to it, prior to final decisions on legislative amendments.

However, as we all know, the legislative process is not in and of itself sufficient to ensure the implementation of the equality clause. One of the other important steps is the development of judicial interpretations as to what the equality clause actually means.

Many organizations representing Canadian citizens will be using the courts to obtain clear legal precedents on this matter. Litigation is an expensive and time consuming process, and particularly difficult to undertake for those who are most disadvantaged in our society and precisely the people who will want to bring cases before the courts. The Government recognizes the obstacles that these groups face in bringing their cases before the courts and also recognizes the importance of test cases. Consequently, as the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has indicated on previous occasions, the Government is considering financial assistance to those groups seeking equality under the Charter, including women as well as racial minorities and the disabled.

Let me take this opportunity to commend those women who have taken the initiative in this area and established the Legal Education and Action Fund, or "LEAF". Many of us went to the kick-off party on April 17 to promote women's legal equality, including via the Charter. This organization will be needed in the coming years.

There are other areas in which inequality is still with us. For example, action is needed at all levels of Canadian society to encourage and enable women to play a stronger role in setting up and running their own business. As I mentioned in the House last week, women now own 29 per cent of small businesses in this country. They are creating them at three times the rate of men and are playing a strong and significant role in this growing and important area of Canada's economy. Removing constraints on the development of new enterprises is a high priority of the Government and women stand to gain a great deal in that process. However, as in so many areas, this cannot be done by the federal Government alone. Greater access to credit and more institutional support at the community level is essential for women's success.

Much has been said about the fact that women form the majority of part-time workers. Yet these workers are often not treated on an equal footing with full-time workers. Employment counselling is a crucial step in the process of women's economic autonomy, and the federal Government is working to improve the quality of its service to women in these areas.

The six thrusts of the labour market strategy were designed to help Canadians, including Canadian women, obtain full and fair participation in the emerging labour market. I was pleased to hear the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) advise the House earlier today that last month 47,000 women found jobs. That is the largest month-to-month increase in many years.

Equality for women is an important element of our labour market strategy. Many other elements of the strategy have been addressed elsewhere during this debate. However, we would be remiss if we confined our discussion of economic equality to women in the paid labour force. Although the majority of Canadian women are in the paid labour force, the majority of unpaid labour in this country is also done by women in the household and through voluntary organizations. The absolutely crucial job of raising children and running the domestic household is done almost exclusively by women and is done for free when they are doing this work for their own families.

The Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women estimates that in families where the wife is a full-time homemaker, and the children are ten years of age or older, husbands do only three hours of housework a week. When this homemaker takes a paid job outside the home, the husband's time spent on housework increases only by six minutes per week. It is also estimated that homemakers work about 40 to 60 hours per week, depending mostly on the number and age of their children. This work is equivalent to about 35 per cent to 40 per cent of the GNP, or at least $136 billion.

This represents a tremendous subsidization of Canadian society and is an economic contribution that is rarely recognized. We frequently pay homage to the social, emotional and psychological importance of the work of raising children and maintaining the support and love of the family unit. But how often do we acknowledge the economic importance of this work?

Obviously, the family benefits from the work of the homemaker, as do employers. Many Canadians believe that household tasks and the raising of children are responsibilities that should be shared by men and women. In practice, however, this sharing is very unequal. It is women, in the vast majority of cases, who carry the burden of domestic responsibilities. Men in Canadian society simply have not shouldered their share of these responsibilities. This must change if Canadian women are to achieve economic equality. As long as women carry the responsibility for unpaid domestic work and often the double burden of paid plus unpaid work, men will have an unfair advantage in the workforce.

There are other areas of concern. Most women expect that if they are widowed or divorced they will receive adequate benefits from their husbands' pensions. It comes as a shock to them to discover that in many cases they have no benefits at all. I know that according to the Public Service Superannuation Act, the divorced woman does not get the benefit of her husband's pension. If they do receive survivor pension benefits, these are often only a quarter of the couple's income.

Various proposals have been put forward by women's groups regarding the specific details of how best to incorporate homemakers into the Canada Pension Plan. These and other suggestions will be carefully considered by the Government in its deliberations. We intend to continue this discussion with the benefit of the views of a wide range of interested parties.

● (1650)

Any debate on the economic inequality of women must take account of the variety of women' experience in this country. Not all women face exactly the same barriers in exactly the same situations. Women as a group have many common experiences, yet various sectors within the population of Canadian women also have various experiences specific to them. For example, aboriginal women must deal with a gamut of economic obstacles which all women face, but they must also deal with racism and they must address economic issues from the point of view of aboriginal people.

Efforts by aboriginal people to develop their own economic base is fraught with problems, as the House well knows. The inadequate land base, the history of inappropriate training programs, the lack of infrastructure, and a whole battery of institutional and structural distortions in the economy of aboriginal communities are just some of the problems. Women in these communities must deal with this entire layer of problems as well as with issues related to sex discrimination both within their communities and in dealings with the rest of Canadian society.

I have been privileged as a Member of the House to be involved in considering legislation to remove the imfamous sex discrimination in the Indian Act with regard to women losing their Indian status. The outcome of our committee's work will be put before the House very shortly. It will address the major issue of discrimination against Indian women, but it will not be a panacea for the woes of all Indian women. Those aboriginal women, whether status or non-status, reinstated or not, who live off-reserve face another series of obstacles in achieving economic equality. Racism and sex discrimination in employment, promotion, pay scales and any number of other areas are all very real problems for these women.

The Abella Commission inquiring into equality in employment in Canada recently estimated that over-all the unemployment rate for native women was double that for Canadian women. Similarly, these women earn on average more than 25 per cent less than Canadian women do over-all which, as we all know, is itself only a fraction of what Canadian men earn on average.

All these shortcomings point to the need for a specific approach to the economic equality of aboriginal women as part of an over-all commitment by Canadian society to equality for all women.

Visible minority women also face particular problems in seeking fair and equal treatment in the work-place. They encounter barriers both on account of their race and on account of their sex. They tend to be concentrated in certain types of job ghettos, usually low-paying, often non-unionized. I am sure Hon. Members are aware of the recent study in Toronto which tested the attitude of employers toward visible minorities. The actors, posing as job seekers, found that their chances of being offered employment were greatly influenced by the colour of their skin. If one adds to this racism the dimension of sexism, I think the picture of visible minority women becomes clearer. Not only do problems occur at the door when hiring decisions are being made, but also when opportunities for training, promotion and other career advancement are available.

Yet another area is the question of racial harassment, compounded for women by sexual harassment. Innuendoes, personal comments, offensive jokes and often harassing behaviour can make a workplace intolerable and essentially force a woman out of her only opportunity for increasing her economic independence.

The few areas on which I have touched are only some of those which concern the Government in matters related to economic equality for women. My colleagues and others will address other elements of this important debate today. Obviously one day is woefully inadequate to discuss these matters with the attention they deserve. It is no secret that these issues are a matter of continuing concern for this Government and will be an important part of decisions related to economic recovery and renewal in Canada.

In closing, I would like to reiterate the importance of dialogue on these issues. We need to hear and learn from the women of Canada. We need to know their experiences, their triumphs and their frustrations as we work to establish an economic future for ourselves and for our daughters. I would like to encourage Canadian women, both as individuals and through organizations, to express their views to their federal, provincial and municipal Governments, to their unions, to their employers, to educational and training institutions, and to others in the Canadian community who have a role to play in achieving economic equality for women.

This Government will stand by its commitments, not the least of which is the commitment to listen to the women of Canada and to support them in their efforts to attain economic equality. We look forward to other partners in the Canadian economy doing the same.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I have three specific questions for the Hon. Member. In light of her comments with respect to the involvement of women in small business and her knowledge that women need venture capital and the support of financial institutions like the Federal Business Development Bank, would she support my contention that the two vacancies currently available in the Federal Business Development Bank should in fact be filled by women? Will she be making presentations to cabinet in this regard?

My second question is to ask the Hon. Member whether she supports her Government's initiative to remove the pregnancy provisions from the current unemployment insurance package under federal law and to have it moved into general revenues. If so, how can she reconcile that position with her stated objectives of allowing women an opportunity to compete equally in the workforce?

Third, I know the Hon. Member has a vast knowledge of the political situation in British Columbia. Does she agree with the Leader of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative Party who was recently quoted on the subject of prostitution as saying that there was a need for prostitutes because men had a desire to procreate. He said: "It is the instinct of a male, particularly a young one, to procreate. And not to have that available creates a danger to society". This is what Peter Pollen, Leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservatives said. Does she support the view of her colleague, the Leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservatives?

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, I will start with the last question first. I would like to dissociate myself totally from the remarks made by that man; I am not sure I could say gentleman. I am sure most of my colleagues on all sides of the House would join me in dissociating themselves from his remarks.

With respect to maternity leave, the proposals which have been put forward as potential areas of discussion do not in any way mean that there will not be maternity leave provisions for women in the workforce. Those are vital. In fact, the discussions have gone further to include parental leave, which perhaps under the Charter makes more sense. Whether or not that should be funded directly out of the unemployment insurance fund or from general revenues, I do not think it really makes that much difference as long as they are there. My own view on unemployment insurance is that there are a lot of changes to be made in that fund to make it truly more of an insurance fund. Whatever changes are made, I would not in any way support removing or downgrading the enabling of maternity benefits for working women.

Finally, with respect to women on boards, particularly the FBDB, I assure my hon. colleague that I am continually making representations to my Cabinet colleagues and to others who are in positions to make appointments of women on all those kinds of boards. I think the Hon. Member will see from the record so far that we are making great progress. I am not yet satisfied, and I will continue with those representations.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am glad I was able to pick up on the debate specifically as it relates to the issue of maternity benefits and the current Government's recommendations to remove maternity benefits from unemployment insurance and place them under the aegis of general revenues. This particular measure by the Government since it assumed office on September 4 is a clear indication that it does not understand, not only the need for women to be allowed to compete equally in the workforce, but the recognition that child care or child rearing is in fact a cost of employment. It is a cost of employment which should be borne specifically under the unemployment insurance revenues of the federal Government. The move by this Government to take that envelope of spending out of unemployment insurance and to place it in general revenues speaks volumes about the lack of commitment to allow women to compete in the workforce. It is all well and good for government Members to say that the funds should remain the same. We know from historical experience and from the universality debate that if we take maternity benefits out of the unemployment insurance fund and move it into general revenues, we will be setting up another system, which could be described as a welfare system within the federal Government.

• (1700)

Very shortly thereafter we would see government proponents of deficit reduction saying to the Government that we have this pool of money going out to pregnant women across this country because they are unable to work during those critical child-bearing months, let us not allow that money to go out to all women but let us pay only those women in a position of dire and desperate need. In other words, very shortly after this Government chooses to remove maternity benefits from unemployment insurance funding, we will likely see the introduction of a means test for maternity benefits.

I suggest that those government Members who have a true and a well expressed commitment to equality for women must recognize that in order to achieve that equality, women need more support through instruments like the unemployment insurance funding. They do not need that support reduced in the manner being suggested by current government policy on unemployment insurance benefits.

We have seen the same thing with respect to the new initiative by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) to cut back on unemployment insurance to those senior workers who are receiving severance pay packages or vacation packages. We know that older women who are removed from the workforce face a tough enough time without having the added burden of being ineligible for unemployment insurance benefits until they have exhausted severance pay and holiday benefits.

We see Members on the government side of the House stand today and defend government policy which discriminates against older women who happen to be single or divorced. I speak specifically to the government legislation which will extend spousal benefits to those people between the ages of 60 and 64, the majority of whom are women, as long as they are widows, but will not extend the same benefits to those who have never married or who, for whatever reason, have suffered a marriage breakdown.

That particular discriminatory government policy introduced by this Government since September 4 clearly illustrates to the Canadian people that this Government is not prepared to fight for all women, and indeed all men, between the ages of 60 and 64, in particular our older workers. It is introducing legislation which sets up two classes of citizens, one that happens to have been widowed, and another that happens to be single or divorced. When I made my remarks relating to the comments made by the Progressive Conservative president in the Province of British Columbia, it was not totally tongue in cheek. In attitudes, not only in this House, but in the community, there is much work to be done.

I look at the labour dispute which is going on between Air Canada and its employees, who are in fact bargaining for a better deal under part-time and full-time employment. It was clear from the answers in the House today, not only from the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) but also the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), that this Government has neither an understanding of the Wallace report on part-time work, nor an understanding of the fundamental recommendations of the Abella Commission which point the finger at the kind of ghettoization that Air Canada is encouraging in its current collective bargaining deliberations with the employees.

If we have a Crown corporation going to its employees and saying it will no longer put the cap on part-time workers but wants the right to employ 100 per cent part-time workers in the full knowledge that those part-time workers at the moment do not receive benefits similar to their full-time counterparts and, second, those employees will be paid less on an hourly basis, then that is sheer exploitation on the part of a Crown corporation, aided and abetted by the Minister, who has the gall to stand in the House and tell the union to go back to the bargaining table.

I am sorry that the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight), in his weak-kneed approach to exercising a bit of Cabinet muscle, has not prevailed upon his colleague, the Minister of Transport, to let him know that the Abella report was worth a little bit more than the paper on which it was written. If this Government has a true commitment to employment equity, it has an opportunity to show it four square before all Canadians by informing Air Canada that it will not allow unfettered part-time employment to the detriment of those on hourly wages and the further ghettoization of women who currently make up the majority of part-time workers of Air Canada.

Although the Government says that the issue is improving the status of part-time workers and although the Wallace report called for those improvements, the intention of the company in the Air Canada dispute is not to improve the lot of part-time workers. It is to allow free rein on cheap labour within the Crown corporation of Air Canada. Frankly, I am shocked and surprised that the Minister of Transport would enter into the debate and admonish the union when he does not have the facts in front of him. It would not be the first time this Government has stated one thing in its objectives—and the April 17 party was a wonderful thing—but when it had the chance to put its money where its mouth is, it had no voice.

I speak specifically to the challenges that will be coming from all parts of Canada with respect to the equality provisions as engendered in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Mr. Speaker, as you are no doubt aware, a fund has been set up called the LEAF fund, the Legal Education and Action Fund, to which all Members have been invited to contribute. It will permit women across this country who want to have access to the court system to determine once and for all what their status is with respect to equality in the work-place and equality on division of assets. Those women will be assisted by this fund. It is a sad situation when the Government of Canada refuses to allow independent funding of that kind of organization so that women and minority groups across this country can have a chance to put the Charter to use and to use it as one tool in the long fight toward economic equality.

The battle was begun a long time ago. It began in this House. I am happy to say that I am part of the Party that brought people into the House of Commons like Judy Erola, who was instrumental in including Section 25 as well as Section 15 in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I am happy to come from the region of Canada that produced politicians of the stature of Judy LaMarsh and Ellen Fairclough. The battle began many years ago with people like Agnes MacPhail and certainly Nellie McClung, politicians who broke through 10, 20 and 50 years ago. The work is still far from finished.

I picked up my local newspaper on Saturday when I was home in the riding. I had a chance to read about a conference going on with respect to the whole issue of violence in the family and wife assault. I read a comment in the newspaper that was made by one of the representatives of our local police force, a comment which will serve to illustrate how much work still needs to be done in this area. It was the view of this particular police officer that violence in the family was a two-way street and that it was not in fact the fault of the husband because there were many mitigating circumstances. I would like to read into the record the mitigating circumstances to which he referred: "He knew of one case where a man beat his wife when he came home to a filthy house . . . Send the guy to a program for batterers . . . and maybe send her to a program on how to keep house." This is the statement of someone who has, as part of his area of responsibility, the responsibility for pursuing the assaulters of women who parade under the guise of family violence. When we hear representatives of our law enforcement agencies making statements like that, we realize that there is much work to be done.

• (1710)

I do not have to remind the House of the response of the House of Commons to the original report on family violence headed by the former Hon. Member for Kitchener, Dr. Peter Lang. When that report was tabled, the response was guffaws. It has not been very long since we got the issue of family violence out from behind the closed doors of individual households and onto the public discussion table.

In the areas of family violence, Charter equality provisions and employment equity, if we are really committed to allowing women the opportunity to share equally in all of the good things that society has to offer, then we must be prepared to provide the financial commitment. That financial commitment includes not only cost-sharing agreements with the provinces but it also includes a commitment from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation to look at the funding of more interval houses and to include an extension to second-stage housing across this country.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, it is quite easy for us in Parliament to say that we would like women to achieve equality, but so far, the reality has proved that we are engaged in a fierce battle. When one speaks of equality, it is quite obvious, according to the Abella Report, that the government should require companies operating under its jurisdiction to have affirmative action programs. But, this would not mean much unless the government does empower the Canadian Human Rights Commission to enforce affirmative action programs within those companies. One realizes how hard it is for the Conservative members to entrust the Commission with fundamental powers to start proceedings against any private, public or semi-public companies which do not provide affirmative action programs in their operations because those members themselves did not support such programs in committee. One just has to read the proceedings of those meetings to know what they really think.

[English]

The following was attributed to Conservative Members of the House of Commons: "Constitutional protections for disadvantaged groups reflected in affirmative action programs threaten the rights of individuals, Conservative MPs told the Canadian Human Rights Commission Tuesday. Tory MP Chris Speyer who raised the concern when Chief Commissioner Gordon Fairweather appeared before the Commons Justice Committee warned that a preoccupation with group rights might result in reverse discrimination". Then we heard from the Tory MP for Calgary East (Mr. Kindy) who said he is opposed to all affirmative action programs because he believes all capable people have equal opportunities in the work-place.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, payroll statistics are most eloquent since they show that on an average women earn 62 per cent of what men earn in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, women do not want a two-tier status whereby many capable women work in many places but are denied the opportunity to achieve "equality" because this government as well as other provincial governments, with the exception of the province of Quebec, are not prepared to recognize that equality between men and women in the work-place can only be achieved if we have equal pay for work of equal value.

[English]

It is not surprising to me that the Conservative Party has difficulty promoting affirmative action programs. It is not surprising to me that the Conservative Government has asked the Commissioner of Human Rights to do the impossible, to enforce affirmative action programs within the federal service without giving the Commissioner the legal teeth with which to carry out that enforcement. Those things are not surprising to me because there is a fundamental feeling within the Conservative Party that affirmative action is bad and somehow results in reverse discrimination.

I will tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the women of Canada are sick and tired of receiving 62 cents or 64 cents for every dollar earned by a man in this country. I am not foolish enough to rise in the House and say that any government initiative will reverse that trend overnight. However, I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that initiatives which have looked at the question of equal pay for work of equal value, initiatives which the Government must use its political muscle to encourage provincial Governments across the country to implement, will in themselves close the wage gap by seven cents to 10 cents according to major economists who have studied the issue. There will be those among us who will say that equal pay for work of equal value will not solve the entire problem so therefore we should not implement it. However, this is a building-block process. One of the fundamental building blocks in that process is the implementation of equal pay for work of equal value.

I was not impressed by the half-hearted promise made by the Premier of Ontario in the eleventh hour, prior to the dawning of a new reconciliation, that he would implement equal pay for work of equal value within the Ontario Public Service. The question extends far beyond the Public Services of this country. There are too many people who are working in ghettoized jobs in the community who are not being touched by current federal legislation and who in fact are being left out of the provincial packages and even the meagre provincial packages suggested by people like the Premier of Ontario.

There will be those among us who will say that somehow we women have missed the boat because we prefer to take time off to have children or are not interested in advancement. However, we need only look at the dismal record of the education sector in which women have played a singular role and have worked hard from time immemorial, not only regarding the informal teaching of our children but regarding the formal teaching through our education system. We can see quite clearly that, notwithstanding the admonitions of those who say that women have not achieved in the sciences and engineering sectors because there are not enough of us and we have not been there long enough, in the education sector, even though women comprise the majority of our educators across the country, the positions of public administration officials, school principals, vice-principals and positions of authority are still, in the main, allocated to men. This is happening at a time when women's participation in the workforce is increasing and at a time when education has been at the vanguard of the women's movement in terms of employment.

There is no doubt that we have many questions to address. I have touched on a few of them and I believe some other Hon. Members have touched on a few of them. I would like to say to the Government that if there is a message that came from the election held on September 4, it is that the women of this country have come of age. We are not prepared to take second-class citizenship on government delegations, committees and other things. I would suggest to all government Members that if they are truly committed to seeking equality for women, they should encourage their Minister of Employment and Immigration to take a firm stand to ensure that benefits accruing to women for pregnancy leave are not turfed out of the unemployment insurance fund in order that those benefits will not become another welfare benefit which will be cut by this deficit-reducing Government. A lot of women in the country are looking to the Government to provide leadership. That is an area which leadership can be shown.

• (1720)

I would encourage all government Members, who have spoken so well today on their commitment to employment equity and to the kinds of safeguards and development which we need to allow women to compete equally, to buttonhole their Ministers in the corridors of power and tell them that we will not stand for any move to shake women out of the unemployment insurance fund. In doing that, this Government would merely reinforce the notion that Conservatives are not interested in employment equity or affirmative action, but only in the maintenance of the status quo.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments?

Mr. Edwards: Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). Her message came through loud and clear and I think that we all appreciated it greatly.

I detected a note of nostalgia for Queens Park. Perhaps we will have the next Ontario election campaign fought here as well.

I did appreciate her recognition that this is a deficit-reducing Government. That is a very important factor. But I would like to join forces with the Hon. Member on a project which I believe she could support, and which I certainly support, that is, our lack of a key form of recognition for the famous five women who persevered in the Persons Case of 1930. The commemorative plaque which previously graced the entrance to the Senate Chamber is no longer there. I believe it ought to be restored to commemorate those famous five: Emily Murphy, Irene Parlby, Louise McKinney, Nellie McClung, and my dear lamented ancestor, Henrietta Edwards. I would be pleased to join with the Hon. Member in that venture.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, of course, I would support any move to recognize the famous five who determined, once and for all, that we women are persons. However, from a policy point of view, I would hope that our initiatives would move much beyond that. Sometimes when I listen to comments made by people such as the President of the Progressive Conservative Association of British Columbia, I wonder whether that recognition has permeated the skulls of some members of the political Parties.

The Member made reference to my nostalgia for Queens Park. I believe that if he had listened closely to my comments, he would have realized that I was attempting to give credit where credit is due, that is, to two jurisdictions across the country which have implemented legislation with respect to equal pay for work of equal value. Those two jurisdictions are the Government of Quebec and the federal Government, under legislation which was introduced by the Liberal administration. Unfortunately, 90 per cent of the workers in Canada are covered by provincial laws. No matter into what particular area of endeavour we launch out in the House of Commons, we will touch only those 10 per cent who are covered under federal laws, which include public servants and employees of Crown corporations and other companies which fall under federal law. That means that 90 per cent of the people of this country are covered under provincial laws. Unfortunately, Progressive Conservative—which is actually a contradiction in terms—Governments across the country have seen fit to ignore the overwhelming evidence which points to the implementation of equal pay for work of equal value as one in a series of strategies which would help bridge the salary gap between men and women.

I had felt that because of the unique relationship between the Prime Minister and the Premier of Ontario—although I am sure that relationship was somewhat shattered after the realities of May 2—those two Conservatives could have come together and provided an opportunity for those 8.5 million people in Ontario, 7.5 million of whom are not covered under federal law, for employment equity through provincial initiatives which would be encouraged by federal counterparts. We in the Liberal Party work together on those kinds of initiatives. When we form a Government in Ontario, we will work very closely with the federal Government. Unfortunately, it has been the history of the Conservative Party that federal and provincial Conservatives do not work together but, in fact, work against each other. I can understand why the Member would not see the association between federal and provincial Governments.

It is very clear. My Party, its policies, and its positions have not altered from provincial to federal jurisdictions. I hope that the Hon. Member will encourage his provincial colleagues to come on side on this important issue because provincial jurisdictions currently cover those millions of Canadians who are not currently protected by the federal legislation which was introduced by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Edwards: Mr. Speaker, while we are having a go at historical revisionism, I would like to point out the marvellous record of co-operation which existed for many years between the Liberal Government in Ottawa and the Liberal Government in Quebec. I would also like to point out the marvellous ideological compatibility which existed between the Liberal Government in Ottawa and the Government of the late Premier, Ross Thatcher, of Saskatchewan.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, believe me, if we are looking at giving lessons in terms of ideological suicide, we only have to look across to the government benches of the House to see a number of Members who, in fact, have spent most of their lives destroying each other.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) on debate.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak today. The motion which is before us is important and brings an important subject to the attention of Parliament.

Of course, today is the day on which the National Action Committee on the Status of Women meets with all three political Parties. Its representatives are lobbying our caucuses and attempting to find out how far we are willing to go in terms of supporting the priorities which they established at their conference. We had an amiable meeting with them this morning and I know that the concerns which they raised with us are reflected in the resolution with which we are dealing today. Obviously, the resolution is focused on one area and the concerns of the women's movement are broader than that. However, the matters which are the focus of this resolution are important and essential matters.

The resolution deals with the economic inequality of women. We have all heard the statistics before, but it bears repeating that women who work in this country earn 60-cent dollars. In other words, the average income of a woman, with equal qualification to that of a man, is 60 cents, while the man earns one dollar. That continues throughout the woman's working life and into her retirement years, as the woman's retirement income is also based on 60-cent dollars. That is a grave and glaring injustice which continues in our economy and in the relationship between men and women. In addition, it bears repeating that the most visible poverty in this country, not only the economic inequality which pervades the whole of our economy—whether a woman is working in an area of modest income, middle income or upper income—is among women. I think particularly of single parents. Single parent families live in the most acute poverty in Canada today, and 99 per cent of the time they are headed by women. Older women as well suffer from poverty, and the pension systems are still not adequate to meet their needs. So we are talking about a very real problem which results in very real human suffering when we focus the attention of this House on economic inequality of women and men.

● (1730)

I would like to comment on the three areas raised for us by the resolution, the over-all economic policy and the manpower policy of the Government. I must say in passing, Mr. Speaker, that it is ironic that even when we debate the inequality among men and women, when we seek that more attention be paid to the needs of women and we talk about job training and job-creation, we still use the term "manpower policies". Even the language falls short of our ideals and of human needs. Clearly we need more adequate language in order to express the ideals which we seek to realize.

I would like not only to comment upon the Government's manpower policy but upon the whole question of public services, as does the resolution, and in particular the transition houses and daycare. In dealing with the over-all economic policy of the Government, and the other matters we want to bring before the House today, we must begin with the fundamental economic approach of the Government, which is to try to balance the books by way of cutting public spending. Hon. Members opposite would have us and the public believe that they have no choice, that they have no option but to cut back public spending, and to cut public spending in areas which hurt and do damage to the equality of women across this country. This is ironic in the sense that the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), when he was Leader of the Opposition, entered into the women's debate, and one of the things on which he scored a lot of points was to lambaste the former Prime Minister for saying he had no option when it came to patronage appointments, for example. But now that he is Prime Minister of this country and leads the largest Party in this House, he comes before us with an economic policy that says, "We have no choice. We have to cut public spending and cut services which are essential and needed and which contribute to the equality of women".

I want to suggest there is a real option, and that is, tax reform. In other words, we have to look at the other side of the ledger. We have to look at our revenues and seek ways of increasing our revenues in a fair and equitable manner which will allow us to provide the services which will result in a greater equality among the men and women of this country. I will briefly suggest, Mr. Speaker, that one of the areas which really cries for reform is the way in which we distribute the burden of taxation between corporations and individuals. Any one who reads statistics with regard to our taxation policy will know that over the last couple of decades the burden of taxation, as it has been distributed between corporations and individuals, has shifted considerably and the burden is increasingly upon the shoulders of the individual taxpayer. Corporations in this country pay less and less of their share of the costs of running Government. In fact, corporations, when they do pay taxes, tend to get an almost equal amount back in terms of benefits for themselves from the Government. So, therefore, there is a potential for raising revenue in a fair way—revenue which we could use for essential services—from the corporations, if we were to insist that they pay their fair share and ensure that the burden of paying for Government would not fall totally upon the shoulders of individuals.

Another trend which has become evident in the taxation system over the last couple of decades is the distribution of the cost of Government between different levels of incomes of individuals. The taxation system has become less and less progressive. There are more and more tax write-offs and loopholes which allow upper-income Canadians to reduce their taxable income. Of course, the ordinary Canadian who has a simple pay cheque and no investment income has to pay the full burden of taxation because there are effectively no comparable loopholes for people at the lower levels of income. We need real tax reform in this country, Mr. Speaker. We need to arrive at a situation in which the taxation system in indeed truly progressive and which will ensure that upper-income Canadians pay according to their capacity to pay. That means that the upper-income Canadians will in fact pay more than people with more modest incomes.

This proposal as well came up in the last election campaign. It was brought up by my Leader in the form of a proposal for a minimum income tax. At that time he pointed out that in the United States such a tax exists. In the United States there is a minimum tax on upper incomes, which means, simply, that after one has added up all of the write-offs and tax loopholes which lawyers and accountants can put together, if the income comes down to below a certain point, there is still a responsibility to pay taxes and to help carry the burden of public services. That appears to me to be eminently reasonable and only fair and just. I mention the fact that this kind of tax exists south of the border to demonstrate that such a tax is feasible. It is possible to design such a tax and it is possible for an economy to run with such a tax in place. Obviously, the rationale for most of the tax loopholes in our taxation system has to do with economic activity. Each of the individual tax loopholes is there as an incentive to create economic activity and, therefore, it is justified in that way.

I agree with using the taxation system in order to stimulate economic activity, but when the taxation system is used in such a way that an individual can earn over $100,000 a year and still come before the taxation Department and indicate that he has no taxable income, then at that point we are no longer using the taxation system to stimulate economic activity. We are in fact abusing the system and creating an unfair tax system in which poor people have to pay tax and people who earn a great deal can find a way to end up paying no tax. That creates unfairness, injustice, resentment and alienation. So that issue needs to be redressed. It is an alternative to cutting needed public services, particularly those that relate to the equality of women. Those are at least two general areas in which the Government could approach tax reform in order to raise revenues to provide the services which are needed.

There is another suggestion I would like to make with regard to tax reform. It has to do with the reporting of tax expenditures. Something of which we need to remind ourselves from time to time is the fact that Government spends money in at least two fundamental ways. The Government can write a cheque, such as a family allowance cheque, and send it to a family, or it can give a grant to some organization or group, in other words, spend money in a direct fashion. The other way that Government spends money is by giving various forms of tax breaks or write-offs to corporations or individuals. It simply does not collect the tax it would otherwise be entitled to collect and thereby forgoes revenue. The problem with this kind of spending is that it is hidden. No one knows from day to day exactly how much we are spending in that way. Therefore, we need to have full and open reporting of tax expenditures. We need to acknowledge that we spend money every time we give someone a tax write-off. The full reporting of tax expenditures would give us an opportunity to examine their effectiveness. If ordinary Canadians became aware of just how much money we are spending in this way, then they would insist that those tax expenditures be effective, in other words, that they work. If their objective were to create employment, then they should create employment or else they would be eliminated.

● (1740)

I suspect there are many tax expenditures we could eliminate because they do not give us the economic benefit they promised and they do not create new employment. It is fairly obvious to most ordinary Canadians that if the tax expenditures worded by and large, then there would be many more ordinary Canadians working today than there are. So we on this side of the House recommend that the Government approach the problem of providing services from the perspective of raising revenue rather than of cutting those much needed services which deal with people's basic human needs and equality between men and women. So tax reform is something this Government must face up to.

More specifically, regarding the public service cuts themselves, let me say that when the Conservative Party campaigned during the election, it ran around reassuring people that, yes, it is going to reduce the deficit but it is going to do it by cutting out waste and fat. In no way is it going to touch needed and worth-while public programs. I wish to remind the Government and Members opposite of that commitment, a commitment which has been broken. It is time for Members opposite to look at those promises and the nature of the cuts they are making. They need to wake up and realize that Canadians are not going to accept cuts in needed programs and that if this Government continues to act the way it has, it will lose the public's confidence. Members opposite should remind themselves that one of the reasons they promised the Canadian people they would cut only waste in order to reduce the deficit is that they knew that if they were to tell the Canadian people they would cut valuable public services, Canadians would not put their confidence in them. They should also realize, now that they are in office, that if they cut needed public services, Canadians will withdraw that confidence. So this Government should wake up before its own actions lead to its demise because of a lack of public confidence.

Another reason why these cuts in public services are ill advised is that, while I know the Government is doing this because it believes in its own way that it will reduce the deficit and lead to economic recovery, every time a cut leads to reduced consumer demand and unemployment, it also leads to reduced revenues for the Government. This is particularly true where the cuts affect services which are labour-intensive. So this Government's own economic programs could backfire and we could end up with a larger deficit.

One area of critical interest to the women's movement, and of course to all Canadians who are concerned with families, has to do with cuts as they affect social services, particularly the universality aspect. We should remind ourselves once again of what the Government said before it was elected. The Conservatives said that universality was a sacred trust. Even before election day, they said they would not touch medicare. Of course, medicare is of great concern to women across this country. Medicare meets family needs and Canadians will just not put up with a Government which tries to savage medicare. But once the Conservatives got into office, they issued an economic statement in which they questioned pensions and family allowances. Well, it did not take very long, maybe a month, for the Government to wake up and realize that it had better not fool around with pensions either, because Canadians were not going to allow a Government which ran on the promise of universality as a sacred trust to mess around with pensions. Canadians fought for these pensions over a long period of time and we are very proud of them as a social policy. But the Government has yet to give us any real assurances that it will not savage family allowances. The Government should realize, as it continues to tinker with and take apart the principle of universality in social programs in its effort to reduce the deficit, that family allowances are something that Canadians feel very strongly about. It took a long fight to get them for Canadians and they are something that Canadians will not likely give up.

So as we consider the equality of women today, we should consider that this Government should be very cautious as it approaches the question of family allowances. The Government should be more concerned about whether the level of family allowances is adequate and whether it can find ways of increasing benefits rather than trying to find ways to reduce or eliminate family allowances on the basis of income.

I see that my time is running out, Mr. Speaker, but I want to say that rather than approaching the whole question of how to pay for our public services, particularly those which relate to families and the equality of women, by way of cutting needed public spending, you should approach it from the revenue side and take a serious look at tax reform in this country. That is the way to raise the revenue to provide the services that people need and which will lead to a better community and greater equality among men and women.

Mr. Caldwell: Mr. Speaker, I have enjoyed the debate this afternoon and I find it very interesting. However, no one mentioned just how much this deficit is costing us. No one spoke about what it costs each Canadian each day to carry this deficit, or the fact that 33 per cent of our taxes now go toward servicing our debt. Just think of the marvellous things we could do and the programs we could put into effect if one third of our taxes did not have to be used for paying interest on the national debt. I think it hurts many people, especially the women of this country, if we increase the deficit and the tax load. Many women with families will have to carry a heavier debt load. I am just wondering whether or not the Hon. Member would agree with the fact that carrying this deficit and increasing the tax load on all Canadians is hurting women.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should know that the way to reduce the deficit is by building a stronger economy. In order to do that we need a number of things. For example, we need an industrial strategy in the country. The Government has washed its hands of the economy. It wants to leave the economy to run itself. We are not going to have the wealth in the country to pay for public services and reduce the deficit if we leave things in that way.

• (1750)

We heard a good example today in the House when the Minister was answering questions with regard to Mitel. The Government has shown no concern whatsoever that an important high-tech industry, which is presently owned by Canadians, is going to be owned by foreigners. It seems to welcome the fact of a foreign takeover.

In order to have public services we must have a Canadian economy and policies that lead to the development of a Canadian economy. We cannot have economic growth in the country if our interest rates simply track American interest rates. We need a "made in Canada" interest rate policy. We need policies to support such a measure. However, the Government seems to be satisfied with leaving the economy to the decisions of the directors and bosses of private sector corporations. If we want to reduce the deficit, I suggest we do it by strengthening the economy and having policies which help us develop our economy, rather than simply leaving it to the private sector.

Mr. Caldwell: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member did not point out the fact that all indications are that the economy is improving. Our interest rates are at their lowest levels in six and a half years. Inflation is down. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) announced 210,000 jobs in the last year and 47,000 jobs for women in the last month. How much more do you want to get our economy going? Housing sales have doubled. We may not have a "made in Canada" interest rate, Mr. Speaker, but interest rates are certainly lower than they have been for some time and the economy is picking up. That is helping the women of the country to obtain jobs.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member seems to be satisfied with 11 per cent unemployment. There is no way that we in this Party would tolerate such a high rate of unemployment. The Government should not tolerate it either. We need a commitment from the Government for a full employment policy in the country. If the Government made that commitment in a real way and put all Canadians back to work, we would produce the revenues which would balance the books to enable us to provide essential services to Canadians.

The Hon. Member quoted a few statistics from the recent past. He seems to think that things are great in Canada for all Canadians. There are many Canadians who continue to be unemployed who need work. We need a serious commitment from the Government to provide work for all Canadians.

[Translation]

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to two issues that are extremely important to the Government, and I am referring to the provision of transition services, including transition houses for women and children who are victims of family violence, and the situation of daycare in Canada.

We are facing a terrifying situation in Canada, where one woman out of ten is beaten by her husband or spouse. The disastrous effects of this problem not only affect women and children but also society in general, including all the legal, economic, health, social and educational systems and services available to us.

The battered wife is found in every community, in all cultural groups and at all income levels. We have seen women of all ages who were beaten by their spouses, even pregnant women, who are particularly vulnerable.

In the eyes of the law, the battered woman is the victim of a criminal act on the same terms as the individual who is assaulted by a stranger. The needs of battered women are physical and emotional, social, economic and legal. She needs protection and advice so that her rights will not be impinged upon. She often needs financial assistance, housing, care for her children and some vocational guidance to find a job. She also needs advice and the understanding of her friends, of her family and experts to tear herself from that cycle of violence.

The problem of battered wives was very seldom exposed in the past. We should be grateful to an increasing number of groups and individuals, especially women, who have enabled us to understand better the nature, the frequency and causes of violence in the family. Consequently, since 1972 when the first transition house was opened in Vancouver, the number of such houses in Canada has reached 202 and it is still increasing at a rate two and a half times greater, proportionately, than in the United States.

The federal government is working in close co-operation with provinces, groups and social agencies. The costs of services provided to battered women are shared with the provinces through the Canada Assistance Plan.

In 1982, the Department of National Health and Welfare set up the National Clearing house on Family Violence.

The Clearing house collects, analyses and disseminates information on family violence; advises and assists professional and lay workers concerning training programs and research projects; organizes seminars and workshops, co-operates with other departments, governmental and non-governmental groups to identify current problems and prevent family violence.

Vis-à-vis, the bilingual newsletter published quarterly by the Clearing house is offered free of charge to the Canadian public. It contains surveys, annotated bibliographies, lists of resources, calendars of events and articles on current research programs and activities.

The collection of films on family violence comprises over 30 features made available free of charge to the general public and specialists through the distribution offices of the National Film Board throughout Canada.

In the area of day care centres in Canada, the federal Government has committed itself to promote the development of extensive, economical and good quality services. Again through the Canada Assistance Plan, the Government is sharing with the provinces the costs of child care services for families in need or likely to be.

* * *

[English]

THE BUDGET

DESIGNATION OF ORDER OF THE DAY

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of a point of order from the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I apologize for interrupting the excellent speech of the Hon. Member for Louis-Hébert (Mrs. Duplessis). There have been consultations between the Parties. If you seek unanimous consent of the House, Mr. Speaker, I believe you will find a disposition to accept a disposition that, notwithstanding any Standing Order, on Thursday, May 23, 1985 at four o'clock p.m. the Speaker shall interrupt any proceedings then before the House and the sitting shall be suspended until 4.30 o'clock p.m. when the House shall proceed to the Order of the Day for consideration of a Ways and Means Motion for the presentation of a Budget, provided that the hour for consideration of Private Members' Business shall be suspended and that the House shall continue to sit, if necessary, beyond the ordinary daily hour of adjournment, and that when a motion to adjourn the debate has been made, by the first Member replying on behalf of the Opposition, and has been adopted the House shall stand adjourned, until the next sitting day.

Mr. Speaker: Can I take it from that that the President of the Privy Council is asking, under Standing Order 64(2) that an order of the day be designated for the consideration of a Ways and Means motion on Thursday, May 23, 1985 at 4.30 p.m. for the purpose of the presentation of a Budget by the Hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson)? I take it that the President of the Privy Council is hereby giving such notice, for which no consent is required.

• (1800)

The motion read to the House by the President of the Privy Council does require unanimous consent. Therefore, is there such unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: It being six o'clock p.m., it is my duty to inform the House that pursuant to Standing Order 62(11), proceedings on the motion have expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

FINANCE—BULK FUEL DEALERS—REIMBURSEMENT OF SALES TAX

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, April 30, 1985, I posed a question to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) concerning the fuel sales tax rebate to primary producers. Some bulk fuel dealers who hold tax paid inventory must seek reimbursement from the federal Treasury for sales tax not collected at the time of sale. The cost of financing the delay between the date of payment of tax by the bulk fuel dealer and the date of receipt of reimbursement of that tax from the Government is placing a burden on many dealers. I asked the Minister if he would examine the possibility of providing cash advances or floats to the dealers to alleviate this situation. I would like to elaborate on this matter.

Members will recall Bill C-12, put forth last fall, which provided among other things for a sales tax rebate of three cents per litre on the sale of fuel to primary producers, including farmers, fishermen and others, plus 1.8 cents per litre, being the petroleum compensation charge, for a total of 4.8 cents or almost 22 cents per gallon. This, to the primary producers, was a most welcome fulfillment of a campaign commitment.

During the debate on Bill C-12 it became obvious that there could be unfairness as between the two kinds of dealers. There is the commission agent who basically holds his inventory on consignment, thus, the inventory that he holds is free of any sales tax. The second kind of bulk fuel dealer is the independent who purchases his fuel from the manufacturer and pays sales tax on it at the time. His inventory is tax paid.

As originally put forward, Bill C-12 would have placed the independent dealers in an awkward position because they would have been obliged to collect sales tax which they had already paid. Thus their initial price at the time of sale to their customers would have been 22 cents per gallon higher than the price charged by the commission agent dealer. The customers would naturally tend to gravitate to the dealer who could provide the lowest initial price.

To prevent this unfairness, Bill C-12 was withdrawn and a new bill, Bill C-17, was put forward which provided that all dealers could sell fuel to the primary producer free of tax. This solved the problem of treating the independents unfairly at retail, but did put them in the position of having to apply to the federal Government to secure a refund of the sales tax which they had already paid on their inventory at the time of purchase from the refiner.

Unfortunately, this procedure has in turn caused additional problems. The problem is that there is an inevitable delay betwen the time of sale by the independent bulk fuel dealer to his customer and the time that he actually receives reimbursement of that tax upon application to the federal Government.

If there be a 60-day turnaround on the rebates, a bulk fuel dealer carrying $25,000 of tax, for example, is facing substantial interest costs. A dealer carrying continuously $25,000 worth of tax is paying out at least $250 per month in carrying charges. That is a lot of money for a dealer to carry. Most dealers are a one-man or one-family operation. The servicing costs will vary depending on the amount of tax outstanding and the time delay in rebate processing.

The point is that it is neither fair nor reasonable that the fuel dealer be made to carry the cost of this Government benefit to primary producers. Further, these same fuel dealers are already put to the substantial added effort and cost of additional bookkeeping in submitting their applications for rebate.

I put forward two solutions. The first one involves the provision of a cash advance or floats to the dealers. This system is already in place in the Province of Alberta under the Alberta Farm Fuel Distribution Allowance, whereby a seven cent per litre rebate is given to farmers to assist in their input costs. This rebate is taken right off the invoice by the bulk fuel dealer. The bulk fuel dealers purchase their fuel, including the seven-cents a litre. When the fuel is sold to the farmer, seven cents per litre is taken off the price and this deduction is, in turn, recovered from the Alberta treasury. The agents are given a cash advance equal to deductions on approximately two months of the highest season's sales, to be placed in the bank to offset the first pay-back. It is called an accountable advance under the Act. I am advised that this system works very efficiently. There is no hardship on the bulk dealers and, in fact, the dealers are very pleased with the system.

• (1805)

The other solution is more simple. It involves paying interest to the dealers, and this interest would simply be included with their rebate cheques from time to time. In view of the fact that the federal fuel sales tax rebate program has a sunset date of December 31, 1986, may I instead suggest that a straightforward system of interest payments would be the reasonable and just solution. The time frame of this benefit does not warrant putting into place a cash advance or float system. Therefore I urge the Government simply to pay independent bulk dealers the equivalent of bank loan interest on the refund of sales tax.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I hope the initial answer which the Department has provided will satisfy him, at least until the Minister rises in his place to deliver his Budget next week.

The Government's fuel tax rebate program was announced in the Minister's economic statement in November in order to respond to serious financial difficulties being experienced by primary producers. Initially it was proposed that primary producers be required to claim the rebate directly from the Government, except where the fuel was purchased from a manufacturer licensed for federal sales tax purposes and required to charge tax on his sales.

After this program had been announced, representatives of Federated Co-operatives Limited, the Co-operatives Union of Canada and other groups of unlicensed retailers requested that the legislation be broadened to allow retailers to elect to credit the rebate directly to primary producers at the time of the sale, and to file a refund claim with the Government to recover rebates credited in this way. They suggested that this would better serve the needs of their customers and enable them to compete on an equal basis with manufacturers that were already authorized to credit the rebate at the time of sale. As a result the legislation was amended to meet this request.

The issue of a potential impact on retailers' cash flow was also considered at that time. Many factors in the design of this program have reduced the risk of any serious negative impact. First, it is expected that the Government will pay rebates in approximately the same time, on average, as primary producers normally take to pay their accounts. Except in the case of cash payments by purchasers, the impact on cash flow will be minimal. Second, the law requires the Government to pay interest on any valid rebate claim not paid within 60 days. This requirement will ensure that rebate claimants will be protected from loss of use of funds where, through government error, a rebate claim cannot be made in a reasonable time.

Finally, it should be noted that the decision by retailers to claim rebates on behalf of their customers is not a requirement of the law. Rather, this provision is an elective one to accommodate legitimate concerns raised by some retailers. It would not be appropriate for the Government to increase the cost of administering this program by compensating retailers for actions they may take to accommodate their customers' needs.

On balance, the Government believes that these positions will minimize any cash flow costs that retailers may face, while providing a substantial benefit to Canada's primary producers.

CULTURAL AFFAIRS—SPECIAL INITIATIVE FUND. (B) ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, on April 29 I asked a very straightforward question of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) concerning the special cultural initiatives program and possible irregularities in the awarding of grants under this program. It is one of the few programs which is actually getting more money because the money comes from lotteries, not from general tax revenues. While there have been arts cut-backs, this special cookie jar fund of the Minister has been getting more money.

I do not want to complain about any of the particular programs which have been funded. They all sound as if they have at least some merit. I am not in a position to judge their actual merits. However, I wonder about how these decisions are made. The special cultural initiatives program brochure dealt with the previous guidelines for projects. Those guidelines no longer hold. They were for the last fiscal year. The Government has not announced any guidelines, and the Minister told me that under the circumstances the old guidelines still hold. His own Department does not say the same thing. If one phones in and asks what are the guidelines for getting money for this program, he is told that there are no guidelines. Groups do not know where they stand.

● (1810)

Unfortunately another message is coming out of all this. If you want access to this program you need political connections with the Conservative Party, perhaps with the Prime Minister's Office or the office of the Minister of Communications. This is indeed shameful. When I asked the Minister about this he did not deny my allegation that connections of a political nature are what counts for getting grants. He could provide no criteria by which these decisions are made.

Since the case I raised with him on April 29, other grants have been made; one to a circus, Cirque du Soleil, of $750,000. With this money it will be possible to import a big top from Italy and put on circus performances, no doubt a very laudable cultural activity. I certainly think circuses are to be supported, but why this particular one? Why not other circuses? Who makes these decisions? What connections are needed? This is a lot of money for the arts field, $750,000.

Then we had an announcement about Stratford. I am a great fan of Stratford. I congratulate them on "Measure for Measure" which I saw on Saturday, but what about the Shaw Festival? Why is it not getting money? More than $250,000 is going to Stratford to tour in the United States. It is very good for Stratford to be touring, but other companies would like that money as well.

The arts community will no doubt tell us that the money could be spent on Canadian theatre. Why should all that money go for English theatre while Canadian theatre is being starved? The Shaw Festival is an excellent festival. It is not getting comparable funding. Why is it being denied funding? We do not know the answers to these questions because the regular arts agencies that evaluate requests from all the companies which develop criteria and which have a peer evaluation system are not the agencies that are making these decisions.

Furthermore, on the question of touring, a most laudable objective, the recommendations which the Government had accepted in Opposition and promised during the election campaign have not been respected. For example, theatre groups have been asking for advertising in the United States to promote theatre in Canada. The Government has not done anything about this. The latest advertising in the campaign of the Department of Tourism still features beavers and flapjack contests. This is what the Americans are being told about Canadian culture, not about our Canadian theatre. Why is money not going to promote Canadian theatre in the United States? Instead we have this cookie jar being used for certain companies under certain criteria that we do not know.

The Minister says as long as money is being spent under his Department, that makes it democratic. I asked him about this in committee. He seemed to imply that channelling money through the Canada Council was undemocratic because the Canada Council is not a government Department. Now we have the ludicrous example of a Minister saying that to keep the election promises of his own Party would be contrary to democracy. This is absolutely shameful.

Surely the most basic notion of democracy is that a Government is accountable to the people, and that for an election campaign to have some sense there is a discussion of the issues with the Parties taking different positions. If the position taken by the Party which wins power is not respected, that is an abuse of democracy. The Minister does not understand what democracy is all about. He does not understand that the arts community wants more funding, not less. It wants that funding to go into the regular arts agencies. It wants jury selection and criteria which are accepted within the arts community.

While we are having these very serious cut-backs which hurt the arts community, it is very wrong to see actual increases in funding available for the arts going into this special fund under the Minister's jurisdiction. We want more funding and we want it through the agencies of arts community trusts. We want the agencies to have much more accountability to the community. We want the community to make recommendations for appointments. We want the Minister to respect the arts community, which is what he promised, certainly what his Party promised in the election campaign.

[Translation]

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised questions concerning the way grants and funds are awarded under the special cultural initiatives program administered by the Department of Communications.

The special cultural initiatives program was created in 1981 to give financial assistance to non-profit Canadian cultural professional organizations. The initial program was approved for a three-year period with a $39.6 million budget to support activities in deficit reduction, administration improvement, acquisition of assets and special demonstrations of national significance. During the first three years of the program, more than 500 cultural organizations from every region of the country received assistance through this fund. In 1983, the program was renewed until March 31, 1985 after its terms of reference were modified so as to replace the deficit reduction program by other activities related to arts and technology. The renewed program had a $34 million budget and over 343 cultural organizations from various parts of Canada were able to benefit from that phase of the program.

• (1815)

[English]

The areas addressed by the program are those activities which complement other funding programs of the Government of Canada including those of the Canada Council and provincial Government programs.

In reviewing request for financial assistance, the program staff consults with other federal and provincial Departments and agencies familiar with the project or the organization and the cultural ecology in which it operates. The Canada Council represents an important source for such information and the level of contact between the Council and program staff is significant. Following an analysis of the request and the information garnered during the consultation process, a recommendation is formulated for the Minister's consideration.

The Minister also receives representations from Members of Parliament from all sides of the House as well as representations from his provincial colleagues, which place the project in the context of the realities of the local community and its needs. This information is directed to the office of the Minister as the background information he requires in order to make an informed judgment on a project submitted for review. Such information ensures that the Minister has the broadest field of information possible on the merits of a project and its impact on the community.

Since March 1, program officials have been actively consulting officials from all provincial Governments to ensure that the objectives, criteria and priorities of any continuing program are consistent with the regional realities and needs of the Canadian cultural community. In light of the central role played by the provincial Governments in co-funding projects submitted to the program, such consultations are essential to ensure a truly responsive and responsible program of support for Canadian cultural organizations.

The Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) will make public his intentions in this respect in the very near future, at which time any revised criteria will be distributed to Canadian cultural organizations as well as all interested Members of the House of Commons. In the interim, the criteria of the Special Program of Cultural Initiatives approved for the period of April 1, 1983, to March 31, 1985, will continue to apply.

[Translation]

Finally it should be noted that, since September 4, 64, or 48 per cent, of the 134 grants awarded under the program went to ridings represented by Liberal and NDP Members. Those figures clearly indicate that the complaint voiced by the Hon. Member—that the main criterion for awarding grants or contributions is related to political allegiance—is totally unfounded. Besides, I might add that a review of projects funded under the program would reveal that it has been and still is an efficient tool to help Canada's cultural organizations.

• (1820)

MINES—CONSTRUCTION OF CARTOGRAPHIC INSTITUTE AT SHERBROOKE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I am very glad to rise during this adjournment debate to come back to a question that I put to the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) last March 25 with regard to the construction of the Cartographic Institute in Sherbrooke. Mr. Speaker, I know how sensitive you are to this issue and I would like to take this opportunity to give the Government a chance to clearly state its position. Everybody knows that the background to this question is terrible. As you are well aware, in 1977, under the decentralization policy announced by the then Government, it had been decided that one of the services would be decentralized to Sherbrooke. Since then, this project has been plagued by all sorts of problems which we all regret. Unfortunately, for many years, there were language related problems, but this difficulty has finally been corrected. Regionally, there has always been a political will to settle the issue, but the population lost patience with good reason perhaps, because of the incredible delay in implementing projects which were so vital to the region.

Consequently, Mr. Speaker, for this and many other reasons, I am certain that you have succeeded in winning the confidence of the public, and in this regard, we must all acknowledge the results of the last election, while keeping in mind the commitments made by Government Members then in the Opposition. This is what everyone is worried about. Mr. Speaker, it had been said that this project had been put off for too long, that nothing had been done and that with a new Government, there would be no such delays.

Mr. Speaker, we have been assured since September 4 that there would not be any delay. We were told that the project would be carried out soon. Nothing of the kind happened. We were then told: You will have to wait for the next Budget. Now we are told that it will not be in the next Budget. I would therefore like the Parliamentary Secretary to show more ability than his Minister and to give us a clear, explicit and specific answer. Does the Government still intend to move the Cartographic Institute to Sherbrooke, as agreed with the unions? This means an institute of about 400 employees and not a skeleton staff. Will the Government not agree to the recommendations made by three Progressive Conservative Members of the region who do not want the institute to move? Is the political will expressed during the electoral campaign still there?

Mr. Speaker, I know that the Eastern Townships need this institute. You know as well as I do how high is the unemployment rate in the region. You know as well as I do how great are the expectations of the people at Sherbrooke University. What I want to know is quite simple. Actually, this should not require three minutes from the Parliamentary Secretary's time if he is in a position to tell me tonight that indeed the Institute of Cartography will be moved, that a specific timeframe will be followed and we will not have to wait until the pigs start to fly and that, Mr. Speaker, you have no intention of making an election on that issue! There have already been three, in my view, so said your leader! He even went as far as five, but we know his natural propensity to exaggerate!

Mr. Speaker, I think this is important for the people in the area who are now getting involved. You will certainly be visited by the Mayor of Sherbrooke, accompanied by people from the economic summit who led an absolutely extraordinary fight on the Domtar issue. There was tremendous regional solidarity on that. In that sense, Mr. Speaker, I know you are aware of the regional solidarity that exists in the Eastern Townships and that, like myself, you will want to make sure the Parliamentary Secretary will not disappoint anyone. You will want to make sure the Parliamentary Secretary is equal to his enormous task, that he gives us a forthright, direct, and specific answer. I know that when he was in Opposition, he was a champion of clarity. This is the kind of clarity I am expecting from him tonight, Mr. Speaker, and despite his interests in forestry, I am sure his interest in regional economic development is still greater and he can tell us tonight what is the definite and specific intent of the Government.

I think the Government has procrastinated beyond reason. If it is credit the new Government is looking for, we will be ready to applaud as soon as the work starts. But, for heaven's sake let it start! Because this has been a specific commitment by the Prime Minister, by the candidates in the election, and it is the kind of commitment we want to see implemented within the shortest possible time, because the area is in tremendous need of it.

● (1825)

[English]

Mr. F. Oberle (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to the Hon. Member's question. He is championing a cause for a region which is similar to the region I represent in another part of the country, and I am most sensitive to the needs of that region. In fact, the Hon. Member will recall that I have in the past made many efforts in many different directions to sensitize the Government to the special needs of regions such as Sherbrooke.

The Hon. Member correctly analysed the situation. It was in 1977 that the Government of the day for the first time announced that there would be a program of decentralization of certain Government Departments to different parts of Canada. Soon thereafter the proposition was advanced that a part of the programs maintained by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources should be relocated to Sherbooke. The commitment became a very seasonal kind of thing, as happened to many of these things in the past. As elections came near, the commitment became stronger, soon to be forgotten after the election. In fact, when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) spoke about this subject during the election campaign he was not, of course, aware of how much planning had gone into this proposition and whether or not an impact statement had been prepared on both the region which was to benefit from this project and, of course, the Department.

I can tell the Hon. Member that the proposition which has been advanced, namely, to relocate the mapping and surveys branch or the Cartography Institute of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources to Sherbrooke involves about 400 positions. There is some planning which has gone on in the intervening period. There have been discussions with unions. It has been decided that only about one hundred of the existing positions would move from Ottawa to Sherbrooke. The rest would be recruited there.

The Prime Minister and the Government, of course, immediately sensed the urgency associated with this matter, and the need and potential of that region to absorb that kind of facility. Unfortunately, however, the planning had not been done, but will be done. The plan needs to demonstrate maximum utilization and benefit to the region and, of course, minimum disruption to the existing program. We want to get the best out of this project.

The Hon. Member has been waiting for eight years. I know how often he spoke when he was in the Government—likely behind the scenes because I never heard him in the House. He will just have to be a little more patient. I can tell him that the program will have to fit in within the new fiscal framework of the Government and must be co-ordinated with a set of other priorities. There is no intention, however, of doing anything other than to perhaps postpone, hopefully for a shorter period of time than eight years, this important project.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion to adjourn is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, May 14, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry) moved:

That this House condemns the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and the Legislatures by failing to use industrial, decentralization, agricultural, transportation and equalization policies as well as its Crown Corporations to further economic development in all communities across Canada.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in one of the more unusual and quixotic episodes in the history of this Parliament, we are now in the fourth straight day of opposition resolutions. Perhaps the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has had a curious bit of absence of mind and has simply not realized that his agenda is now being dominated by the legislative and policy agendas of the opposition Parties. On the other hand, perhaps it is more that the Government has taken a look at its own legislation and has realized just how awful it is and is afraid to bring it forward for any further public examination. Perhaps the Government will now withdraw most of its legislation, as we have been suggesting it do, because it simply does not match up, or perhaps this is simply the calm before the storm. Perhaps government Ministers are now cowering in their bunkers awaiting the Gotterdammerung of the Budget which will take place on May 23 and are simply using this period to lull the Canadian public into forgetting that the Government is no longer a part of the fabric of our society because it is obviously afraid to face Parliament with any form of legislative agenda.

I can only speculate on these things. I would not want to draw any firm conclusions. However, I think all Members of the House would recognize that this is one of the more unusual kinds of House strategies, and it is with some interest that I would request of members of the Conservative caucus, when they meet with their Ministry—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly), on a point of order.

Mrs. Mailly: I question the relevance of the Hon. Member's speech. He has hardly begun, and he is already off on a tangent.

[English]

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I almost set a new record. It took me only 45 seconds to get the Hon. Member on her feet with totally extraneous and superficial points of order to which no one pays any attention. Aside from that, I am sure there will be many other opportunities during the course of my remarks for the Hon. Member to get sufficient exercise by hopping up and down in her chair like a certain kind of seat-cover.

The fact of the matter is that this resolution is attempting to draw attention in a fundamental way to the fact that within a week's time, we hope we will be faced for the first time with the Conservative economic agenda. I hope Hon. Members opposite recognize what an historic moment that will be. Ministers of the Crown will no longer be able to use their normal repertoire of blaming everything on the nasty Grits. They will have to learn a whole new script. They will not be able to rise any longer and say that they inherited all these problems. For the first time, they will have to put forward to the Canadian people exactly what it is that they believe in.

Mr. Dick: What do you?

Mr. Axworthy: I would say that the "member for Mitel" is a little noisy this morning. If I were him, I would be a little more careful about what I had to say, because we are going to make some comments about him later on.

Come next week, the Government will finally have to "fess up". It is going to have to show its commitment to keeping all those many hundreds of promises it made. The great negotiator and promise-maker, otherwise known at times as the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), will have to put his cards on the table and show the Canadian people that he meant what he said last summer.

Time and time again, we have seen the most convoluted form of political acrobatics ever witnessed by the Canadian public performed by the pretender Prime Minister while he is trying to evade his commitments and promises. We have seen more dancing on the floor of the House of Commons than one will see in an all-night ballroom as Ministers of the Crown have done a remarkable minuet trying to evade and avoid the kind of responsibilities for economic leadership that we assumed they would take.

We will see the clear obligation of the Government to fill the many economic vacuums which exist. There are more economic potholes in the agenda of this Government than there are on the unpaved roads of the Yukon. That is why the Conservatives lost that election yesterday.

Mr. Stevens: What about the Liberals?

Mr. Axworthy: We did very well. I am glad the Minister raised that. Guess which seat the Liberals won in the Yukon election? The seat of Faro, which is the site of the Cyprus-Anvil mine which the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has done such a wonderful job of pushing into the ground. I would like to thank the Minister personally for giving us the opportunity to win that seat. We won it because of his inaction.

We on this side can be pleased with the Minister because his record of inaction, indecision and vacillation on a whole front of economic activities is one of the primary reasons for which the Conservative Party is in full retreat across the country, in every province and Territory. That is why it is losing elections and its popular vote is in retreat. I think it is incumbent upon the Liberal Party to give full credit where it is due, and a large part of the credit is due to that Minister.

• (1110)

The people of the country are realizing that the Minister does not understand regional economic development. Not only does he not understand it, he does not care about it. We only have to look at the statements which he has made. Last week he gave a wonderful presentation to The Financial Post. The article described the grand new industrial strategy, compliments of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. However, if we study what he is proposing, we realize that he is proposing the elimination of industrial grants to small businesses and replacing them with tax incentives. That may be fine in the region which he represents, but when he begins to withdraw industrial grants from businesses in Atlantic Canada, Quebec, western Canada and northern Ontario, it will mean that there will no longer be economic activity in those areas. There cannot be tax credits when taxes are not being paid because there is not enough economic activity to support them. Anyone who has any experience, understanding or anyone who cares about the requirement of the federal Government to provide parity and equity across Canada would know that. But the Minister in The Financial Post statement said that he had a grand new design. What is curious is that the "Minister for free enterprise", as he likes to portray himself, put forward in that article far more drastic interventionism than any Liberal Minister ever considered. The Minister is going to dictate to different industrial sectors their long-term plans.

The Minister loves to stand in the House and berate our poor socialist friends. Yet the Minister is prescribing far more direct social economic planning than anything our socialist friends in the NDP would consider. The Minister is a mass of contradictions wrapped up in a ball of enigma warped in a hazy gray mass of indecision—if I may use a somewhat loose interpretation of Mr. Churchill's famous statement.

What we are discovering is that this Government does not have an economic development policy which is directed toward the priorities of the country. For example, yesterday in the House questions were asked which related to the takeover of Mitel by a British telecommunications firm. What was very clear was the total absence of any policy or prescription to deal with Canadian involvement, investment and control of its own high technology industry. Every economic commentator will tell us that that industry must provide the cutting edge in terms of international competition. It is an area which has incredible growth potential. It is an area in which Canadians have been able to formulate and develop some of the most interesting and innovative products in the world. It has been nine months since the Government has come into power with its so-called "open Sesame" invitation to foreign investors. Now we are seeing the takeover of that intrinsic, generic and effective Canadian industry by foreign investors. The Minister has no response. He does not have a policy and he does not know what to do. He is now being caught in his own contradiction of saying: "Let's just have wide open foreign investment". That investment will not bring new development to the country, it will simply take over the existing investment. It is sad because there is nothing in place to offer opportunity, encouragement or incentive to Canadian investors. Look at the anomaly. Bell Canada enterprises, a major Canadian telecommunications firm, is putting up $1.5 billion to buy an oil company but we have to rely upon a British telecommunications company to come over and invest in our own telecommunications industry. If Mitel needed new capital, why did the Minister not take some responsibility directly in working with Canadian investors to provide the necessary capital? He said, "Hands off", yet in the Financial Post article he said, "No, hands on. I'm going to require individual companies and industrial sectors to provide a 15-year plan in order to provide for long-term development", except in the high-tech industry and in another wide range of industries, which we will take full opportunity in this debate to draw to the attention of the House.

• (1115)

What we are saying is that the real sacred trust of this Government should be the effective allocation and direction of economic development across the regions of Canada. Yet what we have seen and witnessed in the past nine months is a total abdication of that responsibility and an unwillingness to use the powers, resources and investment possibilities of the federal Government in order to provide for effective leadership. Even its friends are losing patience. Beginning today in Grande Prairie, the western premiers have on their agenda a clear-cut item dealing with the lack of federal consultation on economic development matters. For instance, its friend, Grant Devine, the Premier of Saskatchewan, is saying that what they are really afraid of is that in next week's Budget the federal Government, through the Nielsen task force, is going to slash, hack and cut away at all kinds of economic programs and the provinces will have to pick up the slack. And Mr. Nielsen and his task force have not even had the courtesy to consult with their friends, the provincial Premiers.

What an incredible contradiction, Mr. Speaker! All the western papers are saying that neither the Nielsen task force nor, I presume, the western Ministers, have bothered to sit down with their cohorts in the western provinces to decide on what they can provide joint action. That is on the agenda. It is not the agenda of the Official Opposition; it is the agenda of the western Premiers who are complaining mightily of the lack of consultation. Yet this is the Government which came into office promising that there would be full and open discussion and open sharing of information and responsibility—except with the western Premiers. They seem to have been left out of this grand plan of the economic Ministers. They have not been included in this development. The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), just as he has avoided the issues of the native people, women and the regions, is now avoiding the provincial Premiers.

I want to know who the Minister is really talking to. We are fully aware he does not talk to his caucus. I presume he is musing with some past ghosts of ages gone by. I know where the muses are, Mr. Speaker, because the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has said that his particular idol is C.D. Howe, a former Liberal. That is who the Minister wants to emulate. He has a fat chance of doing that because he got off to a very poor start.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that this Government is a fraud. It is not living up to the kind of spirit of co-operation it talks about. It is not consulting with the provinces. It is going to bring down the Budget next week based upon, I believe, the hidden agenda, which will be to make a number of severe reductions in federal government programs and throw the buck back at the provincial Governments. It is going to assume that the provincial Governments will pick up the slack. The onus will be thrown back on the provinces to carry the economic responsibilities of this country. This is a Government that does not want to take responsibility. It does not want to face up to its obligations.

Let me speak for a moment, Mr. Speaker, about the Economic Regional Development Agreements, the ERDA programs, two major Liberal initiatives which were brought in about a year and a half or two years ago in order to provide for a coherent framework of economic development. I know the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and other Ministers take all the credit for delivering programs under ERDA. They stand up and say, "Look at the wonderful thing we have done in the Provinces of New Brunswick, Quebec and others", based upon a program that we brought in and a Budget that we set aside. The regional development fund that was set aside in the previous Estimates has provided the financial allocation for which this Government is now taking credit. At the same time, it is trying to take credit for the results under that program, it is substantially undermining the spirit of the program. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion lost $200 million on the IRD Program in the November statement. Who did that affect? It affected about 80 per cent of the communities in this country which could no longer have tier one funding. The major economic centres in every province across Canada are no longer able to find grants and supports for expansion or new business in their regions. That has been the result of this Minister's responsibility.

• (1120)

Equally, you find in the development of the ERDA program a total and complete lack of action in key areas of the provinces. Western Canada has been waiting for months for some kind of an agreement with the Province of British Columbia. The forestry industry is virtually past its seeding season and nothing has been signed. Negotiations that proceeded and were about to be signed have now been totally forestalled and held up for nine or ten months. It is inexplainable, these kinds of hesitations, lack of action and lack of progress.

Let me point to an example in my province which goes back to the resolution. We had provided as one of the initiatives in the Province of Manitoba the development of the National Research Council Institute of Manufacturing Technology. The reason for providing that was to provide a national centre of research and development in robotics and the newest area of research and technology for small business to move into high technology areas. It was a centre planned to provide opportunities for business, universities and engineers in the private sector to become involved. The building was constructed and the plans were in place.

In the November 8 statement, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) cut off totally all funding for that program. The provincial Government, industrialists, the universities and Members of the Opposition began to raise questions expressing their concern about this matter. The Conservatives rushed together, huddled together and said, "Don't worry, we will look after that". Seven months later, the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) came to my province and, in one of the great all-time jokes, said, "What I am going to do is set up a committee and have another nine months study of the program". In the meantime, we have lost a number of major businesses that were going to relocate in Winnipeg because of that centre. There is a total discredit of that kind of program. Conservative Members of Parliament are saying that it would have been a closed laboratory. That means they did not read the original prescription.

That is a complete abdication of responsibility for Members of Parliament from Manitoba, not even to have read the original plans, goals and objectives of that centre to know what is going on. They now go around saying something totally different. It is a joke, a travesty, and a transgression that simply points out that this Government has no understanding, care, sensitivity or willingness to try to provide the federal resources in its Crown agency to get involved in plans for economic development.

We have a lack of leadership and direction in the whole transportation agreement with the Province of Manitoba. The Minister in charge of the Wheat Board says that we will deliver some grain, but he is not sure how much. There is no willingness to give direction, set goals and go ahead with the original program. As a result, it is working on idle. The opportunity in that province to establish major opportunities in transportation, the construction of new prototype grain cars, developing the port as an alternative, moving ahead in the urban transportation area, and using those agreements to give that region an opportunity for economic growth and development is again put in low gear. Nothing is happening. There is no direction, no leadership, no purpose.

Clearly, the point of this resolution is to say that we have a Government that does not understand economic development. It has not provided any leadership in this area. It is forcing the regions to rely upon their own resources by relinquishing the federal role. The Budget on May 23, on the basis of evidence we have seen until now, will be built on the backs of the poorer provinces and the poorer regions. This Opposition is opposed to it. We are simply giving notice now that they have a week to change that Budget. We hope they take our good advice.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments?

• (1125)

Mr. Edwards: Mr. Speaker, I have much empathy with the Hon. Member because we have just heard an anguished cry from purgatory. The demons are at work. We do not know how long the term in purgatory will be, but we sincerely hope that the Member will survive his stint there because it is good for his soul. I think that we are all concerned with souls ultimately.

I believe we have had a lecture on regional industrial expansion. It was a little difficult to track some of it. I would point out to the House that the people of Manitoba were not fooled by regional industrial expansion in their region on September 4. There was certainly a basket of goodies for the Winnipeg-Fort Garry riding, but the people in the other 13 ridings in that province reacted otherwise. We have also had a dissertation on robotics. I believe that the Party opposite can give us some expert advice on robotics since it has practised that art for so many years.

On a more positive note, Mr. Speaker, I will point out one clear example of good results achieved from federal-provincial consultation in these days of economic difficulty. That example is the Cold Regions Laboratory in Edmonton, Alberta. The funding of that laboratory was cut in the November economic statement as part of sharing the pain across the country. I have had the privilege of participating in an alternative plan to revivify that very worth-while project as a combined operation among federal and provincial Governments and the private sector. I am happy to say that it is well on its way to revival and will be fulfilling its role as it should. That is an example of an NRC project that is being revived. That type of consultation did take place prior to the Grande Prairie meeting of Premiers. With this Government it is taking place hourly, daily, weekly, and continually.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Would the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) like to respond?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, in what is becoming a pattern of total absence of mind, the Hon. Member neglected to ask a question. However, I will be glad to answer it anyway because I know what he was aiming at. In his last set of remarks he fell back on the great premise that there is a wild and wonderful system of consultation. I would like him to comment on another independent objective source, The Western Producer. This newspaper is read by virtually all grain producers in the prairie region. The headline reads, "Uncertainty about future bothers many groups". Once again the Canadian agricultural community is in a total state of uncertainty because of the lack of consultation by the Government on agricultural programs. The article reads:

> A large part of the unease flows from ignorance and confusion about the Conservative agenda for agriculture mainly because Minister John Wise has yet to articulate a clear vision of where he wants to take the industry.

That is not my comment, Mr. Speaker. That is the comment of very respected observers of the Canadian agricultural scene. Conservative Members are living in a fantasy land where there is daily and hourly consultation. They are simply drinking each other's bathwater. I presume they are talking to one another. At least I hope they are talking to someone rather than being in total isolation tanks. It is clear that they are not talking about what is going on in the country to the Canadians who really count. The provincial Premiers say they did not talk to the Government. Now the farm groups say that they are not talking to it. To whom is the Government talking?

• (1130)

Therefore, I ask the question in return: if consultation is taking place, is it a secret society that is being consulted? Do you have to belong to the Mulroney Club in order to be consulted in this country? Does one have to anteup to the Mulroney Club before one can be consulted?

Obviously in western Canada the major groups are not being consulted. Their interests are not being looked after, as we have seen in the House with the antics of the Nielsen group who have been making all kinds of recommendations that the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) knows nothing about. Obviously the Ministers of the Crown are not being consulted.

Therefore, I return to my original point. The Hon. Member, in all his interest of having a good policy emerge from the Budget, as I am sure it is his interest, should use his opportunity in the caucus tomorrow to raise the questions he has raised in the House today with his own Ministers.

Mr. Edwards: Has the Hon. Member ever talked to his Liberal friends in western Canada? Indeed, is he aware that there have been six in-depth meetings with his friend, the Mayor of the City of Edmonton, which were initiated by federal Members of Parliament, to discuss matters of mutual interest from which some very concrete results have flowed and will continue to flow?

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I have a brief question for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), who has a distinguished track record when it comes to economic development when he was a Minister in the former Government.

Would the Hon. Member care to comment on the operative word of the Throne Speech, which was "consultation"? Shortly afterward, the Minister made his economic statement in which he announced some very massive cuts. I believe that in excess of $1.7 billion was reduced from the regional economic development envelope.

Would the Hon. Member comment on that, in view of the fact that there have been a great number of regions in Canada, including the Atlantic, Manitoba and parts of Quebec, that have been greatly affected by those cut-backs, which were made without any consultation whatsoever with the Canadian people, the provincial Premiers or Members of Parliament? One example of these cut-backs is the winter ferry services in Yarmouth, from Bar Harbour to Maine. That was cut unilaterally by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) without any consultation. Would the Hon. Member comment on such tactics by the Conservative Government?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his good memory and kind compliments about the past record.

Let me point out to the House that it was only approximately six or seven weeks ago that the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) and I had the opportunity to consult with members of the Atlantic Economic Council who, during the course of those meetings, clearly pointed out that a continuation and strengthening of the IRDP was essential to the economic well-being of the Atlantic province. Through such programs, direct grants would go to individual businesses in those areas to give them the opportunity to start and develop new enterprises. However, we have seen that such action runs totally contrary to what the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is proposing.

It would be a very sad day for regions like Atlantic Canada, northern Quebec, northern Ontario and the western regions on budget day next Thursday if the Minister has once again lost out and the IRDP has been eviscerated and cut back, reduced or transferred so that the federal Government has withdrawn even further from its ability or capacity to provide for an over-all economic plan to help those regions.

It is our hope that this debate will serve to let Members opposite take strong notice that if a further reduction of the IRDP is contemplated in the Budget and its replacement with some kind of tax incentive system, the poorer economic regions of Canada that are trying to improve themselves with federal assistance and co-operation will be sadly and sorely dismayed. It would only prove the case we have seen in the last nine months that the Government does not care.

Mr. Mayer: Mr. Speaker, I wish to respond briefly to the comments of the Hon. Member about the direction of the Canadian Wheat Board. It is very interesting to look at his record when he was Minister of Transport and later Minister responsible for the Wheat Board. During his term, grain exports through Churchill went down over 30 per cent, from exports of a little over 600,000 tonnes in 1983 to a little over 400,000 tonnes when he was the Minister responsible.

It is very interesting to note that this happened at a time when Canada experienced record exports. If one wants to look at the record of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) when he was responsible for Churchill, it is very dismal. Use of the port went down close to 30 per cent at the same time that we had record exports.

If we want to talk about commitments to the Port of Churchill and at that Member's record when he was the Minister responsible, it is a very dismal record and anything but the distinguished track record that was referred to by the Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall).

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, in a record of the many dumb statements made, the Minister's statement that exports dropped for three weeks when I was Minister of the Wheat Board is about the dumbest he has ever made. To try to blame the fallen exports on that administration is ludicrous.

He did not mention that when I was Minister I negotiated and signed a $93 million agreement which put Churchill back on the road for the first time. The Minister and his colleagues are totally undermining that achievement, and that is the Government's record. That is what is actually taking place.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments has expired.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in this debate, I think it is necessary to come back to the motion that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) has put before the House. I noticed that he really did not touch on his own motion but seemed to use this as an opportunity to make statements that I suggest are perhaps among the most irresponsible that have ever been made in the House.

The reason I believe we should get back to the tone of the motion is that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry referred to an article that he read in a newspaper that made it appear as though I were an interventionist. This alarmed him and he said that I was more of an interventionist than even our socialist friends to the Hon. Member's left.

He did not specifically say that I was more of an interventionist than the Trudeau Liberals or the Turner Liberals, but I think that was the implication.

The motion before the House reads:

That this House condemns the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and the Legislatures by failing to use industrial, decentralization, agricultural, transportation and equalization policies as well as its Crown Corporations to further economic development in all communities across Canada.

What could be more interventionist than the Hon. Member's own motion? He claims that his motion is to condemn the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and the provincial legislatures by taking interventionist steps.

As this debate proceeds, I hope the Hon. Member will clarify, if it is possible for him to do so, the obvious conflict between his motion and the words that he uttered.

I find it rather amazing how representatives from the Official Opposition can so quickly forget the past. It is amazing how quickly they can get so worked up about the present. They totally forget that most of what they are rehashing is the result of the policies they had in place for over 14 years.

• (1140)

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that the Hon. Member said that there has been no consultation. In fact, he looked at the ceiling in a quizzical way and asked, "Who is this Government talking to? Is it the provincial Premiers? No. Is it business? No. Is it labour? No". What the Hon. Member has totally ignored is that his Government was the one that instituted the concept of going into programs on a unilateral basis and of saying that the Government will not only not talk with the provinces but will move into their provincial areas of responsibility and unaliterally change things, knowing that it is not welcome.

As far as consultation is concerned, I need only remind Hon. Members that on January 21 in Ottawa, we had a meeting of all of the development Ministers in Canada. The development Ministers from the 10 provinces, the two Territories and the federal Government met at that time, and, much to everyone's pleasure, what took place at that meeting was an excellent dialogue, discourse and meeting of the minds. At that meeting, it was pointed out that that was the first time in Canadian history that there had ever been such a meeting of development Ministers from all levels of Government. How can the Hon. Member say that there is no consultation when the former Government, after 14 years, failed to have one such meeting and when we, within the first few months of governing, were able to organize successfully the initial meeting?

In fact, the meeting was so successful that we had a further meeting on March 25 in Quebec City. Again, that meeting was successful. We started to explore questions like how we can take the IRD Program to which the Hon. Member referred and make it more effectively delivered in conjunction with the provinces. We asked how we could make it more responsive to what presumably were the provincial and regional requirements. The provinces, the federal Government and the Territorial Governments are now working on those questions and hopefully will be able to come to an agreement that will be to the liking of all concerned.

Again, the meeting in Quebec City resulted in an agreement to meet in Vancouver on May 27. At that time, we hope that there will be a joint consultation paper produced. Not only will it be a federal paper but it will be a joint paper produced by the provinces, the Territories and the federal Government. Again, that will be another first for Canada. How can the Hon. Member say that there is no consultation when the 10 provinces, the two Territories and the federal Government, for the first time, are working on such a consultation paper meant for joint publication?

The thing that I found so strange about the remarks of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry was that he said that somehow or other we are not funding enough and that we are not doing it right. He totally ignores the fact that since we took office last September, the Government has signed no less than 19 separate agreements with various provincial Governments under the IRDA mechanism. These agreements provide federal funding of nearly $800 million to the provincial economies. Let me be a little more specific, though. Perhaps the Hon. Member cannot really relate to larger figures. Let me talk specifically. Perhaps he can understand smaller figures.

In Newfoundland, for example, on December 20, 1984, we signed a pulp and paper agreement for a total anticipated expenditure of $46.3 million, $38.5 million of which will come from the federal Government. On March 29, 1985, we signed a highways agreement for a total expenditure of $180 million, $112.5 million of which will come from the federal Treasury. In Prince Edward Island on October 26 of last year, a tourism agreement was signed for a total expenditure of $8.9 million. In Prince Edward Island, a marketing agreement was signed with expenditures totalling $7.5 million. In each of those instances, the federal Government is putting up approximately two-thirds of the money.

In Nova Scotia, a $50-million fisheries agreement was signed with the federal Government putting up $35 million. A $14-million tourism agreement was signed with the federal Government putting up $9.8 million. Can you really fault the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker, for blushing right now? Can you really fault him for realizing how he misled this House? In New Brunswick, we signed a tourism agreement for $32 million, $22 million of which is coming from the federal Government. That was on November 30. A science and technology agreement was concluded on April 13, 1984, and we are continuing and expanding that agreement.

I could list the various subagreements we have signed with Quebec. Industrial development, tourism, communications, cultural infrastructures and forestry agreements have all been signed. The total of those agreements is $830 million and the federal portion of that is $415 million. If that sounds dramatic, one of the reasons for that is that Quebec was one of the provinces that was so severely impacted by the previous Government's unilateral actions that it refused to sign those kinds of agreements. It was not until this Government took over that we were able to sign an IRDA agreement with Quebec.

We not only succeeded in signing an IRDA agreement with the Province of Ontario on November 2 but we also concluded agreements for planning, forestry and tourism that total $196 million, the federal portion of which is $98 million. For the western provinces, I can cite province by province the various agreements we have signed. There are new initiatives in Saskatchewan for tourism and in Alberta for forestry. We signed an agreement with British Columbia regarding the IRDA arrangements.

In short, I would like to emphasize that this Government is picking up after the sad record of the previous Government. It has acted effectively by getting regional development moving again. I would like to start itemizing the results.

Let us not forget what we have been doing. You will recall the Atlantic Accord, Mr. Speaker. For many years the previous Government could not reach an agreement with the Province of Newfoundland. The present Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) were able to conclude that offshore agreement. What a breakthrough that was!

Mr. Lapierre: We have yet to see the results.

Mr. Stevens: Under the former Government, you would never have seen the results. I hope the Hon. Member realizes that.

Then there was the Western Accord. Can you believe, Mr. Speaker, that a Member from western Canada would criticize the present Government through this motion while totally ignoring the impact of the National Energy Program on the western provinces? That is what I mean when I say that this Hon. Member has a short memory. I despair for him. Surely he could remember the events of last year. Surely he knows of the unemployment that now exists in Alberta thanks to the former Government's National Energy Program. Surely he knows of the unemployment that now exists in British Columbia thanks to many of the former Government's policies affecting that area.

• (1150)

It is our job—and I can assure the House that we will accept the challenge—to turn some of those misdirected programs around and get Canada back on the road to prosperity.

I noted that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry liked to dwell on Manitoba. He mentioned the Port of Churchill. I can tell him that the Port of Churchill, as far as we are concerned, is a priority. Again, for the first time, we specifically asked Ministers from the Manitoba Government to join the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board (Mr. Mayer), myself and other representatives at the federal level to discuss all of the ramifications of the Port of Churchill. At that meeting, CN was represented as well as Canada Ports. I believe it was a worth-while meeting which led to a renewed priority which will be given to the Port of Churchill and an intensive examination of its potential.

I would also like to say that in our annual meeting, under the ERDA arrangement with the Government of Manitoba, we succeeded in reaching various agreements, which I believe will prove to be very beneficial for that province in the coming months and years.

I remind the Hon. Member that this Government arranged for equalization payments to Manitoba to be raised by $50 million from the figure which was projected in February. I can only say that the equalization payment—and I am sure other Members who belong to the same Party as the present Government in Manitoba must have heard it—was a very welcome adjustment for that province.

I have referred to the successful negotiations with the Manitoba Ministers. If I may, I would like to speak about specifics. The Minister of State for Tourism (Mr. McMillan) and his provincial counterpart have signed a $30 million Manitoba tourism development agreement. At the meeting on the Nelson River, we agreed with Manitoba that there would be a subsidiary agreement for industrial development. We believe that that agreement will be signed by the end of June. Further, we agreed to implement a memorandum of understanding for hydroelectric development project co-ordination. We hope to be able to sign that memorandum this month. On May 10, the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) signed a memorandum of understanding on science and technology with his provincial counterpart. We are also investigating the feasibility of a trade development organization that will concentrate on the Prairies, which will likely have its main base in Winnipeg. When we met with our Manitoba counterparts, we agreed, in consultation with federal and provincial Health Ministers, to explore joint initiatives in health care products and services.

I could go on to cite the various things which we are doing of an IRDP nature in Manitoba. I can only say that we are encouraged by the agreements which we have been able to achieve to date. Second, we are encouraged by the fact that the private sector is responding.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry referred to Crown corporations. I believe he will find that the Crown corporations which we inherited are now running more effectively and have a greater backlog of orders—be it de Havilland or Canadair—than they have had for many years. In the case of the Cape Breton Development Corporation, it has had a profitable year for the first time in its history. I do not only regard that as good regional development for the sake of the regions concerned, but good economic development for Canada.

The target of this Government is to bring down the 11 per cent or 12 per cent unemployment level which the previous Government left. The previous Government took the country from a rate of unemployment which was approximately 4 per cent when it first took power to what it is today. This Government's target is to bring down the unemployment level to something which approaches full employment in the country. Anything which the Government does of an economic development nature is designed to relieve the unemployment tragedies which exist in Canada at regional and provincial levels.

As far as this Government is concerned, the course is clear. The Budget will outline some of the new initiatives which we intend to take. Unlike the Official Opposition and its socialist allies, this Government has confidence in the country. This Government believes that there is room for Canadian and non-Canadian investment which will help to harness the potential which exists in Canada. We believe that investment will begin to create the jobs which were not created as a result of previous policies. In short, this Government will once again get the real economic growth in the country, both on a regional and a national level, up to the potential which can be ours. It can be ours if, once again, we return confidence to Canada and turn away from the debilitating attitudes and thrusts of the previous Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments?

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister several questions about the situation in British Columbia. He referred to agreements which have been reached with other provinces, but there are still no dollar figures forthcoming for British Columbia. British Columbia is still waiting for money to flow under the forestry agreement. It is becoming crucial.

Last Friday, when the unemployment statistics were released, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) bragged that the Government had created some 201,000 jobs across Canada. If British Columbia had received its fair share of those jobs, it should have received 20,000 additional jobs. However, in April, unemployment went up by 1,000 jobs. British Columbia has 23,000 fewer people working today than when the Conservative Government took office. The unemployment rate in September was 14.1 per cent and today it is 15.4 per cent. In September, 1,226,000 British Columbians were employed. Today, 1,203,000 British Columbians are employed. That represents a loss of 23,000 jobs. Can the Minister tell us when the dollars will start flowing to British Columbia? Why have the dollar figures not been reached? Is it because this Government is not prepared to give British Columbia a proportionate share compared to what Quebec has received? Or is it because this Government does not have confidence in the Government of British Columbia and in the way it wants to spend the money?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, who comes from British Columbia, has the answer ready at hand. I suggest that he talk with his friends in Victoria to find out why they are not willing to accept the figures which we offered them. Those figures were on a comparable basis to what other provinces accepted with respect to ERDA funding. Perhaps he could tell us what the Government in Victoria feels at the present time. Certainly, we are willing to sign and start the funds flowing.

● (1200)

Mr. Axworthy: The Minister's comments only reinforce the case we are making that this Government has a wonderful inclination for self-delusion. He ended up his grand peroration by talking about the performance of the Crown corporations based upon the last annual report of companies like Canadair, de Havilland and Devco. Those corporations, of course, are all reporting for the year 1984 when the Liberal Government was their proprietor and manager for nine months of that year. What we are saying is that in the coming Budget the Government will not be able to hide under those programs any longer.

Mr. Stevens: Who does your research?

Mr. Axworthy: The research is pretty obvious as I read the reports. I suggest you do the same.

Mr. Stevens: Take a look at the dates on them.

Mr. Axworthy: I do want to raise some interesting questions concerning Manitoba. The Minister tells us what wonderful things he is doing there. I would like him first to explain why it is that when our Party left the Government, Manitoba had the second highest rate of growth of any province in Canada and now it has the lowest rate of growth as of the latest figures of this year? Has that been the result of all the grand initiatives taken by this new Government? It has turned around a province which had momentum and development.

I would like the Minister to comment also on a statement made by one of his own officials, a member of his own Department in that province. The industry Minister of the provincial Government, Mr. Kostyra, publicly complained that requests for a number of major industrial grants had been turned down by the Minister's Department with respect to companies such as Canada Packers and Melrose Foods. He had a whole list of companies which would have provided a number of jobs and development which had all been turned down by the federal Department of Regional Industrial Expansion. I quote from The Winnipeg Free Press of May 6, 1985, as follows:

> A spokesmen for the federal Department said it would be impossible to determine whether more applications are being accepted now compared to two years ago because the program has been changed—

That's true.

> He noted the federal Government reduced the nationai budget of the industry and regional development program by $200 million last November. He also said changes to the program have made it much more difficult to obtain funding.

That is a clear indication that one region, which had a very high rate of growth and was beginning to develop the confidence about which the Minister talks, now has the lowest rate of growth in the country and does not have that confidence any more. And one of the key reasons for this has been the withdrawal and reduction of federal investments in that province.

I would like the Minister to explain the words of his own official, who clearly put the finger on the problem, which was the reduction of the budget for IRDP, and the program changes, which mean that a city like Winnipeg is eliminated from any tier one financing. I would particularly like to know if he can now guarantee, or give us assurances, that come the Budget next week, there will be no further cuts in IRD programs and no further cuts in regional development incentives for the province so that while the present level of funding is inadequate and is obviously having a drastically negative effect, the federal Government will not simply throw the province into a state of total disarray by further cuts and reductions?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, we really have to feel sorry for this fellow. In spite of the fact that the Treasury makes hundreds of thousands of dollars available to help the Hon. Member with researchers, he relies on a news story out of a 25-cent newspaper. He refers to a turn-down of Canada Packers and implies that somehow or other we did that. He totally ignores the fact that it was the former Government—

Mr. Axworthy: Oh no, it wasn't.

Mr. Stevens: —and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry as the western Cabinet Minister who turned down Canada Packers. We have indicated that if the company wants to reapply, we will look at it. We will deal with it fairly and judiciously. But do let him not start blaming some mythical $200 million figure as being the problem for the turn-down of Canada Packers. It was the former Government itself which turned it down.

Mr. Axworthy: No, it wasn't.

Mr. Stevens: As far as the Melrose Food Company is concerned, again, poor fellow, it is a subsidiary of the major international conglomerate known as Nabisco. We offered it $300,000, but we said we thought, in view of the fact that it was a very profitable company, that perhaps it would care to repay the money. That is the only difference. It has indicated it would like an outright grant.

Mr. Darling: Who wouldn't?

Mr. Stevens: Notwithstanding the fact that it is a multi-national—and at other times the Hon. Member is very critical of these multi-nationals, he has a little bit of hate for them—in this instance he says, "Give it the money. How dare you ask that it should ever repay the $300,000?" That's what the Hon. Member is talking about. And on the strength of the article out of that 25-cent newspaper, he feels he has something to stand up and expound on in this House. It is pitiful, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I want to speak on behalf of the men and women of Quebec. In his comments, the Minister mentioned that he was happy with the agreement signed with the province of Quebec. In that case, I would like to ask the Minister why the first thing his Government did was to cut $770 million from the amount to be transferred to Quebec this year. They are bragging about signing a billion-dollar agreement, but the money is to be spent over a period of five years.

As far as equalization is concerned, Mr. Speaker, not the Liberals but the Quebec Minister of Finance, Mr. Duhaime, has been saying that he disagrees with the decisions made by the Progressive Conservative Government... Mr. Speaker, unemployment figures may have gone down in Quebec, but this morning, we heard that the problem is not unemployment but 700,000 people who are drawing welfare benefits. That is what your policies have brought us!

[English]

Mr. Stevens: The Hon. Member has referred to certain funding with respect to the Province of Quebec which he says we have scrapped. I would like him to document that. I know of no funding which has been scrapped. In fact, we have grandfathered the various programs which had been identified for Quebec, and clearly the agreement which we have with Quebec not only says that whatever funding was directed toward Quebec would stay in place, but that there would be new supplemental funding. The new funding of $415 million in total, to which I referred, includes an industrial development agreement for $175 million; tourism, $50 million; communications, $20 million; cultural infrastructures, $20 million, and forestry, $130 million. That is just the federal share. The total agreement comes to $830 million because those agreements are all on a fifty-fifty basis. In short, the Province of Quebec received an add-on in addition to whatever had been earmarked for it previously.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The time for questions and comments is now completed. Resuming debate.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have to start out by congratulating my hon. friend in the Liberal Party for moving this motion.

Mr. Stevens: What else is new?

Mr. Langdon: He has, I think, made the heroic discovery that in fact there are, on the part of this Government, industrial policies. I have watched and looked carefully since September 4 and I have not been able to detect any policies or any direction, so I have to say that it is heroic and admirable that my hon. colleague has been able to identify such a thing. It is a particular pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to speak this morning on the aftermath of yet another vote of judgment on the policy direction of the Conservative federal Government. I refer, of course, to Yukon and to the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) has received his welcome reward for the long months of work he has contributed.

I must start out by telling you, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has been referred to this morning as an "enigma". I frankly think that one of the most difficult challenges in this House of Commons is to pinpoint exactly what the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is trying to do. I spent this morning, Mr. Speaker, jogging, as I find occasionally I have to do in order to cope with the frustration of trying to understand the direction of the Minister. It came to me, finally, as I jogged across the lawns of the Governor General's house this morning, that in fact we are talking not about an enigma, but about an octopus, the octopus of the 1980s, the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. His arms stretch out in all directions. Everything from IRDP to Devco to IRDA agreements, his arms are everywhere. Yet there is a kind of writhing quality about those arms, which betrays the lack of direction and strategy. There is also, characteristic of the octopus, a camouflage of ink spewed in all directions, trying to obscure, hide and cover up what is taking place. One might think that somewhere among all this writhing of arms and spewing of ink, the ink coming from his interviews with the press, there is an agenda, a direction, because that is what the Minister tries to suggest in the interviews he gives.

• (1210)

Frankly, he has got a remarkably good press. The press has suggested that somewhere below all of this ad hoc activity there is a strategy. I have looked at the latest effort to set out that strategy in The Financial Post article which has been referred to in this debate, and I must tell you that there are some very interesting ideas in that article. Many of them, things such as industrial agreements, long-term government-company arrangements, are things we as a Party wrote about in 1978 in talking about an industrial strategy for this country. So it is most gratifying to see the Minister finally, eight years later, starting to speak in those terms. But I do not believe that that is the reality. As I look at the record, I do not believe that it shows the sense of direction the Minister claims is there.

It is now about eight months since this Government was elected. The Minister has the longest memory of those in this House and he delights in getting up and attacking the previous regime. But that starts to ring hollow after a while. While the Government might have had excuses after two months, four months or, stretching it, even after six months, after eight months you cannot continue to blame the previous Government for the lack of an industrial policy direction in this country. That Minister has to carry the responsibility. He has had the time to do more than give interviews to The Financial Post. He has had the time to set out a direction and follow that direction in the activities of his Ministry, but, frankly, he has not done so.

I want to take you, Mr. Speaker, through some of those key cases which demonstrate just how inadequately, how shortsightedly, how foolishly that Minister has performed in the eight months he has been in office. Let me illustrate first that industry which is very important not just to my constituency but to the whole manufacturing industry in this country, that is, the automobile industry. In The Financial Post the Minister talks about encouraging industry-government agreements, setting out a plan for that industry. But he has had a task force report on that industry sitting on his desk from day one. It shows him a direction which has been agreed on, not just by the companies in that industry but by the trade unions as well, a direction which would put into effect Canadian content requirements in order to produce jobs here. Yet there has been absolutely no action on that report. Indeed, it has been worse than that. With respect to the renewal of quota arrangements with Japan, the Minister has led us in a song and dance. He promised that he would have some kind of firm signal on Japanese auto quotas by mid-May, yet there is nothing. So the industry limps along with a sense of uncertainty about the future. Yet the Minister has the temerity, the self-righteousness, to speak to The Financial Post about his commitment to industry-government agreements. He has refused to respond positively to the danger signs which exist in that industry.

These danger signs have been evidenced in the decision by Chrysler Corporation to put major parts production in South Korea. I have pressed the Minister to raise with Chrysler Corporation the fact that if it has the financial resources to do that, it should also have the financial resources to reopen the engine plant in Windsor. It committed itself to doing so when it asked for $200 million worth of loan guarantees from the Canadian Government. It got that commitment, which in turn got it the $1.5 billion in loan guarantees from the U.S. Government, yet the Minister will not press Chrysler to get those extra jobs. It seems to me that this Minister is not living up to the challenges which face him.

Another challenge, and frankly one that I expected this Minister and this Government to take most seriously, is that of showing the Canadian people that the money we spend to help the private sector companies is in fact leading to jobs. On March 20 I wrote to the Minister about a classic case involving $275 million given to Bell Helicopter by the previous Government supposedly to result in over 3,000 jobs in Quebec. I suggested in the letter that serious questions had come up with reference to that particular project, and I can tell Hon. Members that I am now in possession of material which makes the importance of those questions even clearer. We have received copies of a secret Science Council report which studied that project. The Science Council in preparing its report had access to the Cabinet memorandum that went to the previous Liberal Cabinet describing this project. Within that Cabinet memorandum there was a commitment that the Bell Helicopter proposal would create the largest number of jobs, an average of about 2,773 over the life of the project. That Cabinet document indicates that Bell Helicopter agreed to place work of equivalent quality and value in Canada in the event that its job targets were not met. That Cabinet memorandum said as well that Bell Helicopter is seeking 67 per cent of the total cost of $409 million for this project.

• (1220)

Each of those statements made in that Cabinet memorandum has clearly emerged as being false. One can only draw the conclusion that that Cabinet memorandum conveyed information to the Government which, intentionally or unintentionally, was grossly inaccurate. The Government was misled with respect to the number of jobs to be generated by this project. It has become clear that only 600 jobs are to be generated by the project.

Second, Bell Helicopter has not been prepared to put extra production of other kinds into this country, despite its failure to produce the original number of jobs suggested, and despite the fact that it made a commitment, according to that Cabinet document. Finally, it has become clear that there was an attempt, after this Cabinet memorandum was presented, to obscure and change the proportion of the financial contribution from this private company to Bell Helicopter.

In this case all sorts of misinformation was put before Cabinet and a decision was made on that basis. It seems to me that the Minister has a responsibility in such a case to have a public inquiry to give Canadians across the country a sense of commitment from Bell Helicopter in the context of this project. The Minister has not been prepared even to answer the latter, let alone to launch a public inquiry, which is crucial to give the people of the country the sense that their money is being well spent.

I would like to talk about the high-tech sector and the fact that the Government clearly does not have a strategy for that most important part of our economy which will give us the jobs that we need in the future. Instead, to my utter amazement, members of the Government stood up in the House yesterday and applauded the takeover of a prominent, viable, dynamic Canadian firm by a British state-controlled corporation which has existed for years as a regulated monopoly. I could not believe the sense of irony and delicious contradiction that the Minister must have recognized he was engaged in as he stood on the floor of the House. He was an opponent of Canadian public enterprise seeking to reduce the public sector in this country. He applauded the fact that a state-controlled corporation from Britain will have control in the future of Mitel Corporation, one of the most important high technology Canadian firms. It is incomprehensible to me, Mr. Speaker, that the back-benchers who are present today would permit the Minister to carry forward such a lack of strategy and planning as representative of the Conservative Party of Canada.

I will conclude by saying that the world according to this Minister is a world in which foreign investment and privatization will somehow save us. It is a world in which Government abdicates responsibility. It abdicates responsibility to provinces, to private oil companies, to foreign investors, and to trade with the United States. There is a challenge for the country to reduce the tragic double digit unemployment which we face in this country.

In our report, Canadian Unlimited, we have suggested a direction in which that challenge can be met. We want to give our communities the power to shape the future for themselves. We want to put responsibility where it belongs, on the Government front benches in the House of Commons. We want to offer leadership instead of obscurity, direction instead of an ad hoc sense of flailing away with octopus arms in every direction.

The challenge is there, Mr. Speaker, but it is not being met. Eight months after the election of the Government it should be met. The Minister can no longer rely on interviews with The Financial Post to attempt to mislead us into believing that he has a strategy for the industrial development of the country. Instead of the octopus of the 1980s we look for direction and leadership. We challenge the Government to provide that for us in the future.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in some of the comments made by my colleague. He spoke of the need for a new direction. Next week there will be a Budget presented. Would my colleague expand on some of his ideas and indicate the direction in which he feels it is necessary to move and what Budget initiatives would help us to move in that direction?

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, in Canada Unlimited we have set out what we suggest is a counter-Budget. This approach does two things. In macro-economic terms it shows very clearly that without a significant increase in the deficit it is possible to have a much more expansionary fiscal policy which would give us a tremendous increase in jobs and a significant decrease in the unemployment rate. It suggests that rather than giving tax breaks and grants to large corporations and companies, we should put that direction on its head and give the tax breaks to middle and lower income people who will spend that money and stimulate consumer demand within the country. We also suggest that the grants, which should no longer be directed to large scale corporations, be redirected to the communities of the country, to young people, and to women's groups. They should be redirected to groups that have shown dynamism and sense of exciting new ideas that would put millions of creative possibilities into force at the local level.

• (1230)

We have suggested that this kind of decentralized community-based support, which was the policy thrust of our successful colleagues in the Yukon Territory during their campaign that just concluded, is a thrust that meets the goals of Canadians today. They do not want to see Governments controlling and running their lives. They do not want big businesses on Bay Street and St. James Street to take all the decisions that shape their future. They want community self-direction.

The Budget proposals that we have set out in a responsible, straightforward and clear way offer that direction.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions or comments? Debate.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in today's debate on an Opposition motion that is specifically concerned with the need to fight regional disparity and the fact that we think the present Government is totally insensitive to this phenomenon, which, as you know, Mr. Speaker, has been a matter of concern for politicians since Confederation. Hon. Members must realize that regional disparities, whether they concern the economy, employment or the search for equal opportunities, are as old as this country.

Mr. Speaker, Canadians have become very aware of regional disparities, especially since the beginning of the Second Word War. At that time, regional disparities became very obvious. Ontario had become the industrial heartland of Canada, while other regions depended strictly on their natural resources, and we can say that since that time, the federal and provincial governments have been concerned about regional economic development.

Mr. Speaker, we know that at that time, the Atlantic provinces and Quebec, especially, were lagging behind on employment, income and all other economic indicators. Unfortunately, in spite of all the efforts focussed on this situation by successive administrations, the situation continues to exist in Canada today.

Mr. Speaker, you probably will not remember, but in 1937, the Rowell-Sirois Commission started its inquiry into regional disparity and the Canadian economic union, and at that time, recommendations started being made for providing equal opportunities for all Canadians. The House will also recall that 1957 marked the begnning of equalization payments as we know them today. Also in 1957, the Borden Commission examined the situation of the Maritime provinces and recommended better economic co-ordination in order to help this part of the country.

Mr. Speaker, the real thrust for regional economic development was given in 1969, when the Department of Regional Economic Expansion was established, and I think everyone will remember how this department, with its growing awareness of our various regional situations, has helped the Canadian Government to become an active partner in regional development and to become more sensitive to regional needs including the need to attract more investment to certain less advantaged areas and thus create jobs. The Department's specific terms of reference at the time were to make sure that all federal departments were fully aware of regional aspirations, that regional interests were considered in Cabinet discussions, and that Government policies were tailored to the various regional realities.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the Department was also responsible for promoting regional economic development policies and coordinating the activities of other departments. Finally, I think it had quite an impact on decisions made by the many Cabinet committees, in the sense that, more often than not, a decision serving national interests did have a negative impact in certain regions which thus were left to play second fiddle to the rest of the country.

Mr. Speaker, all Members of the House acknowledged as formally as possible the urgency of regional economic development when, in 1981, both major parties unanimously adopted the Canadian Constitution Bill. I am sure we all remember Section 36:

36. (1) Without altering the legislative authority of Parliament or of the provincial legislatures, or the rights of any of them with respect to the exercise of their legislative authority, Parliament and the legislatures, together with the government of Canada and the provincial governments, are committed to

(a) promoting equal opportunities for the well-being of Canadians;

(b) furthering economic development to reduce disparity in opportunities; and

(c) providing essential public services of reasonable quality to all Canadians.

(2) Parliament and the government of Canada are committed to the principle of making equalization payments to ensure that provincial governments have sufficient revenues to provide reasonably comparable levels of public services at reasonably comparable levels of taxation.

Mr. Speaker, you were a Member of this House when the Bill was adopted, and we all endorse those principles. Since the new Government took office, although the Constitution may be clear, definite and specific, in practice however, we have every reason to worry.

There has been a sharp increase in the number of IRDP applications turned down since September. Private promoters came to see me with regional economic development case files which were once deemed quite acceptable but which are now rejected for all kinds of considerations.

Of course, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) did not further the cause when he agreed to a $200 million Industrial and Regional Development Program cut-back. I can readily see why applications are refused in ever increasing numbers. That is what has me worried because more and more businessmen and businesswomen come to see us and say: What can we expect! We deal with the federal Government, but DRIE is no longer interested in promoting economic development in the Eastern Townships, DRIE could not care less about job creation in other regions of Quebec. I would suggest that the Minister responsible for the Department considers international trade a more challenging venture. Indeed, he is walking all over his colleague in External Affairs and has downgraded the role of the Minister for International Trade. We all know that. Mr. Speaker, you should go to External Affairs and ask who is the boss. If you see trade commissioners abroad, just ask them who looks after international and trade policies. Most will say it is the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. He is not satisfied with his small kingdom, he wants more. In fact, Mr. Speaker, you probably remember that he was External Affairs critic when in Opposition, and it does look like he still harbours ambitions in that respect even if the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) got the job. With that in mind, I think it is unfortunate that the Minister—I would describe him as the stand-in Minister of External Affairs, or the self-appointed Minister for International Trade—does not look after his own bailiwick, which is regional economic development. To put it another way, Mr. Speaker, he is so busy minding other peoples' business that he has precious little time left for his own.

• (1240)

The Minister has made a name for himself, Mr. Speaker. For instance, Mirabel residents, including town councillor Hubert Meilleur, have said that Ottawa's decision to deny funds for upgrading the city's infrastructures is unfair.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Port-Cartier on the North Shore are still waiting for the Minister to stop navel-gazing and make decisions about the future of ITT Rayonier. I know the people in the Gaspé region. Go to Newport and see what they think of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens).

Mr. Speaker, they all know that the Minister did not dare meet with them, that he dispatched his official interpreter—the Minister of State (Small Businesses) (Mr. Bissonnette)—to mend his fences. Mr. Speaker, nothing has been settled in that case. Year in and year out, their party denounced make-shift job creation projects, but now we know the Newport plant will stay closed, which is why the Minister of State (Small Businesses) went over there to promote Canada Works projects. That is exactly what they beefed about for years on end. All they want to do now with funds allocated to the Gaspé region is to make sure that those people will have their ten weeks of unemployment insurance benefits. But their plant will stay closed.

Mr. Speaker, I could talk about a lot of people. The Minister had been sitting on the Petromont file since September 4, but the Right Hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) twisted his arm until he finally agreed to give $15 million to rescue Petromont. But, Mr. Speaker, that is a temporary measure until the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion can come up with what he called a long term solution. It was one way to buy time, rather expensively at $15 million, but he had to keep everybody at bay until March 31. Well, Mr. Speaker, what has the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion been doing since then? Did you hear him announce his long term solution for Quebec's petrochemical industry? Everything was supposed to be settled after March 31. No, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion would much rather dabble in international trade than settle the Petromont issue.

Talking about major regional economic projects, Mr. Speaker, whatever happened to the French coal plant? It is another project that has been shelved because this Government does not want to make decisions. We are talking about a $500 million plant, yet the Minister and the Government keep putting off the construction of this plant so vital to the Bécancour region.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister's pitiful performance in the Melchers case is well known. The President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) was also against temporary job creation programs—band-aids on festering wounds, he said—but what did they offer to Melchers workers? More of the same, Canada Works! Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the people of Berthierville would not appreciate seeing the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) laugh at their serious problems. The people of Berthierville are entitled to steady and well-paid jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I will not mention the Wabasso fiasco, another horror story. The first thing I heard about when I got up this morning was that Quebec had another problem—550 more jobs lost in Montreal. Stelco will be meeting the unions today and tomorrow to say goodbye. It is as simple as that. Five hundred and fifty people out of a job, who will probably get a severance bonus that the Minister of Employment and Immigration will deduct from their unemployment insurance. Mr. Speaker, this is appalling. This is a government that claims it is very sensitive to regional realities and to the problems of the little man. Mr. Speaker, what is the Government going to offer the workers at Stelco?

Mr. Speaker, this Government is terribly confused, and I am referring to the soft sectors of our industry. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion told people in the textile and clothing industry that they were going to be guaranteed a share of the Canadian market. The Minister for International Trade goes abroad and says that the Government is in favour of free trade. Could these two Ministers perhaps get their act together, Mr. Speaker? One is in favour of global quotas, and one is for a totally open market, and then our national "kid kodak", the Prime Minister, went to Bonn and said: We are going to set an example for dealing with Third World countries, and we are going to open our borders to their textiles and clothing. Mr. Speaker, people who make a living in this industry expect some kind of policy from this Government, and that is the kind of concern that exists throughout Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I could give you some examples, but I would like to summarize the position taken by the famous Ministers from Quebec. Their colleague, the Minister of State for Small Businesses, was speaking on their behalf when he said that the Minister wanted to make it clear that the 10 Conservative Ministers from Quebec were not working for the benefit of Quebec. Mr. Speaker, this is the kind of statement we get from the Minister of State for Small Businesses, who said that for him, Quebec's interests were not a priority. I realize he has a national role, but he was not elected nationally, Mr. Speaker, and he should at least have the decency to acknowledge the concerns of the people who elected him, and his Cabinet colleagues should also make sure that Quebec's concerns get special attention.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take advantage of the fact that the Minister of State for Transport is in the House, and I am sure he is concerned about economic spinoffs for Quebec—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Gatineau.

Mrs. Mailly: The Hon. Member referred to the presence of specific Members in the House, and I would also like to say that he is abusing his privilege, because the relevance of his comments is starting to break down.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not believe that this is a point of order. The Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre).

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I would say that ever since the Hon. Member set foot in the House, ever since September 4, she has done nothing but utter insignificant remarks and interrupt Hon. Members. If she has nothing constructive to say, let her shut up, Mr. Speaker.

What I want to say is that the Minister of State for Transport, whose presence I acknowledge in the House—and I do not think you will object, Mr. Speaker, because the Minister is an important Member of this Cabinet—I want to tell him that I wish he would look into the Canadian North Warning System. On March 23 of this year, Les Affaires reported that the Federal Government was refusing to make any commitments or even to examine potential regional spin-offs from the contract to upgrade our Canadian North Warning System, and I am asking the Minister to ensure that Quebec gets its fair share of this defence contract, as has been the case in all major contracts awarded by the Canadian Government, Mr. Speaker. I think we have a whole list of other issues. I could comment on the problems at Air Canada, Canadian National, VIA Rail, Canadair, Teleglobe Canada, the Corporation of the Port of Montreal, the National Film Board, Katimavik, the C.B.C., the Aviation Safety Board, all of which have suffered at the hands of the new Government. Mr. Speaker, regional economic development means ensuring that the interests of Quebec are properly safeguarded. I could talk about the airport at Rouyn, and I know the Minister of State for Transport is very much aware of that airport because he has received a request from the Rouyn-Noranda Chamber of Commerce, and I am sure he will give them a positive answer, but speaking of transport, and of discrimination, there is one issue a Member from Quebec dared to raise, and which he promised to look into, during his election campaign, and that is the toll on the Champlain Bridge. And I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that the Government will honour whatever commitments were made by its own Members. Every week I fall victim to that discrimination of a special tax on South Shore residents, and I am convinced the Hon. Member who made that distinct promise will be able to fulfill it, with the assistance of his colleagues from the Quebec caucus.

But speaking of the Quebec caucus, Mr. Speaker, since you may think I am not an impartial observer I am going to quote from an editorial written by Mr. François Roberge in the newspaper Finance, who had this to say: "I do not know whether Quebec is now gaining anything through the good will of the Mulroney Government, but certainly it is losing its shirt on many issues because of the weakness of the Quebec caucus".

Mr. Speaker, that was not written by a Liberal. In that respect, I am convinced that my colleagues opposite will overcome their timidity. They will ask themselves questions. How was it that a matter like the Western Bank was solved within a minute, while matters relating to Quebec have been dragging along since the election? And all of them have such problems in their respective constituencies.

An Hon. Member: Which one?

Mr. Lapierre: Which one? Had we not been here, Mr. Speaker, to raise the example of the Domtar issue, they would have been in for it. That is the kind of defenders we have for Quebec. The Official Opposition has to work double time, twelve or eighteen hours a day keeping an eye on them, because they do not look after their own interests. Which one? There is the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce), to whom I want to pay tribute because he is not afraid to speak his mind. There is also of course the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers), but each court has its jesters, Mr. Speaker.

What I mean is if we are to address other matters, let they be farm matters. We know that in Quebec the pork industry is now in serious trouble, for their American friends have put a surtax on them. How can Government Members justify their not reacting violently to a surtax that will put that industry in absolute shambles? I am keeping an eye on them, to see what kind of position they will be taking with respect to the Crows' Nest rates. I am keeping an eye on them in connection with the Canadian Dairy Commission. How is it that not one of them has opposed the $32 million cuts? Where are you, for heaven's sake? This is why, Mr. Speaker, Quebecers and Members in this party are worried because of those 58 silent MP's and we are anxious to see them take some self-assurance and defend Quebec's interests in this Parliament.

• (1250)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before we get into questions and comments, I want to make sure that Members know that when they are debating, they are not to mention the absence of specific Members in the Chamber. I should read the "blues", but I did not hear the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) indicate a particular Member in the House. If he did, he was out of order.

We will now go to questions and comments.

[Translation]

Mr. Bouchard: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, we do not have as much time as the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre), but in any case, we would not want to try the patience of the House which was especially tested by the intervention of my Hon. friend.

We rediscovered a picture with which the Canadian people have been familiar for many years, that of the nightmare years preceding the coming into power of this Government, and I simply want to remind the Hon. Member for Shefford about the need for the cut-backs which the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), along with his other colleagues, reluctantly agreed to apply to a number of worthwhile programs, and we concede to the Hon. Member that some initiatives of Quebec businesses are still as valid as under the previous Government, but unfortunately, the money is no longer there. The funds are no longer there. Of course, it is always the same, but contrary to the previous Government, we do not claim to be miracle-workers. We cannot make money and we use only what is available.

The definite project called Petromont was not started under this Government. In my opinion, the previous Government cannot consider its record on this matter as a success.

As far as transportation matters, with which I am somewhat more familiar, are concerned, I believe that Quebecers appreciate our realistic approach to those questions, whether we are dealing with Air Canada or Via Rail, where we shall very soon be in a position to restore a number of passenger services, and the Hon. Member is from a region which will benefit from this decision. We are trying to deal with the airports very fairly. As for secondary matters such as tolls, we consider that this special tax, as you call it yourself, was not imposed by our Government and that it would be totally unrealistic to abolish them in the present economic situation. The Minister of Regional Economic Expansion treats all matters related to Quebec with a great deal of fairness and honesty. I believe that he does so under extremely difficult economic conditions which we inherited without asking for them, but we shall have the courage to face them, and I am convinced that in the future the policies we implement will improve the situation of Quebec businesses at least as well as those of the previous Government. We are convinced that they will actually be much more successful.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the Minister of State for Transport (Mr. Bouchard) for his comments, but I wish also to ask him to please remove his pink-coloured glasses.

Mr. Speaker, I know that I am here to call my hon. colleagues' attention to the areas which are hurting. And the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has done enough to brag about.

I wish especially to warn him that, as he is applauding the commendable efforts of his colleague, he should be aware that a proposed automobile plant had been planned in Canada since September 4. And can you guess where that plant ended up? In the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion's own riding, which is certainly not the poorest in Canada. The point I want to convey to my hon. colleagues is that things are not all white or all black. They are certainly aware that in politics, there are a great many grey areas. I want the Minister to be vigilant and to make sure that Quebec's interests are protected. Also, I am not a veteran in politics, but as one who has been in this House for a number of years, I can tell him that his enemies are not sitting across the aisle from him. We are his opponents. His true enemies are sitting alongside him.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a very brief comment.

The Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) came in my constituency during the 1984 election campaign to try and help my opponent, the former Liberal Member, Mr. Cousineau, who misused a majority of 38,000 votes on his closest opponent.

The issues that were outstanding are now being solved one after the other. There is the customs clearance issue in which the previous member had taken no interest. A teledetection sector, a high technology field, will be set up in Gatineau, an area which the Liberal government ignored during decades.

An agreement between Ottawa and Quebec has already allowed to develop the tourist industry in the Gatineau riding where unemployment varies between 30 and 40 per cent, a situation about which the previous member had done nothing. Why? As soon as Mr. Cousineau had some interesting plans and contractors came to see him, they were swiped by his colleague Mr. Fox who referred to plants set up in other constituencies. All this shows that the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) is a good speaker, but he should remember that politics require some sense of responsibility as well as the showmanship he obviously has.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are over.

[English]

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

AERIAL SPRAYING OF PESTICIDE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, Agriculture Canada has approved aerial spraying of Delta Methrin, a pesticide, despite claims by officials in Environment Canada and Fisheries and Oceans that the chemical threatens fish and waterfowl. Delta Methrin has been approved for aerial spraying of grain and potato crops until December 31. The spraying will be allowed only once on each crop this year, and must occur at least 100 metres from water bodies that might be damaged by the pesticide.

The concept of a buffer zone is almost impossible to enforce in eastern Canada and in the northern Prairies. The large amount of surface water and numerous sloughs make it impossible to avoid spraying without affecting water bodies.

S.O. 21

Budget cuts announced last November by the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) stopped a Canadian Wildlife Service study of whether or not aerial spraying of Delta Methrin would endanger millions of waterfowl that start life on prairie sloughs. A partially completed National Research Council review of the chemical was also scrapped. When will the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) announce that which he has promised several times, the pest management advisory board, so that he may listen to advice on health and environmental consequences from officials of other Departments?

* * *

FORESTRY

IMPORTANCE TO ECONOMY

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, was named Forestry Capital of Canada for 1985-86. The honour draws to the attention of the nation Prince Albert's long dependency on forestry and its present contribution to the industry.

Along with other Prince Albertans, I had the honour of welcoming the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) to Prince Albert. We thanked the Minister for his visit and called upon him to impress upon his colleagues the importance of forestry in our economy, and to recognize that we are dangerously close to a crisis because of government neglect of our forests.

The federal Government spends less than 20 per cent of the funds it receives from the industry on replenishment of the forests and on research into the care of the forests. Our forests are suffering from acid rain, lack of replanting, and lack of intensive silviculture. We are devastating our own future by our neglect of the forests.

Members of the New Democratic Party call upon the Government to pass a national Forestry Act which would establish a legal base for forestry care and an instrument for making sure that our children, and our children's children, will have use of this wonderful resource with which we in Canada are blessed.

* * *

[Translation]

WOMEN

HOMEMAKERS' CONTRIBUTION TO THE ECONOMY

Mr. Jean-Luc Joncas (Matapédia-Matane): Mr. Speaker, in the area of social equality between men and women, this Government is fully aware of the problems involved and there is no doubt that concrete actions have been taken and certainly will be pursued further.

As we must point out for the record, Mr. Speaker, it would be an error to underestimate any longer the role of the person in charge of domestic tasks and to ignore her economic contribution, for the only reason that this is, no "employment" as traditionally defined. Homemakers who amde legitimate choices justified by their relationship with their spouses should not be penalized economically because most women now make choices that are different.

Mr. Speaker, more and more men share the following vision, and I quote:

> Equality of women now and in the future is basically the opportunity to chose and the assurance that they are not less privileged than men because of their choice, and they receive for their contribution the same benefits as men, quite apart from the context of "chosen employment".

* * *

[English]

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION ACT

REVIEW OF PROVISIONS URGED

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, as prairie farmers know, recent amendments to the Western Grain Stabilization Act introduced by the Government brought about a record interim payment this spring. This $450-million payout was a welcome injection of capital into the western economy, and is allowing thousands of western producers to put seeds into the ground this season.

Looking now to the future, many producers know that the program must undergo further changes if it is to play a more effective role in stabilizing prairie grain farm incomes. I have noted, as have many producers, that the program is not always as sensitive as it might be to regional crop differences. For example, some producers who had bumper crops last season collected the same interim payment this year as did producers who had very poor crops. Yet in other years payouts were not triggered even though it was clear that prairie grain farm incomes in specific regions were in need of a stabilizing influence.

The program has been around for 10 years, and I believe a review at this time could be very healthy. I commend the Minister responsible for recognizing past deficiencies in the program, and for rectifying them. I now call upon the same Minister to continue the process of updating the Act so that the program becomes more relevant to the producers it serves.

* * *

HELSINKI ACCORDS

OTTAWA CONFERENCE—ROLE OF NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, in Helsinki, Finland, in 1975, 35 nations solemnly signed the Final Act of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe. Since that time regular meetings have been hald to review the implementation of the Accords, by the signatory states. At the Madrid conference the former Liberal Government invited experts on human rights matters to meet in Ottawa this year.

Many non-governmental organizations have been actively preparing for this conference. These organizations have developed and possess valuable expertise which could be of considerable benefit to the Canadian policymakers. However, the present Government, which said it places great stock in the consultative process, has done very little to ensure meaningful participation by the various NGOs in the formulation of the Canadian delegation's position. The Subcommittee on Human Rights of the Standing Committee on External Affairs held one meeting on eastern Europe, a meeting that was hastily organized and poorly publicized, to receive briefs from the various NGOs. That is hardly adequate preparation for a conference as important as this one.

The promotion of human rights warrants a process through which the concerns of all Canadians would truly be represented. Indeed, this consultative process also requires a permanent forum to monitor and publicize compliance with the human rights provisions of the Final Act. The former Liberal Government was fervently committed to the protection of human rights, not just in Canada but all over the world. The present Government would do well to emulate the distinguished Liberal record.

* * *

NATIONAL HERITAGE

PRESERVATION OF HISTORIC BUILDINGS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, heritage groups throughout the country are looking to the federal Budget, which is to be announced on May 23, for some indication that the preservation of our past in the form of the protection of the buildings and communities of early Canada will be assisted by tax changes, thus making it possible to rehabilitate these buildings and communities.

The city of Winnipeg, the city in which I grew up, contains a downtown commercial area with examples of stone and brick buildings that have been the focus of many restoration efforts. Perhaps less well known are the many examples of warehouse buildings which reflect Winnipeg's role in the opening of the West during the pre-First World War period. These buildings are now being celebrated by the Heritage Winnipeg annual Heritage Preservation Awards which were presented in February.

Given this increasing interest in our past and in our environment, organizations such as Heritage Canada are once again asking the Government to consider renovation as a means of stimulating our construction industry while preserving many of our finest buildings. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has every opportunity to give them the assistance they deserve.

S.O. 21

INDUSTRY

PETROCHEMICAL INDUSTRY—CREATION OF EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, Canada's petrochemical industry represents an important and vital part of the economy. Over 200,000 Canadians are directly or indirectly employed by the industry, and in my riding of Sarnia-Lambton nearly 10,000 people are employed by the petrochemical industry.

The success of the petrochemical industry demonstrates Canada's potential in world energy markets. The Western Accord, signed in the new spirit of federal-provincial co-operation, not only demonstrates the Government's commitment to the industry but also fuels desperately needed new confidence in the energy sector. The industry can play an even greater role in the creation of jobs for Canadians.

This spirit of renewed hope and enthusiasm is clearly evident in the unemployment figures for Sarnia released last week. The number of people collecting UIC benefits decreased in April to 11.4 per cent, a decrease of nearly 1 per cent from February, 1985. Undoubtedly we will continue to see a positive seasonal adjustment to the unemployment rate as the positive effects of the Western Accord filter through the system.

* * *

● (1410)

[Translation]

HISTORIC EVENTS

BATTLE OF BATOCHE CENTENNIAL

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, we have just been celebrating the centennial of the Battle of Batoche in Saskatchewan, in which the Western Metis opposed the central government's troops. That fight for freedom, under the leadership of Louis Riel, is the symbol of an ongoing fight for the safeguard of the rights of minorities in Canada, and the safeguard of the respect for the various Canadian regions, especially Western Canada.

[English]

It is our duty to ensure that justice is done in our time. Louis Riel was a man who sought justice in his own time, not only for his own people, the Métis, but also for all the native people of our country. I wish to salute and thank him for fighting for justice for western Canadians and minority groups.

May we have the courage of our convictions to continue Riel's search for freedom, justice, and respect for all Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

S.O. 21

[Translation]

FINANCE

THE BUDGET—REQUEST FOR FUNDS TO CREATE JOBS IN QUEBEC

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, this morning we heard the unfortunate news that 700,000 people are on welfare in Quebec. In the press we read that Stelco is closing three of its plants, which will result in the loss of 550 jobs in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, last Friday the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was proud of the fact that according to the statistics, the unemployment rate in Quebec was going down, but what he ommitted to say was that instead of being unemployed, Quebecers are now on welfare. The people of Quebec are asking the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) not to cut back on job creation programs and to earmark funds for job creation to get people off welfare.

* * *

[English]

POLITICAL PARTIES

NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY WINS YUKON ELECTION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, it is very rare that all sides of the House agree on an issue, but I think that today is one of those very rare and special days. I am sure all Members will join with me in celebrating the results of yesterday's election in the Yukon.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: Tony Penikett and his NDP colleagues ran a formidable campaign, and will form a formidable Government.

But, despite the fine work of Mr. Penikett, I think he and progressive-minded Canadians everywhere could rightly criticize me if I did not single out for special attention the election role which was played by one Canadian, the Deputy Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Nielsen)—Yukon Eric.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: The Hon. Member for Yukon looked at what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) did for Frank Miller, and decided that he could not do any worse for Williard Phelps. He was wrong.

The Deputy Prime Minister spent more days in the Yukon during the past few weeks than he has in his entire parliamentary career. He told the people up there that they should vote Conservative because he could offer them good connections in Ottawa. But Yukoners voted for good government, not good connections.

In closing, I hope the Deputy Prime Minister is not too discouraged by yesterday's results—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—MANDATORY MILITARY TRAINING IN LATVIA

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, we believe that there is a fundamental right to life for all persons, especially children and youth. Although the Soviet Union signed the Helsinki Accords in 1975, and by so doing pledged to uphold the principles set out on human rights, it continually violates them in Latvia.

Last year the Soviet Union intensified its program of military training in schools. On December 18, 1984, in Riga, Latvia, Iveta Zutere, a tenth-grade student, was mortally wounded when a gunshot penetrated an artery in her neck during mandatory military training. By the time a nurse arrived on the scene, the 16-year-old girl had bled to death.

1985 has been designated as International Year of Youth. It is reprehensible that military training and military exercises using live ammunition are part of the curriculum in high schools in Latvia.

A military order dated September 20, 1984, made it mandatory for all high schools, professional vocational schools, and special middle-educational institutions, to develop Young Soldiers' platoons and batallions. These young soldiers are then sent for active duty in Afghanistan. Clearly, these acts are violations of the Accords, and the Canadian Government would be justified in making the Soviet Union aware of our abhorrence of such actions.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

FINANCE

CAPITAL GAINS TAX ON SALE OF FARMS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Finance and of the Prime Minister, I would like to direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister, if he does not feel too insecure today as his base in the Yukon has been severely eroded.

Last July the Prime Minister said in Prince Albert:

A progressive Conservative Government will abolish the imposition of capital gains tax on the sale of farm property for continued agricultural purposes.

That was an important promise for farmers who are generally cash-poor and who look to their land as a potential retirement fund. My question relates to the fact that the promise was made and the farmers, perhaps mistakenly, are relying upon it, which is immobilizing farmland, particularly in western Canada.

Would the Deputy Prime Minister impress upon his colleague, the Minister of Finance, and recall to his mind the promise which was made by the Prime Minister in Prince Albert, to ensure that the abolition of capital gains tax on farmland transfers will be inserted in the Budget?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that not only as a former Prime Minister but as a former Minister of Finance the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition would not expect us to speculate on the Budget at this stage.

AGRI-BOND PROPOSAL

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I am not asking the Minister of State for Finance to speculate on the Budget. I am asking her to remind, through the Deputy Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance of the undertaking which was given by the Prime Minister in Prince Albert. By the way, this is the most overdue Budget, in terms of the period between an election and a Budget being brought down, in modern Canadian history.

Would the Deputy Prime Minister remind the Minister of Finance of the undertaking which was given by the Prime Minister in Prince Albert last August that a new style of agri-bond would be make available to farmers with a long term and a low rate of interest? Would he also remind the Minister of Finance that the promise included that the interest rate would not be taxable for purposes of income tax? Would the Deputy Prime Minister remind the Minister of Finance of that particular undertaking which was given by the Prime Minister?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will certainly undertake to continue my discussions with the Minister of Finance and others of my colleagues who are very busily engaged in assisting in the preparation of budget material; so much so that I wish that what the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville said about my absence from this place and my presence at home was, in fact, true.

I would recall to the mind of the Leader of the Opposition that it was in 1971, when he was a member of the Cabinet, when the capital gains tax was imposed on farmlands in the first place.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Fair is fair. I will certainly undertake to remind those around me who may need reminding, but I think it is only fair to remind those opposite, particularly the Leader of the Opposition, from time to time of actions which were not taken or of actions which were taken that were harmful to the farmers during his time.

PART-TIME FARMERS' LOSSES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I can understand the Deputy Prime Minister's selective memory. It is true that capital gains taxes were imposed across the board in 1971. But I am sure he would also recall that when I was Minister of Finance I lifted the capital gains tax on the transfer of farmlands from one generation to another in families. He recognizes that.

When the Deputy Prime Minister is in a selective mood, perhaps he could remind his colleague, the Minister of Finance, of the promise of the Prime Minister to lift the limit on farm losses for part-time farmers. When he does that, would he also consult his colleague, the Minister of Justice, who undoubtedly is up to date on his portfolio? The judgment this morning of the Federal Court of Canada in the Graham case defeats the Government's appeal against those part-time losses. Would the Minister get an undertaking from the Minister of Justice that he will not appeal that case and at least restore the position of the farmers?

• (1420)

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the hon. gentleman is determined to undo the damage which he did in the Budget he introduced in the early 1970s.

* * *

TRADE

IMPORT QUOTAS ON BEEF IMPORTS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture. I wonder if the Minister for International Trade can confirm press reports that in fact the Government of the day has sold out the beef producers of Canada and is going to increase beef quotas to the European Economic Community from some 5.9 million pounds to 23.5 million pounds? That is a 300 per cent increase above the quotas which the Government imposed in December of 1984, amounting to something like a thousand carcasses a week of subsidized beef coming into Canada, which will have a devastating impact on our agricultural community and on the beef producers. Can the Minister confirm that in fact he has sold out these groups?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can certainly advise the Hon. Member that at no time has this Government, nor will this Government, sell out the interests of the Canadian beef producers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kelleher: I can also advise the hon. gentleman that Canadian officials have indeed initialled an agreement with the officials from EC, but under the GATT procedures the agreement must be ratified by both parties. Therefore I am not in a position at this time to reveal the details of the settlement.

BONN ECONOMIC SUMMIT DISCUSSIONS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that it is very clear that in fact the Government has sold out these beef producers. This is just a continuation of its policy of abandoning the livestock producers and allowing a flood of subsidized EC beef into the country. Can the Minister say whether the Prime Minister, in his recent meeting with four heads of Government of the European Economic Community, raised this matter? And why was he so unsuccessful in negotiating a lifting of the countervail which the European Community is trying to impose on Canadian agricultural commodities as a result of the Canadian quota? I wonder if the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would advise the hon. gentleman that the Prime Minister, in his attendance at Bonn, was not there to negotiate a beef agreement. That was being left with the relevant Ministers. I can advise the House, as I already have, that a settlement has been reached. It is now required to be ratified, and the terms of that settlement will be released in due course.

* * *

EDUCATION

BRITISH COLUMBIA—DISBANDMENT OF LOCAL BOARDS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. A week ago Monday the Government of the Province of British Columbia took the extraordinary action of disbanding the democratically elected Board of Education in Vancouver. Yesterday it went one step further and disbanded a democratically elected Board of Education at the provincial level in Cowichan, British Columbia. Could the Minister of Justice inform the House whether or not he has investigated this situation? If so, has he made any public statement on it?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as far as my knowledge of the Canadian Constitution goes, education is a matter within the jurisdiction of the provinces. This is a matter involving the educational system in British Columbia. I, therefore, have not investigated the situation, nor do I intend to, unless there is some allegation that somehow, in some way or other, the Government of Canada should involve itself in this matter.

It is a matter for the electorate of British Columbia to decide. It is an educational matter in British Columbia. I do not propose to interfere where no interference by the Government of Canada is required, nor expected, under the Constitution.

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, with respect, and with seriousness, I say to the Minister that what is involved here is not simply a matter of education. It is a matter of fundamental democratic rights. Because the issue is serious I would like to preface my supplementary question by saying that in Cowichan the Board made it clear that it was prepared to administer a program imposed by the provincial Government. What it indicated was that it refused to violate its democratic conscience and own mandate by actually voting in its legislation for that—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I appreciate that the Hon. Member thinks the matter is quite serious, but does he have a question, please?

Mr. Broadbent: My question to the Minister of Justice is this. Considering that a fundamental democratic right of conscience is involved here, would he make it clear that the action taken by the Government of British Columbia, which is to deny the democratic rights of both the board members and the community, is unacceptable both in British Columbia and anywhere else in Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, this Government intends to observe the Constitution which governs Canada. We are a federal state. Our predecessors, and the hon. gentleman, might take the position that this is a unitary state and that the federal Government has the right to interfere everywhere. We do not take that position.

This is a matter having to do with the school system of British Columbia which is up to British Columbians to decide in the usual way. If they disagree with the policy, there will be an election in British Columbia in the next several years and the matter will ultimately be decided in that way. I do not feel that there is any place for interference which would only exacerbate the situation in British Columbia.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, we are a federal state with a Charter of Rights with a preamble which commits everyone to fundamental democratic rights. I say that to the Minister of Justice as well.

FEDERAL POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Considering that this House, including the Minister's own Party when it was on this side of the House, joined in joint resolutions which have as their force moral leadership, not simply constitutional divisions of power, does the Conservative Government of Canada agree, or disagree, with this denial of basic democratic rights in the Province of British Columbia?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): I am surprised, Mr. Speaker, that the Leader of the New Democratic Party in British Columbia needs to call upon the Leader of the New Democratic Party here in the federal Parliament for assistance.

My answer to the hon. gentleman is that we are only going to interfere in matters which are within our jurisdiction. We have a Charter of Rights. Any citizen of British Columbia who believes what the hon. gentleman believes, can take action in the courts, and the Charter of Rights in the courts will be there to protect him if the Charter has been violated. Go to the courts where you should be going, not grandstanding in the House of Commons which has no jurisdiction.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

STEEL INDUSTRY IN QUEBEC

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

The Minister is no doubt aware that Stelco, the biggest steel company in Canada with headquarters in Toronto, is about to close three of its plants in Quebec, which means permanent lay-offs for about 550 employees. In view of this threat, I want to ask the Minister what kind of assistance his department would be able to provide immediately to Stelco, first to prevent a situation where hundreds of families would be without an income, and especially to ensure the viability and growth of the steel industry in Quebec.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, we, of course, noted the news account on which the Hon. Member is presumably basing his question. We got in touch with the Stelco executives and they have indicated that to date no firm decision has been made. They want to have certain discussions, and until they have their position clearly identified I think it is very difficult for the Government to respond to the Hon. Member's question.

● (1430)

[Translation]

FUTURE OF EMPLOYEES

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, that is not the information we have on this side of the House. In fact, we believe the company will be announcing the shut-downs very shortly, and I hardly think the Minister's remarks are going to reassure my constituents.

I will try again with the Minister of Labour, and ask him, assuming the worst scenario, if he would be willing to provide employees who would be laid off with pre-retirement benefits, under the appropriate legislation. Actually, I am asking him to let us know whether he would be willing to designate the steel sector in the Quebec region, so that these workers, if they are laid off, could benefit from pre-retirement provisions.

[English]

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's entire question is hypothetical and it would be unreasonable to expect anyone to answer a hypothetical question at this time in the House.

* * *

CHARTER OF RIGHTS

PAYMENT OF LITIGATION COSTS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. Last week he suggested it would be the height of idiocy for the Department of Justice to pay its own legal costs for the very important court action by Operation Dismantle, which action established the fundamental principle that Cabinet decisions are subject to the Charter of Rights. Having consulted with the Prime Minister, will the Minister reconsider his initial response and agree at least to absorb the Government's legal costs, and not effectively cripple Operation Dismantle in its very important work for peace and disarmament?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, Operation Dismantle took action against the Government to stop the testing of the unarmed Cruise missile in Canada. That is the reason they took the action, not to establish some principle as to whether the Cabinet of Canada was subject to the Charter of Rights or otherwise. Let's get that clear.

There are two situations here. One is that the Supreme Court of Canada has ordered that Operation Dismantle should pay the court costs of the Government. That question is under consideration. The court costs could possibly amount to something like $15,000 if they were taxed. The question the hon. gentleman referred to was whether we would pay the legal costs of Operation Dismantle for this action, and my answer is no, we are not going to pay the legal costs of Operation Dismantle or any other group which takes action against the Government on such frivolous grounds as this. The Supreme Court of Canada found the claim to be thin and frivolous, that there was no claim disclosed by the Statement of Claim, and we are certainly not going to pay the costs of that.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the Minister has a strange definition of frivolity when the Supreme Court of Canada said there was a fundamental principle at stake here.

Oral Questions

FUNDING OF COURT CHALLENGES

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, during the last federal election campaign the Prime Minister gave a solemn undertaking to provide financial assistance to groups such as the disabled, women's groups, and others, to pursue Charter challenges on important questions of national concern. In view of the fact that April 17 has come and gone and the promise is unfulfilled, when is the Government finally going to stop stalling on this important promise and ensure the Charter of Rights is available to all Canadians, including those citizens in British Columbia whose school boards were undemocratically wiped out, and make the promise a reality so that the Charter will have teeth and there will be funding in place?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, there is a Charter of Rights here in Canada. It is alive and doing well. Any citizen or any group can apply to the courts if they believe they have a case under the Charter. They do not require financing by the Government. If they believe they have a good cause, they can find the money for that cause. That, Mr. Speaker, is the way it is and always has been in our country.

In the meantime the Government is considering whether or not to expand the present policy, which deals with assistance regarding bilingualism policy, to cases of national significance which affect the equality rights in the Charter, or otherwise. When that review is completed an announcement will be made. In the meantime I do not believe there are any pressing cases at the moment which have to be dealt with, but the principle will be announced as soon as we are finished our consideration of it.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

QUEBEC PETROCHEMICAL INDUSTRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The Minister knows that, during the election campaign, his leader made a personal commitment to save Quebec's petrochemical industry. The Minister himself authorized a $15 million payment to Petromont to keep the company afloat until March 31. March 31, that was a month and a half ago, closer to two months. I would like to know whether the Minister can tell us what measures he has in mind in the case of Petromont and the Quebec petrochemical industry so as to find the long-term solution promised by his Government during the election campaign.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member undoubtedly knows, it is not a question of finding a long-term solution for the petrochemical industry in Quebec; the problem is to find a long-term solution for the petrochemical industry in Canada. Perhaps the Hon. Member will be pleased to know that we have been meeting with representatives of that industry. We have, of course, included in our discussions representations from the industry in Quebec, in particular from the Quebec Government. I want to assure the Hon. Member that in our view it is a Canadian petrochemical industry long-term solution that we are seeking and we believe we can achieve.

[Translation]

FUTURE OF QUEBEC PETROCHEMICAL INDUSTRY

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

I appreciate the Minister's arguments, but what I want to know is how many months or how many years will the Minister need to find a solution? I would like to know whether the Minister has received the Bechtel report on the petrochemical industry and whether he has heard concrete proposals from the Quebec Government concerning the future of the provincial petrochemical industry?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's party led us into this problem in the past decade; surely they will give us a few months to lead the country out of the problem.

* * *

DECENTRALIZATION

PROPOSAL TO PLACE MAPPING INSTITUTE IN SHERBROOKE, P.Q.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State for Mines.

[Translation]

As we recall, the Right Hon. the Prime Minister made an election promise to the people of the Eastern Townships last July 24. He promised the establishment of a cartographic institute in Sherbrooke.

Here is my question. Can the Minister, as Minister of State (Mines), now assure the House and particularly the residents of the Eastern Townships that his Government will live up to its election promise and free the funds required for Sherbrooke's cartographic institute?

[English]

Mr. Della Noce: Have you ever been in Sherbrooke? Do you know where it is?

Hon. Bob Layton (Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, this has been raised on a number of occasions over these past months. There was a discussion yesterday in the adjournment debate, and it is on record in Hansard. The Government has not taken a decision on this project, and it becomes one of those major projects to be reviewed, along with others, by the task force and by Cabinet, so that the fiscal disorder we found can be corrected.

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHEN DECISION WILL BE MADE ON LOCATING INSTITUTE AT SHERBROOKE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister made an election promise on July 24. I am talking about 400 jobs for the people of Sherbrooke, eight months have gone by since then, and all I want to know is when the Government will make that decision on behalf of the people of Sherbrooke?

[English]

Hon. Bob Layton (Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, the problem has been produced by the Liberals over a period of 10 years.

Mr. Nystrom: When?

Some Hon. Members: Twenty years.

Mr. Layton: Twenty years, I am advised by my colleagues. I can assure the Hon. Member that this will be one of the subjects discussed in the near future as the Budget is presented.

* * *

LABOUR RELATIONS

STRIKE IN STEEL INDUSTRY

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. Atlas Steel, Canada's major producer of stainless steel, is on strike in both Welland, Ontario, and Sorel, Quebec. Because of the importance of that industry to Canada's economy and international trade, and considering the welfare of the workers in my community of Welland, I wish to ask the Minister if he has any plan for the development of a strategy to outline new ways of uniting management and labour the better to meet today's challenge in the steel industry.

● (1440)

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I cannot comment on the industrial dispute to which the Hon. Member referred. However, in response to the latter part of his question, I can refer him to a steel conference which took place in Sault Ste. Marie last weekend, put together by Labour Canada with the assistance of our colleagues from the Departments of Employment and Immigration, and International Trade. We brought together 50 representatives of the largest industrial union in Canada, the United Steelworkers, and 34 leaders in management from all the leading steel companies in Canada, including the one to which the Hon. member referred.

That group broke into four separate sections to explore, among other things, offshore imports, fair trade with the United States, technological change and its impact upon industry, the status and future of the steel industry, and the requirements—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke.

* * *

NATIONAL DEFENCE

LOW LEVEL AIR DEFENCE CONTRACT

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. In his low level air defence announcement of May 8 the Minister stated that two of the companies on the chosen list were from Switzerland and one was from Sweden. Neither of those is a NATO country, and not all of the equipment has been proven or established. Indeed, the missiles are all new to NATO countries in Europe. It is crucial that an anti-aircraft gun, missile, and electronics system, blend with those of our NATO allies.

How does the Minister of National Defence justify to our NATO allies that his Conservative Government has selected non-NATO countries for the entire short list to produce a low level air defence system? How does he explain his acceptance of certain non proven equipment, when he and his Conservative colleagues advertised for an established or proven system? Is this why the $600 million project ended up back on the Prime Minister's desk?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is not back on my desk at all. The announcement was made in the House of Commons last week, I believe. I thought the Hon. Member was here, but perhaps he was absent at the time.

It is not uncommon for allies within NATO to acquire their equipment from outside the alliance. This goes on all the time, as it has for years. In this particular instance I was very gratified to be able to say that a very minimum of 70 per cent of the requirement in fulfilling the LLAD commitment—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please! Supplementary question.

Mr. Hopkins: Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hopkins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I like your civility much better than the new civility brought in by the new Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hopkins: I said it was back on the Prime Minister's desk, not the Minister's desk. I would not want him to get that promotion yet.

NATO REQUIREMENTS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, it is a well known fact that the Swiss Defence Department has not purchased a system made in its own country, but has opted for the Rolland Missile System which is made by a French and a German company and is used by many of our NATO allies.

Is the Minister of National Defence willing to assure all our NATO allies, without any equivocation whatsoever, that any one of these three non NATO country proposals will meet the NATO requirements for standardization of equipment, and the NATO requirements—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please!

Mr. Forrestall: I never said a word.

Mr. Speaker: Then why can I hear you?

Mr. Forrestall: Not me.

Mr. Axworthy: Because he was shaking his head.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Member's question was long enough. The Minister may want to answer the question that has been asked.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the question of the Hon. Member would require quite a complex answer. In a word I can tell him that the very high standards of our NATO allies will be met. It will not be the first time that Canada's Armed Forces have led the way in new ventures, new fields and new technology. That has been quite seriously submerged in the last 12 years. However, we intend to rectify that and raise those standards in the hope that in this particular instance we will be providing a lead for our NATO allies.

* * *

INDUSTRY

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT COMPANY—REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for DRIE. Tomorrow the President of White Farm Equipment will be meeting with DRIE officials, possibly for the last time before the June 14 deadline. Peat Marwick is advertising all over Canada, and I believe in the United States, to sell off the assets of White Farm Equipment. In view of that, is the Minister prepared to come to the financial rescue of White Farm to save 600 jobs in Brantford, and possibly another 400 jobs across the country?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member certainly knows, we have been having discussions with Mr. Sinclair. We have been having discussions with others who have indicated an interest in possibly acquiring the company, or certainly the assets of White Farm. In short, we have been trying to facilitate a viable takeover of the White Farm operation to ensure that it may continue.

AUCTION INQUIRY

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, would the Minister guarantee the House that the federal Government will not sit back in the final analysis and allow White Farm Equipment to be sold off piecemeal on the auction block, but rather that it will be preserved as a viable farm implement operation?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member reads in Hansard the answer I gave to his first question, he will see that his supplementary question has already been answered.

* * *

VIA RAIL

EXTENSION OF NEW BRUNSWICK SERVICE

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York-Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transportation. As the Minister is aware, VIA Rail has announced its intention to discontinue the dayliner service between Fredericton and Saint John, New Brunswick, on June 1 of this year. The Minister must also be aware that Saint John is hosting the Canada Summer Games, and that Fredericton is celebrating its bicentennial as the capital of the Province of New Brunswick and centre of the universe.

In view of these two important events, will the Minister consider extending the life of the dayliner, at least until September?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for his question, and also for the numerous representations he has made on behalf of his constituents and all of those who are affected by this service.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have considered the representations that have been made. Accordingly, I have asked VIA to extend the service until September 15.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: That will provide for a morning departure from Fredericton and an afternoon return from Saint John.

* * *

● (1450)

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF BENEFITS FOR FISHERMEN

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I, too, am after an extension of a season. I hope I have as much luck with the Minister of Employment and Immigration as my colleague had with the Minister of Transport.

I remind the Minister that tomorrow is the cut-off date for unemployment insurance for fishermen. After tomorrow they cannot collect. The Minister knows that the ice blockade is still around the shores of Newfoundland and the coast of Labrador. It has been there for a long while. As a matter of fact, this is the third year that it has happened.

As she knows, there are thousands of small boat fishermen who cannot fish and earn a living. In view of the fact that this has persisted, will she bring forward an amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act to treat fishermen like all other workers, and prolong unemployment insurance benefits until such time as the fishing season begins?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I want to advise the Hon. Member that I am indeed very well aware of the situation. We have been monitoring it on a day by day basis. We know that the ice situation has been very heavy this year.

I want to advise him that the final unemployment insurance cheques will be issued on March 21—

Mr. Lapierre: March 21?

Miss MacDonald: May 21. I want to advise the Member that we are working very closely with the Department of Fisheries and Oceans to see what additional moves should be taken in this regard. But that decision will not be forthcoming for a few days.

SPECIAL FUND SUGGESTED

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, can the Minister give us an assurance that if the situation still persists after March 21—

Some Hon. Members: May!

Mr. Rompkey: See what effect the Minister has on the House, Mr. Speaker. Will she ensure that there is a special fund set up, as was done in past years, in order to ensure that that income for fishermen will continue until such time as the ice goes and the fishing season can begin?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I realize that the Hon. Member and I are in the same category today, looking at March as May, but I want to assure him that I will make every effort to follow the situation in the next few days and I will make an announcement with regard to the situation by the 21st.

* * *

VIA RAIL

CONSTRUCTION OF DOUBLE-DECKER CARS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The decision to replace VIA's outdated and expensive rail cars with new double-decker cars was made several months ago, to the applause of many. However, the workers in my riding who would be involved in the construction are still waiting for the contracts. The railroad groups and consumers of Canada are still waiting for the contracts.

Now, we find that the awarding of these contracts has been put on hold on account of the upcoming Budget, and these groups are naturally truly concerned that the hackers and choppers in the Cabinet will destroy this program like they have done to others. Will the Minister give us his guarantee that the Government will live up to its commitment and bring in the revitalized rail program that he announced in January?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that we are committed to revitalizing rail passenger service, and we are also committed to bringing in new equipment. The Hon. Member will just have to wait a little longer before a formal announcement will be made with respect to the ordering of equipment.

