STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Government is totally without shame. It has misled the senior citizens of the country. Like the rest of Canadians who were promised all sorts of goodies during the election campaign, the senior citizens saw the Tory Government do an about face following its election. One of its members even had the nerve to say that the Government is not committed in any way to respecting the promises that were made.

It is unacceptable, Mr. Speaker, for two Tory losers like Roy McMurtry and Lawrence Hanigan to be appointed to fat cat government jobs and have their salaries increased by almost $60,000 per year, while senior citizens of my riding will each be losing $100 this year. The salary increase for those two Tory appointees is enough to restore the full indexation of OAS to every one of the 6,000 senior citizens in my riding.

I urge the Government to cancel the salary increases of these two Tories, and to restore immediately those benefits to the senior citizens of my riding. I am sure there is enough money wasted by the Government in every other riding of the country to restore full benefits to everyone.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, sports fans across the country, and I, have a great deal of concern. I rise today because many have called upon us to express our concern about the rumoured trade talks about the true blue Liberal Leader. The Liberal Leader has made it clear that he rejected Conservative Party advances in 1975, indicating that he did not want to trade sweaters in the middle of the game. However, what about after the game, or in between seasons?

All sports fans find that the rumours do persist. Is it possible that a blockbuster trade is in the offing for the coming summer recess? Is it possible that Team Grit will send their leader over to the Blues for future consideration? Why not Filmon from Manitoba, or Miller from Ontario?

Finally, questions have to be asked of the Blue Shirts. What about the rumour that the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Hees) was one of the 40 who begged and pleaded with the captain of the Grits to jump ship? I suppose we will have to reflect on the words of Yogi Berra, Mr. Speaker. "It ain't over 'til it's over".

ENERGY

PETROLEUM RECOVERY PROJECT, SARNIA, ONT.

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, a giant step has been taken by officials of Devron Petroleum Limited, Shell Canada, and officials of the Departments of Finance, and Energy, Mines and Resources. Devron Petroleum Limited is now ready to commence a major research and development project in Sarnia Township to recover petroleum that was left in place after usual recovery methods were exhausted in the early 1900s. This innovative recovery scheme to develop an abandoned oil field further is possible due to the diligence and quick action of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in amending Part I of the Income Tax Act to accommodate new technology in the oil and gas sectors.

Devron is a small Canadian business, and the success of this project has already meant the employment of 75 people and could result in the implementation of the recovery method in heavy oil fields and sand deposits in other parts of Canada. The Departments of Energy, Mines and Resources and Finance certainly did much to get this uniquely Canadian project moving. It once again reaffirms the Government's commitment to support the small entrepreneur oil producer with tax incentives rather than government grants, which represents a fundamental break with the old way of doing things.

This is a positive example of what the May 23 Budget can, and will, accomplish. A medium-sized Canadian business is investing in Canada, helping to create jobs, and generating growth with new activities.

S.O. 21

THE ECONOMY

ECONOMIC RECOVERY—RIDING OF DRUMMOND, QUE.

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, our Government has restored a climate of confidence among Canadian investors by making decisions conducive to economic growth. Last January, for instance, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) announced a $38 million investment to fund the construction of the gas pipeline to supply the cities of Drummondville, Acton Vale and Saint-Hyacinthe.

This financial injection will create 675 jobs over three years and, between now and 1987, generate $125 million in over-all capital expenditures in those three municipalities.

Dominion Textile and the Notre-Dame-du-Bon-Conseil Agropur cheese industry—it ranks first worldwide and is owned by 1,350 farmers—have decided to switch to natural gas, which means that each company will invest $500,000.

Last June 3, Celanese plant management announced their intention to convert to natural gas, again an investment of more than half a million dollars, proof positive that they have confidence in the future and will create permanent jobs in my riding.

Mr. Speaker, those projects spell economic recovery. They show that the Budget of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the economic policy of this Government have restored confidence.

TRADE

UNITED STATES TARIFF ON DRIED AND SALTED CODFISH

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the American Government imposed an outrageous tariff on dried and salted codfish moving into the United States from Canada. Fifty per cent of our exports of dried and salted fish go to the United States. Ten thousand fishermen and fish plant workers are affected in Canada, most of them in Newfoundland.

There is one riding which is affected just as much as mine, and that is the riding of Manicouagan which is represented by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). There are 700 workers in that riding, and 700 workers in my riding. Perhaps that is the only thing we have in common.

Is this the definition of free trade? It is free for the United States, but costs residents of the ridings of Gander-Twillingate and Manicouagan 20 cents on the dollar. We ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to get the lead out of his shoes and do something. We will give him until next week to produce some results.

THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in the House of Commons the NDP tried to bring pressure to bear on the silent Tories, the silent majority of back-benchers, on the pension issue, by giving out their phone numbers and asking people to call them. We now find that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) met with his caucus leaders at breakfast where they cooked up plans to stiffen the resolve of the wavering Tory back-benchers. Apparently the Prime Minister was told that deindexation was only an issue with the NDP in the House of Commons.

On the contrary, we think it is an issue with all old age pensioners in Canada today, and all ordinary Canadians who are approaching pension age. If people are not going to call the Tory back-benchers, or cannot get through, they should call the Prime Minister collect at (613) 992-4211. That number again is (613) 992-4211.

I would like to point out that the ordinary Canadian who is 50 years old today and will retire in the year 2000 will lose $36,000 in purchasing power. Therefore, the salt and pepper group, the 50-year olds, should also phone the Prime Minister and demand an end to this terrible scheme.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

OBJECTION TO PROPOSED POSTAL RATE INCREASES

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak on an issue which I believe to be of great importance not just to small businessmen in Canada but to every Canadian. The Canada Post Corporation has asked the Government to approve a 2 cent hike in the price of first class postage. This would place Canadian rates at 47.8 per cent higher than their U.S. counterparts.

Canada Post justifies this request on the basis of its need to reduce its deficit. Yet how can I, or any Member of the House, justify such an increase to our constituents when daily we receive letters of complaint, and hear numerous horror stories about the operations and poor service of Canada Post?

Independent businessmen are incensed by the proposed increases, and rightly so. They must depend on the mail for their cash flow, yet they know the system has proved unreliable time and again. Now we are once more asked to subsidize this edifice of inefficiency. Canadians know that if they ran their households or businesses in this fashion, they would soon be out of business. But that is not the case for Canada Post.

Mention the Post Office to any person on the street and you can be guaranteed to hear a story of frustration and anger over continued poor service.

On behalf of the constituents of Parkdale-High Park, I ask the Government to deny Canada Post this increase, and I urge that a full review and investigation be made into the operations of this Crown corporation.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired.

DISSATISFACTION WITH SERVICE

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, I also rise today to complain about the proposed postal increase. A recent constituency case comes to mind. However, it deals with early, as opposed to late, mail delivery service.

My constituent, Mr. Day, asked that his mail be held for five weeks while he was away on holidays from May 3 to June 6. He asked for delivery to resume on June 7.

Being the efficient service that it is, Canada Post delivered his mail on June 6, one day early, and not to his mail box but to his milk box. This resulted in his mail being stolen, with a loss of cheques in excess of $2,000.

Every week I receive numerous calls and letters from my constituents who are clearly not satisfied with the service provided by Canada Post. Time and time again their major complaint concerns the consistency in mail delivery.

Millions of ordinary Canadians, business people and charitable organizations rely almost exclusively on a dependable postal system. Inconsistencies in service have serious consequences for these individuals.

I recognize the present financial position of Canada Post, but this in itself is not enough justification for another postal rate increase. Canada Post needs to examine seriously the efficiency of its operations and the level of service being provided to Canadians. Once efficiency and service have been improved to an acceptable level, I would wholeheartedly support a postal rate increase to tackle its financial difficulties.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

MEETING OF ACID RAIN ENVOYS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, today we learn from newspapers that the first meeting of substance between the two acid rain envoys took place in Ottawa yesterday, three months after their appointment. That is a rather slow start which reflects poorly on the degree of commitment and urgency of the two envoys. In other words, it is three months lost.

The meeting was over in just a few hours—a real quickie—which allowed only a few people an opportunity to speak to the envoys. We do not get the impression that the envoys are spending a lot of time on their assignment—on the contrary. But you get what you pay for from dollar a year men.

It is worth noting that the United States envoy, Mr. Lewis, is quoted as saying: "President Reagan is interested in more than continuing studies". If that is so, why did he not say so in Quebec City at the Shamrock meeting? If that is so, why is President Reagan not taking the initiative of launching a control program? If that is so, why has the United States not yet announced that it is going to Helsinki to sign the international acid rain agreement?

We hope that Mr. Lewis is not raising false hopes with the statement he made yesterday. Canadians are watching the public pronouncement of the acid rain envoys very closely, and do not want to be led down the garden path.

REACTION OF PENSIONERS

Mr. A. H. Harry Brightwell (Perth): Mr. Speaker, because the Opposition has been telling us that senior citizens were concerned about the recent Budget, I sought out various seniors within my riding last weekend. They expressed satisfaction with their present care and most did not mind contributing to the reduction in the deficit. Some were very concerned, but they spoke only the Opposition buzzwords. When they learned the facts, most were satisfied.

• (1115)

One 80 year old lady was difficult to convince Mr. Speaker. She had all of the Opposition's buzzwords, but was a little annoyed when "I had all of the answers". She felt that neither she nor her family should pay for the deficit. She called me on her family's urging. I should tell you, Mr. Speaker, that her son-in-law was a Liberal candidate in a previous election. She has a son who has a Ph.D. Beyond that she has a son who is a member of the Opposition. Any "anxiety, heartache, uncertainty", and I quote the Hon. Member, are products of an organized attack on seniors by the Opposition for purely political motives. I call on the Opposition to stop this cowardly attack on the seniors of Canada.

CONTENTS OF BUDGET

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I would like to welcome the Prime Minister back from his press conference. I did not see it, but I understand he talked about a considerable amount of flexibility in terms of the Budget, that it is not necessarily here for all time, and that it may change.

In light of that suggestion, and the statement by the Minister of National Health and Welfare yesterday that these are proposals that are not yet in effect in this document we have here, can he tell us here in the House, right now, whether these are really proposals and not decisions? If so, why on earth have we been taking the time of the House debating and voting on them, as we have done in the past? Would the Prime Minister do one other thing for us? Would he tell us who is the official government spokesman on this Budget? Is it the Minister of Finance? Is it the President of the Treasury Board? Is it the Minister of National Health and Welfare? Is it the Minister of State for Finance, or is it somebody else, because there is a tremendous amount of confusion and contradiction? Would the Prime Minister help us by having one person who can make definitive statements on what the Budget really is?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as is always the case in a British parliamentary democracy, all Ministers of the Crown and all members of the Government speak, and are quite capable of speaking, on behalf of the Budget at any time.

Mr. Deans: I would not bet on that.

Mr. Mulroney: The matter to which my hon. friend refers, the Budget, clearly represents major changes. We have tried to come to grips with overwhelming economic problems. We have a lot of catch-up to do because of the very difficult financial situation we were left by the Liberal Government, to the point where the credibility of some important social programs was placed in jeopardy, and we have tried to undertake that in a fair and in an honourable way.

I acknowledged at the press conference, without hesitation, that one of the issues affecting the elderly poor clearly is a source of concern for all of us, which was why a provision was inserted in the Budget that we would monitor that very carefully. One of my concerns was that, although this measure does not take effect until 1986, the portrayal of it by some members of the Opposition, and transposed across the country, is that pensioners today have lost some benefits. Nothing could be further from the truth. That was a distortion of the truth and reality. That is why we wanted to monitor it very carefully, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT PENSION PROVISION BE WITHDRAWN

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): I would definitely take issue with that, Mr. Speaker. I do not think we have made any misrepresentations about the impact of the Budget.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: I want to say to the Prime Minister that we do have a certain amount of sympathy for him as he picks his way through the damage that has been strewn across the country as a result of the Budget.

[Translation]

However, we sympathize more with the victims, and especially the elderly. In this case, it would in fact seem more appropriate, and since the Prime Minister has caused anxiety to take hold of the elderly in this country, could he give the House the assurance today that he will withdraw this proposal here and now, in order to provide a measure of security for individuals who are being adversely affected in this way and who are unable to protect themselves against inflation? Could the Prime Minister do that for us here in the House today?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the elderly in Canada would be more inclined to believe in the Hon. Member's sincerity if, as a member of a Liberal Government, he had not been involved in severely cutting back benefits for the elderly in 1982. And since the Hon. Member, who was a Minister at the time, took that kind of action, it is clear his credibility has suffered as a result. The provision has had no negative impact on the elderly. According to the Budget, this measure would and will become effective on January 1 of next year, but also according to the Budget, we are monitoring the situation on a regular basis to ensure, as far as possible, that no problems will result for the neediest in our society.

REQUEST FOR EARLY WITHDRAWAL

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I have one final, short supplementary question. The Prime Minister has called an emergency caucus meeting this weekend to consider—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: There is the evidence; there is the evidence. At least subtract that from my time, Mr. Speaker.

Obviously the issue is one of damage control and how to cut losses. Will the Prime Minister assure us that he will not listen to the counsel of those who wish to hoist this issue and postpone the decision until autumn in order to save political face? Will he do the right thing and resolve the problem of deindexation before Parliament rises? That is the right thing to do and we all know it. Monitoring is nonsense. Let us get it out of the way right now, so that we can move on to discuss other aspects of the Budget, and at least people will know that they will be protected.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, at least there is one person in the Liberal Party who knows that no damaging effects will take place to the elderly and that they will only take place, if it comes to that, next year, and that is the Leader of the Liberal Party, who has not been here this week four days out of five. Clearly, he is not very concerned about the kinds of points which are being raised.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, that is unparliamentary—

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Prime Minister should not comment upon the presence or absence of Members in the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Points of order cannot be raised during Question Period. It is true that Hon. Members are not supposed to refer to the presence or absence of other Members in the House. However, that applies equally to all Parties.

Mr. Mulroney: Mr. Speaker, I apologize, and I will not say a word about the Leader of the Opposition not being here.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Gauthier: Where were you yesterday? You were in hiding.

Mr. Mulroney: Both here and in press conferences, we have responded to what were clearly questions about the Budget. The Budget is widely perceived as an excellent job-creating Budget and has met with wide favour across the country. I will acknowledge that there is one element which has caused concern. We are not unmoved by that concern, and that is why we will continue to monitor it very carefully. A concern about the elderly poor must always be a concern of ours. We will monitor it intimately to deal with it as soon as we can.

APPLICATION OF PROVISIONS

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Is it a new thesis that everything announced on the night of the Budget is just a proposition if it is not applied that night? Are they telling Canadians that the tax on gasoline might not come into effect in September? Are they telling Canadians that the sale tax, which is to come into force on January 1, might not be there? Are they telling Canadians that the deindexation of the income tax exemption might not be there? The type of Budget with which we are faced today—is it an economic statement or a joke? Will the Prime Minister give some certainty to Canadians about the Budget, a Budget which took nine years to prepare and which was, after nine years, an absolute flop?

Some Hon. Members: Nine years?

Mr. Chrétien: Nine months. I am sorry.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It would take nine years for the Liberals to do it.

• (1125)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member was only off by eight or nine years, and what's that? On the question of disintegration of the Budget, that was all resolved with the Liberals and Mr. MacEachen in 1981.

All that I have said is that in a massive Budget like ours there was one area of particular concern, and we made reference to it in the budgetary papers. It was that special kind of concern for the elderly poor. I have no hesitation in telling my hon. friend that I never intended to imply that any document, or any group of positions, could be perfect at all times. We put it in the Budget because we had that concern. That is why we placed in the Budget our intention to monitor it very carefully. I know that my hon. friend will not hold a sense of compassion and concern for the elderly against me.

SOCIAL SECURITY

PENSIONS—INDEXATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, could the Right Hon. Prime Minister inform the House whether he intends, and I hope he does intend to very soon, to announce to the elderly in Canada that the Government will not eliminate indexation, and since the amount the elderly will be losing as a result of only partial indexation over a period of five years is practically the same amount the Conservative Government is giving the oil companies for the next five years, does the Government, if the elderly get this money back, intend to withdraw the $12 billion present to give the oil companies?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member astonishes me. As a former Minister of Finance who was widely respected, he knows perfectly well that his statement is sophistical in the extreme. On this point the Budget papers indicated that we would be monitoring the situation very closely because we share the country's concern for the neediest in our society. It seems to me there is nothing here to disturb the serenity of anyone in Canada. We are showing a normal concern, as human beings, for the elderly, and that is why this was put in the Budget papers, and as soon as we can possibly do so we shall take steps to help the elderly again.

Oral Questions

[English]

PENSIONS

PRIME MINISTER'S PRESS CONFERENCE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister too that flows from his press conference, where he indicated that for the first time he understands that the overwhelming majority of pensioners understand that they are going to be severely hurt by the Government's Budget. He also indicated that he might be prepared to take action before the end of the present calendar year to correct this injustice to pensioners, but refused to answer a specific question about that.

Is there a possibility that the Government will take corrective action concerning Canada's pensioners before the end of the present year and, if so, what kind of action does the Government have in mind?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that I acknowledged for the first time that there was concern about this. On the contrary, the acknowledgement did not come today. The acknowledgement is right in the budgetary papers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: While the Hon. Member was busy peddling the line that harm had come to the pensioners, which was misleading, he should have been reading the budgetary papers which indicate that any program would only take effect next January in any case. It was because of our sensitivity that we put it right in the budgetary papers that we ourselves were concerned about this kind of action, that even as we were contemplating it ourselves with a view to restoring health to the economy, we were concerned about it to the point where we indicated that we would want to monitor it and improve it at the earliest possible moment.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the only people in Canada who have tried to be misleading about the Budget are on the government side of this House. Pensioners, opposition Members, business people, farmers, and workers all understand one thing: the Government is out to wage its battle of the deficit on the backs of the pensioners.

● (1130)

Once again, as was the case during his press conference, the Prime Minister did not answer the question. Since he indicated that the Government may take corrective action before the end of the present year, and since pensioners are living in a state of anxiety right now, will the Prime Minister tell us if he does plan to take action before the end of the year, and what that action might be?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we indicated in the budgetary papers that, at the earliest possible moment, pursuant to an intensive monitoring of the situation, we will take appropriate action to be helpful to the people affected.

I hope my hon. friend does not take great pride in going to meetings with elderly citizens to give them only a part of the story. There is not a single elderly person in this country today who has been impacted unfavourably by this Budget. The only cheques seniors will receive will be cheques for larger amounts of money, and that is a fact of life. I think my hon. friend does himself and his Party a grave disservice by indicating the contrary.

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I would like to assure the Prime Minister that we will tell pensioners exactly what the Government is doing. We tell them that the Prime Minister is giving a $500,000 capital gains gift to the wealthy and $2 billion to the oil companies, while taking away $2 billion from the pensioners. That is what we tell them, and that is the truth.

Will the Prime Minister show respect to his obligations to the House, to Members on all sides, to the people of Canada, and particularly to the pensioners, and deal with pensioners' anxieties by answering the question that I will now put to him for the third time? Will he tell us now that the Government does plan to take corrective action before the end of this year, to remove the anxiety with which pensioners are living? Will he either restore indexation, something which we want, or announce fully equivalent measures for Canada's pensioners?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I find quite appalling the fact that this should come from the Hon. Member who has been trading on and exacerbating the anxiety of senior citizens, with no good reason. That is what they have been going around the country doing. I exclude from that comment my hon. friend from Toronto whose appearances at elderly citizens' rallies have been marked with what I thought was great dignity. We have indicated in the budgetary—

Mr. Broadbent: Ha!

Mr. Mulroney: Now the Leader of the NDP finds that funny.

Mr. Broadbent: I always find you funny.

Mr. Mulroney: You do.

Mr. Broadbent: A joke, actually.

Mr. Mulroney: He has never been the same, Mr. Speaker, since we put him in a limousine with a driver.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: That is what I call a cheap shot.

Mr. Broadbent: The master of the cheap shot.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: That is his new civility.

Mr. Broadbent: When you have no argument, reduce yourself to abuse.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

SUPREME COURT RULING ON MANITOBA MINORITY RIGHTS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, you can tell by the level of exchange that the Prime Minister has returned to the House. I welcome him back because—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: How would you know?

Mr. Axworthy: Because we are here all the time.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Just compare records, Mr. Speaker.

Yesterday we were looking for some clear direction from the Government concerning the very important, historic decision made by the Supreme Court regarding Manitoba. We are pleased to have the Prime Minister back in the House so that we may get a more forthright answer than the one we received yesterday.

Mr. Pawley, the Premier of Manitoba, has indicated that his Government intends to follow the invitation of the Supreme Court to make a specific submission on what kind of timetable will be followed in implementing the recommendations of the Supreme Court. Does the federal Government also intend to make a submission to the Supreme Court setting out what it would consider to be a minimum time to meet the requirements?

Is the Government also considering the proposition of working with the Government of Manitoba to develop a constitutional amendment that would be based upon the principles of those resolutions that were passed unanimously by this House in 1983 and 1984, so that we can give better effect to the basic spirit of that decision and provide for a full range of opportunities for the language minorities in Manitoba?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises two items. First is the decision of the Supreme Court. I was somewhat taken aback by his observations because I thought the Deputy Prime Minister responded fully and very well yesterday in the House of Commons. Perhaps the Hon. Member is gearing up to politicize a sensitive national issue, but I must say that I was taken aback by his comments on this important matter.

There has been a decision by the Supreme Court which, of course, the Government of Canada will respect fully. We will work closely with the parties to ensure its full implementation. With regard to any other matters, I spoke with Premier Pawley to assure him of the support of the Government of Canada regarding any technical assistance that might be required on this matter or any other matters. I think my hon. friend knows full well my position in regard to the provision of minority rights in our country. That is the position of the Government, and it will always be the position of the Government and, I hope, of the Parliament of Canada.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Prime Minister would fully recognize that all Members of the House treat this matter with deep seriousness, and that we are all trying to find the best solution. That is why I would like the Prime Minister to answer my question. Is the Government considering making a submission, or is it considering the other option which would be to provide for a jointly arrived at constitutional amendment? Will the Prime Minister meet with the Premier and the Leader of the Opposition in Manitoba to determine whether or not they are open to such an option?

Will the Government also indicate whether or not it is prepared to provide financial assistance, not only for technical services and translation but for the enhancement of the provision of French-language services in the Province of Manitoba as the Prime Minister appeared to offer in his press conference this morning?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Absolutely, Mr. Speaker. It has been the position of the Government to protect and enhance—

An Hon. Member: We didn't hear that yesterday.

Mr. Mulroney: I beg your pardon? You didn't hear it yesterday? That is the specific question that my hon. friend—

Mr. Axworthy: Will you be specific? What about services?

Mr. Mulroney: Absolutely. The Government of Canada is supportive not only of the decision but of any initiative or meetings that might come forward in which the Government of Manitoba or others would bring forward ideas that would be helpful to minority rights. We would be in favour of that.

PENSIONS

IMPACT OF BUDGET

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Pensioners across the country fully understand that the budgetary proposal will not come into effect until January 1 of next year, and that is precisely why they are now organizing. Senior citizens have sharpened their pencils and they know very well, because of the way they have to live, what the impact of this proposal will be.

If the Prime Minister is seriously concerned about how pensioners feel, I suggest to him that there is no need to monitor the situation between now and the end of this year, because the effects of the proposal will not be felt until 1986. I would ask the Prime Minister if he will not say to the pensioners that he promised them during the election campaign, and following that, that he would not touch Old Age Security benefits, and that he will rise in his place today to fulfil that commitment.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think I can say, on behalf of all Members, that no Member of the House has made more compelling presentations in this regard than my hon. friend from Beaches, and I salute him for it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: We indicated that one of the responsibilities of a Government was to listen to people, to reasonable debate in the House of Commons, and to criticism. I do not take it as a sign of weakness to acknowledge that we are, indeed, listening to people such as my hon. friend. One of the reasons for which the budgetary document was so framed was in anticipation of the kind of difficulty which has been raised by many people in the House, and particularly by my hon. friend. We will act as quickly as we can. We will continue to pay very close attention to what he and others say.

PENSIONERS' ANXIETY

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. There is absolutely no question that there is a level of anxiety amongst seniors which I have never seen before. Will the Prime Minister respond to that anxiety by saying to the pensioners: "We will let you know as quickly as possible, perhaps over the weekend, that we will not proceed with this budgetary measure in response to your concerns"?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the first part of the observation of my hon. friend, there is nothing inconsistent in what he has said with what is in the budgetary document. I am happy to reconfirm that, at the earliest possible moment, if and when we have the kind of news that would be helpful, we will make it known.

STATEMENT BY PREMIER OF NOVA SCOTIA

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. I would say to the Prime Minister that senior citizens do not want concern from him; they want positive actions. One of the most damaging comments which has been made in the debate with regard to the deindexation of Old Age Security came from a source which I will quote. The source stated:

—it was a wrong move, I am very disappointed, I am totally against it. It was the wrong thing to do to our senior citizens. That part of the Budget was not compassionate.

That statement was made by the Premier of Nova Scotia. Does the Prime Minister agree with him? If he does, will he have the dignity and the respect of our senior citizens at heart and make the changes today which will mean the full indexation of Old Age Security?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I heard the comment which was made by the Premier of Nova Scotia in regard to that budgetary provision. I heard it from leaders of the business community, the BCNI, leaders of trade unions, and my hon. friend from Beaches. I indicated at a press conference this morning that only a very foolish individual would be insensitive to that kind of comment and analysis. With regard to the question, I think we have been prudent. I hope, at the earliest possible moment, that we can make a statement which would be consistent with the intentions set forward by the caveat which was placed in the Budget.

REQUEST THAT BUDGET PROVISIONS BE WITHDRAWN

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I suggest, respectfully, that the Prime Minister is wavering on the issue. He talks of monitoring, when he knows by the outcry in the country that Canadians are against the budget measure, and when he knows of the uncertainty and anxiety with which senior citizens are faced. Will he not take the opportunity to stand in his place and end the measure, unequivocally, today on the floor of the House of Commons?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the reason that I made the distinction between the Hon. Member for Beaches and my hon. friend was because the Party, of which he is a member, brought in measures which did more harm to the senior citizens than any other Government in the history of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: There is a fundamental distinction to be made between a thoughtful member of the NDP—who opposed both the measures which were taken by the Liberals and this Government on this particular issue—and the Hon. Member whose Party chose to go through with it. That Party did not even have the decency to say that it would listen. We are acknowledging that we are listening to the Canadian people, which is infinitely more than the Liberals ever cared to do.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BUDGET STATEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. There is some question as to whether the plan to deindex pensions is a proposal, an idea, or a possibility. On May 23 the Minister of Finance said: "Beginning January 1, 1986, these payments will be indexed only for the annual increase in the consumer price index greater than 3 per cent." He said "will be indexed". Is the Prime Minister saying to us today that "will be" really means "may", and that the Government is considering changing that terminology in the Budget?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have responded to that question in half a dozen different ways, and the Hon. Member knows it.

TEXT OF BUDGET

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I think the question is very important at this point. The Prime Minister has indicated that what the Minister of Finance said was a commitment of the Government, that it will do this, and that this will be done. He is now saying that this may be done—

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Riis: Is the Prime Minister suggesting that the Budget is now being changed and that the word "will" will be changed to "may" or "possibly"?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, is the Hon. Member suggesting that the sentence to which he referred in the Budget ought to be read in total isolation from the rest of the contents, including the phrase which goes on to say that the matter will be watched very carefully and at the earliest possible moment the Government will act to be helpful? That has been said many times by the Minister of Finance and by the Prime Minister. That is the sentiment which motivates this Government.

NATIONAL REVENUE

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDIT—INVESTIGATION OF ABUSES

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. News reports in the last two days on the front pages of major newspapers have confirmed examples of the scandalous abuse of the scientific research tax credit, which the previous Liberal Government initiated. When our Government took office the Minister of Finance immediately stopped the "quick flip" within the SRTC program.

We have reports of individuals literally taking millions of dollars from Canada. Will the Prime Minister initiate the necessary action to undertake a full investigation into how this was allowed to develop without the proper safeguards, and why this was not stopped when Mr. Lalonde knew that it would cost Canadian taxpayers in excess of $2 billion? I feel that the people of Canada deserve an explanation.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, as Minister of National Revenue perhaps I could respond and indicate to the Hon. Member that one of the very first steps which was taken by the Minister of Finance upon assuming office was to put a stop to this sort of haemorrhage of taxpayers' funds. The Hon. Member is absolutely correct. Certainly there are signs of abuse. Some of the money which was spent in that way went to useful projects. However, it is akin to flying a transport plane across Canada and dumping bushelsful of money, so that some dollar bills would land in deserving yards. We put a stop to that. My Department will be auditing to ensure that, where abuses have taken place, the law will be fully pressed against the individuals in question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF DELEGATION FROM CHINA

Mr. Speaker: May I bring to the attention of the House the presence in our gallery of a delegation from China, led by Mr. Rong Yiren, Chairman of the Cina International Trust and Investment Corporation and Vice-Chairman of the National People's Congress. He is accompanied by Mr. Ma Yi, Vice-Minister of the State Economy Commission, and Mr. Yu Zhan, the Chinese Ambassador to Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

NATIONAL REVENUE

CROSBIE OFFSHORE SERVICES LIMITED

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of National Revenue which is about another, admittedly smaller, haemorrhage of public funds. Yesterday the Minister of National Revenue refused to answer the question about the very strange decision of National Revenue in its treatment of the bank account of Crosbie Offshore Services Limited. He indicated that Section 241 of the Income Tax Act prevented him from answering the question. That Section is there to protect the confidentiality of the taxpayer. I would remind the Minister, in this case, that the taxpayer waived that confidentiality by making information public. The Minister of Justice has also made the information public about that tax account, so I feel justified in asking him again why this very strange behaviour. Why, when Revenue Canada could have paid itself that debt, did it release the funds, and it now stands at least $332,000 short, possibly more?

● (1150)

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I would remind the Hon. Member, who is a former Solicitor General and should know better, that Section 241 of the Income Tax Act forbids me or any of my officials from:

(a) knowingly communicate or knowingly allow to be communicated to any person any information obtained by or on behalf of the Minister for the purposes of this Act—

Therefore I cannot, as much as I would like to do so, particularly in cases where unjust innuendoes are being spread by people who should know better.

An Hon. Member: And in the absence of the Minister.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of National Revenue refers to unjust innuendo he is characterizing the secret information that he has. That is very unfair.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Look who is talking about fairness.

Mr. Kaplan: Here we have a taxpayer who has gone public, and I think it is clear--

Mr. Speaker: Order. Supplementary question, please.

Mr. Kaplan: I want to ask the Minister to consider the taxpayer who has gone public and the importance of the integrity of the system of tax collection being preserved by an honest answer to the question I have asked, and I ask it again.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I gave a fully honest answer to the Hon. Member. I want to say to him that, notwithstanding the fact that a former Solicitor General of Canada would ask the Minister of National Revenue to break the law, I have no intention of breaking the law; I intend to enforce the law.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MEDICAL CARE

HOSPITAL SYSTEM—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Late last year we had the Minister of Finance suggesting that we might have to consider at least a change to universality if not an end to it. Then the Government is moving to partially deindex old age pensions and social benefits. Yesterday the Minister of Finance indicated that it may be necessary for hospitals to look for private funding in order to provide the services that Canadians need. Is it the intention of the Government, now or in the future, to move toward the privatization of the hospital system in Canada?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): No.

NATIONAL REVENUE

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDIT—INVESTIGATION OF FRAUDULENT USE

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of Science and Technology and concerns the scientific research tax credit program which became a bonanza for fraudulent use. This program was initiated by the Liberals in 1984, and terminated by the present Minister of Finance. Because the good name of Canadian science has been darkened, is the Minister going to have an investigation so that those at fault will be punished?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, because the responsibility for this program would be that of the Department of National Revenue, not of my colleague, the Minister of State for Science and Technology, perhaps I can answer in his stead. Yes, we will fully audit claims made under the SRTC program. We intend to ensure that, where abuses have taken place, the law is fully enforced. My colleague, the Minister of Finance, has changed that program, one which will end up costing Canadian taxpayers approximately ten times as much as was predicted by the Liberal Minister of Finance when he introduced the program.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

IMPORTATION OF JAPANESE MANUFACTURED VEHICLES

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Last March his Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said that while discussions continued for a new agreement with Japan on the export of Japanese cars to Canada, the situation would be monitored to ensure that the provisions of the previous agreement would be respected. Yet in April exports of Japanese cars to Canada jumped 20 per cent, and 27 per cent in May. Yesterday his Minister told the press that he was dropping the requirement of the previous agreement that the total number of Japanese cars exported to Canada not exceed 170,000.

I ask the Prime Minister why his Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has not carried out his commitment to see that the previous agreement was respected, and why has he dropped the key provision of that agreement without getting anything in return by way of either a new agreement at previous levels, or new commitments on Canadian content, jobs, and production for Canada.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend has put a lot of figures into his preamble and I would want to examine them very carefully to make sure they are in conformity with the facts. In the absence of my hon. friend, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, who is conducting negotiations both with vigour and, I think, effectiveness, I would say that I think that when my hon. friend was the Minister responsible in a previous Government the documentation was concluded towards the end of June. So we are still working towards a deadline and an agreement which will be beneficial to Canada and Canadians.

CONDUCT OF NEGOTIATIONS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister says that his Minister is pursuing the negotiations with vigour and effectiveness. Can he explain why the Minister first set a target date for a new agreement of June 12, a date which has gone by, and is now talking about August, while at the same time he is unwilling to send a firm signal to the Japanese by way of necessary direct action to make sure they realize that Canada means business that either there is a new agreement for quotas in place at previous levels or there is a new agreement giving commitments for production, jobs, and activity in Canada by Japanese companies equivalent to what they are already doing in the U.S.? Will he ensure that his Minister acts decisively in the way he claims the Minister is doing, but which he has not shown any signs of doing as yet?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think it would be widely recognized that the present Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is probably the most effective Minister to hold that portfolio in many, many years here in Ottawa.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: In fact his accomplishments are such that, while he is working extremely well to protect the automobile industry, he is down in Cape Breton right now announcing new job creation projects for the Island.

PENSIONS

BUDGET IMPACT—MONITORING INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I have been listening with a lot of care and interest to what he has had to say on the pension situation. Is he saying to the people of Canada, more specifically to the pensioners, that following his monitoring, whatever he is monitoring, if the situation gets worse the Government will go ahead with its proposals to partially deindex pensions?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there are two hypothetical questions in there. I have answered many times, sometimes in the absence of my hon. friend, I will acknowledge—

An Hon. Member: Isn't he always here?

Mr. Mulroney: Well, you know, when that car hits the highway the chauffeur just does not know when to stop. The Hon. Member likes to keep close to the working man; that is why he sits up front.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: That is why you are in the back.

Mr. Axworthy: He does not have a flag on his car, Brian.

Mr. Mulroney: I think my friend is, of course, an excellent Member and excellent Leader of his Party, and I have given him full responses to assure him that the commitment of this Government to the elderly and the integrity of social programs is unrivalled and unsurpassed by any other Party in the House, and certainly is no less than anyone else's.

REQUEST FOR ABOLITION OF GOVERNMENT PLAN

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, maybe the Prime Minister will answer this time. He has raised the possibility of a change which no one else in the country seems to want. I want to understand. If the situation worsens, persumably we should not go ahead with this regressive change because it will also negatively affect pensioners. But if the situation improves he has already implied that they are going to cancel the change because, in his judgment, the Government will be able to—

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Broadbent: My question is this. Does that not inevitably lead to the point that, whatever happens, whether it gets better or worse, the Government should abolish this ridiculous plan to deindex pensioners' cheques?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): We have indicated where we want to go with job creation programs designed to strengthen the social safety net and the programs for our elderly. That is where we want to get to, and why, as well. We have acknowledge that this presents a problem, but we have avoided making the categorical kinds of statements which, for example, limit your scope of action or make you look awfully foolish, for example, like the Leader of the NDP who, in the Ontario election campaign, was asked if he would ever join up with the Liberals, and he said: "I'd rather marry Dracula first".

INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question for the Right Hon. Prime Minister.

First of all, I would like to say that as far as I am concerned, he is certainly to be commended for indicating in the Budget that the situation with respect to Old Age Security pensions will be reviewed.

He deserves to be congratulated on having said that he is going to monitor the situation between now and the end of the year, and that he is disposed to make changes if necessary.

However, what I fail to understand, and that is the point of my question, is why this potential cut in the level of indexation was put in the Budget? Why was it included? The monitoring could have been done until the end of this year without causing any anxiety among the elderly, or as they say in Quebec: "sans jouer avec leurs nerfs". And the decision could have been made at the end of this year just the same. Why did the Government decide to have this sword of Damocles hanging over the elderly? Why did they not—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's comments. I think he puts the problem in a practical perspective that shows he likes to take a more realistic view.

All the budgetary measures were designed with a view towards setting up stronger social programs at the national level that can be guaranteed to benefit the neediest in our society. That was the whole point of putting our public finances on a sounder basis, after they had been seriously undermined in the past.

When 30, 40 or 50 per cent of the Government of Canada's national assets is spent on paying the interest on the public debt, it is a serious threat to the social programs we want to protect, and that is why we have proceeded in this way.

However, I admit the Hon. Member has a point, and that is why we said in the Budget that we were going to monitor the situation very closely in order to try and help the elderly as soon as possible.

PETITIONS

CHANGES IN OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions from citizens of Toronto who are petitioning the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

I have another petition from citizens in Metropolitan Toronto who are asking the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from citizens and residents of the Metropolitan Toronto area who ask the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of my riding of Davenport who petition the Government to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the privilege of tabling a petition as part of the campaign for justice for the elderly, in which the Prime Minister of Canada is asked to meet the commitment he made during the election campaign in the summer of 1984, to maintain full indexation of Old Age Security pensions. The petition is signed by several constituents from the riding of Ottawa-Vanier.

I have another petition—

[English]

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker, signed by several members of the constituency of Ottawa-Vanier which I represent. They request the House and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to respect the commitment of the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

I have other petitions signed by an impressive number of constituents of mine asking the Government to keep its word and respect its commitment of the 1984 election campaign, that is, to maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from my electoral district of Vancouver-Kingsway signed by a number of seniors and other people. It is with respect to the issue of deindexing seniors' pensions. This is the largest petition I have ever received from my riding. There are over 500 signatures on it. The petitioners pray that the Government not break its promise to the seniors of Canada and not deindex their old age pensions because they will lose $100 worth of purchasing power next year, $205 the year after, and so on up to $680 in the year 1991. They say that the losers will be the poor, the unemployed, and women.

[Translation]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I also have a number of petitions and they also concern pensions. One petition is signed by 23 individuals from Lefaivre, Ontario. I also received 33 signatures from Vars; 33 from Hammond, 31 from Hawkesbury; 21 from Clarence Creek; 30 from Bourget; 22 from the Club Les bonnes Samaritaines in Hawkesbury; 40 from the Casselman Senior Citizen's Club and three from Clarence Creek, Ontario.

REINSTATEMENT OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission-Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, it is both my duty and honour to present to the House a petition signed by 1,750 concerned British Columbians calling for the return of capital punishment for convicted murderers. This would ensure the security of all Canadians in the future by deterring those in society who would deny us our most basic right, the right to live in a free and peaceful society. This petition is sponsored by Victims of Violence, British Columbia branch.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF POLITICAL PRISONERS IN POLAND

Mr. Murray Dorin (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege to rise and present a petition from a number of very concerned people in Edmonton who strongly wish to urge Parliament to make representations to the Polish Government for the release of all political prisoners who are being held in Poland unjustly and being denied their human rights.

RETENTION OF ONE DOLLAR BANKNOTE

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present a petition on behalf of 32,500 residents of the National Capital Region which was gathered over a period of only a few days in the City of Ottawa. The petition calls upon this House, and in particular the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), to intervene to ensure that the $1 banknote, which is produced by two banknote companies in the City of Ottawa, remain in circulation in Canada and that it not be replaced by a $1 coin.

CHANGES IN OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition on behalf of a number of senior citizens and others who are protesting the Government's decision to deindex OAS and are asking the Government, and particularly the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), to recall his commitment to the people of Kamloops-Shuswap when he said that indexation would not be touched.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition, which has been co-ordinated by the Ottawa Senior Citizens' Council, which calls upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security forthwith, stating that requiring large numbers of pensioners to suffer additional reductions in real income is heartless, especially as so many already exist on incomes below the poverty line.

RETENTION OF ONE DOLLAR BANKNOTE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour, in conjunction with my friend, the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney), to present a large number of petitions which have been gathered over the course of the last two weeks by people concerned about maintaining the dollar bill in Canada, whether or not the dollar coin is introduced as proposed by the standing committee which reported today. This petition is signed by 12,119 citizens of Ottawa, Hull, Vanier, Nepean, Kanata, Richmond, and Smiths Falls.

In addition, I have the honour to table a further 1,000 signatures from citizens of the Ottawa area who call upon Parliament, and particularly the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), to intervene to ensure that the $1 banknote remains in circulation in Canada and that it is not replaced by a $1 coin.

Finally, I have a further 4,272 signatures from people in the Toronto area who, in the course of one day, indicated their desire to maintain the one dollar banknote, that it remain in circulation in Canada, and that it not be replaced by the one dollar coin.

I call your attention to the fact that these petitions jointly represent approximately 47,000 signatures that were gathered in the course of just two weekends.

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition with respect to seniors' pensions. There are a large number of women who are concerned about partial deindexation of pensions as it affects many elderly women who live in poverty in this country.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and privilege to present a petition from approximately 400 Canadians, whose names were gathered in one afternoon in the Kensington Market in the riding of Spadina. They are concerned that the senior citizens' pensions will be cut by $100 in 1986, as the Prime Minister has acknowledged, and by larger amounts in the following years. They ask that Parliament prevail upon the Government to ensure that these cuts will not in fact be carried out.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition signed by 450 constituents from Essex-Windsor, the first instalment on thousands, who are expressing their hopes of being able to persuade the Prime Minister that indeed there is a strong consensus across the country against the unfair measures which have centered on senior citizens for a double attack in the Budget.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PRAIRIE FARM ASSISTANCE ACT

MEASURE TO REPEAL

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture) moved that Bill C-41, an Act to repeal the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and to amend the Crop Insurance Act in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us today is simply a housekeeping matter. I think we sometimes use that terminology loosely, but in this particular case I believe it certainly fits the definition very accurately.

It will formally end the life of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and the Prairie Farm Emergency Fund, established under this legislation. In fact, operations under the Act ceased in 1972 and the Bill to repeal the Act will simply confirm that reality.

The original legislation, enacted in 1939, had a long and very useful life. Under the Act, money was collected from western farmers through a one per cent levy on grain sales. This money was kept in a fund that was used to provide for financial relief to farmers hit by crop damage or by crop failures.

When the federal-provincial crop insurance program came into force, the PFAA operations became redundant. Western farmers had a better way of protecting themselves against emergency situations. As a result, the PFAA operations were wound down, with one notable footnote. There was exactly $9,066,972 left in the fund. It is money that had been collected from western farmers. It belonged to the farmers but there was no administrative way of returning it to them. The problem was finally resolved a decade later when the federal Cabinet authorized handing the money over to the Western Grains Research Foundation, an organization set up to sponsor additional agricultural research in western Canada.

The foundation was established under the supervision of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the umbrella national organization for many farm groups in Canada. Besides the federation, the foundation membership includes the three prairie wheat pools and other prominent western farm organizations. Agriculture Canada has a senior research branch official on the foundation's board of directors to ensure a close working relationship with the federal Government. The over-all aim was to use the money to fund western research in grains and oilseeds on behalf of the farm community which contributed the money in the first place.

I am happy to say that the goal is being achieved. As the money has been prudently invested, returns on investment are flowing out to financial research projects at more than a million dollars a year. By the end of this calendar year of 1985, some 33 separate research projects will have been arranged. All this has been achieved in a very short period of time. The foundation received the Prairie Farm Emergency Fund residue in May of 1982 and began funding research projects the following year. Research funding comes entirely from returns on investment. The original donation is intact and will indeed remain so.

Over-all, the decision to return the Prairie Farm Emergency Fund residue to the western farm community seems to be paying dividends. One spinoff was the creation of an entirely new source of research funds for prairie universities. So far, the Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba have been the principal beneficiaries of the foundation's grants. Some research projects are being carried out with the help of Agriculture Canada's research stations in western Canada.

I believe the fate of the money from the old emergency fund is worth noting, as we move toward the official end of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act. I believe the money is being wisely used for the benefit of western agriculture and consequently will benefit the country as a whole.

As our House Leader has indicated, I believe that there has been some consultation with the House Leaders of the opposition Parties and it is my understanding that there is an agreement that the Bill move through all stages in the House.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I wish to participate briefly in discussing this Bill. As the Minister indicated, this is merely a housekeeping measure whose preparation had been started by the previous Liberal Government. Essentially, it only involves an accounting adjustment, the repeal of the present Act and the transfer of approximately $9 million to the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Now that the Consolidated Revenue Fund will have an extra $9 million, presumably the $15 million that was cut from the agricultural budget by his colleague, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), will be changed and now enhanced by this $9 million. I am sure the Minister, once he discusses this with his colleague, will seize the opportunity and tell him that he might as well write off the complete reduction of funds and ensure that the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) has the full budgetary allocation that he had last year with no cuts at all. I am sure Members on all sides of the House would lend him good support in order to achieve that. I see the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) is temporarily seated behind the Minister. Perhaps his seat over here has grown a little too hot and he had to get over to the other side, but I am sure the Hon. Member for London East would gladly support the Minister of Agriculture in ensuring more funding in the agricultural budget and that this $9 million going to the Consolidated Revenue Fund will be put back for agricultural uses.

There is a Member at the back saying we voted against something or other. Yes, we voted against the Budget that had been cut by $50 million. The Hon. Member who is heckling seems to be in favour of cutting $50 million from the agricultural budget. I am not. Members of our Party do not want the agricultural industry to suffer unduly at the hands of the Tories. That is why we are standing up for the farmers. We know that deep down inside the Minister of Agriculture would want to do that too if his colleague, the Minister of Finance, would let him.

We hope that in time as the arm twisting proceeds he will succeed in getting the $9 million referred to in this Bill along with the other $41 million that was cut off put back in agriculture. Along with that, I am sure the Minister of Agriculture will confer with his colleague, the Minister of Finance, and ask him to deliver on the other promises that were broken by the Minister of Finance that the Minister of Agriculture so desperately wanted for the farmers. I am thinking more particularly of the report from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs in which there were three main recommendations for the agricultural industry, two of which the Minister of Finance refused to give to his colleague, the Minister of Agriculture. The Minister of Agriculture, of course being on our side of the issue, wanted the assistance for the farmers.

I want to tell the Minister of Agriculture that we are supporting this minor housekeeping Bill. We are anxiously awaiting the Conservative Bills to enhance agriculture that were promised in the last election campaign. Since the election, not very many agricultural Bills have been introduced. Most of the ones that have been introduced were Bills left over from the previous administration. I find on my list of Conservative promises, from the book entitled Three Hundred and Thirty-Eight Tory Promises, that there were no less than 20 specific promises for agriculture. Most have not yet been delivered, probably because the Minister of Finance refuses to give the necessary funds to his good and able colleague, the Minister of Agriculture. If and when he does, we will all be here to support the Minister of Agriculture. Like him, we want what is best for the farmers.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us is a housekeeping Bill. It seeks to repeal the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and to amend the Crop Insurance Act in consequence thereof. The older farmers who might be listening in or watching the proceedings of the House will recall that in 1939 a Bill was passed which was an attempt to take care of the crop variability and the problems farmers were having staying in business at the same time. It was a form of stabilization in crop insurance. In order for the program to work, every producer in western Canada was charged 1 per cent on the grain deliveries. The section we are deleting today is the section that gave that power to the administration of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act. It permitted the 1 per cent to be collected at the elevator when the initial price was paid to the farmer, and it permitted the Wheat Board to deduct the 1 per cent and to pay it to the Prairie Farm Assistance Act administration when final payments were made at the end of the calculations for the crop year.

How the program worked was fairly simple, but it was not always equitable. A lot of farmers on the Prairies saw it, probably rightly, as an income transfer from most farmers who lived in the well watered north to those who lived in the less watered south. Basically, that was the way most of the transfers went during the course of the program. Eventually, we got to something more regionally appropriate that more correctly reflected the circumstances of individual producers. We went to a crop insurance program where the individual was covered on the basis of the land he was farming, the soil type and the projected and expected yield from that area of the province given the particular soil type the farmer was farming.

I raise this point only because we are now locked in mortal combat, actually very friendly combat, in the Agriculture Committee on a Bill that is proposing to do some of the same things that we were attempting to do with the old Prairie Farm Assistance Act. We have a red meat stabilization Bill before us, amendments to the Stabilization Act, which would permit tripartite stabilization programs for red meat which, because it is a new and an initial attempt, is trying to ignore the reality of variation in regions and different parts of the country. The initial program being proposed seems to block out the differences that exist in cost from region to region.

The Prairie Farm Assistance Act tried to do that too, Mr. Speaker. After 20 some years, it was finally realized that it had failed. We went into a more acceptable crop insurance program, and the vestiges of that old Act we still have on the books are being done away with today.

The Minister pointed out that the funds left over have already been dealt with in a previous Act in the last Parliament when this Parliament created the Western Grain Research Foundation and moved the $9,066,972, I believe, over to the foundation which is now being administered by a board of directors representing CFA, the prairie pools and other regional organizations in western Canada. The approximately three-quarters of a million dollars produced annually from that foundation is being used mostly at the prairie universities to conduct research into prairie-related activities.

I think it is laudable of the Minister to clean up the books. I do not think we should spend a great deal of time on this Bill. It really does nothing. The organization no longer exists. The money has been transferred out of it. It is simply a means of reducing the length of some of the Acts, notably, the Crop Insurance Act, and so we have no objection to shortening the Crop Insurance Act when it has irrelevant and unnecessary clauses. We are prepared to let these clauses be removed. That is the nub of the question before us. I am quite prepared that we continue the various steps to take this Act off the books of Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is as follows. Mr. Wise, seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn, moves that Bill C-41, an Act to repeal the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and to amend the Crop Insurance Act in consequence thereof, be now read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to committee of the whole.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the Chair.

Clauses 2 and 3 agreed to.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Wise moved that Bill C-41, an Act to repeal the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and to amend the Crop Insurance Act in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed.

He said: I want to thank the Opposition's spokesmen for their co-operation in the expeditious passage of this piece of legislation. I want to compliment my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) for his intervention in the debate. I think his comments were very appropriate, as they always are, and directed to the subject before the House. I want to acknowledge his interest and his co-operation.

I am pleased that my colleague, the spokesman for the Official Opposition in the Liberal Party, the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria), has returned to the House because he had some rather interesting interventions with respect to Bill C-41. The fact of the matter is that very few of his comments were directed to the contents of the Bill. He took the liberty of taking the time of the House to place some very inaccurate information on the public record, and therefore I think it is necessary for me to spend at least one quarter of my time allotment in setting the record straight. He indicated 200 or 300 or so commitments. I do not know just what document he was quoting from but I can tell you one thing, Mr. Speaker, it does not in any way reflect the campaign commitments that we made to the Canadian electorate during the campaign of last August and September. I can make an official copy available to him, and in fact I would be happy to have it delivered to his office this afternoon, and if he would take the time to examine it, he would find that there about 16 commitments were made. I believe that, upon a review of those commitments, he will find that we have fulfilled or made significant progress on most of them.

Second, he will note that there has been a piece of correspondence transferred between by Leader, now the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), then Leader of the Opposition, on or about July 23, 1984, in which he set out some 11 points to the President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture which were in addition to the campaign commitments. Of course, upon examination of what we have been able to achieve since assuming office on September 17, again he will be disappointed, but the fact of the matter is that he will find that there again some very significant achievements have been made in his own area. We made a commitment, not a campaign commitment but rather in the correspondence that transpired between the Prime Minister and the President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, an indication that we would make funds available under the eastern Ontario subsidiary agreement for drainage. My colleague knows that funds have been transferred for those purposes, and he also knows that there are two or three drains which have been held up, I think quite legitimately, and are temporarily on hold pending release from the Ontario Ministry of the Environment or perhaps from a conservation authority or some provincial ministry. Therefore, to this point in time we have fulfilled that commitment.

He will find that we made a commitment to provide a rebate on farm fuels. The House gathered on Monday, the economic statement came down on November 8 on Thursday, and we delivered the commitment to provide assistance through the rebate on farm fuels, which will save Canadian farmers somewhere around $100 million.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicated that same night that the three tax matters which had been bothering the Canadian agricultural industry for years and years were to be referred to a standing committee. The Hon. Member will not realize that because he was not here, but I am sure that farm organizations were making representations to him in the provincial Legislature at Queen's Park. If not, they were down here asking, as they have been asking for the last 10 years, but receiving no action whatever on the three major tax issues.

The first one, of course, and the most important one, was capital gains. The second was Section 31, and the third was the agri-bond. The Minister of Finance referred these three matters, quite appropriately, to a standing committee, where the matter was studied.

The Hon. Member will know that some very significant action was taken on capital gains. People have been coming here, and I have been meeting them across the country for months and months and years and years, and really the bottom line was, if you do anything, please do something significant on capital gains. It did not really matter whether you were talking to farmers on the East Coast, in central Canada or in western Canada, that was their prime desire. Do something, they said, we know that you are in a tight situation but please try to do something on capital gains. Indeed, the Minister of Finance did recognize the importance of doing something and he did do something very significant in his Budget of May 23, something which was long overdue but on which nothing had been done.

Let us look at Section 31. The Hon. Member knows that there is no consensus on Section 31. Some farm groups indicated that indeed it should be changed; others said, no, do not touch it. We know that there would be a problem there if it were simply increased. We know that there is a potential problem perhaps if we take if off completely. So there was no real consensus there.

I invite him, because I think that we have to be accurate, to go back and read the document carefully, when he receives it this afternoon, to see exactly what we said with respect to Section 31. We did not say in our campaign commitment that we were going to repeal Section 31. I cannot really recall the actual verbiage, but we indicated that we would ensure that more fairness and more equity would exist in the assessment, the verification, and the application of Section 31. The Hon. Member will have to admit that, to a large extent, we have achieved that. We have done so as a result of the recognition by my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty), who comes from a rural area, that for a long time a big problem existed in Section 31. It is the application of Section 31 more than anything else that is the problem. To a large extent we have addressed and we have fulfilled our campaign commitment on Section 31. We are not turning our back on it. I just want to make that comment in order to set the record straight.

Concerning agri-bonds, the Hon. Member will know that there is even less consensus on agri-bonds than on Section 31. The Minister of Finance also indicated that when one is assuming or inheriting a very difficult financial situation, with a $35 billion deficit and an accumulated debt of $220 billion, it just might not be possible to do everything to fulfil all of one's commitments. Those commitments, of course, result in lost revenue. The Minister was very clear, honest and open with the Canadian taxpayers on November 8. We will have to address ourselves to Section 31 of the Act. We will have to continue to adress ourselves to the agri-bond concept.

If the Hon. Member were to read on, he would find that we made a commitment to provide an amendment to the Western Grain Stabilization Act so that we would be in a position to make an interim payment to western farmers. The Hon. Member will realize that we have passed that amendment and we have been able to make that interim payment to western farmers. We indicated that we would enact the meat import law, and on December 21, we delivered on that campaign commitment by enacting the meat import law.

The Hon. Member will also know that we indicated that we would do something sensible and appropriate with respect to the metrication program in Canada. We all know that the program was not working too well, particularly in the agricultural sector where not only was it a nuisance factor but it was also a safety factor. We all know that significant crop damages occurred through miscalculations in the conversion of imperial to metric and vice versa. We indicated that we would change that by putting the metrication program on a voluntary basis. Back some months ago, we were able to deliver on that campaign commitment as well.

Another problem that was not a general problem across the country was one we attempted to solve by giving an early commitment to the continuation of the offshore labour program. My colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald), made that commitment as well—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Minister, but I wonder if his remarks are relevant to the Bill.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your intervention and I am in your hands. I will let you be the judge. I am being as relevant to the Bill as the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell was when he spoke.

In the area of farm finance, we indicated that we were going to re-establish or fund the Special Farm Assistance Program which had expired on January 1 of 1984. The previous Government made no additional funds available to that program, but we did through our interest rate conversion program. In fact, we even went beyond that. The Special Farm Assistance Program provided benefits on a means test basis which served some 1,800 or 1,900 clients of the Farm Credit Corporation. Our interest rate conversion program went beyond that to bring interest rates down from 16.75 per cent to 12.75 per cent. That program will cost us $16 million per year for five years, making it a $80 million commitment. Another important change to the program was that one did not have to plead one's case before a board or before bureaucrats, and because of that, rather than serving some 1,900 or 2,000 people, which was the number of people who applied under the previous Government's program, our program will provide benefits to 5,600 clients.

I will not take much more of the time of the House because I think that I have got the message across. I thought that it would be appropriate to take a bit of time not to deal with all of the questions raised but indeed to respond to some of them. We can save the time of the House by asking the Hon. Member, when he receives a list of the campaign promises that we made—

Mr. Boudria: I've got them right here. Do you want me to give you a copy of them?

Mr. Wise: Unless he has changed his document, I am not exactly sure to what he is referring. He seems to have all kinds of things over there. I do not have much confidence in what he has on his desk. I would rather provide him with the gospel.

I do not know whether or not the Hon. Member has on his list our commitment to provide funds to the Ontario Veterinary College for renovations to take place so that it could retain its credibility. That is something that was neglected by the previous Government for a long time. We delivered on that commitment as well. I do not know whether or not he has in his document, which consists of page after page after page—

Mr. Boudria: Lots of pages.

Mr. Wise: If he has lots of pages, it is obvious to me that he is not quoting from the right document. I do not know whether or not he has in his notes our commitment to provide a long-term dairy policy. I am going to be in a position, probably within a couple of weeks, to announce the formation of a small team that will be working with the Government and the dairy farmers of Canada to develop that long-term dairy policy.

Our commitments go on and on. In fact, they go well beyond the list. I can send the Hon. Member a list of things we have accomplished in the very brief time since the election. There have been well over 80 achievements and accomplishments. If the Hon. Member would like to turn on his calculator to add up what he calls cuts to the Agriculture Department, he will find that since that time, we have been able to provide to the agriculture industry some $1.5 billion.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the third reading debate on the Bill at hand. Of course, I will take the occasion to respond to the third reading statement made by the Minister, a statement which I believe was in order in view of the statement you made, Mr. Speaker.

The document from which I was quoting during the second reading debate and to which the Hon. Minister referred in his third reading statement was the book of Tory promises. It has on it a little logo, which you may recognize, Mr. Speaker. It bears the initials PC. Perhaps that means Progressive Conservative although—

Mr. Marchi: Patronage Canada.

Mr. Boudria: Patronage Canada, my colleague has said. I thought it meant "Regressive Preservative" but if so, it would not bear those particular initials.

The document to which I referred earlier was the consolidation of this Progressive Conservative document. There are so many pages in the book of Tory promises that I had to consolidate it in order to make it practical for me to use it in the House. Therefore, I published this book which is known as Three Hundred and Thirty-Eight Tory Promises. This is the book from which I was quoting a little earlier.

Mr. Marchi: Where they stood.

Mr. Boudria: My good friend, the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), says that we should entitle this book Where They Stood. That would be a proper title for this particular book.

Mr. Marchi: It would be a best seller.

Mr. Boudria: It would be a best seller indeed. Perhaps we could deal with some of those promises on which the Minister says he is so proud of delivering. The Minister has said that there were not 20 promises. I count 20 promises right here. In any event, notwithstanding the fact that a few of them have—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Chair realizes full well that the Hon. Minister made statements that went beyond the scope of the Bill. The Chair is willing to allow the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) the same leeway to make his comments. However, I would not want the debate on this particular Bill to degenerate into a totally unrelated debate. I am sure the Hon. Member realizes that.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will try to link my comments as closely as possible to the statement made by the Minister, a statement which of course you have already recognized as being pertinent to the Bill.

A while ago, the Minister said that he and his Party had delivered on most of the promises or on a substantial number of the promises made to Canadian farmers. I would like to know what happened to promise number three, which was to allow the Farm Credit Corporation to offer agri-bonds so that farmers will have access to reasonably priced funds. Where is the delivery on that promise? What about the promises to extend and expand the Farm Credit Corporation special interest subsidy, to revise Section 31 of the Income Tax Act to reflect the principles of equity, to re-establish a long-term dairy policy, to support farmers in the efficient development of the marketing system of their choice, to allocate the necessary funding to assist producers in refinancing loans at current prevailing rates and to eliminate the automatic annual increases in the federal excise tax on wine as part of the rescue package for the beleaguered wine industry?

The Minister, in the statement which he made a few minutes ago, referred to the report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. The Minister said that there was no consensus on what should be done with respect to Section 31 of the Income Tax Act. I would like to remind the House that a document was unanimously adopted by members of that committee. I would like to read the portions of the document which refer to the statements which he made. The document of the committee read:

3. That the use of the existing questionnaire sent to prospective farm taxfilers in its application of Section 31 by Revenue Canada be discontinued.

It went on to explain the new procedure which would be used. It continued:

4. That the Minister of National Revenue consider the advisability of establishing regional assessment review committees—

5. That the Minister of Finance consider the advisability of doubling the present limit on the deduction of loss for part-time farmers—

Those were very specific recommendations. The Minister said that there was no consensus on those recommendations. However, there was more than consensus, there was unanimity. I am sure that the Minister must have inadvertently misinformed us when he said that. He knows that we not only had consensus, but that we also had unanimity.

The Government partially delivered on one promise in the document which related to capital gains tax. However, in isolation, that is not good enough for the farmers of Canada.

In any event, we on this side of the House still support the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). We know that he wants what is best for the farmers of Canada. Hopefully, in due time, he will succeed in cabinet in convincing the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret). I see that the President of the Treasury Board is in the House. I hope he is listening and that he is convinced that the Minister of Agriculture needs plenty of assistance for the farmers in my riding and all farming constituencies across the country. I plead with the President of the Treasury Board to confer with the Minister of Finance to ensure that the Minister of Agriculture will receive all the funds which he requires to have a prosperous agricultural industry in Canada.

The Minister referred to the Canada-Ontario development agreement. We are very pleased with the work which has been done thus far. I have spoken many times to the Minister about it. I hope that at some point in the near future I will be able to tell the farmers of my riding, and especially the municipalities, that they will be getting their money. They are anxiously awaiting that money.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to rise. There are many problems in the agricultural field. The Minister has succeeded in taking up an hour of the time of the House today to present a Bill which, in my opinion, and I am sure in the opinion of virtually every farmer and many lawyers in the country, does not have to come before the House. It is useful verbiage. The legislation concerns words which could lay dead for another 100 years, and it would not matter. The administration no longer exists, so leaving the words would not hurt.

The amendment which was made to the Crop Insurance Act was the same situation. It is no longer applicable. It has not been used for years.

Farmers are wondering what they can do in order to plant a crop. Many farmers have had to find other people to plant their crops and have had to quit this year. Some farmers are trying to make the hard decision as to whether or not they should continue their family farms. Those farmers are looking for answers with regard to financing for this year and coming years. They were hoping for answers on meat imports.

The Government enacted the Meat Import Act. However, within a few weeks it changed its mind and once again opened the borders. We now have more than twice what was the initial proposal for imports from Europe and other sources.

It puzzles me why a measure such as this would be brought before the House when there are so many other higher priority items in the agricultural field which I am sure the Minister and his Department could have brought before the House. I am quite puzzled as to why the Minister even bothered to put this Bill before the House. It may be part of the strategy so that government Members can say over the summer months that the Government has passed so many Bills which deal with agriculture.

This is the second or the third Bill which has been of a housekeeping nature. These Bills only allow the administration, the next time when the Bills are printed, to shorten them. The Government has now, officially, taken away useless words which are no longer relevant from the legislation. It has not contributed anything to the well-being of Canada's agricultural community or to the taxpayers of Canada. It has only wasted the time of the House. However, it has given us an opportunity to say something about a couple of agricultural issues which do not relate to the Bills.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that we should have the vote and get this piece of ancient history put properly where it belongs.

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately what was to be a housekeeping measure—and it was agreed that there would be one speaker from each Party—has turned into a politicized debate. I feel that the agreement has been breached.

First, the last speaker did not commence the politicization of a non-controversial issue. However, I would say to him that the measure is good management and that it will clean out the dead wood. Why reprint, at extra cost, all those useless pieces of legislation which are no longer applicable?

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Humboldt-Lake Centre (Mr. Althouse) on a point of order.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member will know that we have a House agreement and that he will be breaking that agreement if he continues to speak. The agreement was quite clear that each Party would have one speaker. I recognize his remarks, but I think he is breaking an order of the House and he should comply with that order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: As far as the Chair is concerned, there is no such order of the House. There might be an agreement between the Parties, but there is no order before the House.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to say that I believe it is better to save money than to waste money and time printing dead legislation. It only confuses the issue. I an glad that we will clean it up.

It is unfortunate that the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) crept out of the House. I will wait for another occasion, when he creeps back in, to deal with the type of thing with which he dealt in regard to the Bill. His comments were not on the topic. He is so wrong that I suppose that is why he crept away.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that he should not comment on the presence or absence of other Members in the House.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

SPORTS POOL AND LOTO CANADA WINDING-UP ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved that Bill C-2, An Act respecting the winding up of the Canadian Sports Pool Corporation and Loto Canada Inc., as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, if this Bill is to be adopted without comment on third reading, then we are quite prepared to pass it. But it was understood by the Government House Leader and the House Leaders of the two opposition Parties that there would be one speaker from each Party to address himself to the Bill.

I want to say at the outset that I feel rather honoured to have the privilege of addressing the Bill at this stage. As Official Opposition critic at the time the original legislation was introduced, I indicated to the House that it was doomed to failure from the very outset. Notwithstanding that, the then Government told us, told athletes all across the country, and told those responsible for the Calgary Olympic Games of 1988, that the legislation it was introducing would be the saviour of those Games. It would provide funding for athletes across this country so that we would not fall short in any aspect. When the original legislation came before committee the only people with any evidentiary value and experience pointed out that there was no way that the Sports Pool would be successful. Experience has shown that to be true. The Government lost $1 million a week while it was in operation. So we are now at third reading of a Bill to bring to an end a very sad part of our federal Government history. It was a page of that history which took the federal Government into competition with the provinces and charitable organizations all across the country who were fighting for the lottery dollar. People who spoke in favour of the legislation originally said that it would help those in need, yet there is all kinds of evidence to show that those most likely to purchase a lottery ticket are least able to afford it. So this brings to an end this dark page of federal Government involvement in lotteries.

It is a short Bill, Mr. Speaker, and I want to use the words of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) when he introduced this Bill in the first place. He indicated that it was a symbolic Bill. It was symbolic of federal government relations with the provinces then and now. In 1979, the Conservative Government entered into an agreement with the provinces with respect to phasing out federal involvement in lotteries. As a result of that agreement, the federal Government, the sports people, and those who shared in the benefits of the interprovincial lotteries, received a $33 million grant per year at no cost to the taxpayers or the Government. Following the February 1980 debacle, because of an election promise made by the then Leader of that Party, there was no holding back. No reason could be given to justify participation in the Bill except to say that the federal Government was going to get back into the lottery business through a game called Sports Pool.

This Government has indicated that there has been enough bitterness in federal-provincial relations. There has been enough competition for the lottery dollar and enough money spent on advertising by the federal and provincial Governments in competition for that lottery dollar. A system of harmony and co-operation existed between the Conservative Party and the provincial Governments in 1979 as it does today. The Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) has been able to work out an agreement which will stabilize the financing of fitness and amateur sport. It will enable the Canada Games in Calgary to proceed in the knowledge that funding will be in place. The first symbol was that of a working relationship into which the Government of Canada can enter with the provinces to the benefit of all people of Canada.

The second symbol was one which tinged the former Government like no other. It is the ability to waste money through the mismanagement of Government Departments. It continuously threw good money after bad. Loto Canada, the predecessor of the Sports Pool, was marked by fraud, patronage, and law suits. The Liberals were such poor managers of Canadian tax dollars that during the election campaign of September 1984 it was said that they could not even make money out of a lottery. Such was the case as has been established today.

Through the introduction of this Bill we wanted to embark on a new era. That is why it was one of the first Bills introduced in the House after the formation of this Government. This is to be a new era of peace, good will, and harmony between the provinces and the federal Government. It spells an end to the bitter rivalry between Governments for the Sports Pool dollar. This Bill is symbolic in that it indicates a return to sanity in government spending. We have seen many instances of that since Bill C-2 was introduced in the House.

The Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport has emphasized that we could not continue wasting over $100 million of taxpayers' money every week. We are left with no option but to terminate the Sports Pool Corporation and Loto Canada as quickly as possible. This was one of the earliest Bills introduced in this Parliament and it should be brought to a conclusion now. Let the lottery and gambling business of the Government of Canada be terminated now.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I, too, am pleased to participate in report stage of Bill C-2, an Act respecting the winding-up of the Canadian Sports Pool Corporation. My remarks will be brief because I think there is consensus that this Bill should be passed. However, before commencing my remarks I would like to address some of the comments made by the eloquent Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid).

He mentioned how evil the concept of the Sports Pool was. He should pay attention to some of the things that the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) has said. In an article in The Citizen of September 18 ,1984, the Minister was quoted as saying that a different form of gaming operation could continue after this one because clearly we have to keep our commitment to the Calgary Olympics and we will. Implicit in that is the possibility that he may be looking at a mechanism to continue raising money for the Calgary Olympics in 1988.

The Member talks about squandering money. I am surprised that he would mention that in light of the controversy of the last two weeks about the Government taking money from pensioners and giving it to the multinational oil companies. The Member talks about patronage. I need not remind him that in the last months the House has been filled with stories of unending patronage by his Government. Before making those remarks he ought to have considered the actions of his own Government.

In consideration of this Bill there are a couple of important factors which should not be overlooked. It must be remembered that the main objective was to raise funds. This Government, like its predecessor, committed itself to $200 million of funding for the Olympic Games in Calgary in 1988. A few days ago the Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport announced that the provinces would be contributing half of that commitment. I commend the Minister for picking up that $100 million. In addition, there is an Olympic coin which can raise an estimated $30 million to $50 million. However, the fact remains that there will be a shortfall of $50 million to $70 million in reaching that $200 million commitment.