AWARDING OF CONTRACTS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that the delay in the awarding of these contracts could well lead to layoffs during the retooling phase for the plants involved? Will he move to avoid this unnecessary hardship by awarding the contracts at once?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, yes, I am aware of all of those implications. Quite frankly, however, we intend to build the cars in Canada. We intend to spread the business throughout all regions of the country, at least to the extent that that is possible. Taking those matters into account, it requires a certain amount of preliminary work before the orders can be placed. I am sure that the Member will not be disappointed when the final decision is taken.

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AID

UTILIZATION OF SMALL PORTS

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of External Relations.

Since the Canadian International Development Agency grants each year hundreds of million dollars in aid to Third World countries which then purchase goods and service from Canadian businesses, would the Minister specifically ask CIDA to change its policies and practices so that small sea ports such as Belledune, Saint John, Dalhousie, Rimouski, Churchill and Vancouver can be used to ship goods to developing countries as this would give an opportunity to small- and medium-sized businesses to bid for the supply of finished and semi-finished goods, as required under those assistance programs for Third World countries?

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague for this very important question. I can tell the House that I have already asked my officials to report on the purchasing and transport practices for all projects financed by CIDA. I have also asked for a report on the pros and cons of regrouping at a single port the goods to be shipped, and I have asked that information be made available to all cities and municipalities so that the businesses you have just mentioned can take advantage of our programs. I am waiting for the results of this review and I shall be happy to keep you informed.

* * *

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PESTICIDE STUDIES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. The Minister knows, or should know, that pesticides seriously endanger the environment, particularly fish, waterfowl, the quality of water, and ultimately human health.

The Minister's announcement last November brought to a grinding halt a number of studies on the environment, on the effect of pesticides, particularly on the water environment and the elements I have mentioned. Is the Minister willing to restore the budget of the Canadian Wildlife Service so as to permit the continuation of these studies?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member is interested in the use of delta-metryl as a pesticide in agriculture, I can tell him that I have been informed by my officials that they approve the controlled use of this pesticide and have so advised their Department of Agriculture colleagues.

[English]

OFFICIALS' ADVICE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Evidently, Mr. Speaker, the Minister does not realize that the views of her officials have been completely overruled. Therefore I will direct my supplementary question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I know that the Minister is very keen on the effectiveness of his Department in implementing its mandate.

Considering the fact that in recent months his officials have been overruled twice by the Minister of Agriculture, in the case of Alachlor and Delta Methrin, which are very powerful pesticides, what action does the Minister intend to take to prevent this from happening in the future?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I should tell the Hon. Member that it is not a matter of overruling. He will know, from his own experience when he had the responsibility, that there are discussions between the various Departments and Ministers. Those discussions are carried on between the Minister of Agriculture and myself. Obviously there is a concern at any time in regard to the use of pesticides, but that must also be balanced with cost benefits. I think he is aware of that as well.

* * *

INDUSTRY

MITEL CORPORATION—BRITISH TELECOM TAKEOVER OPTION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have another question about the British Telecom proposed takeover of Mitel. Is the Minister aware that, as an alternative to taking 51 per cent of the shares of Mitel, thereby taking control of the second largest telecommunications company in Canada, British Telecom has an unconditional option to take only 18.5 per cent of Mitel, which will leave control in Canada? In view of that option, which is clearly a fallback position for British Telecom, will the Minister not intervene to negotiate that British Telecom only takes that much of Mitel, so that control of this important company can stay in Canadian hands?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, we have not received any formal notification, or certainly any application with respect to the FIRA process, concerning this transaction. I can only tell the Hon. Member that when we get the detail about the nature of the proposal, we will look at all of the alternatives and act in the best interest of Canada.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the 18.5 per cent option would give the benefit of a link-up with a major company in Britain, without the loss of Canadian ownership, will the Minister undertake that that will be the first option considered by the Government, rather than giving up control of Mitel to British Telecom? Then it could in fact stay in our hands here in Canada, where it was born.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I have indicated to the Hon. Member that we have not seen the provisions of the agreement, and I am very interested to hear how he fancies himself as a business consultant.

* * *

• (1500)

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Monday, May 13, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Order, please. Order, please.

I am in receipt of a verbal notice of a Question of Privilege from the Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke (Mr. Hopkins).

* * *

PRIVILEGE

DISRUPTIONS DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, it is quite obvious today from Question Period that the large numbers of Members in this Government are purposely trying to disrupt Question Period and to prevent those in the Opposition from putting their questions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hopkins: I am well reminded, as are all in this House, that the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised that he was going to bring new civility into this House. If today is any example of that, then it is time someone left this House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hopkins: Not only was I not allowed to put my question without a lot of shouting and clamouring and, you, yourself, had to intervene on two occasions—

Some Hon. Members: Oh!

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Hopkins: —then, before I had my supplementary question completed, as a result of all this, you, Mr. Speaker, cut me off in Question Period.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Hopkins: I am quite willing to stand here all day if the groaning wants to continue, Mr. Speaker. The people of this country have to know that the new civility in the House of Commons is not working. If we are going to carry on a Question Period, there has to be some decency extended to Members who have the floor. No one can speak on the floor of this House if everybody is shouting, and screaming and the Speaker is interrupting; which takes up the time of Question Period.

I hope that you will have a very firm hand when this happens in the House, Mr. Speaker, and that you will ensure that the time lost by a Member standing in his place waiting for shouting Members to be quiet is not deducted from his question time.

I thank you, Sir, for intervening a couple of times, but I only wish you had given me time to complete my supplementary instead of cutting me off because of the rabble-rousers across the way.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) wish to respond to the same question of privilege?

Mr. Deans: Why don't you just leave it alone?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as you can see, the hooting and hollering is not only one way now. Members of the Official Opposition apparently do not want to hear what I have to say on this important topic.

I share the concern of all our Members with respect to the decorum in this place. I think the question raised by the Hon. Member is one which in technical terms is more a point of order in terms of our procedure. I rather suspect that from time to time you are obliged to stand in your place for the very purpose of bringing order, Mr. Speaker, so that both questions and answers may be heard by Hon. Members, including yourself, Sir. I know that the Deputy Prime Minister, the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen), heard all of the question and the supplementary posed by the Hon. Member. I think the record will show, if not the electronic record, that he attempted to deal with the question in a serious and forthcoming manner.

In terms of the matter that has been raised, Sir, I think all Members understand that it is important for both questioners and those who are giving answers to have the courtesy of the House. Some of us who have been here for a while understand that enthusiasm on important issues sometimes causes an exchange that is not part of the official record. I hope that since the Hon. Member has raised this matter he will deal with his own colleagues in his own Party. I can assure him that I will deal with Members in this Party on the government side to make sure that the common and usual courtesies are extended to all Members. I think that this matter is one we should all pause to consider; and I am glad the Hon. Member raised it in this context. As I say, it is a matter on which Parties on both sides can take advice from the Hon. Member and myself.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a brief comment on the important point raised by the Hon. Member a few moments ago.

There is a fundamental obligation on the part of all Members of this House to enable points of view to the expressed, to be heard, and to enable responses to be given and to be heard. I respectfully suggest, Mr. Speaker, that today in particular Members on the Government side of the House overlooked this important point. I urge you, Sir, in the carrying out of your very difficult duties to make sure in particular that Members on the government side do not take the view that somehow or another they were elected to form a one-Party state and use the numbers that they may have for the time being to prevent Members on this side of the House from being heard. In not being allowed to be heard they are prevented from carrying out the duties for which they were elected, duties all too necessary because of the way Members on the government side are overlooking the basic courtesies and responsibilities so important in this Chamber.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I had not thought it necessary to rise on this point other than to say one thing. It would be nice if we could have what the Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nippissing-Pembroke (Mr. Hopkins) was asking for. Let us face it. The problem lies on all sides of the House and cannot be solved either from the Chair or by the House Leaders. It can only be solved if the Members show some discipline and some understanding of each other.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I think all Members know that I agree absolutely with the sentiments that have been raised, particularly the comments made by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

If I inadvertently misheard the Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke (Mr. Hopkins) and cut him off in the middle of a question, if is because I thought he had completed at least the first part of his question and was proceeding to a second part. If I misheard him, I owe him an apology and I am more than happy to extend it to him.

May I simply say this. I have tried to tell the House occasionally how much time we are losing in Question Period because of the continual noise. I have also tried to tell members of all Parties that, in my view, the problem lies with members of all Parties. I have also tried to tell Members that in the end it is the Members' Question Period, and if the practice in which we have begun to indulge continues, it is not the Speaker that will lose, it is the Members of the House themselves. Therefore, I beg of you to help yourself and bring Question Period back to where I think we all want it to be.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TABLING OF PAPER ON INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 46(2), I rise to table, in both official languages, the Government's green paper on International relations entitled Competitiveness and Security: Directions for Canada's International Relations.

* * *

PARLIAMENT

TABLING OF REPORT ON REVISED SALARIES OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND SENATORS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 46(1) I have the honour to table in both official languages copies of the report of the commission set up to review salaries of Members of Parliament and Senators, which should be referred to the Standing Committee on Management and Members Services pursuant to Standing Order 46(4).

* * *

PETITION

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND ROMANIA

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured today to be able to present to the House a petition on behalf of concerned Canadians, many of whom are of Hungarian origin, regarding well-documented human rights violations in Czechoslovakia and Romania. These violations have been aimed at the Hungarian minority living in both countries and have included the closing of Hungarian schools, imprisonment of Hungarian dissidents and curtailment of cultural activities. The facts have been documented in the British journal The Economist and the situation was seen by the European Parliament in Strasbourg to be—

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that he may make only a brief summary of the petition, not a reading, no matter how serious the situation is. I appreciate that it is a serious subject.

Mr. Witer: The petitioners petition this House and the Canadian Government to issue a clear statement of condemnation of these acts and that the countries involved be made aware of our abhorrence of such actions. I hereby submit 10,000 petitions in support of such a statement by the Canadian Government.

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, question No. 71 will be answered today.

[Text]

PENSIONS

Question No. 71—Mr. Nunziata:

Does the Department of the Solicitor General or agencies under his responsibility, currently employ individuals now in receipt of a pension from the public service, the Canadian armed forces, the RCMP or other service to the Crown in the right of Canada and, if so (a) how many (b) in which agencies are they employed (c) what are the total salary expenditures?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Solicitor General of Canada): (a) and (b) Ministry Secretariat 8 (Employees—one under contract); National Parole Board, one (board member); Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 59 (public servants and 195 members of the RCMP); Canadian Security Intelligence Service, 7 (employees); Correctional Service of Canada, 5 (employees under contract).

(c) Ministry Secretariat, $296,604; National Parole Board, GIC-5, $58,620 to $68,990; Royal Canadian Mounted Police, $7,630,600; Canadian Security Intelligence Service, $201,500; Correctional Service of Canada, $72,750.

[Translation]

Mr. Dick: I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question mentioned by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy:

That this House condemns the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and the Legislatures by failing to use industrial, decentralization, agricultural, transportation and equalization policies as well as its Crown Corporations to further economic development in all communities across Canada.

Supply

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am quite pleased to rise in the House and to deal perhaps in a somewhat brief but no less confident way with the rather unexpected issue we must address today. The purpose of this ill-advised motion is to condemn the government for undermining the will of Parliament by failing to use equalization policies to further economic development; that is in part how the motion moved by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) reads.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly object to this motion which I find without either rhyme or reason. Moreover, I find it passing strange and somewhat paradoxical that a few weeks after having fully debated in this House Bill C-39, to provide for the making of supplementary fiscal equalization payments, and at a crucial moment when the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs is called upon to consider this equitable and fair legislation, that the author of this bizarre motion has the audacity to put forward such a motion, or perhaps is it due to a lack of understanding of the Parliamentary system.

Since he appears so anxious to deal with the subject-matter of Bill C-39, I hope to meet him shortly during the forthcoming meetings of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, if his party appoints him as a substitute for the next few weeks. I am really eager to see him get together with his friends, the members of the old guard of federal politics, the self-appointed champions of Manitoba interests, who have the gall to condemn the government of Canada for providing Manitoba with $115 million in total supplementary fiscal equalization payments.

I ask myself, and you as well, Mr. Speaker, whether the Government . . . and I quote:

[English]

Has the will of the legislators been undermined by this measure?

[Translation]

And when, immediately before that, reference is made to equalization payments, are these also against the interests of Manitoba? The Premier of that Province certainly does not agree with the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, because he quite freely and aptly said, and I quote:

[English]

I think it is a good step for Manitoba.

[Translation]

To my knowledge, the Hon. Pawley is not known to be a Liberal.

What about the Winnipeg Free Press editorial of April 3, which bluntly stated that this was, and I quote:

[English]

Ottawa's fair decision.

[Translation]

—and had this to say about what our distinguished Minister of Finance said, and again I quote:

[English]

The federal Finance Minister got it right.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, while I am not a regular reader of that excellent newspaper, would it be that the editor himself is also wrong, that he also thinks that the federal Government's intention, as mentioned by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), while thus supporting the highly worthwhile nature of extra equalization payments, or would there still be confusion in the mind of Manitoba's Premier, in the mind of the Manitoba newspaper editor, or again in the minds of the very large majority of Members in this House who wholeheartedly approved the Bill on additional equalization payments a few weeks ago? Or would it be more likely that such blatant confusion would rather lie in the clustered mind of the sponsor of that dismal motion? It goes without saying that I entertain doubts as to the seriousness of that motion as put forward.

Mr. Speaker, the sponsor of that motion has shown his personal lack of understanding, even his party's lack of understanding of the inherent complexity of social policies. Without any reference to his own concept or that of his party, Members of this valiant Government team fully realize that notwithstanding the essence and importance of equalization programs, these transitional measures and their additional adjustment measures have never been, are not and will never be indirect instruments of economic development.

Let us therefore recall, to clarify the nebulous and esoteric points made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, a few functions related to that equalization. Certainly this will help understand the facts.

Again I beg for your patience while I state once more that basic principle underlying equalization programs and their possible adjustments. The aim is to make sure that all Canadians have access to quality public services reasonably equivalent under reasonably comparable taxation measures. This essential definition was originally recognized and confirmed in successive equalization programs and the implementation of temporary programs. It was also largely complied with when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) set the additional equalization payments provided in Bill C-39.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, an additional lump sum adjustment was considered necessary by this government to correct a situation entirely created by a defective legislation passed under the previous government in 1982. Since the supplementary voluntary payment has been decided on a moral basis by the present government as a result of substantial changes in the assessment of basic criteria of the temporary formula, namely the changes in growth rate, the energy crisis, the fluctuations of inflation, it has been clearly established that the temporary steps as well as the original formula had become inadequate. The setting up of a new and complex equalization formula will be discussed later when the government will have heard and exchanged views with all those concerned in the consultation process which will soon begin in order to come to an agreement on March 31, 1987. The bill will then be debated in the House of Commons.

Let us remind the essence of Bill C-39 so that members of this House may be aware of the decisive reasons and the courageous measures undertaken by our Government to make sure that all Canadians enjoy a fair treatment within the Canadian confederation.

Since the great change which occurred on September 4 last, the very responsible Government which we represent as well as possible has been deeply concerned about the severe reduction of equalization payments, especially to some provinces. This drastic reduction was the result of the transitional measures spread out over three years which guaranteed adjusted payments on the basis of a shaky program extended through the use of a financial crutch to alleviate somewhat the expected catch-up necessary by the projected evolution of financial conditions in a given period in 1982. Indeed, these transitional measures had been developed by the administration of which the mover of this motion, which is at the very least paradoxical, was a member.

As they say in English, it is the pot calling the kettle black. If I may suggest a very free interpretation of this saying, another way to put it would be that people in stone houses should not throw stones.

• (1520)

An Hon. Member: In glass houses.

Mr. Lanthier: People in glass houses should not throw stones. I stand corrected. This new Government of change, in a spirit of fair play and equity, in spite of the serious deficit unfortunately inherited from the previous Government and the mover of today's motion, obviously realized that it had a moral duty to provide additional assistance under the other existing programs, even though it had absolutely no legal responsibility to do so.

The cheeky Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) has accused our Government of not giving high enough priority to the equalization program. Through you and with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell him that it is precisely because our Government gives all the priority required to the equalization program and the conditions in certain provinces that we made sure to provide additional payments proportional to their functional needs and our reduced ability to pay.

Our Government therefore acted quite responsibly in a very healthy spirit of national conciliation and exemplary co-operation, two qualities which are quite new at the federal level. The electoral decision of last September was quite clear: The voters had enough of this mish mash of systematic confrontation and organized discord! We now work in a harmonious climate which is quite appropriate in a federal administration. We sincerely believe that this new reality has not been fully understood yet by the Members opposite, especially the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry and his colleagues who still long for the atmosphere of negative rigidity typical of the former administration, which was already exhausted at the time.

I therefore find it unrealistic and even unbelievable that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry should now want to condemn this Government on its record which however short is quite remarkable, what with its approach of consultation and its friendly relations with the provinces and other Canadians.

Once more, I cannot believe that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry was serious when he moved such a motion and I urge all right-thinking Members of this House to take a stand and to rise against this questionable and ambiguous legislation.

I want to repeat, Mr. Speaker, that I am the sole author of these comments and that my hesitations were due to the fact that I had trouble deciphering my own handwriting since I wrote this speech during the lunch hour.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre).

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) on his speech.

I would like to comment that he was rather selective in the quotes he made. In fact, throughout his speech, he never quoted a full sentence. All he gave us was bits and pieces. One of the things he forgot to quote was the reaction of the Minister of Finance of Quebec. When he talks about this new attitude and not being rigid and all that, I wish the Parliamentary Secretary, who is from Quebec, would give us his position on the so-called legitimate claim by the Government of Quebec that what the Parliamentary Secretary refers to as an additional lump sum adjustment is in fact a payment to which it is morally entitled, and I would like to know what his reaction is to comments by the Quebec Minister of Finance, who claims, and rightly so, that the Federal Government owes him more money, and when he refers to the consultation process, I remember clearly that here in the House, his Minister said that he was still open to discussion, and a few days later, he decided that everything was settled, and so much for discussions. Consequently, I think that in addition to referring to Manitoba's position, the Parliamentary Secretary should have mentioned the position of Quebec, which after all should be of greater concern to him.

I also want to say that although the Parliamentary Secretary ought to know that regional economic development is not just a matter of equalization payments, he only touched on one aspect of the motion. There are all the other elements, and I am thinking of the industrial, agricultural, and transportation decentralization policies. I think the Parliamentary Secretary has given us a very restrictive view of the Opposition motion, and in trying to narrow its focus he did not do it justice. Perhaps Hon. Members failed to grasp the scope of the motion, but in any case, we on this side wanted to submit for consideration not just one isolated aspect but a comprehensive set of factors that are vital to the economic development of a region. I would therefore like to know what the Parliamentary Secretary has to say to that, and I also wish he would take a broader view and look beyond the narrow perspective provided by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Speaker, part of the question of the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) was directed at himself, so I hope he will answer that part. As to the question he asked me, it is threefold: first, he wants to know why I dealt with only one aspect; second what is my opinion as a Quebecer; third, he implied that I have a selective memory, as he put it. I hope that sums up his question.

First, we discussed only one aspect because I am speaking in my official capacity. I am very proud to represent the riding of LaSalle, Mr. Speaker, but I am now speaking on behalf of the Minister of Finance, I am Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). So I dealt with the part of the motion mentioned here and, of course, I had to be selective because other Members will speak to the motion. I was selective on one aspect, the part of the motion blaming the Government for undermining the will of Parliament by failing to act responsibly or to give due consideration to equalization policies inasmuch as they affect economic development. I wanted to deal with that particular aspect of the motion, Mr. Speaker.

Second, as a Quebecer, I think that the words fair play are well chosen. As to the remark of the Quebec Minister of Finance, I would say he made more than one and I had an opportunity to study them thoroughly. I was able to debate this question with the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau)—to his satisfaction, I hope—and I think I answered it. I would urge the Hon. Member for Shefford to read Hansard where that complex issue was fully debated.

Third, the scope of my quotations was limited because I tried to select those which are relevant to the arguments raised by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) who, unfortunately, made the thrust of his debate bear on only one province. I had to answer his allegations. That is my answer to the Hon. Member for Shefford.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are over.

• (1530)

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to take my full time as I do not believe the motion justifies that. However, I want to deal with it as best I can in a few moments.

I would begin by saying to my colleagues in the Liberal Party that, of course, we support the intent of the motion. We believe that the Government should use the industrial, decentralization, agricultural, transportation and equalization policies as well as the Crown corporations which it has available to it in order to further economic development in all communities across Canada. We subscribe to that. I find no fault with the Liberal Party's suggesting that that ought to be a matter for debate on a day such as this. However, I do seriously question whether or not the Liberal Party is accurate in suggesting that the Government should be condemned for undermining the will of Parliament and the legislatures by failing to utilize all of those available vehicles to enhance and improve the economic stability of the country.

I would like to make it quite clear that I do not for one minute believe that among the 211 Conservative Members who were elected to Parliament there is a will to use those particular methods in order to create the economic stability which we all desire. Neither do I believe that many of the provinces of Canada which have Conservative or Social Credit administrations, would suggest that Parliament ought to exercise its will and utilize those particular means available to the Government in order to solve the economic problems within the various regions over which they have jurisdiction.

I see the motion as being flawed. I agree that it is important to take advantage of everything which we have at our disposal in attempting to find ways to combat the economic downturn which has occurred in Canada. I also agree that it is appropriate to pay particular heed to the examples which have been set out by the Liberal Party in its motion. But I do not agree that it is the will of Parliament that the Government do these things. I do not believe that there is a will among those on the Tory benches to do any such thing. I do not think it has ever been exercised because I do not believe it exists.

There is a sense among some that this Government is wandering aimlessly in an economic sense and that somehow the Government does not know what it is trying to accomplish. Some people believe that the Government does not have available to it the knowledge which is sufficient to be able to chart the course, even if it did know what it wanted to do. Again, I am not sure that is true. In fact, I have begun to come around to the view that this Government knows exactly what it is doing. What we are seeing across this land is, in fact, what the Government desires to have happen. The Government does not utilize the levers of economic power it has available to it because it has chosen not to do so. The Government does not move in the public sector in order to try to create the economic stability and, therefore, the job opportunities because the Government has chosen not to do so.

I believe the Government knows what it is doing. I believe the Government has a plan to return to the so-called good old days of private enterprise. This Government has in its mind that if only it could get rid of all the public ownership and involvement, somehow the private sector would re-emerge as the engine of economic power, and that this would result in prosperity beyond our wildest dreams. That is absolute nonsense and poppycock.

We could look back in history at the so-called good old days when, in fact, it was the order of the day for the private sector to have the first and final say. The Government never got involved. In those days how did the private sector manage to build up its fortunes and manipulate the system? It did it by paying low wages, forcing, people to work long hours, paying little if any benefits, not providing adequate health care systems, and forcing young children to work in factories and mines. That was a system which existed in the so-called good old days. That, I say to the House, is the system to which the Conservative Party of Canada would love to see the country return.

I find it most aggravating. I believe the Government does have a plan and knows what it is doing. I do not doubt for one minute that there are those on the back-benches and those on the Treasury benches of the Conservative administration who, not unlike their colleagues in many of the provinces—B.C. being an excellent example—would have absolutely no qualms about moving to longer hours of work for employees and getting youngsters to enter the workforce at an earlier age rather than seeing them become educated. There are those who would have no qualms about seeing cut-backs in health care provisions and cut-backs in education, and this at a time when the future lies in becoming better educated, not less educated.

I believe the Liberal Party has missed the boat in its criticism. It is absolutely correct in that those kinds of measures and levers are the right ones to use, but I believe it is wrong to suggest that the Government is not exercising the will of provincial Governments or the will of Parliament. I think the Government is exercising the will of the Tory administrations across the land and the Socred Administration in British Columbia. I think it is exercising the will of the 211 Conservative Members who were elected in 1984. In fact, I believe those are the very people who determined, upon being elected, that they would undermine the social fabric of Canada and move toward adding more to that great pool of unemployed who would be able to fight with each other to get lower and lower wages simply to have a job. I would say to my colleagues in the Liberal Party, well intentioned though their motion is, that it may be misdirected.

I look at what this Government has done and its almost blind adherence to a system which never worked when it was in place, if it ever was in place. It is a system which could only work if it allowed almost uninhibited exploitation. That appears to be the kind of system which this Government is now attempting to put back in place. I hope my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri-Westmount (Mr. Johnston), will agree with me when I say that is not the system which Canadians want. That is not the kind of system which we in the opposition benches want to see. It is not the kind of system on which Canada was built. Good God, we have devoted most of our lives on attempting to eliminate exploitation and to raise the lot of the average working families to make it possible for those average families to own their own homes rather than to live in accommodation which is owned by others. I have spent most of my adult life attempting to improve the health and safety conditions in the factories and in various industrial undertakings in Canada. I don't want to see those things slip away. I don't want to see us disregarding those kinds of things as this Government pursues the ideological utopia of private enterprise based on unfettered exploitation. I hope there are other Hon. Members in this House who feel likewise. I hope there is at least someone in the Conservative Party—anyone, sitting anywhere, I don't care, in the most obscure corner of the House, who will rise and say that he or she disagrees with this Government's intention to create the larger and larger pools of unemployed who will be deprived of the economic future which we have fought to create.

• (1540)

There should be an opportunity for everyone to find a job and to work at it and to use all of the available economic means to achieve success. That is where this Government has failed. It may have failed in a lot of other areas as well, but that is the area in which the Government has no understanding, where its Achilles heel lies, as I look at it today. It is a Government which has fond memories of something which no one liked when we had it, a Government which wants to take us all back to it, notwithstanding that it would be disastrous, not only for the generation which is presently employed but for many of the young people who will come into the work force in the future.

I did not intend to take up all of this time but I did feel it important to put on the record my views on how this Government is operating and what is wrong with it. I venture the opinion that by 1988, when we go back to the polls again, more of Canada's industrial base will be owned by foreigners and less of Canada's industrial base will be secure in the hands of Canadians who have a long and abiding interest in ensuring Canada's economic future.

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that the kinds of conditions which we have built up in the social, welfare and health care systems, which guaranteed that those who were in need could receive without being degraded, will be undermined by this administration. I remember prior to Christmas when we were in debate on universality—you will recall that yourself, Mr. Speaker—that Party argued that it did not really believe in doing away with universality, but we all know the truth. The truth was self-evident in the embarrassed looks on the faces of the various Ministers as they had to rise and try to explain their blurting out of ill conceived thoughts.

I can say to you, Mr. Speaker, that the hidden agenda of this administration is becoming less hidden with every passing day. That is where the public of Canada will look when it finally has to make its decisions. It is no accident, and I know you would agree with me, Mr. Speaker—if you were able to—that the Conservative administrations in the provinces of Canada are now beginning to fall like ten pins. They are falling because the Mulroney-led Government is not living up to the promises it made. It is not fulfilling what it said it had as a mandate. That will be what will ultimately undermine all of the provincial Conservative administrations, not only the administration in British Columbia led by Mr. Bennett and his Socreds, who are the kissing cousins of the Conservatives, in any case. That is what will ultimately undermine the credibility of this administration itself because it speaks out of both sides of its mouth. It will, on the one hand, say whatever is required to be said in the most melodious, most mellifluous tones, making sure it is said with all of the care necessary to have it clearly understood. But someone else can rise a day or two later and say something quite different.

It is not that this practice came to that Party only after it became elected as the Government of Canada. You will remember yourself, Mr. Speaker—you might not admit it because you cannot, but I remember quite well—that in the Parliament prior to this one, on every single issue without exception, there was a Conservative who spoke on each side of the question. It did not matter what the issue was, there was a Conservative for it and a Conservative against it. That is on the record, by the way. That is still the practice. I remember it because it afforded that Party such a wonderful opportunity. If someone wrote in and said he was in favour of lowering the taxes, the Conservative Party could send out the speech of one of its members who was in favour of it. If someone wrote in to say, "It's time we taxed the buggers more", the speech of the Hon. Member who agreed would be sent out. That Party was in favour of nuclear development and opposed to it at the same time. I can remember going through that exercise; it was an exercise to behold.

I say to the Liberal Party that it could have been more focused and more pointed in its motion. There are ways in which we could have brought about a more speedy recovery from the disastrous economic conditions which the Liberals left to the Conservatives. We could have used the methods which the Liberals have set out in their motion. But don't let yourself be fooled, Mr. Speaker, the agenda the Tories are following is the agenda the Tories believe in. It is an agenda which all 211 Conservatives support. It is an agenda based on further deprivation and economic chaos.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There being no questions and comments, we shall resume debate.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to join in this debate this afternoon because it is very clear that after six, seven or eight months in office, the Government does not really have an economic agenda for this country. Last week I had the opportunity to visit two provinces in western Canada. Time after time I was told, in talking to people in Alberta and Saskatchewan, it was clear that the Tories had a very active political agenda but a very fuzzy nondescript economic agenda.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has a wonderful press organization. It is able to put together massive conferences where all these things can be discussed, but the Government never actually brings into the House any bills to improve the economy. It goes from one great show to another.

First, we saw that wonderful meeting of the Prime Minister and the premiers in Regina. It cost about $500,000 or $600,000. Dozens of officials were flown in first-class from all over the country. Great co-operation was promised and then, as a final stroke of economic determination, we were told the Government was going to spend some $695 million on job-creation and direct employment programs and it was going to allow the provinces to have a say in how it was distributed. Everyone sat around the table saying, "Isn't that marvellous. The amount which the Prime Minister has put into job-creation and job training is marvellous". But someone at the back of the room asked, "Well, how much was spent last year?" The answer came back, "Just about exactly the same". So I believe, Mr. Speaker, we really have to give the Government credit for putting on wonderful, wonderful shows.

When it announces job-creation and job training programs worth $695 million, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) doesn't just announce it here in the House, which is good parliamentary etiquette, but a conference is put on and $400,000 or $500,000 is spent to bring all the premiers in to say, "Isn't what we are doing wonderful?" But the actual impact is just about the same as in previous years.

• (1550)

There was an editorial in the May 12 edition of The Toronto Sun headed: "Will Budget be Worth the Wait?" It went on to describe all of the wonderful things the Prime Minister promised in the election campaign. It talked about how he was going to reduce the deficit. It said:

> Remember how stirring he was on waste? That was before such trifles as the $525,000 bill for entertaining the Reagans one night. The PM was offkey in singing When Irish Eyes were Smiling—and so was the bill.

The Prime Minister also ran into a lot of trouble in London with the Palace. He wanted to make a real production of his visit to the Queen. His press agent tried to hustle over there and make all the arrangements. There was to be some good pictures which would really show what a tremendous international figure this man is. But those guys in the Palace, you know, they always let you down. They just would not allow those pictures to be taken. Well, the Prime Minister will just have to make other arrangements in the future in order to get suitable pictures.

The motion before us today specifically condemns the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and relates that to agricultural policies in the development of communities across the country. In spite of the fantastic PR job that the Prime Minister does in promoting shows and extravaganzas, there is a touch of uncertainty and concern creeping into almost all sectors of our economy. This is the man who was going to create hundreds of thousands of jobs. He was going to bring down a Budget within a month and really set the economy straight. But here it is May 14 and we are waiting for May 23 to see what the Budget will provide.

We know pretty well from the economic statement last fall what the Government is opposed to. It is opposed to renewable energy. It is opposed to things like the CHIP and COSP programs. It is opposed to programs like RRAP which help people across the country. It is opposed to providing funding for the CBC. It is opposed to programs which protect our environment, and to the construction of a new world class toxicology centre in Guelph. It is opposed to things like the Canadian Wildlife Service. The list goes on and on. But we really do not know what the Government is in favour of, and we are hoping that we will find out in this Budget exactly what the policies of the Government are regarding economic matters.

I would like to quote from an article by Barry Wilson in The Western Producer of May 9, 1985, which talks about how the uncertainty about the future bothers many farm groups. He says:

> A large part of the unease flows from ignorance and confusion about the Conservative agenda for agriculture mainly because minister John Wise has yet to articulate a clear vision of where he wants to take the industry.

The task forces are combing through Government programs. As far as agriculture is concerned, I do not think there is anyone from west of Toronto on the task force; they are mainly from big corporations. They are deciding what is going to happen to various agricultural programs. The same thing is going on in Indian Affairs, and that report happened to be leaked this week and the Prime Minister immediately disowned it. But there is a great deal of uncertainty among groups, like the Canadian Federation of Agriculture who are quoted in this article as seeing these secret communities working away without even the Minister knowing what is going to be decided. I had the opportunity to attend a meeting with the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) the day after these cuts were leaked and clearly he had no idea of what programs were being cut. That is why there is a great deal of unease in the country in this regard.

We have the crisis with the Farm Credit Corporation. Last November or December the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) announced a moratorium on FCC foreclosures, and said he was going to set up debt review boards as a pilot project. That pilot project has gradually faded away. The people who worked on it tell me there was a great problem with that concept, not because the people involved did not work hard, because they did, but because there was no support from the Minister of Agriculture. He refused to give the FCC the flexibility to make it work, or bring in legislation so it could be more flexible. So we will look with great interest at what the Minister decides to do about that concept, whether he will let it die, or will give the FCC the flexibility it requires.

When we look at the White Paper brought out in January by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) we can really see the policy of this Government with regard to agriculture. Clearly there was no sympathy in that document for the farmers of this country. The paper was written as though the Tory promises on taxation had never been made. Certainly they were never mentioned in the Minister's paper. In fact, it portrayed the agricultural community as being very well off. It said they earned twice as much as the average Canadian but paid only one-quarter as much taxes, suggesting that the farmers of this country are not paying their fair share. It went on to say that the average farmer is seven or eight times as well off as the average Canadian, quoting very questionable figures. The response of the agricultural community was swift and violent. Every farm organization in the country denounced the paper as unrealistic and unfair.

● (1600)

If, before issuing that paper, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) had taken time to look at the Farm Credit Corporation report of last November, in which the desperate financial situation of many young farmers in our country was set out, he would never have allowed it. If he had read that report, he would have seen that approximately 17 per cent of our farmers are in serious financial difficulty and that another 7 or 8 per cent are in medium stress situations. They are facing very difficult times.

When the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs reported on that paper of the Minister of Finance it completely rejected his view of the agricultural situation in the country. It outlined major recommendations for a program to set aside debt by the provision of lower interest rates for a good share of the 17 per cent or 39,000 farmers who face serious financial difficulty. We are waiting. We hope that after having had his white paper on financial matters of the farming community rejected the Minister of Finance will adopt some of the recommendations of the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. It proposed a program that would require nearly $100 million of financial aid. We will have to wait until May 23 to see whether the Government is prepared to accept the recommendation of that committee. It proposes that up to $300,000 be provided through the Farm Credit Corporation at an interest rate of 8 per cent over a five year period and that the interest paid by the individual would not be tax deductible. Therefore, this would clearly be for the benefit of those who are in serious financial difficulties.

In the FCC report of last November the criteria used to establish serious financial difficulty was, equity of less than 15 per cent, payments to service debt of over 40 per cent, or spending more on borrowings than that being put back in capital expenditures.

Looking at the farm situation which has developed since last November when that survey was carried out, we see a much darker and gloomier picture. Let us look at some of the other problems facing agriculture. There has been the imposition of countervail of 5.3 cents a pound on hogs being sold into the United States. That has the devastating impact of a 10 per cent or 12 per cent reduction in price. It is estimated that it is already costing millions and millions of dollars every week.

As well, the EEC dumped 51 million pounds of subsidized Irish beef into Canada last year. It took the Government three and one-half months to make a decision to impose quotas. Now that the quotas have been imposed, the Government is backing off. We could not get a straight answer from the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) today. Clearly, the Minister intends to increase that quota from 5.9 million pounds to 23.5 million pounds. That represents 1,000 carcasses of beef per week, subsidized at up to 48 cents a pound coming onto the Canadian market during the coming year. We will hear the final word on that later, but I do not think there is any question in anyone's mind as to whether or not the Government has in fact capitulated on that.

That is not the end of the EEC beef story. Clearly this is a secret agreement, but it will eventually be made public. The quota of 21 million pounds for the United States is being increased to 65 million pounds. Nicaragua's quota is being increased from 600,000 pounds to nine million pounds. These are all very adverse impacts on the Canadian agricultural community in the coming year.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Speaker, in the Hon. Member's comments he forgot to mention several significant factors. When discussing the agricultural sector, which has been under pressure for a long time, it is important to understand the impact which the Government has had in the short time it has had to deal with the problems which exist. Is the Hon. Member aware of the $100 million tax relief which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicated last November for the farm fuel sector? That represents very nearly $100 million in tax relief to agricultural users.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) introduced a farm credit measure early this year; it will cost the Government approximately $16 million to lower interest rates which the previous Government allowed to rise to 16.75 per cent. They are now at 12.75 per cent. That is a significant indication of the awareness of the Minister of Agriculture and the Government of the serious impact that high interest rates have on agricultural producers and of the necessity of bringing those interest rates down to levels that farm producers can cope with.

The Member spoke about the exportation by the EEC of subsidized beef into this country. He neglected to mention that the previous Government allowed that level to rise to above 48 million pounds last year. That represented a very significant impact. The Member neglected to mention those things, Mr. Speaker. Does he recognize that those measures have been taken? We all know that the agricultural community is under severe pressure because of the cost price squeeze. Does he recognize that the directions which have been taken indicate an understanding of that problem and a real desire and intent on the part of the Government to deal with it as effectively as possible?

• (1610)

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, the Government reduced the excise tax on gasoline. It also increased the tax on the petroleum compensation charge. This affects vehicles coming to and from the farm. We are awaiting for the other shoe to drop with respect to the Western Accord, to see whether or not there will be an excise tax increase. There has been no indication from the Minister of Finance as yet as to whether that excise tax increase will be placed on farm fuels. However, we do know that major farm service charges are being imposed on farmers for inspection and grading of farm crops and red meat. Although we have not heard the final figure, hopefully it will be something less than the $32 million estimated.

I am glad the Hon. Member raised the question of the Farm Credit Corporation. In fact, the federal Liberal Government had a budget last year of some $825 million in funds available in the FCC both from the Consolidated Revenue Fund and borrowings in public markets. Since approximately $575 million of those available funds were not utilized, FCC officials recommended to the Minister that farm loans over 14 per cent be written down to 12-3/4 per cent, utilizing those funds which had been borrowed by the FCC under the Liberal Government which were not going to be used for farm loans. In my opinion it cost the Government very little because the funds had already been made available to the FCC and had benefitted those 5,600 farmers. Of course, there were some 6,800 farmers with loans from 13 per cent to 14 per cent that were not written down.

It is particularly disturbing that the funds from the Consolidated Revenue Fund allocated for the Farm Credit Corporation were reduced to $90 million as a result of the estimates of the Farm Credit Corporation and the Government of Canada that were tabled this year. This suggests that the Government is not planning any massive assistance to the agricultural community this year in the form of adopting the report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs or other recommendations.

With respect to the EEC beef, the agricultural community is most disturbed by the fact that after 3 months the Government imposed a quota of 5.9 million pounds on the EEC for 1985. Clearly, they were using subsidized beef and apparently will be doing so again. It appears that the Government will increase that quota to 23.5 million pounds. I am told by the Canadian Cattlemen's Association that this will amount to at least the equivalent of a thousand carcasses a week coming on to the market.

That is not the only increase. The quota from the United States will be increased by some 44 million pounds, up to 65 million pounds. I understand that the Nicaraguan quota level will be increased from 600,000 pounds to nine million pounds. Therefore, our total imports will be well over 215 million pounds when one considers other countries. This creates possible problems with Australia, New Zealand and other been trading partners. The EEC beef and the pork countervail is having a devastating effect on our red meat industry for both hogs and beef.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I want to interrupt proceedings with a point of order in relation to business of the House. I rise to advise the House that I designate this coming Thursday as an allotted day.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: I rise on a point of order Mr. Speaker. Could I put a question to the Government House leader?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): No. You do so after I have read the question to be raised at the time of adjournment.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall)—Regional Economic Development—(a) Nova Scotia—Cape Breton coal resources. (b) Federal funding; the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps)—Social Security—(a) Child tax credit—Treatment in Newfoundland. (b) Request for legislation; the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier)—Public Service—(a) Federal unions—Government position. (b) Pension negotiations.

* * *

[Translation]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) on a point of order.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) who has just mentioned—I wonder if he could come back in this House—that Thursday will again be an allotted day. I should like to know whether the Government has no bill nor motion to introduce ... Quebecers and Canadians are unemployed. I think that the Government is really tired after only eight months in office.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) knows that it is not a point of order.

We will resume the debate. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski).

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry):

That this House condemns the Government for undermining the will of Parliament and the Legislatures by failing to use industrial, decentralization, agricultural, transportation and equalization policies as well as its Crown Corporations to further economic development in all communities across Canada.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that if the Hon. Member who just spoke is willing to give up one of his Opposition days we would be very happy to bring forward legislation. I think it is quite obvious that the Opposition is running out of subjects, judging by the motion that has been presented here today. This motion has to be the weakest and perhaps the most incoherent motion that I have ever seen presented in the House of Commons. One wonders what goes on in the mind of the Hon. Member wo presented this motion, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy).

Perhaps the Ottawa Citizen had it figured it right in its article on May 3, when it called him "Spaced Out Lloyd". The article said that as soon as he sees space he sees stars and starts attacking. Today we are dealing with an omnibus motion that does not zero in on any particular policy, issue or concern in the country. Rather, it is a grab bag, scatter gun approach to give all members opposite a chance to rant and rave and whine while presenting nothing in terms of a constructive or positive nature.

I also noticed that this motion condemns the Government for its failure to utilize Crown corporations to further economic development. Again, that is another matter of inconsistency. The Hon. Member who sponsored this motion, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, tells us that we must sell our Crown corporations. The headline in the Montreal Gazette says, " 'Tories must sell Air Canada' Axworthy says". Again, that is an example of the inconsistency.

The other day he challenged the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board to assure the House that we would ship 700,000 tonnes of grain through the Port of Churchill. He failed to remind the House in his question that during his tenure as Minister of Transport his government shipped the lowest amount of grain—437,000 tonnes—through Churchill in the last five years. The fact that the member is losing credibility is a reflection upon the credibility of the Opposition Party.

It is also very interesting to note that, as I understand, the Hon. Member who presented the motion made his speech and left the House. At least we have three of those Members in the House today. The last time there was an Opposition motion, there was one of them here most of the time, and once in a while there were two.

• (1620)

Mr. Dingwall: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member should know very well that he should not try to impute motives with regard to those Members of Parliament who may or may not be in the Chamber. For the record, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member to whom he refers is at a committee meeting. I think it is quite unfair and quite inappropriate for the Hon. Minister to make slurs with regard to attendance in the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I think the point made by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) is well taken. Without even going that far, the Minister or any Member imputing motives, they should not refer to the fact that a Member is present or otherwise in the House. It is not necessary to speak of motives.

Mr. Mazankowski: It was not my intention to impute motives, Mr. Speaker, it was just to state the facts.

Mr. Dingwall: Withdraw.

Mr. Mazankowski: This motion really has its genesis in the terrible state of the economy in which this country was when we assumed office. We all know that the economy of this country was in trouble at that time. Most if not all of our basic wealth generating job creating industries were barely hanging on when we assumed office. This motion condemns us for failing to address some of those very difficult issues which we are addressing and which we are turning around. I think it is worthwhile to review some of the facts. Let us look at one of our basic industries.

The Member who preceded me talked about agriculture. Let us look at the state of the agriculture industry at the time we assumed office. Farm bankruptcies reached a record of 551 in 1984; there were 488 in 1983, 410 in 1982 and 125 in 1979. Over 1,500 farm bankruptcies occurred during that four year period. That does not tell the whole story. It does not illustrate the number of people who voluntarily gave up, packed their bags, went away and left the land.

Realized net farm income in 1984 was $3.9 billion, less than half what it was 10 years ago in real inflation adjusted dollars. As a matter of fact that net farm income reached its lowest level since 1970 and the third lowest level since 1938, some 45 years ago. That was the state of the agriculture industry when we assumed office. Land values in many areas dropped as much as 50 per cent of the purchase value. The Farm Credit Corporation estimated 39,000 or 15 per cent of Canadian farmers were in serious difficulty.

Our Government acted immediately; we acted immediately to assist our farmers in alleviating some pressures of the cost price squeeze. We removed the federal sales tax on farm fuels. We triggered a $450 million interim payment for the 1984-85 crop year from the Western Grain Stabilization Act, the largest payment ever made. We brought in legislative measures to make sure that this legislation would conform to the realities and the needs of the producers. We brought in a freeze on the St. Lawrence Seaway tolls which has saved the farmer $1.5 million to $2 million. We imposed a moratorium on Farm Credit Corporation foreclosures. There has been a significant decline in interest rates since we assumed office. We are restoring branch lines which were dismantled, or were to be dismantled by the previous Government. We have established an inquiry into the future of branch lines to determine if short-line operations or other options are available and can be utilized for the provision of services in those areas where branch lines are being threatened. We are looking for new ways and means to improve the grain handling transportation system. We are amending the Western Grain Transportation Act by removing the volume cap, smoothing out the erratic fluctuations, providing a freight rate ceiling over the next two years. We have introduced a red meat tri-partite stabilization program. We have fulfilled our commitment with respect to dual labelling of farm chemicals to avoid costly mistakes and confusion arising from the arbitrary metric only system imposed by the previous Government. We have introduced a shared risk mortgage plan to the Farm Credit Corporation to help protect farmers from possible interest rate increases. We have provided matching federal-provincial support to the Canadian sugar beet industry in order to make sure that the immediate survivor of this industry is secure while developing a long-term, long-range stable sugar policy in this country.

Those are the things we are doing, Mr. Speaker. That is not a complete list, but when you look at the commitments we made in Prince Albert, most of them are being acted upon or have been fulfilled.

Let us look at another of our wealth generating industries. Let us look at the state of energy. We all know that the former Government delivered unto western Canada and the energy sector the most pernicious policy ever delivered upon any industry or region in the country. The impact and the fall-out from that was absolutely disastrous.

I will quote from the Petroleum Resources Communication Foundation of 1982 on what happened after the National Energy Program. We have to remind this House and the Canadian people of the policies of the past Government which led us to the state of economic chaos we were delivered into, particularly that which we took over on September 4, 1984. This article reads in part that, with the National Energy Program:

> —drilling activity plummeted from record highs to record lows. Of the estimated 10,000 wells to be drilled in 1981, only 6,900 were actually drilled.
>
> Canada's drilling rig fleet is one third the size that it was a year ago with more than 200 drilling rigs moved to areas outside of Canada.
>
> Geophysical activity is down 45 per cent.
>
> Industry exploratory budgets are down 40 per cent.
>
> The decline in exploration activity has a significant impact on Canadian oil reserves. Remaining reserves at year end were down to pre-1962 levels.
>
> Cash available for reinvestment has been reduced 20-25 per cent; current taxes from the industry rose 75 per cent and interest payments on debt are up 100 per cent.
>
> Alsands, Cold Lake and expansion plans for the Suncor and Syncrude plants have been cancelled.
>
> 20,000 jobs have been lost primarily in the drilling and service sectors of the industry. Hiring freezes have been adopted by many companies.

I could go on, Mr. Speaker. That is the kind of situation and policy which delivered the economic pay-off that we inherited when we assumed the Government of Canada.

This Government was elected on a mandate of change, to bring about economic renewal and national reconciliation. The two energy accords that were negotiated are a clear indication that the national reconciliation has been achieved and that we have recognized that energy can be used as a major instrument, the major engine for economic growth and development. I think these two accords truly demonstrate the new spirit of co-operation and harmony that exists between the two levels of Government. We have only to look at clippings from newspapers to bear that out. For example, The Globe and Mail in its March 30 edition reads:

> This accord is good for Canada. It enjoys the support of those who own and develop the resources, the vast majority of whom are Canadians. It reduces inefficiencies and distortions while it increases incentives and rewards. It does not ask the energy industry to "save Canada" or bail out the federal treasury; it asks the energy industry to produce oil, gas and jobs.

The same thrust is suggested in The Gazette of March 30. It quotes the Canadian Chamber of Commerce as follows:

● (1630)

We welcome the March 28 energy agreement because it sends a positive signal to all investors about the Government's willingness to consult, to work with industry and the provinces, and to rely upon the market forces. We believe that all Canadians will benefit not only from the resulting revitalization of the energy industry, but also from the reverberations this will have throughout the economy.

I quote a Calgary Herald editorial:

Canada is the winner.

The Edmonton Journal states this is a good deal. It's taken some time, but it's a good deal.

The Halifax Chronicle-Herald states that Canadian rigs are trickling back home. That is a good sign. The Calgary Herald of March 6 indicates that drilling crews are smiling now. The drilling fleet's employment rate fell on average 61 per cent in 1981, slumped more to 49 per cent in 1982, dove to less than half the boom time high to bottom at 39 per cent in 1983 and struggled back to 50 per cent last year.

We now have a revitalization in the energy sector. Those jobs that are being created through exploration and development activity are going to be a boon not only to western Canada but, indeed, to all regions of the country.

I will not go into the details of the Accord; the Accord clearly speaks for itself. It is clearly another example of this Government acting on and addressing those major and very important basic industries which can provide the kind of growth, wealth and the potential for jobs, not jobs on a temporary basis but jobs on a permanent basis.

The tourist industry is another of our basic natural strengths. We have a $2 billion tourist trade deficit in this country today. In 1972 we had over 5 per cent of the world trade in tourism. Today we are down to 2.7 per cent. We recognize that there are more than 100,000 Canadian businesses involved in the tourist industry. We recognize that this is a very important industry which we must utilize. It can be used as a wealth generator and a generator of jobs.

During the course of this past Liberal Government, our world trade fell from 6 per cent in 1968 to under 4 per cent in 1984. I could go on. I talked about the agriculture sector. I could talk about the small business sector.

In the course of the last four years of the previous Government, many small businesses were decimated; 80,000 closed their doors in 1981 alone and 750,000 jobs were lost. Bankruptcies averaged about 50,000 per year. Over 100,000 individuals went bankrupt during that period of time.

I could go on and talk about the fisheries industry, the forestry industry and the mining industry. They are really all the same. This Government neglected those basic industries, those industries which generate wealth, jobs and direct and spin-off economic activity. This Government has a mandate for economic renewal and national reconciliation.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, who sponsored this motion, has been criticizing us for not consulting enough. A couple of months ago they were criticizing us for consulting too much. One of our major challenges is to put our economic house in order and to establish a climate of growth and confidence so that jobs can be created.

Here is a report card. Unemployment declines. The unemployment rate has fallen from 11.6 per cent in September to 10.9 per cent in April and 201,000 new jobs have been created. Interest rates have fallen from 12.38 per cent on election day to 9.93 per cent on May 9. Business confidence grows. Business confidence rose in the first quarter of 1985. The latest Conference Board survey of business attitudes and investment spending intentions indicated a growing confidence in Canada's short-term economic prospects. Consumer spending rises. Consumer spending is rising and that is good news for retailers. Retail sales climbed by 4.3 per cent in the six months following the election. Manufacturing orders are rising. New orders in manufacturing rose by 5.3 per cent between September and February. Price stability returns. The inflation rate in March was 3.7 per cent. The Consumer Price Index has been at or below the rate of inflation in the United States for the past six months. Farm cash receipts are starting to rise. The value of farm cash receipts in the first two months of 1985 was up by 9.5 per cent over the same period last year. Exports are rising. Exports rose by 11.2 per cent in the first quarter of 1985 relative to the same period in 1984. What about bankruptcies? Bankruptcies declined. In the first quarter of 1985 business bankruptcies were down 16 per cent from the first quarter of 1984, consumer bankruptcies were down 21 per cent, farm bankruptcies were down 10 per cent and total bankruptcies were down 20 per cent.

What a report card. Those are the facts. That is where we are at today. Then we have a silly motion like this suggesting that things are not improving. It is very clear that our policies are indeed working. It will take a little time, a little hard work and co-operation, but we are seeing the results in the evidence I just quoted.

I would like to turn briefly to transportation. The transportation policies that we announced during the course of the election campaign were very important. As I said, in most cases most of the issues have been acted upon. For example, we are working on a new revised National Transportation Act which will be put in draft form by the end of June.

On February 27, the provincial Ministers and I signed a memorandum of understanding that will provide for a greater degree of ease of entry, the elimination of rate setting and a more harmonious regulatory regime throughout Canada with respect to extra-provincial trucking. We are looking at ways and means of creating more inter and intramodal competition within all transportation sectors. We have asked the CTC to examine ways and means of freeing up the railway system. We have asked them to examine the effects of the Staggers Act in the United States, and the effect that may have on domestic transportation in Canada.

An aeronautics Bill has been introduced, C-36. It is currently before the committee. Amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act have been introduced. That Bill is before the House now. It will implement most of the commitments made during the course of the election campaign, particularly the Prince Albert Conference, which really set the stage for our western manifesto.

We are restoring services that the former Liberal Government unilaterally dismantled. Twenty per cent of those services were dismantled without public hearings or debate. We are restoring many of those services. We are going to bring forth a new rail passenger act. Hopefully we are going to provide some new equipment to revitalize this system. We promulgated the Transportation of Dangerous Goods legislation. We are engaging in a tremendous investment throughout all parts of the country with regard to capital regions in air, marine and surface.

We have fulfilled most of the campaign commitments with respect to Atlantic Canada. Yes, we are rationalizing some services and trying to reduce waste and inefficiencies, but, nonetheless, this is part and parcel of the mandate that we have. We have approached this in a balanced manner. We recognize that transportation is an instrument for economic development and it will continue to be. Transportation is important to this country. Certainly we will ensure that the transportation services and infrastructure will be maintained and utilized as an important tool for economic development throughout all regions of the country.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I was interested in listening to the Minister's report card. However, there are a few items on which he gave himself an A—in fact in most categories—where I believe there should be a few Es, or probably something further than that down the scale.

The Minister mentioned that tourism is a very important industry. I believe all Members of Parliament will agree that tourism is very important. He mentioned the deficit which we would all like to see rectified. His Government, under his jurisdiction as Minister of Transport, has increased ferry rates in my Province of Prince Edward Island and in the Province of Newfoundland, thereby restricting the third most important industry in the Province of Prince Edward Island. With regard to park fees, the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) is responsible for Parks Canada. She increased park fees for the national park in Prince Edward Island. We have seen an increase in gasoline prices. All of these things fly in the face of an attempt to improve the economic picture for the tourism industry.

● (1640)

Regarding agriculture, the Hon. Minister mentioned some of the things the Government has done for agriculture that he thought were wonderful. I agree that there have been a few good moves on the part of the Government. As far as the Farm Credit Corporation is concerned, interest rates are not exactly where I would like to see them but at least they have stabilized. We should all be thankful for that.

What about inspection fees for potatoes and red meats? Since those inspection fees were announced last week my office has been inundated with calls from representatives of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in the Province of Prince Edward Island, the National Farmers Union and, indeed, even from the provincial Government of Prince Edward Island. The Premier and, indeed, the Minister of Agriculture of Prince Edward Island are totally against any inspection fees for potatoes or red meats. This is the consultation process to which the Minister and the Prime Minister are referring. If this is it, then it is certainly not working. All these individuals, organizations and groups representing the farming community feel that they have been betrayed by the Government through its initiatives.

Indeed, there is no question that the action taken on the gasoline and fuel taxes for farmers and fishermen was a step in the right direction. However, I tried to get the Minister when he put the Bill through the House earlier this year to take into consideration highway transportation for potato producers and shippers who are taking their produce from the field to the market or indeed in some instances to the warehouses. Loggers and miners, for instance, were overlooked.

I hope to hear some comments from the Hon. Minister regarding those things. I hope he will take them seriously since he is a very important Minister in the Cabinet. I hope he will exert his influence on the Cabinet before the Budget is brought down on May 23. Perhaps he can have some of those inequities rectified for us.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I always take the Hon. Member seriously; I have in the past and I will do so today.

With respect to ferry services, I hope that the Hon. Member will check his facts, because I think he will find that in some cases the rates for ferry services that apply to the tourist industry have been reduced.

Mr. Henderson: For trailers.

Mr. Mazankowski: All right, for trailers, but that is a fairly important element of tourism. Where increases have occurred we have tried to recognize the impact on the tourist industry. I have to tell the Hon. Member that there were fairly extensive bilateral discussions with the province.

We in this House must recognize that we recover less than 20 per cent of the cost of operating the ferry services in this country. When we asked for a 15 per cent increase in revenues we did not imply that we wanted a 15 per cent increase in fares. We wanted to arrive at a 15 per cent increase in revenues through a combination of more efficient use and some fare increases. We treated this matter very, very carefully and gave it special attention. We may not have been perfect in the application of those measures, but I want the Hon. Member to know that we certainly took the tourist industry into consideration. I know the tourist industry is an important industry to the Hon. Member's province. It is an important industry to Canada. We certainly do not want to do anything that would unduly deter the growth and future of that industry.

I would remind the House that what we are talking about here is very minuscule compared to what has occurred in the last four years. The Hon. Member wants to talk about high costs. Let us apply that to tourism. In the four-year period between 1980 and 1984 the cost of gasoline rose by 75.5 per cent. I am sure that had an impact on the tourist industry. The cost of transportation rose by 56 per cent during the four-year period that the Hon. Member was a member of the Government. The cost of alcoholic beverages, a cost which some associate with tourism, rose by 43 per cent. Those are components of the tourist industry. However, the 75 per cent increase in the cost of gasoline is a far cry from the modest increase that we placed on the tourist industry. I think the Hon. Member should recognize that as well.

Inspection fees are under the purview of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). I know that the Minister is now engaged in bilateral discussions with his provincial counterparts and representatives of the agricultural industry trying to work out a better arrangement to ensure that there can be some compromise. I am not fully aware of all the details, but I am aware that the Minister has received many of those representations and I am positive that he will be acting on them.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister referred to the new energy deal that was worked out with the western provinces. At the heart of that is the whole question of de-control of prices by which the price of old oil, brought on stream before 1974, will rise some $6 or $7 a barrel and the price of new oil will probably be brought down a bit. The net effect of this will be that the companies involved with old oil will pick up some $1.7 billion more or less and the companies that are involved with new oil will have their incomes decreased by about $500 million.

The fact is that the companies involved with old oil are largely the multinationals, while some of the smaller Canadian-controlled companies had a larger stake in the development and production of new oil. For example, 65 per cent of Texaco's production is of old oil. With Gulf, the figure is 70 per cent; with Shell, 75 per cent; with Mobil, 70 per cent and with Imperial, 50 per cent. The multinationals have a very large stake in old oil. Yet the policy that the Minister has lauded will have a detrimental effect on some of the smaller Canadian-controlled companies.

I would like to ask the Minister how he believes that this policy, which he thinks is so good, will really benefit Canada as a whole, and how it will benefit Canadian-owned or controlled oil companies which are not in control of old oil.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, members of the NDP talk about jobs, jobs, jobs. The National Energy Program which we dismantled cost Ontario 90,000 jobs and Alberta 70,000 jobs. I can cite figures for the entire country. What the Hon. Member is failing to recognize is that the new and smaller oil companies to which he is referring are not complaining about the new western energy accord. In fact, it quite delights them by virtue of the fact that the PGRT is literally removed on all new production, and particularly on enhanced recovery, the tar-sands and those kinds of facilities. Those are the basic job generators.

In so far as the multinationals are concerned, the PGRT will be phased out; they will have to continue to pay it, albeit on a phased-out basis. We will have a taxation system in this country. If the Hon. Member is suggesting that there are some deficiencies in the tax system, perhaps I might agree with him, but that does not necessarily mean that we have to put in place a whole series of alphabet soup programs which no one really understands, which cost millions upon millions of dollars to administer, which strangle the industry and which take away the potential for job creation, economic development and wealth generation.

Generally speaking, the Western Accord has been heralded as a major breakthrough for Canada. There may be some imperfections in the system but there are a heck of a lot fewer imperfections in this system than there were in the old one.

• (1650)

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), condemning the Conservative Government for its indifference to providing regional development assistance.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard) told us about his interest in and satisfaction with the agreement on energy policies concerning the multinationals in Western Canada. I only hope that the Budget to be brought down by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will not include tax provisions to help the multinationals which will no longer have to pay as much in corporate taxes and that the consumers will not have to pay the cost of this new policy.

Mr. Speaker, I do not share the views of the Minister of Transport, because I think Quebec is going to pay the bill. I realize the Minister could not care or less, since he is from Western Canada and is going to get all the jobs and we in the province of Quebec are going to pay the piper. I am sorry, but my first duty is to defend the interests of Quebec within Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the House what this Government did as soon as it came to power. First of all, on November 8, the Minister of Finance cut more than $770 million from projects that were to be carried out this year in Quebec. Some of these projects come under the Minister of Transport, such as VIA Rail. A number of major projects were to be implemented in the area around Trois-Rivières, at Victoriaville—this was a pharmaceutical laboratory. There was also the natural gas branch line program worth $85 million, and now that money will not go into Quebec's economy, and there are the jobs that have been lost as well. I could mention the old Port of Montreal, the marina in Chicoutimi, the electronics institute in Shawinigan, and many more.

With respect to the Government's policy of privatizing or selling its so-called "lame ducks", nothing has been announced yet, and Quebec is at risk in view of this Government's decisions concerning Canadair. Five thousand jobs are at stake. At Teleglobe, 1,400 jobs. At VIA Rail, non-implementation of this project means a loss of 3,000 jobs. At Air Canada 500 jobs are at risk. At CN, 220 jobs are lost. And, Mr. Speaker, I could go on to mention the contract that Versatile lost because the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) decided to make a new call for tenders, although Versatile Vickers in Montreal was the second lowest bidder and the contract should normally have been awarded to that company. Mr. Speaker, there again, it means so many jobs that Quebec has lost.

Mr. Speaker, I said earlier that the Conservative Government had cut $770 million in job creation projects for this year. There was also the fact that Quebec was asking for more than $640 million in additional equalization payments. The first request was for $730 million. Quebec was prepared to negotiate for $430 million. After all the promises and commitments made by the Prime Minister, it was only normal that the Government of Quebec, which I do not think is Liberal at all and which is still headed by René Lévesque with Mr. Duhaime as Minister of Finance all they got as a consolation prize was a scant $110 million. It was entirely normal that the Government of Quebec, considering the remarks made by the Prime Minister and by all Progressive Conservative candidates that relations would improve and that according to the Conservatives, Quebec had been penalized by the previous Government, it was normal that the present Government of Quebec should expect, considering the offer it had made, which was, instead of asking for $730 million, to settle for $430 million. But no. What this Government said when it came to power was, that it could not care less about René Lévesque and everybody else in Quebec. Here is your $110 million. Mr. Speaker, as far as equalization payments are concerned, Quebec is the only province that is losing out. Other provinces like New Brunswick and Newfoundland were not in a loss position to start with. However, to help their Conservative friends just before an election in Newfoundland, they gave that province some extra money. But in Quebec? Nothing! Mr. Speaker, this was not said by us Liberals, but by Duhaime. "Says, Duhaime: Equalization will go on harassing Quebec Conservatives".

The problem is, how can we understand this Government? "Says Wilson: Quebec must recognize that the federal Government could not do any better in the circumstances." Two weeks later, he signed a $2.5 billion agreement with the oil multinationals. That was not in Quebec. And then: "Equalization—Ottawa ready to listen". So another flip-flop. All of a sudden, another headline: "Mulroney agrees to reopen the equalization file from a more comprehensive angle." Another statement, "Duhaime will not concede defeat". According to Jean-Louis Roy in Le Devoir, "An unfinished compromise". And finally, Mr. Speaker—those Tories are impossible to understand—another article by Maurice Jannard in La Presse: "Equalization—File closed, says Wilson".

Mr. Speaker, this will show that Quebecers can take neither the word of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) nor that of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). As far as the Minister of Finance's word is concerned, he himself clearly admitted that, with respect to universality, he did not state the truth during the election. He only stated it after the election. But, Mr. Speaker, people in Quebec and in Canada are asking themselves: Has the Minister of Finance told untruths only as concerns the universality of social programs? On how many other matters will his budget indicate that during the last election campaign the commitments were fake, that he was going to do the opposite?

Another area in which I would like to point out this Tory Government's lack of interest for Quebec's regional development is housing.

In that area, this Government has cut $9 million from social housing projects under the Section 56.1 program aimed at providing public housing with the co-operation of the Provinces, co-operatives, non-profit organizations.

In addition, it has cut $25 million from the RRAP program, the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program. This is a very important program in Quebec and in the Maritimes. It is very important to improve the quality of housing, but it is also very important to create jobs. Also it costs much less to the Canadian taxpayers, through the Canadian Government, to create hundreds and thousands of jobs than to change the color of the Armed Forces' uniforms, or to send 1,000 soldiers in Germany. Perhaps the Tiffany in Germany will be happy to get 1,000 extra customers, but what does that give Quebec or Canada? Not a cent more, Mr. Speaker!

As far as Quebec is concerned, not only the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight) in charge of CMHC, or the Treasury Board executioner—because there is no way we can tell who makes decisions in that joint, probably somebody who was in school with the Prime Minister, because outside of them he trusts no one—not only did he slash, but where Quebecers are concerned he chose to penalize them. Because the people in Quebec decided for once to trust the Conservatives, in return the Prime Minister tells them: We will put the screws to you. As for Westerners, they are the Conservative Party. And to people in Ontario, he said: Here is a bunch of newcomers, we will give it to them. Before they wake up let us make a killing. And before they find out where the toilets and the offices are, the trick will be done.

Mr. Speaker, Quebec is losing at the RRAP level $17 million that were to be invested in all the Quebec constituencies . . . Those $17 million cuts especially affect rural constituencies. Ontario is only losing $2 million. The Minister, to the question I asked him, and the President of the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation had this to answer on that matter, to a reporter from La Presse: We had to make up under the RRAP because Ontario needed it and had less funds than previously. Then, Mr. Speaker, I said to the Minister: This is untrue because under the Liberal government we know quite well that Quebec and the Maritimes needed more funds under RRAP, because they had more units to repair while Ontario and the Western provinces received more funds under the program for the construction of rental units, because their rate of vacancy was lower than in Quebec. The Minister beat around the bush as usual but I am fortunate today, because I have learned what the amounts are. I was shocked to learn that Quebec was penalized. It should be emphasized that such a decision was taken before the Ontario elections to help a good friend, one Mr. Miller. But that was done to no avail and it cost Quebecers $17 million to help Mr. Miller who was almost defeated. If he was not this time, he will be the next time. Not only are we penalized under the RRAP, but I received today from the Minister's office budget figures for the construction of rental units. For Ontario, a first instalment of $15 million, a second one of $6.7 million and another one of $415,000 for a hefty total of $22,115,000. Quebec, you will be pleased to learn, will get nothing. It is as simple as that. Quebec gets nothing under that program, period. I hope that the Progressive Conservative members of Quebec who are here—they would normally have a caucus this evening—will ask the Minister some explanations and the list for their constituencies as well as their losses under the RRAP.

The Chicoutimi area received $268,000 in 1984 but only $97,000 this year, Mr. Speaker. In the Hull area, it is too bad that the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) is not here. She is often too eager to rise on points of order to prevent opposition members from stating the truth and defending the interests of the Canadians, but I will say to her, Mr. Speaker, that she should shout this evening in caucus; Gatineau received $480,000 in 1984, but that amount has been reduced to $209,000 this year. In the Laval-Deux-Montagnes area, $225,000 was spent in 1984 but only $30,000 will be spent this year Mr. Speaker. I could go on and on and I am now trying to find the constituencies in the Beauce area.

● (1700)

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture on a point of order.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie should know that it is not considered parliamentary to refer to members' absence from or presence in the House. He often calls his colleagues' attention to this rule. Because of his many years experience, he should practise what he preaches, especially after his colleague lectured us this afternoon on the need to live up to our Standing Orders.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I recognize the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Malépart: I shall continue because I was precisely coming to this Hon. Member who is present. Something interesting in the Vaudreuil-Soulange riding, Mr. Speaker: $739,000 in 1984; $362,000 in 1985. Near Quebec City, in the Beauce riding—it sounds vaguely familiar to you, does it not?—$417,000 in 1984; $200,000 this year. Bellechasse, there we are! In the Bellechasse riding, $445,000 in 1984, $240,000 this year.

Mr. Speaker, I could continue with the list of all Quebec communities, both rural and urban, and indicate just how much this Conservative government has taken away from Quebecers: $17 million under the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, which is very important for the population as a whole, not only because it improves the quality of housing, but also because it creates a great many jobs.

Mr. Speaker, here is the heading of a newspaper article: "Demonstration at the office of the MP for Verdun-Saint-Paul (Mr. Chartrand) against the cancellation of the RRAP in connection with housing co-ops". The mayors of the municipalities in Rimouski County—they are not Liberals, Mr. Speaker—are very disappointed with the cuts made by this Conservative government.

There are cuts also to RRAP in the Arthabaska riding. According to this article, the funds made available by the Conservative government will make it possible to rehabilitate only one house or housing unit in each municipality. That is ridiculous, Mr. Speaker.

Same thing in the Rouyn-Noranda area: the constituents are anxious to meet their Member of Parliament.

Let us turn to the Sherbrooke area now, Mr. Speaker. All the mayors in the Eastern Townships and the members of the Quebec Construction Association strongly object to the Conservative government's decision to make cuts to RRAP in their region, in view of the great many applications received and of the expectations of the people in these communities.

Mr. Speaker, the prefects in Eastern Quebec have formed a common front, in Matane and Bellechasse. According to a regional newspaper, their member of Parliament met them and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, be patient because you are not going to get a cent. I have decided it was better to change the colours of our military uniforms than to help you." That was his reply, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Bellechasse (Mr. Blais) on a point of order.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is referring to some remarks allegedly reported in the newspaper he has. I would be pleased if he were to table it, because what he has just said is completely false. I cannot accept that.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows full well, I presume, that the Hon. Member is not allowed to table documents, only a Minister can do that.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I would be prepared to table the document. I could remind the Hon. Member for Bellechasse (Mr. Blais) of what he said to his constituents, that there was no money for housing, but then in caucus he voted to waste money on military expenditures, he does not want senior citizens to have more generous allowances, but he is quite satisfied to give out $2.5 million to the oil multinationals. I hope he realizes that his constituents are intelligent people. I know they are.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have amply demonstrated that, in the field of housing, Quebec has been and is still being taken for a ride. Tonight, hopefully, the Conservative Members will put that on the agenda and bring the Minister to his senses tomorrow at the national caucus. I am not asking them to rise in the House. I do expect them to rise in caucus and see to it that the $10 million funding goes back in the housing program. I will find out who rose and who did not at tonight's caucus.

I do not have to be there, Mr. Speaker, I have my sources of information.

Concerning the general agreement, Mr. Speaker, after all those cut-backs the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion and the Conservative Members get up at their mutual admiration meeting and say: We signed a $1 billion general agreement. We reduced it by $770,000 million, $300 million less for equalization . . . I am just about finished, Mr. Speaker. Then they turn around and say: We took that away from you for a year, but we are going to sign a five-year agreement to spend money.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude my remarks by saying what the newspapers of Quebec think of the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion: Confused, Stevens unable to explain his policy.

Mr. Speaker: Question, comments? No questions, no comments. Debate. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais)

• (1710)

Mr. Pierre Blais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to respond today to the suggestion contained in the Opposition motion that this Government has completely failed in its agricultural policies, especially since this is said with reference to all regions of Canada.

[English]

The facts tell quite a different story and I am glad to set the record straight at this time. Where are they now? Where are they? I would like to refute—

Mr. Riis: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. My hon. friend reminded Members earlier that it was not considered parliamentary to refer to Members' absence from the Chamber. I just wanted to remind him of that point.

Mr. Speaker: That is a perfectly bona fide point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, sure enough when we are challenged for minutes and minutes on end and asked to answer and to prove them wrong, and someone rises to answer, of course, they are surprised. I will comply with the rules, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

I would like to refute the Hon. Member's allegations, one at a time, starting with the action the Government has taken in support of Canadian agriculture, then the action we have taken jointly with the provinces, and finally I would like to review some of the ways in which this Government has engaged the knowledge and talents found in this House in the development of agricultural policies.

Let us consider for example the fuel tax rebate. The economic statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in November included a rebate of 4.8 cents per litre on farm fuel taxes. That is made up of 1.8 cents to offset the petroleum compensation charge, and a 3 cents rebate on the federal sales tax. These rebates will save Canadian farmers between $100 million and $150 million per year.

[Translation]

Those are accomplishments, Mr. Speaker, not smokescreens. This is not 20 years of waiting. Those are accomplishments that can be measured; they are visible and can be assessed by Canadians. This is important. I hope that tomorrow, many will read Hansard and find out the facts if they cannot get them elsewhere.

Another example, the Western Grain Stabilization Act. After final payments that amounted to $123 million last fall—

[English]

The Government set to work to amend the Western Grain Stabilization Act to allow for interim payments. As a result of this Government's swift passage of that legislation, western farmers enrolled in this program received payments this spring totalling $450 million. That money was extremely helpful to a great many western farmers in defraying planting expenses for this year's grain and oil seed crops.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, $450 million, that is a lot of money. Reference was made to $450 million cuts earlier. There you have it, $450 million that were paid to help Western producers. This is important, because this Government thinks that agriculture is still important in this country, after having been neglected for so long.

[English]

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) suggests that this Government has not used federal corporations to the benefit of the agri-food industry, but again the facts tell a different story.

[Translation]

What about the Canadian Farm Credit Corporation? Despite the tremendous financial difficulties faced by this Government, we have made money available to Canadian farmers through the Farm Credit Corporation.

[English]

Since the FCC clients are generally the low equity, high risk farmers most in need of assistance, we recognize that this Crown corporation is ideally placed to ensure credit availability and agricultural development across the country. Here are some specifics.

[Translation]

In November, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) announced temporary relief, the withholding by the Farm Credit Corporation of legal actions taken against farmers, until at least the Government could develop new solutions to farm credit problems. Part of those solutions were announced the following month, when the authority of the FCC appeal offices was extended——to allow for input from the Board before foreclosure action is undertaken.

[English]

[Translation]

In January, the Minister of Agriculture announced—

[English]

—an interest write-down program for FCC clients who borrowed money in 1981-1982 when interest rates were 14 per cent and higher. Those loans could be written down to 12.75 per cent, which represents a saving of $80 million for affected farmers over a five-year period. In March the Minister announced another FCC program to help farmers cope with volatile interest rates, the Shared Risk Mortgage Program. Farmers who wish to use this program will generally get a lower interest rate than normally offered five-year mortgages, but the interest rates will fluctuate from year to year.

[Translation]

Those are our achievements, and I am pleased to see that the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is in the House to hear this, because as I am pleased to emphasize, that is money that has been invested in agriculture, those are initiatives that were taken, rather than having 20 years of smoke-screening. Concrete steps that have been taken in 8 months, making up for 20 years of neglect of Canadian farmers.

[English]

In addition to those measures, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) is continuing to explore innovative new approaches to farm financing, with the FCC again playing a central role in policy formulation and implementation.

Just to mention one other Crown corporation reporting to the Minister of Agriculture, there is the Canadian Dairy Commission which continues to be the Government's instrument for administering the dairy program, valued at about $300 million per year, for co-ordinating industrial milk production and surplus removal, and even for special functions such as the donation of skim milk powder for African hunger relief programs.

I would now like to address another aspect of the Hon. Member's motion that the federal Government has not adequately consulted with provincial Governments. There are a great many examples of close co-operation, including the following. On October 1, Ministers of Agriculture for Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Canada, announced a $60 million federal-provincial prairie drought assistance program for livestock producers who had been hard hit by last summer's drought. This program has greatly helped to maintain the prairie livestock industry, and its success is in large part due to the teamwork between federal and provincial officials in administering the program.

[Translation]

Last November, the federal Government and Minister of Agriculture and the Ontario Minister of Agriculture announced a joint fund of $15 million to purchase and process Ontario grape surpluses to be sold later on when the market conditions would allow it. We all know, Mr. Speaker, that agriculture is a major industry throughout Canada. The needs are great and so are the interests. This industry seems to me, perhaps because I am Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture, the most important one in Canada and it deserves all our support.

Mr. Speaker, Canada finally needed a Government which would support farmers and agricultural producers throughout Canada and which would be able especially to have producers from the Maritimes, British Columbia, Ontario, the Western Provinces and Quebec sit down around the same table. This was important, not to urge the provinces and the farmers and agricultural producers of all the provinces to confront each other, but to try to find true solutions to our problems, and I emphasize the word "try" because, unfortunately, we do not have the answer to all problems. However, we did solve many of them and we shall try to do the same in the coming weeks and months. Indeed, we have already started.

Last December, Mr. Speaker, the federal Government and Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) and the Quebec Minister of Agriculture announced a compensation program for crop losses in the province of Quebec for the year 1983.

• (1720)

[English]

It was subsequently announced that the federal Government's share of the program would be $27 million and Quebec would contribute $4 million plus administrative costs.

[Translation]

Now that was an agreement! It was a settlement reached by two responsible governments after negotiations in an attempt to determine the needs in each region of Quebec, Mr. Speaker. I took part in these negotiations personally and I can say that many members of the Quebec caucus worked hard on these issues and held many meetings with farmers from all areas to ascertain their needs, to understand them and be able to meet those needs adequately through a procedure and a program approved by Quebec and its producers.

I received yesterday a letter of thanks from the president of the APU, the Agricultural Producers' Union of three great regions, Quebec East, Quebec West and Quebec Centre. This letter, which I received this morning at my office, thanks me personally and the Quebec Members who are interested in agriculture for having worked with the agricultural producers. This was not achieved after 20 years, but after six months. We worked at it, we came to an agreement and some $30 million have been spent in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, another important issue was resolved a few weeks ago, that of assistance to sugar beet producers. On April 18, the Government announced——that it would provide assistance of up to $8 million, or $10 per standard tonne, to sugar beet producers in Alberta, Manitoba and Quebec in co-operation with the provincial Governments of those provinces. Since that time agreements have been reached with Manitoba and Quebec, but Alberta producers will not be growing sugar beets this year.

[English]

[Translation]

We made an agreement with sugar beet producers. We were made aware of this issue. We sat with them, we thought it over, and agreements were reached. Some negociations are still going on. We are still experiencing difficulties with one of the provinces, but all the same we went to bat for our farmers who were struggling against serious difficulties. I think it is important to realize what has been achieved in that area, Mr. Speaker. We knew that sugar beet producers all across the country were in trouble because of poor foreign market conditions, and we supported them. That is not hot air. Those are facts, concrete facts for anyone to see.

[English]

I will now turn to the subject of the Ontario Veterinary College animal pathology lab. When the Minister of Agriculture was in Guelph on April 29 he announced that the federal Government would contribute $6.5 million to match funds provided by the provincial Government for the renovation of the Ontario Veterinary College. He also announced the construction of a $5 million animal pathology laboratory at the University of Guelph, which will not only serve area livestock producers, but will also be used in the training of students. Through numerous federal-provincial agricultural agreements the federal Government is helping to develop the unique production and marketing potentials of every region of Canada.

In the interest of time I won't go into the details of those programs. I would, however, like to mention some clear examples of the Government's respect for the authority and the talents of Members of this House in response to the false accusations made in the Member's motion.

[Translation]

It is not true, Mr. Speaker, to say that we did not further economic development, especially in agriculture. This is one sector where it cannot be said. I think no one in this House has the right to suggest that we have done nothing to further economic development in agriculture. Agricultural issues were raised more than 70 times since September, and I think it is important that we let the people hear about it or that, wherever they are, they read about it in Hansard tomorrow. I hope they do so that they know what really goes on.

[English]

Following up on our election campaign promise to take action in regard to Section 31 of the Income Tax Act, the capital gains tax on farm land and the possibility of establishing an agri-bond program to facilitate farm credit. On February 25 the Minister of Finance instructed the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs to hold hearings on the three tax issues. The Committee's report was presented early last month.

I hope the Opposition Parties will agree with me that the Committee's observations and recommendations vividly demonstrated the value of Parliamentary study of a pressing issue. All concerned parties had an opportunity to present their views on the three subjects and the Members of Parliament on the Committee were as straightforward in their analysis of the situation as they were bold in their recommendations.

[Translation]

We have not left this issue up in the air. We were committed to consider these matters during the election campaign but one cannot simply snap one's fingers and table legislation without giving it some consideration and without consulting the Canadian people. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that I, for one, have sat with Members of my party to consult groups and associations throughout the country, the people of Canada, who were anxious to be consulted, Mr. Speaker. When you have not been consulted for twenty years, you are pleased to see Ministers and Government Members sitting down with the people to ask them what they want, what their real interests and their expectations are, and to be able to discuss with them on how to achieve those expectations after giving the matter some consideration and assessing the impact. Now is not the time to engage in extravagant expenditures and end up with a accumulated deficit of $226 billion, as we now have. We cannot be expected, Mr. Speaker, and I think it is important, to introduce programs here and there and everywhere. We must be good managers. This is why the youth have elected us last September 4. They have made a harsh judgment on the previous Government, and they told us: We have trusted you, go and put your house in order, and that is what we have been doing since September, Mr. Speaker. It is not an easy task and it will take some time. We need the confidence of the people, as well as the good will of all parties, including the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party. Given the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I think that we are now in a position, after eight months in office, to present an interesting picture to the people that shows how seriously we have taken the fiscal problems of the Government.

Mr. Speaker: Questions or comments. Debate. The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap.

• (1730)

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to speak in support of the principle of this motion. I have listened carefully to speeches by Hon. Members today. I think it is fair to say that in the past Liberals have accomplished some good things for agriculture, although I could not find too many examples.

Mr. Nickerson: Name one.

Mr. Riis: Surely if one is in power for 40 years something good must take place sometime, somewhere and somehow. While I am unable clearly to identify any, indeed there have been some rather minor assistance packages for the farm sector.

Let me open my remarks by referring to what has happened in my constituency in the last three weeks. I come from a constituency where agriculture plays a very major role. There are 1,200 full-time farms and a number of part-time and hobby farms.

I notice that the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty) is in the House. We are still awaiting for that clarification with respect to how the tax system affects part time farmers. That clarification was promised before the election, during the election and after the election—it has been eight months. I simply want to flag that for the Minister in the hope that we will have that clarification in the near future with respect to how the tax system affects this critical area.

Three weeks ago I spoke to a sheep rancher in my constituency. He is from a large sheep farm that has operated for three generations. His grandfather had settled in the area and commenced a large sheep operation. He took over this operation from his father and I believe his son will look forward to taking over this family operation. I say this merely to point out that this case does not involve an overnight introduction of sheep ranching into the area but indeed an operation that has lasted for three generations.

This distraught sheep rancher came to me to say that the production costs of raising sheep on his ranch were far higher than the prices he was receiving for his animals. In short, he was saying that it is no longer profitable to run a sheep ranch in central British Columbia, no matter what the size of the ranch. Furthermore, he was using the most modern methods and sophisticated management techniques. He suggested that three generations of sheep ranching was about to end unless the federal Government could assist him. He asked if I believed that the federal Government could assist him by implementing measures to assist the farm sector in a real way. I am always honest with my constituents and therefore had to answer no. While I hope the federal Government would do so, it was my honest opinion, based on information I had at the time, that it likely would not. Of course, this was not encouraging to my constituent.

Later that week I talked to some 40 cattlemen in my constituency. They also told me that their cost of producing cattle was higher than the prices they were receiving and therefore they could not continue any longer. It is impossible in a cattle ranching area of western Canada to continue such an operation, despite the most modern equipment and sophisticated management techniques. These are very learned food producers who simply cannot continue without some support from the Government.

They told me that they had heard of a proposed red meat stabilization bill and asked if such a bill would solve the problem. I said that it would not solve the problem because if such a bill were passed the price that beef producers would obtain would be an average of the prices which I have just stated are too low to cover the costs.

Until the Government recognizes the value of the family farm in agriculture and that those people must obtain a fair price that is reflected in the cost of their operation, we will not have family farm operations in Canada. It will be replaced by agri-business and corporations. A very efficient way of food production will be removed from the agricultural landscape of Canada.

I met another individual in my riding who, along with others, was introducing a rabbit operation; they would raise rabbits, slaughter and sell them. He asked me if there was any federal support for such a venture and I advised him that he could receive assistance through the IRDP. He indicated that those running the IRDP were not interested in supporting such a venture. They did not have any faith in this type of food production and would not provide assistance. This is another clear signal that people in my constituency are receiving from the federal Government.

I was also approached by a number of people who were becoming involved in the potato producing sector. They had approached the federal Government for assistance in developing a processing storage facility. They were simply asking for assistance to begin operations and were quite prepared to repay the loan. However, when they made their inquiries to the various Departments there was no money for this type of development.

I am beginning to sound like a broken record, but the point is that after all the assurances from the new Government, food producers in my constituency are telling me they cannot make a living and continue their operations. I think these human stories and tragedies that are unfolding speak for themselves.

I am asking Government Members to take these concerns seriously because there is a sense of disappointment in our constituencies. On behalf of our constituents in the food producing sector, we are appealing to the Government to introduce policies that will enable agriculture to continue in this country in a viable way.

During the election, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said in my constituency that his Party had a whole set of solutions to agricultural problems. Agri-bonds was one solution, but these will not be introduced any longer. The Conservative Party said it would change the tax laws to allow many deductions that are not presently available. However, there is no indication that this will happen.

The Conservatives said they would bring in legislation, such as the United States Farm Home Administration Program, that will allow people to deal with these large debts they have accumulated. We have heard no discussion about such a proposal.

The Government said it could introduce a bill immediately that would assist hard pressed farmers and ranchers. It is called the Farm Creditors Arrangements Act. That legislation has been left off the list.

There has been no indication that the Government appreciates the plight of the agricultural sector. As a matter of fact, in many cases the Government is turning its back on food producers of this country.

We heard the Minister of International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) stand in his place today and allude to the fact that the Government had a great idea that would allow tens of millions of pounds of heavily subsidized beef from Europe to be imported into the country in order to undersell all the Canadian beef producers. That is almost as ludicrous as when the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), talking about industrial policy, announced that he had great news for the House. He said that Mitel, a world leader in telecommunications technology and the second largest telecommunications company in Canada that is extremely well respected on the international stage would be sold to a foreign company. All the Members on the Government side applauded for some 15 or 20 seconds at this good news. It is a pathetic day when Parliament applauds the Minister responsible for developing industry in this country for saying the best news he has is that one of our best companies has been sold to a foreigner, and that technology that we as taxpayers—tens of millions of dollars by the way—will now be drained out of the country and taken advantage of by a foreign corporation. That is the good news. If that is the good news, Mr. Speaker, what on earth is the bad news we are about to receive as people warn us of the up-coming Budget.

• (1740)

This motion before us today suggests that we ought to condemn the Government because a number of its policies regarding Crown corporations have not been developed properly. I listened to the Hon. Member across the way talking about things the Government has done to assist the food producers. There is one Bill I am waiting to receive in the House of Commons and to hear Members opposite debate it; that is the Bill to do away with Canagrex. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) said: "Listen, at a time when we are trying to expand into new markets and trying to provide economic opportunities for our food producers to sell their wares overseas, we have a good idea. We are going to scrap the Crown corporation that does this". Again there was some applause on the Government benches when the Minister stated that Canagrex is history now.

In the first few months Canagrex operated millions and millions of dollars of sales were organized overseas to assist our farmers. I asked the Parliamentary Secretary about it. Here was a Crown corporation set up to assist the farmers in Quebec, Ontario, in western and eastern Canada and it was doing an excellent job. I have not read a single report that said Canagrex was not performing beyong the wildest expectations that people had for that Crown corporation. But the Government is going to torpedo it and wrap it up. As a matter of fact, the Government already has.

When you consider what is going on today, Mr. Speaker, and when we hear from the Government that it has done certain things to assist farmers, let us recognize that the situation in the country is growing worse. Let us measure what is going on in terms of farm bankruptcies, and I am not certain this is the most appropriate way to measure the health of the agricultural sector, but it must be one way. When you look at the record going back to 1979, there were 125 farm bankruptcies in Canada. In 1980 there were 222; in 1981 there were 261; in 1982 there were 410; in 1983 there were 488; and in 1984 there were 551. In 1985, if you extrapolate the number we have today, there are over 600. Over the last five years, in every single year farm bankruptcies have increased in the country. This is surely only a tip of the iceberg when you consider all of those people who are walking away from their farms, price collapses and so on.

Look at the debt the farm community was facing in 1979. Total farm debt was $14.6 billion at an average interest rate of 11.6 per cent. In 1981 that amount had increased to $18.5 billion with an interest rate of 15.46 per cent. Today farm debt is in excess of $20 billion and increasing. I do not know how you would measure the health of the agricultural sector of our country. The only way we have before us would indicate that things are deteriorating and the situation is worsening. Now is the time to call for extraordinary measures on behalf of the federal Government to show the leadership necessary to provide an environment for this sector to develop properly.

What can be done? I listened to the Hon. Member with all due respect—I mean that—when he talked about Farm Credit, the tinkering and how this was helping farmers. The number of farmers that were helped is minuscule and the way they were helped by lowering debt a couple of percentage points is hardly the kind of leadership we were expecting from the Government. I think the tinkering and adjusting of the Farm Credit rate is at best a good joke. It is no solution.

What we need to do is look to our financial institutions. On November 7 last year I remember opening up The Globe and Mail and finding on one side this great, huge headline, "Financial Woes Assail Farmers". That is expected under present conditions. On the other page of The Globe and Mail it said, "Bank Profits in Canada the World's best". While the farmers of this country were literally being driven to their knees, the banks of Canada were identified as the most profitable banks in the entire world. Therein lies part of the problem. It is time we looked to our bankers and said, it is time they shared in this dilemma. Why are their profits up substantially while the farming sector is being crushed as a result of these high interest rates? Some of the European countries asked their banking communities to recognize the value of the family farm. They said to them, why not have interest rates for 25 years at say 8 per cent for the family farm?

Mr. Nickerson: Who is going to pay for it?

Mr. Riis: The Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) just said: "Who is going to pay for it?" I will tell you who is going to pay for it, Mr. Speaker. The banks will. Because their profits have been some of the strongest in history, and because the Canadian interest rate spread is the largest and widest in the world, I think it is time Members of Parliament, including the nice fellow from Western Arctic, asked themselves why Canada has to tolerate the widest interest rate spread in the world. We go on to ask, is what is good for the banks good for everybody? It is not, Mr. Speaker. It is certainly not good for the farmers. I think it is time for the banks to carry their share of business and to stop foreclosing prematurely on some of these ranches and farmers as they struggle back into position.

How can this be done, Mr. Speaker? If the Government across the way had the guts and the commitment to help, farmers having difficulties in whatever part of Canada, it would introduce right now the Farm Creditors Arrangement Act 1985 which would allow relief to those hard-pressed farmers. When people ask, what can we do, that is one thing. We can look to the banks and expect them to share. We can introduce measures such as the Farm Creditors Arrangement Act that was introduced in the late 1930s and 1940s. It helped a lot of farmers at that time. Or we can look to our colleagues in the United States, in particular, the United States Farmers Home Administration. We could say that we will set aside without interest for five years as much as 25 per cent of debt owed by farmers in distress up to a maximum of $200,000; that the private lender is willing to write down a portion of loans, and to reschedule repayment obligations one could apply to the FHA for a guarantee of the remaining outstanding debt of up to $400,000 for operating credit and $300,000 for real estate.

This is not a radical program. This is in place in the United States. Again as an example of what can be done, there it is. There are many things that can be done. I refer to the work done by the National Farmers' Union in the last few weeks as they have been visiting the various caucuses, laying out a variety of proposals that would assist the farm sector.

In closing I want to say that I do hope the Government gives some consideration to the point in this motion we are debating today on decentralization. Decentralization is an opportunity for Canadians in their own communities to solve their own problems. There is a great deal of interest in the idea of people getting on to solve their own difficulties and not waiting for the Government or for large corporations to do it, particularly foreign corporations. What about giving people an opportunity? We could assist local areas to develop food processing plants, assist in the development of food storage facilities and so on to allow potential food producers to develop lands that are presently not in development. Again, there are a variety of things the Government can do. Let us hope it has heard the points made today, and that a week from Thursday when the Budget is introduced all of these suggestions are included therein.

• (1750)

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais).

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I heard the Hon. Member talk of the tip of the iceberg referring to farm bankruptcies. If this is the tip of the iceberg, I think that the bottom of the iceberg would be to have an NDP government in office in Canada. Such is not the case, and I hope it never is.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that we agree to listen to the opinions of the Canadian people and of the Opposition on the problems we face in agriculture, but we had to wait for almost half an hour this afternoon for a single Opposition member to show up so that the Standing Committee on Agriculture could sit to study credits earmarked for agriculture, and officials from everywhere were kept waiting. It is not serious, Mr. Speaker. It is not serious. When the time comes to put forward your opinions on budgetary matters, as you have a right to do, you should do it then.

Mr. Speaker, since Canagrex was mentioned earlier, I want to say that a decision has been made by the Government and that investments as well as Canadian initiatives abroad have continued. When a Crown Corporation is done away with, the NPD obviously . . . It is difficult for a socialist party to accept the possibility that a Crown Corporation might disappear.

However, when you try to make the budget work, the economic situation—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Blais: Don't I have ten minutes to answer, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Standing Orders provide for a brief question or comment, as is the case during Question Period.

Mr. Blais: It was brief, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, in responding to a question or a peculiar statement—one of the two—in order to allow my colleague to end the debate which his Party sponsored today, I will keep my answer very brief. If the Hon. Members wants to put up the farm sector policies of countries that have been led by social democratic Governments—every one of those countries—which are extremely viable, I will put them up against the Canadian experience any day of the week.

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, in closing the debate today on this motion, I want to pay particular attention to that part concerning the activity or lack of activity of Crown corporations, and the role they can play in re-energizing the Canadian economy. I make mention of Canadian National and a number of its subsidiaries, whether it be CN Marine, Ports Canada or a host of other subsidiaries. I bring to the attention of the House that the role that these Crown corporations are playing or not playing is crucial to the poorer regions of this country.

I made mention before, as did the Hon. Member for South West Nova (Mr. Comeau), of the cut-backs in ferry service by the Bluenose from Yarmouth to Bar Harbour. Members on the government side, particularly the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), find this to be no big deal. However, in that area of the country, particularly in that area of the Province of Nova Scotia, it is a very serious matter. In fact, the Premier of our province travelled to Ottawa to speak specifically to the Minister of Transport about this very important issue.

This gives ample evidence that this Government in its so-called desire to create economic wealth in this country has allowed these Crown corporations to abandon the responsibilities to those areas of the country which are perhaps in greatest need. The stalling tactics of the Minister of Transport to give us a positive decision with regard to changing that policy in Yarmouth is absolutely appalling to the people of Nova Scotia. It is a repudiation of the provincial Government, the provincial Tory MLAs, and certainly a repudiation and a shot in the face to the Hon. Member for South West Nova who has been attempting, as I have, to have this ferry service restored.

Another issue of great concern, which I believe the Opposition motion covers quite well, is the request made by the Maritime Farmers' Council. The Minister responsible sat in his office and received briefs, delegations and representations from the provincial Premiers and Members of Parliament on all sides. He has elected to do nothing for the maritimes farmers. The request for emergency funding in the amount of $9 million has not even been answered.

The list goes on. It does not stop there. We recently heard that the European Economic Community may take action in terms of imports of various goods. This Minister has refused to send able negotiators there to represent the best interests of Canada. The beef industry is allegedly going to receive a slap in the face. Further importation of beef will be allowed into the Canadian market. I realize that some tough stands have to be made in order to represent Canadian interests. I find the stalling tactics used by the various Ministers not to be acting in the best interests of the Canadian economy.

What about Canagrex? That Crown corporation was set up to benefit the farming community in this country. Without any consultation whatsoever it was slashed. The operative word during the Throne Speech was "consultation". We found that the substance contained in the economic statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in November 1984 was not "consultation", but "cut, cut, cut". Canagrex has gone. So much for assisting the farming community in Canada.

The New Democratic Party Member referred to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion as the optimist. He stood in his place today and bragged about the agreements he had concluded with provincial Governments. I think he referred to 19 agreements. He failed to mention that the ones that he concluded in Newfoundland were concluded during the provincial election. Most of the background of those agreements was well in place before this Government took office.

The Minister bragged about the agreements he has signed in Nova Scotia. The Minister of State for Tourism (Mr. McMillan) is travelling across this country seeking greater input from Canadians with regard to tourism and additional moneys from the Canadian Government to further the aims of his portfolio. He finds that they have given a meagre $14 million to an entire province for tourism. I say shame! That will not cover one region of the Province of Nova Scotia.

The Minister failed to mention in any debate the agreements that he has not concluded with provincial Governments. This Minister is dragging his feet with regard to the SYSCO modernization plans, an agreement concluded in writing by the provincial Government of Nova Scotia and the Government of Canada. The Minister responsible is refusing to live up to his part of the agreement. The rationale has never been explained in this House or to the Canadian people. We only hear the Minister say they might review it, or they are going to review it. Meanwhile, hundreds of jobs are being put in jeopardy.

• (1800)

I could go on, but let me conclude with two points regarding decentralization. The decentralization of offices and services from areas which do not really need them to other areas of this country has been terminated by the Government. Of course, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation is an economic tool that the Government ought to utilize for the benefit of all Canadians. We are seeing the complete opposite. The Government is trying to wind down the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. I believe that the motion put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), is right both in its spirit and its substance.

Mr. Speaker: It being six o'clock p.m., it is my duty to inform the House that, pursuant to Standing Order 62(11), proceedings on the motion have expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT—NOVA SCOTIA-CAPE BRETON COAL RESOURCES. (B) FEDERAL FUNDING

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I put a question to the Minsiter of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) on May 8, and I was somewhat surprised by his answer. He said that money was approved for the further opening of a tunnel at the Donkin Mine. Since that time, statements have been made by the Chairman of the Board of the Cape Breton Development Corporation, as well as by the President, indicating that no money has been approved. The press secretary to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is not aware of any money being approved for the opening of new tunnels to new coal mines in Cape Breton. There has been absolutely no such approval. Such a request is before the Treasury Board in Cabinet, but the Minister quite conveniently said to the House, and to you, Sir, that the expenditure of this money had been approved. I am not suggesting that the Minister intentionally misled the House, but there are certainly some very strong arguments to suggest that one could conclude that that happened.

Notwithstanding the Minsiter's comments, I am afraid that his answer is not satisfactory. We in industrial Cape Breton want a clear commitment on the part of the Government of Canada with regard to new and expanded coal developments in that area of Canada. I remind the Parliamentary Secretary that the energy policy, both in spririt and in substance, is based primarily upon the utilization of Cape Breton coal. That is the fundamental policy thurst of the Conservative Government of Nova Soctia.

The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has an obligation to the provincial Government of Nova Scotia. He has an obligation to those coal mining communities that depend in large part on the viability and future of those coal mines for jobs, for economic wealth and for job opportunities for their families. For the Minister to give no commitment to the Nova Scotia Government and the people of that area is, in my view, and abdication of his responsibilities as a Minister of the Crown, and it is an outright repudiation of a Tory Premier, John Buchanan.

Before a large audience in industrial Cape Breton the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) clearly spelled out that he was committed to coal and steel. I suggest that when commitments are made by politicians, particularly those who go on to become the Prime Minister of Canada, they ought to be lived up to. This Prime Minister is allowing his Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to allow a particular resource industry in my province to go on without a firm commitment from the Government of Canada.

• (1805)

It is fine and dandy for the Minister to tell us that Devco has made a profit for the first time in "X" number of years. But, the fact is that the Minister had nothing to do with that. The present President had nothing to do with that. It was well in place before the Government assumed power. It is an irrelevant point. It is particularly odd that the Minister stood in his place and told us that Devco had made a profit, but could not tell us what the profit was because the statements had not been audited. I find that very misleading; or, I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that it could be argued as being misleading.

Why does the Minister not come clean and tell us the answers? I will tell the House why. It is because this Government has said no to the Government of Nova Scotia with regard to future coal developments on the Island of Cape Breton. The Government has said no to the mining communities in those areas. It will not put additional moneys into the coal industry. The Government will flirt with some research moneys, but it will not continue assisting with new coal developments in Cape Breton.

The Minister said that the company has broken a promise. A total of 1,200 miners are walking the street as a result of the lack of commitment by the national Government. It is not only unfair in terms of regional development policy, it flies in the face of everything which the Prime Minister has allegedly tried to do in terms of co-operation with both levels of Government. It is not going ahead.

Two things could have happened. The Government of Nova Scotia could have backed off on its request for additional moneys for coal development in Glace Bay—and I would like to hear the Parliamentary Secretary zero in on that—or the Prime Minister could have given a directive to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to change the mandate of the Cape Breton Development Corporation, and to run it like a business, because the Government would not provide further dollars for coal developments. I say that is a sick energy policy by a sick Minister, with a sick Prime Minister and a sick Government.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, with the same aggressive tone used by the Member of the Opposition, I would like to refer him first to the answer given by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to his question last May 8. Had he been here, he could also have heard the position of the Minister and the Government during the allotted day of May 3 and today. I think he would have had some of the answers.

[English]

Mr. Dingwall: I was here. Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry but we do not generally hear points of order during the Adjournment Debate. In order to allow everyone to have their time, we do not allow points of order.

[Translation]

Mrs. B. Tardif: I think you could at least have listened to what the Minister said today and last May 3 as well.

When it comes to federal-provincial co-operation, it is a fact indeed that co-operation between this Government and the provinces, including Nova Scotia did improve.

Last April 30, the Minister of Energy and Mines of Nova Scotia, the president of the Cape Breton Development Corporation and the new chairman of the board of the corporation got together to discuss mining development projects, the corporation's production and the market outlook.

Mr. Matheson stated that better corporation management had put Nova Scotia's coal industry in a better position than it had known for years. He was pleased to learn that production and productivity have improved at Lingan Mine and Prince Mine. The unions full co-operation was an important factor. Mr. Matheson also welcomed the fact that coal production facilities will be able to meet the increasing needs of the Nova Scotia Power Corporation.

This press release shows evidence of the co-operation that exists between the federal government and the Government of Nova Scotia concerning coal and energy policies, and the development of coal resources in the province. Besides it was agreed that the Cape Breton Development Corporation and the Nova Scotia government would meet on a quarterly basis to discuss matters related to this industry.

As was mentioned by the opposition member, the profits of the Corporation are under review. The financial data for the current fiscal year are being gathered and examined by external auditors.

For the preceding fiscal year, ending on March 31, 1984, the Corporation had declared $49.6 million in operating losses. The Corporation intends to allocate 10 per cent of its operating profits to its Coal Division employees.

• (1810)

[English]

SOCIAL SECURITY—CHILD TAX CREDIT—TREATMENT IN NEWFOUNDLAND. (B) REQUEST FOR LEGISLATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) is not in the House today—

Mr. Lewis: That's a cheap shot.

Ms. Copps: It is clear from the comments of my colleague from Nova Scotia that this Government is ignoring eastern Canada. That is one of the reasons for my request tonight to speak on the issue of the refusal of the Minister to act on the Newfoundland Government's total abuse of the tax credit system as it affects single parents, particularly those people who need the money the most.

You will no doubt recall, Mr. Speaker, that Hon. Members on this side of the House were incensed to discover that the Government of Newfoundland was using the federal tax credits to gouge money from single parents; people like Shirley Parsons who could not even pay her electric bill because the money she was receiving as a single parent was insufficient. She went to the welfare department to ask for help. This was not a lolly-gagging layabout. This woman had a part-time job and she was seeking full-time employment in a province where the level of unemployment is higher than anywhere in Canada. She was supporting a family and she needed some help with her electric bill. Before the Newfoundland Government would give her help to pay the bill for the utility, which is in fact contracted for by the Newfoundland Government, it forced her to sign a statement to the effect that she would turn over her federal child tax credit to the Government.

When we raised this issue in the House, the federal Minister of National Health and Welfare denied any knowledge of such a request. He denied any knowledge of the fact that the Newfoundland Government was intent on squeezing blood from a stone. The Minister, instead of embarking on a nationwide study to see whether this type of practice is being followed by other provinces, washed his hands of the whole situation and said it did not exist.

I will tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the Newfoundland Government could not take the political heat, and in the few days leading up to the elections in Newfoundland it went to Mrs. Parsons and said, "We will pay your heating bill. We will pay you everything as long as you keep your mouth shut". But I must say that this woman had the courage of her convictions. She laid it out before the public. She told the Newfoundland Government that she was not speaking just on her own behalf, but on behalf of literally thousands of other people, primarily women and single parents, who find themselves in the position of being unable to pay the exorbitant charges inflicted on them by the Newfoundland Power and Light Company.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, the federal Minister chose to ignore his responsibility to ensure that the child tax credits are not used by provincial Governments to extract dollars from single parents and needy individuals. The purpose of the child tax credit from the very beginning was to assist those people who need help the most. It is clear that the Newfoundland Government's policy, which was stated in documents distributed in welfare offices across the province, was a clear violation of the spirit of the child tax credit as enacted by former Liberal federal Governments.

● (1815)

Notwithstanding the statement by the Minister of National Health and Welfare about how they were going to preserve universality, preserve the child tax credit, did he use this opportunity to send a clear message to the provinces? Did he use this opportunity to say no, you are not going to touch that money because it belongs to Shirley Parsons and all of those single parents who are out there struggling to make ends meet? Did he lay down the law and tell Brian Peckford and the Newfoundland Conservatives that they were not going to pay the provincial heating bills on the backs of poor single parents? No, he washed his hands of the issue and said it was not his fault, it was the fault of the Newfoundland Government, or it is a misunderstanding. Who cares that hundreds if not thousands of single parents are being gouged for their electrical bills.

In the same manner the Minister has washed his hands of the medical crisis in British Columbia. When confronted with a clear and present violation of the Canada Health Act, did the Minister fight for the rights of Canadians, as did the former Minister, Monique Bégin? Did the Minister go to the Government of British Columbia and say, Bill C-50 is a travesty, a violation of the Canada Health Act? Did he say that Bill C-50 must be nipped in the bud? No, Mr. Speaker, the Social Credit, cum Progressive Conservative Government in British Columbia, was aided and abetted by the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who has known about this violation of the Canada Health Act for months but has chosen to wash his hands of the issue because he does not have the political guts to go to his colleagues in the provinces and say that this Government is committed to ensuring accessibility under the Canada Health Act; this Government is committed to ensuring accessibility to the child tax credit for all those who need it.

No, Mr. Speaker, when push comes to shove this Government is prepared to kneel and bow and scrape to those provincial Governments who would utilize mechanisms like the child tax credit and the Canada Health Act for their own gain.

This Party introduced the child tax credit and the Canada Health Act, and we are going to fight for Canadians, a job which is not being done by this current Progressive Conservative Government.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Hamilton-East (Ms. Copps) asked the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) about the situation in Newfoundland where people were required to sign over their child tax credit before they could get any help from the Department of Social Services to pay their heating bills.

The Minister answered that officials in his Department had spoken with officials of the Newfoundland Government who had stated very clearly that it was not government policy to ask people to sign over their child tax credit before they could get any financial help. The provincial officials stated that the form signed by Shirley Parsons had never been approved by the Department of Social Services. They regretted what had happened to Mrs. Parsons and informed the officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare that she would get the financial assistance needed to pay her heating bill without signing over her child tax credit.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read now a Telex sent to the Minister of National Health and Welfare by the Hon. R. C. Brett, Minister of Social Services in Newfoundland:

[English]

This will serve to confirm information provided by my officials during the past few days that it is not the policy of the Newfoundland Department of Social Services to require or request assignments to the Department of Child Tax Credit payments for any purpose. Unfortunately this did occur in error in a very small number of cases. The matter has been corrected and the practice discontinued. The clients concerned have been notified accordingly.

We regret this occurrence and any difficulty this may have caused you.

[Translation]

This convinced the Minister of National Health and Welfare, Mr. Speaker, and should convince all Members that the Newfoundland Government does not require that people sign over their child tax credit before they can receive help.

I want to assure the Hon. Member for Hamilton-East (Ms. Copps) and all the Members, that Newfoundland abides by the terms of the agreement signed with the Federal Government under the Public Assistance Act. I would like to add that the federal Government does not require that the Child Tax Credit be considered as income when determining eligibility to provincial social assistance, and all provinces exclude it totally in their social programs.

● (1820)

PUBLIC SERVICE—FEDERAL UNIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION. (B) PENSION NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the subject this evening is Public Service pensions and the promise made by this Government to maintain indexing for the pensions for which public servants have paid premiums and to which they are entitled.

The House will recall that I asked the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), following his statement in the House, to table the so-called agreements he signed with the two largest unions, and I am referring to the Public Service Alliance and the Professional Institute. The President of the Treasury Board refused to do so at the time, saying that if we wanted information, we would have to see the unions, that everything was confidential, and that for the time being it was impossible to judge whether or not there was a good case for settling a problem that has been with us for a long time, that is, four or five very controversial points, including the indexing of pensions.

A few minutes ago, when I was listening to the other speech, at the same time—in the House it becomes second nature—I was reading over a speech I made on December 7, 1982 on the same subject, namely, Bill C-133, which I feel destroyed the indexing of Public Service pensions forever by setting the maximum allowable indexing at 6.5 per cent for one year and 5.5 per cent the following year.

Mr. Speaker, at the time I objected strenuously to this measure, but the fact is that the measure was adopted and I think this injustice should be dealt with very shortly. We were led to believe that an agreement had been reached, that public servants, through their union, had agreed to a remedy and had ratified an agreement they were to submit to management and which would subsequently be ratified by the public servants themselves.

Mr. Speaker, on May 10, after a series of misunderstandings and comments on both sides, both in the press and by spokesmen, by people who we assumed were knowledgeable, we had a rather serious problem, namely, that the unions were saying that what the Minister had read and their interpretation were not the same thing. With respect to pensions, the Minister had said: Unlimited indexing is finished. We are not going to talk about it anymore. We are now going to have an adjustment formula, which I will explain later on, and that is it. He also said: The right to strike was let go in favour of an agreement on other items that were more likely to meet with the general approval of union members. In other words, the right to strike was dropped. The union presidents denied they had dropped the right to strike. They also denied they had agreed to a non-indexed pension plan. In any case, all this created a wave of protest in the press and the media, and finally, last week on May 10, I asked the Minister: Listen, could you put an end to all these misunderstandings and table the agreements in the House? The President of the Treasury Board agreed to do so, and Hon. Members were able to see that quite obviously, the agreements were not what we expected from this Government, which was a settlement that would deal, after so many years, with a problem of major concern to us, and I am referring to pension indexing.

Mr. Speaker, in the few minutes I have left, I would like to comment on this very important subject of pensions. In the memorandum of agreement signed, as far as I know, by Mr. Donegani for the Professional Institute and by Mr. D. Bean for the Public Service Alliance, it says very clearly:

> Premium rates will be set at a level commensurate with the cost of current benefits under the base plan and with the ability to provide full protection against inflation if the economic assumptions on which these rates are based are realized.

Mr. Speaker, that means that the committee will be chaired by an individual allegedly independent of the minister, but who will be nonetheless responsible to him, and who will try to anticipate economic assumptions on inflation interest rates. The system will be based on those factors. How will they manage when, for years, we have been unable to do so with the assistance of so-called professional actuaries, I do not know.

Anyway, here is clause 4 of the agreement:

> It is agreed that the present commitment to unlimited indexation will be repealed.

It is clear. For my part, it is the crux of this issue. The unlimited indexation is being repealed.

> No. 6. The real level of protection against inflation provided to present and future pensioners will be based on the revenues of the pension fund and determined by the president of the Treasury Board on the recommendations of the management committee.

Whom will the advisory committee advise? The President of the Treasury Board, who will have the final word. This means, Mr. Speaker, that instead of saying: Listen, this thing has been going on for years, it is difficult to explain it, is quite complex and we will start over, both plans are put together. The indexation plan and the pension plan will be placed in a common fund which will be used to purchase long-term bonds bearing current interest and it will be jointly managed not only by the present public servants but also by the 30,000 pensioners who will have their say in the administration of their pension plan.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to end my brief comments this evening by stating that I feel that pension indexation should be maintained. We should be able to negotiate. The minister told us: yes, the door is open, come and see me. However, it is the minister who should act and invite the retired public servants to call at his office to negotiate an agreement which I hope will be approved by all and will put an end to a debate which has been going on for 17 years. It would also end the injustice of constantly questioning the future of our pensioners, their means of living, which they have dearly earned.

• (1825)

[English]

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to respond to my Hon. colleague's remarks. I well remember his embarrassment during the six and five debate when he was completely abandoned by the Liberal Party and had to face his constituents. It was very embarrassing for the Member and I appreciate his efforts to try to regain lost ground.

Last Friday, the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) indicated a willingness to meet with the union representatives and discuss, further, pension plan reforms and the shape of a new dental plan. I am sure the Hon. Member appreciates that this is one more indication of our willingness as a Government to sit down and consult. I am sure the Hon.

Member realizes, as his constituents must be telling him, that there is a much better tone and atmosphere with respect to employer-employee relations under the Conservative Government than that which existed under the previous Liberal Government. Although the Hon. Member cannot admit that because of Party solidarity, he would admit that privately.

On April 17, the President of the Treasury Board, in all good faith, outlined a series of understandings that had been reached, through bargaining on both sides, with the unions representing the Public Service employees. Understandings in principle are worked out and have to be taken back to both sides. They provide a framework within which the specifics can be worked out. They anticipate flexibility, compromise on the details, and most of all they reflect an appreciation that there must be continuing consultation.

I am sure I speak for Members of all Parties when I say we regret the events of last week, but we as a Government do not for a minute abandon our hope for continuing constructive joint consultation on the issue of pension reform and a dental plan. Both of these subjects are of importance to present employees. The pension arrangements are naturally important to present employees and retired employees. We see a need to continue these consultations, and I regret that because of the time limit I do not have the opportunity to expand upon these remarks and reply further to my hon. colleague's question.

I wish to thank the House for this opportunity, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The motion to adjourn is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 6.32 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, May 15, 1985

The House met at 2 p.m.

• (1405)

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION

SOCIAL HOUSING IN ST. JOHN'S, NFLD.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring to the attention of the House the situation in the Province of Newfoundland with respect to the reductions which have been made by the Minister responsible for CMHC in social housing and special housing in that province.

Yesterday I received a copy of correspondence which was sent to the Minister from the Community Housing and Support Services Council of St. John's, from the Executive Director, Mrs. Penny Rowe. Mrs. Rowe pointed out that the reduction in social housing units in St. John's this year has reached the 67 per cent mark. She further pointed out to the Minister that there has been absolutely no allocation this year in the Province of Newfoundland for special purposes housing.

One has to recognize that while the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) only a few days ago was celebrating the fact that unemployment had gone down in Canada, in the Province of Newfoundland unemployment went up by 2.3 per cent. In the city of St. John's, and indeed, in the entire Province of Newfoundland, there are many applications before CMHC to provide housing for battered women, children with special needs, and nursing facilities. Because the special funding is totally absent this year, the start-up funds will not be available to allow applications to proceed for those very worth-while and necessary projects.

The people of Newfoundland are extremely upset—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

HOUSING

REDEVELOPMENT OF RAILWAY LANDS IN TORONTO

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, for years the people of Toronto have been trying to find or create affordable housing against a vacancy rate of less than 1 per cent and run-away inflation of land prices.

Some years ago Toronto City Council began to plan a redevelopment of the huge railway yards near the waterfront; office towers near Yonge Street, and housing at the other end of the city, east and west of Spadina. All types of housing were planned, including rental, privately and individually owned, co-op, non-profit, singles housing, family units, assisted and market housing. The planning also included schools, community centres, work-places, and parks.

Now a bunch of tycoons are trying to destroy those plans. Canadian National, Imperial Oil, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Coca Cola, Hiram Walker, McDonald's, Labatt's, and Olympia-York are using the Dome Stadium as bait. They are using free railway land, and mainly taxpayers' money. Through Canadian National, the Metro Council, and the Ontario provincial Government, they plan to redevelop the whole 75 acres as commercial land. That will wipe out the possibility of housing. It will also restart the Spadina Expressway from the south, which will destroy established residential neighbourhoods from Queen Street to Eglinton Avenue.

I call on the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to halt this give-away of public land by the CN for the purpose of private profit, and to ensure that the public land is used for housing, recreation, and the needs of ordinary Canadians.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—PLIGHT OF ANATOLY SHCHARANSKY

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, today approximately 70 members from the Beth Tikvah Synagogue of Willowdale, Ontario, tried to contact the Ambassador of the U.S.S.R. to Canada, to discuss the extraordinary case of Anatoly Shcharansky. Avitali Shcharansky, his wife, was also present.

Mr. Shcharansky epitomizes the struggle of Soviet Jewry and the pain and anguish of refusniks. The Shcharanskys' marriage was only 12 hours old when Avitali was given a visa and told to leave Russia. Mr. Shcharansky was arrested on March 15, 1977, and held incommunicado for 16 months. He was tried in 1978 and sentenced to 13 years.

What was his crime? Mr. Shcharansky simply chose to help organize a group of people who wanted to ensure that Russia abided by the Helsinki Accords which were signed in 1975.

The world was once again vividly reminded of Mr. Shcharansky's plight when he endured a four-month hunger strike in 1982. He won that battle and was finally allowed to receive visitors and mail.

This is not just a struggle to free one more political prisoner; it is a struggle for fundamental human rights. Members attending the Human Rights Experts Conference here in Ottawa need to be strongly reminded of Anatoly's struggle.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

VICTORIA DAY

REASONS FOR COMMEMORATION

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remind the House of some very important dates in the history of Canada.

May 20 is Victoria Day. That date is more than simply a weekday departure from the work-place. That holiday commemorates the birth of Queen Victoria, daughter of Edward, who was the son of George III.

Victoria ascended the throne in 1837 and reigned 63 years. She died at the age of 81 in the year 1901.

It was during her reign that a very special country was born in North America. The breath of life was given to Canada, transforming a British colony into a productive and powerful country.

Since that time the Royal Family has retained the respect and admiration of the people of Canada and countries around the world.

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, who was born on April 21, will formally celebrate her birth date on June 15 this year. According to tradition, her subjects will join in the festivities led by the Trooping of the Colour. That fabulous military parade constitutes one of the high spots of spring in England.

Canada's love for the Queen was much in evidence during her visit here last year from September 24 to October 7. From the bottom of our hearts, may we all say to her: "God save the Queen!"

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

TRADE

BLUEBERRY EXPORTS TO EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I was pleased to learn today that the Government has reached a tentative agreement with the European Economic Community with respect to the proposed tariff on Nova Scotia blueberries. That is very welcome news.

The blueberry industry in Nova Scotia is one of the brightest spots for employment in that province. The industry grows $15 million to $20 million worth of blueberries annually. There are at the present time some 1,000 or more blueberry growers in the Province of Nova Scotia who employ approximately 800 full-time workers and 4,000 seasonal workers each year.

● (1410)

In March of this year the various states within the European Economic Community announced they would be imposing a new 25 per cent tariff on Canadian blueberries. This proposed tariff would pose a very real threat to the industry in Nova Scotia. The European market is, after all, the single largest importer of Nova Scotia blueberries.

I think it is obvious, Mr. Speaker, that the Government cannot afford to protect one industry at the expense of another. I call upon members of the Government to ensure that this tentative agreement is ratified as expeditiously as possible, because the Province of Nova Scotia cannot afford to lose any of the economic benefits which are associated with the blueberry industry, not only in mainland Nova Scotia but also in the Highlands of Cape Breton Island.

* * *

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

REMUNERATION—OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED INCREASES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, as Hon. Members of the House are aware, it has been proposed that salaries and benefits of Members of Parliament be improved. As chairperson of the New Democratic Party caucus, I wish to inform the House, and all Canadians, that we do not share the conclusions of the task force report. It is our view that Members of Parliament are already adequately compensated—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: —and, indeed, at a time when so many Canadians are unemployed and waiting for the Government to take constructive steps to improve the Canadian economy, it would be misguided and inappropriate to put the salaries of Members of Parliament on the government agenda. The priority of the Conservative Government should be to put Canada's unemployed back to work, and it should review the tax system which allows thousands of wealthy Canadians to avoid paying income tax, which results in an increased tax burden on an overwhelming number of Canadian taxpayers.

* * *

[Translation]

EMPLOYMENT

DESBIENS (QUEBEC)—REOPENING OF ST-RAYMOND PAPER MILL

Mr. Jean-Pierre Blackburn (Jonquière): Mr. Speaker, today, speaking on behalf of the regional Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean caucus and its constituents, I would like to congratulate and thank the Hon. Member for Roberval (Mr. Bouchard) and Minister of State (Transport), who was intrumental in re-opening the St-Raymond paper plant in Desbiens.

Mr. Speaker, since last Sunday, Desbiens has been in a state of euphoria now there is hope once again for all those people who were laid off for 42 months. The day after the election the four Members from the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area made the Desbiens dossier one of their regional priorities. Desbiens became a symbol for the region, and following the regional economic summit, we agreed to do everything in our power to help the people of Desbiens regain their dignity as workers.

Thanks to the work done by our Minister of State (Transport), our Government will be providing more than $4 million, in addition to a substantial tax credit, to help the plant get started again this summer. Quebec and the company that owns the plant are also doing their share.

Mr. Speaker, once again I want to say that our colleague deserves to be congratulated for successfully managing this very difficult dossier, unusually so within the present context, with the result that the people of Desbiens in the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area can start to live again.

* * *

[English]

BROADCASTING

COMPOSITION OF POLICY TASK FORCE

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, a week ago the Minister of Communications announced the appointment of a seven-person task force to review the Canadian broadcasting system, the first such review in 17 years. In line with this Government's commitment to appoint people of merit to key policy positions, all but one of the appointments are non-partisan or contra-partisan.

Next Tuesday the Caplan-Sauvageau task force will begin its work. By early 1986 it is to make recommendations to the Minister on the following points: appropriate public policy objectives, cultural and economic, of our unique mixed system into the 21st century; the role and mandate of the three components of our system, national-public, private, and provincial; most significantly, the demands and desires of the public, taking into account the diversity of our no longer solitary linguistic, regional and ethnic communities; the role of such policy instruments as regulation and the public purse; and the unshackling of the system to see what it can do culturally and economically.

The array of talent comprising this task force will assure that it takes its task seriously. It is hoped that, in the absence of any task force member representing the millions of small-town and rural Canadians, the seven distinguished appointees will pay special heed to the needs and wishes of our heartland.

● (1415)

FISHERIES

SITUATION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA TROLLERS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, at this moment a fishery protest is taking place in the Gulf of Georgia by a group of British Columbia trollers. As a result of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans' (Mr. Fraser) failure to develop a West Coast fishing plan, the Minister and his Department have deprived these trollers of an opportunity to earn a living in the 1985 fishing season. In addition, by failing to declare an early opening date, the Minister will likely prevent many of these trollers from qualifying for UIC this fall.

Instead of making himself available to consult with established user groups, as well as failing to make himself available to answer questions in this House and monitor the activities of his Department, the Minister has decided to spend extensive periods of time in the U.S. and Europe. This particular Minister made personal election promises that he would not only consult with fishermen but that he would be readily available when problems arise. The reality is that this Minister is generally unavailable, and in the last several months has rarely been in Canada.

Members of this Party request that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) ask the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans to return to Canada and fulfil his responsibilities, or resign.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER ON FOREIGN POLICY

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I do not know if the Government is on lock-out or strike, because I wanted to ask a question of the Prime Minister or the Secretary of State for External Affairs, but I will ask it of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Crosbie: Look behind you.

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, yesterday Canadians were presented with the Dick and Jane primer on external affairs. It is a kind of sad day when Canadians are presented with a bland document like that, and this is really not acceptable. It was supposed to be a document opening the door to serious participation by the public, but it is in fact the opening of the door to ridicule. We see great statements like "we and the United States are neighbours"; or "Africa is a vast and diverse continent."

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): How about that.

Mr. Chrétien: I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he read that document, and if we can take it as the sum of the brains and talents of the Government when it tells us that we will have a committee and at the same time the Government intends to make decisions on a daily basis, making a farce of participation by the Canadian public?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I really do not understand the negative attitude of the former Minister. Here we have a process which is unique; for the first time ever a Green Paper on foreign policy has been produced for public discussion. This has never occurred before. Already, without even approaching such discussions in a positive way, the Opposition is ridiculing the consultation and public discussion process. But that is exactly what it is—to stimulate and encourage public input with respect to our foreign policy.

Yes, I can tell the Hon. Member I have read that document and it is stimulating, and hopefully—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: You don't need very much.

Mr. Nielsen: It takes a good deal more to stimulate the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry than it does me.

Mr. Axworthy: You'd be surprised.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Get hold of Len Hopkins.

Mr. Chrétien: I am very sorry. I have known the Hon. Minister since 1963, and his admission that he read it and found it very good means he has gone down in my esteem very rapidly.

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I am glad the Deputy Prime Minister says it is a serious discussion, but, if it is, will the Government agree that the committee to be formed can have public hearings right now and that, as it concerns his own Department, we will be consulting Canadians right now on star wars, and not wait to make the report after the decision has been made by the Minister?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Here they go again, Mr. Speaker. They howl about having the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence obtain a reference about NORAD, but my colleague, the Government House Leader, has made offer after offer to those opposite to bring a NORAD reference before the committee so it can be discussed, and they refuse to have that discussion.

● (1420)

I am surprised at the Hon. Member, because he used to be a lawyer. Most people would want to come to value judgments based on facts. He knows as well as I do that we are now in the process of gathering those facts through a group headed by a very distinguished civil servant, Dr. Kroeger, who is marshalling sufficient information upon which some value decisions might be made.

* * *

[Translation]

NORTH AMERICAN AIR DEFENCE

STAR WARS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence that I am in charge of that committee, and that the offer made by the Government House Leader was never transmitted to me, not by him, not by yourself nor by the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Seriously, before we agree to put up names for this committee, I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Government is willing, at this time, to make consideration of Star Wars a priority, as well as the question of trade with the United States, which is now the subject of negotiations, and if the Government agrees to priority consideration of these two issues that are of major importance to Canadian policy, we will sit on this committee, and if the Government does not agree with these priorities, we will have to tell Canadians that it is just another exercise in public relations, and the Canadian people will start getting thoroughly fed up.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I really would have expected more from a responsible Opposition. The Hon. Member has said that the Official Opposition is adopting the same abdication of responsibility which is to be expected from the NDP, namely, the abdication of its responsibility to participate in the parliamentary process. The NDP made up its mind long ago that it would not do that. I would not have been a bit surprised to hear that from the NDP, because it has always had difficulty in coming to grips with the parliamentary process. However, I am really astonished at the irresponsibility of the Official Opposition taking that kind of stand.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps all Members might remember that at the end of Question Period yesterday all Members asked that everybody be able to hear. It is amazing how quickly we forget. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

KROEGER INQUIRY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the somewhat over-stimulated Deputy Prime Minister. On May 8 during this session the Secretary of State for External Affairs indicated in the House that the Kroeger inquiry was to go to Washington simply to look into the technical and economic details of the American invitation to join the SDI research program.

Last night in the Committee on External Affairs and National Defence senior officials of the Department admitted that the Kroeger inquiry is in fact looking into the broad range of domestic, international, strategic, and political questions related to SDI. They further admitted that the Defence White Paper, which we will not see for several months, is also going to take the same considerations into account.

How can the Government make a decision based upon the Kroeger Inquiry when the Minister has only spoken to American officials and has not consulted with any Canadians on the broad strategic defence requirements? How can a decision on defence matters be made when we have not seen a Defence White Paper? In other words, how does the Minister resolve this confusing and contradictory way of making vital decisions in the interest of the country?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I may be over-stimulated, but I am not under-brained. As many times as the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry hears the answer, he chooses not to listen. The discussion that will be stimulated by the Green Paper on External Affairs should be welcomed by him. I can see that he has the same lock-brained attitude as his colleague, the critic for External Affairs.

If the Member wants to make a positive contribution as a Member of Parliament in the Official Opposition, he will join in the efforts of the special committee which has been set up to examine the foreign policies of the country.

• (1425)

UNITED STATES INVITATION—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT POSTPONE DECISION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I might say that I would never, in the House, question the intelligence of the Deputy Prime Minister, although he has given no evidence so far to show that he has much.

Mr. Broadbent: Good shot.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: On April 18 the Prime Minister, again in response to questions on SDI, said, as reported at page 3859 of Hansard:

> We will consider these matters within our own time frame and not with regard to any limitations of time imposed by anyone else.

Last night at that committee senior officials stated that while the Kroeger Inquiry will report in June, the Minister will not necessarily make a decision.

Taking these statements into account, will the Minister commit himself and his Government not to take any decisions on SDI involvement, or research involvement in SDI, until a committee of this Parliament has had a full opportunity to discuss the SDI program, based upon the Green Paper? Will he make a commitment that there will be no commitment until that examination takes place?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, logic would compel one to the conclusion that one cannot have a discussion until one is seized of the facts. That is the purpose, even though the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry refuses to hear that.

Once we have those facts before us, then we are in a position to make value judgments as a Government.

Mr. Axworthy: Will you consult us?

Mr. Nielsen: With respect to the level of intellect that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry draws, I would ask him to apply the same logic that I have applied in my response to his question, by comparing our relative positions in the House.

GOVERNMENT CONSULTATION

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Does he believe in consultation with the Canadian public on an issue like star wars? Their views have not yet been heard.

He indicated in an earlier answer that he does believe in consultation. If so, why is the Government planning to make a decision about whether or not Canada will participate in star wars before he has heard the views of the Canadian public? If the Deputy Prime Minister wishes to hear the Canadian public, will he commit the Government not to proceed with a star wars decision until the parliamentary committee has heard the Canadian public, listened to their concerns, and reported to Parliament?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, here is a surprising question, coming from the foreign affairs critic of a Party that has already made up its mind not to participate in the special committee.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Here is a Member who complained most vociferously in the House about my failure to appear before the Standing Committee on Defence—

Mr. Hovdebo: Answer the question.

Mr. Nielsen: —to answer the kind of questions she is putting now. When I did appear—who was absent at the time to put those questions?

Mr. Broadbent: Oh, come on! Where is the Prime Minister today?

Mr. Deans: Where is the Secretary of State?

Mr. Nielsen: She will forgive me if I view with some skepticism the question she puts. But I would encourage her and her Party to participate in the parliamentary work of that special committee, and to put her views where they belong, in the parliamentary committee.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Ms. Jewett: The Deputy Prime Minister is being as insulting today as he can possibly be. That is a great deal. I have told him many times that I was ill for that one single session.

An Hon. Member: How many times?

Ms. Jewett: I have told him many times with respect to that 64-minute session that he was at the committee.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I do not know how long one can go on listening to insults from the Deputy Prime Minister. Does the Deputy Prime Minister care about listening to the various views of the Canadian public on star wars? The Government can still make its decision. We will still make our decision on it. I am not saying that the Government should have a referendum. I am asking does the Deputy Prime Minister care about listening to their views on star wars? External Affairs officials say there has not yet been time for the public—

• (1430)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Ms. Jewett: —to express views—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Member has had quite a long time to ask the question. I now need the answer.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should be aware of the fact that I appeared before that committee not once but twice. She was in attendance at one of the meetings but not at the other—

Mr. Broadbent: She was sick.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): What about consultation?

Mr. Nunziata: Sleaze bag.

Mr. Nielsen: —at the time it concluded work. I certainly did not mean to be insulting, if she took my remarks as being insulting to her. I thought that in my normally abrasive fashion I was being kind in responding to her question. The Hon. Member should see me when I am really insulting.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: With respect to the specific question she put, the Green Paper on foreign policy is broad enough to entertain the kind of discussion that the Hon. Member would like to have, and that others would like to have, as they say they would like to have—

Mr. Broadbent: A real winner.

Mr. Nielsen: —and if the Hon. Member and her Party would participate as members in the work of the special committee that has been set up to discuss that Green Paper for precisely the reasons that—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to be fair.

Mr. Axworthy: Good.

WORK OF COMMITTEE

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Why bother having a special committee spending a year discussing the matter upon which the Government has already made a decision? Why bother? Why put that enormous expense on the backs of the taxpayers when the Government has decided on its defence policy, or will by fall in its White Paper; when it has decided on its trade policy or will by fall, according to the Quebec City summit; when it has decided, or is about to decide, on star wars? Will the Minister tell me why bother?

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would not like to leave the wrong impression with the House, as is the wont of so many members of the Official Opposition in questions of this nature, that there have been decisions taken on SDI, or that there have been decisions taken on trade, or that there have been decisions taken with respect to defence policy. Those decisions have not in fact been taken. Again I would encourage the Hon. Member to approach her task, as a Member of Parliament with specific responsibilities in the area of foreign policy, in a positive way and participate in the parliamentary process by participating in the work of that special committee.

Ms. Jewett: It is a charade.

[Translation]

HUMAN RIGHTS

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and concerns the document entitled "Directions for Canada's International Relations".

In this 47-page report, the chapter on human rights is very well hidden, and after much patient searching, we find a meagre paragraph which in French bears the unfortunate title of "Les droits de l'homme". If the Deputy Prime Minister read the report, he probably noticed that it contains only 17 lines—a quarter of a page—on human rights, and that those 17 lines are a collection of clichés. The Government gives no indication of the directions—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mrs. Killens: My question is as follows: What does the Government intend to do about human rights?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I suppose that if one paid attention in the drafting of such a Green Paper to all of the interests of all of the Members of the House of Commons, the least amongst which is not human rights, it would generate a multi-volume Green Paper. The very fact that the subject was introduced in a Green Paper is an indication of the Government's concern with human rights as an element of our foreign policy.

Mr. Axworthy: Surely more than three paragraphs.

Mr. Nielsen: We take back seats to no one with respect to our work in human rights, as evidenced by the recent visit of the Secretary of State to Russia, and by the recent meeting that took place here in Ottawa and our ambassador's work in that committee.

Mr. Axworthy: There is a whole blank page you could deal with.

[Translation]

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Speaker, if the Deputy Prime Minister had read page 17, he would have noticed that three quarters of the page is blank. There is absolutely no text, and there was ample space to express the Government's position.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

GREEN PAPER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my second question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and it concerns international dvelopment. Here again, we find only generalities. The only thing that is clear from this chapter is that there will be more budget cutbacks. The Government has already cut $180 million from the development aid budget. My question is as follows: Where is the voice of the Third World, the voice the Prime Minister promised would be heard in Bonn two weeks ago? What specific solutions does the Government intend to provide, and if no clear answer is given today, how can people give their views on a document as vague as this one?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have a very quick and positive response to the Hon. Member's question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: That is that she, and others with similar interests, should participate as parliamentarians in the work of the special committee that has been set up to make inquiries into those matters.

TIMING OF DECISION ON UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Deputy Prime Minister. I sat up late last night reading this document.

An Hon. Member: Where you stimulated?

Mr. Deans: Can the Deputy Prime Minister explain to the House what purpose a committee will serve, unless the Government is prepared to commit itself not to take a decision on star wars until the committee has completed its deliberations and reported back to the House of Commons? With that in mind, will the Deputy Prime Minister undertake on behalf of the Government not to have a decision taken on star wars until the committee that will be set up to investigate whether or not Canadians are in favour or opposed to such a commitment has had a chance to study it and report to the House of Commons?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Here, Sir, is a Member who is asking questions with respect to the Green Paper, who has already made a decision—

Mr. Fulton: Cut the B.S.

Mr. de Jong: Answer the question.

Mr. Nielsen: —that he and no member of his Party is going to participate in a special committee set up for a parliamentary purpose of examining the question the Hon. Member raises, and many other questions.

Ms. Jewett: Why bother?

Mr. Nielsen: The world does not stand still while the parliamentary process continues.

Ms. Jewett: This is a mockery.

Mr. Nielsen: The Government has to govern. I know that he and members of his Party have an extremely difficult time in coming to grips with the parliamentary process.

Mr. Broadbent: Come off it.

Mr. Nielsen: I urge the Hon. Member in this instance to have his Party participate in that process in the examination of the Green Paper.

BILATERAL TRADE WITH UNITED STATES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Why should we shore up a lame duck committee?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Who do you plan putting on the committee?

Mr. Deans: Let me ask the Deputy Prime Minister a question on a related topic contained in the report. Will the Deputy Prime Minister at least acknowledge that on the question of bilateral trade with the United States there is already in place a mechanism, including the Minister of Trade in Canada and his equivalent in the United States who are to report to the heads of the two countries within six months? Will he, therefore, acknowledge that a further study in Canada of bilateral trade could not be completed within six months? Will the Deputy Prime Minister undertake on behalf of the Government not to complete any bilateral trade agreements until this committee has reported to Parliament?

• (1440)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I find that an extremely negative approach, but it is not an unusual one for that Member and the members of his Party to take. What he is suggesting is that there is no need in the next six months to do everything we possibly can to enhance our trade relations, not only with the United States but with other countries of the world as well. Certainly trade is addressed in the Green Paper because it is one of the most important matters with respect to our competitiveness as a nation. Surely this is the kind of thing which he and members of his Party should be discussing in the discussions which will be going on in the special committee.

[Translation]

TRADE

PROPOSED FREE TRADE WITH UNITED STATES

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, having listened to the answers given by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence, I am ever more convinced that it had to be the best world junket organized for frustrated Progressive Conservative Members—at taxpayers' expense to boot.

Seeking evidence to the contrary, I would ask the Minister for International Trade—used as he is to being pushed aside by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, as he was again yesterday by the Secretary of State for External Affairs—how he can reconcile his recent country-wide consultation tour about free trade with the United States with the fact that, being now totally ignored by the Secretary of State for External Affairs, he is seeking public approval to appear a second time before a parliamentary committee, with photocopies and all.

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise the hon. gentleman that I am standing here on my own two feet and that I am not being pushed aside by anyone.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kelleher: I would further like to advise the Hon. Member that I work in very close consultation and partnership with my colleagues, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and that the trade discussions are continuing with full consultation with the Canadian public.

[Translation]

CONSULTATION WITH CANADIAN PEOPLE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

There is no need for the Minister to tell me that he stands on his own two feet, I also know he is performing a balancing act between the two Ministers involved. He is telling me that there is ongoing full consultation with the Canadian people. Can he explain why he ordered renewed full-scale consultations yesterday since we know he wants to begin negotiations with the United States before this fall? He and the Prime Minister have assured us that negotiations will begin before the Fall. Can the Minister tell me whether he will wait for the committee report before initiating those consultations, or are his own consultations the real ones and the others a mere make-believe exercise? Which are real and which are phony?

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would advise the Hon. Member to refer to the foreword contained in the paper, and to page 33 of the said paper in which it is set out that the consultations may move ahead on Canada-U.S. trade in advance of talks and discussions on the Green Paper. However, I would also remind the Hon. Member that the Green Paper speaks to more than just Canada-U.S. trade. It speaks to the whole matter of world and multilateral trade negotiations.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

GREAT LAKES POLLUTION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. The Minister will be aware of reports by her own Department which show that pollution in the Great Lakes is much worse than we thought it was, and even then it was bad. Could the Minister tell the House what plans she has to accelerate the process by which the Great Lakes and the Niagara River, in particular, can be cleaned up? Will she be making any special representations, as of now, with this new knowledge, to the United States to have the $150 million which was cancelled for sewage treatment restored, and on various other things which the Americans could be doing to get serious about cleaning up this important environmental problem?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party for his question. He will be glad to hear this has already been done. I handed over the figures myself in Washington last week, and the result is that planning for the Niagara River clean-up is being accelerated.

[English]

HERRING-GULL EGG PROGRAM

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, we are aware that we have a promise of a plan by the fall, not a promise of action. So that the Minister is better able to ensure that that plan is translated into action soon, will she undertake to reinstate fully, not partially, not one out of six, the herring-gull egg program which she cancelled last fall and which has made our credibility on Great Lakes pollution weaker than it has to be?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, we must see the question in its current context. It is being said that pollution in the Niagara River has increased, but we must not forget that under the previous Government, only two types of effluents were analyzed, the industrial and municipal type. We are now analysing many more kinds of effluents using far more sophisticated techniques, and now we must find out whether there really has been an increase. If so, we shall certainly inform our U.S. colleagues accordingly.

* * *

CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Finance).

Considering recent bank failures and bearing in mind that since 1983, bank deposits have been guaranteed up to a maximum of $60,000, and considering the inflation factor, does the Minister intend to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act to enable the Corporation to guarantee deposits up to a maximum of $100,000?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. As I have pointed out to the House on previous occasions, we have undertaken a full study of deposit insurance and financial institutions. We are taking all suggestions into account, in order to ensure the best possible and most stable financial systems for depositors.

* * *

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

LEVEL OF GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. One of the more profound statements in yesterday's Green Paper was that all industrialized nations saw technology and innovation as the most critical elements in today's economic equation. This harkens back to the statement made by the Prime Minister in February, 1984, that we have to double our R and D commitment and triple our resolve to reach it. However, yesterday the Minister of State for Science and Technology said that the Government would not keep its promise. In a masterful display of doublespeak, he said that a promise had now become a distant goal.

When will the Ministers of the Government stop mouthing meaningless platitudes and fulfil the promises which they made to Canadian people? Does the Deputy Prime Minister agree with his Minister that a promise is not a promise when it is a goal?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): When you cut through, Sir, all these questions that have been asked today concerning the subject matter of the Green Paper, you are forced by logic to come up with only one conclusion. For instance, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry and his colleague are really saying that they are against space research of any nature or kind whatsoever. The questions of those Hon. Members are disguised, but that is their position. They are just opposed to it, and they will twist and turn anything at all to escape that conclusion.

SCIENTISTS AND ENGINEERS—GREEN PAPER COMMENT

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to try out another question on the Deputy Prime Minister. Another statement which was made in the Green Paper yesterday was that it was uncertain whether Canada was producing the number of scientists and engineers required to develop and sustain an advanced industrial structure. Recently Mr. MacNabb, the President of the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council, was much more frank about it. With the numbers of students presently in the sciences, we just cannot achieve—

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Berger: —anything like the 2.5 per cent goal. Does he agree with the Secretary of State for External Affairs that this situation is uncertain, or does he agree with Mr. MacNabb? Will his Government back up its promises with swift action rather than equivocation?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that the earlier statements which he ascribed to myself are incorrect. In fact the Government is committed to moving toward the goal of increasing our investment in science and technology to the economic benefit of Canada; to creating permanent jobs in the new areas of technology; and to continuing to support the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council and other initiatives of the Government in a very ambitious way, to the benefit of Canada and our young people.

* * *

● (1450)

INDUSTRY

MITEL CORPORATION—BRITISH TELECOM TAKEOVER PROPOSAL

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I had a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion who has been acting like a wandering gypsy during this Question Period. If I could, I will direct my question to the Minister of State for Science and Technology.

An Hon. Member: Oh, here he comes.

Mr. Langdon: Here by popular demand. Yet more problems for Mitel are appearing from the proposed takeover by British Telecom, with the announcement made by Bell Canada that it is reconsidering its purchases from Mitel because British Telecom is one of its major rivals. Would the Minister commit himself to meet urgently with Mitel management in order to urge them to adopt the 18 per cent minority proposal for participation rather than the majority takeover?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member undoubtedly knows, we intend in due course to meet with the Mitel people in order to hear more about the nature of the deal. With respect to the statement attributed to Bell Canada by The Globe and Mail, as the Hon. Member probably knows Bell Canada was investigated some time ago with respect to vertical integration in procurement practices. As a result of this story I have asked two of my colleagues, the Minister of Communications and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, at least to check into the story to find out if there is some substance to what was reported by The Globe and Mail.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Is it not activities like the kind of activity undertaken by his Ministry, in allowing a major corporation that is so involved in research and development to go into foreign hands, that contribute to the fact that the Government has now indicated publicly that it has abandoned its promise to double R and D spending in Canada by 1988?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member is stating something that is just not true. We have not allowed or disallowed anything in that respect. All we have done is acknowledge that there is a deal and that in due course we will undoubtedly have an opportunity to review that deal.

I pointed out, and will point out once again for the Hon. Member, that Mitel was in difficult financial straits. The Hon. Member cannot have it both ways. This company has offered to put into Mitel over $300 million of fresh equity, which will at least ensure that 2,500 Canadian jobs, and 5,000, including international, jobs will be preserved. I am on the side of the workers of Mitel, and I think it is time that the Hon. Member got on the side of the workers of Mitel as well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

[Translation]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

INQUIRY IF EVIDENT SIGNS EXIST OF IMPROVEMENT IN CANADIANS' QUALITY OF LIFE

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment.

Following steps taken by the Minister in March this year in the fight against acid rain, could the Minister inform the House whether she has already seen any signs of changes that will improve the quality of life of Canadians?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question and welcome this opportunity to announce to Hon. Members that Inco, without waiting for the regulations to be introduced by the Province of Ontario, has already announced a 50 per cent reduction in its acid emissions, which is good news for all Canadians. I hope this announcement will persuade other companies, such as Noranda, to follow suit.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

PREPARATION OF ANOTHER PAPER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the circumstances, and I am referring to the publication of this working paper, I would have expected the Secretary of State for External Affairs to be in the House. In any event, I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence.

I was hoping he would finally explain to the House the reason for publishing this insignificant document on foreign policy. The Green Paper on External Affairs is an embarrassment to Canadians and an insult to the intelligence of the people of this country.

My question to the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence is as follows: When is the Government going to publish a really serious paper on issues relating to the nuclear arms race, external trade and human rights—a paper that can be taken seriously?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Member now enjoys a position in this House of being the Leader of a political Party whose roots go to the very heart of our parliamentary traditions. One of those traditions is that Members who are elected and are paid to attend to the parliamentary process do participate in it. It ill behooves the members of the Right Hon. Member's Party not to participate in a special committee of the House of Commons which will answer that very kind of question, and explore that and many other areas of the Green Paper. It does not assist the system whatsoever, nor does it enhance the image or credibility of the Opposition, when the Opposition refuses to participate in the process and then seeks self-righteous justification here in the House of Commons.

REQUEST THAT GREEN PAPER BE WITHDRAWN

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in view of the Deputy Prime Minister's failure today to commit the Government to the delay of any decision on star wars or on the completion of negotiations with the United States on the international trade picture, will he withdraw this embarrassing document which does not read much better than a high school text book, and will he forget the committee hearings which the Government has turned into a farce?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman who just asked a question was once the member of a Government that produced White Papers while it was in office, and while those White Papers were before committee that Government made decisions recognizing the fact that the world does not stop while discussions are ongoing. The Right Hon. Member would not only be fulfilling his responsibility but would achieve a meaningful and constructive participation in the parliamentary process if he would urge his colleagues, and indeed instruct them, to participate in the work of that committee which will examine all of the questions, including the one he just asked.

* * *

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

EQUALITY RIGHTS COMMITTEE ORDER

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence and concerns an attempt by his Ministry to muzzle effectively all members of the Canadian Armed Forces by denying each and every one of those members the right to make submissions to the Committee on Equality Rights, through an internal order that was issued the day the discussion paper was issued. I have a copy of that order here. In view of the fact that this committee is dealing with issues of basic concern to many rank and file members of the Forces, will the Minister immediately rescind this gag order and stop denying the men and women of the Armed Forces their rights to full equality before the law?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have absolutely no knowledge whatsoever of any such order. I welcome participation in the discussion of equality rights at any time. It is my intention to appear before the subcommittee that is examining that question, if that is the subcommittee's wish. However, there was certainly no gag order issued by me. Indeed, I wonder just how effective it would be to gag 83,000 members of our Armed Forces and 33,000 civilian personnel through any such order. It has not been done by me.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, the Minister may not know about the order, but the order exists and members of the Armed Forces are bound by it. Will the Minister rescind that order? Furthermore, will the Minister agree to appear with his officials before the committee, by the end of next week at the very latest, instead of refusing to appear before the committee as he and his officials have done so far? Will he finally summon the courage to come before the committee and defend his Neanderthal policies on women and minorities in the Canadian Armed Forces?

● (1500)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I believe I answered that question a moment ago when I said that I would welcome an opportunity to discuss equality rights.

Mr. Robinson: Rescind the order.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member has asked me to rescind something which I have not seen. Surely even his reason, as limited as it might be, would compel him to the conclusion that I certainly would not be expected to be au fait with every single order which is issued in an armed forces which are 83,000 strong. If he will make the document which he is waving about available to me, I will certainly examine it and take whatever action that I deem to be reasonable under the circumstances.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORT

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND ROMANIA

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petition presented by the Hon. Member for Parkdale-High Park (Mr. Witer) on Tuesday, May 14, 1985, meets the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Order, please. I am in receipt of a notice of a question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith).

Perhaps the Hon. Member for Sudbury and I could be heard. The Hon. Member for Sudbury has a question of privilege and the Speaker would like to hear it. Could the Members of the House please allow that, particularly Members on my right.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

CHALLENGE '85

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege as I believe that my ability as a Member of Parliament to properly service my constitutents is being infringed or impeded. The question of privilege relates to a directive which was issued by the Department of Employment and Immigration concerning the Challenge '85 program.

Some three weeks ago the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) circulated to all Members of Parliament a memo which indicated that we would have free and open access to the approval process for projects under the program and the number of dollars which would go into each riding. Since that time I have been informed by officials within the Employment Development Branch in the City of Sudbury that they had received directions from their regional headquarters which stated that the officials working for the Department had been instructed not to release information on the projects or the number of people who would be involved.

I think, Mr. Speaker, you as a Member of Parliament as well as the Speaker of the House, will realize that a number of those project sponsors are in contact on a daily basis with constituency offices wanting to know the status of the projects. Therefore, I believe that the directive which was issued by the Department of Employment and Immigration is infringing on my ability to properly service my constituents.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that you will instruct the Minister who is responsible for that Department to allow that information to be made available to every Member of Parliament.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, obviously I am not aware of the specifics of the matter which has been raised by the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith). I rise only to suggest to you, Sir, that it is not a question of privilege. I believe it is a question which deals with the administration and operation of government. Therefore, on a technical basis, I suspect that it is not a question of privilege. It may be a matter on which the Hon. Member would want to have discussions with the Minister, and I am sure the Minister would be very receptive to hearing representations to determine if something should be done. Indeed, the Minister, as I understand it, was before the committee yesterday and attempted to deal with the matter at some—

Mr. Allmand: She thought it was a wonderful policy.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Well, Mr. Speaker, yesterday we had a lecture from the Liberal Party about interrupting its Members when they are speaking. Today I cannot make myself heard, because the Liberals are trying to shout me down. They cannot have it both ways.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. Order, please. Again, I am addressing my remarks to all Members. I previously indicated that one side was being excessively noisy. Now the other side is being excessively noisy. Is it not possible, even on a question of privilege, for back-benchers and front-benchers on all sides of the House to allow me to hear what is being said?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry the truth is causing so much irritation. I am only attempting to suggest to the Hon. Member that he does not have a question of privilege within the meaning of that phrase for parliamentary purposes. I am sure the Minister will be glad to receive representations and that she will discuss the matter in the usual competent and outstanding way for which she is known across the country in the performance of her responsibilities.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, may I raise a question of privilege?

Mr. Speaker: Is this on the same question of privilege? Otherwise I will have to wait until the first one is finished.

Mr. Malépart: It is on the same question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart).

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I would also like to raise a question of privilege, considering it is my duty and my right as a Member of this House to represent the constituents of the riding of Montreal-Sainte-Marie to the best of my ability.

Mr. Speaker, employees of the Department of Employment and Immigration confirmed to me, on the telephone, that departmental employees are not allowed to give any information to any Member of the House. I am raising a question of privilege not because the instructions issued by the Minister are an infringement on the rights of public servants and project sponsors, but because they infringe on the privilege of Members of this House. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important question because the instructions issued by the Minister are aimed directly at parliamentarians, at all Members of this House, and these guidelines are aimed at all Members as far as Quebec is concerned, whatever their party affiliation. I think it is very important to protect the privilege of Members who are here in the House to defend the interests of their constituents, and I also think the Minister should be asked to withdraw these instructions.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I thank all Hon. Members for their contributions. I think it has been recognized many times in the House that a complaint about the actions or inactions of government Departments cannot constitute a question of parliamentary privilege. By saying that, I do not want to diminish the nature of the complaint or the seriousness which Members apply to what they believe to be a legitimate grievance.

I must say that I was intrigued by the suggestion of the Hon. Member for Sudbury that somehow I had the capacity to instruct or control a Minister. I seem to be having enough trouble with Members of the House. I appreciate the goodwill which was included in the suggestion.

I believe Hon. Members know that the purpose of parliamentary privilege is to protect our speech in the House, the institution itself, and the institution and Members from threats, obstructions and intimidations in the exercise of our duties. The Hon. Member clearly has a complaint on a matter which concerns him, as well as other Members, with regard to the actions of a government Department.

Point of Order—Mr. Gray (Windsor West)

Mr. Frith: Opposition Members are not being allowed information.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is saying something which he did not say for the record. When the Hon. Member spoke for the record he said the complaint had to do with a refusal with regard to all Members. In any event, this is a matter which involves a government Department. There are remedies available for that. I suggest, therefore, that I would have great difficulty in finding this matter to be within the realm of parliamentary privilege. I appreciate the sincerity with which his view is held.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

NOTICE OF MOTION—STANDING ORDER 82

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to raise a point of order regarding today's Order Paper. The Government has given notice of a motion which it purports to be pursuant to Standing Order 82, and has given 48 hours' notice under Government Notices of Motions. That means that when Government Notices of Motions are reached on Thursday, May 16, this motion will be transferred to Government Orders. It could be called at the Government's will, including eleven o'clock on a Monday, Tuesday or Thursday morning.

On every previous occasion when Standing Order 82, formerly Standing Order 75(c), was applied, the motion had been proposed on Motions during Routine Proceedings. In accordance with Standing Order 82, notice has been given orally by a Minister from his place in the House and has been moved pursuant to Standing Order 36(1)(p) on Routine Proceedings. When the debate on the time allocation motion has had to be interrupted or adjourned before the debate was concluded or terminated, that is before the maximum two-hour limit had been reached, and only in these cases, further consideration of the motion has been transferred to Government Orders pursuant to Standing Order 49(2).

● (1510)

Nothing has ever prevented the Government from supplementing the required oral notice with a written Notice of Motion to be printed on the Order Paper in the appropriate place. In the case of a Motion pursuant to Standing Order 82, the appropriate place is not Government Notices of Motion, but rather under Motions. This is required by Standing Order 36(1)(p) which establishes the proper place for the consideration of a motion relating to the management of the business of the House.

For example, when the Government decides to provide for an adjournment of the House for a period of time, not provided for in the Standing Orders, it gives 48 hours' notice and the motion appears in the Order Paper not under Government Notices of Motions but under Motions. In the case of a motion pursuant to Standing Order 82, of course, written notice is not required. But, if written notice is given, it still must be initially taken up by the House, not under Government Notices of Motions but under Motions. By giving 48 hours written notice of a motion to be put down under Government Notices of Motion, the Government is not giving notice of a motion pursuant to Standing Order 82, but is giving notice of a substantive motion which, at the appropriate time, will be transferred to Government Orders for eventual debate without being subject to the special time limits applied to a motion pursuant to Standing Order 82.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, if the motion of which the Government has given notice is supposed to be a motion pursuant to Standing Order 82, it ought to appear under Motions rather than under Government Notices of Motions. Only then would the limits on speeches, the over-all limit on the length of debate, apply. Any written notice of a motion pursuant to Standing Order 82, if it is to be treated as a motion subject to the provisions of that Standing Order, must be taken up under the heading assigned to motions relating to the management of the business of the House, that is to say, Motions.

I want to draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, the serious defect in today's Notice Paper and I would ask you to take the appropriate action.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order to support the representations made by my colleague. In attempting to determine whether or not such a move has been undertaken by a Government in the past, my staff and I have been unable to come up with a situation similar to this. The normal practice has been in the past that the question of time allocation, which this is, be dealt with under Motions during the routine business of the House, and the transferral from the normal practice to a practice generally reserved for considerably different types of motions is a practice which I think would set a dangerous precedent which this House would live to regret.

I would ask, Sir, that you ask the Government to simply adhere to the procedures which have heretofore proved to be satisfactory, and require of the Government that it deal with this motion in the appropriate and normal way.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am quite frankly somewhat surprised to hear this point of order. I thought I was doing the Opposition a great favour in proceeding in this particular manner. The position of giving appropriate notice to the Opposition so that it would be in a position to proceed on any debate is one which I had thought would have been welcomed with open arms by Hon. Members of the Opposition. We have completely complied with every procedure available under our Standing Orders, and I have to tell you, Mr. Speaker, in all fairness, that the Standing Orders do speak for themselves. It is not a question of the Government deviating from the Standing Orders. There has been no suggestion made that we are deviating from the Standing Orders. We have complied in every respect with the Standing Orders.

The House Leader of the Official Opposition makes reference to the appropriate motion and the procedure available with respect to time allocation. I think that particular Standing Order is one which is clear, unequivocal, and in fact is one which is quite properly the subject of moving because it is in the name of a Minister of the Crown, and is only available to a Minister of the Crown as an item which is subject, and can be subject, to a Notice of Motion with respect to Government Orders.

This is a Government Order, a government initiative, which clearly is contemplated by the Standing Orders which allow us to give notice so that the matter can be debated on a timely basis and the House can arrive at a decision. The purpose of the rules and the Standing Orders is not to avoid coming to conclusions. They have to be interpreted, Mr. Speaker, as being established so that Hon. Members can vote on issues and come to conclusions, not the contrary.

What I have done here is criticized because it has not been done before. I take that as a compliment. As the Government House Leader, I like to look at the Standing Orders and take their clear and direct meaning. It is clear to me that the Standing Orders do contemplate that we can, in fact, proceed by way of Government Notices of Motions. We can have discussions—I am in discussion with the Opposition House Leaders about appropriate timing—and try to come to agreement with respect to the extent of a debate.

However, what I have done here, I repeat, Mr. Speaker, is for the purpose of allowing Members of Parliament, and especially Hon. Members of the Opposition, an opportunity to be well prepared for any debate which may come along with respect to this important step of time allocation. I have bent over backwards to be helpful to the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, and I am now faced with the proposition—which surprises me—that the Opposition is somehow challenging the Standing Orders, when in fact I have complied in every respect with all of the facets contained in the Standing Orders.

When a Standing Order speaks in very specific terms about a particular procedure it speaks for itself. I know that in the past this has been done under Motions, and that is quite acceptable. But for the reasons I have outlined, Mr. Speaker, when a motion is in the name of a Minister of the Crown, and can only be in the name of a Minister of the Crown, there can be nothing clearer than the fact that this is a matter of a Government initiative with respect to time allocation.

I believe that if you give this matter some serious consideration, Mr. Speaker, you will come to only one conclusion. Whenever we abide by the Standing Orders we do so for the purpose of going along with orders under which this House operates, not for the purpose of deviating or using any device which does not reflect the rules. It is the wisdom of this House that we operate under these Standing Orders. The fact is that I did not have a part in the drawing up of the Standing Orders. They were the subject of great debate and were brought in by the Party of the House Leader of the Official Opposition who now complains about these Standing Orders. But he was a party to bringing these matters in.

All I am saying to you, Mr. Speaker, is that I have taken a very straightforward view with respect to the Standing Orders and I have complied in every respect. I believe if you read the Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker, you can come to only one conclusion, that this is an appropriate method of proceeding. I would ask you to rule accordingly.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to say that we are not going to be thankful to the Government House Leader for, as he said, bending over backwards to be pleasant to us. Once we have had the unpleasant notice about closure on Bill C-15, we know it is coming, so he does not need to bring it forward a second time. He has done so now in writing. There is no problem; we don't quarrel with the fact that he is giving us supplementary notice. The gist of what our House Leader was trying to put forward is that if the Government House Leader wants to give a second notice—which we agree he has a right to do—he should do it at the right place, namely, under Motion. That is the main point we are trying to put across, and that is what we would like you to rule on, Mr. Speaker.

• (1520)

Mr. Speaker: I fully appreciate that that is what I will have to rule on. I think Hon. Members will agree that the suggestion that the Standing Orders are always clear and permit only one interpretation has to be of interest to all of us who deal with these matters.

Since I do not think it affects debate today, and I think I have the time, I am going to reserve on this matter. I have had some preliminary thoughts on it, because when I saw the matter on the Notice Paper I started to ask some questions. I have come to no conclusions. I am grateful for all the learned advice I have been given, and I will of course make sure that a ruling is ready for the House in sufficient time that the matter can be appropriately resolved.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

TRANSPORT

PRESENTATION OF SECOND REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Darryl L. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, as vice-chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, I have the honour of tabling the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Transport.

[Editor's Note: For above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

[English]

PETITIONS

ESTONIAN CENTRAL COUNCIL OF CANADA—IMPRISONMENT OF MART NIKLUS

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to present to the House today a petition on behalf of the Estonian Central Council in Canada. The Council petitions the House for its assistance in protesting the continued imprisonment of an individual who represents the voice of freedom in Estonia. Mart Niklus has been imprisoned for speaking out against the Soviet regime and has embarked upon a hunger strike in protest. Niklus is now suffering from poor health caused by the extended hunger strike—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Has the Hon. Member finished summarizing the petition?

Mr. Witer: The petitioners implore the Canadian Government to protest his continued imprisonment and demand his release.

PROPOSED POSTAL RATE INCREASE

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House of Commons a petition from residents of the constituency of Calgary South, Alberta. They petition the House to take their views into consideration, namely that the proposed increase in postal rates is unjustifiable in view of the present standard of service.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BENEFITS—SEVERANCE PAY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, the petition I present is from the Canadian Airline Flight Attendants Association. They call upon Parliament to reverse the regulation passed by Cabinet which takes severance pay into account when calculating unemployment insurance benefits.

SASKATCHEWAN'S SENIORS ACTION NOW ASSOCIATION—RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to present a petition on behalf of Saskatchewan's Seniors Action Now Association, the leadership of whom are in the gallery today. If I may summarize very briefly, they make seven recommendations to this Parliament, including the fact that retirement income for seniors should be at least the minimum wage, and the total retirement income should be at least at parity with 75 per cent of the average income for all Canadians. They also talk about establishing a Department of Senior Citizens—I am sorry I cannot go on, but they make seven excellent recommendations and I am sure if you were in my position you would present their petition.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member also knows that there are rules in the House about references to the presence of anyone in our gallery.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BENEFITS—SEVERANCE PAY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to present on behalf of a few thousand constituents in British Columbia a petition asking that all laid-off employees be able to keep their severance pay and receive their unemployment insurance benefits, as was the case prior to March 31 when the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) changed the regulations.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions? The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom)?

[Translation]

Mr. Nystrom: I have another petition, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am now required to seek unanimous consent of the House for the Hon. Member to present another petition. Members are supposed to present all their petitions at once. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) to present a further petition or petitions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: There is such consent.

[Translation]

NEW INCOME INFRASTRUCTURE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of students in the Department of Political Science at Laval University, Quebec City, concerning unemployment in Canada and the need for increased investment in this country and for a new income infrastructure.

* * *

[English]

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if question No. 237 could be made an order for return, this return would be tabled immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that question No. 237 be made an order for return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Text]

INFORMATION PACKAGES PRODUCED BY DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE

Question No. 237—Mr. Howie:

1. From January 1, 1984 to date, what public information in print form and on film or slides has been produced by the Department of National Health and Welfare concerning (a) drug abuse, including alcohol (b) young runaways (c) family planning (d) venereal diseases (e) family violence (f) the causes of family breakdown (g) health concerns of senior citizens (h) special needs of the handicapped?

2. For each information package produced, what was its (a) availability to the public (b) corresponding French title (c) cost to the public to obtain or borrow a copy, if applicable?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall all Notices of Motions for the Production of Papers be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—GOVERNMENT LEADERSHIP

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap) moved:

That this House recognizing the lack of economic leadership provided by the Provincial Government of British Columbia, condemns the Federal Government for its failure to provide economic leadership and for its failure to fulfil its election promises to the people of British Columbia.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I feel very badly today because we find it necessary to bring forward such a motion. After all, when one comes from a province like British Columbia, noted for its richness and optimism, it is a sad thing to find people in many parts of the province walking around almost in a state of shell-shock. They cannot believe what has happened to their hopes and aspirations, watching their farms and ranches foreclosed by the banks, watching their small businesses disappear around them as bankruptcies continue to march upwards.

There is a feeling in British Columbia that something has gone dreadfully wrong. Yet when one looks to the federal Government for leadership, let alone the provincial Government, there appears to be nothing there. It was that situation which encouraged us to put this motion forward for debate today, and I am very pleased to rise on behalf of my Party to make a few opening remarks.

I think it is fair to say that the situation in British Columbia is very serious by almost any indicator. This past year housing starts reached a 20-year low in that province. Retail sales are a good indicator of how things are going and how confident people are about the economy; they have declined in every year over the last four years. I think it is fair to say that the largest single source of income in British Columbia is now welfare. What a condemnation that must be of the political leadership in that part of Canada. Just the other day we received the unemployment statistics for Canada. In every province things were essentially looking up, with two exceptions. Newfoundland is one, and we all appreciate that that province has traditionally been very hard hit. But we also have British Columbia where the situation has gotten worse. Unemployment levels went up in April of this year. It is the only province in Canada where the situation continues to deteriorate. I think it is fair to say that when we mention British Columbia people start to look at you kind of peculiarly, and kind of laugh at what is going on in that part of Canada. The British Columbia Government has turned that province into a laughing stock, and people do not invest in laughing stocks.

Look at the Vancouver stock exchange, Mr. Speaker. The majority of the money being raised on that exchange is for investment outside of the province. What does that tell us about that economy? In parts of British Columbia today unemployment is in the range of 25 per cent to 30 per cent. That is a very serious situation, yet what is the provincial Government doing about it?

The Provincial Government keeps telling us when people ask for support that there is no money for education. There is no money for the school system as we have known it. There is no money for the colleges and universities. They have to take cuts, as do the technical and vocational schools. There is no money for the expansion of hospitals and health care in that province. There is no money for senior citizen housing or child care. There is no money to help the hard pressed food production sector, the farmers and ranchers of British Columbia. There is no assistance for the forest or mining sectors. There is nothing for tourism other than Expo. There is no assistance for the hard-pressed business sector. There is nothing until after Expo in 1986.

● (1530)

As a matter of fact, the other day someone was saying that there is a new "wine" in British Columbia. It is called "We can't do anything until after 1986". We are hearing that repeatedly from every Cabinet Minister and the Premier of that province. However, that is not quite true. They instantly found $500 million to assist with the debt of B.C. Rail. That was no problem. Then they needed $1 billion to develop that north-east coal project. That happened just before the election and many geologists and mining people were wondering if that was a wise move. They had doubts about what the Government was doing. However, the Government insisted that the north-east coal deposit was the big employer, the megaproject, the opium for the people. It cost over $1 billion to provide infrastructure for the development of the Tumbler Ridge town site. Just a few weeks ago we found out that the mine was dug in the wrong place. The coal was not where the mine was dug. It is going to cost in excess of $300 million to move the operation to the proper location. We made a $300 million mistake. We went against the advice of our geologists.

The Government is pumping hundreds of millions of dollars into Expo, yet there is nothing for child care or senior citizen housing. There is nothing to help college and university students. There are cut-backs on loans and increasing tuition fees. However, for Expo there is all kinds of money.

There are some peculiar things in relation to Expo as well, Mr. Speaker. We needed some trees to beautify the Expo site. They said they could not find any trees in British Columbia. They had to import trees from the United States to British Columbia. That is like saying you have to import sand into the Sudan. It is ridiculous that British Columbia could not provide trees for its own Expo site.

One could go on and on with a vast list of examples of how the Government has provided absolutely no leadership. Any leadership it has provided is laughable and despicable. It is a slap in the face of British Columbians that these people are supposed to be providing economic and social leadership in that province.

If one went downtown in Vancouver, Nelson, Trail, Kelowna, Prince George or Prince Rupert and asked people where the province is going over the next 10 years, they would tell you that it is going down. There is no sense of vision, strategy, or a plan for the future. Everyone is fumbling and stumbling over themselves as the critical fishing, mining and forest sectors of our economy cry out for support, direction and assistance. They are simply turned down. The Government walks away as it continues its scorched earth policy in British Columbia.

I do not want to continue to talk about the lack of political and economic leadership in British Columbia. It becomes distressful after awhile. The most distressful aspect is that Cabinet Ministers and the Premier in British Columbia are still suggesting that the most important resource in that province is timber or copper or coal or fish. The most important resource in that province is the people. To cut back on educational funding is an improper way to treat the people of British Columbia.

Mr. Siddon: Don't get so angry, Nelson.

Mr. Riis: The Member for Richmond-South Delta (Mr. Siddon) says "Don't get so angry, Nelson". That is probably fair advice. However, Mr. Speaker, there is no other emotion left with which one can react to the serious, dreadful, and horrible situation which is occurring in that province. Quite frankly, I wish there was one single item about which I could be optimistic. I suppose that Members opposite will stand up and tell us about the wonderful things the Socreds are doing in that part of Canada. I hope they do, Mr. Speaker, because I would love to make a few comments on what they have to say in support of the Social Credit policies.

I would now like to turn to the Conservative Party, Mr. Speaker. Nine months ago after the election it was conceived that the new Conservative Government would do all sorts of things for British Columbia. There were Conservatives through-out British Columbia saying that they were going to help the agricultural, forestry, fishing, and small business sectors. People actually believed them, just as they believed the Socreds when they said they were going to create jobs and improve the economic situation. Well, the Socreds brought in a policy of restraint and cut-backs. I suspect that a week from tomorrow when the Budget is introduced in the House we will see a repeat of that mindless approach to the development of the economic infrastructure of a country in a sound and progressive way.

The Conservative Government promised a reforestation agreement immediately. My colleagues and I in the New Democratic Party, have stood in the House every week since October 7 asking the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) or the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) where that agreement is. They have told us it may be ready next week or next month.

Mr. Siddon: It was signed in November.

Mr. Riis: The Minister says it was signed in November. How can he say that without smiling? Well, he is smiling. I can see why he would. Where is the tree planting, the road building, and the reforestation?

Mr. Siddon: Patience.

Mr. Riis: He says "patience". This is planting season, Mr. Speaker. You do not plant trees in the winter-time or in the fall. If that agreement is not signed soon we will lose tens of thousands of seedlings and another planting season. The tree planters of my constituency have brought their contracts. On those contracts it says that the job will proceed subject to the signing of the forestry agreement with the federal Government. There are thousands of those agreements in British Columbia, Mr. Speaker. The entire reforestation industry is poised ready to provide jobs, and the Government refuses to sign the necessary forestry agreement. We suggested that it be pulled out of the greater agreement if that was the hold-up, but they would not do that.

The Government said it would be providing funds for more research and development in the forestry sector. That was before forestry research was cut by $3.5 million in the November statement. The Government then said it was going to start a National Forestry Internship Program to provide student jobs. That has not been done, Mr. Speaker. The Government said it was going to start an Indian Lands Forestry Program. That has not been started either, Mr. Speaker. It said it would give more tax incentives to enable the forest industry to develop new technology and product lines. That was a $60 million promise for this year but British Columbia has received nothing. The Government promised $10 million in enhanced funding for the fishery sector. The Estimates show only $1.6 million for the fisheries sector under the Pacific Salmonid Enhancement Program. There was supposed to be $5 million for the agricultural program and $5 million for the Freshwater Fisheries Enhancement Program. We have seen no money for either of those programs. The federal Government was going to provide loans to fund a voluntary boat buy-back program to reduce the size of the West Coast fleet. That has not been done. As a matter of fact, the only thing the Government did was to levy user fees on fishermen, increasing total fees by $6.3 million following the November statement.

Where are those commitments and promises, Mr. Speaker? When will the Government deliver? Is eight months not long enough? Never in the history of our Parliament has a Government waited so long before introducing a budget. It is disappointing that the federal Government, when one considers the promises it has made, has not acted more quickly to provide assistance to the people of that hard pressed part of British Columbia on whom the present provincial Government has simply turned its back.

• (1540)

With respect to energy and mines, the Government has not fulfilled its promise of a new taxation system for northern workers. There has been no mention of its promise of a portable pension plan for miners, which is particularly important in British Columbia. The Government has not taken any action with respect to new tax incentives to encourage mineral exploration. I could go on with other unfulfilled promises.

When Hon. Members opposite are discussing the Budget with their Ministers, I urge them to recognize that British Columbia is suffering some special pains. The people in that part of Canada have been abandoned by their elected representatives in the provincial Government.

The Government has said repeatedly that it is the private sector that will create the jobs. This may apply to central Canada, to some extent, where the recession has been lightened and businesses are in fact expanding. However, room for expansion in the private sector in Atlantic Canada and the far western part of Canada is simply not there. The small and medium sized business sectors want very much to expand but there is no demand for their goods or services. People are not prepared to spend their savings on new cars or appliances, expand business operations or begin ranching operations when that part of the country has the highest level of unemployment and a deteriorating economic situation. It has absolutely no political, economic or social leadership.

It is time the Government realized that it has a special obligation to that part of Canada, that it must make some provisions in its Budget to provide relief for the people of British Columbia. The provincial Government has turned its back on that part of Canada. It is up to the federal Government to show the appropriate leadership by giving British Columbians, like all Canadians, a sense of hope. That hope can only be realized when people have a dream for the future. An old Hungarian proverb states that where there is no dream the people perish. In British Columbia there is no dream, just a nightmare.

The federal Government has the obligation to provide that dream through leadership in such areas as the forest sector. It can show that it is committed to the development of programs to encourage research and development that will allow the forest sector to expand into new product lines, plant modernization and the development of new markets.

The Government can provide leadership by assisting the agricultural sector in the same way. That leadership is not shown by abandoning a Crown corporation like Canagrex. In its first year of operation that Crown corporation discovered hundreds of millions of dollars of new market opportunities for the food producers in Canada. Many of those producers are from western Canada, including British Columbia. The federal Government in its wisdom decided to abandon that assistance program and not use it to find new markets for the food producers in British Columbia and other parts of Canada. I raise the question of Canagrex because it is an example of a direction the Government should not be taking with respect to that sector.

We have submitted many suggestions for the Government's upcoming Budget that will assist the people of British Columbia and all Canadians. I beg the federal Government, its Ministers and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), when they bring down the Budget, to recognize the particular plight faced by the people of British Columbia. They have particular difficulties and a need for assistance in the restructuring of almost every major sector of the economy. It is time for some special and extraordinary consideration for that part of Canada. I encourage the Government to allow us to get on with the proper development of that province to its fullest potential.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to change the tone of the debate here today. I believe it is time for us to take a more positive attitude in this country. The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has not proposed one positive solution for the problems facing the people of British Columbia, problems of which we are aware.

I replaced a man who resigned his seat in the House of Commons to run provincially. After listening to the first ten minutes of the speech by the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap, I thought for a moment that he would be running provincially. He has lost sight of the fact that we are representatives of British Columbia at the federal level. I realize that solutions can be made at the federal level as well as the provincial level, but the co-operation that is required from the provincial Government, whether it is Social Credit, NDP or Liberal, in order to achieve those solutions will not be achieved if we continually take a confrontational approach. The election is over. We must work together as Canadians to begin programs that will benefit the Hon. Member's constituents as well as mine.

I stand in the House today as a small businessman who gave up my business because of the plight of British Columbians and all Canadians. The plight they face is the result of the devastation brought on by the Liberal Government and its coalition friends, the NDP. Today I saw them applauding together, as they always have, over the destruction of this country.

Mr. Riis: Try to be positive.

Mr. St. Germain: Let's talk about the most important resource and the most important industry we have in British Columbia softwood lumber.

Mr. Riis: People are the most important. That is where you are wrong. You think it is a bloody tree! You think trees are more important than people!

Mr. St. Germain: We did not disturb the Hon. Member during his speech and this does not call for heckling. We have the Hon. Member upset.

Mr. Riis: You say that trees are most important in the Province of B.C. That is precisely the point; "Let's get coal, let's get codfish".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. St. Germain: Let us examine the forest industry in which most British Columbians are employed. Those Members stand up in the House every day to slam our best trading partner and best friend, the United States of America. They are jeopardizing the very industry in which British Columbians have jobs today.

Mr. Riis: They are putting up tariff walls against the softwood industry.

Mr. St Germain: That party is totally irresponsible.

On a more positive note, the Hon. Member referred to Expo '86. That will be one of the greatest success stories this country has ever seen because Canadians will make it succeed in spite of the negative approach by the Hon. Member and his Party.

Mr. Riis: Let's bet on that.

Mr. St. Germain: I will bet on that any time. We are the leaders in this country and we will show what leadership is. We will make Expo '86 succeed in spite of those Members.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member. Does the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) wish to respond?

Mr. Riis: You bet I would, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Are you going to talk about doom and gloom?

Mr. Riis: It is easy to talk about doom and gloom if you come from British Columbia. I respect the Hon. Member, but I think he really betrayed his true opinion when he said that the most important resource in that province, and probably Canada, is trees. It is not young people, elderly people, workers, managers, entrepreneurs or industrialists. Trees are the most important. He said it. I cannot believe that he would have that kind of courage. That is where he is coming from and that is that. I will have to mute my criticism because I understand that particular perspective.

• (1550)

Let us be positive. If he wants to help British Columbia, Let him sign a forestry agreement, a tourism agreement, sign a mining agreement and sign an economic development agreement. B.C. is the only province now in Canada where that has not been done. It is the Minister's responsibility. It is the Government's responsibility. It is not ours in the NDP. It is not theirs in the Liberal Party. You are the Government. You are supposed to be signing those agreements. Why is it that British Columbia is the last province to receive that kind of financial support? We are talking about hundreds of millions of dollars from the federal government. Deliver it. Help out. Be positive.

Mr. Manly: Get the money.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleague what he thinks the ramifications will be to his province of the planned investment by a Canadian pulp and paper company to construct a paper mill in Washington State? We gather that will compete directly with the producers in British Columbia. Will that make things better or worse for the people in the Province of British Columbia?

Mr. Riis: That is a tough question, Mr. Speaker. I will give it a try. I appreciate the point. When the Hon. Member was speaking, I remembered the announcement a few months ago about how the Government had assisted to the tune of tens of millions of dollars in the development of a new copper mine in Peru and how our taxpayers' money was being used to develop that copper mine to compete with the copper mines in the Highland Valley and other parts of Canada. It is the same type of approach, Mr. Speaker. It is very thoughtless. If you like, it is based on the assumption that what is good for business is automatically good for the country, it is good for everybody. I am not saying that everything business does is bad. Of course not. I am saying that we must not as responsible parliamentarians have the approach that what is good for any pulp and paper company or any copper company or any industry is automatically good for the entire country. That is not the case.

Concerning the question my hon. friend asked, we have to look very carefully at how we support industry. If we are going to support industry, it is through the tax system or through grants, but for gosh sakes let's make absolutely certain that it is in the best interests of Canada and Canadians and, in this case for today of British Columbians.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am always amazed at how far behind events the socialists are in this House. I just listened to the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis): say: "sign a forestry agreement, sign a tourism agreement, sign an agricultural agreement" in very dramatic fashion. I do not know where the Hon. Member has been. Does he not realize that a release was issued this morning pointing out that we have reached an agreement with the Province of British Columbia—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. All I can say is that is about bloody time, after about eight months of waiting, that we have got that particular agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Siddon: Always doom and gloom.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, if I came from British Columbia I would be proud. I would feel that it is an honour to come to Ottawa and tell the people of Canada about my province, that it is one of the finest provinces in which to live.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: He was against Expo '86.

Mr. Stevens: When we read this motion which the Hon. Member has put before us, talking in terms so negative about his provincial government and, of course, about the federal government—

Mr. McDermid: And about Expo '86.

Mr. Stevens: —I would like to show the contrast through a joint press release that was issued this morning. I will read if I may:

The British Columbia and Federal Governments have reached agreement on a $525 million Economic and Regional Development Agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: The announcement goes on.

An Hon. Member: What do you say now, Manly?

Mr. Manly: It is falling short.

Mr. Stevens: The announcement goes on:

The announcement was made jointly today by Industry and Small Business Development Minister Bob McClelland and the Honourable Sinclair Stevens, Federal Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: It goes on:

The five-year agreement, with each government contributing 50 per cent or $262.5 million, will provide joint funding for provincial initiatives in forestry, industrial development, tourism, agriculture, mineral exploration and development and science and technology.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: It goes on:

McCelland and Stevens expressed pleasure that an agreement has been finalized.

It continues:

The federal government is well aware of British Columbia's program for economic renewal and this agreement will allow the province to move ahead without any additional delay—

That is attributed to me.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: It continues:

McClelland said the $525 million in joint funding clears the way for provincial government action in priority spending areas.

Let me just divert from the press release. I think it should be made abundantly clear that what the NDP did during the negotiations with the Province of British Columbia is unforgiveable. The NDP cast doubt on our negotiations. The NDP indicated there was some doubt whether we would reach a final agreement—

Mr. Riis: $600 million.

Mr. Stevens: I can only tell you, Mr. Speaker, through that entire period there was the best of faith on both sides, namely, the provincial government and the federal government, in arriving at the agreement we announced today.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It was $650 million.

Mr. Stevens: The press release goes on to state:

The Minister noted that the discussions with the federal government during the ERDA talks have also resulted in the establishment of a framework under which the two governments will also share equally in the spending of an additional $450 million under the Industrial and Regional Development Program.

The net effect of this IRDP agreement, which I anticipate will be finalized at a meeting of industry ministers—

That is of the other provinces, the territories, and the federal government to be held in Vancouver on May 27. The release continues:

—will see our two governments jointly spend a total of $575 million over the next five years on economic development here in British Columbia.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: The press release goes on:

There could be no better proof that there is a new and productive relationship between the federal government and the province.

What a contrast, Mr. Speaker. What a contrast with the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner), the Opposition itself and certainly with the socialists. We are here to help build British Columbia, to help build Canada.

Mr. Siddon: How many B.C. Members are over there?

Mr. Stevens: We are not here to go out of our way to tear B.C. down and discredit some worthwhile enterprise in that fine province.

The press release continues:

To my mind, it demonstrates that governments working in a co-operative fashion, can together develop mutually acceptable and fair agreements in the interests of job-creation and new economic activity.

That is Mr. McClelland speaking.

In short, I am very pleased to say that not only were we able, where the former Government was unable, to conclude an ERDA agreement on November 23 last year with the province, but once that agreement was in place we were able to work out the funding to which I have referred and have now in place the various agreements that will be signed, including a forestry agreement to be signed very shortly by the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) in the amount of $300 million alone.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1600)

Mr. Stevens: In short, there may be Members from British Columbia on that side of the House who do not believe in their province, but I can tell all citizens of British Columbia that there are 19 Members of Parliament on this side of the House who put British Columbia first and foremost, and that it is as a result of their efforts that such favourable ERDA funding has been arranged. When I say that, we must bear in mind that this is the largest by far of any funding arrangement of an ERDA nature which has been agreed to between the federal Government and the Province of British Columbia.

An Hon. Member: In history.

Mr. Stevens: In history.

Mr. Riis: How does it compare with other provinces?

Mr. Stevens: Again that socialist friend of mine is catching up. Province by province the funding which British Columbia is receiving, any way one wants to look at it, is one of the highest that we have been able to sign to this date. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. Riis: "One of".

Mr. Stevens: As far as I am concerned—and the Hon. Member will see the various agreements which will be concluded as a result of this funding—it is something that we can all be proud of. I can assure him that the Government of Canada is very pleased with the arrangement we have been able to arrive at.

Mr. Riis: It took an Opposition Day motion to get this announcement.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I guess you have to give credit when credit is due. Maybe the Hon. Member gave us a nice platform, but it certainly was not, in the slightest, his efforts or the efforts of any of the opposition Members that led to the conclusion of this agreement. It was scheduled for today and the Hon. Member conveniently gave us a motion to which we could respond to make the official announcement. I thank him very much.

Let me conclude by saying that I think it is a fine agreement, certainly for Canada, certainly for the people of British Columbia, but it is just one type of funding into which we have entered to help. If one listens to the words of my hon. friend, one might have the feeling that the federal Government is doing nothing. That is the typical doom and gloom type of atmosphere which the NDP seems to love to foster. That is its stock in trade—to pull down, to destroy, to belittle. Let us not overlook the record.

Mr. Riis: Remember what happened to Frank Miller. He said the same thing.

Mr. Stevens: In the fiscal year just ended, the total ERDP cases which have been offered and accepted in British Columbia were for $17.5 million and were 81 in number. The Defence Industry Productivity Program awards were four in number, totalling $13.8 million. ILAP amounted in one case to $1,300,000. The Native Economic Development Program had three cases for about $500,000 in total. The Hon. Member referred to the plight of small business. In many cases I agree that it is a problem, but the Small Businesses Loans Act had guarantees in favour of 3,874 firms for a total of $105,660,000. Shipbuilding through SIAP had 17 awards for $3.7 million. The Western Transportation Industrial Development Program had one award for $181,000; the Canadian Industrial Renewal Board, CIRB, $625,000; Federal Business Development Bank loans to 410 companies for $73,684,000. In those items alone we have over $200 million worth of loan, guarantee or grant type assistance for those who are in business in British Columbia. Perhaps the NDP does not like to hear of that, but as far as we are concerned there are people and businessmen to be helped in British Columbia. We have been doing it, we will continue to do it, and we will continue to show fine leadership, notwithstanding the negative motion of the Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I just want to put a question, if I could, to the Minister who is enjoying, in his smugness, his own delicious self-satisfying words. This morning we called the communications advisor to the Minister and asked her whether there was to be any release or announcement today on these agreements which he just announced. She said: "No". I consider that to be a direct misrepresentation from the Minister's senior staff in an attempt, I suppose, to try to lure in the NDP or myself. I consider that completely misleading, and I will tell him that I will not trust his Department again. We asked a specific question. I want the Minister to look into this, and I want an apology from the Minister on behalf of his staff for having incorrectly responded to our question which was quite direct. He was given his little smug time in the House this afternoon—

An Hon. Member: Did it affect your speech?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It did not affect my speech at all. The Minister responsible for research and development can smile, but if that is the kind of tactics which this Government is going to use in response to a question from the Office of the Leader of the Opposition, the civility about which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) talks is not going to last very long in this House.

We called again just after the Minister made his announcement to ask for a copy of that release. The same people said: "The release has not yet been prepared. We can't give you a copy". Take it under advisement, Mr. Speaker, that we will know how to deal with this Minister in future.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, of course I am not aware of the conversation which a representative from the Official Opposition Leader's office apparently had with an official in my Department, but I can tell you there may have been an honest—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): A deliberate lie, that is what it was.

Mr. Stevens: No, no.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Not from the Minister, from his staff.

Mr. Stevens: There may have been an honest misunderstanding, because the truth is that it was not until this morning that the Cabinet of British Columbia gave its final agreement to what has now been announced. We waited for that. Second, the drafting of the release took place at that moment when British Columbia sent on telex what it felt would be the suitable joint release. In turn we replied. That release, if it has not been released, is certainly being put out in British Columbia and in Ottawa currently. My understanding is that it is already out. The thing that I want to emphasize is that Mr. McClelland announced this in the B.C. legislature, certainly if not before Question Period during Question Period in this House. There was absolutely no intention on our part to withhold information or, certainly, to mislead the Leader of the Opposition or his staff in the way he has indicated.

• (1610)

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I have a question to put to the Minister. I have listened quietly to the debate all afternoon. Coming from Ontario, I was very happy for the people of British Columbia. I listened to the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) knocking Expo '86. He said that it was not going to be a success and he was making bets across the floor of the House that it would be a failure. Does this type of attitude on the part of socialists in British Columbia encourage tourism in that province? Does it encourage people to visit Expo '86? Is this the type of thing Members of Parliament should be doing for their own provinces?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, of course not. I think it is time that we in this House, to a Member, got supportive of Expo '86. When I was in the Far East, I was very pleased to hear people from Thailand, Singapore, Indonesia and other areas indicate that they were looking forward to coming to Expo '86; some of them were looking forward to having pavilions at that fine exposition. As far as I am concerned, this exposition is not just for British Columbia, it is a Canadian showcase and it is time we got behind it and made it a success.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make one statement and follow it with a quick question. So that there is no misunderstanding regarding Expo '86. I did not in any way say that it was not an appropriate forum for developing a tourist infrastructure. The point I was making was that an awful lot of money was being spent and all indications are that it will be a losing proposition financially.

Mr. St. Germain: You wanted to bet on it.

Mr. Riis: I said it will not be a financial success. That was my wager.

Mr. St. Germain: And I'll take it.

Mr. Blenkarn: Do you want that?

Mr. Riis: It is not what I hope will happen, it is what every analyst has indicated will happen. I am simply reflecting what those who have analysed the situation have said.

The Minister knew that he would be embarrassed today if he did not come up with a negotiated settlement. I am pleased to see that he has used this opportunity to say that an agreement has been signed. Would the Minister be prepared to indicate whether or not he will table this agreement? When will we know the precise details of it? When and where will they be made available? Literally thousands of people from that province have been waiting for months and months with pent up ambition, waiting to go ahead. When and where will the details of the agreement be made available so that we may release this pent up ambition?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member probably knows, the ERDA agreement has already been made public. It was signed on November 23. What we have agreed to with the Province of British Columbia is on the over-all funding that will take place under the ERDA, being $525 million. The first agreement to be signed will likely be signed by my colleague, the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew). That is an agreement for $300 million which of course will be made public when it is signed.

Mr. Riis: It hasn't been signed yet.

Mr. Stevens: As I said, we have agreed on the over-all funding. We have agreed on which agreements will receive what amount of funding from the $525 million.

Mr. Riis: When will the signing take place?

Mr. Stevens: The Hon. Member had better ask my colleague, the Minister of State for Forestry. I would presume—

Mr. Riis: I'll ask you, you're responsible.

Mr. Stevens: I would presume that he will sign it as soon as his counterpart in British Columbia is available, at a time convenient to both of them.

Mr. Merrithew: Very soon.

Mr. Riis: You said in October.

Mr. Merrithew: Very soon.

Mr. Stevens: The agreement is there.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I would like to follow up on the question put by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). Am I correct in understanding that there is no detail in the announcement? Is it my understanding that there are some dollar figures but that there is nothing that will allow work to begin tomorrow in the Province of British Columbia to implement this agreement? Are we still some time away from having the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) sign the forestry agreement which would then allow for planting, road construction and the like to begin?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, there goes another one of the socialists demonstrating that he either does not understand or does not realize how the ERDA process works. Under the ERDA process there are subagreements, but before the subagreements are signed there is an agreement on over-all funding between the two jurisdictions. The forestry agreement is ready to be signed. It is not a question of any delay in the implementation. The only thing that was holding it up was the agreement on the over-all funding, and we now have that agreement. We know that $300 million will be devoted to the forestry agreement so that can be signed forthwith. The other agreements will be signed very, very quickly.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, this is the first time we have had an opportunity to deal specifically with issues affecting British Columbia. It is not often that the Parliament of Canada is used as a forum in which reflections are cast on the economic leadership provided by a provincial Government. I am not sure that it is wholly advisable as a practice to use the floor of the House of Commons to impinge upon the activities of a legislature of a sovereign province. To a certain extent, this motion deals with other jurisdictions, but it has been put. I feel that it may simply be theatrics on the part of members of the New Democratic Party.

A provincial New Democratic convention will be taking place in my riding at the University of British Columbia on Friday. Canadian Press has said the following about that convention:

This year's provincial New Democratic party convention may lack the excitement of last year's leadership race—

That is for sure. It is going to be a big yawn. It is going to be so dull that the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) wanted to hype it up a bit this afternoon.

I believe we should primarily be concerned with our own jurisdiction and I will deal with that in a moment. However, I might suggest to the Hon. Member who introduced the motion, and to his colleagues, that the New Democratic Party happens to be part of the problem in British Columbia. The polarization between the Social Credit on the right and the NDP on the left has paralysed that province for several years. There is no feeling of compromise, there is no attitude of consensus and there is no civility in discussion. There is a crying need, I believe, for a moderate voice in that province.

[Translation]

It cannot be said too often that the situation in British Columbia is extremely polarized. Instead of having a consensus, instead of having a civilized debate, there is perpetual confrontation, which makes for an extremely unhappy political environment.

[English]

That is why I believe that moderate voices will prevail. Hon. Members opposite may not agree, but I believe that there is an opportunity for Liberalism and for moderate voices to gain a threshold in the legislature of the Province and in the Parliament of Canada.

I believe that if one has suggestions to make to the Government of another jurisdiction, one should go to that jurisdiction and tell the Government about them in person. I did that in Kamloops last Friday when I was in the riding of the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap, and I did the same earlier in the day in Kelowna, the provincial riding of the Premier of the Province, the Hon. William Bennett. I talked about issues in which the federal Government had a joint role to play.

The most pressing issue facing the province in terms of investment for the future is education. It is the key to our future right across the country and is or should be the number one priority. Education in British Columbia is now in a shambles. There has been no commitment from either the provincial or the federal Government to rescue that situation. New technology is upon us and, unless the Province of British Columbia educates its young people to respond to that technology in terms of training, we will not be able to compete with the Pacific Rim, our natural market.

Retraining of members of our older workforce who are being replaced by machines and robots and affected by economic cycles over which they have no control is absolutely crucial. Technical education is fundamental to the future of British Columbia. If we are going to allow the young people of the province to reach their potential, to contribute to the country and to retain hope in the country, then education must be given more attention than it has been given in British Columbia.

• (1620)

Yes, it is primarily a provincial jurisdiction. But, there is a federal role. When I was Minister of Finance I can recall negotiating post-secondary education agreements with the provinces. The idea was that 50 per cent of every dollar came from the taxpayers of Canada, as was authorized by Parliament, and 50 per cent came from the legislature of each province. The people of British Columbia, through their Government, have seen those federal funds, contributed to by the taxpayers of the country, diverted to the extent that next year, instead of the fifty-fifty relationship between the taxpayer and the country and the taxpayer and the province, the people of Canada will pay over 100 per cent for post-secondary education operating costs in British Columbia because the funds have been diverted from education for other purposes.

As a result, the universities in British Columbia are in trouble. The universities are losing their best researchers and professors. Student aid is also under attack, rendering less accessible university education to the broad population, regardless of family income or background. That investment is being neglected, primarily in British Columbia.

We want to reach out to the Pacific Rim and the markets of the Far East. We should be concentrating on educating our young people in British Columbia in the Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Russian and Far East languages. We should be learning their cultures and business practices in order to allow British Columbia to compete on a world scale. The Government of British Columbia is not meeting that challenge, nor is it responding to federal initiatives.

George Pedersen, formerly the President of the University of British Columbia, which is in my riding, resigned. He said:

What I find completely impossible to accept is the uncertainty and complete lack of planning that is going on in this province as it relates to our university system.

At the primary and secondary level the Minister of Education for British Columbia is now firing school boards. Well, I may disagree with the political opinions of some of the trustees in the Vancouver School Board, and other school boards, but those trustees were democratically elected. We have local school boards to better co-ordinate the priorities of the parents and the priorities of the teachers in the operation of the schools in individual communities. The schools are better run from the communities. The schools are not better run from Victoria, and they are certainly not better run from Ottawa. Those trustees were fired. I find that heavy-handed. I find the action Draconian. As I said in Kelowna, which is the constituency of the Premier, I find that action to be a rape of the democratic process.

I would like to speak about the medicare situation. The Supreme Court of British Columbia judgment said that the Government of British Columbia was violating the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Canada Health Act in restricting billing numbers for doctors. Chief Justice McEachern said that the Government's conduct was: "Orwellian, Draconian" and "the antithesis of fundamental justice". In Kamloops last week I met with Dr. Rizhya Mia. She is the young doctor who raised the issue in the first place. She had a lot of guts. She stood up against the entire governmental structure of the Province to make her point and the point of young interns and doctors of the country. Now, despite that judgment, the Government of British Columbia is introducing Bill C-50, which attempts to circumvent the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the Canada Health Act and the judgment.

Last week when I questioned the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) he said that the federal Government would "maintain the integrity" of medicare. Where is the action by the federal Government? What has been done to maintain the integrity of the Canada Health Act and our universal medicare system? On this, as on other issues, we are getting great rhetoric from the Government benches, as we heard again this afternoon, although I have seldom heard it quite that smug. But we are not getting any action.

I believe the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap was entitled to ask where the underlying agreements lie within the overriding umbrella of the ERDA. The Minister rose with some fanfare and said that there was a press release. This morning we were told that there would not be an announcement. We asked for the press release, but it had not been completed. The only thing which has happened is that the funding amount has been agreed upon at $525 million. None of the underlying agreements for forestry, mining, the environment, fisheries, or tourism have been signed. We are no further ahead. The Government managed, however, to present the press release in an attempt to embarrass the mover of the motion.

That $525 million is well short of the $650 million which the Province of British Columbia felt it was entitled to. In the reading of that press release, I noticed that the money would respond to provincial Government priorities. What concerns me is that the federal Government is not insisting on a national agenda for ERDA. It is all very well to respond to provincial priorities, but we have a national agenda for reforestation, fishing, mining and tourism. We will be putting further questions to the Minister and to the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) when we have those agreements, asking how that national agenda will be maintained. What guarantees do we have that the provincial Government will not divert funds from the underlying purposes of the agreement for other purposes, along the priorities which that particular province may set for itself, in complete denial and repudiation of the purpose of ERDA? It has been done in other areas and it can also be done here.

Fifty cents of every dollar in British Columbia comes from the forest industry. Reforestation is critical. Analysts have indicated that there are only 38 years of trees left in that province, maybe more or maybe less. The modernization of that industry must continue. The competition of trees which come from a shorter harvest in the southern United Sates, Latin America and elsewhere is becoming more and more damaging for the Province of British Columbia.

The province needs research and development. We are not contributing to the technical innovation of the natural resource industries in British Columbia. I see nothing concrete in terms of research and development in British Columbia. The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) admitted yesterday, before the committee, that the promise of the Prime Minister to double research and development, which he made during the election campaign, would not be realized within the term of this Government. It is another broken promise. We now know that research and development is no longer a priority.

I would like to deal with mining. The Mining Association of British Columbia, in its brief which was presented to the Standing Committee on Transport, said that transportation was absolutely fundamental to the infrastructure of the mining industry. We have heard nothing about that this afternoon. The mining industry in the Province of British Columbia is now competing world-wide against subsidized metallurgical competition, which is subsidized by governments and owned by governments which sometimes sell those metals under cost. That is what British Columbia is having to compete against.

A lot of geophysical research should be applied. We should be looking at new ways to discover ore bodies. At the moment the companies are not able to do that. In the last three years the mining industry in British Columbia suffered a total loss of one-third of a billion dollars. If we add provincial property taxes and hydro taxes—which, after all, are just taxes on gravity representing costs which must be passed on we see that money is not recoverable. In British Columbia we should be looking at taxes which are based on profits, not taxes which are taken at the root, making the cost infrastructure of the industry non-competitive world-wide.

I have not heard a commitment for small business. Nor have I heard much about tourism. What has happened to employment in the tourism industry in British Columbia is roughly equal to what has happened in the mining industry. It represents roughly 8 per cent to 9 per cent of the total employment in the province. When we realize what is happening to the mining industry and the challenge which faces the forestry and fishing industries, then tourism is obviously the most immediate way to take up the slack. I hope we will receive more information from the Minister about what the Government intends to do by way of a federal response. All we have seen so far are cuts to the Canada Wildlife Service, cuts to the Parks Canada budget and the raising of fees to enter those parks. That is no way to sponsor the tourism industry in British Columbia. The Government should be imaginative. It should be converting Garibaldi into a national park.

I would like to speak about trade. I have said repeatedly in this House, since having had the honour of representing the riding of Vancouver Quadra, that Canada is no longer simply an Atlantic or an Arctic nation, it is now also a Pacific nation. We must reach out to the markets in the Pacific Rim. The need is urgent and the infrastructure must be supplied under the agreements to which the Minister so smugly referred. It is crucial for the long-term economic development and growth in British Columbia. At the moment the economy in the province is probably sustained only by mega-projects. In September of 1986, construction on Expo '86 will have been completed—and I want to say quite categorically, as I said in Vancouver, that I am a strong booster of Expo. I think it will add a lot to our traditions—

• (1630)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I believe Senator Jack Austin, if I can refer to our colleague in the other place, deserves a lot of the credit for putting it through, and we are going to give it all the support we can. There comes a time when every province and every country has to show itself off to advantage, and I think the trading possibilities, as we welcome millions of people from the Far East, the Pacific Rim and the west coast of the United States, will be of great advantage to the province. I happen to be the only Member of Parliament who sat here both as the Member from Montreal during Expo 1967 and the Member from Vancouver for Expo '86. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, they were and are worth-while ventures.

In September of 1986 the construction for Expo'86 will be completed. The advanced rapid tranpsort line will be completed. The Annacis Island bridge and the Coquihalla highway will be completed. There will not be any more of those mega-projects to boost the very weak economy of the Province of British Columbia which has the second highest unemployment rate in the county. So we have a very crucial and vital year ahead of us, which is why this debate has a good deal of relevance.

What we have at the provincial level is the New Democratic-Socred split—the confrontation I have already described—and the people of British Columbia are getting tired of looking at the same old faces, the same old ideas and the same outlook of that legislature. The Members of that legislature remind me of two punch drunk boxers who are still fighting the battles of yesteryear. We need a new attitude, some new moderation and some new political voices in the Legislature of British Columbia. This confrontation is frustrating both growth and investment.

At the federal level, it is good to see, for a change, so many Conservative Members in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I am talking about Hon. Members from British Columbia. The only time we ever hear from them is when they are flapping their fins as if they were trained seals behind the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). What have we heard from these 19 Conservative Members? They have been the most invisible, anonymous and silent group of Members of Parliament who were ever elected to the House of Commons.

An Hon. Member: We are working.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I asked some high school students at the Kelowna secondary school whom they could name as their Conservative Members of Parliament, and they hadn't the faintest idea.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: There are 1,500 students in the school.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Fifteen hundred students were at that meeting. It was broadcast live throughout the whole of the Okanagan Valley by two radio stations. It was the first real representation the people from the Okanagan have received for some time.

I have known the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) for a long time, Mr. Speaker. He brought in a fishery treaty on West Coast salmon, but not a single Member of Parliament saw that treaty before it was initialled. And we have deep problems in fishery. The catch is limited. With all the technology available to that industry, it could take the catch in four or five days if it went at it all at once. We need a salmon enhancement program desperately. And we have to look at reforestry because the silt which is a result of the failure to reforest is plugging our spawning grounds. But the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans brings in a treaty which no one saw before it was signed.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) brought in her so-called oil and energy deal. She still has not settled the natural gas question which is very important to British Columbia. She also has not fulfilled the government promise of the Vancouver Island pipeline. We are very anxious to see what happens to that.

The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) had to admit yesterday that the promise of the Conservatives to double research and development was a flat and empty piece of rhetoric. That Party is long on rhetoric, but short on solutions.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I am glad to see those Hon. Members here, as I am sure you are, Mr. Speaker, those 19 Hon. Members. This may be the first time we have ever heard from them. Get their names. Here they are for the first time.

An Hon. Member: They are phantoms.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I think they are phantoms. What about the Prime Minister's commitment to British Columbia? He has travelled far and wide. He has been to New York—he borrowed a black tie and put on his Gucci shoes. He has been in Washington and he has been in London for a photo opportunity with the Queen. He has been to Bonn where he saved the world. But he has only made one trip to western Canada since the election. On St. Valentine's Day, February 14, he had a love-in session in Regina where not one single problem affecting western Canada was dealt with. But he has not been to British Columbia since September 4.

An Hon. Member: How many times are you out there?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I am out there every three or four weeks representing the riding of Vancouver Quadra.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I invite the Prime Minister, through you, Mr. Speaker, and if any of the 19 trained seals here from British Columbia can get his ear at the next caucus meeting, they can tell him that I invite him out to British Columbia to look at the food banks, the unemployment ranks, our native people on the streets looking for jobs, and the lost hope. I invite him to look into the eyes of our young people. I would like to show him around and let him see the concern of the people of British Columbia.

When I graduated from the University of British Columbia in 1949, there were Chamber of Commerce billboards saying, "Business is moving to B.C. We have men to match our mountains". It was not, in those days, a question of whether or not we were going to get a job; it was a question of what job we were going to choose. That is not the situation today. The unemployment rate in the Province of British Columbia, particularly for our young people, is acute. I agree on one particular point with the Hon. Member who introduced this motion, that is, that the potential is there. It is still an unlimited frontier. Now is the time to expand, not to retrench in British Columbia. It is the time to raise the horizons of the province, not to lower them. It is the time to restore the hopes of our young people, not to dash them. I look to the future, and within the scope of the motion put by the Hon. Member, I hope he can avoid the quarrels which have paralyzed that province for almost a generation. Let us give up the old fights and get away from what I see as a punch drunk boxing posture. Let us get on to something positive.

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment and then a question. I certainly enjoyed the comments of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). Although he got swallowed up in negativity toward the end, he was somewhat positive as he began, especially when he talked about Expo '86. As one of the 19 Members from British Columbia who worked quietly behind the scenes to help to make that ERDA agreement work—which, by the way, is five times what the previous Liberal Government ever came up with in my province—I do take exception to his comment about seals. If it comes to a decision between acting the way his gang of four act as they sit behind him every day in the House of Commons, and acting quietly behind the scenes in the way we act, I will choose the latter every time.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Schellenberg: As you know, Mr. Speaker, I am a new Member of Parliament. I have been listening for some time now and I am learning about procedure in the House of Commons. I am doing my best to learn as much as I can. I do recall on several occasions, during Question Period in particular, the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party demanding that major announcements be made in the House of Commons. Our Minister has done just that. I wonder if the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition would not comment and perhaps compliment our Minister on making that ERDA announcement right here where it belongs.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I wish I could, Mr. Speaker. He made an announcement as to the funding, which is $525 million, but it is $125 million less than the Province of British Columbia expected.

Mr. Siddon: How much did the Liberals offer, John?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is all he did. There are no underlying agreements signed. The forestry and fishery agreements still have to be signed. The tourism agreement has to be signed. So it is a bit of a camouflage we have here today.

What really annoyed me, Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member—and it is a very good question, yes, the major announcement should be made in the House, and this is one of the few which has been made in the House—however, I will not forgive that Minister's staff for misleading me this morning as to whether or not an announcement was going to be made.

Mr. Stevens: He was waiting for you outside.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): And I want an apology from the Minister. I want an apology from someone.

• (1640)

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, I think—

Mr. Nunziata: Another stranger in the House.

Mrs. Collins: I am here all the time.

Mr. Nunziata: Who goes there?

Mr. McDermid: Don't listen to Nunziata.

Mrs. Collins: I would like to make a comment and then ask a question. First, I resent some of the comments the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) has made about the members of our Party from British Columbia. I may have been called a lot of things in my time, but I do not think I have ever been called invisible.

Mr. McDermid: He is nodding his head in agreement.

Mrs. Collins: I think he would agree, especially if he recalls last summer when we were on opposite sides of the bridge. I am also very disappointed because I would have thought that even he would have conceded that May 15 is a red letter day for British Columbia. Because of the work, the very hard work of members of the B.C. caucus in the Conservative Party, we have a signed agreement, an agreement which is, as my colleague said, five times greater than any agreement ever reached before.

I was also surprised by the Right Hon. Member's comment that he thought the priorities should be set in Ottawa. I will tell him that the people of British Columbia are tired of priorities being set in Ottawa. They want to be part of setting the priorities, and that is the kind of Government this is. We work jointly with the provinces to work out priorities which will create jobs and wealth for this country, including British Columbia.

The Right Hon. Member seems to write off all of our policy, so I ask him whether he would not agree that one of the most important steps—and he alluded to it—was the signing of the Western Accord on energy. As a result of that policy and the co-operative efforts of the federal and provincial Governments and I am sure he is aware of this—we had the announcement last week of a $600 million fertilizer plant in Vancouver. I talked to the people involved in that project last night and they said they had worked on it for five years but it was only after the Western Accord was signed that they could go ahead with confidence. That is a $600 million investment by the private sector. There are no government grants but there are jobs for Canadians. That is the kind of thing this Government is providing to the people of British Columbia.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I think this is a very encouraging session. We are hearing some of these Members for the first time.

Mr. Mayer: Where have you been?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I want to encourage them to make some speeches of their own rather than responding to ours.

Mr. McDermid: Her comments were better than your whole speech.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): After eight or nine months of a Conservative Government, including 19 Members from British Columbia, all we have is the ERDA agreement, which was virtually ready for signature when the previous Government was defeated.

Mr. Siddon: It was not.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): So the Government signed that agreement. Eight months have gone by and all we have is a funding agreement, or a joint press release; we have no underlying agreement signed whatsoever.

Mr. Riis: No details.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): So the announcement by the Minister today was a bit of spurious and deliberately coincidental camouflage.

Mr. McDermid: Jealousy does not look good on you.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) on a question or comment.

Some Hon. Members: Who?

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Leader of the Opposition when was the last time that his forestry critic stood in his place and asked the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) a question.

Mr. Nunziata: We don't know who he is.

Mr. Brisco: Because I can tell him that he has yet to ask a question on forestry on the floor of the House of Commons. That is how effective his forestry critic is. The Right Hon. Member waxes eloquent about forestry. I can tell him that his critic does not seem to be a darn bit interested in it, and I do not think he himself is interested in it either. What he is doing is just giving us empty rhetoric.

Let me come back to the National Energy Program because I was in Alberta when that happened. I was not here; I had been defeated. I was in Alberta when that program came out and I watched the blue collar workers go down the tube, and those people over there helped drive them down. It was not the big buck guys; it was the little guy who took the beating, and the Liberals were ably supported by the NDP. It was the Right Hon. Member's Government that did it.

If we want to get a little bit personal about it, let me tell him what I did when I was defeated. They said to me, "Brisco, you have got to take your severance pay"; what is it, the pension fund? They said I have to take my pension money. So I took it and invested it in Canadian oil stocks. The Liberals brought in their program and my stocks went right out the window.

Some Hon. Members: Oh!

Mr. Brisco: It was his Government that did it. Sure, you people think it is funny, but I can tell you that to buy them back is going to cost me $20,000.

Mr. Nunziata: We can't help it if you are a lousy investor.

Mr. Brisco: Who the hell can afford it? But they sit over there and grin. Sure, you are a self-satisfied bunch of turkeys.

Let me give you another example. The people in my riding invested in a major hotel in Fort St. John. They invested in their country and their province. Then you brought in your program, the hotel went down the tube and Fort St. John became a ghost town. Don't you sit in your places and tell us what the hell to do! We're going to turn this country around, we're going to do the job that you totally failed to do. You are just useless!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I am glad the Hon. Member got it out of his system.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment just to compliment the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens). This man sat down with us hour after hour in negotiations as we worked out an agreement. We worked out that agreement in consultation and conciliation, something that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and his group never understood. The time has come in the history of this country when we are going to go forward again, and we are going to do that in spite of the negative comments from the NDP—

Mr. Nunziata: That is not what Frank Miller said.

Mr. St. Germain: —betting against the success of Expo and against—would you mind being quiet?

Mr. Nunziata: Oh, you do not like hearing about Frank Miller?

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. He said that he wanted to be positive. If that is true, how could he possibly get up and discuss the situation in a province? Under our Constitution the provinces have the right to run their business the way they see fit. We should not even be discussing the business of B.C., we should be discussing the business of the federal Government, business such as that which was brought forward today.

I honestly believe that the Right Hon. Member has an honest desire to help the people in Vancouver Quadra and the rest of the province, but if he wants to be positive, why is he getting involved in such a negative approach? He questioned tourism, and that was mentioned today; he questioned mining, and that was mentioned today. He stated as fact that there was no R&D in the forest industry, a natural resource which was neglected by his Party. They never put any money in R&D. That is why the forest industry today is on its knees. They did not look after that natural resource when they were in government. They did not even have a Minister responsible for forestry. But this Government had that foresight. Would he comment on that, please?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I have no comment.

Mr. St. Germain: That figures.

Mr. Belsher: It is rather discouraging to realize that the opposition Members have failed to congratulate the Minister for the signing of this agreement. The Right Hon. Leader has at least spoken somewhat positively about British Columbia and is starting to represent his constituency in the province where we all come from. But given the gloom and doom we have heard from the NDP this afternoon, you would think it was a disaster area. I can tell you that it is not.

Having visited his constituency in the last several months, would the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition not agree that people there do find that a consultative process is taking place in Ottawa, something we assured the people of Canada we would start during our tenure here in Ottawa?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the people of Vancouver Quadra feel that consultation is a very legitimate process but no substitute for decisions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my appreciation to the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) for bringing this motion forward. It was interesting to hear a bit of a debate between the Hon. Member for Mission-Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) and the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap about whether our most important resource was trees or people. Certainly I would agree with the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap that people are our most important resource, but I would like to emphasize that Government, both federal and provincial, are neglecting both. If we want to look at the neglect of our human resource, we need only look at the way in which the provincial Government is neglecting the issue of education. We can look at the way in which it fired school boards which refused to knuckle under to budget cut-backs and the way in which it refused to pass federal funding on to universities. And we can also look at the way in which the federal Government has acquiesced to that.

● (1650)

The Right Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner) questioned the appropriateness of using an Opposition Day in the House of Commons to criticize the Government of a province. Coming from British Columbia as I do, I feel this is entirely appropriate and necessary. Unlike the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Belsher), when I go back to my riding I find that in many ways it is indeed a disaster area because of the high level of unemployment. I do not know the situation in his riding, but the situation in my riding cries out for government action. We are not seeing that action soon enough.

It was interesting that the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) tried today to foist off on us the idea that everything had been agreed upon with regard to funding for the Province of British Columbia. I asked him about that yesterday and he was not able to give me an answer. A few weeks ago, Premier Bennett of British Columbia appealed to New Democratic and Progressisve Conservative Members of Parliament from British Columbia to try to get a decent deal from the federal Government on the issue of funding. Conservative Members of Parliament from British Columbia are now saying what a great job they have done. If any job was done, it was probably done on Premier Bennett by giving him the message that $525 million was absolutely the largest amount he was going to get rather than the $650 million which British Columbia had to expect under an ERDA agreement. The 19 Conservative Members of Parliament from British Columbia did the job on the Province of British Columbia rather than pushing the federal Government for adequate funding.

The importance of this debate can be seen simply by looking at the unemployment statistics. During the election campaign, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised that there would be tens of thousands of jobs. When we discussed unemployment statistics in Question Period on Friday, the Prime Minister claimed that some 201,000 new jobs had been created. He said, "Those are the tens and tens of thousands of jobs which we promised. Unlike the Liberals, we have delivered on our promise". The Prime Minister says he has kept that promise.

The people of British Columbia know that that promise has not been kept as far as they are concerned.

If 200,000 jobs were created across Canada, the people of British Columbia should have got 20,000 of them. Instead of 20,000 more jobs, British Columbia now has 23,000 fewer jobs than it had in September of 1984. It lost an additional 1,000 jobs last month. In September, 1984 there were 1,226,000 people employed in British Columbia. By April of 1985 that number had shrunk by 23,000 to 1,203,000. In September the unemployment rate was 14.1 per cent. In April it was 15.4 per cent. That is a 1.3 per cent increase. A recent study in my riding concluded that the real unemployment rate is 26 per cent. If British Columbia had taken the kind of initiatives taken by the Manitoba Government, and if our unemployment rate were at the same level as that in Manitoba, we would have 90,000 more jobs than we now have.

Statistics cannot begin to tell the real story of the poverty and misery which has been caused by this massive unemployment. We recognize that unemployment in British Columbia did not begin on September 4, 1984 when the present Government came into power. It is rooted in Social Credit policies which date back to the 1950s and 1960s and the sell-out program which was practised by the late W.A.C. Bennett, the father of the present Premier. At that time, our resources were alienated to large multi-national corporations which were interested in maximizing their profits. The people lost control over the planning and intelligent use of those resources. These policies were added to by the cut-back Budget introduced by the present Premier in 1983. All of this is compounded by the indifference of the Liberal Government over the many years that it was in power. The Liberals have now paid for their indifference, but the people of British Columbia continue to pay for that indifference and for the Social Credit and Conservative mismanagement of our economy.

In the last election, the present Government capitalized on the Liberal indifference. It made a number of promises, including one of a whole new era of co-operation with the provinces. To date, promised federal-provincial co-operation with the Social Credit Government has not led to any benefits for the people of British Columbia. The outstanding issue has been the failure to make a funding commitment for the ERDA agreement. The Government of British Columbia has knuckled under to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and agreed to a less than adequate sum for the ERDA agreement.

Where was the stumbling block between the federal and the provincial Governments? It certainly was not ideological. The federal Government and the British Columbia provincial Government are soul mates with regard to ideology. When the Social Credit Government introduced its cut-back Budget in 1983, the then leader of the Opposition said that it was a step in the right direction even though he would have done things slightly differently.

We have now seen the document of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) relating to cut-backs in the native policy area. We see that the difference between the federal Government and the Government of British Columbia is one of style. It has nothing whatsoever to do with substance. The difference is that Bill Bennett's cut-back program of 1983 came with one great blow when he tabled 26 cut-back Bills on the same day as he introduced his Budget. The task force of the Deputy Prime Minister acts with slick media strategy, which includes news leaks, denials, and announcements of cut-backs on big news days of which little notice is given. However, the substance of the task force memorandum to Cabinet could have been written by any of the Socred Cabinet Ministers in British Columbia. I remind the people of Canada that there are five more cut-back strategy papers to come.

Let us look at some of the specific Tory promises. Shipbuilding is an important industry in the Victoria and greater Vancouver areas. The Tories promised $75 million in assistance to the shipbuilding industry. We see in this year's Estimates that $10 million has been cut from the shipbuilding assistance program. Last spring, when the present Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) was the official critic in that area, he promised immediate movement to the second phase of the Salmonid Enhancement Program. He stressed the urgency of getting involved in its second phase. One can see from the Estimates that we are stuck in the transitional phase. There is no real commitment to salmonid enhancement beyond what took place under the previous Government.

• (1700)

The Prime Minister signed the salmon treaty with the United States. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans encouraged him to do so, and now he is travelling in the United States and Europe while the fishery in British Columbia is in a shambles.

It is interesting to hear my colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), talk about the very serious situation facing the gulf trollers while the Minister is travelling in Europe. Those fishermen have not had any indication of when they can start fishing. Therefore, they have been involved in a deliberate breach of the law in order to protest their situation.

The sports fishery is still facing a great deal of uncertainty about its future. While there is an allocation of some 270,000 Chinook, it is common knowledge that this will not nearly cover the demand made by the sports fishery on a yearly basis.

British Columbia was one of the last provinces to feel the effects of the current depression. At a time when other parts of Canada were beginning to feel the effects of a recession, the economy of British Columbia was reasonably healthy. However, when the recession did occur in British Columbia, I believe it hit British Columbia harder than it did other provinces. While people here were talking about a recovery almost a year ago, British Columbia has yet to recover from the recession. This is largely due to the action of the provincial Government, combined with the cut-back mentality of the federal Government.

The crisis in unemployment in British Columbia, Canada and the world today is not simply a political and economic problem, but a cultural and ecological problem. They require both long-term and short-term solutions.

Let me say a few words about the cultural problems. There is a lag between employment in the 1980s and the way we approach it. We continue to approach employment in terms of the 1950s or 1960s when there were 40-hour work weeks 50 weeks of the year until the age of 65. The fact is that new techniques make a great deal of that type of employment redundant.

As presently structured, our society cannot handle that redundancy. Therefore, we deal with it by creating a kind of caste system. At the top of this system are people who continue to have relatively well paid, full-time jobs. As well, these full-time jobs have fringe benefits which also vary with the job.

The level next to that cast contains a growing number of part-time employees who are generally lower paid and have few or no fringe benefits. They are usually called to work during periods of peak activity at jobs involving a great deal of stress. We can see this approach being taken by many supermarkets and department stores. In many cases, these stores have very few full-time employees and an increasing number of part-time employees. Unfortunately, that is the position being taken by the federal Crown corporation, Air Canada. That is why there is a labour dispute in that area. As our Leader pointed out recently, these people do not want to be involved in the labour force only to make pin money. They need jobs that have real income.

At the third level of the caste are those who work on short-term, low paying projects. These are job-creation projects. It is interesting to note that in many parts of British Columbia today these job-creation projects cumulatively become the largest single employer in that province. It is unacceptable that these people must live in uncertainty by working from project to project for which funding is often sporadic. There is no need for people to be stuck in a low wage, short-term project ghetto, because jobs for which there is a need in our society could be provided with the proper funding and planning.

Finally, there is the question of the unemployed. There are 1.5 million people unemployed in Canada, 220,000 of whom live in British Columbia.

A letter from the British Columbia Forest Industry Employee Adjustment Committee to the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight), the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) as well as to provincial Cabinet Ministers, tries to make some suggestions that will deal with some of these short-term cultural problems. It is important to recognize that this committee represents both union and management. It suggests that the entire British Columbia forest industry should be designated and thus be eligible for federal help. It suggests that there should be a program under that designation for voluntary early retirement at the age of 56 and that there should be such things as enhanced unemployment insurance benefits and skill upgrading. The committee makes the point that this will make a more effective use of Government funds by allowing some older workers to retire early, leave the labour force with a decent income and allow younger workers who are presently on unemployment insurance or welfare to have a chance to work.

The committee points out the very serious problems in the forest industry in British Columbia. The letter states:

> Over the past 5 years the number of production employees in the B.C. Coast Forest Industry has declined by 14 thousand. Of these, approximately 3,000 workers lost their jobs due to permanent closures and 7,000 to technological change. Most of the 14 thousand people are now unemployed and have no realistic prospects for returning to work. In addition, several thousand currently employed workers are working less than full time.

That is one reason why Members from our Party sometimes sound as if we were preaching gloom and doom. When we return to our ridings, we are faced with situations such as that. I am very surprised that when Conservative Members return to their ridings they do not see the same situations. They stand in the House, take a Pollyanna-like attitude and say that everything is rosy. They want to defend the Social Credit Government in Victoria. They suggest that the federal Government has taken initiatives to help British Columbia, but I challenge them to say what the Government of Canada has done during the past eight and a half months to alleviate the unemployment situation in British Columbia. It has done absolutely nothing.

We have 23,000 fewer people working today than when the Government came to power, and the Government is responsible. It promised jobs but it has not delivered on that promise, and I think it is time that the Government did so. It has finally been able to co-operate with the Government of British Columbia to the extent of issuing a joint press release. I would like to see those Governments co-operate to the point of creating jobs.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, let me make the observation that there is only one mistake in the motion put forward by the NDP today. It concerns the date. The date of the motion is May 15, 1985, but to be more accurate and to give a proper perspective to the motion it should read, May, 1973, May, 1974 or May, 1975. I will tell you why, Mr. Speaker. In that period, the NDP Government was in power in B.C. During that time, a provincial Minister of Mines by the name of Leo Nimsick introduced mining legislation that shut and slowed down every mine in B.C. Those that were not shut or closed down never started up. The whole mining industry from the associated service sector to the mining sector collapsed. The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) knows what I speak of. All he has to do is to tell this House what the miners still remember about that legislation. It took 10 years for the industry in British Columbia to recover. Let us not shove all the blame on my colleagues in the NDP. They are the federal component. I am talking about their provincial element. It was the most pervasive and destructive piece of legislation to impact on a mining industry, an industry which is slow to respond. If any of those Members had a grain of sense, they would know that it takes a long time for the mining industry to crank up, and it is just beginning to crank up again in British Columbia.

● (1710)

We should also look at the federal Government during the same period. Let us deal with one mine named Polaris. Does it mean anything to anybody over there? Probably not. It was a proposal put forward by Cominco Limited for the most northern mine in the world in the Arctic. That proposal for the mine was before the Liberal Government for seven years. Here are the Departments that had to deal with it: Energy Mines and Resources, Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Environment, Treasury Board, Transport, and National Revenue. Is it any wonder, Mr. Speaker, that no decision was ever reached? Nothing ever happened.

Let us look at today. The Conservatives have been in government for a period of seven months. Between the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), Polaris came on line. Polaris was approved. It took two Departments, the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and the Department of Transport. That is all it took. That mine is in production today. By virtue of the experience of Cominco Limited and of the Inuit people as well as the partnership that Cominco reached with the Inuit, let me tell you about the next and final step. The richest zinc mine in the world known today rests at the northwest tip of Alaska. It is called Red Dog. When it was discovered, Cominco became interested. It is the newest zinc plant in the world, with the most modern state of technology and the cleanest operation. Cominco was immediately interested. This mine lies in a very sensitive environmental area. It lies in an area where the native people have their normal habitat. The Aleut of Alaska were approached by Cominco and by two giant American mining corporations. Do you know what the American mining corporations did, Mr. Speaker? They took the Aleut down to New York City, wined and dined them and said: "Have we got a deal for you?" What did Cominco do? It took the Aleut to Polaris. It said: "Meet your Inuit brothers. Here is how we work with them". Guess who took the deal? Cominco is going to be operating Red Dog. That is the kind of step that has evolved from the action of the Conservative Government of this Parliament.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, spoken like a true Socred. I hope my Liberal colleagues were listening to what the Hon. Member was saying. Some of them are getting a little bit sensitive after eight and a half months at having every failure of the present Government blamed on the previous Liberal administration. I hope they know that the Socreds, like my hon. friends, are going to go on doing that for 10 years. Every problem that has come up in B.C. for the last 10 years is blamed on the New Democratic Government from 1972 to 1975. It was the best Government British Columbia has ever seen.

I want to tell the Hon. Member that when the New Democratic Party was in government we saved industries and towns. We saved the town of Ocean Falls. Where is it now? We opened up the Action Mine. We had the only copper smelter in British Columbia.

Mr. Siddon: Where is it now?

Mr. Manly: When the Conservatives were running in the last election they promised there would be some $100 million for mining exploration. They promised money for research and development. Where is that money? When is the Government going to start delivering on some of those things? We have seen capital strikes in Canada before. We saw a capital strike in the mining industry when the New Democratic Party was in power. To be perfectly honest, Sir, I have not seen any influx of capital into Canada to open new ventures in the last little while.

Mr. Siddon: You are opposing it.

Mr. Manly: Where are the mines right now? How many mines have been opened lately? We do not see capital coming in except to buy up established businesses like Mitel.

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in the comments of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly), who is my neighbour to the south. In particular, I took great interest in his comments on the gulf troller situation which is blowing up, if I may use that terminology, in my riding today.

To give a bit of history, shortly after the Pacific salmon treaty was signed, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) introduced Bill C-32 in the House of Commons which enabled him to allocate fish on the West Coast of Canada. That was two and a half months ago. That Bill was filibustered in committee by the Hon. Member's colleague, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly). A lot of delay and confusion had taken place on the West Coast because of the delay by the NDP. We now understand, as that Bill is about to be brought back to the House of Commons, that it will be again delayed by the NDP. The irony is that it is the commercial fishermen, whom they pretend to protect, who will be hurt by that, because the Minister cannot issue spot closures to the sports fishermen out there.

In reality, the delay of Bill C-32 is harming the fishermen of all user groups on the West Coast. I must ask my colleague from Vancouver Island why his colleague, the Member for Comox-Powell River, and his Party are doing everything they can to delay passage of that Bill and not give the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans the tools he needs to get the job done.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, in connection with Bill C-32, we saw some very serious problems with that Bill. We wanted a chance to discuss those problems with the Minister. Naturally, we insisted on a full debate in this House and in committee. It is interesting that it is only when the Conservatives had a gun put to their heads that they consented to hear Indian people who have very serious concerns about that Bill. The Conservatives then forced the committee to sit all night. I think this was doing an injustice to witnesses who had been called to Ottawa. The Conservatives said they were in a hurry to get the Bill to the House. They forced sittings of the committee around the clock. We have had six Opposition Days in a row because the Government is not prepared to bring forward its legislation. I have never heard such a bunch of hypocrisy in my life.

Mr. McDermid: That is nonsense.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask a question of my colleague. It is a question concerning a gas pipeline to Vancouver Island. I understood that this became a prominent federal election issue and the Hon. Member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) made some very explicit promises that such a pipeline would be built. The Conservative Party and the Province of British Columbia committed themselves to that project.

Is the Hon. Member aware of any efforts on behalf of the Government now to reach an agreement with the Province of British Columbia to build that pipeline? Does he think the people of British Columbia, particularly the people on Vancouver Island, can expect to see that pipeline built in the near future?

Mr. Manly: That is a very good question, Mr. Speaker. If election promises built pipelines, we would have seen that pipeline built many, many times in the past 19 years. I think it was first promised by the Socreds back in 1966. It has been promised at every election since then, and now even the Socreds have the good grace to blush when it is raised. The Hon. Member has not been in politics that long, so he does not feel that he has any obligation to blush for past promises. Certainly he made that promise. I believe that when we see the stairway to paradise, we will see the pipeline to Vancouver Island.

● (1720)

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to participate in this debate today, notwithstanding the pessimistic language of the motion before the House. I think all Members would do their constituents greater justice if we spoke in a constructive way about the very important issues not only before the House today but before the country and for which we all have a tremendous responsibility.

I was somewhat dismayed by the partisanship and the tendency on the part of the Opposition not to be willing to concede good news when indeed there is much good news for Canadians to be thankful, even at this early stage under this new administration.

Without a more co-operative relationship being struck between the federal Government and the provincial Governments, organized labour and the private sector, we would fail to address adequately the serious economic dilemma facing the country. At the present rate of accumulation of the national deficit, our accumulated aggregate public deficit will equal our Gross National Product by 1990. At the present time it is less than 50 per cent of our Gross National Product. Notwithstanding the braying and the alarm being expressed by opposition Members, I think they realize as well as we do that we will have to take significant measures in a spirit of co-operation if we are to restore to Canadians, in particular young Canadians, the sense of opportunity and stability which was gifted to us by our ancestors, those who went before us.

I am proud of the obvious and premeditated plan of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to seek a greater consensus, to sow seeds of goodwill in both official languages from one end of the country to another, as precedent to difficult decisions and important positive measures the Government could take to create a more optimistic and confident climate in the country of which we are all proud.

In the debate on this rather pessimistic motion, I hope the NDP and its cohorts to the right in the Official Opposition will recognize that since September 1984, 201,000 new jobs have been created in Canada compared with only 70,000 in the same period of time the year previous. It is a new year and there are new things happening. The bank rate has fallen two percentage points in the last six weeks. It is currently at a level of 9.9 per cent, the lowest level of the bank rate since the defeat of the Trudeau Government in 1978. Export sales have risen substantially, by nearly $9 billion in March of this year. Already, notwithstanding the alarm being expressed with respect to promises which the Opposition would have us fulfil overnight, there is growing confidence in the country and a new spirit of optimism on the part of all Canadians.

I must indicate that public opinion polls seem to support the notion that indeed we now have a Government in office which is setting about to manage the economy, not run it. I make that distinction quite deliberately. The NDP would have us believe that Governments are the only institutions which can properly manage and run an economy, and that this could be done by merely handing out more money. That is its approach. As the Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) pointed out a while ago in the House, that approach was the hallmark of an unfortunate coalition federal Government between 1972 and 1975. When we consider what happened in British Columbia during that period, I think we see the beginnings of the economic dilemma facing Canada today. I might add that during that period the Finance Minister of Canada was the gentleman who now sits as Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner).

I do not mean to show any disrespect to any of these individuals, but these old attitudes, this living in the past, are not what Canadians want to hear these days. They want to hear of hope and optimism. Therefore, it is with some considerable degree of pride that I stand in the House today and compliment the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) for having completed and announced in the House of Commons this afternoon, where such announcements should be made, an important agreement and a conclusion to the negotiations for an economic and regional development agreement with British Columbia.

While we have some reason for concern about the current levels of unemployment in British Columbia, I have tremendous optimism that with the assistance of this agreement and its subagreement, and in co-operation with that provincial Government and other provincial Governments of all political persuasions across Canada, we will indeed see the evolution of tens of thousands of new jobs from one end of the country to the other. I am growing rather tired of this pessimism. I suppose it is the role of the Opposition to be negative and the role of the Government to be positive. I think as Canadians, as honourable Canadians all, we should rise to a higher level of responsibility.

I have been in negotiation with my colleague in British Columbia, the Hon. Patrick McGeer, a former Liberal, concerning a subagreement on science and technology and its important role in creating new jobs and new economic opportunities in the province which I, together with my 18 colleagues on the government side, are proud to represent. On March 1, I signed with Minister McGeer a memorandum of understanding setting out the parameters of our co-operation. I expect shortly to announce a subagreement flowing from the economic and regional development agreement which was announced this afternoon by the Minister.

We in the Progressive Conservative Party believe that it is essential to make our existing industries more internationally competitive, to raise their productivity and to use new technologies, so that they will be able to survive in an increasingly competitive external world. That will not be a sufficient solution to the problem facing this nation, nor will the solution be found in more government programs to hand out money, which some other entity presumably earns and pays to Government, in order to increase the role of the service sector in our economy. If we do not have a strong, productive workforce, we cannot afford to support a strong service sector. The only solution, as I see it, to creating new economic opportunity in Canada, is to apply the emerging technologies in the most progressive way we can, in a climate of entrepreneurialism and in an envrionment where we encourage young people to rise to the height of their academic and intellectual potential, and then go out and create the new nuclei businesses which will become the new large industries of tomorrow. It will only be through the adding of value to our resources, which we have traditionally harvested, consumed and exported, that we will add new jobs, the permanent jobs which the country needs.

Therefore, I am proud to stand in the House today to indicate that the Government is committed to raising our national investment in research and development in partnership, not by handing out federal dollars in massive increased amounts, with the provinces, the private sector and the municipalities. We are committed to raising our national investment in the application of science and the technological evolution which flows from science to meet new challenges. It is my confident expectation that by 1990, we will indeed see our national level of investment in research and development rise to the level of that of our major competitor nations around the world. It is my confident expectation that we will reach a level of investment of 2 per cent to .5 per cent of Gross National Product, which is characteristic of those other countries which have been so successful in the modern industrial world.

• (1730)

Returning to the British Columbia situation, I am proud to have entered into this memorandum of understanding with the Ministry of Science in the Province of British Columbia and to be able to announce under the ERDA agreement an important subagreement in the amount of $20 million to aid in the strengthening of the already strong technological base in that province. To hear the Leader of the Opposition say that there is no high technology and research activity in British Columbia is merely indicative of the fact that he does not know his own province very well.

In fact, we have had many success stories in British Columbia, not only in the Lower Mainland of Vancouver but in the many communities throughout the province. What we need is to double and triple the activity levels of these companies and the new ones that are yet to come. These are the companies that can create true and lasting employment and the nuclei of new industrial opportunity throughout my province and the other provinces and Territories of Canada.

The thrust of the ERDA agreement which we are so pleased to have finalized today was reflected in a recent speech given in Trail, British Columbia. The next of that speech reads:

> There is a new realism that we can't rely solely on our basic resource industries to carry us through the inevitable fluctuations of the international markets where our products must be sold. We have also to broaden and expand the economic base by attracting new job-creating investment, new industry and new types of economic activity, while at the same time work hard to develop new levels of productivity in our resource industries so that they can remain competitive.

The speech went on:

> So what we are involved in is a dual process within our partnership for economic renewal. It is designed to encourage new growth and at the same time help our major industries, like forestry and mines, remain highly competitive in international markets.

While my colleagues and I have been accustomed to expressing these sentiments in every corner of Canada and in this very House, it is particularly significant to note that the recent speech from which I quoted was presented a few days ago in British Columbia by W. R. Bennett, the Premier of British Columbia.

I am pleased to be able to say that this partnership agreement which we have struck with a Government of another political persuasion is not unlike the partnership and accord we have struck in the Province of Quebec with a Party of another political persuasion and indeed the partnership that we struck in the Province of Manitoba with the provincial New Democratic Party. I am saying that we can make much greater progress if we work together as a team irrespective of our political differences. I must call upon members of the Opposition to give at least some small measure of credit to the Prime Minister and to the Government for having managed to accomplish what a year ago would have seemed impossible, namely, a new spirit of co-operation, consensus and goodwill between the provinces and the federal Government irrespective of political persuasion.

The motion is in two parts. It decries the lack of economic leadership, but, as I have already indicated, the statistical evidence proves the contrary. The second part of the motion suggests that the Government has failed to meet its campaign promises. Any reasonable minded person would have to concede that within its first eight months of office, a new Government could not be expected to fulfil all of its promises unless, of course, it is the view that promises translate into hand-outs or into redistributing chunks of cash that we obtain from the taxpayers to other people who happen to get in line first. That is not the style of this Government.

Mr. Waddell: Like the ERDA agreement.

Mr. Siddon: The priority of this Government is to work in partnership—

Mr. Waddell: What is the ERDA agreement? Don't be a hypocrite.

Mr. Siddon: If the Hon. Member would give me an opportunity to respond, I would be happy to respond. The ERDA agreement represents seed money, the kind of effective investment by Government which does not buy jobs but makes a down payment on them. It flows from a partnership between two levels of Government and draws the municipal and regional levels of Government into the mix with the private sector and, hopefully, in many cases with the use of investment and resources from organized labour and other sources. I am speaking of the federal Government creating a positive climate and attitude together with its provincial partners.

Hon. Members opposite certainly do not expect promises to be fulfilled within a matter of a few weeks or a few months. I would suggest that if they are patient and watch the trends in the indices, they will see a significant improvement in the unemployment rates within the next two or three years and indeed they will see tens of thousands of new jobs from one end of the country to the other.

We have to create a more industrially intensive economy, bearing in mind the fragility of our environment and the importance of using our resources wisely. Therefore, for British Columbia, as well as the commitments that have been made under the ERDA agreement, the Industrial and Regional Development Program is proving to be of great benefit. The IRDP is the core program of my colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Last November 9, the Minister announced an increased emphasis on the use of this program to support innovation, technology and trade. Indeed, this program which is available to budding new industries, middle-sized industries and larger industries as seed money or front-end assistance either by way of renewable contributions, interest-free loans or grants, is going to be a very important element in the future development of the province. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion announced earlier this afternoon that an additional $50 million of that IRDP program would be managed jointly by the two levels of Government and targeted to the small and medium-sized industrial initiatives rooted in innovation and the development of new industry and enterprise in the province.

I might point out that the IRDP program is proving to be increasingly beneficial to British Columbia in that the traditional statistics have shown a bias toward the large industrial regions of Canada. In the past nine months, there has been tremendous flow of additional funding to new economic activity in British Columbia. For the nine months prior to March 31, 1985, 73 IRDP projects were approved for British Columbia with expenditures totalling over $23 million. This compares to the only 34 project and just over $5 million spent during the corresponding period of the previous year under a Liberal administration. We have seen more than a doubling in the number of projects since September 4 and more than four times as much IRDP money going into British Columbia under a Progressive Conservative Government.

In addition, I want to emphasize that the over-all effect of the November 8 economic statement will be a stimulation of private sector research and development. It is our objective to see the fledgling industries and the established high-tech industries in the province grow and contribute to a more diversified and stable economy. That is an area in which the Industrial and Regional Assistance Program will be very, very helpful to the future of the province.

There are a number of other initiatives which will create new economic activity, not only in British Columbia but across Canada. The Government's decision to spend $1.5 billion to upgrade the North Warning System will have major economic implications for Canada and particularly for our technology-intensive industries. Over 7,000 person-years of work will be created in the communications industry alone. One initiative of the federal Government that is of special interest to me is the one that I announced two weeks ago in the form of an interim space plan for Canada. The announcement was greeted as good news by the vibrant space community which is evolving in British Columbia and throughout Canada.

• (1740)

Of course, the Western Accord on energy has been of tremendous benefit. I received a news release at 2.30 p.m. today which indicated that Mobil Oil Limited and Petro-Canada had announced a participation agreement to establish a major LNG facility to export western natural gas to the Far East.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Siddon: That announcement would not have been possible were it not for the new measures and the elimination of the retrograde provisions of the National Energy Program. That is the kind of initiative which this Government has taken.

We have also announced increased funding to granting councils for the Medical Research Council and the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council. In addition to science and technology and economic development, Expo '86 promises to be a great shot in the arm for British Columbia and, indeed, for all of Canada. I would like to indicate that a recent study of Expo '86 indicates that Canada will enjoy an increase in the Gross National Product of $3.4 billion. We will enjoy a $1.8 billion increase of total value-added benefits to the Canadian economy. As well, approximately $1.1 billion worth of new salaries will flow from Expo '86. It relates to 63,000 person-years of employment and an increase of $487 million in combined provincial and federal revenues. Seventy per cent of the benefits will accrue to the Province of British Columbia.

In conclusion, I would like to say that this motion is entirely out of order and inappropriate in relation to the degree of optimism which I and my 19 colleagues feel about the future of British Columbia, especially in light of the very positive and significant announcement which was made in the House this afternoon by my colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments?

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, the Minister must be spending all of his time in Ottawa and not any in Richmond, British Columbia. He does not understand that B.C. is mired in a recession. It has a 14.8 per cent rate of unemployment. In the rest of Canada, unemployment statistics have decreased, but the statistics in British Columbia have increased. The Premier of British Columbia, who has mismanaged the economy of that province even to the extent of putting the northeast coal megaproject in the wrong place, has not concentrated on development. That Premier is complaining that the federal Tories are not doing anything for him.

There is no pipeline on Vancouver Island. The forestry research grant was cut by $3.5 million in November. The fees to fishermen were cut by $6.3 million. The Minister abolished the National Research Council Energy Division and all the economic spinoffs that it would have provided to private enterprise. There were cut-backs in research programs into fishery and salmon enhancement.

Now that a Budget will be brought down, I would like to ask the Minister a question. In the City of Vancouver, the Social Credit Government, his friend, has undemocratically cut the whole Vancouver School Board. Is the Minister, who comes from the greater Vancouver area, prepared to use the influence which the federal Government has to get the B.C. Government to stop its undemocratic actions and its restraint programs which are killing the people of B.C.? If the Minister is so concerned about the deficit, then why did he give $3 billion to 12 large oil companies, ten of which are American-owned? Those oil companies will benefit to the tune of $3 billion. Will the Minister assure us that he will not look for that $3 billion in the Budget which will be brought down next week? Will he assure us that that money will not be taken out of the hides of the ordinary people of Canada, especially those in British Columbia.

The Minister has been spending too much time in Ottawa. The people in B.C. are suffering. There are food banks in my riding. Other parts of Canada may be recovering, but British Columbia is not recovering. I do not want to hear things about ERDA, because the Government has been dragging its feet for months on that. There are a lot of loose ends with respect to that agreement. When will the Minister do something concrete to stop the restraint and punishment which has been forced on the ordinary citizens of British Columbia? When will the Minister stop talking about deficits and start talking about stimulating the Canadian economy, especially in British Columbia?

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, I tried to save the best news until last, but unfortunately I delivered it before the Hon. Member arrived in the House. Obviously, he has not been following the debate this afternoon. If he had, notwithstanding the points of debate which he raised, he would have realized that many of his concerns had been addressed. As he well knows, he has overstated the dilemma. Much as there is an unemployment problem in British Columbia, I believe that it is more important to approach the future with optimism, rather than with the paranoid, negative attitude which flows so frequently from opposition benches.

Surprisingly, he is the only opposition Member from British Columbia in the House. I travel to British Columbia virtually every weekend. I do not know where he spends his time because I do not often see him travelling to British Columbia. If he wants to criticize me for my attendance in my riding, I could do likewise. In fact, the people of my constituency are very pleased with the fact that there are several Members from British Columbia on the government side of the House. I think that is a reflection of the will which the people of Canada expressed on September 4, and I trust that it will continue to be expressed in the future.

I would like to make one final comment. The Hon. Member raised the question about who are our friends and enemies. He said that we should use some clout. The legacy which was left to this Government was a legacy of antagonism, frustration, aggravation and confrontation. That was created partly because of the dynasty of mismanagement which the country experienced under a socialist Prime Minister who was supported by his colleagues in the NDP. Our friends are to be found in the Parti Québécois in Quebec, in the New Democratic Party in Manitoba, and in the Social Credit Party in British Columbia to the same extent that they are found in Progressive Conservative administrations across Canada. This Government believes that if it does not start out with a common commitment to solve Canada's problems and stop living in the past, as our friends opposite constantly wish to do, we will never overcome the problems which face Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, the Minister spent quite a bit of time talking about the glowing prospects of the economy. I have not seen an economic forecaster project a growth in the Gross National Product this year of over 2.3 per cent or 2.4 per cent. If we compare that with 1983, when the economic growth in this country was 3.5 per cent and with 1984, when it was 4.9 per cent, and then look back at the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) prophecies and commitments during the election campaign that he was going to create literally hundreds of thousands of jobs, we start to wonder whether this Government is really committed to creating those jobs. When all of the independent companies and groups like the Conference Board and the Economic Council are forecasting economic growth in this country of less than 3 per cent—and we know that it takes about 3 per cent growth just to keep our labour force at its present level and our unemployment level from not increasing—why does the Government wait for eight or nine months to bring in a Budget? In its economic statement the Government just told us the things it was opposed to. It was opposed to research and development and renewable energy. We had one of the best developed programs for developing a new policy in renewable energy in all of the OAC and from among the western industrialized nations, yet it was cut out. We saw the government cut out things like the protection and monitoring of the environment. We saw it lay off dozens of NRC people, the cream of the crop, so they could go off to the United States. We saw the Government reduce drastically the Canadian Wildlife Service. We had a model institute for toxicology research, at the University of Guelph, associated with the University of Toronto, which would have given us a world class institution for research and development and which would have brought into play not only the training of scientists but the creation of new designs and models for toxicology research. It was a centre which would have involved the private sector, the universities and the co-operation of the Province of Ontario, but it was cut out from under us. So I think the Minister should act in the way he did yesterday at the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates where he admitted that in fact the Government was not going to keep its promise for research and development. He should come clean on this issue this afternoon instead of giving us all this gobbledy-gook.

• (1750)

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, in regard to the final remark made by the Hon. Member, I suppose he was not in the House 25 minutes ago when I gave my response to the concern he has expressed. This Government does not believe we solve problems by throwing money at them. This Government believes in sound management and the determination of priorities.

Mr. Foster: That's why you fired the scientists.

Mr. Siddon: The fact that we inherited a deficit which amounts to one-third of our annual budget is a reflection of the poor judgment of our predecessors, and they have little cause to sit in this House and criticize a Government which, by its performance to date, has shown a clear sign of renewed confidence, and the statistical indicators are showing strong symptoms of economic recovery.

Mr. Foster: Tell us about economic growth.

Mr. Siddon: At the outset of the comments of the Hon. Member, he talked about projections. Unfortunately, we have economists in this country who project by looking back. They very seldom take into account the options which face a Government. That was a significant flaw in planning when the National Energy Program was introduced by the Government of which that Hon. Member was a part. That was a significant flaw in judgment, which was reflected in the MacEachen Budget of 1982. That was a significant flaw in judgment, which led us to take the wrong response to the oil embargo flowing from the Middle East in 1975. What I am saying, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, is that people who have the power of political determination and choice between a number of optional policies have the power to influence the future of a nation in profound ways. I will assure the Hon. Member—

Mr. Foster: Why have you welched on your promises?

Mr. Siddon: I would ask the Hon. Member, if he lacks faith—to use another popular expression—to just watch us. Just watch us grow.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say something a little partisan to the Minister, and then I want to say something a little non-partisan. It always amazes me how the Minister can stand in this House—and he is an intelligent man, well educated—and say that the NDP's solution is to give money away. Then about ten minutes into his speech, he proudly announced how great the Government was today on ERDA, which he describes as grants, subsidies and interest-free loans to help the forest industry. The fact is that that is totally illogical. One cannot damn a process and then claim credit for it ten minutes later.

The Minister asks us to be positive. I think I am a positive person. I notice by the smiles of Hon. Members opposite that they agree. I live in a province, as do many of the Hon. Members who spoke today, which is out of step with the small recovery we are seeing in Canada. We have almost 15 per cent unemployment. In the beautiful Kootenay Mountains there is about 30 per cent unemployment. In Kamloops, the riding of the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis), the unemployment rate is 20 per cent or 25 per cent and up. There are tremendous problems. I think the people of British Columbia are beginning to realize that the present Government of that province has mismanaged its economy. It has been chasing fool's gold when I believe it should be chasing green gold.

I heard the Minister's notions about high-tech. He talks about free economic zones and so on. But let us use a little common sense. The real greatness and strength of British Columbia is in its resources and its people. Its resources are tremendous. We have terrific forest resources. I know the Minister and I do not differ on that. We can look at some of the European countries which have updated their technology, as we have not, with a few exceptions such as the pulp mills and the caribou. By and large, our forest industry is old and needs to be revamped. We are worried about the American trade barriers which could totally destroy our province. I think both the Minister and I agree that there is lots to be done in the forestry area. The Minister has my support in helping with the forestry agreements. But we believe that the federal Government has got off to a very poor start. We think it has dragged its heels in providing things for British Columbia. There is, however, some promise, and we will continue to press the Government. There is the use of Petro-Canada, the government oil company, which got going in the Parliament of 1972 to 1974, of which the Minister spoke so badly.

Mr. Siddon: What is the matter with mixed enterprise?

Mr. Waddell: There is nothing the matter with mixed enterprise. I am not against that. I do not believe the Minister is. We should be using Petro-Canada, using private industry, to get things going for British Columbia. As a Member from British Columbia, I say to the Minister that we are going to keep after his Government to look after the interests of British Columbia, because the province is out of step.

We have great tourist potential. I know the Minister believes in education, as I do, and we cannot have this dispute between the provincial Government and the Vancouver School Board or the Cowichan School Board. Only the kids suffer. British Columbia somehow has to get hold of itself and get some economic leadership in order to develop the province in the way it can be developed. Let us go after what I call the "green gold", that is, the forest industry and our fisheries. We are going to keep after the Minister and that is why we proposed this motion today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock, it is my duty to inform the House that pursuant to Standing Order 62(11), proceedings on the motion have expired.

This House stands adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 6 p.m. the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, May 16, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT—TIME ALLOCATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry) moved:

That this House condemns the Government not only for its failure to protect Canada from potential problems of foreign direct investment as demonstrated by the Government's failure to take effective action in dealing with foreign take-overs in the cases of Mitel and of the book publishing industry, but also for its contempt for the parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

He said: Mr. Speaker, we are now in our sixth straight day of Opposition motions and resolutions. This has to be one of the most incredible and unorthodox situations with which Parliament has been faced in decades. What it basically adds up to is that the Government has gone on strike, or perhaps on lock-out. The Government doesn't want to govern, Mr. Speaker. I think the real reason is that the Government has realized that once all the fun and games of making appointments and having public relations meetings and television interviews, is over, it really has to get down to the hard, difficult and serious business of governing this country and it doesn't want to do it.

Conservatives have never liked to govern. Their long history has shown that. Now that that Party finally has a chance to govern, what happens? We have six straight days in Parliament with no government business on the Order Paper. Can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, any Government in a western democracy so totally abdicating its responsibility that it has to rely upon the Opposition to maintain the entire parliamentary business for almost a whole week?

I have to say that this really is one of the most curious commentaries on this Government. It is perhaps not only that the Government doesn't like to govern any more, but, probably more importantly, it is embarrassed by what it has on the Order Paper and doesn't want Parliament to bring it out for public examination or review. All I can conclude from this strange and unusual period we are going through is that the Government is somehow hoping that if it keeps the Opposition presenting the business of the day in Parliament it will then be able to squeeze all its Bills and estimates into the very last weeks of Parliament, and rush them through in order to make sure Parliament does not get the opportunity to exercise its proper function, which is clearly to examine these issues and exchange different points of view. That is what we basically see in the attitude of the Government in this parliamentary procedure of having nothing but Opposition Days for a full week, and in its attempt to bring in closure on the only major piece of economic legislation that has been introduced. It is clear that they are afraid, and not prepared to defend their case in an honest, forthright, and effective way. Instead they rely upon all of the dodges; they hide behind procedure, and look for ways of avoiding and evading those responsibilities.

• (1110)

The fact is they cannot evade them. Holiday time is over. Canadians who are going to the polls are giving a very clear message.

Mr. Stevens: Fifty-four per cent in the last Gallup.

Mr. Axworthy: There is only one poll which really counts; that is when people put their ballots in the box.

Mr. Dick: You got 26 per cent.

Mr. Axworthy: They gave a mandate last September and we all admitted that. No one is shying away from that. The only people who are unprepared to live up to that mandate are the Conservatives themselves. We are prepared to admit that we were defeated and are no longer the Government. We are now acting as the Opposition. Unfortunately, the Conservatives have been unable to recognize that their role has changed. They do not want to govern.

The Canadian people are sending messages in one provincial election after another as they vote against the Conservative Party. A large part of that vote is directed toward the "Mulroney mugwumps" who do not know what they are up to. There is a very large counter-reaction taking place because the people realize that the Government is not prepared to effectively concentrate on the economic issues of the country.

In the past week we have seen clear examples of incredible confusion and contradiction. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) made one of the century's greatest jokes; he calls it a foreign policy review. However, if Canadians are to make any use of it, the Government had better send crayons out with it so it can be used as a colouring book. There is nothing in that document other than contradictions. It says they will review Canada's military strategy, but they will make decisions before making the review.

The grey or chartreuse document says that in order to stay internationally competitive we must ensure that Canadians invest in research and development, that we control our own economic destiny, and that we hone our ability in high technology industries. Immediately after the paper was tabled the Minister of Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) said that the Government cannot live up to its commitments on R and D. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) joyfully applauded the fact that a number of our major high technology industries are being taken over by foreigners. He said it is wonderful that a Canadian high technology industry is now owned by a company beyond our borders. He wants Canadians to agree that that is a wonderful thing. During the course of the hearings which were held on this Bill evidence was produced time and again that foreign owned companies produce far less research and development than do Canadian controlled companies. We are now simply selling off our birthright, our opportunity to do that which the Secretary of State for External Affairs says we should be doing.

Mr. Brisco: You sold your birthright, turkey.

Mr. Axworthy: We're not talking about agricultural policy. You are in the wrong chamber. You had better go to the other committee. Turkey is what they serve at Conservative fund raising dinners because they are all sitting at the head table.

During the very week that a paper is tabled on the need to develop research and development there is a take-over of Mitel and CTG. There are now reports in the paper that the Hon. Minister is trying to work out a sweetheart deal with foreign owned defence companies. In order to get them to buy Canadair and de Havilland he has to give them defence contracts. This is what we call purpose and direction in our economic affairs. This is what we call smart government. They have got to be kidding. Canadians have got to be asking themselves who is in charge here.

• (1115)

This Minister, who has a lot of time to go and give interviews to The Financial Post and all the business papers about his grand economic strategy, does not have time to do his job. His job is to be an economic development minister and establish clear guidelines and goals to make sure that control of a critical industry like high technology is retained in this country. Where was the Minister when he should have been trying to find alternative Canadian buyers? Where was he in trying to develop a pool of Canadian capital? We were told by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his Economic Statement that Canada has the largest pool of savings in the world; 13 per cent of our income goes into savings.

Mr. Stevens: Your Government was borrowing it all.

Mr. Axworthy: If that is where all the capital is, why is it not being allocated or directed into our high tech industries? Surely we can learn the lessons of the past and not sell off this industry, as we have the mining and manufacturing industries.

The Government has taken almost 200 days to come up with a Budget. The only initiative taken by the Minister of Finance was to cancel R & D spending. We desperately hope and pray that in the Budget next week there will be some initiatives which will provide incentives to Canadians to invest in the high tech industry. But in the meantime this Minister, who said he is going to be the economic Czar, is really acting like a Czarina. He is not dealing with the business of the economy, he is much more interested in telling people what he wants to do. But actions speak louder than words. We will test him, not on his rhetoric, but on what he does, and what he is really doing is nothing; he is simply standing still, with the exception of cheerleading every takeover which takes place. That seems to be his role and responsibility.

Mr. Brisco: Tell us about the ERDA agreement in B.C.

Mr. Axworthy: Let me talk for a minute about the book publishing industry.

Mr. McDermid: Oh, yes, tell us about that one.

Mr. Axworthy: Let me go back to the words of the Minister who said in this House that the one area of the Canadian economy which was another sacred trust to the Conservative Party was the Canadian cultural industry. We all know the book publishing industry is an essential ingredient in the maintenance of our cultural identity; the written word is critical. So what happens? On March 31 the program to provide direct grants to the book publishing industry ran out. Was it replaced? Was any action taken by this Government to provide grants, tax incentives or support of some kind to the Canadian book publishing industry? No, the program was allowed to lapse. In the meantime we had an application for another takeover, that of Prentice-Hall by Gulf & Western, a company which has already taken over four or five publishing firms. Here was an opportunity for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to give a very clear signal to foreign investors that at least in this one area we were not going to accept foreign ownership; in this one area we were going to protect our Canadian culture. But six months later there has been absolutely no action, no decision, nothing from the Minister. As a result of that omission, that inaction, that ineptitude, we now have two other firms, including Gulf & Western, which want to buy a fourth Canadian publishing concern, having taken over two other Canadian publishing companies in the month of April.

The foreign business community is pretty smart; they know how to read signals, and the signal from this Minister is that he does not care, he is not interested, not involved. If you are going to wait six months to make a decision on Prentice-Hall, let's get these other acquisitions and takeovers in under the wire.

The real tragedy in all this, Mr. Speaker, is that we brought in amendments to the Investment Canada Bill which took note of these problems of foreign ownership, but this Government and this Minister refused to pay any attention. In the case of high tech we clearly telegraphed what is now happening with Mitel, because that is only the tip of the iceberg. We said that any company which receives R & D grants from the Government of Canada under the Investment Canada Bill should be subject to review.

• (1120)

Mitel gets the publicity because it is a large company. However, there are hundreds of smaller high tech firms in Canada that will be totally vulnerable and unprotected under Investment Canada. Did the Minister pay any attention to that warning from the Science Council? Did he pay any attention to the representations made at committee that in such a critical area to economic growth in Canada there should be at least a requirement for a review of those companies? The Minister said no, let the foreign companies come in and take over because his Government believes that is a virtue.

That amendment was not brought in because we wanted to confront the Minister and the Government. We were not opposing the principle of the Bill. We were offering to improve it and make it better in an attempt to deal with this matter.

Similarly, in the case of book publishing, we brought in amendments to the House that clearly indicated a desire to have Parliament establish the criteria upon which reviews will take place in the cultural industry. Let us not have it subject to regulation that can be shifted on the whim and caprice of orders in council. Our amendment would have Parliament establish the criteria so that it would be clearly understood by those in our economy, including the cultural groups and publishing groups, that this is in fact the parliamentary sanction. Once again, the Minister said he had no business with that because his interest really is keeping power unto himself. There is a clear disregard for Parliament in these actions and a clear interest in maintaining his own arbitrary, discretionary powers without reference to anyone else.

The Investment Canada Bill is severely flawed because it gives the Minister total and complete power without any accountability for his decisions to anybody else. He is not required to answer to Parliament, to the committee or even to his own Cabinet.

Mr. Stevens: Not true. Why can't you stick to the truth?

Mr. Axworthy: He has no accountability whatsoever in these areas.

We introduced an amendment that would allow for this accountability in order to maintain some kind of balance in this area. Was there any willingness to consider these amendments or any willingness to debate? The Conservative Members sat in their places and would not debate the issue. Instead, the Government introduced closure.

Not only are the Conservatives not willing to administer the Government, they are not prepared to engage in the give and take of parliamentary exchange through the parliamentary process. They do not really favour Parliament because they believe that their large majority on September 4 gave them some form of divine right.

Mr. McDermid: You won't participate.

Mr. Axworthy: Time and again we have said that if Members opposite are going to use Parliament, they should use it legitimately. The Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) is cackling in his seat. I said earlier that we are not dealing with agriculture, so I do not know why he is cackling so loud.

Of course, we want a foreign policy review but it should be legitimate. The Government should ensure that the document does not consider decisions that the Government is going to take without reference to Parliament. It should not be turned into a charade.

Similarly with respect to the Investment Canada Bill, the Government should ensure that the report stage of the Bill provides an opportunity to carefully consider every amendment. However, that is not the intention of the Government. We are prepared to spend as many hours, days or weeks in the House debating these matters as is required. That is why, in one sense, the opportunity to have an Opposition day is a form of blessing in disguise, because at least it gives us an opportunity that is denied us through the normal process of Parliament to bring these matters to the attention of the public.

Mr. McDermid: You have never been denied anything.

Mr. Stevens: When are you going to say something?

Mr. Axworthy: We are quite prepared as an Opposition to sit down with the Government and discuss the Investment Canada Bill. We are prepared to work out timetables for debate and find a reasonable and rational way to present amendments. If the Minister offered to sit down with us, we would be prepared to discuss what might be useful and constructive amendments.

We recognize the Minister's right and responsibility to present legislation and maintain the principle of the Bill. However, I remind him that when we brought in the Western Grain Transportation Act over a year ago, which was equally controversial legislation, we accepted 15 to 20 amendments from the Opposition because they were legitimate, sensible and constructive amendments. We have tried to conduct ourselves in the same manner, but the Minister and the Government do not believe in that process. The Government does not want to get into such an exchange.

Mr. Stevens: You better start talking to Herb.

Mr. Axworthy: The Government should recognize the threat posed by the Mitel takeover this week. It represents the danger of an incredible loss of ability in this country to provide for growth and development in the critical area of high technology and the ability to maintain our international competitiveness. The Investment Canada Bill is severely flawed in that respect. It contains serious errors. The responsibility of this Parliament should be to correct those errors to provide for improvements and constructive amendments.

• (1125)

Let me say to the Government that we are prepared to negotiate and to deal on that basis, but it is the Government that must take the initiative. It must show at least a modicum of interest and goodwill to make that happen. Up to this time, as our resolution clearly states, there has been none of that. There has been a disregard of the committee, a disregard of Parliament, a disregard of the interests of Canadian industry and the economy because the Government is bringing in a Bill that will simply provide for "Open Sesame". The Government is going to allow for a pillaging of our economy that by comparison will make the rape of the Sabine women look like a church picnic.

I do not think this Minister really cares that much about this. I believe what is at the bottom of the whole approach to this issue is that the Minister really wants foreign investment to take over industry in Canada. He is not really concerned about Canadian investment or Canadian involvement. What he really believes is that Canada can operate most effectively as a satellite to other countries. That is the message this Government is giving. In the actions or lack of action it is taking on questions like Mitel, book publishing and legislation such as Investment Canada, the Government is showing what its economic philosophy is. The Government wants Canada to be a branch plant economy. The Government wants to take its orders from Cleveland. That is the kind of approach the Government is taking. It is not providing the kind of direction, purpose and goals that Canadian investors and Canadian business want to make sure that we maintain some control of our industry and ultimately some control of our destiny.

Mr. Duguay: Mr. Speaker, everyone in this House knows very clearly during the last campaign we put our position before the Canadian public on the Foreign Investment Review Agency. The contents of this Bill are not strange to Canadians. We told Canadians we would introduce this legislation and we have done so.

I want to comment for a second on the matter of contempt for the Parliamentary process. Up to and including May 1 the House had spent 36 hours on Bill C-15. In addition, the standing committee spent 40 hours. The Liberals have intervened 82 times and the New Democrats 72 times. Considering their number in the House, it seems that to have each member of the Opposition intervene twice on a Bill which the Canadian public knew we were going to introduce really demonstrates the weakness of the Opposition's position. It is a very weak argument if it has to be made more than once.

My point is very simple. The contempt of Parliament is on that side of the House. My constituents phone me on a regular basis and say: "What is stopping you from stopping Opposition Members from getting up day after day to make the same arguments they made yesterday?" The contempt is on that side of the House, not on this side.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would like some opportunity to respond to the Hon. Member for St. Boniface (Mr. Duguay).

Let me provide a contrast. The Hon. Member said we had spent some 36 hours or so on this Bill. A year or so ago when I was the Minister of Transport and brought in the grain transportation bill we spent several hundreds of hours in this House on the very same legislation.

Mr. Stevens: How much time did you spend on FIRA?

Mr. Axworthy: We spent hundreds of hours in debate in this House. We provided the Opposition a full committee hearing that went on for something like six months. Hearings were held across Canada. There were representations from every region. We then spent almost four weeks at report stage in this Chamber dealing with hundreds of amendments. We sat and listened. We also used that process in a creative way. We accepted amendments from the Opposition. We sat down and negotiated with them on amendments.

• (1130)

Mr. McDermid: That is because they were good amendments.

Mr. Axworthy: That is because they were good amendments. This Government, by showing its absolute disregard and its disdain for Parliament, has never made the offer.

Mr. Stevens: Untrue.

Mr. Axworthy: It has not even bothered to show up. It has not provided the opportunity to sit down to look at the amendments and decide which ones it should consider, which ones it should bring into effect, or how it could recognize what representatives of a number of distinguished and important Canadian organizations said before the committee. They were all voted down and thrown out in committee. The same is being done at report stage. That is the kind of disregard to which we are pointing.

The reason for the resolution this morning is to try to give these people a deathbed reprieve. We saw the case of Mitel this week. Is the Hon. Member for St. Boniface saying that he is speaking for his constituents and that they are condoning the sell-out of the Canadian high-technology industry? Does he want to see Burroughs leave his riding, disappear, and not have the world product mandate which was negotiated as a result of the FIRA process? Is that what he wants to see? That is what will happen with Investment Canada. Burroughs would not be required to have a plant in St. Boniface doing the kind of operation it is doing, had it not been for FIRA negotiating that world product mandate for that particular plant. It would be useful if the Hon. Member for St. Boniface looked more closely at what is going on in his own riding. Then he might come to the House and approve or support our amendments.

Mr. Duguay: Mr. Speaker, with all respect to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), I am quite aware of what has gone on in my own constituency. However, my point is really a fundamental one. We have to spend hours and hours amending legislation in committee when it is not very well thought out or has not been communicated clearly to the Canadian public. This legislation was communicated very, very clearly to the Canadian public. Hon. Members opposite knew that. As a matter of fact, some of them shared platforms with me last summer and took an opposite view. The people of Canada knew that we would do it, and they chose us on September 4 partly because we would do it. We are doing it, and we know what we are doing.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, my answer will be very short. As I said during the course of my remarks, I have no argument with the mandate which was given on September 4, but Canadians did not have an opportunity to see the Bill at that point in time. They did not know what would be in it. In fact, I recall for the benefit of the Hon. Member that during the course of the election the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion was contradicted by the Minister of Finance who was contradicted by the then Leader of the Opposition. They all had different points of view on what they would do in the area of foreign investment. One was to abolish it totally, one was to conduct a review. They all had different positions.

I am simply pointing out that certainly Canadians voted for a change. They voted for a large number of promises which were made by Mr. Mulroney at that time. Since, they have learned that Mr. Mulroney's promises are not really worth the paper they are written on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member should know that we address Hon. Members of the Chamber by their titles. He should refer to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), please.

Mr. Axworthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I am puzzled by the comments of the Hon. Member for St. Boniface (Mr. Duguay). Of course members of his Party put forward their views during the election campaign, including their views on foreign investment and how it should be dealt with. They received a majority. Of course, since they have formed the Government, they will in time get the legislation which they want, and we will no longer have the benefit of a real examination of proposals for take-overs by foreign companies of Canadian companies. We, as members of the Opposition, also put forward our views, and we were also elected. We were elected to come to Parliament to put our points of view. That is precisely what we are doing.

Before the Hon. Member for St. Boniface became a Member of Parliament he was a teacher and was active in the Manitoba Teachers' Society. If, in the years before he became President of the Manitoba Teachers' Society he had wanted to express views which were not in accord with the then leadership of the society and was told by members of the society that they were elected and did not want to hear from him, I wonder what he would have said. Now, because he is a very small part of the administration, he wants the rest of us to keep quiet. Perhaps as a back-bench Member of Parliament on the government side he is not required to speak very often, or they do not want him to speak. We are here to put our points of view, and we intend to do so.

Let me point out two very serious situations which will not be given any real consideration if we pass the Investment Canada Act. There is a proposal by Gulf and Western to take over Prentice-Hall. Surely the Hon. Member for St. Boniface, as a past teacher or educator, should be interested in seeing that the book publishing industry remains Canadian. If we follow the Government's direction and pass the Bill, we will have no control over that.

Similarly, we have the Mitel situation. It is a Canadian-owned company which deals in an area that will be important in the future. The proposal is that it will now be taken over by a British company. When that happens, we will see more and more of the work and the research required to make that company successful in a very competitive field go either to the United States or Great Britain. The Government is proposing to take away any authority or power it has to see that that company and others remain Canadian. This is why we are raising our objections. I tell the Hon. Member for St. Boniface that we will use every opportunity to put our views before Parliament and before the people of Canada.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to put words in the mouth of my colleague, the Hon. Member for St. Boniface (Mr. Duguay), but the Hon. Member completely misrepresented what he said. He did not try to stifle debate or anything else. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) said that we were stifling debate in the House, and the point my colleague was making was that we had not stifled debate at all. That completely misrepresents the remarks he made.

I want to refresh the memory of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry by referring to a little publishing company by the name of Irwin-Dorsey. It had 30 employees in the small community of Georgetown in my riding. It was owned by an American company. It was the only operation it had in Canada. It changed ownership in the United States. In order to get approval in Canada to change ownership it had to come to FIRA. FIRA refused the transaction taking place in another country between two companies which affected this little company of Irwin-Dorsey in Georgetown. What happened is that the American company pulled it out of Georgetown and brought it back to the United States. It is doing the same job; it is still shipping books into Canada. However, 30 people in my constituency were put out of work because of the inflexibility of FIRA.

Does the Hon. Member remember that particular case? Does he remember those jobs being lost because of a stupid decision by the Foreign Investment Review Agency, which did not do one good thing for Canada? As a matter of fact, it took jobs away from Canadians. That is what we are talking about when we debate the Investment Canada Bill. Does he remember that case? I will tell him that the people who lost their jobs in Georgetown remember it very well.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I will make my reply very short. Yes, I remember the case very well, but I think the Hon. Member has it all wrong. It was not FIRA which made the decision. It was the foreign-owned company which closed down that branch plant.

Mr. McDermid: There was no choice.

Mr. Axworthy: That is why we are fighting against the dumb, stupid policies of the Minister which will allow foreign companies to close down factory after factory, business after business, mine after mine, because there is no longer any policy of direction on the part of the Government which says that we want Canadian control and direction. It is foreign ownership and foreign management, which do not give a damn about this country, that are closing down Canadian plants. We are bringing in amendments to try to protect the Georgetowns and other constituencies.

Mr. McDermid: You would not let the ownership transfer.

Mr. Axworthy: If they were smart, they would look at our amendments and change Investment Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The period provided for questions and comments has now terminated.

• (1140)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak on this motion I must comment that we have in this motion perhaps the greatest example we have had in this Parliament of inconsistency and irresponsibility. In his speech and in his motion, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) has demonstrated why today he is sitting on the Opposition benches along with various Members of his caucus instead of on the government side of this House.

The Hon. Member says that we have shown a contempt for the parliamentary process by cutting off free debate. One of the first things he said in defence of his motion was that we should not be giving them six Opposition Days to debate. Somehow he is flabbergasted that we have given them freedom for six days to come in, choose their topic and have a debate in this House. How on one hand can a Member ask the House to agree that there is contempt for the parliamentary process by cutting off free debate and then use as part of his argument that this is the sixth Opposition Day and that it is unforgivable to give the Opposition six days of free debate?

Mr. Axworthy: It is an abdication of responsibility. Why does the Government not bring in the debate? You are the Government, start acting like it.

Mr. Stevens: Here is the inconsistency. If the Hon. Member really believes what he is saying, he obviously would have mentioned it in his motion. Some time between drafting it last night and when he got up this morning, he changed his mind and said "Why on earth do we need a six-day debate? I'm going to go in and criticize the Government for giving us so much time", after yesterday telling us that we were not giving them enough free debate.

Mr. Axworthy: Right.

Mr. Stevens: And now he says it is right. My goodness, if Fort Garry residents could only see him in his true splendor in this House.

Mr. Axworthy: They just remember the Bank of Western Canada.

Mr. Stevens: Let me go on.

Mr. Axworthy: They remember your wonderful record in the West.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I would like to hear the Minister's speech and we can then have questions and comments.

Mr. Stevens: Let me go on. The motion states that we have not provided adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments. My colleague, the Hon. Member for St. Boniface (Mr. Duguay), pointed out the various hours that had been given to debate, either at second reading, report stage or in committee. Let me be a little more specific.

At second reading there were 32 Liberal Members who joined in the debate. All but eight of the total caucus had an opportunity to speak at second reading. Twenty-five New Democratic Party Members spoke. All but five of their caucus had an opportunity to tell the House their feelings. Most who attended committee will agree that in committee there was a full opportunity given to both the Official Opposition representative and the socialist party representative to present their case and their amendments. Each was considered. Virtually all were voted on, with the Official Opposition almost consistently voting with the socialist representative at the committee level.

At report stage on Motions Nos. 1 and 2, we have had 23 Liberals join in that discussion and 21 NDP Members. On Motions Nos. 4, 6, 7, 19, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18, we have had 12 Liberals and 11 NDP Members speak. On Motions Nos. 8, 12, 32, 63, 69, 74 and 75, we have had 13 Liberals and 13 NDP.

Mr. Orlikow: We are just doing our job. What is wrong with that?

Mr. Stevens: On Motions Nos. 19 and 20, there were 12 Liberals and 9 NDP. On Motions Nos. 23, 24 and 25, again Liberals and NDP Members participated. What they are really saying is that they want to filibuster.

When it comes to free speech and free debate, they do not like to let democracy work. They do not wish the majority of the Members of this House, who I suggest reflect the majority wish of the Canadian public, and judging from today's Gallup poll, 54 per cent still say they believe in the Government, to move legislation forward. They basically feel they know best. Notwithstanding the fact that they are two minorities, they know better than the majority what is good for Canadians.

Let us put it into perspective. The Hon. Member talked about FIRA. Let there be no doubt that the thrust of his amendments would basically not only restore FIRA, but make it a much more onerous piece of legislation than the legislation we now live with.

Think of the record. Ten years ago, this country had unemployment at about one-third the level it is at today. Partly as a result of the misdirected policies and actions of the then Government, now Official Opposition, many of the people out of work in Canada today are out of work, I say, because of the policies of that Government, including its attitude toward non-Canadian investment. After 10 years of that kind of a record it is almost beyond belief that the Official Opposition and the NDP caucus would be so determined to try to persist in the mistake. Surely Canadians want change. They want to have a freshness. They want a new approach. In short, they want constructive investment, jobs to be created and people back to work in this country. This Government is dedicated to getting the confidence of the business community restored, investment flows once again constructively coming in to businesses with a view to creating jobs for Canadians. That is what this is all about.

Perhaps we could symbolize what we are talking about with the Liberal and NDP attack on this possible Mitel deal with British Telecom. I say "possible deal" because that is all it is. We have two concerns signing a letter of intent in which a British company says "Subject to various considerations, we would consider buying up to 51 per cent of your company, putting in $320 million fresh equity, helping to preserve 2,500 Canadians jobs, 5,000 jobs around the world".

What is the response of the Official Opposition, backed up by their friends to the left? They are almost horror-stricken that somebody would positively say they would like to participate in a Canadian company with a view to not only keeping the jobs that are now in Canada, but expanding upon that base. They are calling on us to somehow block it or stop it. They are calling on us to take action even before we have received an application to consider the nature of the deal. I would suggest that the Opposition has a blind hatred to anything which they deem to be foreign.

● (1150)

Surely, what we in Government and in the House should be doing is looking at the essence of the deal. In this particular instance I believe that the action of the Official Opposition is inconsistent. To hear those Members talk, it sounds as though Mitel has been a sacred Canadian company which has been wholly-owned by Canadians and has used Canadian technology. Do they think we have forgotten that the previous Government permitted 48 per cent of the company to be sold to foreigners? I am surprised they have forgotten that.

As far as the Opposition is concerned, the most hated of all foreigners are the Americans who did most of that buying. At the present time, 52 per cent of Mitel is held by Canadians and 48 per cent is held by a foreign group. Because another foreign group has come forth and offered to give the company the $320 million which is needed, we have this historical reaction. It is odd. I can only suggest that it is a cold government interventionist approach which is bound to cost Canadian jobs, just as it cost Canadian jobs in the past decade. That is what this Government is trying to reverse.

Let me comment on the motion before us. In my view, we have prospered most in the country when we have been open to trade and investment with the rest of the world. The periods of greatest protectionism in Canada have coincided with periods of stagnation and recession. Throughout our history we have used non-Canadian capital to supplement our savings, to establish transportation and communication infrastructure, to develop wealth in natural resources and to expand and diversify Canadian industry. In other words, Canadians have seen non-Canadian capital as an opportunity, not as a threat.

We believe that the policies which have been pursued over the past 10, indeed 15 years, have tended to tie up Canada with laws, rules and regulations which have held back growth and smothered opportunities. We must start thinking internationally in Canada. The Canadian economy has become an integral part of the international economy. Some people timidly shrink back from the challenges which are associated with that. I think it is time for Canada to stop being so frightened. It is time to stop being so timid. It is time for Canada to boldly accept the world and invite the type of capital and investment which would be available to us if we stopped being so protective-minded, as the previous Government was during the past decade.

Under FIRA—and I have gone through many of the files—I found that there were months of bartering, haggling and bargaining before foreign investment was allowed to enter Canada. The attitude which the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) is showing with respect to the British Telecom proposal is typical of what took place during the past decade. Essentially, non-Canadians were told that they were not welcome and that their investment proposals would not be considered favourably. Meanwhile, Canadians kept joining the unemployment lists. As far as I am concerned, that mental attitude is peculiar to the Liberal Party and the NDP Party, but it is certainly not the outlook of the average Canadian today.

Mr. Deans: The "P" stands for Party.

Mr. McDermid: Where did that come from?

Mr. Deans: The wilderness.

Mr. Stevens: Boy, the House Leader for the NDP has certainly got one thing right, he is coming from the wilderness.

We believe there is room for joint ventures, international ventures and partnerships in Canada. We believe that will bring capital, new ideas and technology to the country, and we believe that Canada has nothing to fear from such interchange with the capital and technology pools which exist in the world.

The motion refers to the Investment Canada Bill and states that there has not been an adequate review in committee. That is just not true.

The motion seeks to condemn this Government for:

—its contempt for the Parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

The amendments to which the Hon. Member is presumably referring, if accepted, could have turned back the clock and virtually re-invented FIRA. In short, it would send a new signal to the rest of the world that once again non-Canadian investment is not welcome in Canada. It would also send a message to the 1.5 million Canadians who are out of work that they would have to do without the jobs which non-Canadian capital might have helped to supply. As Hon. Members know, a considerable amount of time has been spent in both Houses on Bill C-15, and in the Standing Committee on Regional Development. I think it is very fitting for discussions to be held in committee which relate to Investment Canada and non-Canadian investment.

As far as I am concerned, one of the great opportunities which we have in the Investment Canada approach is to positively encourage Canadian investment and to seek the non-Canadian who wants to invest in some of the regions of Canada. We will be announcing certain of those investments. I only hope that by that time the spokesperson for the Official Opposition, the Hon. Member who has put the motion before the House today, will have changed his attitude from virtually insisting that we should discourage employment in the country, to the attitude of encouraging jobs for Canadians. I hope it is understood by all Hon. Members after this debate today that we have clear evidence, once again, of how pathetic this Official Opposition is, how in truth it simply is becoming the Party of obstruction. Having demonstrated over ten years the disastrous results of its policies, it is now virtually insisting that the Government of the day not get on with restoring the great vitality and prosperity which can be ours. I think it behooves every Hon. Member to call it what it is, pure obstructionism, and let's get on with the will of the Canadian people.

• (1200)

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I have a quite specific question to put to the Minister. I would appreciate very much if he could give me an answer. It has to do with the Lapp Industries take-over of Canadian Porcelain. Has the proposed purchase of Canadian Porcelain by Lapp Industries gone to FIRA? If not, can the Minister tell us whether it will in fact have to be dealt with by FIRA? If it has to be dealt with by FIRA, will FIRA, once it is seized of the matter, be required to complete its review and report, notwithstanding what happens to the Investment Canada legislation which is now before us? If that is not the case, will the Minister guarantee us and, of course, the people most concerned, that under Investment Canada proposals he will undertake to review the proposed take-over in order to ensure that it is in fact in the best interests of Canada?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, as you undoubtedly will recall, this question was raised several times by the Hon. Member. The fact is that the Government has been in touch with those who are trying not to consummate a deal involving Lapp. But there are two other possibly interested parties who might come up with some transaction which would involve the company. The short answer is that we have indicated to Lapp that if it proposes to go ahead with the purchase, we feel it would be reviewable as far as the existing legislation is concerned, and we anticipate that it will be making an application, at which time we can look at exactly what it has in mind. Orally, of course, the company has given us to understand that rather than any closing down or moving out of assets to the United States, as some Hon. Members have indicated, it would be making its move with a view to restoring and reopening the company in Canada.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, once again we have been treated to what is known as the "B.C. and I Chamber of Commerce, Speech No. 57", rapping the socialists, dealing with the terrible record of the Grits and promising all kinds of glorious miracles based upon foreign investment. I want to point out, Mr. Speaker, that unfortunately that was all repudiated during those committee meetings we held. People from the investment communities said they would not expect that much more investment from foreign companies because of this legislation. Even the New York investment community itself made statements to the effect that we could not expect any major onrush of new capital. What we would see, however, is a number of takeovers of existing Canadian companies because the Investment Canada legislation has a much broader, wider and more open screen.

I would like to point out something else I find amusing at times in the Minister's remarks, Mr. Speaker, because he has his own peculiar view of history. He is like the Soviets who took power in the 1920s and rewrote Russian history back 500 years. The Minister loves to talk about the ten years of disaster of the Liberal Government. But as the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion he is using all of the federal Liberal initiatives, such as the ERDA program, which were put into place by that past Government. I have not seen him disbanding ERDA. I have not heard him saying, "It was a terrible idea that we should have co-operative planning with the provinces". We put the machinery in place. We allocated the funds and now the Minister is going out and spending these funds and taking credit for it. Unfortunately, that is part of the disastrous record he talks about, but it doesn't get explained in that way. The Fact is that the legislation was brought in by our former colleague, the former Hon. Member from Cornwall. We had negotiated all of the outstanding agreements across Canada with the exception of two, and we negotiated a number of sub-agreements in most of those provinces. We set aside the regional fund which the Minister is presently utilizing for his expenditures.

I would simply say that if the Minister was true to his word, he would probably have gotten rid of all our disastrous programs rather than riding them and using them as he is now doing in the most gleeful fashion. I would say that is also true in the area of training programs, industrial programs, and we can go right across the board. What has this Government changed since it came into office? What has it dismantled other than FIRA?

We simply point out that we are not against foreign investment. I would ask the Minister who asks us to look at the record, to look at the record himself. In the last year of our Government, close to $4 billion of foreign investment came into Canada. The difference is that 40 per cent was based upon an upgrading of that investment to ensure that the jobs, research and development and the world products mandate would be retained for Canadian firms. That is the difference.

The Minister talks about Mitel. I am suprised that a gentleman who used to have some experience in the business world does not understand the difference between holding an equity position and having control of the company. I would assume that surely a Minister of Industrial and Regional Expansion might have some scintilla of understanding that it is control which is important, because that is where the decisions are made. It is not simply holding a piece of the action, it is where the control and management lie. The difference in the Mitel take-over and CTG is that where the management has taken over, that's where the control is.

The Minister doesn't care about that, but in our committees we heard from the business community itself that it is those companies which are not controlled and managed by Canadians which have the poorest record in R & D and which bring in far more import to this country, which affects our balance of payments, and those companies, in fact, employ fewer Canadians. We are concerned about jobs, not about the kind of nonsense the Minister is talking about.

I have a couple of specific questions for the Minister because he, perhaps I could say, deliberately evaded the issue of book publishing in his remarks. With respect to Prentice-Hall of Canada Ltd., can we expect a decision immediately? Will this Minister go forward and try to find and solicit Canadian buyers for that particular company? Will he establish a very clear statement in the publishing industry, as our Government did, that the dominant element must be Canadian? Will he make that statement? Will he reject the application of Gulf Western to take over Prentice-Hall in the recent application for Ginn and Co. and Longman Inc. which will also take out two very major firms in the Canadian text book trade? What is this Minister waiting for? If he believes in Canadian culture, why does he not make a decision today and turn down these applications?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I noticed how you almost burst out laughing the more you listened to the Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Orlikow: You know you can't do that.

Mr. Axworthy: That shows your disdain for Parliament.

Mr. Stevens: How inconsistent can the Hon. Member get? In the body of his remarks he said we were doing nothing, that I was sitting here and taking no action. Then, in the guise of a question, he said we were using too many of the former Government's programs, that we were spending money. He referred to ERDA as something which had been put in place by the former Government. Of course, as we know, it was unable to sign such an agreement with the Province of Quebec. It was unable or unwilling to sign one with the Province of Ontario. It was unable or unwilling to sign one with the Province of British Columbia. Within months we signed those agreements.

Mr. Axworthy: Seven out of three is the record?

Mr. Stevens: And we have concluded some agreements with all of the provinces to a fuller extent than certainly was done before. Yesterday, you will recall, Mr. Speaker, we also announced that the largest funding arrangement in history, between the Province of British Columbia and the federal Government, has now been agreed to. It is for $525 million. How on earth can the Hon. Member then stand up and say we are doing nothing? The fact is, and it is an embarrassing fact for the Hon. Member and his associates, we are doing too much; there is too much change, including the fact we are once again encouraging non-Canadian investment along with Canadian investment in this country. It is change that this reactionary group cannot seem to adjust to. As far as I am concerned, it is time that the democratic will was allowed to be recorded in this House and that we get on, for the sake of the unemployed, with creating a new mechanism which will encourage instead of discourage investment in this country once again.

● (1210)

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, as a new Member of Parliament, it is interesting to try and relate to some of the debate that takes place in the House of Commons. I think many of us who are new Members of Parliament have had some sense of frustration at what we might call the role playing, the synthetic conflict, the sometimes empty, sometimes exaggerated rhetoric which occasionally dominates this House. If I possibly can, I want to try to break through that rhetoric to ask all of us as reasonable, thoughtful and caring men and women to focus on a very real problem in a very real way. I want to confront that problem and I would like us to try and understand the problem. I would hope that it might be possible for all of us as Members of Parliament to work together to try and deal with this problem. For that reason I want to talk today almost exclusively about the Mitel takeover by British Telecom, because the problem is Canada's weakness, our sense of incapacity in technological development, and the consequent problems for the unemployed in this country.

It would be possible to underline some of the points of outrage which have been raised by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). There were amendments we moved which I would very much like to have had a fuller chance to debate here in this House of Commons. We have a concern, too, about the process by which Investment Canada has been debated, the witnesses who have not been heard, and what seems to me to have been the limited amount of debating time with respect to certain crucial amendments.

I think, too, that it is possible to focus on some other areas of concern; the Gulf & Western takeovers which are threatening Canadian publishing, the case raised by my hon. friend for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) concerning Canadian Porcelain, and others. However, Mitel deserves central attention because it is a symbol of our potential as a country because of the tremendous growth which Mitel has shown. However, it is also a symbol of the failures of our technology policy, a symbol of how crucial is our technological development problem in Canada in 1985.

What is that problem? Let me set it out in as non-partisan a way as possible. To do that, let me quote the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who has said that the way to improve our dismal trade performance lies in increased research and development. He said we have to double our research and development commitment and triple our resolve to reach it. As a key part of that, the Prime Minister went on to say in a different speech that his Government was going to encourage the production of new technology and ideas by Canadian industries. He went on to say that this was because, according to the National Research Council, a 1 per cent increase in research and development expenditure as a percentage of GNP means creating 800,000 jobs in this country. Another document ties that challenge to the question of foreign ownership, and the Prime Minister then said that recent data indicates that the R & D intensity of foreign subsidiaries in Canada tends to lag behind domestically owned operations of comparable magnitude. That is from the Progressive Conservative task force on technological displacements.

So that is the problem. It is a clear problem, one that has been recognized on every side of the House, and it is a problem we have desperately to address. The Mitel case is crucial to helping us understand the problem. Let us stand back, if we can, and recognize the Mitel story, because it has been a dramatic story. Sales of that corporation have increased from $300,000 in 1975 to $255 million in 1983, an incredible increase of 132 per cent per year. By 1983 some 83.1 per cent of the sales of this company were outside Canada, 52 per cent to the United States, which we think of as our primary trade target these days. Starting with 30 jobs in 1975, the company reached 5,210 jobs in 1983.

Mr. McDermid: How many in Canada?

Mr. Langdon: Some 2,682 of those jobs were in Canada, including over 80 per cent of research and development jobs. R & D expenditures average 12 per cent of sales, compared to 2 per cent of sales for foreign subsidiaries with over 500 employees operating in Canada.

Mitel experienced problems. There were losses in 1983 and 1984, and over 800 lay-offs in the last 15 months. This was primarily because of the transition to an important new product, the SX 2000. This has been a difficult transition, representing one of those intrinsic and basic realities of the high tech sector, the fact that there are risks and gambles in new product development in technology intensive industries. But this company turned the corner. The last quarter saw a $64,000 profit after payments of interest on an incredible debt which the company had built up.

The founder of the company, Mr. Cowpland, makes it quite clear that Mitel would survive without the British Telecom takeover. But there is a problem of heavy debt, some $266 million worth as of 1984. Mitel searched for help on the basis of this clear success story and the problems of risk in the technological sector. It asked for $30 million to $40 million in assistance from the former Government. According to reports in the paper today, that request was rejected by the former Government. If that is true, it shows that the responsibility for our technological failure lies with the previous regime as well as with the present Government.

● (1220)

Apparently Mitel tried to find Canadian partners. It failed, in part precisely because the Government dangled in front of the potential partners of Mitel in Canada the possibility of purchasing Teleglobe, a vastly profitable state corporation with $400 million in assets. That led many Canadian communication companies to earmark that for potential expansion. That is when British Telecom stepped into the picture.

I would like to review for Members of the House the crucial problems which exist with British Telecom. The House must recognize basic problems which exist with all takeovers of thriving Canadian firms by foreign companies. Witnesses who appeared before the Standing Committee on Regional Development laid out some of these problems. In the case of Philco-Ford they talked about how its purchase was transferred abroad. They talked about research facilities being shifted abroad. These are real threats which have been testified to by the business people who have experienced those realities.

Aside from those general problems, there are some extremely specific problems with British Telecom. I ask all Members of the House to study very carefully that company which we are hoping will take into its arms a successful and thriving Canadian enterprise. First, as the prospectus for the privatization of British Telecom indicates, the company remains subject to Government involvement in shaping its policies. Government retains the power to intervene and vote its largest shareholdings in a pool of 1.7 million individual shareholders and one large shareholder. The Economist, which is not generally recognized as a socialist newspaper, noted that fact with respect to British Telecom. It said:

> Foolishly in most of its privatizations so far, the Government has retained shareholdings of just under 50 per cent in the new "private" companies; it plans to do the same with B.T. This leaves ministers with great influence whenever managerial decisions threaten political interests, and so preserves the most economically damaging aspect of state control.

The May 13, 1985 copy of The Financial Times makes it quite clear that British Telecom continues to feel "some commitment to promoting U.K. employment". Moreover, Mr. Speaker, we have legislation in the form of the Telecommunications Bill of the British Government. If the Minister and Members will look at Section 85 of that Bill they will see quite clearly the capacity of the Secretary of State of the British Government to intervene and give directions to British Telecom with respect to points which the Secretary of State considers crucial to the national interest of Britain.

I am sure that some Members of the House have lived in Britain, as I have. I am sure they have dealt with British Telecom, as I have, and have learned how long it takes to get a telephone in Britain. I would like to quote from Francis McInerney, the Vice-President of Northern Business Information in New York who predicted the problems with Northern Telecom. He said that British Telecom "has not demonstrated its marketing savvy or product management ability". He goes on to note that the British company has spent almost all of its corporate life in the hothouse atmosphere of Government ownership. He said:

> It has operated in highly structured markets where most of the competition is by Government fiat.

We must recognize that British Telecom is under threat from all three British Opposition Parties of being renationalized, and of having complete control over that company once again established. As the present public opinion polls in Britain show, with the Thatcher Government running behind Labour, that is a threat which must be taken seriously. The uncertainties for Mitel which arise from that are quite damaging.

What will happen as a result of the take-over? At best, British Telecom will use Mitel to fight IBM and AT & T in the U.S. market. As sure as I am standing here, Mr. Speaker, that will shift production to the Mitel subsidiaries in the United States. If we had a state role in Northern Telecom I would want to see it behaving in this way too. I would want it to give preference to Canadian employment, which is what British Telecom is expected to do. We will see a shift of production to Mitel's British subsidiaries and a shift of research and development expenditures to Britain to be close to the British Telecom staff. That is the best case scenario, Mr. Speaker. The worst that can happen is that the company will face those problems as well as the additional problem of being cut off when nationalization takes place again in two or three years.

We must take a fast moving route, Mr. Speaker, not one which waits for review by FIRA. We need the pluses of a loose association between Mitel and British Telecom. The Minister must intervene with people at Mitel by telling them to take up the 18.5 per cent share offer and forget about majority control. Second, the Government must come through with that which the Government before it did not provide, Government assistance, to get this key success story back on the rails and to enable it to provide us with the jobs, research, and spin-offs which will meet the technological problem which the whole House recognizes. I plead with the Minister, not to react as an ideologist in this case but in recognition of that sense of danger to our country and this company. I ask the Minister to listen and act with the interest of Canada at heart.

• (1230)

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, during the course of his remarks, the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) made reference to a statement by the President, Mr. Cowpland, concerning the assistance or lack of it by the previous regime. I think it is important to point out that I dispute those comments.

If one examines the record, it will show that since approximately 1979 at least $35 million was allocated for that company in direct assistance. There was some $20 million set aside for their establishment of factories at Buctouche, New Brunswick, and Arnprior. In fact, the company in Arnprior did not go ahead because of market problems, but the Government still offered the assistance.

Second, there was a $9.9 million grant given directly for R and D purposes that allowed Mitel to do the upscaling work on the new technology they are developing, the RX-2000.

Third, there was a grant of approximately $5.5 million to develop a program for the expansion of their Ottawa facilities.

When I was the Minister of Employment and Immigration, I personally recall negotiating with the high tech industry in the Ottawa area, along with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), a very important training program with the high tech industry in the Ottawa Valley that provided major investments of federal funds under the skills upgrading program to provide for high tech training of the existing workforce. That was in 1982.

During all of this period, the federal Government, of which I was a member, recognized the value and gave support. Obviously, it would have to operate in terms of its discretion with respect to the management decisions that were being made.

I stand to be corrected but I understand that in the latest case, before the election there was an application by Mitel that had never been specifically rejected.

Mr. Dick: It was rejected.

Mr. Axworthy: Maybe in your mind, as a legal counsel, it was, but the fact is that the final decision had not been taken.

Mr. Dick: Ed Lumley said no.

Mr. Axworthy: There was never a public announcement.

Mr. Dick: You never announced your negatives.

Mr. Axworthy: The member for Mitel might want to comment because he is closely associated with the company. The fact is that I wanted to point out that some $35 million worth of assistance was put forward. That was only a small part.

The point we are making is that it is critical in cases such as manpower training and research and development that there be a policy in place. We had a policy in place, the IRDP, which provided for expansion of plants and development of new products.

The Government, in its November 8 statement, eliminated that form of support in Tier 1 areas, which include the Ottawa Valley. Those are the problems we are facing. I want to make sure that the record is not simply interpreted through the mind of the President who obviously has his own reasons for wanting the British Telecom application to go ahead.

I think it is important to recognize that governments must play a role in this area but not necessarily one in which there is involvement in an automatic way. I remind my friends in the NDP that the role of the Government in this case is to be discretionary.

We believe that another major omission by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is his unwillingness to make any effort to seek out alternatives for the infusion of the necessary equity capital. He has taken a simple hands off approach, and I suggest the Government's version of free market is really an evasion of its responsibility to work with companies such as Mitel.

I find it very strange that the Minister spoke about Liberal protectionist measures. He is the very one who, in a Financial Post article, said that he would guarantee markets of 30 per cent to 40 per cent in markets such as textiles and shoes. I suggest that he must decide which way he will face in the morning, and what kind of Minister he will be, so that other Canadians will not be as confused as he seems to be.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, we must go by what we read. Of course, the quotation from Mr. Cowpland is:

> We tried very hard a year ago to get government assistance of about $30 million to $40 million, and we couldn't get it. At that point in time, the company was nose down, and there was no relief from the government—not even a nickel. We had to scramble on our own.

This raises a general point. During my speech I talked about a national problem. I think Mitel and what is happening to that company is a symbol of that national problem. It is not a problem that was created in the last eight months, but a problem which we all recognize is the legacy of many changes in the world. It is not something that was created wilfully by any government.

However, the legacy of our failure to respond effectively to the high tech challenge is a legacy from the previous Government, just as much as it is a problem for the existing Government. I believe that the previous Government had a system of grants and support which it hoped would provide support to important high tech initiatives. However, from looking at some of those initiatives, such as the Bell helicopter case, I know that incredible sums of money were spent with very little in the way of commitment and benefit for this country.

I believe that we need a strategy and approach which will learn from the failures of the past regime, build on those failures, and take some of those commitments from the Prime Ministers and others and put them into reality.

Mitel brings it all to a head. As I said at the beginning of my speech, Mitel becomes a symbol of our potential as well as a symbol of how urgent the issue is.

I simply want to conclude by saying that I can understand members opposite who talk about wanting to make Canada open for business. It is a perspective with which I disagree, but it is a philosophy that we can debate. There is a difference between "open for business" and "open for surrender". In the case of Mitel, we do not have to surrender that company. There is an alternative. There is the possibility of minority shareholding. There is a tremendous gain from that alternative. We do not have to go in the direction that we lost effective control of that crucial company in the future. I urge all my colleagues in the House to urge the Government to recognize that symbol of Mitel for the importance that it represents.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, there was an intervention by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) during the comment and question period. He showed his ignorance of the matter and showed that—

Mr. Rossi: A point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. The question should be directed to the Member making the speech and not to comments or questions that were made during the debate. I would ask the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to follow accordingly.

Mr. Dick: I intend to put a question to the Hon. Member. I believe that during the comment portion I am not fettered by any rule of the House that I know of on the comments which I am allowed to make. That is what debate is all about. If I want to make a comment on some idiotic statement made by another Member I think I should be able to comment on that. There is no rule that says I cannot.

• (1240)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments has now terminated. I would now recognize the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) for debate.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to congratulate you on your ruling as to the debate initiated by the last intervener.

I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) for the excellent motion he has brought to this House today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Boudria: On behalf of Liberal caucus members I would like to congratulate the Member for the excellent fight he has led on behalf of our Party in this House. It is important to have people who can stand up for those things we believe in, not just those who roll around and play dead such as we see the Conservative book-ends and surfers doing occasionally.

Mr. Gauthier: What is a surfer?

Mr. Boudria: A surfer is one of those Conservative Members who came in with the tide. They will go out with the tide in the same way. We refer to those members as surfers.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: I think I struck a nerve, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) said in the House today that the Liberals were criticizing the Government for cutting off debate. On the other hand they were permitting today's debate. I am relatively new to this House, but I would have thought the Minister should have known there is a difference between debating legislation and Opposition motions.

An Hon. Member: Substance.

Mr. Boudria: I am sure there would be unanimous consent to withdraw the motion we put forward immediately if the Government would agree to debate the amendment my colleague, the Member from Winnipeg-Fort Garry, has brought forward.

The Minister has also accused the Opposition of being negative. I believe he said: "We are a Party of obstruction". I find it passing strange that a Party which let the bells ring for two weeks in the previous Parliament is now accusing someone else of being obstructionist. We have no moral lessons to take from Tories in so far as the whole issue of respect for Parliament. Those people across the way, and I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you will know this, being the objective non-partisan person you are, are the ones who failed to respect Parliament in the last session. They have the same contempt today in their attitude, demonstrated by cutting off debate on this very important initiative.