Therefore, if this Sports Pool is to be wound up, it would be responsible on the part of the Minister to indicate his alternative to make up the commitment that he announced in September. Although the Minister stated he would inform the House about a private sector or government program to provide that other $70 million, he has yet to do so. Therefore, while it has been beneficial to look at past action, I suggest this debate would be meaningless without touching upon the ways and means of raising that $70 million.

I suggest that the Government should indicate as soon as possible how and when it will provide those funds. Quick answers to those questions will benefit the Canadian organizing committee for the Olympics, the athletes and all Canadians.

The Hon. Member for St. Catharines raised the broad question of lotteries in general. During the short-lived 1979 Conservative Government, an agreement was signed between the federal and provincial Governments which essentially indicated that the federal Government would allow the provincial Governments exclusivity with respect to lotteries. In exchange for that, the federal Government wanted to receive $35 million annually. The Hon. Member is correct that we have been receiving $35 million on an annual basis and that it is an income. However, I remind the House that the lottery business in Canada is worth at least $200 million per year.

If we are going to have a mechanism to raise funds on a national basis to support our athletes in all sports, we must also have a national will. I submit that that national purpose can best be defined by the federal Government of Canada. I believe that Canadians expect that of the federal Government. One need not have an M.A. in economics to realize that exchanging $35 million for $200 million is bad economics.

However, the Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport continues to defend that agreement. He is quoted in Hansard of June 11, 1985, at page 5647, as saying:

> Those Members who are suggesting that we have given away the store are totally on the wrong side of the track because we are getting our fair share from the provinces.

With all due respect to the provincial Governments, I submit that we are not getting that fair share. It is somewhat unfortunate because we could be getting more in order to do more for sports.

Another major announcement made by the Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport concerning sport financing related to cutting off federal funding for multilevel sports activities across the country until 1991. Quite frankly, that decision was not too well accepted in the sports community across this country. Let me refer to the Sports Manifesto put out by the Conservative Party of Canada. It is dated July 15, 1984. It states:

> We believe the federal role can be improved, and we believe that in the years leading up to the Calgary Olympics in 1988 this role must be improved.
> The first step which must be taken is to begin extensive consultations with all parties involved in amateur sport in Canada.
> We are committed to maintaining the highest level of federal support for amateur sports in Canada.

The sports community was counting on at least maintaining a certain discretionary level of funding. Cities like Thunder Bay and London which were looking at Olympic Games in the future will be hurt. We must recognize that sports activities need the funding and support of the federal Government.

While the private sector should be asked to share in the support of our athletes, and the municipal and provincial levels of Government should be involved in this process, the federal Government must also play a role. It is not acceptable to leave that responsibility to the private sector because it began contributing to amateur sports long before the Minister came to office. The Minister seems to suggest that the private sector is suddenly responding to his challenge for funding. However, the private sector has been a primary motivator of many of our sports activities throughout the country in all seasons.

Ultimately, when we talk about Olympic participation and the pursuit of athletic excellence, we must rise beyond our partisanship, as the Member for St. Catharines attempted to do. This issue transcends politics, and in that spirit we on this side agree with trying to raise federal money to contribute to the Calgary Olympics of 1988 in order to make them the best ever winter Olympics. Certainly that must be the spirit that should prevail and that is the spirit that the sports community across the country expects of us. That is the spirit in which I close my remarks.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, this is not one of the great partisan subjects of debate that have so rocked this Chamber in the last six or seven months. In fact, sport is something that I think pulls Canadians across the country together. It is part of the community base which our Party believes helps to give people a sense of commitment and strong participation within their communities.

As I stand here this afternoon speaking on behalf of my seatmate, the Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp), who usually speaks for us on sports matters, I think of the many dozens of volunteers within my constituency who have spent much of their life working on a completely voluntary basis with the young boys and girls of the different communities across Essex County in order to give them a chance to participate in such sports as baseball. Some of the best amateur baseball teams in the country are found in Essex County. Some of the very best amateur hockey teams—

Mr. Marchi: Do you have a monopoly on sports?

Mr. Langdon: I must tell Hon. Members that if they want a real quarrel with Windsor Members of Parliament, they should not expect it on automobile quotas or something concerning pensions. They should expect the real quarrel to be over what is the sports capital of Canada. Of course, Windsor and Essex County are number one in that regard.

I must confess as a Canadian nationalist that part of the sense of commitment to sport in Windsor is a strong and almost irrational commitment to the Detroit Tigers which, for someone who used to be a Toronto Blue Jays fan, is occasionally difficult for me to adjust to. I can tell my hon. friend from the Liberal Party that being a Member of Parliament for Essex-Windsor makes one automatically a Detroit Tigers baseball fan.

Ms. Jewett: Aren't you going to talk about hockey?

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Langdon: I have to talk about hockey too. The Belle River Canadiens, the Junior C team in Belle River, have just taken the Ontario championship. There was a huge celebration in Belle River which, I am proud to report to people, generated the usual sense of enthusiasm and community feeling for which Essex-Windsor is characterized.

Mr. Heap: Are you not going to say anything about lacrosse?

Ms. Jewett: What about B.C.?

Mr. Langdon: Lacrosse and B.C.? I have to confess they are both beyond our experience, as indeed is cricket. Cricket is not a major sport in Essex County.

Ms. Jewett: What about tiddly-winks?

An Hon. Member: And chess?

Mr. Langdon: The question of chess has been replaced by politics as a game of deadly seriousness in Essex county.

I have to express some serious points with respect to this Bill. My hon. colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster-Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) has indicated she will be quiet. I cannot seriously believe this is a long-term commitment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: The Bill is an important accomplishment, Mr. Speaker, which this Government should feel some pride in bringing to the House because it has managed to get an agreement with the provinces. As a result of coming to an arrangement with respect to jurisdiction over lotteries, it will be possible for provinces to contribute $100 million to the Calgary Olympics in 1988. I hope myself, and I speak for our Party, that there would be an equitable sharing of that commitment among the provinces to reflect the fact that the Calgary Olympics will generate, by the most recent calculations we have seen, increased economic activity of $1.2 billion and 28,000 new person-years of employment. Most of that is concentrated in western Canada. Therefore, I hope the formula that is drawn out for the contributions of the provinces to this financing will reflect those kinds of benefits being focused in the West. I do not say that that means the rest of the country should not share in some contribution. All of us will have tremendous pride as we watch those Winter Olympics open in Calgary. We will have a sense of participation and of sharing that event.

I think, however, there remains a question mark over this Bill. I had hoped that the Minister might be here today to clear up that question mark. The federal Government did commit itself to $200 million in contributions to the Calgary games. At this point it has been able to indicate that we are at a maximum $160 million of the $200 million—

Mr. Reid: Thirty-five million a year from the provinces.

Mr. Langdon: Yes, but I understand that is not earmarked for the Games. If it is earmarked for the Games, that helps to answer the question, but it is my understanding from the Minister's previous statement that that is not earmarked for these Games. That leaves us with $40 million to $50 million still to be generated. I had hoped that the Minister would have been here to reassure us, and I cannot resist a small partisan needle here, I hope, that the method of raising that contribution will be somewhat more equitable than the method of raising funds in this most recent federal Budget which has been anything but equitable.

We will be looking for a rapid announcement from the Minister, in return for our support for this Bill, of where he expects that further $40 million or $50 million to come from which will be contributed to the Calgary Games.

I have to make two further points. I cannot let this debate pass without making a reference again to the incredible success of this Sports Pool which is being wound up. As an economist I have had to look at the operations of a great many different kinds of agencies and companies. I have to confess that I have never before seen a lottery that managed to lose money. It has never been brought to my attention before. Most people in this country would have considered a lottery a licence to make money. Somehow this lottery, and perhaps it was the crowning achievement of the previous regime, managed to lose $46 million in the space of nine months. That amounts to $1.5 million a week. Occasionally this Party is attacked as having a penchant for extravagance, for being prepared to risk Government finances in wanton ways. It would never have occurred to us to have created a lottery to lose money. It took the dedication and achievement of the previous Government, the genius for organization of people who sometimes think they can set up government enterprises, without having the commitment which our Party has to make such government enterprises succeed, to establish an agency such as Loto Canada which, over nine months, managed to lose $46 million.

I cannot let that red letter achievement, and I use the word "red" advisedly, pass unnoticed. I have to point out that this Government has been successful in establishing an arrangement with the provinces that has got itself out of trouble, at least halfway out, with respect to its $200 million commitment to those Calgary Games. However, it has had to do so, I fear, at the expense of making a commitment that no further amateur sports funds events of an international character will be supported in Canada into the 1990s. It really is a great pity that that should have been done by this Government. Sports in this country is something of the fabric that ties our communities together. It is something which matters to all of us who have a sense of commitment and participation in our country. It matters to minor league baseball coaches in Essex County, right up to professional football teams which fight for the Grey Cup each November. For people such as those in London, Ontario, who hoped to have the Pan American Games and for those in Thunder Bay who hoped to have the Nordic Games, it comes as a loss, as a disappointment. They sense that the new Government does not really understand the significance of sports and spotsmanship. The Government abandoned its commitment to be open to provide support for those kinds of games during the upcoming five or six years.

We on this side of the House have a sense from our own communities of just how important sports activity can be. We would have wanted to leave open, not the possibility of huge contributions such as $200 million as in the case of the Calgary Games, but the possibility of at least some support from the federal Government to groups of citizens in various cities across Canada, citizens who would want, on a community basis, to come together to try to attract into their communities international sports events, which act as inspirations to those young athletes in Belle River, La Salle and Amherstburg who go out to the baseball diamonds and hockey rinks in the hope that some day they may represent their country at international events. We must remember that this somehow reflects their pride in being Canadian.

I hope this is a very temporary suspension of the help to international sports events which federal Governments have traditionally provided. I hope my colleagues from all Parties who are present today have sensed the enthusiasm in their communities for amateur sport, the enthusiasm which I see in my community. I hope they will push the Minister and their Government to reverse their penny-pinching attitude toward amateur sport at the international level and see to it, in the years ahead, that we become noted, as we have been in the past, as a country which believes in and takes pride in the sense of comradeship across the world which international sport can give to us.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

INCOME TAX CONVENTIONS ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for Mrs. McDougall) moved that Bill S-3, An Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Republic of Zambia, Canada and the Kingdom of Thailand, Canada and the Republic of Cyprus and Canada and the Federative Republic of Brazil for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to implement conventions between Canada and the Republic of Zambia, Canada and the Kingdom of Thailand, Canada and the Republic of Cyprus and Canada and the Federative Republic of Brazil, for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax.

The conventions were signed between February and June in 1984. They follow the same general pattern and are very similar to the conventions approved by previous Parliaments over the last nine years. The number of Canadian tax treaties in force is now 35. The conventions with Cameron, Ivory Coast, Kenya and Sri Lanka, approved by Parliament last June, should be ratified in the near future. After their ratification, the number of conventions in force will reach 39. I hardly need to add that once the four conventions under study are ratified, the total number will reach 43.

Mr. Speaker, we would like to give a short outline of the main elements of these tax treaties. Generally speaking, dividends paid by Canadian enterprises to non-residents may be taxed in Canada at a maximum rate of 15 per cent, according to these treaties. In the case of dividends paid by a Thai enterprise, a 15 per cent rate will apply if the Canadian company receiving the dividends holds an equity percentage of at least 25 per cent in the company paying the dividends and if the latter company engages in an industrial or commercial undertaking. In the case of dividends paid by a Cyprus enterprise, an exemption will apply as long as Cyprus does not impose a tax on dividends in addition to the tax chargeable on the profits of companies. If Cyprus introduces a tax on dividends, the rate will be limited at 15 per cent under the convention.

For dividends paid by a Zambian enterprise, the rate is limited at 15 per cent. Finally, for dividends paid by a Brazilian enterprise, a maximum rate of 15 per cent will apply but only if they are derived by a Canadian enterprise which holds an equity percentage of at least 10 per cent in the enterprise paying the dividends.

In the case of interest paid by a resident of one country to a resident of the other country, a general rate of 15 per cent will apply. However, there are a number of exceptions. In the case of Brazil, the 15 per cent applies only if the interest is derived by a company that is a resident of Canada. In addition, with respect to interest paid to the Government, a political subdivision or an agency wholly-owned by the Government or the subdivision, that interest is exempt in the country in which it arises. In the case of Cyprus, there is a tax exemption for Government interests and interest paid in respect of a loan made, guaranteed or ensured, or a credit extended, guaranteed or ensured by the Export Development Corporation (EDC) or its counterpart in Cyprus. Concerning interests from Thailand, the rates are 10 per cent if the interest is received by a Canadian financial institution, and 25 per cent in other cases; however, interests paid to the Government, the central bank or the Export Development Corporation are exempted.

With respect to royalties, the Conventions provide for a general tax rate of 15 per cent in the State in which they arise, except that in the case of Cyprus, the general rate is 10 per cent. Moreover, in the case of Brazil, the 15 per cent rate only applies if the recipient is a corporation that is an actual resident of Canada. Copyright royalties are exempt in the case of Cyprus and subject to a 5 per cent tax rate in the case of Thailand.

Among other items covered in these Conventions, where capital gains are concerned we find the following: the provisions concerning capital gains in each of the Conventions follow the Canadian policy aimed at ensuring that the State in which those gains arise maintain its taxation right on the sale of immovable property, business assets or shares in real estate companies.

Concerning non-discrimination, each of the Conventions prohibits discrimination based on nationality. This ensures that nationals of one state will be treated the same way as those of the other state in similar situations. However, this does not prevent a state from allowing fiscal incentives, for instance deductions for small businesses on the sole bases of the taxpayer's place of residence.

With respect to pensions, Canada has maintained its right to tax pensions paid to residents of the countries covered by the Bill. In the case of conventions with Cyprus and Brazil, however, the right to tax pensions under $10,000 and $4,000 respectively in a calendar year is granted exclusively to the country of residence of the recipient. Veterans pensions are generally exempted.

Let us talk about the avoidance of double taxation. In Canada we avoid double taxation by granting a credit on Canadian taxes for taxes paid in foreign countries, subject to the limits provided under Canadian law. In addition, dividends received by the Canadian branch of a foreign company are also exempted from taxation in Canada if they come from the exempted surplus of the resident branch of a country covered by a convention.

The conventions include as well a special provisions commonly called "credit for fictitious taxes" or, in the case of Brazil, "corresponding credit". Pursuant to such provisions, tax incentives provided under the legislation of those countries will be eligible for Canadian tax purposes, in the sense that investors will be allowed to deduct foreign taxes from their Canadian taxes even if those taxes have not been levied in the other country.

Generally speaking the terms of each convention constitute a fair solution to the various double taxation problems between Canada and those countries. Canadian businesses are in favour of expanding the network of Canadian tax conventions and, in that context, the early and final agreement on the conventions under consideration will be welcome. Each of the countries involved hopes to implement the bilateral tax convention, and this is why we urge the House to pass this measure as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, this gives me the opportunity to say that I had double taxation problems related to contracts awarded by a company I once had operating in a foreign country. The conventions featured in this Bill fully meet the wishes of Canadians who are quite willing to pay their taxes, but who balk at paying them twice in two different countries.

I urge the House to give particular consideration to this Bill and to adopt it without undue delay because we are facing a heavy work load.

[English]

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, commenting on a tax treaty Bill is always somewhat anticlimactic in that the treaty has already been signed by the Governments concerned, usually after protracted negotiations, and parliamentary approval by both countries is the last step. It is rare for amendments to be made to this kind of Bill, although in 1980 a Bill concerning 11 tax treaties was amended by the House Finance Committee to remove approval for one treaty; that treaty in fact had been signed in 1976 and has never since been renegotiated.

Bill S-3, which is before us today, is designed to implement tax treaties with four countries: Zambia, Thailand, Cyprus and Brazil.

The main purpose of tax treaties, of course, is to avoid double taxation and to give some predictability and assurance to investors. In Europe, in particular, most countries do not include international rules in their domestic tax system as we do, so double taxation can be avoided only if there is a tax treaty.

Attached to the Bill before us are the texts of the four agreements or conventions. Following the 1971 tax reform, former treaties were renegotiated and new ones were put in place. I believe the Parliamentary Secretary in his speech gave the exact number of countries with which Canada now has tax treaties, something over 30.

An Hon. Member: Forty-three.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Forty-three, thank you. The language and form of the conventions attached to this Bill are generally similar to those of the other treaties approved since 1975. The tax treaty with Brazil, as has been mentioned, has some special features. This is the end result of negotiations which began in 1975. It includes a different formula in respect to the taxation on capital gains. Another difference with the Brazilian treaty is the fact that all the reduced rates on withholding apply only to companies, not to individuals.

Canadian companies operating in Brazil have raised with our negotiators some ongoing concerned on which it was not possible to get agreement at this time, but we must hope that perhaps in future agreements will include features that are more encouraging to our Canadian businesses.

Under these agreements it has been said also that Canada reserves the right to tax pensions paid to residents of the other country, but in the case of Cyprus, the right to tax pensions of less than $10,000 a year is given to the country of residence of the recipient, with war veterans' allowances being exempt.

The other technical matters in this Bill, I think, have been summarized very well by the Parliamentary Secretary. It appears to be a rather straightforward matter and we would have no particular interest in delaying the Bill or discussing it further at this stage.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I suppose this is not the most scintillating debate that we have heard in terms of parliamentarians feeling the urge to spend the entire time allotment on this Bill. I will follow that tradition and again want to say how much we appreciate the fact that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) very clearly outlined the contents of Bill S-3 for the Members present and those who are presumably watching and listening today.

I do not have much to add in terms of the points that the Parliamentary Secretary has made other than to make two or three general observations. Again, this Bill coming from the Senate as it was passed on March 12, I suppose is perhaps one of the things that we see flowing out of the Senate that has some marginal value. I suppose that a committee of bureaucrats could put this together in a few hours in their own Department as well but, again, I guess something has to be done in the Senate and this is something that was done over there, so we must thank them for this profound contribution to the country.

As the Parliamentary Secretary has indicated, Mr. Speaker, this is a Bill that flows from agreements that had been signed during the February to June interval in 1984 between Canada and the four countries mentioned, namely, Zambia, Thailand, Cyprus and Brazil. What it indicates is an ongoing process that a country such as Canada, as it expands its economic and trade and investment activities, finds itself entering these types of agreements with more and more countries as the years go by. To date, this has resulted in a total of 43 countries that have similar agreements with Canada so that people operating in these countries will not be double taxed.

Over the last few years, as a parliamentarian, I have come into contact on a number of occasions with people who have been caught in this double taxation situation, people who have found themselves either participating in investments of one kind or another in these countries or now, with a lot of Canadian firms operating in countries overseas, including Petro-Canada, find themselves again serving six or eight months in a foreign country and having problems with double taxation because agreements have not been struck.

Again, I would like to encourage the Government to act with as much haste as possible as Canada reaches out and enters into more and more extensive trade and economic activities in other countries. We should take steps to ensure that agreements are entered into between the respective Governments that result in these double-taxation agreements, thus avoiding the problems associated with having to pay taxes in two countries.

I would also like to encourage the Government to consider the list of priorities for arranging these agreements. This is one area where the Government can provide leadership by encouraging Canadian entrepreneurs, traders and investors to increase their participation in Third World countries, the developing nations and the lesser developed countries. Again, these are the countries that now have, by and large, the majority of the problems associated with double taxation because Canada's trade with many of the developing nations has not been substantial and consequently participants from Canada in these countries have not encountered the level of double-taxation difficulties that have been encountered in other, more developed nations. Again, the Government can provide leadership in this respect by entering into agreements with developing nations for the removal of double taxation. This would then encourage more and more Canadian entrepreneurs to turn their attention to activities in some of these countries.

One cannot get overly excited about this piece of legislation in terms of parliamentary debate. Nevertheless, it is a very important piece of legislation and one that the passage of which members of my Party will do whatever we can to expedite.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I note that the motion on the Order Paper is for reference of the Bill to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. I think there is an understanding that we will, by unanimous consent, have this matter referred to the Committee of the Whole so that we can deal with the Bill in all stages, including third reading, today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there such unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill S-3, an Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Republic of Zambia, Canada and the Kingdom of Thailand, Canada and the Republic of Cyprus and Canada and the Federative Republic of Brazil for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax.

Clauses 2 to 24 inclusive agreed to.

On Clause 1—Citation of Part

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I have a question on Clause 1. I wonder if I could ask the Parliamentary Secretary about a list of some of the nations that are presently being considered in terms of anticipating the agreements with which we will be dealing in the months ahead.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: I think that this information is in my speech, Mr. Chairman, I will look it up if I may. Now in my speech, I said that the conventions with Cameroon, Ivory Coast, Kenya and Sri Lanka had already been approved in June and should be ratified shortly. I do not know whether this answers the question.

[English]

The Chairman: Shall Clause 1 carry?

Clause 1 agreed to.

Schedules 1 to 6 inclusive agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

The House resumed from Wednesday, June 12, consideration of the motion of Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)) that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I suppose there are just a few moments remaining in the time allotted me to make my remarks on the borrowing Bill, a Bill which asks for authority to borrow about $18 billion in the next little while. I was saying the other day that the questions to be asked are why is this money being borrowed and for whom is it being borrowed. I really wonder about giving support to this Bill because of what the Government has done through its most recent Budget that will hurt the senior citizens of the country.

I know that Conservative back-benchers are getting very restless about this issue because they are getting a lot of static from their home ridings. Senior citizens are beginning to attack them quite literally. I see one Member over there already has a black eye from what happened in his riding. For those kinds of reasons, I do not want to give support to the Government on this particular borrowing Bill.

I think that what the Government has done is very, very reactionary. A headline from The Toronto Star reads, "Seniors ready to make sacrifice, Wilson says," and another one reads, "Seniors ready for sacrifice, says Wilson". It is very unfair that seniors of this country should be penalized and that pensions should be cut back by 30 per cent over the next 10 years when, at the same time, the Government is giving all kinds of money to the oil companies and the wealthy. In fact—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Excuse me, Mr. Speaker, but I had prepared my documents for today, that is Bill S-3 and Bill C-51. I did not expect another budget debate. I wonder how relevant his comments are. I would appreciate, Mr. Speaker, if you would call back those people to order and ask them to stick with the bill. I am ready to deal with Bill C-51 but I do not want to begin once again the same discussions on the Budget.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all respect to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary, the Chair believes that the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) are indeed relevant to the debate.

Mr. Nystrom: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is very important that when we borrow money, we know for what the money is borrowed. I know my friend, the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), who used to sit on this side of the House, made those kinds of speeches as well. He know that it was important to know for what the money was borrowed. I see this money being borrowed to give more tax shelters to the wealthy and the big companies. I know that Conservative Members do not like that. I know that some of them are very good Christian souls. I am sure they would be interested in an article which appeared in The Toronto Sun this morning, which is a rather conservative newspaper.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I thought you just looked at the pictures.

Mr. Nystrom: No, I do not look at the pictures Ray, you look at the pictures.

The headline of The Toronto Sun article read: "Church raps 'rob the poor' budget". The article read:

> The Anglican Church has lambasted the federal Government for deindexing pensions, condemning the move as a government step to erode the social welfare system.
> The 918,000-member church yesterday launched a stinging attack on the recent federal Budget, saying it "robs the poor and gives to the rich".

The Anglican Church of Canada, which is a very respected and learned institution, has said that the Budget robs the poor and gives to the rich. That is absolutely true.

In the riding of Assiniboia, and in the town of Weyburn, a large number of senior citizens receive Old Age Security. They will lose 3 per cent of their income from pensions each and every year. After 10 years, that represents a 30 per cent reduction in their income. At the same time, the Government is going to give all kinds of money to the oil companies and to the wealthy.

Mr. Gustafson: What about capital gains?

Mr. Nystrom: The Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) asks me about capital gains. I have said to him many times that I believe farmers needed a better exemption from capital gains. Why does the exemption go up to 500 per cent for whatever kind of investment a person wants to make, such as selling a condominium, or investing money in the stock market? Why is it wide open? The documents of the Department of Finance state that the wealthy people of Canada will benefit the most from the capital gains exemption.

The Government will lose about $2.2 billion in terms of corporate tax cuts because of the Budget. It will lose about $1.2 billion in terms of the capital gains windfall which will go to investors—people who play the stock market, real estate speculation and so on. On the other hand, the Government will save $1.6 billion on the pensions of Mrs. Jones, Mr. Smith and the rest of the old people in the country. I cannot understand why Members opposite are willing to support a Budget which increases the tax load on old people and which takes away the pensions of old people.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We are not taking it away.

Mr. Nystrom: They are not taking it away? As of January 1, 1986, the Government is taking away something which pensioners had. They had full indexation of their pensions and the Government is taking that away.

Mr. Dick: Why do you lie?

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is asking why I lie. I do not know whether or not that is parliamentary, but the Budget of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicates that senior citizens will lose 3 per cent every year on their pensions because of partial deindexation. That is a drop in real income of $100 in the first year. By 1990, it will represent a drop of about $1,500. After 10 years, it will represent a drop of 30 per cent. That is basic economics.

I cannot understand why the Government is doing this, particularly when it made promises during the election campaign that it had no intention of doing away with social programs. The Government said during the election campaign that social programs were a sacred trust. The Minister of Finance, during the election campaign last August, said that the Government had no intention of increasing the taxes of ordinary Canadians. Why did the Government break those commitments and promises? At the same time that the Government is taking away pension increases from ordinary Canadians, the spending for the Prime Minister's office has increased by 54 per cent. Spending in cabinet Ministers' offices has increased for salaries and new furnishings. Why does that type of thing happen? I noticed in the newspaper the other day that when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) flies overseas, he will now take two aircraft. Does he think he is the new President of Canada? He is emulating Ronald Reagan south of the border. I understand that he has also redecorated his car. Once again, he is emulating the President of the United States.

Why does the Government have money for all of those things when it does not have money for the senior citizens of the country? The old people of the country built Canada. They laid the foundations for this great nation. They were promised by the Prime Minister that their pensions and social programs would be a sacred trust. He said: "Elect me and I will not touch them". However, after a few months in office he has decreased the expected salary of senior citizens by 30 per cent over the course of the next 10 years.

I appeal to senior citizens across the country to go after Tory MPs like they have never done before. I appeal to them to send petitions and to write letters. The Government across the way is starting to buckle. Government Members' knees are shaking. They are running scared. There is not one Conservative Premier in the country who supports this Draconian and reactionary move. The Atlantic Premiers are condemning the measures. Frank Miller is condemning them. Even Bill Bennett is condemning them.

[Translation]

The new friend in Quebec, Premier René Lévesque is against that budget proposal, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Jewett: It is true!

Mr. Nystrom: Some other friends of the Progressive Conservative Party such as the Canadian Chamber of Commerce are against it.

Ms. Jewett: Yes.

[English]

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Bulloch's organization and other business organizations are against the measures. Student groups are against them. A lot of Tory MPs are against them. The Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon), according to press reports today, has said that he cannot understand why the Government of Canada would do this to the senior citizens of the country. He wishes that the Minister of Finance would speak to the senior citizens of the country. I wish the Minister of Finance would do that as well. Instead, he likes to sip champagne and eat caviar with the wealthy in Montreal and Toronto. He does not want to go out into the real world, in the communities of Weyburn, Yorkton and Chicoutimi where ordinary people live. They live on old age pensions, in little houses, in places such as Kamsack. Yet, the very wealthy Prime Minister has broken the promise and has taken away the money which those people should have. Then, the Government asks to borrow another $18 billion to support the Government in subsidizing its friends.

Once again, that Party has become the Party of the wealthy and the privileged in Canada. It wants to borrow more money so it can prop up its wealthy friends in the Rideau Clubs of the world. I say: "No, thanks".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There being no questions or comments, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) on debate.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House would be glad to support an understandable request on the part of a Government for borrowing authority, because we believe that there is an important role to be played in the interest of the public by the Government; even by a so-called Progressive Conservative Government which has attempted to interpret the mandate which was given to it by Canadians. After the raft of promises which were made, so far, the Government has given a dismal performance.

It takes a lot of nerve for the Government to ask for borrowing authority this week when the issue of pensions has erupted. It has left a sense of anxiety with a lot of Canadians who are beginning to wonder whether the solidity on which the pension system was built is still to be counted upon in the years to come. I must say it really takes a lot of nerve to do that.

This Government is also creating a sense of anxiety and uncertainty among other Canadians in addition to pensioners. It has created a sense of anxiety among those concerned about the environment. We have here a number of issues which have emerged over the past few months and which have left deep dissatisfaction among those who cherish and admire and want to retain the character and quality of our parks. This is because of the silly musings on the part of the present Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier), musing on the quality of the water along the Niagara River, musing about whether or not PCBs are dangerous, and babbling just a couple of weeks ago about the toxic chemicals in the dumpsites which have been the object of profound dissatisfaction and unhappiness on the part of people who reside along the shores of Lake Ontario.

In addition, there are Canadians who are concerned about the uncertainty expressed or demonstrated so far by the Government in relation to the SDI proposal, better known as star wars. This Government has not had the guts to say no to the SDI proposal. In the beginning it wavered in favour, and has now somehow retreated and decided, as announced today, to set up a committee to investigate the matter. It does this instead of understanding what SDI really means to Canada and the global community, instead of rejecting the concept right away, thus dispelling a profound sense of fear which is mounting among our people from coast to coast concerning the long-term implications for Canada if we were ever to entertain the star wars concept.

There is a sense of anxiety because students by the thousands are still left in limbo. They have not heard about their applications for summer jobs. That is what I hear in Toronto, and this pattern can probably be found in other urban centres across the country since the cancellation of Summer Canada last November. There is a sense of anxiety among the unemployed in training because all of a sudden we have learned that the skill development allowances have been curtailed if not eliminated.

If you put together a number of the developments which have taken place as a result of the actions of this Government since last October, you get the impression that this country is on the retreat, it is being closed down by this Government on a variety of fronts. Let us take for a moment Canada's role on the international front. Where do we stand right now, I ask the only representative of Cabinet here today?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No, no; monsieur Côté and I.

Mr. Caccia: Our international role has somehow collapsed. Canada seems to be nowhere. It has disappeared behind the apron of President Reagan. There is no international action on Canada's part which one can detect in continuation of the past efforts over the decades by preceding Prime Ministers. Canada is nowhere to be found in international councils. The vision is gone. It is lost.

I was referring to SDI a moment ago, before the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) entered the House. It seems to me that a clear, firm initial statement saying no to the SDI proposal would have been greeted with a great sense of relief by many Canadians who see the long-term implications of entering this kind of agreement.

This country is being profoundly affected by the wavering of this Government on social policy. Last October, November and December we had the debate on universality. You will remember that universality had to be re-established and reconfirmed as a result of continuous questioning in the House when its future was put into doubt. Now we have a new potential danger which is to be removed, let us hope very soon, on the question of deindexation of pensions. Again, instead of building and elaborating and improving on what we have, we seem to be tempted to move in the direction of weakening and dismantling our social security structure which has been built by consecutive generations of Canadians by virtue of long-term designs on improving what is hopefully going to be one of the best social security systems in the world.

This Government is under retreat as well on the environment. I regret to say that again because one does not want to sound like a broken record unless it is absolutely necessary, but here again on this front we have disappeared, as we have disappeared on the international front, as we appear to be inclined to demolish or weaken gradually our social security system. We have had statements on this subject which have weakened the confidence of Canadians as to what this Government really intends to do on the environment. I am glad to say that on acid rain, having taken over in September, the Government has continued the work established by preceding Liberal Governments.

Having said that, if you look around, there is no constructive action which has emanated in the environment since. We have this weakness in relation to our parks policy. We have no activity internationally to exert pressures on the U.S. to sign the acid rain agreement next month in Helsinki. We have uncertainty among the ranks of non-government organizations about their role and acceptance by government. We have a subcommittee headed by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) which is causing anxiety over the future of the Department of the Environment. We have no long-term plans as to parks acquisition and an increasing number of invitations to acquire new sites, as in the case for example of South Moresby. We have, therefore, a picture which leaves very much to be desired. It is not a healthy environmental scene that we see emerging after nine months of this Government.

Where we seem to be withdrawing and vanishing also in the area of research and development. Last November the cuts this Government initiated caused the liquidation or cancellation of a number of programs. It is particularly distressing that alternative sources of energy such as the sun and wind are no longer included in a number of programs of the National Research Council which are for the benefit of Canadians. In the long term this will cause us to be increasingly dependent on non-renewable sources of energy such as oil and gas. Why would the Government abandon efforts to further development of renewable sources of energy? This indicates to Canadians that the Government places no value on renewable energy. In the future, Canada will be dependent on oil and gas which have limited potential for supplying our requirements. That is very distressing, Mr. Speaker.

As well as renewable energy programs, other research and development programs were cancelled last November which required gradual abandonment of initiatives and, therefore, the loss of scientists and other people who could have been active in long-term research activities which would be of benefit to our economy. Not only are we reducing the number of scientists at the NRC, we are also not opening employment opportunities for young scientists graduating from universities and looking for an opportunity to work for their country in order to develop and improve our scientific and research potential.

It is most demoralizing that within two months of coming into power, the Progressive Conservative Government decided to eliminate a number of important research and development programs. In the long term, that will cause a considerable amount of distress because we will be losing the cutting edge which research and development affords us in competition with other countries.

The National Energy Program has been dismantled and thereby Canadian ownership in our oil and gas resources has been abandoned. That abandonment of Canadian identity and ownership is another distressing aspect that has emerged through the retreat from the public sector inspired by the Progressive Conservative philosohpy. We are telling the country that we do not believe in strengthening Canadian ownership and identity. That philosophy resulted in the dismantling of the Canadian Development Corporation, which was the result of a fine thought of Walter Gordon. The CDC became a reality in approximately 1971 and was the initiator of a considerable number of corporate enterprises that gave Canada the cutting edge and technological advance which permitted the formation of a number of free enterprise initiatives resulting in a considerable number of interesting jobs.

Another area of retreat and dismay is that of the Public Service. In the Budget we were promised a cut of 15,000 people in the Public Service by 1990. The message from the Progressive Conservative ranks is that there shall not be jobs in the Public Service for young Canadians who graduate and enter the work force. They will be told that they will not have the opportunity to serve their country in the Public Service at the federal level. Job opportunities will have to be found in the private sector. What kind of inspiration does this give to universities, teachers, and students when they are precluded from the opportunity to develop in the service of their country?

Another area of retreat and dismay is that of international competition. We heard the other day that Canada will not be the site for international events afer the 1988 event in Calgary. We seem to have lost heart in this area as well. Inevitably, one must conclude that the Government has no vision other than that of retreat. Its only challenge is to cut the deficit in the wrong way. What hope has this Government offered to Canada in terms of a role in the world as an independent and proud nation?

This Government is bereft of ideas. It has not yet provided a vision for Canadians of our national and international role. It seems to be saying that Canada is going to close down and asking the last one to leave to turn off the lights. I hope this will not happen, Mr. Speaker. We on this side of the House will ensure that the concept of a vision for Canadians does not die. We want the Government to tell Canadians what Canada should be doing on the world scene and what Canada should be telling the young people graduating from training institutions. The Government should tell Canadians what to hope for in their environment and what to expect from the Government in terms of research and development, housing, social policies, and social security.

Up until now we have seen only retreat on every front in a most depressing manner. This makes it extremely difficult to come into the House with a positive attitude in support of this request for financing.

We would be pleased to finance a Government that takes positive action and makes us proud of the Government of Canada. However, those Members should show us something of substance rather than a threat to pensioners and their futures. We do not want to see a reduction of employment in the Public Service. The Government should not waver, but say no to invitations concerning SDI, which is very destabilizing proposal. It should be making us proud about being part of a new decade that is emerging during difficult times.

I would like to see the Government introduce the policies that Canadians are expecting of it rather than having to react every day to measures that increase the level of anxiety and sense of uncertainty about our individual and collective future.

Mr. Kindy: Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat surprised by the comments made by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia). He talks about a vision for Canada. What type of vision did we see in 1968 when we were promised the just society? What vision did we have with the National Energy Program that destroyed the oil industry in western Canada? His Party has no seats west of Manitoba. It is not surprising that they are not in touch with the people of Canada. He talks about SDI and says that we are giving up, but we have a clear direction and want to explore that possibility. The Hon. Member says that we gave up on the National Energy Program. What were the benefits to Canada and western Canada from the National Energy Program?

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, I believe that western Canada benefits as being part of Canada in a variety of ways. In the case of the NEP, it was the fact that future generations of Canadians would, whether western or eastern Canadians, enjoy and share in the increased ownership of our natural resources. I am sure that there are many young western Canadians who would look forward to sharing the ownership of our gas and oil resources to a greater extent than we have in the past.

I submit to the Hon. Member that that in itself is something to be proud about. I could name a long list of visions that were put to Canadians in the 1970s. Some of them were implemented and, it is true, some were not. However, we certainly made the 1970s a very thriving decade for Canada. I would also mention to the Hon. Member the third option in our foreign affairs which was launched, pursued, but not successful. Nevertheless, it was put as a possibility for Canadians if they wanted it.

I would mention to the Hon. Member the fact that we went to the United Nations in pursuit of the gradual suffocation policy vis-à-vis nuclear arms. We provided a vision not only for Canada, but for the rest of the world.

Despite enormous criticism, we offered Canadians a variety of programs for community employment during the summer and winter by which the Hon. Member's own city benefited as much as mine. Young people created their own jobs in the summer and winter and determined their own destiny until they could find the long term permanent activities that they were seeking.

If he wants me to continue, I will mention multiculturalism which, in itself, is an exciting concept and vision. It is in our hands if we want to make it work. I would mention our concept of developing a new approach to transportation systems in the West which was highly criticized and thoroughly debated.

I might also add that in the early 1980s, despite opposition in the House, we gave Canadians a Charter of Rights and Freedoms that probably makes Canada one of the most modern nations, with a legal instrument that is becoming widely tested and which evidently has met a need on the part of a number of people from coast to coast. Would that be a lack of vision in the eyes of the Hon. Member? I ask those Hon. Members to come forward with their ideas because so far they appear to be a bunch of bankrupt politicians. All they have introduced since last October is cuts and reductions.

The ones whom they are asking to shoulder the burden are the same people who have made a contribution to Canada all their working lives. Can you be proud of that and go home to your riding during the recess? This is why I am asking Hon. Members to come forward with a vision because Canada does not seem to have one at this time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, I thought it was rather funny this afternoon when a Member of the Official Opposition told us it was our fault. On September 4, Canadian men and women were newly confident about this country, and it was the Progressive Conservatives that gave them reason to be confident. Looking back, it was the Liberals who gave us a deficit of nearly $200 billion. Mr. Speaker, mathematically speaking, $200 billion divided by 40 Liberal Members means that they each owe our economy $5 billion. That is what our economy is up against, Mr. Speaker.

Something else. Children being born in Canada today are in debt, at birth, to the tune of $7,000 each, because of the Liberals. That is not funny. During the years the Liberals were in power . . . now we have 1.5 million unemployed. If that is supposed to be the present or the legacy they left us, Mr. Speaker, it is some present.

[English]

Opposition Members say that we back-benchers in the Conservative Party have nothing to say. We were elected to work for our ridings and Canada in general. We have begun that process and Canadians are beginning to have confidence. Over 270,000 jobs have been created by our new Government as a result of cutting out progams that were not needed and cutting waste. We have lowered the interest rates.

I have just returned from a week in my riding where my constituents want development. I have already stated that picnic tables are a thing of the past because we have resources not only in oil and natural gas, but forestry, fish, agriculture and tourism. I guarantee the Hon. Member that as the Member for Bonaventure-Iles-de-la-Madeleine, with a Conservative Government for years to come we will never leave a legacy like that which we inherited on September 4.

[Translation]

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that there is another way of looking at the deficit. A deficit can be necessary as a form of investment to save the economy when the unemployment rate is 20, 30 or 40 per cent in the riding he represents.

[English]

When unemployment was over 25 per cent, over 30 per cent and 39 per cent in the case of Port Alberni in British Columbia, the deficit was a necessity on the part of any socially responsible Government in order to provide aid to those affected by a recession. In that sense it becomes an investment in the future. It is an investment in Canada. It is not possible to run a Government like a corner variety store it is not a question of balancing the accounts. It is not a question of making a profit. A government has to do much more than just operate a business. A government has to look after the interests of the population and come through in times of need in the hope that when times improve it can reduce the deficit, gradually, when it is possible. You cannot look at the books and balance them year to year for the sake of balancing them as it is done in the private sector.

• (1550)

Mr. Gustafson: You had 20 years to do it.

Mr. Caccia: Otherwise that is not being in the public sector. You might as well stay in the private sector and run your books there. There is a profound social role that is incumbent upon a government. I will not apologize about the deficit. I am proud we did incur that deficit.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Caccia: I know that we did it for the sake of those who were unemployed and for their families. There was nothing wrong incurring a deficit driven by that kind of social concern.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The period for questions and comments is over. Resuming debate. We will commence with the Hon. Member who claims to come from the sports capital of Canada, the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon).

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, another great sport is politics. I enjoy the chance to enter this debate this afternoon.

I have to take us back in history to an election campaign fought against a long lived and arrogant Liberal Government which had punished the country's economy, which saw a significant decline in the production of the country and, in turn, a dramatic increase in unemployment rates. An election campaign took place. In that election campaign, the Conservative Party launched an all-out attack on that arrogant, probably misguided, Liberal Government. During the course of that campaign, that Conservative Party through its leader made some throbbing, exciting, powerful statements of optimism and hope about the future. In Regina, for instance, people heard, "This is a new country, and there is no excuse for unemployment in Canada if a government does its duty."

A statement made in Moncton was "The Conservative Party is going to find work for all who are willing to work, or perish in the attempt, and take such steps as will end this tragic condition of unemployment and bring prosperity to the country as a whole." The leader of the existing Government, it was said, "promises consideration of the problem of unemployment; I promise to end unemployment. Which plan do you like best?"

That was the Conservative Leader before the election and the Conservative Leader who, on the basis of those promises was elected. I must say, Mr. Speaker, with an overwhelming majority, that Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) went on to put his remedies for this country's problems into effect. When he brought his major budget down just a few short months later, the Minister of Industry, a man by the name of Mr. Stevens, stated that the Budget "was wise and courageous." "The Minister has discharged a difficult task with such marked ability that the country will share with us a feeling of confidence in his capacity to guide us wisely and safely through these troublous days".

What was there in that Budget that was brought down? First, there were considerable cut-backs, for instance, reductions in the services given to agriculture. Second, there was considerable additional taxation. In fact, two-thirds of the new taxation in the Budget was to be raised through sales tax, import duties and what was charitably referred to as nuisance taxes. When you look at the increases in direct taxation that were to be established, for those whose taxable income was $10,000 a year, the percentage increase of tax was 53 per cent. For those who earned $50,000 a year, the percentage increase was 33 per cent. For those whose taxable income was $1 million a year, the increase was 31 per cent.

In those days, as in these days, there was a leader of a social democratic group within the House of Commons who got up and made the point that our leader has been making with respect to this Budget. "The millionaires", he said, "have been very gently dealt with by the Minister of Finance".

I was not there in those days, nor were any of these Hon. Members. I am certain that if they had been there, they would have applauded just as vigorously with just as much sense, confidence and certainty, that their Minister bravely, courageously, as Mr. Stevens had said, was going to provide a solution to this country.

In the interests of history, I have to tell you who these various people were who made these various statements, Mr. Speaker. The election promises were made by Mr. Bennett in 1930. He too promised tens and tens of thousands of jobs. The Minister of Industry who so magnanimously welcomed that budget was the Hon. Henry Stevens who later went on to desert Mr. Bennett because his policies turned out to be so misguided. The Budget that was brought in in 1932 had exactly the same cut-backs to the agricultural sector that we have seen in this Budget, exactly the same emphasis on increases in indirect tax and exactly the same unfairness within the direct tax increases which were designed to put people back to work.

The policy failed dismally then. It will fail dismally now. That massive majority of 1930 disappeared completely by 1935. I fear as I watch this Government, that its majority is going to ebb out in the same way in 1987 or 1988, or whenever the next election comes.

We have now had the first serious careful reading of this Budget by the business economists of Canada, not those who sent me to this House of Commons, those academic economists who according to my friend, the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) have never managed to get it right, not the people who the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) himself referred to yesterday as economists who will tell you one thing with one hand and something else with another, but the business economists, the people who make the forecasts upon which businesses make their decisions about reinvestment.

Seventy-six per cent of those business economists surveyed have decided that as a result of this momentous Budget, there is no need to change their forecasts for this year. For 1986, no fewer than 50 per cent of them have said that there is no need to change their projections. Of the other 50 per cent—and I remind the House that these are business economists—a majority have reduced their growth expectations. In short, as a result of the "magnificent" Budget brought in by this "grand" Government, business economists—

• (1600)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Langdon: —have decided that growth will go down. I note, for the record, that Conservative back-benchers are applauding the fact that that will take place.

Mr. McKenzie: We are applauding the Budget.

Mr. Langdon: These business economists have been even harsher. They were almost as bad as the BCNI itself which criticized the Government the other day. These are the business economists from whose ilk the Minister of Finance in fact springs. I am sure many people have been charmed by the Minister of State for Finance, yet none of the forecasters agree that the promise of the Minister of Finance of greater job creation will succeed. None of them believe what the Minister of Finance says, and 20 per cent of Canadian business economists expect that the jobless rate will be higher than they predicted before the Budget was brought down. Not a single business economist believes that it will be lower, thanks to the Budget, and 20 per cent of them believe that it will be higher.

It pains me to do so, but I have to ask the Minister of State for Finance to demonstrate in the future, when they bring before the House discussion of the projections of economic models, a little honesty. Projections are designed to show what would happen if a certain event takes place. In short, the fact that several hundred thousands of jobs have been created in the last eight months says nothing with respect to the projections of the budget experts of the Minister of Finance.

He would not admit it back in November, but he has since admitted in the House that his own finance projections indicated that there would be 50,000 to 100,000 jobs less as a result of the Budget. That is not an absolute number; that is 50,000 to 100,000 jobs less than would have otherwise resulted. In fact if 200,000 jobs have been created, what his finance officials were telling him was that if he had not brought in that November statement, he would have been able to rise in the House and boast about 250,000 or 300,000 jobs. I must say that he is boastful enough about the number about which he talks that I am perhaps just as pleased that he does not have more to boast about. He should at least have the honesty, as someone who knows something about economics, to recognize that those absolute numbers have nothing to do with contradicting what projections suggest.

We have a Borrowing Authority Bill in front of us this afternoon which asks us to endorse the economic strategy of the Government despite the fact, as my little history lesson demonstrated, that this is a strategy which was tried in the 1930s. At that time it not only devastated the country but, of more importance to people like my friend, the Minister of State for Finance, it devastated the Conservative Party. In the expectation that they would at least be concerned about survival, I hope they take seriously this history lesson this afternoon and look to their political skins to see what is likely to befall them and to see what might happen to the whole country if we were subjected to a Liberal majority Government after the next election, thanks to what has been created in this Budget. I mean, God help us all.

I point out not just the failures which exist with respect to the macro-economic strategy on the part of the Government, but the failures which exist with respect to the agricultural sector. In fact, there are many Members of the House who know quite well the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. The Ontario Federation of Agriculture is to the Conservative Party what the Ontario Federation of Labour is to our Party. It is an organization which has almost always endorsed, supported, worked for and believed in the Conservative Party of Canada.

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture indicated last week that the Budget was a betrayal of farmers. It urged each Ontario Member of Parliament to rise and express the anger and frustration of Ontario farmers with this Budget. I have not heard many of my fellow Conservative Ontario Members of Parliament stand up to express that anger and frustration. As a New Democrat and speaking for my farmers in Essex County with whom I have talked in detail about the Budget, I can express that anger and frustration with absolute and total certainty that it represents their view of and judgment on the Government.

I have heard the Minister say on occasion that this Budget helps women. Having talked with women's groups within my constituency, I have to say, as we said earlier to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), name one group, just one group of women that believes the Budget provides something real and significant in terms of economic advance for women. Women's groups in Essex County tell me that they feel damaged, hard done by and hit by increased taxes. They also feel they have been hit by cut-backs affecting them. It is not only the pensioners who are expressing their disgust with what has been taking place; it is women, farmers and even professional business economists. With enemies like that, the Government badly needs friends. I fear with its present Budget it is simply not going to find them. This Government has brought this on itself and it is going to continue doing so in the future if it does not change its course quickly.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is wriggling. He is attempting to change. I ask him to move quickly, to let pensioners in this country know that he is going to change; to let women in this country know that he is going to backtrack; to let farmers in this country know that he is not going to continue with a Budget that they feel is a betrayal.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that as we debate this borrowing authority it will have the effect also of changing this Government's strategy in this regressive Budget, a Budget out of the thirties instead of a Budget out of the eighties.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Châteauguay (Mr. Lopez).

Mr. Lopez: Mr. Speaker, I already knew that the Opposition parties and especially the NDP were as unrealistic as they come, but they have just demonstrated that they are also prophets of doom, both the New Democrats and the Liberals. They astonish me and they are astonishing me more and more. They really do not have much up here. They said as much earlier when they were counting the seats on our side and saying that when they were over there, at least there was something coming out of those seats. Well, if anything was coming out, it was coming out the wrong end, because there is nothing up here.

They keep accusing us of failing to keep our campaign promises. Last week, we also voted on a Bill, Bill C-15 if I am not mistaken, which contained one of our campaign promises, and both Opposition parties objected very strenuously to this Bill. They said that it would be a catastrophe if the Bill were passed. It was one of the campaign promises we want to keep, and we intend to keep them all if we can.

Had economic conditions been more favourable, had they left the economy a lot stronger than they did, I think we would be able to honour all our commitments very easily. But before leaving they scrapped the bottom of the barrel and left nothing but dust. That is why we may need more time to fulfil some of our promises, but rest assured that we did not forget them and that they are our concern and our objective—and we intend—to live up to every one of them.

In spite of those prophets of doom who try every which way to trip us and prevent us from governing, the people of Canada gave us a clear and unmistakable mandate to do just that. Anyone standing in our way and trying to prevent us from carrying out the wishes expressed by Canadians is showing disrespect for them. We made some promises and we are trying to fulfil them as much as possible, but every time we try to pass legislation to honour those promises you thwart our efforts. Do not do this or that, it is not good! You have been saying that for years, but people are growing skeptical and do not believe you any more.

You talk about honesty and point your finger at us, but if there were a mirror in the middle of the House it would reflect your own image, you could continue to talk about honesty while looking at your own image in the mirror and then I think you would realize that you can indeed blame yourselves. If there is one thing I wish it is that the Opposition Members be more realistic and stop showing off in the House. Take a constructive approach, and when we do something to improve the situation, for God's sake let us work together in the best interest of the country and of all Canadians, stop being so argumentative all the time. You keep saying that the steps taken by the Progressive Conservative Party are not any good. How can you justify that? Because you did not take them! That is the only reason you can find. There is no other. It is always the same negative attitude. Whatever we do, whatever the Government does, Members opposite say: That is no good. They always find a reason to say that it is no good. When we make a promise it is no good. Then, in the same breath, they criticize us for having promised something else and for not keeping our promise. Get your act together once and for all. Should we keep our promises or not?

If we are to keep our promises, when we make suggestions for that purpose, cooperate with us! Why criticize us when we are trying to keep those promises? On one hand, we must keep those promises, but on the other, you prevent us from doing so. If there is any hypocrisy or dishonesty involved, it is certainly over there. In fact, there is a lot of it.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to speak too long, but I simply want to urge the Members opposite, both the socialists and their accomplices, to consider the fact that they should be much more honest and work in the best interests of Canada and all Canadians, because they are now doing just the opposite.

[English]

Mr. Langdon: How does one respond to that?

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to say that political issues have many interesting aspects. For instance, during the election campaign, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion was reported as having said that amendments to the Foreign Investment Act were required. However, he also said that such amendments must give adequate protection to any important sector. The legislation should provide some protection to sectors of major economic importance. However, there is nothing of the kind in Bill C-15.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, this means the Conservatives did not really keep their election promise. They had promised to introduce a Bill which would make certain changes but would also identify the sectors of major importance that should be protected. However, that is not included in the Bill itself.

The second thing that I want to say is that according to the Hon. Member, the Canadian people gave a mandate to this Government. Mr. Speaker, the constituents of Essex-Windsor gave me a mandate, that of speaking on behalf of ordinary Canadians. In order to do that, all bills introduced by the Government must be examined. It can be said that some bills are good, and we support them like the one I supported this afternoon. But now we have an economic strategy that has been announced by this Government, and this is a strategy that does plenty of things, but mainly it imposes higher taxes on every average Canadian and a tax reduction for a small group of rich people. Another thing this strategy does, it changes the safety net protecting senior citizens in our society. Those two things seem unacceptable to ordinary people. Well, I feel I have to fight against those things. When I was in my constituancy discussing the budget with people, nine out of ten told me I was right, because I was doing things they were in agreement with.

Mr. Speaker, you know we now have petitions being circulated collecting loads of signatures on the matter of pensions. In all, 90 per cent of my constituents want to sign such a petition. To me, that response means I speak on behalf of my constituents, and I think I also speak on behalf of the constituents of that Hon. Member.

[English]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am quite pleased to have the opportunity to participate in this debate. We must discuss the borrowing authority of this Government at considerable length because of the priorities the Government has put in the Budget and other measures that it has enacted as of late.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said recently in a speech that this country had a shortage of rich people. I have looked at that statement in terms of my own riding and I beg to differ with the Minister. In my own riding, there is not a shortage of rich people, but a surplus of poor people. I represent a constituency which is not very affluent. The people of my riding will not benefit too much from the measures that were adopted by the Minister of Finance and by his proposal to cut off benefits to elderly people of Canada while at the same time giving the opportunity to do so to someone who wishes to sell a yacht or condominium in Florida without paying capital gains tax.

Mr. McKenzie: Or a farmer.

Mr. Boudria: I fail to see, as I am sure the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Asiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) fails to see in his usual objective way why the Government of Canada would want to punish the poor and reward so unjustly the more affluent in our society.

Mr. McKenzie: Go out to Saskatchewan farmers and tell them that.

Mr. Boudria: Let us see what the farming community had to say about the Budget and the fiscal policies of the Government. I hear the Hon. Member across the way speaking of farmers. I would like to read from a resolution of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and I would hope that the Hon.

Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine would listen very carefully. The resolution reads:

That every MP in the province be talked to over the next few weeks and that this be done by a substantial group of farmers in the MP's own area and that we demand that our MP represent our frustration and anger and demand for action to their respective caucuses and Ministers—

I am glad that a member of the Conservative caucus has referred to the measures of this Budget that will positively affect the farmers of this country.

Mr. Minaker: Who wrote that? Would the Member table it?

Mr. Boudria: Oh, yes, I would gladly table the minutes of the meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. If the Hon. Member across the way challenges the fact that these might be authentic, I am sure he would himself want to phone that illustrious group to confirm the fact that those are the correct words.

The Hon. Member opposite also spoke of the benefits to the farmers of western Canada. Let us see what the Alberta Cattle Feeders Association had to say recently about the Government. In a news release, that group has said:

—the Conservatives traded off the Canadian cattle industry out of fear that retaliatory measures might affect Canada's exports of whisky, blueberries, maple sugar and other food products.

The news release went on to say:

Because of this foolish decision, one of the few options Canadian cattlemen have left is to press on with a costly countervail action against the EEC's export subsidized beef; and encourage the Mulroney Government to keep another of its commitments—

I would like to thank the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine for bringing up the agricultural component of today's discussion. I am grateful to him for suggesting that I raise this matter, and I am sure his constituents are as well.

The Government said that it has to repriorize its expenditures. It has published a little booklet entitled Managing Government More Effectively. I have a few suggestions of my own that I would like to give to the Government. In doing so, I would like to read a letter that was sent to me by a person from South Porcupine, Ontario. The letter reads:

Something I have wanted for a long time is a good government job. I wonder if you could help me out. Would you please be good enough to ask Joe, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Mulroney, Mr. Crosbie and others in the House of Commons very important if they have any unmarried sisters, step-sisters, aunts, great aunts, great-great aunts, nieces, cousins female, of course, grandmothers, great grandmothers, great-great grandmothers, second cousins, third cousins, etc. If any of them has I would be prepared to marry one of them regardless of age or appearance—

The letter goes on:

I talked this over with my wife and will get a divorce to get a job. I am 62 and am past the age of being fussy. I just want to be a member of All In The Family Club. I'll be watching all the activities in the Commons . . . to hear you make this astounding announcement.

It goes on:

I am sending you a copy of the letter I sent to Wilson and . . . Mulroney as I am sure my letter will never get to him, but if you want you can present him with this letter.

This letter came from an unemployed person living in northern Ontario. At the bottom, the letter reads:

P.S. Is there really such a person as Aurèle Gervais?

I thought I would bring this letter to your attention, Mr. Speaker, so that you would know what some unemployed people of Canada think of the government policies designed to manage Government more effectively.

Mr. McKenzie: If you're so smart, tell us why there was one and a half million unemployed.

Mr. Boudria: I see the Hon. Member across is beginning to get restless. If a Liberal Finance Minister would have presented a Budget like this one, I would be restless too. I do not blame the Hon. Member for feeling that way, it is not his fault.

Mr. McKenzie: Tell us why we have such a huge debt, if you're so smart.

Mr. Boudria: Let me read what a senior citizen of my riding has said to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). That letter reads:

Both myself and my wife are Senior Citizens—

An Hon. Member: Another one?

Mr. Boudria: Perhaps the Hon. Member across the way does not want to hear about these letters. Perhaps that is the whole problem. Perhaps the Government does not want to hear about the senior citizens of this country. Perhaps the Government is not interested in their plight. It is only interested in the shortage of rich people to which the Minister of Finance referred when he made a speech in Montreal. Perhaps that is the whole problem with this Government. If that Member does not want to hear about it, Mr. Speaker, I am sure that you do. The letter reads:

• (1630)

Both myself and my wife are Senior Citizens. During our discussion following your appearance on The Journal last night (June 5) we recognized that, even though we do not receive the GIS, we were continually seeking ways to "get by".

The reason is that we are now fully supporting one son (30 years old, with a perceptual handicap)—

Mr. Mantha: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Nipissing (Mr. Mantha) on a point of order.

Mr. Mantha: Mr. Speaker, I must say that the Hon. Member is in a little cloud. As the Finance Minister (Mr. Wilson) said, when a gentleman gets up to speak we should pay attention. However, given that the Hon. Member for Timmins-Chapleau (Mr. Gervais) is not here, the Hon. Member should not be talking about him.

Mr. Boudria: I cannot say that. It is out of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think that the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) referred to the presence or the absence of that Member.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, of course I would not have referred to the absence of a Member. That would be unparliamentary. However, now that my colleague has brought it up, I must agree with him.

I will continue with the letter which I was reading from a senior citizen in my riding. It continues:

> Why are these two young men not earning their own way? They were. Both had good jobs in the oil industry in Edmonton, Alberta until the bottom fell out of it, when, with thousands of others, they returned home to Ontario.
> The question for you is "How many other Senior Citizens are bearing the burden of supporting family members who are unemployed?" We are lucky in that we are just able to get by, but we have to postpone (or probably give up) our hopes of a relaxed retirement, a little travel and enjoyment of some of the things we worked so hard for all our lives (I am a war vet.).
> So Mr. Epp, the nibbling away at the meager living standards of the pensioners of Canada is NOT the answer. It is shameful to pretend that the Seniors willingly support the deindexing of pensions, even to the limited extent your Government has done. Mr. Epp, a piece of paper that says the deficit is $xx billions does not feel hungry.
> What the pensioners support is a fair OVERALL sharing of the burden by those who do have jobs and CAN put up with a slightly reduced standard of living. The very young and the elderly have a strong elementary sense of fairness (it is always present, but often suppressed during working years when self survival is important). The Seniors of this country also have long memories—remember that when the next election comes up.

That is what a senior citizen in my riding had to say about the budgetary measure to deindex pensions. Members of the Conservative Party, who yesterday voted against full indexation of pensions, should remember that. They too have seniors in their ridings. They are part of a Government which has spent millions of dollars buying military uniforms for the Armed Forces. Does any Member of the House know of one military person who would not part with his new uniform in order to have a pension for his grandmother?

Mr. Fennell: Yes.

Mr. Boudria: The Hon. Member opposite said yes. I challenge him to name that person. I refuse to believe that there is such a person. People in the military are proud, but they know what their priorities should be. They know that it is ridiculous to take money away from senior citizens and to give $36 million to an expenditure of that kind.

I would like to read into the record a letter from a constituent who lives in Vankleek Hill, Ontario, which is in my riding. The letter reads:

> I am an old age pensioner who is not at the moment in desperate need of the funds, although I might well become so if the Government's apparent intentions come to full flower. I don't know by what right Finance Minister Wilson piously cites my alleged support for his attack on the elderly. First let him order all snouts out of the patronage trough before invoking my senile sense of self-denial. In the context of its favourite treatment for friends and relations, the Government's reneging on its election commitment to hold inviolate the hard-won and for the most part paid-for pension rights appears to be "cowardly, despicable and dastardly".

That is what the people of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell say about the budgetary measures of the Government. They are not pleased with measures which will deindex senior citizens' pensions.

I have received another letter from British Columbia. Again, that letter talks about how the senior citizens in that province feel about the deindexation of Old Age Security. Countless letters are received every day by members of our Party. I am sure that at least one Conservative member, before this debate is over, will have the intestinal fortitude which is required to stand, on behalf of his or her constituents, and read similar letters. There must be a Tory member somewhere who is willing to do that. I refuse to believe that there is not one Tory member who will stand up for his or her constituents. Perhaps I will be proven wrong. Only time will tell us.

Mr. McKenzie: Perhaps you are wrong.

Mr. Boudria: Perhaps I am wrong. Perhaps he is right. Maybe there is not a Tory member who has that kind of intestinal fortitude. I see the Hon. Member nodding his head in agreement with that. Maybe he is right. Maybe there is not one. Even I am willing to give at least one Conservative member that kind of credit, whether or not that Member deserves it.

I want to speak briefly on patronage. I have spoken about patronage on a few occasions in the past. Patronage costs money. In this debate we are talking about the cost of running the Government. I am sure Members opposite would agree with some of the statements which have been made in the House in the past.

The Conservative Government of Canada has decided to sufficiently reward Tory losers—the Tories who have lost elections across the country. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) stated in The Evening Telegram of St. John's, Newfoundland, on Monday, June 10, 1985, that in his view it was unacceptable that the Liberals appointed 26 people, who were previously elected, to positions. That was unacceptable to the Minister of Justice, yet the same Tory Government feels that it was all right for the Government to appoint 1,200 of its friends and relatives to various government positions. That represents one person every three hours, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, since September 17, who has been appointed by the Conservative Party of Canada.

They are to be rewarded at the public trough. This is from a Party which said only a few days ago through its Minister of Justice in a newspaper in Newfoundland that appointing 26 elected people was unacceptable. I wonder how that person really feels about the appointment of thousands of others in his own Party. I have to ask myself the question in view of what we have heard over the last few weeks.

If this Government thinks it can make promises right, left and centre, if it thinks it can make 338 promises, as I have compiled in this book, to the people of Canada and then forget all about them, then this Government will get a very quick lesson after the next election.

[Translation]

The Canadian people, Mr. Speaker, voted for a change at the last election.

An Hon. Member: And they got it.

Mr. Boudria: And they got it. The Tory Member says so. Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is right. But it is also true that the Conservative Party was elected on an election mandate, a mandate that is cast down in those 338 promises I was referring to earlier. To have a political party elected on a mandate and saying the day after as they do now that they do not owe anybody anything, that they have no obligation whatsoever to the people who elected them on the mandate I referred to earlier, is unacceptable, Mr. Speaker. There is no excuse for a Government to behave like that. And it is my hope that before the end of today's debate, or in the coming days, at least one Conservative Member will rise and tell this House what his constituents really think about that. Maybe there is not one Conservative Member who will have the heart to do that. But I do hope there will be one, because if the Conservative Members do not have the courage to say what their constituents think, I am sure that their constituents will be telling them soon, when they return home to meet them over the week-end.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions, comments. The Hon. Member for Châteauguay (Mr. Lopez).

Mr. Lopez: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member who has just spoken said that members of the Progressive Conservative Party should speak out. Now that it is my turn, I am going to tell him what is really on my mind. I feel first of all that like those hon. members who rose before him, he spoke through his hat. That is nothing new. We are used to that. It is true that he has no hat on, but just the same, he does not know what he is talking about.

When he claimed for instance that we are the source of all the ills which exist today under the sun, he overlooked or ignored the fact that the situation has improved considerably since we came to power. Most everybody is saying so. When he referred to the very clear mandate we have received from the Canadian people, something I am very proud of, I think that if Canadians were called upon again to elect a government, they would give us an even bigger majority.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lopez: That is clear evidence that they are not disappointed with us. He said so himself in so many words a while ago. I almost blushed when I heard him, because although I have heard it said before outside of the House, the Hon. Member has just confirmed that there are Liberals who would marry a Conservative. That is something which I have known a long time: everybody is anxious to marry a good match. Because he cannot find someone eligible among the Liberals, he will have to look elsewhere, and I know he will find what he is looking for among the Conservatives. He should be ashamed to recognize that he is getting letters from Liberals just like him who are seeking the hands of our ministers and members in marriage. I am proud of that. When I stroll through the hallways, I meet all these attractive women who are looking at me, but I do not think that they could propose marriage in such an eloquent way. In his riding, therefore, when people are writing to congratulate Conservatives and ask them to marry—

Mr. Boudria: It is not in my riding but in Aurèle Gervais'.

Mr. Lopez: I am proud of that. I am not lucky, believe me, for other people also will ask him. And the worst is that there will be fewer Liberals. They are not very strong at the present time but imagine how many will they have left if others begin to cross the floor. There are some forty members today but if it continues like that, there will be no one left. But we need a little opposition. I would not like to have everybody on the Tory side. There is not enough room. We have to let them sit on this side. Keep the Liberals with you. We do not need him. We are quite happy with our Conservative members. We want to keep them. The Liberals who would like to sat on this side should stay over there, we do not need them.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to reply to the Hon. Member.

In the first place, I can hardly imagine a Conservative who would blush. I find it extraordinary. The member told us he had blushed. He could have turned blue but not red. I can hardly think that a Conservative could blush.

Mr. Speaker, he said that the situation had greatly improved. I am sure that the situation of Peter and Marcia Clark has greatly improved. It is much better than before. I am sure that the situation of Doug and Wendy Lawson has improved. I am sure that the situation of Marie Marchand in North Bay has improved as well as the situation of several other sons, brothers, borthers-in-law, nephews, grandfathers, grandmothers of the Tories. It is possible, Mr. Speaker, that some of them enjoy improved conditions.

[English]

The Member is also describing that letter I received in which he claims that my constituent wants to marry a Conservative Member in order to get a job. That is a constituent of a Tory Member of this House, not one of my own constituents. Perhaps the Hon. Member could convey that message to the Hon. Member for Timmins-Chapleau (Mr. Gervais). He has a constituent who wrote to me because he claims that he did not know whether his Member existed. In his letter he described out of desperation the fact that it seemed to him that the only way to get a job in this country is to be a relative or be married to a relative of a member of this Government. That is what that person was trying to indicate. Perhaps I read the letter too quickly and maybe I will read it again a little more slowly to make sure the Tories understand, but that is what all this is about. The people of this country are fed up with that kind of action by the Tories.

The Member said a little earlier that he wants the opposition to be more positive. How can one be positive in the face of the nepotism which we have seen in this House? Only you, Mr. Speaker, as the non-partisan person you are, could understand how outrageous this is.

Mr. Winegard: Mr. Speaker, I was not going to participate in this.

Mr. Prud'homme: They all say that.

Mr. Winegard: But as usual, when I hear the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) on his feet, our local stand-up comedian with a great sense of humour—

Mr. Boudria: You need one.

Mr. Winegard: We recognize that. However, what he does not have is a memory. He cannot remember what the Liberals did when they were in power. He conveniently forgets that. He cannot even remember what Bill he is speaking to today. I thought it was a borrowing Bill but, lo and behold, we have all of these extraneous things thrown in. Finally, Sir, I have never heard a better illustration of the pot calling the kettle black than that of the marvellous Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell. He enlivens this House daily. He is a joy to listen to. However, I hope he will recover his memory, retain his sense of humour and be a little more constructive regarding what is good for this country.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Unlike my colleague from Guelph (Mr. Winegard), I would like to congratulate the previous speaker. He is one of our excellent new members.

[English]

Mr. Speaker, I was almost going to call quorum a minute ago as I like to do on Friday afternoon. However, I will not do it because it will only be embarrassing for you, Mr. Speaker.

If the Borrowing Authority Bill was passed, does the Hon. Member think there would be enough money to ensure that our older citizens, who are getting more worried and full of anxiety—and I will refer to this tomorrow night on CBC in French at 11:20, on Sunday night my colleague, the Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) will refer to it in English on CBC—would at long last enjoy a good summer, knowing that indexation would not be touched? I trust that the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) is a man who understands very well that he can back off from that position without losing face so that our older citizens will have a happy summer without anxiety. Is there enough money in the Borrowing Authority to do that?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond very briefly to both Members. In response to the Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard), my memory is just fine. I remember 338 Conservative promises. One hundred and thirteen involved spending more money, five involved spending less money, two involved increases in revenue, and 26 involved decreases in revenue. I remember those promises very well.

In response to my very eloquent colleague, the Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), if the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) cut the 57 per cent increase in the operation of the Prime Minister's office, or the salary increase of Roy McMurtry or Lawrence Hanigan, or the trip of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), which cost $57,000, there would be all kinds of funds to help the senior citizens of the country.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): It is a pleasure to participate in the dying minutes of another week in Parliamentary life. I hope some people are watching. It is very important to put a borrowing Bill into simple and basic terms. Perhaps we can break it down by asking where the money is coming from and where it is going.

Over the last several weeks, the country has involved itself in the issue of senior citizens. I would like to remind Hon. Members that two days ago the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) said that they had no choice, option, or alternative but to do what was done. They did not know that things were as bad as they later discovered. Even if one accepts the statistics which he gave at face value, they still knew those things in July, August, and September when they told senior citizens that pensions would not be touched, that their pensions would be left intact because they helped shape the country and deserved those pensions.