I see the Minister of State for Small Business (Mr. Bissonnette) sitting across the way. If he were the Minister he would permit more debate. I know a frank and honest minister such as he, who is concerned about people, if he were permitted by his superiors in Cabinet, he would like to bring assistance to small business and to protect small business from foreign takeovers. It is quite obvious that Minister has that interest. He is here today listening. We know deep inside—

Mr. Bissonnette: Do not speak for me. Speak for yourself. I can speak for myself.

Mr. Boudria: —even if he cannot do it publicly, the Minister for Small Business is on our side on this issue. We are glad to have his support. I am sure all my colleagues in the Liberal Party are glad to have the Minister's support. It is unfortunate that he has to sit on his hands and cannot manifest that support publicly. We are, however, still grateful, Mr. Speaker.

The Government is abandoning the high tech industry. When research and development tax credits were introduced the first beneficiary of those measures was Mitel. Who cut off those grants? None other than the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on black Thursday, November 8, when the Minister slashed all kinds of useful Government programs. The Government slashed the very useful and worthwhile program helping Mitel and others.

Mr. Bissonnette: Look at what the President said in the newspaper yesterday.

Mr. Boudria: The Liberal Party when it was in Government worked very closely with the high tech industry in establishing those vital programs to protect Canadian industry and small business about which I know the Minister across the way is supportive. What happened? The Tories took over. The Tories started dismantling the good initiatives of the Liberals, and they are destroying them.

The Minister of Regional and Industrial Expansion a little earlier this morning said that the Liberals wanted to turn back the clock. His argument is that the Government is cutting off debate on the Liberal amendments because we are tyring to turn back the clock. Who is destroying FIRA and taking us back 50 years? It is the Minister himself who is now accusing Liberals of wanting to turn back the clock. The Minister cannot have it both ways and he cannot speak out of both sides of his mouth simultaneously, although he is trying very hard.

Even the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion this morning in his speech said that in his review of several FIRA applications he had determined that sometimes FIRA had taken a long time to bargain for Canadians. We should be proud a Government agency was bargaining and being a tough negotiator for the benefit of Canada, a position which the Minister said that Fira had taken. He wants to destroy that. The Minister wants to take us back 50 years. That is enough to make the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) revolt, and enough to make the rest of the voters in Brampton who voted Liberal provincially vote Liberal federally next time around. The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown who is obviously very concerned about such matters will in caucus next week tell his Leader and the others to withdraw that legislation immediately.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member is completely misleading the House. I support my Minister and my Government 100 per cent on this Bill.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I just want to bring to your attention that it is not customary for Members to accuse others of misleading the House. I am sure you will want to ask my colleague to withdraw that statement.

Mr. Andre: It is also not customary to impute motives.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member did not say it intentionally. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell has the floor. I would appreciate it if he would carry on with his debate.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the next time I accuse a Member of misleading this House I will preamble by saying I am not doing it intentionally. Perhaps that will give us this new parliamentary precedent by which we can accuse all Members of misleading everyone else.

I want to tell the Hon. Member across the way, the Member who just accused me of misleading the House, that I am not misleading the House when I say Members on the Government side have in the past on several occasions been in favour of and wanted to strengthen FIRA. Let me give you an example of this Mr. Speaker.

The Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) during the last election campaign was talking about the Black & Decker deal. He said in his riding that FIRA had to be strengthened in order to protect the jobs at Black & Decker. What do we have now? The Minister is destroying FIRA, an agency which a backbench Conservative Member has said was not strong enough and needed to be strengthened. This is enough to cause a backbench revolt of Tories.

Mr. Dick: I doubt it.

• (1250)

Mr. Boudria: I just read about that Hon. Member in the newspaper this morning. I hear him saying that he doubts it. Perhaps he doubts it. Obviously he seems to be saying that he will not participate in such a revolt. However, other members of his caucus have stated publicly that they want FIRA retained and enhanced.

Let us look at the priorities of the Government in the areas of investment and job creation. During the election campaign the Conservatives made promises; in fact they made 338 of them.

Mr. Dick: Do you have a copy?

Mr. Boudria: Perhaps I will hand a copy over to the Hon. Member across the way.

The motion before us today concerns protecting and enhancing Canadian industry, not just allowing foreign takeovers. We want protection. It is correct that we want foreign capital and investment in our country, but we want the best deal for Canadians. That is the difference between a Liberal and a Tory. We want a good deal for Canadians. That is the Liberal position. The Conservative position is, let everybody do whatever they like with no assured benefit for anyone; it does not matter. That is the Tory position, as stated by the Minister himself.

I would like to refer to some of the Conservative promises. This morning we heard the Minister speak against protectionism and such measures. Referring to the textile and apparel industries section of the Tory promises, the first one reads:

> Promote fair trade, but not free trade.

Surely that Minister could not have been party to the listing of campaign promises. Perhaps he should review the document which indicates the 338 promises before he makes another speech. Even better, perhaps he should give a copy of it to whoever wrote the speech which he gave this morning. Then his speech-writer would be aware of the promises and would not write speeches that contradict the positions of the Conservative Party during the last election campaign.

The second promise reads:

> Promote stability, through the rigorous enforcement of our existing international rights and obligations, including, if necessary, the establishment of global quotas and a controlled increase of import volumes.

The third promise reads:

> Review Canada's existing obligations in order to ascertain whether modification should be pursued.

Everyone who listened to the Conservatives had to put up with the empty promises that were made. They promised Canadians that they would protect and enhance our industries, in particular our textile industries which are so vital and important to the riding I represent.

What is the Government's first priority? Is it to assist small business? I see the Minister of State for Small Businesses across the way. The first objective of the Government is to destroy FIRA, directly contradicting the promises which I just listed. That is the priority of the Government. Why has the Government given itself that mandate?

The Government has spent far too much time on this issue. It has expended far too much energy on destroying FIRA. Also it has concentrated on pleasing the President of the United States by having fanfares in Quebec City which will cost Canadian taxpayers over $1 million. It has spent so much time and energy doing such things that it has neglected other very important areas.

Also I see the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Andre) sitting across from me. I know he would agree with me if I were to read a letter from the Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada. On April 1, 1985, the President of the Association, Mr. Jean-Guy Maheu, wrote a letter to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher). He wanted to discuss with that Minister and with other Members of Cabinet issues affecting that industry. We all know how much protection the shoe manufacturing industry needs. In part his letter reads:

> In your letter of October 16, 1984, nearly six months ago, you wrote me that "I hope to be in a position to get together with you, representatives of your association and the unions at an early opportunity". We know that as Minister for International Trade you are travelling very much and that you are very busy but we would appreciate an hour of your time in April.

Since October 16, 1984, and at least until April and probably until now, no meeting was held with that group. There was all kinds of time to meet with the President of the United States in Quebec City. There was all kinds of time to genuflect in front of the Americans. However, there was no time to help out industries that are so important to my riding. That is the disgraceful behaviour of the Government.

The Minister of State for Small Businesses cares about small business. He cares about ensuring that these industries are alive and well. I am surprised that he would not have a very quick and fast discussion with his colleague and order him to withdraw Bill C-15 immediately in order to protect the vital Canadian industries I have just described. That is not bound to happen.

The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said this morning that he wanted to accept the world boldly. That is a euphemism for rolling over and playing dead. Who wants to face new challenges boldly? The Liberals want to face new challenges. Who brought in foreign investment legislation to ensure that foreign investment would be welcome and would protect Canadian industries to the maximum benefit of our country? That is a bold initiative. There is nothing bold about rolling over and playing dead. There is nothing bold about 200 Conservatives sitting here and not speaking on these very important issues. I am sure the voters in their ridings, whose industries are being taken over and are being threatened by the lack of a proper foreign investment policy on the part of the Government, will remind those Conservative Members in the next election of promises which were made in ridings such as Simcoe South and others, promises indicating that our industries needed to be protected and that a Conservative Government would never allow a foreign takeover of Black & Decker, according to some of those Members.

What has happened? What has caused the sudden conversion of Conservative Members? What has caused them to hold ceremonies, which of course will be paid for by Canadian taxpayers, such as the reunion in Quebec City? In singing a duet, the President of the United States and our Tory Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) mutually agreed that there would be a new era of friendliness between the two countries. The engines had not cooled on the jet plane bringing the President of the United States to Washington when there was a countervail on Canadian pork products, a vital agricultural industry in my riding. This has had the effect of lowering the price of pork products by some 12 cents per pound. Farmers are in severe financial distress. The Prime Minister said that the President was as close as the telephone and that they would be meeting and discussing such issues. Where is that telephone call? Why does the Prime Minister not get on the telephone and tell Ronnie over there that we need protection for our agricultural products? That was not done.

In conclusion, I want to say that I fully support the motion presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Before calling it one o'clock, perhaps we could reflect upon the Hon. Member's speech and have questions or comments for him, should he be in his seat when Government Orders are resumed this afternoon.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

S.O. 21

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

HOUSING

BUDGETARY CUT-BACKS—SITUATION IN QUEBEC

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, two weeks ago, we heard that in Quebec, funding for the Home Renovation Plan had been cut by $17 million, which is particularly unfair since only $2 million was cut from the same program in Ontario.

And now, the Minister has announced that Ontario got $22 million under the Canada Rental Supply Program, while Quebec got nothing.

Mr. Speaker, I think all Members of this House should put pressure on the Minister responsible for CMHC to urge this Government to respond to the requests of hundreds of mayors of Quebec municipalities who would like to have additional funding of at least $10 million, not only for the sake of better housing but also to create and maintain employment in the construction industry.

Mr. Speaker, Quebec now has more than 720,000 people on welfare. The unfair cutbacks made by the Minister to the tune of $17 million mean that in Quebec, 4,600 units will not be renovated and 1,300 jobs will be lost. I think all Members of this House should ask the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to correct the injustice being done to Quebecers.

* * *

[English]

INDIAN AFFAIRS

LAC LA HACHE BAND—OPPOSITION TO URANIUM MINING

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to indicate my support for the Lac La Hache Indian band in its attempts to prevent Eldorado Nuclear Limited from pursuing uranium mining under Wollaston Lake, Saskatchewan. I do this for three reasons.

First, there is the question of aboriginal rights. Northern native people have a right not to have their land exploited in this way against their wishes. Second, there is the question of environmental degradation. We should not be in the business of producing the kind and quantity of radioactive waste that uranium mining creates, and which will be a problem for generations to come. Finally, all this is being done as part of the whole nuclear fuel cycle. We, as Canadians, should unambiguously reject any participation in this cycle, whether it be for the production of nuclear power or nuclear weapons.

I have called for a public inquiry into the whole nuclear fuel cycle. Canadians did not like it when the Liberals imposed a nuclear future on them. At one time the Conservatives seemed to share this dislike. Now all we get from the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) is talk about the commercial benefits of everything from marketing reactors to, believe it or not, marketing radioactive waste disposal.

It is about time the Government owned up to the fact that it is business as usual for the nuclear industry in Canada while, tragically, morally and ecologically superior energy alternatives are having their funding seriously cut back. Meanwhile we continue to waste our money on an unacceptable nuclear future.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

PUBLIC'S COMPLAINTS ABOUT SERVICE

Mr. Bill Gottselig (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I rise in this House once again to voice the concerns of many of my constituents regarding the claims made by Canada Post. For the most part, postal service is woefully inadequate. Not only is mail service slow across Canada, but it is very inefficient with local city and rural deliveries.

My constituents welcome the news that Canada Post is establishing a task force to eliminate unnecessary jobs within the corporation. We also hope this review will cover jobs at the executive level. Unless Canada Post can assure us of reasonable time for mail delivery, as well as an improvement of service generally, I call for a halt to the proposed rate increases, not only for mail deliveries but also the proposed increase in rental rates of post office boxes as well.

* * *

[Translation]

THE ECONOMY

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, in connection with the business seminar held recently in the riding of Drummond, I would like to draw the attention of the House to a very important piece of legislation that was adopted by our Government, and I am referring to the Small Businesses Loans Act, which will help thousands of Canadians to start or expand their own businesses. As a businessman myself, I am particularly interested in this legislation, because since 1982, all new jobs created in Canada were created by small businesses. Another fact is that 30 per cent of small businesses are owned by women. In 1961, the Progressive Conservative Government, led by the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker, adopted this legislation for the first time, and one of the first steps taken by our Government was to update the legislation and extend it until March 31, 1990.

In adopting this legislation, which deals with loans by financial institutions that are 85 per cent guaranteed by the Federal Government and are designed for businesses that provide goods and services, the Progressive Conservative Government has shown its commitment to small businesses and has helped to create an economic climate that is favourable to growth. The maximum interest rate on such loans is the chartered banks' preferred rate plus one, and borrowing terms are designed with small businesses in mind.

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION—UNION'S OPPOSITION TO ELECTRIC ARC TECHNOLOGY

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, once again I rise to address an issue of great concern to the people of my constituency. A month ago we read in the Halifax Chronicle-Herald that the federal and provincial Governments were very close to reaching an agreement on the second and final phase of the modernization program at Sydney Steel Corporation. We were told that the new cost-sharing agreement for the $65 million project to replace SYSCO's outdated hearth would be concluded in a few weeks. Well, we are still waiting. It seems like we have been waiting forever.

The plan for the modernization of Sydney Steel was first put forward by a provincial Tory Government. The former federal Liberal Government provided up to $96 million to help carry out renovations in the technological operations of Sydney Steel, while the present Government, with all its high-minded rhetoric about consultation with the provinces, has done nothing.

At issue is jobs, the jobs that will be lost if the federal Government presses ahead with its plans to install an electric arc furnace. Both the Conservative Premier of Nova Scotia and the steelworkers' union have ruled out electric arc technology on the grounds that it would reduce employment in the primary steel-making operations, the blast furnace and the coke ovens. The union in particular has noted that the federal Government's proposal would turn SYSCO's steel plant into a turn-key operation employing merely 500 workers. The steelworkers' union is pushing for a basic oxygen furnace as recommended in the original rehabilitation plan.

It is high time that the federal Government listened to the voices of those most directly concerned with the operations of Sydney Steel, the workers themselves.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

WORLD-WIDE VIOLATIONS BY GOVERNMENTS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, last night the Ukrainian Canadian Students' Union gave Members of Parliament the opportunity to view Harvest of Despair, a film on the Ukrainian famine of 1932-33. This famine was the result of the Soviet Government's demand for large quotas of grain for sale abroad, and its refusal to release food to the people. Stalin's intention was to break the opposition of Ukrainian farmers to his economic policies, and to bring the Ukrainian people to heel. This film presentation underscored the evidence currently being provided by the Canadian Helsinki Group about Soviet and East European violations of human rights.

Unfortunately communist countries hold no monopoly on disregard of human rights. Millions of people in the so-called free world are ruled by repressive military Governments. Who of us would want to choose between living in Poland or in Chile? Humanity can rejoice these days at the trials of secret police officers in Poland, and of army officers in Argentina. Abduction, torture, and murder of dissidents by dictatorships of both the left and the right are equally violations of human rights. We all need to be more sensitive to the human rights consequences of government policies. Western countries have become proficient at policies of restraint that throw people out of work and drive many to despair.

Does the International Monetary Fund consider the social consequences of its Third World economic—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

AWARENESS OF ACID RAIN POLLUTION

Mr. Elliott Hardey (Kent): Mr. Speaker, a recent American poll shows that U.S. citizen awareness of acid rain pollution has soared to 94 per cent. Poll analysts are amazed at this kind of awareness. Of those polled, 72 per cent would like to see the shareholders of corporations that spew the pollution that returns to earth as sulphuric acid bear the burden of clean-up, but they are also willing to accept a $70 per person per year assessment if necessary to get the job done.

• (1410)

That tells me and my constituents that we do have an ally across the border, an ally that will help us get the message to the U.S. leaders who seem reluctant to make this a priority item. That ally is the American people.

The message is that we must not wait any longer. Canada is committed to move now, and will cut 50 per cent of sulphur emissions by 1994. Just last week the Province of Quebec and the State of Massachusetts announced a joint agreement to develop a program for the control of the pollution.

If Canada will continue to be sincere and make positive moves toward reducing sulphur emissions, and embark on a program of encouraging the American people to demand action, the problem will be defeated, and our lakes, forests and crops can and will return to normal.

S.O. 21

INDUSTRY

DEFENCE INDUSTRY PRODUCTIVITY PROGRAM CONTRACT

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, many Canadians who are understandably concerned about preventing a nuclear holocaust strongly oppose any government involvement in defence research. Sometimes, however, that research may be of great benefit to mankind.

Yesterday, for instance, I announced on behalf of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) a federal government contribution of $3 million under the Defence Industry Productivity Program to a Toronto area company called Sciex.

The company will use the contribution to help it complete the development of the AROMIC Cargo Examination System, which is a sensing device used to detect contraband materials such as drugs, firearms, and explosives, which are concealed in legitimate cargo. Two of the systems have already been sold to a Middle Eastern country, for delivery next year.

Sciex, which is a 100 per cent Canadian-owned company, expects to create 260 new high-tech Canadian jobs, and generate $150 million, mostly in export sales. It it succeeds, the federal Government will not only recover its entire contribution and help to create Canadian jobs, but it will also assist humanity in its war against illegal drug and gun trafficking.

We Canadians long for peace and mutual and verifiable disarmament. Sciex and the Defence Industry Productivity Program may very well help us to achieve those goals.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

[Translation]

DANGEROUS PRODUCTS

RECOMMENDATION THAT SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH INTO HEALTH PROBLEMS RELATED TO UREA FORMALDEHYDE FOAM INSULATION BE PURSUED

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government has confirmed that research on health problems related to urea formaldehyde foam, also referred to as UFFI, has been stopped, but a study by pediatricians at Sainte-Justine Hospital in Montreal reveals that 65 per cent of a group of 76 children who were given examinations suffered from chronic coughs, and that of these, 43 per cent were asthmatic or had similar symptoms. At least, that is what was said in the May 2 edition of Le Devoir.

It is absolutely intolerable that the Government should abandon these children, whose average age is six and a half. Physicians also found that the children suffered weight losses of up to 20 pounds, which is not normal. These are growing children who should not be losing weight to such an alarming extent.

S.O. 21

The study, to be published by the magazine L'Union médicale du Canada in July, also says that the findings do not allow for the percentage of children who are unable to put into words what is the matter with them. In the light of these facts, the Government ought to reconsider its decision and order research on health problems related to UFFI to be resumed.

* * *

[English]

HUMAN RIGHTS

POLAND—HARASSMENT OF SOLIDARITY LEADERS

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, since the banning of the Polish Trade Union Solidarity, human rights activists and Solidarity leaders have been subjected to repeated harassment. As cases in point, Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, Bogdan Lis, and Adam Michnik have all been imprisoned or detained, with or without trial, for various periods since December, 1981.

On February 12, 1985, at a meeting with Lech Walesa in Gdansk, they were again arrested and charged with "making preparations for a strike . . . in protest against increases in food prices and extension of the work day".

The rights of freedom of expression, freedom of association, and due process of law are too often taken for granted. This glaring example of another violation of the Helsinki Accords and the international pledge made by Poland as a signatory must be noted. Signatories of the Helsinki Accords are responsible for upholding their commitment to their co-signatories and must be held accountable.

The Canadian Government would be justified in making the countries involved in violations of the Accords aware of our abhorrence of such actions.

* * *

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION

ALLOCATION OF CO-OPERATIVE HOUSING UNITS TO SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, on April 29, 1985, officials of CMHC in Saskatoon indicated to the Co-operative Housing Association of Saskatchewan that Saskatchewan's housing allocation for 1985 would be 28 units. That amounts to a mere 35 per cent of the 1984 allocation of 80 units.

The Minister responsible for CMHC needs to explain to the people of his own province what he is intending to do and why he has seriously reduced the amount of social housing in Saskatchewan. The people of Saskatchewan would like to know why Saskatchewan is being forced to accept these large cut-backs in housing, which are much larger than they are in the rest of the country. Is it a part of the federal Government's approach to Saskatchewan residents, particularly senior citizens, to deny affordable housing, and to make Saskatchewan a second-class province?

* * *

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF HON. ROGER STEELE, SPEAKER OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF THE NORTHERN TERRITORY OF AUSTRALIA

Mr. Speaker: May I advise Members of the presence in our gallery today of the Hon. Roger Steele, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of the Northern Territory of Australia.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER ON FOREIGN POLICY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. In his discussion paper entitled Competitiveness and Security: Directions for Canada's International Relations, he cited on page 3 that one of the objectives is the protection of our natural environment. But there are absolutely no lines of enquiry contained in the document, no questions posed, and no options given. How can Canadians respond to the environmental question internationally, and particularly with respect to our relationship with the United States, with such a slim section on the environment in that discussion paper? Perhaps the printer misplaced the chapter.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it goes without saying that the people of Canada cannot respond to that question, to SDI, to trade, or to any other questions if the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party prevent the Parliament of Canada from allowing a public hearing by the Parliament of Canada so that Canadians can be heard.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): What we have provided is an invitation to Canadians to take part, for the first time, in the discussion of Canadian foreign policy. The position of the opposition Parties denies Parliament the opportunity to be heard on foreign policy, and it denies the people of Canada the opportunity to take part in the discussion of foreign policy. It also denies the Government the benefits of the advice of individual Canadians on environmental, strategic, trade and other questions. I hope the Hon. Member, his Party, and his colleagues will change their opposition to public debate.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE PROPOSAL

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Minister wants debate, but the debate has been foreclosed on a number of issues. That is the point. For instance, what is the point of having a committee—and he can take his Conservative back-benchers across the country because they need something to do—which will ask the people of the country whether we want free trade with the United States, which is one of the options, when the Prime Minister and the President of the United States have already signed a joint declaration in Quebec City which has moved us toward freer trade? Does the document mean anything? Which is the valid document, the communiqué which was issued by the Prime Minister and the President, this document, both, or neither?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition might not want to hear from the people of Canada. The Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party might not want to give the people of Canada an opportunity to take part directly in the formulation of Canadian foreign policy. But we do want Canadians to take part in the process.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): We believe very deeply in the parliamentary process, and in the interests of individual ordinary Canadians in being heard and being influential on the questions which so vitally affect our future. I guess, Mr. Speaker, the best thing I could do is ask the Leader of the Opposition why he is refusing to allow the people of Canada to be heard on international questions.

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I will tell the Minister, Mr. Speaker, it is because we don't want to be party to a fraud on the people of Canada. A phoney, peripatetic committee is looking at questions which the Government has already decided in its own mind—which the paper itself may have already decided—before the conclusions and deliberations of this committee are in.

[Translation]

GREEN PAPER—TRADE LINKS WITH UNITED STATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Now in the green paper, or should I say grey paper, the following question appears on page 33, and I quote:

> Do Canadians believe that an agreement on closer trade relations with the United States entails important . . . advantages or disadvantages? In summary, what kind of

However, the joint press release by the President and the Right Hon. Prime Minister of Canada says that both heads of state—of course the Right Hon. Prime Minister is not head of state yet—have agreed on measures to expand mutual and reciprocal access to their countries's markets. My question is as follows: Is the green paper deliberately setting out to deceive us, since the decision has already been made by the Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the green paper is giving Canadians, for the first time in Canada's history, the right to be directly involved in formulating and determining Canada's foreign policy. This was not a practice of the former Liberal Government. However, today it is the practice to which this Government is committed, and I hope that the Opposition parties will be prepared to respect the right of Canadians to be consulted on our national and international policies.

[English]

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS ON ENVIRONMENTAL MATTERS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who has chosen not to answer the question posed to him by my Leader. If the right hon. gentleman examines the book, he will find that having made the grand declaration in the opening pages that "we are pursuing the objective of the integrity of our natural environment", the Green Paper then reveals, and I quote:

> In the past decade new areas of disagreement have arisen on the protection of the environment, particularly acid rain, and on threats to water quality posed by chemical pollutants—

What security is there for Canadians if all that can be said in this paper is that there have been disagreements between Canada and the United States?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Is that a question?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is a good question. You haven't figured it out yet, but it is a good question.

Mr. Crosbie: That's a Caccia nut question.

Mr. Caccia: You haven't seen the title of the book, perhaps.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on environmental, on trade, on strategic and other questions, this document provides the opportunity for broad public debate by the people and the Parliament of Canada. We know the views of the Hon. Member for Davenport. We know the views of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, and we know the views of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. Parliament knows those views. We believe that there is an interest in Parliament in knowing the views of the people of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deans: Before the decision is made or after?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I would like the Hon. Member for Davenport to explain to me why it is that he should have a right in this House to express his views, but he denies to his constituents, the people who vote for him, the right to be heard themselves? Why is he more important than the people?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Shame.

Mr. Caccia: I will just say to the Minister, Mr. Speaker, that he would not have given that answer if he had realized that in his own document, which evidently he has not read, there are no lines of inquiry on the environment proposed by the document itself. That shows an abysmal lack of knowledge of the contents of his own paper.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PROTECTION AND CONSERVATION BUDGETS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Can the Minister tell us what kind of credibility she can sustain in Washington in her talks with the authorities there when she allows this year a cut of $6.5 million in her environmental protection service and a cut of $5.3 million in the environment conservation services?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): I do not think the Hon. Member for Davenport is fooling anyone with his concern for the environment and his repeated protests, because this Government has done more in seven months than those gentlemen in the Opposition did for years.

* * *

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER—ROLE OF PUBLIC

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed as well to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. He said a number of times so far today that he and other members of his Government respect the people of Canada. They want to listen to the people of Canada, and believe in the consultative process, and so on. Does it show respect to the people of Canada to set up a consultative process in order to listen to their views and then to announce in advance that the Government, before the results are in from the consultations, is going to make decisions in the key areas about which it is listening to the views of the people? Is that showing respect or is that showing contempt for the people of Canada?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that is showing respect for the people of Canada and for the parliamentary process. Let me give the Hon. Leader of the Opposition—excuse me, John—the Leader of the New Democratic Party, an example. The question of the Strategic Defence Initiative is, I believe, of interest to Hon. Members in the House. Certainly the Government of Canada, before we have to take our first decision, the decision as to whether or not we accept the invitation of Secretary Weinberger to become involved in star wars research, would like the benefit of the advice of ordinary Canadians about the Strategic Defence Initiative.

The New Democratic Party and the Liberal Party are denying the Government of Canada access to that kind of advice by refusing to establish a parliamentery committee which would let the people speak.

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, is the Secretary of State for External Affairs telling the House that the Government is now asserting that it will not take a decision on committing the Government of Canada to participation in star wars research until this committee makes its final report? Is that what the Minister is telling the House?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, of course I am not saying that.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): What I am saying is that we are seeking a way that allows the Government of Canada to meet its duty to decide, and allows for the first time the people of Canada to express their views in a way which will have an influence upon the decision of the Government of Canada. There is nothing new, Sir, about Governments having to decide. What is new is that this Government is seeking the opportunity to hear from the people before the decisions are taken, and that opportunity is being denied us by the position taken by the New Democratic Party and the Liberal Party.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, we are hearing a phoney process from a phoney Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Once again he has told the House that he is going to consult before he makes a decision. One minute ago in reply to my other question he said, no, the Government wasn't going to wait. I wish the Minister at least would get his lines straight in the House of Commons.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Since the Minister has reiterated in the answer he gave me one minute ago, and in answers he has given to the Liberal Party as well, that the Government intends to go ahead and make a decision about star wars, and intends to make a decision about trade matters, before the consultative process is over, will he acknowledge that this is a sham process, that it is going to cost the Canadian people thousands of dollars, probably on a weekly basis, and that it makes a whole mockery out of democratic consultation? If the Minister acknowledges that, will he put an end to this sham process?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I remind the Leader of the New Democratic Party that he asked me if a decision would await a final report of the committee. The answer is that a decision obviously cannot await that final report—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1430)

Mr. Broadbent: Why not?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I made it clear earlier that I was not going to accept the deadlines imposed by the Secretary of Defense of the United States. Nor do I think we should accept other artificial deadlines. What we should seek is a means by which, before we decide, we have the maximum possible opportunity to hear from the people of our country. We have provided a process which would allow the public of Canada to speak on this issue, beginning in the next few weeks. The Liberals and the NDP are refusing to give the people of Canada that voice on that decision.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I know the NDP do not like making decisions; they have taken eight years to figure out their decision on NATO. But the Government of Canada—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

MINISTER'S VIEWS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the Right Hon. Minister that one year ago he was conducting his own consultation with Canadians. He prepared his own paper on foreign policy. But he never had the courtesy to use the wisdom of the people who made the presentations to him which he put in the paper, which was then put in the waste-basket by his Leader last summer.

Will the right hon. honest friend of mine come clean at the beginning of the discussion and table the paper he prepared last summer, so we will know the real thinking of the real Joe?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I admire the Hon. Member's agility in trying to change the subject and get off a position of denying public debate, which he knows is an insupportable position. What is at issue here is not my views, indeed not the views of the Hon. Member, because our views are known. What is at issue is whether or not the people of Canada are going to be allowed to be heard on the Strategic Defence Initiative. I want to hear from Canadians on the Strategic Defence Initiative. The Liberal Party will not let Canadians speak on the Strategic Defence Initiative.

REQUEST FOR IMMEDIATE COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a little proposition to the Right Hon. Minister. Will he agree to let the committee sit right now, have public hearings on star wars, and give a mandate to the committee to report three months from now?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I read very closely the report of the debate yesterday in Hansard and I saw that at 2.30 yesterday afternoon the spokesman of the Liberal Party on external affairs was in favour of the committee; at 2.50 in the afternoon his Leader was opposed to the committee.

Mr. Chrétien: If we discuss star wars right away.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Do I now understand that the Liberal Party's official position is that they are prepared to let there be public debate and that they will give—

Mr. Chrétien: On star wars right away.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —agreement to a reference of the Green Paper to a special joint committee? Is that the position of the Liberal Party now?

Mr. Chrétien: Right away on star wars.

Some Hon. Members: Get up!

Mr. Siddon: Get your act together.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

U.S. STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—COMMITTEE REFERRAL

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Secretary of State as well, a question not at all unlike that just asked.

Mr. Crosbie: Are you still stimulated, Ian?

Mr. Deans: Will the Minister take out of his report the question of star wars, refer it now to an all-Party committee, with the reporting date to be that date on which Parliament returns in September? If he will do that, we will participate.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You never said that on House Leaders' day.

Mr. Crosbie: The great participator.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have now had both opposition Parties move off their opposition to public debate.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The place, Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. Wednesday is taking a long time to go by.

Some Hon. Members: It's Thursday.

Mr. Speaker: That is what I am saying; Wednesday is taking a long time to go by. Go ahead, please.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, the appropriate place for a discussion among House Leaders is in a meeting among House Leaders. We would be prepared to have that discussion occur immediately.

From my own point of view as the sponsor of the paper, while I do not want to give instructions to the committee, certainly I would have no objection at all to the committee giving priority to questions on which the Government has to make decisions quickly, so that we will have the benefit of the advice of the people and Parliament of Canada before we have to take those decisions. I would have no objection to that.

Naturally I do not want to limit the Government of Canada by artificial deadlines coming from the Hon. Member, as I did not want to accept the artificial deadline of Mr. Weinberger. But if, for example, we are to make a decision on this limited phase of the question of a response to an invitation on the Strategic Defence Initiative sometime within the next three to four months, I would think that if the committee could get going quickly we would have some expression of consensus to help guide us. I think that is reasonable, and I hope that Hon. Members do, as well.

REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I want to be absolutely clear and understand what it is the Secretary of State is saying. When the Government House Leader discussed this with me—and he shouted across the floor of the House that this was not my position yesterday—my position yesterday, as he well knows, is that I would consider whether or not it was possible to work out some arrangement. That is what I said.

Mr. Crosbie: You were stimulated yesterday?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: And now I want to carry through on that.

Mr. Deans: Thank you. Now I am asking if the Secretary of State is prepared to establish a committee with the primary purpose of reviewing the question of star wars, to report back not later than the day on which the House returns in September, and will the Government hold back any decision until that report is made to the House of Commons?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the world is wider than the Strategic Defence Initiative. There are questions of international development which have to be considered; there are questions of human rights which have to be considered; there are questions of the environment which have to be considered.

What we have done here is establish the means by which, for the first time, the people of Canada can take part directly in the discussion of Canadian foreign policy. I have just indicated to the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain that I, as the Secretary of State for External Affairs, would have no objection to the committee giving priority to questions on which the Government has to come to a decision in the next three to four months. That allows us to decide, that allows the public to participate, and I want to know why the opposition Parties are opposed to government decision and public participation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

CYPRUS ANVIL MINE AT FARO, YUKON

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister, and it concerns the fate of the Cyprus Anvil Mine at Faro, Yukon, and the future of the town itself. As the Deputy Prime Minister knows, the previous Government took imaginative steps to keep that mine open.

Mr. Crosbie: What were they?

Mr. Penner: So far all we have had from this Government is one more study and not even a report. I am advised that there are meetings going on today to offer the employees a one-way ticket out of Faro; the Cyprus Anvil Mine is going to be mothballed.

Is the Minister fully satisfied that everything possible has been done by his Government to keep this mine open and operating, and to keep this town alive and keep the citizens living there, or will he now admit to the House of Commons that the town and the mine were written off by his government quite some time ago?

Mr. Forrestall: By the Liberal Government.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, as the hon. gentleman knows, that question is more properly directed to the Minister responsible, that being the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. But I can remind him that the mine was closed while the Party to which he belongs was in government, not by this Party. I will remind him as well of the efforts initiated by this Government in an attempt to reopen a mine which was closed down during the Government comprised of the Party of which he has the dubious honour of being a member.

REPORTED OFFER OF SEVERANCE PAY TO EMPLOYEES

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister knows there was $11 million set aside to try to keep that mine open. It was in the Budget of the last fiscal year and it was taken out of this year's Budget. It is gone.

Today the employees of that mine are being offered severance pay and a moving allowance which will amount to about $10,000 per employee. I want the Deputy Prime Minister to tell the House if the Government of Canada is offering any direct financial assistance to Dome to move people out of Faro and out of Yukon?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Well, again, as the Hon. Member knows, or should know, that is a matter falling within the responsibility of the Minister of Labour. I, of course, keep current with these affairs from a constituency point of view. His figures are wrong in the first instance with respect to an initiative taken by the mine itself, in which the Government of the day participated, to the extent of $25 million on either side, with a stripping program.

● (1440)

With respect to the current request by labour for assistance on ending the lock-out and all the assistance which flows from that, that matter is now under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Labour. I hope it is met to the satisfaction of the union which first initiated the request.

* * *

FINANCE

CORPORATE TAX BREAKS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance who has stated that the upcoming Budget is going to be tough, but fair. In the last few days we have heard from a number of business leaders advocating massive cuts in social spending. However, they have been surprisingly mute on corporate welfare, the billions of dollars spent each year on corporate tax breaks. Since these tax breaks are disproportionately beneficial to the upper income earners and to the large capital intensive corporate sector, would the Minister not agree that, for his Budget to be fair, the matter of corporations wallowing in their own federal welfare will have to be addressed?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Member's rhetoric is a little too colourful. I have said a number of times in the past that a number of matters relating to the question which he has just posed will be addressed in the Budget.

TAX EXPENDITURE ACCOUNT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, in 1979 the then Minister of Finance had the courage to bring in a tax expenditure account with his Budget, to enable us to evaluate the pros and cons of the tax expenditures. Will the Minister of Finance follow in the footsteps of his colleague and introduce a tax expenditure account to enable the people of Canada to evaluate how fair his Budget is?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides referred to my last effort in the House as courageous. Maybe he will do it again.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NIAGARA RIVER POLLUTION—SUGGESTED ACTION IN UNITED STATES COURTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. The Ontario Government is currently appealing a decision of a United States court which allows toxic chemicals to continue to leak from a storage dump in the United States into the Niagara River and Lake Ontario. Would the Minister tell the House if the Government would be prepared to take action in the American courts to prevent Americans from polluting the Great Lakes? If the Minister feels she wants further negotiations, would the Government consider taking that action after those negotiations have been completed?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, since Canada is a sovereign country, I do not think it should use the judicial processes of a foreign country to make those decisions.

* * *

[English]

FINANCE

MINISTER'S MEETING WITH BUSINESSMEN

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I would like the Minister of Finance to explain why, days before the Budget, he chose to meet secretly with a privileged group of investors and businessmen as reported in The Globe and Mail? Why on earth would he have such a meeting during this sensitive period? Would he kindly tell us who these privileged people were?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the meeting was not sensitive. It was one of a series of meetings that my colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, and I have been having for the last six months. I think we have met with 56 different organizations. The matter on which we met was in the ordinary course of pre-Budget consultations. I suggest that the Hon. Member discuss this with his colleague, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. Maybe he could learn a little more about the matter, since the meeting was held in his former law office.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I do not regard that as a serious answer.

PURPOSE OF MEETING

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): The fact of the matter is that, according to spokesmen for the Minister's office, the Budget has largely been printed. Is this the same charade that the Secretary of State for External Affairs took us through? If the meeting was not to discuss what might be in the Budget, what was it for? Why would the Minister hold a meeting at this particular time?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Budget is not printed. This particular meeting was originally scheduled back in January or February. It was a meeting with a group which was established originally in 1975 by the Leader of the Opposition. It was just a continuation of discussions that have been going on with previous Ministers of Finance since that time. The only time in which these discussions were not held was in 1982 and 1983 when the then Minister of Finance did not want to discuss the particular matter.

* * *

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

NATIONAL COMMITMENT—ELECTION PROMISE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Science and Technology. In June of 1984 the Progressive Conservative Campaign Handbook, which included the promises by the Conservatives for the 1984 election, stated:

A Progressive Conservative Government will make up the ground Canada has lost in technological research and development through:

Doubling our national commitment to R&D from 1.3% of Gross National Product (GNP) to 2.5% of GNP within the first four years we are in office.

Earlier this week the Minister stated:

We cannot promise that by 1990 we will have moved to the point of 2.5 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, when is a promise not a promise? Will the Minister now agree that the Government has abandoned the promise it made in the election campaign of doubling R and D within its first four years in office?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the usual NDP version of a political commitment is that it is a matter of the public sector promising to hand out vast amounts of public resources to accomplish a goal.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: That was your promise.

Mr. Siddon: Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate a little tolerance from the Opposition if they wish to hear the answer.

The Government remains committed to achieving a level of national expenditure on research and development approaching that of our major industrial competitors. I am optimistic that that goal will be reached.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, in June of 1984, less than a year ago, acting on the advice of the then critic for Science and Technology, the present Minister, the Progressive Conservative Party stated explicitly that it would achieve 2.5 per cent in the first four years, that is, by 1988. Is that now still the promise, or has the Government abandoned that promise and therefore undermined the future of the economy of the country?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is ascribing to myself words which were never uttered.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Siddon: In the question the precise words were not quoted. In fact it is an objective of the Government to raise Canada's investment, in the public and private sectors alike, to a level approaching that of our major industrial competitors, hopefully within the next five years. However, that ultimate goal will be achieved in due course.

* * *

INDUSTRY

EMPLOYEES OF DOMINION STORES IN ONTARIO

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Ninety-three Dominion stores have been sold to A&P and many employees in the remaining stores in Ontario centres such as Scarborough face what some fear is an uncertain future. What action can the Government of Canada take to give these employees the assurance that they will receive fair treatment if any more stores are sold or closed by this company which has a dominion charter?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, this issue is substantially a provincial matter. At the time of the acquisition of certain stores by A&P we were most concerned about the preservation of jobs. As I recall, over 7,000 jobs were preserved. We will naturally be concerned about the jobs in the remaining stores. I will take his question as representation with a view to checking to ensure that there is no serious threat of them losing their present positions.

* * *

● (1450)

[Translation]

FINANCE

INQUIRY WHY MINISTER DID NOT MEET WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF QUEBEC FAMILY ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Today he admitted that he agreed to have a meeting with the "big bosses" of the financial world, as had been reported by the Globe and Mail.

Could the Minister of Finance inform the House why he agreed to meet with the big bosses of the financial world, when yesterday he refused to attend a meeting with representatives of Quebec family agencies, representing 100,000 people, who wanted to meet with the Minister to discuss the needs of the real people of this country? What were his reasons? Is this the old double standard? He has time for the crème de la crème but no time at all for the people.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have a list of the various organizations that I have met over the course of the last six months. I could read the list to the Hon. Member if he wishes. It would only take me about ten minutes. They include the Consumers' Association of Canada, the Canadian Council on Social Development, the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and the Canadian Federation of Municipalities.

I have met with a wide range of people and not just the "Pooh-Bahs", to use his words from the translation. The group that I met a week and a half ago was part of the same series of consultations.

I do not understand, for the life of me, why the Liberal Party is against consultation. Surely it is important for the Minister of Finance to have access to the ideas and views of a wide range of Canadians. That is the process we have gone through over the last six months, and that is the process that will continue flowing in this place.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET FAMILY ORGANIZATIONS TOMORROW

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

First of all, I am glad the Minister asked me why we were opposed to consultation. In connection with Bill C-26, all groups were asking to have the spouse's allowance expanded and the Minister is refusing to do so. His consultations are a lot of bullshit!

Could the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am sure the Hon. Member wants to withdraw that word.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the word, but the smell lingers.

Could the Minister of Finance inform the House whether he would be willing to meet tomorrow with these family agencies so they can explain their position on policies affecting the family?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, again the Hon. Member demonstrated a total lack of respect for the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Comments like that do not reflect on me; they reflect on this whole House. If the Hon. Member had any respect, he would take back that comment in a far more complimentary way than he has just done.

I have met with a number of groups that represent social organizations. I can tell the Hon. Member right now that any meeting right now would not be timely in terms of this Budget, but I would be very happy to meet with the organization to which he refers, but not under his auspices, because I do not think that would do any credit to the organization involved.

* * *

SHIPBUILDING

LAYOFFS AT DAVIE SHIPYARD

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

[Translation]

Last week, the Davie shipyards at Lauzon, near Quebec City, sent layoff notices to 880 employees. The remaining 770 will be laid off this fall, and the company will have no new contracts until the fall of 1986, when it will start on the Federal project for refitting four Canadian Navy destroyers. My question is as follows, Mr. Speaker: Is the Federal Government going to accept the union's request to award the company a contract for the construction of another ferry for CN Marine, so that union members will have work until the fall of 1986?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, of course we are concerned about any layoff, in particular a layoff of the nature referred to by the Hon. Member. I can only tell the Hon. Member at this time that we will be having discussions with the company to see if there is some realistic way to avert this layoff and other possible layoffs in related companies.

[Translation]

ASSISTANCE TO VERSATILE-DAVIE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, two months ago, the Minister approved a loan of $15 million for Versatile-Davie to cover capital costs until work would begin on the Canadian destroyers.

My supplementary is as follows: Does the Minister intend to be as attentive to the needs of the shipyard's 1,600 employees, for whom the shipyard is one of two major sources of employment in this part of Quebec? This is a matter of great importance to many Quebecers.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, surely the Hon. Member realizes that our attempts to keep the shipyard open, and particularly to give it the kind of contracts that he has referred to, were very much in the interest of workers in that shipyard. I think he should be standing up congratulating us.

* * *

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance, the Frank Miller look alike. In November the Minister of Finance said that his Government could have made more decisions and taken more action, but to do so in the absence of full consultation would undermine the effectiveness of his Government's economic plans. Will the Minister be true to his word and give an unequivocal undertaking to the House that no changes will be made to the Unemployment Insurance Act, or its regulations, before there has been full consultation with the Canadian public?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member should have some confidence in me. Let him wait until next Thursday and I think he will be able to make up his own mind.

MINISTER'S CONSULTATIONS

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, with regard to specific provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act, particularly those dealing with sickness, fishermen, and individuals who cannot work because of pregnancy, will the Minister indicate to the House whether he has had any consultations on those three areas of the Unemployment Insurance Act? Is he telling the House that he is prepared to move on those, thus deviating from the Prime Minister's commitment that universal social programs are a sacred trust?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, using the expression I have applied to other members of the Hon. Member's Party, the Hon. Member is trying to use the politics of fear. Let him wait until next Thursday. If he thinks about it, I believe he will be able to make up his mind in an appropriate way. There has been full consultation by my colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, and myself, on a wide range of issues surrounding the topics that he has raised. I can assure him that we have a great deal of sensitivity toward the fishermen and women who would be affected by any changes. The Hon. Member should wait until next Thursday.

* * *

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

SUBMISSIONS TO EQUALITY RIGHTS COMMITTEE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Yesterday he stated that he had no knowledge of the January gag order issued by the NDHQ to members of the Armed Forces who might want to appear before the committee on the important issues of equality rights. Now that the Minister has reviewed this matter, will he tell the House his policy with respect to the appearance of the members of the Armed Forces? Specifically, will he inform all members of the Armed Forces that they are free to make written or verbal submissions to the committee without any possible present or future adverse impact on their careers in the Canadian Armed Forces?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I answered that question yesterday. I would be delighted to appear before the committee, if that is what the committee wishes. They simply have to get in touch with me.

With respect to the officials, there are well recognized procedures with respect to officials in the Department, whether they be military or civilian, appearing before committee members.

Mr. Robinson: The Minister has not answered the question.

APPEARANCES BEFORE COMMITTEE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, there are 83,000 members of the Canadian Armed Forces. Is each man and woman in the Armed Forces free to appear, without any possible repercussions, before the equality rights committee to voice their concerns on the serious issues which have been raised in the discussion paper and which directly affect each and every member of the Armed Forces? I am not concerned with just the Minister or senior officials, but members of the Armed Forces themselves.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, my only observation is that if 83,000 members of the Armed Forces appeared before the committee, in our committee rooms as they are presently constituted, it would be a little crowded.

* * *

● (1500)

MULTICULTURALISM

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE—RACE RELATIONS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): My question is directed to the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. This Tuesday's federal-provincial conference on multiculturalism was a dismal failure. Not only was it conducted behind closed doors, but when the doors were finally opened we found how empty that conference really was. I would like to ask a specific question on racism which the Minister irresponsibly said is outside his jurisdiction. How can the Minister make such a declaration when an integral part of his mandate and his directorate is within the race relations area? Was racism discussed around the table? If so, what strategic conclusions and recommendations can the Minister make at this time?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, first, the conference attended by all the Ministers was deemed by many people, most people in Winnipeg except for the Hon. Member, a success. It was the first time we have been able to get together to sit down and talk about one of the most important subjects in the country, namely, multiculturalism. We dealt with that in a spirit of co-operation and unity.

Dealing with the second part of the Hon. Member's question, I and the multicultural Department have a major responsibility for the area of race relations in Canada. If you take the very narrow definition, in terms of legislation it falls in our area. We have a major thrust in terms of fighting racism at every level of society. The Department and myself are committed to doing that, and I hope the Hon. Member is in agreement.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of two, presented on Wednesday, May 15, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Point of Order—Mr. Gray (Windsor West)

The petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Calgary South (Mrs. Sparrow) and the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

RIGHTS OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege relating to the answer given today by the Minister of National Defence concerning participation in a Parliamentary committee on equality rights.

I would submit that the effect of the decision which has obviously been made by that Minister denies the right of Members of Parliament to hear from important witnesses on matters of concern before this Parliament. What that Minister is doing is denying Members of the Armed Forces the right to appear—

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is clearly argument arising out of Question Period. It is not a question of Privilege. The Member may have a point he wishes to make, but he will have to find a different arena.

Mr. Deans: It is a very good point.

Mr. Speaker: Before we get to the business question, because of the nature of the point of order that was made to me yesterday, I must at this point indicate my decision on that matter. One way or the other it might have an effect.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: It might be asking for a lot.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

NOTICE OF MOTION—STANDING ORDER 82—SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: I am now prepared to rule on the Point of Order raised yesterday by the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) relating to a Notice of Motion on the Order Paper under Government Notices of Motion concerning a proposed allocation of time motion.

The Hon. Member for Windsor West is quite right in saying that the contemporary practice has been to propose motions pursuant to S.O. 82 on Routine Proceedings without written notice. I also agree with him that the Government can give written notice to the House of the actual text of the motion. Rulings by my predecessors having clearly established that no written notice is required but as the Hon. Member for Windsor West has stated a Minister of the Crown may, if he so choses, give written notice of a motion of allocation of time and I concur with him that our rules do not prevent this.

Point of Order—Mr. Gray (Windsor West)

The first point to be decided is whether the written notice should appear under Motions rather than under Government Notices of Motions. I say again, that it is a fact that motions pursuant to S.O. 82 of which oral notice has been given have been proposed during Routine Proceedings under Motions. However, in this case, the Clerk of the House received specific instruction from the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) to have the said motion appear on the Notice Paper under Government Notices of Motions. I draw to the attention of all Hon. Members Citation 268 of Beauchesne Fifth Edition which says:

> The Government may, from time to time, put on the Notice Paper notices of motions concerning business of the House. When these items are called they are deemed transferred to Government Orders on the Order Paper.

The Twentieth Edition of Erskine May at page 296 defines the type of motions that are considered to be Government Motions as following:

> Also classified under this heading are the motions regularly brought forward by the Government for regulating the length of the Christmas, Easter, spring and summer adjournments of the House—Another important example is that of allocation of time or "guillotine" orders which the Government moves in order to hasten progress on one or more of its bills—

Once again, review of our recent practice relating to motions dealing with the sittings of the House and with its adjournments shows that they have been appearing under Motions on the Order Paper, but a review of the Order Paper of the 1940s, 1950s and 1960s shows that such motions have most often appeared under Government Notices of Motions. There is no doubt it is this practice that inspired Beauchesne's comment.

The Hon. Member for Windsor West has stated that such motions must be made on Routine Proceedings, pursuant to S.O. 36(1)p). I must differ with him on the purpose of S.O. 36, in my opinion, its only object is to define which motions are debatable motions.

The Hon. President of the Privy Council has argued that since a motion for allocation of time can only stand in the name of a Minister of the Crown it can therefore only be a government initiative and it should quite properly appear under Government Notices of Motions.

On reviewing the precedents and the arguments, I must say on this point, that I agree with the Hon. President of the Privy Council and I must rule that the Government has the right to proceed in this manner if it so choses.

The second point to be determined is whether the prescriptions of S.O. 82 can be made to apply to such motions if and when they are transferred to Government Orders. In fact, I am being asked in effect, to rule on a hypothetical point but I believe it to be in the House's best interest to rule now.

On May 2, 1985, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, (Mr. Stevens) pursuant to S.O. 82, did inform the House that it had not been possible to reach an agreement pursuant to S.O. 80 or pursuant to S.O. 81. He also gave notice of his intention to propose a motion pursuant to S.O. 82 to allocate one more sitting day to each of the said stages of Bill C-15.

A close reading of S.O. 82 will reveal that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has complied with the prerequisite conditions of the Standing Order. The Standing Order prevents him from moving his motion during the same sitting at which he gave notice of his intention. But the Standing Order is silent as to how or when in a future sitting he may do so. The practice has been to propose the said motion without written notice under Motions.

I refer Hon. Members to an analogous Standing Order: S.O. 9(1) which specifically prescribes that a motion for the extension of the sittings of the House can be made by any member on the tenth sitting day before the summer adjournment. Unlike S.O. 82 it does prescribe that such a motion must be made on Routine Proceedings.

I must tell the House that the Chair cannot go beyond the Standing Order as it is now and that I can only rule on the Standing Order as written since there are no precedents. Perhaps the Standing Order may be rephrased and presented in another way to make it clearer. As it reads now, however, I must rule that S.O. 82 does not require that a Minister's motion be made on Routine Proceedings. If a Minister has given notice of his intention before filing his written notice, the Minister has then complied with the prerequisite conditions of S.O. 82. In my opinion he now has two avenues: he can move his motion of allocation of time at the next sitting following his notice of intention during Routine Proceedings without written notice or he can give the House 48 hours written notice under Government Notices of Motions. Once it has been transferred, it can be called under Government Orders, at which time the debate would be limited pursuant to S.O. 82.

The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) has claimed that this procedure would be a dangerous precedent which this House would live to regret. I can only tell him that in my opinion very little would be changed since such motions, if moved on Motions and interrupted, are in fact transferred to Government Orders pursuant to S.O. 49(2) which is the same point raised by the Hon. Member for Windsor West and the limits on debate provided in S.O. 82 survive the transfer and are applied when the Order is recalled, and we have ample precedent in such cases.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the House that we have reached the mid-May long weekend and it is customary at this time of the year for the Government to tell the House what business it plans to complete before the summer recess. This is my main question of the Government House Leader. While he is at that, could he let us know when he wishes to hold the Budget debate.

On the subject of Bill C-49, the Prostitution Bill, which we believe is of an urgent nature, although we do not agree with all that is in the Bill we believe it should be sent to committee as soon as possible. If the Government chooses to bring it to the House, we would not delay it unduly on second reading. Will the Government House Leader tell us when he plans to bring this legislation before the House?

• (1510)

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's question. The House Leader of the Official Opposition has not made the same inquiry of me. In the course of House Leaders' meetings I have listed—

Mr. Deans: Oh, oh.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am not talking about the content. We have had discussions with respect to the business before us and whether we will make progress on the items of business. Since he is asking me, I will try to give some idea of what we intend to do before we rise, if we do rise, for the summer recess. We hope to make progress.

In the spirit of consultation, we have dealt with a number of legislative initiatives. Some have been easier than others, but that is to be expected. Perhaps I will deal with the immediate future. On the basis of consultations with Opposition House Leaders, we have talked about what we might be able to do before the Budget is brought down at 4.30 p.m. next Thursday, as established by an Order of the House. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will be in the House at that time.

We have some legislation on which I would like to see whether we can make progress starting tomorrow. We will proceed with Bill C-25 dealing with the Agricultural Stabilization Act. Hopefully we can get that matter into committee, and there has been some discussion about the reasonable prospect of that happening.

Perhaps the Hon. Member was referring to the Bills relating to divorce and the enforcement of maintenance orders, not the one respecting prostitution.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I referred to Bill C-40.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am sorry. That is a new situation. It has not been discussed with me. We have talked about it in a very general way. I am pleased to have had that representation from the Liberal Party, and to know that it is interested in proceeding with the Bill relating to amendments to the Criminal Code on prostitution and street soliciting. That will be helpful. I will take it under advisement. I know the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) wants to make progress on it. I will discuss it with the representative of the New Democratic Party to see whether we can get as quick a disposition of it as possible.

However, there have been discussions with respect to Bill C-46, Bill C-47 and Bill C-48 relating to divorce and the enforcement of maintenance orders, as well as an ancillary Divorce Act amendment. There may be a disposition on the part of all Hon. Members to deal with the three Bills in one debate. I think the House Leader of the Official Opposition indicated on behalf of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) that, rather than repeat the debate on each on the items, we deal with them in one debate and discuss all items relating to the legislation. on that basis I thought I would put that legislation on as a back-up for tomorrow.

If the House concludes consideration of those Bills, we could move on to consideration of Bill C-32, the fisheries Bill. There are discussions taking place with respect to that legislation. I was hoping that we would get the fisheries Bill on for tomorrow, but, since there are discussions and the possibility of coming to an agreement with respect to moving on it, I will have it as the third item.

Of course the House will not sit on Monday, and if consideration of the Bills which I have enumerated is not concluded on Friday, they will be considered on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday until 4 p.m. when the Order of the House indicates that we will suspend the sitting until 4.30 p.m. As usual the Government will monitor the progress made with respect to House business, and changes and additions to the business will be made as required and appropriate.

In general terms with respect to the legislation on the Order Paper, of course we are interested in making progress on those items. We hope to make early disposition of those items which are now moving through second reading to get those matters into committee, so that the month of June could be used for the purpose of hearing witnesses and considering legislation in detail. As the Hon. member knows, it is possible to make some progress during the last two weeks of June. I hope we will make that progress, and I hope we will be able to sit down and work out an agenda to the mutual satisfaction of the Opposition and the Government. It seems to me that there is an attainable objective of making progress on most of the items on the Order Paper at the present time, including those items now before committee. I know it is an ambitious proposal, but I hope with some goodwill we will be able to make that kind of progress.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, dealing with one question which was asked but not answered with regard to the budget debate, perhaps the Government House Leader, when he rises, could address the question of how he intends to allocate time for the replies to the Budget.

The second matter concerns the order in which the legislation will be called. I totally agree that in fact we came to an understanding with regard to Bill C-25. I anticipate that that Bill will be dealt with tomorrow. However, my recollection was that we thought we would be able to deal with the three Bills related to the divorce legislation on Tuesday and perhaps on part of Wednesday, to resolve those questions and get them into committee. We think that they should in fact go into committee quickly so that the views of those persons most affected and most interested will be heard, and then the House of Commons might deal with it.

As the Government House Leader said, we are actively looking at ways to deal with Bill C-32, the fisheries Bill. I hope we might be able to work out some arrangement at some time in the not too distant future.

The third point I want to make is that the Government House Leader knows—and perhaps he will acknowledge it—that there is no end to the co-operation. In fact, we are all working very hard to try to achieve, on behalf of the Government, of the people of Canada and of course on behalf of Parliament, the utmost, maximum amount of co-operation on legislation which we all understand to be of vital importance.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane-Superior): Mr. Speaker, could the Government House Leader advise us how soon Bill C-31, the amendments to the Indian Act, will be back at report stage? I remind the Hon. Minister that great pressure was put on the committee to get it back to the House. How soon will it be debated? There is great concern on the part of many people about that Bill and its inadequacies.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I will respond to the questions that have been put. I apologize to the Deputy House Leader of the Official Opposition. I misunderstood his question. I thought he was asking for the date of the Budget. Of course it is next Thursday. As far as the budget debate is concerned, at the present time I anticipate that we will carry right into the budget debate, that is to say, the Budget would be brought down on Thursday and then Friday would be the first day of the budget debate.

I want to sit down at the appropriate time and talk with Opposition House Leaders with respect to the scheduling of the budget debate. It seems to me that there may be an opportunity for some understanding about the dates being at the convenience of all Hon. Members so that we will know when the votes are and how we can arrange our speakers, particularly as that relates to the Leaders of the Parties.

In connection with the Bill relating to the amendments to Section 12(1)(b) of the Indian Act and other amendments, it is our intention to bring this matter forward at an early date.

• (1520)

I have listed some items on which I thought we might make progress because of my discussions with the House Leader of his Party and the House Leader of the New Democratic Party. I know that this is a matter of importance and of some great interest. It is a question of looking at the most efficient use of the limited time that we have on the floor of the House of Commons to make sure there is an appropriate debate and an opportunity for points of view to be expressed. I share the Hon. Member's concern about this legislation. It is an important item. I will do my level best to ensure that we have an opportunity of dealing with it at an early date.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have a short question for the Government House Leader. There is immense interest in the distribution Bill. Can the Government give some indication as to when we can expect some motion or movement on distribution? Is the Government intending to proceed soon on that?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, the Bill which the Hon. Member refers to I believe deals with redistribution. There has not yet been an announcement with respect to specific initiatives that have been taken, although in all candour I have to say that I have spoken to the House Leaders about some review of the existing situation. I intend to move on it, I hope, at an early date. Possibly within the next week I will have specific proposals to put forward to the Opposition House Leaders concerning this matter. On the basis of my discussions thus far, there may well be a disposition to have parliamentarians deeply involved in this very interesting, if I may be permitted to say so, legislation in which we all seem to have an interest.

Mr. Speaker: That is one Bill in which even the Speaker has an interest, or a special interest I should say.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

MANAGEMENT AND MEMBERS' SERVICES

PRESENTATION OF SECOND REPORT

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I am sure you will be delighted to hear that today I have the honour of tabling the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services, pursuant to its order of reference of Tuesday, February 26, 1985.

Yesterday, in your presence, our committee examined Vote 5 under the item "Parliament" in the Estimates for the financial year ending March 31, 1986, and we have the honour of tabling it today—

[English]

Of course in both languages. I am sure you will be very relieved, Mr. Speaker, to know that your estimates were accepted yesterday.

* * *

PETITIONS

NATIONAL POSTAL MUSEUM

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have here a number of petitions from residents of Vancouver, British Columbia, who call upon the Government to take action to save the National Postal Museum. They suggest it is incumbent upon this Parliament to do whatever it can to preserve this valuable cultural institution which has served Canada so well.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by a number of residents of the City of Toronto in which they request the Minister in charge of the post office to intervene and find a suitable location near Parliament for the Postal Museum in order that the employees of the Postal Museum might continue to work during the transition period and, furthermore, that they can continue to provide the valuable service they have provided in the past to the people of Canada.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition to Parliament signed by numerous Canadians residing in the City of Regina and several from the City of Saskatoon, in fact residing in the constituency of the House Leader of the Government Party. These Canadians are asking Parliament, particularly the Government and the Minister responsible for the post office, to re-establish the National Postal Museum so that this valuable cultural institution can continue to serve Canada, particularly the Ottawa region.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: My constituents spoke to me about that.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I too have the honour to present a number of petitions from residents of southwestern Ontario, the communities of Kitchener, Stratford, London, Brampton, Guelph and Georgetown, who are calling upon the Government to take action to save the National Postal Museum. It is incumbent upon this Parliament to do all that it can to preserve this valuable cultural institution which has served Canada so well for over 10 years. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty) and the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) should join with representatives of our Party, the labour movement, the mayor of Ottawa and members of Canada's philatelic community to prevent the permanent closure of the National Postal Museum.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of a large number of residents of Ottawa, Aylmer, Hull, as well as Almonte and other communities in eastern Ontario who are philatelists and who have expressed their concern about the closure of the National Postal Museum. They call upon the Government of Canada not just to keep a shrunken service but to maintain the National Postal Museum as a full facility which will continue to provide its services in the vicinity of Parliament Hill, and who call upon the Minister responsible for the post office as well as the post office officials and Members of this House to seek and find a new location near Parliament where the National Postal Museum can continue to serve the people of Canada.

* * *

INVESTMENT CANADA ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

On the Order: Government Notices of Motions:

May 14, 1985—The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion:

Order Paper Questions

That, further to the notice given on Thursday, May 2, 1985 by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, and pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 82, in relation to Bill C-15, An Act respecting investment in Canada, one sitting day shall be allotted to the consideration of each of the report stage and the third reading stage of the said bill; and

That 15 minutes before the expiry of the time provided for government business on those days, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the stage of the bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Section (2) of Standing Order 25, this Government Notice of Motion stands transferred to and ordered for consideration under Government Orders later this day or at the next sitting of the House.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, Question No. 316 will be answered today.

[Text]

MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL RELATIONS—RENOVATION OF CONSTITUENCY OFFICE

Question No. 316—Mrs. Killens:

1. Did the government make any renovations in the constituency offices of the Minister for External Relations in (a) Rimouski (b) Cabano and, if so, in each case, what was the cost of the (i) design (ii) construction?

2. Were private sources used and, if so, what was the name of the individual or company concerned and were tenders called before the contract was awarded?

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works):

1. (a) Public Works Canada made renovations to the ministerial office of the Minister for External Relations in Rimouski, which was set up pursuant to Treasury Board Minutes dated May 7, 1974. (i) No design costs were involved. (ii) The construction costs of the renovations were $8,100.

(b) No renovations were carried out to the Minister's constituency office (House of Commons) in Cabano.

2. Sacona Inc. did the construction work. No tenders were called as it is in rental space and the owner retains the responsibility for carrying out the repairs by utilizing a contractor of his choice.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered.

* * *

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if Question No. 145 could be made an Order for Return, this return would be tabled immediately. I might indicate that it is about two inches thick.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Question No. 145 be deemed to have been made an Order for Return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Text]

FEDERALLY APPOINTED PROSECUTORS

Question No. 145—Mr. Angus:

As of (a) December 12, 1984 (b) September 3, 1984 (c) December 3, 1979, what was the name, law firm and community of all federally appointed prosecutors?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Dick: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT—TIME ALLOCATION

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy:

That this House condemns the Government, not only for its failure to protect Canada from potential problems of foreign direct investment as demonstrated by the Government's failure to take effective action in dealing with foreign takeovers in the cases of Mitel and of the book-publishing industry, but also for its contempt for the Parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

Mr. Speaker: At one o'clock the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) had completed his speech. His time had expired. I will now recognize Members who wish to participate in the usual 10-minute question and comment period following a speech.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of his remarks, the Hon. Member made reference to this motion as an indication of a Government not willing to participate in the parliamentary process. The fact is that motions of this kind were introduced by the Liberals in the years from 1971 to 1979 and 1980 to 1984 no fewer than 39 times. Of those 39 times, 23 notices of allocation of time were given in the last Parliament alone.

If this kind of motion indicates a lack of desire to take the parliamentary process with full seriousness, we have learned from magnificent teachers. We are certainly following a much-applied example on the part of the former Liberal Government. In this instance it is a motion which is more than necessary because of the great many times various speakers on all sides of the House have participated in the debate. Thus far the amount of time devoted to this Bill in the House and in committee amounts to sufficient hours that if they were put into numbers of debating days, based on the number of hours usually devoted to government business, we would have debated this issue just under five weeks of parliamentary sitting time. Surely it is time for the debate to terminate and to get on with the next stage and action.

● (1530)

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the remarks just made by the Hon. Member. Obviously, I totally disagree with what the Hon. Member said. I am sure that even he realizes that what he said was totally inaccurate. We spent only 20 hours deliberating one of the most important Bills we will see during the life of this Parliament. After 20 hours the arrogant Conservatives have tried to cut off debate on that very important issue which will affect workers in my riding and workers in every constituency across Canada. We want to ensure that there will not be foreign takeovers of our domestic industries and that we will not lose jobs because of the inactions of this Government. To have the unmitigated gall to tell us that 20 hours is enough, when the Conservative Party in Opposition deliberated 200 hours on the Crow legislation, is totally unacceptable. Even Conservatives in the back-benches know that.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I would like the Hon. Member to listen to the facts. Twenty-three associations appeared before the committee for a total of 26 hours. The Minister and his officials, including the clause-by-clause deliberations, took up a total of 14 hours. That amounts to a total of 40 hours at the committee level. I do not know where the Hon. Member gets his 20-hour figure from, but if the facts are borne out by my statement he should be asked to withdraw. His statement is totally inaccurate.

At report stage, the Bill was debated for approximately 10 hours. On three separate motions there were five hours, four hours and 15 minutes, and three hours and 55 minutes of debate, respectively. From where did the Hon. Member get the 20-hour figure? He cannot add.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I was talking about House time, not committee time. Perhaps some Tories in the back row do not come to the House very often to participate in debate. Maybe they should.

Mr. Duguay: You do not either.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you. I am glad someone said that I do not speak enough in the House. I will admit to that. I will try to speak more in the future. I am glad to have that kind of encouragement given to me by a Conservative back-bencher. I will attempt to speak more often in this House, and more forcefully, at every possible opportunity. I appreciate the kind of encouragement given to me by the Hon. Member who so rudely interrupted.

The issue which we were discussing is that not enough time has been spent debating this Bill. The proof of that is that the Conservative back-benchers have hardly participated in the debate. On behalf of the Tory book-ends, the surfers who were elected along with the tide in the last election—and who will likely go out with the tide in the next election—I demand more House time so that we can discuss this very important issue. The Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) has told the constituents of his riding on many occasions that FIRA had to be strengthened. On his behalf, and on behalf all the other Tories who have not spoken, I demand more House time so that we can speak about this very important issue. I am sure the Hon. Member for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton (Mr. Dick), who will make a contribution in the debate, will undoubtedly be aware of that.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Hon. Member would ever yield the floor to allow anyone else to give a speech. All he does is talk. If he listened to the 20 minutes prior to one o'clock he would know why most people in the country find Parliament boring. He did not say one thing which had any foundation or one thing which made any common sense.

He said that he was not against foreign capital coming into Canada. I would like to suggest that his Party was not against that. After all, 93 per cent of the applications to FIRA which went before Cabinet were approved.

The Hon. Member said that he wanted the best deal for Canadians. I do not believe anyone in this House would disagree with that. The fact is that we do not think that their way of doing it is the best, and the Canadian public agreed with us when they sent 211 Conservatives to the House on September 4, versus 40 Liberals.

The Hon. Member asked whether we were willing to take control and move on quotas to protect Canadian industry. I would like to tell him how much better we will do than the Liberals did. We will not allow 53 million pounds of European Economic Community beef into Canada. I will guarantee that we will cut that amount down from the 53 million pounds which the Liberals allowed in last year.

The Hon. Member said that this Government had not moved on any agreements. We have extended the agreements on shoe manufacturing. He should know that, as he has some shoe manufacturers in his riding.

The Member spoke about promises and that we would not implement FIRA to protect our international rights and obligations. He listed a number of promises which were made by the Conservative Party during the last election. If he knew what he was talking about, he would realize that each and every one of the promises to which he referred related to GATT negotiations, the rights which we have under GATT, the tariffs which exist under GATT and the ways in which we can defend ourselves through anti-dumping and other mechanisms. Those are the promises which he mentioned. There may be others which deal with FIRA, but certainly the ones to which he referred do not.

The Hon. Member has spoken at length about FIRA. Why is the Liberal Party so bound to one simple Act under which they approved 92 per cent or 93 per cent of the applications which went to Cabinet? Why are the Liberals taking up so much House time when the people of Canada agreed in the last election that the system was not working? Canada had an unemployment rate of 6 per cent when FIRA was introduced, and it is now pushing an unemployment rate of 11.5 per cent. That tells us that the Liberal way was not necessarily working. Why not revise it? Our Party has given it a different name—Investment Canada. Why should we not give it an opportunity to work? Why do the Liberals not think of some other mechanism and be constructive? Why is the Liberal Party tied exclusively to an out-dated out-moded, old-fashioned idea which was not working well? Perhaps the Hon. Member could explain why the Liberals are tied to something which is out of date.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I am always pleased to discuss issues which are out-moded with a Party that still supports the Ontario Conservative Government which was in office for 43 years.

Mr. Dick: What relevance is that?

Mr. Boudria: I am glad to discuss out-dated issues with Tories; it gives me pleasure. They were talking about the fact that the policies were out-dated. The Hon. Member opposite, whose Party wants to revert to a policy which was used 30 or 40 years ago—

Mr. Dick: Investment Canada was not there 30 years ago.

Mr. Boudria: —is now saying that the policies of the previous Government are out-dated. But, the Hon. Member is advocating policies which are decades old. Why is it that the Conservatives are always adding restrictions to their promises after the election? I have a list, which I have brought to the attention of the House on a number of occasions, of the 338 Tory promises. Why does the Hon. Member now say that this promise only affected such-and-such an endeavour? He has placed restrictions on his own promises. The Conservative Party should have come clean with the people before the election. It should have been forthright with its promises, instead of adding caveats after the fact.

* * *

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed the following Bills without amendment: Bill C-30, an Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act and to repeal the International Development Association Act and to amend certain other Acts in consequence thereof; and Bill C-33, an Act respecting the import and export of and interprovincial trade in meat products, the registration of establishments, the inspection of animals and meat products in registered establishments and the standards for those establishments and for animals slaughtered and meat products prepared in those establishments.

* * *

THE ROYAL ASSENT

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a communication has been received which is as follows:

Government House

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that The Right Honourable Brian Dickson, The Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 16th day of May, 1985, at 5.55 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

I have the honour to be
Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A.P. Smyth
Deputy Secretary to the Governor General

● (1540)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT—TIME ALLOCATION

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy:

That this House condemns the Government, not only for its failure to protect Canada from potential problems of foreign direct investments as demonstrated by the Government's failure to take effective action in dealing with foreign take-overs in the cases of Mitel and of the book publishing industry, but also for its contempt for the parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary who just spoke—I don't know whether intentionally or inadvertently in the heat of debate—made a government announcement regarding the quotas on manufactured beef from the European Common Market. The red meat industry is anxiously awaiting this news. I would like to ask, on a point of order, whether that in fact was a government announcement. If it was, could we have more information and could we ask questions on that government announcement? If it was not, if it was just a slip or a leak, I wonder how soon we can expect this announcement from the Government?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to inform the Hon. Member that, unfortunately, I do not consider that to be a point of order.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I am not surprised that immediately after having spoken, the Hon. Member is no longer available so that the record could be corrected. I would like to total up the hours spent on Bill C-15. There were 40 hours in all in the House and 40 hours in committee. Simple arithmetic would lead one to believe that that is 80 hours. The Hon. Member would have us believe that 20 hours were spent on the Bill, but with selective memory recall he said that that only applied to the House. But 20 hours times two equals 40 hours, plus 40 hours in committee. Let that stand on the record as being a point beyond challenge.

I have a great deal of pleasure to be able to debate Bill C-15 today. I do so in the context of the announcement yesterday by the same Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) who brought Bill C-15 before the House. Yesterday he announced a general development agreement with the province of British Columbia, which is historical because of the large amount of money involved. Never before has an ERDA agreement of such scope and dimension been signed. It is for $525 million which is to be jointly shared by the Province of British Columbia and the federal Government.

It think it is very important to realize that within the framework of that $525 million, $300 million has been specifically earmarked for the forestry sector. This is a recognition of the degree to which the forestry sector of British Columbia and, for that matter, of Canada, has deteriorated over the past several generations as a result of the notable lack of attention paid to it. I think it is fair to say that a Conservative Government, given the opportunity and different times in terms of the availability of money, would have doubled the contribution to the forestry sector.

Critics of the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithrew) are quick to agree that probably what is needed is a $600 million agreement over five years, not $300 million. But, Mr. Speaker, we have done what we could and I would like you to compare it, Mr. Speaker, to the measly and trivial sum of $5 million which was last given by the former federal Government forestry in British Columbia. Not only are we attending to our resources in terms of our forests, but we are also working toward a better degree of stabilization of another resource, which is more important than any other, and that is, the people. By the signing of this agreement, we will have an opportunity to create a substantial number of permanent employment opportunities in the forestry sector alone.

I look forward very much to seeing a change in the unemployment figures for the regional district of Central Kootenay. It is faced with an unemployment situation which statistically shows a 27.4 per cent level, but that is a statistic only in terms of those who are registered with manpower. Clearly the figures are higher than that, and there are some serious social and economic problems in that area. It is in the context of this Bill as well that we hope to address some of those economic problems.

When we examine the other provisions in that ERD agreement, whether it is the element of tourism, science and technology, agriculture, the mineral sector, or the industry sector, collectively, we should see some very heartwarming opportunities for job generation on a permanent basis.

I must remark in the context of forestry, as I did yesterday, that it is notable that the forestry critic for the Liberal Party, the Hon. Member for Humber-Port-au-Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), that noteworthy gentleman who sits over there occasionally, has never once directed a question from his seat to the Minister of State for Forestry during Question Period. Yesterday, the Leader of the Liberal Party spoke out about the need to do something for forestry. I find that passing strange because in seven months during which this House sat, that Party's forestry critic has never asked a question of the Minister during Question Period. Clearly, that should spell out to Canadians the shallow depth of interest which that Party has in one of the most major resources of Canada, namely, the forestry sector. It is the biggest employment generator and money earner by far. It is head and shoulders above all other sectors. Yet we still await a question from the forestry critic of the Liberal Party. That clearly gives us a sense of where that Party's priorities lie.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Where is the critic? He's not even here.

Mr. Brisco: He is not here. Let me move on with respect to Bill C-15, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I am sure my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco), did it inadvertently, but it is a well known tradition of the House that we do not refer to Hon. Members who are absent from their places. I believe he did that at the urging of one of his colleagues. I just want to make the point that that is an understanding we have.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) is correct.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I can understand the genuine concern of the Hon. Member, but I would like to point out—and I think my colleague on this side would agree—that the comment did not come from me. I am sure the Hon. Member would be quite prepared to indicate that the comment came from him. I am prepared to accept the responsibility, but I do know the rules.

With respect to Bill C-15, one of the first facts was introduced by the Minister when he said that the European economic forum reported two years ago that on the list of 24 countries which welcomed foreign investment, Canada was twenty-fourth. Last year the list was expanded to 28 countries. Canada, on that expanded list, was twenty-eight. That is the bottom of the line, Mr. Speaker. It does not indicate that we welcome foreign investment or that we are interested in foreign investment. It indicates that we do not welcome foreign investment, that we really do not want it. "Keep out", is what the sign says. There is a big sign there with the Liberal Party logo below it which says, "Keep out foreign investment".

• (1550)

Surely the fact is that Canadians do not have that attitude today. That really is a mind-set of a former Government, not a mind-set of Canadians today, with a couple of notable exceptions. I would like to turn to one of those notable exceptions who appeared before the Standing Committee on Regional Development, namely, Mr. Mel Hurtig. I found him to be a very interesting gentleman, and in the minutes of that standing committee, at page 13:5, he is reported to have said this:

> I would suggest that you scrap this bill—

Then he goes on to offer what he considers to be some positive solutions and makes some very interesting remarks. On page 13:11 he is reported to have said:

> —you asked me about the national energy program, and I think my answer may surprise you. I live in Alberta and I have seen the national energy program in operation. I have no hesitation whatsoever in saying I strongly support the goals and objectives of the National Energy Program.

Now, there is a man with courage. Perhaps he is not smart, but he has courage. There is a man from the Province of Alberta who said that he supported the National Energy Program. Having become a little nervous about that statement and in order, perhaps, to protect himself later on, he went on to say:

> Having said I agree with the objectives of the NEP, I must tell you that I thought it was poorly thought out.

Now he is seeking some concurrence, and there is a wide body of opinion that would support him on that. He went on to say:

> I thought it was hastily put together, and there is no question in my mind that some aspects of the NEP were very damaging to the Canadian petroleum sector as well.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, he loved it. He thought the NEP was great because it was his view that what the NEP would do for Canada would be to drive out those foreign giants. That is what it would do, drive out foreign investment. He was not one bit concerned about the fact that at that time in the economic life of Canada, the Province of Alberta was the single biggest tax generator in Canada with the highest levels of employment. Obviously he is not aware of the fact that it was Canadians who were crucified by that program, that it was the blue collar worker who was hurt the most.

He said he was there to observe. Let me tell you that I was there to observe as well, and I had the opportunity, although I am from British Columbia, to spend several months in Alberta during that disastrous period. I talked with the workers, with the service and supply industry which was collapsing like a house of cards, and I talked with the Canadian oil people. I can tell you that it was a story of unmitigated disaster. I drove into the town of Fort St. John in my province some months after this program has had its full impact, and whereas before, if you had driven into that town unannounced, unprepared, and without a room reservation, you spent the night in your car or on the street, this time there were rooms available everywhere. What we were faced with was a ghost town, an economic collapse of major dimensions. That, Sir, was the Liberal Government's answer to Canadian ownership: drive out the foreign devils.

Let us talk about the foreign devils, because later on in his diatribe before the committee Mr. Hurtig made reference to "cultural baggage". That is an interesting phrase. That was the first time I had ever heard it. I asked him what he meant by "cultural baggage". His response was something like this: When foreign firms come into Canada, whether it is Japan, India, the U.S., Germany, France or England, wherever they come from, they bring some of their own people with them. That is the "cultural baggage" to which Mr. Hurtig alluded. These people bring with them books that they read in their homeland, they bring with them the habits of their homeland, they bring with them the business practices of their homeland. All of that, Sir, is right here in these minutes, in the words of Mel Hurtig. I might have been prepared to listen to that gentleman and accept some of his supposed wisdom until we came upon this blind spot. I can only say that, as far as I am concerned and, I would hope, as far as all Members of this House are concerned, that is a racist remark which does not belong in the minutes of any standing committee of this House of Commons. Just as sure as the people who invest in Canada from outside bring in their own people, whether it is at the management level or at whatever level of expertise they may have to lend to the project, most assuredly they are no different from those people who emigrated from their homeland to come to Canada, whether it is from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, or wherever. So I reject that kind of thinking.

I would like to talk about Canadian investment for a moment because throughout this debate we have heard about the sins of foreign investment, but one component which has been absent in this debate is the Canadian component overseas. We do not hear anything from the Opposition about the Canadian dollars which have been driven out of Canada to be invested inthe U.S., Japan, Great Britain, Germany or elsewhere. We hear nothing about that.

Let me tell you about a little fellow who runs a sawmill of a special type in the small community of Nakusp. He is selectively logging, and doing a very good job of it. He often cleans up behind the big time operators, but he is selectively logging one kind of wood, that is, white pine. He cuts that wood into what are called cants that are perhaps 12 by 12 or 16 by 16 in dimension. He ships those by refrigerator car in order to preserve them from a sort of blue stain which develops on them. He ships them all the way down to North Carolina to a Canadian firm which manufactures wood for furniture. They then take these big cants and shave them, and those shavings, thinly sliced, are used as white pine veneers on furniture. They have another operation in Montreal that looks after the eastern market, but it is a Canadian operation down there and it is the largest furniture wood producer in the U.S. Now I see nothing wrong with that, nothing wrong at all, because there is an exchange of money, an exchange of expertise and an exchange of products. That same operation could just as easily take place here, so why was it not encouraged?

I now want to reverse the scenario and look at an American company which came into Canada to the riding of the Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark), the former Prime Minister of Canada. The company is St. Regis Pulp and Paper. Not too long ago our Minister of State for Forestry had the opportunity to go through this pulp and paper operation. I was already familiar with it because I had spent time there. I can tell you that it has a very remarkable reforestation record, better than many I have seen.

Finally, let me tell you about Weyerhaeuser, a large American company in the forest products industry, whose location in Canada was supported by the Canadian IWA. It came in and took over a major forest management project in British Columbia, while Canadians who wanted to do the same thing were turned down. The reason was that the IWA, in its wisdom, felt it could get a much better bargaining unit going with Weyerhaeuser than with a Canadian group, and I have to agree with that. The bottom line is that both firms are highly productive and Canadians do not view them as being American firms. They are part of the family working in Canada, creating jobs, and generating employment opportunities and dollars for Canada.

• (1600)

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to contribute to this debate, although it is a pity that the debate must take place. The purpose of the motion is to express concern, which my Party shares, over the failure of the new Government to protect Canada from the problem of direct foreign investment, with specific reference to the case of Mitel, and over the fact that after a short period of renewed debate in the House, the Government has decided to impose a guillotine in order to ram the Investment Canada Bill through without considering the various constructive amendments which the opposition Parties have put forward.

In listening to some of the contributions to this debate, I see some irony. I find it ironic, for example, that the Member for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton (Mr. Dick) talks with pride about the fact that his Party intends to cut beef imports from the European Economic Community down from the level to which they have risen in order to protect the beef farmers in the country. Yet he does not understand the problems that are being created in terms of Canadian jobs due to the takeover of Mitel in his own riding. If it is important to ensure equitable treatment and fair trading environments for beef farmers, the same should be the case for workers and industries in the electronics field. In the case of Mitel we are facing the sell-off of control of a very important company in the Ottawa area. This company has contributed an enormous amount to the development of the silicone valley in the Ottawa area and to the development of all of Canada. One of the major players in the important high-tech industry of the future is now to be alienated to foreign control.

I find it ironic as well that this motion was put forward by the Liberal Party. I find that ironic because the Liberal Party was forced to introduce the Foreign Investment Review Agency during the minority Government from 1972 to 1974. Pressure by my former Leader, David Lewis, and the New Democrats in Parliament at that time led the Government of the day to introduce a review process for foreign investment to give Canadian investment a certain amount of protection for the first time. The Liberal Party talks in pious terms about maintaining Canadian ownership. However, it should be acknowledged that for most of the past half a century during which the Liberals were in power their policy was to encourage foreign investment. During most of that time they presided over a tremendous sell-off of Canadian industries, particularly to the United States. C.D. Howe was one of the architects of that particular policy. The Liberals were forced into changing their views because they feared losing office after 1972, not because they had a fundamental change of heart.

I remind the House that during the recent election campaign the policies enunciated by the Progressive Conservatives with respect to the termination of FIRA and its powers were almost identical to the policies advanced by the present Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) in his proposals with regard to weakening or eliminating FIRA. The Liberals have now had a change of heart. The Leader of the Official Opposition no longer rules the roost in his Party. The Rat Pack is now dictating policy for the Liberal Party of Canada. The Liberals have suddenly discovered that foreign investment is a problem in the country.

Foreign investment is a serious problem in the country. In all the time during which they were in office the Liberals did not lift a finger to ensure any review to guarantee that Canadians would benefit from foreign investment when it took the form of expansion or acquisition by foreign companies already resident in Canada. Expansion or new investment by General Motors or any number of other large Canadian corporations and manufacturing industries was totally immune from review. FIRA only got to a minor portion of the problem, which was that foreign investment had gained control of more than half of the manufacturing industry in the country. Foreign investment was running Canada as though it were the fifty-first State. Many companies in the country were denied access to the American market. They were not given the products, allowed to do research, or given the freedom to export into the United States. They did not have any strategic freedom to search for natural markets which might occur down there. As well, in many cases they were not free to export into the United Kingdom, the Common Market, or the Far East. Foreign-controlled companies in Canada which were given any freedom to export were given markets in countries such as Latin America, South Africa and Australia, markets which were too small and unimportant for American parent companies to bother to manage from their head offices in the United States.

Recent figures from StatsCan show us the picture. Fifty-one per cent of our manufacturing industry is still foreign-controlled. Ninety-eight per cent of our rubber industry, 51 per cent of our agricultural machinery industry, and 92 per cent of the transportation equipment industry is foreign-controlled. Seventy per cent of electrical apparatus is produced by companies which are foreign-owned or foreign-controlled. Seventy-one per cent of the chemical industry and 52 per cent of miscellaneous manufacturing is foreign-controlled. My figures do not extend to petroleum, but the vast bulk of that industry is also foreign-controlled.

The Progressive Conservative Government is arguing that foreign investment stimulates jobs. Mr. McMurtry, the High Commissioner for Canada in Great Britain, made a speech the other day. Essentially, he said that Canada is open for business, that it is not the same as when the Liberals were in power. He said there will be no carping when foreign investors want to go in. Sure enough, as soon as Mr. McMurtry's words had been reported in the Time and The Guardian, British Telecom was on the doorstep.

One must ask whether the record supports the case that unlimited access to foreign investment, with no conditions at all, will in fact create jobs in the country, or whether there is not a serious risk that it will turn Canada into a warehouse for products made in Japan, the United Kingdom, Europe, or the United States. We have called the Investment Canada Bill the "Warehouse Canada Bill" because that is what it is in danger of making the country. I grant that the lowering of tariffs and the gradual movement toward free trade with the United States have benefited some Canadian companies. However, in large measure, they are removing the impetus which led to the creation of many companies in the country. That allows Americans and other foreign investors to take jobs away from Canada and into other parts of the world. It is liable to continue if we have no control to ensure significant benefits for Canadians from foreign investment or from the expansion of foreign companies already here.

It is well known that foreign investors have great leeway in avoiding Canadian tax through buying and selling practices which shift their tax obligations to areas where the tax burdens are lesser. That sometimes means moving to Bermuda or to the Caribbean rather than to another industrial country. It is noticeable that the large foreign-controlled companies in the country spent only 2 per cent of their sales on research and development over the past few years, while larger Canadian companies with 500 employees or more spent 10 per cent of their sales in research and development. That suggests that rather than getting a dynamic, progressive, and advanced industrial sector through opening the door to foreign investment, we are likely to perpetuate the situation of Canada having a second class industry and being left with the crumbs off the tables of other countries.

I cite the case of General Motors. That was once a Canadian company set up by Sam McLaughlin in Oshawa in the second decade of this century. He was very successful. Eventually, the day came when Mr. McLaughlin decided to sell out, as he was allowed to do in the climate of the time. GM established a foothold in Canada which it had not previously enjoyed. General Motors has been in this country for approximately 60 years, and I believe it is instructive to note that despite the fact that it has made some contributions to our country in places like Oshawa, it has not once had any genuine commitment to carry out research and development here.

● (1610)

I have visited GM's entire research and development activity, which is its cold weather testing service that is located in Kapuskasing in northern Ontario. The reason it located that research facility there is northern Ontario's very cold weather. Such consistent and lengthy cold periods do not exist in Minnesota, Wisconsin or Maine in the northern United States. Consequently, GM gave us this one R and D facility only because of the advantage of our climatic conditions. Although General Motors has existed in Canada for many years, it has established only that one research and development centre out of the hundreds of millions of dollars that it spends annually on research and development. That example is germane to the case of Mitel which we are discussing today.

My colleagues and I have raised a number of objections with respect to the case of Mitel. Mitel has grown into a company with a net worth in market value of more than $300 million and annual sales of approximately $375 million.

As a Member from the Ottawa area, I regret that the Minister of Regional and Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) is too focused and seized on the fact that Mitel faced difficulties approximately two years ago because of the slow development and marketing of the SX-2000 superswitch. It suffered losses for a couple of years and it did not reach its target of $1 billion in sales by 1985.

However, that should not gainsay the fact that this company has had an extraordinary growth record. Perhaps my Party does not always acknowledge the success stories of entrepreneurship where they occur, but Mitel has been an extraordinary success story in entrepreneurial terms. I congratulate Mr. Cowpland and Mr. Matthews and those others who are behind that success.

Those same people are facing a situation today in which the management of Mitel is much different from what it was when it was a small company. Mr. Cowpland has been a good citizen in the Ottawa area. However, I regret to say that, to some extent, he has lost interest. His shareholdings in Mitel are down to 6 per cent and he has invested in other areas, which means that his focus has turned to other areas, perhaps to developing another Mitel.

Those proprietors who were so good for Mitel in its first decade are essentially walking out the door in the assurance that British Telecom will rescue Mitel. They are not allowing the control of the company to go to foreign hands on their own. They are enlisting the support of the Hon. Member for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton. He received handsome contributions during his election campaign. He is faithfully saying that this is bound to be a good deal as far as Canadians are concerned. I suggest there is ample reason to doubt that this is a good deal.

I pointed out in the House a couple of days ago that British Telecom has an alternative plan B. Anyone who studies business knows that it is necessary to have a fallback position in the event that the primary plan does not work. British Telecom's plan B was to buy 18.5 per cent of Mitel, inject approximately $60 million of equity into the company, and possibly inject some loan capital or bond capital into the company to help it with its debt position. It would therefore gain the advantages of the close link with a good manufacturing subsidiary, even if it did not acquire 51 per cent ownership. I suggest to my hon. friend that that was the alternative plan that Telecom devised in order to have an insurance policy if Canadians would not let it have 51 per cent.

Why did Telecom devise that alternative? The reason is that countries throughout the world protect their telecommunications industry. The British should know because British Telecom itself was a wholly-owned Crown corporation of the British Government until very recently. It was part of the British Post Office. Until very recently British Telecom had the policy to buy British.

Ironically, Mitel was the first major foreign company that broke that restriction and was able to enter into the British Telecommunications market. That market is opening up now and it provides real opportunities. Mitel has helped to create those opportunities for Canadian entrepreneurship, research and products.

Japan is another example of a company with restrictions on foreign ownership of the telecommunications sector. British Telecom knows that most countries continue to have restrictions on foreign ownership of the telecommunications sector because of the critical nature of that sector. That is why British Telecom had plan B.

Let us consider that option. Mitel gains access to an important new market. It gains the marketing savvy of a large European company. Although it is untried because it has only recently been partially privatized, it does have the backing of the British Government. Mitel gains financial support in terms of opening up markets in North America, which are extremely competitive since the deregulation of AT & T in the United States. In the meantime, Canadian ownership is retained. Surely that is a preferable option to losing Canadian ownership of Mitel.

Will we see a position in 10 or 15 years where the R and D carried out by Mitel in Canada has shrunk to 2 per cent or 1 per cent of sales? Will Mitel simply become another manufacturing company with a nostalgic link to the Ottawa area but a company that is a trans-national or British based multi-national? I believe that is a very real danger.

The advent of Investment Canada and the way FIRA is being administered by the Government presently will not improve the situation. The fact that the Government is prepared to ram the Investment Canada Bill through parliament without considering the important amendments which our Party and the Liberals have put forward suggests to me that the Government does not understand the issue of foreign investment and foreign ownership.

Not only are we talking about the loss of an important and major telecommunications company, my hon. colleague, the Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) pointed out that the style of management of British Telecom is still very unproven. Until a few years ago it was hardly the model of a driving, vigorous and progressive entrepreneurship that one would like to see as a partner in Mitel. British Telecom has improved recently, but it must still prove itself as a privatized company.

Conservative Members have raised concerns about state owned industries being non-progressive. It is quite clear that these concerns are not legitimate because Canadian national and Air Canada are two dynamic publicly-owned corporations of which Canadians can be proud. However, British Telecom and other British Crown corporations face some problems which, in many cases, have occurred under Conservative rule. I suggest that we are casting Mitel into a very murky future.

Mitel may no longer make the same contribution in the Ottawa area. There has been a very healthy competition between Mitel and Northern Telecom. Northern Telecom is a very successful Canadian company, and Mitel, one-tenth the size of Northern Telecom, vigorously, competes with Northern Telecom in terms of technology, marketing and production in a number of key products. That situation will be vitiated and we will all be the losers as a result.

I fear that this is only the first step of many such examples that we may see over the course of the next three or four years. There is no question that the Progressive Conservatives have a mandate to govern for three or four years, but their mandate is for change. Canadians believe that the Liberals were discredited, and they were right.

I say for the record that no matter how poor the policies of the Progressive Conservatives—and we are learning quickly how poor they are—the country is better off with a change of any kind than if the Liberals stayed in power. The Conservatives may last for only one term. The powerful mandate they have now will disappear as quickly as it was created for them if they carry out policies of selling the birthright of this country and allowing major Canadian corporations to pass into foreign hands. That is just paper shuffling. That is not going to be the creation of new jobs. We have to look at policies for entrepreneurship. We have to look for the development of small industries. We have to find ways by which industry and jobs can be created in the remote regions of Canada, not just in areas like Ottawa, Toronto, Edmonton and Calgary. We have to look for a whole range of policies, as did our task force on jobs, which was headed by my colleagues, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) and the Hon. Member for Essex Windsor. We have to do all these positive things. A policy of simply saying, "Lie on your back and take what happens to you, we are going to open the doors to business and any business that wants to take over any industry in this country is welcome to do it regardless of the consequences for Canada" is not right. I say we can do better than that, Mr. Speaker.

• (1620)

A policy of unlimited access to foreign ownership which will be the effect of the policy advanced by the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion and all of the Government is a policy of Conservative sell-out, a policy of despair, a policy that will not build industry, create jobs and bring down unemployment but a policy which will leave us hewers of wood and drawers of water. I believe our country can do better than that.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall)—Unemployment Insurance—Impact of changes. (b) Request for freeze on implementation of changes; The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow)—Regional Economic Expansion—Financial institutions—forthcoming White Paper. (b) New Democratic Party proposals; the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse)—External Aid—Sudan—Food crisis—Canadian assistance.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 62—FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENT—TIME ALLOCATION

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Axworthy:

That this House condemns the Government, not only for its failure to protect Canada from potential problems of foreign direct investment as demonstrated by the Government's failure to take effective action in dealing with foreign take-overs in the cases of Mitel and of the book-publishing industry, but also for its contempt for the Parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments?

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a number of questions of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). I thought his speech was very interesting. I disagree considerably with his philosophy. I guess that is why we belong to different Parties. It was a decent speech, except for the last three minutes when he got into his more usual strident self and raised his voice to try to show great anger. But until then, the Hon. Member was quite reasonable and intelligent. In his last three minutes he was back into the insane, inane sort of emotionalism which contained a lot of rhetoric and meant nothing.

If 51 per cent of a company happens to be owned by one person, does the Hon. Member believe that that owner of the 51 per cent can do anything he or she wishes? Is the Hon. Member not familiar with the laws of the province, the Dominion and the number of court cases which protect minority shareholders? Does the Hon. Member think the majority shareholder can cream off the assets and do as he or she wishes? Is the Hon. Member not familiar with the law cases which protect minority shareholders? I would suggest that 49 per cent is a rather significant minority. One per cent and 2 per cent have been protected by the courts from rip-offs that might take place.

Second, is the Hon. Member stating a fact that he knows, as he implied when he said that Northern Telecom has plan B, or is the Hon. Member being hypothetical, guessing or making a prediction, or being any of those other things described by weasel words, rather than stating fact? Could he clarify whether he is guessing or whether he knows? Does the Hon. Member have any documentation to back up what he said?

The Hon. Member indicated at the time that $60 million might come in through plan B, but this would still leave the company with a debt of over $200 million, which would make it rather difficult for it to carry on unless, which the Hon. Member did not say at the time, he was also thinking the Government would participate to the tune of $30 million or $40 million, an amount the Liberals turned down when requested last year?

In the Hon. Member's statement he said that British Telecom is now free to be more aggressive and more innovative. The Hon. Member said it was unproven. Is the Hon. Member implying it is better for British Telecom now that that company has been privatized? Is the Hon. Member differing from his usual socialistic beliefs that the Government always has the best of all possible worlds? Those were the adjectives the Hon. Member was using.

Does the Hon. Member not agree that this tentative offer at this stage has to be approved first by the board of directors of Mitel, then by the board of directors of British Telecom? The offer has to be approved by the shareholders of Mitel, the shareholders of British Telecom, the Canadian Government and the British Government? There are six different groups that have to approve thiis proposal before finalization. Does the Hon. Member not believe that during that period of time there will be negotiations? Does the Hon. Member not think that there ought to be negotiations? I firmly suspect there will be. I hope there will be negotiations that will embody most of the rhetoric which the Hon. Member had spoken about, namely, that we have given the company away. I do not think this company is given away at all. Those are subjects for negotiation. I certainly hope that much of that will be protected through the negotiation process.

The Hon. Member also said that he had a fear. Is it his fear, or is he trying to engender fear in the country that the Government is going to give everything away? In fact, the Government if it does support an offer like this, and it has not indicated yet whether or not it does, will be protecting maybe the jobs at Mitel and enhancing the environment by re-employing some of those 600 to 800 people who have been laid off over the last 15 months? After all, Mitel was broke and did not have any money to pursue its marketing to carry on.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the questions from my colleague. I will respond to them as quickly as I can.

First, there are laws to protect minority shareholders, but the stakeholders in Mitel include this community, Canada as a whole, the people who work for Mitel and the companies that supply parts and components. There is a wide variety of people who are stakeholders in Mitel who are not protected by the security laws that ensure that minority shareholders cannot have assets pillaged from them. The minority shareholders may find that their investment is protected, despite the fact that Mitel is transferred lock, stock and barrel to South Wales or to some other part of the United Kingdom. The shareholders alone are not who I am talking about. I am talking about the interests of all Canadians.

Does British Telecom have a plan B and do I know it for sure? I am judging on the facts that British Telecom has announced the unconditional option to take 18.5 per cent. I have spoken to someone at Mitel, but my efforts to reach Mr. Cowpland and Mr. Matthews have failed. I talked to a public relations person at Mitel who simply said that this is the greatest deal since sliced cheese. When we contacted British Telecom in New York, because it has no offices here in Canada, there too the only person we could contact was somebody in the public relations department who was particularly uninformative. Since not much more than press releases have been issued, I cannot say for sure that this is plan B. All I know is that it is significant to me that if British Telecom really thought it could get 51 per cent for sure, British Telecom would not have mentioned it was taking 18 per cent just in case.

What about government participation in Mitel? If Telecom injected $60 million into Mitel through the minority offer that we have mentioned, then it is not beyond the grounds of reason to believe that there might have been some public money or money from other Canadian companies. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Essex Windsor, pointed out that a lot of Canadian companies were holding back because they wanted a crack at Teleglobe Canada and did not want to commit themselves to Mitel, which has been losing money in the last few quarters while Teleglobe has been consistently profitable.

In addition, the Member said, "We could not have government participation", yet he and his Party came in over a weekend with a $260 million bail-out for the Canadian Commercial Bank where only a handful of jobs were involved as opposed to 2,000 or 3000 Canadian jobs right here in the Ottawa area in the case of Mitel.

Mr. Dick: I did not say that. I asked you about it.

Mr. Cassidy: As far as the various approvals that are required are concerned, the Mitel board has indicated that this is a friendly takeover and not a hostile one. British Telecom would not make a bid if its board were not on side. As for the shareholders of Mitel, there is enough control in the hands of the controlling shareholders that they are pretty likely to get approval, and the Canadian Government is in fact the only bullwark, the only avenue of defence, against Mitel's control going into foreign hands. The Canadian Government, through FIRA, has the right to do that. Unfortunately, as has been pointed out, all foreign takeovers which have gone before FIRA since this Government took power have been approved. This Government is even more open for business and less a guardian of Canadian industry than the Liberal Government under which 93 per cent were approved. We suspect, without knowing because FIRA has been so secretive under the Liberals and the Conservatives, that the conditions placed on takeovers have been even less demanding under the Conservative Government than they were under the Liberal Government.

• (1630)

The Hon. Member asked me about my fear that the Government would give everything away and whether I could prove it. No, I cannot prove it. All I am saying is that the signs in the Investment Canada Bill and the signs in terms of the quick support without a lot of throught given to the Mitel takeover by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion indicate to multi-nationals everywhere in the world that if they want to come into Canada and take over a few companies, they are welcome to do so—no ifs, ands or buts, no conditions—and if they want to move them out of Canada afterwards, the Government will not try to stop them.

Mr. Dick: That is not what he said, and you know it.

Mr. Cassidy: That is exactly what the Minister said. That is the signal he and his Party are sending by the way Conservative Members talked during the campaign and by the way they acted and brought forward the Investment Canada Bill. I remind the House that the Investment Canada Bill is almost the only substantive piece of legislation we have seen from the Government in its first eight months of office.

Are there alternative means to protect the jobs at Mitel apart from a foreign takeover? Of course there are. The Government found a quarter of a billion dollars for CCB, to protect investors in California. When such an important Canadian company is involved, it seems to me that government participation as part of a partnership to refinance Mitel, which was already recovering from the difficulties of last year and the year before, would have been a creative option that should have been explored. I regret the fact that that was not done by the Government.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have a question and a comment, but I will be brief. The former Government put anvils around our collective necks, slit our wrists and threw us into a school of pirhanas with the greatest deficit in our history. We are talking here about jobs and dollars and cents. Fortunately, on September 4 we were saved by the people of Canada who pulled us from that river of debt and gave us a second chance. That second chance is to encourage—and I underline the word "encourage"—more foreign investment in Canada. Today's opposition motion condemns the cutting off of debate on the important issue of foreign investment legislation. We have had debate. We have spent dozens and dozens of hours, as the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) explained this morning, and as the Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) explained this afternoon. I cannot understand this paranoia about not having enough debate on this whole question.

I would like to refer to something which I think is very relevant in that we are talking about the debate on foreign investment. I have a study which was conducted by the Conference Baord of Canada entitled The Foreign Investment Review Agency—Images and Realities. It contains some quotations by very knowledgeable and experienced businessmen, one of which reads:

> We have never experienced anything as fearsome as FIRA before.

Another reads:

> — on a scale of one to ten I would rate Canada a zero. Canada is in a class by itself.

Some class! Another quotation reads:

> FIRA is an interventionist nationalistic policy the likes of which I have never seen anywhere else.

I would like to refer to the document entitled The Future of Foreign Investment in Canada, produced by the Conference Board of Canada and dated January, 1985. I should add that the Conference Board is a very highly respected institute and is an independent body. In part it reads:

> Debating the virtues of various approaches to the control of foreign investment is fast becoming a luxury that Canada can ill afford.

Does the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Centre (Mr. Cassidy) agree or disagree? Yes or no.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would simply say that I disagree with the statement. As the Hon. Member should well know, Britain, France, United States, Japan and almost every other industrial country have substantial restraints, limitations or agencies to set conditions on foreign investment, as does Canada. We can debate the kinds of controls or how conditions should be adapted as time goes on and conditions change. I have no trouble with that, but to abandon those restraints completely, which is the position of large numbers of Members in the Conservative Party, including the present Minister, is a policy of folly.

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to make my contribution to this debate. I am astounded by the statements we have heard in the House over the past few days by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), and by the fact he is happy with the proposed takeover of Mitel by British Telecom. It would be more appropriate to hear the Minister state that he had mixed feelings. Why do I say that? To me it is very clear. One as to feel happy that this particular company, under the circumstances about which we know, has found a partner described by the founders of the company as a preferred partner. They have said that this is a good match. From what we know of British Telecom, it does not have a manufacturing arm. It does not conduct research and development. It is simply a telephone company which provides a service to British customers. Therefore, it is now acquiring a company which may become the principal manufacturing and research arm of Telecom.

This is in an era of global trade when companies are located all across the world, on different continents and in different countries. In this case we have a telephone company in Britain which presumably has access to the European market and we have Mitel, a manufacturing and R and D company in Canada, which has plants and a distribution network in Canada and in the United States. In many respects it seems that this may indeed be an ideal marriage.

I also understand that no Canadian investor was available and that in the past year Mitel actively sought investment by many major corporations. None of them, for one reason or another, was willing to get involved in this company. Despite all these points, I do not think we should say that we are truly happy about the takeover. As Canadians we should feel somewhat saddened that this uniquely Canadian company is slipping a little out of our hands.

• (1640)

Several years ago I was one of the ordinary investors who bought maybe 100 shares in Mitel. I was swept up in the enthusiasm over the fact that here was a small company located in our nation's capital that was making a go of it in Canadian and in world markets. I was proud to participate in the success of this company. With the recession and falling sales in world markets, the company encountered difficulties over the past couple of years. However, we had this initial enthusiasm. The company did fall upon difficult times, but it seemed to maintain its footing. It seems that something can be done to keep this company in Canadian hands. The best one could say about this is that we have mixed feelings. It is strange that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion would say that he is happy about this in an unqualified manner. It tells us something about the size of the Canadian economy as well as the size of our market.

Once Canadian companies reach a certain size, they enter a league of their own. In Canada we could not support two, three, four or five Mitel companies. They could merge and form one solid company that could compete on an international basis. In an economy the size of the United States, you might well have 10 or 12 companies of that nature. If one fell, two might come together. In fact, three or four might join together and have the wherewithal to make a go of it in this tremendously competitive world. We cannot have that in Canada. We can only have one such company.

As I said earlier, when this company had its problems, it went to the Canadian capital market. There are not many companies that are compatible with that kind of request. I do not know who they went to. You could ask yourself who you would go to in this situation. You may go to Brascan, Olympia & York or Cadillac Fairview. All of these companies have their expertise in a specific area. These are Canadian companies in which we take pride. They had made their mark in real estate in Canada and in the United States, but they would not touch a telecommunications company with a ten-foot pole. They do not have the expertise, know how or management to deal with this kind of situation.

The alternatives in Canada are not many, but there are some. In preparing some notes for my speech today, I asked myself about the Canada Development Corporation, as distinct from the CDIC. When the Canada Development Corporation was founded a number of years ago, its purpose was to serve the combination of public and private enterprise. Its purpose was the bringing together of pools of public capital to support investment of a somewhat risky nature. Would the Canada Development Corporation not have been a good partner in this case? Could it not have come in and, not bought control of the company, but rather left control of the company in the hands of the original owners? Maybe it could buy 49 per cent. That would provide the financial stability the company needed to leap-frog into the next level where it could compete with the major companies of this world.

We should be somewhat concerned about this. Our feelings should be mixed. We should be happy. At the same time, we should have a bit of concern that the control of a uniquely Canadian company is somehow falling out of our hands.

Today's papers report that British Aerospace is eyeing two other well-known Canadian companies, de Havilland and Canadair. It is the policy of this Government to put these companies up for sale. It seems that the only buyers available are foreign. Is that what this Government promised Canadians when it sought their confidence during the last election campaign? Did they say there were no solutions in Canada, that we would have to seel all of our critical industries in the area of telecommunications and aerospace to foreigners? Is that the kind of confidence that they offered Canadians? Is that the outlook for our economy? If that all this Government has to offer today, one could say that the September 4 election was won on somewhat false pretences.

This leads me to another point. In the past two days, the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon) has, for all intents and purposes, stated that the Tory promises of doubling spending on regional development will not be kept. Two days ago in committee, he stated, and I quote from the committee transcript:

—we cannot promise that by 1990 we will have moved to the point of 2.5 per cent, which would be a desirable target, nor are we able to promise that we will have the necessary human resources in order to support that level of activity in research and development.

This is a far cry from the rhetoric that we heard during and prior to the last election campaign. In 1984, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) stated, "We have to double our spending on research and development and triple our resolve to reach it." What did the Minister of State for Science and Technology say today? He said, "I do not recall the specific wording, Mr. Chairman, that was used—".

We have come a long way in the last 18 months. From the doubling of spending and the tripling of resolve, we now have, "I do not recall the specific wording—". I am sure that Canadians who are listening to this debate and who have seen what has been doing on in the House in the last couple of days will soon catch up with this game. They will quickly come to the conclusion that all that they were offered during the last election was a lot of smoke and mirrors.

I wish to refer to another statement of the Minister in the last couple of days. I again refer to the committee report where, in reference to the promise that was made for double spending on research and development, the Minister said:

● (1650)

Opposition members are accustomed to thinking in terms of promises; I am accustomed to thinking in terms of goals—

That leads to the question which I asked yesterday in the House. When is a promise not a promise? We now have the answer from the Minister of State for Science and Technology. A promise is not a promise when it is a goal.

The promise to increase the spending on research and development has now been reduced in the priorities of the Government. If there is one area in which this Government should be maintaining its promises, it should be in that area. The Government promised that it would provide renewed growth to the economy and that it would create tens and tens of thousands of jobs. What is the foundation of the renewed economic strategy? There is unanimity today that in the areas of technology, science and research we will lay the foundation for future economic growth. However, today the Minister and his Government are telling us that this must take a back seat because of the deficit.

During the election campaign the deficit was not the focus of the Conservative Party's attention. We were promised growth. Certainly, the only way in which to eliminate the deficit is by putting Canadians back to work. That was the promise. It is true, we do have a large deficit. But there are 1.5 million people unemployed in Canada. If we could put half of those people back to work, 750,000 of them, the deficit would be reduced substantially, if not completely.

How will we put those people back to work? The ways in which we can put those people back to work are through the stimulation of the economy, research and development, and the application of new technologies to our traditional industries, such as fishing, forestry and agriculture. Another way would be to spend judiciously in the new technologies—biotechnologies and aerospace.

I cannot help but remark on the comment which came a moment ago from across the aisle, that the only way to stimulate the economy is through foreign investment. That, certainly, was not what was promised. To me, foreign investment is the approach of a Government which is bankrupt of ideas, which has no confidence in the ability of Canadians and which has no programs to create investment and jobs through the efforts of Canadians. Canadians were promised in the last election that efforts would be made to stimulate their imaginations and energies. It has been almost ten months since the election and all we are hearing from the Government is the plaintive cry that foreign investment will solve the problems.

It is for those reasons that I support the motion. I feel that the House should condemn the Government. Unfortunately, we do not have the numbers, but I am sure that if Government Members looked at themselves in the mirror and searched their souls before coming to the House for a vote, they would join with the Opposition and defeat the Government.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Hon. Member. I wonder how much recent Canadian history the Hon. Member has studied. Does he not realize that it was in the period from 1945 to 1957, under the leadership of the then Minister responsible for everything, Mr. C. D. Howe, and that Liberal Government, that there was a tremendous influx of American capital which took over Canadian companies? Does the Member not realize that when the Liberals returned to power under Mr. Pearson in 1962 and 1963, the then Minister of Finance, Mr. Walter Gordon, recommended to the Liberal Government that it should take a hard look at foreign investment and place restrictions on it? The Liberal Government of the day introduced the Foreign Investment Review Agency, but gave it no power. So foreign investment continued to flow into Canada in ever-increasing amounts and 95 per cent or 97 per cent of all applications to FIRA were approved.

Does the Member not know those things? Does it now show, once again, the vast difference in the opinions of Liberals between the time when they were in office and did nothing and the time when they are in opposition and say some of the right things?

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his questions. He was referring to the period between 1945 and 1957. I cannot claim responsibility for the actions which were taken by C. D. Howe and the Governments of those days. I think the Hon. Member, if he is frank, in spite of the drawbacks which he sees in FIRA, will recognize that in many sectors of the economy the past 10 or 15 years have seen vastly increased Canadian ownership.

Perhaps FIRA did not provide all the answers, but I would suggest that other actions were taken by Liberal Governments which enabled Canadians to take control of part of the economy which provided, either through the Income Tax Act or other legislation, the necessary tax incentives and subsidized programs to Canadians so that they could use their imaginations and energies to take control and exercise substantial control of major parts of Canadian industries.

● (1700)

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that in recent years we have had an increase in Canadian control of business and industry. I urge the Hon. Member to look at the automobile, rubber and mining industries, which have the largest manufacturing plants in this country and he will see that, despite everything he says the former Liberal Government helped to accomplish, foreign investors still hold the major, indeed, in some cases, 100 per cent, control of those industries.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the point raised by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), of course I was not around in 1945 either, but I take it the father of FIRA was the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray). I think it is recognized by well informed people that he did play a very important role in getting the FIRA Bill before the House when he was Minister without portfolio, and that eventually he got FIRA into law in 1971-72.

From the comments just made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North, we would be led to believe that Canadian ownership has not improved. I think we should look at the facts, Mr. Speaker, and at a recent poll which I am sure the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) has seen, which suggests that the majority of Canadians are no longer worried about foreign investment in Canada. Before this Government starts to snap its suspenders and crow about all of this, it had better be understood why Canadians say they are not worried. The reason is that FIRA—and that is the Foreign Investment Review Act—notwithstanding the vendetta of the Conservatives with respect to it, changed the composition of investment in this country. For example, in 1974, foreign ownership in Canadian manufacturing was at 61 per cent; in 1980, that figure dropped to 53 per cent, and it has fallen further since. The same can be said for the petroleum and natural gas sector. It was 76 per cent in 1970, 51 per cent in 1980, and it is now even lower. I could go on to show the House the importance to the Canadian economy of the Foreign Investment Review Act.

The Hon. Member for Laurier did mention tax incentives. There have been comments made today in the House about Mitel. God knows, we in the Ottawa area find that company important to us. It has created thousands upon thousands of jobs and has been a good economic generator in the region. We do not think that Mitel should close. However, would the Hon. Member set the record straight? He knows about research and development. He is our critic, our official spokesperson, in this area. He knows, as do all honest Hon. Members of this House, that $20 million was given to Mitel under the special electronics program in 1980 by the former Liberal Government and that $9.9 million in research and development grants was given to Mitel in 1982. He knows that a $5.5 million grant to upgrade the Ottawa facilities was given to Mitel in 1983. I was part of that. A group of companies in the Kanata region called the Kanata High Tech Training Centre, I believe, received $3 million to improve its management services and capacity.

Since we have had the economic statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who imposed a moratorium on the tax credits for research and development, does the Hon. Member believe, for example, that there has been a loss to the Government in revenues of $1.6 bilion? Does he believe that the Government helped Mitel by taking away the research and development tax credits?

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises a very interesting question. The Government placed that moratorium on the scientific research tax credit because it claims that through what are called "quick flip" transactions, there was a substantial drain on the public purse. However, if one really understands and looks at that mechanism, one sees that it is indeed possible that this was not a drain on the public purse. These are tax incentives which the Government would have given anyway. There was, perhaps, just a change in the timing. These tax incentives were taken by companies in 1983, 1984 and 1985, rather than having them claimed by these companies in coming years.

Perhaps I should explain myself. The scientific research tax credit was introduced because there are a number of companies which are in a non-taxable position. A company has to earn profits to be able to take advantage of a tax credit. It so happens that there are many young companies in their formative years—indeed, many high-tech companies—which are not in a taxable position and, therefore, cannot take advantage of tax incentives under the Income Tax Act. So the scientific research tax credit was introduced by the previous Liberal Government in order to allow these young innovative companies to transfer tax credits, which they could not otherwise claim, to investing companies. They would do it by issuing a debt instrument to these companies, or by issuing shares, and then the investing company could claim the tax credit. The investing company would give money to the research company and this would give this research company the money to enable it to undertake the research. The tax credit, which the research company could not claim, was transferred to the investing company which, obviously, is in a taxable position. So really what one had, Mr. Speaker, was a transfer of a tax incentive from a research company to an investor. One cannot, therefore, entirely conclude that this was a drain on the Treasury. It was perhaps just a difference in timing. Probably a great deal of research was undertaken in Canadian companies as a result of this initiative. A moratorium was placed on it by the Government in November. Obviously, we are all waiting with bated breath for next Thursday night to see if there are any other solutions to be offered by the Conservative Government.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mrs. B. Tardif).

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I would like to go back to the last part of the motion before the House today and consider more specifically the part that says the Government is to be condemned:

—for its contempt for the Parliamentary process by cutting off free debate on its iniquitous investment legislation without providing adequate time for consideration of dozens of important and constructive amendments.

Mr. Speaker, since the beginning of the proceedings on Bill C-15, I was present at every debate in the House and attended all meetings of the Committee, and I shall try to recapitulate what has happened so far. As soon as we reached the second reading stage, it was not the Government that cut off debate but the Official Opposition. After six hours of debate on the substance of the Bill, the Official Opposition decided to move a motion to adjourn or postpone consideration of the Bill for six months. The motion was debated for many hours, and it took a motion by the Government to get the Opposition to revert to the subject that was actually under consideration. We wanted to have a serious debate on the Investment Canada Bill because, as the Opposition has repeated so many times today, we believe it is a Bill that should be taken seriously, that it is an important Bill and that it deserves the full attention of the House.

• (1710)

After second reading, the Bill was referred to committee. In committee, after many witnesses had been heard, the Official Opposition and the other opposition party submitted 102 motions for amendments. Many of these were rejected outright by the chairman of the committee because they were not in order. I would like to make one distinction, however. The Official Opposition kept trying to find ways of delaying consideration of the Bill, but as far as the New Democratic Party is concerned, although we have our ideological differences, they nevertheless took the debate on this Bill far more seriously.

After 40 hours of examining the Bill in Committee, we went before the House with the report stage. This time we had 99 amending motions. I think the Speaker of the House probably did the lion's share of the work that, once again, consisted in looking at the Opposition motions to find out whether they were in order.

I do not have many years of experience as a Member of the House, and perhaps not as much as some of the Opposition Members in the House today, but I do not think it is a common occurrence that the Chair's ruling on whether certain motions are in order covers eight pages in Hansard. The House then decided that 50 motions would be rejected because they were out of order. The remaining 49 were consolidated into 18 groups, probably because here again, the perception was that the large number of motions was mostly an attempt to dilute debate and, as far as I can see, to waste the time of the House.

We spent 25 hours considering the first four groups of motions put before the House. The Opposition used all its allotted time, once again, to say nothing. I fail to see what saying 40 times over that they did not agree, without giving any reasons, is supposed to achieve. If the reason is that they wanted to give this Bill serious consideration, I object, and unlike some Hon. Members, I was present at all stages and every time the Bill was considered. I think the motion before the House today is one more reminder that the Opposition, instead of playing its role by suggesting certain amendments to improve a piece of legislation, is here in the House only to propose amendments that are just another way of wasting the time of this House.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to compare the amount of time spent in the House on consideration of the Investment Canada Bill with the time it took in 1973 to consider the Foreign Investment Review Act. For instance, at the second reading stage, the House spent a total of 20 hours on consideration of the FIRA Bill, and I imagine the Opposition at the time must have been far more co-operative and really have wanted to improve the Bill. I see the House spent 10 hours listening to 26 speakers. At the Committee of the Whole House stage, the procedure was the same as in committee, and at the report stage, the process was also much faster. Since the beginning of December, we spent more time considering Bill C-15 than the House did in 1973 on the FIRA Bill. If that is the co-operative spirit of the Opposition, I hate to think what is going to happen to the rest of our legislation.

Many comments were made earlier today on what has or has not been said during the election campaign. I have here a page of the Financial Times for July 1984 where they mention the position of the Progressive Conservative candidates, on FIRA. At that time, representatives of European and other countries told us about the kind of reputation Canada had abroad. As we know, all surveys by the European Management listed Canada in last position. If we consider how various countries welcome investments, Canada ranks 24th out of 24, or again 28th out of 28. With Investment Canada, perhaps time had come to wonder about our reputation abroad.

The most radical change is a change in attitude. Of course we will continue to welcome foreign investments. We will continue indeed, but at a certain level. Of course we also want to stand up firmly for the interests of Canadians and make sure that Canada's cultural interests are protected. But we also want foreign investors to be aware of the fact that a new Government is in office, and that the new Government is prepared to welcome investments to bolster the country's economy.

When I think back to the election campaign and recall talking to my constituents, my primary concern was the economic situation throughout Canada and particularly in the Province of Quebec. When I consider a measure like the Investment Canada Bill and discuss it with my constituents, one thing is quite clear: they wants us to do everything possible to set Canada's economy back on an even keel, and to make sure that investments will create new opportunities in terms of high technology and assistance to some of our industries, for they know it is the only way to get Canadians back to work. Jobs is what people want. I agree with some Members of the Opposition who claim that FIRA is not the only way, that it will not work miracles. No, FIRA will not work miracles. The Progressive Conservative Party has conveyed a message of hope, a message of confidence to Canadian and foreign investors alike. Yes, right in Part I of the Bill there is a message intended for Canadian investors. Investing in Canada is a challenge and the most effective mechanism we have to create employment for young people and all Canadian workers.

I have just received an article about Mitel. It has been a major issue in the House for the last couple of days and some of the comments I heard puzzled me. I have no intention of delving into this project, as suggested by the Minister in the House. That is the kind of news making headlines these days. No application for such a huge investment has ever been made to the Canadian Government, but I was surprised by the attitude of experts who analyze the situation. It has been said that the proposed merger of Mitel with one of the world's largest telecommunications firms might allay the fears expressed by its clients. It has also been suggested that it is a golden opportunity for Mitel, the best news it could possibly hear.

I am always astonished when I realize that the criticisms we hear in the House are so far removed from reality, from what most people think, from the views of experts who analyze the situation.

I must say that we have done everything there was to do with respect to the Investment Canada Bill. Had the Opposition been prepared to take the matter seriously, the debate would be over. We have been listening to speaker after speaker, and I challenge Hon. Members to come up with fresh suggestions which might have improved the Bill.

• (1720)

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I found the Hon. Member's remarks most interesting, and I would like to ask her a question. As far as I know, the Government has not accepted any amendments. In fact, it has yet to give any amendments serious consideration. Among the 94 or so amendments we have proposed, there is one amendment I would like to single out, one that would have the Government, through the responsible Minister—

[Editor's Note: A child cries out in the visitors' gallery.]

Mr. Gauthier: —I see someone appreciates my speech—be responsible for screening and examining foreign investors in the case of a foreign take-over of a company, corporation or agency that received grants from the Government in the past year. I wonder whether the Hon. Member agrees, when Canadians invest in a Canadian company to encourage it and to help it pursue and expand its activities in order to create more jobs, whether she agrees with the principle of examining a situation and preventing a foreign company from taking over the best of what we have. You know what is going to happen under the new Investment Canada legislation. It will open the door to foreign capital which will come here to see whether there is anything worthwhile and take it, and in many cases, Canadians may have been contributing through a system of grants and tax credits towards promoting and developing this company. I would ask the Hon. Member whether she does not agree that the amendment to make the Government responsible for examining these situations and preventing certain activities and even protecting Canadian capital invested in such companies is an entirely reasonable amendment.

Mrs. B. Tartif: Mr. Speaker, I would like to start by correcting a mistake that the Hon. Member made in the preamble to his question. One amendment was accepted, contrary to what you said.

Mr. Gauthier: There were 94 amendments!

Mrs. B. Tardif: To get back to your question, the matter you raised was examined by the Committee. I think committee members and the Minister looked into this very carefully. They concluded that the amendment was unacceptable and that there were other ways of dealing with such situations. If we look at the conditions imposed on foreign investment, they are such that we will be able to keep technology developed in Canada in this country. If you think that Canadian technology is going to move out of the country as soon as we have foreign investment, I think you are on the wrong track.

Earlier, I gave an example taken from a magazine that took Mitel as an example. Here in Parliament we hear shouts of protest, but analysts say it is a golden opportunity. It is a golden opportunity because the high technology we developed here in Canada will have a better chance to compete with foreign products because the money invested by the foreign company, if the transaction takes place, will enhance the company's position on foreign markets. This is a fact that must be considered, and it is a good thing for Canadians.

Mr. Gauthier: Since the Hon. Member has mentioned the case of Mitel, I have a good question for her. Mitel has been given $30 million these past few years just so it would extend its activities to Renfrew, to establish a business in Bouctouche precisely to improve the research and development capacity which British Telecom does not have. That point was raised. British Telecom is not a research-oriented company, it is a service company. It comes over here and acquires a company whose strong point is research and development and which in recent years has received $30 million from the Government, not to mention God knows how many tax incentives to do scientific research.

The Hon. Member has just said that it is not important. I am telling her that it is of major importance to us. That is what we want to keep. We want to keep in Canada our investments, our research and our development, we do not want a foreign company to buy them out and then likely eliminate those Canadian companies which have had a tremendous impact on job creation and on the Canadian economy.

Mrs. B. Tardif: I think that the example just given proves that there are both pessimistic and optimistic approaches in the House. The approach taken by the Hon. Member is pessimistic the moment there is some talk about an investment. It has been shown that it is not that much different from others, but it will enable the company to find new capital and expand.

The minute they hear about this investment to be made in Canada, they immediately conclude that our technology will disappear, instead of saying that the money will be used to expand the company, help it find new foreign markets and take a commanding lead in research and technology. I certainly hope that after a while the company will be strong enough to do without Government grants for its research and development projects.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that Hon. Member will be a minister one day because she is quite nice.

However, her comments . . . Indeed, it is her hope. Everybody knows that there is very little research and development made by those foreign companies in Canada. Canadian companies do much more. It is a well-known and proven fact. You only have to check in reports and papers published by the Science Council in Canada. Why persist in saying that Canadian companies need foreign companies to tell them what to do? I do not understand.

Mrs. B. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, we do not need foreign companies to tell our companies what they can do. However, if they have funds to invest and our companies have financial needs to meet, if it is the only way to keep them afloat, I would be pleased to get those funds and it is precisely how we can carry on.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Charlesbourg (Mrs. B. Tardif) a question. Does she think that foreign investment will help create jobs in Canada? Yes or no? If so, does the Hon. Member think the new Government is creating this new climate for foreign investment?

Mrs. B. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, that is the whole point of this legislation. We want to improve Canada's reputation and bring in new investment because we want to create jobs across Canada.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is good at answering questions, but she tends to forget the facts. And the fact is that last year, investments in Canada totalled $4.1 billion. There was no need to amend the FIRA Act. It was only necessary to screen applications. Ninety-seven per cent of those applications were approved, and that is a darned good average! I would suggest to the Hon. Member that if she can do better, I think we should compare notes. The Hon. Member is quite charming and I have nothing against her, except for the company she keeps. In any case, the facts are there: $4.1 billion and 97 per cent, which is not bad. I would say it is extremely good.

Mrs. B. Tardif: Mr. Speaker, there has been a lot of criticism directed against FIRA. One point was the delays and the reputation we had abroad. Now we may get even better investors, and more investors who will develop better technologies in Canada, and that will benefit all Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): This is getting to be very interesting, Mr. Speaker. We are throwing around numbers, such as $4.1 billion of investment, 97 per cent of which was improved, and that is correct. How much more money would have come into this country if we had the proper investment climate for domestic capital and foreign capital from around the world? It would probably be two or three times $4 billion. Let us not deal with these silly numbers given to us by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

• (1730)

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member, for questions or comments.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, when we had problems, when we were in a recession, where were his rich friends? Where were all these people who wanted to invest in Canada? They certainly were not here. All I can say is that when times are hard, nobody is going to come, and he says: If we had thought . . . What do you expect?

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Resuming debate.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter the debate on this motion. It is interesting to note that when the Liberals are in opposition they urge policies and legislation which they ignore completely or emasculate when they are in office.

During the last years of the Liberal Government more than 95 per cent of the FIRA applications made by foreign investors to take over Canadian companies were approved. Therefore, I do not take the protestations of the Liberal Members of Parliament today too seriously.

This is an extremely important question we are debating today. The world is going through a new industrial revolution. The days when the industrialized countries, including Canada, produce manufactured goods that are sold to the underdeveloped countries and paid for by those countries through the sale of raw materials and foodstuffs that they produce are no longer here. Today, those manufacturing operations which were carried out by the industrialized countries are now taking place increasingly in countries like South Korea, Hong Kong, Singapore and Brazil. The traditional manufacturing industries in the western world that provided jobs for millions of people are under severe attack. The number of people employed in those industries has reduced sharply and it continues to decrease. Canadians are being told every day by Government, industry and academics that we must be more efficient through the use of new techniques and investment in new technology. Unfortunately, these are only lectures.

Currently, in the United States and Canada we are seeing large corporations use borrowed funds to purchase companies which have no relation to the operations of these large corporations. For example, in the United States these companies are discovering that these purchases made a few years ago have been an inefficient use of their capital. Very often, these companies are now absorbing large losses and divesting themselves of those companies which they purchased a few years ago.

For example, Mobil Oil is one of the largest corporations in the United States. A few years ago it purchased Montgomery Ward, one of the largest retail and mail order corporations in the United States. Mobil Oil is now selling Montgomery Ward and taking a loss.

Mr. Fraleigh: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have read the motion. I cannot see anything in it that could possibly relate to what the Hon. Member is saying at this time. Perhaps he could indicate how the takeover of Montgomery Ward by Mobil relates to the Mitel takeover or Investment Canada?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Perhaps when the Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) is finished he will make it relevant to the motion.

Mr. Orlikow: If the Hon. Member will listen, he will see that I am illustrating what is happening with takeovers in the United States and Canada. I will come to Mitel soon as a glaring example of what we ought not to permit.

Some years ago Mobil purchased Montgomery Ward. It is now disposing of that company. It has said publicly that it will take a loss of $500 million in that transaction.

We usually follow the American example of how to do things in Canada some years after they have tried something. However, we do not take the trouble to learn from the American experience. Large corporations in Canada are now involved in takeovers by borrowing money from the banks which could be much better used in encouraging the development of new technology and better systems. For example, Bell Canada recently bought a controlling interest in TransCanada Pipelines. While that may benefit the shareholders in Bell, what does it do for the people of Canada? Is there one new job created by this purchase?

Mr. Dick: It is not Bell Canada that bought it. It is Bell Enterprises.

Mr. Orlikow: The Hon. Member says that it was not Bell Canada, but Bell Enterprises. Bell Enterprises has been built and established on the profits which the Bell Telephone Company made by overcharging its customers.

Bell is not alone. Other examples include Olympia & York which tried to buy the Chevron oil company. There is the example of CP Investments which bought a paper company. There is Power Corporation which is not satisfied with its present structure and is expanding. None of those acquisitions added one job or made Canadian industry and business more efficient. Rather, these dealings soaked up money that should have been put into productive investment.

Mitel is being sold to a foreign business despite the large public investment in that company made by Governments. That company is involved precisely in the field that we are told future jobs and technology are taking us. Control of that company is slipping out of Canadian hands. The Government has failed to act to repatriate Prentice-Hall, a Canadian publishing company which is vital to the encouragement of Canadian publishing. It has done so in spite of the fact that the Government, in its Investment Canada Bill, says that it will screen foreign investment in industries "related to Canada's cultural heritage or national identity".

The Association of Canadian Publishers appeared before a parliamentary committee and called upon the Government to express its commitment to Canada's cultural industry by allowing the patriation to Canadians of Prentice-Hall. Nothing has been done by the Government in that respect.

I suggest that the replacement of the Foreign Investment Review Agency with Investment Canada, which is being done by closure, indicates the same impatience that the Government is showing to the whole question of foreign investment.

Let me give some facts about Mitel. It is the second largest manufacturer of telecommunications equipment, with sales of $255 million in 1983. It grew remarkably quickly, with an average annual growth rate of 132 per cent, from 1975 to 1983. It built its reputation on high quality products and the ability to sell them throughout the world. It was a success story until 1983. That year the growth rate was only 25 per cent. The seeds of Mitel's troubles were sown. Since then Mitel's difficulties have become well known. It had problems with new lines of products, including the Superswitch. It had losses and lay-offs in the company's operations which included a $32 million loss and the termination of employment of 600 other workers in 1984. The answer for this downturn in a business which had grown so spectacularly was simple to one corporate directors, a good old fashioned capitalist takeover with the consent of a Government which had allowed every foreign takeover of a Canadian company since it took office on September 4 last year. That is the essence of the position of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) in this House.

• (1740)

Mr. Dick: I rise on a point of order. I think the Hon. Member might want to correct the record. He indicated Mitel had difficulty in 1983 with the Superswitch. Perhaps he would like to correct the record that Superwitch is Mitel's trade name. All switches are called Superswitch. It is the SX2000 which Mitel has had difficulty with. The Hon. Member might want to have the record read correctly to show that he knows what he is talking about.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I will accept that suggestion by the Hon. Member.

The question that we need to ask ourselves in this debate and everywhere else is whether permitting this takeover is the best solution to the problem. Is it the best solution for the more than $10 million in direct payments for Mitel's research and development expenditure which came from the federal Government? Is it the best solution for the $35 million in federal grants which were made to this company? Is it the best solution for a company with assets valued at hundreds of millions of dollars, one estimate I have seen is $668 million? Is it the best solution to lose Canadian control of that company for the relatively insignificant sum of $300 million? Where are the banks and the trust companies which are so ready to lend huge sums of money, hundreds of millions of dollars to the CP, to Olympia & York, or to Power Corporation to buy other companies which, as I have indicated, do not add a single job to the Canadian workforce?

It is for some of these reasons that we in the New Democratic Party think this is a very bad business deal. It is bad for a Government investing in what it believed was a Canadian company operating in world markets. It is bad for company management which will now have a head office and will put its British concerns first. Why shouldn't it? After all, the same kind of problems of unemployment exist in Great Britain as they do in Canada. Of course, the British Government and the British people will want to put pressure on that British Company to bring more jobs to Great Britain. It is bad for Canadian workers who believe that Mitel's first priority should be to provide jobs in Canada for Canadians. It is bad for Canadians who have seen commitments made with public money which have only been honoured in the breach as Mitel management slid out from agreements to keep the company Canadian.

There is a longer term process at work here. It is one we should find more profoundly disturbing. Mitel now has 14 manufacturing plants throughout the world. Only three of those plants are in Canada. Of the rest, three are in the United States, two are in the United Kingdom and Ireland, and five are in other countries.

British Telecom as Mitel's buyer has indicated it needs Mitel's manufacturing capacity and it wants to enter the U.S. market. That is the biggest market there is. To supply its captive British market and to do more United States business, the efforts of Mitel will inevitably be drawn to those countries at the expense of Canadian workers. Even if the increased jobs created do not mean a reduction of the workforce in Canada, it means the new jobs will be developed in Great Britain, the United States and in other countries rather than in Canada. As surely as night follows day, the corporate headquarters, the research and development work, the thousands of highly skilled jobs will go to those larger markets and Canadians will once again see that we are the branch plant capital of the world.

To those Members who say that all this is speculation, that there is no evidence of the case I have been making, I would ask them to look at what is happening to one of our largest and most successful corporations, one of the few companies in Canada that has made major investments in research and development. Look at what has happened to Northern Telecom. Here is a company which, in 1977, had a workforce in Canada of 19,000 people and has a workforce in 1985 of 19,000 the same 19,000. In the United States, there is an entirely different story. In 1977, the U.S. workforce employed by Northern Telecom was 4,000 people. By 1982, the U.S. workforce of Northern Telecom had risen from 4,000 to almost 14,000. I do not have the most recent figures. I am certain there has been another substantial increase. This has prompted many observers to ask whether Northern Telecom is a stagnant Canadian company and a growing United States company which will ultimately relocate more of its management, more of its research and development and more of its skilled jobs in the United States rather than in Canada.

The same question is being asked of Bell Canada as it proceeds down its acquisition-happy path, unchallenged by anything in its reorganization as seen in Bill C-19 now before the committee. Members should look at the history of Bell Canada and Bell Enterprises and the many other companies which Bell has created, all based on the profits it made from the monopoly it had providing telephone service to most of the people in Ontario and Quebec.

If the Minister can persist in his naive state that all is well as Canadian companies are bought out or acquire creeping feet where they do their work, he can understand why this Party has the gravest doubt. If the Minister wants to make certain that Mitel, Northern Telecom, Bell Canada, and others remain Canadian, now is the time to insist that that be done through legislation, through agreements with these companies and through insistence that public money invested will not be lost to the whim of the market-place.

There is a wider and more fundamental point to be made. Takeovers do not create jobs. They usually lead to a loss of jobs. Takeovers are followed usually by a so-called rationalization. Our present financial system facilitates those takeovers by the availability of money and the concentration of shares in increasingly fewer hands. If Members want to see what is happening in the field of takeovers, they should look at the issue of The Financial Times which headlines its main story on page one with the title "Take-over fever is back". The present system leads in Canada to what has been called in the United States the process of "greenmail". In that process certain investors, wheelers and dealers, find that it is more profitable to bid for a company and force management to buy it at an inflated price, all of which means that the company finds it much more difficult to operate at a profit.

• (1750)

What we have seen is scarcely an endorsement of institutions which are supposedly raising capital for the expansion of industrial production. This same financial sector has failed companies such as Mitel. As I indicated earlier, they are ready to finance takeovers by companies such as C.P.E. or Power Corporation but not to finance companies like Mitel. Seemingly, not a single Canadian financial institution could provide more capital for this company, despite the fact that it was turning the corner and getting back into a profit situation in the most recent quarter.

Surely there is a lesson in all this. If Mitel cannot be kept Canadian, either by its own efforts or the efforts of the Government, what hope do we have of ever producing world-class industries that will provide jobs and opportunities for a skilled and well-paid Canadian workforce? The policies of the Government are taking this country in the wrong direction.

Mr. McCrossan: Mr. Speaker, I was very intrigued by the Hon. Member's thesis, but I had a little difficulty reconciling it with his Party's support of the takeover by Petro-Canada of Petrofina and BP. If he is opposed to takeovers as not creating a single job and depleting the capital of the country, why did his Party support those particular takeovers?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I certainly did not mean to suggest that all takeovers were bad. I said that a very large percentage of them were bad, and that a Government which cares about the people it was elected to represent should be looking at takeovers and divising policies which would ensure that the takeovers of the future will be of benefit to all the people.

Let me indicate what happened in the case of Petro-Canada. Of course our Party supported—

Mr. Nickerson: The Liberals.

Mr. Orlikow: No, we did not support the Liberals. The oil and gas industry was almost 100 per cent foreign-owned until a few years ago. We believed that Canada, like every other country, should have a Canadian-owned energy sector. We do not see much point in doing what the former Liberal Government did and what the present Conservative Government is doing, that is, giving so-called Canadian investors 100 per cent tax concessions and write-offs, as was done with Dome Petroleum. If the Canadianization in private hands is a success, investors who have invested very little will receive the benefits; if it is a failure, Canadians will suffer the loss. What we believed in and what we supported was Canadianization of the energy industry, in the main publicly-owned. We still believe that that is the route we should go in Canada.

Mr. McCrossan: Mr. Speaker, in his speech I believe the Hon. Member cited a potential takeover by Olympia & York of an entity in the oil and gas field. If he believes, as he just said, that it is in our interests to have more Canadianization in the oil and gas field, is he only supporting Canadianization when the Government owns it? Does he oppose all Canadianization when it is done in the private sector?

Mr. Orlikow: Obviously the Hon. Member was not listening to what I said during the course of my speech. I asked the Hon. Member to look at the business section of last Friday's edition of the New York Times where he will see a list of four or five of the largest corporations in the United States that were involved a few years ago in takeovers of large companies involved in fields different from their own fields of business. Now, a few years later, they are discovering that those were not good investments because they did not really know those businesses. They are divesting themselves of the companies which they purchased at a very high price, very often taking a loss.

I have my doubts that Bell Enterprises knows very much about the shipment of gas and oil through pipelines. Olympia & York has been very successful as a real estate developer, but I have had no assurance that it knows very much about the fields into which it is going.

Also I remind the Hon. Member that the Union Corporation, that is the old Union Gas, just before its takeover by another company, recently bought Burns Foods. I suggest that the officers of the Union Corporation did not know very much about the food industry and that that was probably not a good investment. When I say that, let me indicate that that view is shared by many people who are much more involved and much more knowledgeable about the business community than I am.

Mr. Winegard: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) has used one of the most ringing phrases when he said that all countries have their own oil companies. We know that is not true. The United States of America does not have a national oil company, and soon Great Britain will not. There are a few, but it is just one of those generalizations which rolls off the tongue so easily. We should really take some exception to it.

Mr. Orlikow: Let me point out to the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard) that British Petroleum has been 50 per cent state-owned. It was made a state-owned and a state-controlled corporation, not by those terrible socialists in the Labour Party, but shortly after World War I by that great radical and great revolutionary, Sir Winston Churchill. The Hon. Member should read the facts before he asks questions.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I would like to join in the comments and to respond to some of the remarks of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) with reference to the inability of multi-national corporations to embrace more than one responsibility at a time. He said that if a company is in one kind of business, it cannot undertake successfully another kind of business. The facts just do not bear that out. He referred to Bell Enterprises. I ask him to look at the way the market is judging Bell Enterprises. There is magnificent investor confidence in that firm and the multiplicity of its successful operations. If we look at Canadian Pacific Enterprises, we find that the same is true.

He referred to the business section of the New York Times. Let him look at the business section in The Globe and Mail and the report on Canadian business in the Financial Post, and he will find a rebuttal of the point he was making.

A very impressive example has to be Imasco. What does running a successful tobacco company teach one about running restaurants and fast food enterprises? One of the dimensions of its empire which made money for it a few years ago—

Mr. de Jong: Was the federal Government.

Mr. Stackhouse: No, no. Perhaps the Hon. Member—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It being six o'clock, it is my duty to inform the House that pursuant to Standing Order 62(11) proceedings on the motion have expired.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Apparently the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is a little bit late. I hope that all Members will stay so that we have enough people to go to the Senate for Royal Assent. I expect him to come along at any time. I hope we will all "hang in" to help. I am sorry the Senate is late again.

Mr. Speaker: We do not, of course, make reference to the other place. As the Hon. Member knows, we have no knowledge in advance of what is coming. I appreciate that the Hon. Member is asking Members to stay in case something happens. However, we do not need a quorum to do that.

• (1800)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—IMPACT OF CHANGES. (B) REQUEST FOR A FREEZE OF IMPLEMENTATION OF CHANGES

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, on April I asked a question and made a request of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) with regard to changes that had been announced in the November 8 economic statement on unemployment insurance. On that occasion in April, I had hoped that the Minister of Finance would put a freeze on all changes that he had considered implementing under the Unemployment Insurance Act. How long is it going to take?

This is the second time I have been interrupted.

Mr. Speaker: If the Hon. Member would like to add a few words, I am prepared to allow it.

Mr. Dingwall: I had hoped that the Minister of Finance would be kind enough to agree with my request by terminating any changes whatsoever to the Unemployment Insurance Act. Unfortunately, that was not the case. The Minister, in co-operation with his sister in crime, carried on with implementing those recommendations as stated on November 8, 1984. They became effective.

These changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act are certainly not in the best interests of Canadians. Nor are they in the best interests of those Canadians who happen to be unemployed. I wish to make a point, particularly at this time, that it ought to be recognized by you, Sir, and particularly by government Members that when we talk of changes to unemployment insurance, we ought to remember the clientele which we are attempting to serve on behalf of all Canadians.

A change for an unemployed person with regard to his or her income is much more devastating than any changes which would be effected upon you, I or other individuals in society. To suggest to an unemployed person that he or she will have their income reduced over a period of time or that the requirements for qualifying for unemployment insurance will be changed, and changed unilaterally by this Government, is devastating both in terms of its spirit and in terms of its actual substance.

I want to say to the government Members who happen to be present today, although they are limited in number, that it is high time the Hon. Member for Halifax (Mr. McInnes) and the House Leader of the Conservative Party showed some compassion and sensitivity to those individuals who are unemployed in this country as opposed to implementing and suggesting unilateral changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The Minister of Finance promised full consultation with all Canadians. Thus far we have not seen full consultation. What we have seen is a Government which is bent on reducing the deficit on the backs of the poor and the unemployed in this country.

• (1805)

I find it quite disturbing when changes to severance pay and vacation pay have been brought in without any meaningful consultation. I hope in the next number of days, prior to the budget statement, that government Members will for once represent their constituents and say to the Minister of Finance that there ought not to be any changes in the Unemployment Insurance Act until such time as full and complete consultations are held, not only with business, but with labour unions and all other Canadians, and that the House of Commons should give grave consideration to it. I hope that Conservative Members of Parliament will take that responsibility very seriously.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

● (1815)

And being returned:

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate Chamber, the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

Bill C-43, an Act to dissolve the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and to amend the Surplus Crown Assets Act and other Acts in consequence thereof—Chapter No. 13.

Bill C-40, an Act to confirm certain acts or things done on behalf of the Deputy Minister of National Revenue for Customs and Excise and to amend the Customs Act and the Special Import Measures Act—Chapter No. 14.

Bill C-50, an Act to provide for the continuation of payments under certain guaranteed income averaging certificates issued by the Pioneer Trust Company—Chapter No. 15.

Bill C-30, an Act to amend the Bretton Woods Agreements Act and to repeal the International Development Association Act and amend certain other Acts in consequence thereof—Chapter No. 16.

Bill C-33, an Act respecting the import and export of an interprovincial trade in meat products, the registration of establishments, the inspection of animals and meat products in registered establishments and the standards for those establishments and for animals slaughtered and meat products prepared in those establishments—Chapter No. 17.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

The House resumed consideration of the motion to adjourn under S.O. 45.

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to reply to the Hon. Member who raised the question concerning the implementation of measures announced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on November 8, 1984.

I wonder, Mr. Speaker . . . In fact, this is the fifth time we are answering this question. Concerning the delay in the implementation of that measure, I cannot answer as to what proposals the Minister of Finance will outline in the Budget next week, but the intent was firm when the decision was made on November 8, 1984. I agree with the Hon. Member that this is affecting the clientele which is the most hard-pressed. But among that most hard-pressed clientele, a choice has to be made.

Further to numerous representations received from Hon. Members opposite and from various labour groups, we agreed, Mr. Speaker, to delay somewhat the implementation of that measure, and indeed, instead of it becoming effective as of November 8, 1984 as it would have normally, anyone in receipt of severance pay was given until March 31st as a transitional period. This was a five-month extension, and all persons reaching retirement still have until December 31st.

I would like to emphasize to the Hon. Member who asked the question that those persons will be entitled to a full year of unemployment benefits if they start withdrawing benefits before December 31st or if they started before March 31st. So there were adaptation measures, Mr. Speaker, and our goal, because the unemployment insurance fund shows a multimillion, indeed a multibillion dollar deficit, is to save that fund and make sure it will not fall victim to hasty decisions, because if year after year we have the fund sinking deeper and deeper into deficit, we know full well what the tendency will be. Mr. Speaker, these are preventives measures.

[English]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION—FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS—FORTHCOMING WHITE PAPER. (B) NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY PROPOSALS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, on March 26 I asked the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) some questions which seemed to me to be obvious from problems raised but not answered in the Green Paper on the regulation of Canadian financial institutions which she tabled recently. Since then I have had the opportunity not only to look carefully at the Green Paper, but I have had the opportunity over the last week and a half or so of attending meetings of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs in its examination of the reasons why the Canadian Commercial Bank collapsed, a bankruptcy which was avoided by the Canadian and Alberta Governments, along with a number of the major banks, putting in $255 million to save the bank.

Let me just point out some of the things I and others should have learned from those committee hearings. Virtually all of the witnesses who appeared before us, the officials and auditors of the Canadian Commercial Bank, the Inspector General of Banks, and the Governor of the Bank of Canada, assured us that the Bank had been operated properly and efficiently. The Governor of the Bank of Canada said just last week that he still had confidence in the officers of the Canadian Commercial Bank despite the fact that he had to participate in the bail-out of the Bank.

• (1820)

I would like to put some of the facts that we learned on the record. The management of the Canadian Commercial Bank can only be characterized as incompetent. Two of Canada's largest auditing firms audited that Bank in December of 1984 and certified it to be a viable operation only two or three months before the Bank virtually went bankrupt. The Inspector General of Banks should have known of the difficulties of the Canadian Commercial Bank because he knew that over the years the Bank officers had been involved very closely, almost incestuously, with Leonard Rosenberg.

The officers of that Bank were also the officers of a trust company into which an Indian Band in Alberta had invested $1 million believing the company dealt with mortgages and real estate. That $1 million has virtually disappeared as a result of the very questionable actions of the Bank officers who were also officers of the trust company. The auditors of that trust company, Coopers & Lybrand, apparently did not take the time or trouble to discover and report that things were going wrong.

A leading investment firm, Dominion Securities Pitfield, advertise on television almost every day telling people that they would be wise to go to that company for advice on how to invest their money. That company gave the Canadian Commercial Bank its blessing, telling its potential customers that the Canadian Commercial Bank was a good company to invest in.

There is a great deal wrong with the way in which our financial institutions operate. If our monitoring system could not see in advance how badly the Canadian Commercial Bank was being operated, how will we ever monitor financial institutions if we follow the advice of the Minister of State for Finance to open up the field to trust companies, insurance companies, and other large corporations?

On March 26 I asked if there would be draft legislation to accompany the White Paper. The answer was clearly that there would not be, that there would be committee hearings this summer but no legislation. I asked if the Minister would be promoting uniformity in legislation between the federal and provincial Governments. Mr. Speaker, we have seen a veritable host of trust companies, mostly chartered by the provinces, going bankrupt. Their depositors have been saved by federal government money pumped in through the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Government is apparently going to try to get uniformity, but the Green Paper is not very specific as to how this is to be done.

I will give one more illustration of something which should be done which would protect the depositors better than any other action the Government could take. I ask if the Government will ensure that no one person can gain control of a trust company, usually with borrowed money, and then subvert this trust by using depositors' money to finance what were really personal transactions.

• (1825)

That is the method by which Leonard Rosenberg created his paper empire at Seaway and Crown Trusts. Those companies inevitably had to fail, and they took down with them hundreds of millions of dollars in the life savings of ordinary Canadians.