There has been a serious and immoral revocation of that promise. When talking about the borrowing Bill let us not talk only of graphs, figures, charts, and books. Let us also talk about the thousands and thousands of seniors who have been phoning and signing petitions. Their message is very simple and clear and, therefore, our answers must be very clear and simple.

Why are we touching those pensions? The Budget is like A Tale of Two Cities. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) tells us not to worry, that things are all right and the economy is improving. The Prime Minister ought to get off his pedestral and visit the senior citizen of Sault Ste. Marie who has $100 of discretionary income. He should talk to him or her and ask if things are going well. He ought to get off his pedestal and visit the student who cannot get into York University because tuition fees are being raised. He should talk to the unemployed youth who are trying to break into the economic market-place. They face a catch-22 situation because they cannot get a job without experience. He should talk to some of the disabled people who are being discriminated against in the working place, or to racial minorities who, because of the colour of their skin or the ending of their name, cannot get into the market-place either.

I agree that we are fortunate to be living in this country. Millions have immigrated to this country and are proud and loyal as they should be. All Canadians should be fiercely loyal and thankful to this country. However, we also have our problems. We have our poor and our seniors who cannot make a go of it with deindexation. We must speak to those people.

We cannot only talk about capital gains bonanzas which help only a select few. Statistics of 1982 show that almost 70 per cent of all individuals showing capital gains came from 4 per cent of the Canadian population. It may help farmers who want to sell their farms and people who want to sell their businesses and reap a profit because they have worked hard and deserve it. However, that is only 4 per cent of the Canadian population. What about the other 96 per cent? What happened to equity and fairness? How can it be fair that the taxes of a person earning $15,000 increase by 36 per cent when the person who earns $200,000 is only going to face a 2 per cent increase because he provides jobs? There is something cruel and inequitable there, Mr. Speaker. It is a tale of two cities which the Prime Minister should live.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock p.m. this House stands adjourned until Monday at eleven o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

At 5 p.m. the House adjourned.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

The House resumed from Friday, June 14, consideration of the motion of Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)) that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to resume debate from last Friday. At that time I was indicating that the Government's Budget resembled A Tale of Two Cities. One city is the shining city on the Hill in which the Government sees the economy improving and an economic state which is progressing well. The other city reflects the other side of the tracks that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government have difficulty understanding.

If the Government understood these problems, it would not have imposed the partial deindexation of old age pensions for seniors across the country. It would not ask consumers to pay 2 cents a litre more to make up for the shortfall as a result of what was given to the multinational oil companies. It would not have cut nearly $100 million in job training programs. It would not have increased sales tax across the board, which is a very regressive step. It would not have asked families with two children who earn between $15,000 and $20,000 annually to pay 36 per cent more tax by the year 1990 while the $200,000 family with two children is looking simply at a 2 per cent raise in their taxes.

The Government would show that it is beginning to understand this other city if it were to forget its obsession with the deficit and introduce job creation programs in order to put Canadians back to work. However, the Budget is simply bankrupt of any new or worth-while job creation initiatives.

Without a job, an individual loses that sense of dignity and purpose. As a result, the country loses that same sense of dignity and purpose. That is the tale of the city which the Government has failed to recognize.

Certainly nothing depicts that better than the Government's attack on senior citizens by partially removing the full indexation that they thought was theirs. One of the measurements of a progressive, mature and compassionate country is to see how its society treats its senior citizens. Certainly, with the Budget proposal to deindex partially senior citizens old age pensions, we cannot say that we are as progressive and compassionate as we would like to believe.

However, the Government can vindicate itself and correct the wrong. In order to do so, the Prime Minister and the Government must understand the other city to which I have referred. It is one in which there are more poor than ever, more families in financial trouble and where the line-ups at the food bank and soup kitchens are increasing. It is a city in which there is an increasing need for shelters for the homeless and where thousands of young people have less opportunity to find their first jobs. It is a city where students cannot afford the tuition for their education and the unemployed cannot change their fate despite their efforts.

Ottawa may well be the shining city on the Hill and one may get a good view from 24 Sussex, but one cannot see from there the other city in which thousands of Canadians live. The Prime Minister must visit this other city to see the despair painted on people's faces. The concern of the unemployed worker in Sault Ste. Marie must become his concern. The problems facing the high school graduate who cannot afford to enroll at York University must become his problem. The struggle of an elderly disabled person in Sarnia must become his struggle. The future of a woman in Hamilton striving to find her rightful place in the work world must become his future. Our failure to have compassion and understanding for these dilemmas facing Canadians will be our misgiving and a failure of our country to react to a situation that needs attention.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Are there questions or comments? Resuming debate.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to Bill C-51 with decidedly mixed feelings. No one would question the need for borrowing authority in present circumstances. However, the extent of the borrowing authority can be criticized, and in that respect I want to explore that situation in the time available to me this morning.

The Bill seeks to authorize the borrowing of $18.2 billion, only $16 billion of which is money that is directly required for this year. The other $2.2 billion is designed to cover borrowing that was made necessary last winter because of the actions of the Liberal majority in the Senate.

My colleagues and I are justly critical of the need for that borrowing to cover action under Section 39 of the Financial Administration Act. If we had no Senate there would not have been a need for that part of the borrowing authority that we are debating and eventually voting on.

However, I believe there are deeper reasons for being critical of the Bill before us. It is, in a sense, dealing with the bottom line in the country's accounts, in the Government's financial operations. It is here that decisions on taxation and expenditure come out. It is here that one has to provide the funds required to make up the shortfall in taxation which will be required if the Government is to carry on operations for the coming year.

I want to consider both the possibility that sounder fiscal policies on the taxation side would have made necessary a smaller borrowing and, without meaning to contradict that conclusion, to consider the possibility that the kinds of development policies Canada needs in the present depressed circumstances might well call for larger borrowings than the Government is in fact undertaking. Before beginning that explanation, I might note that the borrowing authority Bill has been brought in properly, as we had arranged in December that it should be, at a time when the Government was considering a very large Bill covering this year in quite an inappropriate way. Our opposition persuaded the Government to break down the matter into other Bills. Within days after the Budget had been brought down in the House on May 23, on May 28, the Bill came before us for first reading. That appropriate action is one I want to recognize.

In considering the weaknesses of the Budget on the taxation side, I should like to indicate the first aspect of weakness which concerns me in this borrowing authority consideration and to compare this Budget with Budgets of recent years and with Budgets of the early 1930s when another Conservative Government had to deal with the problems of Depression and did so in many ways by actions which are quite similar to the ones this Government has undertaken in 1984-85. Of course, at that time revenues fell off sharply. The Customs Tariff was a much larger part of the basis of income for Government. Obviously that would fall off as trade values decreased and trade declined. Revenues fell off in sales tax and excise taxes, with only income tax seeming to be a sound basis for the Government to predict what its revenues would actually be.

In those days, Finance Ministers were as determined to balance the Budget as is the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). Of course it was not possible to take in enough in taxation to cover the relief costs and certain public works expenditures, which somewhat compensated for declining private sector activity. However, certainly every attempt was made to try to cover the costs of the ordinary operations of Government.

I have just referred to some public works expenditures. At the beginning of that Government's administration there was a good deal of public works authorization, but that fell off very rapidly. By 1932 and 1933, the Bennett Government was behaving very much the way the present Government is behaving. It was involved in a decrease of public works activities and in an increase in various taxes. Interestingly enough, sales tax was put on ice-cream cones and other things back in 1932, in the same way the present Minister of Finance has decided to tax various confectionary and drugstore products. The refusal to make any significant change in the tax system in those days was very much like the determination of the present Minister of Finance to leave the basic structure of taxation unchanged. There was, interestingly enough, in the very first Budget brought down by R. B. Bennett as both Minister of Finance and Prime Minister, a rejoicing in foreign investment, specifically the American investment which had come into Canada in the first months after his Government took office. In fact, the Budget Speech contains a long list of enterprises, practically all of them in Ontario and Quebec, which presumably represented some triumph of Conservative policy as early as 1930-31. All of this was carried out in the context of what a Minister of Finance, looking back in 1933, characterized as being done against the backdrop of the dead hand of past lavish expenditures and borrowing, by Liberal Governments, of course. If that kind of phrase does not evoke the spirit of the present Government's fiscal policy and attitude, I cannot imagine what would.

Perhaps the most striking contrast between the Budgets of those days and the Budget which we heard on May 23 of this year is the fact that the Government recognized that the wealthy should bear their fair share of the burden of government. Consequently, year by year, the income tax increased. It may astound my colleagues across the way to realize that by 1933 millionaires in Canada were paying income tax of more than 50 per cent. The actual tax bill for someone with $1 million of income in 1933-34 exceeded $500,000. That is the kind of taxation which allows a Government to try to cover the costs of its normal activities. It was of course not sufficient to cover the development needs the country had.

The Budget also talked about the irresponsible borrowing patterns of the past 10 years and excoriated the excesses of Liberal Governments in the past for their lavish expenditure and the consequent borrowing needs. The sad reality of this Budget, of course, is that the patterns it follows are so largely the budget patterns of years past, that is, the Liberal policy of trying to shift the burden of taxation to individuals and allowing all sorts of tax breaks to corporations. Those patterns are certainly followed in this Budget, excessively so on the individual's side. The hope that it will increase economic activity and lead to jobs is one which past Governments have expressed in a series of Budgets. The Budgets of Marc Lalonde and Allan MacEachen certainly expressed those hopes. The consequent failure of those hopes, the failure to move any closer to full employment, the run-up of large deficits and the resulting need to borrow are quite in keeping with what the present Government holds out to us. What we have then, surely, in this Budget is no departure from the past.

Conservative Members have moved to government benches and taken up Liberal ideas, which they of course evinced often enough when they were voting on Budgets in the past in support of a Liberal Government. One wonders, then, how we can break out of the situation we are in if then Liberal and now Conservative policies do not do it. I want to suggest that, on the one hand, there be a thorough reconsideration and reform of our taxation system. This would provide us with a basis for raising far more revenue and allow us to readjust the burden of taxation in such a way that we would give a strong and healthy stimulus to the economy which, accompanied by other policies, could ensure that Canadian citizens would be able to give that impetus to the private sector, the small and large businesses which the Government talks about so much. There, it seems to me, is the Budget's most overwhelming failure. I recognize deindexation as being a political blunder of the largest scale. The Government now realizes that as well.

The failure to deal with tax reform and in fact the rejection of any kind of massive tax reform by the Minister of Finance is far-reaching and touches the lives of all Canadians. The Budget in its fiscal projections recognizes that the revenues of the Government will come in the proportion of 45 cents from individual taxpayers and only 15 cents from corporations. The balance that prevailed within the last quarter century when corporations paid rather more to Ottawa than individuals has now shifted so far that individuals pay three times as much in taxation to Ottawa as corporations. When we recognize that there has been that kind of shift in the taxation system of the country, we can recognize the hand of excessive and outrageous taxation of individuals which leaves individuals unable to support fundamentally their households and therefore unable to produce the impetus that is required for a sound economy to develop in this country again.

The failure of the Conservative Government to make any progress in the taxation system by loading even more taxation on poor and middle-income Canadians while leaving the rich even less burdened with taxation creates the kind of imbalance in which the fiscal statements of the country become a means for enriching some and impoverishing others. It seems to me that that makes this a Government which speaks for the wealthy in a way that the voters across Canada did not foresee when they voted for Conservatives on September 4. It seems to me that that is a ticking time bomb that deserves to go off in Government ranks sooner rather than later.

That is the fiscal side of the borrowing coin. If the Government allows those billions of dollars of tax breaks and refuses to collect taxes, it will inevitably have to borrow. If Canadians were to realize the amount of money that has gone into businesses through tax breaks, the extent to which ordinary Canadians pay interest on the investment capital of companies rather than having them depend on the stock exchanges and brokerage houses on Bay Street, St. James Street and beyond, and that Liberals and Conservatives have burdened them with paying for the capital for business investment, we would see a revolt of the proportions at which senior citizens have only begun to hint. That, then, is one of the reasons for borrowing. It is sad to say that there has been no fundamental shift in the attitude of Conservative Members.

On the other side of the borrowing coin, there has been no real consideration of the development needs of this country. I feel for the Hon. Member for Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain (Mr. Hamilton), recognizing what he once did as a Member of the last successful Conservative Government of 1957 to 1963. At that time, national development programs of all sorts were developed. It was a Government of which Canadians could be proud because of its vision of what this country should be. For all of its failures, and some of those failures were failure to act on those national development programs, that Government had a vision for this country. These days, in the most despicable and contemptible way, we have a Government that hopes it can ride on the coat-tails of the American recovery which has been flagging these days, and that suggests that we will continue with the recession. We have a Government which thinks that foreign investors will save Canada. No Canadian can be proud of that. The Minister of "Regional Industrial Stagnation" takes pride in the Government's reduction of support for the shipbuilding industry. The day after the Budget was brought down, the shipbuilding industry was told that the subsidy program would be discontinued. That program has been important to the industry. The Government also cancelled the productivity improvement grant, which was about the only thing that was left for the shipbuilding industry, other than the tariff. A Minister of that sort does not deserve to be in a Canadian Government at a time of depression.

Canada has other needs. I would like to deal with the need for housing. We are falling further and further behind in the housing industry. Canada requires tens of thousands of housing units. I would suggest that the Government look at co-operative housing. That type of housing is the most efficient and socially sensible way of providing housing. It is a context in which people can establish the community and become involved in the committee and board structure. Canadians could begin to pull themselves together sufficiently enough to enter the job market. Co-operative housing suffered at the hands of the Liberal Government. So far it is not doing much better. However, I do not want to speak very severely to this issue because the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight) who is responsible for housing has a sensitivity for it. Will he be provided with the funds? Will the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation have the means to undertake the housing programs which Canada needs? It is not clear that it will have the funds. Fiscal measures such as the capital gains tax holiday are likely to increase the cost of land and housing. Therefore, CMHC policies which gear income to the market will be more difficult.

The Budget is designed to make things more difficult for the people of Thunder Bay. The waiting lists for housing are very long in Thunder Bay. The people of that community are seeking better and reasonably priced housing. We are not experiencing the general impetus that residential housing construction could provide from coast to coast. That would put people back to work, and it would produce a sound demand for small and large businesses.

The Government has failed to recognize the developing needs of Canada and to respond in an imaginative manner. The Minister of "Regional Industrial Stagnation" takes pride in packaging a variety of principles from years past in a document which requires agreement among all Governments. There may be something to be said for agreement on a statement of principles, not that there is anything remarkable about the details. Beyond that, will we have policy development which is applicable to industries and communities? Will there be financial assistance? Giving tax breaks is the easiest way to go. The distressing thing about tax breaks is that one does not have the means by which to assess their effectiveness and to recognize the cost.

We will vote against the borrowing authority Bill for a variety of reasons. The Government needs borrowing authority because it has failed to tax properly. The Government needs the money because it has failed to develop the kind of policies which Canada needs to get businesses moving and to get people back to work. The failures of the Government in its Budget are just as clear in the borrowing authority Bill as they are in various other areas.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Are there questions or comments?

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member referred to trade with the United States. Does the Hon. Member have any opinions regarding the recent protectionist tariff policy of the U.S. Government as it relates to Canadian products? I refer, Mr. Speaker, specifically to protectionist measures on hogs, lumber, footwear, raspberries and saltfish which, of course, affect the riding of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) just as much as they affect Newfoundland and all the Maritime Provinces. It is an absolutely outrageous protectionist tariff of 20 per cent on the export of these products into the United States from Newfoundland and from the north shore of Quebec. This tariff was imposed last Thursday evening. I am wondering whether the Hon. Member would have any thoughts on the subject as it relates to the policy of free trade which this Government announced. And is this really free trade when it is free for the Americans only but Canadians have to pay 20 cents on the dollar? Why is all of this happening now with the advent of this new Conservative Government?

• (1130)

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, that is a very good question. The desire of Canadians to have free trade with the United States is older than the Dominion of Canada. I think of a Conservative Minister of a little more than a hundred years ago who spoke in terms of reciprocity of trade or reciprocity of tariffs. The desire of Canadians and their Government to achieve freer trade agreements with the United States has usually been a desire which Americans have failed to entertain. I suppose the year 1911 would be the main exception when an American Congress and an American administration was suddenly ready for the negotiation of a freer trade agreement with Canada, a significant agreement, and the Canadian people turned it down at, we might remind ourselves, the behest of the Conservative Party of the day through an unholy alliance with nationalist interests in Quebec which were also fighting the Liberal Government's naval policy at the time. The desire to achieve freer trade arrangements with the United States, then, is an almost universal Canadian desire. In this century, of course, we have become concerned about maintaining economic activity in this country which has been built up at much cost and great pain because the Americans would not allow us to trade freely with themselves.

I think what the American Congress is doing these days in one area or another, Mr. Speaker, is demonstrating again the protectionist tendencies which have been so strong in that body time after time and term after term. We, for our part, can succeed only in minimizing the damage in one area or another. We have worked hard in the area of lumber exports to keep that particular trade open. That is one item in the Hon. Member's list which, I suppose, is directly relevant to northwestern Ontario. But it takes inordinate effort to achieve some opening in the American market for these products.

I am sorry to say that, aside from much determination and all the lobbying efforts we can make in Washington with Members of Congress, there is nothing more I can offer the Hon. Member whose constituents are now affected by a tariff on saltfish. We will have to work as hard as we can and remind the Americans of those freer trade traditions which they came to after the Second World War on which, I hope, enough of them still believe their prosperity after the Second World War was based. And we must maintain our pressure on them for freer trade.

Long ago we Canadians settled on reciprocity of tariffs because we could not get reciprocity of trade with the Americans. We should remind the Americans that we do not want to be driven to reciprocity of tariffs at a time when we have in fact been reducing our tariffs and opening our economy more and more to the rest of the world. We should press the United States not only to stop these attempts to put quotas, tariffs and other restrictions on Canadian natural products, a battle which takes us back at least to the 1840s or 1850s, but we should in fact press them in other ways to open the state economies and various industries to Canadian production. We must convince the United States to lessen those "Buy America" policies. We would like to be sure that as much as possible industries which produce, for example, rail rolling stock, city streetcars and subway systems, such as, for example, the CanCar rail plant in Thunder Bay, can produce these systems in our country and that we are not forced by other rules of the United States to manufacture them in the United States, therefore getting some of the earnings back to this country but not the employment which we need so desperately.

I am sorry I do not have any additional solutions at the moment for the Hon. Member except to say that we must press on and remind our friends in Government that the rhetoric we are hearing now will not in fact bring us anything without a great deal of hard work, and even the hard work may not do the job.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister of Canada met with the President of the United States at Quebec City. The Prime Minister at that time informed his constituents—because they were affected—of the pending tariffs which were to be imposed, the tariffs which were under consideration by, I think, the United States International Trade Commission at that time. Yet, in spite of the discussion of the Prime Minister with the President of the United States, which was verified by the Prime Minister publicly in responding to his constituents—and, of course, that matter affected my constituents and a lot of constituencies right throughout eastern Canada—and in spite of the intervention by the Prime Minister, last Thursday night the United States Government imposed that atrocious tariff. It appears that all the representations, which were supposedly to have been made by the Minister of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) together with the Prime Minister, have had no effect whatsoever on the imposition of these tariffs.

So I would like to ask the Hon. Member, in light of what he was saying, whether or not he believes that intervention at the policitical level has any effect at all on general U.S. trade policy as it relates to protectionist tariffs? Historically speaking, would he say, for example, that once that trend is in place, not even the politicians can stop it?

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend for another splendid question. What one can derive in the way of lessons from the experience of the late 1940s would suggest one particular word of wisdom for the Government in its present circumstances. I am saying that against the background which my friend has evoked of the summit of the Prime Minister with the President of the United States in which it was suggested that all sorts of good things will follow from the fine relations between the two countries. What Canadians so often forget—and I trust the Prime Minister knows better—is that the American constitution provides for a division of power in which the President has limited authority on many of these matters. He certainly faces the actions of a Congress made up of hundreds of Members representing their districts from coast to coast, and two Senators from every state, all of whom will go their own way. The President might conceivably have the best of intentions, but if those Congressmen do not agree with the decisions he has arrived at, he will not get anywhere.

I think of the late 1940s. The key point in the circumstances of 1947 through 1949 was that the dealings from executive to executive were not nearly as effective by themselves as the Government's holding out the prospect, or the fear, to the American administration and to Congress that the Canadian response in the way of trade restraints, which would be made necessary by our shortage of American dollars at the time, would have a very serious effect in one area or another of the United States. In each of those areas where a congressional district was involved there was a Congressman who was going to feel the direct impact of Canadian action.

The moral of the story is that a Government which can only see Americans as friends, instead of realizing the need to be businesslike and tough at times with them, will lose the opportunity to drive home to Americans that if they set out to hurt us, as happens in area after area, we may have to take action to hurt them in Michigan and other parts of the United States. I have yet to see that kind of toughness from this Government.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to join in the debate on Bill C-51, an Act to provide the Government with borrowing authority of $18 billion for the succeeding months and year. I am disappointed that there is no provision in Bill C-51 for the indexation of old age pensions next January 1.

Last weekend I had the opportunity to visit half a dozen communities in my constituency. In each community I was met by senior citizens who presented petitions to me to present to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government. A senior citizen couple, both receiving Old Age Security pensions, will have their purchasing power decreased by $200. By 1990 they will lose approximately $1,200 of purchasing power per couple.

While I was in my constituency I received petitions from senior citizens groups in Little Current, Gore Bay, and Silver Water on Manitoulin Island. As well, I received a petition from the Senior Citizens' Club 455 in Espanola with several hundred names on it. It calls upon the Government to reinstate full indexation of the old age pension. In Elliot Lake I was presented with a petition by the President of the Senior Citizens' Group, Mr. Laverdière. In each case the senior citizens groups make a very strong presentation for the Government to reinstate full indexation.

Perhaps the most poignant story was that of Mr. Ivan Bailey from Evansville who came to see me in my constituency clinic in Gore Bay. He told me of his situation, which I think is typical of so many senior citizen couples across the country. He told me that he was 76 years of age and that he and his family had been pioneers in western Manitoulin. His wife is partially disabled and he himself had a heart attack a couple of years ago. In spite of that, they are able to cope and live in their own home. He pointed out that they are very thrifty. For instance, he cuts his own wood and burns that rather than heating oil. They do not splurge in any way. He was simply asking why the Government is going to cut back on their old age pensions next January when they are struggling and working so hard to make it on their own.

I hope that the Government will amend Bill C-51 in Committee of the Whole and provide for full indexation of old age pensions. I think that is the only way in which the Government can correct the situation of the senior citizens of the country. It is not only senior citizens who are very concerned about the deindexation of old age pensions. People who are from 55 to 60 years of age, many of whom have taken early retirement and are counting on the old age pension in order to have a certain level of purchasing power, are concerned as well. If deindexation goes through, over a period of five years a couple will lose $1,200 of purchasing power. Over a period of 10 years they will lose $2,000 or even $2,400 per couple. Someone who has made retirement plans based on receiving benefits of a certain level will not have the expected purchasing power in four or five years when he or she does retire.

There is very great concern about the authenticity of the commitment of the Prime Minister. Last year he called the indexation of old age pensions a sacred trust, saying that he would maintain it fully. Now that is being taken away. We want the Prime Minister to keep his commitment. He has indicated that he is waffling. I know that he is getting a lot of pressure from his caucus. I do not think he should wait until after the adjournment of the House a week from Friday to make that commitment. Senior citizens are very concerned about this cut-back and he should make his announcement in the next few days. Senior citizens of my constituency are sending in petitions which will be presented in the House. We will be making the strongest possible arguments that indexation of old age pensions should be maintained.

When the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) was interviewed on CTV Question Period in April he indicated that he thought he could make cut-backs in a number of government programs and would not have to increase taxes. He seems to have changed his mind because many taxes will be increased for medium and low income families. This Budget does not provide much benefit for low income families. One of the concerns of senior citizens about the Budget is that at the same time as they will be losing $1.6 billion a year, a capital gains tax provision has been instituted which will cost the Government $1.25 billion per year within five years. If there must be a trade-off, surely senior citizens ought to be the beneficiaries rather than high income groups.

The Minister of Finance has indicated that he is not satisfied with the number of rich people in the country. Surely even the Minister of Finance would not wish to see people benefiting enriching themselves to the disadvantage of senior citizens. When this Bill goes to Committee of the Whole I hope the Government will back down on its plan to deindex old age pensions and reinstate the full benefits.

There are a number of other provisions of the Budget I want to mention because I believe that they all impact on this borrowing authority. Clearly, one sector which received no assistance from the Budget was the farming sector, except perhaps to help farmers get out of farming. Over the weekend, the Prime Minister said that his Budget was so popular that he thought he would be able to back down and give old age pensioners their full indexation. I hope he will do so very soon.

The budget provision of a capital gains tax exemption up to $500,000 allows those involved in agriculture to get out of farming. That was a commitment made by the Tories during the election campaign although their commitment was to provide full capital gains tax exemption.

The agricultural community is clearly dissatisfied with the federal Budget. For instance, the board of directors and county presidents of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture met in Toronto on June 6. Their resolution states:

> Whereas the federal Government has betrayed the farmers of Canada by presenting a Budget which totally ignored the results of its own consultative process and the commitments of the Government of Canada; and whereas the Government has not only ignored its own promises, it has ignored the legitimate needs of our farmers; therefore be it resolved that we are demanding that the Government live up to its own commitments made during and after the election campaign and that in order to get this message across to our Government, we recommend the following action—

They recommend that each MP from the Province of Ontario be petitioned by several members of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and that the Ontario Federation and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture hold an executive meeting on June 19 to form a national action plan to bring the frustration and disenchantment of the agricultural community over the Budget to the attention of the Government.

Clearly the Budget strikes out at Canadian agriculture. For instance, the Government will impose a 9 cent per gallon tax on gasoline and farm fuels early in September of this year. Out west, where agriculture and the use of fuels is a major industry, they are terming this the "harvest tax". It is a tax on western Canadian farmers' harvest, imposed by the Tory Government. This will cost several hundred dollars, and perhaps more, on very large farms. The tax will increase once again in January when the 1 per cent sales tax is imposed on agriculture and all commodities in the country.

Last fall, the Government flamboyantly boasted about how it would reduce the tax on farm fuels. In fact, it is reimposing that tax this September, early in the harvest season. It is interesting to note that the Government was considerate enough of the tourist industry not to impose that tax during July and August, but it had no reservations whatsoever about imposing it just as harvest begins. For that reason western farmers are calling it the harvest tax.

Not only will the 1 per cent sales tax increase tax on farm fuels on January 1, it will be imposed on other agricultural input costs and production costs. Furthermore, a massive tax has been imposed on our tobacco farmers who have been suffering from changes in the personal lifestyle throughout the country. The Minister talked about some accommodation in that respect but no backing down. The wine growers in the Niagara escarpment and other areas of the country have expressed their concern about the 2 per cent excise tax on alcoholic beverages. Clearly, the Budget practically ignores agriculture.

The Government said that it would clarify Section 31. In fact, it did not do that in the Budget and has taken no action, although a committee report recommended that the limit of deductibility for off-farm expenses be increased from $5,000 to $10,000. There was a commitment during the election campaign as well as a recommendation by the Finance Committee of the House to establish an agri-bond program providing money at 8 per cent interest. These would be long-term, low interest rates to assist some 39,000 farmers who are facing serious financial difficulty. There was no action on that agri-bond program.

Therefore, groups such as the Ontario Federation of Agriculture are planning an emergency meeting on June 19 to prepare a national action program to counter the lack of action by the federal Government in its Budget.

The Prime Minister stated at the First Ministers' meeting on the economy in Regina that no one has increased productivity and assisted the country more than agriculture in the past several years. People like Harry Pelissero, President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, are now calling on the Prime Minister to explain why that sector is not recognized in the Budget if it has made such a great contribution to our economy.

One of the few areas singled out for cut-backs by the Nielsen committee is agriculture. Some $50 million a year will be cut from the Department of Agriculture. Although a number of programs will be severely cut back by the Government, it does not make it clear which ones. However, it is clear that the cut-backs will be $50 million this year, $50 million next year and $50 million the year after that.

The budget documents refer to programs like the dairy support program, agricultural commodity transportation and crop insurance as being subject to cut-backs. While it has not been made clear what will be cut back, we know that the Department of Agriculture is facing those cut-backs.

All of this is taking place when agriculture is under attack from beyond our borders as a result of the bungling of the Government. Last week, for instance, the United States Government imposed an even larger countervail duty of 5.5 cents a pound on our hogs and pork products going into the United States. That is a very substantial increase which will cost the hog producers of this country very dearly.

The Prime Minister met with the President of the United States in Quebec City. They were to solve all these problems in terms of trade with the United States. Clearly, these problems have been exacerbated in every realm. Whether it is steel, raspberries, pork or fish, our entire trade system with the United States, at a time when the Prime Minister talks extensively about improving trade relations, is incredibly worse. The support or bonus program on grain will drive down the international price of grains and have a devastating impact. Not only in North America, but in Europe and in other areas, the Government has clearly bungled our international trade relations. This is having a devastating impact upon our agricultural community, along with the lack of action in its Budget.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member. He talked about reductions in the agricultural sector. I should like to refer to a document which was tabled in the House recently. It is entitled New Management Initiatives, and it contains the initial results from the Ministerial Task Force on Program Review. In the sections under agriculture we find some very interesting words. It talks about improving and the targeting of scientific research and development. In part it reads:

> The Department will eliminate, or obtain full outside client funding for identified current low priority research.

Then under the section entitled Limit Freight Subsidy, it reads:

> The Government will propose changes to limit future expenditures to current levels.

The next section is entitled Study Feed Freight Assistance, which in part reads:

> —feed freight assistance will be examined for consistency with the commodity development strategies for feed grains and livestock.

Other sections are entitled Recover Costs for Grain Commission Services and Harmonize Production Development Assistance. They contain some very interesting words, such as the following ones:

> Provincial Governments also provide assistance for various such groups.

Then under the section entitled Inspection and Regulation Programs, it says:

> —the Government will consult with provincial Governments to determine areas in which federal-provincial duplication can be eliminated—

Does the Hon. Member have any opinion as to the assumptions in this document that the Government will harmonize, regulate, recover costs, limit, study and improve targeting? When we really get into the document, it talks about cuts which will come in the agricultural sector. Is there really that much duplication by provincial Governments? Is it correct, as the document assumes, that the agricultural sector is receiving so much money from provincial Governments and from the federal Government that we can do away with, as indicated in the document, duplication of these programs? Is the agricultural sector really receiving that much money? Is it possible for the federal Government to eliminate programs and to retarget programs, which will automatically be replaced by existing provincial programs?

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, the Hon Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) raised a very important matter. I appreciate his question. He drew some similarities between the problems of fishermen in Atlantic Canada and the problems of farmers. Clearly there are some comparisons which can be made.

I should like to look at the quotas and countervail duties which have been imposed by the United States. In fact, last week it imposed a duty on fish from Atlantic Canada of approximately 20 per cent, while at the same time it imposed a countervail duty on our hogs of some 5.5 cents per pound. This is having a devastating impact on the price of hogs and has had such an impact since April 1 when the United States imposed it. We certainly see the similarity. There is sort of similarity in the approach of the United States, despite the comments of the Prime Minister about how he will improve trade relations.

I cannot remember, in the 17 years I have been a Member of Parliament, so many duties, countervails and threats of countervails being imposed. They are all on our primary producers who are already faced with very low commodity prices, for example, fish, agricultural products and softwood lumber. I do not believe anyone in the House will remember such massive countervails and quota plans between Canada and the United States in the past. It is clear that the Government is messing up our entire relationship in terms of those products, all of which have been in very low price positions for the last while.

With regard to the Hon. Member's question concerning duplication of federal and provincial government programs, I doubt that there is that much duplication. For instance, if we look at crop insurance, the federal Government has put up half the premiums and the producers have put up the other half. In most cases the provincial Governments have administered the crop insurance program. It has been a very beneficial program. The Minister runs around the country proclaiming what he has done for farmers since last September 4. One figure he quotes is something like $530 million which has been paid out in crop insurance. That is an insurance program which the former Liberal Government put in place, into which producers pay. As well, the federal Government pays into a fund and the provincial Governments administer the program at a relatively small cost compared with the cost of the premiums for the program. If the Government is proposing that provincial Governments, as I understand it is doing, will put up a third of the cost, similar to the proposed tripartite red meat stabilization program, I think it will find a very cool reception. The reception on the part of provincial Governments having to put up as much as the federal Government will be about as cool as the reception of the deindexation of old age pensions on the part of Atlantic Premiers, all of whom are Conservatives. I do not think many provincial Governments are prepared to put up that additional money for the crop insurance program.

With regard to research and so on, it seems to me that the money spent on research and on developing new varieties of grain, fruit and vegetables, is really a reach toward the future. If we develop a grain which is more hardy or more resistant to disease or will produce greater yields by 5 per cent or 10 per cent, that is the price we pay to be successful five, ten or fifteen years down the road.

In the tripartite red meat stabilization hearings, we heard that provincial Governments in the Maritime Provinces really wanted to see feed freight assistance provided, whether it was provided through the stabilization program or through a direct feed freight assistance program. I do not think they want to see the Government cutting back on it. It seems to me that the Government should be providing a feed freight assistance program, while at the same time doing the necessary research and development to make Atlantic Canada self-sufficient in grain so that hog and beef production can continue there, even though in the initial drafting of the tripartite red meat stabilization program they may not be qualified.

So I think the Hon. Member has raised some very important points concerning the Government's attitude towards management, where it essentially wants to cut back on programs like agricultural assistance, feed freight assistance, grain inspection and crop insurance.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I am very interested in participating in this debate this morning and I want to get very quickly to the heart of my remarks because they relate to a very serious situation which has developed in my constituency. Usually I do not use the 20 minutes allotted to me to make a speech in this Chamber to speak on a local issue, but the subject of my speech today is a very serious one and it relates to job creation and the possible collapse of a major and historic industry, the former Cockshutt Plow Company, now called White Farm Equipment Canada Ltd. This firm goes back to the 1870s, so it is really a historic company with regard to the production of agricultural implements.

Bill C-51 is an Act to provide borrowing authority, and certainly there is nothing new or revolutionary about it. Usually Members of Parliament do not question the amounts of money involved because we all know that, particularly these days, it takes a lot of money to run a country. Governments run out of funds and they have to seek authority from this Chamber, Parliament, in order to borrow funds to keep payments going. However, we do use a Bill such as C-51 to question the Government's wisdom in spending that borrowed money. From time to time we put forward suggestions as to how we on this side of the House think the money should be spent. For example, in my opinion very often public funds are spent frivolously by this Government, and this is true of other Governments in the past.

We have the wife of the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who has, so I understand, a spanking new office in the Langevin Building, and I question whether or not the taxpayers of this country should be paying for the operation of that office. It is my right to question that, and I do not know whether the money should be spent in that way. This certainly should be examined very thoroughly. Something else which might strike one as being very trivial but nonetheless symbolically important is whether public funds, even a few dollars, should be spent on a new presidential style podium for our present Prime Minister bearing a coat of arms not of a political Party, not of an office, but one that is symbolic or emblematic of our country. It is not a symbol of office, it is an emblem of Canada. If any person in this country should have the right to use that emblem, it is not the Prime Minister, it is the Governor General. I question the propriety of that use. In the former Prime Minister's household we used to question whether or not the taxpayers should pick up the tab for his and his family's food, and for the nanny or nannies, present and past. These are probably nit-picking examples but symbolically they represent our concern on this side of the House as to how this borrowed money is spent from time to time.

Miss MacDonald: As well as on a car and chauffeur for the Leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent).

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): We could, on the other hand, spend borrowed money to maintain pensions at a respectable level for seniors who built this country. We have gone into great detail on that issue on both sides of this House over the last few weeks. We could also borrow money to help keep Canadians from falling further and further into poverty. We could borrow funds to help preserve the quality and way of life for many other Canadians. We could use borrowed money to create meaningful jobs.

I have a modest proposal for the use of some of the borrowed money and, as I said at the outset, it has to do with a very serious financial and industrial problem in my constituency of Brant. This Government could offer to guarantee loans to White Farm Equipment Canada Ltd. in order to keep it from going under, thereby putting about 600 human beings out of work and on unemployment insurance. It would also take with it other smaller industries and suppliers, along with their employees, to say nothing of the hundreds of employees in the dealer network across the country. So we are talking about a very, very serious situation, one which I have raised on a number of occasions in the House and privately with the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens). I must say that he has been very accommodating and very positive, but so far no action has been taken. This would not cost the taxpayers one cent. Granted, the agricultural implement industry is going through tough marketing times. Harvesters or combines are certainly not in any great demand and the market is depressed. As my hon. friend from Algoma was saying a few moments ago, one reason for this is the deplorable state of finances in which our farmers find themselves at this time. The last Budget certainly did nothing to help that situation. Indeed, as the Hon. Member and others have pointed out, all that that Budget did was to make it easier for farmers to quit, give up and sell out. Well, that is a hell of a way to try to keep a basic major industry going in this country. What is happening to White Farm is the industrial spinoff from that kind of policy.

When I say this will not cost the taxpayers a cent of this borrowed money, I mean it. The money would only be in the form of a loan guarantee to tide this company over for a year, possibly two years, until, hopefully, the western agricultural market picks up, as well as that of central Canada. I call upon the Minister, then, to show some entrepreneurial spirit on the part of his Government and take a risk, as the former Government did. I would point out that as a result of the 1983 bail-out, so called, White Farm not only continued in production for two more years, but it increased its share of the Canadian combine market from 7 per cent to 22 per cent. The company is doing very nicely with a new Canadian owner, a president who is on the job in Brantford every day at his office, with a Canadian management team and a state of the art R and D facility, which was paid for in part by taxpayers' money over the years. The rug was pulled out from under the company, not because it was mismanaged or the market disappeared, but because of a foreign finance company, Borg-Warner, which decided, legally and quite properly, that it no longer wanted to have any of its money invested in White Farm Equipment Canada Ltd. The rug was pulled out at the very worst time. We cannot say that it was unfair on the part of Borg-Warner to do so. I suppose from its point of view, it was just good business. However, it dumped the whole financial problem back in the lap of White Farm Equipment of Canada.

For the first time in years, the profits that were being made at the Brantford facility were staying in Brantford. In the 1970s, when White Motor of Cleveland owned it, the Brantford facility made profits at a time when the market was buoyant. However, where did the money go? It was sucked out of Brantford to Ohio year after year. That was one of the things that lead to the financial problems of White Farm Equipment. When the recession hit in the early 1980s, it had no reserve capital. Furthermore, after the Cockshutt family sold out to foreign interests, virtually nothing was done to improve the plant or facility. There were virtually no capital expenditures at all. The only thing that was improved upon, updated or upgraded was the R and D facility which produced the state of the art axial-flow combining technology, and that facility would not have been built had it not been for the Canadian and provincial Governments which turned over a great deal of money to get that project launched.

Last week we did away with FIRA and brought in Investment Canada. We told Americans to come to Canada to buy us out. I have just given a perfect example not of why we should keep foreign money out but of why we should keep a very tight rein on how foreign investment in this country is used. It must always be used for the benefit first of this country and second of the foreign country or corporation.

Brantford is facing a very tense situation this morning. The deadline of the receivers, Peat Marwick, was arrived at last Friday at twelve o'clock. To the best of my knowledge, it has not been legally extended as Peat Marwick did not advertise an extension. So far, no word has come from the office of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion regarding an extension. We are hanging in the balance right now and are waiting with bated breath.

We do not know whether or not White Farm Equipment will be alive tomorrow or whether or not those 600 men and women who work in the plant and office will have jobs. We do not know whether or not the Government has the courage to put up a loan guarantee of some $30 million in risk capital to save those 600 jobs at the plant plus several hundred other jobs in the dealer distributorships and supplier industries, and indeed to save several of those supplier industries.

We are only asking for $30 million in loan guarantees to save White Farm Equipment. That is not a great deal of money. It equals the approximate cost of giving away capital gains tax exemptions to about 50 of the wealthy friends of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). That is really what $30 million amounts to. It would preserve a way of life that began when the Cockshutt Plow Company opened its doors in 1877. At that time, it became a world renowned harvester company and its products were extremely popular in the Canadian West for many generations.

The recent history of White Farm Equipment is one of ups and downs, lay-offs and recalls, recessions and depressions. We saw interest rates choking off sales in 1981. We saw the recession hit both the farm community and urban Canada in 1981, 1982 and 1983. Some parts of Canada are still suffering from that recession. As I said earlier, we saw the former American owners siphon off profits in good times and then shut the plant down in tough times. We saw the American owners sell out when the times became so bad and the future so grim that it was not worth keeping the company. However, no one in Brantford really ever believed that Cockshutt, or White Farm Equipment as it is called today, would ever really disappear. They believed that it would survive somehow.

White Farm Equipment was not a leach industry. In 1983, it went to the provincial Tory Government and the federal Liberal Government to ask for loan guarantees to keep it going. As I said a few moments ago, it increased its share of the Canadian combine market from 7 per cent to 22 per cent during the toughest years experienced on the farm front in recent history. White Farm Equipment proved that it can produce a state of the art harvester like the axial-flow combine. It was all set to produce a new, smaller version of the 9,700 class harvester that would be more economical to operate and would sell at a lower price when Borg-Warner in the United States pulled the plug. Unfortunately, that could not have come at a worse time.

What can be done to rectify the situation? I suppose that what I am pleading for this morning is for the Minister to announce sometime today that there will be a loan guarantee forthcoming to White Farm Equipment because times are going to improve on the farm front. If they do not improve, we are going to go right out of the agricultural business altogether. If times get any worse, it will be the end of the agricultural sector, we will end up importing almost all our food and we will be paying world prices.

I think the Government had better put aside its ideologies for the time being and realize that there are some sectors in the Canadian economy in which the private enterprise system simply does not function at 100 per cent efficiency and cannot do so for a number of natural and normal reasons, perhaps unlike private enterprise in the United States. If the farm community needs assistance at this time, surely this is not the time to reduce aid to farmers by $50 million per year, but it is the time to increase aid to those who are just on the brink of going under.

In the newspaper, I read the other day that net farm incomes are supposedly up by 30 per cent this year. I cannot for the life of me understand that figure. My riding is often referred to as an urban riding, but it includes the entire county of Brant. Some of the best farmers and some of the ones that were the most prosperous in the past live in Brant, and are still trying to hold on. Last week I spoke to some of those farmers. They were even more shocked than I was to read in the paper that net farm incomes were up by 30 per cent. Everyone to whom I spoke had a net farm income that was down.

As I said this morning, the Government, through its Budget, proposes to make it easier and financially more inviting for established farmers to sell and get out of the farm business. That will certainly not help the agricultural implement industry and it will certainly not help a community like Brantford, a community which has already been sorely hit by the recession of the early 1980s.

The community of Brantford is slowly climbing back to a better employment figure. There is still an unemployment rate of about 14 per cent in the City of Brantford. Even with the Summer Works Program, it will still be a very serious situation. Are we going to add another 600 and possibly another 200 unemployed to that list? I sincerely hope not.

What we are going to have to do is what the Government did in the case of Domtar. The Government is going to have to set aside its ideological strait-jacket for the moment and ask what is in the best interests of the public. It must ask itself what, apart from what is in the best interests of the company, is in the best interests of the public.

I urgently call upon the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, today, or at the earliest possible opportunity, to announce that the Government—as in the case of Domtar—will guarantee a loan of $30 million so that White Farm can continue until the market picks up, which should not be more than two or three years. The Conservative Government at Queens Park is prepared to give $10 million. There is private sector financing to the tune of approximately $5 million. However, another $30 million in loan guarantees is required.

I would also like to thank Members of Parliament of all Parties from southwestern Ontario who wrote letters of support, after receiving a letter from me which requested that support. I am not going to suggest what those Members recommended, but it was gratifying to know that they too are interested in maintaining those jobs.

I hope the Minister will consider every avenue and come forward today or tomorrow with a positive statement which will keep those 600 families out of poverty and put them back to work.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): There being no questions or comments, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) on debate.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, in order that I maintain the rules of relevancy, I will preface my remarks by saying that there is absolutely nothing in the Borrowing Authority Bill of $18 billion which will solve the problems that were created in the Budget which was tabled on May 23 by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

In the last six or seven days I have had the opportunity to travel widely throughout western Canada and parts of Ontario to ascertain firsthand the reaction of a number of groups in our society who have been affected adversely by the Budget. I was absolutely astonished to realize how little support the Government has for some of the measures in the Budget. I am surprised that members of the Conservative Party have been so silent throughout the debate which has taken place during the last two or three weeks in the House. I must admit, there are some rather courageous Conservative back-benchers who have had the conviction to stand and ask the Minister of Finance to reverse himself on some of the very unpopular measures which are in the Budget.

In addition, I note with some surprise, and I suppose with some contentment, that as a result of the Budget, the Conservative Party was forced to hold a special caucus in Ottawa this past weekend. Of course, I did not have the privilege to enter that room. Frankly, after witnessing the way in which the Conservative Party's blueprint for economic renewal was delivered on May 23, I can say that under no circumstances would any opposition Member even contemplate the idea of agreeing with it. I hope that the Members who attended the special caucus meeting at least had the courage to indicate their constituents' response and to give, firsthand, their opinions on the ridiculous and unfair deindexation proposal which was made by the Minister of Finance. I am sure, within the confines of those four walls, that both the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) learned that there are the makings of a taxpayers' revolt against some of the measures in the Budget.

I see that the Hon. Member for Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn) is in the House. I visited Saskatoon last week and met with hundreds of concerned senior citizens. They are concerned about the impact of deindexation, not only on Old Age Security and the Guaranteed Income Supplement, but also about what will be the future intent of the Government on issues which affect the elderly and those in our society who are below the age of 65, who will be affected adversely by deindexation. Those people have no common voice to speak for them. I know that the senior citizens in Saskatchewan who represent those groups have repeatedly asked for the presence of their Conservative Members of Parliament to explain and convince them of the fairness of that tax measure. I suspect the reason for which those people have not seen Conservative back-benchers or front-benchers is that those Members are afraid to face the people who will be affected adversely by the Budget.

Where in the Borrowing Authority Bill are the funds which will reverse some of the direction which was in the economic blueprint of May 23? I have called the Budget a reverse Robin Hood budget. Not only does it take from the poor to give to the rich, the Budget will make the rich richer and the poor poorer. Any Conservative Member of Parliament who can stand before his constituents and attempt to justify the Budget as being fair and compassionate will require a good speech writer.

It took approximately two weeks for the full impact of the measures to be understood by Canadians. They are now very much aware of exactly what is the full intent of the Government with respect to deindexation, not only as it pertains to senior citizens, but as it pertains to personal exemptions and the effect which that will have on middle-income Canadians.

Canadians will no longer be fooled by the rhetoric which was heard during the 10 day debate on the Budget. In those 10 days I heard Minister after Minister tell the House that they had the support of the senior citizen of Canada for the deindexation proposal. The Minister of Finance indicated that old people had said they were pleased that the Government had brought in deindexation. He said they were willing to do their bit to ensure that the federal deficit is reduced. They did not mind that the Government was taking $50 a month away from them and giving $2 billion in tax cuts to the multinationals. The Minister of Finance said that the senior citizens did not mind the fact that the rich would get richer. He said the senior citizens felt that it was their sincere pleasure, as people who live close to the poverty line, to ensure that the acute shortage of rich in Canada would be remedied by the Budget. He said they felt happy that they would make the rich today even richer, because they know what the rich can do for Canada.

I listened to the rationale behind the moves of the Government to increase the capital gains exemption to $500,000. In essence, the Government is taking money away from middle-income Canadians and the people who live close to the poverty line and it is adding $125,000 to the pockets of the rich people of the country. I am sure there is some support. However, I would have to stretch my imagination to contemplate which two Canadians might agree with the proposal. We now recognize the facts. The Government has no support for the measures which will take away from the poor and give to the rich. That is the reality.

I defy any Conservative back-bencher who has been back to his riding during the last 10 days to rise in his place and give me the names of the people and groups in this country who support these tax measures. I believe there are some rather compassionate Conservative Members of Parliament who are silent in the confines of this chamber, who have a great deal of concern about those people in our society who are below the age of 65. I am speaking about the widows in our constituencies who are between the ages of 60 and 64 years and whom you and I both know, Mr. Speaker, represent true hardship cases because there is no support system within our Governments, either provincial or federal, which represents their interests.

One thing I have learned in the last two weeks is that the New Horizons program which we instituted some six years or seven years ago was instrumental in creating a number of senior citizen groups and infrastructures across this country. It has allowed the senior citizens to form groups which can speak with one voice in representing their interests. However, there is another group in our society which will be just as adversely impacted by this Budget but which does not have the infrastructure or the organizations to speak for it. There is no voice for the poor in our society who are below the age of 65 but whose needs are just as crucial. I can report to you, Mr. Speaker, that in my travels across the country last week, I found that every one of those senior citizen groups I spoke with in order to solicit their views on the Budget indicated to me that they are prepared to take up the challenge for those people under the age of 65 years who are going to be just as adversely impacted by this Budget. Thank heavens there are people in this society who have some compassion and some sense of justice.

When the Minister of Finance indicates he is prepared to have the burden of the deficit reduction taken out on the backs of the poor, it seems to me that the Conservative Party has a warped sense of justice. Now I understand why it was required in the Budget speech to put in the word "fair" 26 times. Members of the Conservative Party had to first convince themselves that the Budget was fair before they attempted to do their sales job on the people across this country. We as an Opposition Party have indicated that there is no support for the move of deindexation, the federal excise tax changes and gasoline tax increases. I would like to focus for one or two moments, Mr. Speaker, on these particular areas. We have had the impact of those taxes pushed through a computer model, just as the Minister of Finance had the opportunity to do before he put his budget to the Canadian public. I am sure that the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister of this country knew, when that Budget was tabled on the night of May 23, that as a result of deindexation, the increased federal excise tax and gasoline tax, another three-quarters of a million Canadians who are presently living just above the poverty line were going to be pushed below it over the next five years. Those figures have now been confirmed by the Canadian Council on Social Development.

When I put these questions to the Minister of Finance some 10 days ago, he had no quarrel with the numbers I presented to him. We see four or five days later in a report by Canadian Press that in fact, the Minister of Finance was aware. He had economic econometric models done which indicated that in fact three-quarters of a million additional Canadians would be pushed below the poverty line as a result of his budgetary measures.

I recognize that in the last 10 days we as an Opposition Party and the media have primarily focused our attention on the impact of deindexation on senior citizens. In the days ahead we will still push the Minister of Finance to reverse himself on his decision. The fact is that of those 750,000 persons who are going to be pushed below the poverty line, 230,000 persons will be senior citizens. That leaves another 520,000 Canadians who are below the age of 65 who will experience the same loss of roughly 20 per cent purchasing power, which will force the poor in our country to be poorer by 20 per cent. I find it incredible that the Conservative backbenchers have not risen in this House of Commons and asked their own government front-bench to reverse itself on these issues which are affecting their constituents.

Surely you will understand, Mr. Speaker, because you come from the Province of Quebec, that there have been fluctuations in the unemployment rate there. There is not one Member of Parliament in this House of Commons who has a monopoly on poor people. There is not one Member of Parliament in this House who has a monopoly on senior citizens. In every one of our constituencies there are senior citizens who have been adversely impacted by this Budget. There are people in our constituencies who are poor by anyone's definition of poverty, including Statistics Canada. We all have those kinds of constituents in our ridings.

I feel very strongly, Mr. Speaker, that it is our duty as Members of Parliament to come to this forum and place before the front-bench opposite these questions so that people can fully understand the need for reversal of many parts of this Budget.

We are witnessing the anger of senior citizens toward the Government on these measures and, quite frankly, what I believe to be the snowballing effect of this anger so that the Government will have to reverse itself on the issues which affect senior citizens. Once that has been accomplished, whether that takes the next two weeks before the summer break or whether the Prime Minister will wait all summer to reverse himself, therefore bringing more political damage to the Conservative Party, there are still a number of other issues.

This is not a one-issue Budget. There is a smorgasbord of questions which have yet to be asked so that we can properly focus the attention of the Canadian public on the need for reversal in a number of other areas in the Budget. I really wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the intent of the Government is to arouse the Canadian taxpayers and make them so angry that there will be in essence a Canadian taxpayer revolt and a re-enactment of the Boston Tea Party. Is that the hidden agenda of the Conservative Party? If that is what it is waiting for, believe me it is going to come. If the Conservative Party believes that this issue is going to go away quietly over the summer, it is dead wrong. I can only say that in terms of philosophy, in terms of my sense of justice and compassion, this Government deserves to have the political fall-out and loss which will result from a Budget which creates wealth beyond comprehension for the select few. These capital gains provisions are going to cost the Canadian taxpayer more than all of the indexation which will affect the poor.

Mr. Fennell: That is inaccurate.

Mr. Frith: The number I have is $1.6 billion. I could stand corrected on that, and I will verify it in the national accounts component, but let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, if there is a thought in this country that we do not already have enough concentration of rich, one might want to read some of the articles in the Financial Post and in the Globe and Mail business section, which indicate that nine Canadian families in this country control 46 per cent of the share wealth of the stocks in the Toronto Stock Exchange. Are we supposed to worry about those people? It is a travesty of justice to make those nine families even richer than they are by taking the money from the poor who live in every one of our ridings across this country.

I was asked to check my figure and I stand to be corrected, Mr. Speaker. The capital gains tax provision will cost the Canadian taxpayer $1.25 billion—

Mr. Fennell: That is not accurate.

Mr. Frith: —over the next five years, and the deindexation of the senior citizens is going to cost in the neighbourhood of $1.6 billion. So, I do stand corrected.

However, I would indicate one other thing for the Hon. Member for Ontario. In the quest for justice in the country and the pursuit of happiness for the multinationals, the Minister of Finance has managed, through the Western Accord, to give the multinationals of the country $2.4 billion.

What Party which has a sense of the mood of the Canadian public would have the courage to introduce budgetary measures which would put $2.4 billion into the hands of the multinationals while taking equivalent amounts from the hands of the poor? It is impossible to believe that. That is what leads me to believe that the Government will have to reverse itself in these areas of very complex taxation. If I am not mistaken, four Conservative Members of Parliament have had the courage to stand up during Question Period and publicly disavow themselves from the measures put forward by their own Finance Minister. I give them credit.

However, I forecast that unless the Government decides to reverse itself on the issue of deindexation between now and June 28 when we rise for the summer break, the momentum created as a result of this Government decision will not die out. There will be a unification of 2.3 million Canadian seniors, the like of which has never been witnessed before. The demographic trends in our society indicate that the population over the age of 65 will be doubled in the next 20 years. I predict that that generation will become political activists in a sense that the Prime Minister never envisaged when the Budget was introduced. That will be a very positive thing. A political force has been created in this country which will be reckoned with for decades to come.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I appreciated very much some of the comments made by the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith). However, there seems to be a state of selective amnesia among members of the Liberal Party with regard to the issue of deindexation of old age pensions.

The Conservatives have taken a measure which we find objectionable and which 2.5 million senior citizens find extremely intolerable. Their view has been echoed by children, grandchildren, and entire communities. On Friday night the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) was asked to defend this position in front of 1,000 women at the National Arts Centre. Never have I seen a Cabinet Minister as incoherent and incapable of defending an item of Government policy. She had just told the meeting that she herself had been very closely involved in the preparation of the Budget. If the junior Minister of Finance is not even prepared to defend this particular measure, it is obviously time for it to go.

I believe there were 130 or 150 Liberals sitting on that side of the House of Commons when Old Age Security was cut back by 5 or 6 per cent as a consequence of the six and five program. That was as cruel a blow to senior citizens in those days as what the Government is doing to senior citizens today. I question why the Liberals can be a bit sanctimonious now. They are getting up to condemn what those who were in Government refused to say a word about at the time of the six and five program. Perhaps the Hon. Member could explain what has changed now, apart from the fact that he is in Opposition, to put him on the side of senior citizens today when he was not on their side two and a half or three years ago and did not at that time publicly break rank with the Government as he is urging Conservative Members of Parliament to do today.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, talk about a selective memory process. I will tell you the difference between Liberal compassion and Tory compassion. Under Liberal compassion, every person who lived below the poverty line or was on a Guaranteed Income Supplement received full indexation against the cost of living. It was as a result of the six and five program that we were able to break the psychological inflation barrier of double digit inflation. Does the Member really believe that today's inflation rate of less than 4 per cent came about as a result of Conservative economic policy instituted last fall? That began when the Liberal Government had the courage to witness the ravages of inflation on everyone in our society. We took a common front position.

Members of the Government front-bench who are now trying to defend their deindexation proposals should read in Hansard some of the comments they made at that time. How can they justify the fact that in their Budget of May 23 they did not have the decency to protect those who need help and protection in our society? There is not one iota of support for them. Their attitude is to let them eat cake and share in the burden of deficit reduction.

The Liberals did not do that. I am proud to be a Liberal because the Liberal Party understood what it was to be poor and underprivileged in our society, living below the poverty line as defined by Statistics Canada. Having understood what it was to be in those economic conditions, we fully protected those people in our society against the full CPI index.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate on the Borrowing Authority Bill. I intend to make a speech about jobs; not possible jobs, nor jobs at some undefined date in the future, but real jobs now to help alleviate the suffering that is faced every day by the unemployed in the country.

This speech is also about fairness; not the kind of Tory fairness that gives pensioners and the poor tax increases while the wealthy get more handouts, but real fairness which ensures that all Canadians contribute according to their ability, real fairness that does not benefit one Canadian at the expense of another.

This is also a speech about justice. It is not about Tory justice which can ignore line-ups at food banks or tell a miner in Atikokan who has not worked since the mines closed five years ago that he will have to wait for the private sector to find a job, but real justice which puts the welfare of people before the welfare of capital. It is about justice which realizes that we must stimulate job creation in the private sector, but also realizes that we must move immediately to create employment directly in order to ease the pain of poverty. As well, we must put an end to line-ups at food banks and restore dignity and hope to the 1.5 million Canadians who have been betrayed and ignored by the Conservative Government.

The Government had an option to say that it would live up to its election promises and the commitments it made to the unemployed, seniors, native people, young people, and women. Instead, it chose to wash its hands of its responsibilities and the trust placed in it. It says that job creation is up to the private sector.

We have seen great evidence of the trust that was placed in the Conservative Party last September 4. It is exemplified by headlines such as one appearing in the Thunder Bay Chronicle-Journal of Thursday, June 13, 1985, which reads, "Tories Robbing Poor", and one of June 10 which reads, "No Support for Deindexing". There is clearly a great movement in Canada. That is one thing I will give the Conservatives credit for. They have given senior citizens across the land the reason they have been looking for to unite, mobilize, and create a force which we have never seen before in the country and which will be around for a long time.

Something I learned as a community worker many years ago is that if you want to build a cohesiveness and pull people together, then threaten their basic existence. Developers do it all the time with their zoning applications and it seems as though the Government has copied its corporate friends.

Not only senior citizens but other Canadians are very concerned about what the Government has proposed. One seniors group in Thunder Bay, the Sunshine Club, has begun writing letters to their MPs, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). About 1,000 seniors in 15 clubs in Thunder Bay will be asked next week to join in an organization to lobby the Government of Canada strenuously.

Some individuals are already speaking up. An acquaintance, George Andrew-Cotter, a former City of Thunder Bay worker, is quoted in the paper as saying that widows are the ones who will be affected most. Widows have no other incomes. If they worked, it was in private homes or on farms. They have no other pension. He said that deindexation will hurt, not help the economy. Most of these people on Old Age Security spend all their pensions, and to reduce it reduces the amount of money going back into the economy. He said, "there must be other ways of reducing the debt load without jumping on us seniors".

In Thunder Bay in 1981 there were approximately 11,327 people receiving government retirement income. About half of them received only the Old Age Security and the other half received Old Age Security and the Guaranteed Income Supplement. That is an indication of the size of the group we are talking about in Thunder Bay, with a population of 120,000, who are angry.

Last Wednesday when my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp) and I were travelling to our ridings to attend local functions, we discussed the growing movement in opposition to the government's Budget. We decided on Wednesday afternoon that we would give senior citizens in our ridings an opportunity to get together and express their frustration directly to us so that we could bring it back to the House and to the Conservative Party particularly.

I am pleased to announce that with 36 hours' notice, via the media, posters in buildings and by word of mouth, 225 senior citizens crammed into the Lakehead Labour Centre to voice their anger and outrage about what was contemplated to be done to them. They were not there just to talk; they were there to take action. They presented us with a number of petitions which, later today, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon and I will begin to introduce to the House.

They took more petitions to every corner of the community, to every senior citizens' building, to every church and corner store throughout Thunder Bay. Beginning today we will be presenting upwards of 1,500 signatures on petitions from all corners of northwestern Ontario; from Shebandowan, Kakabeka, Nolalu, Kaministikwia, Vickers Heights, Geraldton, Atikokan, Emo and Dryden. We will also be presenting petitions signed by delegates to the Manitoba-Northern Ontario District Command of the Royal Canadian Legion who held their annual conference in Thunder Bay last week. A number of them signed the petitions.

That organization also passed a resolution. They are representatives of the people who fought for freedom so that Canada could be the place it is today. They stated very clearly that they do not accept deindexation. We should remember that the Legion is an organization that tries to stay out of the political limelight. It wants to be seen as an organization serving its members. However, they recognize that in this instance they had to speak out because it is their members and their colleagues who are being affected by the Government's decision.

We also received a number of letters from individuals, a few of which I would like to read into the record. This is a letter from a retired businessperson in Thunder Bay, an individual who has been involved in the retail sector for some 30 years. He wrote to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp):

Dear Sir:

I confess I do not know whether to call you the "Right Honourable" or the "Honourable" Jake Epp, but since the budget was brought down, I assume it safe to omit the "Honourable" altogether.

You claim, sir, that we seniors support the budget. Here is one that does not. I contributed in my community as a small businessman and employer for 30 years. I asked no government aid in business or providing my family's education. I was the exemplary taxpayer.

Now, sir, I face a dilemma. Your government has thrown out RHOSP. You have all but deindexed our pensions. Somehow the $500,000 capital gains exemption does not fit in with my financial plans. But how can anyone plan a future if they cannot trust the government? There is one thing I can do.

I have always voted Conservative, no more. I have been betrayed. Please tell Mr. Mulroney that here in Thunder Bay we don't like broken promises. We won't be fooled by deep toned double talk and we don't support your "tricky dickie" budget.

Another young individual from Atikokan wrote:

I would like to say a few words about the Conservative's plan to deindex pensions. I think it stinks.

I find it hard to believe that they can justify hitting our senior citizens with backwards punitive cuts, saying that it is time that the seniors did their part to help the country's economy. It seems to me that they already have.

The citizens which the Conservatives have chosen to rob have suffered the hardships and deprivations of recessions and depression, have fought in world wars to keep Canada a free country, and have worked all their lives to build a better place to live.

It is especially galling to see this substantial slashing of Senior Citizen's incomes when the Conservatives have decided, in the same budget, not to initiate their promised tax on the rich who manage to get away without paying any income tax. We are told that this tax would be complex and must be studied. Obviously the Conservatives feel it is easier to withhold from the Senior Citizens their rightful pension payments than to tax rich big wheels who might make waves or perhaps (how cynical) withhold political contributions.

The third letter regarding this subject comes from a gentleman I know well from the village of Vickers Heights, which is part of Thunder Bay. He writes:

My wife and I must heartedly protest the latest round of cuts especially to seniors.

Mr. Wilson in his latest budget is totally unfair to us the seniors of this great country. With the rise in the cost of living being a constant threat to our way of life, we must be indexed to the full amount of the cost of living. You should come down to our level and find out that it is tougher each year.

Further:

The latest federal budget has been a rather tough one for us that are retired.

It is not only individuals who are responding to the grounds well but editorials as well. Lakehead Living, an award winning weekly in Ontario, wrote in an editorial this past week:

There is an ironic twist to the federal government's recent budget. The government has produced a budget which puts further hardship on senior citizens and has released it just a few days before the proclamation of a month devoted to saying "thank you" to our senior citizens.

If the partial deindexing of the Canada Pension Plan was not such a blow to the income of our senior citizens the timing of the release of the budget, so close to Senior Citizen's month, would be laughable.

However, the deindexing of the pension system is a serious matter and is one that will take hundreds of dollars away from our seniors each year. That is money they cannot afford to lose.

Finance minister Michael Wilson's statement that seniors must share their portion of bringing down the national deficit is an insult to our elderly. Many of our senior citizens have already gone through one recession in the 1930's and have "shared" the burden of putting that economy on its feet. Mr. Wilson is very mistaken when he says seniors support his new budget. Opposition to deindexing is quickly gaining momentum among seniors across the country.

The Conservative government has awakened a potent political force in our senior citizens and if they are not careful they may pay for it in future elections.

Some would suggest that these are New Democratic senior citizens or that, heaven forbid, Lakehead Living is a New Democratic front. This is an issue which has stretched across all party lines.

• (1310)

In the public meeting which the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon and I held on Friday, we heard clear representations from every political party in the House and in the electoral system of Canada. I draw the attention of back-bench Members of the Conservative Party to the fact that they should not be afraid; they are not alone if they object to deindexation. For example, the Provincial Member for Fort William, a gentleman who took my place in the Ontario Legislature some eight years ago, attended our meeting to support senior citizens, wrote a letter to the Minister of Finance and ran a newspaper ad in the Thunder Bay newspapers which read: "Support Senior Citizens—Protest Deindexation of Old Age Pensions", in which he indicated that he strongly protested the deindexation of old age pensions and urged the federal Government to reconsider. He invited the constituents of Fort William and Port Arthur to write to him and that in turn he would forward them to the Minister of Finance, to let him know that not only New Democrats and Liberals but Conservatives objected to deindexation, this attack on our senior citizens.

The Government has awakened a giant, and it will regret it, not just today, not just tomorrow. Senior citizens, those who voted Conservative last September, did so with some unease. On one hand, they voted to get rid of the Liberal regime with which they were fed up. We can understand that. In many cases they went to the Conservatives because in those ridings they tended to be number two and they saw it as a way to get rid of the then Government. However, on the other hand, in the back of their minds they were thinking about other years and other Conservative Governments under which they had suffered; they suffered through four years and quickly turfed them out. The Government has rekindled that fear. It has confirmed their worst fears. I can assure the Government that they will not forget three years or four years from now.

Before turning to other aspects of the Budget, I want to wind up my comments on deindexation with an appeal. This is an appeal which I made to senior citizens in Thunder Bay on Friday when we talked about how one can get one's word to Ottawa, not only through petitions but by writing letters. I told them that their letters did not have to be long ones, that they had to be directed to the Prime Minister and read as follows: "Dear Brian: Deindexation stinks. Yours truly". I encourage senior citizens and all others across the nation to write to the Prime Minister in care of the House of Commons.

I should like to move on to other matters. The most significant line in the entire Budget suggests that the new direction for Canada's Government is to reward success rather than subsidize effort. We should think about that comment for a moment and what a dramatic shift it represents, not only in Canadian public policy but in terms of our view of the world. It used to be that in this country effort was important and that the role of the Government was to assist Canadians to further develop the development of our culture and economy. That is no longer the case. They cannot come to the Government for help because they cannot find any, unless of course they have already made it and really do not need it, unless of course they are successful and can come to the Government for their rewards, their hand-outs. This view is callous and regressive. It is social Darwinism at its worst. It is a denial of all on which society is based.

Those words were echoed in a communiqué from a group which calls itself the Community Business and Professional Association of Canada and has as its motto "Fair Enterprise", an interesting approach. Its analysis of the federal Budget contains a number of important points which I would like to bring to the attention of the House. It indicates that the philosophy of rewarding success rather than subsidizing effort is very dangerous, in that it will curtail entrepreneurship in frontier areas of economic development. Risk taking is definitely discouraged in favour of classical endeavours. As indicated in the budget papers, the result will be that a greater number of profitable companies within each industrial sector will be taxable.

I see that my time is winding up. I have a number of other comments which I will reserve for another time, but in conclusion I should like to refer to how construction association representatives in Thunder Bay feel about the proposed 6 per cent sales tax on ready mix concrete and related building products:

> We wish to register our most vigorous protest against the proposed imposition of this tax.
> The construction industry (the country's largest single employer) has been devastated by the slowdown in the economy; registering unemployment in our area of up to 40 per cent. Investors need low interest rates and confidence in a stable construction climate, as stimulus to develop; not more taxes on the beleaguered construction industry and its suppliers to drive costs higher.
> Our industry represents 15 per cent of the Gross National Product and 650,000 direct jobs, with an equal number in allied industries and professions.
> The long-term effect this will leave on construction, and on employment in the construction trades is obvious.
> At a time when the construction industry is at a low ebb, we must demand that these changes be rescinded.
> Yours very truly,
> Robert L. Irwin,
> (Past President, Construction > Association of Thunder Bay)
> (Director, Ready Mixed Concrete > Association of Ontario)

Whether it is senior citizens or business people, the Budget will not help them. It will hurt them. For that reason, we will not support the Government's financial plan.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words in this debate about pensions and also about another issue which may not relate directly to the Budget but certainly relates to the policies of the Government during the course of its first year in office. Of course I am referring to the question which was a key issue in my campaign in Ottawa Centre during the course of the election campaign last summer, that is, to provide people who work in the Public Service of Canada the political rights which were promised them by the Conservatives when they campaigned for office.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Is that relevant?

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, it is relevant. Among other things, we are talking about 500,000 people who work for the Government of Canada, directly and indirectly, and are now deprived of their opportunity to protest the deindexation of pensions despite the fact that many of them will in fact be retiring shortly and will find themselves in a situation where the purchasing power of what they receive is gradually diminishing, thanks to the hard-hearted policy of the Government.

I cannot tell the House how concerned pensioners in my riding are about the Government's decision to deindex pensions. Some of the double-talk and gobbledegook which is coming from Cabinet Ministers and even from the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is very confusing, to put it mildly. I always thought that when a measure was announced in the Budget, it had the force of law. In fact, it has been a tradition in Parliament that once a tax increase has been announced by the Minister of Finance, it takes effect immediately, despite the fact that it may take a number of months before the particular tax measure is translated into law. However, now we have the spectacle of the Government back-pedalling and trying to pretend that it really did not mean to do this to pensioners and, as a consequence, saying that of course it will monitor the situation, that it will not take place for several months, and that it was a proposal or an academic exercise.

If the Economic Council of Canada, the Business Council on National Issues or some other such body had come up with a series of proposals including the deindexing of pensions, it would have been appropriate for the Government to say that it would listen to the proposals with great interest. If a committee of the House of Commons had made suggestions for radical reform in terms of social security benefits or Old Age Security, again the Government of the day could have distanced itself from those particular proposals. However, we are now talking about a set of proposals contained in a Budget which took eight months to prepare and presumably set the course for the economic policy of the new Government over the life of its first term in office.

As I mentioned to the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) a few minutes ago, I was struck by the fact that the other evening, the Hon. Member for St. Paul's, the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall), the junior Finance Minister, appeared in front of a meeting of 1,000 women in the National Arts Centre and when she, having worked with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on the Budget, was asked to defend the deindexing proposal, she did not know what to say.

The situation now is that virtually all Conservative Members of Parliament wish this proposal had not been made. They are distancing themselves to the point where the Minister of Finance is the only Member of Parliament adamantly in favour of this proposal. I say to the Government it is about time it backed down and made sure that pensioners could sleep easily, knowing that their purchasing power was not going to be eroded because of a misguided proposal which should never have been brought forward and which should be withdrawn now. If Members opposite have made a mistake, be man and woman enough to admit it and withdraw the deindexing proposal now.

I think it is grossly wrong for the Government to decide it will double index the GIS but continue to take purchasing power away from senior citizens who happen to be just above the poverty line. I think that is the Government's intention, and I suspect if it acts at all, that is what we will hear, and I want to say in advance that it is wrong. Those pensioners who may be just above the poverty line right now are not very far above. In many cases in my riding, they still have to pay rent amounting to $400, $500 or $600 a month. If they are hanging on to their own homes, the average property tax for a home in Ottawa Centre is about $150 or $160 a month. The expenses of operating a home are rising rapidly and people in that situation cannot afford to see themselves lose $100 in purchasing power this year, $200 next year, $300 the year after and so on.

If the Government decides to restore indexing only to those who get the GIS, it will be doing by degrees what the Prime Minister said categorically the Government would not do when this issue was debated in Parliament in December. At that time he said universality was a sacred trust. It now appears he may decide to announce it is not a sacred trust anymore, but something to be eroded by 3 per cent per annum. This will go on until the present OAS is worth only 50 per cent of what it is worth today. For someone who is aged 50 and expects to retire at 65, the OAS will be virtually worthless and we will have what amounts to a means tested pension for the poor and nothing better. I think our country can do better than that.

I want to point out also that the other day the Senior Citizen Council of Ottawa-Carleton had a meeting. They represent all of the old people living in Ottawa-Carleton. They have some 60 affiliated organizations. They are strong, tough, bold, lively, and they said categorically that this cold-hearted proposal to reduce their inflation protection should be abandoned forthwith. While the NDP has been presenting petitions in this House for the last two and a half weeks, that organization has also been collecting petitions to see that this misguided proposal is withdrawn. They moved that copies of the resolution should be sent immediately to the Prime Minister and leaders of both opposition Parties, and they remind the people of Ottawa-Carleton that during the election campaign the Government said quite clearly that the PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis.

When they were in opposition, the Progressive Conservatives fought deindexing of the OAS. Now they are in Government, they suddenly find there are all kinds of reasons to take it away. Their excuses are just as hollow as the excuses of the Member from Sudbury when he tried to explain why the Liberals brought in six and five and cut back old age pensions by 6 per cent or so per annum.

The Council also pointed out that in the January 1985 Consultation Paper on Child and Elderly Benefits, the Government was again categorical in stating that in its view, no change was required in the OAS-GIS payment system. What was the Minister of Finance doing at that time? Did he sit in Cabinet when this question was discussed and the paper was reviewed and say he was going to get them in two and a half months, but he was not going to say what he was going to do right then? Was he refusing to play squarely and deal fairly with the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), or was that Minister being duplicitous in publishing a consultation paper which he probably knew was going to be changed or violated in a very short time?

I think it is about time the Government stuck to its promises on this issue. We have seen a lot of broken promises and as far as our senior citizens are concerned, if I had a set of priorities regarding which promises to break, it would be to not break any at all, but if the Government is determined it is going to break its word, for God's sake, don't break your word to those senior citizens who contributed so much to our country.

A week ago today, at about this time, I was out on the steps of Parliament Hill when a number of people arrived to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the great trek to Ottawa which was broken up in Regina with tragic results by a previous Progressive Conservative Government. Some pensioners came to me and said "We want you to know that during the Depression we worked for 20 cents a day. We lived in the camps. There was no radio, no newspaper. It was like a concentration camp, or just about." They tried to break out but they could not. They lived in abject poverty year after year. They said "Now the country is prosperous and look what they are doing to us today." They asked me to please pass that message on to Mr. Mulroney and Members of the Government, and I am doing that right now.

The Government seems to have a passion for deindexing. It seems to have bought the gospel according to Colin Brown and the National Citizens Coalition right down the line. The Government is wrong on this issue, and I want to suggest that it is also wrong on deindexing pensions of people who work now or who have worked for the Public Service of Canada.

Last Friday I had a chance to meet with representatives of the Union of Economists and Statisticians. We talked about the Government's deindexation proposal which had been announced in conjunction with representatives of the PSA but quickly abandoned because it was clear that the Alliance spokespeople perhaps had made some mistakes. Certainly they did not understand what the Government understood they were getting. Public Service pensioners paid for indexing. They pay about the highest proportion of income for their pension benefit plan of any group of workers in Canada.

The actuarial assumptions the Government is using to try and back away from its commitments to indexing of Public Service pensions are hollow, unfounded, and have a great deal to do with the fact that for many years the earnings of the Public Service pension fund have been grossly below those that private sector pension plans were getting in the private market, or had it been able to get the benefit of interest rates available on long-term Government bonds. It looks as though the Government is trying to send this matter back to the advisory committee on pensions which has already dealt with it once and made recommendations which effectively amount to deindexing. You can hardly expect a group which has come up with one lousy proposal to turn around and give a better proposal the second time.

Therefore, I want to echo the concerns of many people in the Public Service or retirees and say that I for one, and my Party as well, would support the matter of Public Service pension plans being referred to a parliamentary all-Party committee which can get objective advice and make some objective recommendations. I think it would be grossly wrong to refer this to an in-House advisory committee which did a bad job last time, which perhaps badly advised the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret). This in turn led to an unfortunate rift between the President of the Treasury Board and the leaders of the major Public Service unions over something which in my opinion should never be implemented.

Public Service employees to whom I have spoken indicate quite clearly that if what they contribute is not sufficient to continue to pay for full indexation of their pension plans, they are prepared to look at a change in contribution rates. However, all of the actuarial calculations they have made indicate that what they are paying now is ample to maintain that indexation, particularly if they were to stop playing games by joining together the basic superannuation fund and the supplementary fund which has been created for indexation. That should be done, but if it is not done directly, I suggest that it be done by means of a review by a parliamentary committee.

I would like to conclude my remarks by speaking on the question of political rights. I do so in sorrow and with regret. During the election campaign, the Progressive Conservative Party promised, as did the NDP to provide full political rights for people working for the Public Service of Canada. I fought and won the election in the riding of Ottawa Centre on that particular issue and I am pledged over the life of this Parliament to do everything I can to make sure that those Public Service employees who deserve to get political rights do get them.

I believe that the President of the Treasury Board has been acting in good faith in terms of the discussions that he has initiated. I think, however, that he is being undermined by the Public Service Commission, which has been carrying out a holy war in favour of maintaining the present restrictions and by a number of senior mandarins at the Deputy Minister and Assistant Deputy Minister levels who believe that the present system should stay because it is necessary that a very small proportion of people working for the Public Service be untainted, pristine and seem to be non partisan. Most everyone to whom I have spoken agree that keeping a small proportion of the Public Service in a state of political virginity is probably not a bad idea, but that should not apply to the 250,000 others who work for the Public Service of Canada, yet that is the position being taken by those who I believe are stoutly resisting the efforts of the President of the Treasury Board to implement the promise the Government made last fall.

I must say with regret that last week I held a press conference to announce that the court case which I initiated in conjunction with a number of members of the Public Service Alliance who are federal Government employees will go forward. We expect and hope to get a date before the Federal Court of Canada early in the fall. The lawyers are now getting together to resolve the subsidiary and minor issues so that the case can focus on the constitutional questions of the denial of fundamental rights of freedom of speech and association to people working for the Public Service because of the current restrictions in the Public Service Employment Act. That case will go forward because I felt I had no choice. After 10 months of a PC Government, the Government mandate is beginning to weaken a bit. The Government is having some set-backs in areas like pensions and there is a grave danger that it will forget this promise the way it has forgotten so many other promises it made to pensioners, public service employees and ordinary Canadians.

We have seen during the course of the elections held in the Yukon and Ontario that the situation facing people who work for the Public Service has not changed one tittle since the election. Members of the Public Service of Canada are no more free today than they were during the election campaign leading up to the September 4 election. They can give money, they can go to political meetings, they can hold membership in a political Party but they can do more. If a member of the Public Service of Canada were to have knocked on doors for a political candidate in the Ontario election, he or she would have run the risk of losing his or her job as a consequence. That is how serious the situation is, and no change has taken place.

I thought that the Treasury Board might have issued instructions to personnel officers in different departments indicating that it is doing its best to implement these changes and asking the personnel departments to inform those people who are members of bargaining units that it is okay for them to take part in election campaigns while keeping a low profile but that if they want to be campaign managers or candidates, of course the normal rules will apply. However, no such compromise was reached. In the meantime, the Public Service Commission has continued, in its status as an independent Commission reporting to Parliament, to give advice to the people who run the Public Service in the various departments to say that it is an offence to take part in elections. To reiterate the guidelines issued in the spring of last year, they effectively say that any action by anyone in the Public Service that might give the least cause to think that a Public Service employee is not impartial is suspect and should not be engaged in.

A few weeks ago when he appeared before the committee, the President of the Public Service Commission made public a poll on political rights that had been carried out by Carleton University. That poll indicated that 30 per cent of the people working for the Public Service of Canada would in fact exercise more political rights if they were granted them through legislative action. I think that the President of the Public Service Commission was taking the view that that proved that most members of the Public Service do not want to have political rights. I say that when 80,000 people are saying that their fundamental rights are being denied them, something is wrong.

I think all of us know how small of a proportion of the general population is in fact politically active. Perhaps 2 per cent or 3 per cent of the population of Canada, during the course of an election year, goes to a political meeting or takes part in a political campgaign. If 30 per cent of the Public Service indicates tha they would like to be politically active, that is a very major proportion. I would say that if only 1 per cent said that their fundamental rights were being denied, something would be seriously wrong.

The Charter of Rights says that everybody enjoys freedom of speech, and that does not include an exemption with respect ot all people working for the Public Service of Canada. The Charter of Rights guarantees fundamental democratic rights to everybody and does not exempt people working for the Public Service of Canada. The Charter of Rights provides for freedom of association and does not except people who work for the Government of Canada but wish to take part in the activities of a political Party.

The Government has time before we adjourn on June 28 to make its intentions clear. I look forward to a statement by the President of the Treasury Board because for Public Service employees, this issue is just as important as the issue of pension rights and deindexation is for the two and one-half million senior citizens who have been so cruelly treated by this Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Cooper): Questions or comments? Debate.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to Bill C-51, but I would like to start by refreshing the memory of the public and explain that this is a very important piece of legislation which authorizes the Government to borrow an amount not exceeding 18 billion 200 million dollars for its operations, or as it says here: " . . . as may be required for public works and general purposes." In fact, this also means that when speaking to this Bill, Members are allowed to comment on a variety of subjects.

Mr. Speaker, if we look at the Government's strategy we are tempted to ask: Where is this Government going? Or if you prefer: What is their strategy? Actually, during the past nine months, we have seen the politics of style, the strategy of style, an attempt to sell a large Cabinet with a new Prime Minister—and I must say that on occasion, the Prime Minister and his Cabinet have cut a dashing figure on television—but that is not the primary responsibility of Government. It must be consistent and serious, and it is imperative that this Government firmly establish its policies both in the economic and social sphere. So at last we had a Budget, on May 23. We discussed this Budget for several days, and now we are considering this particular Bill which is aimed at authorizing the Government to borrow $18.2 billion. Billion, Mr. Speaker! Recently, someone asked me, and I was talking to high school students: what is a billion? So I said it was 1,000 million, and to try and put it into more concrete terms, I told them that to spend a billion, you would have to spend $1,000 every day for 3,000 years. They were speechless. I said yes. And of course $18 billion means you would have to spend $18,000 every day for 3,000 years.

So we cannot think in those terms. It is an incredible amount of money. It is a lot of money, and because this is a wealthy country, we have very big budgets.

Mr. Speaker, the Government is trying desperately to sell its budget. It is trying to save face by saying that the Budget has been well received. It should realize, however, that it contains a major defiency, which we have pointed out, and that is the proposal to de-index Old Age Security pensions. This is how the whole discussion on the Budget started, because we realized that in the figures we were given, the Government indicated the scope and the size of the Budget measures it was proposing.

• (1340)

[English]

The Government is desperately trying to sell the Budget to Canadians because, in my view, not many Canadians want to buy it. Conservatives have realized that the country is not willing to accept a Budget which will put the highest burden on those who are least able to carry it—the poor, the elderly and the unemployed. In his attempt to sell the Budget to Canadians, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), in a recent speech to The Empire Club of Canada in Toronto, said that the Tory Budget upholds public morality. Obviously, the Conservative Government distorts the understanding of the word "morality".

In its Budget, the Government has partially deindexed Old Age Security pensions. I have a document from the Department of Finance, released after the Budget, which indicates the effects of the various budgetary measures up to 1990-91. The document indicates that the deindexation of senior citizen's pensions will have an impact of $1.6 billion by 1990-91. The document outlines the revenue and expenditure impact of budget measures by national accounts component. The third column of the document from the Department of Finance was not made pulic. The first two columns which dealt with 1985-86 and 1986-87 were made public, but 1990-91 was not.

I would like to return to Old Age Security. That will have an impact on the deficit. Reductions in other fields of taxation, such as the modified indexing of personal income tax and the personal surtax, the RHOSP and the child exemption will also have an impact on the deficit. The disability deduction has gone from minus-$15 million to minus-$50 million. Capital gains tax will cost the taxpayers of Canada $300 million this year, $600 million in 1986-87 and $1.2 billion in 1990-91. Canadians have a $500,000 capital gains exemption which will allow a $10,000 exemption this year and which will gradually increase over the next few years. They will be allowed to use those capital gains as a tax shelter.

An Hon. Member: It is not a tax shelter.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, it is a tax shelter. No tax will be applied to the capital gains which people realize, whether it is realized on a Kentucky horse, a condominium in Miami, paintings or jewels. In that $500,000 capital gains exemption, we would have liked to have seen some encouragement for jobs, small enterprises and research and development. In other words, the Government should insist that the money be used for the benefit of Canadians in Canada.

The tax treatment of pensions will mean a reduction of $235 million by 1990-91. Housing loans will be reduced by $45 million by 1990-91. The document lists other examples. For example, the freezing of unemployment insurance premiums will provide a reduction in the deficit of $10 million. I could list all the financial consequences of the Budget, but the one measure with which all Canadians are preoccupied is the measure which deals with the partial deindexation of Old Age Security. Child benefits will also be changed, including the family allowances. Tax exemptions for dependent children will mean a net reduction of $600 million by 1990-91. The families of Canada will say that is immoral. I cannot blame them.

By 1990 the Government will have cut social programs by more than $2 billion a year. That money will not be redistributed to needy Canadians—the old, the poor and the unemployed. It is another election promise which has been broken by the Government. It says it will use the money to reduce the deficit, although it promised that it would not do that. That is immoral. The 1.4 million unemployed Canadians say that it is immoral.

The Government will probably come to its senses in the next few days and change its mind on the question of the Old Age Security pension. I hope the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will have the guts to come into the House and say that the Government has made a mistake and that it will not proceed in January 1986 with the Ways and Means motions which are necessary to implement the measure.

Mr. Speaker, the last time the Government asked the House to approve borrowing authority legislation, the circumstances were, of course, quite different. Hon. Members will recall that at the time, there had been no Budget, and we were being asked to provide borrowing authority for an amount that was far in excess of projected spending. The Government wanted to borrow more than it had said it was going to spend. Obviously, we objected to that. This caused quite an upheaval in Parliament which went on for several months, until last December, when the Bill was passed because the Government, which was involved in a debate on universality at the time, wanted to reach agreement at any price before Christmas, and since time was running out in two instances, namely for the borrowing authority which it needed and which was essential, and there was also the debate on universality which was becoming an embarrassment, the Government set aside the last day of the session before Christmas for a debate on universality, in exchange for the Opposition's consent on the borrowing authority legislation.

Subsequently, the Senate or perhaps I should say the other place, Mr. Speaker, made a fuss, and this caused a number of problems that were perhaps more a matter of image than substance. The situation today with respect to Bill C-51 is different. The Government has brought down a formal Budget and tabled its Estimates. But there is another difference, and that is because the Government is asking for $18.2 billion to finance its extravagant gifts to the multi-national oil companies and rich investors, while at the same time it is telling the elderly they will have to tighten their belts. They were unable to set aside any part of the $18.2 billion to provide for full indexation of the Old Age Security pension for Canadians. That is the difference, that is what is so immoral and that it is why it is wrong.

Mr Speaker, what we are considering today is the morality of the situation. Is there any moral justification for telling 200,000 senior citizens that they will become poor? Because that is what the result will be, Mr. Speaker. Between now and 1990, this measure will put 200,000 Canadians below the poverty line. The immorality of this Government's request in the Bill before the House today prompts me to dwell a little longer on the Budget brought down on May 23 of this year, since as I said before, the Government's request is closely linked to the Budget. What the Government is suggesting, Mr. Speaker, is a single, primary and very narrowly-based objective. The purpose of the Budget is to bring down the deficit, so the deficit comes first and nothing is going to stop that.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think any Member in this House is against bringing down the deficit. It is a very worthy goal, and it is very important. But it must be done without putting the burden on the wrong people. What the Tories have done is regressive and unfair. They are well aware of that. Why put a tremendous tax burden on the consumer while giving big corporations and wealthy individuals special privileges? Why not be a little more flexible and allow more generously for job creation? Why did they cut $78 million from the Budget for training, development, and especially manpower training? Mr. Speaker, there is a very real possibility that all these measures will reduce purchasing power and with all these tax increases, the situation is not going to improve, and it may well get worse later on.

Let us look at the figures, Mr. Speaker. These are not my figures, they appear in the Government's Fiscal Plan, a document given to us along with the May 23 Budget. In 1987 middle-income consumers will have to pay $2.4 billion in additional taxes, while at the same time about $540 million in benefits will be given to the companies that are so friendly with this Government. We know them. And the figures keep increasing, Mr. Speaker, to the extent that the business community will have a field day by 1990, while elderly and ordinary Canadians will have to make do with ever diminishing assistance.

Mr. Speaker, the social planning council recently published a very interesting document indicating:

[English]

"Summary of Major Budget Measures", and these are not my figures, these are the figures of the Canadian Council on Social Development. These are the costs, and I will repeat them again because it is extremely important for Canadians to know them. For example, Mr. Speaker, the Budget will decrease the buying power of a typical family with two children by more than $1,000 in 1990. By deindexing tax systems, by capital gains exemptions, it lowers the revenues of the Government of Canada which results in increased taxation on consumers. The increased pension contributions will be lower. It will eliminate the federal tax reductions, reduce the child benefit systems and reduce old age security. By 1990, Mr. Speaker, $2 billion will be cut from provincial Governments for post-secondary education.

I really would have liked to continue my remarks for the next half hour because I still have notes. However, Mr. Speaker, I would just remind Hon. Members that on voting on Bill C-51, they are voting on $18.2 billion. That is a lot of money and, for God's sake, let us put it where it should be, that is to help the aged, the poor and the unemployed.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the Hon. Member and I am glad that he spent a good deal of his time calling for justice for seniors. However, I wonder how he can explain to an ordinary citizen who may be watching this debate in the House of Commons how he can now condemn the government's plans to deindex seniors' pensions—which is a just and reasonable condemnation—when at the time his Party was in office it also had a plan for partial deindexation of seniors' pensions? I would welcome some explanation from the Hon. Member because I know him to be a man who is sincere and genuine.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that question. I believe my constituents will know that I can rise—

Mr. Gormley: In all modesty.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, in all modesty, and say that the Government when it did apply the six and five made sure of two things; first, that the measure applied for two years and, second, that it did not touch those in need. Those in need who received the GIS were double indexed. They all know that in my riding. It was a question at that time of anticipating the inflation to be what it was. We were having double-digit inflation. We had a problem and tried to resolve it. I am not saying that it was the best way of doing it. As a matter of fact, Hon. Members know where I voted on that issue. I would say it did work, the six and five measure did bring down inflation so that indeed senior citizens did not lose very much.

• (1400)

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the Hon. Member. With regard to his present position on this issue, is the Member asking the Government to restore deindexing fully as it applies to Old Age Security across the board, or has he some more watered down position on double deindexing with regard to the Guaranteed Income Supplement? I am wondering about his concern regarding the Old Age Security.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Cooper): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but, it being two o'clock p.m., the House will now proceed to Statements by Members pursuant to Standing Order 21.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

CRITICISM OF BUDGET IMPACT

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, hundreds of thousands of Canadians are sending a message to the Government about its refusal to provide full pensions for all our senior citizens. The offices of Members of Parliament from coast to coast have been flooded with calls. The rallying cry of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) of a tough but fair Budget has been exposed for the Conservative hypocrisy of the rich that it really is.

Last March we said that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) put the "sham" back into the word "shamrock". It is now clear from his broken promises that he has put the "con" back into the word "Conservative". The Canadian people were conned last September, but they are mad now and will not take it any more. That is why life-long Conservatives in my riding have renounced their Party and expressed dismay at their betrayal by the Prime Minister. That is why seniors from across Hamilton will be gathering Friday morning at First Place Community Centre to let our Liberal Operation Justice Team know how they feel about so-called Tory justice.

Tory times are tough times, and now we see that Tory times are con times. Canadians are not going to be conned by the Government. We demand that the Prime Minister live up to his promises to the Canadian people and move today to restore full indexation to senior citizens' pensions so that people from coast to coast will finally be able to sleep at night. The con game is up, Mr. Prime Minister. Come clean.

OPPOSITION TO DEINDEXATION THREAT

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the senior citizens of Thunder Bay are fighting mad about the Conservative Government's threat to deindex their pensions. With less than 48 hour's notice, more than 200 of them gathered at 2 p.m. last Friday to tell my colleague from Thunder Bay-Atikokan and myself what they thought of the Government's budget proposal.

George Andrew-Cotter pointed out that senior women are already $2,000 below the poverty line. Dutchie Gall pointed out that many seniors had been unable to save for their retirement years and are entirely dependent on the Old Age Security and Guaranteed Income Supplement. Mike Chicorli called on City Council to add its voice to the demand that the Conservative Government keep its election promises. Norman Richard described the budget proposal as a real scam, made in the name of grandchildren but designed to put their fathers out of work. Romeo Turcotte pointed to the ever-rising cost of living as requiring that pensions increase as well. Mike Comishin declared that seniors were not ready to lie down and accept what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) threatened to do to them. Louis Johnson asserted that if the Prime Minister has $500,000 to spend on a party with President Reagan, he could find money for seniors. Molly Kapush urged the Government to borrow as needed from the Canadian people so the interest would be spent in Canada, rather than in Germany or the United States.

The senior citizens of Thunder Bay and northwestern Ontario demand an end to the deindexation proposal. When will the Government act?

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

CALL FOR REINSTATEMENT

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, how much longer are are we going to tolerate the mollycoddling of murderers who have been convicted of deliberately planning and killing one or more human beings? We put them in prison for 20 years and, during that time, we provide extra protection for them. They have security, and are given far better food than hundreds of decent, law-abiding citizens can afford.

They are entertained and taken to sporting events. Hundreds of our taxpayers' dollars are spent for pool tables and equipment, and periodically they may have their spouse or common law partner as a guest in a government trailer. All of this, of course, is with the compliments of the Canadian taxpayer. We put the lives of prison guards on the line while they are with these murderers.

What about those who were murdered; young girls, young boys, women, police officers, and prison guards, many of whom were tortured and physically and sexually abused before their lives were snuffed out? Their bodies lie in the cold earth, with only relatives and friends visiting their graves. The loved ones left behind are the forgotten people of our nation.

"It would be barbaric to execute these murderers", the bleeding hearts cry. They ignore such barbarism as molesting and then murdering a four year old boy, or the agony suffered by a teenage girl before her body was raped and burned, or the pain of forcing policemen to dig their own graves before being slaughtered. A majority of Canadians want such murderers executed. I grieve and weep for the murdered and their loved ones, not for the murderers.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

IMPACT OF GREEN PAPER

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to commend the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) for his Green Paper on foreign policy.

This consultation document pinpoints directions for change and parametres with respect to international development, human rights, environment, trade and strategy.

Our Governement wants to set up a democratic consultation process through a parliamentary committee which, for the first time in the history of this country, will enable us to give Canadians an opportunity to participate directly in the preparation and drafting of Canada's foreign policy.

After beating around the bush for a while, the Official Opposition reconsidered its position and now agrees that the public and the Parliament of Canada ought to be able to discuss foreign policy issues.

Notwithstanding the negative criticism of the Liberals who, in fifteen years, were unable to make an over-all survey of external relations, people interested in Canadian diplomacy did make positive comments. Among other things, it was said that the Green Paper is intellectually more challenging than the former Government's 1970 White Paper, particularly in connection with economic questions.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, apart from any partisan consideration, organizations that are interested in Canadian foreign policy are enthusiastic about the prospect of a genuine international affairs debate in Canada, and that is the objective of the Progressive Conservative Government.

OLD AGE SECURITY

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS—DISCONTENT OF THE ELDERLY

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, this is not the first time I rise to tell the House that the senior citizens of New Brunswick disagree with the Conservative Government's proposed deindexation of pensions.

Today I would like to read a letter I received last weekend from the Golden Age Club of Scoudouc. Here it is:

MR. ROBICHAUD: We, the 160 members of the Golden Age Club of Scoubouc, are strongly opposed to the changes advocated in Mr. Wilson's recent Budget. Senior citizens deserve more than they are getting now, but the present Government does not seem to realize that. We hope you will bring pressure to bear with us senior citizens so that no change be made that might harm us. Thank you and good luck.

The message is clear, Mr. Speaker. This letter reflects the discontent and concern of elderly people. There is no doubt that the policy of the Government is inhumane and that, as long as it does not change its position concerning pension deindexation, senior citizens will continue to speak up, demonstrate and protest.

MAIL CONDEMNING DEINDEXATION

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, as Members belonging to the governing Party have risen in the House and complained about a lack of mail delivery in new suburban developments, I too have noticed prolonged delays in the delivery of mail, lost mail, and even misdirected mail which ends up in the wrong place. Mr. Speaker, we in the Opposition share these concerns about inadequate mail service. We sincerely hope that the Government will listen to its own backbenchers, if it will not listen to opposition Members, and improve mail delivery before increasing postal rates.

However, there is another kind of misdirected mail around this place. I am receiving a continuous stream of mail condemning the deindexing of senior citizens' pensions. This mail calls for justice for seniors, and it must find its way to the proper place, to government Members. A number of ordinary government Members have already spoken out on this issue and I urge those government Members who are calling for good mail service to call for justice for seniors, and to condemn the deindexing of seniors' pensions.

EXTERNAL AID

ETHIOPIAN FAMINE—WORLD UNIVERSITY SERVICE OF CANADA'S ADOPT-A-VILLAGE PROGRAM

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, in the International Year of Youth it is most gratifying to see the major role the World University Service of Canada is playing in relief to Ethiopia. Its Adopt-a-village concept is unique and thrilling. Several cities in Canada have adopted a village in Ethiopia.

Toronto has adopted the village of Gode. Gode is located in the Agadon desert of southeastern Ethiopia. The Agadon has been suffering from a three-year drought wihch has devasted crops and depleted all water supplies. There is malnutrition, starvation, and other diseases associated with poor nutrition. There are already 300,000 displaced persons who are seeking food and water, and Canadian and Ethiopian relief workers expect the total to rise to over 1 million by the end of this year.

There are real practical needs. Two 10-tonne trucks, a mobile medical unit, medical supplies, water storage facilities, and more personnel are urgently needed. The cost is $450,000, and I urge all residents of Metro Toronto and other Canadians to support the Adopt-a-Village concept developed by the World University Service of Canada.

HUMAN RIGHTS

OTTAWA CONFERENCE—WORLD-WIDE BENEFIT

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, as one of the Members of Parliament who is privileged to be attached to the delegation to the World Conference on Human Rights, I would like to say a word of congratulations to Ambassador Jay and all the officials of the Department of External Affairs who have formed the Canadian mission at that important conference. They have performed with a professional commitment worthy of the best traditions of the Canadian diplomatic corps.

Many people wonder, however, if it has been worth the effort. When the conference adjourns today and the delegates go home, it is feared that they may go home with little more than a communiqué phrased in diplomatic generalities and with a few rhetorical flourishes. Blacks can still be gassed at a peaceful demonstration in South Africa. Dissidents can still find penal servitude their reward for even a whisper of criticism behind the Iron Curtain.

But there is one gain from the conference. It is the recognition that if nations of the world can come together to discuss human rights within the borders of each other's countries, then human rights are not simply an internal matter anywhere. Human rights belong to everyone and they are a world responsibility that commands the concern of us all, not as citizens of one country intruding into the affairs of another, but as men and women who are sharing with others in their sufferings because we share a common humanity.

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, the appointment of Jim Wood, a former RCMP corporal, to the Canadian Pension Commission at a salary of up to $65,000 has given further evidence of the Solicitor General's (Mr. MacKay) tendency to assist his friends at the expense of his official responsibilities. During the 1970s Mr. Wood was responsible for leaking confidential information on RCMP activities to the Hon. Member for Central Nova, now the Solicitor General.

This was in total violation of the oath of secrecy that Mr. Woods swore when he entered the force. By arranging for his friend, Jim, to receive this appointment, the Solicitor General has debased the RCMP oath of secrecy. He has sent a message to members of the force that they can violate their oath with impunity. Indeed, if they violate their oath for the greater glory of the Tory Party, they may even be rewarded.

Ironically, the details of Mr. Wood's appointment come at a time when the RCMP Commissioner is attempting to restore respect for the oath of secrecy within the force. Commissioner Simmonds stated in the Hatfield report that the value of the oath is "in setting a standard of professionalism and integrity that will assure public confidence and trust in the force. When the standards are not maintained, there is a consequential lessening of respect for the organization".

The Solicitor General is like a wrecking ball in his own Ministry. He should resign, and the Wood appointment should be rescinded.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY INTO MAIL DELIVERY DELAYS

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil-Papineau): Mr. Speaker, following complaints from some of my constituents in Argenteuil-Papineau that I was not answering their letters, I made enquiries and found out that it takes at least two or three weeks for mail to get to Ottawa from my riding.

Mr. Speaker, my constituents, and I as a Member of Parliament, refuse to be victimized by the Canada Post Corporation. How can a Crown corporation do what private enterprise would not dare? Why is the absentee rate among the corporation's employees so abnormally high? Why are rates going up while the quality of service is going down?

I would like to ask the Minister responsible to reconsider the mandate Parliament has given this corporation and to order an investigation of the corporation's management. My constituents are reasonable people. They are aware of the corporation's tremendous deficit. When service is good, they are willing to pay the cost, but now they feel they have a right to complain because Canada Post has given them a raw deal since it became a Crown corporation. One does not do this to Canadians without suffering the consequences, Mr. Speaker, and the people who are responsible for the corporation's failure to live up to its mandate will sooner or later be held accountable before Parliament.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

PENSIONS

IMPACT OF BUDGET

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. As we have seen over the weekend, the honeymoon is over for the leadership of the Tory Party, and the dishes have started to fly in the Tory kitchen. We saw many Members of Parliament from Victoria to Ottawa, to Montreal and on to Halifax, get up and say that the mistake made by the Minister of Finance about deindexation in the Budget should be corrected. Is it the intention of the Government to stop the anxiety of the old age pensioners of Canada, make it known right away that the Government intends to backtrack on that terrible decision, and give justice to the old age pensioners?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am not as familiar as the Hon. Member with flying dishes in the kitchen particularly as a result of his most recent foray into the Atlantic provinces with what he is pleased to call his task force on world disarmament, where his co-chairman, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry, was saying precisely the opposite thing to what he was saying in public.

The question put by the Hon. Member today was asked repeatedly last week and was repeatedly answered by the Prime Minister, as it has been by the Minister of Finance in the past.

I merely quote a small excerpt from Hansard of last Friday at page 5772, when the Prime Minister said:

> I acknowledged at the press conference, without hesitation, that one of the issues affecting the elderly poor clearly is a source of concern for all of us, which was why a provision was inserted in the Budget that we would monitor that very carefully.
> According to the Budget, this measure would and will become effective on January 1 of next year, but also according to the Budget, we are monitoring the situation on a regular basis to ensure, as far as possible, that no problems will result for the neediest in our society.

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, instead of repeating at length what the Right Hon. Prime Minister said, I hope the Deputy Prime Minister can inform the House whether instead of just "monitoring" the situation, the Right Hon. Prime Minister intends to act on the unanimous resolution of the Legislative Assembly in Quebec, the views expressed by the Premier of Quebec and the opinion of Conservative Members from Montreal who spoke out against the Government's de-indexation measure, and inform the elderly in the province of Quebec this evening, in Manicouagan, that the Conservative Government has made a mistake and that it intends to correct it immediately and put an end to a situation that is causing the disintegration of the Progressive Conservative Party.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the farce with respect to government ended last September 4.

The Prime Minister has answered that sort of question repeatedly, in a very forthright, upfront fashion, as when he said, again last Friday in the House of Commons in answer to a Member from the Hon. Member's Party:

—I heard the comment which was made by the Premier of Nova Scotia in regard to that budgetary provision. I heard it from leaders of the business community, the BCNI, leaders of trade unions, and my hon. friend from Beaches. I indicated at a press conference this morning that only a very foolish individual would be insensitive to that kind of comment and analysis. With regard to the question, I think we have been prudent. I hope, at the earliest possible moment, that we can make a statement which would be consistent with the intentions set forward by the caveat which was placed in the Budget.

Why the Hon. Member cannot accept that forthright, honest reply by the Prime Minister, similar to the replies made by the Minister of Finance, must find its motivation in the roots of his own political set of values.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, it is evident that I will get nowhere with the Deputy Prime Minister who cannot make up an answer but just reads from Hansard. Therefore I will direct my supplementary question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

As the Hon. Minister is responsible for defending the people who are less privileged in society, will he suggest to the Minister of Finance that if he were to stop the capital gains tax exemption for rich people, not give the $11 billion to the oil industry, then he, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, will be in a position to tell old age pensioners, those who live on family allowances and those who benefit from personal exemption on income tax, that the deindexation of these programs will not take place and the social contract will be preserved in Canada?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister had made very, very clear, by way of his explanatory statements, the Government's position in this matter. He has pointed to the commitment of the Finance Minister in the Budget, on behalf of the Government, to full indexation of the Guaranteed Income Supplement. He has pointed to the further commitment, carefully spelled out in the Budget, which promised that the Government would, and I quote, "review the adequacy of payments in light of future circumstances and will increase them as resources permit".

This is a clear commitment by the Government that the deficit will not be reduced on the backs of needy pensioners. Nothing could be clearer than that. That process is now going on, and we are monitoring it with respect to the degree to which the economy has responded to the Budget. If they would like to embark upon inquiries in that regard, we would have something to say to them as well.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear that the Prime Minister and the Government have put "con" back into the word "Conservative". If the Deputy Prime Minister wants to talk about honesty, why does he not tell us why the Prime Minister made the promises which he made to Canadian people?

Last week two life-long Conservatives came into my office to tear up their PC membership cards and pledge to work for me in the next election.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: One of them, Thomas Ashthorpe, said:

Mr. Mulroney promised he wasn't going to touch our old age pensions . . . I feel betrayed.

How many more torn PC membership cards will it take before the Government reinstates full pensions for all senior citizens from coast to coast?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons why there was a change on September 4 was not because of the tearing up of a couple of cards, but because of the tearing up of virtually hundreds of cards by members of her Party and the NDP.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nielsen: Thousands; thousands. We were elected to address the horrendous legacy left us by that Party over there in terms of the economy of the country. Instead of preambling her questions as she does, she should look at the rate at which unemployment has declined since last September, at the new low level of interest rates, at the increased rate of growth of confidence in the Government, at consumer spending rises, at manufacturing orders which have risen, at price stability return, at farm cash receipts having risen, at exports having risen, and at bankruptcies declining. These are the things which the hon. lady and those with her should be thinking about.

Oral Questions

REINSTATEMENT OF FULL INDEXATION REQUESTED

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, if the Deputy Prime Minister thinks that only two Progressive Conservatives opposed these measures, I have seen his velcro lips sink into the political sand for the last time.

Mr. Ashthorpe told the Hamilton Spectator that the measure by the Government, a Party of which he has been a member for 72 years, could put him into an old age home. Will the Deputy Prime Minister act today to reinstate immediately full pension benefits, so that hundreds of thousands of seniors—Progressive Conservatives, Liberals, New Democrats and those who are apolitical—can sleep tonight?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think I have already answered that question four or five times today, as well as the Prime Minister having answered the question repeatedly for almost the entire Question Period last Friday, and the Minister of Finance before that. If the hon. lady cannot yet understand that—

Mr. Chrétien: Answer the question.

Mr. Nielsen: —or the hon. gentleman opposite who is interjecting now, I simply give up hope for their reason.

PENSIONS—REQUEST FOR REINSTATEMENT OF FULL INDEXATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. After the Conservative Caucus meeting on the weekend, the Prime Minister indicated that the Government may be changing its policy on pensions, perhaps this week or next week. My question to the Minister is as follows: Does the Minister agree with the spokesperson for one million pensioners who indicated that the Government will have to fully re-index pensions for all pensioners in Canada, and do so forthwith?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it seems that there is still an Hon. Member who has failed to understand and to hear the message in the responses by the Prime Minister to himself and to others last Friday. Let me, by referring to page 5776 of Hansard, answer that question directly in terms of what the Prime Minister said. He said:

> We indicated that one of the responsibilities of a Government was to listen to people, to reasonable debate in the House of Commons, and to criticism. I do not take it as a sign of weakness to acknowledge that we are, indeed, listening to people such as my hon. friend. One of the reasons for which the budgetary document was so framed was in anticipation of the kind of difficulty which has been raised by many people in the House, and particularly by my hon. friend. We will act as quickly as we can. We will continue to pay very close attention to what he and others say.

I wish that he would pay as close attention to the answers which he is getting from the Prime Minister and other Ministers of this side of the House.

REQUEST FOR EARLY DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, it is one thing for the Deputy Prime Minister to answer for the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance who are not here, but it is quite another thing for him to try to answer for the Minister of National Health and Welfare who is responsible for questions directed to him in the House. The Minister should be answering these questions, not the Deputy Prime Minister.

I will try again by directing my question to the Minister responsible for Canada's pensioners. I hope he will stand up and be counted, rather than leave it to the Deputy Prime Minister to reply. Given that the Prime Minister indicated that the Government may indeed change its policy on pensions, may reindex the pensions of Canada's pensioners before we recess for the summer, will the minister now guarantee to Canada's pensioners that the Government will do that, will remove their anxiety, and fully index the pensions of all Canadians before we recess?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer the Leader of the New Democratic Party to page 5776 of Hansard, about which he has already heard, I am sure. I will not repeat it for him because, no matter what are his qualities, I am sure he now understands what is on that page.

As the Prime Minister said, both in the House and on the weekend, we are listening to Canadians. The decision, if any decision is to be taken, will be done in the usual fashion. That stands.

RUMOUR ANTICIPATING DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, "done in the usual fashion" may mean that we will be waiting for another three or four years for the Government to act. Canadian pensioners want an answer now. They do not want to be sitting around all summer waiting for the Government to make up its mind.

I should like to ask the Minister a final two-part question. First, concerning the rumour which is going around that the Government is considering simple double indexation for those who are receiving GIS, will he assure the House that when the change comes there will be full indexation for all Canadian pensioners, not just those receiving GIS? Second, will he assure the House that the decision will be made before we recess? Why wait for fall? Do it now.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, with respect to rumours, the Hon. Member should keep in mind that he probably knows the rumours best; he probably started them. I think he would admit that, in the best traditions of the Opposition, he has not only started that rumour but some others, and that he has also tried to use it for his own political purposes. I say to him: Check your own rumours that you have been making, and wait for any developments.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Sudbury.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, I might add that Canadian senior citizens do not want to hear a rehash of Hansard. They want a decision by the Government to reverse itself on deindexation.

FULL INDEXATION—REQUEST FOR RESTORATION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Every senior citizen with whom I met in the last six or seven days, as I travelled across the country, wants me to put the following question to him: When will the Government do the compassionate and fair thing, reverse itself on deindexation, and restore full indexation to Canada's seniors?

• (1430)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I remind the Hon. Member of the speech he made regarding six and five. When he speaks to seniors I am sure he also puts into his presentation what the Liberal Government did at that time when inflation was eroding the purchasing power of Canadians, and of the senior citizens who were especially vulnerable. Knowing him, I am sure he did that.

As to the second part of his question, he really repeated the question which has been asked by his Party and the NDP. The answers given by the Deputy Prime Minister and myself also apply to the second part of his question.

REQUEST FOR IMMEDIATE ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows full well that the decision has been taken to reverse deindexation. It is no longer a question of if, it is just a question of when. Therefore, does the Minister believe that senior citizens who have fought wars, gone through depressions, and paid a special 3 per cent surtax to ensure their OAS pensions, should wait and worry all summer before they find out the Government is going to reverse itself? That is the question Canadian seniors want answered here in the House today, not tomorrow, next week, or the day we leave before summer break.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, regarding any decision, I repeat what has been said by the Prime Minister and repeated today by the Deputy Prime Minister. As to any other question relating to timing or anything else, I suggest that he refer to the answer we so frequently received when he was on this side.

Mr. Frith: In due course.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): That is, in due course these things will be answered.

SENIOR CITIZENS' REPRESENTATIONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. He will recall that last week the Prime Minister said that the Government was anxious to receive news which would be helpful on this matter of deindexation. He will also be aware, if he was in Manitoba over the weekend, that the Manitoba Society of Seniors published 30,000 copies of a journal in which they suggested the Government and the Minister failed to keep their promise to pensioners, ignored seniors' advice, and ignored their pleading. Since the Minister has the responsibility for pensions, would he now stand up and say that he is prepared to announce the Government is not going to proceed with deindexation?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think it was the Hon. Member who last week put the question to the Minister of Finance with respect to consultation. I could be wrong about it being he, but I think they should be seen for what they are. They speak of consultation, they speak of listening. The Minister of Finance today, on the invitation of members of that Party to attend a meeting in Halifax, has been trying to communicate with the office of the Leader of the NDP to obtain the time and place of that meeting in Halifax. Through last Friday he had no success. But he is there now meeting with the Chairman, Mr. Gifford, referred to by the Hon. Member for Beaches; meeting with representatives of the concerned pensioners, representatives of the senior citizens of Nova Scotia, and he is meeting with the Halifax Seniors Council.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, those Hon. Members cannot have it both ways, accusing us of not meeting, not consulting and not listening to interested bodies, in light of that kind of activity by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Minister may be meeting, but is he listening?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Sit down.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You may be talking, but are you awake?

PENSIONERS' ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, to whom this question is directed, will have received a letter from 10 different pension groups representing over one million pensioners. They say that there is only one option, and that is reindexation.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Riis: Are the Minister and his colleagues prepared not only to meet with seniors but to listen to what they have to say, and admit that there is only one option, complete reindexation?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, regarding listening, what the Hon. Member said was pretty ridiculous, that when the Minister of Finance or anyone else in this House sits down with seniors or other groups they are not listening.

Mr. Riis: Well, their view is unanimous.

Mr. Andre: All one million of them? Every one of them?

Mr. Riis: Yes.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): To say they are not listening is patently ridiculous. We have said many times in the House that we are listening, and I would suggest we would listen to him as well if he did not come up with such ridiculous suggestions.

BUDGET CONTENT

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, a constituent of mine writes: "This Government is made up of a bunch of opportunists who underestimated the intelligence, vigour and energy of our senior citizens". I am sure everyone is happy to learn that this is now all under review. However, I would like to seek a clarification from the Acting Prime Minister, who cites a sentence on page 18 of the Budget which he says makes it a proposal and not a policy, whereas a clear reading says it is policy, and when the policy has been instituted it would then be reviewed. Was it a policy, or was it a proposal?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): The Hon. Member should read the Budget. It has been quoted ad nauseam in this House by the Prime Minister in response to the nauseous questions from the Opposition. I do not intend by that reference to denigrate for one moment the seriousness of the subject with which we are dealing. The words are in the Budget that the Government will review the adequacy of payments in light of future circumstances, and will increase them as resources permit. Now, I think I would be presuming on the time of the House to repeat the kind of answers that I have given today, and that the Prime Minister gave in his very forthright and fully open fashion last Friday. Why can the Hon. Member not accept those answers? Can he not think of anything more positive?

FAMILY ALLOWANCES—EFFECT OF BUDGET

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the reason I was asking was because that sentence in the Budget not only applies to deindexing of OAS payments but also to deindexing of family allowances. Is it correct that family allowances are not a matter of policy but simply a proposal? Who did not read the Budget now?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the question that has been coming up here has been on the matter of pensions, that is the matter on which the answer has been given, and I would suggest he not draw any other conclusions.

PENSIONS

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I want to raise with the same Minister a question not at all unlike that being raised on a regular and daily basis. The Minister must surely be aware that we have at least 10 groups representing over one million pensioners who have asked for only one thing, a simple request that the Government move now to reinstate indexing for all old age pensioners. Will the Minister stand in his place and say that he supports them?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I can repeat again what the Deputy Prime Minister has said today, and what the Prime Minister has said previously. I say to him that I support old age pensions, I support social programs, and so does everyone here.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): But I do not know if he has noticed that in the last year in the expenditures of the previous Government, compared with 10 years ago when we were spending 50 cents of every dollar on social policy, we are down to 43 cents, but we have gone from 11 cents on deficit payments to 25 cents. I say that he should look at both of these matters. Of course we would like to expand social programs, but we have to do it in light of the financial circumstances of the country.

PLEA BY PENSIONERS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, having looked at both sides of the question, does the Minister support the request of literally millions of senior citizens who have asked that the Government simply put on the shelf its proposal to deindex old age pensions partially? As the Minister responsible, does he believe that the cause they have been fighting for is just, and will he rise and say he supports them?

● (1440)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would return to the answer to that question which I have already given, which is that everyone supports old age pensioners and the need for them to live in dignity. Every one of my colleagues in Cabinet and every one of my colleagues in the House of Commons support that. I would know of no Canadian who would not support that policy.

I would say to the Hon. Member again that, when looking at social policies, or any public policies, we must also be realistic in terms of the expenditures and the deficit faced by Canadians, as we face not only the question of social policies but the ability to maintain programs.

SOCIAL SECURITY

FAMILY ALLOWANCES—BUDGET IMPACT

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is along the lines of the one put by the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. On page 17 of the booklet entitled The Budget Speech, it says:

Accordingly, I propose to modify indexation for old age security payments and family allowances.

The Prime Minister has indicated that he is planning to back down on deindexing old age pensions. Is he also giving consideration to backing down on the deindexation of family allowances?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Budget has been well received by Canadians. Canadians feel that the Budget is taking the right direction. Canadians are realistic people and know full well that the deficit should not continue.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I welcome back the lawyer from Bay Street who was in part the architect of that trend. Today, the largest single account in the Public Accounts of Canada is the servicing of the debt. After being on Bay Street last week, the Hon. Member is telling us not to worry about that but to make sure that the deficit has no relationship to public policy or social policy.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister is obviously skating around the issue. He is not telling us whether or not he will remove the deindexation of family allowances as well as the deindexation of the old age pensions. I wish he would clarify that point.

How can the Minister of National Health and Welfare justify deindexing old age pensions, a move which in the next five years will cost old age pensioners $1.6 billion, while at the same time he is reducing taxes to the multinational oil companies by $2.4 billion per year? Can the Minister explain how that can be justified? Does he think that that has been well received by the old age pensioners?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I can answer the Hon. Member's question. He has asked the question in his usual manner which distorts the real facts. One thing that we cannot accept is the unscrupulous scare tactics that are being adopted by the Hon. Member in what he thinks is a very smooth fashion and are adopted even more so by Members of the NDP. We are not paying off the deficit on the backs of senior citizens.

Certainly the NDP and the Party of which the Hon. Member for Algoma is a Member are trying to ride, for their own political motivations, on the backs of the senior citizens by giving them misleading information, and telling them that there will be a reduction in their pay cheques when there will be no reduction. That sort of misinformation only exacerbates an anxiety rather than proffering reassurance. I have told the Hon. Member, as has the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare, that the situation is being monitored extremely closely and that, when resources permit, the appropriate action will be taken.

ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION RESOLUTION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. Perhaps the Minister is aware that recently the Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario Command of the Royal Canadian Legion passed a resolution at its meeting in Thunder Bay calling for the restoration of full indexation of the Old Age Security payments. Knowing that veterans have a keen sense of sacrifice but also a keen sense of justice, I wonder whether or not the Minister would indicate that the Government will respect the Canadian consensus now developed and established, and recently joined by members of that particular Command of the Royal Canadian Legion, by announcing before we recess that the Government has abandoned its plan partially to deindex old age pensions.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that is a perfect example of the kind of distortion that the Hon. Member, and most Hon. Members of his Party, attempt to make. The only exception is the Hon. Member for Beaches.

The fact is that the Government, in the short time it has been in office, has done more for veterans than any other Government, in my perception as a veteran. The Hon. Member knows, or should know, that one of our first acts as a Government was to index veterans pensions fully, a move made by the Minister of Veterans Affairs. There is as much connection between what he is attempting to link as there is between the old grey mare and the grey ghost.

TELEPHONE CALLS FROM MINISTER'S CONSTITUENCY

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the Minister did not say whether or not he was going to respect the views of that particular Command of the Royal Canadian Legion on this issue. My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of Health and Welfare. I wonder if he could explain why my constituency office keeps getting calls from people in his riding who claim that they are being put on hold when they phone to talk about pensions.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member can say whatever he feels might benefit his political purposes, but that is not what is happening. I would suggest that the Hon. Member reconsider a question of that nature.

NEED TO REDUCE ABSENTEEISM

Mr. Reg Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister in charge of Canada Post. The President of Canada Post has advised the Committee on Transport that he could withdraw half of the proposed increase in postal rates if he could reduce absenteeism to the level it is in comparable industries. In view of that, what priority will Canada Post give to reducing absenteeism in its strategy for controlling costs and limiting increases in the future?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for asking that very important question. It is one that is of concern to all Canadians. The fact is that Canada Post Corporation properly assigns a very high priority to reducing the rate of absenteeism in the Corporation, a rate which is roughly twice the rate of absenteeism in the private sector.

I think the bottom line is that Canadians are entitled to get a day's work for a day's pay. Nobody at all would complain about someone being absent from work because of bona fide causes such as sickness, but I think Canadians have the right to the assurance that any claim for days off is in fact legitimate.

EFFECT OF BUDGET ON FAMILY ALLOWANCES

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I believe that the families of our country have a right to know what is happening to them as well. For the sake of these families I would like the Minister to clarify what we read on page 17 of the booklet entitled The Budget Speech, as follows:

> Accordingly, I propose to modify indexation for old age security payments and family allowances. Beginning January 1, 1986, these payments will be indexed only for the annual increase in the consumer price index greater than 3 per cent.

In other words, families are in the same situation as far as knowing what is going to happen to them as the seniors of this country. Is this a trial balloon? Is this a proposal? If so, is this proposal going to be reversed? What are families going to expect? Are they going to expect the same treatment as senior citizens?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member just likes to expand the scare tactics that the has been using. I have heard opposition Members say, for instance, that senior citizens' pension benefits are going to go down. He knows full well that that is not the case. He knows that the increase would have been reduced, as he has tried to put it forward. He read the Budget correctly. I suggest that he follow exactly what he read.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, what the Minister did not understand is that what we have read in the Budget does not tell us whether it is a measure or a proposal. Now we know that pension deindexation was a trial balloon from which the Government is backtracking. What I want to know, on behalf of families, is whether this is another trial balloon or whether it will it be done to the families.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, he should remember what the Liberal Government did with six and five, and what it did during other periods of time when family allowances were touched by Liberals, when inflation was at 11 per cent and when the deficit was below $20 billion on an annual basis. I would suggest to him that he should first take a look at the details of what his Party did during the time when it was in government. Again, I would remind him that it is exactly what the Budget said.

TRADE

UNITED STATES TARIFF ON CANADIAN PORK

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I would like to direct my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

[Translation]

Last week in Montreal, I had a meeting with the Union des Producteurs Agricoles. For the UPA, the most important issue is the tariff levied by the United States on imports of Canadian pork.

Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows: considering the special relationship formed by our Prime Minister with the President of the United States after the Shamrock Conference in Quebec City, could the Minister perhaps arrange for a telephone call between the Prime Minister and the President of the United States, to ensure that the tariffs on pork are lifted?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question put by my Francophone friend from Saskatchewan, and I hope to answer the question with the same courtesy and . . . the same accent!

In fact, we do not think the time is right for a telephone call between the Prime Minister of Canada and the President of the United States, but my colleague, the Minister for International Trade, has arranged for a meeting tomorrow with the provinces affected by this decision and union representatives for the pork producers to discuss their taking a joint Canadian position and ensure that in the last stages of the American process, we can increase Canadian pressure to bring about a policy and an approach that will protect the interests of Canadian pork producers.

PORK PRODUCTION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, for my friend the Francophone from Alberta.

Until now, Mr. Speaker, no ministers have been to Washington to discuss a subject that is vital to Canadian pork producers, an industry that is worth $2 billion per year. Is the Minister prepared to make a commitment today to go to Wahstington himself to discuss a question that is extremely important to all Canadians with the U.S. Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the Minister for International Trade, will be in Washington this week to discuss the question raised by the Hon. Member, as well as other questions that are important to Canadian U.S. relations.

GOVERNMENT ADVERTISING

AWARDING OF CONTRACTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Government may be totally heartless when it comes to senior citizens, but let it not be said that it is not compassionate when it comes to handing out untendered government advertising contracts.

Will the Minister of Supply and Services explain to the House why Mr. Robert Byron, a former member of the Tory election campaign committee who now heads the government agency responsible for advertising, has awarded $169,000 worth of contracts to Case Advertising Associates, a company for which Mr. Byron was formally the Vice-President before heading the government agency? Why was Mr. Byron allowed to give such contracts to his former company without the Minister's intervention?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Byron was hired by myself to co-chair the Advertising Management Group because of his expertise. He has done an outstanding job.

Incidentally, the Advertising Management Group, under my supervision, is costing the taxpayers $7,825 a month less than the Advertising Management Group under the Liberals.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: And incidentally, the Advertising Management Group has shown us how we can save something in excess of $20 million in advertising less than the expenditures of the previous administration.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: And incidentally, Case Advertising undertook three small contracts for the Department of Employment and Immigration. That Department has indicated that the contracts were handled and that the program was undertaken in such an exemplary fashion that it is extremely pleased. That Department feels that it got more value for its money than it got from an advertising contract for many years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, as interesting as that answer might be, it had nothing to do with the question.

In a recent report by Douglas Goold, in the Edmonton Journal, the Minister said: "Charges of nepotism and favouritism and patronage are always used by anybody who doesn't feel they have the right friends". Does the Minister think that anyone who complains about patronage only does so because he or she did not get it? Does his statement confirm our worst fear that the promises of the Prime Minister during the election campaign to reform patronage were nothing more than empty rhetoric? Does the Government not intend to follow up on those promises?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I will always applaud any public servant or employee who gets exceptional value for money, as Mr. Byron has for us. The Member was talking about conflicts, the implication being that somehow Mr. Byron did something which was improper. He severed all relationships with Case Advertising Associates. He did absolutely nothing which was improper.

If the Member is suggesting a new standard, perhaps he should approach the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition who resigned some directorships at the end of June last year, yet during July and August, when he was Prime Minister, there were some untendered contracts with companies for which he had formerly been a director. We do not consider that a conflict of interest. We consider it reasonable, once a person has severed a relationship, to conduct good business deals. This was a very good business deal on behalf of the taxpayers, and he ought to applaud us for it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INDUSTRY

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT COMPANY

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion I will direct my question to the Minister of State for Finance. My question deals with White Farm Equipment. The deadline for tenders was last Friday at twelve o'clock noon. I would like to ask the Minister if there have been any firm offers from the private sector to come to the aid of White Farm Equipment. If not, what is the Government prepared to do to save the 600 jobs at White Farms, and the approximately 300 jobs in the supplier industries and the dealerships?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I recognize that this issue has been of great concern to the Hon. Member for some time. I will give the appropriate Minister notice and will have him get back to the Hon. Member right away.

REQUEST FOR LOAN GUARANTEES

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my supplementary question to the Deputy Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the deadline was last Friday at noon for tenders to buy out White Farm, and in view of the fact that Peat Marwick, the receiver, did not advertise any extended period, could the Deputy Prime Minister assure the House that the Government will at least guarantee loans in the interim, due to the fact that the private sector has not come to the rescue of that company?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would not expect me to be fully familiar with the details of such a question. Certainly I will take careful notice of the representations which he has made and see to it that they are drawn to the personal attention of the Minister.

TEXTILES AND CLOTHING

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT WILL NEGOTIATE BILATERAL TRADE AGREEMENTS WITH PACIFIC RIM COUNTRIES

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, since the request to re-open negotiations on the GATT agreement was unsuccessful at the Bonn Summit of industrialized countries, could the Minister for International Trade inform the House whether the Government intends to start negotiations on bilateral trade agreements with the Pacific Rim countries and propose measures that will help the Canadian textile and clothing industry to penetrate the markets in this area, which would help the industry play a prominent part in Canada's economic development strategy?

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as I am sure the hon. gentleman is aware, Canada is a signatory to the multifibre agreement which expires in July of 1986. Canada is presently preparing its negotiating position and will be discussing with the other countries what should be done with respect to the renewal of this agreement. One of our objectives is to try to obtain entry to the countries to which the Hon. Member referred in his question.

PRIVILEGE

STATEMENT OF MR. NIELSEN DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of a question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent).

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. Earlier in the Question Period, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) misled the House, no doubt inadvertently, I say—and I mean that—when he suggested that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) had attempted to find out the location of a meeting today in Halifax and that my office either refused or did not give the information. I simply want to indicate clearly to the House that what the Deputy Prime Minister said was not the case. The meeting took place at Spencer House Senior Citizens' Apartments at 5596 Morris Street in Halifax today. The Minister of Finance was told last Thursday. They are still waiting to hear from him any time today.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am, of course, going by information which has been provided to me by officials in the Minister's office. The gentleman in the offices of the New Democratic Party who was contacted was Mr. Jim Thompson, I believe. These efforts have been ongoing for some time in response to an invitation made by a member of the New Democratic Party, but all that the Minister of Finance apparently has been receiving is the run around. Fortunately, the Minister of Finance is meeting with those very people today.

Mr. Speaker: There clearly is not a question of privilege here.

TABLING OF REPORT ON REFUGEE DETERMINATION IN CANADA

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 46(2) I am tabling in both official languages two copies of a report entitled Refugee Determination in Canada.

It would be my predisposition, Sir, to see if there is unanimous consent to have this report permanently referred to the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration. If that is not possible today, I will look to have that unanimous consent tomorrow.

TABLING OF REPORT OF COMMITTEE

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 46(2), I would like to submit for tabling in the House, in both official languages, a copy of the final report of the working committee on the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I happen to be the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration and I understood that the Minister asked for unanimous consent of the House to have a permanent reference—

Mr. Speaker: We will get to it under motions, unless the House wishes to deal with it now.

PETITIONS

CLOSURE OF RURAL ROUTE 1 IN MAYMONT, SASK.

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to this House of Commons a petition signed by 58 people from Lilac, Saskatchewan. These citizens protest the planned closure, on June 30, of Rural Route 1 in Maymont. They say it would be unfair, discriminatory and would inhibit their ability to receive mail. These citizens call upon Parliament to prevent the closure of Rural Route 1, Maymont.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I would like humbly to submit a petition I received in my travels across the country last week. It states that whereas any reduction in the pensions to seniors would create great hardship to a large segment of the population who helped to build our great country, and whereas the Government's election promises guaranteed that the structure of the seniors' pensions would not be changed, we petition the Government of Canada to remove the 3 per cent indexing of the Old Age Security pensions. This petition is signed by hundreds of citizens from the City of Toronto.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a petition on behalf of the residents of metropolitan Toronto and the Beaches outlining their concern for the Government's plan to deindex senior citizens' pensions. They wish to have restoration of full indexation.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I have before me a petition signed by several people from the ridings east of the great metropolis of Toronto, Oshawa and Scarborough East, who have outlined their concerns about the Government's plans to deindex the senior citizens' pensions in this country.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of hundreds of senior citizens in the City of Saskatoon—the riding, I might add, of the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn)—I would like to present a petition. These petitioners have indicated to me that they wish me to place before you a petition in which they humbly ask the Government of Canada to reverse itself on the issue of deindexation and restore full indexation to all pensions for senior citizens.

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker, outlining the concerns of hundreds of senior citizens in the Province of British Columbia. They reside in several ridings in the metropolis of Vancouver. They have indicated that they respectfully request that the proposal by the Government be deleted from any approved federal Budget. In addition, they point out that Canada was built upon the backs and hard labour of its senior citizens whose Government now seeks to heap further insult upon what is already a grievous situation. These petitions have been presented to me in my travels across the country.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which indicates that there are several constituents of ridings in Toronto as well as the Beaches who are humbly asking this Government to reverse itself on the issue of deindexation.

I would also like to place before you, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the Hon. Member rising to present further petitions on the same subject?

Mr. Frith: Yes, it will be on the same subject, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I believe the Hon. Member knows the practice. Would the Hon. Member indicate how many there are? Otherwise, he has the right to file them with the Clerk.

Mr. Frith: I was personally asked, Mr. Speaker, by the citizens with whom I met, to present these petitions on a case by case basis, and I will wait until tomorrow to produce any further petitions.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the privilege of presenting a petition in this House, signed by constituents of the riding of Vanier, and according to these petitioners, the Budget of the Progressive Conservative Government is tough and merciless for the elderly since it eliminates full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour of presenting another petition from constituents of Ottawa-Vanier, this time from the Overbrook area, which says that the Progressive Conservative Government has failed to keep its promise made in January 1985: "Any savings which may result from program changes will not be applied to a reduction of the deficit."

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition humbly submitted by constituents of Ottawa-Vanier, again asking the Government to reconsider its position taken in the Budget, and to eliminate a provision which they deem to be tough and merciless for the elderly, since it eliminates full indexation of Old Age Security pensions.

[English]

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I am very honoured to be able to present what I know will be the first group of a large number of petitions. They are signed by people from Windsor, Ontario. The petitions I am presenting today say that the pensioners ask the Government to respect the commitment it made during the 1984 federal election campaign and maintain full indexing of the old age pension.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I as well have the honour to submit petitions in certain numbers signed by residents in the riding of Davenport, in west Toronto, as well as residents in metro Toronto, who feel that submissions and presentations should be made to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) asking him to respect his commitment made during the 1984 election campaign and urging him to maintain the full indexation of old age pensions. I submit them in one group for your consideration.

• (1510)

Mr. John Nunziata (York South-Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by a number of residents of the federal riding of York South-Weston, the riding of Mississauga North and the riding of Etobicoke Centre. CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of several dozen constituents in Espanola, Ontario, calling on the Government to reinstate the indexation of old age pensions and deploring the fact that pensions will be deindexed next January.

I also have a petition from a dozen constituents in the Hamlet of Silver Water on Manitoulin Island also calling on the Government to continue its full indexation of old age pensions in 1986.

I also have a petition signed by about a dozen constituents in the Town of Little Current on Manitoulin Island calling on the Government to re-establish old age pensions in 1986 on a full indexation basis as in the past.

I also have a petition signed by several constituents in Meldrum Bay calling on the Government to reintroduce old age pensions with full indexation.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have the honour to present a petition from the residents of Brantford. It says that the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security program in Canada.

REDUCTION IN CANADIAN NATIONAL MARINE SERVICE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Mr. Morrissey Johnson (Bonavista-Trinity-Conception): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of several hundred residents of Pool's Cove, English Harbour East, and Rencontre East, I wish to present this petition protesting CN Marine's decision to eliminate their communities along the south coast of Newfoundland as ports of call.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by several hundred residents of the Town of Southey and surrounding districts calling upon the Government to reintroduce the indexation of pensions so tha senior citizens will not lose buying power as proposed in the Budget.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition containing the names of hundreds of senior citizens from my riding who join with the many others whose names have been presented over the last few weeks in protesting the deindexation of old age pensions by the Government.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to present a petition on behalf of my constituents of Kamloops-Shuswap. The petitioners ask the Government of Canada to reconsider its move to reduce indexation of the Old Age Security Program of Canada causing over 200,000 senior citizens to exist below the poverty line.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to add nearly 200 names to the list of petitioners who have already submitted petitions from Windsor. They protest the Government's intent to deindex old age pensions and call upon the Government to revoke that decision.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions from residents of my riding whose signatures were obtained by a student, Mike Fricker, a student volunteer who was hard at work on this campaign. There are also signatures from residents from 63 Carrie Street, Dawson Court, and Cumberland Hall who protest that the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security Program and that it flies in the face of Progressive Conservative promises that a PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis. They request that deindexation be cancelled.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions signed by members of the Slovak Legion Branch 129 and the Ortona Branch 113 who call upon the Government to reject the deindexation proposal.

I also have the honour to present a petition signed by three dozen delegates to the Manitoba-Ontario Command of the Royal Canadian Legion who, at their convention in Thunder Bay, indicated very strongly that they were against deindexation.

I also have a petition from 150 constituents of the Thunder Bay-Atikokan and Thunder Bay-Nipigon ridings who also indicate very strongly that deindexation is not something they are very happy with.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) on a point of order.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order, or maybe a point of information. I hear the words "restore", "reinstate", and "reintroduce" in connection with pensions. How can you do that when they have never been taken away—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

REFERENCE TO STANDING COMMITTEE OF REPORT ON CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions and I believe that you would find unanimous consent for this motion and for the moving of it in the first place. It is as follows:

That it be an Instruction to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs that, in relation to the Committee's order of reference of April 18, 1985, the Committee consider the document entitled "Final Report of the Working Committee on the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation" tabled earlier this day before making its final report and that for the purposes of this study the said document shall stand referred to the said Committee.

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the waiving of notice and the introduction of the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: I apologize. I thought that was the one moved on behalf of the Hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald). Does the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) seek unanimous consent on the earlier request of the Minister of Employment and Immigration?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, discussions are carrying on with representatives of the Liberal Party on that one.

Mr. Speaker: I apologize. I understood notice of intent had been given.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all the questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall all the questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)) that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade, and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Before the period for Statements Pursuant to S.O. 21, there were seven minutes remaining in the question and comment period following the speech of the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) had the floor for either a question or a comment. I propose to let the Hon. Member finish his comment and we will then move on to debate.

● (1520)

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I was simply asking the Member, who is no longer here, about his Party's position with respect to deindexing of seniors' pensions. Obviously, the move by the Government to deindex seniors' pensions is totally uncalled for and unjust. I welcome the fact that a Liberal Member of Parliament would understand that and would speak out against this unjust measure by the Government. However, I was curious why the Liberals chose to do the same thing when they were in office.

Mr. Speaker: Debate.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Government is asking the House for the approval of Bill C-51. I ask the House to consider how it can give its approval to such a Bill when the Government has betrayed elderly Canadians in its May 23 federal Budget. The Budget attacks the well-being of millions of elderly Canadians living on fixed incomes by increasing the cost of living for senior citizens through hidden and regressive taxes, while moving directly to cut the purchasing power of the Old Age Security pension.

Over the last few days, the Government, facing the understandable fury of millions of elderly Canadians and millions of Canadians generally about what it intends to do in its Budget, is hinting that it might be backing down on what it has said it would do when it comes to cutting purchasing power by deindexing the Old Age Security pension. Whatever the Government ultimately does, I do not believe that senior Canadians or Canadians generally should ever forget what the Conservative Government fully intended to do and may well still do in the Budget it presented to the House on May 23.

What were the promises made to elderly Canadians and later broken by the Conservative Government? On July 26, 1984, during the election campaign, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), speaking in Sherbrooke, Quebec, tried to create the impression that the Progressive Conservative Party would actually increase pension benefits for Canadians. He said, "We are committed to full pension fund reform to eliminate poverty among retired Canadians and to improve their standard of living".

In January this year, after the Conservative Government was able to examine fully the books of the Government and its financial requirements now and into the future, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) issued a consultation paper on benefits for the elderly and for children. The Conservative Government set out a number of principles in that paper which were to be considered as firm commitments. Let me quote the key principles. "Any savings which may result from program changes will not be applied to a reduction of the deficit". Second, "It should be stated at the outset that the Government regards the present system as a good one, which is working well". Third, "Changes in these programs which may result from this review should improve benefits for those in need".

The final principle states:

> Any net savings which may then remain, whether resulting from reductions in expenditures or additional revenues, should be applied to other priority concerns in the social affairs envelope. No such savings should be transferred to deficit reduction.

These are direct quotes from the paper that was issued on behalf of the Conservative Government in January of this year. The record of the Budget shows how far the Government has broken the commitment in that consultation paper.

Having outlined the basic principles that I have quoted in the consultation paper, we can see how the Conservative Government moved all too quickly in its Budget to try to fool Canadians into believing that it was acting to maintain the basic principles of protecting the well-being of elderly Canadians.