The Green Paper says that it can control this by banning "self-dealings". Can the minister give her assurance that the provinces will ban self-dealing? Further, if self-dealing is banned, will it really stop the Leonard Rosenbergs of this world since they seem to be so readily able to manipulate their supposedly professional staffs and our regulators, who should be protecting us, by engaging in such obvious ploys as that of Mr. Rosenberg appointing his wife to stand in as chief executive officer of Seaway Trust?

Finally, if these suggested methods are found wanting, is the Government prepared to recommend a more fundamental solution, which is the extention of the 10 per cent shareholders' limit to any individual shareholder, as we insist for our banks?

It seems obvious to me that if we wish a professional staff to follow trust relationships, it is far more realistic to keep share interests and professional decisions apart. Surely that is the lesson of Seaway, Greymac and Crown, and I am waiting to see if the Government has learned that lesson.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the review of the regulations governing financial institutions is naturally one of this Government's priorities, as mentioned in last November's economic statement. That is why the Government has tabled an important discussion paper suggesting certain initiatives, and even though I can understand his position, I am somewhat disappointed that my colleague finds this paper not specific and detailed enough, and so on. However, it is a consultation paper. If such a document has to be perfect and contain all the answers, right from the start, it is no longer a consultation paper, but a piece of legislation.

Indeed, the very relevant comments made by the Hon. Member, and I am not saying that they are accurate, but simply that they are relevant, should be made in the context of the consultation process related to this document.

Mr. Speaker, the question at issue is the solvency of financial institutions. Apart from this, we have the recommendations of the Wyman report on the reform of the deposit insurance program, which will also be an integral part of this review, but there is much to be done in this sector, as was seen recently with the case of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the bankruptcies of some loan and deposit institutions.

Our purpose is to promote an economic renewal. Equity investment has to increase because, as we know, the major role of banks is to turn our savings into investments. Indeed, we are trying to encourage through incentives individual depositors to help turn those savings into investments. The amount of savings is ever increasing in Canadian banks. It is therefore important to develop a more modern, more rigorous and more complete framework to provide true protection for depositors. We are truly looking for honest consultation and I urge my Hon. friend to participate in a positive manner in this consultation. Draft legislation will come out of these consultations, progress will be made, and I am certain that we shall be able to adopt without undue delay effective legislation in this area.

We shall also be consulting the provincial governments. Hon. Members are aware that the federal Government must share with the provinces the responsibility of protecting consumers in their dealings with financial institutions. We shall continue to work in this sector, and our Government has already proved that it can get along with the provinces to ensure an effective and complete protection through regulations which must also be both effective and complete.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we must act without delay. That is why consultations are under way and why I urge my Hon. friend to participate actively in this process.

[English]

EXTERNAL AID—SUDAN—FOOD CRISIS—CANADIAN ASSISTANCE

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, on March 8, as reported at page 2817 of Hansard, I asked the following question of the Minister for External Relations (Mrs. Vézina):

Will the Minister advise the House what response the Government will make to the food crisis in the Sudan, exacerbated as it has been by so many Ethiopian refugees? In particular, will the Minister tell us if the Government intends to appoint any full-time officials to protect such a Sudan relief program from the kind of abuse suffered in Ethiopia?

● (1830)

My concern in raising that question was to direct attention to the emergency in the Sudan created to a large degree by the ingress of now 850,000 Ethiopian refugees, many of them driven there by the severe conditions imposed, not simply by the natural developments such as drought and erosion of arable soil, but by the policies of the Ethiopian Government in maintaining civil war in such a way that innocent people in the northern part of the country have been cut off from relief opportunities. The same Government refused to accept western proposals that there be a temporary truce to permit the delivery of food supplies that would bring life and health to so many.

It was for those reasons that I focused attention on our need to provide an adequate monitoring service to make sure that Canadian relief, so generously provided both by Governments and individual Canadians, would be delivered to the people who need it most.

In the Minister's answer, there was a reference to the MacDonald report, expected at the time of the answer since March 8, submitted to the standing committee and, through it, to Parliament. I am very glad the emphasis in the MacDonald report was a recognition of the need for increased monitoring services if we are to have a program that will be fully effective and as well a program that will enjoy full credibility among members of the Canadian public.

It is shocking, is it not, to recognize that since I asked this question, the Ethiopian Government's army has wiped out an entire relief centre, sending over 50,000 refugees out on their own, and then within less than a week, grabbing the attention of the West, the Ethiopian Government said that it was all a mistake and really, as a Government, it did not intend that that should be done.

When that kind of possibility is before us, we need to be adequately represented in the field so that we can assure ourselves and our people that our objectives are being achieved. Since this question was raised we have had a complete overturn of the Sudanese Government. We may hope it will be a turn for the better. Certainly we will not be surprised if there is an extended period of instability in the Sudan before anything like a social order is enjoyed. Equally then, we need monitoring of whatever relief programs we have in place there.

I would like to submit that if Canada is to have a long-term commitment for development as well as relief in Ethiopia and in the Sudan, the need for adequate surveillance by Canadian authorities is all the more evident. No one can say that we will undertake such a commitment, but neither can we deny its possibility. The need is great. The desire on the part of many members of the public is greater still. It may well be that this Government may make a quite proper and understandable decision to stay in Ethiopia and in the Sudan over the long run. If we are to do that and to enter into a full scale development program there, we will have to ensure greater surveillance than we have in the past.

I recognize some of the difficulties. I certainly appreciate the reluctance of some officials to undertake what they see as high cost appoitments, but we can be sure that there are much lower cost alternatives, partly through the services of NGO's which are open to contract arrangements. I am glad that since this discussion began in mid-winter there is a greater enthusiasm on the part of elements of our government Departments to undertake such contractual arrangements, but we can make much more use as well of those individual Canadians, young, middle-aged, and old, who are available for this kind of humanitarian service at low cost, sometimes at no cost.

● (1835)

I hope the Government recognizes fully the need for adequate monitoring, which the MacDonald report emphasized, and will make every effort to use whatever services and talents Canadians can put at its disposal in ensuring that our humanitarian and social objectives are effective in the field.

Mr. Stewart McInnes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I wish to acknowledge the genuine interest of the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) and his contribution on behalf of the famine victims about whom he so eloquently and relevantly spoke.

I believe that Canadians and the Government are acutely aware of the suffering throughout Africa. A great deal of debate has taken place in the House on that suffering, and I think there has been ample demonstration by the Canadian Government in response to that need. We recognize that some five million Sudanese have been seriously affected, in addition to almost one million Ethiopians. Canada responded immediately by providing emergency food, particularly wheat. However, we are also concerned about the long-term economic benefits. We are endeavouring to support policies which will aid transport, agriculture and forestry.

Let me emphasize that since 1980, Canada has provided the Sudanese people with some 80,000 tons of wheat and wheat flour with a total value in excess of $31 million. So far during 1985, Canadian food aid shipment through Port Sudan include 11,000 tons of wheat from CIDA for the Sudanese people and an additional 14,000 tons from CIDA and Canadian non-governmental organizations for distribution to Ethiopians. An allocation of $12 million has recently been approved for the supply of food aid to Sudan for the fiscal year 1985-86. We consider this to be substantial support.

The African Emergency Aid, a consortium of nine Canadian non-governmental organizations, is providing emergency relief assistance to Sudan at the present time, consisting of over 6,000 tons of food supplies valued at $7 million. A great deal of this aid is expected to arrive in Port Sudan on June 1. Officials will be attending that port on the date of arrival to ensure that the food shipments reach their final destination.

Canada was a full participant in the January World Food Program which estimated that Sudan this year faces a cereals deficit of approximately 1.5 million tons. Through this mission Canada has collaborated with the Government of Sudan in preparing a list of quick recovery projects which can be implemented immediately and without great cost. This will enable Sudan to take advantage of any break in the drought this year.

● (1840)

We have investigated and the Canadian Government is satisfied that the distribution of food is comparatively efficient. There are a number of international organizations which are in place. They are continuing to monitor the placement of the food and the distribution system. We also recognize that the world food program is co-ordinating and monitoring all food aid and food aid shipments through a 29-person logistics team which is now established in the Sudan.

The CIDA program in the Sudan is monitored from the Canadian Embassy in Cairo which is accredited to Sudan to oversee Canadian activities. To date we have had no adverse reports that the system of distribution is imperilled or is prejudicial to the persons who are the intended recipients.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but unfortunately his time is up.

The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 6.41 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, May 17, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—MINISTER OF SUPPLY AND SERVICES

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Andre), responsible for handing out untendered government advertising contracts, short-changed the people of his riding of Calgary Centre during the last election campaign. The Hon. Member introduced to his constituents what he called the Liberal shrinking dollar, which he said was worth 75 cents U.S. After having promised these to his constituents, the Hon. Member should do the honourable thing.

Now that the dollar has decreased by 2.5 cents since the election of his Government, I figure he owes his constituents $1,367.40, since there were 54,696 voters in his riding and each one of them was short-changed 2.5 cents. I am sure that the people of Calgary Centre are anxiously awaiting their cheques. The people of that riding are entitled to be compensated for another Conservative dwindled dollar, now only worth 72.5 cents. On behalf of the people of that riding I express my gratitude to the Hon. Member for making a suitable contribution worth $1,367.40 to the charity of his choice.

* * *

COMBINES

AMENDMENTS TO LEGISLATION—COMPOSITION OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) recently announced a 10-person special advisory committee to examine amendments to the Combines Investigations Act. We know our present anti-combines law is unworkable, and in view of court decisions there is virtually no likelihood of convictions for conspiracy to restrict competition. In view of this disgusting record I find it unbelievable that the Minister would appoint a special advisory committee, to examine proposed amendments to the law, consisting of six private lawyers, three business executives, and one business journalist. I have very little hope for the value of the amended Act after it passes through this laundry.

I wonder about the larger public interest, and whether the Minister could not have found some dispassionate academics with an interest in the area. Also, could there not have been representatives from the public interest, consumer, credit union, co-operative, and labour sectors, all of whom have an interest in this legislation? Surely the Minister realizes that better anti-combines legislation for Canada will not be arrived at by allowing the pro business committee simply to vet and gut any proposals which could check the alarming corporate concentration and takeover mania which is the hallmark of our economy.

* * *

SPACE WEAPONRY

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—CALL FOR PARTICIPATION IN RESEARCH

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, ever since the United States announced the proposed Strategic Defence Initiative, many opponents have named it the star wars program. This I find most misleading. The basic premise of SDI is to eliminate the threat posed by strategic nuclear missiles, and search for ways to reduce the danger of nuclear war. SDI would eliminate the necessity of using nuclear warheads as a deterrent. Furthermore, once SDI research is employed the value of offensive nuclear weapons would be reduced, thereby creating both military and economic incentives which would encourage negotiations for nuclear weapons reduction. In addition, an estimated $25 billion would be injected into research for the SDI program. This will undoubtedly develop technology for peaceful application in Canada, Europe, and the United States.

We should no longer be lukewarm about our involvement in the development of SDI. The only logical thing to do is to participate and promote SDI's less menacing concept of preventing nuclear war in the years to come.

* * *

SPORTS

TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN ATHLETES

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, last evening at Ottawa's Congress Centre I witnessed, along with some of my colleagues from all Parties in this House and some of our hard-working pages, a wonderful tribute to our 1984-85

Olympic and world champions. What an evening of pride and accomplishment. It was a night of nostalgia as we saw replays of Gaetan Boucher in Sarajevo, and Alex Baumann in Los Angeles. Jack Donohue, our men's basketball coach, warmed up the audience with his usual style of humour and grace, followed by our former Governor General, Roland Michener, who underlined the importance of fitness and good health which comes with sport participation.

[Translation]

The remarkable individual and collective success achieved by young Canadians during the 1984 Olympics and this year's world championships attest to our vigour and determination as a nation.

I congratulate all those who received prizes awarded by the media—retired athletes, coaches, our champions, and Shawn O'Sullivan who proved to be a winner when he accepted a prize for great distinction.

[English]

I also salute Canada's Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) and his staff for a world class performance in saying "Thank you"

* * *

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured today to present the Patronage Award of the Week, the PAW award. A lot of people have worked very hard in the past with the hope of some day obtaining their reward at the trough. To those who have not yet been nominated, I say keep on oinking.

The candidates for this week's PAW award are Mr. Bud Sherman for his defence of the bilingualism issues; Mr. Jack McNie, former Ontario Tory Minister, now chairman of the R.T. Kelly advertising agency in Hamilton, for the contract on previously advertised material; Camp Associates Advertising Ltd., who need no further introduction, for their $30 million advertising contract. May I have the envelope please? And the winner is Mr. Bud Sherman.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Sherman therefore is the winner of the PAW award of the week. Mr. Sherman receives a sweater of the French Canadian Association of Ontario which he hopefully will wear in the course of his duties with the CRTC as a reminder that we are a bilingual country.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

QUEBEC STEEL INDUSTRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, Canada's largest steel industry, Stelco, with head office in Toronto, is apparently planning to close three of its Quebec plants with the result that some 550 employees might be permanently laid off.

Worldwide overproduction threatens the steel industry throughout Canada, Mr. Speaker, and that applies to Sidbec as well.

Therefore Stelco is making radical changes which, unfortunately, will entail closure of some of its plants, including three in Quebec. This is a regrettable and unfortunate situation, and we are convinced that other alternatives must surely exist.

Will the Government of Canada let Quebec's steel industry worsen without reacting, without offering assistance? It did help Domtar, so why not do the same thing in this case? The Government is open, too much so to foreign investors, but it is not doing anything to prevent Canadian companies from giving up, closing shop and laying off hundreds of workers. Is that the Government's new economic development policy for the country?

Mr. Speaker, I dare hope that officials of the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion have been in touch with Stelco management in their quest for a solution which would be more helpful to Stelco workers and the Quebec economy.

* * *

• (1110)

[English]

THE FORMER ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, frankly we are a little surprised at the presentation of another PAW award this morning, right after our first SOW award on Monday pointed out that the pot is indeed calling the kettle black. I draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the official Tory rat catcher on my desk. It is a blue rat trap, with a red rat.

This leaves us no alternative but to ask once again for the envelope, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the survivor of the week . . . which in French could be: la truie.

[English]

This week it is—

[Translation]

—the former Member of Parliament and Minister of the liberal Cabinet—

[English]

—still the President of the World Food Council, Eugene Whelan.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NIAGARA RIVER POLLUTION—CANADA-UNITED STATES AGREEMENT

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of great importance to the people of Niagara Falls and all of the people of Canada. That is the matter of the contamination of the Niagara River.

All evidence indicates that the level of PCBs and other toxins is increasing. Up until now our American friends have refused to move on this issue. That is why I congratulate the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) on her recent trip to Washington. Her obtaining of an agreement to setting an agenda for clean-up of the Niagara River is a tremendous step forward.

As for the Official Opposition, its sudden interest in this area is rather surprising, but it is not kidding anyone. The people of my area know that for 15 years the Liberal Party of Canada did nothing to clean up the Niagara River. That is why the actions of our Minister of the Environment are applauded, not only by the people of Niagara but by all Canadians.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

PLIGHT OF CANADIAN SENTENCED IN NEW JERSEY

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to the attention of the House once again the case of Bruce Curtis, a 20 year old Nova Scotian now in the second year of a 20-year prison sentence in New Jersey in the United States.

As many of us here are aware, Mr. Curtis is a graduate of a private school in Nova Scotia. In July of 1982 he paid a visit to a school friend's home in Loch Arbour, New Jersey. That friend, Scott Franz, lived with his step-parents, Alfred and Rosemary Podgis. On the evening of July 4, following a week or more of domestic violence, during which Mr. Podgis had repeatedly threatened both Scott and his wife, Curtis and his friend slept with loaded rifles by their sides to protect themselves. The next morning Scott shot and killed his stepfather. In the confusion that followed, Bruce Curtis claimed that he fled in panic. He said that in doing so he stumbled into Mrs. Podgis and that the gun he was carrying discharged accidentally, killing her instantly.

At the trial of the two young men in March of 1983 Scott Franz secured a reduction of his 30-year sentence for murder to 20 years by plea bargaining with the prosecutor, who allowed Scott to name Bruce Curtis as the master planner behind both deaths. Since perjury and plea bargaining were employed in the original trial, both the conviction and the unduly harsh sentence that followed have left a wrong that needs to be righted. I call upon the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), the Solicitor General (Mr. MacKay), and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to employ every means at their disposal to see that justice is done in the case of Mr. Bruce Curtis and his family.

* * *

VE DAY

COMMEMORATIVE VISIT TO EUROPE

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, a number of days ago the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), and other leaders in the House commemorated VE Day. Yesterday I returned to Canada following my participation with a parliamentary delegation to the Netherlands and Italy marking the end of World War II. This delegation consisted of outstanding generals, an air marshall, navy commanders, colonels, privates, and ordinary citizens. It would take an hour for me to explain my feelings about this trip. It was an experience I shall never forget.

The Dutch people of Holland demonstrated their love and appreciation of Canadians, the people who liberated their country. The delegation was treated royally by Princess Beatrix, the ambassadors, mayors, and hundreds of thousands of ordinary citizens.

• (1115)

Our delegation, under the leadership of one of our Canadian heroes, the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Hees), visited cemeteries where we paid fitting tribute to our fallen comrades. We sought out the graves of our lost friends. We offered our prayers of thanksgiving; we shed tears in their memory.

On May 4 the Dutch people have a day of official mourning when they honour their war dead and the peace of the last 40 years. After the silent march and dedication, a young girl walked up to me, extended her hand and said "Thank you". "For what", I asked, perplexed. "For our liberation" she said, and walked away. Even the young people of Holland know what freedom truly is. I am proud to be a veteran.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired.

Oral Questions

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[Translation]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

CONTAMINATION BY PCBs—MEASURES GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO TAKE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment.

This morning we heard that according to a report by the Quebec Department of the Environment, contamination by PCBs affects nearly all Quebecers. This includes infants who are breast-fed, people who eat fish, factory workers and so on down the list. All Quebec families are affected by this situation. My question is therefore as follows: Could the Minister inform the House and the men and women of Quebec about what she intends to do to deal with a situation that is worrisome, to say the least?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition for his question. It is a situation that concerns us all and it is clear that we must take immediate action. That is why I have called a federal-provincial conference on how to dispose of the PCB wastes lying around the country.

The Quebec study was based on U.S. studies and reveals something we have known for a number of years, namely that if we were to make an exhaustive study of all human beings alive today, we would find that their fatty tissues contain traces of PCBs. The situation is therefore very urgent.

CONTAMINATION BY PCBs

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Now the Minister is saying the situation is very urgent, but this conference is being called very late in the day.

The Minister does not seem to be concerned about the gravity of the situation, any more than she was yesterday when she said that PCBs did not cause cancer.

Does the Minister feel that the situation is peculiar to Quebec or is it more widespread? Does it concern all Canadian men and women and is this not a national issue rather than an exclusively provincial responsibility, as she said before?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think that the presence of PCBs in the fatty tissues of the human body concerns the entire planet and obviously concerns all Canadians, and that is why we have called an emergency federal-provincial conference for the end of May, something the Liberal Party never did during the fifteen years it was in power.

[English]

DEPARTMENT'S RESEARCH INITIATIVE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, it is the opinion of those of us on this side of the House that such a conference should have been called right after the first PCB spill.

The Minister's position is full of holes. The World Health Organization believes that PCBs should be treated as cancer causing agents, but the Minister does not. Her Department believes that the situation in Lake Ontario is serious, but she does not.

If the Minister really believes that we need more research into PCBs, why did she cut the research initiative in her own Department on these particular chemicals? How would she explain that to the people of Quebec who are now concerned about it? How would she explain it to the people who drink water from Lake Ontario, and particularly to people in northern Ontario who were faced with that recent PCB spill?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of the Opposition has been misinformed by his environment critic. If his facts had been correct, he would know that we did not cut off research on toxic substances such as PCBs. In fact, we have taken over the research on the state of scientific literature on the effects of PCBs which had been done at the National Research Council. The study is being put together in my department and will be published this summer.

[English]

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF FUNDING

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of the Environment. She never ceases to astonish us on this side of the House by the speed with which she reverses herself—from her lack of sensitivity yesterday in committee in answering questions on PCBs to her full endorsement this morning of the importance of PCBs to human health.

• (1120)

Let me ask the Minister once and for all whether she will admit her mistake in allowing such substantial cuts in Environment last November, and whether she will re-establish the funds she cut in Environment Canada for the protection of the long-term health of Canadians.

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, ever since I became a Member of this House, the hon. environment critic for the Liberal Party has been constantly referring to my lack of sensitivity. Is this supposed to make up for his lack of effectiveness during the nine months he was himself Minister of the Environment?

[English]

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, we can only judge people by their performance—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Caccia: —and it is pretty pathetic to hear that.

ROLE OF NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I must turn to the Minister of Science and Technology. Will he restore the cuts he allowed to the programs at the National Research Council that had to do with health, PCBs, and the long-term effects on human health, programs that were sponsored by his Department before the cuts were announced last November?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, any and all research relating to the health hazards and potential health hazards of toxic substances in which the NRC has been engaged will be continued.

The only cut to which the Hon. Member referred if he were to be fair, was the decision to eliminate the environmental secretariat, which was not doing research but merely compiling data. My hon. colleague has indicated that that type of work will continue in her Department.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER—UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Crosbie: You got creamed yesterday. Do you want to have it happen again?

Mr. Broadbent: The Government's position on the timing of the decision on star wars and the role of the proposed committee looking into a possible review of foreign policy remains unclear, some might say confused.

Yesterday the Minister said outside the House that the Government is prepared to wait three or four months before making a decision on star wars. If this is the case, why does the Government not request the proposed committee to make an interim report on the star wars portion of its mandate before the Government makes a decision itself on star wars?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the position of the Government of Canada is, as it has been, that we expect to take a decision on the limited question of the American initiation to participate in research into the Strategic Defence Initiative sometime in the next three to four months. We would greatly value the advice of individual Canadians and interested Canadians on the strategic Defence Initiative question prior to that time. That is one of the reasons why we want to have the joint committee sitting to allow the public to speak.

I have a question for the Leader of the New Democratic Party. Will the New Democratic Party stop boycotting the joint committee? Will Members of the NDP stop opposing the right of Canadians to be heard on the Strategic Defence Initiative?

Mr. Rodriguez: You are supposed to answer the question.

Mr. Crosbie: You answer that one.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to answer the Minister of Justice as well as the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Our position is clear. We will participate in a committee that really intends to listen to people in the context of having input in the decision. We will not support a sham process. That is our position.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Yes or no?

PROPOSED COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I have a question for the Minister who is responsible, not the one who is talking over there, but the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I think he is responsible. If he really does want the committee to perform a useful function, he knew when he was on this side of the House, and when he was Prime Minister and showed some respect, and I emphasize that, for committees, that if you want respect you have to listen to what a committee recommends. Therefore, if the committee has input on the star wars decision it must make a recommendation. Why won't the Government request the committee to make an interim report on the star wars position?

• (1125)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I respect committees of this House. That is why I want to establish one, so that the people of Canada can be heard on this question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I also respect the traditions of the House which indicate that when committees are established they function most effectively when they are not severely limited by detailed instructions from the Government.

If the NDP and the Liberal Party will stop opposing the idea of public hearings, the committee can establish its own agenda. I have made the Government's own view clear. The Government's own view is that we would not oppose—indeed we would encourage it—discussion of the Strategic Defence Initiative and of other questions on which the Government has to take decisions urgently. That is the committee's business, and I ask the opposition Parties to let the committee do its business—stop holding up Parliament, stop holding up the right of the people to be heard.

KROEGER INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows that he is doing what we sometimes affectionately describe in this House as indulging in stonewalling. He has not dealt with the issue. If the committee is to be relevant, if it is to be serious, and if we are to take the opinions of the people of Canada seriously in a decision making sense, it should make an interim report, and the Government should make a commitment that it will not make a decision on the matter until it sees that report.

Since we have now learned that Dr. Kroeger, who is heading a committee to investigate the star wars project from the Canadian point of view, is reporting directly to the Prime Minister, and since we have had a different view of the committee's role, even from the Minister himself as expressed by the Defence Minister, does the Secretary of State for External Affairs speak for the Government on this matter, or will whatever he decides ultimately be ratified, possibly revised, changed, and reversed by the Prime Minister?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is asking two questions today. Let me answer the first one in my capacity as Acting Prime Minister and Acting Minister of National Defence.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): In those capacities we have absolute confidence in the judgment of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and we can offer that categoric assurance to the Leader of the New Democratic Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Stonewalling is the practice of people who stop progress.

Some Hon. Members: That's right.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): We want to establish a committee that will let the public be heard. The Liberal Party is stopping that committee. The New Democratic Party is stopping that committee. They are stonewalling. We are saying that we want to follow the unusual practice of establishing a joint committee which will let the public be heard, and we want to follow the normal practice of letting that committee establish its own agenda.

I have indicated our views on the kind of agenda that we would welcome. We would welcome discussion on SDI, we would welcome discussion on trade and on other questions. Most of all we would welcome a committee, and we would ask why the opposition Parties continue to refuse to let the people of Canada be heard.

TIMING OF GOVERNMENT DECISION

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It is difficult enough trying to figure out what his position is when he holds one position; today he is holding two positions and I suppose the pregnant question is this: Has the Secretary of State for External Affairs consulted the Acting Prime Minister? He has not yet clearly stated his position and the position of the Government. He has said that the Government will make a decision sometime in the next three or four months. Will he tell us what will be the date of the Government's decision, so that this supposed committee will be able to plan its work? Will he assure us that the Government will await the conclusion of full public hearings on star wars before coming to a decision?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is impossible to give a precise date. What I have given is the period of time within which the Government expects to be called upon to make a decision, in the Canadian interest and on the Canadian timetable, on the American invitation to participate in research in the Strategic Defence Initiative. We have already told the Americans that we will not accept their artificial deadline, and I think we would be foolish to impose other artificial deadlines on a process which must come to a decision.

Surely the Hon. Member must know that if Parliaments or Governments are interested in delaying decisions, there are innumerable ways to do that. The Party of which he is a member delayed for years a decision on the North Warning System. Not only did they not bring it to Parliament, they did not bring it to decision. The New Democratic Party has been debating for eight years its position on NATO. They still have not made up their minds.

● (1130)

Mr. Broadbent: Yes, we have.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The Hon. Member for Oshawa has made up his mind. The Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam has not made up her mind. The process can go on, and on, and on, without decision. Governments have a duty to decide. They also have the duty to allow the people of Canada to be heard. That has not been allowed in the past.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE PROPOSAL

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, when it comes to figuring out ways to postpone decisions, the Government is developing a certain expertise. In the area of defence the most important question facing Canadians today is star wars.

There is another question which the Minister has addressed in his paper. That is the question of free trade, which will affect every aspect of Canadian life. Considering that free trade with the United States will mean major changes in our economic, social, cultural and political life, which merit extensive public hearings, will the Minister postpone any decision on that subject until the views of Canadians are fully canvassed?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, once again we would welcome Canadians taking advantage of the special committee process to express their views on trade questions, if the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party would allow the committee to sit, and allow the people to be heard.

Let me take the implications of the Hon. Member's question. This committee that we want to establish and which the opposition Parties refuse to let us establish, reports at the end of May next year. That is a year hence. The Liberal Party is now proposing that we delay any decision on trade matters for at least a year, in other words that we wait a year while thousands and thousands of Canadian jobs are threatened by protectionism in the United States. We are not going to put at risk thousands and thousands of Canadian jobs as the Liberal Party suggests.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

FINANCE

FORTHCOMING BUDGET—PREPARATION OF BRIEFING MATERIAL BY PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister as well. It has to do with a memorandum from Jerry Lampert, the national director of the Progressive Conservative Party, to the various Progressive Conservative constituency presidents, suggesting that party headquarters will be preparing the following material to be available, prepared radio material, press releases, speech notes, background packages, to riding associations on budget night. In the spirit and the tradition of budget secrecy, will the Acting Prime Minister explain how it will be possible to get information to party headquarters and those kinds of releases unless the secrecy provision is broken?

Mr. Crosbie: You have to be quick.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I remember some of the issues in Kamloops-Shuswap in the last election campaign and I won't ask how the Hon. Member happened to get on the Progressive Conservative mailing list. Let me simply assure him that the principles of budget secrecy will be fully respected in the presentation of the Budget by the Minister of Finance on May 23.

METHOD OF PREPARING MATERIAL

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister. The Minister of Finance is going to give his speech late Thursday afternoon, up until six o'clock. How will it be possible to have prepared radio material available, a background package of speech notes, and budget information for Members of Parliament, constituency presidents and others, all within a matter of hours? How could this be possible unless there has been a leak of party officials that in fact budget material would be moving out of the Department of Finance and into party headquarters?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it may be that the New Democratic Party communicates by semaphore, if it communicates at all. I simply repeat my assurance to the Hon. Member that the principles of budget secrecy will be respected absolutely by the Minister of Finance and this Government when the Budget is brought down on May 23.

* * *

WAR CRIMINALS

SUBJECTS REFERRED TO ROYAL COMMISSION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. I would like to ask him about his Government's war criminal policy. When the Deschênes royal commission was established the Minister told this House that the Government would continue to be active in dealing with war criminals while the commission was working. I know that the Minister and the Government like to criticize the former Government on war criminals, but we have an example here of this Government breaking its commitments on the subject of remaining active on war criminals.

Is the Minister satisfied with the Secretary of State for External Affairs deciding that the question of extradition to Israel should be referred to that royal commission, instead of taking up Israel's interest and acting on it now? Is he satisfied with a decision announced by the Minister of Employment and Immigration that the Kisielaitis case would be referred to that royal commission for study, instead of being referred to the police for action?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I frankly do not know how the hon. gentleman has the gall and the audacity to ask any questions on this subject. After 35 years of Liberal indifference, obfuscation, twisted immigration policy and all the rest, we have taken firm and decisive action on this matter. We have a commission studying these issues that will report back by the end of the year. I am quite satisfied that they are doing well. They are making good progress. These issues should be studied by them. That's why they are set up. For the first time since 1945 this whole matter is having a proper ventilation and some decent action.

CITIZENSHIP STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO SOLICITOR GENERAL

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, it sounds to me as if the Minister is reneging on the commitment that he made in the House that the activities of the Government would continue while the commission is working. He is now saying that he is satisfied to let the commission do the work. Does he agree with the Solicitor General, who recently said that seeking to take away Canadian citizenship from war criminals here in Canada was too complicated and that it should not be done, without even waiting for the royal commission's views on that remedy?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, during the whole period from 1945 to 1957 and from 1965 to 1985, during all of which time the Hon. Member's Party was in office with the exception of eight brilliant months, rudely terminated for the wrong reasons at the wrong time, the Immigration Act was never used by that Liberal administration in this connection. Now the hon. gentleman complains that it is not being used at the moment. It is not being used at the moment because, as he knows, of the difficulties in providing evidence, and because under that administration the documents were destroyed. Records were destroyed, and you cannot show what statements were made when people were admitted here as immigrants back in the 1950s, 1960s, and so on. The Hon. Member's administration made it impossible for that to be an effective device. Surely he should wait until the end of the year to see what the royal commission recommends. Now that he is the Opposition, he is carrying on as though he were intensely interested in this matter.

* * *

SPACE WEAPONRY

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE IN RESEARCH

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question on the star wars initiative, the Strategic Defence Initiative and the evaluation now taking place in Canada. I want to address my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Acting Prime Minister and Acting Minister of National Defence. Can the Minister explain why it is that despite the scientific implications of any Canadian participation in the research program of the United States for the SDI, and the fact that research by Canada could suck dollars away in a major way from other Canadian research and development, and therefore have grave implications for Canadian scientific R & D, the Minister of State for Science and Technology in the Cabinet has had no involvement, has not been approached, and does not anticipate being involved in any significant way with the work presently under way to evaluate the invitation that Canada has received from the U.S. administration? Why has that Minister been excluded when he is the chief—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

• (1140)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I do not know if the Hon. Member has not been paying attention or if he has suddenly developed an interest in this question. The situation is that a senior Canadian public servant has been sent to the United States to seek detailed information on the implications, including the scientific implications, of the invitation for Canada to take part in research into the Strategic Defence Initiative. That official will report his findings back to the Cabinet of Canada, and the Cabinet of Canada includes, very prominently and actively, the Minister of State for Science and Technology. The Cabinet of Canada, including that Minister, will then take its decision.

EVALUATION OF SCIENTIFIC IMPLICATIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could let the Minister know that earlier this week the Minister of State for Science and Technology said the following at the Miscellaneous Estimates Committee:

> —nor do I anticipate being involved in any significant way with the work which is presently under way to evaluate the invitation that Canada has received from the U.S. administration.

Why is it that no effort is being made here in Canada to evaluate the scientific implications? Why are we simply sending someone to the United States to look at the Americans' evaluation of the scientific implications?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, what the Minister of State for Science and Technology, the Prime Minister, and I have been saying is that we have asked a senior public servant to seek particular information about the implications of an invitation. That is the job given to Dr. Kroeger and the team he assembled. There is no need at all for Ministers of the Crown to duplicate the work that we have assigned to him.

* * *

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

INVESTIGATION INTO LETTING OF CONTRACTS

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Public Works in his capacity as Minister responsible for the National Capital Commission. Can the Minister confirm press reports that the NCC general manager has taken a leave of absence from his job pending the conclusion of an investigation by the RCMP into possible criminal activities in the letting of contracts by the Commission? If so, can the Minister comment on the status of this matter?

[Translation]

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, all I can say for the time being is that on May 15, investigators from the RCMP reported to the National Capital Commission's headquarters. The same day, the General Manager of the NCC was suspended. The investigation is continuing, and the Hon. Member will understand that it would be inappropriate for me to make any further comments at this time.

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION—FUTURE FUNDING

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Has the Minister received a formal request for funding from the Province of Nova Scotia for the second phase of the business plan for the modernization of Sydney Steel Corporation? If so, what type of steel-making process is the province recommending?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as Hon. Members know, I did meet with the Premier of Nova Scotia last week. At that time the question of future funding for Sydney Steel Corporation was discussed. It is now under review, and I would have to say that, as far as any requests from the province are concerned, there are two and possibly three alternatives that are under review.

TIMING OF GOVERNMENT DECISION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I think the people of Sydney who depend on this steel plant for their livelihoods want to have more definitive information. When will the federal Government let the people of Sydney know when the second phase of the modernization will begin?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, very soon.

* * *

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

VARIABLE ENTRANCE REQUIREMENT PROVISION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Section 16(6) of the Unemployment Insurance Act provides for a variable entrance requirement which allows people to participate in the unemployment insurance fund in different ways depending upon the unemployment rates of their particular regions. That provision comes to an end on June 4 unless it is approved by an affirmative resolution of Parliament. Does the Minister intend to introduce such an affirmative resolution to the House of Commons?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I anticipate that an announcement regarding that matter will be made very shortly.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF DECISION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, the Minister's answer is totally unacceptable in view of the fact that June 4 is the deadline for the new affirmative resolution. If the affirmative resolution is not passed, the requirement of 14 weeks will be in effect across the country. Does the Minister think that that is fair and reasonable in light of the fact that there are many people in regions of the country with high unemployment rates who must know the answer to that question because they may very well be laid off in the next week or two?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Government is very well aware of the consequences of the difficulties that arise with the expiry of the VER on June 4. Once again I would say to the Hon. Member, and to those who are concerned, that the Government will be making its decision known in that regard within a very short time.

* * *

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

PREMIER'S TRIAL—INTERNAL INVESTIGATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General my question is directed to Premier Hatfield's friend, the Minister of Justice, and concerns the MacKay-Hatfield affair and the internal RCMP report which we have been promised and promised. On February 25 the Deputy Prime Minister said that the report would be ready as early as that week. On March 5 the Solicitor General said that the report was substantially complete. On March 14 he again said that the report was substantially complete. On March 26 he promised that the report would be ready within a week or two. On May 3 he said that the report was just about complete. On May 8 he promised that the report would be made public within a matter of days.

Why the stonewalling? When, specifically, will the report be made public? Does the Government intend to abort justice twice on the same day by releasing the report on budget day to avoid as much publicity as possible?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, that is an ingenious suggestion. I will pass it along to the Solicitor General.

The main difference between my hon. friend and myself is that I have at least one friend.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Name him, John.

Mr. Crosbie: My wife.

We have been awaiting with trepidation all week the charge of the rodent brigade. I will pass this request from the hon. gentleman to the Solicitor General who will, I am sure, next week around budget day, respond to him.

CONTENTS OF REPORT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, with friends like Premier Hatfield, who needs enemies?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: On May 3 the Solicitor General promised that the report would be comprehensive. Would the Minister of Justice therefore confirm that the report will reveal if there is any substance to the allegations made by Premier Hatfield that the RCMP was part of a conspiracy to overthrow his Government? Will the report detail full particulars of the secret meeting at the Chateau Laurier held on October 7 between the Solicitor General and Premier Hatfield? Will the report indicate precisely why the RCMP waited 30 days before they charged Premier Hatfield, or will the report be nothing but a fraud, a sham, and a deceit?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, for the first time, words fail me.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): But not for long.

Mr. Crosbie: I think it is for the first time. The Commissioner of the RCMP is preparing this report, and I think that if there is one thing of which this House can be assured, it is his complete integrity and impartiality.

The report will deal with the RCMP investigation, whether or not there was a leak that could be traced in any way to the RCMP, and the issues into which the Commissioner was asked to look. I am sure that if the Solicitor General feels that it is in the public interest to reveal the report, it will put the decisive lie to the various allegations and suggestions so improperly contained in the hon. gentleman's question.

* * *

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

CREDIT CARD INTEREST RATES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs I direct my question to the Minister of State for Finance. We are all happy with the decline in interest rates. Can the Minister tell the House why interest rates on charge cards such as Visa and Mastercard, which rose dramatically when interest rates were at 20 per cent or more, remain today at 18.6 per cent, as they have remained for the past year, at a time when the prime rate of 10.75 per cent is the lowest it has been since September, 1978? What action, if any, is the Government planning to take to ensure that these rates come down as have other interest rates?

● (1150)

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the best thing that the Government can do for consumers and for interest rates is to ensure that we get our own house in order so that rates can come down, and that is happening in the market-place now. Consumer rates, I am sure, will follow other rates down. The Hon. Member himself has indicated that they are lower than they were. I should think consumers would be happy.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, what I am asking the Government to do is to try a little persuasion or pressure. The Government supposedly believes that the market will do these things. Since the Minister knows that there are only two charge card companies in Canada, Visa and Master Card, and that they set the terms and conditions for all agencies which issue their cards, can the Minister tell the House when the Government intends to ensure that these terms and conditions permit genuine price competition and, therefore, lower interest rates, which we should have now on these cards?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Hon. Member will be happy to facilitate discussion and legislation around my financial institutions proposals, and that will help us get more competition in the market.

Mr. Orlikow: Don't hold your breath for that.

* * *

GOVERNMENT ADVERTISING

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for External Affairs. On April 23, 24, and 25, during the heat of the Lawson-Murray-Wilson family affair, the Prime Minister promised this House that the new—n-e-w—conflict of interest guidelines respecting the conduct and behaviour of Cabinet Ministers would be filed in the House within a few days. Nearly one month has passed since the Prime Minister made that commitment. Will the Acting Prime Minister provide Hon. Members of Parliament, and through Hon. Members of Parliament, all Canadians, with a copy of those new conflict of interest guidelines respecting the behaviour and conduct of members of Cabinet?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, the rodent has it wrong again. The Prime Minister indicated that the Deputy Prime Minister was seized of the report prepared by the Sharp-Starr Commission and was examining it. With respect to the question of guidelines respecting advertising which were promised within a few days, they were delivered within a few days. They are now a part of the Treasury Board policy manuals, a new chapter 485, I believe. They are available at any time. I am sure that one of the Pages will get them from the Library for the Hon. Member if he wants to read them.

* * *

THE ADMINISTRATION

MINISTERIAL CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is pitifully easy to set a trap for a donkey. On April 24 the Prime Minister said that he had written to the Deputy Prime Minister asking him to review all of the guidelines with regard to Ministers of the Crown and their conduct, with a view to enhancing them and tightening them up. He said: "The Deputy Prime Minister has done that", and that those guidelines would be filed very shortly.

The Minister of Supply and Services has it wrong, as usual, and is trying to confuse the issue, as usual. We have been told that new guidelines had been prepared. We were promised on three different occasions—

Mr. Speaker: Question.

Mr. Tobin: I would be glad to provide a copy of Hansard where it says that the new guidelines respecting Ministers would be filed. I ask again, will the Government release those new guidelines to Hon. Members of Parliament today? And, if not today, when will they be tabled in this House?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, there is a difference between the Hon. Member's first question and his second.

Mr. Nunziata: No, no. Wake up.

Mr. Boudria: It was slower; that's all.

Mr. Andre: The rodents should pick up their ears.

Mr. Tobin: Answer the question. It is a serious question.

Mr. Andre: The first question was a promise of guidelines within days. As I told the Hon. Member, the guidelines respecting advertising were promised within days and were delivered within days. In his supplementary question the Hon. Member said that the Prime Minister promised guidelines respecting Cabinet Ministers soon. They will be given soon.

Mr. Tobin: It's been a month.

[Translation]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

CONTAMINATION BY PCBs—URGENT MEASURES THE GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO TAKE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. This morning, the Minister said there would be a federal-provincial conference on environmental problems in this country. However, a conference will not resolve the immediate and alarming problem existing in Quebec and the rest of Canada, the problem of PCB contamination. My question is as follows, and it is very specific: What is the Minister going to do now? What is she going to do right away to deal with a problem that is a potential danger to all Canadians?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party for his question. I believe there is a misunderstanding. The federal-provincial conference I called for the end of May will deal exclusively with the problem of PCBs.

REQUEST THAT FUNDS BE MADE AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, there will be a conference on the PCB problems in this country, but could the Minister inform the House this morning whether sufficient funds will be made available to seek a solution to this problem? It is a very serious problem in the Province of Quebec and in the rest of Canada. Will the necessary funds be released now, right away?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I realize the gravity of the situation, and that is why when we were still cleaning up the environment after the Kenora accident, I immediately asked for a federal-provincial conference to discuss PCB disposal sites, and I have asked my provincial colleagues to reach a consensus on what should be done.

* * *

SOCIAL SECURITY

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Yesterday the Minister of Finance seemed disappointed to find out that we have our doubts about his consultation process and that we are firmly convinced that he would rather lend an ear to financiers than to ordinary Canadians. I am wondering whether the Acting Prime Minister would tell us if his Government will commit itself to endorsing the recommendations made by 45 organizations throughout the country—including the National Anti-Poverty Organization, the National Advisory Council of Senior Citizens and the National Action Committee on the Status of Women—which have been urging the Government to make the spouse's allowance available to all needy persons living alone and aged 60 to 64, so as to avoid discrimination against single and separated persons as well as widows?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is not a newcomer to this House. I am delighted that, being now in the Opposition, he is finally showing interest in matters about which he was unconcerned when sitting on the Government benches. Surely he appreciates that he must wait until the Budget is brought down before we can comment on it, and that the Budget to be tabled next week has been the subject of more consultations than ever before in the history of Canada.

CONSULTATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): With respect to the remarks of the Minister, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that I have a respectable reputation, but that he is known to be prone to blunder.

Here is my supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. How can you expect the people and Hon. Members to have faith in this bragging Government when the Minister talks about having more consultations now that consultations did take place? Witnesses appeared before the committee to urge the Minister of National Health and Welfare to eliminate discrimination against elderly Canadians. How can you expect Canadians to react positively to the Government's consultation process if you fail to come up with answers?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I repeat that as far as the contents of the Budget is concerned, the Hon. Member knows he has to wait until it is brought down.

Second, with respect to the other Government policy, as the Minister of Finance pointed out and as the Government has often indicated since coming into office, we are prepared to consult and talk directly to people who are worried, and we seek their advice. Concerning the points raised by the Hon. Member, I can only hope that the Liberals will show a willingness to hold public consultations, something which is not apparent in the field of international relations where the Liberal Party wants to deny—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

• (1200)

[English]

NATIONAL REVENUE

DEPARTMENT'S POWERS OF SEARCH AND SEIZURE

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a very short question to the Minister of National Revenue.

Mr. Beatty: Hurray!

Mr. de Jong: As the Minister will no doubt have noticed, last week the Law Reform Commission made some important recommendations concerning the tremendous powers of search and seizure his Department has. When in opposition, almost one year ago today the Minister invited the Government to introduce legislation which would do away with those powers. He assured the Government of the day that the legislation would be passed within a day. I am giving the same assurance to the Minister now. Will he introduce legislation which will take away that awesome power from his officials and bureaucrats?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, weekday after lonely weekday I sit here waiting for questions from my hon. friend. However, this is worth it, and I appreciate the Hon. Member's question. The answer is yes, I will, and yes, I will be delighted to receive the Hon. Member's support. I have already limited the powers of the Department under Section 231(4); we are now seeking search and seizure warrants under the Criminal Code. We will be introducing amendments which will curtail the powers of the Department under Section 231. It is our goal to ensure that they are brought into line with basic civil liberties, and I appreciate the Hon. Member's support.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: No more questions for you this year, Simon!

Some Hon. Members: More!

Mr. Nunziata: By unanimous consent, they want more questions.

Mr. Speaker: A lot of people around here want more, I have noticed.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions presented by Hon. Members on Thursday, May 16, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINT OF ORDER

ORDER OF PRESENTATION OF PETITIONS DURING ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS—RULING BY MR. SPEAKER

Mr. Speaker: Some time ago I was asked by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall) to provide a ruling to the House with regard to petitions. For reasons outside his control and mine, there was a delay in the presentation of this ruling.

The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond raised a point of order on March 28, 1985 during Routine Proceedings, concerning the time of the presentation of petitions, namely, that Members should be able to present petitions at any time after Oral Questions and before the Introduction of Bills. Thereby, the waiting time between the end of the Question Period and the presentation of petitions would be greatly shortened. The Hon. Member was concerned about occasions when Ministers make statements and Members who wish to present petitions have to wait for lengthy periods of time. Standing Order 71(2) reads as follows:

> Any Member desiring to present a petition in his or her place in the House must do so during Routine Proceedings and before Introduction of Bills.

In our practice, the expression " . . . before Introduction of Bills" has been understood to mean immediately before the Introduction of Bills. This is easy to verify in the proceedings of the House since 1980. Before that, since the number of petitions presented was small, the time of presentation never caused any inconvenience to Members. A search of the records of the House has found no ruling on this subject.

I suggest that the Committee on the Reform of the House of Commons or the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization might look at the matter. In the meantime, Members who cannot be in the House for the presentation of petitions can always present their peitions by filing them with the Clerk of the House, as stated in Standing Order 71(1); which reads:

> A petition to the House may be presented by a Member at any time during the sitting of the House by filing the same with the Clerk of the House.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

PETITIONS

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I should like to present a petition from 28 residents of St-Bernardin, Ontario, and members of the senior citizens club of that area protesting against the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 which the Secretary of State for External Affairs refused to hear this morning when stated by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart).

Mr. Speaker, I also have another petition signed by residents of Alexandria in my constituency. They want to express their disagreement about the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 and demand that allowances be paid to needy people between 60 and 64 years of age.

I also have another petition, Mr. Speaker, signed by 22 residents and members of the Union culturelle d'Alfred and those people also reject the discriminatory clauses of Bill C-26 and they demand that the government take the necessary steps to apply the legislation to all needy individuals between 60 and 64 years of age.

[English]

I also have a petition signed by 19 people of the village of Alfred. They request that the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 be corrected forthwith so as to permit all needy people between 60 and 64 years of age to receive benefits.

I also have a petition signed by 22 residents of the village of St. Albert, Ontario, in my riding, who wish to express their displeasure with the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26, and the effect these provisions will have on the people of our area.

I have one final petition signed by 29 residents of Alfred, Ontario, and they are once again protesting the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 which deny benefits to single, divorced and separated people between the ages of 60 and 64. They ask that the Government immediately correct these discriminatory provisions.

NATIONAL POSTAL MUSEUM

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present on behalf of a number of residents of Vancouver, Delta, Clearwater, White Rock and North Vancouver a petition calling upon Parliament, and particularly the Minister responsible for Canada Post, to intervene in order to ensure that the National Postal Museum is retained; to find a new location near Parliament if it has to move from 180 Wellington; and to ensure that its staff continue to serve the public in their present capacity.

[Translation]

MODERATELY-PRICED FAMILY HOUSING

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House a petition from my constituents of Québec-East. It includes 709 names collected by the Regroupement des citoyens et citoyennes de Ville-Vanier and demand the construction of low-cost housing units for families.

I will personally deliver a copy of that file to the minister responsible so that he may take action.

[English]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 161 and 274.

[Text]

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAMS

Question No. 161—Mr. Orlikow:

Has the Department of National Health and Welfare cut any projects in its science and technology programs in order to absorb the reduction in its expenditures required by the economic statement made by the Minister of Finance in the House on November 8, 1984 and, if so, what are they and what are the projected costs?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, three scientific projects were cut by Health and Welfare Canada as a result of the reduction of funding from the National Energy Program announced on November 8, 1984. Their titles and their projected costs are as follows:

1. Field validation studies on radon entry into buildings ($80,000).

2. Characterization of hazardous aromatics from the combustion of wide boiling range distillates ($57,000).

3. Characterization and mutagenic potential of air samples in coal liquefaction facilities ($50,000).

The remaining nine Health and Welfare Canada projects funded by the National Energy Program will continue but the funding has been reduced by approximately 40 per cent.

FARM AUDITS

Question No. 274—Mr. Greenaway:

For the year 1984, by province and by month, how (a) many audits of farmers were initiated by the Department of National Revenue (b) much money in back taxes was assessed against farmers by the Department (c) many extra personnel were hired by the Department to aid in the auditing of farms?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): During 1984 the Department completed audits on (1) farmers, (2) farmers whose chief source of income is not farming, and (3) hobby farmers who have full-time occupations yet carry on farming activities. The 1984 audit statistics, set out by province and by month, relating to questions (a) and (b) include all three types of farmers.

(c) No additional personnel were hired to carry out these audits; staff assigned farm audits are also assigned audits of taxpayers in other categories.

[See Table Page 4865.]

[English]

Mr. Dick: I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) what business he proposes to call for Tuesday.

I also want to tell him that, pursuant to the suggestion made by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), I will certainly be ready to meet with him to discuss how an agenda for the proposed special joint committee of the House and the other place on the Government's Green Paper on foreign affairs can be worked out so as to enable the people of Canada to be heard prior to decisions on issues raised in that paper being taken. I want to stress that our attitude in these discussions with respect to whether we will participate in the work of such a committee will be determined by the degree to which the Government is willing to give a firm and public commitment that it will not take decisions on, in particular, matters concerning the Strategic Defence Initiative, star wars, or trade relations with the U.S. before the views of the people of Canada are heard and fully considered, including the report of that committee, by the Government.

● (1210)

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like the Hon. Government House Leader to confirm that, contrary to what was suggested by the Secretary of State for External Affairs in Question Period, the consent of the opposition Parties is not required for the Government to place a motion on the Order Paper to create the type of joint committee I just referred to, nor to call that motion for debate and for decision of the House.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the business of the House for next week, we will, of course, not be sitting on Monday. Today we are going to commence consideration of Bill C-25. There is the prospect of making progress on that Bill today. I am hoping that we can attain second reading of that legislation.

I had indicated a sequence of Bills which would be debated on the days on which the House sits next week. These Bills involve amendments to the Divorce Act and enforcement of maintenance orders as well as amendments to the Fisheries Act. I had hoped that we would be able to deal with the Fisheries Bill early next week. I would ask my friend to

FARM AUDIT STATISTICS

JANUARY 1 TO DECEMBER 31, 1984

Month	NEWFOUNDLAND		P.E.I.		NOVA SCOTIA		NEW BRUNSWICK		QUEBEC		ONTARIO		MANITOBA		SASKATCHEWAN		ALBERTA		BRITISH COLUMBIA		ALL CANADA
	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes	# of audits	Additional taxes
		$		$		$		$		$		$		$		$		$		$		$
January	1	0	12	26,841	25	65,846	9	6,375	88	637,067	211	1,369,930	55	170,686	212	805,105	132	1,252,756	60	329,803	805	4,664,409
February	4	8,133	9	28,581	9	18,614	13	17,434	68	392,337	160	808,965	43	283,047	145	396,922	94	653,038	25	185,299	570	2,792,370
March	0	2,223	3	17,922	3	7,701	11	10,728	41	119,965	95	446,015	30	16,189	163	413,705	86	382,830	20	140,377	452	1,557,655
April	0	0	1	1,383	8	15,613	8	15,799	47	31,592	65	274,319	27	69,460	90	210,382	60	462,902	15	25,794	321	1,107,244
May	1	3,195	9	12,713	14	65,828	16	67,561	87	193,328	170	438,753	79	203,747	137	408,300	109	703,166	47	221,746	669	2,318,337
June	1	23	9	7,539	9	3,509	9	7,741	82	168,134	144	266,252	68	136,640	180	727,227	116	4,231,381	58	329,144	676	5,877,590
July	0	0	7	5,695	3	2,341	23	10,312	51	113,223	135	350,360	54	131,280	143	406,560	126	923,832	36	210,534	578	2,154,137
August	0	0	14	6,164	17	17,862	11	20,515	93	157,040	153	381,478	84	544,051	132	828,032	72	408,704	40	179,881	616	2,543,727
September	0	0	8	6,104	10	16,632	3	2,581	92	59,871	139	303,198	34	83,416	133	332,353	111	311,008	32	222,293	562	1,337,456
October	1	636	9	6,510	13	43,662	8	9,877	104	153,176	130	386,753	43	92,996	141	284,797	108	373,960	25	49,906	582	1,402,273
November	5	39	4	1,095	8	25,949	4	516	71	81,326	148	451,811	49	(3,727)	117	290,115	113	332,199	27	167,997	546	1,347,320
December	1	0	3	11,208	9	18,239	0	0	61	131,555	116	436,762	56	63,741	148	315,804	89	328,485	14	86,138	497	1,391,932
Total	14	14,249	88	131,755	128	301,796	115	169,439	885	2,238,614	1,666	5,914,596	622	1,791,526	1,741	5,419,302	1,216	10,364,261	399	2,148,912	6,874	28,494,450

consider moving on that legislation if we can arrive at an agreement with respect to the nature of amendments which might be acceptable to the House.

Under the circumstances, it would be appropriate if the first item of business on Tuesday were to be Motion No. 22 standing in the name of my colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), which relates to Bill C-15. Once we have disposed of that motion, we will continue with the sequence of legislation which I indicated earlier.

With regard to the ongoing consultations with respect to the committee for the study of foreign affairs and the Green Paper presented by my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), I appreciate the indication by the House Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Gray) that he will be prepared to give me an answer to the inquiry I made of House Leaders at our last meeting, which was alluded to by the Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) yesterday. We are interested in determining what the proposals of the Official Opposition are. The Hon. House Leader will be the first to admit that the proposals put forward by the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party have varied from day to day. It is difficult to get a handle on what they really want from one day to the next.

I look forward to receiving a concrete proposal. If we have an opportunity of getting together on Tuesday, I hope the proposal will be the same. However, it may be that it will change over the weekend. Whatever the proposal, we will be receptive to getting this committee on the road.

The final inquiry dealt with how we are to deal with the motion. As the Hon. Member knows, we could move a motion with respect to the establishment of the committee. The most desirable way to proceed with the creation of the committee would be to get consent to deal with the matter without using up the very limited time of the House. The Hon. Leader will know that I have been unable to get any assurance with respect to how long this reference would take. In other words, the intimation I received was that this would very definitely not be agreed to and that there would be an open-ended debate in the House of Commons, which would preclude us from dealing with important items of legislation. Yesterday I was asked to bring forward items of legislation for early consideration. However, the effect of the refusal of the Opposition to agree to the resolution is to preclude us from proceeding since we have only a limited amount of time for Government Orders.

We try to proceed on the basis of reasonable opportunity for discussion of all matters. However, an indefinite term for debate has the effect of vetoing anything we may propose in the interest of consulting the people of Canada.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Wednesday, May 8, 1985, consideration of the motion of the Hon. Don Mazankowski (for the Minister of Agriculture), that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be now read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Pierre Blais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to present this Bill which is aimed at amending the Agricultural Stabilization Act.

I think everyone will agree that since the last major amendments to the Act ten years ago, agriculture has changed a great deal in Canada, and that during that time, the shortcomings of the present version of the Act have become increasingly obvious. The Bill before the House today should have been tabled a long time ago.

Actually, the Bill has been under consideration for over ten years, since 1974. The provincial Ministers of Agriculture, provincial and national producers' associations and the Federal Government have all worked very hard, during long and sometimes frustrating meetings, to try and reach a compromise that will provide real stability for red meat producers and put this entire sector on a firm basis.

Mr. Speaker, this is a grassroots Bill. It is based on the views of farmers who are not only aware of the shortcomings of the present legislation but also of the inequality that exists among the various provincial stabilization programs. The legislation was prepared by the provincial and federal Ministers of Agriculture, who acknowledged that they were getting mired in a morass of overkill as a result of these programs.

The House will recall that harmonizing stabilization programs was the first item on the agenda when the Minister of Agriculture met with his provincial colleagues in 1979, over six years ago.

Today, we are very glad to have this opportunity to settle the long-standing problem of agricultural stabilization. As the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) said earlier, it is indeed one of the Government's priorities. For the time being, as a result of the decision made by the Canadian people on September 4th last year, it is of course up to the Government to decide in what sequence its priorities will be put before the House.

Price stabilization is one of the cornerstones of federal agricultural policy, together with crop insurance, research, market development, regional development, inspection and grading.

Since price stabilization is such a basic and important part of agricultural policy in Canada, I think it would be useful to approach the subject by attempting to answer four questions that would put the proposed legislation into context.

First, why is it useful and why are we so concerned about stabilizing agricultural prices?

Second, what are the programs currently in effect and what are the problems?

Third, how does the proposed legislation attempt to improve the situation?

And fourth, does the Bill have the support of the farmers and the provinces?

● (1220)

[English]

The first question is: why does agriculture require stabilization? Agriculture is vulnerable to two major destabilizing forces: first, the natural hazards of production such as frost and floods, insects and diseases; second, market fluctuations. Crop insurance is the federal Government's major vehicle for helping farmers to cope with production hazards. Our major vehicle for helping farmers to cope with market risk is the Agricultural Stabilization Act along with the Grain Stabilization Act.

Prices for many agricultural commodities change on a daily basis, reflecting real or perceived changes in supply and demand. For a non farmer to appreciate what that means, one only needs to imagine going to work in the morning without knowing what you are going to earn or even if you will earn anything at all.

Agriculture is also subject to large cyclical price fluctuations. Farmers frequently see their prices dropping by half from one period to another, while their costs of production continue to rise. Even the most productive producers go into the red in such circumstances.

Of course, agriculture is not the only sector of the economy that exists in such a wide open market environment, but it is one of the very few. It is certainly one of the most dispersed and diverse, composed of more than 300,000 individual operations across Canada. Except for a small handful of these operations—less than one-half of one per cent—these are family farms and our very existence depends on them. That is a very important fact, Mr. Speaker.

In 1983, 476,000 people were employed in farming—4.4 per cent of the Canadian labour force. Only 30 years earlier, that proportion was 18 per cent. The exodus from the country to the city has left fewer farms, but they are larger and more efficient. In constant dollars, production per farm has risen nearly fourfold in the past 30 years.

These highly mechanized farms have relied increasingly on off-farm inputs, generating jobs throughout the economy. When one includes processing, distribution and retailing, about one-sixth of all Canadians now depend on agriculture for their livelihood.

Moreover, all Canadians have benefited from the accomplishments of our agri-food industry in that it has provided food for only 16 per cent of disposable income, which is the second lowest cost in the world. At the same time, the agri-food industry has been bringing in more than $10 billion a year in export revenues.

In summary, we must recognize the central importance of agriculture and its unique vulnerability. As public policy, we must ensure that efficient operations have a good chance of surviving and prospering. That is our best insurance for maintaining a healthy rural Canada, jobs in the agri-food industry and a continuing supply of reasonably priced food for all Canadians.

[Translation]

Second, Mr. Speaker, what are the programs in effect today? I assume that the ideas I have just mentioned would be supported not only by our provincial counterparts but also by all Members of the various legislatures across Canada and even by the Ministers of Agriculture of most countries.

We all agree that agricultural stability is a must, and that is why we now have so many stabilization programs at the provincial, federal and international levels. Indeed, again last evening I attended a meeting with the French ambassador to Canada who agreed that it is imperative for our country to aim at achieving greater price stability here than do other agricultural countries that must rely on export markets, quickly stabilize their prices, and maintain production and exports at certain levels.

Here is now a summary of existing programs. The Agricultural Stabilization Act was adopted by the Progressive Conservative Government in 1958. It set the support price of Canada's major agricultural products to 80 per cent of the average price over the ten previous years. In 1975, the Act was amended—

Mr. Boudria: By the Liberal Government.

Mr. Blais: —to raise the support price to 90 per cent of average market prices over the five previous years—

Mr. Boudria: Under a Liberal Government.

Mr. Blais: Indeed, just before the previous administration began to bring us a series of deficits, from 1975 until this year when we are up to $226 billion. It is indeed an important date. That was when we began to sink ever deeper into huge deficit financing where we have been stuck for over ten years. An important date indeed.

The strength of the program lies in the fact that it made it possible to maintain a national support price structure geared to markets, a security net which, owing to its retroactive connotation, had no bearing on decisions of farmers concerning production. Unfortunately it is its weakness as well. The program would offer more stability if its support were more regular and predictable.

The current sluggishness of the federal program and its dependency with respect to previous costs and average market prices in Canada are two of the reasons why certain provinces came to the conclusion that their agricultural sector was not properly protected against the constraints of the cost-price squeeze. As a result of this situation, provincial stabilization programs came into being, first in British Columbia in 1975, then in Quebec and in other provinces. Those schemes vary as far as eligibility criteria, support levels and premiums to producers are concerned.

The provincial governments are surely entitled to set up such schemes in response to what they consider their own special regional conditions. However, from a national point of view, they have given rise to confusion and competition among provinces on the domestic as well as on the international markets. In some cases, those schemes have encouraged a greater production than economically justifed. In some other cases, the provincial stabilization schemes have literally collapsed because they were not actuarially sound. Those setbacks probably had a considerable unsettling effect.

It is interesting to note that Canadian agriculture has equally suffered from disparities and disturbances as a result of unduly high price support programs abroad. We are well aware of this and I think that during the past few months or weeks, the steps taken by the government in Canada with its trading partners in America, in Europe and elsewhere are specifically aimed at a closer co-operation between the countries to solve the problems of surpluses found all over the world at present. In the United States for example, some $22 billion was earmarked for the agricultural price support program in 1983 alone.

The best known, the Cash Crop Payment Program in the United States, brought an increase in the price of grains in 1983, but discouraged pork production in the United States. In Canada, thanks to relatively large grain crops, especially in Western Canada, we could develop our production and increase our pork exports to the United States. But those increased exports caused a trade conflict that now opposes our two countries.

The other significant example is the common farm policy of the European Economic Community. It has hindered Canada's farm exports while causing huge surpluses that must be sold on world markets, including ours, at highly subsidized prices.

Last year, the huge increase in CEE-subsidized beef exports to Canada exerted a strong downward pressure on Canadian beef prices. This compelled the Government to use the Meat Import Act to limit beef and veal imports into Canada in 1985. We pursued the talks with the parties concerned and finalized an agreement that may not please everybody, but that should for a while allow a certain amount of stabilization in that area. However, this shows how much the CEE's stabilization programs can disrupt Canadian markets, and how important it is to have mechanisms in place that protect our farmers when the need arises.

We could discuss at length the problems associated with stabilization programs in Canada and elsewhere. However, I feel I have covered some of the basic points. I hope this will help you understand why the changes we are proposing to the Farm Stabilization Act are a model of responsible, co-operative and efficient public policy.

The third point—

● (1230)

[English]

How is this Bill an improvement? To begin with there are really two parts to this legislation. First, there are a number of minor housekeeping changes to the Agricultural Stabilization Act. These changes are not contentious, and they could go into effect immediately after the Bill is passed. I will list them in a moment.

The second part of the Bill is enabling legislation allowing for some major changes in Canada's approach to agricultural stabilization. However, I cannot over-emphasize that it is the first step in a co-operative process involving the federal Government, provincial Government and producers. Major changes to the stabilization programs will go into effect only after they have been thoroughly discussed in committee, after in depth consultations have been held with producers, after federal provincial agreements have been held with producers, after federal provincial agreements have been reached, and after the Governor in Council has ratified these agreements.

To return to the first category of changes, we have received a legal opinion that there may be flaws in the existing statute, which raises questions as to the Government's authority to issue stabilization payments for a past marketing period using the existing formula. The Government would like to ensure that the wording of the Act is clarified to reflect the intent of Parliament.

There is another rather technical reason for passing this Bill. As the Act now stands, employees of the Agricultural Stabilization Board are not included under the terms of the Public Service Employment Act, a provision of the old Agricultural Stabilization Act which was needed many years ago but which needs to be changed. The Bill also proposes that we include wheat produced outside the Canadian Wheat Board area as a named commodity receiving mandatory support, as was the case prior to 1975.

Lambs and wool would replace sheep in the list of named commodities, thereby solving a problem we have with providing stabilization for both sources of the sheep producer's income.

Currently, the support period must be for 12 consecutive months. We are proposing to authorize periods of support shorter than a year, but not less than three months, so we can react more effectively to shorter term cost-price-squeeze situations.

Finally, when passed, the Bill will delete the restriction on the amount which the federal Government may spend under the Act in any year, a holdover from the days of financing the Act from a revolving fund.

Now I will move on to the enabling aspects of the Bill. This is really the heart of the Bill. As I said before, we are asking Parliament to provide, through this legislation, the framework for much more effective and efficient stabilization programs, programs that are going to constitute the basis for a true partnership with farmers and provincial Governments.

Section 10 of the existing Act allows for the federal Government to enter into stabilization agreements with the provinces and producers. But while the wording is, at first glance, quite open-ended, there are problems with it. For one thing, it does not allow for the creation of a jointly funded program. For another, it does not allow for the use of different formulas for calculating support prices, and therefore it does not respond to the unique nature of each commodity. The proposed amendments would do so.

If federal-provincial agreements can be achieved, the Bill will enable us to reduce the problem of interprovincial competition over stabilization programs and their resultant disruptions in production and marketing patterns. It would put our livestock industry on a more solid, competitive, and therefore secure, footing.

The new program would also reduce our trade difficulties with other countries. It specifically excludes from coverage the portion of a commodity that is marketed abroad. Furthermore, it would lead to fewer ad hoc programs, which disrupt normal production and trade patterns.

The Canadian program would avoid the problems encountered in the U.S. and with the EEC programs by limiting the amount of money the federal and provincial Governments would contribute to the program. Support levels would not constitute an incentive to over-produce, the programs would be actuarially sound, and there would be an automatic review of each stabilization plan every five years.

I do not want to go into the details of the red meat plans which have been drafted in consultation with the provinces and producers because they will have to be refined and finalized after the enabling legislation has been passed.

[Translation]

Of course, those are new terms that were unknown to us in previous years—consultation, arrangements, negotiations with the Provinces and with producers. They had disappeared from the Canadian landscape, from Government policies. That in my view is a change for the better.

Fourth, Mr. Speaker, is the legislation winning popular support? I want first to point out that this legislation is a fair compromise. Quite honestly, we must admit that it will not please everybody. We are aware of it. However, I want to assure you that the Bill is not cast in cement, to use that phrase. As any other proposal, it is subject to improvement. Indeed we expect that it will be scrutinized by the Standing Committee on Agriculture, which will be in a position to start discussing it, hearing the views of and consulting Canadian producer groups as soon as possible. That is where all the views that have been expressed concerning the Bill over these last few years can be aired and analysed.

We are quite aware of regional differences. This is both the difficulty and problem and the greatness and richness of this great land of ours. The problem has been raised by many Provinces which have not yet given their support to the changes contained in the Bill.

We all know that in Canada, the spectrum of natural resources and the access to markets vary from one region to another. The same goes for production costs and commodity prices. In other terms, Mr. Speaker, all the regions of Canada do not have the same ability to produce any given commodity. However, the ability to efficiently produce is something that can be acquired.

It is also possible to fill the gaps between regions by way of research. When controlled by farmers, research can enable them to increase their productivity—the productivity of lands, crops, animals, manpower and capital. When a part of the tax dollars is channelled into research, permanent solutions can often be found to the problems of regional disparities. As a general rule, all the producers of any given commodity are affected simultaneously by a cost-price squeeze. This is especially true in the case of red meat, because there is a close link between the markets and the main production factors of those products. Price and cost fluctuations are a national rather than a regional reality. I think we are all aware of that. For all those reasons, it is important that we should have a national program.

Moreover, we are pleased to note that the regional concerns are both valid and sincere. We feel that the bill should be considered at length when it is deferred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture in the days to come. I remind you that the government is open to innovative solutions provided that they do not violate national policies on which the bill is based.

It should not have forgotten that we have reached the best consensus of our history after ten years of negotiations. The four provinces which have already joined the national tripartite program for the stabilization of red meat prices represent 94 per cent of beef cattle; 88 per cent of cow-calf operations;

57 per cent of hog production and 79 per cent of sheep production in Canada. It is indeed the best consensus reached for over 10 years.

The Canadian Association of Beef Producers, the Pork Marketing Boards in the four participating provinces and the Canadian Sheep Breeders Association have ratified and supported the program. In short, we have the necessary support to develop the best national tripartite stabilization program. Red meat producers will be the first to benefit from it. In fact, the most important aspect is that the program will in the first place be beneficial to Canadian producers. Who knows, other producers may follow their example.

● (1240)

[English]

I sincerely hope that with the goodwill of Parliament we will provide the opportunity for this program to become a reality in order to give Canadian farmers more stability at a time when it is genuinely needed and at a time when Canada needs a stable agricultural industry.

[Translation]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to deal with Bill C-25. I wanted today to take this opportunity to ask the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) several questions, but things being as they are and without being more specific because it is not allowed, I will say only that I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will say hello to him on our behalf.

Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary indicated in his remarks that agriculture was a high priority of this Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Boudria: How sweet it is to hear such loud applause, Mr. Speaker!

Yet, I find it strange that this Government which has agriculture as a high priority and which introduced on January 24 this Bill to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act needed as long as three and a half months to wake up and move its second reading. Thanks to the Government, the Opposition Members have had more than enough time to peruse this 9-page long Bill, but they did not really need quite as much time as that. Even a Conservative Member would not need three and a half months to read it. Yet, this Government claims it has agriculture as a high priority. I am grateful to the Parliamentary Secretary for saying that the Government regards Bill C-25 as a major piece of legislation. He has just stated that the House spent a long time dealing with Bill C-15, and that is the best excuse he could find for the Minister of Agriculture dragging his feet on this Bill which is so important to Canadian producers.

The Parliamentary Secretary will have to come up with a far better excuse to explain why he and his Minister dragged their feet on this, because both you and I know, Mr. Speaker, that we have been waiting impatiently for the Government to introduce legislation, so that the House may go on with its work.

[English]

This is the first piece of government legislation on which we have deliberated this week. Perhaps it is new Conservative policy to start working on Friday. We have spent all this week in the House, and the Government refused to bring forward legislation until today.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: I seem to have touched a tender nerve. It is nice to know that they will at least be awake for the weekend.

As I said previously, this Bill was introduced on January 24. It took the Government three months before deciding to deliberate on it at second reading, and three months is what the Government thinks is a reasonable amount of time to debate what the Parliamentary Secretary said earlier today was a priority of the Government. The Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour) applauded the delaying and the dragging of their feet for three months on an agricultural Bill. Let the record show that this is what the Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona is applauding, a three-month delay.

● (1250)

This Bill was promised by the Conservative Party during the election campaign, as it was by other political Parties. All Parties were in favour of tripartite stabilization. I remember it well. I heard it a lot during the campaign. I promised it myself. Things being the way they are, it is up to the Conservative Party to present government legislation. It has taken it this long to bring it forward.

This will assist the agricultural industry once it is passed. However, it is not the totality of what is needed. In listening to the speech made by the Parliamentary Secretary, one would almost think that the Conservative Party is actually the author of this legislation. It is guilty of its usual plagiarism. What Conservative Members are doing is introducing a Bill that had been presented by the previous Liberal Government. It was an omission or oversight by the Parliamentary Secretary that he neglected to bring that to the attention of the House. So that you will be aware, Mr. Speaker, I thought I would remind you of the fact that essentially the same Bill had been presented by the Liberal Government in the past.

There is considerable division in thought in the country as to just how the stabilization Bill or stabilization legislation would deal with agricultural problems. In many regions there are higher costs of production. Coming as I do from the Province of Quebec—I am sure the Hon. Member knows that—I know that some farmers feel that because of their higher cost of production, they should be able to get supplementary benefits or be able to top-load the program on provincial programs.

That is a very difficult issue to deal with, principally because the minute the program can be top-loaded by anyone, we are right back at the point where we started where individual provinces could compete against each other for subsidies. The net effect would be to lower the prices and bring back the whole issue to where we started. I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary is very much aware of this issue and has given it some thought, as has the Minister.

We must do other things in addition to this Bill in order to provide good price stabilization to our agricultural industry. The Parliamentary Secretary referred to that issue during the latter part of his remarks, and rightfully so. There are issues now on which the agricultural industry needs answers, and very clear answers, from this Government in order to have any kind of stability in agricultural commodity pricing.

We need to know what has been done by this Government with regard to the United States countervail. That countervail duty of 5.3 cents a pound, as I understand it, has had a devastating effect on the price of pork in Canada. More particularly, it has had tragic effects in the riding that I represent. Pork producers need assurance that this Government is doing its job.

Not long ago the Leader of the Government said in Quebec City that the President of the United States is as close to him as the phone, that he could reach him at any time and discuss issues which affect our country. We have an example here with this countervail duty. We have asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) on several occasions whether he has telephoned the President of the United States. Has he contacted U.S. authorities to ensure that this countervail duty will not adversely affect our producers? We know the answer from the mere fact that the countervail was imposed. It is having a terrible effect. It has completely depressed prices. Representing an agricultural area, Mr. Speaker, as does the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle), who is quite notorious for his discussion with farmers, you will undoubtedly be aware of all this.

[Translation]

Because the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) is quite famous for his conversations with farmers. For instance, I read here: "Quebec hog producers want Roch La Salle to fulfil his commitments". We are aware that if he is very much interested in agriculture, although he may not be very anxious to fulfil his commitments. Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Supply and Services—I should say the Minister of Public Works: because of their patronage tendencies, I am inclined to mix them up. The Minister of Public Works is very much interested in agriculture, and Quebec hog producers are certainly anxious to get their cheques. Moreover, Quebec and Eastern Ontario hog producers—

Mr. La Salle: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Minister of Public Works on a point of order.

Mr. La Salle: I realize that the Hon. Member was not here last year, but he should know, first, that his Government had refused any assistance to pork producers. Second, as concerns the subsidy to pork producers, the Hon. Member should know that we have a problem—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I do not believe that this is a point of order. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You are quite right, it is not a point of order, and it is not even a good point because, as we all know, the point is that the Minister himself made some commitments and did not meet them. That is the point.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister was right, however, when he said that there were problems between Canada and the United States, but as the Prime Minister himself has said, he is just a phone call away from Washington. All he has to do is to take the phone and the solution will be instantaneous. Just add water and the solution will be there. What is the answer to help pork producers? Is it to charge an artificial customs duty of 5.3 cents a pound for Canadian pork? That is not the answer.

Mr. Blais: Do you have the answer?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I am happy to know that the Parliamentary Secretary has finally admitted that his Prime Minister does not have an answer. When he told the Canadian people that he had answers following the Quebec Conference, it was not true and I am glad to know it. I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary will at least have the courage to tell his Prime Minister that he was wrong and that, next time, he should tell the truth. I am happy at the present attitude of the Parliamentary Secretary and I congratulate him on his courage, Mr. Speaker. I trust that he will be able to show the same attitude when he meets the Prime Minister. Mr. Speaker, it is good to see at least one Progressive Conservative Member with such courage.

[English]

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture recently sent to Members of Parliament its annual revised edition of its policy manual. It brings to the concern of legislators, federal and provincial in the Province of Ontario, issues which affect the agriculture industry in general. It indicates how we need price stabilization in Canada. I wish to read briefly from the manual. I quote:

> Stabilization programs must provide enough security to encourage farmers to make long-term management decisions. A good stabilization plan is forward-looking; gives timely signals of the desired level of production;—

In terms of production, we are not addressing this issue now. I see that we are nearing one o'clock. Perhaps I should continue later this afternoon briefly with the rest of my remarks.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When the House rose at one o'clock, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) had the floor.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, if I remember correctly, at one o'clock we had all agreed that the Parliamentary Secretary was indeed very courageous for having told the Prime Minister in this House that the Prime Minister had not respected his campaign promises and that the Parliamentary Secretary was going to see to it that he did so in the future. I believe that was the point at which we were when the House rose. I simply wanted to refresh everyone's memory to that effect.

We are indeed very proud of the Hon. Member and we are glad to see that at least one Tory Member is willing to stand up to this nasty Government.

Mr. Blais: Do you agree?

Mr. Boudria: I am in agreement with the Hon. Member when he says that the Prime Minister has not delivered on his promises. I am in full agreement with him when he says that and I want the record to show that.

There are a number of other issues which we should raise here today while discussing the entire issue of price stabilization and how prices of commodities in particular need to be enhanced. The Parliamentary Secretary will undoubtedly know that there is a tremendous threat, particularly to the beef industry, from foreign imports.

It is interesting that this discussion is being brought to light now after the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) made what could almost be called a free trade speech yesterday. I do hope that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais) will be able to respond by assuring all Hon. Members that the previously fixed quota of 5.9 million pounds of imported beef will be respected and that Canadian producers and farmers will not find themselves in a very difficult situation, which will undoubtedly affect them if the quotas are increased to 17 million pounds. As I said previously, this, of course, would have a depressing effect on the prices.

● (1410)

So I am looking forward to the comments of the Parliamentary Secretary with respect to the imports of beef from the European Economic Community, because we know that in terms of price stabilization, it does not matter what we do to prices if we are going to keep on flooding the market with subsidized imports. We could have subsidies of 75 cents a pound on beef, but if someone has double our subsidy, we will never be able to compete. Obviously, we have to be assured that the quotas of beef from the European Economic Community will be left at the level which had been previously set. I believe it was in the order of 5.94 million pounds, and not the 17 million pounds which the rumour mill has us now faced with.

These are some of the issues I wanted to raise, and I just want to refer briefly to the pork producers in the area I represent. I received a letter from a pork producer in my riding on March 22.

[Translation]

I would like to read part of the letter, Mr. Speaker. I want the Parliamentary Secretarty to be aware of this, he who said earlier that agriculture is one of the Government's priorities, that the Government wants the House to proceed with the study of Bill C-25 so it will become law. As I pointed out a moment ago, we know that the Government has been dragging its feet for months about Bill C-25, and I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary will agree with me that the Government behaviour is totally unacceptable.

Here is what one of my constituents wrote to me in a letter dated March 22:

> There have been many newspaper articles about Bill C-25 to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act. We do not know anything about this Bill, but we hope that problems related to pork production will be dealt with so that:
>
> (1) pork will be included in the list of "named commodities"—

And so it is. I continue the quotation:

> (2) assistance will be geared to the cost of production—

So a farmer in my region told us he wants the assistance to be geared to the cost of production, not to the resale price as is the case now. Apparently, this opinion is shared by some producers in other provinces. Needless to say, we cannot have at the same time a program tied to the cost of production and a program tied to the resale price. It has to be one or the other, and it is not always possible to have the kind of program mentioned by my constituent.

Be that as it may, Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to note that my constituent was wondering about the Bill last March 22. He wanted to know why nothing more had been heard about Bill C-25 which was introduced on January 24, I think. Well, we never did hear anything more about the Bill after January 24, but here we are today, Mr. Speaker, May 17, and we are just beginning to talk about Bill C-25. I would like the Parliamentary Secretary to be aware of that fact.

I am sure you remember this, Mr. Speaker, but in case you are not too sure, I will try to refresh your memory. This morning the Parliamentary Secretary talked about our deficits. He said that agriculture is stagnant as a result of deficits and useless expenditures which, he said, were attributable to the previous Government. Well, Mr. Speaker, you know that I cannot miss such an opportunity to prove that it is the Conservative Government which is guilty of making useless expenditures. It is common knowledge, for instance, that since last September there have been over 1,200 partisan appointments. Some were less partisan than others, perhaps one per cent—and I am being generous—but the fact remains, Mr. Speaker, that most appointments were extremely partisan and that a lot of money was spent in the process. I may also recall that the new Prime Minister increased the budget for his own office by 57 per cent. And this was done by those people who told us earlier that previous governments had spent money unnecessarily. Not them. Perish the thought! Remember Mr. Lawrence Hanigan, a defeated Progressive Conservative candidate, who was appointed to VIA Rail and received a salary increase of $38,000 per year. Not bad for a defeated candidate, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that many Progressive Conservative backbenchers must be wondering whether maybe they should have lost in the last election.

This morning, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Blais) informed the House that the previous Government had been guilty of wasteful spending. I wonder whether the Parliamentary Secretary spoke to his colleague, the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), the "courant d'air national", about his trip to the Middle East which cost $57,000. Mr. Speaker, as you see—

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine), on a point of order.

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I do not think the Hon. Member's remarks are relevant to the subject before the House today. He should stick to the subject being debated.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Considering his experience in the Ontario Legislature, I am sure the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) will be able to make his present comments relevant to the proposed legislation.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I was simply reacting to what the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture said in his relevant speech about the fact that the previous Government had wasted taxpayers' money. And I think it is passing strange that the Hon. Member who just spoke should accuse the Parliamentary Secretary of not being relevant this morning. I am sure he will have something to say to him later on. I am quite sure, Mr. Speaker.

In any case, perhaps we could change the subject, but I am sure we can look forward to the discussion these two Members will have later on, and I am sure the Hon. Member for Bellechasse (Mr. Blais) will not let it be said by his colleague that he is not relevant.

In any event, it is interesting to note that people who accuse others of wasteful spending can turn around and waste taxpayers' money on rewarding their Conservative friends.

[English]

Just before the lunch hour, Mr. Speaker, we were discussing the fact that the Ontario Federation of Agriculture in its policy manual, which is circulated to Hon. Members of Parliament every year, made many recommendations to us. Of course, it greatly advocates the implementation of a plan of stabilization, with which our Party agrees. But I do believe, Mr. Speaker, that the Parliamentary Secretary must clarify certain points to the House, particularly vis-à-vis the position of the various provinces. We know that some provinces are in favour of the Bill as it stands now, and our Party supports this type of legislation. We know that other provinces want clarification. Even as of late, Mr. Speaker, they are not convinced that the Bill should be in exactly the same form in which it is now, particularly, as I said previously, as it relates to the formula to be used to determine compensation. And, again, other provinces are against it.

I notice that the Parliamentary Secretary, in his opening remarks, referred to the fact that various commodity groups, in different proportions, had indicated their support for this Bill. He said that the provinces representing 54 per cent of pork producers were in favour of the Bill. This also means that the provinces representing almost half of the pork production are against it. With regard to pork production especially, because it affects my riding to a large extent, I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary could indicate to us what are some of the difficulties. Which provinces are still reluctant and why? I wonder if we can get some sort of clarification in that regard.

• (1420)

I have a final point to bring out, and I do so somewhat reluctantly. There is, of course, the continuing issue of beef coming from the European Economic Community, but over the last couple of weeks we have had the stalemate between the United States and Nicaragua regarding trade. We know that beef originating in Nicaragua was being sold in the U.S. I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary has any idea of what effect the U.S. embargo on trade with Nicaragua will have as it pertains to potential sales of beef to Canada originating in Nicaragua. If there are such sales and they will be increased, what effect does he think that will have on domestic prices of beef in Canada? I ask that with some reluctance, recognizing the gravity of the situation in that country, but nevertheless I would like to know the effect of such sales in Canada, if any. If he does not have any information right now, perhaps later on in correspondence he could indicate to members of the Standing Committee on Agriculture and others interested in this issue whether any increases in sales of this commodity are expected.

I am looking forward to the Bill going to committee so that we can have a full and thorough discussion on the whole issue of price stabilization, Mr. Speaker. I must say in closing that I and all members of the committee are looking forward to what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will do with the report he received recently concerning farm financing. I am sure that the Parliamentary Secretary will seize the occasion and jolt the Minister of Finance a bit to ensure that the Budget will address the three Conservative campaign promises which were made to the farmers concerning farm financing, Section 31 of the Income Tax Act, and of course the agri-bond issue. We are really looking forward to the Parliamentary Secretary using his influence and muscle on the Minister of Finance to ensure that the farmers of Canada get the best deal out of this Budget.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate. The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I see terrified Tories across the way.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Shaking.

Mr. Nystrom: They are shaking in their boots.

Bill C-25, Mr. Speaker, as we all know, affects the farmers of this country. It is very similar to the Bill introduced by Mr. Whelan when he was Minister of Agriculture. Perhaps that shows there is no real difference between the Liberal Party on the one hand and the Conservative Party on the other.

Mr. Boudria: I would not go that far. Just call it plagiarism on their part.

Mr. Nystrom: We have now had that confirmed by my Liberal friend on the right saying it is plagiarism. So it is a carbon copy of Mr. Whelan's Bill. Maybe that is why the Tories are so quiet. I challenge you, Mr. Speaker: if you can tell me the difference between the two Bills, I will sit down and not even speak today. There is no fundamental difference whatsoever. It is Mr. Whelan reincarnated; all that is missing is the big green Stetson. You are sitting in a big green chair, Mr. Speaker, so maybe that is a substitute. But there is really no difference whatsoever between the two.

Mr. Tupper: It was never a priority for Whelan.

Mr. Nystrom: I am not sure of that; I do not know whether or not it was. Certainly it was not a priority for the Liberal Party. But my dear departed friend, Mr. Whelan, was quite popular with a lot of farmers across this land so I would not be that rough on him.

The Bill itself is designed to stabilize farm incomes in the short run, particularly regarding red meat products like beef and hogs. As I said before, it is identical in principle to the Whelan Bill, as well as in most of the details which this Parliament discussed in the past. The Bill would establish a framework to negotiate agricultural stabilization agreements between the federal Government and the provinces. This is particularly important to producers of red meat products, as I said before. The stabilization plan would be voluntary and tripartite in nature, involving the provinces, the federal Government and the producers. It would stabilize farm incomes at 90 per cent of their previous five-year average.

We in this Party have some serious problems with the Bill as drafted. We had serious problems with the Whelan Bill last year, and those problems have not gone away. In many ways this Bill stabilizes poverty. If prices continue to go down, there will not be an increase which is in any way whatsoever relevant to the cost of production or to what a farmer needs to make a living in this country. If, for example, the price for a certain commodity were $50 one year, $50 the next year, $50 the third and fourth, then it fell to $35, then stabilization would bring it up a few dollars. The next year, let us say, it is $35 again, and stabilization brings it up a few dollars, but the average continues to slide. The lower the prices go, the lower the stabilization price drops because stabilization is 90 per cent of the previous five-year average. So that does not do anything for the farmer except maybe for a small step or creep forward. That is about all it does for the farmer. It stabilizes his low prices at a very low level.

I am very surprised to see the Conservative Party reintroduce the old Whelan Bill, lock, stock and barrel. I remember that it got very upset about this. The Conservatives used to scream about it, speak out against it, and—it is too bad the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle) is not here. I remember very well that when he spoke on this Bill when it was introduced in the last Parliament, he was very articulate in saying it was a horrible Bill. It was going to do great harm to the pork producers in the Province of Quebec. By the way, that provision is still here. I am sure, as a Member from Quebec, Mr. Speaker, you are very concerned about that because this Bill will not allow hog producers in Quebec or certain other producers in B.C., where there are provincial insurance plans for income, to participate. They are precluded from participating in this particular plan. So if there is a pay-out from the federal plan, it would not be done provincially because producers already have provincial insurance plans. I remember very well in the election campaign the—

[Translation]

During the election campaign, the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle), if I remember correctly, gave a symbolic cheque for $13 million to the Quebec Farm Producers Association—$13 million! Maybe the Hon. Member for Joliette is a very rich man and has a lot of money, Mr. Speaker, but during the election campaign, he said that he was against the Whelan Bill, that he was very much opposed to this Bill. He told Quebec families: Vote for the Progressive Conservative Party and I will change the Bill . . . I have here a symbolic cheque for $13 million for Quebec's pork producers and beef producers and for Quebec farmers. But now he is a Member of Cabinet, things are different, and the same Bill Mr. Whelan brought forward is now being introduced again by the Conservative Government, and as I said before, what is the difference, why the same Bill, Mr. Speaker, why has the Progressive Conservative Party broken another election promise?

• (1430)

[English]

I know that my good friend, the doctor from Ontario, is very upset by this breach of election promises. I am sure he is very anxious to get to his feet to denounce the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) on this particular law now before the House. When he was in opposition he supported and applauded speeches against it. He even applauded our speeches once in a while, but now he is silent. He is the docile doc sitting in his corner of the House. I am sure that in a few more months he will have the courage of his convictions and will rise in the House like a tiger to denounce the Government which has broken so many election promises.

We are concerned about the Bill for two or three reasons. First, we believe that the Bill is inadequate. It is a rehash of the old Whelan program. Although it is a stabilization of farm incomes for certain products, it is nothing more than a stabilization of poverty or a stabilization of farm incomes at a low level. We believe that the solution is to pay the farmer a price based on the cost of production and a fair return for what the farmer is paying. In other words, we want an income insurance plan or parity price that would provide the farmer with real income with which to look after his farm and raise his family.

Second, I appeal to my friends in the Liberal Party not to support this Bill holus-bolus. We should send this Bill to committee and have very open committee hearings. We must have a process which allows the farmers of Canada to appear and make their arguments to convince the Government to be open to change and to amend the Bill which is before us today. The Government is headed in the wrong direction. Its solution is inadequate and does not solve the underlying problem of low prices for farm products and high input costs to produce a crop.

One of the problems of farmers is that their farm input costs are so high. When I was in my riding recently a farmer showed me a little worm gear from an air cleaner on a combine. This tiny worm gear is made of plastic, weighs about an ounce, and is about one and three-quarters inches long. That particular item costs $32. He told me that he would have to sell 480 pounds of wheat in order to pay for this small item for the air conditioner of his combine. He asked why he could not get a return for his product based on his cost of production.

Any agricultural debate in the country is very important for a number of reasons. Agriculture is the basic and most important industry in the country. If the farmer is better off, the rest of Canadians are better off. If the farmer on the Prairies is better off, my friend from Nickel Belt is better off in the big City of Sudbury. If the farmer in Quebec or Ontario is better off, the worker at White Farm or Massey-Ferguson in Brantford is better off. If the farmer in British Columbia is better off, there are more jobs in the towns and cities for the young people of the country.

In order to create jobs we must stimulate the farm economy and other basic resources such as the forestry and the fishery. We build on what we have. As the Prime Minister of the country has said so often, "You dance with who brung you". He is not perpetuating that in legislation, and I know it is not proper grammar, but that is what he said. We must start with the basic industries in the country, namely, agriculture and mineral resources.

Mr. Rodriguez: With nickel.

Mr. Nystrom: My friend behind me says "nickel". I think he has nickel on the mind, but I am not really surprised since he comes from Nickel Belt.

That is where we must start, Mr. Speaker, but I have a feeling that the Government is not going in that direction. It wants to rebuild the country relying on two things only; big business and its friendship with Ronald Reagan and the administration in the White House.

Mr. Boudria: Don't forget their relatives.

Mr. Nystrom: Well, there are lots of relatives and lots of patronage, but they learned that from the Liberal Party and nothing has changed.

The Government relies on big business and its friendship with the Americans. Many people thought that with the new Prime Minister and his rhetoric about "good old Ronnie down in the White House" we would have a tremendous relationship with the United States which would help us here in the north. They had a conference in Quebec City and talked about free trade—

[Translation]

—free exchange of goods between Canadians and Americans, free trade for our agricultural commodities and manufactured goods.

[English]

No sooner had the wheels gone up on the aircraft carrying President Reagan back to the White House, than his administration in the United States slapped a 12 per cent tariff on Canadian hogs going across the border into the United States. No sooner had he returned to Washington after all this great rhetoric about free trade and after the expensive songs that Brian sang in Quebec City which cost taxpayers over $.5 million—

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) on a point of order.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member knows full well that he must refer to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) by his name rather than "Brian".

[English]

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) does not know the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) as well as I do. I have known him as Brian for a long time and he knows me as Lorne. The next time I have a chance I will introduce her to the Prime Minister of Canada.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) on a point of order.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid this is abusing the House. The Hon. Member is really making a mockery of our rules. It is for the sake of decorum and for the protection of the House that we have certain rules. I do not see how the Hon. Member can think he can get out of that.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I would remind the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) that the Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) is right in her point of order. I give the floor to the Member for Yorkton-Melville.

Mr. Nystrom: I suppose that comes from her vast experience. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

We had a conference in Quebec and a lot of talk about free trade, improved relations between Americans and Canadians, and how this would be of great benefit for Canada. Yet, as soon as the President left, there was the announcement of a 12 per cent tariff on Canadian hogs. The Canadian hog industry is worth around $2 billion per year to the Canadian economy. Only a few days ago there was an announcement that States such as Iowa, Nebraska and Oklahoma were banning the importation of Canadian hogs. Where is this new relationship, Mr. Speaker? What does free trade mean for this country? Is it free trade for Canada but protectionism for the United States?

It is due to such actions as I described that farmers of the country need more protection and more money. For that reason I recommend that the House introduce legislation to provide farmers with a guarantee on cost of production and a decent return. I was very pleased that the House referred to committee the subject matter of Bill C-235 on parity pricing. That Bill would provide farmers with their costs of production and a decent return. It would cover wheat, oats, barley, hogs, and beef. For the portion consumed in this country the farmer would receive a parity price based on the cost of production. I do not think that is asking too much. It is asking for no more than what other Canadians receive for the work they do. As Members of Parliament we are often criticized for our high salaries. Perhaps the Canadian population is right that we are overpaid for what we produce. Obviously, that was the opinion last summer because over half the Members did not come back. However, MPs' salaries are adjusted every year according to the cost of living, as is the case with other people in our society who have collective agreements. Even senior citizens get a minuscule increase of $3 or $4 every three months on their pension cheques if the cost of living goes up.

• (1440)

The argument made by our Party and by an increasing number of farmers in Canada is that they too should be paid a price that has some relevance to what it costs them to produce a bushel of wheat or raise a hog on the farm, a price that has some relevance to the cost of repairs on their tractors or to the interest rate or price of fuel in this country.

That is what farmers are telling this Parliament. The concept of parity pricing means that farmers do not want a subsidy, a hand-out or a charity. All they want is a fair price from the market-place so that if interest rates, fuel or the price of machinery go up, the price that a Canadian pays for a loaf of bread or a bottle of beer will go up as well. I do not think that is asking for too much. Let us use wheat as an example. If the price of wheat goes up $5 a bushel and the farmer were to receive the entire $5 a bushel for the increase in the price of wheat, the price of a loaf of bread for the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) would go up eight cents a loaf. I ask: is an extra eight cents a loaf too much to pay to give the farmer an extra $5 a bushel for the wheat he is producing to make that bread? Perhaps the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) indulges from time to time and wants to have a beer.

Mr. Rodriguez: I don't drink.

Mr. Nystrom: Let us say the Member from Newfoundland wanted a beer. If we raised the price of beer by 40 cents a dozen and gave all of that 40 cents to the farmer who produces malting barley for the beer, the price of malting barley would go up $10 a bushel.

We can afford that in this country. If we had a price based on the cost of production and on a decent return, we could keep many more farmers on the land, solve many farm bankruptcy problems in this country, and provide more jobs to young people from coast to coast since farming is the base industry in this country.

There are other examples besides bread and beer. The corn farmers of Ontario will know that often it costs more to run contests for cereals with respect to processing the coupons and advertising the contents than what the farmer gets for the corn that goes into the cornflakes.

Mr. Boudria: I have never heard of anyone winning, anyway.

Mr. Nystrom: The Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) says that he has never heard of anyone who won. Maybe it is because he is in the wrong Party. I think there is something terribly wrong in our society if the farmer receives less than what it costs to process a coupon on a cereal box.

We believe that the farmer should get a parity price that is based on the cost of production. It would stimulate the small business community and provide more jobs for young people. It would stimulate the entire Canadian economy.

This can be done without a subsidy. It can be done without increasing the national debt. It can be done without imposing more taxes on the Canadian people. I believe that it is the kind of direction we should be taking in our society today.

The Government often speaks of the huge Liberal debt with which it was saddled. I repeat that the farmers are not asking for a hand-out, but for a more fair share of the proceeds from the market-place. I believe we can afford to pay that in this country.

[Translation]

I think the crisis in agriculture is now very serious in this country. I have here a list of farm bankruptcies over the last 6 or 7 years in this country.

Six years ago, in 1979, there were 125 farm bankruptcies in Canada. The following year, 1980, 220 farms went bankrupt. In 1981, there were 261; in 1982, 410; in 1983, 488; in 1984, more than 500, yes 551 farmers went bankrupt here in Canada. And during the first quarter of 1985, 152 farmers went bankrupt across Canada. This is a very serious situation. It is very serious in Quebec, very serious in my own Province of Saskatchewan, very serious across the entire country.

Mr. Speaker, six years ago, in 1979, farm indebtedness in Canada was $14.6 billion. Two years later, it had increased to $18.5 billion. And, last year, in 1984, farm indebtedness In Canada totalled $20.7 billion.

[English]

We have had an increase in the farm debt from 1979 to 1984 from $14.6 billion to $20.7 billion. Farm incomes have not gone up. The realized net income of farmers in 1975, was some $3.8 billion. In 1978, it was $3.1 billion. In 1981, it was $4.2 billion. In 1983, it was $3.3 billion and in 1984, it was $3.8 billion. The realized net income of farmers in 1984 was exactly what it was in 1975, that is, $3.8 billion. Although nine years have passed, farmers' income has not gone up. I suggest that something is terribly wrong in our system.

I suggest that Bill C-25 is no different from the Bill introduced in the last Parliament by the Liberals and Mr. Whelan as Minister of Agriculture. Perhaps that is why my hon. friend from the Liberal Party was so anxious to jump into bed with the Conservative Government earlier this morning and again this afternoon in promising support at second reading for this particular Bill. It is the same type of Bill that we have seen before.

I suggest that this Bill is inadequate because it stabilizes farm incomes at 90 per cent of the previous five-year average. Would Members of Parliament agree to pass a Bill in the House that would stabilize our incomes as MPs at 90 per cent of our previous five-year average? That would be a disaster for the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty) because he would lose half of his taxes. Yet we are being asked to pass legislation that would have that effect on farmers.

A second major concern is one which will anger Quebec farmers. Some provinces have provincial income insurance programs. In Quebec, it is based on the cost of production of hog farmers and others. The same situation exists in British Columbia. Farmers in those provinces will not qualify for this federal stabilization program. I do not believe that it is fair that a province and its farmers should be penalized by a federal program because that province is enlightened and progressive with respect to an income insurance program. I appeal to my friends to make that change in the committee so that we would not penalize the farmers of Quebec and British Columbia.

I remind the House that according to the Constitution of Canada, agriculture is co-jurisdictional. It comes under the responsibility of both the federal Government and the provinces. Both the provinces and the federal Parliament have the right to legislate, and the provinces should not be penalized by federal legislation, as is the case with this federal legislation. I appeal again to my colleagues to make that particular change. Most important, we need legislation that will give the farmer his cost of production back and a decent return. I think we have a consensus today. We have a consensus for parity prices in western Canada, in Quebec, and in parts of Ontario, and I appeal to this House to get on with it and to provide the farmers with legislation that will help each and every one of them.

• (1450)

Mr. A. H. Harry Brightwell (Perth): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act. There is a critical need to reshape this part of the agricultural industry in Canada.

I have listened to my hon. colleagues across the floor. I heard the cute rat, the mean rat, the shrill rat and the Newfie rat talk about the slowness of this Government to introduce legislation. Yet I remember the time last week when a Member on the other side stood up and said: "I have spoken four times on this Bill this week". Anyone on the other side who is trying to blame this Government for delaying tactics on this Bill is simply not telling the truth.

I have heard a socialist Member talk about guaranteeing income. He would have every farmer on the government payroll. Farmers would have no incentive for free enterprise, for making money and getting ahead. This is totally unacceptable based on our deficit position. It would be unacceptable in any case because it would run us into a deficit.

I represent the riding of Perth in southwestern Ontario. Within my riding is the City of Stratford, and within that city is the flagship of Canadian theatre. We have a diversified riding. Next week the Stratford Shakespearian Festival will open its thirty-third season. It is quite a coincidence in that we are now in our thirty-third Parliament. Surrounding the City of Stratford is the beautiful County of Perth. I have some of the best farmers farming some of the best farm land in Canada. I know that is also true of the county south of me and around me, the County of Oxford.

These days, however, many farmers are hurting. The stage was set a few years ago when Canada was caught in an inflation spiral that was pushed along by our Liberal predecessors. At the time, the psychology was that if you did not invest, inflation would kill you, but if you did invest, inflation was supposed to pull you out. Later, spiralling interest rates and low commodity prices brought Canada to the ground. Now the survivors as well are hurting from unfair competition both from outside and from inside Canada. The outside competition is most obvious. It comes from the European Economic Community. That community has a policy of self-sufficiency in food. The EEC has subsidized products without care for the amount produced.

We were hit when the EEC changed its policy. Instead of producing 150 per cent of the needs of the EEC, 125 per cent of its meat and dairy requirements were produced. This brought the EEC to the point where one-sixth of its dairy herd cattle was slaughtered, resulting in mountains of boned frozen meat, which created our problem. There was so much meat, the EEC had to rent facilities outside of the community for storage purposes. When one has high storage costs, it is not too hard to realize that the next step is subsdization of sales. Meat arrived at Canada's border with an export subsidy of 35 per cent. This was less than the original subsidy after appeals from the Government.

Last year, Canada's farmers had to compete with 50 million pounds of beef from the EEC that was subsidized well over 35 per cent, probably in the range of 60 per cent. Figures show that European farmers get about 39 per cent of their income from Governments while Canadian farmers get only 12 per cent.

I know that our Ontario farmers would not want to have subsidies. They can and will compete with farmers the world over, but they cannot compete with foreign treasuries, for instance, the EEC. One must hope that the EEC will come to its senses soon and decrease subsidies. But even then, Mr. Speaker, we will still be faced with the impact of the subsidies as we have in the dairy cut-backs.

Outside competition also exists in Canada. Farmers in one area compete with provincial treasuries in other provinces. This is why Bill C-25 is so important because it will open a path to a uniform subsidy plan across Canada.

Some regions of Canada are more suited to certain forms of agriculture than are others. I believe all will accept that western Canada is particularly suited to beef production because of its thousands of acres of grassland. As well, southwestern Ontario is blessed with good land and a favourable climate. Perhaps even more important, southwestern Ontario is close to the major population centres of Ontario and our export market. Other areas of Canada do not have the same advantage and agriculture there does not flourish as well.

However, few provincial Governments can accept that. Agriculture, when it is thriving, can make the rest of the country go. It is one of the most potent, perhaps the most potent, economic forces that exist. Therefore, provinces have established their own forms of subsidy. Even to speak about these subsidies is most difficult. Until very recently there was no compilation of support policies across Canada. There is now a report in this connection in the draft stage.

If we speak about swine, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the best source of information would be the U.S.A. where interest groups have studied our program to defend the imposition of countervailing duties.

We can accept in general that farmers in the EEC get 39 per cent of their income through their Governments, in the U.S.A. about 36 per cent, while Canadian farmers get only about 12 per cent. The support in Canada is not equal. It is an average of all the support. Ontario and Alberta, the have provinces which contribute to the equalization payments that help other provincial treasuries, have the lowest subsidies. Perhaps because of the natural advantages on which I have already touched, these farmers survive. These farmers are now competing with farmers who are more heavily subsidized in other provinces, subsidized perhaps with money sent in equalization payments.

Examples of provincial subsidies can best be shown in the hog industry. I would like to speak of the hog industry because Perth County produces more hogs than any other similar area in Canada.

In Prince Edward Island the subsidy can best be described as bipartite or coming from two parties, the provincial Government and the producer. The enrolled producers are supported to a level of 95 per cent of the total operational costs of an efficient producer. These costs include depreciation and interest charges. If the price of hogs goes up, the farmers begin to donate to the stabilization fund.

If one accepts that the costs in eastern Canada are higher and prices are set according to Ontario and to export prices, it is easy to see that this fund will nearly always be in a deficit position with the money coming continually from the provincial treasury. In 1984, this program cost Prince Edward Island nearly $1 million.

In Quebec, enrolled farmers have income stabilized to include their cost plus 70 per cent to 100 per cent of a specialized workers' income. Farmers do participate in this plan but the Government input is always twice that of the hog producer. I understand that in 1984, enrolled Quebec farmers received approximately $24 a hog. If the provincial treasury paid its two-thirds share, then each hog was subsidized to the tune of $16. Of course, all of these programs are based on good average producers. Farmers with better graded hogs, and the more efficient ones, received the subsidy and a profit.

If we get back to Ontario and Alberta farmers, we find only the subsidies that farmers get across Canada, for example, some relief in taxes, some assistance with drainage, and some interest relief for beginning farmers or farmers in difficulty. The Ontario hog farmer does get a stabilization payment under the Agricultural Stabilization Act if prices are low compared to a five-year average. This takes the bumps out of the rapidly changing hog prices, but it does not guarantee a profit. We are aiming to keep the farmers on the farm in times of drastic cuts rather than to keep them on the farm with a guaranteed profit. In 1984, a payment was made. In 1985, there will be no payment. Not only do Ontario farmers have no subsidy this year, but they must compete with farmers whose hogs are subsidized. The Ontario production of hogs is about equal to the consumption in Ontario. However, other provinces sell thousands of live hogs in our market. Other countries, like Denmark, also penetrate our market. Then our surplus hogs find their way to the American market.

• (1500)

When we speak of the American market we must mention countervailing duties. The strong American dollar and government policies are combining to put unusual pressure on the American farmer. With an increasing amount of our pork entering the American market—and it is only a fraction of that market—American farmers thought it was unnecessary and unfair and successfully moved to have a countervailing duty applied. This duty was defended on the basis of a Canadian subsidy. Ironically it is the Ontario farmer who bears the brunt of this duty, while it is other parts of the country, particularly those to the east, which obtain the subsidy or are cushioned from the effect of subsidy by income guarantees.

We have heard comment about our friendship with the American Government and with the American President. In June the President of the United States will have to decide whether the duties will be applied. He has the final signing authority. The process up until now did not involve a presidential decision. I submit to the House that it is fine for us to have a good relationship with the President of the United States rather than the controversial relationship of the past. If there is a chance for this duty to be removed, there is more of a chance now than there was at any other time.

I hope I have laid the groundwork to demonstrate that a national tripartite scheme is essential. It should not be thought that every region in Canada should be subsidized in relation to its particular costs. Pork produced in Canada is Canadian pork, and all producers should produce on an equal basis. This is particularly important when one considers that present plans encourage over-production and that our subsidized products are exported to foreign buyers. Such a common system will become possible with the amendments proposed under Bill C-25. Four provinces have already agreed that tripartite plans should be in place—Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—which represent somewhat over half the producers in Canada. They only await legislation for the plan to go ahead. To delay passage of this Bill any longer would place pressure on these provinces to initiate their own plans and to enter the interprovincial wars of treasuries being fought in farmers' backyards.

Under a tripartite agreement, the provinces would drop their regional subsidies and production in Canada would fall back to a more rational, market sensitive level. Each participant—the provinces, the federal Government and enrolled producers—would pay equal shares. Unlike present provincial plans, the maximum amount of any government input would be 3 per cent of gross sales of the product. In certain circumstances I understand the producer might be allowed to increase his payments to obtain a bigger pay-out.

The tripartite agreement would allow payments to be made promptly in respect of those products lending themselves to quarterly adjustments. For instance, for hogs and feeder cattle payments could be made on a quarterly basis. For other crops like wheat, payments could be made at the end of a crop season. The tripartite support prices would be such that there would be no incentive to over-produce and each commodity would have its own fund, recognizing the unique characteristics of the commodity, for instance, the difference in a cow-calf operation where costs are relatively static and the calf comes once a year, and the production of backgrounders, a term I never heard until I came to Ottawa, which means light feeder cattle, where the turnover can be as little as three months.

Within the tripartite agreements will be provisions that pay-outs will occur only on domestically consumed products. The Americans have shown more understanding of similar plans, and under such plans countervailing duties would be less likely.

Certainly the farmers of Ontario will welcome this Bill with its great potential to bring stability to farm incomes. Other farmers, particularly those who are benefiting from generous schemes, schemes funded partially by equilization payments from the have provinces, will initially fear the effects. However, our farmers are important to the nation and agriculture is an important tool to our economy. We cannot allow provincial boundaries to become the battle lines between farmers. We cannot afford to pour in more money, funded by loans, to push production in less favoured areas while the more favoured, efficient areas are torn down. The agreements which are possible under the amendments to the Agricultural Stabilization Act are important to the future of Canadian farmers. I am pleased to be able to add my support to its passage.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I want to correct an impression which I think the Hon. Member did not intend to leave. This is not a stabilization of farm income Bill; it is a stabilization of commodity prices Bill. One of its weaknesses is that it attempts to stabilize the commodity price. If the market price continues to go down, the result will be a lower stabilized price every year.

Following upon his remarks, I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question. He abhors the import of subsidized products into the country. I suppose that is a real concern on the part of all of us who are either farmers or deal with farmers or with products that have to compete with these imports. In the case of EEC beef, would the Hon. Member explain why his Government did not do something else rather than cave in to the EEC and increase the quota? Originally it was 5.9 per cent, and now we understand that the level will be three times that amount. Why did the Government do that? It invites more beef into the country to compete with Canadian beef.

Mr. Brightwell: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. The problem with European beef started, as I mentioned in my speech, when the EEC suddenly had surplus beef which it had to dispose of and subsidized its sale. Canadian beef farmers became aware of the problem and tried to set up a hearing under the GATT agreement to see if it could be withdrawn. We understand that last August a decision was made within the bureaucracy indicating that frozen boned beef was not in fact a beef product, that beef producers could not appeal, and that if there was to be an appeal it would have to be done by the producers of frozen meat products. That occurred last August before this Government was involved. As the problem grew, the Government applied a restriction and held hearings. The amount of meat coming into Canada has been drastically reduced. I have not heard the final decision, but it would seem that we have either to accept that amount of meat, because the problems were created before we came into power, or to pay the penalty of $50 million. It should be remembered that the quota about which we are talking is less than half the amount of beef which came in last year. It is probably less than a third of the amount of meat which would have come in this year if we had not taken the strong action we took.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is forgetting the other side of the problem, that is, the threat to other industries. Because of the quota which has been established and the failure to take action to make it less profitable for this beef to come into the country by establishing a countervailing duty, or something of that nature, we are threatening other products such as honey and maple syrup. In fact, I could provide a list of some 20 products. What fear does the Government have about placing a countervailing duty on this beef? Everyone accepts the idea that it is subsidized. The last figure I heard was probably as high as $1 per kilogram. That would mean that we would put a fairly hefty tariff on it within the GATT.

● (1510)

Mr. Brightwell: Mr. Speaker, I was fully aware of the penalties that were being threatened by the European Economic Community. I was there in March. We were told that Canada had two choices, either to negotiate on the basis of accepting more meat and paying the penalties on products coming in, or go for an agreement under the GATT. That is still open to us. To go under the GATT takes time. The product floods in in even greater amounts. This is probably a self-limiting amount. When the surplus is exhausted, we will not be flooded with beef from the European Economic Community. It will probably come from some other area, and we will have to watch that.

We were put in the position that we had to negotiate. If we apply more duties on this, we involve a large group with far greater power and more trading aspects. We are in surplus trade with them and they can penalize us even more. We cannot do it without a negotiated settlement, what we are approaching right now.

Mr. Hovdebo: The United States did not wait. They did not have to go through the GATT process, which takes a long time. I agree that it does. The United States put on a countervailing duty against our hogs which went into effect immediately. The money is going into a trust. It has had the effect of reducing the price of pork from 75 cents in some areas, and even to 58 cents the other day. If the United States can do that under GATT, why can Canada not do the same on beef?

Mr. Brightwell: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few comments. First, we are dealing with the United States which is dealing with another group of equal power. Second, the hearings in the United States did not occur immediately. The Hon. Member simply is not informed. They went through at least three stages. At the present time, they are still not complete. These duties that are being collected could come back, subject to the decision which will be handed down June 7. It was not an immediate decision. I do not know under what law it was done, but it was probably under the GATT. I could be informed about that. I do not know how it was done.

Mr. Hovdebo: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it could possibly be returned. The effect of that return will not help the farmer who sold the pork unless he sold it through a marketing board, in only a couple of provinces. It has had the effect of making it unprofitable to ship our pork to the United States, consequently reducing the effective income of the hog farmer.

Mr. Brightwell: Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge that the countervailing duties have had the effect of reducing prices, probably from 73 cents to 63 cents. There is a philosophy that may be having an effect on the total North American market. At the same time as our prices are coming down, American prices have come down as well. Our dollar has fluctuated to a degree. Therefore, there have been other factors than the countervailing duties.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to make a few comments on Bill C-25, an Act to provide some stabilization to red meat prices in this country.

I should begin by stating that I have never had a great deal of expertise, in fact I have very little, with respect to agriculture in this country. In my part of the country the fishery and forestry are the resource industries and primary areas for job creation. There are a number of small farmers in my riding. I have taken an interest and tried to learn something about the difficulty that farmers encounter. Earlier this week I had the opportunity to meet with some gentlemen from the great Province of Alberta, members of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. They came to my office to begin the process of educating me. They told me of the difficulties that farmers in this country face in trying to make a living, trying to provide food for our tables in Canada and elsewhere around the world. At the same time, they are trying to make a decent living for themselves and their families.

I rise today to support Bill C-25. There is no question that the Bill is necessary. Although there is a fair amount of controversy within the agricultural community about whether it represents a solid step in the right direction vis-à-vis the American threats of countervail and the American attitude with respect to fish and lumber, and in recent days we saw prevention of the importation of pork into their country, nevertheless until somebody comes up with a better solution I feel I have no choice but to support the notion of a tripartite red meat stabilization program.

Marketing stability has been a common characteristic of beef and pork producers. Even though prices over the years, particularly on the red meat side since 1974, have been very unstable, fluctuating up and down, these producers nevertheless have the responsibility to make long-term investment decisions. Those decisions carry with them a responsibility to undertake long-term repayment programs. It is very difficult when you do not know from year to year what kind of return you will have on your investment. It is difficult to know whether you can provide a reasonable return on your investment and a reasonable income for your family in the first instance. In the final analysis, and more important, you do not know whether you will have the kind of income to meet those long-term mortgage payments. If Bill C-25 prevents to some degree the fluctuation in market prices and ensures that producers can make long-term plans and at least have some assurance of a base price for their product, I support the Bill.

I have one problem with the Bill coming up at this time. We have seen reports in recent days, such as the one I have before me in which the general manager of the Saskatchewan Pork Producers Marketing Board, Mr. Jim Morris, has indicated that the farm commodity stabilization programs, the whole range of those programs across Canada, may have to be dismantled if producers want to continue selling in the U.S. market without paying heavy penalties.

When you have someone of that calibre and that kind of interest and input in this industry coming back from the United States, talking to producers in that country, suggesting that on the countervail side Canada may be in serious difficulty unless we begin to dismantle stabilization programs, and we may see more and more protectionist measures being adopted in that country to prevent the import of Canadian products, then I am a bit concerned that perhaps we have to do our homework before this Bill is passed. We ought to be sure that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) have received assurances from our friends to the south that the net result of passing Bill C-25 will not be a knee-jerk reaction south of the border. Every one in this House is familiar with the news reports of the last few days of western produced pork being prohibited from going south of the border. I am a bit concerned about that kind of trend spreading to red meat if we pass this Bill without first assuring ourselves of the reaction it will receive south of the border.

• (1520)

I repeat that I support the Bill. The Bill does not solve all the problems of the agricultural community in this country. It is a very small step, a temporary solution, taken before these trade discussions with our neighbours to the south have been concluded. As one who is not familiar with farming, one who did not grow up in a farming environment and does not understand the blood, sweat and tears, the part of your life that a farmer invests in trying to make a living from the land, I received a message. I did not entirely appreciate it. For the first time, a few days ago, I had a good discussion with some farmers. I was given a look at the way farmers' incomes have moved over the last 10 years. I saw that even though cash flow associated with the farming operation has increased dramatically, even though the cost of equipment and competitive technology has increased dramatically, and even though the number of bankruptcies are on the rise, real farm income over the last 10 or 12 years has not moved.

It seems to me that parliamentarians have the responsibility to ensure that there is a degree of justice and fairness for people who have chosen to make their living on farms. Through my discussions I learned that farmers have not had any real or significant increases in their incomes over the last 10 years. If there were any other single group in society that could organize itself with one voice and had not had a real increase in income in the last 10 years it would be here on Parliament Hill demanding that the Government pay serious attention to its problems.

The solution is not simple. Obviously one of the most important problems with which we as parliamentarians must come to grips is in providing farmers and those in the agricultural community with the ability to borrow money at interest rates that allow them to make a decent living and retain some cash at the end of the year that can be reinvested in their farms to keep their farms productive and to keep the Canadian agricultural industry competitive.

The Government made a great many promises to farmers during last summer's election. As one who knows very little about this industry, but is going to learn more, I will assume that those promises were made in good faith. If those promises were made in good faith, and if pledges to assist farmers and allow them to live with dignity and a sense of just reward meant anything at all, then the Government had better come forward with a program that will allow farmers to borrow money from FCC or on the open market at interest rates that reflect their ability to repay. As it stands right now, we are driving farmers into the ground.

One can only assume, looking at the data, that it must be a love of labour that keeps many of these people going. It certainly cannot be the financial reward involved. When looking at the kind of incomes farmers have, given their investment and their time spent sometimes over generations, they are not farming out of love of money.

I rise today to support the Bill before us. I would like to add that the farmers of Atlantic Canada are having a difficult time as well. When one hears red meat producers from Ontario,

Quebec and elsewhere screaming that it is tough out there, one can be assured that it is twice as tough in Atlantic Canada, because the farmers of Atlantic Canada import feed and grain from Central Canada for their livestock. The producers of Atlantic Canada spend as much as 30 per cent to 35 per cent of their over-all costs bringing grain into the Atlantic region. Right now, the subsidies that have been paid over the years to bring that grain into Atlantic Canada are being eroded. We are seeing the Government move to increase freight rates through those Crown corporations which are responsible for moving freight in Atlantic Canada.

For the Atlantic Provinces, and particularly the island provinces of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, whenever there is an over-all increase in freight rates, the cost of living and the cost of doing business is affected. Moving things by freight to Newfoundland is not a question of taking the scenic route by the sea versus some other route. When there is bulk material that needs to be moved over 90 miles of water, the sea is the only way to go.

When dramatic increases are applied with no thought to the effect of those increases, the net result is a dramatic increase in the cost of living. In fact, when unemployment rates in most provinces went down three-tenths of 1 per cent, it went up 2.3 per cent in Newfoundland, due in large measure to the Government's move to increase freight rates to an island province where no other alternative is available for moving grain, livestock or consumable goods. The Government brought in an increase with no thought to its impact on the people of that province.

With those few words and with a great deal of humility, as a man who has much to learn—has barely scratched the surface—but has a passion for the difficulties of farmers, I urge Hon. Members to see this Bill passed in reasonable time.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment to make to which the Hon. Member might like to add. I would point out to the Hon. Member that his knowledge of the primary industry of fishing gives him the kind of knowledge and authority required to speak on the problems of farmers. Their problems are very similar and have the same effect.

I appreciated particularly the Hon. Member's last words regarding transportation. The farmers and other producers in remote areas are affected by transportation costs. For example, I feel that Saskatchewan and other areas like the Peace River country are remote areas. By setting up increases in freight rates on a percentage basis, when those in the remote areas are already paying more than those who are closer to central Canada, a real penalty is put on those who live farther away from the market. That penalty then becomes a part of the cost of production to the farmer and the fisherman. If a farmer has to pay an extra dollar a bushel to ship his grain, that means he receives a dollar a bushel less. If the price of grain is set at $7 at Thunder Bay, the farmer in the Peace River country receives only $5. I appreciated the approach taken by the Hon. Member because it had not been taken previously.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his generosity. I was terrified that he was going to ask me some complex questions about a subject about which I admit freely I do not have a great deal of expertise.

Indeed, one of the approaches that is being taken by the Government that concerns me is its approach to the agricultural community. This approach affects the notion that people have the ability to choose where they want to live, and to have a life-style that is uniquely their own in the case of those who have lived in rural areas for hundreds of years. If these people are not actively supported, then at least they ought not to have difficulties placed in their way for choosing to live a certain life-style.

In the past, we always had the notion of regional development and regional assistance. As a goal, we wanted to remove regional disparities. We were trying to provide, at the very minimum, services to meet the basic needs and requirements of the people across this land on an equal basis.

● (1530)

I believe the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has a somewhat different attitude. It is an attitude which indicates, "User-pay. That is the concept we shall apply." It is an attitude which indicates that those who live in the areas of the largest population shall benefit first and foremost from the services of the Government. I don't object to that, I really don't. But I believe that those who live in the rural areas, off the beaten path, and who have lived there for generations, choosing a life-style which reflects rural Canada, or the north, should also be able to expect the benefit of services and programs of the Government of Canada. But that is not the attitude taken by this Government which is too much concerned with a free market, private sector approach to providing goods and services to Canadians.

I am a free enterpriser from the word go. If I wanted to sell "rat pack" T-shirts, I would go out to the biggest market-place, because that would make sense. I wouldn't go to a place where there are the least number of people. But the Government is elected to represent all of the people no matter where they live in this country. It has an obligation to understand and to empathize with all of the people no matter where they live or what their circumstances might be. The Government's kind of market-place mentality will lead us to the point where we will have first, second, third and fourth class citizenships. That is a step in the wrong direction, Mr. Speaker.

My colleague talked about farmers who live off the beaten path, who do not live on the main transportation routes, whose business is not adjacent to the major market areas, and the additional cost they must bear to produce and get their product to market. He has concern about the cost of transportation and this Government's approach to it. I suspect that we understand each other very well.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to speak on Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act. First, I would like to define the situation surrounding this Bill, the situation on the farm front across Canada.

The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and the Hon. Member from Newfoundland began to define the kind of crisis situation which faces our farmers. This is probably the basic reason this Bill is before us, and why it was put before the previous Government about two years ago. It is the reason we so often stand in this House to speak about the problems of the farmers.

When the economic statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) was laced before this House last fall it was quite a blow to many farmers who suddenly realized that the bureaucracy, and many Hon. Members of the House of Commons, had no real insight into the problems of farming and agriculture. The economic statement of the Minister of Finance indicated a type of farm structure and return from farming which put the farmers in a category above most ordinary citizens. Exactly the opposite is true. A large portion of farmers, even the ones who appear to be well off, are living off their equity. Their equity is going down and their investment is going up. If one made that kind of investment in any other business in Canada, one would expect approximately 10 per cent or 12 per cent return on the investment. It is many years since the farmer received any return on his investment. That is the situation with which we are faced as this Bill is brought forward.

The Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville mentioned farm bankruptcies, as did the Hon. Member from Newfoundland. In 1979 there were 125 bankruptcies. In 1984 there were 551 bankruptcies. In the first three months of 1985, there have already been 152 bankruptcies. Those bankruptices are just the tip of the iceberg, Mr. Speaker, because most farmers recognize that they are going under and sell a piece of land in order to keep going for one more year, or they sell off half their herd. They decide they are not going to make it so they get out before they go bankrupt. They voluntarily leave farming. So the real problem is that farmers are leaving farming. Farms are being consolidated and a way of life of which we have been so proud is beginning to change. That change is not for the better because the person who takes over, although he may farm on a larger scale, faces exactly the same problems of too much debt and not enough return. Therefore, any kind of approach which would make survival of the farm community more certain is worthwhile taking.

I am pleased that the Government has brought forward this Bill. I hope that in the process of coming to some kind of acceptable Bill in the end, the Liberals and the Conservatives do not close the door, because this Bill is almost identical to the previous Bill. I hope they do not close ranks behind the Bill and exclude the possibility of making it worthwhile, because right now it is not a worthwhile Bill.

The farmers are not making enough return on their investment to survive. By suggesting that perhaps if we give them a little more for their commodity in the years in which they have a commodity to sell they possibly might survive is too much of a gamble. We must have something in place which is more secure than the idea that we can stabilize farm commodities, that the farmer will get 90 per cent of what he received for the last five years. As the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville suggested, if the market price continues to go down, we are stabilizing a lower price each year, and if the cost of operations continue to go up, the spread between the income of the farm and the cost of farming becomes closer, until finally the positions are reversed. That is the situation which faces many beef farmers today.

In one township in my riding, 36 square miles, a few years ago there were something like 2,000 cattle. One would be hard pressed to find 500 cattle in that area now. This has happened over the last four years or five years when farmers, although they have hung on, have lost money. Instead of going bankrupt they have got rid of their cattle in the hopes they could make it on straight grain.

Statistics Canada shows that in 1975, the income from farming was $10 billion. In 1984, it was doubled at $20 billion. That seems as if we are doing very well, that we have twice as much income from farming. But that is the gross income. But over that same period of time we have increased the costs of operation from $6.6 billion to $16.6 billion. In 1975 some 65 per cent of the farmer's gross income went to cover expenses. That left 35 per cent for gross profits, although that is being a little simplistic. But in 1984 some 82 per cent of gross farm income went to cover depreciation and operating expenses.

• (1540)

Several Members have said that the farmer's net income in 1984 is the same as it was in 1974, and that is correct. But that does not take into account the change in the value of the dollar. In constant dollar terms, farm income in 1984 is $1.9 billion, compared with $3.8 billion in 1974. In other words, it has been halved over that period of time, and that cannot go on. Therefore, this Government and the provincial Governments across Canada must do something about it.

We could spend a lot of time looking at the need for this Bill, but what we should be looking at is something that will make it possible for farmers to survive. We need a system of stabilization insurance that deals with the farmer's income, not the price of his commodity.

If you ask a beef producer, he will tell you that it is costing him at least 25 per cent more to raise an animal than he is going to get back. This Bill, if we allow it to go through unchanged, will stabilize that 25 per cent loss and in fact make it possible for that loss to be increased as time goes by, because the stabilization is based on 90 per cent of the average price over the past five years. Although this stabilization plan is a step forward, because over a short period of time you might have a dramatic price drop and this plan would even out the bump, as time goes on, unless the market improves, it will not help the farmer. So why not look at the farmer's total income and then put in place something to make it possible for that farmer to survive under almost any circumstances, or at least in those years when his returns are low.

A farmer faces not only market price problems, he faces bad weather, insect infestation and other problems. Therefore, farmers do not need just price stabilization. What good does it do if the price of grain is stabilized at $5 a bushel but the farmer has no grain to sell because it froze or the grasshoppers ate it? In the last two years we have had grasshopper problems in southeastern and southwestern Saskatchewan, and it looks like we are going to have another year of the same.

In approaching this Bill in committee we need to ask whether it does for farmers what is necessary. Does it put in place a survival plan so that in a bad year the farmer can survive, and in a good year he can make up what he lost in the bad year? As one farmer told me not too long ago, if he keeps this up for the next 10 years he will live but he will have nothing left, his equity will be zero. I think that is the situation faced by many farmers today. So this Bill is basically a step in the right direction, but it is so inadequate that we have to look at the basic problem and try to solve it in its entirety rather than piecemeal.

I could criticize small parts of the Bill, Mr. Speaker. For example, it does not establish one program, it establishes four programs. It is quite possible for the Government to carry on under this Bill in exactly the same way as before without any contribution, and perhaps farmers will accept that; no contribution and some payout under certain circumstances. It also allows the Government to make a deal with a province and not bring the producers into it at all. There has been considerable suggestion that the Bill is a tripartite approach, but it is not. It can be operated as a federal Government subsidy program alone, a provincial program alone, a federal-producer program, omitting the provincial Government, or a tripartite program, which has gotten the most publicity.

The farmers are looking to this Government for help. The Conservatives made a good start when they invaded Prince Albert during the election and made a lot of good promises about what they were going to do for farming, agriculture in general and transportation. The farmers look to them to fulfil their promises, but they also look to them to take a logical and worthwhile approach to agriculture generally. Although this Bill is almost exactly the same as the Whelan Bill of a year ago, it at least gives us an opportunity to air the problems faced by the agricultural community.

I am very glad that the Private Members' Bill on parity prices put before this House by the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) is also being referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture so it can be discussed relative to this particular approach as well.

I think that some day in Canada we will have a stabilization insurance program for agriculture under which the farmer will be assured of receiving an adequate income when the grasshoppers get him or when the frost gets him, or when there is too much rain or not enough. That is what we need. This Bill eases the pain but farmers are still going down the drain. If this Government really wants to do something worthwhile for the farmers it will look at farming as a basic industry and recognize it as being essential, just as fisheries and forestry are essential. We must decide what is necessary for them to survive, and then take certain steps in that direction.

• (1550)

Farmers do not want hand-outs. They want to be assured that in bad years caused by poor markets, insects, or frost, they can still make a living. That is the approach that should be taken. We are not short of ideas on how it could be done. Recently the Grain Production Committee of the Canada Grains Council presented a paper to a convention of municipal councils. It laid out a very effective-sounding income insurance plan for farmers. That idea should be studied, even though it probably has some faults. My Party and I and other Members in the House are not going to wed ourselves to one particular position. However, let us consider the idea of income insurance for farmers.

It would be ridiculous for the worker on the street to pay a large amount of money to ensure that his wages do not fluctuate, because that does not happen. However, it happens every year for farmers. Other workers pay for unemployment insurance in case they do not have a job next year. Therefore, the idea of insurance may be one which we should consider. Perhaps we should combine insurance with stabilization. In every case the basic approach should be the consideration of what is necessary for farming and farmers to survive.

This Bill is inadequate. It is almost identical to the original Whelan Bill. There is a great need to establish a comprehensive income insurance plan and this Bill does not accomplish that. Let us hope that when this Bill goes to committee we will take a global approach and allow the Committee on Agriculture to make amendments, or to rewrite the Bill in such a way as to take into consideration the needs of the industry, rather than just applying a band-aid to a number of the commodity areas.

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, I listened with great attention to the thoughtful speech of the Hon. Member. I would ask him for his comments on how he would resolve the apparent impasse which exists with some provinces that are unwilling to enter into an agreement to make this a national initiative with the support of all the provincial organizations affected.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, the Member has put his finger on one of the weaknesses of this Bill. There is such a variety of plans available, all of which are voluntary. If you do not volunteer for anything, you will not get anything. In the industry we have established a number of approaches for certain products. Each of the three western provinces with the responsibility to market grain agreed to give up that responsibility to the federal Government. The Canadian Wheat Board was established in 1926 and was legislated into existence in 1934. It is a central marketing system rather than managed production. This has proven that we can do that kind of thing. The dairy industry in every province has agreed to establish a dairy commission. This involves a bit of market management which certain commodity producers, such as the cattlemen in western Canada, do not want. However, it has been done with eggs as well. There is the possibility for that kind of agreement if the structure which would allow it were in place.

There is a certain amount of insurance in the Dairy Commission and Egg Commission because the price received is based on production. Some people dislike that because it restricts their amount of production. That is being very short-sighted because if twice the amount of milk is produced the price would immediately go down and you would not make any more money in the end. To get the security you must give up something. If the Government put the structure in place I think we would get the necessary agreement across Canada.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, the Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) started his remarks by saying that it is not a worthwhile Bill at present. The Bill would clarify and make more flexible the period on which the support price for any commodity would be based. I ask the Member whether that is not a worthwhile feature. Second, the Bill would allow for support periods to be shorter than a year, but not less than 90 days. Is that not worthwhile? Third, the Bill would include winter and spring wheat produced outside the designated wheat board area and a list of named commodities. Is that not worthwhile? The Bill would replace "sheep" in the list of named commodities with "lamb and wool". Is that not worthwhile? The Bill would provide a new framework for federal-provincial agreements. I ask the Hon. Member whether that is not a worthwhile concept? The Bill would provide for the appointment of staff of the Agricultural Stabilization Board under the Public Service Employment Act. Does the Member not feel that that is worthwhile?

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I have voted for and worked for stabilization at every level because it affects a particular individual at a particular time. This Bill affects drastic drops which can occur over a short period of time. However, because we are not solving the problem of agriculture in its entirety, perhaps it is just extending the agony. Maybe it is just allowing the industry to take a little longer to go broke. Maybe it will just take a little longer before we have the same situation as that which exists in Kansas. Soon, nearly 75 per cent of the farms in Kansas will be corporately owned. They will not necessarily be corporately farmed, but they will be corporately owned. That is happening in Canada.

The changes which the Member has suggested as worthwhile are the good features of the Bill. However, they are not solving the basic problem of agriculture, and neither is the Farm Credit Corporation or the capital gains changes which we are hoping the Government will introduce. All of those things are having some effect, but they are not solving the basic problem of agriculture.

● (1600)

During the next four years the Government should consider that basic problem because agriculture will suffer much more than it is today. We were much better off on the farm four years ago than we are today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being four o'clock, the House will now proceed to consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the House proceed to Item No. 182?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

[Translation]

THE CONSTITUTION ACTS, 1867 TO 1982

SENATE REFORM

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Constitution Acts, 1867 to 1982, should be amended in order to reform the Senate of Canada so that its membership is elected by the Canadian people and equal in representation of the provinces, thereby ensuring that the Senate of Canada would become effective legislative body.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I put this motion forward.

[English]

I would like to begin by stating some of the reasons I am propelled to introduce this motion. During the recent election campaign, as a political scientist, I thought that the issue of Senate reform was a dry and dusty one. I was astonished to discover that it has been one of the most lively issues among my constituents over the past year. In fact, at 44 public meetings held during the nomination campaign and the campaign itself the issue voluntarily came up at least once at each of those meetings. It is a pressing issue in western Canada.

I had occasion last Sunday to visit Peterborough, a beautiful city in central Canada. The occasion was the rededication of the monument to Captain Edward Templeton Brown who was a soldier with Bolton's Scouts and happened to have been killed at the Battle of Batoche. He was one of General Middleton's soldiers. I was called upon without notice to make some remarks since Captain Brown was my great uncle. I sought to convey something of a western perspective of what the Battle of Batoche means to western Canada. As tactfully as I could, in the presence of the Union Jack and the Red Coats, I strove to underline that the Riel phenomenon and Dumont's generalship really were a popular reaction in many ways to what was perceived as colonialization from elsewhere.

It is interesting to note from where the support for a Triple E Senate is beginning to come. While I am not sure if the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) has totally embraced the concept, he seems to be leaning in that direction. I suspect that many of our friends from the New Democratic Party, at least those who are westerners and perhaps others, are very sympathetic in their hearts and perhaps even in their minds. Of course, they are restrained by doctrine not to speak out on the issue.

Let me refer to some of the distinguished Canadians who have given their public support and financial support to the Triple E movement. They are the Hon. E. C. Manning, retired senator and former Premier of Alberta for some 25 years; Mr. Gordon Gibson, former Leader of the British Columbia Liberal Party; Mr. Jim Gray, Executive Vice President of Canadian Hunter Ltd; Mr. Ralph Hedlin, a distinguished energy policy consultant who lives in Ottawa; Mr. Horace Carver, former Attorney General of the Government of Prince Edward Island; and Mr. Ted Byfield, former publisher of the Alberta Report in Edmonton, Alberta. There is also our distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor), who has served for 45 years in the legislatures of Canada, and Mr. Izzy Asper, Chairman of Canwest Capital Corp., in Winnipeg, Manitoba, a former Leader of the Opposition in the Liberal Party in that province. There is the distinguished Senator E. W. Barootes; Mr. Jack Gallagher; and Mr. Thomas P. d'Aquino, who is the President of the Business Council on National Issues which is based in Ottawa.

I would be remiss if I did not touch on some of the interesting developments in the direction of Senate reform over the past few years. The House will recall that in 1969, the then Government introduced a White Paper proposing a new Senate, with half of the members appointed by the provinces and the other half by the federal Government. In 1972, the special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House on the Constitution recommended increasing the number of western senators and reducing the Senate's powers to a suspensive veto. In 1975, a constitutional amendment awarded one Senate seat to the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories, bringing the total membership to 104 Senators.

In 1978, Bill C-60 proposed replacing the Senate with a House of the Federation, with the provinces and the federal Government each appointing half the members based on portional representation. In 1979, the Supreme Court ruled that the proposals represented a constitutional amendment and would therefore require the approval of provincial legislatures as well as the federal Parliament.

In that same year of 1978, the Canada West Foundation recommended replacing the Senate with a House of the Provinces. British Columbia, the Ontario Advisory Committee on Confederation and the Canadian Bar Association also submitted reform proposals.

In 1979, the Pepin-Robarts Task Force on Canadian Unity proposed replacing the Senate with a provincially appointed Council of the Federation.

In 1980, the federal and provincial Ministers responsible for constitutional matters discussed a new Upper House involving the provinces, with no resolution. The report of the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs entitled "Certain Aspects of the Canadian Constitution", affirmed the need for a nominated but substantially reformed Senate.

The Quebec Liberal Party's Beige Paper entitled "A New Canadian Federation" proposed replacing the Senate with a federal council composed of provincial government delegates. In 1981 the well respected Canada West Foundation supported direct election of senators based on single province-wide constituencies.

In 1982, the Constitution Act provided for a six-month suspensive veto for the Senate in respect to constitutional amendments. Alberta recommended provincial appointment of Senators. The Senate debated the election of Senators by the people.

In 1983, a special joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on Senate reform started its work in April of that year. The Business Council on National Issues supported direct election of senators.

In 1984, the final report of the Special Joint Committee on Senate Reform was tabled in January.

This year, the Alberta Select Committee reported, and in May of this year the Hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) introduced his resolution.

Let me give credit to a distinguished former Member of the House who has done considerable research on the question of Senate reform. He is Mr. Bill Yurko, the former Member for Edmonton East. Mr. Yurko pointed out in a paper prepared three years ago, which was called "Toward a Renewed Senate Structure under the New Constitution", that a new Senate would require legitimacy, accountability, independence and stability. Mr. Yurko said that the issue of legitimacy is primarily a question of the Senate's legitimate position in the political process. He went on to say that probably nothing has undercut the Senate's position more than the system of Prime Ministerial appointments.

To be legitimate, any system which replaces the current regime must be structured to permit the Senate to perform its two most important functions in a balanced manner. The selection committee must be based in the regions or provinces to legitimize the regional representation function. It must allow for the selection of experienced politicians and other public figures to legitimize the legislative review or "sober second thought" functions. In relation to the Lower House, the second Chamber must also be a secondary chamber in every way. The House of Commons must remain supreme.

The second principle is that of accountability. Appointments for life steadily eroded the Senate's legitimacy. The central point at issue here is the question of accountability. The need to create a democratically accountable Upper House was not a high priority with the delegates to the Quebec conference. However, over the years, the lack of accountability has supplied abolitionists with ample ammunitions with which to wage their war against the Upper House.

• (1610)

The third principle is that of independence. To be effective a reformed plan must scrupulously uphold the independence of the Upper House. While expecting perfect and absolute independence from any legislative body may be unrealistic, the structural features of a reformed Senate should strive toward the ideal.

The final principle of a reformed Senate is that of stability. This is more or less separate from the question of which selection procedure would be preferable, since either election or modified appointment procedure could be tailored to provide stability. Whatever selection procedure is decided upon, Senators must have a longer term than Members of Parliament to allow them to develop the experience and expertise they require for legislative review and regional representation.

Let us go to the question of what the public seems to be saying on this issue of Senate reform. I go to two distinguished newspapers, two editorials published hard on the heels of the release of the joint committee report in early 1984.

The first is the Calgary Herald which reported:

> The latest report on Senate reform hits one target dead on but is completely off the mark in proposing regional representation by population that leaves eight provinces still with no more than second-class status—

Three weeks before the walk in the blizzard, on February 3, 1984, in The Edmonton Journal we find this article:

> An elected Senate, based on regional interests with significant power, would go part of the way toward making Ottawa everybody's national capital—not just those who voted for the party in power. Reform of the House of Commons itself would go the rest of the way... Without Senate reform, Canada risks a permanent crisis of national unity and inferior policy-making—provincial premiers will continue to serve as the effective opposition to the federal party in power—The highest road for Prime Minister Trudeau's exit from politics would be full Parliamentary approval of this report—throwing the political and moral initiative to the premiers and the people of the provinces.

Obviously the challenge was not met at that time.

Why should this resolution be brought before the House at this time? We have before us now a resolution from the Minister of Justice to amend the Constitution in such a way as to limit the amount of time the Senate could delay money bills. We are told that agreement has been secured from eight of the Provinces to support this resolution—

Mr. Boudria: Name them.

Mr. Edwards: —to support this resolution and that a constitutional conference will be held no later than 1987 to discuss long-term meaningful Senate reform. Whether those provincial commitments will hold is, I hear, now being questioned. Whether the Senate as it is now constituted will support the resolution remains to be seen. However, whether or not the resolution succeeds, the conference, we understand, will take place.

This is the time to coalesce the various proposals advanced for reform. Between now and 1987, let us develop in this place, in the other House and in public forums across the land a consensus for meaningful and enduring improvement.

The Constitution Acts, 1867 to 1982

The joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons basically made these recommendations: Senators be elected for non-renewable nine year terms by plurality vote in single member constituencies, in triennial elections separate from Commons elections, and that the Senate have a suspensive veto of 120 sitting days over most Bills; the representation of the less populous provinces and of the Territories would be increased, bringing the number of seats in the Senate to 144; legislation of linguistic significance would require a double majority vote; and the constituencies themselves would have a logic as to mutual interset.

I would like to take one moment now to outline the proposals of the Alberta Legislative Committee on Senate Reform, which has met with fairly wide approval, including very recently that of the distinguished Liberal Senator Dean Gigantès.

I will now outline the recommendations in summary, Mr. Speaker. First, that the Senate should continue to act as a body of sober second thought. Another original purpose of the Senate, that is to represent property owners, should be abandoned immediately. Third, the Senate should not be a forum for intergovernmental negotiations. It is recommended, vis-à-vis membership, that the tenure of current Senators should be terminated through an equitable severance process. Second, that the determination of tenure should be accomplished as quickly as possible to facilitate an immediate move to the new system.

On the method of selection and basis of representation of new Senators, it is recommended that the Senate should consist of 64 Senators, six representing each province and two representing each Territory. Senators should be elected on a first-past-the post basis, a system now in use in federal and provincial elections. Senators should represent constituencies whose boundaries are identical to provincial boundaries. Senators should be elected for the life of two provincial legislatures. In each province, three Senators should be elected during each provincial election with each voter being able to vote for three candidates. The qualifications should be the same as those for Members of Parliament. Upon winning an election, Senators should be required to resign from any provincial or civic elected office they hold.

With reference to the powers of the Senate, it is recommended that the Senate should have the power to initiate any legislation except a money or a taxation Bill. Notwithstanding that point, the Senate should have the power to initiate supply resolutions relating to the Senate's own operational Budget. The Senate should have the power to amend any Bill after which the House of Commons would consider the amendment. The Senate should have the power to veto any Bill except a supply Bill. The Senate should retain the existing 180 days suspensive veto over constitutional issues. The House should have the power to over-ride a Senate veto on money or taxation Bills by a simple majority, The Senate should vote on a money or taxation Bill within 90 days and on other Bills within 180 days after it is sent by the House of Commons. All changes affecting the French and English languages in Canada should be subject to a double majority veto, that is a majority of all Senators combined with a majority of French speaking Senators or English speaking Senators, depending on the issue. This, Mr. Speaker, is from the legislature of Alberta. Finally, non military treaties should be subject to ratification by the Senate, to which I would suggest we add the appointment of deputy ministers, assistant deputy ministers, heads of Crown agencies, and commissions.

Current polls seem to indicate that Canadians have little faith in the Senate, primarily because of its method of appointment. In my part of the country, as well as I think in others, there is a feeling that regardless of the popularity or sensitivity of this Government, fundamental changes to Confederation are required in order to ensure that the Western and Atlantic provinces, in particular, are adequately represented in the federal decision-making process. In the west it is a particularly crucial issue. I will quote from my distinguished colleague, the Hon. Member for Lethbridge-Foothills (Mr. Thacker) who said before the last election that western Canadians must feel that Parliament is protecting their legitimate interests; it is a very serious matter should that faith be lost. He went on to say that western Canadians do not feel that we Opposition Members are that effective; therefore, the emphasis is on the provincial premiers to defend them and that distorts the whole federal-provincial relationship. He went on to say that:

> People now must vote for provincial premiers based on their effectiveness in opposing the government in Ottawa, whereas they want to be able to rely on Parliament itself—opposition Members, government Members and the Senate—for that.

Finally, there are oxen to be gored and hurdles to be overcome. The oxen to be gored include, of course, the powers of this very House, the powers of the Cabinet, the Prime Minister's office and perhaps most significantly the power-brokers themselves, the provincial premiers. But, Mr. Speaker, an effective elected Senate, equal in representation province to province, will bring to Canada the harmony and civility which have too often eluded us. This is not just something to please the west, though it would without doubt. It is not just a redress of the blows of history, economics and demography, dealt to the Atlantic Provinces. Nor is it a gimmick to bring Quebec warmly and securely back into the bosom of Confederation. It is an evolution whose time has come, for Ontario no less than for all of Canada.

Throughout the country, audiences of up to 3,000 people have cheered the concept of a Triple E Senate. It is the positive enduring alternative to confrontation. What better time to bring it to reality than as a crowning achievement of this new age of harmony and consultations.

● (1620)

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate this afternoon. I have read the motion of the Hon. Member. Some parts of it worry me personally, and I would like to speak to them.

I find it passing strange that over the last three or four months Conservative Members have introduced several motions, contradicting each other of course, on Senate reform. One Member said that we should have an elected Senate, that if we could not have one, we should abolish the place. Another Member rose and said that the Senate was a great place. Now an Hon. Member today wants to considerably reapportion Senate representation and retain it as a useful and effective body.

Mr. Schellenberg: It is a sign of a healthy Party.

Mr. Boudria: I suppose the Hon. Member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) has a good point. He says that it is a sign of a healthy Party that its Members can at least say something during Private Members' Hour. I am glad that there is at least one time of the day when Tories are permitted to do that. Hopefully they will muster up enough courage to do the same when we are considering legislation, but we will not hold our breath. Be that as it may, I should like to return to the debate at hand.

The sudden interest in the Senate on the part of the Conservatives has arisen because one day the Senate refused to give automatic consent to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to borrow funds for a year for which he had not tabled estimates. Of course the Minister of Finance should have never requested those funds, to start with. That day the Senate was guilty of doing its job. It is unusual that whenever the Senate is not doing its job, Conservatives talk about reforming the place. Whenever the Senate does its job, suddenly they talk about abolishing it. I find that passing strange. However, in my view we have to retain, protect and enhance our parliamentary institutions. This means that they should be reformed.

In the past, members of the New Democratic Party have always said that the Senate had to be abolished. Undoubtedly that is part of their doctrine. One fine day many, many years ago, a socialist awoke in the morning after dreaming that the Senate should be abolished, and thereafter it formed part of the Party doctrine. Of course it will hot happen and should not happen.

Most federal states have bicameral legislatures. The reason for this is to ensure that regional interests are represented and to overview legislation. This as well is the reason for having and retaining our Senate of Canada. The difficulty I have with the NDP proposition of abolishing the Senate will become evident if I remind the House that in 1979 the Government of the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) had very few Quebec Members. As a matter of fact, there were only two, one of whom was appointed to Cabinet. That created a very difficult situation in that one of the two founding peoples of our country was not represented in Cabinet. Therefore it was necessary at that time to call upon parliamentarians who did not sit in the House of Commons to join the Cabinet. Of course there was only one place with federal parliamentarians in our system of Government other than the House of Commons and that was the Senate. Therefore a number of people from existing Senate ranks were appointed to the Cabinet of the then Prime Minister. Thus there was regional representation in Cabinet provided by some other means than the House of Commons. It was made necessary because there was not a sufficient number of Members elected not only from that province but from that linguistic group or founding nation. As I said previously, because there was not that representation the then Prime Minister rightly chose to appoint some Senators to Cabinet.

Another difficulty I have with the NDP proposition is that all of us in the House, collectively and individually, although Members on the government side do not usually complain about it as much as opposition Members, are somewhat at odds with the fact that there is an ever-increasing concentration of power in Cabinet and not enough in parliamentarians generally. If we abolish one of our Houses of Parliament, obviously it would only lead to a further concentration of power within Cabinet. After all, we cannot enhance Parliament by destroying half of it.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) presented a motion to the House to make the Senate into a reading room. Of course I have some difficulty with that proposition because the Minister is effectively trying to abolish one of our parliamentary institutions, nothing else. There is only one way to deal with reform of the Senate and that is through comprehensive reform. We cannot arbitrarily take away one of the most important powers of one of our Houses of Parliament, and call it reform, because one day the Minister of Finance did not get his way. There has to be more to reform. That is not comprehensive reform. That is not adequate. Obviously the scheme of the Minister of Justice will get nowhere. I do not think he has the consent of eight provinces. I challenge the Hon. Member to name those eight provinces. It will be interesting for all of us to check to see whether there is agreement on the part of eight Premiers on reducing the Senate to a reading room, as the Hon. Member claimed.

During his remarks today the Hon. Member suggested that we should give the same number of Senate seats to each province. If we look back at the history of our country and the reasons for having the Senate, we see that one of its functions was to provide a sober second thought. Perhaps that can be accomplished by having any number of Members from any part of the country. After all, a function of the Senate is to review legislation and the regional aspect is somewhat less significant in that regard, although it is still a concern. Of course another one of its functions is to provide individual provincial representation in Parliament. As I said a while ago, that manifested itself in the case of the 1979 Progressive Conservative Government which lacked a fundamental component of representation.