The Budget Speech delivered by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) devotes only four lines to state that old age pensions are being deindexed. That is to say, its purchasing power is to be reduced in perpetuity for all increases in inflation below 3 per cent, but indexation would remain for the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

Although the Conservatives try to show that indexing the Guaranteed Income Supplement makes up for deindexing or cutting the purchasing power of the Old Age Security pension, the fact is that continuing indexing of the Guaranteed Income Supplement protects only the purchasing power of that supplement. It does nothing to protect the purchasing power of the Old Age Security pension which represents at least half of the pension income of those elderly Canadians whose incomes are so low that they receive both the old age pension and the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

This Budget is deceptive and sneaky, as the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) put it, because nowhere in the Budget Speech is there an explanation of the true ramifications of deindexing. There are no concrete examples of how incomes of senior citizens would be affected by what the Budget—therefore the Conservative Government—fully intended and likely still intends to do. Through its broken promises and deception, the Conservative Government is betraying our senior citizens. The Conservative Government promised in its January consultation paper that no savings or additional revenues in the area of social programs would be applied to reducing the deficit but would actually be applied to increasing benefits. However, that commitment to elderly Canadians was betrayed in the Budget, and the confirmation of that betrayal was given on May 24 in the House when the Minister of Finance stated, "Everyone has been asked to share a little of the burden in order to get the budget deficit and the accumulating debt problem under control".

Last weekend in my community of Windsor I talked to many people. Many were senior citizens who asked me why the Government is expecting them to bear any burden of deficit reduction. They asked, "why does the Government believe that we are as well equipped as wealthy Canadians to bear any part of such a burden, if that is required? They said to me, "We have already made our sacrifice for this country. We have survived a depression and the Second World War and the post-war period." They said, "We have paid our dues. We have made our sacrifices. If there is a need for deficit reduction", they told me, "that burden certainly should fall on people much better off than us".

In January the Government told elderly Canadians that it regards the present system as a good one, one which is working well. It said that it is a sound system, one which should not be disturbed, and that changes in these programs which may result from this review should improve benefits for those in need. It said that savings should not be transferred to deficit reduction. However, the Conservative Government totally reversed itself on this by attacking the income and well-being of elderly Canadians for years to come, in perpetuity.

The reality is that the Conservative Budget is punishing middle and lower-income Canadians but is especially cruel to the elderly.

Figures developed by reputable bodies—not only a very reputable body like the Official Opposition—show that the four lines devoted to the elderly in the Budget of the Minister of Finance failed to note certain facts. First, as a result of the Budget, the real income of an elderly couple will fall nearly $1,200 by 1990. By 1995, the real income of an elderly couple will be cut by almost $2,600. The real income of elderly singles, mostly women, will be cut by $560 in 1990. By 1995, the real income of elderly singles will be cut by almost $1,300. Only Conservatives would believe that our senior citizens could afford cuts of this magnitude. Elderly Canadians, as well as all Canadians in general, will have to pay sales tax increases for gasoline, health care products, pet food, shampoo and other goods, which will amount to hundreds of dollars per year in lost income.

• (1530)

These facts represent the truth which the Conservative Government failed to tell Canadians in its Budget. These facts expose the broken promises and the deception of the Conservative Government in its Budget. The Conservative Government did not tell Canadians that its Budget would increase poverty. The Budget provisions introduced on May 23 will see more than three-quarters of a million Canadians fall below the poverty line by 1990, and more than 200,000 more elderly Canadians living on fixed incomes will be forced into poverty. The Conservative Budget will cast more Canadians into poverty than the global economic recession in 1981-82. All the assurances and commitments given by the Conservative Government were exposed as being empty and meaningless. In fact, they were replaced in the the Budget by what I believe to be a long-standing, hidden Conservative agenda to weaken the social safety net built over decades. With the Budget, the broken promises and deception of the Conservative Government, it is seen for what it really is—cruel and manipulative. It betrays elderly Canadians. How can the Government ask for support of Bill C-51 when it betrays in this and in many other ways the trust of Canadian people?

Throughout his budget statement the Minister of Finance continued to use, but in fact abused, the word "confidence". Certainly Canadians are finding it impossible to have any trust in a Minister or in a Government claiming to restore confidence when the Minister's own projections and forecasts for the economy, set out in his Budget Speech, and after taking into account the impact on the economy of that Budget, show a growth rate decline from the 4.7 per cent record increase in 1984, a year of Liberal Government, to 3.1 per cent for 1985 and dropping further to only 2.4 per cent in 1986. Jobs will not be created, unemployment, which is all too high, will not be reduced without a continued and in fact an accelerated pace of economic growth. Because of its own policies as set out in the Budget, the Government admits that it will be causing a slowing of the rate of growth on one hand. On the other hand, it continues to speak of confidence while in fact it puts both hands into the pockets of lower and middle-income Canadians through hidden and sometimes not so hidden tax grabs in its Budget.

This is what we must learn to expect from a Finance Minister who said during his speech to the Canadian Economics Association in Montreal on May 30: "Canada has an acute shortage of rich people". The Minister of Finance does not intend that rich people in Canada should bear their fair share of responsibility. We know this by looking at his Budget. Ordinary Canadians will be taxed an additional $400 to $500 per year when all tax increases in the Conservative Budget are taken into account. There is no stipulation that these revenues will be directed toward the poorer regions of the country, toward unemployed youth, toward elderly Canadians, toward single parents or toward the less advantaged people who need assistance. This money, taken from ordinary Canadians in extra and new taxes, will likely go into the pockets of rich Canadians through new tax breaks like the lifetime capital gains exemption set out in the Budget, as well as through following a blind priority of reducing the deficit rather than a priority of job creation and economic growth.

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition put this point in simple, straightforward terms when he said:

> The $500,000 capital gains tax exemption is a cash bonanza of $125,000 . . . The average family faces a $500 a year tax, while the wealthy have a cash lifetime bonanza of $125,000.

The value of the capital gains exemption has been estimated by the Department of Finance at $1.2 billion in 1990. Only 63 per cent of this capital gains benefit has been shown to go to people earning over $50,000 per year who represent only 4 per cent of Canadian taxpayers. Even if we ignore the effects of the capital gains tax exemption, the family earning only $15,000 annually will pay 36 per cent more in income taxes, while the family earning $200,000 will pay only 2 per cent more.

Is that fair? The answer of ordinary, individual Canadians and their families is that it is not fair. They say that the Budget and any legislation connected with it should not be allowed to go into effect.

Among the other 96 per cent of taxpayers, most of whom cannot use the capital gains exemption, are old age pensioners. I have already indicated to the House the damage the Conservative Government intended doing to their basic income in the Budget, as presented to the House on May 23. Its program of deindexation, applied not only to the Old Age Security pensions but also to the family allowance and the basic tax payable by individual Canadians, takes desperately needed money from senior and lower and middle-income Canadians and does severe harm to the economy.

If the Government is willing to reconsider the desperate and dangerous mistake it made in intending in its Budget to cut the purchasing power of the pensions of elderly Canadians, why will it not do the same thing when it comes to the purchasing power of middle and lower-income Canadians through the basic family allowance? After all, figures have been presented by reputable bodies such as the Canadian Press and the Canadian Council on Social Development, showing that the net effect of the Conservative Budget of May 23 is to begin cutting family benefits on an income of only $20,000 per year. There are not too many people who will say that such a family income in Canada today is a starting point for wealth; quite the contrary. Budget documents of the Department of Finance, which were not tabled with the Budget because of the truth they contain, show that the Government will take away at least $1.6 billion from pensioners by 1990. It is a well understood fact that pensioners struggling near the poverty line spend this money on the goods and services which they need to live. In addition to the damage to pensioners, the Government is taking $1.6 billion out of the Canadian economy. At the same time as the Government reduces demand in this manner, a leaked Department of Finance document shows that it is piling up a $1.3 billion tax break through its new capital gains tax exemption. This tax break does not even have to be used to invest in productive economic activity in Canada. It is all right, according to the Conservative Government, to invest those gains in condominiums in Florida, in works of art or in jewellery. That is Tory economics; it is not the economics of Canadians generally.

As we predicted before the Budget was brought down, Canadians will be forced to pay an additional nine cents per gallon at the gas pumps after the beginning of September, to pay for tax breaks for multinational oil companies of more than $2 billion by the conclusion of the next fiscal year. Individual Canadians will be hit by an increased federal sales tax and an extension of the sales tax base to candies, soft drinks, pet foods and cosmetics. On top of these and other tax increases required to make up the shortfall of $8.5 billion in revenues from oil industry taxation by 1990, the Government's deindexation measures alone will take $11.5 billion out of the hands of ordinary Canadians and their families in the next five years.

In conclusion, the Budget is built upon shameful principles involving an abdication of fairness and a disregard of fairness.

Its economic assumptions are as wrong as the public policy ethics between its lines. It is a mean-spirited scheme which seeks to implement the mistaken belief that deficit reduction above all will provide the conditions for private sector investment and therefore economic growth. On the contrary, it is public policy devoted above all to the goal of economic growth and full employment that in reality creates jobs that provide the tax base needed to reduce government deficits.

The Government has this reality all mixed up. It is undoubtedly, given its own predictions, going to move us backwards when it comes to economic growth. This mean-spirited Budget will cause joblessness and increase poverty and despair among Canadians. This Budget is advanced by a Government that does not, and I think cannot, understand that fairness and justice are integral parts of both the meaning and the generation of economic prosperity. For this reason let us send a message to this mean-spirited Government on behalf of senior citizens, Canadian families, indeed on behalf of all middle and lower-income Canadians, that the Budget is damaging to them and to Canada and thereforre Bill C-51 must be soundly rejected.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg-Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, there are a few areas of government policy I would like to comment on in this debate on the borrowing authority which the Government requires to carry on with its platform. First, I would like to comment, as environment critic for my Party, on how the Government is performing with respect to the environment and environmental issues. We notice with some satisfaction that there are no further cuts in the Department of the Environment itself in the Budget as it now stands. I think credit has to be given to many Canadians who let their anger be heard over the cuts in the Canadian Wildlife Service and other areas announced in the statement of November 8. I think the Government, once bitten, is twice shy about cut-backs in the environment. But the real test will come whenever the Nielsen task force reports. If the Department of the Environment and environmental sensitivity survives that report, then indeed Canadians who are concerned about the environment will be able to congratulate themselves on a job well done. They will have made it clear to the Minister and the Government that they did not have a mandate to go ahead with cuts in the Department of the Environment, in the Canadian Wildlife Service, or in the environmental monitoring which was taking place under the National Research Council.

Although Canadians from time to time may not be pleased with things the Government does for which it has a mandate, they are even less pleased when it goes ahead on things it did not seek a mandate for. Surely the Government did not seek a mandate to make cuts in the Department of the Environment. All we have to do now is to get the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) to realize that what she says, where and how she says it, is very, very important, not just for her own political fortunes, however short they may be, but for the well-being of the environment. As I said the other day in the House when she was asking the Canadian Nature Federation to judge her by her actions and not her words, her words are important. If she says, as she did in committee once, that there are people who have worked with PCBs for 30 years and there is nothing wrong with them, well, that is not the kind of argument you expect from the Minister of the Environment. It is reminiscent of the argument made by Rothmans and other cigarette companies 30 years ago—and they might even be making it today—that there are people who have smoked for 40 or 50 years and they do not have lung cancer, so let's not get excited about the causal relationship between cigarette smoking and lung cancer. You cannot have these kinds of gems coming from the Minister of the Environment without there being some anxiety created on the part of those people who are concerned about the environment. If the Minister muses about privatization of the national parks system, this sends out a signal to people who may be interested in exploiting our national parklands for private purposes. The same holds true if she muses about logging and mining in national parks. I am told there are already some logging companies in Alberta who have expressed an interest in that. Since then the Minister has gone some way toward the goal of clarifying her remarks, but she has not ruled out logging and mining in new national parks, and that is still unacceptable to us. In any event, I wanted to put on the record the concern that I and a lot of other people have about the way the Minister is performing.

Members will be aware, I hope, that at this very moment, and since Friday, there has been a blockade going on at Wollaston Lake in northern Saskatchewan having to do with the concern of people there about the extent of uranium mining going on there and its potential expansion. I support that group and I feel for their desperation in trying to get someone to listen. I hope the Minister of the Environment will do the right thing and initiate an environmental review process, which I understand has never really taken place up there, either provincially or federally, regarding the new mines being planned. I hope she will try to initiate a process whereby the people there could be listened to and the effects of these new mines on the renewable resources economy of that area, on the native community and on the environment in general, could be assessed.

To be honest about my own biases in this area, I say that in the context of my opposition to uranium mining anyway. I put that opposition on the record when I first came to this place, even when there was a NDP Government in power in Saskatchewan. My opposition has been consistent throughout, and so when I am critical of the provincial Government of the day in Saskatchewan for not doing what I think it should do, I want no one to think that I am singling out the Progressive Conservative Government. I think uranium mining is a mistake no matter who is responsible for it and no matter to which Government the Crown corporation involved is responsible. It is one of the most hideous way we have yet developed as a white industrial society of trampling on the lives of native communities. We do this in the name of the international arms race and sell uranium to countries like France so they can blow up innocent little islands in the Pacific and continue their ecological crimes, sins against the planet which they seem determined to commit regardless of the opinion of the international community, or anyone else for that matter.

I think it is high time that Canada got out of the uranium mining business altogether and said that we do not want to play a part in this. We do not want to be a part of the international uranium system which is part and parcel of the nuclear arms race. We have often got up in this place and been critical about the arms race, yet at the same time we remain silent about that aspect, the uranium mining which is taking place in northern Saskatchewan.

In that context I would call on the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) to institute the kind of public or parliamentary inquiry into the whole nuclear fuel cycle which was promised by the Progressive Conservative Party in 1979. That promise was in its Throne Speech of 1979, but since it came back to power in 1984 we have heard absolutely nothing about such an inquiry. I used to have the impression that that Party was critical of the nuclear future which was imposed on Canada by the Liberals without any real consultation with the public and without any real debate about the role that nuclear power should have in our energy future. I had some hope that that was one area in which the Conservatives might do something I would agree with, but we have had complete silence since the election of September, 1984. When the silence has been broken, there have been statements from the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources which are, to put it bluntly, quite frightening. The Minister has said that the only problem with Candu and the whole nuclear power option is a marketing one. That is not a view that goes to the root of the more fundamental question of whether or not this is an energy option that we ought to be pursuing in any event.

With regard to radioactive waste disposal, in a letter the Minister sent to the town of Gimli and other municipalities that passed resolutions expressing opposition to Manitoba becoming a radioactive garbage dump as a result of the research going on at Pinawa, the Minister said that the Government was interested in the commercial aspects of radioactive waste disposal. She went on about how Canada might be able to profit by becoming a repository for the radioactive garbage of the rest of the world. That is what I call a commercial world view taken to its most ridiculous extreme.

I have taken every opportunity to ask the Government to repudiate its view of radioactive waste disposal, but no word has been forthcoming with respect to whether or not an inquiry will take place. If one were to read the comments made by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to the Canadian Nuclear Association the weekend before last, one would get the impression that it is business as usual and that we will see no different action taken by the Conservatives when it comes to the question of nuclear power except for some of the cuts that we have seen at AECL.

The third thing on which I would like to comment is the underlying values in the Budget. Through this Budget we have learned a lot not just about Tory economics but about Tory values. We have learned more than we ever really wanted to know about those things. The key phrase in the Budget was the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) saying that the Tories wanted to reward success rather than subsidize effort. What does that tell us?

There is a tendency on the part of the Progressive Conservative Members, collectively and individually, to think that the financial world is the real locus of human activity and that everyting else has to play second fiddle to that. That can be seen in the summer job program through which the only jobs that are regarded as worth-while are those which can be hitched to the private sector. Those jobs which may be community oriented and deal with people are put in a kind of second class category because the real jobs are created when a small business hires people to help it market a product that nobody needed in the first place so that it can produce more junk. That is real economic activity as far as Progressive Conservative Members are concerned.

What did we see in the Budget? The Government is going to reward success rather than subsidize effort. What government Members are saying is that it is not how one plays the game of life but it is whether or not one wins. That is the value that lies at the root of the Tory Budget. The Government is telling all those people who do not have $500,000 in capital gains that they are not successful. Government Members do not regard them as the kind of people who make the economy run.

Pensioners on GIS, people who might receive a small company pension, people who worked hard all their lives and raised families but who do not have the level or the kind of incomes that will enable them to benefit from this Budget are not the people who really count. The people who really count are the people who can come into a $500,000 capital gain or be eligible for all the other goodies that are made available to the investment community. As far as I am concerned, that is bribery. It is nothing other than a bribe to rich and powerful Canadians who will not make the effort unless there is a buck in it for them. Pensioners and everyone else will make the effort anyway because they are decent Canadians who would invest their money in this country without even considering buying condominiums in Florida or doing whatever else it is the rich do with their money.

Rich Canadians have to be bribed by their Government to invest in Canada. I say that that is the very kind of economic system that the NDP and before that the CCF were created to resist. That is why we are here. We are here so that we can point the finger at this kind of shallow, immoral economics which makes the ordinary people pay through the nose because they do not have any choice. The rich people for whom there are no borders—their only border is the almighty dollar—might invest their money somewhere else because they do not really care about the country, and so we must cater to them.

What Progressive Conservative Members are doing here is capitulating to the very worst elements in our economic system. I was never more proud not to be a Progressive Conservative Member than I was when I saw 211 Members give their first standing ovation in the Budget Speech to the statement about the $500,000 capital gains exemption. That was one of the grossest things I have seen since I came here. That was the most disgusting display that I have ever seen. Members gave their first standing ovation to the statement about the $500,000 capital gain exemption. Boy, oh, boy, is that not something great for all their constituents?

Mr. Mayer: You have the sense of a goose.

Mr. Blaikie: I would say to the Hon. Minister of State responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board that we are not opposed to the capital gains tax exemption for family farms, so I hope he will not begin to deal with that issue.

Mr. Mayer: Be honest and straightforward about what you are saying then.

Mr. Blaikie: Conservative Members are saying that everything we have been taught over the years by our Sunday school teachers, our cub and scout masters and our parents, is not true. They are telling us that it is not how one plays the game but rather whether or not one wins. Progressive Conservative Members are telling the people who already have money that they are willing to give them even more money to spend more money. They are saying to the rest of us who did not make it big that that is tough luck. I say that this Budget deserves every element of criticism that is delivered against it for that underlying philosophical reason.

Much attention has been paid to the question of deindexing pensions, and properly so. However, I would like to see more debate about the kernel that lies at the root of this Budget, which is, that the business of life and the business of Government is to reward those who are already successful and to demand from those who have not made it big in the economy that they give up their indexed pensions and make other economic sacrifices so that those who already have money can be paid to make more money.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to comment on the Hon. Member's speech. He began his speech by talking about how the Minister of Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) often shoots from the lip and ultimately backs down on many issues. I think that occasionally the Minister makes really colossal mistakes in the operation of her Department. I believe that she made a colossal mistake last December when she approved the decision made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to cut out the proposed toxicology centre at the University of Guelph. That centre was proposed by two world-famous universities, the University of Guelph and the University of Toronto. It was being supported by the federal Government, the Province of Ontario and the private sector. It was a model about which the Government has been talking—co-operation between the private sector and federal and provincial Governments. It took many years to complete the proposal for the centre. With respect to its funding, the federal Government provided $16 million, the Province of Ontario provided another $16 million, auxiliary assistance was received from the universities, and some $8 million was provided by the private sector. It was a world-class facility which was designed to deal with the toxicological problems of the world. We hear about these problems from newscasts and from concerned Canadians daily, whether it is with respect to the control of diseases and infection in the environment or whether it is leakage problems in the Niagara River. However, the Minister cut that facility which would have given Canada a world-class capacity in dealing with those problems. It would have provided a facility for research and the development of new techniques. It would also have assisted in scientific training. It is a very specialized field. It does not only deal with toxic chemicals, it deals with chemicals which may cause cancer or other diseases which are so prominent in society. I spoke to the Chairman of the Board, who is a research scientist at the University of Toronto, and to other people from the University of Guelph. They indicated that there has been no consultation. The Government thinks that by talking about consultation it makes it so. However, it does not make it so. The decision to cut the centre was a unilateral decision. I am sure even the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard), who is a former President of the University of Guelph, was not consulted. The Minister of Finance simply cancelled the project. There was no consultation with the original team which was appointed to guide the development of the centre.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) was quite right. The Minister often shoots off rockets which she has to retract. However, she also cancels projects such as the centre at the University of Guelph, which will be a severe impediment in the research and training of people in that very important field.

The promise of research and development is simply "Mulroney baloney". The same applies to the question of indexation, agriculture and the rest of the promises. It is political rhetoric. When the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has a research audience in front of him, he promises research. When his audience relates to fishery, he makes promises in that area. When his audience is from the agricultural field, he makes promises in that area. The policy of the Government changes every time the audience changes. It is a very serious problem.

Bill C-51 should provide some of the things about which Hon. Members on this side of the House are talking. We are being asked to grant $18 billion of borrowing authority to the Government. The Government made commitments to research, the environment and many other areas. Now the Government is backing off and asking for a blank cheque, with no promises.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few comments to what the hon. gentleman said about national parks. In fact, a lot of the decisions which were made by the Government, as they relate to increases in fees, are now being announced. A couple of days ago, as the hon. gentleman suggested, the new fee structure for the national park in my riding was announced. I was surprised. People who buy family rates in the national park in my area—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It is with great regret that I interrupt the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker), to remind him that his comments and the comments of the preceding speaker should be relevant to the speech which was made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie). He may be coming to another question which is more relevant.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member did mention national parks and the new rates. It would cost about $1,000 to buy family rates for the season to take advantage of all the services of the Terra Nova National Park.

The Hon. Member spoke about the cuts in the Canadian Wildlife Service. That service was destroyed. Since the Hon. Member was intimately involved when the cuts were announced and when the programs were cancelled, what person-years were reinstated following the outburst from the general public and from members of the standing committee of which the Hon. Member is a member? Was there a resintatement of any services as the Minister claimed?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I am sorry, the period for questions and comments has now expired. I am sure there will be other opportunities for the Hon. Member to anser that question.

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)) that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I would like to remind all Members of the House that the initial eight-hour period of 20-minute speeches and the 10-minute questions and comments period, according to Standing Order 35(1), has now expired. We are now moving into the period of 10-minute speeches with no questions or comments.

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I have previously made some comments regarding the effects which the Budget will have on the Atlantic area. I said that it would be devastating because the private sector is not strong in that area. As a matter of fact, 80 per cent of economic funding in the Atlantic area comes from the Government. It is betwen 35 per cent and 45 per cent elsewhere in Canada. Since the time when I set out the effects which the Budget will have in the Atlantic area, the Atlantic caucus has gone to Atlantic Canada to seek the views of the people. I thought it would be useful to read into the record some of the press reports from business groups, senior citizens' groups, local politicians and other groups in the Atlantic area. First, I would like to read an article from the Journal-Pioneer in Summerside, Prince Edward Island. It reads:

> The May 23 federal Budget further injured all Canadian farmers, but it may kill hopes of survival for many farms already suffering badly because of high debt and low prices, National Farmers Union spokesman told members of the Atlantic Liberal caucus in Summerside today.
> A brief presented on behalf of the farm organization's Maritime region criticized the Wilson Budget for failing to represent or protect the basic interests of most Canadian farmers. Regional co-ordinator Gordon Vessey and P.E.I. director Urban Laughlin charged that present and proposed federal agricultural policies "spell disaster" for many farmers.

● (1610)

That is a comment from the farmers' spokesman in Prince Edward Island, Mr. Speaker. I would like to quote again from that same news paper. It reads:

> A volley of verbal abuse was lobbed on the recent federal Budget by an Island farming organization and a union representing public employees when Budget hearings initiated by the Atlantic Liberal caucus opened here Wednesday morning.
> "We fell the result of this Budget will be higher unemployment, lower consumer demand, increased hardship for the poor and near poor and, contrary to expectations, a larger deficit," Aubrey MacDonald, President of the P.E.I. division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees said, "This is not a Budget appropriate for the times".

I have another quote from the same News paper, and I will read the first couple of paragraphs as follows:

The Atlantic Provinces and Prince Edward Island in particular, will be hit hard by the Budget introduced in the House of Commons May 23 by Finance Minister Michael Wilson.

That was the collective opinion of eight groups representing interests as diverse as tourism and day care, who appeared before a hearing of the Atlantic Liberal caucus Wednesday at the Linkletter Convention Centre.

To continue on with the feeling of the people in the Atlantic area, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote from The Guardian in Charlottetown as follows:

If farmers were getting a fair price for their commodities there would be no need to ask for special consideration from the federal Government, a spokesman for the P.E.I. Federation of Agriculture said here Wednesday.

Federation President Ray O'Brien told the Atlantic Liberal task force the recent federal Budget has all people in Atlantic Canada, not just farmers, concerned the federal Government has "totally abandoned" any notion of special consideration or assistance because of geographical position.

In other words, that idea of special consideration for have-not areas and for developing areas such as the Atlantic, has been completely forgotten by the Government.

I have another quote from Moncton, New Brunswick, which reads as follows:

Charging that Finance Minister Michael Wilson's Budget stinks, the executive director of the New Brunswick Senior Citizens' Federation—

I notice that there are senior citizens in the gallery today, Mr. Speaker. If they could only come down here to the floor of the House of Commons and say themselves what they think about this Budget. It goes on to read:

—told the federal Liberal caucus Thursday that seniors are mobilizing against its plans to deindex old age pensions.

And we have seen that mobilization now taking place across the country, Mr. Speaker. It goes on:

"The elderly have no political clout," he said. "We use whatever methods we can to spread the word. We don't demonstrate or stage marches. We will continue our fight both on the federal and provincial level".

I have another quote from an editorial in The Journal Pioneer, which reads:

The Wilson Budget shows no sign of leaving the consciousness of Canadians, the main reason being that Finance Minister Wilson designed the Budget so that it would affect the maximum number of people. This was probably the outcome of his efforts to ensure that nobody got hurt—

Continuing with the quotations from the Atlantic area, Mr. Speaker, I quote the following from The Telegraph Journal of June 6, 1985:

The recent federal Budget may spell the end for many farmers already suffering because of high debt and low prices, the Atlantic Liberal caucus was told Wednesday.

A headline in The Times transcript of June 7, 1985, reads, "Richard pulls no punches in ripping Budget". It reads, and I quote:

—the May 23 federal Budget "stinks . . .". The Executive Director of the New Brunswick Senior Citizen Federation did not mince words Thursday in Moncton in lambasting the move by Ottawa to deindex the country's old age pensions.

These are just a sample, Mr. Speaker, of the reactions from farmer's groups, fishermen's groups, senior citizens, union leaders, businessmen, and from boards of trade throughout the Atlantic area. The plain message is that this is the first time in history that a Government has failed to recognize that all parts of this country are not equal and that there are some parts where the private sector is weaker. If we bring in a national policy that applies the same to everyone across the country, we are naturally going to hurt the weakest.

I think a case is to be made that senior citizens in the Atlantic region will suffer more because the Atlantic region will suffer more from this particular Budget. The public sector, as I have already pointed out, is what we have depended on for many years to provide employment, and the private sector is not strong enough to provide that employment. That is why we are going to be more hard hit than anyone else.

The cut-backs we have seen in the various programs we depend on will be disastrous. There is a cut in the fisheries of $25 million, in addition to a previous $40 million cut. We do not know what the effect of cuts in transportation is going to be on CN Marine, for example, on the ferry services. Bear in mind, Mr. Speaker, that the only way we can get to the islands of Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island is by sea. That is the only way we can carry large and heavy merchandise, and it is also the way many tourists travel. If we cut the transportation budget and affect those ferry services, we will naturally affect both the cost of goods and materials and the tourism industry.

I said earlier on, and it bears repeating, I think, that the reductions in transfers is also going to hurt us in the Atlantic area. While there will be an increment, the over-all increase to the Atlantic area in transfer payments under the Established Programs Financing by 1990, is going to be cut. That is going to hurt because the provincial Governments will have to recoup in some way. If we increase the tax, we obviously increase the cost of all materials which are coming in by truck, by air and by other conveyances. So that is going to result in an increase as well in the Atlantic area. All of this points to the disastrous effect that the Budget is going to have. Indeed, that was recognized by the Government. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) when he was in Newfoundland was less than sanguine about the effects of the Budget and was less than enthusiastic. The Minister of Justice said at that time that if the Budget had any negative effects on areas like Newfoundland, then Ottawa would take measures to deal with them. He went on to say, and I quote:

If it turns out that in any of the approaches taken in this Budget there is any possibility of any damage to regionally deprived areas, then there will be changes made to deal with that.

The time has come, Mr. Speaker, for the Minister of Justice and the Government to live up to the commitment he made in his speech on this particular Budget. We have heard from a host of groups all over the Atlantic area. They are not political groups. They are union groups, business groups, farmers' groups and fishermen's groups. And all of them have said there is going to be a disastrous effect on the Atlantic area because of this Budget. I call upon the Government now to follow through on the commitment made by the Minister of Justice when he spoke and tried to support this disastrous Budget some time ago. He said, and I quote:

"If they don't perform, then big brother will have to be given the job back again", he warned.

He admitted the private sector in the Atlantic area is weaker than any other parts of the country and said there will have to be more government support in the Atlantic region.

That is a quote from the Evening Telegram in St. John's of what the Minister of Justice said on May 25.

So I call upon the Government now to follow through on the commitment made by the Minister of Justice that if the Budget is seen not to work in the Atlantic area, then changes would be made. I call upon the Government to restore the programs that we have depended upon, to restore the support which the Government of Canada has historically given to the Atlantic area and to retract those disastrous measures which are going to have such a negative impact on the Atlantic region.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, in the 10 minutes I have available to me, I would like to make some comments on Bill C-51, which is an Act the Government has introduced in order to increase its authority to borrow funds to spend on operating expenses during the course of this fiscal year. As you know, Mr. Speaker, having read the Bill, what the Government is asking for is an additional $18,200 million on top of the borrowing authority which already exists.

Just so that we can compare that borrowing authority with previous ones, I would like to take the House back for a moment to the Minister's speech when he introduced this Bill on May 28. As recorded at page 5133 of Hansard, he said at that time:

With the passage of this Bill, the Government will have a total of $32.2 billion of borrowing authority for the current fiscal year.

Later, on that same page, he compares this year's borrowing authority with the previous year's borrowing authority. He points out that the total amount of borrowing authority for the 1984-85 fiscal year was $31.9 billion. Today we are being asked to increase the borrowing authority by about $300 million over and above what this House allotted the previous administration.

The Government is increasing the amount of money it wishes to borrow after arguing that it was busy cutting deficits, reducing expenditures, and creating an era of confidence in the country. I am wondering what type of signals of confidence are being sent out from a Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who says he is cutting the borrowing of the country and reducing the deficit, then asks the House for more money than, even to use his assessment of them, the accursed Liberals asked for in the previous year.

Parliament is being asked to give the executive branch of the Government an additional $300 million over and above what it spent in the previous year. Why is this extra money necessary? It does not seem to be for the provision of goods and services. In fact, the Minister of Finance does not seem to have taken any substantive action to reduce the deficit. He has reduced expenditures to a lot of key people. Pensioners will be asked to take a cut in the real value of their pensions. Families will be asked to take a cut of $500 per year in their spending power based on the May 23 Budget. That falls on top of a tax load imposed in the November 8 statement, which cost ordinary families approximtely $500 in increased taxes and reduced government services.

In the course of less than a year, average families with average incomes will have approximately $1,000 less to spend than they had with previous administrations. Therefore, why does the deficit not seem to be going down? It is not going down very quickly, as even The Globe and Mail has noticed. It points out that the deficit may be trimmed by as much as $1 billion in 1985-86. The forecast would only be for another $1 billion in 1986-87, which would leave the annual deficit at $32.7 billion in a total budget of just over $100 billion. The Minister of Finance is not changing the proportion of deficit very much as compared to previous Ministers of whom he was so critical.

The most important point is how much of the Gross National Product the Minister is going to ask the Canadian people to carry by way of debt charges as compared to previous administrations. One would expect the amount would be going down. However, the Government's own papers indicate that debt charges seem to be growing somewhat faster than the Gross National Product. In fact, by 1990-91 public debt charges will represent about one-half of a percentage point more of the expected Gross National Product than they did in the budget year 1984-85. Even the budget papers indicate an expected increase in the deficit in the next five years. Yet the focus of the rhetoric from that side of the House continues to be on what a great job they are doing of attacking the deficit.

The facts are becoming more clear as Canadians understand what the Budget is about. They can now see that the attack is not on the deficit, but rather on the pocketbooks of ordinary Canadians. The focus of this Budget and of these spending policies is to effect a transfer of income. It seems that the stated policy of the Progressive Conservatives is to have a transfer of investment income from the pockets of those people who have only ordinary amounts of money, or are very poor, to those individuals who are already wealthy in their own right.

I cite a number of budgetary measures to back this up. They are reinforcing a trend that has occurred, even under Liberal Budgets, over the last four or five years. We are now at the point where approximately 4 per cent of the population of the country has control of about 40 to 42 per cent of the country's resources. There has been no effort to redistribute those resources to less fortunate people. In fact, this Budget will exaggerate that process.

To give an illustration of how corporations have been assisted by this process, let us look at income tax paid by individuals and corporations. In 1950, income taxes paid to the federal Government were shared roughly equally between individuals and corporate citizens. By 1980, 70 per cent were paid by individuals and 30 per cent by corporations. Through the Budget provisions of May 23, by 1986-87, 77.3 per cent of income tax will be paid by individuals and a mere 23.6 per cent by the corporate sector. That accretion of wealth by the already wealthy continues.

The move for the virtual elimination of capital gains tax is being sold to the country as a means of allowing the accumulation of capital in hands which will reinvest it. I submit that we have seen programs like this in previous Budgets. The Lalonde Budget contained an ISIP provision which stands for Indexed Securities Investment Program. That afforded people who wanted to invest in stocks the option of setting up an ISIP in order to avoid paying capital gains on most of their profits from stock investments. This Budget almost entirely eliminates the little capital gains tax that was being charged under the Lalonde Budget.

As a result of such government and budgetary policy, shareholders put different requirements on company officials than may be expected by budget makers at the federal level. They do not use the money saved through decreased taxes to start new businesses or hire more people. Instead, they take the safe route and buy up existing small businesses, which often puts people out of work. The actual result is quite opposite to what the budget planners had hoped for. We must recognize that we are not dealing with rational people. They have failed to study what happens in the real economy.

This particular program, as well as the entire Budget, should be opposed. We should all take every opportunity available to explain why we cannot support this Budget.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to enter into this debate in spite of the impatience of Members on the other side of the House to dispose of this legislation. Bill C-51 seeks to increase the Government's authority to borrow by $18.2 billion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. Has the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper), already spoken to Bill C-51?

Mr. Keeper: No, Mr. Speaker. I have not spoken.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member. He may continue.

Mr. Keeper: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I assume that means that when we get up and ask questions in the House, Members opposite become very sensitive and notice our presence.

Every day the Government claims to be decreasing the deficit. It is asking Canadians to shoulder the burden of that decrease and is particularly asking senior citizens to shoulder the burden. It is significant to note that when the Government asks for increased borrowing authority we must question everything it says about its intentions to reduce the deficit and the impact its economic policy will have on the economy. Seniors are being asked to disrupt their own economic package to which they have contributed with their hard-earned money over a lifetime. Yet the Government is calling into question its own economic policy and its effectiveness in reducing the deficit by seeking this borrowing authority of $18 billion. I suggest that it confesses a failure. Deindexing will cut the purchasing capacity of the Old Age Security pension which makes the credibility of the Government's economic policy crucial.

The Government has accused both the Opposition and the media of distorting the reality of these deindexation proposals. However, whether we call it partial deindexing or deindexing the fact is that the purchasing power of seniors will be $100 less next year, $200 less the next and $300 less the year after that, while the cost of the Government's economic policy increases for the senior citizens who have made this country what it is today.

Although the Government claims to be cutting the deficit, its Budget will cut pensions. Furthermore, the fact that the Government is asking for increased borrowing authority shows that its attempts to cut the deficit have been ineffective. At the same time, the impact of this on seniors is very real and will remove real dollars from their pockets.

Perhaps a partial deindexation of pensions could be justified if everyone was sharing in the burden of deficit reduction. However, the Government's Budget is tough and unfair. The Budget is tough on senior citizens and other groups in this country and is particularly unfair because it gives a tax holiday to the very wealthy in this country. Those who will be eligible for this capital gains tax holiday are those with considerable assets. In the meantime, the Government is asking seniors and others to reduce their incomes in order to combat the deficit.

That is why the Budget is unfair and that is also why it is being rejected. More and more petitions are being presented from Members from all sides of the House. Senior citizens and other Canadians throughout Canada are signing petitions and asking the Government to withdraw its deindexation proposals because they recognize that the Budget is unfair and unjust.

Those petitions will continue to come in until the Government has reversed its position on deindexation. The New Democratic Party has a long traditions of supporting pensioners—beginning with the Canadian Commonwealth Federation, which is the Party from which the NDP grew. We are accustomed to calling on Governments to meet the needs of senior citizens. It is important for us to continue that tradition because Governments must realize that we will fight for seniors every time that they are attacked.

In conclusion, the Government's request for increased borrowing authority shows that its efforts to reduce the deficit have not worked. It is understandable that Canadians are outraged when it asks seniors to cut their incomes in the name of deficit reduction. The Government will have to reverse its position on the deindexation of seniors' pensions.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to have the opportunity to stand before this august assembly to consider Bill C-51, which would accord to Her Majesty's Government authority for borrowing an additional $18 billion this fiscal year.

I have been listening to the debate. In a certain sense it is rather peculiar. The Government is being berated because it has been observed that it is committed to a redistribution of wealth in favour of the wealthy at the expense of the poor and the elderly. This kind of debate has been deemed by some as rather strange. After all, this is a Conservative Government. What would one expect of a Conservative Government except that it would do what it has set about doing? It should not be of any particular surprise that there should be a capital gains tax exemption in favour of the wealthy. It should not come as a particular surprise that those making over $200,000 per year will pay less taxes, while those making less than $30,000 per year will pay more taxes. It should not come as a particular surprise that more money will be furnished to the oil companies for their benefit at the expense of the rest of us. There are no surprises. This is what one would expect of a Conservative right-wing Government. One must ask why there is so much upset and why there is such a tremendous reaction. Perhaps one could attribute the reaction of so many to the fact that the Government has proved to be so precociously hyprocritical.

I direct the attention of the House to a matter which I think should be of great concern to the Government. It said that it would help out small business persons. I do not know to what small business people Hon. Members of the Party opposite have spoken. However, I know that the small business people to whom I spoke, small retailers, small manufacturers and so on, are a little concerned that $7.6 billion will be taken out of the pockets of consumers next year. They have great difficulty trying to understand why they should be encouraged to invest more, why they should expect to have increased sales, and why increased investment and hiring are justified.

The trouble is that the Government promised to be so different. We had a smooth talking salesman and his colleagues going across the country promising that things would be different. I will always remember the day that the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) seemed almost to declare himself a New Democrat by saying: "I agree with you, Ed; there should be a minimum tax on the rich". However, the promise which hurt was the one given several times, the promise that there would continue to be complete indexation of the Old Age Security. As I said, that promise was thrice given. We have heard about confidence, consultation and sacred trust. It is to be observed that the word "sacred" has come into serious question in the last few weeks.

Many Canadians, including senior citizens and the elderly, were convinced by the smooth performance during the election campaign. They were further reassured in the House, despite the fact that they were somewhat miffed by having a Saturday Night Live show with clackers on the Government side. They had no reason to believe that they would be so treacherously treated as to have experienced a proposal, as it now is, to deindex the Old Age Security.

The problem is that it is very difficult to establish trust, especially for politicians. I am willing to accord to the present Prime Minister that during the first portion of his tenure he communicated to all of us at least a basis upon which we could trust him, so we thought. So competently, so sincerely and so soothingly presented were his promises that we thought at the very least that he would live up to what he said. He did not. By so doing, he has wrought almost a revolution among senior citizens and elderly of the country. So offensive was the breaking of those promises that no one has been able to produce a single soul representing any significant organization in Canada who is prepared to accept that deindexation of the Old Age Security was a reasonable and just proposal.

I know Hon. Members opposite feel very uncomfortable in the position in which they find themselves. It is a tragedy when the Prime Minister has created an image of hucksterism in that office. It is offensive and dangerous to the democratic process when the slick promises of a vacuum cleaner salesman become the rhetoric of a Prime Minister. It is dangerous when the Prime Minister is imaged as an individual from whom one would not buy a used car. If I were sitting on the side opposite, I would seriously question the future of a Party which has projected an image that has been so viciously contradicted. A Party which has offended the notion of the morality involved in breaking promises in the fashion that has been done is a Party which will be in trouble.

I stood before about 1,200 senior citizens last week and I asked the following question: Is there anyone here willing to stand up and defend the position that senior citizens should sacrifice what little income they have in order to decrease the deficit or to increase the wealth of the wealthy, that they should be the sacrificial lambs for increasing employment? As the record has shown all over the country, not an individual stood up. It is a sad day when the Leader of the country, having projected an image of trust, of assurances to the elderly and the poor, of honesty and of marriage to sacred trust, should so badly translate it into such treatment of those in society who need a more positive thrust in the direction of this country, a thrust to development of employment and economic growth which we should demand and have.

It is not a situation which does any of us proud. I hope we will proceed just a little farther than this backtracking which is already on the record. Canadian senior citizens know that the forces for revision of the Budget are strong even within the Conservative Party. There is no reason to delay. There is no reason to continue the worry, concern and prospect of suffering among senior citizens who will be placed below the level of poverty as a consequence of deindexation. There is no reason the Government should not accede to the demands of virtually every person in the country, live up to its promise and return to an image of trust within its own ideology. I cannot accept that ideology, but at least it should be true to its ideology and to its promises, and then perhaps we could return the debate to a more reasonable basis.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, in discussing the borrowing authority, very little attention has yet been paid to the money spent by the Government on international development assistance. Some really quite tragic developments are taking place and are being encouraged by, particularly, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), apparently without the knowledge or concurrence of either the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) or the Minister for External Relations (Mrs. Vézina). There is a conflict between finance and regional industrial expansion on the one hand, and external affairs and external relations on the other, and it has been growing since the present Government came into power September 4.

You will recall that the Secretary of State for External Affairs announced at the UN that Canada would continue to have a target of .7 per cent of GNP on official development assistance by 1990. Apparently without discussion with that Minister, the Minister of Finance announced in his November statement that the deadline date would be moved from 1990 to 1995. That came as a surprise to everyone since we had taken the Secretary of State for External Affairs' word that the deadline date would be 1990. As I said, that was the beginning.

We then saw the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) get into the act in his January discussion paper on international trade in which he mentioned the desirability of linking trade and aid through something called the trade and development facility. I think he had intended that originally this would be in the Export Development Corporation, where it might indeed very appropriately belong, but it has now suddenly turned up in the Canadian International Development Agency. Indeed, the Minister of Finance in his Budget stated that the trade and development facility would be in CIDA.

Most significant of all, and it seems to me that this has been almost entirely ignored, the Minister also announced that this trade and development facility would receive half of all increases in the foreign aid Budget for the next decade. Apparently this was done again without the knowledge or concurrence of either the Secretary of State for External Affairs or certainly the Minister for External Relations who is responsible for CIDA.

It was some two months later, after the statement of the Minister for International Trade, that the Minister for External Relations decided it was time to consult the non-governmental organizations about this linking of trade and aid. Now the Green Paper comes out with a list of extremely interesting questions which have again been largely ignored because only four paragraphs are devoted to international development assistance. Nevertheless, it is a series of very interesting questions which it would like the public consultation process to help the Government answer.

One of these questions concerns the nature of the linkage between our trade and aid program. This is put as a question in the Green Paper. The Minister has made a great deal of having full consultation with the Canadian public before any decision is taken. Yet, as we have already seen, a decision has been taken that this new facility established in CIDA with its emphasis on trade will receive half of all increases in the foreign aid budget for the next decade. This just shows how little the Government really believes in the consultation process which it talks about all the time.

It was prepared to decide on star wars without consultation. It was prepared to decide on bilateral trade with the U.S. without consultation. It has now agreed to a couple of weeks' consultation this summer and, if you work out the probable agenda for the hearings, as I have been doing, given the translation requirements and notice to all interested groups, it seems to me to be impossible to hold more than two weeks of hearings if the deadline date of August 23 is to be met. That is just a façade, it is not consultation at all.

In the case of trade and aid, the deed has already been done and it has been announced in the Budget. As far as I can see, the Minister for External Relations, who is responsible for CIDA, is watching the Canadian International Development Agency being turned into the Canadian Export Development Agency. The purpose of this new facility in CIDA is to in a sense duplicate the Export Development Corporation, perhaps because it is not doing a good enough job, and provide export subsidies chiefly to uncompetitive and inefficient Canadian businesses.

A second recent development shows that it is not only the Minister of Finance and the Minister for International Trade who are now determining our international development assistance policy, but also the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

It is very interesting that while the Minister for External Relations was in San Salvador signing an agreement to provide a loan, presumably for development assistance, to El Salvador despite the continuation of the death squad activities, the special envoy of the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion, who is a Salvadoran and who at one time I am told worked for the Salvadoran Embassy in Ottawa, was meeting with a small right wing business clique in Salvador, almost all of whose members are participants in the ARENA Party of D'Aubuisson, telling the elite that they would be the conduit for the development assistance being proposed by the Minister for External Relations.

I know the Minister was asked to meet with the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion for two hours prior to her going to Central America. No doubt she got the word on how the linkage between aid, trade and export subsidies would be facilitated in the loan to El Salvador. What she probably did not know was that the envoy of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion was in Salvador at the very same time giving guarantees that the aid would be, as is the case in other development which I have mentioned, subsidized trade linked in with the small right wing business community in Salvador.

What this House must do, and in the very near future, is persuade the Government to not continue making the final decisions on linking of aid and trade but to genuinely consult the Canadian public as the Green Paper says it wishes to, and see if the Canadian public would like to see a genuine aid program or simply one which subsidizes Canadian and other businesses.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)), moves that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Call in the Members.

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations and I think you will find a disposition, by unanimous consent, that notwithstanding the form of the motion on the Order Paper, it be amended to refer the Bill to Committee of the Whole rather than to a standing committee.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The question is as follows. Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance)) moves that Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority, be read the second time, and, by unanimous consent, referred to Committee of the Whole.

The House divided on the motion which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Charest in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority.

Shall Clause 2 carry?

On Clause 2—

Mr. Baker: Clause 2(2) of the Bill states:

All borrowing authority conferred by subsection (1) that remains unused and in respect of which no action has been taken by the Governor in Council pursuant to Section 37 of the Financial Administration Act shall expire on March 31, 1986.

Would the Minister of State for Finance, in requesting such a large amount, enlighten us on the projections of the President of the Treasury Board? His November statement dealt with the raising of additional revenues to the Government of Canada by increasing fees and eliminating certain programs. Could the Minister indicate to the House whether or not the projections by the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Finance are on line, in view of the fact that many Ministers have cancelled fund raising activities; funds which were supposed to be derived from increasing certain fees. What effect would those modifications in the financial statements have on the requirements of the Government of Canada and the requirements as stated in the borrowing authority Bill?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the changes that have been instituted since the original projections in the fall, based on the kind of fees that the Member is talking about, would be marginal at best.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I imagine that they are marginal in the Minister's eyes when we are talking about $18.2 billion. However, even the smallest projection made in each Government Department means something to that Government Department.

Would the Minister reconsider her answer? Projections have been made by each Minister as to how much the Government of Canada would gain from increased fees as a result of modifying certain fee schedules and modifying the collection of fees from the general public in many areas. Many of these announcements have since been cancelled. In other words, there were subtantial modifications made by every Minister since the November financial statement and since the Ministers made statements regarding the increased revenues to the Department.

If the Minister finds it difficult to understand what I am talking about, let me give her an example. The Department of the Environment said it would raise fees by charging people for telephone calls. As I understand it, that will not now be done. It also said it would save the Government of Canada money by cancelling park guides. That will not be the case. There are a number of examples of increased fees for public usage which have since been cancelled.

Surely the Minister cannot say that these millions of dollars are only marginal. Surely the Minister must have some opinion as to what the effect of those cancellations have been as a result of public uproar in various parts of the country? What effect will that have on the needs of the Government of Canada under this borrowing authority?

Does it give further reason for the inclusion of Clause 2(2) as outlined in the Bill?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I am sure that even the Hon. Member knows that projections are always estimates. There are adjustments to them as time goes along. That should not be a surprise. However, if the Hon. Member will check the Main Estimates again, he will discover that the rate of increase in Government spending is at its lowest in many years. I would suggest that perhaps he is the one who should examine the figures.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I am not supposed to be the one answering questions here. The Minister is supposed to be an expert on this Bill and is supposed to give the House some general opinion of the requirements of the Government of Canada as outlined under this borrowing authority. All that she has told the House so far is that the effects will be marginal because it is only a few hundred million dollars, give or take a few hundred million.

I am asking the question in all sincerity. Has the Government re-examined its financial needs for this financial year in view of the modifications and changes that have been made since the President of the Treasury Board outlined the vicious cuts in Government Departments and projected increases in revenues amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars? Much of that is from programs that have been reinstituted or changed from the collection of higher fees to the collection of lower fees. Surely the Minister knows what I am talking about. Perhaps the President of the Treasury Board, who knows exactly what I am talking about, could give the House the answer to the question.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I believe I have answered the Hon. Member's question. I said that the changes are marginal and that there is information available in the Main Estimates. There is up to date information available in the Budget.

Mr. Boudria: That means she doesn't know.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, if the changes are marginal and do not really have any effect on the needs of the Government of Canada, why is there this increase in fees in the November statement? If it is only marginal, why is so much attention being paid to it by Ministers of the Crown? Surely it is not only marginal. Surely the President of the Treasury Board could stand in his place and tell us what the negative figure has been since his November statement?

Members of the House deserve to have this information. You cannot have a Government operating like this, saying that it needs $18.2 billion, give or take a billion dollars, and just letting it go at that. It is then said in Clause 2 that anything left over will terminate March 31, next year.

Surely we deserve some information regarding the actual figures. What happened since the President of the Treasury Board tabled his statements of cuts and increased revenue measures to the Government of Canada? Surely with such a blanket proposal, the House deserves some statement from the Government regarding its needs for the coming year? If it is not forthcoming, maybe I should give an hour long speech on some of these cuts and decreases in revenue. Maybe that would be a good idea. I am calling upon the Minister to take a stab at answering the question which has been directed to her or, as I said, I can go into specifics regarding the difficulty with which the Government of Canada will be faced as far as realizing certain objectives are concerned.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member will find our projections in the Budget. There are some on page 12 and some on page 13. They are public documents. They have been tabled in the House. If he is having difficulty with this, I suggest that he look it up.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I have a few comments to make about the particular Clause; perhaps some Hon. Members would like to have a cup of coffee. It is not a joke or a laughing matter. When we examine the document entitled Expenditure and Program Review, tabled in November 1984 by the President of the Treasury Board, it is no laughing matter that we see in every government Department tens of millions of dollars being required and being obtained by the Government of Canada through increased fees to the general public. It is not a laughing matter when the Government of Canada tells everyone that they have to pay for their telephone calls to the weather office. The Government of Canada should be encouraging fishermen and everyone else who needs weather updates to telephone the weather office, not discouraging them. It is no laughing matter to have the Minister of the Environment increasing park fees to such a degree.

An Hon. Member: She didn't.

Mr. Baker: I hear the Hon. Member. I would like to tell her that they just came out a couple of days ago in our region. They were some of the hidden costs. There will be approximately $9.2 million in increased revenues for the Department of the Environment through increased user fees in national parks.

What does that mean? I will tell the committee what it means for a family. It means in Terra Nova National Park in Newfoundland that to tie up or moor one's boat, the charge will start at $110 for the season and go up to $590. In view of the imposition of that kind of fee scheduling in national parks, I say to the Minister of State for Finance that people will not use the mooring facilities or the wharfs. Therefore that $9.2 million will be substantially reduced.

Let me look at another fee in national parks, the one related to the use of golf courses. It will cost a family over $500 per season. Obviously people will not use the golf courses on a regular basis. Therefore the $9.2 million will be reduced even further.

In that same "little" saving, according to the Minister of State for Finance, we also see an increase in the cost of semi-serviced lots for people using camp facilities. To what will the increase amount? According to the Government of Canada, it must be equal to or more than that offered by private enterprise. Consequently those charges have risen to exceed those of private enterprises adjacent to national parks.

An Hon. Member: Equal to.

Mr. Baker: I hear the hon. gentleman across the way. I should like to tell him something. The fee for a semi-serviced lot in the Terra Nova National Park is over $8. Since the Hon. Member wants me to get specific, in Beothick Park at Eastport, the charge is $7.

An Hon. Member: I didn't say that.

Mr. Baker: Perhaps he did not say it, but I will tell him in any event. Even down at Trinity Cabins, the charge is $7. The Government's increase is a substantial one over the rates charged by private enterprise. There is no place in Newfoundland where one has to pay to moor a boat, so what did the Department say? It said that it would have to go by a national standard of dockage fees somewhere in central Canada. At what did the Department look when it looked at golf course fees? It said that it could not compete with private enterprise, so it would increase the rates more than those of private enterprise.

Apart from that, things have happened to the Government since these projections were made which could substantially impact upon its requirements. I give as an example for the Minister of State for Finance the protectionist tariffs imposed by the Government of the United States on Crown corporations involved in international marketing practices. Obviously they will impact upon the requirements of Crown corporations which, by law, would have to be written off by the Government of Canada. The Government cannot say that they will not have any impact at all.

The Prime Minister is in his own riding tonight attending a meeting. He has to answer to 700 fish plant workers who are being discriminated against by the United States protectionist tariff on saltfish. These workers went to the Prime Minister prior to the Quebec Summit and told him that this problem would arise. The Prime Minister indicated that he would raise it with the President of the United States and that he thought there would not be any problem. On Thursday night, at nine o'clock, down comes the decree from the United States Department of Commerce indicating that there would be a 20.75 per cent tariff on saltfish from the north shore of Quebec, affecting the riding of the Prime Minister, my riding and several other ridings represented in the House. That does not have to be made up by private enterprise. That has to be made up by an agency of the Government of Canada, and that one action will cost that agency millions and millions of dollars. It has been established by law that that Crown corporation must buy all saltfish from fishermen in its coverage area, which includes the entire Quebec north shore and all of Newfoundland.

Mr. Robichaud: And Labrador.

Mr. Baker: And all of Labrador, yes. I am not talking about the tariff imposed on saltfish as it relates to private companies. They have been subjected to an 11 per cent or 12 per cent charge by the Government of the United States, but in this case with 20.75 cents on the dollar, the Department of Fisheries and Oceans will have to come up with the difference to make up for the tariff.

The Minister of State for Finance should realize that when establishments which are in place as a result of regulations,

Crown corporations, announce to fishermen in the riding of the Prime Minister, or for that matter in any riding in Newfoundland or Labrador, a new price structure for the coming year, as was done three weeks ago, they have to pay that money. On top of that, fishermen have to be compensated for the U.S. tariff. They cannot compensate by charging fishermen less because by law this particular corporation announced its fee structure.

I have another example for the Minister of State for Finance. The Government indicates that it will triple the rates. After looking at the statement of the Hon. President of the Treasury Board, who was only doing what he was ordered to do by Cabinet in November 1984 and in the subsequent statements emanating therefrom, we see that the cancellation of several federal government programs was announced. For example, the cancellation of the fisheries vessel insurance program was announced. What did the Liberal Opposition do in this Chamber? It rose and said that the Government could not cancel it, that it had to reverse its decision. The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans rose and said that that program could be cancelled because the President of the Treasury Board said so. However, as time went on, and as we in the Opposition put on the pressure, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans realized that he could not cancel that program and that therefore he could not save the projected $8 million. He could not save the money, so what did he do? He turned around and said that he would triple the rates. We are back into the same situation of having tripled rates and fishermen, who do not require it because the loan authority does not demand it, are not getting the insurance. In that event the projection of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans as far as the $8 million is concerned goes completely out the window.

The Minister of State for Finance and the President of the Treasury Board have to go back to the drawing board. They should ask the Minister of Labour what he is going to do when every provincial administration says that he has to increase the federal minimum wage. What will that do? It will increase the cost of every single contract the Government has with security companies and cleaning companies in airports. It will increase charges to the Government through the Department of Public Works and the Department of Supply and Services.

The Government has to increase the minimum wage. It said it was not going to do it, but I say it will have to do it and very quickly because the federal minimum wage, for the first time in our history, is less than that of any province in Canada. Tory times are hard times. In your province, Mr. Chairman, the minimum wage is $4.58 an hour and the federal minimum wage is $3.50 an hour. That cannot continue because it violates the Labour Code. The Code does not spell it out directly, but it does say that it must reflect the average minimum wage rate across Canada and there is no way the Government can get out of it. But it has not included that in any financial statement or expenditure review program.

So my original question for the Minister is very relevant. What are the actual projections? What is it going to do? There are big gaps in the program announced by the Government to raise fees, increase rents and everything else. You know that a lot of these programs have been cancelled or reorganized. So the question to the Minister was a perfectly logical question and I would be pleased now to take my seat and—

Mr. Baker: If the Minister will recognize that I have a legitimate point, then yes, Mr. Chairman, I will take my seat. But I am sure you will recognize me again if she says that it is only a flash in the pan, that a couple of hundred million dollars here or there or everywhere does not really matter.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I never suggested that the question was not a terribly serious question. I indicated that in my considered opinion the impact would be marginal. The reason for that is that we have been working very hard as a government to cut our expenditures and keep the management of government services under control. If there are adjustments within departments they will be within good management practices, and if there are additional expenditures, as the Hon. Member well knows, they will have to be approved by the House, will they not?

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, I do not think the Minister completely understands what I am talking about.

Mr. Lewis: Even Herb Gray is leaving.

Mr. Baker: I was requesting some indication from the Minister about just how much money was going to be required by every Government Department in order to function.

Mr. Oberle: You have the figure right there.

Mr. Baker: Let me elaborate some more, then perhaps the Minister might be able to understand what I am talking about.

Mrs. McDougall: George, I can hardly wait.

Mr. Baker: Right now, at this very minute, the Government of Canada has decided to cut back on person years in its various departments.

Mr. Lewis: What?

Mr. Baker: To cut back on person years. We used to call it man years, now it is person years.

Mr. Lewis: The Minister understands that.

Mr. Baker: The Government notified every federal Department that there must be a cut-back in the number of people hired in the Departments. The Government talks about savings in person years, but nowhere in the financial statements or the Budget papers does it indicate what the increased costs will be to the Government. Yesterday we heard the Government was going to cut back the number of RCMP officer in certain airports. They will be replaced by private security companies. It is one thing to do that, but it is another thing when Government Departments bring in an employee who has been working for 19 years, as was the case with one I had the other day, or 10, 12, or 13 years, and saying to them that we cannot afford to pay them because our person-years have been cut. However, we will offer you a personal contract. I do not see that in the Department of Supply and Services' envelope, Mr. Chairman.

For example, what actually happens is that 350 employees of the Small Craft Harbours section of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans across the country will be offered a personal contract or be hired through a private engineering or consulting company to do their work. As a result, all those Departments which have been cut back will now have to supply money to the Department of Supply and Services to pay for those personal contracts, or that Department will have to pay.

Here is the shame of it. With that policy, the Government still has to pay wages, overtime and an amount to make up for the loss of benefits, but it also has to pay a profit to the person who is hiring the worker concerned. So when you ask the Department of Supply and Services how much extra that person-year is going to cost the Government, they say from 25 per cent to 30 per cent more. But what do you see when you look at the financial papers? You see a saving because of cuts in person-years. There are orders given to Government Departments to cut back on this or that function or to cancel this or that program. There are only six or seven small craft harbours people who are in the field now in Newfoundland. There are only 10 or 12 of them in Nova Scotia and 30 or 40 in Quebec. However, this adds up to about 300 people. This measure in the budgetary papers appears on only one line.

However, these people are losing their positions as public servants. They are losing their pensions and all of their benefits for all time and they are being offered a personal contract or the opportunity to work through a private consulting firm. These people are professional engineers. They have always done that type of work. They go to the communities along the coastline of eastern Canada and the Arctic to help build wharves, slipways or breakwaters. They consult with local community groups who apply for what we used to call Canada Works programs before the present Government got its hands on them. We do not know what that program will be called in the fall.

It is true that the service to the community groups and the local organizations will still exist. However, it will exist at an increased cost to the Government of Canada. It is not, as the budgetary papers would show, a reduction in the cost of Government. It is not a reduction in the amount of money required just because there is a reduction in person-years. It is actually an increase to the expenditures of the Government of Canada because it has to pay for those contracts, either directly or indirectly.

Let me deal with another area that is hazy. I am again discussing the Minister of Labour and a matter that has not even been discussed in this Chamber. It is a matter that should have been discussed; there are a great many matters like that.

The announced reductions in the Expenditure and Review Program of the President of the Treasury Board and the statement made by the Minister of Labour indicate that the Government is going to save money by cutting 25 per cent of the budget on the home repair program across Canada. That shows up as a 25 per cent reduction in the Expenditure and Review Program and in the Budget papers. This works both ways. In this particular case, the reduction will be greater than 25 per cent. Why is that?

I do not think that the cuts contained in these Budget papers and the Expenditure and Review Program was completely fair. Newfoundland got cut by 44 per cent and Quebec got cut by 48 per cent while the national average was 25 per cent. How the Government arrived at those figures, I do not know. However, when this cut was made, the Department, the Minister, the President of the Treasury Board, the Minister of Finance and all Members of this Chamber did not realize something.

When the cuts went into place only a month ago, all of these offices that administered the program that was cut by 25 per cent through this Expenditure and Review Program could no longer exist. They existed on the fees that they received for the number of applications they processed. That figure was an average of $450 across the country, $500 if it was a municipality and $1,300 if it was in the north. The salaries of the clerks, inspectors and managers were paid on the basis of the number of applications that were processed. Along comes this Expenditure and Review Program which cuts everything across the nation by 25 per cent and cuts some provinces by more than 40 per cent. All of a sudden these offices were left with one-third of the money they had to spend last year, money on which they were just getting by. They could not process enough applications to maintain their existence. The offices are therefore closing down.

The Minister of Labour should know about this. Obviously his advisors have told him that last year some areas were extended for coverage under this home repair program. Big announcements were made in every single province of Canada indicating that the Government would extend this program, just like it did last spring. All of a sudden the Government was left with all of these extended areas but a budget that was cut by 25 per cent. All organizations that were operating the RRAP program got hit twice. They got hit by the reduction of 25 per cent and they got hit with another reduction because the areas of coverage were extended.

What are we now left with? We are left with hundreds and hundreds of homeowners in every single community in this country who are being told that they are too far down on the list to be serviced. However, they were told last year that their turn was coming up next. Now the CMHC and the provincial housing authorities are devising criteria so that they can knock people off the list. If they have a list containing 500 families and they know that they cannot deliver, they say that they are going to restrict the criteria and make it more difficult to qualify.

This is happening when all of these people felt that the home repair program was a cheap way to get their homes repaired, because anyone could get a loan to cover the cost. If one was a millionaire, one could still get a loan. Anyone qualified for a loan. The public felt that this was a great program. All homeowners needed to do was establish the fact that they needed that loan, based on the size or condition of their dwellings and the size of their families. Now, because of this new measure brought about by the reduction in expenditures, there are hundreds upon hundreds of people who will not be able to receive the benefits of the program which has been hit by the 25 per cent cut.

The Minister of Labour cannot now turn around and tell the Minister of State for Finance that he needs additional money because the program was not only cut by 25 per cent but was knocked out of half the country. Now all these areas of Newfoundland no longer qualify because there are no longer any RRAP offices in operation. The provincial administrations refused to operate the program and, since they refused to operate the program and pay the salaries, those offices have to close.

The Minister of State for Finance should realize a couple of realities as they relate to eastern Canada. There has been one of the worst fishing seasons in living memory. The ice is still blocked in on certain parts of the coastline. Fishermen are unable to fish. Fish plants are unable to operate. Even in areas where the ice went out, the water is still too cold for fish. If the water is very cold, the fishermen cannot fish.

Now the Government of Canada has made an about turn. The Minister of Justice announced on behalf of the Minister of Employment and Immigration that the Government would extend unemployment insurance benefits for fishermen this year because the fishery is bad. What was the mistake which was made in the submission to Cabinet, that was approved, which appears in the expenditure program of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans?

The error was that the Government thought that it was just as bad a year this year as it was two years ago when a similar program was implemented. In other words, the Government is going to be faced with the reality this week of having to approve more money for that program. Once the Government has announced it, it cannot stop it. The Government cannot tell people that they will receive an extension of unemployment insurance benefits and then say that it only meant to provide an extension of two weeks. The announcement indicated that the benefits would be extended until the ice was gone and the fishermen could once again fish. That is what was in the announcement of the Minister. Therefore, the Government of Canada, because of the adverse weather conditions, the temperature of the water, and the ice that surrounds the coastline, knows that it must cough up more money in order to satisfy that program and the terms and conditions which were announced by the Minister of Justice.

Changes will have to be made before the end of the summer. The Minister of Employment and Immigration recognizes that some changes will have to be made as far as her general policy is concerned. She said that she would save $250 million. The Minister of State for Finance probably is thinking that $250 million is only marginal. However, $250 million would reduce the borrowing authority to only $18 billion! Presently it is only $18.2 billion! The Minister of Employment and Immigration has announced that she will not need approximately $200 million this year because of reductions and redefinitions within the Department that controls unemployment insurance. The figure that is used in the Expenditure Review Program is absolutely crazy.

The Minister cannot say in a financial review that she will save $200 million in the coming year because modifications will be made to the interview process for unemployment insurance purposes. I would like to tell the House why that is wrong. The Minister is talking about bringing people into an unemployment insurance office and interviewing them. The Minister is talking about picking up the telephone in every office and asking people if they are looking for work. If those people cannot be reached—Mr. Chairman, I see that my time has expired.

I am sorry that there is not another Clause in the Bill. I have not yet said what I wanted to. However, I suppose my time has expired. I will conclude by saying that in passing this Bill we will give the authority to the Government of Canada to borrow $18,200,000,000, give or take $600 million!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I have a number of questions I want to ask the Minister of State for Finance. I know that the House would like to pass this Bill quickly, but I would remind the Minister that the Bill involves $18 billion. The Minister is familiar with the amount of deferred corporate tax which is presently on the books. Could she give us an approximate idea of what that sum is?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I would be very happy to tell the Hon. Member what is the current amount of the deferred corporate tax. However, I would first like to explain to him that the most important expenditure which the Government makes is on the interest on the debt. The interest on the debt is $22.6 billion. That is more than we are able to pay for health care, Old Age Security and other things. It is because of that debt that we must borrow this money. Had we not inherited the profligate record of the former Government, we would not be in this position and we would be able to get on with the job of managing the Government and the programs in which we, as a Government, are so interested.

The good management which we have brought to the Government is a record in which we take some pride. Our expenditures show the lowest increase in 17 years. Ministers are managing their Departments in a manner which keeps their expenditures under close control. We have been able to establish an exceptionally good record for expenditures on training and employment initiatives which involve the private sector and local communities as well as the federal Government. It is very important for the Hon. Member to know those things. He should also recognize the efforts which we have made in inflation control and in bringing the debt to a level we will be able to manage much more effectively in future years.

I should also point out to him that in response to the wishes of the House, and as an act of good management, the Borrowing Authority Bill was introduced within two days after the presentation of the Budget. Of course, that means that our figures are up to date. We recognize the connection between having good records before the House and being able to make an assessment of the amount of borrowing authority which will be required. The responsible actions which we have taken are a very important part of the future financial management practices of the Government. The fees to which the former Member referred are part of our management practices. I believe that we have established the most appropriate way to deal with the deficit and the accumulated debt. As a result, we will be able to ask for less borrowing authority next year than would otherwise be required.

One of the important items we have brought forward—and I know the Hon. Member will be interested in it—is the review of corporate taxation. That review will be under way shortly. We are looking at all the measures we use in the corporate sector to raise money. We are also looking at how the corporate tax structure should be changed so that it will be fair and equitable, and will raise the revenues the Government needs. That will give us more flexibility in revenue and expenditure planning.

We are attempting to ensure that Canadian people have the jobs and the social policy framework which they require for the future. And I think what we have attempted to do in the small sector is going to be very important to that.

• (1830)

In response to the direct question, I will get back to the Hon. Member with the answer. I might tell him, however, that the underlying principle of classification, of course, as between budgetary and non-budgetary transactions, is that transactions changing the net indebtedness of the Government are classified as budgetary while transactions involving the creation of an offsetting financial asset or liability are non-budgetary. For example, a loan by the Government increases financial assets since the recipient incurs an obligation to repay the loan. And the creation of the asset for the Government is offset either by a reduction in another asset, which is typically cash, or a corresponding increase in a financial liability, which is typically unmatured debt. I am sure that answers the Hon. Member's question.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure if that answers my question or not.

Mr. Althouse: We were looking for a number, I think.

Mr. Riis: Is the Minister saying that it is at this point difficult, if not impossible, to arrive at a figure for the amount of accumulated deferred corporate tax? I am not looking for a specific number but even within 10 per cent or 20 per cent would be helpful. Surely the Minister must have some general idea.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I think what I am indicating is that we do not have the number in our documents, but obviously there will be a lot of variables in the future as to what the implications are, and it will depend on corporate revenues and profitability, how that is effective over time and how much investment corporations continue to make.

Mr. Riis: Let me be more specific, Mr. Chairman. I don't want to pursue this needlessly but what I want to know is, as of today—not what the future holds—what is the existing value of deferred corporate tax? Is it $20 billion, $5 billion, $18 billion? That is the question. It is not what is going to happen but what it is as of today when we are requested to approve $18 billion in borrowing authority.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, perhaps if the Hon. Member would indulge me for a moment, one of my officials will attempt to get an answer to that question.

Mr. Riis: Thank you. I would appreciate that. Again to set some of the Minister's earlier comments into context, regarding the amount of money this year—the 1985-1986 fiscal year—what is the value of the corporate tax expenditures for this period? Is that question clear to the Minister?

Mrs. McDougall: No, not really.

Mr. Riis: In other words, we know what are certain costs to the Government. This particular provision costs the Government this much and another provision that much. A lot of people ask the question in terms of the corporate expenditure account, such as the Minister laid out back in 1979. He laid out what the accumulated value of that was, as well as under the corporate tax expenditures for the various programs so that we could evaluate. While the Minister says this may be done in the future or this will be evaluated, could we have some idea of the total value of corporate tax expenditures in the country?