Another difficulty which I see—and I think the Hon. Member forgot it in his proposal today—is that in the origin of the Senate it had another function, to represent not only the regions but the two founding nation principle of our country. When Canada east and Canada west joined in the Act of Union of 1840 they were given equal or proportionate representation.

Mr. Schellenberg: Upper Canada?

Mr. Boudria: No, not Upper Canada; it was after Upper Canada. Upper Canada was 1791 to 1840, but in the Act of Union of 1840 Canada east and Canada west were joined. At that particular time there was identical representation in both Houses, notwithstanding the fact that Canada east had a larger population than Canada west. Canada west, Ontario, was given a much larger number of seats. It was known at that time that the population of Canada west would increase. Canada east accepted an equal representation because there was a two founding nation principle that was important to preserve. Those statistics have turned around and numerically in terms of Anglophones and Francophones there is now a far greater number of Anglophones in this country.

• (1630)

The same principle was very important in the deliberations in the 1860s in the Constitutional Conference where Canada east and Canada west, formerly called Upper Canada and Lower Canada, wanted a parliamentary structure in which there would be equal representation in at least one of the Houses of Parliament of those two areas. The Maritime provinces, which were then about to join Canada, wanted at least as much power together as one of the two larger provinces. The reluctance they had as smaller Maritime provinces was based on their fear that the difficulty that existed between Canada east and Canada west would put them in the middle of the problem. They wanted to ensure that collectively the Maritime provinces had at least as much power in one of the Houses of Parliament as Canada east and Canada west. Those are some of the origins.

When the western Canadian provinces joined Confederation under various parliamentary Acts of 1870, 1905 and so forth, they were given a number of Senate seats, again proportional to one of the other regions that existed. This created a situation whereby French Canada, Quebec, had and still has approximately one-quarter of the Senate seats in this country. Perhaps that is somewhat more than their fair share in terms of percentages. There is an element outside the percentages which cannot be measured. That principle has to be measured differently, the principle of the two founding nations. It is important to remember that.

I hope there is not one Member in this House, particularly from Quebec, who would want to restructure our parliamentary institution to remove some of those special powers and privileges that are necessary to ensure not only that each province is represented, but that there is a special place in confederation for French Canada. By giving one-tenth of the representation in the Senate to French Canada, and giving an equal number of seats to all provinces, one-tenth or one-eleventh, depending on how many seats there are for the Territories—giving roughly one-tenth of the representation of the Senate to the Province of Quebec is unacceptable. I hope that Members will reconsider any such proposal, however well-intentioned it might be.

I think the Hon. Member's remarks were very positive with regard to enhancing the parliamentary institution, and I commend him for that, but the formula he suggested is not correct. I am sure that all who are concerned about the two founding nation principle of this country will agree that there has to be a special element in the parliamentary structure to protect that principle. We all know of the special provisions that are there for Quebec. We know of the guaranteed minimum number of seats for that province. Only one province in Canada has a guaranteed minimum number of seats in the House of Commons. All other provinces cannot have less seats in the House than they have in the Senate.

Quebec has another tier of guarantee which is very important, and rightfully so. It has to be there. I say this as a Member who does not represent that province. I am a Franco-Ontarian who represents a linguistic group that is similar and, although I am from outside the province, I am very interested in that topic. It is very important in my mind, as it should be in the minds of all parliamentarians.

Quebec has a different method of designating Senate areas, ridings or electoral districts. Senators represent their provinces. That is true in all provinces except Quebec. In Quebec, Senators are each assigned an electoral district which is similar, if not identical, to the 24 seigneuries in the Province of Quebec. There is a special significance there for the Province of Quebec, and it is important to remember all these things.

How do we reform the Senate? In my view, we should have an elected Senate. I fully concur with that proposition. It is an ideal time to consider that seriously. I believe all Members of this House should advocate that. As elected parliamentarians and supporters of elected democratic institutions I am sure all Members want our parliamentary institutions to reflect that principle. However, we should not forget that destroying, dismantling or doing something in a way which is not well thought out will not necessarily enhance our Senate. We must proceed with caution and real reform, and do it all at once. It should be a comprehensive package, not one that addresses just one small part of the issue.

In order to reflect the principle that our Senate must represent provincial interests, I believe that Senators should be elected at provincial elections. While that may be a somewhat unusual way of proceeding, what better occasion is there to assess the provincial mood of an area than during the provincial election campaign? Why not elect one-half of the Senators at every provincial election, assuming that we had the same number of seats in the Senate that we have now in each province? I recognize that there has to be reform there. However, for the purpose of debate, let's assume that we have the same number of seats that we have in each province. The greatest number of Senators that could be changed at any one time would be 12. Ontario and Quebec each have 24 Senate seats. With only one-half elected in every provincial election, a maximum of 12 would change at any one time, if all Senators were defeated within that province, which is somewhat unlikely. There would be insured continuity.

Some Members may wonder how we could ensure that those Senators elected have at least some sort of federal point of view. If Senators were elected with very separatist tendencies, for example, there could be some difficulty having that institution function. In order to present candidates for the Senate a Party should have a minimum number of seats in the House of Commons. There would then be a process which would marry the principle of federalism with the thoughts of electors in a provincial election campaign. In so doing, we would have a provincial perspective, federal perspective and continuity, because only a small number would be elected at any one time.

That theory has to be further developed. There needs to be a full airing of that view in order to ensure that the system would best represent our country. I recognize there has to be a way of looking at the proportion of Senators in each province. I agree with that. However, in so doing, we must keep in full view the fact that there must be a very special place for the Province of Quebec; we must retain that important component in the system.

● (1640)

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I rise to oppose this Bill as both previous speakers had suggested someone from my Party would. I have listened to the interesting lectures that have been given. However, I do not detect a clear enough thrust in either the remarks of the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards) or those of the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) to warrant a careful study of what they said. In fact, for a while, I thought the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell was debating a different motion entirely. He seemed to have imagined that the subject for debate was a resolution by the NDP for abolition of the Senate. However, toward the end of his remarks, he did return to the subject at hand.

I found the historical comments made by the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell regarding the rationale for the Senate from the past century and perhaps the early part of this century to be very interesting and informative. The mover of the motion gave us a rapid-fire survey of the more recent history of discussion regarding the Senate. I believe his object was to prove that Senate reform is an idea whose time has come because enough people have talked about it. It is no doubt true that a number of people have talked about it. However, at all-candidates meetings and other public meetings that have been held in the riding of Spadina, not only when I ran for office but at the time of previous elections when I did not run for office, this question seemed to come up very rarely. It may be that certain candidates, simply by their own expressions of interest, evoke more discussion around that subject than do other candidates.

Both Hon. Members mentioned a variety of schemes. Although the Triple E proposal made by the mover of the motion does state some broad principles, he developed it with so many alternatives from so many groups that it is difficult to see exactly how he would focus. Likewise, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, in using up his last two or three minutes, proposed a whole new scheme as an alternative. He made very little development of the practical effect of the scheme.

The difficulty with both presentations is that the Hon. Members made an assumption which, in a doctrinaire way, they simply repeat without really defending. They made the assumption that we need a Senate. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell did make some attempt at defending the Senate, but he defended it largely in terms of the very early years of Canada's history, the years when different parts of the British Empire were being incorporated into Canada and there were growing pains. He picked out some instances of the existence of the Senate being important for the defence of either of the two founding nations of this country. However, I think it is a mistake to make an automatic assumption that because we had a Senate before, we must have it forever. Perhaps it is a venerable old piece of the furniture, but the question is whether or not it serves a function and, if so, whether that function is predominantly useful or harmful.

I think it is not at all clear that in balance, the function of the Senate is useful. As it exists at present, I doubt that it seriously defends the unity of Canada. I have not noticed that the things that tend to tear Canada apart are curbed by the Senate. It seems rather that the Senate at times intensifies the things that tear Canada apart. An example of this is its action a couple of years ago on banking legislation. Very frequently the effect of its action on banking legislation is to strengthen the grip of a tiny minority of powerful Canadians on the Canadian economy. Legislation that goes to the Senate from this House with the object of curbing the power of the banks tends to come back from the Senate with the object of increasing the power of the banks. That does not promote unity in this country. It may appear to do so by momentarily drawing attention away from rivalries between east and west, French and English, Maritimes and centre and North and South, but in fact it intensifies still greater rivalry or polarity.

Last year there was an example of action by the Senate which did not directly intensify a division, but was quite ineffectual for the public good. This happened when the previous Government put forward an outrageous piece of legislation designed to implement the security service of Canada. After the legislation was tramped on by Attorneys General across the country and by all sorts of public institutions, the Government referred it to the Senate. I think that this was meant to take the heat off the Government. The Senate sat on the matter for a few months and then brought the legislation back with some cosmetic changes. The Government felt that that was fine, it was a reformed Bill and it would now be passed. The Government did pass it. The Conservative Party which was then the Official Opposition supported the Bill in the end and throughout committee stage.

I was rather amused when I recently received a fund raising letter signed by Dalton Camp. He is asking for money for the civil liberties associations; one of the reasons he is doing so is that we have this dreadful legislation. I do not know where Dalton Camp was last year when the Party he helps to lead as one of the back-room boys was promoting that Bill in support of the Liberal Government. He is now trying to raise money for civil liberties associations and is saying that it was a bad Bill. I do not remember the Senate being a house of sober second thought regarding that very important and very dangerous Bill that was passed by the Senate and by the House.

I do not see that the Senate performs a useful function. Granted if we are to have a Senate, it should be an elected one. I do agree with the two previous speakers on that matter. An elected Senate would have to be less harmful than an appointed Senate. The question of whether or not it should have equal representation from all provinces, I think, tends to be irrelevant or ambiguous. Equal representation suggests that fundamental conflicts in the country that need to be balanced are conflicts between people in areas which are marked by some provincial boundary. Just because a certain line goes from north to south between Manitoba and Saskatchewan does not mean that the people in Saskatchewan have different interests from the people in Manitoba and must therefore have balanced representation in Parliament.

• (1650)

I grew up in Manitoba and I understand that there are tensions, but I find as decades go by they are less and less based simply on regional conflicts because the regions are changing. For example, the economic boom in the western provinces, particularly in Alberta and British Columbia, has considerably altered the balance of power within Canada. The regional considerations which may have seemed very strong when we had only Upper and Lower Canada, or Canada east and Canada west, or the Maritime Provinces plus Quebec and Ontario, not having yet incorporated Manitoba and points west, are now an important part of our history, but not necessarily part of our present needs. I do not remember the Senate doing anything serious to mediate the dispute with respect to the price of oil within Canada and the slogan of the western Premier, Mr. Lougheed, "Let those eastern bastards freeze".

Mr. Edwards: He never said that.

Mr. Heap: The Hon. Member says he didn't say it. I certainly would not want to contradict the Hon. Member from the west, but it has become part of western folklore and part of the understanding of east and west attitudes. I am not aware of the Senate having actually done anything significant with respect to the establishment of fair pricing of oil or, for that matter, natural gas.

While I would not object to the reforms proposed by the Hon. Member for Edmonton South, and I would certainly not object to the principle that the Senate should be effective, I have not heard the Hon. Member for Edmonton South or the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell say for what, and in what, the Senate might be effective, let alone how to make it so. I simply cannot see the point of the motion put forward by the Hon. Member. I believe that the principle adopted over half a century ago by the CCF was a farsighted view into Canada's future and that that future has become the present. I believe it is time now to abolish the Senate, not to mess around with any further attempts at reform.

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great interest to the debate during Private Members' Hour on Senate reform. I took particular interest in the comments of the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) who very often stands in the House of Commons to speak on many issues, and sometimes knows something about those issues. However, his exact comments, as I recall them, were that he was concerned about a special influence which certain provinces should retain in the Canadian Senate much the way they are in the House of Commons. I can understand his fear. I can understand, perhaps, the central Canadian's xenophobia of western Canadians rushing in here with all kinds of brilliant ideas. I can understand those comments and feelings because as a western Canadian I know that we have been in the wilderness for many, many years. The previous administration had only one elected representative in the Canadian Cabinet.

I believe that perhaps it is time for Senate reform which would allow us to have a little more influence in the Government of Canada. What the Hon. Member's comments basically stressed is that there is no need for reform, that we should have the private arrangements which were there before. I entirely disagree with that suggestion.

With respect to the comments of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards), I am in almost total agreement with him on many of the things he said. Perhaps it is because he and I shared those years in the wilderness. I find myself in basic agreement with the thrust of his comments, but I certainly disagree with the timing of which he speaks. My colleague knows the approach of our Government in proposing the constitutional resolution, now on the Order Paper, that deals with the absolute veto of the present Senate. The Hon. Member for Edmonton South is aware that this is merely an interim measure, with a constitutional conference scheduled before December, 1987 to discuss the issue of Senate reform in greater detail. The Hon. Member also knows that the consent of seven provinces with 50 per cent of the population of Canada is required in order to enact the changes he is suggesting.

We have all heard the expression, "If it ain't broke, fix it". I believe most Hon. Members in this chamber would agree that the Senate is not working as well as it could and perhaps it is time to fix it.

Let us take a look at this august body, the much maligned Canadian Senate. One journalist called it "The only wax museum in history where the figures actually breath". Vancouver humourist, Eric Nicol, said, "There are two kinds of people in Canada. There's the quick and there's the Senate". Columnist, Allan Fotheringham called it, "A body that bores the socks off most Canadians". Well, some of Mr. Fotheringham's recent columns may also fall into that category, but we will not get into that.

Even the Right Hon. leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) does not know what to make of the other place. As a 20-year-old student at the University of British Columbia he wrote in his bachelor of arts thesis in 1949, "If the Government summons men of experience and ability to the red chamber, and provides the upper House with enough work to do, there is no reason to doubt that the Senate will continue to manifest its present efficiency". But in 1961, the Right Hon. Gentleman seemed to have a change of heart. While practising law in Montreal he wrote an article lambasting the Senate as a haven of retired politicians and party bagmen. He said, "The waste of talent in recent administrations has made that chamber a functionalist oddity". There seems to be a lot of confusion all around, but I do submit that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition was perhaps right the second time around.

Every so-called civilized country has a second chamber as some sort of a check on the first chamber. But I believe an appointed legislature, supported by public funds, has no place in a democratic society. That is my opinion. It is one man's opinion. What do the 24 million other Canadians think about reform of the Canadian Senate? I think we should take the time to find out, with debates such as this in the House of Commons, a constitutional conference with our premiers, and continued discussion with our constituents.

Like a bit player in the theatre, the other place since Confederation has stayed in the background. The audience is aware of its presence but the focus, as in any performance, remains on the leading players in the House of Commons. However, the bit player in our national drama has recently knocked over a prop and now stands exposed in the spotlight. Do we fire the bit player for his folly, or do we attempt to improve his performance? If we are going to improve his performance, how exactly do we do it? Some have suggested a ten-year term with elections every five years for half of that august body. Others have suggested nine-year terms with elections for a third of the members every three years. And I heard a couple of other suggestions from my colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton South this afternoon.

We do know that reform requires consent of seven of the provinces for major changes. Abolition is a little more difficult and requires the support of all ten provinces as it affects the amending formula under the Constitution. When the Fathers of Confederation scripted this great drama about which we have been speaking, they provided for a balance between the provincial legislatures and the federal Parliament. This provision, of course, was the "other place", which would be formed on a regional basis; 24 members from the west, 24 members from Quebec, 24 members from Ontario and 24 members from the Maritimes. The flaw in this scenario is that of the three bodies, the provincial legislatures, the House of Commons and the Senate; it is the other place which is the only one not made accountable to the people through elections.

Should the Liberals and their allies ever regain centre stage, it could well result in the electors of my great province of British Columbia being once again relegated to the cheap seats. On the other hand, as my colleague the Hon. Member for Edmonton South might agree, with a regionally elected Senate with appropriate muscle Alberta would not have to accept the crippling effects of the national energy policy, as it did in previous years.

Total abolishment would doom the regions to certain further abuse from future Governments. Total abolishment would also involve asking that dottering bit player to fall on his own sword which has, until recently, remained unsheathed. But more than that, Mr. Speaker, total abolishment would remove the possibility of a responsible second chamber with equal elected provincial representation. So I think my colleague the Hon. Member for Edmonton South and I are paddling the same canoe on this issue. We only differ on when we should arrive at the rapids.

I will conclude my comments, Mr. Speaker, by saying that a few years ago I recall an Opposition Member of Parliament, probably one of those wise Conservatives our nation has come to know and love, saying that, "While Pierre Elliot Trudeau fiddled with the Constitution, the fire went out of the Canadian economy". Those fires are only now being rekindled. Employment initiatives, not Senate reform, are of paramount importance to the citizens of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour provided for consideration of Private Member's Business has now expired.

It being five o'clock p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(2) this House stands adjourned until Tuesday, May 21, 1985, at eleven o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 5 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, May 21, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

• (1105)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

INVESTMENT CANADA ACT

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER REPORT AND THIRD READING STAGES OF BILL C-15

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise a point of order about the motion.

Mr. Speaker: The motion on the Order Paper?

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Yes, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: I have something I was going to say about the Order Paper, but please go ahead.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, if you look at the Projected Order of Business, it says:

Note: Length of speeches, pursuant to Standing Order 35(1):
—unlimited time—Prime Minister and Leader of the Opposition
—20-minute maximum (all other speakers)
—all speeches are subject to 10-minute question and comment period.

If this is the case, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit that the motion which is about to be moved by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) is not limited to a debate not extending more than two hours. Otherwise, we would certainly not find the Order Paper constructed in the way it is. As you have pointed out to us previously, Sir, Standing Order 82 calls for only 10-minute speeches. However, it is clear from the very clear wording of the Notice Paper today that if the speeches are pursuant to Standing Order 35(1), I respectfully submit that there is not then a two hour time limit on debate of this motion. I thought it was important to bring this to your attention at the very outset of the debate.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member is indeed correct that if it were a motion under 35(1) there would indeed be unlimited debate. I have a note to myself to indicate this before anybody said anything else. I appreciate the point. Therefore, before putting the question on the motion to the House, may I, for the benefit of Hon. Members, indicate that the time allowed for speeches on the motion as listed on today's Projected Order of Business is incorrect. In fact, the provisions of Standing Order 82 apply and all speeches will be limited to 10 minutes. As a consequence, two hours after commencement of proceedings on the motion, the question shall be put to the House. The motion is properly under Standing Order 82.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), the following proposed motion:

That, further to the notice given on Thursday, May 2, 1985 by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, and pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 82, in relation to Bill C-15, An Act respecting investment in Canada, one sitting day shall be allotted to the consideration of each of the report stage and the third reading stage of the said bill; and

That fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for government business on those days, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the stage of the bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in joining in this debate I would like to begin by saying that, pursuant to Standing Order 82, there is now time allocation which will have the effect of requiring that there be only one sitting day at report stage of Bill C-15, and one sitting day at third reading stage of the same Bill. There may be those who ask why we felt it necessary to bring in time allocation. I can only say to such people that if they had had an opportunity to sit in the House and watch the progress of Bill C-15 at second reading and at committee stage and if they had seen the stalling and filibustering tactics which the Official Opposition and the NDP Members used, they would be endorsing this time allocation motion.

I would like to refer specifically to the remarks of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) made recently in this Chamber. He said, "We are prepared to spend as many hours, days or weeks in the House debating these matters as required". The unfortunate thing, Mr. Speaker, is that the Hon. Member was not kidding. If the Opposition had its way we would still be debating Bill C-15 this time next year, or even the year after that. We would be going over the same ground, hearing the same arguments, and having amendments put which had already been duly considered and in many cases voted down in the committee which made a very in-depth study of this Bill.

If Hon. Members read some of the arguments used, I think they would find them to be hackneyed, trite and, what is most unforgivable, ignoring the hard fact that there are 1.5 million Canadians out of work who would like to see investment, preferably from Canadian sources, but certainly from all sources, considered with a view to creating the prosperity and jobs which the country needs. It is beyond reason to claim that insufficient time has been allowed for debate on this legislation. We have already devoted many hours to it, both in the House and in committee.

• (1110)

Let me emphasize again how much time has been spent. In that respect, I would like to compare the number of Members we have heard speaking on Bill C-15 with the number who spoke on the Foreign Investment Review Bill back in 1973. At second reading of Bill C-15, there were 72 speakers, compared to only 26 speakers at the second reading of the Foreign Investment Review Bill. A total of 128 speakers have spoken so far at the report stage of Bill C-15, compared to only 68 at the report stage of the Foreign Investment Review Bill.

What a contrast! When one thinks of it, the Foreign Investment Review Act changed Canada's attitude toward non-Canadian investment in a very fundamental way. It was a true policy change. If the House saw fit to pass that type of legislation, surely it is rather remarkable, ten years after the fact, when we bring in legislation that we think is improving the approach, still putting in meaningful review where necessary while making it clear that we welcome Canadian and non-Canadian investment, that those in the Opposition now feel their right is to block such legislation and delay it much more than ever was the case with respect to the original Foreign Investment Review Act.

In the House last week, my colleague, the Hon. Member for St. Boniface (Mr. Duguay), and I spelled out the number of hours spent in debate on Bill C-15. Let me repeat them once again for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry and the other hard of hearing socialists on the opposition benches. It has now become crystal clear that every reasonable point that could have been raised in regard to Bill C-15 has indeed been raised. At second reading, the Bill received 15 hours of debate in the House, a total of 40 hours in committee and a total of almost 24 hours at report stage up to and including May 2. How can the Opposition claim that we have not provided enough time for the consideration of their important and constructive amendments? This argument, like so many of their arguments, is simply ludicrous.

It has now become crystal clear that every reasonable and constructive point to be raised with regard to Bill C-15 has already been raised. Several opposition motions which were rejected in the committee were still put forward here in the House. Obviously it was a stalling tactic. Furthermore, several of the opposition motions put forward in the House have been ruled out of order.

Opposition Members may be smug in the knowledge that their attempts to obstruct passage of this vital piece of legislation has worked so far. Are they equally smug in the knowledge that at the same time they are obstructing the economic progress of the Canadians who elected us all? I can tell you of one group who do not appreciate this smugness. They are the workers who are looking for jobs in this country. They feel that such stalling on a meaningful approach to future investment in Canada is not what the Parliament of Canada should be a party to. In short, they believe that it is time to allow the will of the majority of the electors, as evidenced in the last election, to be recorded in the House of Commons and presumably in the other place.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: In short, it is our view that we must start facing the facts. We must remove needless obstacles to investment in this country in order to bring to Canada the capital, the technology development, the industrial growth and, above all, those new jobs to which I have been referring this morning.

• (1115)

To remove needless barriers to investment here is precisely the way we have drafted Bill C-15. By proposing this legislation, the Government of Canada is saying to Canadians, "Let us try out new ideas and technology. Let us work together, federal and provincial Governments, public and private sectors, to put Canada on the road to economic recovery. Let us demonstrate the Canadian edge in energy, technology, markets, growth, people, and ideas". The time has come to put an end to the Opposition's endless talking about this Bill. The time has come for action. The time has come to pass Bill C-15.

Canada needs the benefit that this legislation can provide. It is our responsibility to bring the benefits within our reach by passing this Bill as expeditiously as possible.

May I remind all members of the Opposition that the Progressive Conservative Party made a commitment to Canada, to the Canadian electors during the election, to replace the Foreign Investment Review Act with a simpler, less restrictive investment policy. We were elected to carry out the will of Canadians. We intend to see it carried out with precision and purpose. We will not be held back by an Opposition bent on disruption for the sake of disruption. That is why I have introduced this motion to limit debate at this point. We will not see this Bill and with it Canada's economic recovery put on hold.

In short, any Member who decides to resist, to vote against this legislation, is contributing to the lack of investment in Canada and, unfortunately, to the ultimate lack of jobs for Canadians.

Mr. Langdon: Nonsense. Such total nonsense.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Minister in introducing this closure motion said that the time has come. I think that was his resounding refrain. That is the one statement with which I can agree. The time has now come when the Canadian people will see this new Conservative Government exposed for what it really is, namely, made up of a group of hypocrites.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: They are a group of people who have in the past stood in the House of Commons with the most self-righteous indignation, proclaiming the right of Parliament to open and free debate about the important issues of the time. These are the people who held up parliamentary debate for two solid weeks on the Constitution with bell ringing tactics. On the debate on the Western Grain Transportation Act they maintained close to nine months of debate. We had a report stage that lasted 15 weeks, and they introduced over 100 amendments. At that time what they did was an exercise in democratic right. Now when we get to the foreign investment question which deals with billions of dollars of economic development, this Government is no longer prepared to tolerate Parliament exercising its rightful role.

An Hon. Member: What about jobs?

Mr. Axworthy: The most supercilious proposition put forward since this Government came to power is contained in the statements made by the Minister that the reason for this thrust is only that the Conservatives want to help the working people, or the people who want to work, the 1.5 million who are unemployed. Everyone in this House wants to help them. The problem—and this is what the Minister does not understand—is that he has not made the case. His problem is that, because of the weakness of his own arguments and the lack of presentation by members of his own caucus who refuse to debate, they have not made the case.

The poll done last night was prime proof. The majority of Canadians do not want further foreign ownership. You have failed, Sir, to show and to demonstrate how this Bill in any way, shape or form will be able to assist Canadians to get jobs. The problem is that we have a basic fallacy on our hands. Parliament is being asked to pass a Bill based upon pure fiction. Time after time witnesses appeared before the committee and gave arguments that the Bill would make no difference and there would not be a great onrush of new capital as a result of it. When representatives of the New York money markets were interviewed and asked whether it would make a big difference, they said: "No, of course not".

• (1120)

Last year we had $4 billion worth of foreign investment come into the country. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) is a man who lives totally in mythology; he has no reality about him. One of his great mythologies is that somehow this is night and day; that there was no foreign investment before and there will be foreign investment now. He does not read the reports of his own agencies, which indicated that last year there was close to $4 billion worth of foreign investment coming into Canada. The difference is that that foreign investment came in to create jobs in Canada. Repeatedly in the course of this debate we have indicated that with total free licence and lack of any kind of bargaining power, the foreign investment which the Minister is inviting into the country will take away the jobs and opportunities of Canadian workers. He should ask the workers in Canadian Porcelain whether they think foreign investment is a good deal. He should ask one of his own Members who jumped to his feet in high dudgeon last week to ask: "What about Irwin-Dorsey?" A foreign owner closed down that plant in his riding and took away 35 jobs from that area. Time after time we have seen the same example.

Without conditions being negotiated, without some agreement on the part of foreign investors that when they come to Canada they will provide a clear commitment to secure jobs, to provide an opportunity for the Canadian-based subsidiary to conduct research and development and recognize the right of that Canadian subsidiary to get into the world export market, without those kinds of guarantees, the Canadian economy is the poorer for foreign investment. The one hard, clear, undeniable piece of evidence which was repeatedly raised was that unless we are able to secure those guarantees, Canadian subsidiaries will perform far less well economically for Canadians than Canadian-owned companies. They import much more, which substantially affects our ability to sell and our balance of payments. Their mandate in export markets is far less, and they conduct far less research and development. That is the evidence which this Opposition has been trying to impress upon the Minister. The problem is that the Minister is so close-minded, so obdurate, so insensitive and so absolutely disdainful of the role of Parliament that he does not bother to listen or to respond.

The Minister does not care about what other people have to say. We have seen this time and time again. Even when there are partisan differences, the primary role of the committee structure and report stage is to try to make the Bill better than that which the Government initially presented. Parliament is not here as a rubber-stamp. It is not here for government Members to flap their wings in wild applause. It is here to do an honest and effective job in trying to make a piece of legislation more effective and more useful. The Minister does not understand that process.

There is no question that the other side was given a mandate in the last election to bring about a change in the Foreign Investment Review Agency. That change should have been subject to the salutary, beneficial effect of a proper parliamentary process, but we have a Minister who does not believe in it. Therefore he refused to accept any amendments, refused to conduct any negotiations and refused to deal with the kinds of representations we heard. He is a Minister who does not care about Parliament, and that is part of the case we are making. Of course, we must bring forward a number of amendments because those brought forward at committee stage were totally rejected and there were only 14 sessions of the committee.

• (1125)

Mr. Gormley: What about you?

Mr. Axworthy: One of the hand-clappers has asked what about us. I would remind him that in the case of the Western Grain Transportation Act, we accepted over 22 amendments put by the Opposition. He should read his parliamentary history before he flaps his lips. The fact of the matter is that Parliament is here to provide judgment and assessment in order to make the process more constructive.

While trying to make his definitive case, the Minister said that there were fewer speakers when we debated the Foreign Investment Review Agency. Why is that? It is because there was more consensus in the House on that legislation than there is on this legislation. The Minister does not understand Parliament. Other Parties were supportive of that legislation and were prepared to give it a try.

This Minister has not been listening very well. He has not even listened to some of the key questions. For example, we asked a question regarding the arbitrary discretionary power of one Minister to make billions of dollars worth of investments. We asked if he should not be required to consult from time to time with his colleagues in caucus. We saw what the Minister did regarding Domtar. We know how he had to have his wrist slapped by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and members of the Quebec caucus so that he would change his mind. We will see a repetition of that case time and time again.

We have a wilful, headstrong Minister who does not care about the opinions or judgments of those in other regions. We know of the Minister's history in western Canada. He was the great creator of the Bank of Western Canada. We know how much he cares about regional interest in that area of the country. We know how much he cares about Domtar in Quebec. We are simply saying that for the sake of God, Parliament should put some restraint on the wilful arbitrariness of one Minister. However, the Minister has not bothered to listen to us. That is okay with us because we know the kind of hot water in which he and the Government will be time and time again.

This debate is about the fact that the Minister and the Government do not care about Parliament. The Government is not prepared to use the parliamentary process the way it was designed to be used. That will tell the Canadian people far more than anything else about just what kind of Government they elected. They elected a Government that is presidential rather than parliamentary in style, and that will be its downfall.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, it is a sad and shameful day when the Minister can stand before the House to claim with self-righteousness that he is somehow meeting the needs of the Canadian people by closing off debate on this Bill. I want to—

An Hon. Member: We've even got the babies squawking.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: It is obvious that the voices of our youth are shouting out in terror as they see what is happening.

An Hon. Member: It's your speech.

Mr. Langdon: If my speech has the capacity to strike terror into the heart of the Minister, I will be pleased indeed.

If we could, let us talk about honesty. Let us talk about what has actually occurred with respect to this debate. I would like to review those facts for the House because I think there must be Members of the House who are not aware of them since they applaud so vociferously what this Minister is doing.

First, let us talk about the committee hearings which were held with respect to this Bill. The Minister likes to suggest that somehow those committee hearings gave everyone across the country a chance to comment, to have input and to consult, to use the favourite phrase of the Government. The reality is that at least 28 witnesses who wanted to testify before that committee were prevented from doing so. Most of those witnesses were the kind of disinterested witnesses who would have been able to offer a great deal in terms of non-partisan advice with respect to this Bill. The Director of the Research Centre at Queens University and—dare I say it—the son of the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton), people such as they who have a certain perspective based on detailed study and a lack of access to grants, did not approach the subject with the extreme prejudice of the Minister. They were cut off and not permitted to testify.

• (1130)

We could move from the witness stage to the stage at which amendments were reviewed. Again, the Minister tells us that the committee was able to study with care and diligence all the suggestions which were made by opposition Members. That was not so. There were only three days of debate. At least half of the amendments which were put before the committee were not debated. Then the Bill, at report stage, came to the House. Again the Government is suggesting that a filibuster is taking place.

If we look at the debates which have taken place on each of the sets of amendments which have been brought forward, we find that there has been a reasonable number of speakers. There are 30 people in the NDP caucus, but in no case have we offered 30 speakers. In most cases we have not come close.

These are key items. The Minister spoke about his mandate to see the Bill through the House. Indeed, he has that mandate. In principle, the people of the country supported the notion of Investment Canada, but they did not vote last September to have no public input to the hearings which are held on Investment Canada. The people of Canada did not vote to have ineffective criteria on which to judge companies. For instance, there is no criterion to look at the financial viability of the parent companies of the firms which are taking over Canadian companies. The people of Canada did not vote for a definition of assets which is totally confusing. It will provide a bonanza for lawyers, but it will not give Canadians the protection which they deserve when takeovers occur.

In report stage on the Bill, we are dealing with key technical points. Surely to God each of those points is worthy of some debate. Yet the House will be given only one day to look at the important amendments which remain.

The Minister claims that what he is doing is designed to protect workers in Canada and to find jobs for the future. There are many points of view concerning the question of foreign investment. On the basis of experience I would hold that the Minister's view is faulty and that the analysis which lies behind it is mistaken. But that is something on which we can differ. That is not what is at debate at report stage. We are not debating that broad principle at report stage. We are debating a whole set of crucial amendments, such as amendments concerning changes which would ensure that branches of U.S. companies, if they change hands, are subject to review. If, for instance, the Iron Ore Company of Canada changed hands, which threatened jobs for Canadian workers, there is no capacity in the present Bill to review the takeover, because of faults in the organization of the Bill. Branches are not included, but subsidiaries are. That is one example of the kinds of technical but important points which deserve careful scrutiny before the House votes on the important amendments brought forward.

There are several cases which have come before us since September, such as those of Black & Decker, Mitel and Canadian Porcelain. In each of those cases, the importance to Canadian workers in being able to turn to the Foreign Investment Review Agency for protection or to safeguard their positions, has been an important ingredient in the economic future of Canada. This Bill will eliminate that protection for many workers. In that sense, it is absolute and total nonsense to say that this Bill somehow meets the needs of the 1.5 million people who are unemployed. In fact, those people are threatened by the rationalizations that may take place as takeovers occur and foreign investments leave Canada as branch plants shut down and subsidiaries restructure. The Minister should remember this day in the future when he faces case after case of shut-downs of Canadian subsidiaries and of the rationalization associated with North American free trade. Day after day he will face the sense of loss which his Bill leaves among the workers and the communities.

On election night we had a sense of hope. Instead of hope, today we have a sense of shame as the Government uses its large power to stifle debate. We see a sense of dishonesty as arguments are brought forward which are not appropriate to report stage of the Bill. We feel a sense of sadness. The Government controls all power in the House of Commons. It can do what it wants to do. But on behalf of my Party I want to register the sadness and the sense of regret which we feel as this Government adopts the arrogance, the sense of overweening pride, and the sense of dominance and concern with its own policies and beliefs at the exclusion of ideas and input from opposition Parties which so marked the Government voted out of office last September.

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a few comments on the motion to limit debate on this Bill and to respond to a few of the assertions which have been made by the two previous speakers. I found it interesting to listen to the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) and the obvious sincerity, albeit very often misguided, with which he speaks. The remarks of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry certainly speak for themselves and will later be addressed.

There are several obvious reasons for this motion to limit debate on Bill C-15. The time which has been spent on this Bill has been addressed by previous speakers. As the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) previously stated, the time spent on debate in the House and in committee is now approaching 80 hours. I believe that Canadians who are watching the proceedings of the House of Commons can appreciate what 80 hours of discussion should be able to generate and accomplish. There has been extensive participation in debate by all Members in the House and in committee. It was interesting that one of the member of the Opposition commented on, in his words, the "stifling" of people in committee. There were 23 representations made in committee for a total of 26 hours of discussion. There were 30 additional briefs and 19 amendments accepted by the committee. These amendments, briefs, submissions, and representations dealt exhaustively and extensively with the Bill.

• (1140)

There has also been concern expressed, as mentioned by the Hon. Minister, about the obstruction of popular will. On September 4 the Government received a massive mandate from Canadians who had many desires and aspirations for their Government. The people of Canada look toward the Government for some new and innovative approaches to the economy. The Minister's Bill has drawn a very sensible and equitable balance between the Government and those Canadians and non-Canadians who wish to invest in our country. The needless number of amendments proposed by the Opposition would have reinstated FIRA and gone much further to undermine the popular will of Canadians.

What did Canadians want on September 4 in the area of investment by non-Canadians? They clearly showed that they did not want the intervention exercised by the past Government. The over 90 amendments moved by the Opposition went even further than asking for the reinstatement of FIRA. The Opposition debate to this point has been repetitive, to say the least. As Canadians watch the parliamentary proceedings, they find it sad that the House of Commons has become a "talk shop".

The NDP espouses a philosophy and point of view that is, to say the least, unrealistic. I hearken back to my province of Saskatchewan. When one grows up in the only province which has had over 40 years of New Democratic and CCF Governments, one learns very quickly the extent to which that Party wants the state involved in the lives of all people.

It is unfortunate that the opposition Parties have used the number of hours that they have. Liberals have spoken 82 times in the House on Bill C-15. New Democrats have been on their feet 72 times. These interventions made simply reiterate tired and meaningless amendments which waste the time of Canadian people who are watching the proceedings of the House. Debate in the House is often compared to a freeway. There are all sorts of Bills affecting farmers, native people, and other Canadians in the merge lane trying to get into the House of Commons. Yet debate in the House is taken up by an Opposition which makes many interventions and amendments which border on the frivolous. For that reason, the House of Commons is not being used in the responsible fashion in which it should.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gormley: As well as being obstructive the debate which we have heard creates uncertainty. The uncertainty and lack of confidence which was spread by FIRA is now being perpetuated. Those who wish to invest in Canada look at the positive aspects of the Investment Canada Bill and wonder why it cannot clear the House of Commons. They wonder why the Opposition is causing such a delay. We are not doing a service to the people who wish to invest in Canada.

For that reason I speak in support of this motion to limit time for debate. Owing to its sense of democracy, the Government has allowed the fullest airing of opinions on this Bill. The committee has dealt with this matter extensively and it is now time to move on to other pressing matters that are before the House of Commons.

I would like to address some comments through you, Mr. Speaker, to the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), who speaks about hypocrisy. It makes the heart flip and the stomach turn to hear that Member talk about hypocrisy.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gormley: The pot calling the kettle black had nothing on the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry. Unction oozes from every pore of his little body. He speaks with a sanctimonious air about what his political Party stands for and what his Government did. After the years of pitiful, sad performance by his Government, with him as a Minister, this is neither the time nor the place for members of the Liberal Party to discuss hypocrisy.

It was interesting to hear Liberal Members saying that we should leave FIRA as it is because it did not prevent anything; that the majority of proposals were simply rubber-stamped. They wanted FIRA because they could use it as a political football. The Liberal Party wanted to use people's hopes, concerns and views about investment as a political football to play upon feelings of economic nationalism from time to time. When it got a little too repressive it would simply back off on FIRA and economic nationalism. The blatant political overtones of FIRA were seen for what they were on September 4.

I call upon Members of the House to support the proposal to bring Bill C-15 to a vote and to move on to the other important issues which await the people of Canada. For that reason I support this motion of time allocation to enable the House to move on to other serious matters which await us.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, it is a sad day when one must get up to speak on time allocation and look at the laughing faces of the Conservatives who introduced only one original piece of legislation before the House, that is, Investment Canada. How many of those bookends and surfers have we seen—a surfer is a guy who comes in and goes out at the next election. We have heard none of them debate this issue. The last speaker must have been a surfer who came in with the tide. He talks about the meaningless and needless number of amendments. He says that the Official Opposition has undermined the will of the Canadian people. He says that the Government came in with a strong majority and should therefore rule and govern as nobody else can, and no one should question it. Well, I remind him that fewer than half of Canadian voters voted for the Progressive Conservatives, God thank them.

• (1150)

Mr. Gormley: How many voted for you?

Mr. Gauthier: It doesn't matter.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: I got my majority, don't worry. You can come into my riding any time, Sir, and I will take you on, you and any others. I do not have to worry, I have a comfortable majority. What I am telling you is that you do not have that kind of majority from Canadians. Call an election tomorrow on this issue, show that you have guts. But no, they would not do that.

What were we talking about? About amendments. Because we had a combined total of 94 amendments, the Government says, "Hey, enough. The Government says it has an agenda, but it spent six days last week and the week before on opposition days. The Government said we should tell it what to discuss. Well, we did, for six whole days. I heard the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley) get up and say we are taking the time of the House. The Government gave the Official Opposition six full days, and we used it.

Mr. Gormley: What did you do with it?

Mr. Gauthier: We used it. Interestingly enough, we raised subjects that were of interest to the Members of this House and to Canadians at large. It was a good debate on all the issues we raised. But that is not my point. My point is that the Conservatives did not have an agenda, they did not have anything on the books. All they had was Investment Canada. And when we said, let's work together and improve this legislation, they said no. They said they were going to cut off debate, have only two hours of ten-minute speeches following which we are going to vote, and of course, "We have the majority", as they put it so well. "We are 211. We are the bullies on the street, we are going to tell Canadians how we run this country." Watch out on Thursday. Every night for the last two weeks we have heard that it is going to be a tough Budget. Be careful, Canadians, you are really going to get it. But on Thursday they will say, "We are a bunch of nice guys". Such beautiful marketing, but what a bunch of nonsense!

Let us look at the amendments and what the Minister called the obstructionist Liberals. We proposed that the Minister should give policy direction to the agency. Did he accept that? No. It is going to be another part of his office. No direction there. They will do whatever he decides. And if some foreign company comes over and wants to buy anything in Canada, it is welcome to it. The Minister is the only one who will decide. He will not even have to consult his Cabinet colleagues. Great. Well, I say that is not the way things should be. Motion No. 6 suggests that finding Canadian buyers should be a duty of the Minister. Sure, we want foreign investment, but we should ensure that Canadians buy into their own economy. Last week I heard a Member saying that in Canadians' minds FIRA is not important any more. But before they start to snap their suspenders, as we say in French—péter les bretelles—I would remind them that the reason Canadians—

[Translation]

—the reason why Canadians are not concerned about FIRA is because the agency has been a good thing for Canada. For instance, in 1970, as Canadians are aware, the manufacturing sector was 61 per cent foreign-owned. By 1980, this percentage had dropped to 53 per cent. We had recovered 8 per cent of our economy. The same thing was true—

An Hon. Member: You closed the shop!

Mr. Gauthier: That is not true. We did not close the shop but we made Canadians take an interest in the shop.

In 1970, 76 per cent of oil and natural gas interests were in foreign hands. By 1980, this was 51 per cent. Why? Because we gave Canadians the challenge of becoming the masters of their economy and increasing their participation in the economy by buying back our resources and our companies.

[English]

In mining and smelting foreign ownership decreased from 80 per cent to 48 per cent in the period from 1970 to 1980. I thought that was pretty good. So FIRA was useful. Of course Canadians said in the latest poll that they are not too preoccupied with FIRA being modified. I can understand that because we reached a certain level of Canadianization with FIRA; you have to admit that. We reversed a trend which was quite disquieting to many of us, where foreign ownership was becoming a threat to our economy. As the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) said, they are companies that are welcome, but we know from observing their practices that they do not do the same amount of research and development as do Canadian companies in Canada.

We would like to develop our high-tech industry, we would like to think that the Mitels and the Gandalfs and the Nabus and all these small companies will some day be able to compete in the international sphere, but with Canadian ownership being guaranteed. I do not think there is anything wrong with that. What is there in this Bill to encourage Canadians to invest in their own economy? Nothing. Absolutely nothing. What is there in this Bill that will interest foreigners to come in and invest in Canadian manufacturing industries and the Canadian economy? Nothing. Except that the Government, through a campaign of—

[Translation]

"Denigration", I do not know the right expression in English, so I use this one, a campaign to denigrate FIRA. They spread the view around that the agency was a threat to this country's economy, that it was responsible for the economic crisis we experienced following the recession of 1980, 1981 and 1982. But that is just not true! It was the international economic situation. In order to finance a very substantial deficit, the Americans increased interest rates in the U.S. to such high levels that foreign capital flooded into the United States. I remember last year when, in three months, $40 billion were invested in the United States. Why? Because they were paying 13 and 14 per cent, that is why. So this money was not going to Canada, and Canadians with money to invest were going to put it where? Where they were likely to get the best return on their investment, and this was happening on an international scale.

You do not have to be an economic genius to understand that all this was not FIRA's fault, that it did not cause the economic recession. Of course the agency was affected in recent years, but last year, 97 per cent of FIRA applications were approved in Canada. This means $4.1 billion worth of foreign capital was invested in this country, created jobs, and breathed new life into an economy that needed a boost, so that today, Canadians are capable of defending themselves and fighting their own battles. It seems that the responsible Minister who is going to be the czar or the big boss of the new agency is going to be the only one to decide what goes. It seems he will not have to consult with his Cabinet colleagues and will be able to do what he wants, when he wants. I say this is very disturbing, because there are companies like Mitel which received as much as $30 million in grants from the Federal Government for the purpose of expansion, and I am thinking of Renfrew and Buctouche, and there is going to be a lot more said about this matter. They got grants! I say that a Canadian company that gets federal grants should be screened by the Foreign Investment Review Agency, but now, the Minister will not have to bother about that. He will not do that anymore. He will choose who he wants. Come on in, we are for sale, and we are a terrific bargain!

Mr. Speaker, so much for my comments. I will get back to the amendments later on.

Mr. Pierre Blais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): At the outset of his remarks, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) was talking about calling an election on this issue. I would suggest that going to the electorate in such a case would signal the ultimate demise of the Liberal Party. On the mere strength of Canadian voter reaction in the face of policies advocated by this Government, I think it would be doing them a disservice, particularly so to the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague from The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley) said earlier that I am a new Member of the House of Commons. Well, so is my colleague and we were not used to hearing the kind of verbiage we have had to listen to for a few weeks now, particularly concerning this Bill—

Mr. Gauthier: The word is "persiflage"!

• (1200)

Mr. Blais: Persiflage is what you call it, is it? Perhaps I was used to work differently, in other surroundings more conducive to efficiency. That is precisely what the Progressive Conservative Government has been trying to restore in this Parliament and in this unprecedented majority administration—getting Canadians back to work and building up their confidence. We are not yet quite reconciled to watching the Opposition blowing up a storm in a teacup in an attempt to block the adoption of a Bill supported by most Canadians who want progress—

Mr. Gauthier: Not true!

Mr. Blais: —and job creation in this country. The Opposition refuses to admit that the mood of Canadians has changed and it shows disrespect for the clearly expressed will of the people. The Government and the Progressive Conservative Party have been defending that position for a long time, for months in fact, even before the election. FIRA had to be changed and made into an organization to promote job creation here in Canada. Canadians were at one with us on this point and I think that the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party are duty-bound to support our position because Canadians asked for that when they gave us a majority.

I have heard lots of speeches in the past 15 days and all Members of the New Democratic Party invariably begin by saying: Today is a very sad day . . . Had Canadians been able to hear that litany, not only children but hundreds and thousands of people throughout the land would have been squawking. We must stop feeling sorry for ourselves, being in the dumps, forever afraid to take a bold economic approach. Our Prime Minister sent a clear message when he said in New York: "The Canadian Government is now open for business". And he meant just that. We must now regain our confidence and give Canadians something to look forward to.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, we are just coming out of a long tunnel. We have restored the confidence of Canadians in their Government. There is still the odd resistance movement—I can see evidence of it from here—but one does not wipe off twenty years of deception overnight or in a week.

Mr. Gauthier: Stop making personal remarks!

Mr. Blais: It will take a few months. We understand that. But in my opinion the former Government—and particularly your leader at the time—tried to make Canada find new markets the world over, but it backfired. We withdrew into our own shell and, by trying to open up to all the nations of the world, we closed the door to our best friend, the United States of America. It is our neighbour, it is our friend, it is with its Government that Canada does most of its business, and I think it was the wrong approach.

Mr. Speaker, our approach is what I want to stress at this point, because that is what I wanted to deal with from the beginning of my remarks. Members of the Opposition simply have to understand that our Government has taken an approach which markedly differs from what we were used to. There lies the essential element, and Canadians from every region of the country got the message. A new Government came into office with a solid majority, so it gave a sense of direction: My friends, we will roll up our sleeves and come to grips with the problems of the nation. Quite obviously, FIRA has proved to be an obstacle in the way of economic growth, so we will change it. We want to make it into a driving force and if we are successful in restoring a climate of confidence among foreign investors, particularly the Americans with whom we have a special relationship, I suggest that investors from the four corners of the world, Americans included, will no longer hesitate to come here after seeing our climate of lasting stability and freedom.

Mr. Speaker, I tried to follow the second reading debate on this Bill as best as I could and I heard other comments as well. Among others, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) said that if there is one thing which the Liberal Party left behind and of which we should be particularly proud, it is to have managed to Canadianize our economy.

I do not think I can share the Hon. Member's pride in a legacy of a million and a half unemployed, a $35 billion deficit for this year and a cumulative deficit of $225 billion. I do not think there is much to be proud of there. I suppose the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) was referring to some kind of private legacy, because as far as what we inherited—thanks but no thanks! I would much rather start from scratch instead of having to work with what the previous Government left us, that is pretty obvious.

I would say that the Opposition parties, especially in this debate, do not seem to realize there was a change on September 4 and that the Government received a clear mandate. They should not be wasting time obstructing a Bill for which we have received a mandate. I think it is time we got to work and dropped this useless and time-wasting exercise.

Ninety-four amendments were considered in committee, all of which the Opposition wanted to consider again here in the House, just to make the debate drag on and to postpone the passage of this Bill for I do not know how long. All that is obvious. The Minister said so earlier, and my hon. colleague as well, that we have other legislation on the agenda. This debate has gone on long enough. The will to act is there. The public's reaction is positive. That is what counts. It is a matter of attitude and confidence. We have restored that confidence and we must go on. Mr. Speaker, the Government cannot tolerate . . . of course, they say we are taking advantage of the situation and of our majority. That is just not so, Mr. Speaker. When one has the majority one must act accordingly. To do so is to respect the will of Canadians who elected us on September 4 and who told us: Go ahead with your policies. We believe in them and we agree with you.

Mr. Speaker, I have finished my comments and I thank you.

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Gormley: It is a sad day.

Mr. Deans: It is not a question of being a sad day.

Mr. Crosbie: Try a black day.

Mr. Deans: I was interested in the comments made by the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley). I yearn for the days when his predecessor said intelligent things here. In fact, I hear from those who normally vote Tory in Saskatchewan that they can hardly wait for the next election to return the former Member to his place in the House.

I do not want to make any apologies for what we are doing. The Government does not have an agenda of programs to bring forward. If it had programs, we would not have had six consecutive opposition days in the House. I tell the government Members not to give us that malarkey. Don't give us that malarkey about the Government wanting to get on with the business of Canada by bringing forward its programs to solve the very serious problems confronting the people of Canada.

The Government does not have programs to bring forward, and this is why we were forced to put up speaker after speaker to give our views on how the country ought to be run. The Conservative party was either afraid or unwilling to put up speakers to demonstrate its ideas. That has been the problem with this Parliament. I do not heap that abuse on new Members because I do not expect them to have particularly good ideas. Most of them did not expect to be elected in the first place.

With respect to the Government's present action, I believe that it is fundamental that we take every step necessary to preserve the integrity of this nation economically and socially. It is on our shoulders in this Parliament to do whatever we can to ensure that there will in fact be the kind of economic opportunities and social integrity that Canada has fought and struggled so hard to maintain for many years. What this Government is doing through this legislation is undermining that very purpose. I think that is what makes it so offensive to us on this side of the House.

• (1210)

It is true that FIRA was not all that it could have been. It is true that FIRA did not measure up in many ways to what some of us had anticipated it might do. It is also true that although FIRA was in place, there were a large number of takeovers about which I had some serious reservations and about which many of my colleagues had serious reservations. These were takeovers of what were good, viable operations in Canada that fell into foreign hands, the end result of which was that the viable operations ceased to exist. They were run down and ultimately closed. The end result of that was that the foreign competitor in his own country of origin was able to ship into Canada products that used to be made here because the competitor had successfully worn down the opposition right here in our own country.

I hold no particular torch for FIRA. I do not think that FIRA was a particularly useful mechanism in its over-all capacity to deal with the problem. It is certainly head and shoulders over what we now have before us, and it is for that reason we fought so hard. It is for that reason we took so long. It is for that reason we want to continue the debate on the Investment Canada Bill. It is a vital part of Canada's future.

This debate speaks to what Canada will be ten, fifteen, or twenty years from now. It speaks to whether we will allow almost total foreign ownership of the valuable resources of this land. That is why we are not at all eager to see this Bill dealt with expeditiously.

It is not a question of whether the Government got a mandate on September 4 last. Of course the Government did. However, that mandate did not extend to the dismantling of the very economic structures here. That mandate was more or less given because of the—

Mr. Rodriguez: Mismanagement.

Mr. Deans: —mismanagement, thank you, of the Liberal Party over a number of years prior to 1984. I do not want the government Members or the government supporters in the House to walk around with the misguided notion that somehow because the Conservatives won an overwhelmingly large number of seats in the September 4 election it automatically gives them the right to destroy the very substance of the country. It does not. It gives Conservatives the right to be a Government; it gives them the right to bring forward proposals to Parliament. But the parliamentary system is set up in such a way that Government proposes and Parliament disposes. That is what it is all about. The Government brings forward its ideas. Having those ideas put before Parliament, Parliament then decides at what point in time and in what way those ideas should be dealt with.

I suggest that in this Parliament, even with a combined 80 hours of debate on a Bill, its being of such a crucial nature, it is simply not long enough. There is other legislation. There is other legislation that we are quite prepared to deal with reasonably expeditiously, and we have said so. I have brought to the attention of the Government House Leader a list of legislative proposals that we would be prepared to deal with in a way that they should be dealt with, that is, expeditiously and speedily. We have pointed out that there is a need to deal with some of them immediately, but that there is no need to deal with this Bill now. There is nothing requiring this piece of legislation to be dealt with right away. There is already a process in place. The Cabinet does deal with proposals from FIRA. They come to Cabinet. Cabinet has the opportunity if it so desires, to review the reasons that FIRA thought it was good or not such a good idea to accommodate a takeover request.

Mr. Stevens: It will still have that.

Mr. Deans: It is not as if this change in itself will make it easier. I am suggesting that there are other important matters. There is the whole question of the 1.5 million who remain unemployed notwithstanding the promises of this Government. There is the whole question of the economic direction the country will take as a result of this Government's views on the economy, and since there are serious environmental questions still to be dealt with, and since there are any number of other issues that, combined, made for the reasons people defeated the Liberal Party, why do we not get on and deal with those things? Why must we put in place legislation which has the capacity to undermine the future economy of Canada? Why run the risk of passing a piece of legislation now that would enable the takeovers to take place that until now we have had some serious reservations about? Why pass legislation now to accommodate that, knowing full well what the past history has been and knowing full well that we have, in the main, found it extremely difficult to establish an economic path for Canada when we have had to deal with head offices located in any other part of the world but our own?

The Minister is well aware, I am sure—if he would take off his ideological blinders for a moment and think a little about what has happened in the past—he knows as well as I do of the numerous times when major corporations have made it impossible for their Canadian operations to enter into the world market and to seek out markets for the products they manufacture. He knows of the numbers of times when takeovers have been effected, the cost written off against taxpayers' dollars in Canada, and the company has then closed its doors, become a warehouse for the distribution of products manufactured in some other part of the world, the only purpose of the exercise being to eliminate competition. He knows of the takeovers, using any test one might want to use, that could not be shown to be of any significant benefit to Canada. Recognizing that all of those things have happened in the past and recognizing that as a country we have never been viewed with any great concern, other than for the purpose of monetary return to the investor, by the vast majority of those who would invest in Canada, why would we want to make it easier?

I always think of a conversation I had in Washington. I think it was a Senator who said to me that he did not understand why we were concerned about foreign investment. I asked him how much foreign investment there is in the United States. It might have been, let us say, 10 per cent of the total number of dollars. It is down about 2 per cent, so I am being generous. It might be around 10 per cent of the total. I said to him, "Suppose that foreign investment got to 30 per cent of the total, how would you feel?" He said, "We would never allow it". I said, "Suppose it got to 40 per cent, how would you feel?" "We would never allow it", he said. "It could never happen in the United States". He was telling me that the conditions we have in Canada would be totally unacceptable to the very people who are arguing that they want to impose their conditions on us.

Mr. Rodriguez: They have a Congress.

Mr. Deans: The various people who are demanding, threatening, bludgeoning us into giving up the last little bit of protection we have are saying to us at the same time that if the situation in Canada were to be identical in the United States, they would not tolerate it. Yet this Government, misguided as it is in its direction, is prepared to give up the last little bit of protection for the Canadian economy.

Mr. Boudria: That is the Tories.

Mr. Deans: That is why we fight and that is why what the Government is doing is wrong.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, we have reached the point in this debate on Bill C-15, which is to kill the Foreign Investment Review Agency, at which the Government has allowed us two hours to conclude debate.

Mr. Blenkarn: You have been here before.

• (1220)

Mr. Kaplan: I have been here before, and I have had the opportunity to speak on the Bill before. I do not want to use all the 10 minutes available because there are many Members on my side who have more they want to say about the Bill. However, I want to make a couple of points.

Before September 4, it was difficult to find members of the Conservative caucus in the House of Commons who believed that closure was ever justified. They were wrong. Closure is sometimes justified. Although they never recognized it in opposition, they certainly recognized quickly in government that closure or time allocation can be a very valuable instrument for the Government to bring the House to a vote on Bills where it is really necessary to deal with them and get on with the public business. I am rising to point out that this is surely not that kind of case. Although the rules permit time allocation now, I think time allocation now is wrong and that the Government has made a mistake in applying it. It has become even more important for us in the Opposition, in the couple of hours we have, to make the point to Canadians that something very valuable will be lost when the Foreign Investment Review Agency is shut down.

For one thing, there is more to be said on the question of foreign investment review. It is a subject in which this country became involved very late. We entered the policy area of foreign investment review long after foreign investment became very far advanced in Canada. While it was largely beneficial to Canada to have the foreign investment we had, while we used it well and we grew as a nation from it, we also paid a higher price than we had to.

I became a Member of Parliament shortly after an intensive review began by the Government of the nature of foreign investment in our country and the question of whether foreign review could be controlled or directed in a way which would still encourage it to come to Canada but in a way that would provide more benefits to Canadians and still be worth-while from the point of view of the foreign investor than had been the case in the past. The Foreign Investment Review Agency was established in that spirit. It is bureaucratic by nature. It is an agency which reviews the plans of business and negotiates with business interests.

Naturally, there may be business interests which would prefer not to have foreign investment review at all. However, on the other hand, any multi-national firm in the world market is aware that almost every country in the world has foreign investment review. Even the United States has it in one way or another. The idea that multi-nationals or others interested in investing in Canada would be deterred by that bureaucratic step was never really proven. I am not satisfied today that any serious business proposition which had wanted to come to Canada would have been deterred by the kind of foreign investment review established by the former Government and in effect in Canada. In fact, if anything, one might have seen a continuation. In fact, there was a continuation of foreign investment in Canada. For all the criticism made of foreign investment review, it appeared to me that most of it was political, most of it was partisan, and most of it was done to design part of the election campaign of the Progressive Conservative Party in the course of the last election.

What has to be remembered in deciding whether the Foreign Investment Review Agency is really the obstacle which the Government says it is is that the Government controls it now. The Foreign Investment Review Agency is an instrument of the Government of the day. It eventually determines whether investments are to be approved. So the argument that we have to proceed here and that we have to collapse this debate because otherwise FIRA will continue inhibiting investment in the country, is wrong on two grounds. It does not inhibit investment and it is controlled by the Government, in effect the final say is at the Cabinet table. On that score the Government is not able to convince the House that any kind of limit, especially the two-hour limit it is seeking to impose on us today, is justified.

A second reason which might be advanced to justify imposing closure today is that this is about the only initiative which the Government has. If we look at virtually all the other legislation on the Order Paper, the other legislation that has gone forward, it is either legislation of a straightforward housekeeping nature or it is legislation that was on the Order Paper when the election was called. I am thinking of all the Bills in the justice area, in particular the one with which I am most familiar. These were initiatives, for the most part, which were well under way when the election was called. The one thing we can say about Bill C-15, the Bill to establish Investment Canada, is that it is the legislative program of the Government of Canada today. To my way of thinking that in itself does not justify forcing the Bill through the House any faster than it would be carried by the normal parliamentary process. If the argument is that the Government wants to move forward and put its stamp on the public administration of Canada by bringing forward its first real Bill and getting it enacted in legislation, I do not think it washes as an argument. I reject it, and I consider on that ground as well that there is no justification for bringing in closure or time allocation to force the House to settle the Bill now.

The third argument which was often used in the past when time allocation was brought forward by former Governments was that there was a heavy legislative backlog, that there was a lot of legislation waiting on the Order Paper to move ahead, and that the Bill before the House, although important, it would be argued, needed to be dealt with so that we could get on with other business. Again, if we look at the Order Paper and at the legislative timetable of the Government, there is nothing else which has to be brought forward on an urgent basis to be considered now. I know our House Leader would be willing to sit down with the Government House Leader, if it were a question of finding time for the rest of the Government's pitifully short legislative program, to permit us to do that according to the Government's timetable and get back to this Bill. I think that kind of agreement could be worked out. On this third ground there is no reason demonstrated for imposing time allocation now. We do not know with what the Government will want to fill the legislative timetable or the time of the House when we have finished consideration of this Bill. In fact, last week and the week before we had something like six days, nearly one after the other, dedicated to opposition business because there was no government legislative business other than this Bill to move forward on. Why can we not give it all the time it requires?

In closing, I want to point out that this is a very important subject. It is not a subject which should be dealt with by time allocation. The way in which foreign investment is to continue in Canada, a country which requires a great deal of foreign investment, is a very important subject, not one which should be wrapped up in the course of a two-hour debate. We should have time to explore all aspects of it. The Government should take the time to try to bring forward the evidence, if there is any other than the anecdotal statements of some businessmen around the world who oppose any kind of government intervention or participation in the activities of an economy. I know the Government can obtain a lot of evidence like that. There are various types of businessmen around who will come forward and say that they would rather not have to deal with Government than deal with Government. However, that is not real proof that the economic development of this country has suffered because of FIRA. We think the case can be made on the other side. The records are there in every FIRA application which went ahead of the kinds of concessions and commitments that were made by foreign investors to ensure that the Canadian economy and the Canadian people would be the clear beneficiaries of every foreign investment made in our country while the Foreign Investment Review Act and the Foreign Investment Review Agency were in place.

● (1230)

I think the Government is making a big mistake. Investment Canada will not do the job that the Foreign Investment Review Agency was there to do. The Government will be too removed from the examination of proposed investments in our country under the new system. It has not proven that anything was lost through the Foreign Investment Review Agency and in fact, as I have said, there is a great deal of evidence to show that very specific benefits were obtained for Canadian workers and the Canadian economy from the existence of the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

I for one am more determined than ever that the story be told to the Canadian people of what has been lost here today. They should know about the very great damage that can be done if the doors are thrown open wide to any kind of investment in this country without any adequate oversight to ensure that the public interest is protected.

Mr. Norman Warner (Stormont-Dundas): Mr. Speaker, for some time, the public has been quite aware of the discussions surrounding FIRA and what would replace it. What the Government was going to do was discussed thoroughly during the election campaign. It was recognized by Canadians that they wanted a change.

Debate on this Bill commenced in the House over five months ago. During that period of time, almost 40 hours of House of Commons time and almost 40 hours of committee time has been used to discuss this Bill, potential amendments to it and the possibility of going back to a form of FIRA. I believe that the time has been well spent but that we have used enough time.

The fact is that unemployment is at a high level, even though it has dropped somewhat. An unemployment rate of 11 per cent is still too high and the need for new jobs and job-creation measures has never been greater. We are looking forward to bringing $100 billion worth of new equity investment to Canada between now and 1991. As this is what is required, it is the target the Government has in mind. Passage of Bill C-15 is one of the steps that will help us bring into this country that new equity that is so badly needed to help create jobs for the many unemployed.

Encouragement of foreign investment can take many forms. It can be a partnership, a joint venture or a minority interest. In changing this climate, we hope that Canadians will once again have renewed confidence in Canada and Canada's future so they too will be encouraged to provide much of that $100 billion worth of new equity which is required.

In Stormont-Dundas, my home riding, there is an unemployment rate of about 15.5 per cent. However, the riding of Stormont-Dundas also has one of the lowest rates of participation in the country, being slightly over 60 per cent. This means that a great number of people have simply given up, are not looking for work and have lost hope in finding work. Although the published unemployment rate is around 15.5 per cent, if we had a participation rate similar to that of the rest of Canada, the unemployment rate would actually be 21 per cent. If we had a participation rate similar to that of the rest of eastern Ontario, the unemployment rate would be 26 per cent. These figures have been hidden from a public that is very concerned. However, they do emphasize the problems with which we are faced. I am sure that in the near future, not only will we create new jobs but the participation rate will begin to rise as people have more confidence in our ability to create jobs.

Business confidence rose in the first quarter of 1985. The latest Conference Board survey of business attitudes and investment spending intentions indicated the following:

—a growing confidence in Canada's short term economic prospects. An increased proportion of senior managers now see the near-term economic outlook characterized by lower unemployment rates, stronger sales and improved profits. Business confidence in the current investment climate continued to climb following the significant gains registered in the fourth quarter survey.

This confidence is continuing to grow. Passage of Bill C-15 will indicate to the rest of the world that we have confidence in our community, our businesses, our ability to create jobs, and our investment opportunities which are probably the most outstanding investment opportunities available to international investors anywhere in the world.

We recently had the privilege of having a large American company locate in Cornwall with the intention of creating in excess of 200 jobs. We welcome this company. We welcome more Americans, we welcome Europeans and we welcome the entire international investment community. Stormont-Dundas will welcome investors, not only foreign investors but Canadian investors, and it will show some of the negative-minded opposition Members that we can create jobs and we can create them without government intervention.

Perhaps in the next few years we will see the unemployment rate in Stormont-Dundas drop dramatically. I hope and wish that members of the Opposition will join me in a positive thrust to create new jobs. Get behind the people who are unemployed. Rather than pushing them down, help lift them up. We have a new era ahead. I invite all Hon. Members to join us.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, hundreds of thousands of people, indeed millions of people from industrialized countries like the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium and Holland have lost their jobs in recent years. They have lost their jobs partly because of the development of new technology requiring fewer workers and partly because the new technologies are being exported to formerly under-developed countries like South Korea and Brazil where the most modern manufacturing plants are being set up. These plants are producing the manufactured goods which in the past were produced in industrialized countries while paying workers a fraction of what workers from the industrialized countries formerly made.

Workers in this country are facing the same problems as workers in other industrialized countries. However, our situation, is probably worse than that of workers in other countries because so much of Canada's manufacturing industry is owned and controlled by companies with head offices and owners located in other countries. These head offices and owners are located mainly in the United States, but there are also some in Japan, Germany and Great Britain.

When foreign-based companies make decisions, those decisions will not necessarily be made taking into account what is good for Canada and Canadian workers. Very often, decisions will be made taking into account what is good for shareholders and management, and also because of pressure that is put on these companies by their Governments. Why should that not be so? Why should the American Government not be concerned about the unemployment rate in the United States? Why should it not be putting pressure on multi-national corporations to create as many jobs as possible in that country rather than in Canada?

There is another problem which we face. Every day of the week we are being told by business leaders, by Government and by academics that in order to survive and to provide jobs, we must be more efficient and productive and that to do that, we must put more effort into research and development. We know about Canada's record in research and development. We know that of all of the OECD countries including countries in western Europe and the countries of the United States and Japan, Canada is at the bottom of the list when it comes to the effort we put into research and development. When other countries are spending 2 per cent to 2.5 per cent, sometimes more, of their GNP on research and development, we are spending half of that. The Conservatives, in their run-up to the election, promised that by 1990 we would be spending 2.5 per cent of our GNP on research and development. But we know what has happened. The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Siddon), has made it very clear that we are not going to reach that figure because the Government has to cut back. We also know that among the worst offenders, the companies which spend the least on research and development, are the multi-nationals.

• (1240)

I do not know if what I am going to illustrate today is still a fact, but I know that several years ago Ford Motor Company, which was doing about $500 million worth of business here a year, did not have a single Ph.D. graduate working on research in this country. That is the situation and that is why we believe and have believed for many years that it is important that as much of our industry as possible should be Canadian-owned. The Government, working with those industries, could then ensure that they develop policies and follow objectives that were good for Canada and Canadian workers. That is why we were so insistent when the Liberals were in power that we get legislation which would encourage Canadian ownership. That is why we kept the pressure on the former Liberal Government to pass legislation establishing FIRA. As so often has happened with Liberal Governments, it took steps to give the appearance that it was doing something when in fact it had no real intention of seeing that real steps are taken. So we have the situation where, particularly in the last few years, 95 per cent or more of all the applications to FIRA by multi-national companies to take over Canadian companies were approved. So that FIRA became something which was to a large extent ignored. It really did not work.

We have always believed that the Government of Canada has to protect the people of Canada. It has to see that the industrial development which takes place in this country is of benefit not just to the shareholders but to the Canadian people. That is why we have opposed the present Government's proposal to do away with FIRA and replace it with Investment Canada.

Let me give just a couple of illustrations of the kind of thing we believe could very well happen if we did away with the present legislation and opened the doors to any foreign company that wanted to come in. The Government now owns two of the largest aerospace companies in this country, namely, de Havilland, which has its main operations in Toronto, and Canadair, with its main operations in Montreal. These two companies employ thousands of workers. How is it that they are now Crown corporations? After all, originally, and for many years, they were privately owned. I want Members on the Government side to remember that it was not some socialist Government which believed in public ownership of everything which took those companies over. What happened was that, as in many countries, the aerospace industry was going through a period of recession and the private owners of those two companies said they could not continue, they were losing too much money, and they were ready to close down. The former Liberal Government of Canada said that every industrialized country in the world has an aerospace industry, that Some of the most important inventions used in all kinds of industry were made originally in the aerospace industry, so it cannot let the aerospace industry disappear. If the private sector will not continue to operate Canadair and de Havilland, then the Government of Canada, on behalf of the people of Canada, is going to take these two companies over.

Now I am not going to defend the way in which those companies were managed, but I certainly believe, and I think the people of Canada believe, that we need to have an aerospace industry in this country. The Government now proposes to privatize those two companies. It may be that they could be privatized by virtually giving them away, but I hope that not even a Conservative Government would do that. However, it may be that right now the aerospace industry world-wide is on an upturn and they can be sold at a fair price. But I ask the Minister, what if four or five years down the road the industry is again in brouble and the new owners want to sell these companies? Will the Government let the aerospace industry disappear, or will we again go through the process of taking them over?

This makes no sense to us, and that is why we believe this legislation is wrong. That is why we believe the Government of Canada has to have the power and authority to be involved in the decision-making concerning what happens in the continuing development of a healthy manufacturing industry in this country.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on the motion before this House because it is obvious that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) is really on a power trip. He obviously wants to get rid of the Foreign Investment Review Act and get all the power in his own hands in order to deal with the few applications which will come to the Government for review. I suppose he wants to do that because he has really had a dismal record of bringing new investment into this country in the six or eight months he has been the Minister.

Let us look back to the time just a year ago to the situation when the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, during a period of about three months, announced something like $2 billion worth of new automobile plant construction in Ontario alone. I will recite the list of plants created because we tend to forget these things. We listen to the Mulroney malarkey and to what the present Minister has to say, but we forget that they have not really been able to bring in any major new automobile assembly or parts manufacturing plants. Looking back we see that a Honda plant, worth $100 million, creating 350 jobs, was approved. Then there was the AMC Renault assembly and parts manufacturing plant, worth some $700 million, going into Brampton, with 7,000 jobs being created. There is also a General Motors steel production and parts plant in Oshawa that is worth $1 billion. There is another General Motors plant in St. Catharines which manufactures engines that is worth $255 million. Those plants amount to over $2 billion and represent some 10,000 jobs. We only have to look at press clippings since that time to realize that the Minister, who talked about bringing in more automobile assembly plants in the fall, has not accomplished very much in that regard. Obviously, the Minister wants to have all the power, for whatever reviews there will be, in his own hands. He does not even want to have to refer them to Cabinet. We could look back at the number of applications which went before FIRA. In 1983, there were 860 applications which did not require review. If applications under Investment Canada are to take over a Canadian company, is the company going to be shut down? Will they also take over the sales force and lay off people? Those are the concerns which many Canadians have with respect to Investment Canada.

● (1250)

On this side of the House we find it incomprehensible that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), before he met with the press and before coming to the House, ran to the United States and made the commitment to do away with FIRA without holding negotiations. Surely, even the Tories agree that it is very useful to have a Foreign Investment Review Act, when new funds are coming into the country or foreigners propose to take over a Canadian company, to be able to negotiate and to ensure that the jobs will be kept, the plant will continue to run, that research will be done in Canada, and that a reasonable share of the international market will be maintained for Canada.

The American foreign control legislation is just as extensive as ours, however , the United States does not have a one-stop shopping situation such as FIRA. People wanting to invest in the United States are required to comb through a whole list of frederal and state legislation. Federal legislation in the United States has 17 Acts which restrict foreign investment. Six of those Acts provide restrictions as to who can invest and participate. Eight of those Acts provide a total prohibition of ownership. The legislation covers many fields. For example, coastal and fresh water shipping is totally prohibited under The Jones Act and the Merchant Marine Act. Dredging and salvage operations are restricted under the Regulation of Vessels in Domestic Commerce legislation. Shipbuilding is barred from government benefit programs under the Fishing Fleet Improvement Act, the Merchant Marine Act and the Merchant Ship Sales Act. In the fishing area, countries which have reciprocal agreements are restricted, and others are prohibited, under the Fish and Wildlife Act and the Fishery Conservation and Management Act. There is a long list of legislation concerning restrictions and prohibitions which cover activities such as those of domestic air carriers in which investment is prohibited under the Federal Aviation Act. International air carriers are restricted under the International Air Transportation Fair Competitive Practices Act. Activities such as radio, television, telegraph and telephone licensing are prohibited under the Communications Act. Radio and television operators are prohibited under the Communications Act. In addition, nuclear power is prohibited under the Atomic Energy Act. Hydroelectric facilities are restricted under the Federal Power Act. The transmission of natural gas and electricity are permitted or restrained under the Federal Power Act. Yet the attitude of the Tories is that Canadian ownership is not necessary or desirable.

I think Canadians believe that Canadian ownership is desirable. In fact, during the first three years of the National Energy Program, Canadian ownership rose from 28 per cent to 40 per cent. That is an amazing performance for a three-year period. During that same period of time we increased our reserves in natural gas to a 33-year horizon and arranged for reserves of oil which will last until the end of the century. Yet the transmission of natural gas and electricity is on the list of American restrictions and prohibitions.

I would like to continue dealing with U.S. legislation. The transfer of federally-owned lands is prohibited unless it is by reciprocal agreement under the Small Tract Act. Mineral rights, such as to oil and coal, are prohibited, unless there is a reciprocal agreement, under the Mineral Land Leasing Act. In addition, the mineral leases on the continental shelf, which include oil, gas and sulphur, are restricted, and in practice are prohibited, under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.

The Americans have a whole list of restrictions and prohibitions which the Tories want to throw wide open in Canada. If the Government is to bring in an Investment Canada Bill, we cannot understand why the Prime Minister and the President did not sit down to negotiate. Instead of throwing Canada wide open with no restrictions on investments under $5 million, we might have negotiated away some of the restrictions concerning Canadian ownership in the United States.

I believe the Tories are putting a hammer to our heads by forcing the vote today on Investment Canada.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, since it is almost one o'clock, pursuant to Standing Order 8(4)(a), I would ask that the House be allowed to continue to sit past one o'clock today in order to complete consideration of the business now before the House.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would ask the Parliamentary Secretary to send the motion to the Chair, please.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Opposition House Leader on a point of order.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, that is exactly my point. We have not seen the motion that was presented to the House. I would like to draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to Standing Order 8(4)(a), which reads:

> When the Speaker is in the chair, a Member may propose a motion, without notice, to continue a sitting through a lunch or dinner hour or beyond the ordinary hour of daily adjournment for the purpose of considering a specified item of business or a stage or stages thereof subject to the following conditions:

I particularly want to draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to subparagraph (i) which reads:

> The motion must relate to the business then being considered—

The Parliamentary Secretary, in her haste to chop off debate on this very poorly conceived and constructed Bill, which would benefit greatly from further consideration in the House, has not presented a motion which has been proven to relate to the business before the House. Therefore, I invite you, Mr. Speaker, to strike down the motion as being defective and ask the Government to go back to the drawing board, both with respect to the motion and, in particular, on this poorly conceived Investment Canada Bill.

I would like to call it one o'clock. I would like to suggest that the Business of the House be considered after two o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair must rule the proposal out of order because it mentions the words "complete the consideration", and it should have read "continued".

S.O. 21

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to deal with the business of the House. I would like to advise the House that following Routine Proceedings today we will move directly to consideration of Bill C-25 with respect to agricultural stabilization. That will be followed by the amendments to the Fisheries Bill. The third item in the sequence will be consideration of the divorce legislation. Therefore, following Routine Proceedings, we will move directly to Bill C-25. I understand that that will be an item of legislation.

Mr. Deans: I rise on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. Do I understand the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) to say that we will not be completing the order that we were dealing with prior to one o'clock?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, because the Opposition is blocking the taking of a vote—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The question was asked of me, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gauthier: You do not have the numbers.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We have the numbers and we are prepared to continue on with unanimous consent. I have just announced the order of business for this afternoon. What I have said is quite clear and we will continue this debate on another occasion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1.02 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

PENSIONS

LUMPSUM PAYMENTS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to make representations here, as well as in writing, to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on behalf of pensioners and senior citizens who receive lumpsum pension payments.

I am referring to lumpsum payments made either under the Canada Pension Plan or by foreign Governments with which we have international agreements, when an application usually requires several years before it is processed and concluded.

I urge the Minister to consider the merits of introducing a measure in the Budget permitting pensioners who receive a lumpsum payment to average it over the number of years for which the payment is being made. In doing so, the taxation burden would be spread in accordance with the years covered by the lump sum payment and would be applied in a fair manner. I hope that the Minister will give this representation positive consideration.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—PLIGHT OF ANDREI SAKHAROV

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the House that on this day when the International Conference on Human Rights is resuming in Ottawa there is a disturbing development in the case of the world famous Soviet dissident, Andrei Sakharov. Attempts by his step-daughter in the United States or reach Dr. Sakharov have proved unsuccessful today. There are suggestions that this internationally known dissident has resumed a hunger strike over the denial to his wife, Yelena Bonner, of permission to receive medical treatment in the West for her serious heart condition, treatment not available to her in the Soviet Union.

It is shocking in this age of instant communication that a simple telephone call between a relative and an international figure famous for his scholarship and human rights activities is impossible to arrange. Therefore I ask the Government to make immediate representations to the Soviet Government, first, to permit Mrs. Bonner to leave the Soviet Union to receive treatment that is not available in the U.S.S.R.; second, to permit the family to establish contact with relatives in the United States; third, to permit representatives of western Governments or the news media to visit Gorky, which is a closed city, in order that Dr. Sakharov's many supporters throughout the world can be informed of his condition.

I am sure that this statement has the support of all Members in the House, and that the Government will act promptly in expressing Canadian concerns.

* * *

VE DAY

VETERANS' VISIT TO THE NETHERLANDS AND ITALY

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, this month thousands of Canadian veterans returned to the battle zones of the Second World War to attend the 40th anniversary of the liberation of the Netherlands and of Italy where the Canadian Forces played a major role in driving out the Nazis. For a few days the veterans relived the horrors of war and vividly recalled the fatigue, the hunger, the thirst, the noise, and the agony of seeing their comrades die as they climbed the mountains and crossed the rivers under heavy gunfire. The Canadians could not be stopped, for they fought for the freedom of the people and for the sovereignty of the nations.

Typically, as in other places, in Wageningen where the Nazis unconditionally surrendered to the Canadians, thousands of people of all ages lined the streets and cheered the veterans as they marched; hundreds put out their hands to touch a veteran while shouting "Thank you, Canada!"

During the impressive commemorative services held in the war cemeteries where the bodies of Canadians lie beneath grave stones carrying the Maple Leaf, wreaths were reverently laid, and while the R.C.N. Brass Band and Bagpipes beautifully rendered "Amazing Grace", hundreds meditated and prayed. In front of the grave of a 21-year old Canadian, a lady with her family exclaimed: "Thank you ... because of your sacrifice we are free!" And they all bowed their heads and thanked God for the Canadians who cared enough to offer their lives, and even to die, so others could be free and so their nation could be sovereign. Holland and Italy say, "Thank you, Canada".

* * *

DISARMAMENT

ADVERTISEMENT SIGNATORIES

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, a new coalition has formed in Canada to disseminate inaccurate, alarmist propaganda. Known as the Toronto Disarmament Network, this left wing advertising co-operative has drawn together an interesting group of infamous Canadians.

In a full page newspaper advertisement published yesterday, this group attempts to convince Canadians that the U.S. Strategic Defence Initiative Research Project will somehow make Canada less secure. In fact Canadians know that this is a gross misstatement.

But one only need to consider where this inaccurate propaganda originates. The group that signed this particular misleading ad includes none other than the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) and 15 of his caucus colleagues; the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), and his fellow Liberal, the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia); the Communist Party of Canada; the Karl Marx Club of Winnipeg, and the Young Communist League of Toronto, to name just a few. It is interesting to see this polarization of like minded people.

* * *

SPORTS

FUNDING OF NATIONAL SOCCER TEAM

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, our Canadian national soccer team is doing extremely well in its march to next year's World Cup finals in Mexico City. The team has fielded a young, dynamic, and able selection of Canadian talent. All Canadians take pride in these sports' ambassadors, and all wish them well on the international sports scene.

However, a projected deficit of close to $500,000 is seriously plaguing their efforts. In response, the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) has committed total and full support, but no money. This kind of action will not score any goals with anyone.

The team needs more than words of encouragement. This year alone over $600,000 of federal money was provided to the Canadian Sports Association, but because of some unrealistic, outdated restrictions, not a single penny reached the national team. I urge the Minister to remove these impediments immediately so that this and other national teams may receive the financial assistance they rightfully deserve.

In addition, the Minister, in typical fashion, has passed the buck to the private sector. However, the corporate sector has already committed more than $1 million in sponsorship for the team.

It is clear that it is the Minister who must now act, and toward this end I challenge him and the Government, from today on, to match any private or corporate donations to our national soccer team. This would show leadership and commitment, and offer an incentive that would be responsed by those very Canadians whom the Minister is asking for financial help.

* * *

SHIPBUILDING

CALL FOR GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, in the recently released annual report of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association, the lack of the Conservative Government's commitment to the Canadian shipbuilding industry is evident. It is clear that the Canadian shipbuilding industry is in need of government attention.

Government statistics show that the number of people employed by the industry has decreased rapidly over the past few years. In 1982, 12,000 were employed in the Canadian shipyards. In 1984, the number is down to 7,000.

At the same time there was a dramatic increase in the number of foreign built vessels registered in Canada. Canadian ship transport companies are going offshore to purchase their vessels, and Canadian workers in the industry are suffering from the Government's inaction.

The Conservative promises to the industry appear to have been forgotten. Where is the extension of concessionary financing terms to Canadian customers of Canadian shipyards? Foreign customers can already obtain such terms through the Export Development branch.

Where are the incentives to increase the Canadian content in vessels used to export Canadian natural resources? Where is the promised doubling of the rate of duty for the temporary importation of foreign vessels when no suitable Canadian vessels are available?

These and other promises were made by the present Government. Instead, the Government has cancelled the SIAP Program and has left the industry to fend for itself. The Canadian shipbuilding industry is hopefully awaiting the Conservative's Budget. However, given the Government's past inaction, we on this side of the House believe that it will be sorely disappointed.

* * *

VETERANS AFFAIRS

LIFE MAGAZINE'S SLIGHTING OF CANADIAN WORLD WAR II VETERANS

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my outrage and indignation over an unconscionable slight to Canada and Canadians by our neighbours to the South.

A special 114-page issue of Life Magazine features stories and pictures about the heroes and battles of World War II, highlighting veterans from the United States and most, if not all, of our other Allies. The magazine had enough space for a section highlighting heroes from Germany and Japan, but apparently not enough space even to mention Canada's part, which is said by others to be a greater part per capita than any other Allied country. It was a valiant and heroic role which is well remembered and honoured in Europe.

• (1410)

As a veteran, I had the honour this month to be a member of the Canadian delegation which travelled to the Netherlands and Italy to commemorate the fortieth anniversary of VE Day. Our delegation, composed of many distinguished veterans, including a recipient of the Victoria Cross, visited more than 20 war cemeteries where more than 10,000 Canadian war dead are buried. In both the Netherlands and Italy we participated in ceremonies organized by their respective Governments to pay tribute to Canada and to the Canadians who liberated their countries 40 years ago, and to the thousands of Canadians who gave their lives in doing so.

That a major American publication can obliterate Canada's important role in World War II, by failing to acknowledge our presence, is an inexcusable omission.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired.

* * *

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER—GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): On May 14 last, Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) tabled in the House his green paper entitled "Competitiveness and Security: Directions for Canada's International Relations".

Mr. Speaker, more than 15 years have gone by since Canada's foreign policy has been reviewed and, in light of the radical changes which have occurred in this country in recent years, it is only normal that a new Government would want to take a fresh look at our relations with the rest of the world. The year 1970 marked the beginning of our unending economic slump and, in September 1984, our Government was saddled with a huge deficit which stands as a major obstacle in the way of economic recovery. This period of economic decline has taught us to what extent our nation and our economy are ever more dependent on other countries. As the Canadian economy lost steam, other countries witnessed our diminishing political clout.

The green paper offers a challenge: we have to make choices and decide what kind of privileged relations we want to have with other countries with a view to increasing our productivity and securing our future. International political experts have expressed enthusiastic support for this reflection and consultation tool.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I humbly call upon the leaders of the Opposition Parties in the House—although I can see that the principle of consultation is anathema to them—to stop pussyfooting and agree to sit on the joint committee which will seek the opinion of Canadians on the green paper, an approach which would be more constructive and positive than the criticisms heard—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his time has expired. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan).

* * *

[English]

ENERGY

OIL PRICES—POSITION ADVANCED BY MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to tell the people of Canada that the Government has been had. The Government gave into the demands of the multinationals in exchange for new investment, but the Government is coming up short.

Three of the five major multinationals have said that even with the money that has been given to them by the Government, they want more. Gulf Canada President Keith McWalter says: "Higher real crude oil prices will be required in the 1990s to warrant the development of new supply sources". But in March the Energy Minister told us her prayers were answered.

Texaco Canada President James Dunlap says the pending federal fiscal policies will help decide how much new investment will be made, and where. He is waiting for the Budget before spending more money, and says: "The best business decisions will be made in response to market forces rather than government regulations". But the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) told us 300,000 jobs would be created because in the past the industry always invested. She forgot to think about prices.

Shell Canada's President, Jack MacLeod, says that: "Our greatest concern is too high expectations by Governments and the public about the speed of the upturn. Balance sheets have to be rebuilt and there must be increased profitability for new long-term projects".

The Minister of Energy told us that oil companies promised her they would invest more if she removed the Government's taxes. But now the oil companies want more tax concessions and higher prices. The Government has been had, and the consumer has to pay for it.

* * *

MULTICULTURALISM

PREJUDICE AND RACISM CONDEMNED

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, last week one of the most successful federal and provincial conferences ever was held in Winnipeg. I refer to the federal-provincial conference on multiculturalism. It was the first time such a conference was ever held in Canada. Because of the positive progress made in Winnipeg, more such conferences are slated for the future.

The Minister of State for Multiculturalism, the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta), by his sincere dedication and hard work at the conference has greatly strengthened and furthered the cause of multiculturalism in Canada, and by his leadership and emphasis has shown that multiculturalism is indeed for all Canadians, regardless of their country of origin, regardless of their colour, their language, and their religion.

There is no question that we have some distance to go in Canada in combating and trying to overcome those basic problems that are anathema to most Canadians but which some Canadians, unfortunately, vehemently pursue and promote, which are the practice of wholesale discrimination, prejudice, and racism, often to further their questionable and obscure reasons for undertaking unwarranted and vicious attacks on fellow Canadians and others.

Through the co-operation of the provinces, the federal Government, the Department of Multiculturalism, and, equally important, Mr. Speaker, by the changes in attitudes in people, treating every citizen in a way they would like to be treated themselves, I believe if we do this we will become an even greater country, a greater, compassionate country, with citizens who are equally compassionate and understanding of their fellow man.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREEN PAPER—TIMING OF COMMITTEE REPORTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. I hope that perhaps he can clarify some confusion, apparent or otherwise, on foreign policy issues arising from his Green Paper.

The Minister knows, I think, after some of the bargaining that went on on the floor of the House, that the Opposition will take part in the parliamentary committee to review that Green Paper and the foreign policy issues deriving from it if the issues of free trade and the Strategic Defence Initiative are considered and reported on by the parliamentary committee before the Government takes a decision on either of those issues.

Would the Minister not agree that a House committee could be set up, that its terms of reference could be drafted in such a way to include a date for a report by the committee on the Strategic Defence Initiative and bilateral trade with the United States? At the same time, could we have an undertaking by the Government that no decision on either of these issues will be taken before the committee reports on these two issues?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to see that the Official Opposition is now back in a position of supporting the idea of letting the public of Canada and the Parliament of Canada discuss foreign policy matters. I am a little surprised that a parliamentarian of the experience of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition would want to negotiate these matters on the floor of the House, particularly when he knows there has been a House Leaders' meeting called for immediately after this Question Period to discuss precisely that question. We intend to continue to be reasonable—

Mr. Broadbent: Continue? That is a new approach.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —but we intend to safeguard the right of the people of Canada to take part in debate of Canadian international policy, and not to have that right stopped by the stubbornness of opposition Parties in the House of Commons.

Mr. Deans: That is not a good negotiating position.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, that is not entirely the climate or tone the Minister would want to set if he wants terms of reference that are acceptable to this side of the House. He knows that if the Government insists it can set up this committee with its own terms of reference and take its Conservative members across the country. No one is trying to block any discussion. We are trying to insist on meaningful discussion.

[Translation]

TRADE

TRADE WITH NICARAGUA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my second question is as follows. The Secretary of State for External Affairs is no doubt aware that, in his answer to questions in the House on May 6, 7 and 8, concerning the U.S. embargo on trade with Nicaragua, he gave the impression that Canadian companies, including Canadian branches of American firms, could continue to trade unencumbered with Nicaragua. Why then did the Minister give the opposite impression in Washington in his discussions with U.S. Secretary of State, George Schultz, on the subject of Nicaragua's new trade office in Toronto? Can Canadian branches of U.S. firms continue to trade, thus filling the void left by the American embargo, and sell medical products, farm machinery and similar goods?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, first of all, if I understand correctly the position taken by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, the Liberal Party is now prepared to give its agreement, without expensive debate, to referral of the Green Paper to a joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate, even if only part of the document will be discussed. That is not the procedure we prefer. We prefer to have an all party debate in the House, and we continue to hope this will be possible.

Regarding the situation on relations between Canada and Nicaragua, the situation is today what it was before and as I described it here in the House. Canadian companies are not affected by the U.S. action. That has not changed. It will not be changed by the Canadian Government's attitude with regard to the office to bet set up by the Government of Nicaragua in Toronto.

• (1420)

[English]

CANADIAN POSITION AT INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON HUMAN RIGHTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman should read the "blues" and he will learn that what I set forth might be acceptable terms of reference.

Many Canadians are concerned that the Minister's Green Paper on foreign policy contains only 17 lines on human rights. At the international human rights conference being held currently in Ottawa, apparently the Canadian delegation is refusing to raise formally cases of specific individuals who have been abused in various countries for expressing their political opinions. I know the Minister has a very strong personal commitment to human rights, so why is the Government soft-pedalling on individual cases? Wouldn't a strong public stance be in order here, particularly when other countries are taking that type of stance?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, a question was asked by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal some time ago in the House, to which I responded by indicating that the Government of Canada would act vigorously at the human rights conference despite the constraints of being host, and that because of the rules governing the CSCE process, which are well known to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, sometimes those representations would have to be made in the corridors, but that they would be made nonetheless effectively. They have that commitment.

The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition made reference to the position which I have already taken publicly and privately in defence of human rights. I think that is a position which is shared by all Members of the House. I think I might be forgiven for saying that it would be very much in the interests of the country if the whole Parliament and the whole country were given the opportunity to discuss human rights and other questions freely, in a debate on Canada's international relations which is now being stopped by the attitude of the two opposition Parties.

* * *

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

IMPORTATION OF JAPANESE MANUFACTURED VEHICLES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. This weekend in Calgary the Prime Minister, in his typical forthright, candid style of speaking, addressed the Canadian Japanese business Association, and failed to mention the most important issue affecting that group, namely, the question of quotas on Japanese cars. At the same time we have had reports that the Japanese now refuse to deal in any way with the issue of voluntary restraints, and there have been no negotiations whatsoever since the first week of May.

Could the Minister confirm that the Japanese Government has not agreed to any acceptance of voluntary restraints on Japanese exports? Could the Minister tell us when new negotiations are scheduled, and whether the Government still affirms its position that there will be quotas unless the Japanese Government agrees to firm commitments on investment and sourcing in Canada?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to tell the House that I agree with the Hon. Member, for perhaps the first time, when he says that our Prime Minister is candid and forthright.

In answer to his question about the auto import situation with respect to Japanese cars, the Hon. Member will be interested to know that a senior associate Deputy Minister from my Department is now in Japan talking with the Japanese about the ongoing relationship between Canada and Japan in connection with the auto industry. In short, discussions continue, contrary to his statement, and I am very hopeful that a suitable arrangement will be worked out that will ensure that there will be proper sourcing and investment by Japanese concerns in the Canadian auto industry.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in case the Hon. Minister did not quite understand the nuance of the question, the Prime Minister was not being forthright and candid, because he refused to deal with the most important issue. In case he does not comprehend the subtlety of such things, I will try to remind him.

In that same speech the Prime Minister said another curious thing. He said that in his own personal opinion, not the opinion of the Government, the whole question of Japanese investment was purely up to private business arrangements, and that the Government would take no stand. When will the Government take an official stand? Will it do the same kind of thing its good friends President Reagan and the Americans did? They made actual direct representations to Japanese leaders which resulted in some $4 billion worth of investment? When can we expect the Government once again to say clearly that any question dealing with automobile quotas is tied specifically to commitments on sourcing—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is very long for a supplementary question.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member will read in Hansard tomorrow the answer to his first question, he will see that I did exactly that. I said that we were urging the Japanese to invest and source in Canada. As has been stated by myself and others earlier, in the meantime, until a suitable arrangement is worked out, we have asked them to stay within the 18 per cent penetration level they enjoyed last year as far as the Canadian market is concerned.

* * *

INCOME TAX

DEINDEXATION INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs in his capacity as Acting Prime Minister. On the weekend the Prime Minister said that when it comes to the Budget which will be presented later this week, the Government intends to be "tough but fair". Also on the weekend we learned that the substantial majority of Canadians believe the Government's efforts on unemployment are totally inadequate.

Considering that while in opposition the Conservative Party said that deindexation of our income tax system would cost us at least 30,000 jobs in the economy, which most Canadians would regard as being unfair right now, does the Acting Prime Minister agree that such deindexation at this time would in fact be quite unfair?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member knows that we are looking at a number of measures for the Budget, and that it will be fair and it will be tough, as we have outlined before.

STATEMENT MADE IN 1980

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I did not ask what was in the Budget. It was very thoughtful of the Minister; she has returned from the weekend to say a few words to the House. I will return to the Acting Prime Minister and get him to answer a question.

In 1980 the Acting Prime Minister, who was then Leader of the Opposition, said that deindexation of the Government's income tax program—of course the Liberals were then in Government—would result in profiteering on inflation at the expense of "the lives and hopes of Canadians". Now that the Acting Prime Minister is a part of the Government once again, does he hold the same views in government as he held in opposition about how pernicious such a policy would be?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat. I have answered the Hon. Member's question. The Hon. Member started off with a quote about being tough and being fair. That is what we have been repeating and repeating. We will be tough, but we will be fair.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question.

Mr. Broadbent: That would be nice, and it would also be nice if he would answer the questions.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I know the Acting Prime Minister sometimes gets in trouble for what he says in the House, but I give him this last occasion. He himself in opposition was responsible as Leader of the Conservative Party for the Conservatives spending $30,000 on an ad campaign denouncing deindexation. Does he hold the same views today as he held back in 1980 when he was Leader of the Conservative Party and presumably authorized that campaign?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the New Democratic Party has been in the House of Commons long enough to know that he will not get the Budget revealed in bits and pieces, or comment on the Budget, before it comes down.

I was interested that when he referred to the Minister of State for Finance he spoke about her activities over the weekend, and that when he referred to me he spoke about an advertising campaign. I happen to know what he was doing over the weekend as part of an advertising campaign which ran in the Toronto Globe and Mail.

• (1430)

Mr. Broadbent: A good ad.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The Leader of the New Democratic Party says it is a good ad. It was signed by the Leader of the New Democratic Party, by the Karl Marx Club of the Communist Party of Canada—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Let us not do this.

An Hon. Member: That's the Government.

Mr. Speaker: The pot calling the kettle black. The Hon. Member for York South-Weston.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

MYSTL MANAGEMENT INCORPORATED—CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister and concerns the four senior civil servants who are partners in the recently incorporated company known as Mystl Management Incorporated. The company offers, for a fee, insider information to businessmen on how to do business with the Government. In its brochure, Mystl promises to give "information the bureaucrats won't give". These civil servants are in clear breach of the Treasury Board conflict of interest guidelines. There is also a probable breach of Section 110 of the Criminal Code of Canada.

Does the Acting Prime Minister agree that the seriousness of this matter requires the immediate dismissal of these individuals? Second, will the Acting Prime Minister request that the RCMP conduct an immediate investigation to determine if criminal charges should be laid in this matter?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could respond to the Hon. Member's question in my capacity as Acting President of the Treasury Board. I can indicate to the Hon. Member that at least three if the members of this corporation have resigned from the organization. The seminar which had been planned by the company for the weekend has been cancelled. At the present time the Treasury Board is undertaking an investigation.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Mystl affair is an example of how the Government has lost control of the civil service.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: It clearly illustrates that the conflict of interest guidelines are meaningless and useless. Did the Minister of Transport, the President of the Treasury Board, or the Minister of National Revenue know about this matter? If not, why not? If so, why did they not do anything about it? Will the Government conduct an immediate investigation to determine how widespread is this activity?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated, we are in the midst of conducting an investigation right now. I guess what this indicates is the difference between the Hon. Member and us. The Hon. Member is in favour of a fair trial, but only if we have the hanging first. We would like to ensure that there is a fair and proper investigation of all of the circumstances underlying this matter, and we will take the appropriate action when the time comes.

* * *

INCOME TAX

MINIMUM TAX PROPOSAL

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister who is well aware that in the last few years thousands of Canadian upper-income earners paid no income tax as a result of the many loopholes available, and is also well aware that a bank president who is earning in the range of $500,000 per year, if his financial affairs were to be arranged appropriately, would pay no tax either. If a tax of, say, 1 per cent were to be levied on the income of that bank president who is earning $500,000 per year, would the Acting Prime Minister consider this to be a fair minimum tax?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Hon. Member had a distinguished career in the classrooms of the country before he came here. That is where that question belongs.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

APPLICATION TO BANK PRESIDENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is again directed to the Acting Prime Minister. I suppose this time I will get my name put on the long list of people who oppose the star wars research program, along with the United Church, many other distinguished parliamentarians, and many other leaders of the country.

During the Leaders' debate the Prime Minister stated that if the Progressive Conservative Party was to form the Government of Canada, one of the first things it would do would be to introduce a minimum tax so that upper-income earners who pay no income tax at all as a result of loopholes would pay a fair minimum tax. Does the Acting Prime Minister believe that if a bank president earning $500,000 per year were to have a 1 per cent tax levied on his income, it would be acceptable as a fair minimum tax?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am afraid that is simply the same question repeated. As well, it is hypothetical.

Mr. Riis: He did not answer the first one.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister may choose to answer, but it is the same question.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

MYSTL MANAGEMENT INCORPORATED—CASE OF TEMPORARY CIVIL SERVANT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port-au Port St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Acting President of the Treasury Board has just indicated that the Department is investigating the four principals of Mystl Management for apparent conflict of interest. I commend him for taking swift action.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Tobin: However, I fail to understand the logic of taking swift action today when only a few weeks ago, in the case of Mr. Doug Robson, who also had access to insider knowledge and who may have profited from that insider knowledge, the Government argued that there was no conflict of interest. In light of today's action by the Government with respect to career civil servants, is the Minister prepared to reconsider the Government's inaction with respect to a temporary, "political friend" civil servant, to ensure that justice is applied equally with an even hand and a blind eye? Is he prepared to reopen the investigation into the Doug Robson affair?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that the two questions are absolutely unrelated. It stretches the boundaries of the responsibilities of this House for him to attempt to relate them.

DEPARTMENTAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it stretches the comprehension of anyone who is listening anytime that Minister speaks. My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Will the Minister tell the House if he or any of his colleagues in Cabinet responsible for the activities of the four principals of Mystl had any knowledge of the operation of Mystl prior to the story being broken this morning by The Toronto Star? Further, was he or any of his Cabinet colleagues asked for a ruling by senior public servants after each of the principals had allegedly notified their superiors of their apparent potential conflict of interest? The Minister knows that his own employee is responsible for a quarter of a billion dollars worth of government purchasing and is president of Mystl Corporation.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can only speak on behalf of myself. I was first apprised of this by the Deputy Minister of Transport. Since that time I have ordered a full internal investigation into the matter. As has already been indicated, Mr. Spinks has resigned as director and officer of the corporation in question. As well, both Mr. Spinks and Mr. Cottingham, as of this morning, asked for and were granted leaves of absence pending the outcome of the investigation so that the investigation can be conducted in the most unfettered way possible.

* * *

ENERGY

CANADIAN OWNERSHIP CHARGE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Does the Minister believe it would be fair if an attempt were made to recover the lost revenue—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Order, Mr. Speaker. Order.

Mr. Deans: Order? You got a problem?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): "Believe it would be fair"?

Mr. Deans: Having a tough day?

Does the Minister believe that it would be appropriate to replace the nearly $900 million lost to the Government of Canada as a result of the elimination of the Canadian Ownership Charge, with a tax on consumers?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is well aware that the kind of question he has asked is, by its very nature, a budgetary question. I urge him to wait until Thursday to see if his very hypothetical question is answered.

• (1440)

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister now saying that she has changed her mind from the position which she took on March 29, 1985, when she said that it was entirely possible that the revenue, which would be lost as a result of the dropping of the Canadian Ownership Special Charge, would be passed on to the consumer?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, it must be a very dull day for the Hon. Member. I know he is not a dull Member. But, my previous answer stands. That is a matter to be adjusted in Thursday's Budget. He should know better. He should not be taking up the time of the House with that kind of question.

TRANSPORT

SALE OF NORTHERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Given that the decision to sell the Northern Transportation Company to the IDC Trimac group is viewed with alarm in southern Mackenzie, could the Minister explain why he selected that purchaser when, according to his press release, there were no differences in the various bids? Will he ensure that the people and town of Hay River will not suffer as a result of the sale?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that the proposed sale to the group in question was heralded with a great amount of accolades and acclaim. I am rather surprised to hear the Hon. Member make that comment.

Of course the service will be provided adequately, and all the communities which are presently affected by NTCL will continue to have the same level of service. That is one of the commitments which has been undertaken by the principals who are involved in the purchase of the company.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—NOTIFICATION OF ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting President of the Treasury Board. The Minister will know that Section 5.2 of the Conflict of Interest Guidelines for the Public Service instructs public servants with respect to the disclosure of potential conflicts of interest. Is the Minister satisfied that the Assistant Deputy Minister of the Treasury Board and others were properly notified? If he is satisfied that they were properly notified, what action does he intend to take, due to the fact that those people have failed to inform the three or four public servants in question about that conflict of interest?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, as I previously mentioned to the Hon. Member's colleague, the Treasury Board at the present time is conducting an investigation. We want to get all of the facts. As soon as we have the facts, we will be glad to give the results to the Hon. Member.

MYSTL MANAGEMENT INCORPORATED

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, the people doing the investigation are part of the process. I would like to ask the Minister of National Revenue, who told my colleague, the Hon. Member for York South-Weston, not to prejudge the case, if he would agree with me that if there is nothing wrong in the whole issue, why did at least three of the four officials resign from the board of Mytl Management Incorporated. Also, why were the seminars cancelled if nothing was wrong?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, my knowledge of English may be faulty, but I do not know what the Hon. Member meant when he asked would I agree with him why would they have resigned if there was nothing wrong. I do not understand what he means. If the question is are we determined to look into this to ensure that high standards of propriety are being following by the public servants, the answer is yes.

* * *

[Translation]

SMALL BUSINESS

NATIVE PEOPLE'S ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Small Businesses).

Is the Minister prepared to confirm that several applications for financing submitted for the Native People's Economic Development Program have been affected by delays of six months or more between the steering committee's recommendation and departmental approval, and that 25 per cent of fund directors positions have been vacant for several months?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I can inform the Hon. Member that applications under the Native People's Economic Development Program are submitted to a committee for consideration. They are then routed to my office, where they are processed in the usual way and as efficiently as they have been in the past.

INQUIRY WHY NATIVE PEOPLE MUST TOLERATE DELAYS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. As president of a successful small business, would the Minister have tolerated such delays at his bank? If the answer is no, why does he think native entrepreneurs must put up with this kind of delay?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I do not see the connection. I am taking very good care of this particular program. I even went to meet with native communities about a month ago and I got the impression that people were satisfied with the service they were getting. If there are any complaints, I would be happy to hear them directly, or at least with names or something like that. Furthermore, the Hon. Member is always welcome to see me at my office.

IMMIGRATION

CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE ON STATUS OF REFUGEES

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

The refugee status determination process is to be reviewed shortly. Both because of the Supreme Court decision in the Singh case and the great many pending applications, could the Minister advise us whether it is true that the Refugee Status Advisory Committee will be abolished or shelved without any consultion of the groups working with refugees?

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): No, Mr. Speaker, that allegation is not true.

[Translation]

RECOGNITION OF REFUGEE STATUS

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, could the Minister of Employment and Immigration indicate to the House when she will announce the necessary review to the refugee status determination process. Moreover, I should like the Minister to confirm the vital importance of the Refugee Status Advisory Committee and to promise not to abolish it.

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is confusing the decision which was announced by the Supreme Court: it refers to the Immigration Appeal Board, not to the Refugee Advisory Committee. The Government and I will be proposing steps to the House to improve the workings of the Immigration Appeal Board in order to respond to the Supreme Court decision in the Singh case. I will be making those proposals before the House rises at the end of June. I trust that we will have the co-operation of the opposition Parties in order to have those proposals carried out.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

NIAGARA RIVER POLLUTION—CONTROL OF CANADIAN SOURCES

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment who will know that recent tests show that the total pollution which is entering the Niagara River has increased substantially. Since the Niagara River Toxics Committee calculated that 11 per cent of pollution sources are here in Canada, can any part of the increase be attributed to Canadian sources? If so, what will she do to control it?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): I thank my hon. colleague for his question, Mr. Speaker, and I want to emphasize once again that our preliminary studies were focussed on only two types of pollution, namely industrial and municipal wastes. Obviously, there are other sources of pollution, and we are currently looking into them, including those originating in Canada.

* * *

[English]

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION

FORT FRANCES, ONT. PROJECT

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Labour, who is responsible for housing, I would like to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. My question concerns a housing project in Fort Frances, Ontario, which is known as Flinders Park. That project was badly mismanaged and ran hundreds of thousands of dollars over budget. It finally went into receivership last August. CMHC has dealt very harshly with the secured creditors, ultimately promising them only 50 cents on the dollar. Will the Government intervene to ensure that the good work which was done on this project will receive full compensation?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Labour I will take the Hon. Member's question as notice and have the relevant information given to him.

UNSECURED CREDITORS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, only to underscore the point, when she speaks to the Minister will she ensure that the unsecured creditors, who trusted CMHC, and who did not file liens, will be taken into consideration as well?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I will ensure that the Hon. Member's representations are properly communicated.

* * *

• (1450)

[Translation]

LABOUR

QUEBEC STEEL INDUSTRY—PRERETIREMENT—LAID OFF WORKERS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, last week, I had questions addressed to the Government, asking them to help the Quebec steel industry now in difficulty. I specifically asked the Minister of Labour whether the people who were laid off or might be permanently laid off could use the pre-retirement provisions of the Labour Adjustment Benefits Act. The Minister pompously replied that she was not answering hypothetical questions.

Since more than 400 families have been affected, people have been laid off, would the Government have the kindness to consider the suggestion I put forward last week?

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Hon. Member, with regard to the Labour Adjustment Benefits Act to which he referred, and under which older workers would be covered, when the closure of these three plants is complete that situation will be monitored to see if they meet the criteria of that Act. If so, then that decision will be taken.

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

It is about time the Government should start looking at the issue. When they do consider the matter . . . I must remind the Hon. Minister that Stelco has made large investments in Ontario and intends to make its Hilton site, and I quote:

—a world class steel complex.

This implies that Quebec will be set aside, no more, no less, and its operation also will finally be downgraded.

I would ask the Hon. Minister whether those facts will be taken into account when a decision is finally made, whether the employees may use the pre-retirement benefits under the Act I mentioned earlier?

[English]

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that all relevant data will be taken into consideration to see if the criteria are properly met.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL AMERICA—MINISTER'S FORTHCOMING VISIT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for External Relations. In less than two weeks the Minister will be leaving for Central America and I want to know if she has received representations from a number of non-governmental organizations experts in the field of Central American affairs, requesting to meet with her prior to her leaving. Has she agreed to meet with representatives of such organizations, the Inter-Church Committee for example, and, if not, will she agree to meet with them before going to Central America?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to answer my hon. colleague. Two political assistants are already in Central America to arrange preliminary meetings. I have planned some meetings with political authorities, non-governmental organizations and voluntary groups working on our behalf in the international development area.

[English]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER VISIT CONTADORA PARTICIPATING COUNTRIES

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I know the Minister is planning to meet with these groups when she is in Central America. However, I have asked her whether she is meeting with those who have recently returned from Central America to Canada and who have asked to meet with her.

While she is answering that, would she also inform the House whether she is going to take the opportunity of this visit to Central America to visit some of the nations, at least two or three, involved in the Contadora process?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, we know quite well that a trip as important as the one I will be undertaking in two weeks should be thoroughly planned. Therefore, during the past two weeks, I have met with various groups to become better acquainted with the needs and experience of those people and I will try, as a representative of the government, to learn what goes on there and to report on my return.

* * *

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

SYDNEY, N.S.—EXPOSURE TO COKE OVEN EMISSIONS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Last January the federal Environmental Protection Service released a study on the very dangerous polynuclear aromatic hydrocarbons, or PAHs, in the city of Sydney, Nova Scotia. The study strongly suggests that one could be exposed to a high level of PAHs at certain sites in the city. It also suggests that 15 to 20 years of exposure to coke oven emissions containing PAHs might lead to a high rate of cancer. What steps are being taken to remove this very serious health hazard?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I am considering the results of that study and I will be in a position to answer my hon. colleague in a few days.

[English]

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, when this matter was raised in the Nova Scotia Legislature the Government undertook to do another study. However, studies have been done, and what is needed is some department, federal or provincial, to take the lead in dealing with this very serious problem. Will the Minister give her undertaking today to have her Department take the lead in correcting this problem?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious question to which I give all due consideration. I can only repeat that I will be in a position to better inform my hon. colleague in the next few days.

* * *

[English]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

PROVISION OF SERVICE TO NEW RESIDENTIAL SUBDIVISIONS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for Canada Post Corporation. On April 2, 1985, an agreement was signed between Canada Post Corporation and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers which stipulated a reduction of 53 sub-post offices. Within the past three weeks I presented to this House two separate petitions, containing over 1,000 names of citizens of Saskatoon East who are concerned about postal facilities in a new subdivision.

Could the Minister explain how Canada Post Corporation will fulfil its responsibility to ensure adequate postal facilities for residents of new subdivisions, particularly in cities like Saskatoon which are growing at an above average rate?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, first I want to thank the Hon. Member for his question, and also for diligently presenting petitions as he did last week.

As part of the agreement with CUPW, the Post Office agreed to open up new post offices run by postal employees and reduce the number of sub-post offices, a number of which close their doors every year. One of the things which the corporation will be doing, obviously, as the opportunity arises, is looking around to see in which communities new facilities are necessary. I think, because of the Hon. Member's diligence, it will be very much aware of the need for facilities in Saskatoon.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Earlier this afternoon the Acting President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Transport attempted to give the impression in the House that there had been speedy action on this question, despite the fact that Assistant Deputy Ministers in both their Departments have known about this but not acted for some time. Ministers are responsible for the actions of their officials. We have had an impression of fast action involving public servants, but my question is, given that the Prime Minister promised me on April 24 that he would table conflict of interest guidelines related to Ministers, are we going to have speedy action affecting Ministers?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker, we will. I have not inquired into the exact schedule planned for tabling that information, but I give the Right Hon. Member my undertaking that we will have that information acted on, and tabled, and made available just as quickly as possible.

* * *

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

LEVEL OF JAPANESE MANUFACTURED VEHICLE IMPORTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of International Trade. The Canadian Government has indicated that it wants to limit Japanese auto imports to 18 per cent of the Canadian market, but the Minister must be aware that the Japanese have rejected such a level. Will the Government move urgently to impose, through legislation, a level of that kind to protect workers and the Canadian car industry until such time as an agreement is established with the Japanese?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think if the Hon. Member checks my answer to the question put to us by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, he will see that question has already been put in the House.

Mr. Broadbent: No. Listen to him.

CONDUCT OF NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, why has it taken the Minister such an inordinate length of time to carry this agreement through with the Japanese and report back to the House, as he promised to do three weeks ago with respect to this negotiation process?

● (1500)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned in the House before, the previous Government took until June 12 to get a satisfactory agreement with the Japanese last year. We are getting close, but as I indicated before, negotiations continue. In fact the Japanese car dealers were in to see me on Friday afternoon. They are complaining that the Japanese manufacturers have indeed been holding up deliveries of cars. Perhaps our request for Japan not to exceed the 18 per cent level is being complied with.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Mount Royal may ask one short question.

* * *

CHALLENGE '85

STUDENT ENTREPRENEUR PROGRAM

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. On May 10 I asked her to explain to our youth why the $30 million Student Entrepreneur Program was not off the ground. In response we were treated to a totally irrelevant answer. Our office in Quebec was advised on Friday that students' requests were to be in by July. If the students are only going to be accepted in July, and they must pay back in October, when are the students supposed to earn money?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Challenge '85 Program, which has been very successful, has a number of—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: Members in the Liberal Party may not think it is successful, but some 60,000 students already have jobs under that program.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, the entrepreneurship program is part of the over-all Challenge '85 Program and it works differently in different povinces due to the arrangements which have been entered into with the provincial Governments. It started in some provinces before others. However, it is now under way in all provinces.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of one, presented by Hon. Members on Friday, May 17, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petition presented by the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) does not meet the requirements as to form.

Petitions

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

PRESENTATION OF FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the fifth report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs on Bill C-39, without amendment, in both official languages.

* * *

PETITIONS

EXIT VISA FOR SOVIET CITIZEN IDA NUDEL

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table a number of petitions signed by many Canadians exercising their rights as Canadian citizens. The petitions relate to the situation of Ida Nudel, a Soviet Jewish woman who has been waiting for an exit visa for 12 years. She has now been diagnosed to be suffering from pancreatic cancer for which she requires immediate medical treatment. I humbly request and call upon the House of Commons to direct the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) immediately to call upon the Ambassador of the Soviet Union to demand that Ida Nudel be given an exit visa to join her sister in order to receive adequate medical attention. This woman is in her late sixties.

Mr. Speaker, in the interest of Ida Nudel I have another petition asking that she be allowed to join and be reunited with her only living relative, her sister in Israel. She has served three years in internal exile and Ida Nudel has been living under the most horrendous conditions in Soviet Siberia. I plead with the Minister of External Affairs—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Member should be reading a summary of the petition. In fact, it sounds to me as if she were making a case directly to the Minister herself. I take it she now has another petition to summarize.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I have a third petition which is in the same instance and about the same issue. It is again a plea to—I am reading what is on the petition, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Member should know that that is precisely what is not allowed, to read what is on the petition. Members are allowed to make a summary for the House. Please go ahead.

Mrs. Finestone: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The summary of the petition is that Ida Nudel, a woman in her late sixties, is ill, needs treatment, cannot receive it in the Soviet Union, and should be allowed, for compassionate reasons, to leave that country. If the Helsinki Accord were agreed to, she would be allowed to leave.

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a number of residents of Canada who also petition the House on behalf of Ida Nudel who is awaiting the opportunity to be reunited with her only living relative, her sister in Israel. In this petition the petitioners call upon the House of Commons to direct the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to call upon the Soviet Ambassador to demand that she be given an exit visa to join her sister in Israel immediately.

[Translation]

NUCLEAR WEAPONS FREE ZONE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table a very long petition signed by 785 students from the CEGEP and universities in the Montreal area who are asking the Parliament of Canada to take a stand against the Cruise missile tests in Canada and that Canada be declared a nuclear weapons free zone.

Mr. Speaker, that very important petition has been brought from Montreal to Ottawa by 8 students who travelled by bicycle to present it on behalf of the Canadian people.

* * *

[English]

EXCISE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-239, an Act to amend the Excise Act (exemption on home-brewed beer).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member is familiar with the rules about displays in the House of Commons. Before he introduces his Bill I might ask him to come to order, however he chooses to do that.

Mr. Cassidy: I will retire my display, Mr. Speaker. That was a bottle of Wilson's Wallop which would be available to you, and which I could extend to you, Mr. Speaker, were this Private Member's Bill to be adopted by the House of Commons. This Bill will amend the Excise Act which presently requires written consent from Revenue Canada before any Canadian can legally brew beer at home for his own use. At present, if a person brews beer at home and offers it to a guest or someone outside of his home, he can be liable to a fine of $250 or to hard labour. The purpose of this Bill is to change that and to put home-brewed beer on the same basis as home made wine.

I have had the support of the Campaign for Real Ale Canada—

Mr. Speaker: Order. As the Hon. Member knows, as with petitions, the summary should be short.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 200 and 336.

[Text]

PEACEKEEPING FORCES

Question No. 200—Mr. Stackhouse:

1. How many Canadians are now serving under the United Nations (a) Truce Supervision Organization (b) Disengagement Observer Force and, in each case, what is the cost?

2. How many Canadians are now serving under the United Nations Force in Cyprus?

3. In 1983, what was the cost to Canada for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and what was the cost to Canada since its inception?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. (a) Twenty Canadian officers normally serve with the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), but this year, at the request of the United Nations, Canada has provided one additional officer. The estimated cost to Canada in FY 84/85 dollars is $1,436,390.

(b) Serving with the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) are 223 all ranks. The estimated cost to Canada in FY 84/85 dollars is $8,538,883.

2. There are 515 all ranks currently serving with the United Nations Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP).

3. The cost to Canada in 1983 in FY 83/84 dollars is estimated at $25,126,046. The cost to Canada since inception of UNFICYP in 1964 to the end of FY 83/84 is estimated at $228,346,000.

CN TASK FORCE

Question No. 336—Mr. Ouellet:

Has a one man task force on the activities of Canadian National in Pictou County, Nova Scotia been struck and was Mr. Joe Stewart appointed as the person and, if so (a) what qualifications and experience does he possess which makes him suitable for the position (b) what are the terms of reference of his commission (c) what is his rate of remuneration (d) on whose recommendation was his appointment made?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): (a), (b) and (d) Yes. An internal management decision was taken by CN to engage Mr. Joe Stewart as a consultant to determine means of improving the community perception of Canadian National Railways. Similar studies by consultants are undertaken throughout Canada when deemed necessary by senior CN management.

(c) Remuneration is regarded as proprietary information to Canadian National.

[English]

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Friday, May 17, 1985 consideration of the motion of Mr. Mazankowski (for the Minister of Agriculture) that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have the opportunity this afternoon to speak on Bill C-25 and to comment on the remarks made by the distinguished Parliamentary Secretary last Friday when he introduced the Bill in the House.

Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, is clearly a very important piece of legislation. It was first introduced about one year ago as Bill C-50. I am not sure why the Government has taken so long to introduce it in the House. There is a great deal of concern in the red meat industry about the current difficulties and problems faced by that industry.

● (1510)

We are pleased that the Bill is now before the House. The purpose of the Bill is to provide a stabilization program for red meat under the Agricultural Stabilization Act. It is a tripartite red meat stabilization program in which the provinces, the producers and the federal Government jointly and equally participate in the establishment of a uniform stabilization program. This would prevent top loading by some provinces because many provinces already have their own stabilization program.

The provincial stabilization programs have caused some concern in the country because the United States has imposed a countervail on pork and hogs going into the United States.

Therefore, one of the objectives of this program should be to establish and provide funds for a uniform tripartite red meat stabilization program. In fact, five funds will be established in this regard, one for cow-calf operators, one for backgrounder cattle; one for slaughtering cattle, one for hogs, and one for sheep operations.

The Bill provides that the three participants would share equally in the funding of the program and the Government's contribution would not exceed 6 per cent of the gross receipts of the participating producers.

A number of changes were made to the Bill that was originally introduced in the House in January. These changes, which would be retroactive to January 1, provide that stabilization could take place for less than a one-year period as provided in the former legislation. The price support formula for stabilization programs would be different from the one in the existing legislation. It provides for the establishment of a fund within the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the federal Government.

The greatest difficulty facing the Government with respect to this legislation is the problem of whether it will get full participation from the red meat sector. Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario have indicated their willingness to participate, and this represents a very significant proportion in terms of the total share of the production of red meat. With respect to slaughtered cattle, it represents approximately 94 per cent; approximately 88 per cent with respect to cow-calf production; 94 per cent for backgrounders; 79 per cent for lambs; and 57 per cent for hogs.

The question remains whether British Columbia, Quebec and the three Maritime Provinces will participate. Unless they support this legislation it is questionable if it will meet the objectives of preventing the balkanization of the Canadian production and market-place for red meat which seems to be taking place under current circumstances.

Last summer, the federal Government was very careful not to provide stabilization for the number of hogs that were sold into the Canadian market. Clearly, we do not want to contravene our GATT requirements in the American market-place because stabilization of production going into the international trade subjects us to countervails. That is the reason for a countervailing duty on pork production in Canada and the investigation which is taking place by the U.S. Department of Commerce.

This legislation will establish a national program which could take into account some of the production of red meat that goes into the United States and other markets in order to prevent the contravention of our GATT commitments.

Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary could indicate this afternoon how much progress has been made in getting the co-operation of the other provinces that have yet to join the program. Unless the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) is willing to work out the details necessary for negotiation with those other provinces, the program will not be as effective and desirable as we would like.

That uncertainty is apparent in a Canadian Press story dated May 8. The Minister of Agriculture from Alberta expressed his concern about the proposal and his wish that the proposal not be changed if his province is to participate. He also expressed concern that many beef producers in this country believe that the federal Government has sold them out by increasing the quotas to the European Economic Community countries. The House will recall that in September, quotas were set at some 5.9 million pounds for 1985. It certainly appears that the Government will increase that quota to over 20 million pounds. That will have a devastating impact on the industry. I am sure it prompted the Minister of Agriculture in Alberta, as reported in the Canadian Press story on May 8, to say:

> We keep getting traded off in agriculture all the time. We have import levels of meat coming into this country. We don't mind competing with them, as long as it's not subsidized.

I suggest that that underscores the concern in the industry as a result of those increases in beef quotas from the European Economic Community.

The purpose of this Bill is not to provide a continual production subsidy but, rather, to provide assistance when the price drops dramatically. The price of pork has dropped dramatically in the last few weeks as a result of the countervail imposed by the United States. That countervail will remain until late July, at which time we will know if it will be imposed for a full year.

This legislation will be very beneficial in eliminating the wide fluctuation in prices for red meat. It is clearly not a marketing tool in itself because it is not designed to provide a market for red meat commodities. It is designed to provide stabilization when there are dramatic drops in price. I think in that regard it will be interesting in the committee hearings to hear the details of how the legislation will work. The Committee on Agriculture must find out exactly which provinces are prepared to participate in the program, because otherwise we will end up with a very balkanized situation in the production of red meat, with Quebec having a massive program of stabilization payments, some of the Maritime provinces having a very rich program, whereas many of the other provinces, the ones that have indicated they want to participate, not having similar type legislation and assistance available.

● (1520)

Those are some of the concerns that I have with the legislation. I hope the Minister will be successful in getting all the provinces to participate. I hope that we will be able to get a clear indication of support and participation from those other provinces. Clearly, the red meat industry today is probably in one of the most desperate situations we have seen in many years, not only because of the continuing level of low commodity prices, but because of high interest rates and, as we have seen, the dramatic drop in the last couple of years in the value of land, which has wiped out the equity many young producers have in their farms. All of those things, combined with the continuing increase in input costs, plus the countervail that we have seen put on pork and hogs during the last couple of months, have had a devastating impact.

That is the reason for the dramatic report last fall of the Farm Credit Corporation which indicated that a large percentage, over 17 per cent, of our farm operators, especially the young ones, are facing serious financial difficulty. The situation has worsened since then with a drop in prices of pork and hogs by some $10 or $12 per animal. We have seen the increase in the European Economic Community quota which the industry has already recognized even though the Government has not made a formal announcement of that massive increase, but all in all it makes for a very difficult situation, one which requires government action.

I hope that besides working this legislation through the committee, improving it and making it functional, we will look at other ways to assist the red meat industry. I hope that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), on Thursday night when he stands in his place to deliver his Budget speech, will adopt at least some of the recommendations, hopefully all of the recommendations, of the Finance Committee which recommended, I believe, a $96 million agri-bond program, which is designed to assist some of the 39,000 young farmers who are facing very serious financial difficulties. Many of them will lose their farms this season.

Last week I was in Alberta. I was talking to one of the people responsible for the Alberta Agriculture Development Corporation. He indicated that many of the young farmers who have been in production for only a few years have a large capital debt, and with the reduction in the price of hogs brought about by the countervail they are facing a very short time period in which to recover their financial stability. In his opinion they will be facing the loss of their farms within a period of two or three months.

This legislation, within its limited scope, can be beneficial to the agricultural community. It is essentially the same Bill as the one introduced last June by Mr. Whelan when he was the Minister of Agriculture. I hope the Bill will move on to the standing committee where we can call witnesses with a view to making the Bill as functional and as beneficial as we can. Hopefully, the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to indicate to us this afternoon how much success there has been in getting the support and assistance of the other four or five provinces which have not until now indicated they would be willing to participate in this legislation.

I hope the Bill will go to committee in the next couple of days and that we will be able to go on with more detailed study at that time.

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, the beef producers in Canada are in serious trouble today as a result of the neglect of the previous Liberal Government over a period of six years. The present Government is now trying to correct the problem. It has cut the import of European subsidized beef by over 50 per cent this year. The job would have been much easier had the homework been done by the previous Liberal administration and, instead of 50 million pounds of beef coming in last year, had that amount been 10 million, 15 million, or 5 million. The job would have been much easier for us this year had that been done.

Was the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) aware that the present Government has cut that importation of subsidized beef from the EEC by over 50 per cent this year? Is the Member prepared as a member of the Opposition to contribute in the best way he can to solving his problem so that the red meat producers will be able to get out of the serious difficulties in which they now find themselves?

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I am aware that last September 4 representations were being made by the Canadian Cattlemen's Association to trigger the meat import law. It took the Government three months to trigger that meat import law. By that time we had actually gone beyond the allotted 145 million pounds. Had the law been triggered on or about October 1, we would not have gone beyond the 145 million pounds, which is the historical guaranteed minimum access level. Finally, belatedly, after three months in power the Government did trigger the meat import law. It restricted the United States to 21 million pounds. The Government restricted the EEC, especially Ireland and Denmark, to 5.9 million pounds and Nicaragua to 600,000 pounds of meat. Other countries, such as Australia and New Zealand, were restricted to more traditional amounts. It is with great chagrin and concern that a few weeks after the Government established the quotas for the 1985 period we learned what the Government had done. It had secretly negotiated with the United States to increase its quotas from 21 million pounds to what I understand will be 65 million pounds. Also we heard that negotiations were under way for Nicaragua to increase its quotas from some 600,000 pounds to close to nine million pounds, and it may even be higher. There is as well the question of the United States embargo which was imposed recently. With regard to the EEC, we do not know exactly what it will come down to, but we understand that it will be 23.5 million pounds.

● (1530)

I asked the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) why he and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), when they were in Europe a few weeks ago, did not take this matter up with the heads of Governments—with the Prime Minister of Great Britain, the Presidents of France and Italy, and the Chancellor of West Germany. If they were unable to raise it together, they could have done it on a bilateral basis as it was an important question. The Minister for International Trade indicated that there was not time or there was not concern on the part of the Government to maintain the quotas imposed under our meat import law.

I am aware of the import levels. I am aware that the Government triggered the meat import law on December 21 but did not have the intestinal fortitude to stand up to the EEC. As a result, we have not only an increase of some 17 million pounds of beef coming into the country, which works out to about 1,000 carcasses per week of additional meat coming to the market at a time when commodity prices are low, but we have also upset the Australians, our traditional trading partners. They are very concerned about an additional 1,000 carcasses a week coming to the Canadian market of subsidized beef at 48 cents per pound, subsidized by the Treasuries of European countries. Australian is very concerned because it has had an historical access of a very large amount of beef, lower quality cuts. This is very harmful to our agricultural community.

I hope the Hon. Member will be able to make strong representations in caucus to the Minister for International Trade and to the Minister of Agriculture as I have been making in the House since January when it became apparent that the Government was planning to cave in to the pressures and threats of the countervails which the EEC was putting on the Government.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member suggested, the basic Bill is very much like the one which was brought in by the Liberals last year. However, the situation with which farmers are faced is relative to income rather than to the price of commodities. Would the Hon. Member comment on a particular weakness in the Bill? They can stabilize the commodity price, but the farmer will still go bankrupt if he does not have a product to sell or if the five-year price is still lower than the cost of production.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, those are the kinds of questions which we will certainly want to delve into in committee. The Bill contains certain conditions about the amount of commitment that Governments can make. I think it is 6 per cent of the gross receipts for individual commodities. Also the fund must have fiscal integrity. In other words, it is not as if the Government would bail out the fund or producers would have to put more into it. We clearly have a serious problem in the red meat industry. We certainly want to save the industry. We want to see it continue to function. Certainly the formula will be one of the things we will want to examine in committee.

I know of the concern of the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) in this regard. I would like to look at those aspects of the Bill at committee stage. As I said earlier, I do not believe it is possible under this legislation to solve many of the farm debt problems. They will have to be dealt with in the Budget on Thursday night. I hope the Minister of Finance will do that.

My other concern at this stage is how we get hog and beef producers to pay their premium with the industry being in such a devastated position this year. That is another matter we will want to consider in committee. I have had hog producers telephoning me and saying that they hoped this legislation would be in position immediately. Certainly we want to expedite it, but I am not sure that it can be moved forward rapidly enough to have pay-outs or even that the formula would trigger pay-outs over a short period of time, given the depressed state of the industry right now.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few comments on Bill C-25. I represent a mixed community of urban and rural people. In fact, in the rural sector I represent a fair number of hog and beef producers. One does not have to represent rural areas to know that there is a severe crisis in agriculture today. Canadian farmers face a very uncertain future. If they look back over the last few years, they see that the prices for their commodities have either fallen or else have not kept up with the ever increasing cost of production. The squeeze in which they find themselves is forcing many people off the farms and is creating real stumbling blocks for young people to get into farming.

We have only to look at the statistics to know how serious the situation is. For example, in 1979 there were 125 farm bankruptcies in Canada. In 1980, there were 222; in 1981, there were 261; in 1982, there were 410; in 1983, there were 488; and in 1984, there were 551. Every year for the last number of years the number of farm bankruptcies has increased, and that is only the tip of the iceberg. In 1979, the estimated farm debt outstanding from all sources—that is, short, intermediate and long-term—was $14.6 billion, carrying an average interest rate of some 11.6 per cent. In 1981, the outstanding farm debt increased to $18.5 billion at an average interest rate of 15.46 per cent. In 1984, the Farm Credit Corporation reported in its survey that outstanding farm debts amounted to $20.7 billion, with an interest rate well in the two digit level.

• (1540)

We can look at some of the other problems. For example, in its 1984 farm survey report, the Farm Credit Corporation shows that one in five of a total of 37,000 Canadian farmers are in serious financial trouble with debt costs exceeding 40 per cent of income. There were 551 farmers who declared bankruptcy in 1984, a 20 per cent increase over 1983. The FCC estimates that another 1,700 farmers are on the brink of immediate insolvency.

We know that the situation is becoming much more difficult, particularly for the younger farmers. The younger section of the farm community has the weakest equity position and is most vulnerable to escalating interest costs and hence to foreclosure and liquidation. Unless decisive action is taken, Canada stands to lose a whole generation of its most efficient and productive farmers.

The FCC report went on to indicate that one-third of the farms carried about 80 per cent of the $20.7 million in outstanding farm debt and that about half the food produced annually in Canada came from these farms. In other words, of a total agricultural debt of some $20.7 billion, 80 per cent of it was carried by those farmers who produce about half of Canada's annual farm produce. Therefore, lack of productivity is not at issue, but income certainly is.

Let us take a look at income. Net farm income in 1984 is no higher in actual dollar terms than it was in 1974, and has fallen by a staggering 30 per cent in real terms over the past four years alone. We have a case of increasing costs and decreasing prices. It certainly does not require an economist or a farmer to realize that we cannot continue operating under these conditions for too long. As the figures demonstrate, more and more farmers are being squeezed off the land. They no longer find what their parents and very often their grandparents did to be a productive activity.

The crisis in agriculture is not merely an economic question. Surely it is also a social question. Can we as a country afford to lose our agricultural sector? Can we afford to see ever-increasing numbers of farmers go into bankruptcy? What are the social implications of this? Surely a reasonable minded person would find that this situation is unacceptable and that our agricultural community must be kept viable.

We have to maintain the part of this country that is inhabited by farmers. Statistics indicate that there are fewer and fewer family farms and that these family farms will be replaced more and more often by large corporate farms. That, I believe, we all find unacceptable, regardless of political Party. I think we are all committed to maintaining the family farm as a viable economic unit and we all recognize that it is in the best interests of this country to maintain a viable agricultural community. For agriculture to be taken over by large corporate agri-business is not socially desirable. In fact, it will essentially lead to a new type of feudalism. In feudal times, feudal lords owned and controlled large tracts of land and the people who worked the soil were in essence the peasants or salaried agricultural workers, not the people who owned the land.

We must all recognize the seriousness of the problem that faces this country. This problem is not one that is faced by farmers alone; it is a problem that must concern us all. If we do not have a viable, healthy agricultural sector, everyone in the country will suffer. When farmers in Saskatchewan do poorly, the people of my riding of Regina East do poorly. The small shopkeepers and manufacturing and service centres that service the agricultural community do poorly. That means that there are more layoffs and less economic activity in Regina. The entire city and the entire province suffer. The same is true for Ontario, Quebec and other industrial areas. If farmers do poorly, farm implement companies cannot sell their products and they in turn must lay off workers. Manufacturing, servicing, retailing and wholesaling interests in Ontario, Quebec and the larger industrial regions suffer. The wellbeing of our agricultural sector is important to all men and women across this country.

What we are facing today is not simply a farm crisis, but a national crisis. It is a national crisis that must be addressed. Unfortunately, there is very little in Bill C-25 to address the issue. The Conservative Government has done very little so far to indicate that it recognizes the seriousness of the problem and that is capable of doing something about it. Despite the promises that we heard made during the election campaign, we have not seen much action.

During the election campaign, we heard Conservative Members denounce years of Liberal inaction, and promises to safeguard the future of the independent family farm. More specifically, we were told that a Progressive Conservative Government would establish a farm finance review board to adjust farm debts. At that time, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) told the Empire Club and the Canadian Club that new expenditures of $100 million would be made available in 1985-86 for farm mortgage financing. We heard many good promises being made last summer. It is too had that we have not seen them put into action since the summer. It is too bad that we are not seeing legislative action being taken today on the promises made by the Conservative Party during the election campaign.

Government Members have certainly had plenty of time to bring forward measures that would help strengthen the farm economy. Instead, we have Bill C-25. As everyone admits, it is essentially the same as the Whelan Bill, Bill C-50, which was introduced almost a year ago. It does nothing to solve the basic problem facing agriculture. It provides for stabilization based on market returns, but that will be insensitive to future cost increases. It will do nothing to raise price and net farm incomes. It is lacking because it does not offer a stabilization program that actually meets or begins to meet the real costs that farmers must face in order to produce red meat products.

By averaging out market returns over time, the Bill does take a very small step forward. However, that step is inadequate when the market itself has failed to generate a return to the farmer which covers his or her costs of production and a reasonable return on capital and labour. It is a stabilization plan based on prices which have been in effect for the last number of years. Those prices are inadequate in meeting the real costs of production. What we have is stabilization based on unacceptable prices.

• (1550)

We have been urging the Government to recognize that there is a need for a cost-based insurance system or a stabilization program. It is that type of program which we wish the Government would introduce. We want a program which is based on the real cost of production one which will ensure our farmers a sensible rate of return on their capital and labour investments in order that Canadian farmers and producers can carry out their important functions with a sense that there is a Government and a nation which cares enough to ensure that they will get an adequate rate of return on what they produce.

It is not an outrageous proposal. Everyone recognizes that agriculture in Canada is the least subsidized when compared to any other part of the world. American agriculture is subsidized through a variety of programs. The European Economic Community subsidizes its farmers in all sorts of different ways. Canadian farmers are the most efficient in the world, but faced with subsidized foreign competition, our farmers do not stand a chance. They stand a chance if they compete on a one-to-one basis with a farmer or a cattle producer in Ireland, France, Germany, Iowa or any other part of the world, but they do not stand a chance if they are competing against a farmer whose Government is standing behind him. Is it not time for us to stop expecting Canadian farmers to stand naked and alone in the world when competing against farmers in other parts of the world who have their respective Governments standing behind them? Is it not time to begin to guarantee to farmers in Canada a fair rate of return on their activity? It is not that the farmers are asking much; they are only asking for a fair rate of return.

Farmers do not have the clout which other players in the economy have. If a manufacturer of goods and services discovers that his costs have increased, he is able to jack up the price and recover the increase in his costs. When banks have to pay more interest to attract savers, they charge higher interest rates to the borrowers. Many working people in the organized trade union movement are able to recover increases in their cost of living the next time they bargain and achieve a wage settlement. However, I must say that the trade unions have been losing their clout over the last number of years. In fact, actual wages have declined as a percentage of the increase in the cost of living. Working people are discovering a reduction in their standard of living something farmers have been experiencing for a number of years. Farmers cannot pass on their cost of production increases. Therefore, farmers depend upon a collective action, whether it be a marketing board or a collective action taken by the federal and provincial Governments. Otherwise, farmers do not stand a chance in Hades of surviving.

I am certain that the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), who has a number of cattlemen in his riding, understands that. Even though he is a free enterpriser, I am sure he will admit that as far as agricultural production in Canada is concerned, there are limits to the free market. Given what Governments are doing in other parts of the world, there is a need for some collective action.

We believe that Bill C-25 is inadequate. It does not deal with the basic problem which farmers face. Neither does it deal with the whole question of front-end loading. The Province of British Columbia, the Province of Quebec and the Maritimes have offered certain forms of subsidies. The Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario do not provide subsidies and object to front-end loading. The present legislation will not help producers in British Columbia, Quebec and the Maritimes. That is not entirely fair. The Province of Alberta has what could be called "bottom-end loading". The cost of production in Alberta might not be the same as in other provinces because Alberta does not charge a tax on gasoline.

A co-operative approach is needed. Ministers of Agriculture and producers from across Canada should sit down with the federal Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) to discuss these matters. A system should be established across Canada to eliminate the possibility of price wars between provinces. What we need first and foremost is leadership from the Government and the Minister of Agriculture. We have not seen that leadership, therefore the farm crisis in Canada will get worse and worse. Until we have leadership, Bill C-25 will not provide a solution.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

JOINT DISPOSITION OF BILLS C-47, C-48 AND C-49

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the House Leaders which will involve, after one more speaker of the Official Opposition, a change in the order of business. The change will involve the calling of the Bill relating to divorce for second reading. Therefore, we will deal with second reading of Bill C-25 and then move on to the divorce legislation which will be moved by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie).

There have been discussions in the House with respect to the divorce legislation. Bill C-46, Bill C-47, and Bill C-48 are related to the area of divorce. Therefore, the House Leaders have proposed an arrangement, and are seeking the unanimous consent of the House to deal with those three Bills in one debate.

I have a draft order, Mr. Speaker, which I believe the House will receive with unanimous consent. The order is as follows:

That when the Order for the second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs of Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act, is called, notwithstanding any Standing Order, the following orders shall also be deemed to have been called:

(a) for the second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs of Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief; and

(b) for the second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs of Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada.

● (1600)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, this is satisfactory to the Official Opposition and, therefore, we certainly consent to this order.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, as you are well aware, the three Bills named in the House order are dependent one upon the other, and it makes eminent good sense that the House should deal with all three in one debate. Therefore, the House order which is before us is certainly agreeable to us.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the Government House Leader propose a draft order. Is there unanimous consent for the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

* * *

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Mazankowski (for the Minister of Agriculture) that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will resume the question and comment period on the speech of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) with the Hon. Member for Lambton-Middlesex (Mr. Fraleigh).

Mr. Fraleigh: Mr. Speaker, by and large I agree with everything the two previous speakers said. Regarding the speech of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong), I would simply say that although Bill C-25 may not be the panacea that he foresees, where we look after the farmers from the cradle to the grave, I think he would agree that it is a significant small step forward. I think we are doing the farmers of this country a great disservice if we do not move this Bill into committee very quickly so we can bring together the important players in this industry and try to resolve many of the problems which the two previous speakers so ably outlined in their remarks.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I agree with what the Hon. Member has just stated. As I understand it, I am the last speaker from my Party, so we will get this Bill into committee. I hope we will get the committee to deal with it quickly because I would like to see more legislation coming down, and the faster, the better. The Hon. Member agrees that this is just a small step, and I think what we need are big steps. Therefore, we will allow this small step to occur but, for heaven's sake, get some legislation ready so we can take some big steps.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member made a brief reference to interest rates without elaborating very much. I think one of the very big problems farmers are having right now are high interest rates. I spoke in the House on Friday and read off the increase in bankruptcies of farmers over the last four or five years. It has gone up by leaps and bounds. One of the major problems in this country is the fact that we need to bring down interest rates. This was promised by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) when he was campaigning as Leader of the Conservative Party, and it seems to me we should be doing more about that. I would like to ask the Hon. Member what ideas he has for bringing down interest rates in Canada.

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, historically interest rates have generally been around two points above the inflation rate. We now have an inflation rate of around 3 per cent or 4 per cent. I am willing to give them 7 per cent, three points above the inflation rate. At 7 per cent, a lot of economic activity in this country all at once becomes viable. A lot of farm activity and small business activity all at once becomes viable. It becomes viable to think about putting out some money on a new home.

One of the central problems we have to address ourselves to is that of interest rates. I could stand here for a long time and talk about that issue, but my essential position is that as long as we have an arms race which sucks in around $1 trillion from the total amount of world capital available, we will have a shortage of capital. We are paying the price for the arms race. The total amount of U.S. savings is not enough to pay off the American deficit. They must maintain a strong dollar and high interest rates in order to attract capital to pay off their deficit. We have to compete and also maintain a high interest rate in order to keep some of that capital here. Given that, we begin to realize that the farmers, workers, consumers and small business people are the people who are paying for the arms race. As long as the arms race continues to suck this capital into non-productive activity, farmers are going to be in trouble, as they are in the U.S. and here in Canada; small business will be in trouble; we will have slow economic growth. The real solution has to come through stopping the insane arms race, which I am sure is destroying the Soviet economy just as it is destroying our economy.

[Translation]

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, it is always with pleasure and interest that I to rise to take part in the debate in the House. Today, the House is considering Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act. Stabilizing the prices of agricultural commodities is a matter of vital importance for Canadian farmers, and especially for farmers and producers in the Maritimes. The former Liberal Government understood this when it introduced Bill C-50 last year, and now, after seven months in power, it is high time the present Government introduced a Bill that meets the expectations of the groups concerned. Unfortunately, however, Bill C-25 is not what Maritime producers and farmers expected it to be. It is disappointing because it provides no solution to the increasingly serious problems being caused by the differences in agricultural prices among the various provinces.

This Government is talking about stabilizing agricultural prices. But what kind of stabilization? Does the Bill allow for the diverse problems facing each of our ten provinces individually? Does the Bill take into consideration that production costs in the Maritimes, for instance, are higher? It does not, Mr. Speaker. We are talking about a national tripartite plan for red meat producers without even looking at the specific situation in each province.

Before further considering this policy, I would like to recall the reasons that make it necessary to have coherent legislation on farm price stabilization. This legislation provides for stabilization payments for a certain number of commodities referred to as designated commodities when prices fall below previously set levels. Similarly, most provinces have, at some time or another, introduced their own price support or income insurance programs in response to the needs of their farmers. In some provinces, the role played by the provincial threshold is essential. Since the Agricultural Stabilization Act is aimed at providing adequate support levels for all producers when necessary, and since this is a goal that is difficult to achieve, the role played and the assistance given by the provinces becomes even more crucial.

However, under this legislation, the Federal Government has paid about $200 million to red meat producers since 1978.

For ten years, the federal and provincial governments have been working on an income stabilization program for red meat producers. Recently, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta agreed to participate, together with the federal administration and national producer organizations, in setting up a new contributory stabilization program in the red meat sector. In the Atlantic Provinces, however, producers felt that the provinces should also be able to provide financial assistance. Producer associations in the Maritimes would like to see the solution on a regional rather than provincial basis. I think their position is quite understandable. Their position is that additional funds provided to producers would help the Eastern Provinces to remain competitive on national and international markets.

Finally, in New Brunswick, as in other Maritime Provinces, there is agreement on the concept of setting up a national farm price stabilization plan. However, if the plan is to be effective and fair for all Canadian farm producers, the Government must include the provinces and give them the option of adding financial funding if necessary. This way, should there be a difference between sale prices and production costs, agricultural products will still be competitive on the markets.

In fact, that is the crux of the problem. For instance, if we compare the cost of producing one hog in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces, we are astonished to realize that producers in the Maritime Provinces spend $6.67 more on each hog. Multiply tht figure by the impressive number of hogs in our provinces and you will see why our pork producers pay thousands of dollars more. Obviously, our production costs being higher, the product has to sell for more to be profitable. Given the difference in production costs from one province to the next, the losing province has to make up the difference by giving additional assistance. This way the provincial stabilization program restores proper balance.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure other people realize as I do that Government Bill C-25 falls short of the mark. The problems faced by the Maritime Provinces are there, they exist, they are real, and something has to be done to solve them. I know what the problems are and, for their part, the various Maritime Provinces producers associations deplore them and fully expect the federal Government to take action. For instance, here is what the Pork Producers Association of N.S. said to the Government in a recent document:

● (1610)

[English]

The Pork Producers Association of N.S. cannot support the proposed Tripartite Red Meat Stabilization Plan until such time as the regional differences in the cost of pork production unique to the Maritimes are recognized and alleviated. Nova Scotia producers are extremely reluctant to give up their provincial program for the Tripartite Plan.

[Translation]

I do not see how it could be clearer, Mr. Speaker. According to the same association, quarterly instead of weekly payments as provided under Bill C-25 represent a losing proposition of producers.

[English]

Even with the same support or stabilization price, a weekly administered plan provides higher support than one based on average prices for the quarter.

[Translation]

This means that under the provincial program, the producer receives three times the amount received under the tripartite plan.

Admittedly, the difference in funding is very substantial indeed. With figures like these, it is understandable that Maritime Producers are very disturbed at the prospect of total elimination of provincial programs.

In fact, the Hog Producers Association of the Maritime Provinces insists that regional differences in production costs in the Maritimes must be acknowledged and considered when developing a stabilization program. It is absolutely essential, since the difference in production costs between Ontario and the Maritimes continues to increase very significantly.

The hog grower associations are not the only ones dissatisfied with Bill C-25. There is also the Maritime Farmers Council, an organization that represents 80 per cent of farm producers in the Maritimes and which also represents the three provincial farm federations and co-operatives in the Atlantic Provinces.

However, before discussing the demands of the Maritime Farmers Council here in the House, I would like to emphasize the importance of feed grain and the cost of grain used to feed livestock and poultry in the Maritime Provinces. First of all, feed represents about 70 per cent of the cost of raising one pig. Consequently, feed costs are the single most important factor that determines whether or not the hog growing industry will make a profit at the end of the year.

Aware of the impact equitable grain prices would have on all provinces, in August 1984, the previous Government revised the Feed Freight Assistance Program by granting $2 more per ton of grain being shipped from Western Canada to the Maritimes.

This decision by the former administration had been greatly appreciated by the agricultural producers, but there is still a lot of ground to cover because the feed grain cost difference between the Maritimes and the rest of Canada remains an unsolved issue. If the Government does not take immediate action, within a few years we stand to lose from 4,000 to 5,000 jobs in industries related to cattle breeding in the Maritimes. Otherwise, with a coherent policy, those industries might well create 4,000 to 5,000 jobs.

To be perfectly frank, the pork industry is ailing, particularly in the Maritime Provinces. In other words, it will vanish from the market before the end of next year unless preventive measures are taken as soon as possible. For example, close to 20 per cent of New Brunswick producers are practically bankrupt as it is. The first explanation for this situation, of course, is that pork prices throughout North American are depressed. The second reason is the fact that there is a wide gap in feed grain costs between the Maritimes and the rest of Canada, particularly Ontario.