Mrs. McDougall: Perhaps when my other official comes back he could change places and one of them will try to find out. I doubt that we would have a record of that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, the Minister has indicated that there is a great deal of fiscal management now in place in the various Departments as reflected in the Estimates and the generation of the Estimates. Within the Ministries and Departments which come under what is called the "social envelope", how is it that the Government evaluates the efficiency of its expenditures? In other words, we have had projections from previous speakers if we cut 10 per cent here or 25 per cent of this program. How does the Minister evaluate whether or not these programs are effective?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, all that would be up to individual Ministers, not up to the Department of Finance. The Ministers themselves bring judgment to their Departments. There has obviously been a great deal of overspending in the past, and it is a case of looking at each envelope on social programs and bringing the best judgment to what is effective; have the needs in the country shifted or have they not shifted. Those are ongoing evaluations which I believe any intelligent Minister would make in a social portfolio as well as an economic portfolio—I think we owe that to the Canadian public—so that we do put our resources to work in ways which deal with the present and the future and not with the past.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the Minister could respond to this question, and it is one which is on a lot of people's minds these days, that is the critical cuts in pension increases which has been debated. How did the Government evaluate that in terms of deciding that this was an appropriate action at this point in time to reduce the increase in OAS?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I think the question of the evaluation which would be done by the Minister of National Health and Welfare should probably be directed to him. In terms of the Department of Finance, the Minister of Finance in bringing this Budget made an assessment of how we could meet the real needs of the elderly poor, which was why the Guaranteed Income Supplement was fully indexed, and we took into account that most Canadians we spoke with in our pre-Budget consultations all suggested that we ensure, if we only had a limited amount of money—which the people understand in this country—that we look after the neediest people first. That is why the evaluation was that the Guaranteed Income Supplement should remain fully indexed, and we were more than prepared to do that.

We have tried to be as fair as possible in spreading through the system how we deal with the problems we have. It is always a very difficult line to draw and we brought our best judgment to that. I think that we will find before our first term is up that social policy will give us more flexibility. This is our first Budget and not our last.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, what I find interesting, in light of the Minister's last response is that she will know, of course, as everyone in the House knows, that as a result of the deindexing of the increase to OAS, 220,000 pensioners will now be receiving incomes which place them below the poverty line, by the government's own definition of "poverty line". When one sees 220,000 seniors now living below the poverty line, one would have to say that that is inappropriate; it surely is not an appropraite step to take. However, Mr. Chairman, we will leave that for another discussion at another time.

With respect to this Bill before us, the Minister is requesting $18.2 billion in borrowing authority. She obviously feels that reducing a senior's disposable income by 3 per cent will not cause undue hardship. How would the Minister feel if Hon. Members of the Opposition tonight decided that it might be a prudent measure to reduce this borrowing authority by 3 per cent which would eliminate $546 million? If 3 per cent is nothing to worry about, how would the Minister feel if we moved an amendment later tonight to reduce it by 3 per cent?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the Government is attempting to manage its affairs well and will continue to do so. We have budgeted very closely and would prefer not to borrow any money at all. The easiest government policy in the world is to write a cheque. The former Government did that time after time. It is the easy policy, but not one which is fair or good for the future of the country.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, we are certainly concerned about the amount of government spending, but by the same token we do not talk about the hundreds of millions of dollars that are being offered to all sorts of sectors of the economy which we might feel are highly questionable. In order to bring some wisdom to the way in which funds are expended by the Government, it may be appropriate to reduce the amount by $546 million in order to bring some extra pressure to bear. We are certainly not prepared to accept the priorities of the Government in terms of expenditures and cut-backs. The increased user fees in many areas are inappropriate, particularly now that we are giving vast sums of money to the oil companies as a result of the Western Accord.

If we are to give the Government authorization to borrow an extra $18 billion, it is not unrealistic for Members of the House of Commons to ask for some projections. During discussions on the Budget, it became clear that the Department of Finance has done these projections. They have factored in, as well as possible, the various elements of the economy and the Government's measures. Can the Minister give us any indication of what the Government programs will do in terms of increased employment?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the record of this Government in terms of jobs has been very good. There has been a steady increase in the number of jobs. I think something like 235,000 have been created. The regular increase in employment has been spread throughout the country. The Western Energy Accord has resulted in greater investment throughout Canada. The jobs from the Western Energy Accord are not just in Alberta and the other energy producing provinces, they exist throughout Ontario and Quebec in the manufacturing sector. The number of jobs that have been forthcoming reflect the fact that there is a real awareness of Canada and a need for private sector initiative and development which will enable us to create those jobs. That is what we have done in this Budget.

Mr. Riis: The Canada Permanent Trust Company recently completed a survey of the forecasts of a number of business economists. Interestingly, none of the economists interviewed agreed that the promise of job creation by the Minister of Finance will succeed. About 20 per cent of those business economists interviewed expect the jobless rate to be higher than it was before the Budget.

The other day I read some comments made by R. B. Bennett during the 1930 election campaign. At that time he, too, was saying that they were going to create tens of thousands of jobs in the next number of years.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We have done it.

An Hon. Member: Look at the facts.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order.

Mr. Riis: They get a little sensitive when I remind them of what R. B. Bennett said. I suspect that if we compared the campaign rhetoric of 1930 with that of 1984 we would find some real similarities. Perhaps a little later in the evening we will have a chance to do that, Mr. Chairman.

The Minister commented on her wish list or hope list in terms of employment figures. With regard to the economic intelligence that she has from the Department of Finance, what does the Minister believe about disposable incomes of Canadians as a result of the Budget? Surely that is critical in terms of an economic recovery and in terms of encouraging the small business sector to expand. What do the Budget and the policies of the Government do in terms of disposable income for Canadians?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: A very short answer, please, by the Minister of State for Finance.

Mrs. McDougall: Disposable income is a very important part of public consumption, just as business investment is. I know that the Hon. Member is very fond of quoting business economists indicated that our actions would lead to fewer jobs. They were not correct then and I do not think they will be correct now.

Mr. Riis: I would like to make one last comment and then I will give the floor to my hon. colleague. In order not to disappoint the Minister, I will once again quote her collection of business economists. In their analysis they say that the new tax measures in the Budget will drastically reduce the spending power of the average Canadian. The November statement of the Minister of Finance and the Budget will together take $1,000 a year out of the pockets of the average Canadian family through increases in taxes and reduced deductions. Mr. Chairman, $1,000 a family is going to have a very important impact on the ability of the small and medium sized business sectors to expand in spite of their best intentions. How is $1,000 taken from every family in Canada going to be useful in terms of encouraging economic expansion and development?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the best thing that we can do for the country is to lower interest rates because interest rates get built into the costs that people pay. We have a responsibility to the people of Canada to ensure that in the future we will not have the kind of inflation and interest rate policies that we had in the past, which have cost the country so dearly. They are the reason that we have a high unemployment rate and a high deficit. They are the reason that we must bring some sense into our fiscal framework which we have not seen in this country for many years. We are not taking money out of the pockets of the people for no good use. It is for the purpose of building up the fiscal integrity of how we deal with the future so that we are able to bring forward the programs and flexibilities that people will need in the future.

Mr. Hopkins: Mr. Chairman, when the Minister of State for Finance and her colleagues promised the sky to voters last summer, did they not realize that they might have to face the music some day and pay for those promises? Can she and her front-bench colleagues not add and subtract? There is no justification for getting up in the House day after day and saying that they cannot do it because of the debt situation in the country. There was a debt situation last summer which they talked about all the time, but they still went ahead and made all kinds of promises. The Prime Minister even went to the extent of putting his name on a telex sent to the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories in my riding of Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke. He said not to worry one bit, that not only were they going to retain the present research facilities, they were even considering expanding them. Did the Prime Minister not realize at the time that there had been deficit budgeting in the country? Did he make that promise seriously? Obviously not.

The Government has just chopped 50 per cent from research and development in Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. The Chalk River Nuclear Labs are a very important part of that research and development. For the Prime Minister to go back on a promise is unforgivable, just as it is unforgivable for people on the front benches of the Government to state day in and day out that they did not know the country was in debt so they cannot keep their promises. Is that what the Prime Minister meant when he told the senior citizens of this country that their financial situation was a sacred trust?

The Minister of Finance introduces a Budget, along with the Minister of State for Finance and the Cabinet, that knocks out the first 3 per cent of indexing of the inflationary increase from the pensions of senior citizens of this country. The Government thought it could get away with this by saying that it would provide jobs for the children and grandchildren of pensioners. However, senior citizens of this country are smarter than the front bench of the Conservative Government because they can see through that ploy very easily. The Government is simply trying to make itself look good by cutting back.

A review of history shows that when Marc Lalonde left the finance portfolio, there was a $30 billion debt. When the Conservative Government took office, it ran that debt up to $38 billion and brought it back to $34 billion, then suggested that it had made great progress. That is their logic.

Since the Conservatives follow their great process of consultation, did the five or six conservative MPs from the Ottawa area suggest to the Minister of State for Finance that the Public Service of Canada should be cut by 15,000? Did they support that concept? Was it the Minister of National Health and Welfare who suggested to the Government that it cut research and development in Atomic Energy of Canada Limited by $100 million? He has Whiteshell in his constituency, another AECL facility. I doubt very much that he made that suggestion.

The Prime Minister of the country not only promised but made a commitment to the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories that there would be no cuts in that institution. He knew full well at the time that there had been deficit financing in this country. The Government cannot deny that there was insincerity in that promise and that it was absolutely unfulfilled. Not only did he not fulfil that promise, the Government wants to make itself look good by removing money that those labs have managed to earn. It will lift $50 million from AECL's reserves this year and another $20 million from its reserves next year and are applying it to the national debt. Those labs will be left with nothing to back up the situation they will be facing as a result of the $100 million cut on research and development.

One of the platforms on which the Government ran during the election was that it would increase research and development in the country and fully encourage it. The Minister of State for Science and Technology, who has four degrees behind him, went to the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories to visit the scientists and declare his friendship. He is certainly not a friend today. He is following the Government without any sympathy for the fact that $100 million is being but back from research and development, which is 50 per cent of the Government grant to that institution.

We are sometimes told not to raise the question of the Avro Arrow because there is no comparison. I say that there is a comparison because Atomic Energy of Canada Limited has some of the finest engineers, chemists, physicists, and scientists in the country. Furthermore, the Government is driving the talent away from the National Research Council. It cannot stand success.

It took years to build a success story in research and development in this country. For example, cheap hydroelectric power has been produced through the nuclear reactors in this country. The Province of Ontario alone has saved the residents of Ontario billions of dollars in energy costs by providing energy from Candu reactors. Canadians take it for granted that everyone knows about these successes, but obviously the Government does not know. Without those reactors which produce the cheapest form of hydro that can be found, central Ontario, the home of the Minister of State for Finance and the Minister of Finance, would not have the energy resources to run those industries, factories and businesses in Toronto.

The Minister of Finance talks about rewarding success. However, the way he rewarded success was to chop 50 per cent from the research budget of the very people in AECL who have saved Canadians billions of dollars in energy costs alone. The Government cut $100 million from the research and development budget of AECL and also took $70 million from its reserves without warning. Furthermore, it has proposed no alternative. While it proposes to charge users more, there is no firm agreement in that respect. Although there are those who say the cut-backs will not be so detrimental, why is the Government sending public relations officers to those institutions to offer early retirement in order to reduce the number of jobs by 450? Even that will not be enough to cover the bill, and others will have to be laid off.

Again, the Government is downgrading one of the finest research establishments in the country. I was told by one Member that it is not paying its way. However, that is another story. Many companies, both domestic and foreign international companies are related to the nuclear industry in this nation. They send programs to the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories and other facilities at AECL to conduct research and development. Once their problems are solved, they use those solutions in their industries. That is the pay-off. The Government is slashing that capability. It is saying: "Okay, tomorrow you face the music; we will not give you any more money for it or any time to bridge the gap."

I have another very good example. The present Minister of Supply and Services said outside the base gate at Petawawa in my home community during the election campaign that if the Conservatives were elected, they would increase in real terms national defence expenditures by 6 per cent. I am sure Hon. Members remember that famous pamphlet, Honour the Commitment, which was circulated among Canadian Armed Forces personnel. Where is the honour and where is the commitment today? The Government is not even meeting the NATO commitment decided upon by NATO Ministers.

Mr. Dick: It is better than the Liberals did.

Mr. Hopkins: I hear the Hon. Member for Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton. He just proved that he does not know what he is talking about. When we left power, we were at a 4.1 per cent real increase in spending on national defence, and the Conservatives are away below that percentage today.

Mr. Dick: Are those your projections or what you were spending?

Mr. Hopkins: The Hon. Member is good at coming into the House and shouting. Sometimes he is better at it from the seat of his pants than from the soles of his feet. Another example would be the promises to the agricultural industry, all those great promises to help out farmers.

Mr. Gormley: Capital gains.

Mr. Hopkins: The Hon. Member refers to capital gains. That helps them get out of farming. It does not help them to remain in farming, to become involved in farming for the first time or to help those in trouble in the agricultural industry. That is what the Hon. Member's Party promised to do during the election campaign, and it has not been done. Let us talk about subsidization and assistance to farmers. Today, Canadian farmers are competing with the European Economic Community and its great subsidizations to agricultural industries in European countries. Agriculture is one of our greatest industries. However, people do not look upon it as an industry. They look upon it as a bunch of homes in which people live. Agriculture is big business today, and it is time for everyone to recognize it.

What will happen to all the equipment promised for the Canadian Armed Forces? Thank goodness the Liberals got most of it ordered and on stream before they left office. Otherwise, the Armed Forces would certainly not have it today. I am sorry that the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence is not in the House this evening. Where is the pay increase for the Canadian Armed Forces? They have been looking for it for weeks, indeed for months. Why was it not announced in April? Is the Minister of State for Finance prepared to tell us today where that increase is?

The Minister of National Defence himself did the cutting as chairman of the cutting committee in Cabinet. Is he saying that the money to pay for the increase for the Armed Forces is in this package? We have not been told about that. All we have is a one-page Bill which does not tell us a thing about that. I ask the Minister of State for Finance, where is the pay increase for the Canadian Armed Forces? Is the Government holding it up as a money saving device as well? Is it holding it up the same as it is trying to hold 3 per cent back from senior citizens on an annual basis? The Minister says that it is only 3 per cent, but what will it be over two, three, four or five years?

It is great to go out in an election campaign, as did the Conservative Party last summer, and make all kinds of promises. However, when it comes time to keep them, that Party says that it did not know there was no money and that it cannot do those things. People are sick and tired of hearing that from the Ministers on the government front benches. An Hon. Conservative Member from the Cobourg area—the name of his riding escapes me at the moment—at a committee meeting one night at least had the courage to say to the Minister of National Defence that it was time that he got off his butt and started to give some answers. He also said that it was time for the Government to get off its collective butt and to start giving some answers. Now that the answers are forthcoming, we know why they were so long in coming. These people did not want to give those answers in the first place.

During the election campaign, the Prime Minister ran around the nation and called the interest of the senior citizens a sacred trust. He said that nothing would happen to them and that they would be looked after. Afterwards, in a rather underhanded manner through the Minister of Finance and his colleagues, he proceeded to pull 3 per cent out from underneath them on an annual basis. Also, he placed a half page ad in a local newspaper which indicated: "You are safe". He indicated that they were committed to full funding and to the full operation of the Chalk Nuclear Laboratories. He indicated that they were safe in Conservative hands, that nothing would happen to them. However, a few months later, after being in power, they chopped $170 million and have no shame about it. That is the worst part of it. The people out there are beginning to know the scenario and what this new Government is all about.

Also, the Government said that it would increase jobs through the private sector. However, it goes into regions of the country and cuts out many jobs.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but the 20-minute period is over.

Mr. Deans: We will give him an extension if he would like more time.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask some questions and focus them on th area which the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap was exploring before. I am pleased to see that the official has returned, and I trust that the Minister of State for Finance has some idea by now of what the total deferred taxes might be. Perhaps I could ask for that particular figure before expanding on it and raising some further questions. Would the Minister of State for Finance have an indication of the total of the deferred taxes?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, we are still looking at that. It will arrive before this session draws painfully to a conclusion. Perhaps I might indicate some of the things which have been happening in our economy that I should think—

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Chairman, I would prefer to ask some questions, not to hear a speech.

• (1910)

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I would have preferred not to have so many speeches, too, but there seems to have been quite a number from the other side. Perhaps I could just point out for the edification of the Hon. Member who used to, as I recall, as did many members of the Opposition, talk a lot about jobs, that I do not hear them talking about jobs much any more. I wanted to correct the figure I gave earlier on the number of jobs created because there actually have been 271,000 jobs created. Employment increased by 159,000 in April and May, the largest two-month increase in over 12 years. The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate declined to 10.5 per cent in May from 10.9 per cent in April. The unemployment rate in May was the lowest in three years. Almost 80 per cent of the increase in jobs was in full-time employment. Youth unemployment rose significantly while adult employment grew moderately.

After the painful, painful increase in unemployment this country has suffered for so many years, that is a record this Government can be proud of. Of course, Hon. Members on the other side of the House do not talk much about employment and jobs any more because they know we have a good record in that area and that our measures have worked. We are creating jobs and opportunities for Canadians, and that is a record we can be proud of. Hon. Members now choose to ignore that. They have lost interest in jobs for Canadians all over this country.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Chairman, the concerns we feel about creation of employment in order to get this country back to 4 per cent unemployment do not need any lectures from the Minister.

To return to the topic I was raising a moment ago and picking up on what my friend from Kamloops-Shuswap had to say dealing with deferred taxes and corporate tax expenditures, let the record show that a good hour of questioning of the Minister has not given us the total of deferred corporate taxes. I do not doubt that the search through the records and the guesstimation required would produce an astonishing figure. Surely tens of billions of dollars have gone uncollected, have had to be borrowed and added to the national debt because of this situation. The key point is there has not been any change in nine months of this Government. Nor was there much change in the nine months of the previous Conservative Government.

The question I have for the Minister, one which interests every taxpayer in this country, is what the grand total might be of taxes not collected but which have been turned into capital for Canadian companies or distributed to shareholders. If the total were to reach $100 billion, something over half of the national debt, that is money on which interest is being paid by taxpayers now for the enrichment of corporations and wealthy Canadians. This Government and these Ministers, present and absent, do not intend to do a damn thing about it by the appearance of things. There has been little talk about looking at corporate taxes, but it is primarily at where the losses could be pulled in so as to reduce one's tax burden.

The taxpayers of this country have been told this year they are going to pay three times as much tax as the corporations do, about 45 cents out of every dollar Ottawa takes in comes from individuals and only 15 cents from corporations. Taxpayers have been flimflammed by this Government talking about the enormous national debt, but they want to know exactly how much of the wealth of Canada was taken out of their pockets. They want to know exactly what proportion of their taxes is the result of allowing nine corporate family groups to acquire something like half of the stock traded in the TSE 300. They want to know exactly how much this Government and previous Liberal Governments have taken from their pockets in the process of making a handful of Canadians spectacularly wealthy.

It is appalling that a Government which has been in office for nine or ten months does not have any idea of what those figures are. It is surely appalling that a Government which would pride itself on being business-like has no idea what those figures are. Individual taxpayers of Canada, those people we have talked about ad nauseam, as the Government would probably say, have a very great interest in knowing exactly how much of their tax burden is the result of this transfer of wealth. They want to know if these cut-backs by the Government are the result of taxes not collected from the wealthy.

If ordinary Canadians saw that figure, they would be astonished. It is quite possible that $100 billion is an underestimate. The borrowings being undertaken by the Government now move us up toward a debt of $200 billion. If ordinary Canadian taxpayers were to realize that this supposedly business-like Government is in fact a Government from Wall Street and Bay Street and does not give a damn about them and is quite ready to let this game go on, there would be a revolt in this country which would make the pensioners protest over the last few weeks look like just the beginning.

I suggest to the Minister of State for Finance and her colleague the Minister of Finance that it is time we knew what a reasonable estimate of corporate tax expenditures will be. It is time we knew what the deferred taxes totalled. We have a right to know exactly how much of the national debt is money that ordinary Canadians are paying to enrich corporations and their owners, and in particular a small number of the wealthiest Canadians. That is the kind of capitalism that exist in this country today.

I really do not believe it is true for all of them, but if Conservative Members really want to continue with that kind of refined exploitation of our tax system both on the corporate break side and the individual burden side, let them be clear with the public that that is what they want to do. They will discover the extent to which the voters of 1988 or 1989 will reject this Government.

With those comments, I would invite the Minister to give us any kind of firm figure she might have on corporate tax breaks. Is she able to tell me that the total which I have suggested is outrageously high, and that individual Canadians are not paying anything like that total to enrich a few, or is she not? Does she have to confess the ignorance of the Finance Department and the imperative need to get on with the job of gathering information in order to make the national accounts of this country as business-like as they ought to be?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I am really quite surprised at the Hon. Member for indicating for the record how long it was taking to find an answer to the question. Let the record also show that the question was asked at around 6.30 p.m. As we all know, the Department of Finance is a union shop. It takes a little time to get information in the evening.

I might also indicate that the kind—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I just phoned your office and it had been closed since three.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): It was open at five when I came over here.

Mrs. McDougall: That late?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Excuse me. I hate to interrupt this conversation. Perhaps the Minister of State for Finance could answer the question.

Mrs. McDougall: Along with the kind of muddle-headed thinking we have heard around here is the Hon. Member's indication that only rich people are going to benefit from this Budget. This is a point Opposition Members never tire of making, even though it does not bear any resemblance to the truth. The kind of investment we are going to see from this Budget and from our economic policies is going to create the jobs that Members of the Opposition and Members of the NDP have so recently forgotten.

I think I should say for the record, since there has been a great deal bandied about this evening, that this $38 billion was not our deficit. It was the deficit that we discovered when we walked in the door. It belonged totally to the former Government.

I might also say in response to an earlier question that our expenditures on research and development and our commitment to efficiency in the research sector in an attempt to develop private sector partners are all going to be good for Canada and good for our techonological future. We are attracting capital investment. I just came back from a trip to Europe where I found that there was quite an interest in Canada. People with substantial amounts of money are prepared to look at Canada as a place in which to invest because they recognize that the policies of this Government will be helpful to them and of course will be helpful to the Canadians who are looking for new jobs.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Chairman, the Minister did not answer my question; not that I really expected she would have the resources at hand to do so. She began responding to the speech which dealt with the Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, undoubtedly a good topic to consider as well.

The Bill indicates that a sum of money may be required for public works and general purposes. The public works part is the part that interests me. In recession circumstances, when some industries are concerned about the possibility that they may be sliding into depression circumstances, public works are one of the means available to us for maintaining and increasing employment and for increasing economic activity.

As I suggested earlier today, the budget speeches of the early 1930s, the Bennett days, provide some interesting reading. I concede that much has changed over the years and Ministers of Finance are less involved with the details of their accounts than they were in those days. I suppose that is the point I have been making over the past 15 minutes. There was a good deal less moralizing going on in speeches made in those days than is the case these days.

One of the interesting things about the budgets of the 1930s is that when the R. B. Bennett Government first came in, Mr. Bennett recognized the need for a jolt of expenditure so that the Government would not simply be paying out relief costs. Therefore, some public works authorizations were put forward. There had of course been others which the Liberal Government in earlier years had put forward as well.

I think we have a similar situation today. We had a Conservative Government in office which, very early, has denounced the waste and extravagance of its predecessor. It took a little longer to do so in the 1930s. However, in various areas, I find that the concern of my constituents and people across the country is that the Government is not maintaining levels of expenditures, but rather is cutting back.

My Liberal colleague, the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate, referred to the Small Craft Harbours branch of the Fisheries and Oceans Department.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member has about one minute left.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Thank you. Let me then say that the desire in committee to have increases in the Budget for small craft harbours and the promises given to the shipbuilding industries of the country represent examples of potential for public works and for the encouragement of enterprise. In both areas there appear to be very real disappointments coming for these industries. I would ask the Minister of State for Finance what she can indicate about the new public works this Government has launched, public works which would justify our voting for the borrowing that this Bill is designed to authorize.

• (1930)

Mrs. McDougall: Oh, I have been waiting for this all day.

Mr. Deans: I can tell that is true. For those who were not listening, the Minister has just said that she has been looking forward to this all day.

I was not going to rise and speak in this debate, as I thought that things were going along reasonably well. However, I heard the Minister say that somehow or other she took some joy from the fact that there are 271,000 people working who otherwise might not have been working. I cannot help but feel a sense of panic in my heart when I hear such a statement. There are still approximately 1.8 million people who are unemployed. For a Minister of the Crown to rise an expect that we should applaud when the Government has created a paltry 271,000 jobs, over and against the enormous need, is enough to make one shudder.

The Minister has failed to address the areas of greatest need, those in the age group of 16 to 24 and those in the age group of 55 to 65. There continues to be an overwhelming number of people who are almost to the point of being institutionally unemployed. That is not being addressed by the Government.

The Government has asked us to allow it to borrow additional funds. To do what? We are not clear on that. The Government says it needs more money. I know the minister will remember the discussion on the Government's proposal to partially deindex old age pensions. We suggested to the Government places where it could go to raise substantial amounts of dollars—into the billions of dollars—in order to offset a number of tax impositions which the Government was prepared to impose. The Government said no. My colleague from Kamloops-Shuswap suggested one area. I see that my colleague from Simcoe North is in the Chamber. As a lawyer and an accountant, he has gone through the analysis quickly and can see the point which we have made.

How can the Government ask the House of Commons to permit it to borrow money to pay for the debt it has accumulated on behalf of extremely wealthy corporations which are not paying taxes? That does not seem to be an unreasonable point to make. Is it not reasonable to expect that the corporate sector, in these difficult times, would perhaps be willing to contribute, if not the amount it owes, at least the interest costs to the balance of society on the money it owes? The Minister is shaking her head. I am not sure whether it is because she has never thought of that before or, perhaps, it is the first time that she has considered it. Who else in society, other than corporations, can come to the Government and ask the Government to borrow money in order to pay what they rightfully owe and then not even pay a cent toward interest charges? It does not take much to see the unfairness of that.

There are a lot of people in the country who have not worked for the past year. They are drawing on savings which they have accumulated over 30 or 40 years. Those people are receiving a bill from the Department of National Revenue which tells them that they owe the Government some tax. If those people asked the Government to defer the tax for a few years, and if they also asked not to pay interest charges, can we imagine the Government's response? This Government and its predecessor, which I might say are cut from much the same cloth—the two political Parties which represent a vested interest in Canada—allow those who have more than they need to not pay taxes. If they should happen to be asked to pay a share, by God, the Government will give them all kinds of loopholes so that they will not have to pay their share. It is not only the corporate sector which gets away with that. Heaven forbid that we should only allow deferred taxes without any payment—

Mr. Lewis: Will you change the Ontario Corporation Tax Act?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I am being asked if I will change the Ontario Corporation Tax Act. That shows the naivety of the Member. He knows that I have no power to change the Ontario Corporation Tax Act.

That provision is not only provided to the corporate sector. I might add that the corporate sector owes many billions of dollars.

I want Tory back-benchers to tell me the truth. How many of them truly believe that it is fair to tax a widow on her pension and to say to the corporate sector that it can defer taxes and that the Government will borrow money in the international money markets to cover what the corporate sector would normally have to pay? The Government does not even ask the corporate sector to pay interest on that money. Do they think that is fair? Is there one Tory who is prepared to stand and say that he thinks a widow should have to pay tax in order to cover the costs which ought to be borne by the corporations, upon whose behalf we borrow money so that they will not have to pay taxes? I do not see Members rising, so I assume that they all agree with me.

It is not only the corporate sector, it is those who benefit from the corporate sector. What has the Government done with those guys? The Government says: "Well, you are not getting enough out of that so we will allow you to accumulate half a million dollars in your lifetime tax-free. However, we cannot do that for everybody. If we are going to do that it can only be for the top 5 per cent of the population." That will cause problems for the Government.

Not only will the Government allow corporations to defer taxes and to not pay interest charges, it will now give an additional bonus to those individuals in the top 5 per cent so that they can accumulate $500,000 in their lifetimes which is tax-free. "But that is a bit awkward", the Tories say, "because we are running kind of short of cash. We are going to have to find a way to make up the shortfall. We'll do away with the indexing on old age pensions. That is how we'll do it", so the top 5 per cent can accumulate this $500,000 and pay no tax but the old age pensioner, by God, they will have to pay for it. That is the Government.

Then it has the nerve, Mr. Chairman, to ask us to let it borrow more money, And while it is borrowing more money it is decrying all of the borrowing which took place before. Here is this Government asking us to give it more and at the same time telling us that the evil in this society is that it has had to borrow so much. So the Government decides that what it will have to do is raise the taxes on ordinary Canadians. So what did it do? It upped the sales tax. But Government was careful when it upped the sales tax because it knew that a sales tax works harder on average income Canadians than it does on those at the upper-income levels. That is typically Tory. That is the kind of thing which one could have anticipated would occur but hoped would not. It is a tradition of the Conservative Party; sock it to those who don't have much. Give it to those who have more than they need. That has been the tradition of the Conservative Party in Canada and of Conservative Parties all around the world. To think, Mr. Chairman, that they would have the nerve to come back and ask to borrow more.

Mr. Riis: Next they will tax candy for the kids.

Mr. Deans: As my colleague just said, the Tories must then begin to find out that that doesn't raise enough. If they deindex old age pensions, and increase by 1 per cent the sales tax, that still does not raise enough to pay for the give-aways. So they say, "We'll increase the tax on candy. And we'd better do it on pet food, too". Then they asked themselves, "What else can do do?"

Members of the Conservative Party sit here on the third floor in the little cabinet room and say to themselves, "We have given to the corporations, we have given 5 per cent to the upper-income level, but there must be some other friends we have missed. By George, we missed the oil companies. What can we do dor them?" So they decide to do away with some of the taxes on the oil companies. But if they reduce the tax burden on the oil companies that will reduce the amount of revenue to the Government. So they thought they had better increase the cost of gasoline at the pumps. And they did that.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare has the answer to everything. He walks around almost blind. He stands in his place and defends the indefensible. He is the only person in the caucus of the Tory Party who is still arguing that it is good to deindex pensions. The Prime Minister has not given him the word yet.

If that isn't bad enough, last Friday, and a month ago, he was going around the country saying that because of the high deficit, and because we are in such debt, we must look at new ways of funding health care. He thinks perhaps we should be looking at privatizing the health care system so the Government does not have to pay out as much, and will have more to give to its rich friends. So what has now started is a movement.

We have the Minister of National Health and Welfare who speaks to the medical association, I believe in Alberta, and says he wants it to consider the possibility of moving towards more privatization of the health care scheme in Canada. Because, after all, the Government cannot afford to carry the burden of providing universal health care to the poor, and the rich can afford it so they don't have to worry. Then the Minister has another meeting with the Health Ministers and he says to them that it may be a good idea in trying to bring down the burden of cost to Government to privatize the health care system, find new private ways to provide the same system to people at whatever cost, because it will be private and Government doesn't have to worry about it. The wealthy, of course, can afford it, but the poor will not be able to. And if the wealthy find it difficult, the Government can give them another tax break and tax the poor some more in order to make sure the rich are not inconvenienced in any way. That is what the Government is doing. That is clear. One doesn't have to be a student of Conservative logic to see what it is now doing.

The unfortunate part of it all, I say to your, Mr. Chairman, is that the end result of all of this will be that Government will not bring down the deficit, because it does not have the will to bring down the deficit, because it is afraid to go to where the problem really lies, and that problem really lies in the level and amount of give-aways which this Government and its predecessor Governments have made available to the private corporations.

My grandfather was a Conservative, God rest his soul.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: I must say that when he reached his sixties, he saw the error of his ways. My grandfather was an entrepreneur. He put his own money on the line. He didn't run to the Government and demand assistance. He didn't get anything from the Government. He was one of those free enterprisers that Tories dream about. But under 30 or 40-old years of Conservative administration in Ontario, and an almost equivalent number of years of a similar kind of Liberal administration in Ottawa, the Government provided that every single person who ran a major corporate system in Canada was able to write off so much of it against the public purse that it wasn't necessary for them to raise their capital themselves. They now do not know how. They do not want to take risks. Why take risks when the Government will bail you out? The government's protestations to the contrary, it is following along in the exact same way. Albeit using somewhat different techniques, as the predecessor Government of the Liberal Party. The results will be identical. That is what I find most disappointing, Mr. Chairman.

I can tell, Mr. Chairman, just from the way you are looking at me that you have recognized the fallacy of the argument of the Government. The one thing it has not been prepared to address when talking of borrowing is what was done with the money. Why did we borrow that money in the long run? We have to try to figure that out. The reason we had to borrow the money over the last four years was because of high interest rates. And it was the Conservative Party which supported the Liberal Party in its quest for high interest rates.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: I remember, as does the Hon. Member for Simcoe North—we will remember—when the now Minister of Finance went to Montreal and spoke to the Board of Trade there. He said he supported the high interest rate policy of the then Liberal Government. The now Minister of Finance said, "If I were the Minister, I could do nothing more, nothing less than to follow the line established by the Bank of Canada". It was the Minister of Finance when he was the Opposition critic who said that high interest rates were necessary and that the Conservative Party of Canada supported them.

The end result was that a million people lost their jobs and countless hundreds of thousands of people never recovered, tens of thousands of people lost their homes and their businesses, farms went bankrupt in record numbers. But the Conservative Party supported the Liberal Party in allowing those interest rates to continue to rise to the point where no one could afford them. Now the Conservative Government has the gall to come into this House and suggest to us that we should accept its idle rhetoric.

No, Sir. I will tell you right now, Mr. Speaker, it will get its money only because it has the majority which will force it. But the fact is that it has been the mismanagement of the Liberals, supported by the Conservatives over the last 20 years, which allowed the deterioration of the system that has put us in the position we now are in.

• (1950)

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I have a number of questions for the Minister. Perhaps she could give us some explanations about the nature of the Borrowing Authority Bill we are discussing tonight.

In the statement the Minister of Finance gave when this Bill was introduced on May 28 he indicated that this $16.2 billion would bring the total borrowing authority for the current fiscal year to $32.2 billion. He compared that to the total borrowing authority Parliament had granted to the two different Governments for 1984-85, which amounted to $31.9 billion. In effect, we are granting an additional $300 million this year. He indicated that while Parliament had granted borrowing authority of $31.9 billion last year, $27.6 billion was actually expended by the Government, leaving $4.3 billion unused as of March 31, 1985.

The request for borrowing authority this year is $300 million higher. Does that mean that $4.6 billion will be left in a fund for unspecified expenditures? Could the Minister tell us what the unspecified expenditures portion of this borrowing authority is likely to be by the end of this fiscal year?

Mrs. McDougall: I am not sure that I could estimate at this stage what the unused portion may be by the end of the year. I would indicate that the figures do not appear to be quite correct. I think that perhaps the $2.2 billion of short-term Section 39 borrowing has been included twice in that total, because the figures the Hon. Member was giving were not correct. I would have to check Hansard. Perhaps there was a mistake. I would like to put that on the record.

We will, of course, be trying to control our expenditures as much as possible and not use any further borrowing authority than is necessary. The total amount of borrowing authority will depend on the economic prospects we have, which at the moment we are reasonably pleased about, given the circumstances of the country. It will depend on interest rates which have been trending downward. It will depend on revenue projections. As more people continue to go to work we will have increased revenues. All of this will be reasonably positive in terms of the actual borrowing.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, in light of the expected reduction of the deficit the Minister of Finance has been talking about, why is the borrowing authority higher this year than it was last year?

Mrs. McDougall: The actual borrowing last year was $39.8 billion. We are anticipating a total of $28 billion this year. Therefore, the amount of borrowing is down.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I am not trying to confuse myself deliberately. I am reading from the statement by the Minister on pages 5132 and 5133 of Hansard. The numbers that he presented are somewhat at odds with the numbers the Hon. Minister of State for Finance is presenting. The Minister's statement seemed to be fairly clear. He said:

> With the passage of this Bill, the Government will have a total of $32.2 billion of borrowing authority for the current fiscal year.

In the next paragraph he points out that, in his opinion at least, the borrowing authority for the 1984-85 fiscal year was $31.9 billion.

Mrs. McDougall: I think the $2 billion which is in there is part of the reserve. The other is the $2.2 billion that was borrowed under Section 39 in February which, instead of being part of the long-term borrowing program, had to be repaid. That is the difference.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, what is the Government's interpretation of the amount of money that it can borrow under Section 39 of the Financial Administration Act? Last year while the Senate was holding up the Borrowing Authority Bill the Government apparently borrowed $2.2 billion. What are the limits, if any, to that borrowing authority? If the borrowing authority which is before the House at the moment turns out to be insufficient, is there any limit to the amount of money that could be borrowed under Section 39 of the Financial Administration Act in order to keep the Government in operation?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, there is no limit to the amount that can be borrowed under Section 39. However, it must be repaid within a term of 180 days. That is where the limitation is imposed. However, we are expecting that we will have a much more responsible response this year and that we will not have to use Section 39.

Mr. Althouse: Could the Minister indicate the difference in cost for the 180 day borrowings versus the kind of borrowings that are normally carried out under the borrowing authority as such? While she is at it, perhaps she could tell us what sort of rate the Government is anticipating will be paid during this fiscal year for the borrowings that are necessary to make up the interest on the accumulated deficit that we have.

Mrs. McDougall: The interest rate spread changes every day. Between short and long it is normally about 1 per cent. However, you cannot always put everything in the least costly part of the market because that would jack up rates in that part of the market and would change the spread going in the other direction. That is why our debt management program of not using Section 39 is very important to us. We do try to design our debt management in order that the costs are minimized, depending on the rate spread at any given time in different sections of the market.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, it is normal for individuals lending money for short terms to take a lower rate on deposits than we do for longer terms. Is that procedure followed with the short-term money which the Government borrows? If so, how did the Minister of Finance arrive at the figure of $15 million as the cost to borrow short-term money, as opposed to long-term money? That is the price tag he laid at the feet of the Senate for holding up the Borrowing Authority Bill and forcing him to go to the short-term market, which is normally a lower priced market, I would think.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, there was some deterioration in the interest rate curve at that point, and there was an issue that had to be deferred. I am sure the Hon. Member is aware that while normally the spread widens the further out you go, there have been reverse yield curves more frequently in recent years than in the past. This was particularly true at the height of the inflation cycle when nobody wanted to lend for long periods of time. Therefore, we have what is called a reverse yield curve, because everyone wants to keep their money very short.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell us what the accumulate deficit for the country is now? I want to repeat my previous question as well. She indicated in an answer to my friend from Kamloops-Shuswap that the Government is estimating that the cost of interest on debt will amount to $22.6 billion. I am sure she can tell us the accumulated deficit. We know from the Budget what are the expected additions to that. Since she is quite specific about the $22.6 billion figure, I am sure she will be able to answer the question I put previously about expected interest rates?

Mrs. McDougall: Of course, much of that is on debt that is already outstanding. Therefore, the estimate is based on that.

I assume the Hon. Member means the accumulated debt rather than the accumulated deficit. Therefore, I believe the accumulated debt is $190. If I have a correction to that figure I will advise the Hon. Member.

Mr. Althouse: I assume that the Government expects to pay approximately in excess of 10 per cent interest or probably in excess of 11 per cent interest, given that it is paying a debt under $200 billion and is expecting to pay approximately $22.6 billion in interest. Therefore, I assume it is a good estimate of what the Government is expecting interest rates to be, which is somewhere in excess of 11 per cent.

Will the Minister tell us if she and her officials have had time to arrive at the number asked for my my friend from Kamloops-Shuswap? Can she tell us the total accumulation of deferred corporate taxes that have been left unpaid and on which no interest is being paid?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I will deal with the first point raised about the average interest rate. The reason that rate is historically quite high is that the deficit doubled over five or six years as interest rates were at their peak. Therefore, the accumulated debt is weighted to the high interest rates that had to be paid during that period when the former Government treated the deficit, its expenditures and revenue so irresponsibly. That constitutes a large part of that cost.

The amount of deferred corporate income taxes is to be found in Corporate Financial Statistics published by Statistics Canada. It is quite readily available during business hours. It is $29.4 billion for 1982, the latest year available.

Let me point out that the so-called interest on unpaid taxes is not relevant or applicable because deferred taxes arise out of the investment a company makes. It concerns capital cost allowances and therefore there is no deferral of taxes without an initial investment. Corporations, as citizens, pay the taxes that are owing. However, not only corporations but individuals can write off their interest costs if they invest money to some extent as well.

Mr. Althouse: The Minister said that the interest rate that is being paid varies, depending on the year that the debt was incurred. Is she saying that there has been no refinancing of those debts that might have been incurred in the 20 per cent range? Is there no way of refinancing those at current rates?

Could she also tell us how far ahead the Government commits these interest rates? Are they not just short-term?

Mrs. McDougall: No, they are not just short-term. That is what I meant about the spread between the short and long-term rates and how the debt management program depends to some extent on what those spreads are and what the demand is in the market-place for short-term as opposed to long-term instruments.

When those are issued in the form of a bond, of course, it is a contract to pay on a fixed date and cannot be refinanced when the interest rate structure moves. They are repaid at maturity and I believe that 20 years is the longest normal term for a bond. However, if the Hon. Member looks at the announcements that we make monthly he will see that there are normally three or four maturities which will be anywhere from one year to perhaps 24 years.

Actually, if bonds can be issued in the long end to a greater extent, it is a sign of confidence because the expectation is that interest rates will be stable and people are prepared to go for longer terms. Lately we have seen a willingness in the money markets, among financial institutions, to go somewhat longer on mortgages than they have before. That is a very positive trend.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak briefly on this clause of the Bill. I see that a Conservative Member who was adjusting to the role of being on this side has decided to sit in another place in the Chamber. Perhaps he will want to reconsider and stay on this side permanently, especially after I have convinced him that the Government's measures and the way it is spending taxpayers' money is totally inappropriate.

Let me talk about Government expenditures. Perhaps the Minister, who is responsible for this Bill and one of the Ministers responsible for the public purse, can indicate to us why she believes that the Government should get borrowing authority in light of certain facts which I will bring to her attention.

First, I would like to talk briefly about the 57 per cent increase in the Prime Minister's operating Budget. I say this, keeping in mind that this is the same Government that is telling senior citizens of this country that there is not enough to go around. It has been telling senior citizens that they must tighten their belts. I have met with many senior citizens in my riding over the weekend, and they do not feel like tightening their belts any more. As a matter of fact, they are not in a position to tighten their belts. At the same time, we see that the expenditures for the office of the Prime Minister have been increased by 57 per cent. Mr. Chairman, you, being the non-partisan person you are, would understand how outrageous that is.

I should like to talk a little about salary increases to certain people. I brought to the attention of the House on a few occasions that the Government rewarded some of its friends and relatives through the mechanism of patronage. As we know, this is very expensive to the public Treasury.

I should like to refer to two individuals in particular, a gentleman by the name of Lawrence Hannigan, who happens to be a defeated Conservative candidate in the riding of Laval-des-Rapides, and Roy McMurtry, another Tory loser. Both were appointed to very lucrative government jobs at tremendous expense to Canadian taxpayers. Their salary increases alone amount to close to $60,000 per year. Just imagine what would happen if some of our senior citizens had that kind of money. Needless to say they will never have it. However, it would be interesting to indicate how far that $60,000 would go toward restoring the pensions of senior citizens in my riding.

There are roughly 6,000 seniors in my riding. Next year they will each be cut by approximately $100. A very quick multiplication of the figures shows that the salary increases of those two Tory losers alone could restore full indexation to the pensions of all seniors in my riding. I am sure there is not one Tory back-bencher who would not second a motion to cancel those salary increases and give them to the seniors in their ridings.

I detect almost unanimity for that on the part of Hon. Members across the way. Looking at my good friend from Interlake, I can tell that he would be in favour of restoring the benefits to the seniors of his riding. I am sure he does not really want those large salary increases for two Tory losers. After all, he was a Tory winner and he is making less money than the losers. This is almost enough to cause a back-bench revolt in the Conservative ranks. We can see that starting develop at this point. Obviously the Hon. Member for Simcoe North is beginning to become somewhat upset about this issue.

I should like to refer to the economic statement of last fall. On November 8, the Government of Canada issued a document entitled Expenditure and Program Review. As I said, this was delivered on November 8, otherwise known as black Thursday. On black Thursday, the Government decided to effect these very severe, harsh and unfair cut-backs. Not content with doing that at public expense, at the expense of those who could least afford it, Mr. Chairman, do you know what the Government decided to do?

Mr. Marchi: What?

Mr. Prud'homme: What?

Mr. Boudria: I am glad the Hon. Member for York West and the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis ask me that question. The Government decided to ship copies of that document to every provincial Premier. One would think it would have relied on Canada Post. After all, it was a very worth-while government endeavour. But that is not what the Government did. It sent by jet messengers with copies of the economic statement. Tory back-benchers were sent as messengers. After all, the Government had to find something for them to do. Tory back-benchers delivered copies of the economic statement personally to every provincial Premier. The total cost was $23,850 for delivering ten copies, and the Government wants the House to give it more money! Why? Why should we give it more money when it has squandered what we already gave it? That is terrible.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk about the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse). As we all know, the Minister decided to spend taxpayers' money in a rather unusual way. The Minister decided to fly hither and yon on a Government plane, and so what did he do? He asked his friends or rather his family and his staff and they filled the jet and left for the Middle East. They made a few stops and when they got back, they added up the cost of the trip: $57,000 the Minister of Communications spent on a trip to the Middle East. It cost $57,000, Mr. Speaker! That is obviously why everybody now knows the Minister's nickname: the "courant d'air national". Obviously, when you spend that kind of money—

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to say a few words about the cost of renovating ministers' offices. As you know, the ministers all have very large offices here. They say that some ministers have more offices than staff. They have five or six offices and only two or three people working in those offices, here in the Parliament Buildings. The Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) has new carpeting in his office which cost $10,000, Mr. Speaker, and I do not know what—

[English]

The Minister of National Health and Welfare, the same Minister who wants to cut the pensions of the seniors in my riding and in your riding, Mr. Chairman, spent $23,327 to redecorate the inside of his office on Parliament Hill. Mr. Chairman, I know that you are saying shame on the Minister, and rightfully so.

Mr. Holtmann: The Liberals before left the place in a rotten mess. We had to.

Mr. Boudria: I hear my friend across the way. The Liberals are not the ones who are cutting the pension cheques of senior citizens. It is the Tories who are perpetrating that upon Canadians. The Tories are responsible for that mess.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: They are giving the money of taxpayers to multinational corporations, to themselves and to their friends, and there is none left for our seniors.

I would like the Minister to respond to these questions, and then I will have more to ask.

Mr. Prud'homme: Where is the Minister?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, the Minister is out of the Chamber for a moment getting a glass of water. If the Hon.

Member wants to continue, he may do so, as I am making a note of any questions he asks to which she can respond.

Mr. Boudria: Because of the insistence of the Government House Leader, I will ask more questions.

Mr. Towers: She is back.

Mr. Boudria: There are more examples of government waste. The Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport, otherwise called the amateur Minister, spent $13,496 to redecorate his Parliament Hill office. Let me tell you, that would buy an awful lot of wallpaper. The Minister of State for Mines is here, and he spent $17,712. Maybe he could tell us what colour the wallpaper is at that price. The people of Canada deserve to know. I see this is getting the Minister a bit excited. Perhaps if I was a Minister who spent $17,000 on wallpaper I would be a little excited when it was brought up in the House.

• (2020)

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The facts are all wrong.

Mr. Boudria: I am glad the Government House Leader has indicated the facts are all wrong, because those facts are what I received in response to a question I aksed and it is signed by him.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I like to read George Bain.

Mr. Boudria: These were supplied and signed by the Government House Leader personally.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: In my own hand.

Mr. Boudria: He signed this personally and he is now saying that it is wrong.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You have your facts wrong.

Mr. Boudria: Has he inadvertently misled this House? No, I am sure the Government House Leader would never do that. So the $130,000 worth of Government waste I have just described must be true. I would never think the Government House Leader would tell us anything but the entire truth and I can see that you are nodding in agreement, Mr. Chairman.

Let me ask the Minister of State for Finance about the cost of limousines. It used to be that one could actually drive up beside the West door of the Parliament Buildings. Now the place, as we know, looks like a used car lot. There is hardly room to drive by because so many limousine drivers are tripping over each other. There are 39 or 40 of them all over the place. Of course we know how badly Ministers need them. It is extreme suffering on their part to do something other than jump into a limousine to go over to the West Block or to the Confederation Building, or wherever their offices are. We know that would be quite strenuous. We also know that in order to supply these limousines the Government had to supplement the existing stock. So the Government bought $173,000 worth of limousines to add to the existing ones. Just in case the Government House Leader says that information is not exact, it was he again who provided it. I ask a lot of Order Paper questions and they do get answered.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: At least I answer questions.

Mr. Boudria: Just in case the Minister of State for Finance thinks this is extravagant, which it is, maybe she could comment on why the Government had to lease another $30,000 worth on top of the $173,000 worth which had been bought. I have the list right here, everything from renting a Chrysler New Yorker for a whole year, to leases for one day. I could list them all for the record if you want to know the details.

On top of this, the Government wants us to give it more money at the same time it is cutting the pension cheques of seniors. Well, Mr. Chairman, my constituents will not go for this. If I voted for that, they would never forgive me, as they will never forgive Tory Members across the way. Some of them may vote for this, but we know most of them will have time to reconsider.

Let us talk about the changing of uniforms. There is a ceremony outside this place known as the Changing of the Guard, but there is now another ceremony in the military known as the changing of the uniform. This means that for the bargain cost of $36 million, all our military uniforms can be colour coded. Do you know of any military person, Mr. Chairman, or does the Minister know of any military person who would not give up trading his or her uniform in order to give their grandfathers or grandmothers their pension cheques? Maybe she could answer that question specifically.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: George Bain was right.

Mr. Boudria: I cannot think of one constituent of mine in the military who would not give up trading his or her uniform in order to restore pension benefits to their grandparents. That money would go a long way to restoring those benefits for the people of this country. Perhaps the Minister can tell us what she thinks of the extravagant expenditure on the part of the Minister of National Defence. It is enough to make a Minister want to resign.

Let us talk a little bit about the Shamrock Summit, another bargain deal. It cost the taxpayers of this country close to $1 million, almost half of which went just for television.

Mr. Towers: You don't know anything about class.

Mr. Boudria: The Hon. Member says I don't know. I am glad the Hon. Member for Red Deer has woken up to the fact that his Prime Minister wasted that money. I am glad that he is finally agreeing with us, and I commend him for that.

Mr. Towers: You don't know anything about class.

Mr. Boudria: Some $500,000 was spent by the Prime Minister of this country so we could listen to him sing on television. The rest of it was spent on various things, such as the Armed Forces and other things. No doubt the Government House Leader agrees with me that it was an extravagant expenditure.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Fennell): I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time is up. Unfortunately he has not left enough time for the Minister to answer his question, so we will let her answer at the end of the remarks of the next Member.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if she would react to comments made by Mr. C. R. Bowles, executive vice-president of Great Lakes Forest Products when he appeared before the June 3, 1985 meeting of the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry. Referring to deferred taxes, a subject raised by my colleagues a number of times this evening, Mr. Bowles said this:

> Deferred taxes are extremely difficult to describe without using your hands and your feet and all sorts of things, so let me just try to go through it . . . I dare say everybody, or almost everybody, in this room, is a member of a pension plan. That is a form of tax deferral. In the corporate sector, the biggest one is the accelerated write-off for capital investment in manufacturing and the production of machinery . . . So the difference between the accounting charge for taxes and the amount which actually has to be paid in accordance with the law, sits in this never-never land we call deferred income taxes. It is therefore not correct to consider the balance in this account as an amount owing to the taxing authorities.

He summarizes by saying:

> The tax act tells us what we have got to pay; the accountants determine what we show on the balance sheet and profit and loss statements or earning statements; the difference between the two is deferred income taxes—that is what we call it—and it is not owed to anybody . . . You never pay any of that as such back to the government.

● (2030)

Would the Minister agree with the interpretation of Mr. Bowles of the term "deferred taxes" as it applies to the corporate sector of this country?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I probably understand far better than Mr. Bowles how the deferred tax system works. I am sure the Hon. Member would agree that our undertaking of a study of corporate taxes, something which seems to be very worrying to Members of the NDP tonight, is a very positive move forward and something that is long overdue.

I would like to point out to the previous Member who questioned me that there are quite a number of points he raised which were of great interest to me. He talked about cars and the decorating expenses. I would like the Hon. Member to know that I moved into the office of a former Minister of the former Government and the total inventory of that office consisted of six plants and five tubes of toothpaste. I wonder where the furniture went.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: As they said in the Pepsodent ads, I wonder where the yellow went.

Mrs. McDougall: I also discovered when I moved in that the car for the former Minister of State for Finance was nowhere to be found either. Is that not truly amazing? I wonder if the Hon. Member also remembers a certain Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry who spent $1 million on his staff.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Over a million a year. Wretched excess.

Mrs. McDougall: I find this selective use of statistics quite fascinating. We all know that the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell is very interested in statistics of all kinds. I know that he is a burrower. I am just amazed that he did not come up with the fact that the inventory of my office was so tiny.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I know that he wouldn't knowingly mislead anybody.

Mrs. McDougall: I should return to the question at hand. I do treat it as a serious one. That is why we have undertaken a review of the corporate income tax structure. We will be examining over the next few months ways in which we think the country can be better served by the corporate tax structure, and this will include the kinds of things that will create jobs as well as things which will create some even-handedness in the tax structure.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the Minister for responding, not to my question, as my question asked for her interpretation of the definition, but for giving me information regarding the study. Once again, Mr. Bowles and others have stated very clearly that as far as their companies are concerned, they have no intention of paying back those so-called deferred taxes. They believe that they are solely within their rights not to do so. Not in terms of policy but in terms of interpretation, I am asking the Minister whether or not the interpretation of the tax Act of Mr. Bowles as it applies to deferred taxes for the corporate sector is correct and that that money does not have to be paid back at this current moment in time.

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, that is what deferment means, of course. It means that the taxes do not get paid back in a single moment. The taxes are due and payable in the future under some certain circumstances. If corporations continue to invest money, then the deferred taxes continue to be deferred.

I recognize that the Hon. Member is quite exercised about this matter. We are undertaking to review the corporate income tax structure. It is something to which we have committed ourselves.

I will not comment directly on the remarks of Mr. Bowles. I do not know the context of those remarks, or what the question was to which he was responding, or the point he was trying to make. However, I do understand the principle of deferred taxes.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Chairman, let us say that a company has accumulated tax deferrals amounting to $100 million. If that company stopped investing capital investment within its plant, would it then begin to pay those deferred taxes back to the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the answer to the question is yes. It is a little more complicated than that but ultimately, if a company stops investing, that triggers the taxes payable.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, because the borrowing Bill is now being discussed at committee stage, I have a question I would like to put to the Minister of State for Finance; it is a question that has puzzled me. I was not in the House a year ago when the 1984 Budget was being debated. I do recall, however, from press reports, and from reading Hansard the dire warnings uttered by the Conservative Opposition of the day. In fact, many of the Minister's colleagues in Cabinet were at that time Opposition Members. They warned about the deficit and they preached doom and gloom. They indicated that the situation was far more serious than the Liberal Government of the day had indicated to the public. This was repeated many times prior to the election campaign.

During the election campaign, Conservative Members did two things. They continued to warn the country that the deficit situation was extremely serious, but at the same time they made an extraordinary string of campaign promises, one of which was the promise that a Conservative Government, contrary to the Liberals' 6 and 5 program, would restore full indexing on Old Age Security pensions. That promise was made with the knowledge that it was potentially costly. They knew that money would be required in order to do the decent thing; to continue providing pensions and dignity for old age pensioners. That promise was made in the context of a preparation for Government, and with a transition team in place that was planning that kind of thing.

My question is quite simple. What has changed? One did not need to be in the Ministry of Finance to know what the situation was like. Conservative Members when in Opposition were saying the same thing as the Minister of Finance has said in his Budget, but somehow the policy results are diffeent in the sense that policies were made in full knowledge of the situation, but were subsequently violated and thrown away. How is it that Conservative Members could make those promises knowing that the financial situation would prevent them from doing the decent thing for old age pensioners?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I will review once again for the Hon. Member what he has heard many times in the House. He may not have been here a year ago, but neither was I. When planning for Government, one could expect that things are worse than they look. However, one must take power before the actual facts are known and the next stage can be assessed.

As I and other Members have indicated earlier, this is our first Budget and not our last. We have kept many of our commitments. We brought forward the borrowing Bill within two days of the Budget. The Main Estimates contained the lowest year over year increase in 17 years. We have kept our commitment on accountability in the borrowing Bill. We have kept our commitment that the poorest people in our society would be looked after. We have kept our commitment to create jobs and we have kept our commitment to bring down interest rates. I think that the record speaks for itself. Commitments have been kept. The kind of flexibility that will come from control of the deficit and still lower interest rates will mean that in the future, we will have the flexibility in social policy which everyone in this House wants.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, it seems to be that what the Minister is saying indicates that the Progressive Conservatives, when they were campaigning, were either being naive or hypocritical. The Conservatives were being naive if they said that things were worse than they appeared to be at the time they made the promises. They were hypocritical if they proceeded to make promises in the full knowledge that they would have to break them.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You were not around.

Mr. Cassidy: I was around. I was out on the hustings. As a matter of fact, I was aware of people working for Conservative candidates in my riding and elsewhere in Ottawa who were promising pensioners that they would not have to put up with cut-backs if a Conservative Government was in power. Some pensioners were taken in. They are telling me now that that will never happen again. However, at that time they were taken in by a Party which was being either naive or hypocritical.

While complimenting the Minister of State for Finance on her presentation last Friday night at the National Arts Centre—which I thought was fully up to the standards of the other three participants, including Geraldine Ferraro—I felt that she was extremely uncomfortable when she answered a question from the audience with respect to her defence of the pension situation. In fact, I would say that she was close to being inarticulate, which is something the Minister never is. The reason is that even the junior Minister of Finance is being left out to dry. She does not know whether or not her Prime Minister is going to fish or cut bait on this issue, and when it will occur.

I would suggest that the Minister of State for Finance come out right now and say that she recognizes, having met with her constituents and having seen the telegrams and letters, that a grave political mistake has been made by the Government in deindexing pensions. She should say that it should not have been done and that it was wrong for the Government in its first Budget to take that particular step. Why does she not say now that it was wrong and that she will do everything in her power to persuade the Prime Minister to withdraw the deindexing before the House rises for the summer recess on June 28?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, if the Hon. Member was confused or took my remarks last Friday night to be anything other than thoughtful, he is making a mistake. Before that group of people I was doing what Members of the NDP do not do. I was going through the whole package of things the Government has done. I spoke of how the Government is looking at Public Service pension plans so that they will not cost the taxpayers more money. I also explained that there would no longer be a full guarantee on MP's pensions as of January 1, 1986. That is something which does not seem to get mentioned in the rhetoric of the Opposition. I went on to explain that this was a package of budget items which we had put together very carefully. I explained that it is always very difficult to draw the line. As always, we have attempted to look after the people who are the most in need. That is where our hearts are and that is where our greatest concern is. I am sure the Hon. Member shares that concern.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, I would like to be thoughtful for a minute. The concept that indexing everything is undesirable is a valid argument. I would accept, for example, if the Government said to those who are contracted by the Government that it would not automatically give them a 3 per cent or 4 per cent increase every year, in line with the rate of inflation. I would understand if the Government told them that they would have to fight for every penny. That is certainly argued in terms of labour-management negotiations. However, I found it objectionable to have the same argument apply, with such religious fervour, by Members of the Government, including the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Finance, when it comes to people who are no longer able to work an extra hour-and-a-half a week if their income begins to fall. The Government should find a way to provide a better service, which is more efficient and which would cut costs to keep them in line with government ceilings.

Senior citizens are not in the position to fight back. The bulk of them live in poverty or below the poverty line. It seems to me it is desirable for people who retire, who can no longer provide for their own needs by working, that indexing should continue to apply. I think that is a humane and sensible provision. Why is the Government out to punish Public Service employees who have worked 30 years for the Government of Canada? Why is the Government out to punish people who started their working careers for 20 cents or 40 cents a day back in the days of the Great Depression? They are now trembling. They do not know if the purchasing power of their pensions will get them through. Why is the Government picking on the people who are the weakest in society? If the Government wants to preach deindexation, why does it not do it to able-bodied individuals who are in their working years and to corporations and companies which have been ripping off the Government for a very long time?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, I think that the programs we have put in place do recognize some of the situations which the Hon. Member has outlined. The budget papers indicate that government Departments will not automatically get an increase for inflation every year. We have been consistent in looking at the whole area of indexing and what it has done to the system over time. I believe there is more consistency in our approach to the policies which we have produced than we have seen from any government for a long time. There is considerable sensitivity, concern and awareness.

We recognize that there is a short-term problem with the elderly poor, in which case those on the GIS are protected. We also recognize that there is a long-term problem in that these things will continue to happen if we do not provide for and encourage the kind of pension recommendations which are included in the Budget, such as pensions for part-time workers, earlier vesting and portability. All those things will help women, who comprise the larger proportion of our elderly poor.

We have very carefully balanced the policies we have outlined in the Budget. We have indicated that we would watch the trends very closely. It is something to which we are very sensitive. When we are in a position to do so, we will have more flexibility in social policy and we will be able to enrich some of the programs.

As I indicated earlier tonight, we have to ensure that the social policy meets the needs of the present and the future rather than the needs of the past. That means that we need flexibility, financial responsibility and fiscal responsibility. If we do not have that, we will come to the point where the funds will simply not be there to deal with the people who have real needs. I believe that people who have lived through the Depression and the wars know how important it is to take responsibility for the future. We are enormously sensitive to senior citizens and to other people who are in need in our society. That is why we indicated in the budget papers that we would watch the situation very closely with a view to enriching the programs as soon as we have the fiscal capacity to do so.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, the Minister is avoiding the point, which is that the Government is being sensitive to the needs of the rich people today. It has given them a half a million dollar exemption capital gains tax—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You do not know any farmers.

Mr. Cassidy: As far as the aged are concerned, the Minister is dead wrong. She said that the Government is being sensitive to the needs of the people on GIS. People on the GIS are suffering a $100 decrease—

Mr. Lanthier: The NDP is against farmers!

Mr. Cassidy: This is a Budget for the rich.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Farmers are not rich.

• (2050)

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. What went wrong? The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, you know, as I know, that a tax concession to farmers could have been very easily accomplished without benefiting all of the fast buck artists on Bay Street and St. James Street, which is what the Government has done in its Budget with the capital tax exemption. Everyone in this House knows that, Mr. Chairman. There is no issue about that.

To get back to the point I was trying to make, the Minister stated that the Government is protecting the poorest of the pensioners, those who receive the Guaranteed Income Supplement. What she ignores and what she is dissembling about is that people receiving the Guaranteed Income Supplement will also suffer the equivalent of $100 loss in purchasing power next year because of deindexation, $200 a year after that, and $300 the year after that, rising to about $700 by the early 1990s. That cut in purchasing power will apply equally to a pensioner with pensions and other investment income amounting to $30,000 a year, to a pensioner whose income gets them just above the threshold for receiving the Guaranteed Income Supplement, and to those 1.3 million pensioners who will receive the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

I cannot understand what sensitivity there is in dealing with the poorest of pensioners in exactly the same way as someone who by any standards would seem to be very comfortably off. People are asking me why the Government has done this? When it can give so much money to the rich people, why is it taking $100 next year and twice that the year after from people who are receiving the Guaranteed Income Supplement who, by definition, are living in poverty?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member well knows that it is not only farmers who are going to benefit. The small business organizations across this country are going to benefit from this Budget. This is a Budget of opportunity. The small business organizations have been asking for this tax measure for years and years. We recognize that we also have to do something about jobs. That is something we have been committed to from the beginning. It is something we have a good record on. It would be nice to have all the money in the world to answer all the problems the very first go-around. It would be nice to be able to do that. But the Government which went before was totally irresponsible, because its answer to every problem was to write a bigger cheque. That is why we are here today discussing these topics.

The worse thing that ever happened to senior citizens in this country was in the middle 1970s when the former Government moved from a surplus to a large deficit and never got off that track. It totally squandered our prosperity. The economic theory is very simple, Mr. Chairman, and it has to do with seven years of feast and seven years of famine. It is a theory which has been around for a long time. If one is not careful in the seven years of feast, then one cannot handle the seven years of famine.

That Party opposite squandered our prosperity, Mr. Chairman. Day after day it just wrote cheques. That was its answer to every problem. There was no discipline, no caring for the future of the country. It dealt only in the present.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, in view of the comments made by the Minister a few moments ago, I feel that I have to speak for a few moments.

The Minister stated that our problems were caused by the previous administration writing blank cheques. But I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that this Government does not intend to write any cheques at all, as our critic on environment has pointed out. The former Minister of the Environment on many occasions pointed out that the lay-offs which took place in the Canadian Wildlife Service and with Environment Canada are absolutely unexplainable and cannot be defended by any Government.

But I want to get back to the Minister's sensitivity and concern. What was in the financial statement, the Expenditure and Review Program, is correct when it states that the Government is going to save $30 million because it is going to treat pensions as income, and that it is going to save $60 million through separation payments under Employment and Immigration.

What that means, Mr. Chairman, is that prior to this Government taking office, and prior to March 31, someone who finished their employment after years of working, and who received payments from their employer, did not have those payments taken into account as income for unemployment insurance purposes. Now it is taking into account. In fact, it is spread out over the entire years so that we get to the point where someone who has worked all their life, never drawn unemployment insurance, and always there was that provision there whereby they could draw for a set period of time, has had it discontinued. The Government is going to save $60 million. I will agree with that figure. The Government is going to save $30 million by taking pension income as earnings as of, I believe, January 1. That means, Mr. Chairman, that anyone who retires early and draws a pension early—that is a lot of people in the Armed Forces and the Public Service—will have their pensions taken into account as earnings for unemployment insurance purposes. In other words, Mr. Chairman, they have to pay in but they can't collect. Is that sensitivity and concern, as the Minister of State for Finance claims?

What really concerns me, Mr. Chairman, is this atrocious $200 million figure, which I suppose, Mr. Chairman, in considering this Bill of $18.2 billion is another $200 million which was not taken into account. What the President of the Treasury Board says is that we are going to save $200 million through intensifying interviews under the Unemployment Insurance Act. But there will be no saving of $200 million, and I will tell you why, Mr. Chairman, and I will tell the Minister why.

We can look at all the report from the Auditor General we want and there is always this massive figure of overpayments which should never have been made to recipients who were drawing unemployment insurance. There was never a distinction made as to why they received the overpayment. In other words, according to the law, if the Unemployment Insurance Commission makes a mistake, it is the recipient who has to pay the money. If the employer makes the mistake, the recipient still has to pay back the money. That is a considerable portion of what the Auditor General recognizes as being "overpayments".

The Minister says, "We are going to save $200 million now by intensifying interviews". In other words, Mr. Chairman, if the recipient is telephoned and they are not at home, they can get cut off their unemployment insurance benefits. If it is found that they went for a week looking for a job somewhere and didn't report that change of address to the Unemployment Insurance Commission they can lose their unemployment insurance benefits. If the Commission makes a mistake, as in a lot of these cases, it is the recipient who has to pay it back.

The point is, Mr. Chairman, that all of these cases involving the $200 million will be appealed. They will be appealed to the Board and then finally to the federal Tax Court of Canada, because we are going to encourage those people to appeal. The Court will hear their appeal because their reasons will be justified for that appeal. How else are we going to do it, Mr. Chairman? We are going to keep these appeals going for three years because the Act states that anything which is owing over a three-year period is automatically erased by the Unemployment Insurance Commission. I believe that every Member of Parliament now is going to encourage everybody to appeal—

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

CANADA POST CORPORATION—POSTAL DELAYS—REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT OF RATE INCREASES

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I rise under Standing Order 45. On June 4 in the House, in the absence of the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty), I asked his Parliamentary Secretary if Cabinet should not be considering improving Canada Post services before a rate increase is approved and implemented. Clearly the Canadian economy cannot afford to ignore the deteriorating productivity in a Crown corporation, that is the Post Office, that vitally affects every Canadian and the ability of every Canadian business to compete effectivetly in the marketplace.

Canadians want quality service and there is no reason they should not receive it. They are paying for first-class service and are entitled to the best. Canada Post claims that the mail is on time in 86 per cent of cases. This is just not good enough in the estimation of most Canadians. Normally if a paying customer is dissatisfied with the services of a particular company he has the option of taking his business elsewhere where he can receive the best quality service for his money. Since the post office has a monopoly on first-class mail it is not possible to go elsewhere unless a person can afford the services of private couriers.

Why should Canadians be forced to do this? It is our responsibility to provide postal service to Canadians, and ultimately to provide the best service for their money. The cost of doing business through the post office is not just the cost of stamps, but also the cost of delays, uncertainty, and anxiety. It is not knowing what you are going to get in the mail and when you are going to get it. Canadians seem to be giving up hope of better postal service, Mr. Speaker. They are plain fed up and tired of giving Canada Post the benefit of the doubt. Canadians want a post office that reflects responsibility, dependability, and service consistency and efficiency.

How can a postal rate increase be justified when we are aware of the many horror stories about disgraceful service. I am not referring to isolated incidents. The public is now being asked to pay more for postage in an environment where volumes of addressed mail are declining along with the quality of service. The seeming inability of Canada Post to provide consistently good service will hobble its future. Canada Post stands to lose a tremendous volume of business to private courier services.

Surely the Corporation must realize that a price increase during a period of declining service can only accelerate the decline in mail volumes and ultimately result in additional revenue losses, something I am sure the Corporation does not want to have happen if it still intends to clear its deficit position by 1987. We must remember that the inefficiencies of Canada Post not only impact negatively on the general public of the country, but also cost the business community, particularly small business which can ill afford to have its time and money wasted and abused by Canada Post.

Not only are small businesses concerned about the two-cent rate increase for first-class mail, but also about the possibility of a larger increase for small packages that are not sent first class. If these rate increases are approved they could force lay-offs and closings among businesses that are unable to make the necessary changes in their operations before the increases come into effect. Indeed, it is no small wonder that small business owners get very upset at the slightest hint of a postal disruption.

It is truly unfortunate that Canada Post all too often appears to be threatening to strike or is suffering from labour trouble. Perhaps it is time to reconsider whether Canada Post should have the right to strike. I believe that it is an essential service. More importantly, should a corporation that is vital to millions of Canadians have the right to disrupt a service that could mean the livelihood of hundreds of thousands of Canadians?

It is time to get Canada Post's house in order. It is time to consider what the customers want; that is, what Canadians expect and want for their money.

I commend Canada Post in its attempt to decrease and eventually eliminate its cash flow deficit. It is true that the Corporation has come a long way since its incorporation in 1981, but it is not fair to ask Canadians to carry the burden of its deficit when there is little indication and hope of improved services in the future. They are being asked to pay more for a service that is totally unacceptable.

In summary, I would ask my Cabinet colleagues to seriously consider the proposed Canada Post rate increases, what effect they will have on Canadians and whether they honestly feel Canadians should be asked to pay more for services while there is no evidence of improvement in the basic service. I have had many letters and phone calls to my constituency office about this topic. Not one letter has been complimentary of the post office. They have all been harshly critical of the service and demanding that we not approve a rate increase.

Finally, let me talk about the absenteeism rate at Canada Post. It is nowhere near the level in private enterprise. I believe it is another serious flaw that the management of the corporation should bring into line with normal levels. Perhaps when other efficiencies are put into effect, only then should it come back to the Government to ask for a rate increase.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, first I want to thank the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) for providing Canada Post with copies of the envelopes that took a great deal of time to get to their destination. I can assure the Hon. Member that upon receipt of these envelopes, an investigation has been launched by Canada Post and the Corporation will determine the causes of the undue delay that occurred in the delivery process.

The Corporation and the Government recognize that perhaps one of the single most important issues for Members of Parliament and many Canadians is the level of service provided by Canada Post. In fact, I believe we could say that this is something that truly unites Canadians. In this, the Corporation achieved initial dramatic increases in the level of service, with speed and reliability levels reaching up to 90 per cent on-time performance in 1983-84.

However, several factors affected its performance in 1984 and earlier this year. One of the major factors is that the Corporation is now processing the largest volumes of mail in the history of the post office. Further, during the prolonged period of labour contract negotiations, many large and small postal users flooded the system to protect themselves from possible disruptions. This made Canada Post's task of providing Canadians with acceptable levels of service particularly difficult.

Since service is Canada Post's business, every effort is being made to restore service performance to previous levels. Recent tests indicate that this has been under way for the past two months and that service performance now stands at an 85 per cent level. Canada Post Corporation's goal is to reach a 90 per cent on-time service performance level in the next few months. Of course, the Corporation will maintain its policy of both monitoring and publicly releasing its service performance levels on a regular basis.

In a corporation which handles more than 25 million pieces of mail every day; in a corporation which handles almost 7 billion pieces of mail every year, such incidents are bound to happen. If only 1 per cent of the mail does not get to destination on time, we have 250,000 unhappy customers.

Canada Post is conscious of the inconvenience this problem causes its customers and I can assure the Hon. Member for Don Valley East that all efforts are being made by the Corporation to reduce to a minimum these types of incidents, and at the least possible cost of Canadians.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS—RAIL CARRIAGE HAZARD TO TORONTO

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, on May 24, the Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission rejected a recommendation to reroute trains carrying hazardous materials through the centre of downtown Toronto. That was a shock to me, a shock to my constituents, and a shock to the people of Metropolitan Toronto. That recommendation had been made by a very distinguished committee, the Burton-Post Committee. Burton is a professor at the University of Toronto and is well regarded; Post is actually the Ontario Regional Manager of the Railway Transport Committee itself. These two distinguished gentlemen recommended rerouting out of downtown Toronto trains carrying hazardous material. However, for some astounding reason, the Committee rejected this recommendation.

In addition, both myself and my constituents were shocked because the main line of both CPR and CNR go right through my constituency of York East. It is the same line on which the famous Mississauga train derailment occurred a few years ago. If that train had stayed on the track in Mississauga, that accident would have occurred 30 minutes later in my constituency. All the people in my constituency have been very concerned about this situation ever since that time. They are very concerned about train derailments because something like 1,500 freight cars carrying hazardous materials travel through Metropolitan Toronto every month. Two accidents occur involving those particular freight cars every year. The Mississauga train derailment was one example. Another accident occurred recently in February, 1984. It was an accident in which a so-called empty freight car blew up in the MacMillan Yard in the Scarborough area of Metropolitan Toronto. Since that time there have been a number of very famous train accidents, one occurring in the Barrie area of Ontario and another occurring in the Pembroke area of Ontario. Of course there was the very famous one in India. All those accidents involving trains carrying hazardous materials required a great evacuation of residents living in the surrounding areas.

The Commissioner of Roads and Traffic in Metropolitan Toronto indicated that it was impossible to have a similar evacuation in Metropolitan Toronto because of the high density population in that area. A number of suggestions have been made on how to deal with this sort of problem. One was to slow down freight trains to something like 25 miles per hour or 40 kilometres per hour. That has been rejected already by the Railway Transport Committee, because there are so many trains travelling this route it would clog up the line. The Committee indicated that it was impossible to slow them down and clog up the line.

Another suggestion, as I just indicated, was the rerouting of trains. That was rejected because of the cost of $120 million, apparently, to build other facilities to allow for the rerouting of these trains out of Metropolitan Toronto. By the way, these trains travel back and forth, carrying the same goods in and out, without dropping them off at all. It is an incredible situation.

The Toronto Board of Education has arranged for and is now holding evacuation drills in its schools. There are nine such schools in areas adjacent to the direct lines travelling through the Metropolitan Toronto area. There are something like 76,000 students in those schools. They had their first drill on March 5. They are planning another evacuation drill in the fall and expect to carry them out on a regular basis.

Other suggestions have been made about how to deal with the situation. Some of them include ceilings on the numbers of cars on these trains. Right now these trains carry up to 150 separate carloads of hazardous materials at a time.

• (2115)

Another suggestion for the federal Government or the Commission is to prepare some evacuation plans themselves. They have not done anything of that sort.

Another suggestion is to make sure that the cabooseless trains which are proposed to travel back and forth not be allowed to travel in high density metropolitan areas. There has been nothing said about that as yet.

Of course another suggestion is the colour-coding of these cars carrying hazardous material. That at least is apparently going to be introduced when the Transportation of Dangerous Goods Act, proclaimed November 1, 1980, is actually put into effect. There are no regulations promulgated to put it into effect, but I understand those regulations will come in on July 1 of this year. They will finally be some colour-coding so fire-fighters will know what is in those cars when they turn over and cause these potentially hazardous situations.

The final suggestion was for not just a rerouting but a relocation of the actual tracks themselves; put them in an area where there would not be a high density of people and there would not be the same sort of problem situation occurring. Obviously there has been a lot of resistance to that because it will cost a lot of money, and there will be some people wherever the track is relocated. But it is possible because there is a green belt plan around metropolitan Toronto. It would be possible to relocate the track in that area. Approval has to come from the Cabinet, not from the Canadian Transport Commission or the Railway Transport Committee.

I ask the Parliamentary Secretary this evening if the Government is now prepared, if it is going to reject all of these other suggestions, to finally approve some funding for a relocation of these tracks to solve the problem and make sure the safety of 2.5 million people in metropolitan Toronto is protected, that they are not going to be placed in a situation such as the one which recently occurred in India where they suffered such devastation.

Mr. Paul Dick (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I hope to respond to most of the items the Hon. Member has raised.

The question of transportation of dangerous commodities through populated areas, be they large or small, is one of grave concern to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). As you know, it was the present Minister who asked Mr. Justice Samuel Grange to inquire into and report on the derailment at Mississauga in November of 1979. The Minister has followed this issue closely over the intervening years.

As a result of the Grange Commission inquiry, many important steps have been taken to increase the level of safety in the transportation of dangerous commodities through built-up areas. For instance, hot box detectors have been installed, gateway inspections are being performed, a retro-fit program is underway to install roller bearings, tank cars have been equipped with double-shelf couplers, regulations have been promulgated with respect to thermal and bottom fitting protection and new freight safety inspection regulations became effective on November 5, 1984. Hon. Members know that there has been much recent debate in this Chamber with regard to the transportation of dangerous goods and more specifically PCBs. New regulations enforcing standards for the transportation of dangerous goods will come into force July 1, 1985.

As to the case at hand, Mr. Speaker, as already stated by the Minister, the implications of the Burton-Post report recommendations are severe and there has not been a clear consensus as to which of the two, if any, should be implemented. I would like to advise the Hon. Member that the responsible authorities are invited to apply for railway relocation at any time, an option which has yet to be exercised. It must be pointed out at this time, Mr. Speaker, that the CTC has not rejected the recommendations of the Burton-Post report, but rather that in an effort to reach a solution which would prove satisfactory to all interested parties the CTC has invited submissions on safety measures not already addressed in the Burton-Post report. These submissions must be filed by October 1, 1985. I would encourage the interested parties to take advantage of this opportunity and make their views and ideas known.

NATIONAL PARKS—PARKS POLICY—MINISTER'S POSITION. (B) REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ASSURANCE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, as you probably know, on page 5642 of Hansard of June 11, in a question put to the Minister of Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier) on Parks Canada, it is shown that I did receive a reply to the effect that the Minister committed herself to protecting, improving and beautifying the Parks. Having received that reply, I pressed her further to obtain a commitment that she would not review or change the present policy of Parks Canada, that there will not be any mining, timber cutting or other activities in conflict with Parks Canada policies.

In reply, apart from the fact that she could not resist the temptation of addressing some vilifying comments in my direction, comments which are on the record for anyone to see, she urged me to stop reading newspaper headlines and referred me to statements made before the standing committee of the House. She did this rather than taking a clear stand on whether or not she would make sure that there would be no review or change of the existing Parks Canada policies in which Canadians place so much confidence and have for many decades.

Today, what I see in The Globe and Mail is an article describing an interview with the Minister. This article again puts in jeopardy the attitude of the Government toward the environment, and in this case toward Parks Canada. In the article, it says that the Minister first indicated that she would not consider mining or logging in national parks like Banff or Jasper. Big deal. Of course one does not consider mining or logging in such parks as Banff or Jasper. What kind of a statement is that? It is a well known fact that those two major parks, along with others, represent a very valuable heritage. They are parks in which one would not even dream of let alone contemplate the possibility of mining or logging.

The interview goes on to quote the Minister as saying that it is not anything anyone would wish, but if they are to establish a park in an area where the logging and mining rights are owned by private developers, then there would have to be some compromise. What kind of a park would this be that the Government envisages? Is it a logging park, is it a mining park or is it a logging and mining park? How can one reconcile this kind of statement with the well established practices and policies of Parks Canada, which are to ensure that there are no activities of this kind?

For example, would this kind of proposal lead to the acquisition of South Moresby in those magnificent islands as a national park in which logging would be allowed? I would ask, as would you, Mr. Speaker, what kind of park that would be. Would it be a park in which the land is saved but not the forests? Does that make any sense?

I am amazed at this kind of muddled thinking that is emerging from the Government which does not seem to know the basics about environmental and parks policies. At this rate, the Government is becoming a menace to the environment. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) cannot go on saying that the Minister was misquoted. That is like saying that a tape recorder was functioning improperly. We cannot go on like that. The series of statements indicates that something is profoundly wrong and that there is an attitude which poses a threat to the parks. It poses a threat to parks in the same way in which the Government posed a threat to wildlife by the cuts it made last November. On the one hand we have a Government which prides itself on the creation of jobs, but on the other hand it does not hesitate to wipe out existing jobs in wildlife. It still has the nerve to defend that decision, in light of the continuous appeals to restore the Canadian Wildlife Service.

The Government has already made decisions which pose a threat to another very important field which has environmental implications—renewable energy. Renewable energy is very important. It is the path to a conservation approach and to the use of resources which are not finite and environmentally friendly. It has taken years to put renewable energy resources on track. However, the NRC is having to abandon its research, as well as a group of scientists who were involved in soft energy studies. The Budget has imposed a federal sales tax on insulation material, and solar and wind equipment. If all the elements are put together, we see a general trend which is telling Canadians that their future lies only with oil and gas. That is not the road which Canadians should travel. The Government is dismantling many years of careful work, which was launched in the 1970s, particularly in 1977 when the country was hit with the second oil crisis.

We are seeing a threat to the parks policy because of the silly statements of the Minister. There is a threat which has emerged in the wildlife field. There is a threat and an impending serious consequence to the over-all conservation of energy by renewable sources, due to the decisions of the Government.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to respond to the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) on behalf of the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier). I find the logic of the Hon. Member somewhat convoluted. I think he will know that the parks policy, as it is now written, is a direct consequence of the 1979 Conservative Government when the present Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) approved the policy during his term of office as Minister of the Environment.

When the Hon. Member speaks about parks policy he should be fair enough and logical enough to define the whole policy. He knows that the policy, as it is presently written, which he supported when he was Minister and which continues to be supported without reservation by this Government, does indeed include specific areas in which there is a preservation and conservation attitude.

However, we also have a commitment to support the kinds of activities which will respect the things which have been done by local residents. Such is the case with timber harvesting in Gros Morne National Park in Newfoundland and trapping in Wood Buffalo National Park in Alberta and the Northwest Territories. Those activities were not stopped two years ago, they are still continuing. These are activities which seem reasonable to the local residents. It was agreed at that time when the parks were established that the activities would be permitted because of their importance to the local economy. Nor can we be insensitive to the economic and cultural importance of certain activities such as hunting and fishing to our native peoples. New parks in Canada's North will be established in such a way that the importance of these activities will be fully recognized.

Again, I would point to new parks, Mr. Speaker. We want new parks and we are going to have new parks, but we will have to have some sensitivity toward these things. I cannot believe that the Hon. Member opposite would not share that similar view if he were in fact still in Government and still Minister of the Environment.

This Government without question is firmly committed to maintaining the natural beauty and integrity of our national parks, parks which are famous worldwide, and deservedly so. Resource extraction will not be permitted within their boundaries. But we cannot turn a blind eye to the economic and cultural importance of certain activities to local residence and native people. I know, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister of the Environment, who is now the Vice-Chairman of an OACD conference and will be going to Helsinki to sigh certain documents on behalf of Canada and the international community, supports that comment and that perspective totally.

The House resumed from Monday, June 17, consideration in committee of Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority—Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance))—Mr. Danis in the chair.

The Chairman: Is the Hon. President of the Privy Council and Government House Leader seeking the floor on a point of order?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No, Mr. Chairman. I just want to carry on with the debate.

The Chairman: House again in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority. When the committee was interrupted at nine o'clock p.m. on Monday, June 17, Clause 2 of the Bill was under consideration and the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate had the floor.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, it is unacceptable for the Government of Canada to be cutting 3 per cent from the pensions of our senior citizens. Furthermore, what the Government has been saying over the last couple of weeks and what the Prime Minister has been saying over the last couple of days is also unacceptable. The Official Opposition has put forward its position very firmly. We are saying that if senior citizens have to suffer by losing 3 per cent of their pensions, then so be it, let the Government of Canada suffer by losing 3 per cent of its borrowing authority.

Therefore, I move:

That Clause 2 of Bill C-51 be amended by deleting the words "eighteen billion, two hundred million dollars" and substituting therefor the words "seventeen billion, six hundred and fifty-four million dollars".

The Chairman: The committee has heard the terms of the amendment. The Chair finds the amendment in order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, I rise to respond very briefly to this amendment and to indicate, unfortunately, what has happened with respect to it. When we look through all the political rhetoric which has gone into the presentation of this particular amendment, we discover that the Opposition is now suggesting that there be a limit with respect to very clearly laid down, unprecedented borrowing authority legislation which has come before the House in an appropriate manner, as we brought down the Estimates with respect to the spending requirements of the Government of Canada. A proposition with respect to the borrowing requirements of the country was brought in within two days of the Budget in order to ensure that essential services can be provided by the Government of Canada through a borrowing authority. This particular borrowing authority is justified on the basis of the statistics provided within the Budget and the Estimates which have been laid before the House.

On occasion, the Opposition attempts to make political points. As we in the House of Commons say, this is a political forum, but let us consider the effect of this particular amendment. By virtue of this particular amendment, the Official Opposition is saying that every person who relies on expenditures through the federal Government will be cut by 3 per cent more than is now required by the Government of Canada to carry on under the terms of its Budget. It is saying to the people of Canada that they will be cut more. It is saying to Canadians who rely on payments, subsidies, grants and a variety of things, that they now have to take a reduction. These are the same Members who are complaining about a process under which the Government will modify indexing in the future and which, we say to the people of Canada, we are monitoring on an ongoing basis. The Opposition says: "No, cut the poor right now". This goes right to the people in society least able to defend themselves. The Opposition is now saying: "Cut the amount of money you are now spending on the poor of the country". This is the effect of its amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: Cut the Prime Minister's budget.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: When we get down to it, this is exactly what the Opposition is saying. It is saying to the people of Canada, who can least afford it—

Ms. Copps: Cut the expense accounts.

The Chairman: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The poor of the country—

Ms. Copps: Cut the $19,000 trip to Vancouver.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, I hope you will call for order.

The Chairman: Order, please. I ask Hon. Members to listen to the Hon. President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The people of Canada are concerned—and I have received many complaints about it—about how the Liberal Opposition is so rowdy, its lack of decorum, and the way it disrupts proceedings in the House of Commons. This is something on which Canadians across the country have written to me. We in the Government have sat and listened to the representations on the part of the Opposition. We have tried to listen in silence while opposition Members made their points. We believe in free and democratic debate. However, when the Opposition resorts to barracking and to shouting down speakers on the government side who have a right to participate—

• (1110)

Ms. Copps: Tell the truth to the Canadian people.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member is the worst offender. The barracking that goes on by that Hon. Member is unacceptable.

Ms. Copps: Tell the truth to the Canadian people.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I say to the people of Canada that this is the kind of representation they have in the Liberal Party. Liberal Members do not believe in free and unfettered debate.

Ms. Copps: We believe in the truth.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They believe in shouting down anyone who tries to put forward a position with which they do not agree. Their response is not to debate the issue but to try to shout down the speaker. That kind of attitude does a disservice to the democratic institution of the House of Commons, an institution which we all respect. I would hope that Hon. Members of the Liberal Party would simply allow the freedom of speech which we in this country hold so dearly to our hearts.

If I can carry on without Liberal Members trying to shout me down—

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. Surely it is noted by all of those who are present today that the Government will not even listen to, let alone meet with, senior citizens. The bombast of the President of the Privy Council is exceeded only by the hypocrisy of his comments.

The Chairman: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member has been around the House for a couple of years. He will understand that not only is that not a point of order but it is a complete misstatement of the facts. I will not even comment on the statement he made because I must be touching a sensitive nerve. The only nerve that I know the Hon. Member has is the nerve that goes to his mouth. I must be affecting that nerve because he is responding in a rather curious and unparliamentary manner.

What I have said about the effect of this particular motion is, I think, quite clear and would make sense to anyone who understands basic arithmetic. Opposition Members have simply indicated to the poorest people of this country that they are not going to be allowed to have the services that will be provided for by this borrowing Bill.

What is a borrowing Bill? It is like running a household—

Mr. Tobin: You're stalling while your Members come in.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Chairman, again Liberal Members refuse to listen. Could I have some order, Mr. Chairman? They refuse to let people speak on the floor of the House of Commons. They refuse to listen to reason.

Ms. Copps: We haven't heard any.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I want to reason with Members of the Liberal Party because I think that there are Members of that Party who can listen to reason and who will be silent enough to allow free and unfettered debate to take place on the floor of the House of Commons. I know there are some who will not try to disrupt the proceedings of the House of Commons by constantly shouting, something which is so repugnant to the people of Canada.

Ms. Copps: You're repeating yourself.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I simply want to appeal to the reason of Hon. Members and say that we—

Mr. Gauthier: You said just about enough.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We on the government side have tried to bring reasonable management into the affairs of this Government. I think this is a situation which has been acknowledged by the people of Canada. With the proper sense of responsibility for the taxpayers' money, we have attempted to bring forward a full and complete accounting with respect to the affairs of the country.

We have in fact dealt with the question of a borrowing Bill after bringing in a full, complete and massive Budget. Now the Official Opposition is moving a motion which has the effect of slashing the amount of money that the Government is able to borrow in order to bring essential services to the poor of this country. I appeal to the sense of compassion of Hon. Members.

What has happened to the Liberal Party? I know that Liberal Members suffered an enormous electoral defeat, but I look back to the proud tradition of the Liberal Party over the years—

Mr. Boudria: Frank Miller knows what that feels like.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: In the Liberal Party, there was compassion for the poor and there was no preoccupation with politics, with cheap shots and with the rat pack mentality. I appeal to the real soul of the Liberal Party, and particularly the Leader of the Opposition, who I think is an honourable man, to show some leadership. I know this is a difficult time within the life of the Liberal Party, but what is the Leader of the Opposition allowing his back-benchers to do? There is no way that this motion should be allowed to carry, but if it were carried, they would be punishing the minorities of the country because there would not be the necessary funds to ensure that employment opportunities are available for women in programs of the federal Government. Through this very unfortunate amendment they are attacking the people who are least able to defend themselves.

I am the first to acknowledge that the Liberal Party has had some success in social policies in the country. To see what remains of that Party moving a motion which will have the effect of adversely impacting on—

Mr. Tobin: What hypocrisy! How can you speak this way?

The Chairman: Order, please. I ask hon. Members to listen please to the President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the fact that you are so often required to bring the Liberal Party to order. We in the House must look seriously at decorum and the impression that people of Canada have of this institution. That impression is negatively impacted by the Liberal Party which knows nothing of debating on a serious matter, but rather spends its time trying to shout down people who are appealing to common sense, such as myself.

Mr. Rossi: You can't even say that with a straight face.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The Official Opposition should be ashamed of itself.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I have been around the House for a little while and have been in the Opposition for an unfortunate period of time. However, it is this kind of tactic, irresponsibility, and attack on the poor of the country, that will ensure that the Liberal Party remains in opposition for the next 25 or 30 years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Chairman, I have listened very carefully to the intervention of the Hon. Government House Leader. In his attempt to lecture us he has overlooked a very important point, which is not unusual in his myopic approach to politics. He has inadvertently, or perhaps inaccurately, accused us of slashing borrowing authority. He does not seem to realize that the Liberal Opposition is putting pressure on the Government at the first opportunity available for us to do our job and to speak up. Contrary to what the Government House Leader said, we have listened to the signals that we have received from pensioners across the nation.

As the weeks pass, it becomes quite clear that this is an important issue of national dimension. On May 23, the Minister of Finance said that there would be deindexation. He did not say that there may be deindexation; he said that there would be deindexation. He also said that there would be deindexation of family allowances. He did not say that there may be deindexation of family allowances; he said that there would be such deindexation. Now all of a sudden, the Prime Minister is saying that that was just a proposal and that we should not be upset. He says we should not interpret "will" as meaning "will", that it may mean "may". For the first time in recent history the Budget is no longer a Budget. It is something which ressembles a White Paper. The pensioners of Canada and those who are approaching that time of life are thinking that perhaps they should not take seriously what the Minister of Finance is saying. Perhaps they should wait for potential statements from the Prime Minister. As every day goes by, the distance between those two gentlemen is growing.

If I were a Tory back-bencher, God forbid, I would have to ask myself what I would say to my constituents during July and August. Are they going to tell their constituents what the Minister of Finance said on May 23, or what the Prime Minister has been saying in the last few weeks? What is the true theology? That is the question facing 180 inexperienced back-benchers who will face the music when they go home. I feel sympathy for them because it is the first time in a long time that they will have to defend government policies. The people of their constituencies are wondering what on earth is going on.

An issue of national importance has emerged. The Official Opposition has seized the issue because it is its duty. If Conservative Members were in opposition they would be doing the same thing. We are asking the Government to diminish the amount of money which is requested in the borrowing authority Bill by the amount of the proposed deindexing. We are on our toes in the Official Opposition and we are putting pressure on the Government, at the first opportunity, with this amendment. That is what we are doing.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Chairman, I am looking at the other side of the House and it is interesting to see that there are only two members of the New Democratic Party here today—

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I believe it is the tradition of the House that Members do not draw attention to other Members who are at the time occupied in committee or elsewhere and are not in the House. I believe it is desperate behaviour on the part of the Hon. Member. If that is the best comment he can make in this debate, it is a sad state for the Progressive Conservative Party.

The Chairman: The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap is correct. The Hon. Member for Prince George-Peace River has the floor.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Chairman, I apologize. If the Hon. Member had heard me out, he would have realized that I simply wanted to be polite to him. I wanted to point out how infinitely logical are members of his Party and how illogical are members of the Official Opposition. What members of the Official Opposition should have done, in pursuit of their objectives—namely to reindex seniors' pensions—was to have suggested that we increase the borrowing authority by 3 per cent, not decrease it—

Mr. Tobin: It cannot be done.

Mr. Oberle: I feel obliged to point out the logic. Borrowing authority provides the Government with the opportunity to meet its obligations. These obligations are not just to senior citizens, they are, in the main, to bankers because of the spendthrift activities of the previous Government during the last 20 years. What those Hon. Members opposite are doing by asking us to decrease the borrowing authority of the Government—and the bankers, of course, will want their pound of flesh—is to decrease the Government's ability to meet its obligation to the poor, because we will be paying the bankers and our other statutory obligations to the provinces.

• (1125)

What those Hon. Members should have done, if they had wanted to be responsible and if anything else but their selfish political motives had motivated them, would have been to increase the borrowing authority with the view to the Government's proceeding with the reindexation of pensions. We could have debated that logically. But what they have done now, if in fact their motion carries, is to make it necesssary to renege on other social programs, because that is the only thing we can renege on. We cannot renege on our obligations to the foreign bankers. There is no money tree out in the backyard. These thousands of people who come from all across Canada and the United States are walking around these buildings thinking there are money trees out in the back. There are no money trees. The Government cannot give anything away that it has not first taken from somewhere else. Had it not been for the strange and irresponsible policies of the Liberal Government over the last 20 years, we would not be in this fix.

So I appeal to the Opposition's sense of fairness and logic. What it is doing makes absolutely no sense at all. What it should be doing is to increase the spending authority. Mind you, we would fight this. I speak to senior citizens as well. They built this country. They put us where we are. And something else they did throughout their lives is to have paid their bills, something which the Liberal Government did not do. Had it done that, we would not be in the fix we are in. The senior citizens who write to me say, "For God's sake, pay your bills because we don't want to pass our debts on to our grandchildren".

I appeal to the Opposition's sense of logic and fairness, Mr. Speaker, and I would like to think that it would withdraw this motion.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Chairman, at the beginning of the debate on this amendment, I think it would be a good thing to explain clearly what the intentions are of the Opposition and our reason for moving an amendment that seems to have taken our friends opposite by surprise.

Mr. Chairman, the reason is quite simple. Ever since a Budget we consider unfair and inequitable was brought down, we have tried in every possible way to make Government Members understand that in an enlightened society like ours, we cannot tolerate any attempt to reduce the deficit by making the rich richer and putting a greater burden on the neediest in our society, and I am referring to those people who only have their Old Age Security pension and especially those who have to live on that pension plus the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

We know that Canadians who are receiving the Old Age Security pension and the Guaranteed Income Supplement are those who are living below the poverty line across this country. We cannot accept this, and we have said it a hundred times over. However, our efforts together with those of thousands of Canadians across the country do not seem to have moved the Government away from its determination to make people pay who cannot afford to pay.

That is why we are moving this motion this morning, in an attempt to make the Government take its own medicine so it will understand that a 3 per cent cut in income is not something to be taken lightly.

We realize the Government must meet its commitments. That is why it has tabled a Bill to seek borrowing authority, which means that the Government can then go to the financial markets and borrow the funds it needs for its operations. We think that if the Government does not realize what a three per cent cut in income means to the neediest in Canada, perhaps it will understand—although I am not so sure—when it has to take a 3 per cent cut in its borrowing authority, that a three per cent cut can hurt. And that is why we are taking this action.

[English]

We are just trying to impress on this Government that a 3 per cent cut when one is below the poverty line is unacceptable. And after repeating this hundreds of times it is obvious that we have not so far been able to push our message across. So we are trying, by a practical amendment, to let the Government feel the pinch of a 3 per cent cut, and that is the reason we are doing it.

• (1130)

When the Hon. Member for Prince George-Peace River, who is hurling invective at me, said earlier that there was no logic in what we are doing because if we had wanted to reindex pensions we should have moved an increase in the borrowing authority not a decrease, he proved that he does not understand the way this Budget and the borrowing authority work.

Mr. Oberle: I understand how you work.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): If you did, you would not have said that because the borrowing authority relates only to this fiscal year and the pension cuts will be in the next fiscal year. So it is absolutely irrelevant whether or not the borrowing authority is reduced. It will have no bearing on the seniors this year. Open your eyes, wake up and read the Budget.

What we have been doing over the years under Liberal and Tory Governments is gradually and increasingly to build a sound pension system which could benefit and has benefited the citizens of this country, a system which has been the pride of Canada the world over. Even under Tory Governments the pension benefits were increased, but what is happening now? We see an attack on one of the basic cornerstones of the social network which protects the people of this country. We are not going to allow that to happen, as few in number as we may appear to be to those on the government benches.

Remember one thing: we are not alone on this side of the House. The NDP and the Liberal Opposition, along with thousands upon thousands of people across the country, are against this proposal. We have not raised this blockade, it was the people of Canada who have done it. We are not the ones who suggested to the three Atlantic provincial Premiers that they should speak against this measure; they did it by themselves. They certainly would not listen to Liberal advice because they are Tory Premiers. They thought themselves that it would not be acceptable to the people in their provinces. The Manitoba Legislature passed a unanimous resolution, including the Tory back-benchers, condemning this measure.

[Translation]

The Quebec National Assembly has also adopted a unanimous resolution condemning this measure and asking the Government to reverse what it too believes is a case of flagrant injustice being prepetrated on the neediest in our society. Thousands of Canadians are opposed to this Scheme. And if that is not convincing enough, I would invite the Members opposite to stand in front of the Parliament Buildings tomorrow and watch thousands of people who will be demonstrating in favour of a reversal of the Government's decision.

[English]

Let me get back to the Budget and the reason we are opposing this borrowing authority. We ask ourselves: Where is the fairness in this Budget when you start cutting the benefits of those who need it most? When the time comes to cater to the rich of this country there is no barrier. The Government is offering them a lifetime deduction of $500,000 on their capital gains. Don't shake your head; read the Budget. It will benefit a very small segment of our society.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Probably between 4 per cent and 6 per cent of our society.

Mr. McDermid: That is not true.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Why should these people get away with a bonanza when the poorest in our society are asked to bear the brunt of this Budget? We say that the Budget is not fair. It was said to be fair, but we found out it is not.

Mr. McDermid: Tell the truth for a change.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): The Government promised to bring in a minimum tax on the rich.

Mr. Gass: It is coming.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): It is coming. That is my point. It was not in the Budget.

Mr. McDermid: It was so.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): The Government is talking about it, promising it, but why would we on this side of the House believe the Government when it promises a minimum tax on the rich? It promised earlier not to touch pensions and to bring in full indexation. I wish the Minister of Finance, when he spoke of bringing in a minimum tax for the rich, had his hand on the Bible. Then maybe we would start believing him. Why should we believe him?

Mr. McDermid: Why should we believe you, a Liberal?

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): In Sherbrooke last summer, the Prime Minister was promising to reinstate full indexation, while in January, in the consultation paper on social services, the Minister of National Health and Welfare plainly stated that pensions will not be touched. That was in writing, but his hand was not on the Bible. This is what we will have to ask the Government Members each time they promise something, either to put their hand on the Bible if they are believers, or to make some sort of official declaration if they are not. How can we be certain the Government is going to follow through on its promises after we have seen what it has delivered over the past few weeks and months?

I say that the Budget is unfair because it is asking the poor to pay. The Budget brought in a surtax but not a minimum tax. What will happen to those hundreds of people who do not pay a cent of tax even though they have large incomes? A surtax on zero is still zero. It will bring in taxes from the middle-income people again, the poor and the middle-income earners, the two favourite targets of this Government.

Mr. Dick: Those are the rules you broke as a Liberal Government.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): What you are doing is taking more from those who need it most. More than that, now that the Government realizes that this thing may not wash, Members opposite are going across the country saying they are monitoring the situation. They are going to think about it and maybe they are going to do something. Well, I say to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of Finance that if they had in mind to monitor the situation until the end of the year and then maybe cut the indexing or maybe not, because that is the story we are getting now that this situation is getting hotter, then why write the proposal in the first place? It has been termed a proposal, not a measure anymore. Why write it in the budget documents in the first place? Why do the seniors spend sleepless nights in anxiety thinking that maybe their purchasing power is going to be reduced by $1,500 over five years? If the whole purpose of the exercise was to monitor the economy, then why do that? The Government could have left that out of the Budget completely. It could have monitored the economic situation, and if it thought at the end of the year there was reason to cut the pension indexation, it could have done so without having the seniors worry for months over what it was going to do.

What the people are asking themselves at this time is whether they are going to be cut or not. So why do it? I am going to tell Members opposite why it was done. I know why. Government Members thought they would get away with it. They thought that a powerful 211-Member Government on a honeymoon could steamroller just about anything they wanted on the backs of the poor of this nation. It so happens that it does not wash, so now they are toying with the idea that maybe they will back off and maybe not. We are just saying that while the Government is toying with this, we are going to give it a ride on the borrowing authority. We are going to make the Government feel the pinch of 3 per cent too. Maybe that will bring it back to its senses and make it do something sensible for the people who need it most.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, that is what we are trying to do by presenting this amendment. We are trying to make the Government understand that when people are strapped for cash and have to borrow—which is the position the Government is in—they are in exactly the same position as an elderly person who is strapped for cash and has to borrow to pay the rent.

An Hon. Member: That is the truth!

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): It certainly is! And an elderly person in a situation like that certainly does not like to see his or her purchasing power cut by 3 per cent!

I think that when not a person but a Government is strapped for cash and has to borrow to pay for its daily expenditures, that Government is not particularly keen either to have its borrowing power cut by 3 per cent.

That is why we are trying it this way, Mr. Chairman. I am not sure it will work, but it might put a new light on the Budget and it might make the Government think a little today. Today, because tomorrow there will be thousands of people on the Hill in front of the Parliament Buildings. Those people will be bringing an entirely new dimension to this question, and in their own way they will be trying to make the Government review and reverse its decision on a measure that must be the most unfair proposal the Parliament of Canada has ever been asked to consider, at least in the last seventeen years I have been sitting in the House.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to have an opportunity to make a few comments as a result of the unexpected turn of events here today. Yesterday, in one of the comments that I was making about Clause 2 of this borrowing Bill, I suggested to the Minister of State for Finance that obviously the Government had come to the conclusion that it could live with reducing the purchasing power of senior citizens by 3 per cent. A number of Conservative spokesmen have said that they are concerned and did not like to do this but it is something that had to be done. They were confident that senior citizens would support this act of cutting 3 per cent from their disposable income in the years ahead.

When we put this into dollar and cent terms, assuming that inflation remains at the stable level at which it has been for the last number of years, which all projections indicate, a typical senior citizen in our country would lose approximately $1,500 of purchasing power over the next five years. It also means, as the finance officials have indicated, that 220,000 senior citizens will drop below the poverty line, as defined by the Government, in the years ahead.

The Government is saying that it supports the decision to reduce senior citizens' purchasing power by 3 per cent. It believes that seniors could live with this reduction, and it is prepared to impose that upon the people who built this country.

I appreciate the symbolism of the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Newfoundland in which he suggests that if the Government is going to ask senior citizens, as a special group, to take a 3 per cent cut, then it is not unreasonable to expect the Government itself to take a 3 per cent cut in this particular borrowing authority, which amounts to a little over half a billion dollars. Perhaps the Government itself should adjust its priorities as it has asked seniors to adjust their eating, travelling and day-to-day priorities. This motion asks the Government to adjust its expectations downward, just as it is asking senior citizens to do. I do not believe that this is an unreasonable expectation when one uses the same logic that is used by Members opposite.

Quite frankly, I have not been able to understand why there has not been outrage from Members opposite, particularly from the Hon. Member for Mississauga South who used to sit on this side of the House beside the NDP. I recall the time when he would become extremely animated in his outrage because of the discriminatory activities of the Government of the day against the oil companies. I admire the colour the Hon. Member brings to his speeches, as only he can. He went on for days and days during Question Period and in debates fighting for the oil companies because the Government, through Petro-Canada, was acting unfairly. The Hon. Member, along with some of his colleagues, convinced the Official Opposition at that time to shut down the House of Commons during the infamous bell ringing period incident because the oil companies were being punished. The Opposition at that time stayed out in the lounge and drank coffee, talking about the importance of that act of symbolism. They believed it was important to close down Canada's Parliament in the best interest of the multinational oil companies.

While I understood their action at that time, for many reasons I did not believe it was appropriate. I did not think the priority of closing down the House of Commons to prevent free debate from taking place was appropriate. I did not appreciate the tactics because I thought they were rather dictatorial.

However, the Opposition at that time felt strongly about that issue. I cannot believe that Hon. Members opposite do not feel as strongly now about what the Government is doing to senior citizens in this Country. They are not like oil companies with headquarters in Houston and Dallas, Texas. These are hundreds of thousands of grandparents, mothers and fathers and relatives and friends who will have their disposable incomes cut.

The Minister of Finance termed these cuts within his Budget fair. However, it has been demonstrated time and again that this Budget is not fair. The Budget is punitive toward the poor of Canada because it raises taxes to the poor and middle-income Canadians while being a bonanza for the wealthy. I realize that some Members opposite smile at that remark, implying that I am wrong in that analysis. However, it is not my analysis but that of every financial analyst, business and academic economist in the country. The simple fact is that the wealthy benefit while the low and middle-income earners pay.

This country is in desperate need of leadership, as was shown when the people of Canada cried out for strong, decisive leadership in the last election.

Mr. Nickerson: They have it.

Mr. Riis: The Hon. Member for Western Arctic says they have it. Let me point out to him that on budget night the Minister of Finance stated that starting on January 1, 1986, the Government will deindex pensions. That is what the Budget statement indicated, what the Minister stated, and I think Canadians believed him, coming as it did from the Minister of Finance who indentifies government policy. While many people, including myself, did not like this policy, it was a clear signal to the people of Canada. However, the Prime Minister stood up recently to say that the Government did not really mean it was going to do that but, rather, intended it as a proposal, an idea or a concept. In other words, it was a concept to which the Government was not committed.

What kind of leadership signal does that convey? On the one hand the Minister of Finance says that the Government will take certain action while, on the other hand, the Prime Minister says that the Government will monitor public opinion and the economy because this measure is only a concept.

That is not the decisive leadership demanded by the people of Canada at this time. It is not the kind of decisive and direct, strong leadership that Canadians said was needed. It is mumbo-jumbo. Even if one makes a bad decision, I suppose people appreciate the fact that one believes it is correct. We have hung the poor Minister of Finance so far out on the limb that it does not matter what he does, he will fall off. If he does not, he surely should. Obviously the Prime Minister has no confidence in him. Obviously the Government of Canada has no confidence in him. I have not heard Hon. Members opposite leaping up in their places and saying: "Listen, if he does not fight for senior citizens, I am prepared to". They have been mute over there. I do not know where they stand on this particular issue.

When a Budget is brought in which cuts the expected increases to the OAS so that the purchasing power of senior citizens will be reduced next year, the year after and the year after, that, what happens to all those folk who are not senior citizens today? If a person is 50 years of age today, and if the Government proceeds with this policy, it means that he will not collect $37,000 in OAS over the term of his pension. It means that he will not be receiving $37,000 to purchase goods and services and so on.

Mr. Lewis: If there is inflation.

Mr. Riis: Yes, if there is inflation. Considering that some countries are facing 1,000 per cent inflation, and considering that we have always had inflation in the last number of years, I suspect that this is a reasonable expectation.

I ask Hon. Members opposite to think about what they are doing today. They are saying to 50-year old people that they will introduce a policy on January 1 which will take $37,000 out of their pockets over the term of their retirement. They sit there and they take this. I do not understand how they can say that the Budget is a fair one.

Mr. Brisco: To what age, Nelson?

Mr. Riis: To age 85.

Mr. Lewis: If you keep making those speeches, Nelson, you will never live that long.

An Hon. Member: Is that the average age?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I have opened up—

The Chairman: Order, please.

Mr. Lewis: Come on, Nelson.

The Chairman: Order, please.

Mr. Riis: Hon. Members opposite should rise in their places so that people across the country can hear what they have to say. It is easy to sit there and snipe and yell, but they should rise to their feet so that the people of Canada can hear what they have to say about cutting the pensions of senior citizens.

An Hon. Member: Wait until you sit down.

Mr. Riis: I will be resuming my seat in a couple of minutes, but I hope some Hon. Members on the government side will have the courage of their convictions to rise and speak. It is easy to snipe and yell across the aisle, and I do it myself, but I also rise to make my comments.

Before resuming my seat, I want to make one suggestion. If this particular amendment passes, it will cut a number of dollars from the borrowing authority. Yesterday we asked the officials of the Minister of State for Finance what the deferred corporate taxes were for last year. The answer we received is that they were somewhere in the neighbourhood of $30 billion, just under $30 billion, back in 1982. Something to consider, in terms of deficit reduction or obtaining more funds for social programs, is that the Government could levy a 10 per cent interest rate on deferred taxes so that corporations, instead of putting off their taxes year after year, pay just 10 per cent for that privilege. This would net us $3 billion this year. Then we would not have to worry about the 3 per cent cut to the increases in the OAS. It would even allow the Government to decrease the deficit somewhat. It would allow the Government other money, so that it would not have to impose user-fees in a number of federal areas. I step down, having made that modest proposal—impose a 10 per cent levy on deferred corporate taxes, which would result in a flow into the national Treasury of about $3 billion.

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Chairman, at the beginning of this day an amendment was presented to reduce the borrowing authority by 3 per cent as a symbol to remind the Government of the onerous punishment which it has put upon the backs of senior citizens by cutting at a rate of 3 per cent of the increase in their inflation protection. This Party was trying to make one point. If the Government wants to talk about reducing deficits, then perhaps, through the symbol of cutting its spending, it would be induced, if it had 3 per cent less, to cut out some of the fat with which it has started to bloat since it became the Government in terms of patronage and of the salaries to people who were its back-bench supporters in the past. Perhaps it could cut away some of the people in the PMO which were added on, this huge number of extra employees. Perhaps it could cut back on some of the political commissars which have been placed in the offices of every Minister of the Crown in order to ensure that its particular interests are carried out for political purposes rather than in the interests of the Public Service, that is, to serve the people. It could cut in many places and be cut back to some kind of integrity. That 3 per cent might make government Members more honest.

When the Hon. House Leader rose to reply to the proposal to cut back government borrowing by 3 per cent, it was amazing that the first thing he said to the Liberal side of the House was: "You want to do this to the poor". Honni soit qui mal y pense! It is interesting that the Hon. Government House Leader did not think, when 3 per cent was to come off the Government's budget, of cutting the extra people in the PMO or of cutting patronage. The first thing which crossed his mind was obviously that if there was to be a 3 per cent cut, it would be on the backs of the poor. They would first select the poor as the targets, not the rich. It is interesting, is it not? Honni soit qui mal y pense! In pointing the finger at us, the first thing he thought he would have to cut as a result of a 3 per cent cut in borrowing would be the poor. That is all the Tories can think of—to cut the poor. They are their first targets.

Also it was interesting that the Hon. Member for Prince George-Peace River suggested that we should have proposed an increase in the borrowing rather than a decrease. First, the rules do not allow it. Obviously this veteran Member of the House does not understand its rules. The borrowing authority could not be increased by a proposal or motion from this side because it is not permitted. He was not interested in why we were introducing this proposal. He was trying to say that we were being hypocrites, when in reality the opposite was the case.

Also it is interesting that the Budget hits the poor and protects, and in fact gives a windfall, to the rich. The Budget offers a $500,000 lifetime opportunity in respect of capital gains. In effect, it is a gift of $125,000 in due course to everyone in the top 4 per cent of the population who invests in stock and makes other kinds of investments about which the remaining 96 per cent or 97 per cent of the Canadian population knows nothing. Instead of thinking about how they might fulfil their election promise that the rich who are paying no taxes would start to pay, they broke that promise.

We waited for nine months for this Budget to be tabled, but there was still nothing in it to ensure that the rich who had not been paying any taxes would now pay them. This borrowing authority Bill does not indicate the amount to be used for expenditures. It simply indicates the amount of money the Government will get. The Government could cut down its expenditures or increase income revenues by adjusting the Budget. The Government could introduce a Bill which would ensure that those who are paying no taxes would have to pay them from now on.

There is reason for us to be bemused and annoyed with the righteous indignation of the Hon. House Leader, who stands up in pious and pretended self-righteous indignation saying that we should stop trying to take 3 per cent away from the poor, when it is the Government that first wanted to take it from the poor. The seniors are asked to take a 3 per cent cut in the inflation protection which was introduced by the Liberal Government. The Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition introduced this measure to ensure that seniors would be protected. In the Budget, the Tory Government guarantees that the first 3 per cent of inflation will come off the backs of senior citizens. If inflation continues through the decades, as the Minister of Finance predicts it will, the first 3 per cent of inflation will be taken off the backs of senior citizens, and that rate will be compounded. It is tragic that the purchasing power of senior citizens will be threatened.

The Prime Minister said that nothing has yet happened to the senior citizens. That is a tragic way to speak to senior citizens. Something has happened to them, they are scared. Those who are too proud to ask for welfare or the GIS will fall deeper and deeper into poverty. Even with the GIS, they are only receiving $7,000. In communities with a population of over 500,000, the poverty line is around $10,000. These people are already living $3,000 below the poverty line. Imagine what it means to senior citizens to be told that they will lose 3 per cent a year. The Prime Minister can say that nothing has happened to them yet and that perhaps the Government will change its mind, but the cuts are in the Budget and in its thoughts. The first thought of the Tories is to take away from the weak and give to the rich, the corporations, and the oil companies.

There was money in the Budget for the rich, but it was taken away from the seniors. The Government is also planning to take away from mothers. Think especially of what 3 per cent per year means to a single mother. The Government wants to take from those who cannot fight back, from the unorganized. The business lobbies are well organized, well-heeled, and have good lines of communication. The Government thought the seniors would lie down and take it.

Even those who have hesitated to become politically active realize that there must be some kind of morality in Government. During the election campaign, the Prime Minister promised the seniors that he would not take anything away from them. Now, in the first Budget, they have been betrayed. They feel this is too much. I challenge the Tory back-benchers to demand that these people be relieved of their anxiety now rather than during the summer when it would be easy for the Government to give some small token to the seniors to make them feel a little better. They are feeling bad and are worrying now. They want to be relieved of their anxiety and terror now.

Every Member of the House has received phone calls and letters from senior citizens. They know that what I am saying is true. They know of the anguish of the seniors and of the children who are worried about their parents. This is a matter of national concern. For the Prime Minister to say that nothing has happened to them is wrong. A lot has happened to them. They have been shaken up and threatened. Their futures have been put in jeopardy. To suggest another 3 per cent cut to those who are already living in poverty is drastic, tragic, and cruel.

The Government has also made promises with regard to the give and take proposal. Before and during the election campaign the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State promised that the Government would bring forward the give and take program to give charities a 50 per cent tax credit. That promise was broken. The Government broke its promise to charities, but kept its promise to oil companies. The promise to the oil companies was a sacred trust because the first priority of the Tories is to look after the rich. However, the charity organizations which serve the churches and poor people were fobbed off without any reference in the Budget. The former Tory Budget of the present Secretary of State for External Affairs at least contained a footnote indicating that the give and take proposal would be studied. There is not even a reference to it in this Budget. The promise which the Prime Minister made to the charity organizations of the country was broken, but money was found for the oil companies. That shows the sense of values of this Government. It takes from the poor and gives to the rich. Premier Buchanan said that this was politically unsound. They were told by Premier Miller that this was politically unsound. Yet they have the amazing audacity to think that they could put this one over on the Canadian people and that the Canadian people would accept it. To think that they can give money to the oil companies and a windfall of $125,000 to 4 per cent of the population, while taking away from the poor is sheer arrogance. It is arrogant to think that the people of Canada would stand for it.

I am sorry that I have to rise to speak in this way about the Government. It sounds as though I were over-simplifying the matter. I thought that perhaps there might have been some amelioration in the situation. The more I study the Budget and see its repercussions, the more I am amazed at the Government for giving to the rich and taking from the poor.

The Government took away from the charities. As well, it broke promises in other areas. It broke its promises to senior citizens. The Prime Minister promised that this would never happen. It broke its promises in terms of universality. It broke its promises to the charities of the country and its promises to the disabled and women. Just today, the press is reporting on how women's organizations are protesting that they too have been betrayed.

Is there no shame on the part of the Government? Did government Members think that because the Budget would come out in the late spring, the summer would soon come and they could escape scot-free? I hope the Canadian people will keep this very much in mind all during the summer. We can guarantee to them that when the fall comes, they will still be facing the same problems.

The fundamental problem is this: the Government had better decide that it must keep its election promises. It had better decide that if it wants to survive, it should listen to the people and care as much for the poor as it does for the rich.

Mr. Nickerson: Listen to the expert on political survival.

Mr. de Corneille: I was very sorry to hear the Hon. Member for Simcoe North and the Hon. Member for Kootenay West indicate, while the member for the NDP was speaking, that they disagreed with what the member of the NDP had to say. He was saying the same thing as I am saying here, and that is, that it is not fair to take from seniors.

Do those Hon. Members want to rise to explain their position? I think the people of Canada would like to know about it. In fact, the people of Canada would like to know about the positions of many of the other members of the Conservative Party, including the Hon. Member for Western Arctic. Are those Members quite pleased with themselves, or are they going to recommend to the Prime Minister and the Cabinet at the next caucus meeting that action must be taken before the House rises for the summer? Are they going to recommend that the Cabinet take action by announcing to the seniors of the country that their cry has reached the Cabinet and that it intends to do something about their suffering? Will they ask the Government to reinstate the 3 per cent that it has deindexed from the pensions? I hope that at the same time the Government will also reconsider its position on family allowances for those who are poor. As well, I hope the Government will listen to the voices in Atlantic Canada that have expressed their horror at what is being proposed by this Budget.

In Atlantic Canada, there are certain regional disparities and the area requires and depends upon federal transfers and grants. The people in Atlantic Canada are saying that the Budget will hurt their communities and particularly the disadvantaged ones. This is again another case of the federal Government's Budget being one that attacks those who are poor and weak who live in the disadvantaged provinces while giving to those who live in the wealthy provinces.

The Government's record is an amazing one. As the people of Canada study it, they will better understand the philosophy of the Tory Party. I understand even more clearly now after the Budget why I became a member of the Liberal Party. I hope that the Government will take steps that will take into account this motion to cut back government borrowing by 3 per cent and look at the way it is spending money on things that are fat and unimportant. I hope that it will give back that 3 per cent which is causing such anguish to the poor seniors.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, I would like to pay tribute to the speech that has been given by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Eglinton-Lawrence. He has, in a very articulate and obviously passionate way, restated the kind of appreciation that he has from a human point of view for the anxieties and worries felt by senior citizens who are struggling to meet their commitments resulting from the Government's 3 per cent reduction.

The Hon. Member for Eglinton-Lawrence has perhaps seen more clearly and understands more clearly than most the mentality of the Government. He made a very important point when he said that the Opposition has moved a 3 per cent reduction in the Government's borrowing authority as a very symbolic gesture of the kind of arbitrary manner in which the Government is treating senior citizens. Speaking on behalf of all government Members, what does the Government House Leader say to that?

This motion would reduce the Government's borrowing authority by less than $600 million. In fact, the Government could cancel or limit capital gains exemptions to save that much money. However, what does the Government House Leader say? Does he say that this motion may require the Government to reduce the capital gains give-away? Does he say that this may require the Government to reduce by one-third the amount of money it is giving back to the multinational oil companies? Does he say that this will require the Government to return to the old levels the salaries of chiefs of staffs, of commissars and of Ministers, or to reduce office furniture budgets? Does he ask Ministers not to trade in their cars every six months? No, he does not.

What does the Government House Leader say as an immediate response to the motion to reduce borrowing authority by about half a billion dollars? He says that we will have to cut back on the poor, and he is speaking on behalf of 211 Members of Parliament who wear the Conservative stripe. He says that when there is any discussion of cutting back on government expenditures, we should cut back on the poor.

This 3 per cent reduction represents about a half a billion dollars. Half a billion dollars represents about one-third of the cost of giving $125,000 in cash gifts to the rich of this country. The 3 per cent reduction could be absorbed without cutting any social programs. The 3 per cent reduction could be absorbed, the capital gains provision could be scrapped and there would be a billion dollars left over to give to senior citizens. This could be done if the minds, hearts and souls of government Members were concerned with how the poor people of this country live. This could be done if government Members had any basic respect for the people who built this country. This could be done if government Members were not beholden to the wealthy economic interests as represented by multinational oil companies and banks and the kinds of people who bankrolled their Party in the last federal election campaign.

We have proposed this kind of measures because for the last three weeks, as we debated and asked questions about the Government's deindexation plan and as we listened to senior citizens of the country speak about it, our caucus met—and I am not supposed to tell secrets out of caucus—but there we indicated that we believed that the back-benchers, the rank and file of the Conservative Party, would make their voices heard. We believed that they would make their presence felt. We believed that even if the Cabinet, in some kind of kamikaze mission, saved the so-called honour of the Minister of Finance by not backing away and even if the Cabinet insisted on committing hara-kiri on public television, those back-benchers who had gone to talk to their constituents and to their own mothers, fathers and grandparents would have made their presence felt. We believed that those back-benchers would have made their presence and influence felt. We thought that during the past weekend at the special emergency caucus meeting of the Conservative Party, which was called to keep the caucus from disintegrating over the issue, the voice of the people of Canada as represented by back-benchers would be heard, and that it would not be the voice of Cabinet as represented by the Prime Minister that would carry the day. We thought there would be an announcement on Saturday or Sunday that the Government would move away from deindexing. However, it was not the voice of the back-benchers which carried the day. It was not the voice of those who truly have the power in Parliament—the majority of Members who sit on the back-benches. They were stifled. They were beaten back by the bullies in the Cabinet. They were told, in the name of the honour and prestige of the Minister of Finance, to bite their tongues.

I know Tory back-benchers. I know they are not happy. I do not have to ask them if they are upset. I do not have to ask them whether they agree. I know there are a substantial number of Tory back-benchers who do not agree with the policy. I know them well enough to know that their voices were heard lound and clear at the caucus meeting. I know them well enough to know that they rose and stated their points of view. I know that they urged the Prime Minister and the Cabinet to do the right thing. Perhaps they are as shocked as I am to realize that not only will Cabinet not listen to the Opposition, organized groups in the country, the Chamber of Commerce, business institutions, social councils, provincial Premiers and provincial Conservative Parties, but that it also will not listen to its own back-benchers.

Reform of the House cannot come quick enough. We have a Prime Minister who ignored the pleas from his back-benchers on Saturday. That is no secret. He cracks the whip and tells them to sit quietly in their seats. There is something wrong. The biggest worry which the people of Canada had on September 5 was that there was too big a majority and that too much power had been placed in the hands of one man and his Cabinet. We have an administration which is a collection of 39 men and women who will not be policed by the voice of their back-benchers. We have a Government which has assumed the arrogance of a dictatorship. We have a Government which is made up of Members who believe that it is more important that they never have to say they are sorry because they are Tories. They will not relieve the senior citizens of the country of the burden of anxiety and the weight of not knowing whether in one, two, three or five years they will have not only Old Age Security payments, but security in their old age.

I find it incredible that the Government is asking for borrowing authority in the amount of $18.2 billion. It would take 18 Canadians spending $1,000 a day for 3,000 years, to spend that amount of money. We have proposed that it should be cut by 3 per cent. The Government has told us that it cannot do that because it has commitments and bills which must be paid. The Government is saying that we cannot arbitrarily cut its spending program by 3 per cent because it has commitments. What a brilliant defence! It sounds familiar. That is what the senior citizens of the country have been saying to the Government. The Government did not consult with them nor did it assess what would be the impact. It arbitrarily cut the budgets of senior citizens by 3 per cent. The senior citizens have told the Government that it cannot do that because they have commitments to meet. The Government responded by saying no. The Government tells them that they are happy to participate. The Government tells us that it has spoken to one or two senior citizens and that they are happy to participate. If that is not hypocrisy, what is?

The Prime Minister visited his riding. His staff spent several weeks trying to orchestrate carefully a good reception. They went into a poll which he had won overwhelmingly in the last election—Le Pionnier. His staff thought that Le Pionnier would be safe turf. The overwhelming majority of people in Le Pionnier, in the Prime Minister's riding, and in senior citizens' complexes, voted for the Prime Minister. His staff thought that it would be a safe media event. They thought it was a safe place for the Prime Minister to bring his presidential podium and his travelling troup in order to show the people of Canada, by way of a media event, that there is no problem with the deindexing measure.

This morning in The Gazette and in the French press we read that those senior citizens used very strong language to describe the Prime Minister. In fact, I am upset. I think it is terrible for senior citizens in the Prime Minister's riding to gang up on him. They used language which I would never use. They called the Prime Minister a liar. I do not accept that. Those senior citizens could have found another word to describe what the Prime Minister did to them. When they use that kind of blunt, honest and simple language, we cannot repeat it in the House. An 82-year old man, who voted for the Prime Minister, said that the Prime Minister had lied to him. Is that an indicator? Could we call that putting the finger on the pulse and discovering that people are not happy? The Prime Minister does not. He said that he was pleased with the warm reception which he received.

Tory back-benchers have a rare opportunity to show their constituents that, as well as being members of the Conservative caucus and the Prime Minister's soldiers, they have their ears tuned to what their constituents are saying. Tory back-benchers have the opportunity to show their constituents that they have their fingers on the pulse of life's blood as it beats through their constituencies. They should show their constituents that they are prepared to stand up and be the Members of Parliament for their ridings. They should be prepared once in a while to be the spokesmen to Ottawa and in Ottawa from their districts, rather than just people who spend time apologizing to their constituents on behalf of Ottawa when the Government loses touch.

The Government had better consider that it is being served notice now if its intention is to keep the Prime Minister busy and out of Ottawa, and to send the Minister of Finance on a two or three-week exotic travel excursion in Europe, and not have anyone in the House to answer questions. The Government is trying to bamboozle members of the Opposition. It is treating, with total disregard and disrespect, the senior citizens of the country who are asking for an answer. The Government had better assume that it has been served notice.

We in the Opposition have no intention of allowing this kind of charade and farce to continue. We will not allow this House, the people's House, to be turned into a charade while the Prime Minister totes around his presidential podium doing media events. There are 71 Members of the Opposition and a massive majority of 211 Members of Government. I warn those Members of the Government now that the eyes of the people of this country are upon all of us. They are weighing our actions and measuring our words. We are prepared to see that this place does not work at all before its works as a charade or merely as some kind of propaganda tool for a Government who sadly, after nine months in power, is so out of touch with the realities in this country.

While the senior citizens of this country organize, prepare their position and make their way to Ottawa to come face to face with Members of Parliament and this Government, what is the Government obsessed with? Is it obsessed with doing the right thing? Is it going to dig down deep and screw up its courage and backbone and say "We made a mistake and we'll correct it right away"? No, Mr. Chairman, it is obsessed with having the Solicitor General appoint his fine buddy in the RCMP to a patronage position. It is obsessed with having Mr. Byron, who has been apppointed to the advertising committee, name the firm of which he was vice-president until a few months ago, so it can give it four or five untendered contracts. The Government is behaving like a child too long denied access to the cookie jar and it is using the taxpayers' money in a gluttonous display of greed and petty villainy while it turns a deaf ear to the 2.5 million senior citizens of this country who are demanding not special treatment, but only that the system which gave them some measure of security in their old age be restored.

Members of the Opposition rose in their places last week and told Members of the Government that we would not demand the resignation of the Minister of Finance, that we would not ask for the head of the Prime Minister and we would go quietly into a summer recess if they would but admit what they are doing is wrong and move to immediately correct the situation. There was an unpartisan mood last week. There was a time in this House when no blood was being asked for and no one was measuring the Gallup poll. We were asking for simple justice and for a display of dignity, courage and concern for justice, but that was not forthcoming. This Government is stonewalling. It is determined to make a mockery of this institution until June 30, and then to adjourn this House. Those Members will go away for the summer, leaving seniors with the anxiety of not knowing what their fate will be.

I say through you, Mr. Chairman, to the Government House Leader, who thinks if we have to cut $500 million, we have got to cut it from the poor rather than from Tory friends who are going to benefit from no capital gains tax, that the Government can easily take a few dollars back from the multinational oil companies. The Government can easily police itself and cut its extravagant spending on Ministers' offices, chauffeur-driven cars and high salaried politically appointed staff. It can make cuts to the Government jet aircraft which trounce all across the land carrying Members of the Government who are trying to sell something which is not saleable because it is not just. I warn the Government that if it continues to perpetrate this farce upon this institution, this institution will not be party to it.

It is the first responsibility of any Opposition to be the defender and scrutineer of the public purse when the public purse is being raided to provide $1.4 billion in windfall money to multinational oil companies, and when the public purse is being raided to give $125,000 to every wealthy Canadian, which is a gift from the taxpayers of Canada to those who can afford take advantage of no capital gains tax. That program is going to cost as much as the Government is taking away from senior citizens, and the Opposition cannot sit quietly as Government reaches out and tries to pay for that giveaway by taking it from the group which is the most defenceless and which cannot speak for themselves, the senior citizens. If the Government believes it can roll this group like a mugger in a park and there will no outcry, then the Opposition cannot be silent. This institution will not function as a farce.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Chairman, I am also pleased to rise in my place and address the motion which was tabled earlier this morning by a Member of our Opposition Party. It is again unfortunate that the Government of the day has missed the opportunity to understand and take with a certain degree of seriousness and sensitivity the message, because it is a clear message. It is a message which is not necessarily coming from this side of the House. It is a message from the millions upon millions of senior citizens across this country who have been trying to communicate by phone, petition, rally, or whatever means they can. It is a message which the senior citizens are trying to articulate with some degree of sensitivity and compassion in order to make this Government understand that what it has done through its Budget measure in taking away three percentage points from the pensions is not only wrong fiscally but wrong morally.

We in the Opposition are trying to be a vehicle for the senior citizens. We are trying to bring to this Government the understanding that its decision is absolutely dead wrong and that it has an opportunity to correct that wrong by admitting it.

Members of this Party have been told by senior citizens, and I was told specifically at a community meeting at my constituency office last Saturday, that the senior citizens are asking "How does the Government feel when it arbitrarily and immediately cuts our pensions and how would it feel if the money which it needs to operate the business of the day was cut just as immediately and arbitrarily". The message is clear. They are saying, "Why can the Government do it so easily to senior citizens?" I suppose they were thought to be a group which was unorganized and it would be easy to make the move. It was a move which was certainly not contemplated, perhaps, against the more elitist and organized groups of this country because as soon as we touch the bankers or the corporate community, they are there the next day, organized, financed and articulate, and the Government responds.

The Government thought, perhaps, that pensions was an area in which it could afford to save some money because our senior citizens are not organized, they are not articulate, and do not have the resources nor the energy to come to Ottawa and tell this Government it is wrong. However, the senior citizens are organized, they are articulate and they do have the moral compassion to stand up and be heard. It is that Government and Party that is wrong. It is that Party that does not have the courage to stand up and say they were wrong. It is a lesson the Government ought to learn.

This motion is another way of informing the Government that it ought to rethink this proposal. Government Members say we are practising the politics of fear. We are not. That fear came from page 17 of the federal Budget which says that we are reducing the indexation of their pensions. That is where the fear started and we are trying to dispel that fear. We are trying to tell the Government to admit it is wrong, do so quickly, and remove the fear so that the senior citizens can go back to living their lives without having to worry about whether the money they rely on will remain intact.

As my colleague indicated earlier, perhaps the Prime Minister and the Government do not see the other side of the tracks. Perhaps the Prime Minister prefers to view this country as a shining city on a hill. Well, that is true; we are a privileged society. We have a good country. But there is another side of the tracks.

There is another city, and perhaps this is A Tale of Two Cities which the Prime Minister cannot understand. From where he is standing perhaps he cannot see that other city, he cannot answer the calls we are getting and meet with the groups we are meeting with. He will not take the time to visit the senior citizens who might have $100 of discretionary income. He does not have a sense of what it means to be a senior citizen on a fixed income, an income now endangered by what the Government announced in this Budget. He does not see that other city, yet it is there. You can see it in the long line-ups at food kitchens and food banks. You can see it in the increasing number of shelters.

Mr. Blenkarn: What absolute drivel.

Mr. Marchi: You can see it in the increasing number of people being added to the poverty roll. You can see that other city and it is useless to pretend it does not exist. It is useless to pretend that only the shining city on the hill exists. That city might exist here in Ottawa, but the country is larger than Ottawa. He should visit the senior citizen who is striving to live in some degree of comfort in Sault Ste. Marie. He should come to Toronto and visit the Humber Summit seniors in my constituency whose only luxury is to play cards on a daily basis. They cannot afford much else, but they are asking themselves and this Government: Why do it to us? Why take away $1,500 from us when you can get the money in other ways? What have we done to deserve this? We have worked for 30, 35 or 40 years in the expectation that our pensions would be intact. With the announcement of this federal Budget, we are changing the rules of the game after the game has started.

The message has fallen on the deaf ears of the Government. The first or second Member on that side to get up and respond to this motion talked about fairness, honesty and how the opposition was failing in both areas. I challenge that Member to show me the fairness and honesty of this Budget, specifically the proposal advocating partial deindexation of Old Age Security pensions.

Where is the fairness, honesty and integrity of that proposal? Members opposite have a short memory. They fail to remember that several months ago they all fanned out across this country and said they would not touch the pensions of our senior citizens. They would not ask those people to bear the burden of the economic price we have to pay. A sacred trust, is what the Prime Minister said. After a few months in power, one of the first things in the Budget, one of the first Tory documents to be presented in this House, reneges on that very fundamental and clearly articulated promise to senior citizens. The Minister of National Health and Welfare, in answer to a question I posed, said we have no option, no alternative, but he did and he knows it.

Where is the fairness in a Budget proposal which means that a household with two children earning $15,000 to $20,000 a year will have to pay 36 per cent more in taxes by 1990, but a family earning $200,000 is looking at a 2 per cent increase? Where is the fairness and integrity there? There is none. Where is the fairness in the capital gains tax bonanza? The Government says it will affect everyone, small businesses all across the country, but one only has to look at the 1983 statistics concerning capital gains taxes to see that almost 70 per cent of those claiming capital gains represent only 4 per cent of the Canadian population.

We on this side of the House and seniors of this country ask ourselves: What about the other 96 per cent? The Hon. Member across the way said we have to pay our bills. We have to pay the bankers because they will not wait. That, Mr. Chairman, is the mentality we are attempting to fight, a mentality which suggests we have to pay our bills and let other people suffer. The senior citizens have bills to pay, too. We are trying to send a message to the Government that if it can easily, arbitrarily and regressively undermine the seniors' pensions, then it ought to be prepared to swallow the same pill on the same day, and that day is today, but the Government is not prepared to do so. It is not prepared to make that sacrifice or accept the same punishment it has inflicted on the senior citizens.

The first reaction of the Government was that this motion would further hurt the poor and disadvantaged of this country because it assumes that if the Government was to reduce its spending by 3 per cent, that is the constituency it would cut the 3 per cent of spending from. Well, that perhaps says more than does our motion. That message to senior citizens is perhaps even stronger than our message to the Government. We understand the message we are getting from the Government, we understand the mind-set of Members opposite. We understand their philosophical bent and it is unfortunate, but it clearly delineates their side from this side.

We are having a rally next Tuesday in Toronto at 12 noon in Nathan Phillips Square. Once again we are getting a magnificent response from senior citizens' organizations. We have invited members of the Government, the Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare to attend because it is important to speak to those seniors who will be affected by this clause. This rally is not being organized on a political partisan basis because no one in the House has a monopoly on concerns facing senior citizens or concerns facing the poor and disabled. We have the responsibility to speak for those groups and bring their concerns to the attention of the Government.

We want the Prime Minister to come to that rally because he will see something very different than what he saw in Quebec yesterday. This event will be much more spontaneous and real than what happened in Quebec because he will see the look of desperation on the faces of those individuals who come to him. It will be difficult for him to defend the indefensible in front of those individuals. If he takes the time to listen to those concerns and anxieties facing those senior citizens, he will not hesitate to reverse this regressive move he instigated several weeks ago in the Budget.

We are trying to speak for the aspirations of those people. Another Member opposite talked about democracy and how we were somehow undemocratic. He suggested that we are being obstructionist and overreacting to this concern. He ought not to teach us about democracy and profess to be democratic.

The senior citizens of this country have rallied daily for the last two weeks in an attempt to send the message to Government that it is wrong. The business community and business organizations of this country have also rallied and tried to send that message to the Government. The municipal Governments throughout the country are passing resolutions in their council chambers, regardless of the fact that this is a federal issue, in order to send a message to the Government that its measure is wrong. The provincial Governments are doing the same thing. We have witnessed Tory premiers and Tory Governments, and provincial governments in Manitoba and Quebec sending that message, despite the fact that it is a federal issue.

The Official Opposition and the NDP are raising this matter daily in Question Period and in debate, as we are this morning. If the Hon. Member wants to talk about democracy, he should not ignore the message that has been coming from the legislative groups in the last two weeks.

Members opposite cannot spend the summer in the belief that this issue will have disappeared by September 15. This issue will not die, not because the Opposition Parties will not let it die, but because Canadians from one coast to the other will not let it die. Canadians, particularly elderly Canadians, are saying that this issue is fundamental to their existence—to the social contract that they have with this state. As Canadians, they are entitled to Old Age Security pensions and to the full indexation of those pensions. This social contract is part of being Canadian. It is not acceptable to change the rules after someone has paid into that pension in order to plan their future after the age of 65 and collect a certain amount of money.

The Government argues that this measure will help future generations and provide money for future pensioners. What about those people who are 65, 75 and 85 today? Who is speaking for those individuals? Who is speaking for today's pensioners who want the obligations of that social contract to be respected and honoured? We on this side are fighting for that obligation and we are not afraid to speak for those individuals because they need representation.