[English]

On February 1, 1985, according to information provided by the Livestock Feed Board of Canada, the average cost of hog grower ration in Ontario was $207 per tonne, compared with $254 in the Maritimes, a difference of $47 per tonne. These food cost disparities between the Maritimes and central Canada are growing wider every year. Continuation of this trend will eventually threaten the survival of all sectors of our Maritime livestock industry. In the Maritime Provinces we produce 45 per cent of our annual requirement of feed grains and less than 5 per cent of our vegetable protein concentrates. The remainder is imported from central and western Canada.

[Translation]

So as to balance the costs of feed grains throughout the country, in 1941 the federal Government set up the Feed Freight Assistance Program under which Ottawa paid 90 per cent or more of the cost of transporting grain from Thunder Bay to the various regions of Eastern Canada. Since they did not have to worry about grain transport costs, eastern producers remained competitive on the markets. The price of feed grain was then the same for all Canadian producers. That is what the then Liberal administration wanted to achieve, as the Hon. Maurice Sauvé said at the time when he was the Minister responsible.

[English]

The policy has been to pay the transportation costs of grain from Port Arthur to eastern Canada, leaving no balance of cost to the producer. This is what we have called equalization. It is an equalization or elimination of transportation costs so that the normal cost of feed would be the same as if the feed has been purchased at Port Arthur.

[Translation]

In 1976, federal feed freight assistance dropped from 90 per cent to 60 per cent. Even worse, in 1985 the Government is reducing feed freight assistance from 60 to 28 per cent on corn from Ontario and to 33 per cent on grain from Western Canada. This reduction is unacceptable to Maritime producers. The Government must change its feed freight assistance policy as soon as possible and allocate additional funds. Federal aid must be revised upward to 60 per cent in other words, to its 1976 level. Meanwhile, producers in the Maritimes are monitoring the situation and taking steps in the hope that by the year 2000, the provinces in Eastern Canada will be self-sufficient in feed grain. The Government will, of course, have to promote this self-sufficiency by introducing assistance and research programs. Unfortunately, all this Government is proposing to do is to cut subsidies and, most recently, to increase the cost of inspection services for potato, pork and beef producers.

Mr. Speaker, the Government should act quickly and effectively to help the pork industry in Eastern Canada compete with the industry in other provinces and in the United States. This kind of policy is urgently required, because the economic situation and the financial resources of farm producers make it impossible for them to make a profit. Farm producers simply cannot cover the additional cost without this threatening the existence of a number of farm operations.

Finally, if our Canadian farmers are to supply the domestic market and be competitive on international markets, we must first resolve the problems I have mentioned throughout this debate. I say yes to a farm price stabilization plan, provided it is fair to all provinces and the provinces will be able to take part in setting up the program.

• (1620)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments on the speech made by the Hon. Member for Westmorland-Kent (Mr. Robichaud)? If not, is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Wise, seconded by Mr. Bissonnette, moves that Bill C-25, an Act to amend the Agricultural Stabilization Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 45, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster)—Trade—Beef import quotas. (b) Prime Minister's role; the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp)—Visible Minorities—Internment of Japanese Canadians during World War II—Compensation inquiry. (b) Government Action. (c) Deadline inquiry; the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby)—National Defence—Maritime command—Restoration of navy blue uniforms.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

DIVORCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT FAMILY ORDERS ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURES TO ENACT

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and the attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to move second reading of all three Bills that you have just mentioned: Bill C-46, to amend the Divorce Act; Bill C-47 and Bill C-48, the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act. I am pleased to have the opportunity to do so. If the House adopts the legislation that is placed before it and once the Justice Committee has dealt with it, and perhaps made some improvements or changes if it appears to be required, I believe that we will have significantly improved the social legislation of Canada in this area.

The principles of the three Bills are based on the view that in the past there has been too much emphasis placed on the grounds for divorce and too little emphasis placed on what the consequences of divorce were or are for the parties and their children. It is based on the view that the divorce laws should be part of the solution rather than part of the problem in the difficult area of family relationships and family law.

It is also based on the view that once a marriage relationship has broken down irretrievably that we should sever the legal relationship with as little stress and acrimony as possible. Those are the principles that lie behind this legislation. We should stress any possibility there might be for reconciliation or mediation.

It is a fact that marriage breakdown occurs in our society. It is an unfortunate fact of life, but it is a fact. Therefore, legislation is required to settle the issues that arise once a marriage has broken down. It is the need to update and modernize our laws in this respect that leads to the introduction of this legislation.

The Divorce and Corollary Relief Bill seeks to update the 1968 Divorce Act by modifying the grounds for divorce, by improving provisions relating to support and custody and divorce procedure. The Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act will provide additional remedies to help enforce support and custody arrangements made in the case of separation or divorce.

I might mention that legislation along these lines was introduced last year by Mr. Justice MacGuigan. The divorce part of this legislation is based in large part on that with what I believe are significant improvements, taking in mind the objections and criticisms that were made last year when that Bill was initially introduced. Among the major improvements I believe will be found the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act to provide for the better enforcement of support and custody orders.

Let me deal first with the reform of the Divorce Act. That was a priority outlined in the Throne Speech of the Government. It is a priority because there is mounting pressure to modernize the law. The pressure comes from the public, the legal profession and various women's groups. The provincial governments, which are generally responsible for the administration of justice, have also urged us to proceed with divorce reform. These pressures are due to the conditions that have changed since the law was last reformed 17 years ago.

Last year in Canada there were approximately 69,000 divorces. There were 179,000 marriages. That is a ratio of 2.5 marriages for every divorce. Canada's rising divorce rate and the declining marriage rate have led some people to declare that the institution of marriage is in decline. Some believe that what they call shorter divorce will only contribute to a further weakening of the family. In my opinion, that is not so. If I thought that were so, I would not be introducing this Bill.

Let us look at some of the facts. Although people are divorcing in greater numbers, they are also forming new relationships. Statistics Canada estimates that three-quarters of all divorced couples remarry at one time or another. We know that of the marriages that took place in 1983, 27 per cent were composed of couples where at least one of the spouses had been previously divorced. The family is not disappearing in Canada; it is taking on new forms. People who get divorced usually wish to be remarried, to form families and carry on the family relationships.

Marriages in Canada are under the same economic and social pressures experienced by those who live in all western nations. However, statistics show that our divorce rate is modest when compared to our neighbours. The United States, Denmark and Sweden experience much higher rates of divorce. The divorce rate in Canada is similar to those in the western Commonwealth nations, such as the United Kingdom and Australia.

As members know, according to the present Act, grounds for divorce are fault oriented. The commonly used ones are adultery and cruelty. The grounds of sodomy, bestiality, sexual aggression or homosexuality are largely ignored. When a fault ground is used directly, no period of separation is required at all. For separation to be a basis for divorce, the parties had to be living separate and apart because of the conduct of the respondent at the time of the presentation of the divorce petition. The only neutral possibility in the present law is that the spouses will be separated for three years by mutual agreement before they file a petition for divorce. Otherwise, the ground is fault oriented.

A major criticism of the present system is that it focuses overly on the alleged fault of the spouse or spouses. It polarizes a conflict situation. It creates increased tension. It discourages reconciliation. The present law does all of those things. The present system denies social realities because in more than 90 per cent of all divorce actions, the issues are uncontested at the time the divorce petition is heard and the divorce is the outcome of an agreement between the spouses. That is the actuality.

• (1630)

In addition, an accusation of fault is certainly not conducive to mediation of the possible consequences of divorce. If we want divorce to occur in the proper kind of atmosphere and in the proper circumstances, where the parties think what is the best way of dealing with the problem, what is the best way of looking after the children for whom we are now responsible, then we need to remove the fault grounds and deal with the consequence that a particular marriage has broken down. The legislation proposes that reform should focus on the consequences of divorce rather than on the possible grounds. If we are not going to use fault direclty as a ground for divorce, then the requirement of a long separation period as evidence of marriage breakdown simply forces the parties to build separate lives and minimizes any chance of adjustment or reconciliation.

Parties who agree to divorce tend to use at the present time the fault grounds so they do not have to wait three years. Yet if they choose to complete three years of separation, one spouse still has to petition against the other. It is still an atmosphere of conflict—antagonism and fault. If one has to petition against the other, they both need separate lawyers to negotiate a settlement of the consequences. That will be done away with if this legislation is approved.

Under the present system the granting of maintenance to a spouse is often based as well on fault considerations that have no connection with the real needs of the non-wage earning spouse. These fault considerations are used mainly to deny or decrease the right to or the amount of maintenance awarded to a dependent spouse who is found to be at fault. It is never used to increase the maintenance obligations of the wage-earning spouse who is at fault. There is an unfair application of fault considerations in this event in any case. If you are at fault but you are the wage or income producing spouse, your maintenance payment is not increased. If you are found to be at fault and are the dependent spouse, you either do not receive maintenance or your maintenance is reduced. It is not a fair situation. Mediation is not provided for.

At the present time if the divorcing spouses cannot agree upon maintenance, custody and access arrangements for the children, the issues are resolved by the court. There is no mention in the present legislation of the interests of the child. In the present legislation we are proposing, there will be only one basis or one ground for divorce, that is, marriage breakdown.

I believe the law should promote the philosophy that divorce laws are not for happy people. It is not a happy situation for those involved in a marriage breakdown. No one who is happy proceeds to a divorce. It is a remedy for an unhappy fact, that the marriage has broken down. A divorce or the grounds for it should not be a reward nor a punishment for conduct or misconduct. What is crucial is what evidence is needed to prove marriage breakdown and the most effective ways to address the consequences of the divorce.

In this legislation, we are proposing that marriage breakdown is the only basis for divorce and that it can be established in two different ways. You can prove separation for one year, or you can prove adultery or cruelty.

Mr. Nunziata: That is fault.

Mr. Crosbie: I will come to that in a moment.

Many people condider that if their partner has committed adultery, the marriage has broken down. The hon. gentleman might not consider that to be the case, but there are many many people, in fact the majority, I think, who happen to believe that if there is adultery or cruelty, the marriage has broken down.

The legislation we are discussing has to take account of the diverse views in this country. There are many who for religious or moral reasons believe that withholding a divorce decree where a spouse has committed adultery or cruelty is immoral. There are others who are concerned for the well being of a spouse who suffers physical or mental cruelty at the hands of the other spouse. Why should some woman, for example—usually a woman—have to stay married to her mate for a year if she is being treated with great physical cruelty or whatever? Why should she not be able to apply for divorce immediately? This Bill provides for that. There are two ways of showing marriage breakdown under this legislation. First, that you have been separated for at least a year, that the marriage has broken down despite any efforts of reconciliation. Second, if there has been physical or mental cruelty or adultery. That is a change, by the way, from the legislation that was introduced last year.

Divorce on the basis of a fault ground provides for quicker relief from the other spouse and offers a chance to ventilate feelings, often a beneficial process. Shortening the separation period to one year from the present three years is in line with the desire to reduce the conflict between the spouses. It will also allow them to rebuild their lives more quickly. At the same time, we believe it long enough to allow for second thought and it is long enough to avoid rash and hasty divorces. If the two parties to a marriage have been living separate and apart for a year, they have not been able to patch up their differences and there is no reconciliation, the relationship has broken down and a year is certainly sufficient time to establish that. I do not think it is necessary to force people to wait another two years in addition before they can move to deal with the consequences of their marriage breakdown.

In addition, the possibility of proving marriage breakdown by fault is necessary for several reasons. First, many religious groups feel that divorce should be available immediately for moral reasons to a spouse victimized by the other. Religious beliefs and moral standards are such for certain individuals or groups that withholding a decree of divorce when it is pursued by a spouse who is the victim of adultery or cruelty would be considered immoral. For practical reasons, Mr. Speaker, we know it offers to a petitioning spouse the chance of ventilating frustrations while obtaining a judgment of divorce immediately or being granted immediate relief in the form of maintenance and or custody. That is why these grounds are being left in the legislation.

To those who favour a pure no-fault system, I answer that adultery and cruelty have long been considered valid proof of marriage breakdown and, therefore, they should stay. I can also point out that alternatives will exist and that the reduction in the separation period as an alternative means to prove marriage breakdown will render the use of fault less appealing or necessary. My guess would be that in four or five years time the use of the fault grounds will be very rare.

In addition to modifying the grounds for divorce, the principles upon which support will be provided are set out in the legislation. These do not include criteria under the present law of the conduct of the spouse. The Bill outlines the principles upon which you can obtain support. The principles do not include the conduct of the spouse. Fault is not a criteria for maintenance, nor should it be. Maintenance should be to meet the needs of a spouse, and retaining conduct as a criteria would encourage conflict between the spouses and run counter to our desire to reduce the adversarial nature of the proceedings.

In addition, this criteria has been unfairly applied in the present law. It was used to reduce maintenance received by a dependent spouse found at fault. As I mentioned before, it was never used to increase support payments owned by a supporting spouse found at fault.

Mr. Nunziata: What is your evidence?

● (1640)

Mr. Crosbie: With regard to the criteria to be applied in awarding maintenance, many groups and individuals have advocated that reference should be made specifically to the duration of and the functions performed during cohabitation in order to assess the need and quantum of maintenance. This will ensure that married people will still be free to organize as they wish the division of functions during a marriage. In the eventuality of divorce, the Divorce Act will recognize their different contributions through a maintenance order. The duration of cohabitation should be one of the criteria. If one is married for 30 years and has looked after the home for 30 years without an outside career, certainly that is a function which should influence the need for maintenance. If one has been married only two years and has been a homemaker for just two years, that would not be as significant, though it should be taken into account.

One of the problems which the Supreme Court of Canada outlined in the 1983 de cision of Messier v Delage was that the Divorce Act, that is the present Act, did not provide any guidance as to what a maintenance order was supposed to accomplish in the case of a divorce. The present Act has no objectives. It does not say whether it is to provide maintenance for life to a dependent spouse who divorces or is divorces after two or five years of cohabitation. It does not explain whether it is to provide means for a dependent spouse to become economically independent again. None of this is dealt with.

The criteria for determining what a maintenance order shold state have to be the conditions, the means and the other circumstances of the parties including the duration, the functions or the responsibilities which they performed during their cohabitation.

Our Bill proposes the following objectives for maintenance; first, that it recognize the advantages and disadvantages which arise from the marriage and the breakdown of the marriage, that it recognize the sharing of the economic burden of child care, that it recognize the relieving of economic hardship, and that where particable it lead to the achieving of economic self-sufficiency within a reasonable time. These objectives are not mutually exclusive, and they have no particular order of priority. A maintenance order should accomplish all those objectives unless one of them cannot apply.

We should note that the objective of economic self-sufficiency is a desirable one, but it is restricted in two ways. If it is not practicable, it should not apply. If it is practicable, then economic self-sufficiency should only be required to be achieved within a reasonable time. Under the present Divorce Act, the court can impose such terms, conditions or restrictions as it thinks fit and just regarding a maintenance order. For years the courts have imposed a fixed duration for maintenance in appropriate cases when economic self-sufficiency was possible. In my view, they should have that express power. It would seem to be inconsistent that such award should be varied or revised indefinitely, but we also had to be careful of the words "fixed term".

Bill C-47 proposes certain exceptions which will alleviate injustices that such situations might create. In situations where economic hardship arises through changed circumstances related to the marriage which might have resulted in a different original order if they had existed at the time of the original order, then an application to change the conditions of the order should be received. This is an attempt to obtain a solution to a weakness which was felt to be in the legislation last year. The Bill will provide that applications can be made to change an order if the conditions change in the way that I have related. For example, there may be an incapacity on the part of an ex-spouse to become economically self-sufficient even after a fixed maintenance award term expired because of some kind of change in circumstances related to child care which could not have been contemplated at the time of the order. The Bill tries to provide for that.

With respect to children, Bill C-47 recognizes the view—and I believe it is widely accepted by all Hon. Members—that any arrangement regarding children should be according to their best interests. To give effect to this, the Bill recognizes the possibility of joint custody and that after divorce, children should have maximum access to both parents. That is the policy expressed in the Bill. The law stresses that maintenance of the children is a joint responsibility of their parents after a divorce. I think these are all steps forward.

Finally, since the present Divorce Act gives a court the power to deal with the custody of children only on the basis that the petitioner can have a divorce granted by that specific court, and since the children involved can be living somewhere else, the new legislation proposes to give a discretion to the court to transfer proceedings to the place where the children have the most substantial connection. That appears to be the most logical solution.

Under the present legislation, a divorce cannot be granted except, and I quote, "after a trial which shall be by a judge without a jury". There must be a trial under the present legislation. A costly court appearance is inappropriate in many cases, especially where both parties wish a divorce and where all the corollary issues of relief, custody and maintenance are settled. If everything is settled in a satisfactory manner, it should not be necessary to have a trial before the divorce order is granted.

Ontario has already adopted rules of procedure which will dispense with the need of a petitioner to appear in an uncontested case. The evidence then has to be in writing and supported by an affidavit. If the court is satisfied with that evidence, it can issue a decree of divorce with the appropriate maintenance or custody order. Other provinces may soon follow Ontario and, if they do, there may well be a reduction in the cost of divorce proceedings. The Bill now before the House will allow this and will give the discretion to provincial authorities.

It often happens that spouses are living in separate provinces at the time of divorce proceedings. In order to avoid the possibility of courts in two different provinces proceeding on two actions for divorce relating to the same couple, a copy of every divorce action has to be sent to the central divorce registry here in Ottawa. This registry conducts a computer search to check to ensure that there has been no duplication of divorce proceedings. In this way, couples are ensured that the dissolution of their marriage is granted by one court with proper jurisdiction to grant the decree and to award any other relief.

As part of the Government's expenditure reduction and revenue generation initiative, a $10 fee will now be charged to divorcing couples for the services performed by the central divorce registry.

Mr. Nunziata: Shame.

Mr. Crosbie: I think that is a fairly modest fee which people should be able to afford.

Any law which concerns itself with divorce also has to concern itself with the preservation of marriage whenever it is possible. We naturally want marriages to be preserved, and we believe in the preservation of marriages whenever possible. That is why the legislation now before the House continues the provision which was in the 1968 Act, that lawyers are required to encourage their clients to reconcile, unless that is clearly inappropriate, and they are directed to refer their clients to reconciliation services.

In addition, the Bill now before the House will replace the present provision which allowed for one 90-day period of cohabitation for the purpose of reconciliation and did not jeopardize one's status of living separate and apart. We want to take a more flexible approach, designed to encourage several attempts at reconciliation. The new Act will allow any number of attempts at living together and reconciling the total 90 days, cumulatively. In the year unfortunate couples are separated, they will be able to try to reach a reconciliation by living together again during that year for a period of up to 90 days without doing away with the fact that after the year is expired and if there is still no reconciliation they can proceed to have a divorce decree. Where a marriage is truly broken down and reconciliation has failed, we are encouraging the use of mediation to settle the questions of support for the dependent spouse, support for the children, custody and access. The use of a neutral third party trained as a mediator can often resolve those matters with less conflict and with a great deal more satisfaction than litigating them in court. The new Act will require lawyers to encourage their clients to mediate their divorces, unless that is completely inappropriate, and to refer their clients to mediation services.

• (1650)

We are promoting the use of mediation in ways that go beyond this Act. For example, we are providing funding for three years for a national association of mediators and others who are interested in promoting mediation. That association, known as Family Mediation Canada, is going to seek to improve communications and the exchange of ideas in that area across Canada. It is going to seek to increase the availability of mediation services and to develop education and training standards and a code of ethics for mediators.

Mr. Kaplan: I hope there is a good Tory candidate for that job.

Mr. Crosbie: This might be an area for some people I could think of to use their well honed skills.

As my time is limited, I would like to move on to the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act. The need to improve the enforcement of support and custody orders is acute, as I am sure all Members of the House know. I have said this elsewhere, but the default rate for support payments in Canada is a national scandal. Between one-half and three-quarters of all support orders in Canada are in arrears in whole or in part. This is an intolerable situation and is the case despite the fact that research shows that a reasonable estimate is that 80 per cent of defaulting spouses can afford to make support payments. They can afford to make them, but they choose not to. That is a situation that cannot be permitted to continue. If the House passes the legislation that is now before it, that situation will continue no longer, or at least it will not continue as easily as it has heretofore.

The wholesale flouting of custody and support orders brings the authority of the courts into disrepute. It places a tremendous emotional and financial burden on the dependent spouse and on the children of the union who have to exist without the unpaid support payments. As we know, all too often most families are forced to turn to welfare, thus placing the financial burden of the defaulters on the shoulders of the taxpayers. The estimate is that $1 billion is spent annually by governments to support custodial parents and their children. One-half of that is contributed by the federal Government under the Canada Assistance Plan. Obviously any law that permits this situation to continue would be a poor law.

In some cases, a defaulting spouse is also a missing spouse. He or she cannot be located so that a support order may be enforced. Too often children are taken by the non-custodial parent in violation of a custody order and the criminal law and they disappear beyond the reach of the parent who is supposed to have custody. In such instances, the dependent spouse or custodial parent often does not have the financial resources to trace the missing spouse or child in order to enforce the support or custody order. We all know how difficult it is to enforce these orders in a country with 10 provinces, all having different court systems and different laws. We have had to develop initiatives to improve the enforcement of such orders and these initiatives have to meet the constitutional conditions that govern us in Canada.

Canada operates under a federal system. There is one federal Government, 10 provincial Governments and two Territorial Governments. Both levels of government have their respective jurisdictions. The federal Government has jurisdiction over divorce and corollary matters to divorce, but the provinces have jurisdiction over all other incidents arising out of a marriage. Both levels of Government have an interest in improving support and custody orders. However, the provinces are primarily responsible for the enforcement of those orders. They have the constitutional responsibility for the administration of justice and over half of such orders are made pursuant to provincial family law. They are not made as a consequence of a divorce action.

We have been consulting with the Attorneys General of the provinces to improve the enforcement of family orders. They have been very co-operative. It is with this in mind that the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act and the Divorce and Corollary Relief Act seek to improve enforcement.

First, the Divorce Act will allow support and custody orders to be registered in any court designated by a province. That will simplify enforcement. The new Act also allows the assignment of support orders to the federal or provincial Governments so that they can enforce the orders. This is a considerable improvement. The Act will allow the courts to order a spouse both to provide security for and to pay lumpsum or periodic payments. Under the new Act, the spouse can obtain a provisional variation of a support order in the province in which he or she habitually resides and have it confirmed by a court in the province in which the erring spouse resides. That will be an advance.

The companion legislation will improve the situation pursuant to both federal and provincial laws. The Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act will provide two new remedies for the enforcement of these matters in addition to what already exists under provincial law. The first remedy will allow the release of information from designated information banks of the federal Government in order to trace a missing spouse or child where there is a breach of a support or custody order or an access right or where a charge has been laid of child abduction in contravention of a custody order pursuant to Section 250.1 or 250.2 of the Criminal Code.

The second remedy will allow the garnishment or attachment of designated federal moneys due a support defaulter for payment to the dependent spouse or other creditor. That remedy is available to enforce a support order or a support provision of an agreement where the agreement can be enforced under provincial law by garnishment or attachment.

The federal information banks that will be opened up include designated banks of the Health and Welfare Department and the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission. One will not be able to search any other information bank nor will one be able to search income tax files. However, those banks that can be searched provide information on 16 million adult Canadians and can be searched if the person's name or social insurance number is provided. We are looking after the right to privacy. The Act requires court authorized to apply to the federal Government for the release of the information. The information can be released only to authorities and services responsible for enforcing the orders, including the courts, provincial enforcement services and police officers. They must keep the information they receive confidential. Only information sufficient to trace the missing person will be released. The information to be released is his or her address and the name or address of his or her employer.

The second remedy will be available for garnishment or attachment of income tax refunds, provided the provinces agree to that, interest in Canada Savings Bonds and unredeemed matured Canada Savings Bonds, the training income supplement, unemployment insurance payments, Canada Pension Plan payments, excluding children's benefits, Old Age Security payments, Guaranteed Income Supplement payments and agriculture, dairy and grain stabilization payments. Next year we will complete a review to see if there are any other federal moneys which might be added to the Act by regulation.

A court will already have found that the spouse who was ordered to pay can afford to pay. That spouse will have been given notice of these applications. The creditor spouse will have to prove the existence of the debt default and the amount of the default. The debtor spouse will have to be notified of the proceedings. All of these safeguards exist. Once the safeguards are complied with, the attachment notice can go into effect. The garnishee summons will bind Her Majesty for one year. Numerous summonses will not have to be submitted every year in order to intercept payments. The original garnishee will be good for one year.

Some have criticized this measure by saying that there should be a national enforcement service. That would be compelling in its simplicity, but it ignores the reality of the provincial constitutional authority in this field. We believe that the improvements that are to come in provincial enforcement services such as those already in place in Manitoba and Quebec, provinces which are leading the way, together with the federal legislation, will deal in a very effective manner with the problem of defaulted support payments or child abduction arising from separation or divorce.

• (1700)

In conclusion, I would like to say that I believe the legislation is well deserving of the support of Members of the House. I believe the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party are supportive of the legislation in general. We know that there will be a few carping criticisms, which are bound to come from some, and that there may be legitimate criticisms from others. In any event, whether carping or legitimate, we hope that the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs will pay adequate attention to everyone's views and report back to the House, if we pass second reading, in order that this major reform and improvement can be put into effect before the end of June with the help of all Members in the Chamber.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Private Members' Hour is scheduled for this time, but unfortunately the Member in whose name the motion stands is not present in the House. There are two alternatives. Either we can adjourn for the day until tomorrow or, if the House wishes, it could continue with Government business. It is up to the House to decide.

Mr. Kaplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) on a point of order.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, for my part, I wish to co-operate with the Government in seeing the legislation expeditiously moved forward to committee, but I would prefer to continue the debate tomorrow at the appropriate time.

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, if that is the wish of the Opposition, I believe that we should agree with that. If opposition Members wish to wait until tomorrow, that is agreeable to our side.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, we are also prepared to facilitate passage of the Bill to committee and to continue the debate tomorrow. However, if it is the will of the House to proceed this evening, I would certainly be prepared to hear the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan). If he is not prepared to proceed now, we are agreeable to proceeding tomorrow.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, as there is not consent on the matter and other speakers are not prepared, move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I understand, with respect to the Member whose motion is before us today, that this is the second time in three weeks that the matter has been on the agenda and the Member has not had the common courtesy to appear in the House to speak to his motion. I would expect, Mr. Speaker, that you would take disciplinary action with that Conservative member, who has shown not only disrespect for the Chair, but disrespect for each and every Member of the House. We have important and urgent business to conduct in the House, and when a Member is on the agenda to speak during Private Members' Hour and does not appear, it shows contempt for the Speaker and for the House of Commons.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is a motion from the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council that this House do now adjourn. Is there a seconder?

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I have just been informed that the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) is on his way and will be in the Chamber in a moment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the House agree to wait for the Member?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: I have no objection to the House waiting for the Hon. Member to arrive, but his allotted time would have to be shortened accordingly rather than being taken off the time of Liberal or NDP Members who want to speak to the motion. They are entitled to 20 minutes.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is a motion to adjourn the House which was proposed by the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council. Is there a seconder for the motion? The motion is not debatable, but I wonder if there is a motion.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I would like to withdraw my motion as there is no seconder. I believe that we should debate the motion in the absence of the Hon. Member for Athabasca, as he can be the second or third speaker on the motion.

Mr. Gauthier: There must be unanimous consent to withdraw the motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That cannot be done without the unanimous consent of the House.

Mr. Dick: The motion has not been seconded.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: As I do not have a motion, I will have to read every Private Members' Motion which is on the Order Paper.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I would propose that you go ahead with the motion which is listed for today in the name of the Hon. Member for Athabasca. My understanding is that the Hon. Member will be here and be prepared to speak. However, under the circumstances, he could speak at a later stage. As a matter of fact, I understand that the Hon. Member has just arrived in the House. Perhaps we can proceed with Private Members' Business.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) on a point of order.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I note that the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) has just appeared in the House. It is now eight minutes past the hour. He was required to be here at five o'clock to present his motion. Could I have a ruling from the Chair with respect to whether the Chair intends to deduct from the Members' allotted time the eight minutes which he has irresponsibly kept this House waiting?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair cannot deduct the time from the Member's speech, but certainly Private Members' Hour will expire at six o'clock.

It being a little bit past five o'clock the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

Is there unanimous consent for the House to proceed to Item No. 132?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTIONS

[English]

GOVERNMENT WASTE

ESTABLISHMENT OF TOLL-FREE TELEPHONE LINE

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca) moved:

That, in the opinon of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of establishing a toll-free telephone line which would enable citizens to report cases of government waste and misuse of funds.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I wish to apologize to the House for the delay in starting Private Members' Hour. However, I would suggest that the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), who indicated that I was irresponsible, should have had the courtesy to check—which would not be in keeping with his mode of operation in the House so far—with me prior to making the allegation which he made. If he had done that, he would have discovered that the reason I was late was because the buses which service the Confederation Building were all up at this end of Parliament Hill. I waited for ten minutes and then ran halfway up the hill to get to the Chamber. That is why I am out of breath. But, I would suspect that the Hon. Member is not very interested in the reason—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I ask the Member to please speak on the motion.

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I am asking the House to consider the advisability of establishing a toll-free telephone line which would enable citizens to report cases of government waste and misuse of funds. It is a suggestion which I received from a constituent a number of months ago.

I did some research on this question as it applied to the United States. They have a hot line program which has been operating for about five years. It is used to ferret out the misuse of Government funds.

● (1710)

All citizens of our country are vitally interested in how their dolars are used or misused. Through use of this hot line an individual, whether he works in a government department, out in the field, or even a concerned taxpayer, could pick up the phone and say that such a problem exists. They might say that such and such a problem should be looked into because they think there is an abuse.

How do these abuses come about? This House authorizes the spending of millions upon millions of dollars in grants for projects to various groups or individuals in order to create jobs. There may or may not be some abuses, but if there is, a concerned citizen or civil servant could alert the Auditor General's department of that fact through this line and save the Canadian taxpayers a great deal of money.

In the U.S. a request was made for a summary of what had happened through this program after it had been operating for five years. The program had not been formally advertised, but it got a good deal of news coverage. Over a period of five years, the hot line had recorded 53,000 calls, of which 10,600 were referred to the Comptroller General. Of those 10,600, about 1,100 were substantiated; there was enough evidence to proceed to investigate and recover funds that had been misused. In fact, they were able to identify situations where $20 million to $30 million had been misspent. They projected savings of another $24 million through tightening up on improper practices.

I cite that example because I think there is a good possibility that a proportionate saving could be made in Canada. We all hear stories about the misuse of government funds. I am sure that each one of us in this House can recount stories of constituents coming forward and making certain allegations. Because of the workload we have as Members of Parliament, while we may be able to alert a department about an allegation, we are not able to carry through with an investigation on our own. That is why I am asking that a program like this be set up in Canada.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that a small department of the office of the Auditor General could set up this hot line across Canada in order to receive information from the taxpayers who do not ordinarily have access to the right kind of people to lodge their complaints, and from civil servants who are afraid to say anything because they might lose their jobs. Given the experience in the United States and the amount of taxpayers' dollars which have been saved, this could well be a worthwhile program here.

If we were to establish this hot line, it would also make the taxpayers much more interested in how their tax dollar is spent. The way it is now, the taxpayer feels he has no opportunity to speak up or change in any way what is happening. All they see is big government spending big dollars. They might shake their heads about it, but the vital interest is not there because they feel they cannot do anything about it. This line would give them a chance to do something about it. As well, I think it would clearly indicated to civil servants that they are charged with a special responsibility to jealously guard taxpayers' dollars. Therefore, I think if this is done, over a period of years we would see a much more responsible attitude on the part of the Public Service toward the public purse. We would also see a much greater concern expressed by individual taxpayers over how their tax dollars are being spent.

I know that others might wish to comment on my suggestion, so I will close by giving the House some indication of the types of calls which have been received by this hot line in the U.S. See if this is not familiar to us all. One caller alleged that space rented by the General Services Administration in a New York City office building had been vacant for months. That certainly reminds me of some of the accusations that were made in this House by Members on this side when we were in opposition, and indeed by members of the Opposition today. There is space being rented by government agencies and departments right across this country which has remained vacant for months or years. Yet we here do not know how these allegations are being investigated. As another example, an anonymous informant claimed that two university professors in Wisconsin had extorted money from trainees in a federal program and converted federal funds to their personal use. I know that there are federal funds being used in training programs across the country. There is potential for the same type of abuse as in this example.

• (1720)

An anonymous caller said an employee of the Department of the Interior in the State of Virginia was using a Government account with a local auto dealer to embezzle money. These things would never come to light unless taxpayers who see an abuse of trust or of the spending of tax dollars have the ability to pick up the phone and report such abuses. Another informant sent a photograph of a veteran, who was on full disability, operating a commercial fishing boat in Texas. That informant, who was a taxpayer, did not agree that the veteran should be ripping off the system. An informant alleged that a Major General, the commanding officer of an army installation, bought an interest in a nearby hotel after being advised by the Department of Defence of a planned troup increase and possible housing shortage at the installation.

I am sure that other Members could think of examples of misuse of Government funds. Such a system would give taxpayers the opportunity to more actively participate in the correction of abuses. Public civil servants and Crown corporation employees would become much more attuned to the concept that they are indeed spending taxpayers' money and that they are accountable for it. I hope that Hon. Members will take a positive attitude toward this suggestion. The results could be well worthwhile and show a considerable saving to the entire country.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Member for giving me this golden opportunity to speak of Government waste. There could be no more valuable occasion, outside of Question Period, to raise such issues. I am very pleased that we have this motion before us today. I shall have to introduce such a motion myself in order to bring up all the incidents of Government waste in the country.

One of the first issues of Government waste that I would like to deal with is the fact that the House wasted eight minutes waiting for the Hon. Member. Members are paid roughly $30 an hour. You have told us in the past, Mr. Speaker, that all Members are always present in the House. Therefore, we can only assume that every other Member was here. Therefore, multiplying $4 by 281 other Members, we see that it cost the taxpayers of the country $1,124 for the eight minutes that we waited for the Hon. Member to show up here today. Two weeks ago the Member did not show up at all. We wasted one hour which cost $7,858. Add that to the $1,124 wasted today, and we have a grant total of $8,992 of wastage caused by the Hon. Member for failing to show up to debate his own issue in the House of Commons.

Mr. Foster: Shame, shame.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member across the way said that we should raise other examples of Government waste in the House. As much as I hate to, I am about to do so. Let us start at the top, Mr. Speaker. The Leader himself increased the budget of his own office by 57 per cent this year after telling everyone else in the country that it was time to tighten the belt. We can see that there is an awful lot of slack in the belt of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

The Government handed out a number of jobs, some 1,200 of which are listed here in this black paper. They were mostly given to Tory friends and relatives. Two of those jobs are particularly notorious. One was given to an individual by the name of Lawrence Hanigan, the defeated Tory candidate in the riding of Laval-des-Rapides. The other one was given to Mr. Roy McMurtry, the former Attorney General of Ontario. Both of these individuals were appointed to high paying Tory rewards. That is enough to make some Conservative back-benchers in the House wish that they had lost so that they too could have partaken in such rewards. However, unfortunately for them and for us, the Tory back-benchers were elected and could not receive the high paying rewards of $100,000 each.

Well, the $100,000 salaries were not enough for Mr. Hanigan and Mr. McMurtry. The Government decided to help them make ends meet in their budgets. The Government gave them pay increases of $38,000 each to ensure they had enough money to pay the grocery bill at the end of the month, which likely comes free with that kind of job to start with.

We have since nicknamed Thursday, November 8, "Black Thursday." On that day the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) perpetrated his vicious attack on the people of Canada. He decided that he would cut just about everything for the poor people of the country. The Minister of Finance decided to send copies of this notorious statement to his colleagues, the Tory Premiers of the country. It cost $23,850 in jet service to deliver a speech that should not have been read to start with. That would have cost $105 by Air Express. The sense of economics of the Government led it to believe that the proper thing to do was to waste $23,850 in order to do a $105 job. That is an example of Government waste.

Let us talk about the Shamrock summit in Quebec City. It cost us $525,000 to hear about the Irish eyes that were smilling. Notwithstanding that the singing was not much to start with, the price of the affair was enough to give indigestion to everyone who ate the caviar and quail that was served. The total cost of the event was $1 million to the taxpayers of the country.

The summit was supposed to be for good Canada-U.S. relations. Well, no sooner had the President of the United States flown home than there were countervail duties on Canadian pork and other products. That was the effectiveness of that endeavour. It was another waste of taxpayers' dollars.

Around Christmas time the Prime Minister decided that he should take a little holiday to Florida. Maybe he was right and he should have taken that holiday to Florida.

Mr. Marchi: With a one-way ticket.

Mr. Boudria: My friend says that perhaps he should have taken a one-way ticket. While he was there, he wanted to see what the Opposition was up to. Every day he had video clips flown to Florida. The cost of flying the video clips to Florida to enable the Prime Minister to watch the Opposition on television was $1,000.

Let us talk about another Member of the House. Perhaps—

[Translation]

—we might mention the "national air draft", Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) who was described in those terms when he was a Minister in Quebec. He took it upon himself to take off for various destinations at the expense of Canadian taxpayers. The Minister chose to fill a jet with relatives, department officials and what have you and fly to the Middle East for a ribbon-cutting ceremony for which Canadian taxpayers had to shell out $57,000, Mr. Speaker.

Those are examples of waste of funds by this Government.

[English]

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) decided to take a trip to Vancouver on board a government jet. She arrived there three minutes ahead of Air Canada. The cost was $17,000. It cost us $5,000 a minute to send the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to Vancouver. That is a prime example of Government waste.

• (1730)

Let us talk about renovations to the offices of Cabinet Ministers. They are the ones who tell the people of Canada that it is time to tighten the belt. Let us hear about Government waste. The Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) decided that it would require $10,000 to renovate his office on Parliament Hill. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) required $22,327. That will buy a lot of wallpaper and paint.

The President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), the cutting man himself who is the watchdog of our tax dollars, requires $7,887. The Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek), or the amateur Minister of Fitness and Sport, as he is sometimes called, required $13,496. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) required $7,950. The Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton), whoever that is, required $17,712 to redo the inside of the Parliament Hill office.

As if that is not enough, add $173,000 worth of new limousines which make the West Door of the House of Commons look like a used car lot. They are added to the ones that were already there. Of course, one cannot have limousines without chauffeurs. One cannot have chauffeurs without political commissaires and chiefs of staff, which every Cabinet Minister has. They are paid the mere sum of $80,000 each, courtesy of the taxpayers of our country.

What about car rentals? It is not enough to have that used car lot outside the West Door, in the first three months of this year the Government had to rent another $30,000 worth of cars to make up for the shortage of cars to drive Cabinet Ministers around.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, there is Government waste. How about the $36 million of Government waste in order to colour our military differently because the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen), who has lost his coat over this issue, cannot differentiate one person in the military from another? It seems that everyone else could, but he could not.

Let's talk about chiefs of staff, about staff for the Prime Minister. Let's talk about nannies and about Ministers who spend $496,000 in their first few months in office on jet travel alone. My colleague, the Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), reminds me that not all was wasted. The Prime Minister himself paid $1.50 for every meal that he ate at his house. He reimbursed the people of Canada. Let me remind the House that most citizens of this country would gladly change their grocery bill for $1.50 per head per meal. I wish I could, frankly, and I am sure that most of my constituents could not feed their family on $1.50 a meal.

Last week we heard that the Government spent $103,000 in advertising a program which was signed in 1981 and took effect a year ago. The Government believes that now is the time the program should be advertised. What did it do? It gave a contract to the R. T. Kelley Advertising Agency, which is run by a former Ontario Conservative Cabinet Minister and former defeated Tory candidate in the riding of Hamilton West. They gave this $103,000 contract.

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This is Private Members' hour. The discussion is about easier access for Canadian citizens to the Government of Canada. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), although he is very interesting, is rambling far off the topic. Perhaps he could stick to the topic.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion mentions a toll free line to report cases of Government waste. It is a question of debate about whether the items being mentioned by the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) are a question of Government waste. The Hon. Member has not mentioned the toll-free telephone line. Presumably he will do so at some point in his speech.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It would be my hope that everyone would report these Government wastes by means of whatever telephone line. I do not blame the Member for Nanaimo-Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) being embarrassed by these examples of Government waste. Were I Tory right now—heaven forbid—I am sure that I would be as embarrassed as the Hon. Member.

For him to try to stifle debate like this is quite normal. It is normal for a Conservative backbencher who cannot partake in most of this waste. That Hon. Member who just spoke cannot have any of those expensive cars that were rented. He does not have a limousine or any other part of the Government waste that we have raised. I am sure that he wishes he could fly on a JetStar.

All that said and done, let me give the most glaring example of Government waste. The toll free phone line that the Hon. Member suggests today would cost $4,065 a month to operate. That is nearly $50,000 a year that would be wasted for a telephone line so that the Member could be in contact with his constituents the way he should be already in order to find out about Government waste. It would cost us $50,000 a year so that that Member and other Conservative backbenchers could do their jobs.

I have an easier solution. I invite all people to contact me at area code 613-996-2907. They can report all Government wastes at 996-2907.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to sit in the House and hear the comments by the Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) who introduced this motion and to the comments by the Liberal spokesperson, the Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria). It is interesting to hear the Liberals and Tories debating about who is the most gross when it comes to getting into the trough.

I listened with some interest to the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell talk about renovations, nannies and advertising. We must mention the extensive renovations carried out by the former Liberal Prime Minister. We must keep in mind the extensive renovations to Stornoway that are now being considered. We are intrigued when we hear about nannies. We recognize that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) needed a nanny. We certainly understood that the previous Prime Minister needed a nanny.

We heard talk about advertising. I remember well, during the Constitution debate, the Liberal geese flying across our television screens. In fact, I think most Canadian people felt, after seeing these geese, that they were being goosed. I believe that that perception by Canadians was quite accurate.

The Hon. Member for Athabasca is proposing this resolution in the midst of the flowering of Tory patronage. He does so without a blush, just as the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell reads his list without blushing. I believe that the Liberals, with their long experience, have become experts at going to the trough. Perhaps the only difference between the Liberals and the Tories, who have been away from the trough for such a long time, is that the Liberals had developed some table manners. At least they wore a bib when they were at the trough. The Tories have been away so long that they are madly rushing to the trough to distribute what they can. I suggest that Canadians are upset at the method of Conservative patronage.

• (1740)

I think Canadians have become a bit cynical about political parties generally. I wonder what they must feel about the Prime Minister who, during the election campaign, wrapped himself in such righteous indignation. He condemned in ringing and eloquent terms the patronage in which the Liberals indulged just before the former Prime Minister left and the ascendency of the new Liberal leader. When the former Opposition Leader became Prime Minister, gone was the cloak of self-righteousness. He and his fellow Tories jumped into the trough. It is hoped over these next four years at least that some table manners are developed by the Government.

I think Canadians are concerned about the type of waste that does occur on a patronage level, but this is nickel and dime stuff really and is something Canadians generally expect. I certainly expect a certain amount by any political party that forms a Government. I think it is a question of degree. As well, it is a question of ability. If you are a Conservative government and appoint a Conservative person to a board, I will stand in my place right now and say there is nothing particularly wrong with that. The sin is if that person is not capable of carrying on the proper function to which he was appointed. It is on that level we must question some of the appointments which the present Government has made. We must also question some of the appointments which the previous Government made. Mr. Mackasey, for example, was appointed to Air Canada and other various spots. Surely some secret moments were enough to make even Mr. Mackasey blush. It is not political affiliation but the lack of ability in carrying out the function which is the biggest sin.

When we are talking about Government waste, the big item, it appears we have lost over $2.5 billion to $2.8 billion on an R and D tax credit scheme. Originally when this measure was introduced by the Liberal Minister of Finance, it was to cost the treasury $500 million in lost revenue. Everyone agrees it has become a scam. It is as though the doors of the treasury were flung wide open and we lost $2.8 billion. This is a big money item, Mr. Speaker. Nobody in this House will claim that we have had $2.8 billion in extra research and development here. If we had $2.8 billion more in research and development, we would be in quite a different situation today. It is apparent to all of us that the only research and development which this tax measure has created is research and development by accountants and tax lawyers.

Mr. Rodriguez: All Tories.

Mr. de Jong: Here we have a big budget item, $2.8 billion, which is $2.3 billion more than was estimated. It is "Oops", a $2.3 billion "oops". Then we have Mirabel Airport. Another billion dollar "oops". This was thought out by some bureaucrats in the Department of Transport who really like thinking in tremendous Technicolor screens, the same people who are destroying agriculture in western Canada by the Crow Bill which the Liberal Government was so stupid to push through and which the Tories have not revoked. These same people are the ones who projected the need for this tremendously large airport outside of Montreal which is a disaster. Everybody admits now that it is a billion dollar "oops" in lost change that fell out of a pocket.

The money on these two programs, the R and D tax credit and Mirabel, would do a lot to alleviate the hardships in which unemployed people are finding themselves. It amazes me that Governments, whether Liberal or Tory, are quite willing to nickel and dime people who are poor, sick, or elderly. They are quite willing to restrict the eligibility for unemployment insurance so they can squeeze $200 million out of the scheme.

Mr. Rodriguez: The tough Tories.

Mr. de Jong: Yet do we find the same concern when we lose $2.3 billion in this R and D tax scheme? No, Mr. Speaker. There is hardly a word about it. We do not talk about these welfare bums, or the lazy people who, if you only give them an extra squeeze, would get off their fannies and find a job. There is none of this rhetoric. It seems that we are quite willing to lose $2.3 billion in this mad hatter R and D tax scheme. There is not a ripple of protest. Yet we have all the wrath, fury, and self-righteousness directed at the poor soul who is on unemployment insurance. There might be some odd cheat in the unemployment world. Human beings are human beings, but the rip-offs that occur in unemployment insurance are nothing compared to the rip-off now occurring with the R and D tax credit scheme. All the focus is on the poor soul who is trying to get by on a few hundred bucks a week.

When the Hon. Member suggests that we set up a hot line so people can report on Government wastage, are they going to report on the guy next door who someone might figure should not be eligible for his welfare or his unemployment insurance cheques? After all, it is Government wastage. Will this be something like a crime watch, except it is on the civil service? Is this part of the extension of the civil service bashing in which Members opposite seem to indulge? Who are they going to phone? What are they going to phone about? Are they going to phone about government wastage in terms of advertising? What about the Liberal flying geese?

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It has become increasingly evident that my motion, a pearl of an idea, should not have been cast before political swine.

Mr. Rodriguez: That is great language for a parliamentarian.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has used unparliamentary language. I have had a chance to look at Beauchesne. To call Hon. Members swine is quite unparliamentary. I know the Hon. Member, being a gentleman, would want to withdraw that remark. We have had a very heated debate, but I do not think that justified calling members of the Opposition swine. I think this is a matter of some gravity for the House of Commons. I know the Hon. Member would want to withdrawn that remark.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order, I think it is absolutely deplorable that a Member of this House would use that kind of repartee, using the word swine. It is not just an indirect reference. I made a mistake in this House and one has to have the courage to get up and admit that one has made a mistake. I think the Hon. Member should get up and withdraw that remark. It sets a certain tone. He is not the only one who can use that kind of language. I think he should take it back.

● (1750)

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, I heard very clearly what the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) said. As a Member sitting in the House and hearing the remark, I must say, contrary to my friends in the New Democratic Party and in the Liberal Party, that I took no offence from the remark. It was a simple expression, often used in ordinary parlance, not intended to apply to any individuals. If Hon. Members are so paranoid that they respond to the least remark, I think they should take their problem elsewhere.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has heard the remarks of the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) and believes that they are certainly inappropriate and do not help the level of debate. However, the Chair does not find that the words are strictly unparliamentary. Therefore, the debate will continue with the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong).

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I am not a bit upset by the remark of the Hon. Member. Certainly he is not a pearl, and everyone recognizes that his fanciful Bill is not one either. If it was, he would have made certain that he was here at the beginning of the debate. It was supposed to be dealt with a week or so ago and he did not bother showing up, and he showed up late today. Obviously it is not a pearl with which we are dealing. I recognize the general level of intellect of the Hon. Member in politics and so forth. What he said to me was of no great surprise. I do not feel insulted. That type of insult by that type of Hon. Member reflects rather well on me and identifies the Hon. Member and what he is all about.

Let me return to the Bill which is before us. It is sort of a crime stopper Bill on public servants which the Hon. Member is requesting Parliament to consider. The first question I would ask is: On what are they reporting? Can they pick up the telephone and say that there is government wastage as a result of the proposed renovations to the summer residence of the Prime Minister or to the residence of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), or that they think there is wastage as a result of the R and D tax credit? On what will they report? My second question is: To whom will they report?

If we have a system which works properly, and if we have a Government which recognizes the important role that Members of Parliament can and should be playing, it is the role or job of Members of Parliament to get those telephone calls. They should hear from their constituents and from the Canadian public that they believe there is government waste on some project or other.

Public waste is an important topic. All Governments should be concerned about curbing waste and about running a tight and well administered operation. However, to do what the Hon. Member is asking will not accomplish that purpose. In fact, the result will be that public servants will be afraid. They will have the sense that they are being spied on all the time and that they have to account for policies and programs for which they are very often not responsible. Very often public servants are just people who are carrying out the duties and directions of their political masters. If things do not go right, they are the men and women who get blamed. They are the people who are held up to ridicule. They are the victims of public servant bashing. Very often the political masters who are really to blame escape it.

Possibly this becomes more odious under Tory Governments, in that the Tories really enjoy public servant and bureaucrat bashing. Very often when they form the Government, it is the directions which they give to the public servants that create the mistakes for which the public servants are blamed. Back home in Saskatchewan we see this time and again. Even though there is a Conservative Government in the Province of Saskatchewan, they continue to bash public servants; they continue to bash their own employees and blame them for their own mistakes. That is the most deplorable part of all.

I should like to turn to the role of the Auditor General, who is really the watch-dog on government waste. I believe the Auditor General should have a firm mandate. He should have access to all pertinent documents in order to make a decision as to whether or not there is gross government waste. When the Conservatives were in Opposition, they were all in favour of that concept. Unfortunately, now that they are in Government, with perhaps documents they would rather not have the Auditor General see, they do not want to give that power to him any longer. Perhaps they want a free telephone line to Ottawa with some bureaucrat at the other end taking all the complaints. Then perhaps they can feel they have done their job in terms of accountability for public expenditures. The Auditor General has the capacity, the mandate, the technical know-how and staff to do the job properly. If it is serious about government waste, one of the first things it should do is strengthen the role of the Auditor General.

Another question I would have if the service is set up is: How would the complaints and comments be responded to? Will someone take a complaint and pass it on to another person, to be passed on to a third person, so that it is eventually lost in a labyrinth of memos and cross-memos? Again I return to the role of Members of Parliament. We should receive those telephone calls. The Canadian public or our constituents should fee, regardless of whether their Member of Parliament is a Conservative, a Liberal or a New Democrat, regardless of whether he or she is a member of the Government or of the Opposition, free to pick up the telephone to tell us that they think there is a case of abuse or a case of gross wastage. I am not referring to petty stuff, but to gross wastage. Then we should have the ability as Members of Parliament to follow through on the complaints. We should be able to talk to Ministers and to Deputy Ministers to obtain an understanding of what is going on and to get to the bottom of whether or not it is a legitimate complaint. This means a strengthening of the role of ordinary Members of Parliament. As well it means a strengthening of our role in committee and a touch less bipartisan politics. When government or opposition Members come across instances of government waste, they should not be out there to score political points. They should help to make Government more effective and work better for the public of Canada. We should all be able to co-operate in that effort. If we receive suggestions from our constituents on how to make Government more effective, we should have the ability and capacity to see that those suggestions are followed through and implemented. However, it means a different concept of what this place is all about and what we as Members of Parliament are all about. It means a different concept of how Government, Parliament and the committees work. Lacking that, I am afraid the Private Member's Bill which is before us is quite inadequate. I tend to think it is a Mickey Mouse public relations gesture. I see that it is six o'clock. I assume the Bill dies.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

● (1800)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

TRADE—BEEF IMPORT QUOTAS. (B) PRIME MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, on May 14, I put a question to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) concerning the press reports indicating that the Government had agreed to increase the quotas of European Economic Community beef coming into Canada from 5.9 million pounds to some 23.5 million pounds. On December 21, the Government triggered the meat import law and imposed a quota on European meat of 5.9 million pounds. This quota was well in tune with the amount of meat which had been coming into Canada in the previous four or five years. It was a sharp reduction for the EEC, but was certainly well within historic averages.

Some time late in January or February, we heard that the Government was considering caving in to pressure being put on it by the EEC. I do not know why it would do so. Clearly the beef which came to Canada last year was meat that was surplus within the European Economic Community. It was highly subsidized to cover the cost of transportation into Canada. In spite of this, we heard reports that the Government was going to cave in and abandon the red meat producers of this country by increasing those quotas.

I put the question to the Minister for International Trade. In his response, he indicated that the Government had initially an agreement with, I assume, the negotiators. However, he could not reveal the amount of the agreement. I think the Minister has a responsibility to come clean with the House of Commons and the industry which has suffered so much in the past six months by revealing exactly what is taking place.

Many of the agricultural producers of the country feel that they have been let down by the Government. The Government did trigger the meat import law. However, it took the Government three months to make up its mind, even though strong representations were made all fall for it to trigger the meat import law. In spite of that, no action was taken for this calendar year until December 21.

We must put this matter in perspective. The Government has already raised the United States quota from some 21 million pounds to some 65 million pounds of meat. There are rumours that a secret agreement has been reached to increase the Nicaraguan quota from some 600,000 pounds to over 9 million pounds and that even that estimate may be low due to the trade embargo placed by the United States on Nicaragua.

Naturally, agricultural groups, farm groups, the Canadian Cattlemen's Association and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture are just appalled at the prospect of the federal Government backing down and knuckling under by agreeing to an increase of some 17 million pounds of additional beef coming into the country. This amount of beef would represent at least 1,000 carcasses of meat which is subsidized by 40 cents to 48 cents a pound.

I would like to read into the record excerpts of a letter from the Bruce County Federation of Agriculture dated April 30, 1985. This letter was addresed to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and a copy was sent to me as Liberal agriculture critic. The letter reads:

> We, as members of the Bruce County Federation of Agriculture, live in the foremost beef producing County in Ontario. To say the least, we are more than concerned about increasing the allotment of EEC beef into this country.

● (1805)

> We find it very difficult to understand at a time when the red meat industry in this country is in an unfathomable financial crisis, with a record high number of bankruptcies, why a supposedly concerned and caring government would allow even one single pound more of beef into this country.
>
> At a time of decreasing beef consumption and low commodity prices that don't even come close to covering the cost of production, it would hardly seem like a prudent financial move.
>
> With all of this in mind, we respectfully request an explanation from your office outlining the reasons for such a decision being made when we all know the result would be another disastrous blow to our Canadian beef industry. Doesn't our government care?
>
> We look forward to a reply—

Well, I am not sure whether Wayne Robertson, the President of the Bruce County Federation of Agriculture, has received a reply, but, clearly, Members of the House of Commons have not received a reply from the Government on the question.

During the same Question Period, I asked the Minister for International trade if, during the recent visit of the Prime Minister to the European Economic Community countries, he had raised the question of the massive increases in beef quotas with the Prime Minister of Great Britain, the Chancellor of West Germany and the President of France. I think, because the matter is of such importance to our agricultural community, that the Prime Minister should use the prestige and power of his office, either as a group or on a bilateral basis, to raise matters which are of fundamental importance to producer groups. The response which I received from the Minister for International Trade was very high-handed. He said that the Prime Minister was not there to negotiate beef agreements. Of course he was not. But, when he was meeting with senior heads of government of the European Economic Community, he should have seized the opportunity. It is a very important issue to the red meat industry in Canada. There is no reason why he could not have raised the question with the heads of government. I think the Canadian farmers and beef producers of Canada are appalled by that type of attitude.

There is more to be concerned about in this matter. Press reports have told us that Australia, which has been a traditional trading partner with Canada in red meat, and which has large access to our markets, is very concerned about the subsidized beef which is coming into Canada. The Australians feel that it will drop the price of their exports to Canada. The Australians have a very important stake in their beef exports to Canada. They are upset. In fact, I am told that Australia had offered—if the Canadian Government had summoned up the courage and gone to GATT to fight the issue rather than being a pussy-cat and backing down to the EEC—to assist Canada and fight the issue at the GATT tribunal. It is a matter of great concern. I hope the Government will not sell out the beef producers of Canada.

Mr. Stewart McInnes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with the Hon. Member that the matter of beef imports from EEC countries is one of great concern to Canadians. It is because of that that the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) has been giving a great deal of attention to that issue. He has also been giving attention to a corresponding issue; that of the threat which has been made by the EEC to impose substantial quotas or tariffs on other sectors of our agricultural community—that group which intends to export to the EEC community. Both sides of the question must be taken into consideration, and that has been done.

I am happy to report that a tentative agreement has been reached with negotiators representing the European Economic Community and that the agreement has been secured. Only outstanding at this time is the ratification and formal approval by the Council of EEC Ministers. It is anticipated that that will come within a reasonable length of time.

• (1810)

It is necessary for the Minister to be sensitive to and have regard for the interests of the beef industry, which has suffered unduly because of the subsidized beef imports from the EEC. We are very much supportive of their position, and indeed the Minister has said so in the House on a number of occasions, especially on April 29 and May 14. However, the prolonged negotiations have now concluded and we hope to be able to make a more formal as well as full and final report in the very near future.

Mr. Dick: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I was just wondering whether, with the consent of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp), we might reverse the order of appearance in the Adjournment Debate. He might be able to get a more full answer that way.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): That is agreeable.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—MARITIME COMMAND—RESTORATION OF NAVY BLUE UNIFORMS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, in November, 1984, I received confirmation in the House of Commons from the then Minister of National Defence that the Government intended to take action to restore navy blue uniforms to Canada's Navy, and to accomplish this change in time for the celebration of the Canadian Navy's seventy-fifth anniversary, the major events of which will occur toward the end of June or early in July. I hope the Minister's representative, in commenting on this matter, will bring us up to date on the Government's and the Minister's plan for implementing the change to navy blue uniforms in Maritime Command, and also other changes in uniform which are contemplated by the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen). But I come here with what I believe will be a more important message. Let me begin by reviewing very briefly my involvement in the campaign to have navy blue uniforms restored to Canada's Navy.

Early in 1983 I became aware of the desire on the part of many members of Maritime Command, Canada's Navy, to again wear a navy blue uniform. I brought the matter to the attention of the House of Commons early in 1983. Then in July of 1983 Vice Admiral James Fulton, when he turned over command of Maritime Command, indicated in that ceremony that he, as a member of Canada's Navy, desired a restoration of navy blue. In a ceremony which was attended by literally thousands of people at CFB Halifax, he said that he would like all people present there to know that those in the Navy would like to be dressed in blue and look like sailors.

I review that situation by way of saying that quite often a Member of Parliament who hears a message from a constituent, and from an important constituent such as Vice Admiral Fulton, representing as he did the personnel of Maritime Command, is prepared to take action. I think we who were interested were effective in bringing before the House of Commons that desire for change. Let me say very quickly, because I heard the remarks today in the House of Commons by the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), who deplored the Government's action in bringing about a change of uniform for Canada's Armed Forces, even though that appears to be the overwhelming desire of the personnel in Canada's Navy, that we, and I hope I speak for all Members of the Progressive Conservative Party, want to react to the desires and needs of the personnel of Canada's forces.

We cannot deliver all that they might desire in the way of equipment and facilities, but we can at least recognize those needs that we can fulfil. It was in response to that kind of request from those personnel that I think our Government acted to restore the navy blue uniform to Maritime Command and to consider other uniform changes.

● (1815)

This is relevant today in the House of Commons because the same person, now retired from the Canadian Armed Forces, Vice-Admiral Fulton, has made the suggestion that the Navy must make its voice heard in Ottawa. I want to tell him and all people interested in the Canadian Armed Forces that that is exactly the case. The Canadian Forces in all three commands must make their needs known to parliamentarians and public officials. They must get the message to us so that we, in turn, can get the message to the public that the Canadian Armed Forces has to be a developing institution. It cannot stand stagnant and let the world go by.

We must all take Admiral Fulton's message to heart, particularly those of us in the Progressive Conservative Party who want to support the Canadian Armed Forces. I draw a distinction between our own position and the position of the socialists in the New Democratic Party who would have us withdraw from organizations such as NATO. They would have us cut back on National Defence expenditures and destroy the spirit and capacity of our Armed Forces as though it were not part and parcel of the Canadian fabric, the Canadian nation, and the national way of life.

Admiral Fulton must convince his own colleagues in the Armed Forces, and those who have retired from the Armed Forces, that there is a need for public education. The Leader of the New Democratic Party compares National Defence expenditures to other kinds of social programs and claims that National Defence expenditures adversely affect social programs. We cannot allow such an erroneous message to go to the public. We must fight for attention for the Canadian Armed Forces. The role of those involved in the Canadian Armed Forces in this exercise is of vital importance.

I want to say to Admiral Fulton, through the medium of the House of Commons, that his message is heard. It is recognized that in the national interest we must bring to the attention of all Canadians the need for improvement in our Canadian Forces. It is part of our sovereignty and way of life. It has been since the beginning of Canada. With our conscious attention to the needs of the Canadian Armed Forces, it will continue to be part of our national life.

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to respond to the Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) on behalf of the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen). I am able to stand and give this response today in good part because of the efforts over many years of the Member for Halifax West. So often in the House of Commons we start with an idea, bring it forward, and then have to wait and wait for its fruition. The Member's patience and hard work has been rewarded.

I can understand that he has exerted pressure for a distinctive blue uniform for the Maritime Command. He can realize that this is only one small part of the Government's decision to provide new, distinctive uniforms for all three elements. I am sure the Maritime Command on the East Coast is pleased, as it is on the West Coast. As east meets west across the country, we will find a whole new sense of pride and increased morale in our Armed Forces.

It would be remiss of me not to mention specifically the Hon. Member for Cumberland-Colchester (Mr. Coates). This Member came to power in Canada with a very firm decision and a strong sense of connection with the Navy from his own home area. He recognized that morale is all important in the initial stages of the rebuilding in which the Government is currently involved. I want to pay credit to the former Minister of National Defence today.

Keeping in mind the seventy-fifth anniversary of Maritime Command, for which the main celebrations will begin in late June and early July of this year, I am pleased to inform the Member that new uniforms will be available in appropriate numbers when the first public tatoo is presented on June 27. Indeed, we hope that the same situation will prevail for all three services. This is what we are aiming for. Accordingly, 50 per cent of the change-over will be completed by the fall of 1986. Specifically, by July 1 this summer, Naval will be in 750 winter uniforms and 500 summer uniforms. Land will have 750 winter uniforms and 400 summer uniforms. Air will have 750 winter uniforms and 400 summer uniforms.

● (1820)

That very tight target is in fact being met and Canadians will have their first view this summer. I am sure the Member for Halifax West will be standing at that tatoo with a very special sense of pride as he will know that his efforts have resulted in the Armed Forces marching in different uniforms.

In closing, let me stress that this is just the beginning. It is a symbol of better things to come. We have had North Warning, low level defence, new frigates and a communications system. A major policy review is under way with respect to manpower and the regulars and reserves. In spite of the economic conditions, we are maintaining our commitment to the Armed Forces, and this move is symbolic of that particular concern.

VISIBLE MINORITIES—INTERNMENT OF JAPANESE CANADIANS DURING WORLD WAR II—COMPENSATION INQUIRY. (B) GOVERNMENT ACTION. (C) DEADLINE INQUIRY

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, almost four months have passed since I raised questions in the House regarding the Government's plans to redress the injustice done to Japanese Canadians during the Second World War. At the time there was a real sense of anxiety about the possibility that the Government might act unilaterally to impose what it saw as a settlement on the Japanese Canadian community, not matter what they thought. Expectations of negotiation were raised while at the same time deadlines were suddenly imposed and unilateral action threatened. I raised questions about that and the need to achieve an agreement, as well as the possibility of early deadlines being used to cut negotiations short.

The months that have passed since then give us reason to bring this issue into focus for the nation and reveal the extent to which the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Murta) has failed the Government, his leader and the Canadian nation. It has been a little over eight months since the Minister took office. In the first weeks of May, we heard some strange remarks from the Minister. On the one hand, in a radio interview on May 5, he declared that when he took office and found the slogan, "Celebrate our Differences" being used in his directorate, he scrapped that right off.

Inevitably, when he convened the Multicultural Conference in Winnipeg on May 14, that kind of suggestion forced him to deny that he was in fact thinking of Canada in melting pot terms. He said, "This country is never going to be a melting pot. I don't think Canadians want Canada to be a melting pot".

When he held a press conference to wrap up proceedings after this conference, he suggested that the fight against racism falls outside the jurisdiction of his Department. He said that although his Department is concerned about racism, it "really falls outside our jurisdiction". His concern would be to sensitize Canadians against racial intolerance.

Inevitably, that kind of statement led to questions in the House. Just this past Thursday, in response to questions in the House, the Minister stated:

—I and the multicultural Department have a major responsibility for the area of race relations in Canada. If you take the very narrow definition, in terms of legislation it falls in our area. We have a major thrust in terms of fighting racism at every level of society.

This evidence of indecisiveness and lack of clear leadership is nowhere more clear than in the matter of the Japanese Canadians. I call upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to very carefully consider the current situation. If the need for leadership is not obvious, surely the Prime Minister's pledge to address this issue makes its attention urgent.

● (1825)

What we have seen over the past month, after expectations of negotiation had been clearly raised, was a press release under the heading of the multiculturalism directorate. It clearly referred to a negotiation process, the process of negotiation. What we found in January was a refusal on the part of the Minister and his officials to negotiate with the Japanese Canadians. We saw the attempt to impose deadlines to arrive at an apology and a redress formula. We saw a resolution for apology being presented to House Leaders that was not the final resolution that had been discussed in these non-negotiations. We saw a refusal on the part of the Minister to consider compensation, either individually or corporately for the Japanese Canadians. We saw a rejection of any action on the War Measures Act, on criminal charges and other concerns which the Japanese Canadians have had in years past. A variety of those items were not considered.

The Japanese Canadian community, which has been clarifying its own mind on these matters, has in the last week felt driven to undertake a consideration of the costs of the losses suffered during the 1940s. This is being done by the firm of Price Waterhouse. The process presumably will be at the expense of Japanese Canadians themselves in order to clarify their needs. The Toronto Star pointed out in the last days that the Prime Minister said last year that Japanese Canadians need assurance that:

—this kind of heinous action will never again take place in Canada and, if it does, that we will have the nerve and the courage to stand up and apologize for it and deal with it honourably.

The Prime Minister recognized they, the Japanese Canadians, were not looking for overwhelming compensation, but symbolism and reassurance. He said:

—I feel very strongly that Canadian citizens whose rights were abused and violated and trampled upon indeed should be compensated.

That very clear statement has not been acted upon by the Minister of State for Multiculturalism and the honour of the nation which has been demanding redress action for months and months continues to wait. How long is this charade to go on?

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Government views this matter as a moral issue, not an economic issue. This has been stated in a letter addressed to the Government House Leaders of the two Opposition Parties sent to them on January 28, 1985, outlining what the Government is proposing and seeking the views of the two Opposition House Leaders. As yet the Government has not heard from the two Opposition House Leaders and has not been able to go ahead.

The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp) indicated that he was worried at the initial stage that this matter would be forged ahead unilaterally. Obviously his initial concerns were wrong and his present concern is wrong. It has not been forged ahead unilaterally. It has never been threatened that it would go ahead unilaterally.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): That is wrong.

Mr. Dick: There has not been any agreement, Mr. Speaker. That is the reason the matter has not gone ahead. Before the Hon. Member was suggesting that there should not be artificial deadlines to bring it to conclusion, but he is now asking in his statement this evening to bring the matter to a conclusion. That in itself is a contradiction. I would suggest these matters continue in discussion. Hopefully all Parties will find a consensus to allow this matter to be resolved. On Wednesday, May 15, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism met with Mr. Miki. They had amicable discussions at that time. At that time they agreed that an apology was necessary. Discussion at the present time centre around what appropriate redress, if any, there should be.

Compensation was not originally considered as the appropriate word and we have now heard various descriptions of what compensation may be, which defies any definition which is precise. We do not want this matter to go into an auction. The Government wants the matter to be dealt with as a moral issue and to give some emphasis to the people who have suffered and to the Japanese Canadian community that matters of this type will not happen again in Canada.

Other than that, I would suggest that the Hon. Member should read the letter dated January 28, 1985 and perhaps encourage his House Leader and the House Leader of the Official Opposition to respond to the letter of the Government House Leader.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, May 22, 1985

The House met at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

THE BUDGET

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, tomorrow is an important day, for that is when we will find out the true intentions of this Conservative Government. We will see whether the Conservative Government lives up to its election promises and whether its consultations were nothing more than make-believe. Tomorrow we will find out whether the Government pays more attention to financiers than to ordinary Canadians, middle- and low-income earners. Tomorrow we will find out whether Canadian men and women enjoy a sunny or cloudy day. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will find out whether the Government intends to redress its injustice towards needy senior citizens aged 60 to 64, and whether it will make all needy Canadians living alone eligible for the spouse's allowance. Tomorrow we will find out whether the Government intends to correct the unfair situation it created by slashing $17 million off the residential renovation and rehabilitation program in Quebec. Tomorrow we will find out whether the Conservative Government will slap a tax on gasoline to offset losses incurred through tax incentives to the oil multinationals. Tomorrow we will find out whether families with dependents will be penalized, particularly middle-income families.

Mr. Speaker, I dare hope—

Mr. Speaker: I must inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo).

* * *

[English]

SPORTS

PRINCE ALBERT RAIDERS WIN JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, the Prince Albert Raiders are the best junior hockey players in Canada. They proved it last Saturday by winning the Memorial Cup.

The forestry capital of Canada, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, produces pulp, lumber, and grain. Prince Albert also produces Prime Ministers and championship hockey teams.

After winning four Centennial Cup Tier II National Junior Championships, the Prince Albert Raiders moved up to major junior hockey in the Western Hockey League just three years ago. Last Saturday, in Drummondville, Quebec, Prince Albert defeated the Shawinigan Cataractes to win the Memorial Cup, the highest award for junior hockey in Canada.

Coach Terry Simpson of the Raiders distinguished himself world-wide five months ago when he coached the Canadian team to the World Junior Hockey Championship in Helsinki, Finland.

Coach Simpson and the Prince Albert Raiders have produced, and will continue to produce, outstanding citizens through their hockey program. Prince Albert is proud of the Raiders' accomplishment and their contributions as ambassadors to the world.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

KIWANIS SUPPORT FOR PROTECTION OF ENVIRONMENT

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, environmental concerns are very much on the minds of all Canadians, and the people of my riding are no exception. There is an increasing awareness that all pollution, wherever found, must be stopped, and that preservation and enhancement of our environment must become a major focus of government and the private sector.

On this occasion I would like to bring to the attention of the House a resolution forwarded to me by the Kiwanis Club of Stamford, which is located in my riding of Niagara Falls. The Kiwanis Club of Stamford, along with other citizens in my riding, are concerned and recognize the current serious state of our environmental situation. Their resolution states that they fully support the protection of our environment and, in particular, they encourage public education and legislation that provide for cleaner air, cleaner water, and proper conservation of land and vegetation. I have assured them that I will do everything to promote that cause, and I know that I have the support of all Members of Parliament in this endeavour.

S.O. 21

THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, since Confederation, the Province of British Columbia has felt distant from the political, economic, and social forces of Central Canada. The geographic distance between British Columbia and Ottawa is approximately 4,000 kilometres, yet the psychological distance is nearer to 10,000.

The previous Prime Minister did very little to reduce this sense of distance and alienation. Indeed, many of his own Party members regularly asked him not to visit British Columbia, for his presence was not always seen as a positive one for the Liberal Party in that part of Canada.

However, it would appear that the new Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) must be receiving similar advice. Although near nine months have passed since the Prime Minister took office, he has not yet found time to visit the people of British Columbia.

Considering the isolation and alienation British Columbians have experienced over the years, and the extremely difficult economic times as reflected in the excessively high unemployment rates and numbers, the Prime Minister's failure to visit, meet, and consult with the People of British Columbia is totally unacceptable.

During the last election campaign the Prime Minister said that the people of British Columbia were a priority for his Government. But his own actions and behaviour appear to indicate otherwise.

* * *

NATIONAL SOIL CONSERVATION WEEK

IMPORTANCE OF HALTING LAND DEGRADATION

Mr. Bill Gottselig (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, as this is National Soil Conservation Week I would like to address the very important issue of soil degradation. Soil degradation is one of the most vital concerns facing Canadian agriculture today. It is so vital that the attention of industry, universities, and Governments of all levels, is focused on it.

Soil and water conservation initiatives should be a priority item for all levels of government. We must recognize Canada's soil for what it is, the very foundation of our national wealth. We must maintain the productivity of our land, as well as the quality of our water, to sustain growth and prosperity for future generations.

With grain stocks at their lowest level in 40 years, the time to take a decisive action is now. I call on all levels of government to develop an effective strategy to halt and reverse the long term effect of land degradation, recognizing the importance of the primary producer in this plan.

THE ADMINISTRATION

NOMINATION TO CN RAIL BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Tories need to get their act together on patronage. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) announced the nomination of twice defeated Tory candidate in Nipissing, Marie Marchand, of North Bay, to the board of directors of CN Rail. The Minister will know that this nomination has been so unpopular with North Bay Tories that the local people have written letters of protest to the Government. Furthermore, the nomination prompted the Tory Member for Nipissing (Mr. Mantha) to say about the nominee: "If you can't say something nice about somebody, you shouldn't say anything at all."

When asked about her experience in railways, Mrs Marchand said that there is more to this than only patronage. After all, she said, she lives in North Bay—a railroad town. She further added to the newspaper that her grandfather was a well known railroader in the Maritimes. If that does not make someone qualified, what does? Are these the qualifications which the Minister used as a basis to appoint this person? Or is it the fact that she was a defeated Tory candidate? In order to find out the answer we will have to wait until Friday morning to see who will get the PAW award this week.

* * *

● (1410)

FORESTRY

SIGNING OF AGREEMENT WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, forestry agreements mean jobs. Energy agreements mean jobs. Together they mean more jobs and economic health for the people of British Columbia. That is what this Government has been doing for the people of British Columbia.

This Saturday in Vancouver our Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) will sign a $300 million forestry agreement with British Columbia, an agreement which has been lauded by industry and labour alike. What does this landmark agreement mean? Renewed forests, replanting of 600,000 hectares, intensive silviculture, and jobs, 15,000 person-years of employment. This is only part of the $575 million ERDA-IRDP agreement between our government and the Province of British Columbia which will herald a new era of economic activity for our westernmost province.

That is not all. When the Energy Minister negotiated the Western Energy Accord a few months ago, we knew it was good news for British Columbia. Now we have solid proof. Most recently three energy companies announced their application to build a $600 million fertilizer plant on Annacis Island in Delta. The decision to proceed with this project was based on the efforts of the B.C. Government, but particularly, by the progressive policies of this Government to dismantle the heinous national energy—

Mr. Speaker: I must advise the Member that her time has expired.

* * *

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

USE OF CARDBOARD IMAGES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, parliamentarians were dismayed to see in yesterday's Ottawa Citizen that a student entrepreneur is using a life-size cardboard image of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for "photo opportunities". Right thinking Canadians will be quick to condemn this trend toward artificiality in politics, although they will, of course, acknowledge the poetic justice in that it is the Prime Minister whose presence is being so artfully simulated.

Several possible remedies for this fraudulent practice suggest themselves. Perhaps the presidential stance, or some outstanding physical characteristics, might be patented, copyrighted, or registered as a trademark to prevent counterfeiting.

In any case measures must be taken to nip this practice in the bud before it becomes too widespread. Consider the dangers. While most Canadians can probably tell the difference between the Prime Minister and a cardboard likeness, imagine the difficulties they would have if one-dimensional replicas of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) were to start springing up around the country. Dissension and dismay would spread as citizens argued over who had seen the real Member for Yukon and whether or not his lips moved.

In short, this practice could destroy by excessive exposure the images that the Government has worked so diligently to build up. It is a public menace, and must be stopped.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

CALL FOR PARLIAMENTARY REVIEW OF OPERATIONS

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, it has been said before, but it bears repeating. Parliament must review the operations of the Canada Post Corporation in the interests of all Canadians. In 1981 Canada Post accepted a challenge from the Parliament of Canada to improve the postal service. Four years later it is clear that Canada Post has failed to respond adequately to its statutory mandate.

There is a long litany of complaints, and no real evidence of improvement: $425,000 and more was spent on consulting fees to monitor transmission times for letters; private couriers were engaged to deliver important post office mail; thousands of dollars were wasted on full page ads telling Canadians how to use the mail. The real offence against the Canadian public is the zero growth policy which destroys the right of new Canadian households to receive postal service.

Canada Post has the statutory monopoly on postal services in Canada. It must serve all Canadians, whatever the cost. It is time for a parliamentary review of all aspects of the operations of Canada's postal service.

* * *

THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS

EQUALITY PROVISIONS—VIEWS OF HAMILTON RESIDENTS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, when the Government was elected it promised that women would have equal opportunity. It promised that women would have a chance to compete equally in the market-place. It promised that equal pay for work of equal value would be a benchmark—

Some Hon. Members: Louder. Louder.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. All Members are entitled to make their statements and be heard, at least by the Speaker. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

• (1415)

Ms. Copps: In fact not only is the Government not backing its promises to women, to aggravate the situation further it is ignoring the city of Hamilton.

When I heard that the equality committee was travelling across the country to hear what women had to say about the equality clauses in the Constitution, I was shocked to discover that, after only nine days of notice, the Minister decided that Hamilton was not an important enough place because the response had not been great enough. If the mountain will not go to Mohammed, Mohammed will come to the mountain. I invite the constituents in my riding to come to Ottawa to let the Government know how the equality provisions are as important to the people of Hamilton as they are to the people of Baie Comeau, and that they want to be heard in Hamilton on this very important issue.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ADMINISTRATION

REFERENCES TO PREVIOUS ADMINISTRATION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I do not see too many targets over there today. However, in the absence of the Minister of Finance, the Prime Minister, and the Deputy Prime Minister, I will direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. Everyone in the House realizes that tomorrow is a day long awaited by Canadians, in fact eight months. There are great expectations. Of course there is some fear as well. I want to ensure the Minister of Finance, through the Acting Prime Minister, that we on this side of the House wish him well as he puts on his new shoes tomorrow and delivers his Budget to the House of Commons and to Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Johnston: With your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to add that to my very limited time.

The Minister of Finance has been derailed often enough in the last eight months, and we want to see him get back on track. Would the Acting Prime Minister, using his good offices, discuss with the Minister of Finance a problem which has come to bore us as Canadians, namely, the dragging out at every opportunity of all the tired and shop-worn complaints about the previous administration, based upon a distorted Tory view of history?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: It is their Government; it is their agenda; no more excuses. Will the Acting Prime Minister assure us that he will convey that message to the Minister of Finance, get rid of those shop-worn complaints and get on with the job? We want to look to the future, not to a distorted view of the past.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to the Hon. Member that the best thing he can do between now and tomorrow is hold his breath.

* * *

FINANCE

THRUST OF FORTHCOMING BUDGET—TABLING OF STUDY PAPERS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, Canadians have been holding their breath for over eight months.

[Translation]

Now, if I must direct my question to the Minister of Finance, that is—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With great respect to the Hon. Member, I cannot hear his question because of the noise in the House, and it is not coming from that Hon. Member's Party. May I hear the question, please?

[Translation]

Mr. Johnston: It is a fair ruling and much appreciated.

The Minister has said that his Budget will be tough and fair, and it is to be hoped, Mr. Speaker, that it will at least be intelligent, not the pitiful document produced on November 8, when the Minister was obliged to review a whole set of ill-conceived cut-backs. Could he and could she give the House the assurance that an impact study of the Budget has been made with respect to employment, research, inflation, the regions and the environment, and that the study will be tabled here in the House with the Budget?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague, the Minister of Finance, will be intelligent, as always, in addition to tough and fair.

EFFECT OF POSSIBLE BUDGETARY CUTS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I wish the Minister of Finance were not in hiding today and had not sent forth his emissary, the Minister of State for Finance, who is hardly forthcoming.

In any event, in my last supplementary, Mr. Speaker, let me point out to you something you know well. The Liberal Party and the people of Canada look to this Budget above all to create jobs, not just for tax lawyers and accountants, not just for the people on Bay Street, and I know you agree with this approach. Will the Minister of Finance, through the Minister of State for Finance, agree to table in the House of Commons, which he refused to do the last time, those studies of the Department of Finance which show the job loss in all sectors and all regions arising from the cuts which the Prime Minister assured us would be in the Budget?

● (1420)

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the expelling of wind in the House today is really quite extraordinary. Since the economic agenda there have been over 200,000 jobs created in this country, and I can only reiterate: intelligent, tough, and fair.

* * *

ENERGY

WESTERN ACCORD—EFFECT ON TAXPAYERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The Western Accord will reduce federal government revenues by over $1 billion this year alone. Since the Prime Minister has told us that the cost of that Accord must be borne equally across the country, will the Minister tell us how it will be shared among Canadians?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, as I have told this House, there is nothing in the Western Accord which would lead to the results indicated by the Hon. Member. His comments are sheer speculation.

MULTINATIONAL OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Government is saying the Budget is going to be tough but fair. It is going to be fair to the multinationals and tough on the consumers? Three of the multinationals are saying that further spending and job creation will depend on future world prices for oil and even more tax concessions. Will the Minister tell us if she is going to give further monies to the multinationals?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I fail to understand the basis for the Hon. Member's question. A number of projects have been announced which have created jobs since the Western Accord was signed. I have at least $15 billion worth of work and thousands of jobs in projects which are on my desk and which have been announced since the Western Accord was signed.

I am sorry that the Hon. Members opposite are indifferent to the information I have to offer, and that they are unable to listen to me talk about jobs for Canadians. Possibly they feel that their questions do not deserve an answer.

EFFECT OF ACCORD ON CONSUMERS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy and I hope she will be kind enough to give me an answer. The Independent Petroleum Association has said that, as a result of the Western Accord, $1.2 billion will go to the oil companies through deregulation of oil. The Financial Post has said if you add in the PGRT, a tax which the Government is forgoing, it amounts to about $9 billion in government revenues to the oil companies over five years. Does the Minister still stand by her claim that this $9 billion shortfall in government revenue will not be taken out of the pockets of ordinary Canadian consumers?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, again the figures used by the Hon. Member are clearly speculative. The consumer is the major beneficiary of the Western Accord because, through deregulation, we are going to a system where competition will rule in the market-place, rather than administered prices. Consumers have more clout in a competitive system than they have in a regulated system.

MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, those were not my figures; they were from IPAC and The Financial Post.

Is the Minister aware that the Minister of Finance has written to me personally—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: Wait until you hear what the letter says. He has said that tax changes are contemplated to pay for the shortfall as a result of the Western Accord. Is the Minister aware of that?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Pardon, Pat?

• (1425)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that—

Mr. Broadbent: What are you saying, Pat?

Mr. Speaker: Fair is fair. I would like to be able to hear the Minister's answer as well. Perhaps we could have some quiet in the Chamber.

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the Hon. Member could possibly table that letter.

INTERPRETATION OF LETTER

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to take the Minister up on her invitation to table this letter, but I would like to ask a further question. In the letter which was written under the Freedom of Information Act, in reply to my question about the Government's forecasts for getting back its revenue as a result of giving away the PGRT, the Minister of Finance cited Clause 18(3). I would like the Minister to comment on what he said. He said that there would be a "contemplated change in tariff rates, taxes, duties or other revenue sources". Is there any other interpretation that Canadian consumers can put on this letter and on the present deficit situation other than that the Government has given away $9 billion to the oil companies and will take the money back by taxing the Canadian consumers?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, again I cannot comment on a phrase from a letter which I have not seen. I can say that the speculation contained in the Hon. Member's question does not deserve an answer.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

MYSTL MANAGEMENT INC.—ROLE OF DEPUTY MINISTERS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister and concerns the Mystl Management case. There is no question that the four civil servants in question breached Treasury Board conflict of interest guidelines and for that they must be seriously disciplined. What is troubling is the fact that these four civil servants advised their Assistant Deputy Ministers and/or Deputy Ministers in advance of their intentions, and those Assistant Deputy Ministers or Deputy Ministers failed to take any action to stop the formation of this proposed company. Would the Acting Prime Minister not agree that, by failing to take action, the Assistant Deputy Ministers and/or Deputy Ministers displayed extremely poor judgment and for that reason should be seriously disciplined for their inaction?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can respond in my capacity as Acting President of the Treasury Board. The Hon. Member's question points out precisely what I cautioned him against yesterday, and that is his demanding that something be done before he gets the facts. He has asked that all of these people be fired, and has now made serious allegations about Deputy Ministers and Assistant Deputy Ministers. While these individuals did in fact talk to their superiors, it is not the case that in all instances they talked to Deputy Ministers or Assistant Deputy Ministers. To the best of my knowledge, in no instance was a Deputy Minister aware of this matter.

COMMUNICATION WITH ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have the facts. I have a confidential memo that was sent from Mr. Spinks, the president of Mystl Management, to the Assistant Deputy Minister of the Department of Transport. This confidential letter describes the business, and goes on to say:

> While I do not consider there is any conflict of interest in the activities which we will be undertaking, I wish to provide full disclosure of our proposed business and be seen to operate in the full spirit of the policy.

In view of the fact that this secret memorandum was sent to the Assistant Deputy Minister on April 3 and was received on April 11, will the Minister of Transport not agree that by failing to take action, and by failing to tell these individuals that what they were about to do was wrong, this particular Assistant Deputy Minister displayed extremely poor judgment and, accordingly, should be seriously disciplined?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the information I have is that the ADM of Finance did in fact speak verbally to Mr. Spinks and suggested that it would be unwise for him to engage in the kind of activity in which he had intended to engage, and that it would be perceived as a conflict of interest. The ADM of Finance awaited further contact from Mr. Spinks but further contact was not forthcoming. However, as we indicated yesterday, this whole matter is being investigated internally by the Director of Staff Relations. All aspects of this matter will be looked into, including the actions of the ADM, the Deputy Minister, and all other people involved. The facts will be made available in the next two or three days. It would probably be in the best interests of all to stop making these innuendoes and charges, and wait until the facts are brought before the House.

• (1430)

ENERGY

WESTERN ACCORD—EFFECT ON GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Given the answer which my colleague from Vancouver-Kingsway received from the Minister of Finance with regard to the possibility of a tax increase in order to recover the revenues lost to the Government as a result of the Western Accord and other measures, would it be fair to suggest to the motoring public of Canada today that they should fill their gas tanks before the Budget comes down?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members know that the subject matter which they have raised is budgetary and, therefore, is sheer speculation. For the record of the House I would like to point out that the famous letter which Mr. Waddell mentioned, from Michael Wilson, the Minister of Finance, simply deals with the process of accessing information under the Access to Information Act, and certainly does not deal with the matters which have been raised.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the Minister meant the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway, for the record.

CONTENTS OF MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the answer which was given by the Minister, I would like to ask her whether she denies that in the letter which was sent to my colleague from the Minister of Finance it clearly stated that the reason why my colleague could not receive the information which he sought was the following:

> 18. The head of a government institution may refuse to disclose any record requested under this Act that contains—
>
> (d)(iii) a contemplated change in tariff rates, taxes, duties or any other revenue source,

Does that not mean it is because there is a tax increase pending?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): No, Mr. Speaker.

* * *

PUBLIC SERVICE

MYSTL MANAGEMENT INC.—MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport and it concerns the Mystl Management issue. I want to remind the Minister that it was the President of the Treasury Board who admitted yesterday that the guidelines had been broken, not opposition Members in the House, and he should not accuse my colleagues of saying so.

Yesterday, when asked by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe, when the Minister had been informed of the affair and by whom, the Minister replied that his Deputy Minister had told him, but he neglected to tell the House when exactly he found out about the issue. Would the Minister now tell the House who told him, exactly when he found out and when his Deputy Minister found out about this whole affair?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I sincerely apologize for not giving the information yesterday. I inadvertently omitted to do so.

I was informed about the incident late on Friday night at my home in Vegreville. I was given further details on Saturday, and apprised myself fully of the details yesterday. I believe the Deputy was first advised on the sixteenth day of May.

REQUEST FOR INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, as Deputy Ministers and ADMs are ultimately responsible to their Ministers, I would like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister, reminding him that the four Ministers in question must be taken to task in the matter. Will the Acting Prime Minister immediately order an independent and external investigation of the whole affair, such investigation to deal with the conduct and negligence not only of the ADMs and the Deputy Ministers, but as well of the four Cabinet Ministers who are involved?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I am always grateful for the Hon. Member's suggestions, which I know will be taken as seriously as they were given.

Mr. Boudria: What about the investigation?

Mr. Beatty: I do not know whether the Hon. Member wants an answer or not, but I am quite anxious to give him one.

I think at the outset it would be appropriate if he would ask his colleague who sits next to him to tender his evidence that, in all cases, Deputy Ministers and Assistant Deputy Ministers knew about this. Or is his evidence the one letter to one Assistant Deputy Minister, which I acknowledge? But the allegation which was made was that in all cases Deputy Ministers or Assistant Deputy Ministers knew. That highlights exactly what I was warning about yesterday. When the Hon. Member makes wild allegations and demands—

Mr. Nunziata: You are responsible.

Mr. Beatty: Again they try to shout me down when I give information. When the Hon. Member demands that people be fired first and tries to get information afterward, that is a denial of basic justice. Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the Hon. Member finished?

Mr. Beatty: No, Mr. Speaker. I would like to finish if I could, because I think the House is entitled to answers on this subject and I am anxious to give them.

What I would ask from the Opposition is that the basic principles of natural justice be allowed. Surely in a country such as Canada even public servants are entitled to simple justice.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, I communicated to the House that an investigation is under way at the present time—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: Mr. Speaker, if I could have order I could indicate to the House that—

Mr. Speaker: Clearly the answer is taking an unusual length of time.

* * *

FINANCE

EFFECT OF POSSIBLE TAX INCREASE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance who will be well aware of the struggling state of small businesses in Canada and the crisis in the farm community. In her own family she is well aware of the plight which young people face today in finding a job in the shrinking job market.

Would she not acknowledge, at this very critical time in the economy of Canada, that even a 1 per cent increase in tax would be considered especially harsh, tough, and essentially unfair?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, let me just add something to the information which I have already given to the House. The Budget will not only be tough and fair, it will be appropriate.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

POSSIBLE EFFECT ON SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of State for Small Businesses. I will try a more direct question. The Minister has indicated on a number of occasions that jobs in Canada would be created by that sector. He knows how critical it is. I would like to ask him the same question. Would he not agree that a 1 per cent increase in tax on small businesses today would be considered especially tough and certainly unfair to impose at this time—

Mr. Speaker: I indicated to the Member yesterday that a hypothetical question which is simply repeated is not appropriate. I must do the same thing today. The Hon. Member is simply repeating the same question.

* * *

[Translation]

SMALL BUSINESS

PERCEPTION OF SALES TAX

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Small Businesses). Small businesses spend a lot of time and effort collecting sales tax on behalf of the Federal Government. Often they are obliged to pay this tax to the Government between 45 and 60 days before receiving the money from their customers. Is the Minister of State (Small Businesses) prepared to give this service the recognition it deserves and to recommend some manner of fair compensation for the businesses that collect the tax?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member's question is very apt. We all know that small businesses must collect this tax. It is certainly not new and was introduced a number of years ago. However, if the Hon. Member is asking us to review the matter, I am willing to do so.

PAYMENT OF SALES TAX TO GOVERNMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard-Anjou): Mr. Speaker, it is a well-known fact that small businesses are an excellent source of job creation, provided they have sufficient liquid assets. Does it not seem unfair to the Minister that a small business should be forced to lend to the Federal Government, without interest, for a period of 60 days or more? Does the Minister think it would be fair to allow 60 days' grace for payment of the federal sales tax, and if he does, what does he intend to do?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I think the answer I just gave applies here. If the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard-Anjou is asking the Government to review the tax refund issue and the deadline, which is now 30 days, I think his request can be appropriately considered, whether the Hon. Member is asking for 30, 60 or 90 days. I am not saying what the answer will be, but I am prepared to look into the matter.

• (1440)

[English]

THE ECONOMY

CONSUMER DEMAND AND CONFIDENCE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The Minister is no doubt aware of the malaise and lack of confidence in Canada's manufacturing industry. Its output is down, its shipments are down and, most serious of all, its employment levels are down. It shows no willingness whatsoever to step up activity on its production lines and put people back to work until it sees more solid signs of increased demand from both consumers and business. Does the Minister not agree, given this situation, that continuing with deficit reduction and imposing even more cut-backs and tax increases on ordinary Canadians, will only serve to reduce consumer demand and confidence further, much as we have seen in British Columbia, and thus will defeat our efforts to put Canadians back to work?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that the Hon. Member, instead of having such a voice of despair, would have been encouraged by the falling interest rates which we are experiencing in Canada. Undoubtedly the Hon. Member has noted the number of jobs which have been created since September 4, which was a very momentous day in Canada.

Mr. Angus: Perhaps the people of Canada would have more confidence if there was a guarantee that those rates would not go back up again.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): The Minister will remember from last year's election campaign a quote from the Prime Minister as follows: "Clearly there can be no drastic reduction in the deficit until interest rates are lower and the country gets back to work. Massive cuts now would guarantee a recession". Would the Minister explain to this House, and to the people who elected him and his colleagues, why the Government is now doing a complete about face and bringing in deficit reduction policies which would guarantee a recession?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I only wish the Hon. Member had read his question before he asked it in the House, because the Prime Minister anticipated falling interest rates and made it clear that that is one way to help reduce our deficit.

HOUSING

SITUATION IN METROPOLITAN TORONTO

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for housing. The over-all apartment vacancy rate in the City of Scarborough and throughout Metropolitan Toronto is well below the national average and is becoming critical. In view of the report of the Metro Planning Board which claims that initiatives must be taken by all levels of government if adequate housing is to be assured in the future, what action does the Government of Canada plan to take to help the municipalities of Metro Toronto meet this challenge?

Ms. Copps: Cuts, cuts.

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I recognize the seriousness of the Hon. Member's question and share his concern. In the next two months we will be meeting again with the provincial housing Ministers.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McKnight: I hear from the Opposition that it does not want us to consult with the housing Ministers or the metropolitan housing authorities who have accepted, and will continue to accept, their part in providing housing for Canadians. We cannot provide housing singly. We have to do it in co-operation with the provinces and municipalities involved, and I look forward to assisting the people of Canada in that manner.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

IMPACT OF TOXIC CHEMICALS ON SEA-GULLS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Could the Minister tell the House why she insists on denying that her Department has a responsibility to assess the impact of toxic chemicals on sea-gulls as a way of anticipating the impact of toxic chemicals on human health?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I should think that the Hon. Member for Davenport has all the answers on that subject. He has been asking the same question in the House for the past six months and I have always given him the same answers.

[English]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET SCIENTISTS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, since the scientific community has repeatedly expressed concern about the cancellation of that monitoring program by the Minister, would she at least be so kind as to meet with the scientists who are raising their concern, listen to them, and perhaps reconsider her decision? Would the Minister be prepared to do that?

[Translation]

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I must repeat the same answer. The program has been reinstated at the Burlington centre and monitoring continues.

* * *

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

PUBLICATION OF DISCUSSION PAPER

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In the Economic and Fiscal Statement of November 8, 1984, under the heading "Unemployment Insurance", the Minister of Finance, on behalf of the Minister of Employment and Immigration, said:

> A discussion paper will be published shortly by the Minister of Employment and Immigration, followed by appropriate parliamentary review.

Can the Minister tell this House when we can expect this discussion paper on unemployment insurance?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to the economic statement of last November. The Minister of Finance stated at that time that there would be a review of the unemployment insurance fund. I can assure the Hon. Member that that will be undertaken shortly.

REQUEST FOR CONSULTATIONS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that in that Economic and Fiscal Statement the Minister of Finance said that the review would be "undertaken on an urgent basis", and in view of the fact that there is a lot of tough talk about what is going to be in the Budget with respect to unemployment insurance changes, can the Minister assure this House that no structural and important changes will be made to the Unemployment Insurance Act until she has consulted with ordinary Canadians about unemployment insurance benefits?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I wish that Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party would make up their minds about consultation. One day they are saying: "Don't consult with the Canadian people about foreign policy", and the next day they are saying: "Consult with the Canadian people about unemployment insurance".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: Obviously we want to consult with the Canadian people—

Ms. Jewett: You've had eight months.

Miss MacDonald: —and I can assure the Hon. member that that is indeed what we will be doing.

Mr. Rodriguez: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair allowed a supplementary question.

* * *

[Translation]

TRANSPORT

PCB SPILL IN CERTAIN REGIONS—GOVERNMENT INTENTIONS

Mr. Darryl L. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport and has to do with the PCB spill in Eastern Canada over the past weekend.

As the Minister knows, a truck from the Magdalen Islands spilled part of its load while travelling across New Brunswick and the Matapédia Valley.

I would like to ask the Minister what have been the consequences of this unfortunate incident for people in the area and what measures will his department take.

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, a Transport Canada inspector is investigating this particular incident. Samples are being evaluated and tested for PCBs by Environment Canada officials. The results of those tests will be made available this week. Until such time as the investigation is complete it is difficult to contemplate what action will be taken. However, I can advise the Hon. Member that the protective direction which was issued by myself last month was in fact received by Hydro Quebec, and any action with respect to prosecution or clean up will be decided next week.

* * *

ENERGY

SALE OF COME-BY-CHANCE REFINERY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It concerns the sale of the Come-By-Chance refinery in Newfoundland for which five bids have been received. A senior political adviser in the Prime Minister's Office is quoted as saying that Canadian businessmen in the Middle East are being quietly warned of negative repercussions for Canadian business in the Middle East if that refinery is sold to an Israeli-based concern. Will the Minister tell this House what criteria in fact will be used in determining who the successful bidder will be? And will she assure this House that Newfoundland economic concerns and conditions, as bad as they are, will be her primary criteria, not geopolitical concerns in the Middle East, in deciding who should be the successful bidder for that refinery?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the priority which we have given to Newfoundland I think is proven by the fact that we signed an Atlantic Accord with Newfoundland which will bring great economic benefits to the province, which the former Liberal administration failed to do.

In terms of the actual issue the Hon. Member raises, I can assure him that the nature of the bids are not being released at this time until they are reviewed by Petro-Canada.

• (1450)

REPORTED ESTABLISHMENT OF PROVINCIAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, if we do not start getting more serious answers to questions, we are going to have to insist on having a breathalyser installed at the door of the House of Commons for government Members.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

Mr. Tobin: My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Why don't you apologize?

Miss MacDonald: That is going too far.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the Hon. Member knows there is a level of comment that is inappropriate. The Hon. Member has a supplementary question.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Ms. Copps: Down boys.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member has a supplementary question.

Mr. Tobin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. A senior Minister of the Newfoundland Government has indicated in The Globe and Mail this morning that the Newfoundland Government has set up a special committee to meet with one of the five bidders and is considering, in his words, providing incentives for that bidder to reactivate the refinery in Newfoundland. Has the Minister received any communication whatsoever from the Government of Newfoundland requesting that a joint federal-provincial fund, or initiative, be established to assist in helping one particular bidder reactivate that refinery?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that the Government of Newfoundland has not made any such representation to us at this time. We are certainly not considering that possibility at this time.

* * *

FISHERIES

REPLACEMENT OF WHARFINGERS IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. I am wondering if he might share with us some more of the elements in his personal campaign of patronage. Would the Minister confirm in the House that he has released, or terminated, a number of wharfingers in Prince Edward Island without any cause or complaint whatsoever? That is a repeat of what has happened in New Brunswick. It is a repeat of the patronage situation that is occurring in Comox-Powell River. Could the Minister confirm to the House that he has done it again?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that wharfingers have been replaced in the provinces that the Hon. Member mentioned. I suggest that if the Hon. Member thinks there is any need to replace wharfingers in his own riding, I would be prepared to listen to him.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I, for one, am appalled that the Government is not prepared to provide any process of natural justice to people who are doing an excellent job. I would not be a part of that.

APPEAL PROCESS REQUESTED

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Minister guarantee the House that he will put in place some form of appeal through which these people can at least hear the complaints made against them. They should not be replaced on the basis of some vague innuendo made by a Member of Parliament who wants them replaced on the basis of their Party card.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, apparently the Hon. Member has no complaint with wharfingers in his own riding. As a consequence, I do not think there is any need to worry about a process in that particular part of the country.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

UNITED STATES GRAIN EXPORT PROMOTION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Last week the Secretary of Agriculture in the United States announced a $2 billion program of grain bonuses to promote export sales. This could have a very distorting and devastating impact on the price of grain in the world. It could perhaps even touch off a price war.

Can the Minister tell us whether the Government of Canada has protested this action by the Government of the United States? What action is the Government taking to protect the traditional markets of our grain producers and the Canadian Wheat Board?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture took the time and courtesy to inform me of this action late last week. There is no question that I expressed some concern. We expect to have further discussions in the very near future in relation to the issue. Due to the improved relations between our two countries which have developed since September 4, we can take some satisfaction from the fact that the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture indicated to me that he would do everything possible to ensure that we would not get caught in the cross-fire.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, it sounds to me like the Minister was more of a pussy-cat in his meeting with Secretary Block than someone really defending the interests of agriculture in this country.

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Minister talked about the alleged friendship of the Prime Minister and the President. In order to forestall the U.S. Department of Agriculture dumping its stored grain on to the international market, would the Prime Minister and the President be prepared to negotiate a new international grain agreement which would guarantee reasonable floor prices for grain and ensure the viability of grain producers in western Canada?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I would not slough off the fact that relations between the two countries have indeed improved. There is no question about that. I am sure that the agricultural industry in our country will benefit from that improved relationship. However, it is inappropriate for me to respond at this point in time as to exactly what discussions or negotiations may take place in the future between the Prime Minister and the President of the United States.

Oral Questions

TRADE

GATT NEGOTIATIONS ON EUROPEAN BEEF EXPORTS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of International Trade. Have the GATT negotiations been completed with regard to agricultural products?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I presume my hon. colleague is referring to the discussions we were having with the European Common Market on beef. I can advise that those discussions have been completed. The settlement has been initialed, but as required under the GATT procedure it must be ratified by both the European Community and Canada. We expect that that will happen within the next week. We will be in a position to disclose the terms of settlement at that time.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

BRAINWASHING EXPERIMENTS FUNDED BY CIA

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. During his weekend visit to Washington it was reported that the Minister had informal discussions with the Secretary of State of the United States concerning compensation for the nine Canadian victims of CIA-funded brain washing that was done in Montreal more than 25 years ago. Would the Minister tell the House why these discussions were held on an informal basis in private, as opposed to being part of the formal agenda of his meetings? More important, could he tell the House and the victims what progress was made in those talks?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the matter was raised in the private and informal part of my discussions with the U.S. Secretary of State precisely because I wanted to make it abundantly clear that this was a matter of very real concern to me personally as well as in my capacity as Secretary of State for External Affairs. It was not a matter of concern simply on the official level, but was very much a matter about which Canadians of all Parties had expressed concern. We have not yet received the kind of response that the Leader of the New Democratic Party and I are looking for. I hope the conversations I had on the weekend with Mr. Shultz will advance the interest shared by all Members of the House in getting adequate compensation for the people affected by the procedures he has described.

COMPENSATION FOR CANADIAN VICTIMS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the CIA has admitted publicly in the United States its responsibility for this abominable act. It has offered a mere $25,000 per victim, which is an insult to the Canadian victims as well as to Canada as a whole. Could the Minister tell the House what the Government plans to do next in order to obtain, at long last, just compensation for these Canadians?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, without associating myself with all of the language of the Leader of the New Democratic Party, some of which I think was excessive, I can certainly assure the House that the Government of Canada intends to continue, through every avenue that is open to it, to encourage the American authorities to respond with a higher level of compensation.

• (1500)

I cannot report more progress today, except that the matter has been raised personally, directly and forcefully by myself with the U.S. Secretary of State. I share the anxiety, and the determination, if I may say so, of the Leader of the New Democratic Party to achieve a higher level of compensation.

Mr. Speaker: One very short question.

* * *

[Translation]

PUBLIC SERVICE

JOB CLASSIFICATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question was meant for the President of the Treasury Board but, in his absence, I will direct it to the Acting Minister.

Last February 4, I asked a question of the Minister concerning job overclassification in the Public Service and, in light of the Prime Minister's election campaign commitment to make classification standards a negotiable issue, I would like to ask the Minister whether he can announce or promise today that classification will be negotiable in the near future.

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the Hon. Member. I do not have the answer to this question. Certainly I recognize that he is making a representation, and I will certainly ensure that it is brought to the attention of the President of the Treasury Board.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of one, presented by Hon. Members on Tuesday, May 21, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

The petition presented by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) does not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINTS OF ORDER

STATEMENT OF MR. DICK IN ADJOURNMENT DEBATE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Last evening during the Adjournment Debate, at page 4947 of Hansard, the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Dick) said:

> Mr. Speaker, the Government views this matter as a moral issue, not an economic issue. This has been stated in a letter addressed to the Government House Leaders of the two Opposition Parties sent to them on January 28, 1985, outlining what the Government is proposing and seeking the views of the two Opposition House Leaders. As yet the Government has not heard from the two Opposition House Leaders and has not been able to go ahead.

I want to draw to the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary something about which I think he may not be aware. As one of the two House Leaders in question, I did in fact respond to the January 28 letter. I responded on January 30 to the Government House Leader and set out quite clearly the views of the New Democratic Party with regard to this issue. I would very much appreciate if the Parliamentary Secretary could correct the record in this regard.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I would remind the House that our position on this matter has been stated very clearly in the House by our leader and by our critic. It is the responsibility of the Government to take its decisions and present its proposals to the House.

If it really wants to act in this matter, it does not need our consent, and by not acting it shows a shallowness, emptiness and lack of commitment on this important issue of Japanese Canadians.

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) for the information which he has passed on to me. It merely shows that the fact is that the House Leader of the Official Opposition has not replied in the sense of co-operation that we would like to have around here.

Mr. Speaker: I believe that all the participants in this point of order know the degree to which it is not a point of order but, perhaps, a grievance.

STATEMENT ALLEGED UNPARLIAMENTARY OF MR. TOBIN

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order with respect to proceedings which took place during the course of Question Period. I am inspired to do so by comments made by the Hon. Member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke (Mr. Hopkins) who rose to speak in the House with respect to the demeanour in which we conduct ourselves in the debates. He made some observations, to which you responded, about the way in which we conduct ourselves on the floor of the House of Commons.

Point of Order—Mr. Hnatyshyn

I rise on a point of order today because of the comments and statements made by the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) during the course of Question Period. The Chair will know that there are certain terms that are unparliamentary and that it is unparliamentary to accuse an Hon. Member of certain activity. There are lists of precedents and words that have been the subject of rulings by Speakers throughout the years.

I think it does us well to reflect on what we are doing and on some of the obligations that we have as Members of Parliament not only to this institution that we all respect very much but to the public's growing cynicism about the way in which we conduct ourselves in the House.

During the course of Question Period—apparently dissatisfied with a response given by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney)—The Hon. Member made a statement that on the basis of the answer we should have a breathalyser stationed at the entrance to the House of Commons.

I know that the Hon. Member has respect for the House. However, these terms imply, without directly saying so, that an Hon. Member—in this case a Minister—is in fact giving an answer which she did not intend because she was under some influence. Such a direct statement would be unparliamentary.

I rise because I think it is important for all of us, regardless of which side of the House we stand, to be careful with this kind of allegation. We have different points of view and we can and do argue strenuously on the issues. I think that is expected by the public and by the Members of the House. However, I do not think it adds anything to the debate when such an allegation is made, no matter which Hon. Member utters the words.

I hope we can reflect on our conduct in the House of Commons not only with respect to noise in the Chamber but with respect to personal allegations concerning Members in the House. I think that is something that we all want to avoid and we should seriously consider in terms of our future conduct.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, since the comments by the Hon. Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) concern the comments that I made this afternoon, I think it would be appropriate that I be given an opportunity to respond to him.

First, I want to thank him for acknowledging the respect that he said I have for the House, because I do have a great deal of respect for this institution. However, I suggest to the Hon. House Leader that he is perhaps best known in this Chamber, of all 282 Members, for his ability to quip under his breath and for his entertaining and heckling during the Question Period on a persistent and regular basis. For a while I was wondering whether he had lost his sense of humour because he knows, and I suggest to him that I made no statement today that was unparliamentary.

It was quite clear that I was referring to the quality of the answers and the seriousness with which the questions that I was raising were being answered. That was the only reference I made. I made no reference to sobriety, which is the word he used, not I. I make no such reference now. I think that would be inappropriate. I would never do such a thing, and I hope the Hon. Member does not believe that I have done such a thing.

As one of the best quipsters in the House, the Hon. Member knows precisely what I was doing. I was reflecting on the lighthearted and flippant manner in which Ministers were answering questions today. He knows that full well and he knows that no offence was meant.

Assuming that he has not lost his sense of humour, I hope that he understands that no offence was meant. Even though these coming days will be tough and, we are told, fair ones for Canadians, I suspect they will be a lot tougher for Members opposite, and I beseech them to keep their sense of humour.

Mr. Speaker: I can assure Hon. Members that if I thought that language or a charge had been made about the honour or lack of honour of a specific Minister, I would have indicated at the time that the language had to be withdrawn. I did rise but I did not indicate at the time that I thought the language had to be withdrawn. I find the point of order to be similar in quality to a point of order raised earlier.

• (1510)

I do, however, want to say that the fact that something may be in order does not necessarily make it appropriate. I think there are times when some of us err here in the language we use, and I think Hon. Members know that in the heat of battle we sometimes say things we do not want to say. That is why I indicated at the time that, whatever the intentions were that lay behind the phrase, I did sense some Members of the House took it perhaps in a way which the Hon. Member indicated he did not intend it to be taken. That is why I indicated at the time that I thought the language or the comment was inappropriate. I think I will leave it at that.

* * *

CORRECTIONAL INVESTIGATOR

WITHDRAWAL OF 1983-84 ANNUAL REPORT

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. On Wednesday, April 3, 1985, I tabled the annual report of the Correctional Investigator for the period June 1, 1983, to May 31, 1984. I was under the impression at that time that the Standing Orders provided for a referral of this report to the committee. However, I subsequently realized that this was not the case since the tabling of the report is not required by statute. Under the circumstances, I would ask the House to disregard my request pursuant to Standing Order 46(4).

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the House is in agreement with that and the records will be changed.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Solicitor General made reference to the annual report of the Correctional Investigator which he had purported would be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. He indicated that upon reflection he felt that the report need not be referred. In the circumstances, Mr. Speaker, would it be appropriate for the Solicitor General to seek the consent of the House, if that consent is required, in order that this very important report might be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs where it can be given a careful examination and the scrutiny it deserves?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Solicitor General may have an indication. May I suggest that we wait until Motions are called and the Solicitor General may make such a motion or seek unanimous consent to waive notice, if that is his intention. Otherwise it would require a formal notice procedure. Perhaps I will recognize the Solicitor General under Motions.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

WITHDRAWAL OF COMMENT CONSIDERED INAPPROPRIATE

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, last night during Private Members' Hour an occasion arose when I paraphrased a quote from Shakespeare, when I referred to the casting of pearls before swine. In the context that I did it, I think it falls into the category which you just outlined. Although it was not ruled out of order, not being unparliamentary, it was not an appropriate comment. The Hon. Member for Algoma rose and asked for the remarks to be withdrawn, which I did not do. A Member from the New Democratic Party also rose and asked that I withdraw the remark.

Upon reflection, I would like to withdraw the remark because I certainly did not want to cast any aspirations on any Members of this House sitting on the other side.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I think we will correct Hansard one more time and say that I think the Member meant allusions—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps it is aspersions.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I thought I would rise at this point to talk about the business of the next day or so. Today, as has been indicated previously, we will continue the discussion and, hopefully, make progress, possibly even complete second reading, with a bit of good luck and co-operation all around, on the divorce legislation so that we can have this important matter in committee and allow the committee to hear representations not only of Members of Parliament but of the people of Canada generally.

That leaves tomorrow to consider. We might start the day off on the right note and continue, as the Deputy Speaker made reference to with the motion in the name of my colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), relating to time allocation under Standing Order 82 on Bill C-15, Investment Canada.

Following that Bill it will be my intention to call Bill C-32, which is a Bill to amend the Fisheries Act. I am hoping we can, during the time available to us tomorrow, make progress with respect to these important amendments.

As Hon. Members know, by order of the House, tomorrow will be a government day commencing at the usual hour of 11 a.m. At four o'clock, proceedings will be interrupted and suspended at that time for half an hour. The speech of my colleague, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), relating to the Budget of Canada will commence at 4.30 p.m. Proceedings of the House will continue in the usual tradition until the spokesperson for the Opposition has had an opportunity to rise and give the usual preliminary remarks. This procedure will continue on the first day of the budget debate which will be Friday.

As I indicated previously, Mr. Speaker, it is my intention to carry on with the second day of the budget debate on Monday. We will monitor the situation from time to time. I am hoping that we will be able to make progress on the time usually allocated for budgetary matters, but I will be in constant and continuing contact with the distinguished Opposition House Leaders to discuss the order of business from time to time as may be appropriate.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS—FOURTH AND FIFTH REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have the Honour to present the fourth and fifth reports of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts. If the House gives consent, I intend to move concurrence in the fifth report later this day.

[Editor's Note: For above reports, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

Petitions

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS—SIXTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. The report asks for an extention of the time allowed the Canadian Commercial Bank to make its report until Friday, June 14, 1985.

[Editor's Note: For above report, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

* * *

[Translation]

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

TABLING OF REPORT OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY ON PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 46(2), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the report of the Commission of Inquiry on Pharmaceutical Industry.

* * *

CANADA COUNCIL

TABLING OF SUPPLEMENT TO 1983-84 ANNUAL REPORT

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 46(2), I wish to table, in both official languages, copies of the Supplement to the 27th Annual Report of the Canada Council for the year 1983-84.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Petitions. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

* * *

PETITIONS

IMPRISONMENT OF BRUCE CURTIS IN NEW JERSEY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the petition of a group of Canadians resident in Ontario urging the federal Government to enter a treaty for the exchange of prisoners with the State of New Jersey so that Bruce Curtis, a Canadian citizen imprisoned in New Jersey, can be transferred to serve his time in his own country.

Mr. Speaker: Further petitions?

Petitions

[Translation]

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of tabling a petition on behalf of residents in the federal ridings of Calgary West, Calgary North, Calgary South and Calgary Centre, who wish to ask the House that people between the ages of 60 and 64 who are single, separated or divorced and who are in need, be made eligible for the spouse's allowance available to widows and widowers.

I have a second petition from the riding of Rosemont, next to my own riding in Montreal, from residents who are opposed to the fact that the spouse's allowance is restricted to widows and widowers only. They are asking that the program be extended to people between the ages of 60 and 64, who are in need, and who are single, separated or divorced.

Mr. Speaker, my third petition is from constituents in the riding of Thunder Bay-Nipigon, in Ontario, who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. They are asking that the Government of Canada extend eligibility for the spouse's allowance to all people between the ages of 60 and 64, who are in need and who are single, widowed or separated.

My last petition, Mr. Speaker, is from residents in Calgary West, Calgary North, Calgary South and Calgary Centre, who see the spouse's allowance program for widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64 as a social injustice where people who are single, separated or divorced are concerned.

They are asking this Honourable House to extend to them the same privileges granted to widows and widowers under Bill C-26.

● (1520)

[English]

OPPRESSION IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House of Commons a petition signed by members of my riding of Sarnia-Lambton who are exercising their fundamental and democratic rights by petitioning this House to seek redress of certain grievances.

My constituents are concerned about the current situation in Central America. They ask that the Canadian Government state openly that we are against the attempts of those Governments of Central America which block genuine freedom and reform, and that we work to aid the people of that region who so desperately need our help.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by a number of residents of Kamloops-Shuswap. These people are objecting to the provisions of Bill C-26 which unfairly discriminate against single people between the ages of 60 and 64. They wish immediate redress to ensure that these people will be allowed benefits.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition signed by 25 residents of Sainte-Anne-de-Prescott in the great riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, who are opposed to the fact that Bill C-26 discriminates against people between the ages of 60 and 64 who live alone and are single, divorced or separated.

I also have a petition signed by 94 residents of the village of Embrun in the electoral district of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, and the 94 undersigned are asking that Bill C-26 be amended to enable people who are in need, between the ages of 60 and 64, and who are single, divorced or separated, to benefit under the new legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition, signed by residents of Plantagenet, Ontario. Mr. Speaker, you will be glad to hear that these people are also asking to have Bill C-26 amended so that people in need who are single, divorced or separated and between the ages of 60 and 64, will be able to benefit from the provisions of Bill C-26.

Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by members of the Senior Citizens' Club of Chute-à-Blondeau, Ontario. These 18 residents are also asking to have Bill C-26 amended to enable people living alone, who are in need, and are single, divorced or separated and between the ages of 60 and 64, to benefit under Bill C-26 and receive the spouse's allowance.

I have one last petition, with your permission, Mr. Speaker. It is signed by people of Saint-Albert, Ontario, which is in my riding, and the 63 undersigned humbly pray that the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 be amended to enable people who are in need and are single, divorced or separated, and between the ages of 60 and 64, to receive the allowance and to remedy forthwith the injustice that is being perpetrated against 80,000 Canadians.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif). Petitions.

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table a number of petitions concerning the same thorny issue of Bill C-26. A group of constituents from my riding of Richmond-Wholfe have felt it necessary to speak out officially against the discrimination of which single, separated and divorced persons are the victims.

Here is another petition, Mr. Speaker, again from my riding of Richmond-Wolfe, which states that the exclusion of single, separated and divorced persons from the benefits of Bill C-26 cannot be justified.

I have here another petition, again from my riding; it is from some 40 of my constituents who expressly deplore the totally discriminatory treatment made to people 60 to 64 years of age, many of whom are in dire financial need and who are excluded from the benefits of Bill C-26.

Another petition, this one from a neighbouring constituency, strongly deplores this discriminatory legislation against some Canadians between 60 and 64 years of age.

I have another petition in which the petitioners oppose the unacceptable, unfair and discriminatory treatment of single, separated and divorced persons between 60 and 64 years of age. They insist on a new amendment being introduced to make them eligible to these benefits in accordance with a basic principle of social justice.

[English]

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions to present to the House. The first petition is from the residents of the federal riding of Essex-Kent. They are petitioning the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and asking him to extend eligibility for the spouses' allowance, which has been granted to needy widows and widowers between 60 and 64 years of age, to all Canadians who are either single, separated or divorced and who have identical needs.

I have a further petition. It is similar to the first one. It is from residents of the federal ridings of Calgary West, Calgary North and Calgary South, and several from Calgary Centre. This particular petition is asking the Government to extend the eligibility for the spouse's allowance, which has already been granted to needy widows and widowers between 60 and 64 years of age, to all Canadians who are either single, separated or divorced and who have identical needs. Mr. Speaker, 80,000 persons will suffer discrimination and social injustice if the Prime Minister overlooks the amendment they are proposing to Bill C-26.

I have a further petition signed by 19 residents of the federal ridings of North Vancouver-Burnaby, Capilano and Vancouver-Kingsway. These petitioners as well are petitioning the federal Government to extend the benefits in Bill C-26 to all Canadians who are either single, separated or divorced and who have identical needs.

The last petition I wish to present today is from a number of residents of the federal riding of Rosemont in Quebec. These citizens, who are very concerned about Bill C-26, are asking the federal Government to extend the eligibility for spouse's allowance to all Canadians who are either single, separated or divorced and who have identical needs.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of Bills.

Mr. Malépart: Petition.

Mr. Speaker: Presentation of Bills. I had called it, I am sorry.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: What is the question of privilege?

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, strangely enough, my privileges as a Member of Parliament are being jeopardized by your attitude.

My colleague has just finished with his petitions. I rose immediately, and you have twice refused me—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. It is clearly not a question of privilege. It is also very clear to the Member that I had called petitions three times.

[Translation]

I called petitions three times and the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) did not rise. I waited—

Mr. Malépart: But, Mr. Speaker—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry. I am indicating to the Member that there is no question of privilege. I had called petitions three separate times. The Hon. Member for York South-Weston came in after the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell had finished. He came in and I called "further petitions", and the only Member who rose was the Hon. Member for York South-Weston. He was the only Member who rose. When he was finished I had already called it three times, and I therefore moved to the Introduction of Bills.

• (1530)

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) on a point of order.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I simply want to point out that I believe that you were looking the other way. I saw what happened. Since my colleague was on his feet before you called the next item, there is no reason for not recognizing him on petitions.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member indicating he wishes to challenge the Speaker's ruling? Is the Hon. Member indicating that?

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): That is not what I meant.

Mr. Malépart: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have indicated to the House that as far as I am concerned everybody who had indicated they wished to present petitions had been heard. That is it.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell).

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to introduce a Private Bill, the purpose of which—

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Fennell, seconded by Mr. Kempling, moves for leave to introduce a Bill entitled An Act to Amend the Criminal Code (Capital Punishment).

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: It is unacceptable! On a point of order.

[English]

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House—

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: I will ask both Members to resume their seats.

I have indicated what I have done. I called petitions three times. The Hon. member says I did not. The fact is he was not in the Chamber.

An Hon. Member: That's right.

Mr. Speaker: Order. If the Hon. Member persists, he will leave me no choice.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Do it.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: On a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell).

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Go ahead, throw me out! You will not prevent me from speaking. We have the right to express our views here.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie leaves me no choice; I must name the Member for disregarding the authority of the Chair. He leaves me no choice.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: We are not going to let the Chair dictate to us. We want to have impartial justice, not partial justice.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I invite the Hon. Member to withdraw his challenge. It is very simple. Under the circumstances I have no choice but to name the Member unless he chooses to resume his seat and not pursue this matter. He is creating a disorder in the House by refusing to accept the authority of the Chair. I invite the Hon. Member to leave the matter—if he rises, I must name him.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Are you recognizing me, Mr. Speaker?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I have to name the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

[Translation]

I have no choice.

Mr. Malépart: Question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, I have the right to speak.

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I do not know, is the Hon. Member prepared to accept the ruling of the Chair? If not, I am obliged to move a motion, which I am reluctant to do, naturally. We make our points in this place, but if the Hon. Member is serious about challenging the Chair, then it leaves me no alternative but to move a motion.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, may I say something? You have decided on this issue without hearing me out. I cannot, therefore, accept the fact that the Chair can deprive me of the right to speak without giving me an opportunity to be heard. This Parliament is not only for Members of the Progressive Conservative Party, but for Members of all parties.

[English]

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I very much regret to have to move this motion:

That the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie be suspended from the service of the House for the remainder of today's sitting.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn) which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 25)

YEAS

Messrs.

Andre
Angus
Beatty
Belsher
Benjamin
Bernier
Bertrand (Mrs.)
Binns
Bissonnette
Blackburn (Jonquière)
Blaikie
Blais
Blais-Grenier (Mrs.)
Blenkarn
Bouchard
Boyer
Bradley
Brightwell
Browes (Mrs.)
Cadieux
Caldwell
Cardiff
Cassidy
Champagne (Mrs.) (Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot)
Champagne (Champlain)
Chartrand
Clark (Brandon-Souris)
Clifford
Clinch
Cochrane
Collins (Mrs.)
Comeau
Cook
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Crofton
Crombie
Crosby (Halifax West)
Darling
Deans
de Cotret
de Jong
Della Noce
Desjardins
Dick
Domm
Dorin
Duplessis (Mrs.)
Edwards
Elzinga
Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon)
Epp (Provencher)
Fennell
Ferland
Fontaine
Forrestall
Fraleigh
Fraser
Fretz
Fulton
Gagnon
Gass
Gervais
Girard
Gormley
Gottselig
Graham
Gravel
Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine)
Greenaway
Grisé
Guilbault (Drummond)
Gurbin
Gustafson
Halliday
Hamelin
Hardey
Harvey
Hawkes
Hees
Hicks
Hnatyshyn
Holtmann
Horner
Hovdebo
Howie
Hudon
Jacques (Mrs.)
James
Jardine
Jelinek
Jepson
Jewett (Ms.)
Johnson (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception)
Joncas
Jourdenais
Keeper
Kempling
Kilgour
Landry (Mrs.)
Langdon
Lanthier
La Salle
Layton
Lesick
Lewis
MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)
Mailly (Mrs.)
Malone
Manly Mantha
Marin
Martin (Mrs.)
Mayer
Mazankowski
McCurdy
McDermid
McDonald (Ms.) (Broadview-Greenwood)
McDougall (Mrs.) (St. Paul's)
McInnes
McKenzie
McKinnon
McKnight
McLean
Merrithew
Minaker
Mitges
Murphy
Murta
Nicholson (Niagara Falls)
Nickerson
Nystrom
O'Neil
Oostrom
Paproski
Parry
Pennock
Peterson
Pietz
Plamondon
Plourde
Porter
Price
Ravis
Redway
Reid
Ricard
Riis
Robinson
Rodriguez
St. Germain
St-Julien
Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni)
Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin)
Scott (Victoria-Haliburton)
Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth)
Scowen
Shields
Siddon
Skelly
Sparrow (Mrs.)
Speyer
Stackhouse
Stevens
Stewart
Tardif (Mrs.) (Charlesbourg)
Taylor
Thacker
Towers
Tremblay (Québec-Est)
Tremblay (Lotbinière)
Tupper
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Vankoughnet
Vézina (Mrs.)
Vincent
Warner
Wenman
White
Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek)
Winegard
Young—181.

NAYS

Messrs.

Axworthy
Boudria
Caccia
de Corneille
Finestone (Mrs.)
Foster
Frith
Gagliano
Garneau
Gauthier
Gray (Windsor West)
Guilbault (Saint-Jacques)
Hopkins
Isabelle
Kaplan
Killens (Mrs.)
MacLellan
Marchi
Nicholson (Miss) (Trinity)
Nunziata
Pépin (Mrs.)
Prud'homme
Robichaud
Rossi
Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe)
Tobin—26.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried. I must now order the Hon. Member to leave this chamber pursuant to Standing Order 38(2).

And Mr. Malépart having withdrawn:

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

[English]

CRIMINAL CODE AMENDMENT ACT, 1985

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-240, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (capital punishment).

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure at this time to introduce this Private Members' Bill. The purpose of the Bill is to restore the death penalty for substantiated first degree murder and high treason. The Bill also provides for a more humane method of implementing the punishment.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and orderd to be printed.

* * *

CRIME VICTIMS ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-241, an Act to provide assistance for victims of crime.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, this Bill enacts a new statute called the Crime Victims Assistance Act. The provisions require that a crime victim be kept informed respecting the investigation of the crime and the prosecution of the offender. At present, the victim has no status in the legal process.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Order Paper Questions

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

CONCURRENCE IN FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, if the House gives its consent, I move that the fifth report of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts presented to the House earlier this day be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 154, 176 and 220.

[Text]

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAMS

Question No. 154—Mr. Orlikow:

Has the Defence Research Board cut any projects in its science and technology programs in order to absorb the reduction in its expenditures required by the economic statement made by the Minister of Finance in the House on November 8, 1984 and, if so, what are they and what are the projected costs?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): No.

ABORTION COMMITTEES

Question No. 176—Mr. Stackhouse:

1. On the last day for which information is available, how many Canadian hospitals had abortion committees and how many did not?

2. How many were Department of National Defence hospitals?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of National Health and Welfare and National Defence as follows:

1. In its report, the Committee on the Operation of Abortion Law (appointed by the Pricy Council, September 29, 1975 and chaired by Robin Badgley) indicated that out of 1,348 non-military hospitals, 559 were eligible to establish therapeutic abortion committees in terms of their major treatment functions, the size of their medical staff, and their type of facility. Out of these, 271 hospitals had established therapeutic abortion committees by the end of 1976, and 288 hospitals had not.

The latest data obtained from Statistics Canada (Institutional Statistics Section) pertains to 1982. In that year there were 1,218 non-military hospitals in Canada of which 261 maintained therapeutic abortion committees. No information is available on the number of non-military hospitals that were eligible for such committees in 1982.

2. None.

RELEASE OF ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL

Question No. 220—Mr. Howie:

For the year ending March 31, 1984, were any personnel released from the Canadian Armed Forces and, if so, how many?

Mr. Robert Wenman (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): During the period April 1, 1983 to March 31, 1984, 5,078 personnel were released from the Canadian Armed Forces.

[Translation]

Mr. Dick: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall all Notices of Motions for the Production of Papers be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

DIVORCE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

DIVORCE AND COROLLARY RELIEF ACT FAMILY ORDERS ENFORCEMENT ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURES TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motions of Mr. Crosbie that Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act; Bill

C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief; and Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and the attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see the Government move forward with its divorce legislation. On behalf of my Party I have done everything I can to co-operate to see that the Bill moves forward expeditiously to the committee in the hope that it might even become law by the summer. In fact, I suggested to the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) that the three Bills that relate to the divorce question be read together at all stages. That order has found approval. Therefore, I am rising to speak to the second reading of all three Bills dealing with the question of divorce.

We have had some loss of time this afternoon but I want to reiterate the intention, which I know is shared by the New Democratic Party, to try to conclude second reading of the Bill this afternoon and see it referred to the Justice Committee. I must say that I was disturbed that the Minister took so long yesterday in his remarks. I would have wanted to speak yesterday and would have been prepared to do so if he had left some time for that purpose.

What disturbed me even more is to have read in the media yesterday that the Government does not expect that any of the Bills of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) will become law before the summer. This applies to the drunk driving legislation, which was part of Bill C-18 that is now before the Senate, and it applies to this Bill as well as to the Government's initiative on street soliciting.

I want to make the position of our Party very clear on these subjects. As early as last December we were offering our full co-operation to get the drunk driving legislation on the books in time for Christmas. We would have co-operated in moving toward that goal if the Government had had the initiative to do so.

With respect to the question of soliciting, our Party recognizes that it is a serious problem which, in some parts of our country, becomes even more serious during the summer. I want to put on the record for the Government once again that while we do not agree with the entire Bill that the Government brought forward with respect to street soliciting, we wanted to get it into committee. We would have co-operated with a short second reading debate so that the Bill could get to the committee. We could then determine if the Government is aware that its drafting of the Bill poses dangerous consequences for civil liberties and for prostitutes themselves. The Government recognizes that this would continue to be a problem even with its legislation on the books.

We wanted to hear from the Minister how the extra crime that appears to be the consequence of his legislation would be countered. What would happen to prostitutes under the legislation as he proposes it? Would their lives be subject to greater danger, greater pressures from possibly corrupt policemen, from pimps, and from customers? We have a lot of questions about that Bill. At the same time, to read in the newspaper yesterday that the Minister is not prepared to get that legislation through by the summer should make it clear to the Canadian people that it is the Government that is responsible for these problems remaining with us. We are ready to co-operate on this side of the House. We would like to see the divorce Bill through. We would like to see a solution implemented in the area of street soliciting. We would like to see drunk driving legislation on the books. These Bills are not on the books because this Government is not organizing its business properly.

• (1630)

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kaplan: It has the full co-operation—

Mr. Speyer: What about the Senate?

Mr. Kaplan: —of this side of the House in moving—

Some Hon. Members: Not true.

Mr. Gormley: What about Bill C-15?

Mr. Kaplan: You talk about what is happening today. I am not talking about Bill C-15. That is a different story. Bill C-15 is not a Bill that we are prepared to assist the Government in passing. We are prepared to see the Government move forward on these other three matters. I am sorry but before the delay today, before we had an opportunity to indicate on the floor our position on these other Bills, the Government was already throwing up its hands. I hope that I will not hear the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) say during the summer that street soliciting is the problem of the Opposition because the Opposition is not co-operating. We are co-operating. Let the Canadian people know where the responsibility is for the failure of this legislation, these three important Bills, to move forward now.

I would like to say a few words on the subject of divorce. I will reduce my remarks beyond perhaps what they should be and certainly beyond what I had in mind because I am anxious to see the Bill get to committee, perhaps by the end of the day.

We agree that divorce legislation needs to be reformed and that reform is overdue. We agree that the legislation now in effect tends to increase the contentious nature of a divorce proceeding. When that happens, reconciliation becomes less likely rather than more likely. We wanted to see legislation introduced that would make divorce less contentious. We are happy to see legislation brought forward that makes the divorce procedure less expensive and less drawn out.

The existing legislation requires if no fault can be found, that there must be three years of separation. That is a very lengthy period of time. We on this side of the House do not believe that a broken marriage, broken for one year, is more likely to survive if a three year period of separation is required. In other words, we think one year is long enough. We think also that the procedure could be streamlined. That is addressed in this legislation. What is the necessity in an uncontested divorce of the court appearance and the court proceeding? Divorce does not have to be as expensive and as lengthy before the courts as it is.

We are pleased to see legislation brought forward that deals more directly, more humanely, in a more contemporary manner with the consequences of divorce and with the question of maintenance, to which I want to come back later in my remarks. We are glad to see that it is addressed and that there is a better rationale, more in keeping with the equality of spouses and more in keeping with the nature of a marriage nowadays. We are also happy that custody is addressed and the problem that now exists in the area of custody is being addressed somewhat in this legislation.

I would like to remind the House and the Government that all of these problems were known to the former Government and were the subject of the legislation brought forward by the former Government. I want to pay tribute to my former colleague, the Minister of Justice Mark MacGuigan, who brought forward a very good bill that addressed all of the issues addressed by this Bill, except for one or two matters that I hope to have time to deal with and offered the same solutions.

What is interesting is that when the former Government brought forward its Bill, we did not have an Opposition Party that said it was going to co-operate to improve the divorce law. The former Opposition, the present Government, laboured anxiously and met in caucus to discuss how it would deal with the Bill. The present Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) announced what the Government's position on that legislation was.

The Tories were going to fight it, they were against it and even though it was exactly the same in all important respects as the legislation being brought forward now—I will deal with the differences—the Tories said, "After intense discussion, we have come to the conclusion that the existing divorce Bill,"—namely the one of the former Government—"is shallow, superficial, and simple." They were stuck with having characterized the divorce Bill brought forward by Justice Minister Macguigan as shallow, superficial, and simple. The Tories were stuck when September 4 came along with the problem of having to address divorce. They have agreed in what they have done that the matter is a priority but, not being able to do exactly what the former Government did, even though in substance the Tories have brought forward the same thing, they engaged in a search for a face-saving tactic to bring forward essentially the same legislation, allowing them to live with the remarks they made while in Opposition.

Let me say what I like about the Government Bill. What I like are the essential parts which copy exactly what was in the former legislation. I will then have to say what I do not like about it, which is the face-saving technique the Tories found to differentiate their Bill from the Liberal Bill. It is a face-saving technique to which I would concede if it were not damaging, but it is damaging to the divorce Bill. It is a mistake to do what the Tories are proposing to do to differentiate their Bill. I am referring here to the very superficial frill the Tories have added on the subject of fault, Mr. Speaker.

Let me first go over the features of the Bill we welcome, that we think are overdue and should have been in effect for a year or more than a year had the Bill introduced by the former Government been passed and not fought so hard by the former Opposition.

We are moving away from a contentious type of divorce. The old requirement of a three-year separation for marriage breakdown made the other grounds more attractive and the parties tended to be driven into a situation where they were wanting to characterize themselves with one as the innocent party and one as the guilty party and so get a divorce on the basis of fault. We are glad the Bill follows its Liberal predecessor in moving away from the contentiousness that has characterized divorce in our country until today.

We are glad not only for its own sake but because it makes divorce a more dignified process that we recognize it is. In fact, this is a divorce procedure which encourages reconciliation more than the present procedure does. Like the Liberal Bill, there is an incentive and a requirement for attempted reconciliation during that one year of separation.

We do not believe, as the Government does not believe, that having tough divorce laws makes for stronger marriages. In other words, if it is hard to get a divorce, people will try for that reason to make their marriages work. We do not agree with that. People who are trying to make marriage work do not look over their shoulders at what the divorce law is. I cannot accept the argument of those who want tough divorce as a way of showing the sanctity of marriage or as a way of showing that spouses should work to make their marriages work. As long as they want to make their marriages work, they are not looking over their shoulders at what the divorce law is. When a marriage does break down, and the grounds are to be set out in the Bill—we accept them—divorce should be realistic. Divorce should be contemporary and above all, as is the tenor of the Bill before us, the divorce procedure should try to encourage reconciliation. Better than the existing law, this Bill tries to encourage reconciliation. I will not go into the details as they were placed on the record by the Minister in his statement yesterday.

• (1640)

We are glad that the Bill reduces the amount of legal process in court proceedings. This is a Bill which, like the Bill of the former Government, will not require that the spouses appear before a judge when there is no contention or no contest and when all matters are settled. Also, we are glad to see a modern philosophy of maintenance which is based upon a recognition of the equality of the spouses but which recognizes that, where one spouse is dependent, there is an obligation on the other spouse to assist the spouse in achieving economic independence if it is possible. If it is not possible, that is recognized and maintenance of the dependent spouse is provided for.

Although the Government introduced fault as a ground for divorce, it specifically detached the issue of fault from the issue of maintenance. I am worried that that detachment, which is formally provided for in the Act, will not work and that because the Government brought fault into the Act, it will find its way into the maintenance issue. I will explain how I think that will happen, regrettably, in a moment when I come to urging the Government to withdraw the face-saving component it added on the question of fault.

We are also glad that custody is addressed. When we get to committee, we will want the Government to consider the issue of custody because more than it should, custody has developed in divorce situations to be custody of one parent or the other. The time has come to recognize that joint custody is a viable basic concept and that divorce itself should not be a ground, as often as it is, for the judge confronting the issue of which parent should have primary custody and what the rights of the other should be. Joint custody works very well in some jurisdictions in the United States. Having been dry run in the United States, we think it needs to be brought more than it is into the Canadian context. When that feature of this package of legislation is addressed, we will want to express our views about it.

In a final area, I want to indicate that the Government went further than the former Government in the area of enforcement of maintenance orders. We are happy about that, but we do not think the Government has gone far enough. In our legislation in the last Parliament, we talked about going to the provinces and speaking with them about enforcement. The new Government considers itself to be in a very different position in relation to the provinces. The new Government feels that it has a very good relationship with each province. I am prepared to concede that it has a better relationship with a lot of the provinces than did the former Government. If the Government has that good relationship, why is it not using it to try to get a better system of maintenance that the one proposed? It talks about an exchange of information and about entering into agreements with provinces. I would like to see more.

Given its claims about good co-operative relations with provinces, it should have put more on the table now. We will be asking the Government in committee to put more on the table, to protect dependent spouses and dependent children, and to ensure that the wealthier spouse is in a position to make the payments. We would like to see more machinery and more recourse contained in this legislation to assist dependent children in getting what is their due. The Minister made a good sounding speech about it. He recognizes the cost to other taxpayers when dependent spouses and children are unable to collect from more independent spouses the payments ordered by the court, but I would like to see more machinery to give effect to that.

I mentioned that the Government was faced with a dilemma because it wanted to produce all these good things. I have outlined them and the reasons we support the Bill. However, government Members could not have simply reintroduced the Liberal Bill because they had criticized it when they were in Opposition. Thus they introduced the concept that, notwithstanding a general no fault philosophy, fault—that is, cruelty or adultery—would be a continuing ground for divorce without having to wait for one year. I do not suppose we are in a position as one small opposition Party to prevent the Government from introducing the concept of fault, but we will try to convince it that it is wrong in the general framework of the legislation we have discussed and of the good things included in the legislation, borrowed, as I said, from the former Liberal Government, to add on this little frill about fault.

I will refer to the information which the Government put forth. It claims to want the divorce process to be less adversarial while increasing chances for the reconciliation of the spouses or, where this is not possible, providing a more humane and fairer resolution of the consequences of divorce. Mr. Speaker, you can see the problem. If fault and cruelty are grounds for an early divorce, there will be a tendency in some situations, if not by both spouses then by one or the other, to want to use those grounds to obtain an early divorce without waiting for the year. If those are available grounds, I submit that even if the legislation indicates that fault should not go to maintenance, there will be a negotiation which takes account of the possibility of early divorces between spouses. In many cases one will put pressure on the other to go the fault route in order to obtain an earlier divorce at the price of some concessions on maintenance. I think that is wrong and that fault should be taken out for that reason alone.

There is another reason as well—the custody issue. I see nothing in the Bill which unties custody from the fault issue. What I am worried about—and I will want the Minister to deal with it—is how we will assure that custody is decided on proper grounds and that custody is not side-tracked into the cause of an early divorce where fault becomes one of the grounds. I do not want either of the spouses or the court to be directed, because of this little face-saving fault issue, into taking fault into consideration unduly in the awarding of custody. I am worried that the Bill, the way the Minister presented it, will lead to custody being affected inordinately by considerations, which may not even be very serious considerations of fault, designed by the couple to allow for an earlier divorce.

Also I think that the addition of fault will tend to work against the reconciliation machinery provided in the divorce Bill, and that we will see couples avoiding the reconciliation route which is in the law because the Government has found it necessary to provide for a divorce by way of adultery or cruelty on a quicker basis.

The Minister was very uncomfortable with the issue of fault. We could see that from the speech he delivered in the House yesterday. I wondered how he would resolve the dilemma of favouring the no fault divorce yet including a provision for a divorce by way of established fault. When I listened to him, looking for the way he would resolve the dilemma, I found that he did not resolve it at all. He said, as reported at page 4933 of Hansard:

A major criticism of the present system is that it focuses overly on the alleged fault of the spouse or spouses. It polarizes a conflict situation. It creates increased tension. It discourages reconciliation.

● (1650)

Yet, having made all that criticism of fault, he introduces it in this bill. He also said:

—an accusation of fault is certainly not conducive to mediation of the possible consequences of divorce. If we want divorce to occur in the proper kind of atmosphere and in the proper circumstances, where the parties think what is the best way of dealing with the problem, what is the best way of looking after the children for whom we are now responsible, then we need to remove the fault grounds and deal with the consequence that a particular marriage has broken down.

Later he continues:

It is still an atmosphere of conflict—antagonism and fault.

If the Minister feels so negatively about fault that he would go to such lengths to criticize it in the same way the former Government criticized it, why not follow the model of the former Government and leave that ground out and come back to the grounds provided for before? He does not even think that fault will be used very much. At page 4934 he says:

My guess would be that in four or five years' time the use of the fault grounds will be very rare.

I hope he is right. But if he is, why put it in to complicate the package? The fault ground is counter-productive and it can only lead to more acrimonious divorce and provide a back-door entry to fault as an issue in maintenance or custody; it can also decrease the likelihood of reconciliation taking place.

[Translation]

Those are the comments I wanted to make on Bill C-46, Bill C-47 and Bill C-48. I had a long list of my colleagues—I have three other colleagues who told me that they wanted to speak on this issue on second reading. However, to be helpful to the government which would like to refer the bill today to the Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs for consideration and public input, I will conclude now. I will not carry on the debate to urge the government to remove the concept of fault contained in the bill. Finally, it is the responsibility of the government to take a decision considering its huge majority. However, the Liberals will do their utmost to make sure that the legislation is amended before it is enforced this summer.

[English]

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and take part in this debate on the most significant overhaul of Canada's divorce legislation since 1968. This Bill represents a major improvement over the previous Bill tabled in this House by the former Minister of Justice in the spring of 1983. Where it has been improved most significantly is in the area of enforcement of maintenance orders. I want to pay tribute not only to the many groups and individuals from across Canada, including the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women, and other such groups, but also to single out the contribution made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). In her capacity as justice critic in the spring of 1984, on behalf of the federal New Democratic Party caucus, she worked very hard to bring to the attention of the Government our concern about the deficiencies in the Bill, particularly in the area of maintenance and the enforcement of maintenance orders, access to government data banks, and the whole question of pension splitting. I believe that much of the credit for the improvement in this legislation today must lie with that Hon. Member for the work she did on behalf of our caucus in this area.

The question of divorce is one which has touched the lives of literally hundreds of thousands of Canadians. The most recent figures show that over 65,000 divorces were granted in 1983, a decline from 1982 when there were over 70,000. Of course, the statistics show as well that some four out of ten marriages in Canada today end in divorce. It is a rather sad commentary that almost half of the marriages in Canada today end in divorce. It is a rather sad commentary that this is happening at a time when we see in our society the phenomena of increased alienation, loneliness and pages and pages of ads in newspapers of people looking for companions. It is a rather interesting irony that while marriages are breaking down and families are splitting, there are still many Canadians who seek relationships. Certainly many of us regret very deeply the number of divorces and the extent of divorce in our society. It has touched, as I say, hundreds of thousands, including Members of this House. Indeed, I myself have been through the experience of divorce and thus can empathize with the feelings of pain and hardship which is experienced in the process.

Over half the divorces in Canada involved young children. In 85 per cent of those cases, custody is granted to the mother. The difficulty at present is that half of all single parent families in Canada headed by women live in conditions of poverty. When one combines those statistics, we can see that we must do a great deal more to ensure that women of single parent families have the means to bring up their children. Perhaps one of the most telling statistics are those disclosed in a recent study in the U.S. which show that following divorce the standard of living of men increased by some 42 per cent, whereas for the women it dropped by some 73 per cent. So, while we certainly have to look at the grounds for divorce and the question of enforcement of maintenance orders, we have to recognize as well that the position of women following divorces, generally speaking, is far worse than that of men.

Compounding those difficulties is the fact that social assistance levels in Canada today, and I might say particularly in my own Province of British Columbia, are far too low. In many cases they force women to live in what can only be described as abject poverty, and not just women but also their children.

The most important innovation in this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is the introduction of the concept of marriage breakdown as being the sole ground for the granting of a divorce. Marriage breakdown is to be evidenced by a period of separation of at least one year. I want to say without reservation that we in the NDP strongly support this move. Indeed, as long ago as 1967 we adopted a policy calling for the introduction of no-fault divorce in Canada. That followed hearings by the special joint committee in 1966 and 1967. Indeed, it was in 1967 and 1968 that the last major overhaul of the Divorce Act took place. At that time my colleagues in the NDP argued for marriage breakdown as the sole ground for divorce. I want to pay tribute to the far-sightedness of former Members like Grace MacInnis, Andrew Brewin and John Gilbert, along with other Members, who argued for the kind of enlightened legislation which is being brought forward today.

● (1700)

At the same time, I would like to pay tribute to two gentlemen who perhaps more than any others fought to ensure that the House of Commons recognized that divorce law in Canada was archaic and had to be changed. Those two gentlemen were Arnold Peters and Frank Howard. They single-handedly conducted a filibuster in this House by bringing each individual petition for divorce from the Province of Quebec before the House. Back in the 1950s and the 1960s, as you will recall, Mr. Speaker, it was the case that divorces in the Province of Quebec could only be obtained by bringing an individual petition to the House of Commons. It was Arnold Peters and Frank Howard who said that that kind of nonsense had to end.

There are those who have expressed concern about the fact that we are not retaining the 14 or 15 grounds of fault which are contained in the present Divorce Act even though realistically, only three or four of them have been used in the courts on a regular basis. Perhaps it was the Catholic Women's League that put it best in its brief to the House with respect to the question of no fault divorce. The brief indicates the following:

> The present system of having to "air one's marital laundry" in a public courtroom seems both demeaning and time-consuming. It is obvious that at a point of time where the matter is being heard by a Divorce Court Judge, any possibility of reconciliation has long since dissipated. The present system appears to lend itself to a good deal of mutual disrespect and disposes of any possible future friendship the spouses may have. Furthermore, the accusations and counter-accusations of the present adversarial system seem to do a great deal of harm to the familial relationship which often-times must survive the dissolution of a marriage because of children.
>
> Accordingly, it is our submission that the best interests of all parties concerned, including children would best be served if the only ground for divorce were permanent breakdown of the marriage.

As I said, that was the position taken by the Catholic Women's League. It is rather interesting that it would appear to be in some conflict with the position taken by the Catholic bishops. I would certainly defer to the wisdom of the Catholic Women's League on this particular issue.

The Government has decided that it will effectively eliminate the fault provisions of the Divorce Act, but instead of accepting the argument that we should eliminate entirely the fault grounds on the basis that a marriage breakdown is a complex situation and that to ascribe the breakdown to a particular act or series of acts denies the reality of the marriage, the Government has attempted to retain the fault concept by permitting couples to obtain a divorce after a separation of less than one year on the grounds of adultery or cruelty. We have serious concerns about the retention of these fault grounds and I would like to take a moment to explain why it is that we believe that this is not the most appropriate course for the Government to take and that in fact its provision for a one-year period of time before marital breakdown is established should be the sole ground for divorce.

First I would note that by retaining the grounds of adultery and cruelty, children will still be called upon to testify with respect to violence. Children will still be called upon to testify as to how daddy beat mommy. We will still have a situation where fault is ascribed and the marriage breakdown is pinned solely on one party. That cannot be a step forward for Canada today.

As well, by retaining the ground of adultery, couples will still connive even though conniving and collusion is illegal. I think most Hon. Members know that when couples wish to obtain a divorce earlier, they will go through the motions of establishing evidence of adultery by hiring private investigators who burst into motel rooms at in appropriate times with flashbulbs flashing. The charade which is involved in establishing the ground of adultery will continue. Private investigators will still peer through the windows of individuals after which they will swear affidavits. I had hoped that those days would be gone. Unfortunately, the Government has decided to retain those two grounds for divorce. I hope that the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs will consider carefully whether this is indeed in the best interests of Canadian men and women whose marriages have broken down.

It has been argued that these grounds will be relied upon only in rare circumstances. I would like to point out that the evidence from other jurisdictions is very much to the contrary. In fact, in jurisdictions which grant divorces on both fault and no fault grounds, fault grounds are used more often than no fault grounds. In 1974, for example, in England and Wales where there is a two-year period of separation before a no fault divorce can be granted, slightly over 60 per cent of divorces proceeded on fault grounds. I would point out as well that if one wants to prevent couples from making too hasty a decision to divorce, it does not seem wise to maintain in the Act grounds which would facilitate a divorce after only a few weeks or months. Surely a one-year minimum is appropriate in those circumstances.

Mr. Thacker: What about the pregnant woman?

Mr. Robinson: Other Members have raised concerns about issues related to this matter and I am certain that in the context of the committee hearings on this Bill, those concerns will be aired fully. The Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women has raised its concern that in some instances, the retention of the grounds of adultery and mental or physical cruelty may in fact receive undue consideration in determining custody arrangements in provincial courts.

There are some who ask about the situation in which the woman is pregnant as a result of adultery. They ask if she should not be able to get out of her marriage even more quickly than the one-year period provided by the Act. Fortunately, in Canada today, the stigma of illegitimacy has disappeared. That is a concern, but we should weigh the pros and cons involved in retaining the grounds of fault. Despite that concern, which I do recognize, I feel that on balance it is not wise to retain the grounds in these circumstances.

I think it is also important to note very clearly that when we are dealing with a Divorce Act, we are dealing with marriages which have broken down and with relationships which have failed. Those who argue that by easing the pain and suffering involved in these circumstances we are somehow facilitating divorce are flying in the face of the reality of these relationships. Of course we want to do everything in our power to strengthen marriages and the role of the family in our society. However, where relationships have broken down, we should not be perpetrating measures which simply add to the pain, suffering and hardship involved in what is already a very difficult situation.

We should be supporting families through economic means. There should be better provision of child care, improved family allowances, shelters for battered women and economic equality for women. We should be ensuring that people in our society are better prepared for marriage itself. There should be more provision for pre-marital counselling in our communities and there should be better marriage preparation.

At this point, I would like to pay tribute to those church and other organizations that do engage in pre-marital counselling. In my own constituency of Burnaby, the Burnaby Christian Fellowship in conjunction with a number of other churches has embarked upon an excellent program of pre-marital counselling as well as counselling for those couples whose marriages have run into difficulty. The objective there is to attempt to salvage the marriage. But there is the recognition where that marriage has broken down, that the relationship should not be aggravated and the hardship which is faced by children should not be aggravated by forcing couples into the courts to point fingers with respect to allegations of wrongdoings by one party or the other.

• (1710)

In addition to strengthening marital relationships and ensuring that adequate funds are available for premarital counselling programs, we should do everything in our power to promote mediation and counselling at the point at which couples feel their relationship has begun to flounder. Unfortunately, it is still the case in too many provinces that the resources which are made available for mediation and counselling are totally inadequate. In the Divorce Act there exists a legal requirement for lawyers to point out to couples which are contemplating divorce any resources which might exist in their communities for mediation and counselling. Yet, as is too often the case, that obligation in the Divorce Act is a mere formality. In many communities there are inadequate resources for mediation and counselling. While there should continue to be an obligation on members of the legal profession to advise on the services which are available, as well, federal funding should be made available to ensure that those services are, in fact, a reality. Once again, hopefully, marriages can be salvaged rather than proceeding to divorce.

In too many cases it is the children who are the real victims. They are helpless victims in a divorce. The pain and scars which children too often feel can last for many, many years. I would hope that one of our most important and fundamental objectives in the area of divorce would be to ease the pain which is felt by children. One of the most important ways of doing that is to ensure that the Divorce Act does not, in effect, represent a tug of war between two parents over their children, but rather, recognizing that it is the best interests of the children, which should be the only relevant factor, that wherever possible those interests should be promoted through the use of joint custody. Instead of assigning custody of the children to one parent or to the other, we should recognize that while it is not possible for the spouses to continue living together, their love for and responsibilities to their children continue and, wherever possible, custody should be joint. That is the norm in a number of other jurisdictions, including a number of American jurisdictions. For example, California's Civil Code has been amended to declare that while custody should be awarded according to the best interests of the child, the first priority is to award custody to both parents jointly. The California Civil Code further states that the custody orders should encourage frequent and continuing contact with the noncustodial parent, and shall not prefer a parent as custodian because of that parent's sex.

There is still a perception in Canada today that mothers should be granted custody on a preferential basis. There are too many fathers who are denied custody in the courts who would be willing, able and, indeed, anxious to share in the custody of their children through a joint custody provision. That could only be in the best interests of the children. I would note, as well, that the former legislation did make provision for the appointment of a child advocate, a lawyer to act on behalf of the child where the interests of the child could be represented independently in the court room. That was a good provision and it is one which should be included in this legislation.

In addition, the Bill is not clear about the possibility of awarding custody or access to persons other than parents. The previous legislation made it clear that in those rare circumstances in which a parent was not the appropriate person to whom custody should be awarded, that another individual could be granted custody, for example, a grandparent, an aunt or an uncle who had looked after the children. I would suggest that the Bill should be made more explicit to make it clear that that is a possibility under this legislation.

With respect to procedure, in Canada today, 95 per cent of divorces are uncontested, but it is still necessary for the individuals in question to go through the ritual of court proceedings. In many cases, it is an expensive revolving door. It is a mere formality. We welcome the provisions in the Bill which would permit the provinces to allow divorces which are uncontested without an expensive court hearing. That would save both time and money. At the same time, I would urge the Government to do whatever it can to promote the concept of unified family courts. There are unified family courts in a number of jurisdictions. I hope the Government will recognize that the concept of one court, in which legal proceedings can take place with respect to divorce as well as providing facilities for conciliation and mediation, is important. Financial assistance to establish unified family courts should be provided.

Reform in the area of divorce law involves two basic elements. It involves the whole question of the grounds upon which divorce is granted, and it involves the question of maintenance. The Law Reform Commission of Canada, in 1976, made that point very clearly. It stated:

> Reform involves two courses of action. First there must be an effort by government in Canada to improve individual laws and practices that deal directly with maintenance enforcement. Second, the whole body of marriage breakdown law must be thoroughly re-shaped. It is as much the traditional fault-and-adversary foundation of this law as it is the particular deficiencies in enforcement techniques that accounts for the appalling record of non-payment of maintenance obligations in Canada.

The final areas I wish to address today are the question of maintenance, the enforcement of maintenance orders and an assurance that where maintenance is ordered, the spouse in question makes those payments. This Bill is a significant improvement over the previous legislation in several respects. First, the criteria upon which maintenance is granted are improved. They are more appropriate and recognize that it is not always possible for a woman who is 50 or 55 years of age, who has been working in the home for many years, to be able to quickly establish economic independence. Indeed, that may not be possible, given the high levels of unemployment today. The second improvement was in the area of fixed maintenance awards. The previous Government's legislation made provision for awards which, at the end of the term, could not be varied under any circumstances. Clearly that was wrong. I am pleased the Government has recognized that and is making provision for the possibility of reopening fixed term awards where the circumstances might not have worked out as the court had anticipated in making the original award. The previous provisions were particularly unfair to older women who might have undergone a process of retraining but simply were not able to find jobs after that.

With respect to the enforcement of maintenance orders, I would urge the Government to adopt as a policy the establishment of a national enforcement agency which would begin the enforcement process when a spouse defaults on payments, and which would also have the authority to garnishee wages and other income sources. The enlightened Government of Manitoba has, once again, led the way in that area. Manitoba in fact has the only automatic state initiated enforcement system in Canada. Whereas in 1975, some 75 per cent of Manitoba orders were in default, in 1983, after four years of automatic state enforcement, 85 per cent of maintenance orders were in fact being collected. The program was so successful in 1983 that it actually made a profit. It collected some $8 million and the total cost of collecting that amount was about $300,000. Of the amount collected, some $600,000 was turned over to the provincial treasury. Therefore, I would urge the Government not to just nod its head and say, "Yes, this is a good system", but to go further.

• (1720)

In the United States, the federal Government in fact funds to the tune of 75 per cent state enforcement mechanisms similar to those of Manitoba. I would urge the federal Government in Canada to similarly assist in the cost of provincial enforcement mechanisms such as the excellent enforcement mechanism used in the Province of Manitoba.

I welcome the access which is being made available by the federal Government to a number of federal government data banks. I would hope that all provinces would open up access to at least one major data bank in order that people who live in any province might avail themselves of these provisions. Fifty per cent to 85 per cent of divorce awards in Canada today remain in default. This is partly as a result of bitterness over the court process, and only some 15 per cent remain in default as a result of inability to track down the defaulting spouse. The main problem is enforcement. Certainly, a national enforcement system, coupled with strong and effective provincial enforcement mechanisms, would go a long way to ensuring that women who are awarded maintenance in fact receive that maintenance.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, on the question of variation of maintenance orders, I would note that once again this Bill is an improvement over the predecessor legislation. Under the previous Bill, an order could be sought varying maintenance in one province, even though the spouse was in another. This worked a particular hardship, particularly on women who could not afford to travel to the ex-husband's province. It was again as a result of representations made by the Province of Manitoba that the Government changed this provision.

The final area I would like to touch on just briefly is the whole question of pension splitting. I would have hoped that the Government would have moved forward and recognized that in this country today, at both provincial and federal levels, women should be entitled to an equal share of pension credits. The federal Government in fact should have included in this Bill an amendment to all federal pension laws which would provide that all pension credits, subject to its jurisdiction, would henceforth be shared equally between the spouses on the breakdown of the marriage. In many cases, Mr. Speaker, the woman has been working in the home for many years and has not been in the work force. She has not been in a position to build up credits for a pension. I hope that the Government will move forward quickly in the area of the splitting of pension credits.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, may I say that we welcome the introduction of this important legislation. We support the underlying principles of it. We will be proposing a number of amendments to strengthen the Bill in committee, but we are anxious that it be referred to committee quickly so we can hear from national organizations representing women and others who have concerns in this area. Because of our desire that the Bill be passed quickly, a number of my colleagues, who otherwise would have wished to speak in the debate, are not speaking, although my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood will be making some remarks. As I said, I welcome the legislation. It is an important step forward and will indeed help to make the painful process of divorce in Canada just a little easier for the many Canadians who must still go through that today.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on the Bill respecting divorce and corollary relief and on the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Bill.

First of all, I want to point out that as far as the Divorce Act is concerned, it is a great pleasure to see that a Bill similar to the one introduced last year by the Liberal Party is before the House today.

In fact, I agree that certain provisions of the Bill to amend the Divorce Act are of interest and reflect the changing attitudes of Canadian men and women.

This kind of legislation must always meet with the broadest possible consensus in society, while at the same time ensuring that the principles of justice and generosity are observed.

In Canada, 44 per cent of marriages end in divorce and 48 per cent of the couples that do divorce have children, and despite newspaper articles that describe a new generation of father as responsible and concerned about their children and actually obtaining their custody, 85 per cent of the time, women still obtain custody of their children.

The member of single-parent families increased 50 per cent between 1971 and 1981. Most single-parent families are headed by women, and more than half of the youngest women in this category have incomes below the poverty line.

Mr. Speaker, I am stating all these figures in order to emphasize the importance of our divorce legislation for that half of the population that has suffered for too long under an economic and social system that is weighted against it. Further statistics demonstrate that many women are far worse off than men after a divorce. A study carried out in 1984 shows that one year after the divorce, the husband's income had gone up 42 per cent, while the wife's had dropped by 73 per cent. Reforming the system for collecting alimony is certainly not a luxury.

Mr. Speaker, I must say that the principles on which the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) is basing the new Divorce and Corollary Relief Act and the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act, are entirely admirable. I am sure that the vast majority of Canadian men and women will agree with these principles.

Unfortunately, as is the case for many Bills passed by the Progressive Conservative Government, the principles are excellent but the provisions to enforce them are deficient, in most cases. For instance, the House will recall the measures relating to equality issues in employment tabled in the House last March. The principles on which the proposals for equality in employment for women, native peoples, the handicapped and visible minorities were based were admirable, but the tools for enforcing those principles are defective and leave some doubts as to whether the political will of the Progressive Conservative Party is genuine.

As stated by the Minister of Justice, we must make divorce proceedings more humane, while at the same time trying to protect the family bond. We must provide for equality among spouses and protect the dependent spouse who is not in a position to achieve his or her financial independence after the divorce, by seeing to it that neither party is made to suffer serious economic hardship. Access of children to both parents is also one of the Minister's objectives.

Mr. Speaker, the Progressive Conservative Government provides that marriage breakdown is the only grounds for divorce. Unfortunately, the concept of "no-fault divorce" was not included. The legislation provides that breakdown of a marriage is established if the spouses have lived separate and apart for one year or if the spouse against whom the divorce proceeding is brought has committed adultery or treated the other spouse with cruelty, in which case the divorce may be granted immediately.

Although it may not be this Government's intention to do so, by maintaining adultery or cruelty as grounds for divorce, it has thereby eliminated the possibility of speeding up divorce proceedings, which are painful enough as it is.

According to the Minister of Justice, we should advocate more humane and more equitable divorce proceedings. Who does not have a brother, a cousin, an aunt who must meet the legal requirements to obtain a divorce, and regretfully charge his or her former spouse with mental cruelty to speed up the divorce proceedings? If at least the legislation provided that two consenting adults may divorce immediately without charging each other, but not even that! And yet people can get married if both agree. Why not apply the same logic to divorce?

With the concept of no-fault divorce spouses would not have to ruin each other's reputation. We know how painful that can be for people who are going through a period of their life which is not particularly joyful. The concept of no-fault divorce would make it possible to lay more emphasis on what is primarily at stake in a divorce, namely the children's future and the restructuration of family finances, rather than stressing the unproductive and painful aspects of divorce, such as charges and counter-charges. A great many Canadian men and women nowadays are disappointed that the concept of no-fault divorce has not been accepted.

As to the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act, many groups of women have pointed out that the proposed legislation does nothing more than make it easier to gain access to information concerning husbands who do not respect orders, without allowing enforcement of support orders. In my judgment, it is imperative to set up a national organization for enforcing family orders when one of the spouses defaults. If such an organization is not established, then a very strict agreement should be signed by the provincial and federal Governments. Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister of Justice would like us to believe that such a protocol will be established, but a careful reading of the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act points to the opposite.

Clause 3 provides that the Minister may, on behalf of the Government of Canada, enter into agreements with each of the Provinces concerning the searching for and the release of information. You understood correctly, Mr. Speaker, the Minister "may", which does not mean he "shall".

Moreover, the legislation grants certain rights to a person trying to locate his or her former spouse, either because the latter does not pay the allowances ordered, or because he or she has kidnapped a child. Under this legislation, that person could petition a court to search for information on his or her former spouse. The Canadian Government is putting a series of information banks at the disposal of investigating authorities, but what seems to be creating a problem, Mr. Speaker, is that federal information banks will be available only after the provincial bank will have been. Not only must each Province determine what information banks will be available for searches—and this opens the door to high-handedness and variations between provinces—but if a Province delays in designating those information banks or bluntly refuses to do so, the whole process will become impossible to engage.

Therefore, in point of fact the working paper introduced by the Minister of Justice says on page 5 that use of federal provisions is not possible unless a province allows at least one information bank to be searched. This means the Federal Government is willing to help women trying to locate their defaulting former husbands, provided those women live in a Province whose authorities have agreed to co-operate. We know what would be the outcome of that, Mr. Speaker. Women in Quebec and Manitoba would be provided with good services, that I know for sure. But as to women in other Provinces, this is open to question.

Yet the Tory Government recognizes the problem. In the working paper I have quoted, it is stated that federal-provincial agreements are essential to the implementation of the Act. The Minister of Justice may be nearsighted, or perhaps he is simply inconsistent and irresponsible. Passing legislation and having other people carry the responsibility for enforcing its spirit and letter is a sign of poor judgment. I must say that our parliamentary rules prevent me from using the terms that truly reflect what I think of that.

Also, the political will to set up and enforce an efficient system for collecting support monies is not there. Rather than squarely taking sides with the individuals at odds with their former spouses who do not fulfill their obligations, this Government wants to go the easy way, and above all else not to hurt the Provinces. The working paper on the Family Orders Enforcement Assistance Act stresses the fact that the federal Government will make every possible effort to be flexible as to the choice of the information bank or banks to be searched, provided the bank chosen holds information that is adequate. The least we can say is that this Tory Government will avoid quarrels with the Provinces, even when they are recalcitrant and will not co-operate.

Clearly said, Mr. Speaker, this means that the system provided for by the Bill will crumble like a house of cards if the Tory Government does not get federal-provincial agreement. This is a flaw that could make this legislation completely powerless in some Provinces.

Briefly, I believe the principles that underlie the Act respecting divorce and corollary relief are commendable. They reflect the change in mentalities in Canada. However, I doubt this Government has the political will indeed to make the legislation more equitable when I see the weaknesses and inconsistencies inherent in these bills.

Mr. Speaker, it is to be hoped that some amendments will be incorporated into the bills now before the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments. Debate. The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. Lynn McDonald).

• (1730)

[English]

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview-Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, Bills C-46, C-47 and C-48 which are before us today deal with the very difficult question of divorce. There are some who would oppose the legislation, believing that divorce should be as difficult as possible to obtain, and in so far as it is difficult, that marriages will not break down. They believe that the stricter the laws are, the more marriages will be saved. However, I believe that the measures before us today are responsible. We can debate some of the finer points, but I do not think these measures will make divorce so easy to obtain that people will not make every reasonable effort possible, short of divorce, to solve their marital problems.

Most importantly, making marriage breakdown the grounds for divorce will make the process less of an adversarial one. I think that separation for a year or more will, practically speaking, become the main grounds for divorce in Canada. This will stop the terrible occurrence which we have seen in the past of children being forced to testify for one parent against the other. This is the first legislation we have seen which makes a serious attempt to deal with the issue of maintenance. Canadian women and children have suffered for a very long time because of the non payment of maintenance orders.

[Translation]

The three bills now before the House fully meet the objections which the New Democratic Party had raised when the previous government had introduced its Divorce Bill. On second reading, we had opposed the principle of the bill, for this so-called reform was not likely to improve in any way the lot of the great many women and children who depend for their support on maintenance payments. It is a well known fact that court-ordered maintenance payments are only partly made, if made at all. The result of this is that, following a divorce, the spouse on the labour market, generally the husband, benefits from an increase in his disposable income, while the spouse who has custody of the children, the wife most of the time, finds herself in a distressing predicament.

This bill will go a long way toward providing adequate income to these women and children who depend for their support on delinquent husbands and fathers. First of all, the criteria for determining maintenance payments are more just that those in the preceding legislation. As a matter of fact, that Liberal legislation could have made these women's situation even worse by insisting on maintenance payments with fixed terms and the economic independence of the divorced wife.

This bill is more realistic. It reflects the fact that economic independence for some divorced women is impossible. In some divorce cases, there are some women who have never been on the labour market, or have not been for 30, 40 or even 50 years.

In such cases, it would be unfair to compel the divorced woman to accept any job to become financially independent. Economic conditions are difficult. A 60-year old woman without experience on the labour market can earn her living but is it fair that such a woman should suffer a substantial reduction in her standard of living? Fortunately, the criteria proposed in the bill are more reasonable; they are as follows:

Firstly, the maintenance order should recognize any economic advantages or disadvantages to the spouses arising from the marriage or its breakdown; secondly, it should apportion between the spouses any financial consequences arising from the care of dependant children; thirdly, it should relieve any economic hardship of the spouses arising from the breakdown of the marriage; and fourthly, it should in so far as practicable, promote the economic self-sufficiency of each spouse within a reasonable period of time.

• (1740)

[English]

Let me note that there are real difficulties in establishing economic independence and real equality after the break-up of a marriage. Even if there is a fifty-fifty split of assets—provinces are moving toward this procedure, although it is not perfect yet—and even if some support money is granted to the spouse who has been in the home looking after the children, there will still be difficulties. What seems to be equality may not in fact be equality in practice because the partner who has stayed in the home has missed the opportunity to develop skills that are marketable. The partner who has been in the labour market during those peak years of job training and experience-gathering has human capital and the opportunity to invest. That person will have far more opportunity to gain a good livelihood after the marriage break-up. I suspect that even with better laws, women will be seriously disadvantaged. While we hope that they will be above the poverty line, they will still not be on an equal footing with their husbands because they have lost all those years of skills training which can be sold in the market-place in career development.

A serious gap in this legislation concerns the fact that pensions, even those under federal jurisdiction, are not mentioned in the legislation. ed1988;-1 While most private and employment related pensions come under provincial jurisdiction, there are some pensions under federal jurisdiction. Therefore, this unfairness with regard to pensions and the dependent spouse should be remedied. There should be automatic pension splitting for the Canada Pension Plan, with no need for application. We know that most female spouses do not make that application, nor should there be a deadline for it. There should be automatic splitting for all pensions under federal jurisdiction, especially since homemakers do not qualify for the Canada Pension Plan in their own name. Women are badly treated with respect to pensions.

The wife must negotiate pension splitting as part of the marriage settlement, which means that she may have to give up something else during that negotiation. The splitting should be automatic, unless the court finds a good reason not to do so. The federal Government could set a standard by automatically splitting all pensions under its jurisdiction. I hope that recommendations for such amendments will be made in the committee.

There has been some improvement in the legislation with respect to grounds of divorce, compared with the current laws. The New Democratic Party supports the principle of marriage breakdown being the sole ground for divorce because we believe that this is the way to have the fairest settlement, to decrease the adversarial nature of the proceedings and to prevent conduct from beginning a matter for maintenance decisions. However, the new Bill before us today would have both marriage breakdown in effect by separation of fault grounds of divorce either by adultery or cruelty. I have some concerns about the wording of the cruelty section. It states, "if one spouse has treated the other spouse with physical or mental cruelty of such a kind as to render intolerable the continued cohabitation of the spouses". This raises a question of how much cruelty must there be? How many beatings must there be before the situation is rendered intolerable?

Mr. Thacker: The same as the last law.

Ms. McDonald: The last law is very unsatisfactory in that respect. We certainly heard of cases where the spouse has gone to court claiming physical cruelty and was told that she wasn't beaten hard enough or there weren't enough bruises. The single beating or the beating she had was not enough.

It does not require a simple assault but one of a nature to render continued cohabitation intolerable. Judges have differed as to what they considered "intolerable". Therefore, people have been turned down on the grounds of physical cruelty because it was considered that a wife should be able to put up with some. It is a question of what is intolerable, and I question whether that wording is adequate for this day and age. There is also the issue of the one year separation and whether it is an adequate period to establish marriage breakdown.

I certainly have had representations in my riding, particularly from clergy, who believe that perhaps a longer period of separation might provide an opportunity for a marriage to be saved. That is a reasonable and important point to be made and it is difficult to choose a particular cut-off period. While I am not opposed to a one-year proposal, I would be glad to hear representations concerning a different period of time.

One can note that lawyers in such cases, as the courts themselves, have an obligation to work toward reconciliation and advise clients as to the possibility of marriage counselling. The court has an obligation to stop the proceedings if it believes there is a possibility for reconciliation. I believe that the legislation treats the obligation of seeking reconciliation and avoiding marriage breakdowns seriously.

With respect to the issue of enforcement machinery, there are enormous improvements in this legislation. However, one can question whether the legislation goes far enough. I might point out that the New Democratic Party opposed the previous legislation in principle simply on the grounds that it did not have adequate enforcement machinery. We worked very hard with women's organizations in the country to ensure that adequate machinery would be introduced. We fought for that very vigorously, and it is a great pleasure to see that these objections have been taken seriously.

However, organizations are saying that it is not good enough yet. Let me quote the Canadian Advisory Council on the Status of Women:

> The proposed legislation only offers increased access to information on spouses who default on support and custody orders. It should provide enforcement of these orders.
>
> The CACSW again calls for a national enforcement agency which would begin the enforcement process when a spouse defaults on payment and which would also have the authority to garnishee wages and other income sources. Without such an agency, people in need—and that is mostly women—will still have to initiate lengthy legal proceedings to get the payments they have already been awarded by the provincial courts.

This is a thorny legal question of jurisdiction between the federal and provincial Governments. I would like to see the provinces do more. Certainly, Manitoba is proving that automatic computer monitoring is successful is getting maintenance orders actually paid, and it would be beneficial for other provinces to follow suit.

The United States Government has been far more aggressive in encouraging the collection of maintenance payments. In my Party, one seldom has the opportunity to congratulate President Reagan on anything. However, in this case, if not for the right reasons, we do see some action. The purpose for his action is to save welfare payments on the part of the state. Nevertheless, bless Ronald Reagan for ensuring that women get their maintenance payments. The federal Government in the United States accomplished this by paying 75 per cent of the enforcement costs. The Government could at least consider such a mechanism. Certainly, the provincial and federal Governments should consider the establishment of much greater enforcement machinery.

Let me refer to a study by Finnbogason and Townson which raises serious doubts about the proposal before us today. What it says is that such an agency, if it is only going to have information in it and not be linked into actual enforcement, may not be cost effective. Why set one up if it is only going to have those purposes? It points out that the experience of Manitoba and other jurisdictions, such as the United States, indicates that effective enforcement of maintenance orders is a matter of regular monitoring of accounts, prompt notification of default, and vigorous pursuit of defaulters. Such requirements are only met through an automatic computerized state initiated enforcement system. The establishment of such a system should therefore be a priority in each province where it does not already exist.

● (1750)

If all Canadian jurisdictions were to adopt such a system, then a central registry could become an effective part of a nationally linked system for monitoring and enforcement of maintenance and custody orders. However, to confine a central registry to the passive role of a mere repository for the purposes of providing information on maintenance and custody orders is to develop a very expensive computerized filing system which would do little to improve the day to day enforcement of maintenance and custody orders and to relieve the desperate financial situation of so many Canadian single parent families. These are strong words and I think they are very appropriate. I think this is an area where we still need to see more work done.

The legislation does provide adequate safeguards for the abuse of privacy. This has been a traditional objection, and I think these objections are quite properly answered in the legislation. It would remove the barriers to the garnishment of federal moneys, including income tax refunds, unemployment insurance, Canada Savings Bond interest, Canada pension plan payments, old age security, guaranteed income supplements, and this list could even be extended. The important point is that there is recognition of responsibility to pay for the support of children and the people looking after them, normally the mother. A person does not have the right to say this money is mine for my use alone, but a recognition that marriage is a partnership, that family involves responsibilities of both the parents. This is a most important reform, that the right of a person to income, and the responsibility to support other people in the family unit be recognized. It is a point I have argued in the House on a number of occasions, and I am very glad to see it being recognized in the legislation today.

I have a couple of points on a few other matters in the legislation. With respect to variation orders, here we see some better recognition of the reality of Canadian mobility patterns. It is a reasonable compromise. This will allow for greater flexibility in varying orders for maintenance and also for custody. Also, there are some better safeguards than in the Liberal legislation of last year to prevent one's spouse from moving to another province just to get a variation order that the dependent spouse could not fight. The reform, which is a very sensible one, requires that the new order be confirmed in the court of the province where the concerned spouse actually lives so there cannot be this evasive action which we know occurs. This was a recommendation of the National Action Committee on the Status of Women of Canada. It shows Common sense has prevailed and that a good recommendation has been incorporated into the legislation.

There is a similar provision for custody where a child is in one province with one parent and the other parent applies for custody. The parent who has the child can apply to have the case heard in their province so that the information on the child's welfare can be brought to the court and the decision will not have to be made in a distant place where the other parent is. In other words, the needs of the child concerned will be treated seriously by the court. It will be possible to get the information on those needs to the court.

Finally, there will be greater flexibility in allowing the provinces to determine the nature of the court procedures for divorce. This will permit provinces, although it will not require them, to avoid trials on uncontested matters. This is a proper procedure, allowing these decisions to be made by the provinces. Some will probably choose to insist on having court appearances, and some will dispense with that procedure.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of satisfaction in seeing the many improvements in the legislation before us. I think it goes to show that democracy is indeed alive, that common sense can prevail, that Ministers of Justice can listen to constituents, organizations, and what Opposition Parties are saying. The Bills before us today still need some work. The NDP will support passage of them. We want these Bills to go to committee for some modest amendments. They are a considerable improvement over previous legislation. It goes to show that an Opposition Party, by raising vigorous objections and making them in a very constructive way, can have a position impact in seeing real reform brought into legislation when a matter comes to Parliament.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there any questions or comments?

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Mr. Crosbie, seconded by Mr. La Salle, moves that Bill C-46, an Act to amend the Divorce Act; that Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief; and that Bill C-48, an Act to provide for the release of information that may assist in locating defaulting spouses and other persons and to permit, for the enforcement of support orders and support provisions, the garnishment and the attachment of certain moneys payable by Her Majesty in right of Canada, be now read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motions agreed to, Bill C-46, Bill C-47 and Bill C-48 read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I believe there is disposition to call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being six o'clock, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 5.58 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, May 23, 1985

The House met at 11 a.m.

● (1105)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

INVESTMENT CANADA ACT

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER REPORT AND THIRD READING STAGES OF BILL C-15

The House resumed, from Tuesday, May 21, 1985, consideration of the motion of Mr. Stevens:

That, further to the notice given on Thursday, May 2, 1985 by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, and pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 82, in relation to Bill C-15, An Act respecting investment in Canada, one sitting day shall be allotted to the consideration of each of the report stage and the third reading stage of the said bill; and

That fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for government business on those days, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the stage of the bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, when the debate was adjourned last Tuesday, we were discussing closure or time allocation for consideration of Bill C-15.

If we look at the debate on this Bill and what has happened up to this point, I must say, although the Opposition claims we did not have enough time to consider this legislation, that this is strictly the perception of the Opposition. On second reading, after six hours of serious debate, the Opposition moved a motion to postpone consideration of the Bill for six months. It was not the Government that decided not to have a serious debate on the Bill but the Opposition that decided that it was not now in a position to proceed with a serious study of the bill. In any case, we had sixteen-and-a-half hours of debate on second reading, including the Opposition's motion.

The Bill was referred to committee for consideration. The Committee heard 23 associations and more than 30 briefs were submitted and analysed. At this stage, the Opposition agreed to let us screen this information and, with the agreement of the Official Opposition, we were able to define the scope of the study to be carried out in Committee. At the stage of clause-by-clause consideration, we accepted 19 amendments, which were the result of our meetings with various associations and of our analysis of various briefs. These amendments were mainly aimed at improving the Bill and making it respond to the expectations of so many Canadians.

The Bill has now been reported back to the House, and in addition to the 19 amendments that were approved, we have also had to examine 102 amending motions proposed by the Opposition. It soon became clear that with these amending motions, the Liberal Opposition especially wanted to make Investment Canada even stricter than FIRA. During the election campaign, however, Canadians knew perfectly well that the Progressive Conservative Government would introduce a Bill that would reflect the comments of Canadians and the changes that had to be made in the existing legislation.

If we look at the proposed legislation, it is clear that serious objections that had been made were taken into account in drafting this Bill, and that special attention was given to factors that could have an impact on Canadian culture. There is also special emphasis on the investments to be screened.

In the report stage study which the House must complete, the Opposition put up a whole slew of speakers who did not have anything new to contribute to the debate. Here we are still considering 105 Opposition motions, including 50 or close to half of them that have been rejected for being irrelevant and out of order. Every motion introduced at the various stages was meant to prolong the debate. Again last night I was listening to a public affairs program during which it was obvious that the majority of Canadians are under the impression that the Investment Canada Bill has long since been adopted. Only here in the House are we still facing the same opposition, they resort to delaying tactics, they are not ready, they want to hoist this measure. The Liberal Opposition is bent on delaying consideration of this Bill till kingdom come, yet it has had ten years to debate the issue and introduce its own amendments. We know that interested parties had been seeking changes for years and that the Liberals have had more than enough time to take action had they wanted to do so. They have come up with good suggestions since September 4, so I wonder why they did not think of them before.

I know what has been going on in the House, that we even had an Opposition day debate on the issue we are still considering today—and that was rather unusual—a debate which is a waste of time since we know the positions of the parties will not change, which makes this debate utterly useless. The Opposition is simply rehashing the same old arguments day after day, we are wasting time, the debate will not change anything.

Mr. Speaker: It being 11.09, the last seven minutes of the two hours allotted for the consideration of the motion now before the House pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 82 have now expired. Consequently, pursuant to that Standing Order, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put every question necessary to dispose of this motion.

• (1110)

[English]

The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Stevens), which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 26)

YEAS

Messrs.

Andre Attewell
Belsher
Bernier
Bertrand (Mrs.)
Binns
Bissonnette
Blackburn (Jonquière)
Blais
Blais-Grenier (Mrs.)
Blenkarn
Bouchard
Bourgault (Mrs.)
Boyer
Bradley
Brightwell
Brisco
Browes (Mrs.)
Cadieux
Caldwell
Cardiff
Champagne (Mrs.) (Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot)
Champagne (Champlain)
Chartrand
Clark (Brandon-Souris)
Clifford
Clinch
Cochrane
Collins (Mrs.)
Comeau
Cook
Corbett
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Côté (Langelier)
Crofton
Crombie
Crosbie (St. John's West)
Crosby (Halifax West)
Crouse
Dantzer
Darling
Daubney
de Cotret
Della Noce
Desjardins
Dick
Domm
Dorin
Duplessis (Mrs.)
Edwards
Ellis
Elzinga
Epp (Provencher)
Fennell
Ferland
Fontaine
Forrestall
Fraleigh
Fraser
Fretz
Friesen
Gagnon
Gass
Gérin
Gervais
Girard
Gormley
Gottselig
Graham
Gravel
Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine)
Greenaway
Grisé
Guilbault (Drummond)
Gurbin
Gustafson
Halliday
Hamilton
Hardey
Harvey
Hawkes
Hicks
Hnatyshyn
Hockin
Holtmann
Horner
Howie
Hudon
Jacques (Mrs.)
James
Jardine
Jelinek
Jepson
Johnson (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception)
Joncas
Jourdenais
Kempling
Kilgour
Kindy
King
Landry (Mrs.)
Lanthier
La Salle
Layton
Lesick
Lewis
Lopez
MacDonald (Miss) (Kingston and the Islands)
MacDougall (Timiskaming)
MacKay
Mailly (Mrs.)
Malone
Mantha
Marin
Martin (Mrs.)
Masse
Mayer
Mazankowski
McCain
McCrossan
McCuish
McDermid
McInnes
McKenzie
McKinnon
McKnight
McMillan
Minaker
Mitges
Murta
Nicholson (Niagara Falls)
Nickerson
Nielsen
Nowlan
O'Neil
Oostrom
Paproski
Pennock
Peterson
Pietz
Plamondon
Porter
Price
Ravis
Redway
Reid
Reimer
St. Germain
St-Julien
Schellenberg (Nanaimo-Alberni)
Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin)
Scott (Victoria-Haliburton)
Scott (Hamilton-Wentworth)
Scowen
Shields
Sparrow (Mrs.)
Speyer
Stackhouse
Stevens
Stewart
Suluk
Tardif (Mrs.) (Charlesbourg)
Taylor
Thacker
Toupin
Towers
Tremblay (Québec-Est)
Tremblay (Lotbinière)
Tupper
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Valcourt
Vankoughnet
Vézina (Mrs.)
Vincent
Warner
Weiner
Wenman
White
Wilson (Swift Current-Maple Creek)
Winegard
Wise
Witer—182.

NAYS

Messrs.

Angus
Axworthy
Baker
Benjamin
Blaikie
Boudria
Caccia
Cassidy
Chrétien
Copps (Ms.)
Deans
de Corneille
de Jong
Dingwall
Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon)
Foster
Frith
Fulton
Gagliano
Garneau
Gauthier
Gray (Windsor West)
Henderson
Hovdebo
Kaplan
Keeper
Killens (Mrs.)
Langdon
MacLellan
Malépart
Manly Marchi
McCurdy
McDonald (Ms.) (Broadview-Greenwood)
Mitchell (Ms.)
Murphy
Nicholson (Miss) (Trinity)
Nunziata
Orlikow
Parry
Pépin (Mrs.)
Prud'homme
Riis
Robichaud
Rodriguez
Rossi
Skelly
Tobin
Waddell
Young—50.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

* * *

FISHERIES ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-32, an Act to amend the Fisheries Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry.

Mr. Speaker: As Hon. Members are aware, there are 12 motions on the Order Paper at the report stage of Bill C-12, an Act to amend the Fisheries Act. I have had an opportunity to examine the motions and have found them to be procedurally acceptable. Motion No. 1 should be debated and voted on separately. Motions Nos. 2 to 9 inclusive should be debated together and voted on separately, in my view. I gather there may be an Hon. Member rising on that point and I will come back to it in a moment to hear his argument.

Motions Nos. 10, 11 and 12 should be debated separately and voted on separately, in my view. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) wishes to make representations on this matter.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, in the grouping of the amendments, I just wonder if it might be possible to take a couple of motions out of that group, Nos. 2 to 9, so that we might debate them separately. There are some important matters which relate to native people which are certainly separate issues. They would not necessarily fit in with the other amendments. It strikes me that those are important matters which would be worthwhile for the House to consider separately. The debate would be part of the record, and I presume that the positions taken by various groups in this House relating to those issues would be relevant. They certainly break into areas affecting the sports fishery versus the commercial fishery and it would be useful if we were able to have a short debate on the issues affecting the sports fishery. I am particularly concerned about the native area, which is relatively unique.

• (1140)

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the observation made by the Hon. Member, but I understand your ruling to be that while the various motions would be debated at one time, there is no question that each would have a separate vote. I think the most important thing is to find out where Members of Parliament stand on individual issues as demonstrated by their vote. I suggest that in order to have a debate which makes procedural and logical sense, your ruling allows us to deal with matters of great importance in the motions put forward, and utlimately there will be a separate vote. I think that solves the Hon. Member's problem.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I just want to reflect for a moment on what the House Leader said in that items 2 to 9 are important amendments which flow from the Constitution. This is one of the first opportunities we have had to make the Fisheries Act comply with the wording in Section 35 of the Constitution. We heard the evidence of a large number of witnesses from Canada's native community, and a very important amendment was proposed by groups from the West Coast relating to that Section. I think it fair for purposes of debate to include the sports fishery and the others in relation to items 2 to 9, but I think it is very important, for purposes of clarity, that these amendments, particularly those put forward by the Nishga Tribal Council, be debated separately.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the arguments which have been made. That is why I indicated on a preliminary basis what my views were. I have to say that my view has not changed. Clause 2 is the purpose clause and all amendments proposed in items 2 through 9 relate to proposed amendments to that same clause. It is therefore logical that they be grouped for debate because that clause is then before the House for consideration.

It is precisely for the reasons advanced by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) and the Government House Leader that it made sense to me that they be voted on separately in order to achieve what I think the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) wished, which is that the House have the capacity to express itself separately on various matters regarding Clause 2. However, I continue to believe that it makes sense, given that it is one clause, the purpose clause, that they be debated as one group and I therefore so rule.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-32, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out line 12 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"(c) the eggs, spawn, spat and"

He said: Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us today has had a great deal of discussion in the House and in committee. It is interesting that the Government has not been forthcoming on the concerns raised by thousands of people about this legislation. It is unfortunate that the Government really has not, in an appropriate way, consulted people about this legislation; nor has it taken seriously the amendments put before us. The rough road this Bill has had moving through the House certainly reflects this Government's good faith in dealing with this legislation.

When this legislation was presented to us early last winter, the Minister and others indicated that the fishing industry would collapse without this legislation. It was presented, in fact, the day before the herring fishery opened and the Government indicated that that $75 million industry was in danger of collapse; there would be some very serious consequences if we did not pass this Bill through all stages immediately. The reality is that this is an old piece of legislation drafted by the Liberals when they were in power. But the Liberals found that Parliament was not willing to deal with this legislation expeditiously and immediately put it on the shelf. It is interesting to note that the 1984 fishing season passed by without a problem, despite the fact this legislation was not passed.

If the Minister were prepared to sit down with user groups and discuss this legislation in a forthright and upfront manner, certainly the 1985 fishing season would go down without a hitch. But I think the Minister has chosen to play politics with this legislation and with critical issues on the West Coast. He is claiming he does not have authority to sit down with people and negotiate and work out proper allocations and opening dates for the fishing season. But he does have this authority.

Unfortunately, we then find ourselves in a very serious impasse. Basically this is a three clause Bill which purports to change definitions in the Fisheries Act, and those definitions extend the ability of the Minister to regulate. The degree of regulation already imposed on the fishing industry is just enormous and astounding. We heard in committee that the Minister had the authority to regulate the fishing industry in an appropriate way with some checks and balances where legislators or others would have an opportunity to review the regulations and have some input. But what officials from the Minister's Department stated was that this simply makes it more convenient for them. They do not have to continually go back and seek authority.

There comes a point when you have to question the track record of the Government and the Minister involved, as well as how his officials have performed. You have to ask yourself if you want to give these people more power and make it more convenient for them to regulate the lives of Canadians.

I know Members opposite cried from the roof-tops about the heavy hand of regulators, rule by Order in Council, and the inability of Canadians to have some proper input in the decisions which affect their lives. But no sooner are they in power than we find the absolute reverse situation. We do not have open government. It is extremely difficult to talk to people in that Government concerning user groups whose lives are affected. Not only has the Government closed the doors, it has made up its mind about how things will work. It is extremely difficult to have the Government accept reasonable changes.

• (1150)

Finally, through this Bill, the Government is attempting to make it easier to impose regulations without having to come to Parliament. This amendment, which would extend definitions in the legislation, also allows the Government to extend its authority. That is extremely unfortunate. We believe we should be able to question that authority and question the definitions.

When this Bill was being considered in committee the Government appeared willing to accept only one amendment which was moved by my colleague from Prince Edward Island. Late in the proceedings he noticed an enormous omission in the legislation and attempted to include larvae in this particular Section. I have serious questions about that because the Liberals and the Conservatives are in bed, attempting to have the hand of Government regulate the fishing industry even further.

On that basis, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That this House do now adjourn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has received the motion by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), seconded by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton). Because we do have a special order today which states, "notwithstanding any other order", and because it is a Budget day, the Chair must rule that the motion is out of order.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. On what point do you make that ruling? Motions to adjourn the House are always in order. That is completely erroneous.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Member knows that the decision of the Chair cannot be appealed.

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, we were discussing an amendment which would include in the clause defining fish, "portions of fish" as defined under the new Fisheries Act. I suggest to the Minister that this further complicates the definition of fish and fisherpersons in the various Acts and regulations that are in effect in this country. For example, the fact that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans will now have jurisdiction over "portions of fish" will bring into question whether it has the constitutional right to do so since a fish is the real property of the person who has landed it. Therefore, would the Department not be infringing on the provincial jurisdiction as far as portions of fish are concerned? Once a fish is landed and brought onshore it comes under provincial jurisdiction and therefore that province may regulate what happens to the portion of the fish as well. The provinces issue the relevant licenses concerning fish and generally administer the transportation, storage and processing of the product once it is landed.

I suggest that the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) should examine the ramifications of changing the definition of fish as it relates to other definitions that are in effect in other legislation.

Another example is the Unemployment Insurance Act, and its definition of who is a fisherperson, fisherman, and what happens to that fish when it is brought over the side of the boat.

I raise that issue because most of the cases that are pending before the Unemployment Insurance Commission, as a result of a determination of the Department of National Revenue, involve the question of the definition of fish and the definition of a fisherman as a person who is a member of a crew and catches that fish. As a result of this amendment, will it also now include the definition of a fisherperson who handles the portions of a fish? In other words, what is the meaning of the definition as it relates to the Unemployment Insurance Act?

This is a very important subject. I am sure that Members of Parliament who have constituents with a case before the Board of Referees, the Federal Court of Canada, or have appeals to the Minister responsible for the UIC, recognize that there must be some consistency with the changing of this definition and the regulations that are in effect under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The Government of Canada has embarked upon a policy of checks and balances, examining the books of fish companies and the records of fishermen as they relate to the fish they catch. It is unfortunate that the Government, which wants to tighten up on unemployment insurance, has implemented that process. In carrying out this procedure, the investigator goes back to the regulations that were based on the definition of fish, and now based on the definition of portions of fish, to determine how that person actually established his claim.

For example, as a result of this new section of the Bill, it would be possible to classify a fisherman as someone who rakes up Irish moss, but it would not be possible to define a fisherman as someone who takes a portion of a fish and completes the processing of that fish. In other words, persons who spend their entire time salting portions of fish or working with portions of fish on shore as part of a fishing crew are no longer covered by the Unemployment Insurance Act. Will they be covered with this new definition of fish as presented under the Fisheries Act? The obvious answer to that is no. The judge, or the Department of National Revenue in making that determination would only go by the regulations in the Unemployment Insurance Act. The need is there for the Minister of Fisheries on behalf of all of these fishermen—

• (1200)

Mr. Dick: Fisherpersons.

Mr. Baker: —fisherpersons who will in the future get into trouble with the Unemployment Insurance Commission because of the actions of this Government, to try to co-ordinate these definitions to lessen the chances of a man having to pay back $5,000, $6,000 or $7,000 as it is now.

There are hundreds and hundreds of fishermen across Canada who have to pay back this money because of a problem with definitions. In one section of Newfoundland 278 fishermen are having to pay back $7,000 or $8,000. They are appealing the decision. But why did that situation occur? It happened because of a problem with definitions, the problem that we are dealing with here today. It happened because it is the policy of the Government of Canada to remove all those people who should not be getting unemployment insurance. What they did when they threw out the net is they cut people off because of the problem with definitions. They had to draw the line in regulations. They asked, "Was this a fish that the person caught? Does this cover portions of fish? No, it does not cover portions of fish". The Fisheries Act with this amendment covers portions of fish. Why does the Unemployment Insurance Act or its regulations not cover portions of fish?

In the spirit of this amendment, and in dealing with this clause, the Minister of Fisheries with the rest of his Cabinet colleagues should examine and change the regulations in the Unemployment Insurance Act so we will not have thousands and thousands of Canadians being judged not eligible for unemployment insurance after having received it for three and four years, and having to pay back thousands and thousands of dollars because of a problem with definitions. These are poor people, people with average incomes of $7,000 or $8,000 a year. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, with this new clause in the Fisheries Act there can be some co-ordination of Unemployment Insurance and Fisheries Act regulations in order to have matching definitions.

Before I sit down if the Minister is going to say a few words, I want to make sure that he has in his statement the answer to a very important question. Is the Minister or is he not going to answer positively the request from the Fishermen's Union and every fisherman in Newfoundland and on the Quebec coast, including those in the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) own riding, to extend unemployment insurance because of the ice conditions?

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill, as all Members know, is to give the Minister and the Department the authority necessary to manage the fisheries of Canada, especially in view of court cases last summer which put this authority in doubt.

I want to remind Hon. Members and the public, and especially friends on the West Coast, that this Bill was tabled on March 4, 1985. On March 6 second reading debate began. On March 12 at my invitation and with the concurrence of the Government House Leader the debate was adjourned.

On March 14 from 9:30 a.m. to one o'clock in the afternoon I appeared before the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry as a consequence of that arrangement—an unusual procedure. On March 20, second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry was agreed to in this House. On March 21 the committee review began with sessions with officials from my department. From March 24 to April 3 the committee, with my full endorsation and support, held seven days of hearings on the West Coast, during which time the subject of this Bill formed part of the representations heard at that time.

From March 26 to April 2, the Hon. senate conducted a pre-study of the Bill in the Senate Standing Committee on Agriculture, Fisheries, and Forestry.

On April 22, the House of Commons Standing Committee heard testimony from representatives of seven industry groups and from the West Coast Minister's advisory committee. On April 24, I appeared before the Standing Committee again. On April 29, the Standing Committee of the House of Commons heard testimony from representatives of ten native groups and the Government of New Brunswick. On April 29 clause by clause consideration of the Bill began in committee. That went on until the early hours of the next morning. On May 2, I appeared again before the Standing Committee on clause by clause study and the Bill was reported to the House with two amendments.

I would point out to my friend, the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) that one of the amendments accepted was the amendment of his colleague from Prince Edward Island to include larvae in the definition of fish. That is the item which the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) is trying to remove, which is most unusual.

On May 16, the Government gave notice of amendment motions to safeguard aboriginal rights. I would remind all of those who are here to keep in mind that the Government is proposing an amendment that says nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any existing aboriginal or treaty rights of the aboriginal peoples of Canada.

There has been a common misconception in the House, among the public and the media that somehow or other the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River is the only person opposed to this Bill. That is not so, Mr. Speaker. The Leader of the New Democratic Party clearly concurs in that opposition as does the House Leader for the New Democratic Party—

Ms. Mitchell: We always act as a group.

Mr. Fraser: —as does my friend, the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) and other friends of mine in the New Democratic Party from British Columbia. It must be clearly understood that as long as this Bill is delayed I do not have the legal authority to proceed with the allocation and disposition of fishing plans in the Gulf of Georgia. This authority is necessary and should be announced in the interests of the Gulf trollers and for the continuation of the sports fishing commercial enterprise which the Province of British Columbia is so dependent upon at this time.

I want it clearly understood, Mr. Speaker, that it is the New Democratic Party, with its motion to adjourn, that has clearly decided to do everything it can to scuttle this Bill, no matter how reckless or irresponsible the action might be. The Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River said he had questions to ask. He has spent hours with my officials up until recently going over all the details of the proposed spot closures which will be very difficult to implement if this Bill is not passed. The Act without these amendments is still very much at risk, because there will be a court of appeal hearing on June 28 on the substance of the decision of last summer. I ask Hon. Members and the public to recognize the difference between constructive debate and intelligent and legitimate inquiry. That has ceased and Members of the New Democratic Party have decided, no matter how careless their action may be or how it will affect the livelihood of people in my province and on the West Coast, that they want to obstruct the process.

We have to do what we can to implement the terms of the Canada-U.S. Pacific Salmon Treaty as well, which involves restrictions on catch, and we need the power in this Bill to implement that. It is clearly the New Democratic Party, and not just one member who, while conscientious in my view, is misguided and seems to lack some understanding of the purpose of all this, that is preventing us from proceeding. The New Democratic Party has decided, no matter how long it has had to discuss this Bill and no matter how many days in committee, no matter how many private meetings with officials and discussions with myself or somebody else, to wreck the process and try to keep this Bill from being passed under any circumstances whatsoever. It must be clearly understood what the NDP is doing.

I am a little surprised that the Hon. Member for Skeena is doing this. He has representatives from his riding dealing with me on a matter of very great importance to the native people on the Taku River. I am trying to co-operate with him. There is no co-operation from the New Democratic Party on a Bill of immense importance to the administration of the fisheries in Canada.

• (1210)

I also want to point out, because it is appropriate to do so, that Hon. Members of the Official Opposition in the Liberal Party have been very diligent throughout the entire process. They have made constructive suggestions and have helped to bring before us those problems of the provinces which have now been resolved. They argued strongly for the inclusion of a section to ensure that there be no abrogation or denigration of native rights, and that was appropriate. They have played a full and effective part in this process. It is not Her Majesty's Official Opposition which desires to wreck this piece of legislation.

I urge all Hon. Members to assist the House in passing this piece of legislation so that the uncertainties, especially those on the West Coast, can be clarified as quickly as possible. As soon as the Bill is passed, it is the disposition of the House to co-operate, I will be able to do something very quickly to alleviate the uncertainties with respect to Gulf trollers and others.

This is not only a West Coast matter. We are not asking for powers that have not been assumed. It may have been incorrect to assume them, given the court decisions which have flowed from the challenge. Nonetheless, those powers of allocation and administration have been assumed. As Hon. Members from Atlantic Canada know, the fisheries of the Atlantic Provinces could not be managed if the amendments requested at this time were not granted.

In conclusion, I urge all Hon. Members to understand clearly what this matter is all about, and that it is the New Democratic Party, with a Leader stationed in central Canada who does not understand fisheries, which is attempting something that is reckless and irresponsible.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have great respect for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser), but that little puff piece he just put before the House requires some response.

This Bill was introduced on March 4. In the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry we talked for the first time in a quarter of a century about going to British Columbia and listening to sports fishermen, native fishermen, seine boat fleets, gill-netters and trollers to find out their views. We took thousands of pages of evidence from the different user groups in British Columbia. Other than commercial sports fishermen, we found no support whatsoever for Bill C-32 as it is drafted.

The Minister said it was only the New Democratic Party which was holding up the legislation. We in British Columbia have listened a long time to jiggery-pokery from the Tories about consulting and then drafting legislation to meet our needs. In fact this Bill was drafted by the Liberal Party. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans took it hook, line and sinker from his bureaucrats, either here in Ottawa or in Hull. He talked about central Canadian legislation. That is where this piece of legislation was drafted; that is from where it came.

Also the Minister said that the committee should go out and hear evidence on what the people really wanted. We have heard from fishermen in British Columbia. They do not like the Bill as it is drafted because it does not have a consultative or protective mechanism for existing user groups. We are talking about native people, the native food fishery and the commercial fishery. We are talking about existing gear types and a group in British Columbia and within other areas of Canada which is massively expanding, the sports fishermen. There are now close to 500,000 licensed sports fishermen in British Columbia. A few small, fragmented groups claim to represent them all, but clearly that is not the case. None of the groups which appeared before us produced membership lists which indicated that they represented 50,000 or 75,000 members.

I was interested in hearing the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans say that he had the Liberal Party penned up in a room doing exactly what he wanted. The Minister accepted one amendment, the addition of the word "larvae". All scientific experts who appeared before the committee said that the addition of the word "larvae" was not necessary, that to describe it as the juvenile stage of fish was perfectly adequate. I see that the Parliamentary Secretary is present. He knows that this was a puff piece, adding the word "larvae" to the Bill. It makes no significant change. I challenge him to produce a single scientist or biologist who said that this was the greatest and most necessary legal addition possible to the Bill.

Let me return to what the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans is saying. He proclaims himself as a prima donna representing only British Columbia interests. That in fact is not the case. When the fishing industry appeared before the committee, it made clear that it did not want the Bill passed in this form. The New Democratic Party takes that seriously. We have attempted to have included, as contained in Motions Nos. 2 to 9, a consultative or protective mechanism for those 500,000 sports fishermen, native people in British Columbia and those who operate on seine vessels, gill-net vessels and the troll fleet. We have tried to introduce some semblance of sanity into the legislation.

The Tories are always talking about consultation. Why did we go to British Columbia for two weeks? Why did we sit from eight o'clock in the morning until midnight, with no lunch break or dinner break, to take evidence from fishermen? I challenge the Minister of Fisheries to rise in the House today and say that he has read that evidence.

I should like to deal now with the Government of New Brunswick. When representatives appeared before the committee just a couple of weeks ago they said that the Bill was both illegal and unconstitutional. Although those representatives could not speak for the politicians in New Brunswick, they made clear that the Bill, as presently drafted, would be challenged in the Supreme Court of Canada. What does the Minister of Fisheries have to say about that? Why has he not come forward and told us how he will deal with the very real concerns of the Province of New Brunswick, going back to the 1880s and the Robertson case, the famous fly-fishing case which went to the Supreme Court of Canada? The Minister of Fisheries has not dealt with that.

Motion No. 12, in the name of the Hon. Minister, reads as follows:

Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any existing aboriginal or treaty rights of the aboriginal peoples of Canada.

He is trying to tell aboriginal peoples that Section 35 of the Constitution is empty. That section is not empty, it in fact contains rights. What about the proposal which came forward from the Nishga Tribal Council?

I see the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) present in the Chamber. I hope he will rise in the House and tell aboriginal peoples whether he supports the inclusion of the Minister of Fisheries that Section 35 is empty. The proposal which the Council put forward is very clear and supports that of the Government of New Brunswick. I always thought there was a Tory Government in New Brunswick. I guess that is not the case any longer; I guess it is just another little group to be swept aside.

Motion No. 2 is very clear and to the point. It reads:

—to provide for the proper management and control of the inland fisheries of Canada and for the allocation of those fisheries, subject only to:

(i) the constitutional jurisdiction of the provinces—

That is why the Government of New Brunswick came here and argued its case forcefully and openly. The Minister of Fisheries does not want to deal with it. Having been through the constitutional process myself, I believe we should respect the constitutional jurisdictions as put forward by the provinces. The motion continues:

(ii) the constitutional rights of aboriginal people to the fishery;

We live in a country where rights have to be respected. We cannot just pile drive this through. The Minister of Fisheries says that we must have Bill C-32 because of the Collier decision in British Columbia. I urge the Minister of Fisheries to read the Collier decision and to look at the progress which has occurred in British Columbia with the Mac Committee. There were no problems in this year's herring fishery. There was an agreement on the part of the Department, the Minister and the existing fleet to come forward with a rational plan. Some very sensible amendments were put forward by the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) to entrench within the legislation that for which people have been crying for decades—a consultative mechanism to protect existing allocations and to ensure that before the Minister comes up with a new management plan for a season he has consulted with the trollers. He cannot just say that he will give them 13 per cent this year and 4 per cent the next year. He cannot simply say that there will be "shinners cubes" for the sports industry and all that gobbledygook.

The Minister of Fisheries pleaded his case. He said that the media misunderstood him, that he was a good guy, that it was only the NDP which was holding up the Bill, and that the Liberals had their "larvae" amendment accepted. He wants to throw this bone to the aboriginal people and say that he will sort of recognize their aboriginal rights. What was the constitutional process all about? I think the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is the one Member of this House, as the Crown representative of the aboriginal peoples, who should be fighting for them.

This is one of the oldest Acts in Canada; it was written in 1867. This is the first time in many decades that a proposal has come forward to put a purpose section in the Act for the interpretation of the courts. There are many fisheries cases involving aboriginal peoples, gulf trollers and others which will end up in the Supreme Court of Canada. We will have a purpose section without the recognition, as it should be written, of provincial constitutional jurisdiction and constitutional jurisdiction as we see it in Section 35 for aboriginal peoples, making it clear that it is a recognition of aboriginal rights, and making it clear that provincial jurisdiction is not being tampered with. We must take these kinds of opportunities in Parliament to bring our Acts into the 20th century. It was written in 1867 and now we are adding a purpose section, with reference to marine plants, portions of fish and other new wording. If we do not take the opportunity to make it constitutionally accurate and to reflect the nature of our country, we are not doing our job in this Parliament.

● (1220)

The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) can go to British Columbia and say that the NDP is stalling the Bill. The fishermen there know that our committee went there, received a lot of evidence and came back here meaning well. They know we mean to amend this Bill to reflect the views of British Columbia fishermen, sports fishermen, native fishermen, trollers, gill-netters, seine boat operators. We want it to reflect that reality.

When the Deputy Minister appeared before the fisheries committee this morning I asked him what user groups he had dealt with in the Atlantic provinces, and he replied "Oh, none." I asked what his dealings had been with Governments in the Maritimes and he replied "Oh, none." Is this the great era of Conservative consultation? A group from this House of Commons went in good faith to British Columbia to hear evidence. We came back with logical proposals based on the evidence given by fishermen in British Columbia. The Tories say we cannot have any of that in there, but that they will throw in "larvae" and a little extra wording. They say they have to get the Bill through because of the Collier decision.

Let me deal for a moment with the Collier decision because it is the crux of the matter. The Minister says that because the Gulf trollers are fishing, he is in a terrible dilemma. He will not be able to allocate to different user groups in British Columbia. That is simply not the case. The facts are clear. The herring fishery proceeded this season.

The Minister has to deal more openly and fairly with the Gulf trollers. The rest of this season's fishing plan is falling into place. This Party does not intend to stall Bill C-32 forever and a day. We want this Bill to contain a consultative and protective mechanism for the user groups, not just in British Columbia, but for all Canadians. We want to be sure that those who have been involved historically in an industry are protected. New users of a resource such as salmonids in British Columbia must be given a protected place within the fishery.

I am a sports fisherman. I do not want to see sports fishermen excluded. The Minister plays games, saying that the NDP is trying to take away from the rights of sports fishermen or from others. The fact is that this Bill is not representative of the evidence that we heard, the constitutional evidence, legal evidence, evidence of user groups and evidence of aboriginal peoples.

The Minister does not urgently require this legislation. It should be redrafted or, during this process of debate, the Minister should put on his consultative hat and demonstrate to Canadians that he is prepared to accept in good faith amendments that are based on logical evidence. The Parliamentary Secretary knows the evidence was given in good faith. We sat early in the morning until late at night. We sat up all night dealing with this Bill. Now we only have "larvae" attached to it. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans should return to this House and not carry on with this puff piece about the NDP stalling this Bill. We are holding this Bill in an attempt to make it good legislation which represents the user groups of Canada.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to speak at any length on this first amendment. I moved the amendment to have the word "larvae" included. I did that because the previous legislation talked about the eggs, spawn, then there was a gap, spat, juvenile stages of fish.

There is a very important stage in the development of fish that was not taken into consideration in the legislation we had before us at the committee at that time. The larval stage as far as musks are concerned for oysters, clams and most shellfish, is a critical stage. I will use oysters or clams as an example. There are male and female oysters. After an oyster develops gonads, it develops the eggs and the sperm. Fertilization takes place in suspension. There is an 18 to 21 day period that is definitely not covered under the old legislation. It is a very critical stage in the development of oysters or shellfish, extremely critical. Indeed, one-half of one per cent of oyster larvae survive to the stage of maturity and indeed come to spat. Why would this be left out of this legislation in the definition? It is a very minor technicality, but one that most biologists would certainly agree to. My understanding is that since that word has been put in, by my request, biologists in fisheries and in other areas have confirmed that it is important to have that included.

I am only going to speak to this motion at this time. We have major concerns about other motions which we will speak to at another time. We will not be supporting the motion to delete the word "larvae" moved by my friend from Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly). I presume that my friend probably wanted to remove the word for other purposes. I think he understands the technicalities of it. It was probably to open debate on Clause 1, and that is fine. At this time I am going to stick to the motions we are dealing with here. We will be speaking on further motions later in this debate.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, it is always difficult to follow the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson). He usually speaks with a great deal of expertise on anything he debates, especially with relation to the fisheries. In his recent speech he seemed to be an expert in the sex life of oysters. I would not want to debate that too much with him. I know the old Liberal Party believed the state should keep out of the bedrooms of the nation. The new Liberal Party must want to get the state into the sex life of oysters. Well, Parties change. I guess they are entitled to do that.

I am a bit upset with the comments of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser). Let me say something about his contribution to this debate. When I was the short-lived fisheries critic for my Party I said in this House that I have a great deal of respect for the Hon. Member for Vancouver South, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. We have been colleagues for a long time. We appeared against each other in courts in Vancouver and in other areas. However, I do not take too kindly to his comments about the role of the New Democratic Party in this debate. We are saying some real things. We are speaking for western Canada. We are speaking for British Columbia. We are speaking for the fishermen. That is what the Minister should be doing. How soon they forget.

• (1230)

When government Members sat on this side of the House, they acted like an Opposition Party. When they moved to the government benches they suddenly became just like the old Liberal Party. They have become centralized Canadians. They forget about the interests of the West Coast and about ordinary Canadians, the little people who really make up this country. I see that a government Member from B.C. is present. He is one of the 19 Tories from B.C. who are not really carrying on a good fight for British Columbia. They are putting out a lot of hype about what they are doing but they are not really doing very much.

I can tell the House why we do not like this Bill as it relates to the consultation process. As the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) said, the committee spoke to the fishermen's groups and the fishermen's groups told us almost unanimously that they did not like this particular Bill. They told us that they are afraid it will give the Minister too much power and will concentrate power in the bureaucracy. That is the problem with the Bill. It is a Bill which is an overkill reaction to a lawsuit with which I will deal in a moment.

The biggest growth industry in the fisheries sector these days is in the fisheries bureaucracy. The problem with the fisheries industry used to be that there were too many fishermen chasing too few fish. Now the problem is that there are too many bureaucrats governing too many fishermen who are chasing too few fish. The bureaucracy is growing by leaps and bounds. I have heard it mentioned that there are 6,000 bureaucrats who deal with the fisheries industry. Perhaps that figure is wrong. It is simply one that came to mind. In any event, there are too many bureaucrats.

The position we are taking is one which befits a popular western Canadian Party. The Minister should realize that the interests of ordinary Canadians and the little people ought to be protected from people over in Hull or here in Ottawa who work in fancy buildings and make decisions for fishermen who live in British Columbia. The very lives of these fishermen depend on when the fishing season opens.

The Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) is present in the House today. He appreciates these new kinds of arguments that come up from time to time. The latest argument being put forward by the Department of Fisheries is that it is doing this for the fish. It is easy to do things for the fish because the fish do not talk back. We are getting our instructions from the fish. The bureaucrats should be getting their instructions from the fishermen, the human beings who are participating in the fisheries process, as well as from the environmentalists and concerned Canadians, particularly members of the New Democratic Party who are fighting for the rights of Canadian fishermen.

As I said, the problem began with a court case. The ruling of Mr. Justice Collier of the Federal Court stated that the federal Government was only entitled to allocate fish on the basis of conservation. This decision interfered with what the bureaucrats considered to be their powers over opening and closing the fishing season and dealing with everything concerning the fisheries on the West Coast. That is why they were upset by this particular decision.

Another problem with the decision was that Mr. Justice Collier, in what lawyers call an obiter dictum, something which is not the law but is thought to probably be the law, indicated that the Fisheries Act was unconstitutional, that some of its provisions violated the Canadian Constitution and that the federal Government had no business putting those kinds of controls on the fisheries industry. That is a serious matter.

Rather than rushing this Bill forward in an attempt to plug the loopholes created by the Collier decision, by trying to add to the powers of the Fisheries Department without really consulting the fisheries groups, the Minister should go to court to test the constitutionality of the fisheries law provisions. If Mr. Justice Collier, a well respected and experienced judge, is right in what he said, then the Bill we are debating, the Bill which we were accused by the Minister of filibustering, will then fall and all of the debate will be wasted. We are saying that the Bill should be referred to the court for an opinion. During the course of the second reading debate of this Bill, I put that specific question to the Minister. I would refer the House to Hansard which recorded that exchange.

We think the Fisheries Department has a hidden agenda. Because of this Bill, we think there will be more users competing for a shrinking resource. We feel that no part of the legislation improves the plan for the protection of the environment. There is no plan to base enhancement on the principle of watershed management. There is no move to protect our stocks from high sea intervention by foreign fleets. In fact, we say that thousands of pages of direct testimony from experienced users of the resource have been set aside by the Minister and the Department in bringing in this Bill. That is a serious charge and demands some serious answers.

The problem with the Bill is not just with an amendment affecting larva. As important as it is and as much as my colleague from the Liberal Party likes the sex lives of oysters, although he indeed has made a significant contribution to this debate by expounding on the sex lives of oysters, there are bigger issues which the Liberal Party must address. I have never heard the Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner), speaking on West Coast issues. I hope he will speak on this particular Bill today.

I would like to deal with another aspect mentioned by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena; that is the part of the Bill which relates to native people. The Hon. Member for Skeena indicated that it almost seems as though this Bill and its amendments were drafted without considering Section 35 of the Constitution. Section 35 of the Constitution establishes existing aboriginal rights of the native peoples of Canada and is an important part of the Constitution. Hon. Members might as well accept that now. We have to deal with it. It is no good to put in an amendment indicating that we will acknowledge that section. We must deal with it in more detail.

I remember when we were dealing with Bill C-48, the oil and gas measure, in the Energy Committee. At that time, the Liberals proposed the same clause that is proposed as an amendment to this Bill. It is not good enough to slip in a clause that says we will not do anything with existing rights. My colleagues, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) and the Hon. Member for Skeena, have many native people in their ridings and have specifically proposed certain amendments to this Bill. With respect to Hon. Members, I think those amendments are worth examining.

We do not apologize for not dealing with larvae amendments and for presenting more substantial amendments. We do not apologize for holding this Bill up until we can get a better deal for the fishermen on the coast. Fishermen are unique. They are the last real hunters of Canada. The fisheries industry is unique, and what these bucreaucrats do with it affects these people's lives. That is why we want to make sure that the bureaucratic power is restricted as much as possible. That is why we want to make sure that the users, the trollers, the seiners, the gill-netters, the sports fishermen and the native fishermen are consulted. That is why my colleagues were prepared to sit up all night in committee. That is why we are speaking in this House today.

As much as we like the Minister of Fisheries personally, we will not accept it when he says that we are guilty or that our Leader is only a central Canadian. We are standing up for the rights of the fishermen in Canada and we will continue to do so.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, like my colleague, the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), and other Members of our Party, I was rather distressed to hear the remarks of the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) who described the actions of our Party regarding Bill C-32 as being reckless and irresponsible. We in this Party believe that Bill C-32 is reckless and irresponsible because of the kinds of powers it gives to the Minister. We feel that the Bill is irresponsible and fails to listen to what the fishermen of the Pacific Coast have had to say.

The committee went to a great deal of effort to travel to British Columbia to listen to what the actual fishermen had to say. The committee returned to Ottawa and found that really nothing about the Bill has been changed. We are still giving carte blanche to the Minister to do whatever he wants to do.

When the committee travelled, the majority of witnesses who appeared before it made it very clear that they did not want this Bill passed in its present form. As the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway pointed out, what we have in the Bill is a form of overkill in reaction to a court decision.

● (1240)

I do not believe that it is reckless and irresponsible of our Party to insist that there should be proper consultation before the Bill, in its final form, is passed. I do not believe that it is reckless and irresponsible to insist that a consultation process should be built into the Bill in order that different user groups on the coast could have a say as to how the resource should be allocated. That is exactly what the Minister promised when he was fisheries critic for the Official Opposition before the election. But it would seem that elections change views. Elections not only change the Government, they change the minds of some individuals who form the Government.

I regret that the Minister has changed his view. Before the election he appeared to be very open to the idea that all user groups and all people who had a basic interest in the fisheries should be involved in making decisions. However, now the Minister is standing in the House and telling us that we are reckless and irresponsible because we refuse to give him carte blanche to make all sorts of regulations without the requirement of consultation.

I remember, as do other Members, when the Davis plan was introduced to limit the number of people who would be involved in the fishing industry on the West Coast. That plan was introduced some 15 or 16 years ago. I think all sides of the House would agree that the plan was a disaster. At that time we had yet another instance of "Minister knows best". The Davis plan was dreamed up by the Minister and his advisors. It had nothing to do with the actual people who were involved in the industry. Those people attempted to raise their voices and point out the problems inherent in the Davis plan. But, the Minister knew best and the plan went ahead. Now we all recognize that the plan was a complete disaster.

I have three basic concerns regarding the Bill in its present form.

Mr. Gass: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Malpeque (Mr. Gass) on a point of order.

Mr. Gass: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering to what motion the Member is speaking. I thought it was the motions to which we were speaking and not the whole Bill.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, had the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Gass) read the amendment and understood its import, he would have recognized that the Davis plan, in fact, affected the fishery in such a complicated and far-reaching manner that even the production of eggs, spat and other things were affected. The Hon. Member was referring to the reorganization of fisheries, which touches on the matter of regulations, and the amendment deals with how closely the regulations deal with every aspect of fishing. Of course, that is what we are working toward removing.

Mr. Gass: Mr. Speaker, I have listened very intently to the previous Member and he never once mentioned the word "larvae".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sure the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly) will make his comments relevant to Motion No. 1.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I will be very glad to discuss the issue of larvae. As a preliminary, I believe it is important to recognize that the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans made a fairly lengthy speech, but he did not refer to larvae. He referred to the New Democratic Party and said that it was reckless and irresponsible. He referred to our Leader as being reckless and irresponsible, as well as the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly). However, I did not hear the Minister speak on the question of larvae. I would be glad to continue, if I may, to make several prefatory comments.

I have three concerns regarding the Bill: first, the failure to consult prior to the drafting of the Bill; second, the fact that the fishing industry on the West Coast is already subjected to over-regulation; and third, that the Bill gives too much power to the Minister. My third point goes back to the comment I was making before I was interrupted by the point of order, which is that we have already seen what resulted from that kind of situation through the Davis plan.

There has been a failure to consult with the fishing industry on the West Coast and there has been a refusal to recognize that the people who are most involved in the fishery are the people who could arrive at the best solutions. One of the jobs of the Minister should be to sit down with all the people who are involved in the industry and establish a comprehensive program which would result in long-term solutions for the fishing industry, instead of telling us that the whole issue is so complex that only the Minister and his advisors can deal with it.

If we look at the treatment which Indian witnesses received, we get a very good idea about what the failure to consult in drafting the legislation meant. When the committee was considering the Bill it decided that it would not hear Indian witnesses. The Conservative Party decided against hearing Indian witnesses. However, the Indian people wanted to be heard. They sent a deluge of telegrams, letters and made numerous telephone calls to pressure the committee, together with the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River and the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton).

Finally, the Conservative Party saw the light and felt that it should change its previous position. So, the decision was made to hear Indian people, but what happened? The Indian people were brought to Ottawa and subjected to an around-the-clock process. They were required to appear all evening before the committee. Ed Newman, President of the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, told us that he travelled some 3,000 miles to appear before the committee and then had to speak to a group of empty seats. He felt that the Indian people were being treated very shabbily. When I visited the committee I was surprised. Of the 11 Conservative members on the Committee only the Parliamentary Secretary and the Chairman were present. Members from the New Democratic Party and the Liberal Party were present, but only one Conservative member was present.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) on a point of order.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I believe the Hon. member's remarks are completely out of order. Attendance in the House or in committees is not to be mentioned in the House of Commons. In addition, the work of the committee should not be mentioned. I would ask the Chair to rule that those remarks are completely out of order.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point or order. It has been the practice—not to single out any Member in the House, or to say that that Member was not in the House or was not in committee. But, never in my experience have I been aware of the fact that it is unparliamentary to say that Tory Members, Liberal Members or NDP Members were absent. There is nothing wrong with mentioning that. Indeed, I believe it is quite correct to mention that the Conservatives who are so concerned about the Bill have a sparse attendance in the House. There is not one Tory from British Columbia in the House. We have not specifically named anyone. I noticed that I was very careful not to name anyone. That is a very important—

• (1250)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think the Hon. Member has made his point.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) on a point of order.

Mrs. Mailly: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Concerning the same question, I thought that the remarks of the Hon. Member were not altogether relevant.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Quite true with respect to the relevance of the speech of the last speaker.

[English]

I give the floor to the Hon. Member for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands (Mr. Manly). He has one minute left in his speech.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I apologize if I was slightly out of order on that last issue. I simply raised the matter because of the concern of the Indian people themselves. They felt that they had been shabbily treated. However, if I was out of order, I do apologize to the Hon. members of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Rodriguez: They are so sensitive.

Mr. Manly: I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton):

That debate on Bill C-32 be adjourned until 4 p.m. today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has received a motion by Mr. Manly, by virtue of Standing Order 50, wherein he moves that the debate on Bill C-32 be adjourned until four o'clock today. The first part of the motion technically would be in order. However, by having added a certain time limit, the Hon. Member has qualified the motion. For that reason, the Chair must rule the motion out of order.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I would ask permission to withdraw the final words of the motion in order to make it in order.

Some Hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has already ruled on the motion and it is out of order. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo).

Mr. McDermid: Tell us what you know about fish.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Where I come from, Mr. Speaker, we do a lot of fishing.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hovdebo: This Bill before the House is very typical of what this Government has been doing during its few months in office. It keeps giving lip service to a large number of issues but never really gets a good hold on them. It never follows up on what it says it is going to do. For instance, Motion No. 1, the process of consultation was insisted upon by the New Democratic Party with respect to this particular Bill. We finally convinced the Government to allow the committee to travel to the West Coast—

Mr. Gass: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member is speaking on Motion No. 1, I believe, and that has to do with eggs, spawn, spat and larvae. It has nothing to do with consultation.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I find the behaviour of the Parliamentary Secretary certainly very questionable. I wonder if there is not a mechanism available to the Chair to prevent frivolous points of order so that the Hon. Member will not keep on disrupting what I think has been an incredibly good speech. He has failed to allow the Hon. Member to develop the context in which his remarks will be made.

Mr. Gass: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 7 is in respect to consultation with coastal communities. Motion No. 8 has to do with consultation with traditional user groups. I believe the Hon. Member has his speech notes mixed up and is speaking on Motions Nos. 7 and 8 rather than Motion No. 1.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, we have a problem that if the Government wishes to impose regulations on eggs, spat and larvae, there definitely has to be consultation on how this will be implemented, and the Hon. Member was moving towards that. In the limited time remaining, he will have difficulty developing his remarks.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) has the floor, and I would ask him to be relevant to the motion.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put on the record exactly what the definition of fish is and the need for this Bill to take a look at that definition in regard to some consultation with—

Mr. Rodriguez: Fish. What is a fish?

Mr. Hovdebo: —so that this Bill does react to the requirements and needs of the fishermen on both coasts.

Mr. Crombie: Three coasts.

Mr. Hovdebo: Three coasts. Thank you, Sir. The definition of "fish" includes:

(a) portions of fish,

(b) shellfish, crustaceans, marine animals, marine plants and portions thereof,

(c) the eggs, spawn, spat and juvenile stages of fish, shellfish, crustaceans and marine animals, and

(d) such fish products and by-products as are prescribed pursuant to Section 34;

The amendment adds to that definition "larvae". I started to develop the need for consultation, the need to put definitions into the Act so that the fishermen know exactly what they are getting into.

My second point as far as this Government is concerned is that it says it is going to put less government on the people, that there will be less regulation. But what does this Bill do? It increases the amount of intervention in the fishery industry by the Government. It establishes more control in an industry where the control is probably already at maximum.

This is a Bill which the Government insists we pass without any debate. It has completely overlooked the kind of consultation which is needed by the native groups and fisherpersons across the country. Just by looking at this one Bill, I can name four areas where this Government is going back on its word. It says it will listen to consultation, yet it does nothing. It says that it will protect the native rights of the native people of Canada and it ignores them in this particular Bill. It says it will have less government regulation and it proceeds to put before us a bill which increases government regulation in this particular industry. It says that it is concerned about all private primary industries and here we have a primary industry which the Government is devastating by putting this Bill in place. I will continue my remarks after two o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

SEXUAL HARASSMENT COMPLAINT—CALL FOR AMENDMENTS TO LEGISLATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, the sexual harassment case involving the former Minister of National Defence, the Hon. Member for Cumberland-Colchester (Mr. Coates), illustrates how the procedures and practices with respect to complaints under the Human Rights Act are grossly unjust. The Member has been denied some very basic rights. Fundamental principles of natural justice, including the right to be presumed innocent until proven guilty, have been breached. The damaging media coverage surrounding the launching of a complaint has the effect of convicting an individual in the eyes of the public before a fair hearing has been conducted. Even though a complaint might subsequently be determined to be without merit, the damage caused cannot be corrected. Complete vindication is impossible.

The Human Rights Act does not require a complainant to swear an affidavit or provide independent substantiating evidence. There is absolutely no protection against frivolous and vexatious complaints. Reputations and families can be destroyed by the publicity surrounding the mere laying of a complaint. The media have special rights in a democracy which must be scrupulously protected. But these rights, especially in relation to a quasi-judicial body, must give way to the greater right of the individual to be presumed innocent until proven guilty. I call on the Government, in the name of fairness, to bring forward immediate amendments to the Human Rights Act to prohibit the publication of a complaint by the media until a hearing and subsequent decision by the Commission.

[Translation]

NATIONAL PARKS

IMPACT OF BUDGETARY CUTBACKS ON NEW BRUNSWICK

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, last weekend, the people of the Village of Alma, in New Brunswick, strongly protested against the cutbacks affecting Fundy National Park, announced by the Conservative Government last November.

Thirty residents of Alma have just lost their jobs which, needless to say, are very important to them. At least 300 residents depend on Fundy Park for employment which is mostly available only during the summer months.

First of all, in a province where the unemployment rate is very high, the Government has no right to cause further loss of jobs. Furthermore, cutbacks in our national parks also affect tourism. Admission fees have tripled, so that now it costs $12 instead of $5 to have access to a camp site.

Mr. Speaker, Canadians are increasingly feeling the impact of Conservative policies that will bring the development of our national parks to a halt. Already, since the opening of the new season at Fundy, it seems there are far fewer visitors than last year.

This is only the beginning, and the worst part is that everyone is going to suffer: workers are losing their jobs, and it will cost more to visit the parks. What it boils down to is, Mr. Speaker, that this Government is trying to destroy the heritage and the economy of New Brunswick.

* * *

[English]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ENGAGEMENT OF CNIB CATER PLAN SERVICES

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I recently learned that luncheon arrangements for school children visiting Ottawa from our various constituencies will now be accommodated through the Canadian National Institute for the Blind Cater Plan services. I understand this has been brought about by the closure of the cafeteria in the Wellington Building. The Government is to be commended, and I assume you as well, Mr. Speaker, for engaging the services of this splendid organization to cope with our present shortfall in accommodating these groups.

CNIB Cater Plan services has been in existence for 58 years. At present it employs 1,071 people across Canada, 240 of whom are registered blind. This is a non-profit organization whose main purpose is the employment of the blind in a meaningful and fulfilling occupation. In Ottawa they provide catering services in 26 federally occupied buildings.

Cater Plan is the largest employer of blind people in Canada, and in my Province of Alberta it has 39 operations, two in Calgary, and province-wide provides employment for 43 blind people.

Cater Plan has been asked to provide 28,000 meals this summer under the current House of Commons program, and I believe all Canadians will be proud to know that CNIB Cater Plan services have been contracted to provide meals at a very reasonable cost to these visiting groups.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

DROP IN INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, the Bank of Canada rate fell this afternoon to 9.59 per cent.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Tupper: The prime rate is currently the lowest it has been since September, 1978. Mortgage rates are falling. The Bank of Montreal cut its six-month mortgage rate last week to 9.75 per cent, the lowest rate for any mortgage offered since 1973. The one and two-year rates at the same institution fell to 10 per cent and 10.75 per cent respectively. London Life Insurance Company dropped its five-year mortgage rate below 12 per cent for the first time since 1979.

In addition, automobile manufacturing, rail loadings, housing starts, real estate transactions, the output of several industries, and employment are all up.

Why? It relates to the fact that Canadians and Canadian businessmen are gaining confidence in themselves and in Canada. Much of that confidence relates to the initiatives of the present Government. The mood across the nation is buoyant, Mr. Speaker, as we await the Budget of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

POSTAL SERVICE DELAYS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, while Canada Post applies for an inflationary rate increase, service in many areas continues to deteriorate. Constituents ask questions for which no reasonable answers can be given.

Why does it routinely take nine days for a letter to go from Galiano Island to Vancouver, less than 20 miles away?

Why is mail from the U.S. held at the border until a certain quantity is reached, so that a constituent receives four pieces of mail in one day which had been written over a one month interval?

Why is Canada Post trying to take from community newspapers their traditional business of delivering inserts and flyers? Why is it harassing these papers with excessive charges for minor mistakes in date-line? Why does it insist that all inserts must be placed in the centre of an open newspaper, when small operations have to do this by hand?

Why does Michael Warren not answer letters of complaint?

The Government must instruct Canada Post that there will be no increase in postal rates until service has been brought to a satisfactory level.

* * *

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT'S POLICY

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, do you know what? Our country is in one terrible, deplorable, disgraceful, scandalous, bad, disastrous, painful, shameful, dishonourable, discreditable, disreputable, unmentionable, humiliating and ignominious shape. In other words, we have been broke since 1975, but the Liberals, aided by the NDP, pretended, bewildered, mystified, misinformed, equivocated, evaded, ignored, rationalized, subterfuged, claptrapped, quibbled, blinded and shaded the facts to fool the people, and lived high on the hog on more than $108 billion of borrowed money. But the people were not fooled, and on Septermber 4 last they elected a Progressive Conservative Government to save the country from going into bankruptcy. Now, to increase productivity, create jobs, and increase social benefits, it must get rid of the monstrous debt that is bleeding the country dry.

The PCs are working, struggling, fighting, digging, analysing, exerting, reducing, strengthening, shortening, discounting, demonstrating, converting, co-operating, tightening, collaborating, and consulting, and doing it all fairly and above the table to restore Canada to its rightful place among nations. Our citizens may bleed a little, but Canada will rise again as a united, sovereign nation, reflecting the thinking of all of its people. Canada, we stand on guard for thee!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

• (1410)

DANGEROUS PRODUCTS

USE OF HERBICIDES

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, on a more serious note I am sure that many Canadians will be saddened today upon hearing that the Ontario Government has had to decide to make free bottled water available to those whose drinking water is contaminated by the herbicide alachlor, rather than ban its use. Who would have thought that the day would come in Canada when we would be reduced to handing out bottled water? Is our fascination with herbicides and pesticides so great that we would rather give up our water than seek ecologically sound alternatives to the use of these dangerous substances?

The federal Government should have had the courage to ban alachlor altogether. It would have been standing on guard for Canada by banning dangerous substances. But it has not addressed that problem, nor has it addressed the problem recently brought to its attention about the wood preservative, PCP.

Finally, I wonder if MPs could be told just what herbicide has been sprayed on parts of the Parliamentary Lawn, and why this was felt to be necessary. The ugly little yellow signs, however temporary, as well as the herbicide itself, hardly enhance the image of the Hill.

* * *

TRADE

SUCCESSFUL FUR NEGOTIATIONS WITH EUROPEAN ECONOMIC COMMUNITY

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, congratulations are in order for the Minister of State for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) and his team of negotiators who have successfully persuaded the European Economic Community not to impose its threatened increase in tariffs against Canadian fur products.

The proposed increase in import tariffs from 7 per cent to 24 per cent would have had a disastrous effect on Canada's $650 million per year fur industry. However, we must not forget that the reprieve lasts only until November, when shoe import quotas are due to expire. If Canada unrealistically imposes renewed quotas, the European Community will undoubtedly, once again, retaliate against our fur producers.

The Minister of State for International Trade must therefore not rest on his well deserved laurels but renew his efforts to keep the European market open for Canadian furs on a permanent basis.

* * *

FINANCE

BUDGET FORECAST

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, today, May 23, 1985, will be a day that will long be remembered by middle and lower-income Canadians. At 4.30 the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will smash these Canadians with a sledgehammer type of budget. It is the same type of budget that defeated the Tories in 1979. Today, for the first time, the Tory Government will show its true colours to the people of Canada as the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) bows down to his friends in big business who will be the ones profiteering from the Wilson Budget.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I sympathize with those Canadians whose lives will be drastically changed by this Budget: senior citizens, farmers, workers whose money will go to fill the coffers of the big corporations that support the Conservatives. The repercussions of this Budget will come back to haunt this Government which has always blamed the previous Government for its own incompetence.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge all Canadians to buy new shoes today, because only the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will be able to afford them tomorrow.

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

START OF NEW BRUNSWICK PAPER MILL PROJECT

Mr. W. R. Bud Jardine (Northumberland-Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, Tuesday of this week was an historic occasion for the Miramichi, the area which I am pleased to represent. A 40-year old dream came true when the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) participated in a sod-turning ceremony that marked the beginning of a $360 million paper mill project.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jardine: In the words of the Minister, "it was one of the most important days in the history of New Brunswick, and especially the Miramichi".

This repap paper mill will help stabilize employment for more than 1,600 mill and woodlands workers; it will provide 1,000 person years of employment during the construction phase, and will create 125 new permanent jobs.

This is a prime example of how this Government, through the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), in co-operation with the province and private enterprise, has worked in a positive way to provide what this country needs—jobs, jobs, jobs.

* * *

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

EMPLOYEES' RAIL PASSES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, for 100 years, ever since we started building railways in our country, there has been an agreement, written or unwritten, between the employees of the railways and the company management that employees would have passes to travel on the railway lines. That benefit has been cut back as passenger service has declined.

Recently the CNR reached an agreement with its employees whereby its employees continue to get the pass privileges. Unfortunately the CPR, that poor company which has been given hundreds of millions of dollars by Canadian people, still opposes that kind of agreement.

I urge the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to use his influence with the CPR to see that it makes the same kind of agreement with its employees.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

REPORTED SUBMISSION TO EQUALITY SUBCOMMITTEE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Justice I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. I have a copy of the intended submission of the Department of National Defence to the Justice subcommittee on Charter equality. It was reported on this morning in The Globe and Mail.

This is a highly offensive document, and a serious insult to Canadian women, just in the same way that the Government discussion paper on charter equality was an insult. It confirms our suspicions that, whatever the Government's rhetoric, it has no intention of supporting the implementation of the goals of the Charter.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that the senior officiers who wrote this document did so after scrapping a whole process that they had established within the Department of National Defence, under a consultant named Jim House, which was to provide for true consultation and participation by men and women at all levels of the Department of National Defence in the preparation of their submissions? Is that the way this report was developed?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member describes the document in his hands, I presume, as being an intended submission to the subcommittee now studying this matter. I know of no such submission in documentary form—

Some Hon. Members: Again?

Mr. Nielsen: —in documentary form that is so intended at all.

I read the press articles, including the one that the Hon. Member referred to, and others. It would be my intention to examine whatever document exists in order to acquaint myself with its contents.

The Hon. Member will be happy to know that I have written to the Chairman of the subcommittee offering to appear before the subcommittee at a mutually convenient date and time for the purpose of addressing this and other matters affecting the policy of the Department.

EQUALITY FOR WOMEN IN COMBAT ROLES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, other Canadians have and will be reading this intended report with interest. Will the Minister be endorsing this as government policy? Particularly, does he really believe that Canadian women should suffer inequality in DND because women do so in some other countries, and because mixed combat units have never been tried before in Canada?

I ask him to answer that question bearing in mind that combat roles don't just mean pulling the trigger type jobs. According to DND definition, combat roles include such jobs as pilots, sonar technicians, weapons technicians, all sea artillery and infantry jobs. Are these to be denied women on the spurious grounds contained in this report?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, who is a lawyer and who, at one time, was a Solicitor General in the previous administration, asks me to endorse something that I have just told him I have not seen. Surely even he would recognize the unreasonableness of that.

With respect to the role played and to be played by women in our Armed Forces, I think I can speak with specific and particular knowledge which is held fairly exclusively in the House. I can tell the Hon. Member of the significant contribution made by women in our Armed Forces during World War II, which was quite substantial in a wide variety of roles. I would expect that kind of contribution to continue, much to the credit of women, and much to the credit of Canada.

• (1420)

APPLICATION OF CHARTER OF RIGHTS TO WOMEN PERSONNEL

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, whatever the excellent role of women in World War II, I suggest it is a pretty patronizing observation to say that that is the level at which their participation will continue in the Department of National Defence.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kaplan: Because the Minister of Justice said recently that he does not know what the Charter will eventually be determined to imply for women in the Department of National Defence, if the view is as expressed in this document can we get an assurance that the Government will not introduce a notwithstanding clause into legislation to prevent the Charter from applying to women in the Department of National Defence, giving them the rights that were intended when the Charter was introduced?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Charter is the law of the land and will be applied as the law of the land.

Mr. Chrétien: Apply it.

Mr. Nielsen: As far as being patronizing is concerned, the Hon. Member is patronizing. I have first-hand knowledge of the extremely important role played by women both in war and in peace, a knowledge he does not share with me. I can tell him that I was very proud to have served for ten years alongside women in our Armed Forces, something which that hon. gentleman cannot say.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: You would send kids to war?

APPEARANCE OF ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL BEFORE SUBCOMMITTEE

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Defence. First I would like to tell the Minister that it is very nice to know he worked with women in the Second World War. There were no women in the House in the Second World War. Women's roles in the Second World War were very different from today. There are some changes one has to take into account.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Finestone: The Minister earlier refused to allow the equality rights committee to hear views and to take testimony from individual members of the Armed Forces who requested to appear before the committee. Is the Minister going to allow liberty, or enforce silence, for the individual members of the Armed Forces? What possible basis does the Minister have that women cannot appear as individuals? Why is the Minister neglecting their freedom of right to speak? It is not a national security issue. Will the Minister allow individuals who wish to do so to appear and to testify before the equality rights committee?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): It is simply not true, Sir, for the Hon. Member to say to me that I have refused to allow members of the Armed Forces to appear before the committee, whether they be women or whether they be men. That is not true. That is not a fact. What I will inform her and Members of the House is that the conduct of all members of the Forces, be they women or be they men, among other things is governed by Queen's Regulations and Orders to which all members of the Forces must adhere.

With respect to that question which was raised initially by the Hon. Member for Burnaby, I am having an examination made of Queen's Regulations and Orders to see whether, for the maintenance of good order and discipline in the Forces, it might be possible for that appearance. I very much doubt though that that would be the case.

COURT CHALLENGES

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of National Defence. The interpretation of the new Charter of Rights would indicate, I hope, a much more open spirit when the Minister examines those rules and regulations in those instances.

If the Government continues to show the desire to muzzle the voice of women in the military, will the Minister be prepared to support and finance those cases which will have to be challenged in the courts so women can earn their equality rights, something which the Minister does not seem ready to give?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the accusation of the Hon. Member with respect to muzzling is both inaccurate and untrue. If that were not enough, it is also false.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: To say nothing of being offensive.

Mr. Nielsen: With respect to the whole question of equality, I have informed the House that it is my undertaking, my commitment, as Minister responsible, to appear before the committee and to answer all of those kinds of questions.

An Hon. Member: Why don't you?

Mr. Rossi: Go back to sleep.

Ms. Copps: Zipper up.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

* * *

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY—PAYMENT OF ROYALTIES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Yesterday after he tabled the Eastman report he made the observation that he was concerned an increase in the royalties paid by the generic companies would mean an increase to the consumer and he did not want to see that.

Is the Minister aware that the highest price paid by consumers for prescription drugs, and the highest profits made by the multinational companies, were in those years when the multinationals had the exclusive right to produce and sell prescription drugs?

Is the Minister not favourably impressed by Dr. Eastman's recommendation that the period for which the multinationals have exclusive rights to sell the products, be reduced to four years?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): In answer to the question, Mr. Speaker, I can tell my colleague that the general recommendations of the Eastman report are acceptable to us, to the extent that they advocate research and development in the pharmaceutical industry. However, I did express certain reservations with respect to the reaction to higher royalties on consumer prices and my opinion has not changed yet.

[English]

REQUEST THAT COMMITTEE BE DISBANDED

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister. Given the fact that both the multinational companies and the generic companies have expressed opposing views with regard to the recommendations of the Eastman Commission, it is obvious that the committee he has had working with his Department cannot reach any useful conclusion. Is it not time that the Minister dissolved that committee? It must be an embarrassment to him, given the fact that his Director of Combines Investigation is investigating his Department?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): All I can say, Mr. Speaker, is that our Government initiated a democratic consultation process in September. We intend to carry on with it and meet with our provincial colleagues and the various consumer associations to see how they react to the report. We will then be in a position to implement a policy which will be in the best interests of Canadian consumers, I am sure.

[English]

DRUG PRICES

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, my last supplementary question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Before 1969 when the patent laws were changed to the present system, Canadians were paying the second highest drug prices in the world. Since then we have been paying the second lowest prices. Will the Minister tell the people of Canada that he is not going to make any real changes which will destroy that favourable situation which they have enjoyed since 1969?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat that we will try to promote research and development in Canada, while at the same time making sure that consumers pay as little as possible for pharmaceutical products.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. It is nice to know the Minister is going to attend the committee, but if he is as forthcoming with information there as he has been in the House, then the Members will be better off doing something else.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hopkins: I refer once again, Mr. Speaker, to an internal Department of National Defence document entitled Canadian Forces Policy on the Employment of Women, dated March, 1985. After reading that report one would think that it was written in 1885 instead of in 1985. The report makes shocking statements about discipline, emotional stability, unit cohesion, morale, and effectiveness, which would cause the majority of Canadian women to shudder with anger. Is the Minister prepared to dissociate himself, his Government, and his Party, from this discriminatory document?

● (1430)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I repeat the responses which I made with respect to the question originally put by the Hon. Member for York Centre in general reply to the Member. I can tell him by way of reassurance that whatever might be in that report is not government policy. When that has been set, it will be announced in the appropriate way. However, I find it rather strange that these Hon. Members in the Official Opposition should be asking that kind of question when it was not they, when they were in office, who forced through the provision in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms with respect to women's equality rights; it was this Party which did that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: It was those Hon. Members who had to be dragged, kicking and screaming, to support women's equality rights.

WOMEN'S CAREERS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, we all know that the Deputy Prime Minister is very professional—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I get the distinct impression that somehow questions and answers are not really on everybody's mind today.

Mr. Hopkins: The Deputy Prime Minister just brought another red herring on to the floor of the House; he is a pro at it. I want to remind him of a Conservative election promise, and I quote from his own document, "to ensure the full career development of members of the Canadian Armed Forces". Is the Minister willing to assure Canadians that all the distasteful and discriminatory implications of this report will not affect the careers of the thousands of competent women already in the Armed Forces? If he is not willing to do so, are we to assume that women are not full and legitimate members of the Canadian Armed Forces today, in 1985?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have just reassured the Hon. Member, in response to his first question, that whatever that document contains does not constitute government policy and that when that policy is formulated it will be announced in the appropriate way. Again I express surprise at this line of questioning coming from him when he describes as a red herring an amendment ensuring women's equality rights which we proposed, and which they had to accept when they were in office. We did not consider that to be a red herring. I am very surprised that he does.

* * *

[Translation]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PCB SPILLS IN PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, NEW BRUNSWICK AND QUEBEC

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Yesterday, upon leaving the House, the Minister said that Hydro Quebec had been advised of the new regulations on transporting PCBs and that it should have passed this information on to the carrier whose truck recently leaked PCBs in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Quebec. The Minister also said, and I quote: "The new regulations are very clear on the manner in which this product is to be shipped, and if there is any infringement of these regulations, charges will certainly be laid." Could the Minister inform the House today whether the Government intends to lay charges against Hydro Quebec or the carrier responsible for the PCB leak last week?

Hon. Suzanne Blais-Grenier (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. Obviously, if it is proved that the regulations now in effect have been infringed, charges will be laid.

[English]

POSITION OF DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Transport, given that the Minister of the Environment displayed her usual passion for the environment. Could he tell us whether his Department, as the Department in charge of transportation of dangerous goods, has initiated any inquiry? There is some rumour to the effect that violations of the Canada Shipping Act and violations of the directive issued by the Minister have taken place. I am wondering whether the Minister has taken an interest in this event, whether there will be an investigation, and whether there is a willingness on the part of the Government to pursue it to the full extent of the law if these violations are confirmed?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker, this Minister has taken an interest in this issue. I indicated to the House yesterday that the matter was being investigated by a Transport Canada inspector and that tests were being conducted on the level of the concentration of the PCBs. As soon as all that information is available, and it should be available by the end of this week, a decision will be made. In so far as prosecution is concerned, that determination will be made next week. I should say as well that there has been excellent co-operation on the part of Transport Canada, the Department of the Environment, and the provincial authorities, in this whole issue.

* * *

[Translation]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

AN OFFICER'S OPINION—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence.

On a recent trip to Germany with the Canadian Forces, an officer actually told me that having five men go to battle and only one come back would be much better than having five women in the same situation and only one come back, because the man could then impregnate the women who stayed home, and it was a matter of the survival of the human race, because one male could replenish the entire stock.

Mr. Speaker, now that we have the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and considering the very positive experience of female cadets in the armed forces, does the Minister not think this is a decadent sign of male chauvinism and is he prepared to endorse such outrageous statements?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I would certainly not be prepared to endorse the philosophy expressed by the the Hon. Member as having come from an officer with whom she was speaking when she was in Germany without knowing what was that expression of philosophy. However, I can tell her that it is the ambition or the determination of every member of the Forces, of whatever sex they might be, in a wartime mode or in a battle mode to strive to the utmost of get back in one piece.

[Translation]

ARMED FORCES' MENTALITY—MEASURES TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Since Government policy to promote the status of women will not be implemented unless the Government makes it clear to public servants that it is committed to this policy, why does the Progressive Conservative Government not insist on a change in attitude in the Canadian Forces, and what specific measures have been taken by the Minister to show he is serious when he refers to the rights of women and his respect for the Charter?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member would know, as one who would have cause to know, —and it must have disappointed her at the time having regard to where she sits now—that it was this Party which insisted upon including in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms a provision with respect to women's equality rights, and that it was her Party which had to be dragged into consenting to that amendment introduced by this Party.

* * *

● (1440)

FINANCE

CONTENTS OF FORTHCOMING BUDGET

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Finance, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister. The Ministry has left Canadians with no doubt that it is determined to reduce the budgetary deficit. The Minister is undoubtedly aware that efforts in the past to do this by means of spending restraint had the effect of increasing expenditures and reducing revenue, with the result that the deficit has been larger later. Has the Government considered the potentially unfortunate budgetary consequences of a program of deficit reduction in the Budget this afternoon? Will the—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Budget will be called later today as a special order of the House and, therefore, any questions with regard to it are out of order under the rule of anticipation of an order later today. Does the Member have a question on another subject?

* * *

[Translation]

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY—MEASURES TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Now that the Eastman report on the pharmaceutical industry has been tabled, and considering that Quebec and the rest of Canada urgently need new jobs in high technology sectors, can the Minister tell the House what measures he will take to promote research and development in that industry?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the concern expressed by my colleague. I can reassure him by saying that we will indeed give priority to finding a solution with respect to pharmaceutical products so as to boost research and development in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario as well as in the rest of Canada.

* * *

[English]

VISIBLE MINORITIES

JAPANESE CANADIANS INTERNED DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. He is aware of concern about the failure of the Government to negotiate a redress settlement with the National Association of Japanese-Canadians. In Tuesday night's adjournment debate his representative blamed the failure of opposition House Leaders to respond to a letter from the Government House Leader last January for the failure to act. Does the Minister actually believe that the Opposition's failure to agree to an imposed settlement prevents him from negotiating with the National Association of Japanese-Canadians?

Hon. Jack Murta (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, we never refer to anything we are doing in terms of our conversations as negotiations with the Japanese-Canadians. I have been in discussion with them over the last number of weeks in terms of trying to reach an agreeable settlement. As the Hon. Member knows, the association is now involved in its own study in terms of the cost of redress, the cost of the loss of what the community suffered during the war. Until that study is completed, which will probably take until late summer, September, October, we intend to continue holding discussions with them and keeping the lines of communication as open and free as possible.

* * *

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. The Minister likes to talk about the Conservative record on women. We know that it is a source of continual embarrassment for that Party that, in convention, 75 per cent of the delegates voted against extending equality rights to women. That is the real face of the Tory Party. The rest of the real face of the Tory Party will emerge at four o'clock. The Minister continually in this House, with regard to documents that have been offered by him or by his officials, denies any knowledge. This document entitled Federal—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. Some day I may get to be heard by Hon. Members.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: It fascinates me that people would yell at me that people should be shouted down. Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I have a question. I want to ask the Minister of National Defence whether this document entitled Equality Issues in Federal Law, Canadian Forces Policy on the Employment of Women, with the seal of the Canadian Forces on the document, dated March 17, 1985, is a document of his Department. I will tell him now that his continual attempts to deny knowledge of the document are wearing thin. I do not believe you, Members do not believe you, Canadian women do not believe you. Nobody in this country believes those answers. Is this your document, yes or no?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman obviously is not listening. I did not deny the existence of any such document. What I did say, for his benefit, was that I had no knowledge of the contents of the document. Now then, he will—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With great respect to the Minister and others, it is somehow unfair to complain to me about not being able to be heard when you are asking questions and then to yell continuously when someone is answering. It just is not fair. Has the Minister completed his answer?

Mr. Nielsen: I believe so, Mr. Speaker.

CONTENTS OF DOCUMENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate the Minister believes that he is finished answering the question. Let me say this to the Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: I am asking a question. Be patient. Be polite. Civility. Whether the Minister believes he has answered the question and whether he acknowledges the contents of the report or knows of them, the contents of the report and the archaic attitude expressed in the report are being practised today, discriminating against Canadian women. Will the Minister call in his Chiefs of Staff? Will he apprise himself of the contents of this report? Will he instruct them that, until such time as the Minister gets on with the business of doing his job, to quit the high level of discrimination being practised against the women of Canada and the kind of patronizing attitude expressed in this report? Burn it.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is wrong for the Hon. Member to attempt to leave the impression that whatever might be in that document that he has read is the policy of the Government. I have said repeatedly today that whatever is in that document is not the policy of the Government. When government policy is formulated, it will be made known in the appropriate way.

With respect to his suggestion that I call in the Chiefs of Staff and consult with them, I intend to do just that and to discuss the matter with the Chief of Staff. There is only one now since the Forces have been unified. Perhaps the Hon. Member has forgotten that, as members of his Party had forgotten about the whole question of women's equality rights when they brought the Charter before this House of Commons and had to be reminded by this Party.

* * *

THE DISABLED AND THE HANDICAPPED

REMOVAL OF HANDICAPPED PERSON FROM AIR CANADA AIRCRAFT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Minister of Transport is aware that a handicapped person travelling to the Sports Federation for the Handicapped was removed from an Air Canada aircraft on the grounds that the person was unattended, even though she had flown many times unattended. What redress, if any, has been made to that person, and what action is he taking to improve travel arrangements for the handicapped in transportation in general?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, that of course is an issue of ongoing concern to the Department of Transport and, indeed, to the carriers. A number of steps have been taken to deal specifically with the issue which the Hon. Member has raised. I understand that Air Canada has issued an apology to the person in question. I further understand that any reparation to correct this issue will be arranged between the two parties.

ROLE OF ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, some time ago a special advisory committee was set up on transportation of the handicapped. They met in February. They were to meet two more times. I am advised that either the Minister or his officials asked them to cancel the last meeting. One member of that committee said that the committee has not done very much. What, if anything, is this advisory committee doing? Is it being disbanded? Is it going to be allowed to function, or does the Minister have some alternative plan for the transportation of handicapped people in Canada?

● (1450)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, indeed some very important recommendations have come forth from the advisory committee to which the Hon. Member refers. We are now in the process of putting in place a plan to implement a number of those very important recommendations that have been advanced. My colleague, the Minister of State, will be taking full responsibility for that. He will be announcing a plan of action in that regard in the very near future.

* * *

CRIMINAL CODE

IMPAIRED DRIVING AMENDMENTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Justice my question is for the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice. The Parliamentary Secretary is well aware of the fact that, as a result of a news report yesterday, there is a great deal of concern in the minds of judges, law enforcement agencies, and the Canadian public, regarding the date on which the Criminal Code amendments, and specifically those relating to impaired driving, are likely to go into force and effect and become law in Canada. Will the Parliamentary Secretary give us a clarification of this matter? Will he advise the Canadian people of what his best judgment is of when the Criminal Code amendments relating to impaired driving will become law?

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Bill is presently in the other place. I anticipate, and indeed hope, that it goes through that place in all stages within two weeks. I know that we have received the co-operation of the NDP and of the Liberal Party. I do not think there is anyone in the House who does not want to see the strengthening of the impaired driving laws. I anticipate that by late summer this particular law will be in full force and effect.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

PETROMONT REQUEST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

As the Minister knows, the Quebec Government is committed to invest $30 million to upgrade Petromont facilities. Will the federal Government make representations to the National Energy Board and support Petromont's application to upgrade and extend the natural gas pipeline with a view to ensuring the profitability of that plant?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member is undoubtedly aware, there are various proposals being put forth at the present time concerning the petrochemical industry, and in particular the Petromont plant itself, including a possible pipeline to transport natural gas to that facility, as well as various other conversion approaches. Naturally we are helping with the study of some of these proposals and are discussing the matter with the Province of Quebec. We are certainly cognizant of the fact that the province has indicated that money could be made available by it in the way suggested by the Hon. Member, but at the present time we believe that we must consider all the possible alternatives connected to Petromont before making a federal decision.

[Translation]

PETROCHEMICAL INDUSTRY IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. John Parry (Kenora-Rainy River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

The federal-provincial committee on Canada's petrochemical industry, which is made up of representatives of the western provinces, Ontario and Quebec, submitted its report to the federal Government last January. It concluded that the three petrochemical centres—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Parry: Here is my question, Mr. Speaker. Will the federal Government use its own studies, and will it guarantee Petromont's viability so as to maintain the 250 direct and 24,000 indirect jobs on the south shore?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Hon. Members are well aware of the fact that we are indeed using such studies and other data bases. We are meeting with the industry at the present time. There is a memorandum of understanding under negotiation with the petrochemical industry that will, most important, hopefully solve some of the problems with respect to other plants in other areas of Canada. It is the Canadian petrochemical industry that we have as our concern, and we hope to restore it to a uniform viability.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VISIT BY NICARAGUAN MINISTER OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs, but first I would like to say to the Deputy Prime Minsiter that the women's section of the Charter of Rights was introduced by the Minister of Justice, which I was at that time.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate the Hon. Member's concern. Presumably the Hon. Member would be making a preamble to a question and not simply making a preamble and then moving to another preamble.

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, when receiving the Minister of External Affairs for Nicaragua, Mr. Victor Hugo Tinoco, tomorrow, would the Secretary of State for External Affairs assure him that the policy of the Government is a very clear one, and it is that we do not want any intervention at all in Nicaraguan affairs, either by the United States or the Soviet Union?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I want to reply, both in my capacity as Secretary of State for External Affairs and as the Member of Parliament who had the opportunity and privilege of moving the amendment that led to the adoption of Section 28 of the Charter of Rights.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: You stabbed him in the back at the leadership convention. You weren't applauding there.

Those are the guys who stabbed you in the back, Joe. With friends like them, who needs enemies? That's why Brian is Prime Minister, Joe.

Mr. Speaker: Milk and cookies are later.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the opportunity of meeting Mr. Tinoco tomorrow, as does my colleague, the Minister for External Relations. I understand Mr. Tinoco will also take advantage of the opportunity to meet the Hon. Member and representatives of the New Democratic Party. For our part we certainly intend to make it very clear again that we believe that the root of the problems in Nicaragua, and indeed in that region of the world, is a socio-economic one. We intend to continue not only our aid programs but our political influence to advance that view of the problem, and to move the region toward settlements on that basis.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH NICARAGUA

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, perhaps you will let me reply by saying that after the five—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Chrétien: Of course they do not want to know the truth. When it was taken out by the provinces, it was through an amendment to a Section that I put in after November 5.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Chrétien: As the former Prime Minister has had so much bad luck in his life, I will not insist on this point any longer.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I made a comment earlier that I can see applies to other Members as well.

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. I want to ask the Minister whether he intends to direct his department officials to grant immediate permission for the Nicaraguan Government to establish its trade office in Toronto—rather than wait for weeks—and direct them to provide immediately the list of all Canadian manufacturers and distributors who are ready to sell products to replace those which are now boycotted by the Americans.

[English]

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member may have had some bad luck in his life. I consider mine to have been pretty good.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1500)

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The Government of Nicaragua for several months discussed the movement to Toronto of a trade office which has been based in Miami. It is now proceeding to accomplish that purpose. Naturally, it, like any other client defined by the foreign investment review legislation which was passed by the Hon. Member and his colleagues, has to go through certain procedures. Those procedures will apply to the Government of Nicaragua in exactly the same way as they would apply to anyone else. Certainly I would reaffirm, in the House of Commons the determination of this Government to continue to play a very constructive role with regard to the development of Nicaragua and other countries in Central America.

* * *

CHALLENGE '85

NON-PROFIT ALLOCATION INQUIRY

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the House that it was the women of Canada who got their motion in, not the Liberals or the Conservatives.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Does the Member have a question, please?

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Challenge '85 non-profit allocation—

Point of Order—Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Fair is fair. The Member's preamble was on a different subject. The Member will now immediately put his question.

Mr. Hovdebo: Will the Minister restore the non-profit allocation to the Province of Saskatchewan, at least to the level at which it was last year, and make it possible for Saskatchewan residents to have projects in place without requiring the one-half allocation to be contributed by themselves?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I always enjoy speaking about Challenge '85 and the remarkable number of jobs which it has produced both in the private sector and in non-profit organizations.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: I am pleased to say that voluntary organizations, municipal governments, and the private sector, have all contributed to making Challenge '85 a great success.

* * *

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of two, presented by Hon. Members on Wednesday, May 22, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Certain petitions which were presented by the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, in response to a question a few moments ago, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Murta) suggested that the word "negotiation" was being imported into the discussions in dealing with the National Association—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could the Member please come to his point of order.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): I have a document which was issued last December by his directorate. That document twice referred to "negotiation". The document read:

A full and frank discussion was undertaken—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Clearly the Hon. Member is engaging in debate. He does not have a point of order.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

GULF CANADA LIMITED

SALE OF SHARES

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to make a brief statement concerning what I believe is an important announcement, certainly for the oil and gas industry in Canada and, indeed, for all industry and Canada at large. Perhaps I should first read a press release, which was issued only a few hours ago, in which Chevron Corporation of San Francisco, California, and Olympia & York Resources Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Olympia & York Developments Limited of Toronto, Ontario, today announced that Chevron has agreed to sell its holding in Gulf Canada Limited of Toronto to Olympia & York, Subject to Olympia & York being satisfied prior to June 18, 1985, with respect to certain regulatory and other matters.

The agreement provides that Olympia & York will purchase approximately 112 million common shares, or 49.24 per cent of Gulf Canada, for approximately $22.21 Canadian per share, on or before July 16, 1985.

In addition, Olympia & York will purchase at that time an option on the remaining 25 million common shares of Gulf Canada which are held by Chevron. The price of the option is $6 Canadian per share, and the exercise price for the optioned shares is approximately $15.04 Canadian per share. The option is exercisable prior to December 31, 1985.

The press release further states:

Upon exercise of the option, Olympia & York will own 60.2 per cent of the currently outstanding common shares of Gulf Canada for an aggregate consideration in excess of Cdn. $3 billion.

Olympia & York has advised Chevron that Olympia & York does not intend to make a similar offer to the other shareholders of Gulf Canada.

If I may, Mr. George M. Keller, Chairman of the Board of Chevron Corporation, concluded the press release by stating:

Although we are sorry to lose our major position in a fine company like Gulf Canada, we feel this is an excellent arrangement for all parties. The Canadian Government's objective of increased Canadian ownership has been met; from our side, the sale proceeds will be used to significantly reduce the debt incurred last year in our purchase of Gulf Corporation. The sale of these shares will put us significantly ahead of schedule on our debt reduction program.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: I would like to highlight the significance of the proposed purchase which, hopefully, will be closed before the end of the year. It will be the largest single Canadianization of the oil and gas industry in Canadian history and, indeed, it is the largest such Canadianization in Canadian industry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: We believe it is particularly noteworthy that this repatriation of Gulf Canada to Canadian ownership will also result in the repatriation of certain cash assets which are now invested in the United States by Olympia & York, to be brought back to Canada in connection with the purchase of Gulf Canada.

To put it into perspective, Gulf Canada had assets in 1984 of $5.6 billion, and sales of $5.3 billion. As a company, it ranks third among petroleum companies in Canada in terms of oil protection, and fourth in terms of sales. It has extensive oil and gas rights in Western Arctic and off the East Coast, in the Beaufort Sea and the Arctic islands. In 1983, it spent $300 million on exploration and development. I have received assurances from Gulf Canada that their operation will be maintained as planned in the exploration and development fields.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: As Members will undoubtedly know, Gulf Canada operates refineries in Montreal; Clarkson, Ontario; Edmonton; Port Moody, British Columbia, as well as an asphalt plant in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. Gulf Canada has some 9,000 employees across Canada. Again, I have been assured that those employees will be maintained and that possibly the total employment will be expanded.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: I would like to sincerely congratulate Chevron and Olympia & York for arranging this significant acquisition. This is an important initiative on the part of the Canadian private sector to achieve Canadianization of the oil and gas industry.

• (1510)

I am pleased to note as well that the transaction has been structured by the parties in such a way as to minimize the impact on the Canadian dollar. It, of course, also follows the very successful Canadianization involving Texaco Canada where we had 14 million shares of that company, worth about $485 million, sold to Canadians, which are now selling at a premium.

The net effect on Canadian upstream oil and gas assets is that where they were 40 per cent Canadian owned prior to this transaction, upon the closing of the Gulf transaction, upon Gulf coming into Canadian hands, it will mean that we are 45 per cent Canadian-owned—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: —as far as that industry is concerned. In short, Mr. Speaker, this is the Mulroney Government in action. This is the private sector in action. If the Opposition would stop blocking the Investment Canada Bill, it would see that this is only the beginning of what we can do.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, we are afraid that if we let the Investment Canada Bill go through this will be the end of what Government will do in Canadianization.

I would like to say to the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) how pleased the Liberal Party is that these shares in Gulf Canada have been sold to a Canadian company. And we appreciate that this has happened in keeping with the Canadianization policy of the former Liberal Government. I have quite a few of concerns, though, about this transaction. I hope that the Minister will follow through and give us the details of the bids which were made for the shares of Gulf Canada, as I asked him to do earlier, because I think it is very important that we know all of the details of all of the bids which were presented for these shares.

The Minister mentioned the repatriation of funds presently in the United States via this purchase of shares by Olympia & York. What I would like to know is, did the fact that a large portion of the moneys which were used to buy the shares was American money have a bearing on the fact that the successful bidder was Olympia & York and, perhaps, not some other Canadian company which could not put up the American money and which would have had to pay for it in Canadian funds?

I would also like to take note of something said by the Minister. He made reference to the exploration and development field, that the undertaking by Olympia & York is in the exploration and development field. There is quite a large amount of money involved when you pay $6 a share for an option on a share. That is a sizeable amount of money and an indication that one is pretty sure of taking up that option. Is it a possibility that the downstream activities of Gulf Canada will be sold by Olympia & York to another company, possibly Petro-Canada? I would like the Minister to be frank with us today on that question because it is an important one. It is not a question which is disturbing other than that there will be a consolidation of marketing and stations in this country and some stations will close. But it will mean a further endorsation of a policy of the former Liberal Government, a policy which was criticized quite severely by the Progressive Conservative Party when it was in opposition.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister will give us some information on this. I would like to know as well how many—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but I have a question to ask him, if I may. Since he is, I think, asking questions of the Minister, I would like to be clear as to whether he wants me to take this as part of the question period or part of his speech. I am happy to take it either way.

Mr. MacLellan: These are concerns that I have, Mr. Speaker. We really have no objection to the actual sale itself to a Canadian company. What we want to know is what portion of this undertaking is not being disclosed by the Minister here this afternoon. This is something we would like to know. The shares which are yet to be purchased are to be purchased by the thirty-first day of December and I would like to know if the Minister is giving us an undertaking as well that these shares, if they are not picked up by Olympia & York, will in fact be picked up by a Canadian company? And will this undertaking towards increased Canadianization be ongoing in this transaction? Because we don't want to stop here. The aim of the former Liberal Government was 50 per cent Canadian ownership by 1990. The Minister says this transaction raises the level to 45 per cent. If that is correct, which we hope it is, it is still 5 per cent short and we have a long way to go if, as he says, it is the position of his Party to likewise try to obtain 50 per cent Canadian ownership by 1990. Certainly, it is the position of the Liberal Party to try to obtain at least 50 per cent ownership in the oil and gas industry by 1990. We would want to make sure that the Minister is going to continue on in this process of Canadianization.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, we have replaced a Rockerfeller with a Reichmann now. I am not so sure whether we in fact have succeeded in doing all that much differently.

I would like to make some comments, Mr Speaker, with respect to some concerns I have. I am sure you know, Mr. Speaker, that in March of 1984, Chevron of San Francisco bought Gulf Corporation of Pittsburgh in a massive takeover for $13.2 billion. Buying Gulf Corporation, of course, meant that Chevron Canada and Gulf Canada were owned by the same company and, of course, they are often in competition. In my home Province of British Columbia, for example, they have competing gas stations, and so on. There clearly was a problem as to what should be done with the two companies. For instance, should there be a merger would there be loss of jobs? In a sense, the deal would be welcomed but we will have to press the Minister on what guarantees we will have that there will be no loss of employment for some of the 13,000 employees who work for Gulf and Chevron. I will be asking the Minister some questions in that regard in a few moments.

The Minister said that this was the Mulroney Government in action, that this is the private sector in action, and this is only the beginning of what we can do. Let me put this into perspective, Mr. Speaker. What the Canadian Government did with the Western Accord was to give a lot of money to Gulf so as to inflate the price of Gulf, and to give them better tax deals. It took all the old oil the corporation owned and brought it up to the value of world prices. In other words, Gulf received a huge windfall.

James Doak, an oil company analyst with First Marathon Securities Ltd. of Toronto, said Gulf Canada will gain $200 million a year from the energy agreement by 1989. And Denis Mote, a Toronto-based analyst for Maison Placements Canada Inc. of Montreal, said the pact adds $1 billion to Gulf Canada's value.

• (1520)

These are not NDP MPs saying that, these are energy analysts. They are saying that Gulf was pumped up in value by about $1 billion as a result of the Western Accord and the Mulroney Government giving that windfall to the oil industry.

What is happening now is that Canadians are paying an inflated price for Gulf. The Minister said it will cost something like $3 billion, and that the money will go to reduce a debt which was incurred. That money, paid by Canadians, will go back to the U.S. to reduce Chevron's debt. So before we start falling all over ourselves with praise for the Mulroney Government, as the Minister has just tried to do, we should look at how expensive and how inflated this deal is.

As far as Canadianization is concerned, I am not sure this is the largest exercise in Canadianization. I think the largest was when the Government of Canada set up Petro-Canada and that company began to expand. I call that real Canadianization, and at a cheaper price. We want to know from the Minister what is going to happen to that inflated amount of $3 billion which was paid for this company, and it is inflated because of the Canadian Government's oil deal.

Mr. McDermid: You have to take a basic course in economics, E-100.

Mr. Waddell: I wonder if the Parliamentary Secretary would let me finish. He may not be concerned about the jobs of 13,000 employees, but I am. He may not be concerned about the $3 billion and where it goes, but I am.

Mr. McDermid: Your idea of Canadianization is the Government buying a company.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Will Hon. Members please let the Hon. Member finish his statement? The Minister and the Liberal Party spokesman were both allowed to make their statements in peace.

Mr. Waddell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If the deal is so good why are Tory members so touchy?

Mr. Thacker: We just like the truth.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, they will get their chance in the debate.

We want to look at this deal very closely. We want to know where the money is going and how it will affect the balance of payments. We want to know what $3 billion going out of Canada will mean. We want to know whether the 13,000 employees will be protected. Finally, we want to know whether replacing the American shareholders with a Canadian family at the head of this corporation will really make a difference. I think the difference will be marginal because private Canadian companies have a better record of investing than private American companies, but I would still like the Minister to tell us that he is still prepared to have Petro-Canada as the number one Canadian company. That is our position, and it should be used by the Government to direct Canadian energy policy for the benefit of Canadians. We have a mixed system here and we are going to continue to have a mixed system. This is an interesting deal but it raises many questions. I would not go as far as the Minister has gone, and I have some questions for him.

Mr. Speaker: Questions?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware of any other arrangements in this transaction which would have shares of what is now Gulf Canada going to Olympia & York, or a transfer of options or warrants or whatever? Is there another arrangement whereby the downstream activities of what is now Gulf Canada will be sold to yet another company, perhaps PetroCan?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, as far as the arrangement in which approximately 49 per cent of the total shares is to be sold, firm, with an option on the remaining roughly 11 per cent, I understand the reason it is being structured that way has nothing to do with the possibility of an option being sold to some party, but more for tax planning reasons. There are certain reorganizations which have to be done, and for an interim period the Olympia & York people feel it would be more advantageous to not have a 51 per cent interest but stay at 49 per cent. However, it is certainly their stated intention to us that they want the full 60 per cent.

As to what they may do in any restructuring, to the best of our knowledge there is no agreement to sell to any other concern, either upstream or downstream.

My reference to the exploration and development commitment was that that is where most people are concerned that there be suitable investment in that field. Now, whether as a result of this transaction there are service stations sold to someone, that is yet to be seen. Contrary to what the earlier speaker had to say about employment, if some deal like this had not gone through Chevron was proposing to merge Chevron Canada with Gulf Canada, probably, and that would have resulted in a loss of Canadian jobs. We do not, as the NDP apparently do, want to see that.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, let me say that that is absolutely false. We are trying to protect these jobs, and I am pleased the Minister is prepared to guarantee that these jobs will not be lost.

Can the Minister tell me why the minority shareholders could not bid on the deal? Could he also tell me whether the Government of Canada is putting anything into the deal at all, giving any tax breaks or concessions or grants or guarantees as part of the deal?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, if any minority shareholder had these kinds of resources, of course they could have put a bid in. There was a very serious alternative bidder who withdrew. To their credit, the Reichmanns saw it through and they have come up with this signed agreement.

As far as any agreements with the Government are concerned, other than discussions with representatives of Olympia & York as to the nature of this deal, what they were hoping to achieve, there has been no contract between the Government of Canada and the Reichmanns or Olympia & York, and certainly no tax rulings have been given at this date.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister tell me whether or not the $3 billion will go to the United States to pay off debts? He said in his statement something about reducing debt incurred.

Can he also indicate to us what he means by the reference to there being no effect on foreign exchange? Would he kindly answer those two questions?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, that of course is a fair question because every time we contemplate the Canadianization of assets now owned by foreigners it means taking Canadian dollars and using those dollars to pay the foreigner, who in turn will convert the Canadian dollars into whatever is his currency, which in turn puts pressure on the Canadian dollar.

• (1530)

Naturally, finance is always concerned when there are huge amounts involved. We wanted to make it clear that because of the Olympia & York interest in the United States, their liquid assets in the U.S. are sufficient that they were able to call on those assets to the extent of almost half of this $3 billion purchase, which puts no pressure on the Canadian dollar. As far as the remaining $1.5 billion that must be made up in Canadian dollars is concerned, Chevron has agreed to stage the payment in a way that there will be a minimum pressure on the Canadian dollar to avoid any foreign exchange problem.

In short, the problem to which the Hon. Member has been referring was certainly contemplated by all parties and, to their credit I think, they have tried to make it as easy a deal as possible as far as Canada is concerned and as far as the value of our dollar is concerned.

The Hon. Member asks where the money goes. When speaking to Mr. Keller, he makes it very clear, and does so as well in his press release, that they incurred quite a large debt in acquiring Gulf America, the U.S. company, and they will use at least part of the proceeds to pay down the debt that they incurred. Of course, that was one of the reasons they were looking for a buyer. We asked them to seek a buyer actively. I was very pleased when they responded positively and agreed to seek a Canadian buyer before the end of April.

At the time it was felt that a Canadian buyer or consortium could not be put together because this is the largest type of transaction in our history. In order to put it into perspective, the total amount involved with the Petro-Canada purchase of Petrofina in a similar equity fashion was $1.460 billion. This transaction is more than twice the size of the Petro-Canada purchase when it bought Petrofina which, of course, was generally felt to be at a premium price.

Mr. MacLellan: I can appreciate the Minister's concern for the impact on the Canadian dollar. It certainly would be a consideration in a purchase of this size.

Did the Government take this into consideration in the successful bid of Olympia & York and was it one of the reasons it was successful?

If Olympia & York does not pick up the option, will the Minister assure us that he will maintain the same principle of ensuring that Canadian participation will be present in the purchase of the option shares? It is very important to continue this policy of Canadianization. Would he also make the details of this whole transaction, the number of bidders and the various bids, public?

Mr. Stevens: I know that Hon. Members will understand that we cannot have it both ways. I have indicated that this is a private transaction. It is a transaction that we on this side of the House like to encourage. It is the private sector in action.

I am not free to start disclosing—even if I knew—who all the bidders are. For example, I know of an alternative bidder because he was in touch with us. He is a very substantial all-Canadian bidder. He frankly felt that he could not justify this size of bid. Although he was close, as far as he was concerned, he had to fall out on a question of price. That was the only reason he backed off.

As far as the Hon. Member's comment about the option shares is concerned and assuring that they would go to Canadians, that is not within our power. Naturally, we will mention to Olympia & York that we hope they can complete the deal, including taking down those option shares. However, if they decide for any reason that that option could be transferred to somebody else, we would naturally hope and indicate to the Reichmanns that they give Canadians a chance to pick it up.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the Minister talks about having it both ways. It seems to me that his statement today is clearly a case of having it both ways. On the same day that his Government evoked closure on the Investment Canada Bill and on the same day that the Government is introducing a plan that would abandon Canada rather than invest in Canada the Minister cites the increase in Canadianization of the petrochemical industry, which can be directly tracked to two Liberal programs—the NEP and FIRA—which his Government is in the process of dismantling and destroying. How can he talk about Canadianization of the petrochemical industry at the same time that his Government's future initiatives or lack thereof with respect to Investment Canada will in fact prevent the kind of Canadianization of the petrochemical industry which was fully in evidence as a result of the previous initiatives by past Liberal Governments?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is wrong on at least two scores. By referring to Investment Canada as something that would perhaps not facilitate this type of Chevron-Gulf-Olympia & York transaction, of course, she is dead wrong. If Investment Canada were in place six months ago, the type of deal that took place here would have been exactly the same. This is a reviewable transaction. The deal we have proposed with Chevron would have been very similar. Of course, the added element would have been that we would have had the power and certainly the mandate in Investment Canada positively to promote Canadian investment.

When the Hon. Member says that we will not get these kinds of deals as a result of our changes to the NEP, I find that a tremendous riddle. Although I cannot prove it, the fact is that it is very unlikely that a Canadian group—Olympia & York or anybody else—would have found Gulf Canada interesting enough to buy if the NEP were still in place. I hope the Hon. Member will understand that. There are very fundamental matters at stake here. The National Energy Program made the oil and gas industry extremely unattractive for both Canadian and non-Canadian investors.

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) on one question, and I will allow a final supplementary from the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Ms. Copps: Will the Minister not agree that as a direct result of the National Energy Program and FIRA, the Canadianization of the petrochemical industry over the last ten years has tracked the same model that was developed by previous Liberal Governments? If it were not for FIRA and the NEP we would not have Canadianized the petrochemical industry to the extent of the 45 per cent which the Minister brags about today.

I very much fear, as do Canadian consumers, that the initiatives of the Government to embrace any kind of investment, regardless of the nature of origin and any kind of job guarantees, will result in the destruction of the very Canadianization about which he speaks today. Is the Minister not at all concerned that the former increases in Canadianization of the petrochemical industry will in fact be threatened by his Government's decision to introduce a Bill with no teeth in the form of Investment Canada?

Mr. Stevens: I am rather pleased, actually, that the Hon. Member is asking these kinds of questions. Surely it shows how totally out of touch some Members on the other side of the House are. The fact is that since 1974, when FIRA got its teeth into our economy, the total Canadianization in Canadian businesses—

Ms. Copps: Petrochemical was the question.

Mr. Stevens: I am giving you the whole figure.

Ms. Copps: I know what the figures are. The petrochemical industry.

• (1540)

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, total Canadianization amounted to $16 billion. What people forget, certainly the socialists do not forget because Canadianization to them means nationalization, that is their creed—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: —but the fact is that 33 per cent of that Canadianization was the takeover of petrochemical companies by the federal Government. The total takeovers were $5.5 billion.

Ms. Copps: Are you against that now? Are you against Petro-Canada?

Mr. McDermid: Listen to the answer.

Mr. Stevens: I would point out to the Hon. Member in addition to that—

Ms. Copps: Are you against that?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am having trouble hearing the Minister's answer.

Mr. Stevens: In addition to the 33 per cent, provincial Governments of various sorts took over 9 per cent, which was $1.4 billion worth of assets, but total private Canadianization was $9 billion. In this announcement today is one transaction we have identified Canadianization involving $5 billion. I hope that is impressive enough to show that there is another and a much better way to go about this, namely, the Investment Canada way.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: You hate to hear good news over there.

Ms. Copps: Investment Canada is not here yet. Heaven help us when it comes.

Mr. Dick: Does she ever stop talking?

Mr. Waddell: May I put a final supplementary question to the Minister, Mr. Speaker? It is just a follow-up on sometime he said. He will recall that I suggested in my comments that it was the Government through the Western Accord that inflated the price of Gulf. I quoted two energy analysts to indicate that the price was inflated by about $1 billion because of the money given to the oil industry. Does the Minister agree or disagree with that?

I also expressed the problem of $3 billion flowing out of Canada. He indicated to me that one-half of that would flow out of Canada but the other half would somehow be recouped in Canada by the Reichmanns selling their assets in the United States. Has the Minister had any indication from Reichmann of what kind of assets are going to be sold and whether they will be sold at inflated prices or at bargain basement prices to recoup that money?

Mr. McDermid: Do you want to buy something?

Mr. Stevens: Let me assure the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker, that if I am going to put any money at risk, I will put it at risk with the Reichmanns as opposed to the Hon. Member—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Stevens: —when he starts trying to judge whether they will be selling their U.S. assets at some bargain basement price. All they have said to us is that they do have sufficient liquid assets in American dollars that they feel about half the total transaction can be mustered in U.S. dollars. I think that is very much to their credit.

As far as the Hon. Member's other question is concerned, perhaps he could put it again.

Mr. Waddell: Perhaps I can assist the Minister, Mr. Speaker. I indicated to the Minister that the Government had inflated the price and has given Gulf, according to two energy analysts, up to $1 billion as a result of a windfall in the breaks in the Western Accord that has just been signed.

Mr. Stevens: Let me put it this way to the Hon. Member, Mr. Speaker. He is forgetting that the PGRT benefit to which he is referring, and I think some analysts commented on it, does not fall into place until 1988.

Mr. Waddell: What about the old oil?

Mr. Stevens: As far as that income advantage is concerned, it would be downstream. I can assure the Hon. Member that a Canadian group would be less inclined to buy under the old National Energy Program structure than at the present time because of the prospect that they are really buying a healthy company that will be less government-fettered and a better cash flow. In truth, the Hon. Member would find that there would be no deal either at a lower or at a higher price if the National Energy Program were still in place.

Mr. Speaker: I have to say to the Hon. Member that this is a question period like any other and that the same rules with regard to questions by Parliamentary Secretaries apply.

* * *

[Translation]

PETITIONS

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table in the House a petition on behalf of the people of the riding of Montreal-Sainte-Marie who ask the Right Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) not to discriminate against the elderly, and especially elderly people in need, between the ages of 60 and 64, who are single, separated or divorced.

Mr. Speaker, the people of Restigouche in New Brunswick have asked me to submit a petition on their behalf. They are asking the Right Hon. Prime Minister of Canada and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) to extend the spouse's allowance to all persons living alone who are in need, whether they are single, separated, divorced or widowed.

I also have another petition from the people of the electroral districts of Edmonton South, Edmonton West and Edmonton East in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, the men and women of these ridings are asking all the Members of this House to support their petition to the Right Hon. Prime Minister not to discriminate against elderly people in need.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from the federal riding of Hamilton-Wentworth in Ontario. These people are also seeking the support of all Members of this House for their request that the Progressive Conservative Government refrain from discriminating against elderly people in need.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding, I have a petition from the people of the federal riding of Victoria in British Columbia, who want the Right Hon. Prime Minister of Canada to force the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), who is bringing down his Budget today, to extend the spouse's allowance to all persons living alone, between the ages of 60 and 64, and who are in need, whether they are single, separated or divorced, and these people are asking all the Members of this House to support their petition to avoid discriminating against the elderly.

[English]

RELEASE OF MARK NIKLUS FROM SOVIET PRISON CAMP

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by over 1,500 concerned Canadians. They are calling for the release of Mr. Mart Niklus, a prisoner in the Soviet Chistopol prison camp. He was sentenced to 10 years hard labour and five years internal exile. Mark Niklus' only crime was to speak out against the Molotov-Ribbentrop—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Member has the right to make a summary of his petition. It sounds to me as though he were making a speech about an issue that he thinks is important. It is a speech. This is the time for a summary of a petition only.

Mr. Attewell: It was in connection with the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact of 1939. He was forbidden to speak in his mother tongue.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Member has submitted his petition. We will take it as read. Does the Hon. Member have a summary of his petition to make?

Mr. Attewell: These concerned Canadians, Mr. Speaker, are calling on the Houses of Parliament to urge the Soviets for his release.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by 38 people of St. Isidore de Prescott, Ontario. These people are objecting to the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 which would discriminate against single, unmarried and divorced people between the ages of 60 and 64.

I have another petition signed by Members of the Golden Age Club, Hawkesbury, Ontario, signed by 35 people. They object to the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26, which would adversely affect single, divorced or separated people between the ages of 60 and 64—

[Translation]

—and it is signed by three residents of the village of Plantagenet who are against the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 under which needy persons living alone, as well as single and divorced persons aged 60 to 64 would be denied benefits.

Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by 150 people who are members of the Unions culturelle des franco-Ontariens and who are opposed to the provisions of Bill C-26 which discriminates against needy single, divorced or separated persons aged 60 to 64.

Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by three residents of the village of Limoges, Ontario, who are also opposed to the provisions of Bill C-26 which might discriminate against needy single, divorced or separated persons aged 60 to 64.

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker, and this one is signed by six residents of Rockland's Laurier House. As you may have guessed, Mr. Speaker, these people are against Bill C-26 discriminatory provisions which would prevent needy persons aged 60 to 64 who live alone, and single, divorced or separated people persons from receiving benefits to which they are entitled.

● (1550)

[English]

CBC PROGRAM THE NATURE OF THINGS: A PLANET FOR THE TAKING

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to the House of Commons a petition from the residents of my constituency of Fraser Valley East, British Columbia. They petition the House in order to express their concern that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has utilized the television program, The Nature of Things: A Planet for the Taking, to put forward the evolutionist point of view whilst ignoring the opposing points of view of creationism. The petitioners call upon Parliament to remind the CBC that it is mandated to provide balanced programs on controversial issues.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have several very important petitions to present to the House today. The first one is signed by 36 residents of Le Club d'âge d'or d'Alfred in the federal riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell. These 36 petitioners are petitioning the Government to amend Bill C-26 to end its discriminatory provisions to ensure that all elderly people are treated equally.

I have another petition signed by 36 residents in the federal riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell who belong to Le Club d'âge d'or d'Embrun. They are also petitioning the federal Government to ensure that the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 are left out of that particular piece of legislation. They petition the Government based upon the inequality of that particular piece of legislation.

I have another petition which is very similar to the first ones. It is signed by 17 senior citizens who belong to Le Club d'âge d'or de St. Eugène in the federal riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, which is represented very ably by my colleague on my right. These petitioners are requesting that the Government ensure that Bill C-26 does not contain discriminatory provisions and that the provisions apply equally to all senior citizens.

I have another petition from Le Club d'âge d'or de Treadwell in the federal riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell. These petitioners are petitioning the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Conservative Government to ensure that Bill C-26 does not contain any discriminatory provisions with respect to senior citizens. Senior citizens have contributed immensely to the—

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member is about to veer away from a summary and into a speech on an important issue, but nevertheless a speech.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I am glad you agree that it is an important issue. It is for that reason my colleagues and I have presented a number of petitions.

The final petition I wish to present today is signed by 36 residents who belong to Le Club D'Age D'Or de Wendover in the federal riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell. These 36 senior citizens are deeply distressed by the discriminatory provisions contained in Bill C-26, and they are asking the federal Government to ensure that those discriminatory provisions do not continue to exist in Bill C-26.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, question No. 326 will be answered today.

[Text]

OFFICE OF MINISTER OF STATE (SMALL BUSINESSES)

Question No. 326—Mr. Gagliano:

Have any public servants been seconded to the office of the Minister of State (Small Businesses) and, if so, how many and, in each case, what is his/her salary?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): As of April 15, 1985, one employee within the salary range $42,789—$48,076.

[Translation]

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Fisheries Act

[English]

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. A number of weeks ago I placed approximately 240 questions on the Order Paper concerning the "MacKay-Hatfield" affair. We on this side of the House have been patiently awaiting answers to those specific questions.

When might we be in receipt of answers to those very important questions on the Order Paper? If the Parliamentary Secretary intends to respond by saying "soon", I would ask him to define to the House what he means by "soon". I respectfully request that he indicate a specific period of time within which those answers might be forthcoming.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member's question, I spoke with the Solicitor General about that today and he informed me that those questions will be answered in the fulness of time.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, does the Parliamentary Secretary have any information regarding the questions which I placed on the Order Paper nearly two months ago, requesting that a full and detailed cost be provided to the House regarding the Quebec City Shamrock Summit, that expensive extravaganza? Those questions were put on April 1, 1985, and as yet no reply has been received from the Government. There are some 50 questions to which we deserve answers as the issue is a very important one. I trust the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to rise immediately and provide us with these answers.

Mr. McDermid: In the fullness of time.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

FISHERIES ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-32, an Act to amend the Fisheries Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry, and Motion No. 1 (Mr. Skelly) (p. 4983).

Mr. Speaker: I suspect that someone will rise to ask me to see that it is four o'clock.

An Hon. Member: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

SITTING SUSPENDED

Mr. Speaker: It being four o'clock, pursuant to Order made Monday, May 13, 1985, the sitting is suspended until 4.30 p.m. at which time, may I remind Hon. Members, the House will consider a Ways and Means Motion by the Hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

At 4 p.m. the sitting of the House was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

At 4.30 p.m. the House resumed.

THE BUDGET

FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF THE MINISTER OF FINANCE

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance) moved:

That this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the Government.

He said: Mr. Speaker, on September 4, Canadians voted for a new approach to Canada's problems and potential.

[Translation]

They voted not only for a change in policies.

[English]

They voted for a new approach to making public policy. In doing so, they opened the way for a fresh start, based on national reconciliation and economic renewal.

Two months later, on November 8, we charted a course of action to create growth, jobs and opportunities. I set out our guiding principles and new policy directions in an Agenda for Economic Renewal. We pledged to consult before we acted. And we pledged to act fairly.

Today, I am putting before this House and the Canadian people a budget of opportunity. A budget to encourage private initiative. A budget to build growth and lasting jobs for Canadians.

This budget is designed to produce more efficient and more effective government. It contains the tough measures necessary to reduce the deficit.

The actions I am proposing are realistic, effective and fair. They represent a fundamental break with the past. For too long, government decided what is best for Canadians. Government set priorities, directed activity and subsidized effort. My budget calls for Canadians, not government, to choose what is best for Canada. And it challenges Canadians by rewarding success, not subsidizing effort.

The actions in this budget are consistent with the urgent priorities for international economic renewal affirmed by the leaders of the major industrial nations at the Bonn Summit. At home and in concert with our international partners, we are working to free up the entrepreneurial spirit of our citizens, to remove obstacles to productive growth, to lower barriers to international trade, to control and reduce high deficits, and to let the dynamism of our renewed economies produce jobs and opportunities for all.

[Translation]

WORKING TOGETHER

Step by step, we have been building a clear and growing sense of harmony and purpose with our international trading partners and among all Canadians.

Since November, my colleagues and I have spoken with and listened to people from all parts of Canada. The National Economic Conference, chaired by the Prime Minister, brought Canadians together in a unique and historic forum to discuss with each other, and with government, how to achieve our shared objectives.

[English]

My colleagues and I are grateful for the enthusiastic and positive response we have had from Canadians across the country. I have personally benefited from the most extensive round of pre-budget consultations ever held. These have had an important influence on this budget.

Canadians recognize that, in this uncertain world, we must work together with patience and determination to secure economic renewal. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has carried this message consistently, vigorously and unceasingly—to labour leaders and business leaders; to the provincial First Ministers at the Regina Conference last February; to the National Economic Conference; to President Reagan at the Quebec Summit in March; and to the leaders of our major trading partners at the Bonn Economic Summit.

And working together, we have made progress.

We have achieved a measure of federal-provincial harmony absent for many years. We have brought a new spirit of co-operation to government relations with business, with labour and with other groups. We have restored Canada-United States relations to the status worthy of two sovereign nations who are not only close neighbours but who share similar goals and ideals. And we have refurbished Canada's image around the world as a secure and reliable partner. We have begun, at home and abroad, a process of reconciliation and rejuvenation.

A RECORD OF ACTION

We can point with pride to our record of action in the past eight months. Consider some of these achievements:

The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) is implementing a series of employment and training initiatives with the full support and co-operation of provincial governments and groups in the private sector. I will be committing additional funds to support these programs.

The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has moved to establish Investment Canada in place of the Foreign Investment Review Agency. This has already provided a clear signal to investors around the world that Canada is once again "open for business".

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has concluded energy accords with both Newfoundland and the western producing provinces. These historic agreements mark an end to a decade of federal-provincial bitterness and lost opportunity for Canada. They signal a new beginning that will benefit Canadians in all regions of this country.

We are acting vigorously to support our ability to excel as a trading nation. The Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) is seeking the views of Canadians on how best to secure access to our traditional markets and expand our trade.

● (1640)

[Translation]

The Minister of the Environment, working with her provincial counterparts and the private sector, has made significant progress in the fight against acid rain.

The President of the Treasury Board has announced a new deal and a fair deal with the public service unions: a deal that among other things proposes to remove taxpayer subsidies from the financing of public service pensions by establishing the plan on a sound financial basis.

[English]

The Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) has proposed far-reaching and comprehensive reforms to the rules governing financial institutions in Canada. These proposals will promote competition, increase the availability of business financing and strengthen consumer protection.

We have extended eligibility for the spouse's allowance for the elderly to an additional 85,000 low-income widows and widowers. We have embraced the concept of employment equity that Judge Abella recommended to provide women and minority groups a fair chance at realizing their full potential. We have made progress in advancing the hopes and aspirations of aboriginal peoples and in eliminating discrimination under the Indian Act.

We are moving to modernize the Criminal Code and the divorce laws. And we have initiated a long-overdue study of Canadian broadcasting policy, a vital element of our cultural sovereignty.

In all these areas, and in others, we have consulted, we have listened and we have acted. Today, it is time to take further actions to secure our future.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

The outlook for sustained and balanced growth in the world economy is better than it has been in years. But that optimism must be tempered by certain realities. There are signs that the American economy is slowing. High deficits continue to put pressure on interest rates worldwide. Protectionist pressures threaten the open trading system that has done so much to increase world prosperity.

In Canada, our economy grew strongly in 1984. Real growth was 4.7 per cent, the highest since 1976. Inflation averaged 4.4 per cent, the lowest since 1971. Inflation has since fallen below 4 per cent.

Interest rates have declined. The prime rate is below 11 per cent for the first time since 1978. Mortgage rates have declined substantially. Longer-term mortgages are beginning to appear—a sign of growing confidence.

[Translation]

Investment is expected to expand strongly this year. I expect that inflation will continue to be subdued through 1985 and beyond; real economic activity will likely expand by more than 3 per cent this year—about the same as the average for the major industrial nations.

[English]

Our recent performance and immediate prospects are encouraging. More than 200,000 jobs have been created since this government took office; the recorded increase in employment last month was the highest in five years. This is very positive, but it is still not good enough. The unemployment rate has recently fallen but remains just below 11 per cent. There are still close to 1.4 million Canadians unable to find work. We can, we must, and we will do better.

The federal government has accepted the responsibility to lead the way in meeting this challenge. But this is more than just a challenge for the government. What is needed is a national effort by the people of Canada. Everyone must participate.

Working together, we can build new confidence in the future of this country. Confidence is rising. It shows in higher consumer spending and growing business investment plans. Our job is to reinforce that confidence through our actions in this budget and to encourage Canadians to accept the challenge of economic renewal.

SECURING ECONOMIC RENEWAL

To meet this challenge, I will be proposing a large number of measures in this budget—too many to mention all of them or to provide full details in this speech. Additional information is contained in the Budget Papers I am tabling today. I encourage Hon. Members and others to refer to this material.

The actions I am proposing are consistent with the comprehensive economic strategy that we set out last November. They are designed to deal with the two major problems facing Canada today: high unemployment and our spiralling national debt. High deficits constrain our ability to promote growth and create jobs. High unemployment in turn contributes to even higher deficits.

This budget addresses the vicious circle of unemployment and debt with a range of measures carefully balanced to support economic renewal now and into the future.

We confronted a major problem of rising deficits when we took office last September. This year, in the absence of any action by the government, the deficit would have risen to more than $38 billion. The actions taken in this budget, together with those introduced in November, will reduce this year's deficit by $4.4 billion to $33.8 billion. Next year, the deficit would have been over $40 billion. Our actions will reduce that deficit by more than $8 billion to a level of $32.7 billion.

I believe that larger reductions at this time would not be prudent in light of current economic conditions. Instead, I am proposing actions which control the deficit now while ensuring that significant reductions will occur over the balance of the decade.

I am implementing a clear and realistic medium-term plan to control our debt. That plan requires tough actions to be taken now. There will be expenditure reductions and tax increases. The impact of these actions, and those taken in November, will continue to grow. Our actions will directly reduce the annual deficit at the end of the decade by more than $20 billion. Between now and then, our actions will cut a total of $75 billion from the projected increase in the public debt.

These actions represent an unprecedented response to control the dangerous trend of rising debt.

[Translation]

But this budget does much more than restore fiscal responsibility to government finance. The strategic rebalancing of priorities in this budget constitutes a major step in the direction of securing a prosperous economic future. We will promote growth and job creation by encouraging private initiative, improving government effectiveness and controlling our national debt.

[English]

ENCOURAGING PRIVATE INITIATIVE

Our priority goal is jobs for Canadians.

Maintaining the jobs we have and creating the jobs we seek requires a strong and healthy business sector. In particular we need to recognize that small and medium-sized businesses across the country are the most dynamic forces for growth and employment.

If we are to stimulate the creation of new businesses and the expansion of existing ones, we must increase our investment in productive activities. We are major savers, but too few of us are willing to invest a part of our savings in new ventures. It is through capital investment that new ideas get implemented, new activities are generated and new jobs are created. I believe Canadians understand this. I believe they will respond to the challenge of taking a direct stake in the future if they are encouraged by government, not discouraged.

• (1650)

I want to encourage risk-taking, but in a way that lets the investor choose where to invest. I do not want to further distort the tax system by measures that tell Canadians where and how to invest. This government wants individual Canadians to pick the winners within a tax framework that rewards success.

I am therefore proposing a major change in the taxation of capital gains.

Individual Canadians will be granted a lifetime capital gains exemption of half a million dollars. All capital property will qualify for the exemption. The lifetime exemption limit will be phased in over six years beginning this year.

The full exemption will be available immediately for capital gains realized on the sale of farm property. Based on my consultations with the farming community, I believe this to be the most effective way to provide the necessary assistance to this vital sector of the economy.

This measure will encourage more Canadians to invest in small and large businesses. It will help Canadian companies to accelerate their return to a healthy financial position by attracting new equity investment. It will assist smaller businesses in raising capital to pursue new ideas and new directions. It will help raise capital for research and development.

Most important, this is a broadly-based incentive that allows individual Canadians to decide where to put their money and how to create wealth, economic activity and jobs. This is central to our philosophy. The decisions should and will be made by individuals across Canada, not by politicians or public servants here in Ottawa. This is a measure designed to unleash to full entrepreneurial dynamism of individual Canadians.