We are sending a message, through this simple motion, that the Government has not listened and has not reacted well. Once again, we call upon its sense of compassion, fair play and morality to come clean and admit that this regressive policy to deindex is wrong and unfair. We call upon the Government to show leadership by saying it is prepared to restore full indexing as a commitment to our senior citizens.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Chairman, I join this debate because of the importance I associate with its substance and that I believe the effects of these regressive measures that were contained in the Budget will have a long lasting effect on many Canadians.

It should be noted that the debate was touched off by the Honourable—I use the word with great care—House leader for the Government. He made some very uncomplimentary remarks with regard to Opposition Members. I do not believe that he was questioning their motive, however it could be argued that perhaps he was. I believe that the House Leader said some very unfair and uncomplimentary things about Members of the Opposition relating to this particular debate.

What that Hon. Member has failed to recognize is that the Liberal Party of Canada is standing behind this issue in an attempt to have full indexation restored to our senior citizens. However, along with the Liberal Party of Canada are other individuals, groups and organizations who believe that our cause is just, fair and equitable on behalf of senior citizens in Canada.

I would be remiss if I did not take this opportunity to share with the House what some of those other individuals have said and who they are. There is no secret that the Premier of the Province of Prince Edward Island is against the deindexation of Old Age Security. Is the House Leader of the Conservative Party suggesting to Members of the House and Canadians that because some object so vigorously that somehow they are undemocratic, appalling, unfair and not carrying out their tasks as elected representatives?

The Premier of Newfoundland is also on the record publicly and within his own province as being opposed to this very regressive measure. Of course, the Premier of the Province of Nova Scotia has said very clearly in Nova Scotia and elsewhere in Atlantic Canada that he and his Party are against the deindexation of Old Age Security.

However, the list does not stop with political leaders. It includes the business community. The list includes senior citizens' organizations and non-profit organizations which have issued news releases and held press conferences to cast shame upon the Government of Canada for introducing such regressive measures. We all know that the government caucus meeting held on Saturday—

• (1300)

Mr. Blenkarn: What do you know about it?

Mr. Dingwall: I know exactly what went on, and I know exactly what will take place. We know that the Government will change this measure and restore full indexation. However, the question becomes: "When will the Government do it?" The issue which senior citizens find so distasteful is that the Prime Minister has not lived up to his clear and unequivocal commitment in the Province of Quebec in July, 1984. That commitment has been replayed time and time again and showed very clearly that the Prime Minister would restore, according to his own words, full indexation.

However, several months later, we found that the Minister of Finance went against his Prime Minister and introduced a budget measure which flew in the face of that commitment. Senior citizens find that to be particularly distasteful. They believed their Prime Minister, rightly or wrongly, depending upon one's political persuasion. They believed that their Prime Minister would restore full indexation, only to discover, as was suggested by one of his own constituents—and I use the words of that constituent—that they have been "lied" to. It is unparliamentary for me to use that word, and I will not use it, but that is what was said by a Canadian residing in the riding of the Right Hon. Prime Minister. That comment ought to be taken seriously, not only for the tone in which the constituent said it, but for the substance of what he was saying.

It is fine and dandy for Members of Parliament, regardless of their political association, who earn in excess of $70,000—and some earn substantially more—to say that that may not be so devastating. However, senior citizens on a fixed income have to make plans, have to budget for their expenditures and revenues. When they are faced, out of the clear blue sky, with cut-backs in the money anticipated to meet their expenditures, that is devastating. Perhaps it is not so for Members of Parliament, but to senior citizens, after working hard for 35 years or 40 years raising their families, it can be a devastating and appalling feature of their economic viability as citizens. The principle is rooted deeply. I appeal to the sense of fairness of Hon. Members opposite. It may mean that a senior citizen will be overdue in paying the telephone bill. It may mean that a taxi cannot be taken to go to the hospital to visit a loved one. It may be that extra little bit which a senior citizen gives to a neighbourhood boy to go to the store to buy a few groceries during inclement weather. Surely those of us who sit in this awesome Chamber, the distinction that it is, realize that the Minister of Finance cannot stand in his place and say to Canadians: "Bravo, I have done the right thing".

What toughness is there in taking money from senior citizens? I say to the Hon. Member from Halifax and to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development that the Minister should have been tough on those who could afford it, and I refer to the capital gains provisions in the Budget. In my view, that would have been cause for Hon. Members on all sides of the House to stand in their places and say: "Yes, the Minister of Finance is standing up to those who can most afford to sacrifice". However, what has happened has been the complete opposite. The Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister have broken their commitments to the elderly of Canada.

Mr. Chairman, you know, as a distinguished Member of the House, that 1.7 million Canadian senior citizens live below the poverty line. I ask Hon. Members on all sides: Where is the toughness in saying to senior citizens living below the poverty line that they will receive less? In my view, the Minister of Finance has committed a major political blunder. Of course that happens, but it is important what one does to recover from a political blunder. I suggest to the Minister of Finance and Hon. Members who support him and believe in his sincerity and his policies, that they have to stand and be counted to have this regressive measure changed, changed to honour the commitment of the Prime Minister in July 1984.

In terms of the capital gains provisions, is it tough to say to the wealthy of the country that they will be given $300 million this year and $600 million in the next fiscal year? Is it tough to say to them that Canadian taxpayers will give them $1.2 billion by 1990? Is that toughness or, as some senior citizens have said, is that copping out?

This measure calls upon the most vulnerable segment of Canadian society. It calls upon them, after years of sacrifice, whether it was during the First World War or the Second World War. It calls upon them after years of productive life, trying to build their communities, to strengthen the educational system and to build churches so that Canadians would have an opportunity to worship the God of their choice. Now, in their years of retirement and reflection, this regressive measure is calling upon them to make a financial contribution. That is not fair in anyone's eyes.

Members of Parliament, particularly Members of the Government, must accept that this was a political blunder. They have an obligation today to end the uncertainty with which senior citizens have been confronted since the announcement of the Budget on May 23, 1985. For the edification of all Canadians, I must emphasize that uncertainty of Canadians on a fixed income is a major reason for frustration and worry.

The fairness of this Budget does not lie with the senior citizens of Canada. They have been treated unfairly. When will this unfairness stop? The Government will have an opportunity today or tomorrow to end the unfairness of this regressive tax measure. Some political commentators would say that it would not show toughness if the Government backed down and that it should stick to its guns. However, that is not what Governments are elected to do. Governments are not elected to appease those who sit in the press gallery. Governments are elected to serve the best interests of the people. Government Members can take satisfaction in changing this regressive tax measure in that they will be doing the right thing on behalf of all Canadians. So what if there are a few editorials in the newspapers condemning the Government for backtracking? In my view it must.

I sincerely ask Government Members to stand in their places and right this wrong. If the wrong continues to affect senior citizens in any province of Canada, the issue will become so great that it will become virtually impossible for the Government of Canada to back down. To continue with this unfair measure will cause strife and worry for a population which deserves much better. This ought not to be a political issue and it ought not be debated on the floor of the House of Commons because it is a wrong. Each of us should stand in our place and vote today to right this wrong for the benefit of the senior citizens of our country. Every Member of Parliament has an obligation to put aside this political blunder by speaking of fairness, equity, and dignity for the senior citizens of Canada.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, in participating in the debate on this amendment, I would like to give the most visible message possible. This pile of paper contains over 2,000 names of senior citizens from the City of Winnipeg. That is only a small percentage of the number of people in that city who are deeply protesting the action of the Government.

Over the weekend I read the statements of the Hon. Member for St. Boniface who said he did not think this was much of an issue because he had only had four or five phone calls on it. I looked at the addresses on these petitions and saw Provencher Boulevard, Dumoulin Street, Goulet Street and Marion Street. Hundreds of people from that Member's riding have signed these petitions. I bring that to the attention of the House because it highlights what is very much at stake in this debate. What is important is not only the substance of the action taken by the Government, but the way it has handled this matter and broken its trust with the Canadian people.

The Prime Minister has more gyrations than a run-away corkscrew. We do not know from one day to the next what turn, twist, zig, or zag he will be taking. Let us look at the record on old age pensions and support. During the election campaign we heard the famous declaration of the sacred trust with strong hints that support to senior citizens would be improved. That was good during the election campaign, but after the election we began to hear some murmurings from the Minister of Finance that the Government was going to re-examine the universality of the pension scheme. It was no longer sacred, they were beginning to review the matter.

When questions were raised in the House of Commons and elsewhere in the country, the Prime Minister jumped back on the bandwagon saying that the incomes of senior citizens would not be touched because they were essential. In the dark of the night, the Minister of National Health and Welfare redrafted his Green Paper or White Paper in order to change the matter. That paper said that in the re-examination of social programs there would be no reduction in the income support for senior citizens. That was another turn in the road.

Then it was Budget time and we saw a whole series of actions that have substantially undermined the income position of older people in the country. We have heard the argument for deindexation many times. In the next four years, individual senior citizens will have a decreased buying power of $1,500 in today's dollars. Furthermore, the problem is compounded by the substantial increase in sales taxes on basic commodities, a regressive form of taxation which is to be applied to detergent supplies, candy and pet food. An old saying by W. C. Fields goes that anyone who hates children and dogs can't be all bad. The Conservative Government is making that particular axiom real. I suppose W. C. Fields helped to write the Budget. There must have been some source for that.

The fact of the matter is that the Government has substantially reduced in a regressive way the purchasing power of senior citizens. Not only has their direct income support been taken away, but their purchasing power has been taken away. As if that were not enough, a third whammy is added through reductions in transfer payments to the provinces by $2 billion between now and 1990. This can only mean that there will be either a substantial reduction in health services or increased taxation or user-fees at the provincial level. Compounding that, the municipalities that also supply specialized services for senior citizens like day care centres and transportation will also have to raise taxes or cut back on programs. The Budget is clearly a multifaceted attack on the income base of senior citizens.

When the Budget was first brought down, we rose in the House to ask the Government why it was doing this. Let us think of the interesting sequence of arguments that have been used since that time. First, government Members said that senior citizens wanted them to do that and were all supporting them. The Minister of National Health and Welfare said that he talked to all kinds of senior citizens who wanted the Government to reduce the deficit and take away their incomes. However, when challenged, he could not name one individual or group that had said that to him. That argument did not fly very well.

Mr. Dick: We've got two right here.

Mr. Axworthy: Sure, they are sitting in the Commons where they have their own benches.

Government Members felt that that argument was not going too well, so they moved to the next defence. Then government Members began saying that this really was not a Budget but a set of proposals and speculations. The Prime Minister who rewrote the textbook on public finances inside of a week said that the Budget is not a Budget but is a series of proposals that they may consider and change. He has totally ripped apart and cast asunder the financial projections of the Minister of Finance. He has completely eviscerated any sense of fiscal security or stability.

Then that argument did not seem to fly too well. We are now dealing with the argument which consists of the Prime Minister saying that he is going to change his mind, take a new look at the situation and revise it when economic conditions get somewhat better. What does "when economic conditions get somewhat better" mean in terms of indexation?

We want to know for what government Members are waiting. What is the stall about? Why has the Conservative caucus, in all its multiple numbers, not been able to convey to the Ministry the serious mistake it has made? Are we once again being treated to another form of the Prime Minister's manipulations and machinations? Is he telling us to wait until Parliament has adjourned for the summer so that they can finagle and manipulate the mechanisms of Government while the Opposition is not around?

What was it that the Prime Minister said the other week after he had been leader of the Party for two years? Oh, yes, he said that the press has been hurtful to him. The poor, delicate, sensitive psyche of the Prime Minister does not take well to opposition. Therefore, he is going to wait until Parliament adjourns for the summer. Then he is going to jack up the payments on the Guaranteed Income Supplement but leave the OAS alone. That seems to be the indication, but it still does not solve the problem and that is that this Budget says that senior citizens must bear the brunt of the fiscal reordering of the country.

If members of the Tory caucus think that the Prime Minister can get away with his little bag of tricks by simply playing around with the GIS while leaving alone the OAS, they have another thing coming. This Parliament will be back in session on September 15 and we will take the fight up from that point on. Government Members will then change their minds whether they want to or not. Conservative Members had better have another special emergency caucus meeting to tell the Prime Minister that his little bag of tricks will not get him by this time.

People are wising up to the Prime Minister. They know what he is about. They know that he cannot be trusted and this his word is not one that can be taken seriously. How many times can he go up and down, round about, left to right? He has no sense of direction and no sense of purpose. He is allowing himself to be dictated by what his Decima polls tell him as he waves them at caucus meetings as opposed to dealing with the rightness and goodness of the issue.

Mr. Dick: More honest than you.

Mr. Axworthy: That remains to be seen.

Mr. Dick: How about the million dollars you spent on your own office?

Mr. Axworthy: The fact of the matter is that that is far less than what the Prime Minister is spending on his office. This issue carries with it not only the serious and incredible damage being done to millions upon millions of Canadians, but also brings into clear focus the incredible and almost unbelieveable way in which the Conservative Government has acquired divine right in a matter of nine months. It does not have to listen to the people. All those protestations about consultations, building consensus and working with the public are being totally disregarded.

What is the purpose? What are government Members trying to achieve with this? It would be different if they said that this Budget would somehow achieve something worth while. We would not agree with them, but their argument now is that somehow this sacrifice that only the senior citizens and lower income families are going to have to make will result in some great economic millennium. However, the Government's own Budget denies that in its descriptions.

Government Members are talking about a growth rate that is less than 50 per cent of the growth rate over the past two years. The fallacy in their economic thinking is that somehow the Government can withdraw close to $40 billion worth of purchasing power from the economy over the next four years, yet they assume that the demand for consumer goods, housing and services will continue. Regardless of how many tax give-aways and breaks are given to the investor community and regardless of how happy the friends of the Minister of Finance on the Toronto Stock Exchange are, if there is not a basic economic demand, business will not expand to meet it. Businesses expand to meet consumer demand. However, if people do not have money because it has been taken away from them by enormous tax grabs, business will not expand.

The Wall Street Journal has said that this is economic suicide. The Government is not putting money back into the economy. It is not stimulating consumer demand. Instead, it is reducing and withdrawing money from circulation and there will, therefore, be far less stimulus and far less incentive.

Since this does not make economic sense, we have to ask what government Members are doing. It has become very clear that the close to $3.5 billion that is being taken away from senior citizens and the billions of dollars that are being taken away from low-income families have nothing to do with reducing the deficit. The sales taxes and deindexation can be matched up with the give-aways through the capital gains program, the cancellation of the PGRT and the other forms of tax offerings to a very select, privileged group in this country. Because of that, this is a Government that is prepared to have millions of Canadians pay for the benefits that will go to less than 4 per cent of the population.

The only economic sense which one could draw from that is that it is the Government's fundamental belief that economic growth and stimulus will come from the privileged elite. It will come from catering and servicing that particular restricted, hothouse group of Canadians. The Government believes that if there are a few crumbs which trickle off the table to ordinary Canadians, then that is fine. The old trickle-down theory was discounted back in the 1920s when we put social Darwinism to bed. It was the rule of the economic jungle, which had been the prevailing notions up to that period, which was placed in the storehouse of worn-out ideas forever. It took 1985 and the Prime Minister to bring back the time-worn idea that aid to the privileged would result in benefits to all.

I think Canadian people are wising up to what has taken place in the Budget. They are beginning to realize that the net impact will not be for the benefit of young families who want to buy homes, workers who want to be retrained, or older people who want to maintain their income security. The Government is helping a small circle of individuals. The rest is based on some faith that those individuals will generate a massive wave of growth and that we will all rise the tide.

It is a very precarious and dangerous economic theory. It is no wonder the Minister of Finance is leaving the country today and not returning until Parliament recesses. It is no wonder he thinks that the best refuge is about 5,000 miles away. He is recognizing that the underlying foundations of the Budget are built on shifting sands which are being badly eroded day by day. The only way in which he can save face is to get out of the country. He is once again, as we have seen since the Government took office, evading responsibility for taking the tough and right decisions. He and the Prime Minister think they can get by with fancy tricks, public opinion polls and public relations gimmicks. Once again they are trying to replace solid and tough economic decisions with coloured lights and cosmetics.

This Government does not like to govern. It does not know how to govern and it does not want to govern. It does not want to make the kind of decisions which are necessary. The Government has now been abandoned by all of its friends and allies. The business community has said: "Don't do it". Provincial Premiers, many of whom are Tories, have said: "Don't do it". Many articulate and well-informed social organizations have said: "Don't do it". Can the Government name one organization, aside from the Riverdale Conservative Association, which thinks that the Government should do it? Is it able to provide any evidence that there is overwhelming support for the budget measures? It says that it has the Decima poll. I am sorry, I will correct my remarks. Allan Gregg says that the Government should do it. If that is the basis on which policy is being decided and consensus is being formed, I wish the Government would tell us that.

With seer wisdom and the prophet of forecasting, the Conservative Party has decreed that it is okay. All the protest of individual senior groups and the abandonment of the Government's business allies does not convince the Government and the caucus. We have brought forward the amendment for that very reason. We believe there are Conservative Members of Parliament who understand their constituencies and who are not prepared to buy the blarney of the Prime Minister. We believe they are willing to represent what they know is of deep, abiding and crucial concern to their constituents.

The amendment will give the Government time to convene and examine its actions. Obviously the weekend was a flop. However, it is not too late as there are still two weeks left in the session. We are asking the Government to take a look at what it is doing. It should honestly examine what kind of impact it will have on people. The Government should ask itself if this is really what it wants to achieve. Does it really want to tell seniors and young families that it is prepared to withdraw their incomes for the sake of a small boom on the Toronto Stock Exchange? Is that the trade-off which the Government is presenting to Canadians?

We hope that the wisdom and the judgment which exists in the caucus will ultimately prevail and that the Prime Minister, in his last zig and zag, will make the right decision, which all Canadians want him to make.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I listened with a great deal of interest to the comments which were made by my colleague from Winnipeg-Fort Garry. His comments prompt me to raise a couple of issues which have come to mind during the last two or three days when I have listened to the exchanges which have taken place in the House over the deindexing issue.

Last Sunday morning I spent some time wandering around my constituency talking to people, as I do almost every Sunday morning. I went to the local doughnut shop and chatted with people who like to bring me up to date on the events, as they see them, in Parliament and in the area. The question which was raised most often was the question of the Government's action with respect to the deindexing of pensions. It struck me as passing strange, because many of those people were not on pensions.

The same morning I read in The Saturday Star or The Sunday Star about a number of Conservative back-benchers who had indicated that they had not received an overwhelming amount of representation on that particular issue. Many Conservative Members seemed to feel that it was not an issue of great importance in the minds of their constituents. They were not receiving large volumes of letters and they were not being stopped on the street. Their telephones in their offices were not being rung off the hook by those who were desirous of expressing their individual concerns. I was puzzled about that. I wondered why it was that everyone whom I met on the streets of Hamilton, on the Sparks Street Mall, or walking out of my apartment building in Ottawa asked me about the question of deindexing, or at least made reference to it. Why was it that I was receiving those kind of representations? Why were my colleagues in the New Democratic Party receiving those kind of representations? Why were Members of the Liberal Party receiving these representations? Yet apparently the Tory back-benchers were not.

I say this in all kindness, but for some Tory back-benchers it may be simply because of inexperience. They perhaps have not been involved in politics for very long and do not have a routine established for allowing people access to them. Those Members of the Conservative Party who are here at the moment and who have gone through a number of election campaigns could perhaps cast their minds back to election campaigns when they did not receive the kind of support they had anticipated. Perhaps they noticed that people did not talk to them in anger, that some people, particularly elderly people, did not talk to them at all. I find that as a rule when people are upset with their Member of Parliament during an election campaign—except for the few who know you reasonably well—they do not tell you how angry they are. They simply leave you alone. They talk to each other, but they do not confront you because they have decided they are not going to support what you are doing. So for those Members of the Government who perhaps wonder why they are not getting the kind of response we in the Opposition are getting, that may well be part of the answer.

Perhaps in the past people would have raised an issue with their Member of Parliament in passing because they were not directly involved and, therefore, did not feel embarrassed about making their case. They may not feel comfortable making a case on their own behalf on an issue such as this. I would urge Members of the Government to not assume automatically that because they are not inundated with phone calls and correspondence, it is indicative of complacency. I suspect it could well be indicative of a sense of frustration and acute embarrassment that many old people feel over an issue which touches them directly, which affects their very day to day lives and which will undermine their income capacity.

I ask Members of the Liberal Party if they found during the last election campaign that people simply did not talk to them on the doorsteps because they were not voting for the Liberal Party this time? I found in past elections that they simply say, thank you very much, take the leaflet and walk away. They don't really want to confront you. I think that could well be the reason why Members of the Government are not receiving the kind of response which the rest of us in the House of Commons are receiving over this issue.

In addition to that, quite clearly those who are most affected align themselves with those who are raising these concerns. It is not unnatural that people who feel their future undermined by the proposal of the Government would, out of necessity, align themselves with Members of Parliament who are raising the issue. Given the fact that there is no indication as yet, other than a few individual instances, that any Members of the Government are about to stand up and be counted in opposition to this rather harsh measure, I would think that that would be a good reason why a large number of people are not yet making contact with them in an effort to try to get this matter reviewed by the Government.

Having said that, I want to now turn to what I consider to be the nub of the issue. It really goes to the heart of the beliefs of the present Minister of Finance. For years the Minister of Finance has believed that universality is a bad thing. He has for years believed that there could be some way devised to, as he puts it, get more money to the poor while not providing so much for the rich. He has spoken frequently about the need to reconsider universality as an integral part of social programs in Canada.

This is the first substantive assault on universality. The Minister of Finance raised the matter last November, perhaps foolishly, and the Prime Minister, after having suffered some abuse as a result of the Minister of Finance having raised the question of universality, beat him over the head and forced him to withdraw. That was the first step since the Government took office in September toward achieving what the Minister of Finance has been saying he believes in for many years. That was, of course, followed by this measure which the Government tells us is intended to reduce the deficit. It is the seniors' contribution to the deficit reduction program of the Government and it will raise some $250 million.

Given that we know the income levels of the overwhelming majority of senior citizens in Canada are barely above the poverty line, it does not make much sense to ask those who have so little to make such a contribution. It makes even less sense when we view it in the context of all of the Government's expenditures and all of the other areas where Government might turn in order to find an alternative way of raising $250 million.

Rather than be simply critical, the NDP Party sat down and looked at the various ways in which Government might raise the $250 million it requires. We offered, as you will recall, Mr. Chairman, five ways. I am prepared to concede that they are not the only ways and it is entirely possible to come up with an additional 15 or 20 ways, and perhaps even more. These five ways may not, in the minds of the Conservative Party, be the most appropriate ways, but they are concrete ways which could be used by the Government to raise the $250 million which it proposes to raise from the partial deindexing of the pensions of our senior citizens.

When we think about senior citizens, without going any farther, we have to think that these are the very people who built the society we are now enjoying. These are the people who worked the long torturous hours, who worked under unsafe working conditions, who worked in plants which paid little in way of remuneration, who worked without adequate vacations and who had very little opportunity to save for their retirement. These people in many cases went through the Depression and may have lost everything they owned in the 1930s. They went to war on behalf of Canada and, in the final analysis, they put together for us this society we enjoy. We are now saying to them, "While you did make those sacrifices and they were important, and, by God, we are grateful, we are not grateful enough to index your pension to the cost of living". We are grateful enough to index it to anything over 3 per cent of the cost of living. We have to raise $250 million and notwithstanding our gratitude, that $250 million is more important than our sense of what we owe to our senior citizens for what they have done for us.

We said, let's take a look at the options. We offered a number, and I do not intend to go back over them again, but I want to suggest that there is one which appeals to me and I do not quite understand, even yet, why it does not make sense. I would love to hear someone on the Conservative front benches attempt to explain to me why we should go out and borrow money in order to offset the money we do not now collect from the corporate sector, money which they owe. Why should we ask seniors and others to increase their tax burden in order to say to a very lucrative corporate sector that they can defer paying their taxes indefinitely? Why do we not require from those who are allowed to defer their taxes that at the very least they pay to the Government of Canada the interest charges that the Government incurs in borrowing the money they would be required to pay if they were not allowed to defer it?

I say to my. hon. friend from Bow River: does that not make sense when you think about it? If I have to go out and borrow money in order to replenish the coffers because I do not collect from the corporate sector the money they owe, then the very least I could expect from them would be that they pay the interest on the money I borrowed. Do you agree with that? Surely you have to think that makes a little bit of sense.

Do you know that if we simply charge a rate of 10 per cent, which is below the rate they could borrow in the market-place, we could collect on an annual basis some $3 billion. Why should they not be prepared to make that kind of contribution rather than ask the senior citizens to do without the indexing provision for pensions which are already woefully inadequate? I look around and I ask if there is anyone on either side of the House, even you, Mr. Chairman, who will stand up and tell me why. I mean, is there something wrong with the logic I am offering? Can anyone tell me that there is something wrong with suggesting that it is better that the corporate sector pay interest on the money it owes rather than collect $250 million from the senior citizens? That is the question. Does the Hon. Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development want to rise and answer? I would be pleased to sit and listen. No, I see him shrinking back into his seat again and I can understand why. He is a sensitive man. He is the kind of individual I anticipate would be fighting in caucus and Cabinet to advance the kind of suggestion we have put forward.

I say to you, Mr. Chairman, that with that one measure alone we would collect $3 billion and it would more than offset the $250 million we intend to take from the seniors. That would leave us with $2.75 billion to do with whatever we pleased. If you really only need the $250 million, instead of charging 10 per cent, charge 3 per cent or 2.5 per cent if that would make you happy. By doing that you will raise exactly what you need. I say to my colleague from Hamilton East, who is no doubt about to rise and support the position I am putting forward, that quite clearly any person sitting here or watching or reading or hearing about it later on will come to the inevitable conclusion that what we are asking for is eminently sensible. It is irrefutable in its logic. It will work absolutely no hardship on the corporate sector. It will relieve us of the necessity, if there is indeed a necessity, of turning to the seniors for that money. It will enable us to act responsibly toward the people on whose backs this country was built.

I could go on, Mr. Chairman. I could outline the other four proposals which, when added together, would make for many billions of dollars which could be used to offset the deficit and provide better programs. We could debate the later. However, quite clearly, the Government seems to have become deaf not only to the logic of my argument but also to the pleas of senior citizens and young people, as well as deaf to the pleas of the Premiers of the Provinces.

It seems the Government does not want to lose face. I want to tell you, Mr. Chairman, that if it were me, if I were the Minister of Finance or if I were the Prime Minister and I had inadvertently allowed a proposal like this to come forward in my name and had then the benefit of reviewing it and seeing the consequences of my action, I would rise in my place and say I have made a mistake and I am going to change it. That is what we are asking the Prime Minister to do.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, indeed I would like to join my voice to that of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain who has spoken to the very heart of the issue we are discussing today. I happened to be here in the House this morning when the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate moved an amemdnent which said that the Government was asking the Parliament of Canada to approve a motion which would allow it to borrow billions of dollars at the same time it is putting a 3 per cent squeeze on senior citizens' pensions, the very people in our society who can least afford to pay. Given that, we then say to the Government we want to reduce its borrowing authority by a corresponding 3 per cent. The Minister of Finance tells the senior citizens to cut back on their bus fare, food and hydro bills by 3 per cent. Well, we called upon the Government to cut back by 3 per cent, and what was the response of Government spokesmen? The Government House Leader, upon hearing the Liberal amendment, immediately rose in his place and said that means we are going to cut back further on the senior citizens. That means we are going to decrease senior citizens' pensions by another 3 per cent. That seems to me to be indicative of the kind of knee-jerk reaction of this Government. The Government House Leader, confronted with the amendment put by the Liberal opposition, stands in his place and says we will carry out those cuts on the backs of the seniors. That is the mentality of this Government.

I hope I will have a chance to carry on after Question Period on this very important issue, Mr. Chairman.

• (1400)

The Chairman: It being two o'clock p.m., it is my duty to rise, report progress, and request leave to consider the Bill again later this day.

Progress reported.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

EFFECT OF CUT-BACKS ON JOB CREATION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian people have heard the claim that the Governments goal is jobs because it attempts to justify its actions on that basis. For example, cuts in research and development will create jobs; family allowances deindexation will create jobs; pension deindexation will create jobs; heavy cuts to the Ministry of Environment will create jobs; taxes on insulation material will create jobs. The list is endless, and the claim is always the same.

In May, 1984, jobs created represented a 0.50 per cent increase in the total workforce. In May, 1985, jobs created represented a 0.55 per cent increases in the total workforce. There is no real difference between the two.

Having established this fact, why is it that the Government, in its drive to create jobs, insists on contributing to unemployment through the cuts affecting valuable people in places like the Canadian Wildlife Service? Furthermore, if the Government believes in the heritage values of the environment to ourselves and future generations of Canadians, why reduce the management of wildlife and habitat? Is the protection of our natural heritage not worth the investment of the 84 jobs cut last November?

Mr. Speaker: I must advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SOUTH AFRICA—DEMAND FOR RECALL OF CANADIAN AMBASSADOR

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, last week South Africa's stormtroopers swooped into Botswana under cover of darkness, shooting 16 men, women, and children, and blowing up the houses of black refugees.

Sunday, the fury of reincarnated Nazism was again unleashed, this time upon 5,000 churchgoers in Soweto whose singular crime was to have gathered in commemoration of the victims of the Soweto massacre nine years ago.

In response to the Botswana raid, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) said Canada deplores violence from any quarter, thus implying that the victims share an equivalent measure of guilt, while politely requesting South Africa to respect the sovereignty and independence of its neighbours.

Even the U.S. administration, which regards South Africa somewhat sympathetically as a bulwark against Communism, has recalled its ambassador to South Africa.

Will the Government again turn a blind eye even while a member of its own diplomatic corps is gassed in church, or will it immediately recall its ambassador as a sign of the revulsion of the Canadian people at this racist, outlaw regime, and act immediately to implement economic sanctions against South Africa?

NATURAL RESOURCES

PROTECTION SOUGHT FOR NIAGARA GRAPE LANDS

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, the 44,000 acres of tender fruit and grape lands left in Niagara is a resource under attack. They are unique. There is no other combination of quality soils and climate like them anywhere else in Canada. There are few lands of this quality anywhere else in the world. Still, the growers must have a reasonable return in keeping with their investment and cost of operations.

Peach growing declined when the processing end of the industry was hit by offshore competition. The home market was flooded and subjected to a deliberate attack to put that industry out of business. Those peach orchards were converted to grape vineyards.

High quality grapes are being grown for quality wine. But, unhappily, those grape growers and wine producers are caught in the same type of squeeze that forced the peach growers out of business. Unless the problem of dumping of offshore import wines is resolved soon, the wine industry will be placed in jeopardy. We can make trade a two-way street, providing an export market for our wines, or we can protect the domestic market from dumping.

If those growers cannot make a reasonable return, cannot make a living from the sweat of their labour, then these acres will go the way of so many others—urban development. The fate of these lands is in the hands of the Government.

MINES AND MINING

BENEFITS ACCRUING TO NORTHERN ONTARIO FROM FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AGREEMENT

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, on Friday, June 14, a very significant event took place in the town of Kirkland Lake in my riding of Timiskaming. The federal Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Layton) and the provincial Minister of Natural Resources jointly announced a five-year, $30 million federal-provincial mineral development agreement. The signing of this agreement is truly symbolic of the co-operation that now exists between the federal and provincial Governments.

Under this subagreement to the Canada-Ontario Economic and Regional Development Agreement, a road which was proposed for construction back in 1928 has finally come about, and I congratulate the pioneers—the prospectors and the developers—who fought so long and hard for this access road. Once again it shows that the Government that was elected last September 4 knows and understands Canadians.

The construction of this access road to mining areas in northern Ontario will bring great prosperity to my riding. Employment opportunities will flourish in the forestry, tourism, and mining sectors of Timiskaming.

The signing of this agreement demonstrates once again my Government's commitment to creating jobs for Canadians.

MULTICULTURALISM

AWARDING OF GRANT TO WINNIPEG INTERNATIONAL CENTRE

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring to the attention of the Chamber a storm that is brewing in Winnipeg over the awarding of a $29,900 grant by the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Murta) to the International Centre.

Members of the Centre and of the ethno cultural community are outraged over the circumstances surrounding the grant. First, Mr. Tom Denton, the sponsor of the application and a former PC candidate, signed as the treasurer of the Centre's multicultural committee. In truth, though, the committee was unaware of his application, and there is no position of treasurer. Second, four individuals listed as sponsors on the form did not know or approve of their names being used to obtain the federal moneys. Third, the grant application was for $28,400, but was approved in the amount of $29,900. Fourth, the application was not dated and, finally, while the public is being told it will support a one-year project, the grant indicated the period was only from January to May. Therefore, has the money been spent and, if not, will it be returned since the deadline has already come and gone?

Members of the Centre and the community have written to the Auditor General and the Minister of State for Multiculturalism asking for an immediate investigation into these improprieties and the appearance of a quick grab for some patronage dollars. I, too, call on the Minister to investigate these serious shortcomings and urge him to clear the air quickly.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

VISITS BY UNITED STATES SUBMARINES TO WEST COAST PORTS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, Los Angeles and Sturgeon class submarines, which are being equipped with sea launched Cruise missiles known as Tomahawks, have visited Nanoose Bay and Esquimalt Harbour in the last few days.

Nuclear equipped Tomahawks have a range of 1,500 miles, and a 200 kilotonne warhead. The American Navy Director of Strategic and Theatre Nuclear Warfare said:

> The increased strike range of a large number of surface platforms operating under carrier air cover and independent, covert, forward deployed submarines presents the Soviets a formidable threat.

Not only are the Soviets threatened by these Tomahawk missiles, our entire world is threatened.

Were the Los Angeles and Sturgeon submarines that came into Nanoose and Esquimalt nuclear armed? We do not know. The United States will neither confirm nor deny, and the Canadian Government is afraid to ask. In the absence of such information, New Zealand had enough gumption to refuse access to all American warships. Canada should take the same step.

The Canada-U.S. Agreement for the submarine base at Nanoose expires in April, 1986. This agreement has not contributed to world peace or to Canadian security. It should not be renewed.

SUPPORT FOR CONTENTS

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, following the Budget of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), there have been many words uttered in criticism.

None have been so vocal as those who oppose the plan to deindex partially Old Age Security and Family Allowances. The Opposition has, in its pursuit of criticism, often created and promoted fear in the hearts of the elderly.

Perhaps the Opposition would like to talk to Canadians about some measures that are being ignored by Liberals and New Democrats. How does the $500,000 capital gains exemption affect farmers? What does it do for the thousands of small neighbourhood businesses? The Opposition failed to mention changes to RRSPs, a more equitable tax system, assistance for disabled Canadians, and much desired tax changes for charities and artists.

Canadians wanted a new and better approach to the country's economic affairs. That is what they received on May 23.

RESEARCH

CONSTRUCTION OF TOXICOLOGY RESEARCH CENTRE AT UNIVERSITY OF SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to advise the House of a major development concerning environmental research in Canada. Since October I have worked with the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Blais-Grenier), the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise), the Secretary of State (Mr. McLean), and the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), to promote the much needed Toxicology Research Centre at the University of Saskatchewan. This university was identified by the National Research Council as one of three centres to undertake toxicological research in Canada.

I am also pleased to advise the House that, through a $2 million grant from the Centres of Specialization of the Secretary of State, Phase I of construction of the Toxicology Research Centre will commence this year. This Centre will be supported by the faculties of Health Sciences, Veterinary Medicine, Pharmacy, Chemistry, Biology, and Agriculture. In addition, the Wildlife Services Division of the Department of the Environment and the private sector will utilize the facility.

The Toxicology Research Centre will serve all of western Canada and conduct environmental research of critical importance to all of Canada. Adequate funding for the entire Centre is not in place. It is hoped that the remainder of the funding will be made available as resources from the federal and provincial Governments, the university, and the private sector, permit.

All Hon. Members of the House should applaud the federal Government and the University of Saskatchewan for recognizing the importance of toxicological research and making a strong commitment which will ensure a safer environment for our children and generations to come.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

FEDERAL AID—CUT-BACKS—CONSEQUENCES FOR NEW BRUNSWICK

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, since the Budget was brought down, the Canadian people have risen up to protest against the Progressive Conservative Government's plan to de-index Old Age Security pensions.

An Hon. Member: And rightly so!

Mr. Robichaud: But Canadians, and especially the people from New Brunswick, are also very concerned and are protesting against another Government policy proposed on the same date.

Mr. Speaker, the Progressive Conservative Government has decided to cut federal aid to regional development by $100 million this year and $150 million next year. These cuts represent a tremendous loss for New Brunswick's economy. They will be reflected in the loss of many jobs and a slowdown in regional development. The cuts also mean that the number of jobs New Brunswick's industry will be able to create will get smaller and smaller, and it will therefore become increasingly difficult to deal with the province's high rate of unemployment.

The Economic Council of New Brunswick, is a very important agency in the Atlantic Region, said that the philosophy according to which we should reward success rather than effort is paving the way to more difficult times for the disadvantaged regions of this country, regions which have not been successful despite their efforts.

Mr. Speaker, the cuts in regional development are a matter of grave concern and provide tangible proof for the people of New Brunswick that the Government ignored them completely when it brought down this Budget on May 23 of this year.

THE CHARTER OF RIGHTS

VIEWS OF REAL WOMEN OF CANADA

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, one of the goals of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms is to enshrine equality between the sexes as a fundamental value of Canadian society. It will be many years before Canadians, through both Parliament and the courts, begin to have a rough idea of what their society will be like with the inception of the new Charter.

The adoption of a Charter of Rights and Freedoms was a move conceived with the hope of making our society more just through the clarification of the mutual obligations and entitlements connecting the individual and the state. Equality will eventually be defined in a way which reflects the values, beliefs, and convictions of individual Canadians.

Toward this goal the Secretary of State (Mr. McLean) provides grants for women's organizations attempting to bring meaning, in different ways, to the concept of equality in the Canadian context.

In implementing the Charter, it is not for the Government to prejudge what the proper role of women in Canada should be. But, unfortunately, arbitrary program guidelines have not granted certain groups access to this support, specifically REAL Women of Canada. This group supports a definition of equality different from the views of other women's groups, but equally legitimate. It is a wholesale violation of the principles of the Charter if a specific feminist view is imposed and encouraged to the exclusion of alternatives from thousands of other Canadian women.

I appeal to the House to support the funding of REAL Women of Canada, representing over 20,000 Canadians. It is vital that the process of achieving equality through the Charter be legitimate—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's time has expired. The Hon. Member for Spadina.

REFUGEES

PLAUT REPORT PROPOSAL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, Rabbi Plaut has given a just, quick, and inexpensive proposal for 13,800 people in Canada who are claiming refugee status according to our laws. I call upon the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) to use Rabbi Plaut's proposal which he gave yesterday in his report entitled: Refugee Determination in Canada. The Supreme Court said that none of the 13,800 people claiming refugee status in Canada should be deported without first having a chance to meet face to face, in an oral hearing, with those who decide their fate. However, Rabbi Plaut pointed out that there were many, in fact the majority, who deserve to be allowed to stay even without a hearing.

Many come from countries such as Afghanistan, Iran, El Salvador or Sri Lanka, countries to which Canada does not force people to return. "These could all be issued Minister's Permits to stay", he said, "except those already under deportation order. They could be allowed to go briefly to the United States to be readmitted to Canada."

Many have come from countries torn by war, civil war, or racial violence, but have families here to help them settle. "It would be in Canada's humanitarian tradition", Rabbi Plaut said, "to let them stay, and the Minister has the power to do so."

Those concerned for refugees in Canada warmly welcome Rabbi Plaut's report as a whole. I particularly urge the Minister to follow his suggestion for wiping out the backlog of 13,800 claims—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his 90 seconds have expired.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

PENSIONS

IMPACT OF BUDGET

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Last week in Vancouver I met with groups of senior citizens in my riding of Vancouver Quadra, and indeed with representatives of senior citizens' organizations from all over the Province of British Columbia. They repeated, over and over again, that older Canadians felt betrayed by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance, and that the Government had broken its word to them.

Why on earth would the Minister of Finance continue to hold to his commitment in the Budget to take money away from our older citizens, in approximately the same amount over the next five years as the money he has given to wealthy investors by way of the capital gains tax exemption? Why on earth does he not stop this absolute nonsense and restore now the full value of the old age pension, before the House rises?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has been away for a while. He may forget—

Some Hon. Members: So were you.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —the original thrust of the Budget, that we are trying to create jobs and, as the Hon. Member is very well aware, we are trying to get the enormous deficit under control. We are making some good headway on producing those jobs; 271,000 have been created since September 4. As we are able to create those jobs, as we are able to generate more government revenues from less people being unemployed, we will be able to look more positively at the reinstatement of some of the programs about which the Hon. Member has been talking. We have said in the Budget that we are monitoring this closely, and we will continue to monitor it.

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT WILL NOT RESTORE FULL INDEXATION IMMEDIATELY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister, who is the chief salesman of the Progressive Conservative Party, failed to sell the Minister's reply to his own constituents of Manicouagan at Sept-Îles yesterday. In the press we read this morning: "Mulroney is unable to convince the elderly in his own riding". They do not believe the Prime Minister in Manicouagan. They do not believe him anywhere else either.

I therefore repeat my question: Two and a half million elderly Canadians are fed up. In their opinion, the Government should reverse its decision and reassess and reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions. Why does the Minister not act now before the House adjourns for the summer?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I watched the reports of the visit of the Right Hon. Prime Minister to his riding. I think he demonstrated a great degree of sensitivity at the meeting where he addressed senior citizens. I think the people who were in attendance at that meeting responded quite positively, and appreciated the Prime Minister's attendance and also the comments which he made.

Let me indicate to the Hon. Member that what we are trying to do here, in a broad way, is to address the problem which has given rise to this decision, that is, the deficit. He knows—and I will remind him again, because he sometimes tends to forget it—that the debt of the country has been growing three times faster than the economy has been growing. In 1979 we were spending $8 billion on interest costs for that debt. Six years later we are spending $25.5 billion. We have reached the point where the federal Government is spending more on interest than it spends in total on medicare—

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, Order. Supplementary question.

REQUEST FOR EARLY DECISION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Minister misses the point. We are not disputing his efforts to get the public debt of the country under control. However, we ask him not to do it on the backs of the elderly who can no longer protect themselves because they have retired and have no more income.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Minister is saying that the Prime Minister was sensitive in Manicouagan. The Minister said earlier that he is monitoring the situation. How much more evidence does he need? What evidence will convince him? He knows that 2.5 million Canadian citizens over the age of 65 are outraged. They feel betrayed, and want an answer now. Do it now. Do not prolong the anguish and sleepless nights of many Canadians who are very disturbed.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition told the senior citizens with whom he met that their cheques were going to go up the normal amount as of July 1. They will continue at that level on August 1 and September 1. They will go up again on October 1 according to the formula that is presently in place.

I would suggest that he not foster and encourage the anxiety that he is so concerned about. By fanning these flames he is causing the problems that he is trying to get changed. We are concerned about those elderly Canadians who are receiving both the GIS and the OAS. We will be monitoring very closely the impact of this and our ability to reinstate that amount.

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF FULL INDEXATION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. In a speech in Sept-Îles yesterday the Prime Minister said that there is no panic amongst senior citizens with respect to deindexation. In fact he said that there is a degree of serenity and comprehension. The Prime Minister has not only lost touch with his constituents, he has lost touch with reality. Those statements fly in the face of all of the evidence that I gathered from senior citizens in Vancouver, Saskatoon, Toronto, and Sudbury last week. I know that those senior citizens are worried and apprehensive about their loss of purchasing power.

Will the Minister of Finance now admit that he and the Prime Minister are wrong? Will he restore full indexation before the summer break, and give some relief to the worries of senior citizens?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me ask that Hon. Member the same question. Did he tell the senior citizens that they should not be concerned, that their cheques will not be going down but in fact will be going up?

Ms. Copps: They're not that stupid.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Did he also say that the Guaranteed Income Supplement would be fully indexed and no changes will be made as a result of the Budget? Did he caution the senior citizens not to be concerned about that?

Did he go on to say that, as this Budget produces the jobs that will provide the revenues to support these programs, the Government of Canada will continue to monitor them and as soon as possible reinstate the programs? Those are the sorts of things that he should be saying to senior citizens if he is truly concerned about their anxiety.

BUDGET STATISTICS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, on May 23 did the Minister of Finance tell the Canadian public the truth? Did he tell them that not only our senior citizens, but our working poor, were going to lose 20 per cent of their purchasing power? Did he tell the senior citizens of the country that a 55-year old, who is expecting his OAS to maintain 25 per cent of his retirement income, is going to lose 50 per cent of his purchasing power over the next 10 years?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Frith: In a sneaky, back-door way the Government has attempted to fool the Canadian public which has awoken to the fact. Will the Minister of Finance do the only honourable and compassionate thing, and restore full indexation?

Mr. Gauthier: Never mind that—resign.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is playing with numbers as he normally does. I can play with numbers too.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): They are your numbers.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Leader of the Opposition says they are my numbers. Is the budget deficit of $38 billion with which we were presented this year my numbers?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It was $32 billion, and you blew it up to $38 billion.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Whose numbers point to the fact that the deficit is growing by 25 per cent per annum for three years running? That is the reason why we must make some changes to the programs. If we do not make some changes, at 25 per cent per annum the debt will swallow the whole country.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance had the same numbers in January when he promised all of Canada, including the pensioners, that they would not have to pay for the debt. That is when the government made the promise.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister met with groups representing five major sections of pensioners in Nova Scotia yesterday. As we sit in this assembly today a meeting in Courtenay, British Columbia, attended by representatives of all the pensioners of British Columbia, is debating a motion calling for the full restoration of indexation for all pensions.

Through his answer earlier in Question Period was the Minister implying that the Government does not intend to make a decision before we recess to re-establish indexation for Canadian pensioners?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I caution the Hon. Member not to draw conclusions. If there is a statement to be made, it will be made. He will have to be patient.

REQUEST FOR EARLY STATEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the Minister of Finance will not be back in the House until next September since he is taking a trip elsewhere. I understand that he has other obligations. However, since the Government has an obligation to deal with the anxiety of Canadian pensioners now, will he not undertake to make a statement, either this week or next week, which will clear up the anxiety of Canada's pensioners on this matter?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, courtesy of the office of the Hon. Member I finally managed to find out who he and his colleague wanted me to meet with yesterday. It was a good meeting. We discussed a range of things. We talked about the problems of elderly Canadians on the GIS and OAS. We talked about the impact of inflation, and their concern about government policies that lead to inflation. We also talked of their concern about government waste which was prevalent in the years of Liberal Government, which we are trying to come to grips with, under the auspices of the Nielson task force report. I think elderly Canadians are pleased with the efforts that we are making to try to come to grips with the problems we are facing.

TIMING OF DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Minister listened more closely to the group with whom he met yesterday than he listened to the question I asked, because he certainly did not answer it.

Will the Minister be fair to Canadian pensioners and make a statement before we recess for the summer, or at least tell Canadian pensioners when the Government will make a definitive decision on this? Surely Canada's pensioners have a right to know.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think I have responded to that question. I responded to it initially in the Budget itself. I said that we would be continuing to monitor the impact and the circumstances relating to the decision and, as resources permit, would be making some changes. The Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare have responded to this question, as I did earlier in Question Period.

I tell the senior citizens of the country that their cheques will not be changed on July 1. They will increase by the normal indexation amount, and this will continue for the balance of the year.

• (1430)

There is no cause for the anxiety and concern that the Hon. Member and his colleagues are trying to fan. We will monitor the situation and will be making any announcement, if appropriate, in due course.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, with every day that passes this matter becomes more and more confusing. It seems that today the senior citizens are being told that they are paying the price of the vanity and ego of the Minister of Finance who will not agree, despite pressures from his own back-benchers, and despite a very heated debate in caucus last weekend, to do the right thing now because he personally does not want to be seen as being forced to back down. Is the Minister of Finance telling the senior citizens of Canada, Members of the House, and all Canadians, that there will be no remedial action taken on the proposed deindexation of OAS until another Budget is brought down, possibly in 1986?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am repeating what I said a minute ago. We are monitoring this matter on a regular basis, and are listening to the senior citizens to whom we are speaking on a regular basis. All my colleagues are advising me of what they are hearing. I should say to the Hon. Member that there are two messages that are coming to us. A lot of people say that they like the Budget and the way the Budget is going to create more jobs. A lot of people are saying that they can see that, as the Budget creates more jobs, we are going to be able to deal with the problem about which the Hon. Member expresses so much concern. I would suggest to the Hon. Member that, rather than fan the flames as he has been doing, he should be explaining to the senior citizens that 271,000 jobs have been created and that, as more are created, there will be good changes made.

VISIT TO PARLIAMENT HILL BY SENIOR CITIZENS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance reminds me of a wind-up toy soldier. One winds him up and gets the expected reaction each time. His answers do not change.

The Minister of Finance keeps on asking members of the Opposition to explain certain things to senior citizens. Let me ask the Minister a question. Tomorrow many of the country's senior citizens, particularly from the Province of Quebec, will congregate on the front lawns of Parliament Hill, in an open, public forum. Will you go outside tomorrow before those senior citizens to address them and listen to them? You take the time yourself to explain to them this policy that cannot be explained because it is brutal, heartless, foolish, and the price of your vanity.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Tobin: You won't back down. In the name of—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's rhetoric does not fool anyone. I have talked to many senior citizens, and I talked to senior citizens yesterday while in Halifax. I am not backing away from the senior citizens. I am happy to talk to any group of senior citizens. I would just suggest that the Hon. Member cool the rhetoric. You're not impressing anyone.

ONTARIO SENIOR CITIZENS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. The Minister of Finance has often referred in the House to the need to monitor the effect of the Budget on senior citizens. I am sure he noticed in the press this morning a report from Ontario which indicated that 42 per cent of the seniors of that province live in poverty, that is to say, 42 per cent of the seniors in the richest province in the country live in poverty. Since the Government already had access to this kind of information when it drafted the Budget, why in heaven's name did it decide to hammer senior citizens through partial deindexation of pensions?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, again I caution the Hon. Member against drawing the conclusion that he is trying to draw. This Budget attempts to get a degree of job creation and economic wealth established so that we can support the programs about which the Hon. Member speaks so strongly. As we are able to generate that wealth for the Government of Canada, we can make some changes if they are appropriate.

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT RESTORING FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, that was a very interesting answer.

[Translation]

But the irony of it is that the Minister is leaving for China tomorrow, a country where respect for the elderly is traditional.

Here is my question, Mr. Speaker. Before leaving, can the Minister announce to the coalition of senior citizens who will be here in Ottawa tomorrow for a gathering on Parliament Hill that they can expect full indexation of old age security pensions, not just half measures? It is an important question.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have heard the same question three times. All I will do is suggest to the Hon. Member that he read Hansard later today to get the answer.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER WITHDRAW PROPOSAL

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. A five-year study of senior citizens in Ontario reveals that 42 per cent of seniors are already living in poverty. Obviously the Minister's plan to deindex pensions will make the situation much worse for many seniors, and not just those who receive the Guaranteed Income Supplement. Will the Minister not now agree to withdraw the harsh proposal which should never have been put forward in the first place?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me make it quite clear to the Hon. Member that I am as concerned as she is about the plight of senior citizens, not just in Ontario but right across the country. However, we also know that when we have a Government that has been wallowing in waste for the past 15 years, we have to take leadership to try to come to grips with the problems. We are trying to come to grips with the problems, and if the Hon. Member, who is an active member on the finance and other committees, has some ideas on how we can make further savings in spending programs, I could welcome her suggestions. I will meet with her any time, any place, to hear from her.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS

TRANSFER PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, indeed one can think of many ways to reduce the deficit other than attacking senior citizens. In addition to the direct assault on the pocketbooks of senior citizens, the Budget proposals include a $2 billion reduction in transfer payments to the provinces. On May 27 the Minister of Finance said—

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, this is becoming another preamble. Is there a question, please?

Miss Nicholson: Yes, my question is about inconsistent statements, Mr. Speaker. On May 27 the Minister of Finance said that these payments will be increased—

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, but this is supposed to be a supplementary question. Preambles are not allowed. Is there a question?

Miss Nicholson: Yes, I have asked the question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Nicholson: Will the Minister of Finance tell senior citizens what to believe, his statement of May 27 indicating that transfer payments to the provinces are being increased, or the statement made by the Minister of State for Finance on June 12 indicating that they are being reduced?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure I understand the substance of the question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member would ask a straightforward question, she might be able to get an answer. What I think I heard her say was that there have been some inconsistencies regarding what we are about to do with—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I suggest that there is a very major inconsistency between the Leader of the Opposition, who says that we should cut the deficit, and all of the members of the Liberal Party who say that we should jack up the spending.

Let me answer the question quite specifically. We have proposed an increase in the EPF over the next six years but it will not be quite as high as the formula stated originally. However, the result of that will be that the amount of post-secondary education and health spending by the federal Government will be the same per cent of program of expenditures now as was the case then.

PENSIONS

SUGGESTED USE OF CAPITAL GAINS TAXES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Minister of Finance. The Minister is aware, I am sure, that studies have been done, both here and in the United States, indicating conclusively that the elimination of capital gains taxes produces few, if any, productive jobs. Keeping that in mind, and recognizing the need to exempt farms and homes from capital gains—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: —will the Minister reconsider his proposal to eliminate capital gains taxes, and use the money that that would generate to offset what he now proposes to raise from deindexing pensions, so he can put back in place the indexation provisions for the old age pensioners?

● (1440)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, maybe the Hon. Member should settle down and think a little about what he said. Why does he distinguish between a small business, into which a family puts its heart and soul over a lifetime, and a farm? There is a very clear inconsistency in the Member's thinking.

The other point which I would like to make is that he and his Party have never shown any confidence in the ability and the desire of individual Canadians to build something for themselves, to create wealth, and something for their families which is important to them. As it is important to them, it is important to the whole country. That is what we are trying to generate with the capital gains exemption. It will create jobs in the country. It will create the wealth which will provide revenue for the Government so that we will be able to afford those programs. Surely the Hon. Member can recognize that.

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, the answer is too long.

REQUEST FOR BUDGET REVIEW

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister not recognize, given that close to 40 per cent of seniors in the Province of Ontario live at or below the poverty line, that the deindexing of old age pensions will result in an even larger number of senior citizens—who built this country, who took chances and who put their lives on the line—who will have to live at levels far below what they ought to be able to live at? Will the Minister reconsider all the measures in the Budget to find within them ways of raising the $250 million which is necessary to allow seniors to have indexed pensions, as they deserve?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have yet to hear the Hon. Member compliment the Government on its economic policies. I would suggest that he look at the record. Before he jumps up and down and gets red in the face, he should look at the fact that 271,000 jobs have been created.

Mr. Deans: Look at the 1.7 million people who are still unemployed.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): He should look at the fact that mortgage rates have dropped by 3 per cent. In the first quarter of this year, economic growth was 50 per cent higher than people were forecasting. I know the Hon. Member does not like to hear that, because it undercuts his argument. It takes away from the force of the things which he is trying to say. Canadians are not fooled by that. Canadians are very pleased and confident. Individual confidence, consumer confidence, and business confidence are increasing. That is what will create jobs.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

SMALL BUSINESS

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL POLICIES

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of State for Small Businesses I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The intergovernmental position paper on the principles and framework for regional economic development which was signed by the Government of Canada, all ten provinces, the Yukon and Northwest Territories, has just been released.

In the concluding pages of the document reference is made to the Government's pledge to develop more effective policies for small and medium-sized businesses. I would like to raise a question in connection with a statement which was made that both orders of Government—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question will come now, please.

Mr. James: My question to the Minister is: Who will be overseeing these policy changes, and if this joint effort—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides.

SUGGESTIONS CONCERNING FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Quite obviously, Mr. Speaker, the kind of answers we are getting today from the Minister of Finance show that he is not faring well under pressure. Here is what I would like to ask him, keeping in mind the fact that he did ask the Opposition for suggestions concerning full old age pension indexation.

On several occasions I referred to the capital gains tax and the benefits given to people—

Some Hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Garneau: Would the Minister of Finance agree to consider the possibility of reducing by half the benefits he is giving wealthier Canadians through the capital gains tax exemption? Would the Minister be prepared to entertain the suggestion that such benefits be cut by half and that the funds so recouped be used to restore full old age security pension indexation? There would be enough—$150 million the first year and $300 million the second year.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it tests the patience of a person to hear that sort of question coming from that particular Member. I can understand it coming from some other Members, but that particular Member has been against indexation and universality. Those things have not been attributed to him, but they are things about which he has written in the past. An Hon. Member from his side of the House talked about inconsistency. Maybe the Hon. Member should try to develop a little more consistency in the questions which he puts.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, if the Minister of Finance can find one single document I wrote about deindexation of old age security pensions, I would ask him to table it in the House. The Minister of Finance is complaining about being broke yet he did find $8.5 billion for the oil multinationals and nothing at all for the elderly—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member ought to ask his supplementary question.

UTILIZATION OF PUBLIC FUNDS TO ASSIST ELDERLY—REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question to the Minister of Finance is this: Is he prepared to consider—I will repeat my question since he did not answer the first—is he prepared to consider setting a limit on benefits related to capital gains made in Canada and using the money thus saved to maintain full indexation of old age security pensions for senior citizens?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I guess more articles will be retracted by the Hon. Member.

He cannot have it both ways. On the one hand he says that we have to create jobs. On the other hand he is telling me that he wants me to cut the deficit. He has made positive comments in that regard since he has become a Member of the House. If he wants to have jobs created, particularly in the oil and gas industry, then he has to recognize that the National Energy Program which was put in place by the previous Government, the Party of which he is a member, killed jobs in the oil and gas industry and that it spread right across Canada. He must recognize the disaster of that policy. If not, he is talking in another manner which is very inconsistent.

EMPLOYMENT

CHALLENGE '85 PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Minister wrote to me recently to say that the private sector would create thousands of summer jobs without wage subsidies because private enterprise has been "challenged by the new atmosphere of co-operation and harmony between Canada's economic partners". If that is the case, why does the Minister find it necessary to bribe her business friends with an opportunity to win ten cases of Coke if they hire a student? Do jobs go better with Coke?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has been critical of the Challenge '85 Program since it was announced. I want to tell him that today the figures show that some 78,000 young people have jobs because of that program.

• (1450)

Miss MacDonald: That is 78,000 jobs as against 50,000 jobs this time last year. In fact the progam is so good that the Hon. Member's colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre, put out a press release to say just how good it really is.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: Perhaps he ought to get together with that Hon. Member.

I do want to tell the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville that last month alone 34,000 more jobs had been created for young people, in one single month, and that is because of a combination of the efforts of the private sector and the Government working together.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, we had better lock the lavatories of the nation because an awful lot of coke has been drunk. Last week it was old coke. Next week, perhaps, it will be new coke. Maybe we will have the Pepsi Challenge '85 for the Pepsi generation.

PRIZES FOR JOBS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): If the Minister has so much confidence in her summer employment program and the private sector, why has she resorted to such bush league tactics as advertising prizes for jobs in newspapers, as she did in Hamilton?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, one thing the Hon. Member will never recognize is that there is such a thing as incentive in this society.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: I want to give the Hon. Member an example of the kind of program which he is downcrying. The program last year had a young student working at painting park benches. This year, under this program, that same engineering student is working in a biomedical engineering project in a research hospital. That is the difference between last-year and the kinds of jobs which are being created now.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LEBANON—SAFETY OF CANADIANS

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey-White Rock-North Delta): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. All Canadians have joined the rest of the world in concern over the turbulence in the Middle East. Our concern is for the safety of Canadians. I wonder if the Secretary of State for External Affairs could give us an estimate or update on the situation which Canadians face there?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the House knows the action the Government has taken with regard to our representatives in Lebanon and would share my concern that the consular, visitor visa, and immigration services of Canada remain available to people in Lebanon who would normally avail themselves of the services. We intend to make those services available through Damascus and Syria, and our ambassador accredited to Syria is now in the process of discussing the putting in place of those arrangements with the officials of Syria.

RESTORATION OF CLIMATE OF CONFIDENCE AND BALANCE BETWEEN ELDERLY AND GOVERNMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. On September 4 last year, Canadians voted for the present Government. They voted for the Mulroney Government—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Pépin: They voted for the Mulroney Government because they felt they would have security.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Pépin: Since the Budget, their attitude has changed considerably, because they cannot understand the Government's shift in policy.

Recently, I visited a number of towns in Quebec, and the elderly—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is a very long preamble. Is there a question?

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I wish the Minister of Finance would inform the House what he intends to do to restore the climate of confidence and trust that existed between the elderly and the Government, so that elderly Canadians will no longer feel threatened and will no longer be afraid of this Government and of what the future holds.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, first, I would thank the Hon. Member for her ringing endorsement of the events of September 4. I would also remind her that there has been a considerable improvement in confidence in a broad way right across the country.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member is telling her colleagues to keep quiet and let me answer her question. I thank her for that also.

What I would say to the Hon. Member is that we are also concerned about the position of elderly Canadians, particularly those who are receiving both the GIS and the OAS. As I have said on a number of occasions in answer to questions today, we are monitoring this situation very closely. We are talking to people on a regular basis. I think that we should be able to respond to the concerns she has expressed.

FIGHT FOR INDEXATION OF PENSIONS—PRINCIPLE OF SOCIAL JUSTICE AT STAKE

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

I simply want to add that Canadians voted for the present Government because they thought it was offering them security, something you are not giving them today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to know on the basis of what principles of social justice the Minister of Finance is requiring the elderly to fight once again to have their pensions indexed?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member talks about the need for greater security. Surely she understands that if the debt of the country is growing 25 per cent per annum, no one, not a senior citizen, nor any person who is benefiting from any type of program of the Government of Canada, can feel secure that that program will be in existence in five years time.

Some Hon. Members: We want Crosbie.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It astounds me, Mr. Speaker, when I hear the chirping over there, that those people do not understand that 25 per cent growth per annum means that the debt will double every three years. It will double in three years' time, it will double again in six years' time, and it will quadruple in nine years' time. That is the fundamental nature of the problem we are facing.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If we cannot get control of that, there will be no security for anyone.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

HUMAN RIGHTS

CHILE—ABUSES PERPETRATED BY PINOCHET REGIME

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who, in the foreword to the Government's Green Paper on Foreign Policy, makes the following statement:

> We are determined to help eradicate human rights abuses that deny our fellow human beings the freedom and dignity to which they are all entitled.

Is the Minister prepared to join with Amnesty International and other groups, and express his revulsion over the murder, torture, and other human rights abuses perpetrated by the Pinochet regime in Chile?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada on several occasions has made known to authorities in Chile our revulsion at the practices of that regime. We intend to continue to do so. I think it entirely helpful that Hon. Members of the House will, as the Hon. Member has, indicate that that is not simply an attitude of the Government but it is an attitude widely held by citizens across the country.

REPORTED EXPORT OF PARA-MILITARY EQUIPMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, in light of the Minister's response I would like to ask him why his Department granted an export permit to Med-Eng Systems Incorporated of Ottawa, on November 5 last year, to export para-military equipment to the Chilean National Police who, according to Amnesty International, participated in the murder and torture of hundreds of Chilean civilians last year? Does this not make a mockery of what the Minister just said?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will have to take that question of detail as notice. I will look into the situation and reply to the Hon. Member, and to the House, as soon as I have information.

SPORTS

BASEBALL DECISION UNFAIR TO CANADIAN UMPIRES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. While we are all waiting for the day when the World Series will be held in Canada between the Expos and the Blue Jays, will the Minister ascertain why Canadians, who have graduated from recognized umpire schools in the United States, are not permitted to umpire in the minor or major leagues in the United States, while American umpires in baseball, and American referees in hockey, work in Canada? Should this not be a two-way street?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for that very serious question. We are looking into it seriously. We have had discussions with officials of the United States. We are not completely satisfied as yet with the response—

Mr. Blaikie: Give them a fast ball, Joe.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —but it is the bottom of the seventh inning, and we expect that we will win that particular game before the end of the ninth.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PENSIONS

STATEMENT BY NOVA SCOTIA MINISTER

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. I want to read to him what the Nova Scotia Development Minister said regarding deindexation:

> Our obligation to our elders is not to be taken lightly, nor rejected out of hand. To ask them to make this sacrifice . . . is to go too far. The fear exists that such callous disregard for a pre-election commitment may be only the first step in reducing benefits to the elderly.

How much evidence does the Minister of Finance need to change this regressive, callous, ruthless, and vicious legislation? How much evidence does he need?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I will remind the hon. gentleman of answers I have given previously in the House. It is not a very original question that he poses. But I will say to him that the thrust of the Budget is to create jobs and generate the wealth which will give us the funds whereby we can get the deficit down and enable us to afford these programs. There is nothing fair about everyone watching our debt go up 25 per cent—the Hon. Member shakes his head and waves his hand. He is going to have to understand the basic rule of compound interest. When debt grows 25 per cent per annum, year in and year out—the Hon. Member from Newfoundland is indicating he does not understand it either. It is simple mathematics. Growth of 25 per cent will double the debt in three years from $200 billion to $400 billion. Three years later it will have gone from $400 billion to $800 billion, and so on. You cannot go on forever, and people better get used to that.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of four, presented by Hon. Members on Monday, June 17, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Certain petitions presented by the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley), the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) and the Hon. Member for Bonavista-Trinity-Conception (Mr. Johnson) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

May I add that copies are available to Hon. Members in the lobbies. May I further add, with your permission, that this report is presented on the seventy-seventh birthday of the Hon. Stanley Knowles, a great parliamentarian.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The rules also do not allow me to say thank you to the Hon. Member and his committee on behalf of the House, but I am sure the House would want me to.

PETITIONS

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions. One is signed by some Canadians who are protesting the measures in the federal Budget which severely affect the economic situation of senior citizens and call upon Parliament not to deindex old age pensions.

I have another petition from another group of senior Canadian citizens complaining about the effect of Bill C-26 on widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64. They ask that the benefits of the Bill be applied to all citizens in need between the ages of 60 and 64.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from Halifax signed by over 1,000 people, many of whom met the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in Halifax. They simply ask that the Government change the deindexing provisions of the May 23 Budget, those provisions placing an undue and unfair hardship on pensioners.

REQUEST FOR READJUSTMENT IN PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. François Gérin (Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the residents of the municipality of Chartierville, I want to present a petition asking for an adjustment in the price of oil, which is too expensive, especially in view of the proximity of this municipality to the United States.

[English]

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition asking the Government to reconsider its budgetary measure to deindex OAS pensions partially. The petition is presented by several constituents of mine who live in a senior citizens' home.

[Translation]

I also have a second petition, Mr. Speaker, from about 50 of my constituents of Ottawa-Vanier who ask the Government to reconsider its position and to keep its promise of indexing senior citizens' pensions.

[English]

I also have a petition from another area of my riding dealing with the Conservative Government's failure to keep its promise of January, 1985 when it declared that any savings which may result from programs changed will not be applied to deficit reduction. They ask the Government to change its position on its proposal and not deindex old age pensions in January, 1986.

Point of Order—Mr. McCurdy

[Translation]

I also have a petition, Mr. Speaker, sent to me and signed by many residents of the Gatineau riding, who ask the Government to change its policy and to respect the promise made to senior citizens not to remove the full indexation of old age security pensions in January 1986.

POINT OF ORDER

STATEMENT OF MISS MACDONALD DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Speaker: I understand the Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) has a point of order.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, during Question Period the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) indicated that a press release had been issued by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) praising Challenge '85. Reading the contents of the communiqué to which she referred one can only conclude that the Minister lied.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McCurdy: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker,—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Will the Hon. Member resume his seat, please? Will the Hon. Member now please rise and withdraw the statement?

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to withdraw the term "lie", but I know of no other way of indicating that the Minister did not tell the truth.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is relatively new here so I will simply indicate to him our practice. The Hon. Member will please rise in his place and simply withdraw the statement.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to follow the directions of the Chair, but again I must say that the statement—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. McCurdy: I withdraw the statement as I previously described it. Nevertheless, I have to say that the Minister did not accurately portray the contents of the press release issued by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Speaker: I take it that we now have a withdrawal. I am now in a position to indicate that the Hon. Member has not raised a point of order.

PETITIONS

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to present a petition to the House today on behalf of several hundred people from the Province of Nova Scotia who protest the draconian move to deindex pensions of senior citizens. They say that the losers will be the poor people of Canada, the unemployed and women.

[Translation]

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy and honoured to present a petition from senior citizens in the Bourassa riding, who ask the Prime Minister to respect the commitment he made last summer during the 1984 election campaign and to restore full indexation of old age security pensions.

● (1510)

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from some 100 people of Halifax. The undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a number of petitions containing many signatures of citizens from the metropolitan Toronto area who are asking the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to maintain full indexation of the old age pension.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from the communities of Dundurn, Viscount, Allan, Aberdeen Leroy, Spalding, Englefeld, Jansen, Semans and Leastock in my riding. They urge the Government to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to present a petition signed by all the senior residents of Skead, Ontario, in my riding. This petition calls upon the House of Commons to withdraw the partial deindexation of the old age pension which, as they point out in their covering letter, would make them pay again as they have paid all their lives in contributing to the growth of Canada.

I also have a petition signed by many residents of St. Vincent's Guest House in Halifax, in which they too call upon the Government and Parliament to withdraw the partial deindexation of the old age pension.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed mainly by the people from the communities of Amherst and Springhill, Nova Scotia, beseeching Parliament and the Government not to proceed with the deindexing of the Old Age Security Program.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of several dozen constituents in Elliot Lake, Ontario, calling on the Government to reinstate the full indexation of old age pensions and deploring the fact that they are being unfairly penalized in order to benefit large multinational oil companies and high income groups.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition from a dozen constituents in Gore Bay, Manitoulin Islands, calling on the Government to reinstate full indexation of old age pension.

I also have a petition from some 25 constituents from Espanola, calling on the Government to reinstate the old age pension with full indexation starting next January.

I also have a petition from a dozen constituents in Whitefish Falls, Ontario, calling on the Government to reinstate old age pensions with full indexation.

I have a petition from the Town of Little Current, signed by several dozen constituents there, calling on the Government to reinstate the old age pension with full indexation rights and calling upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to keep his campaign commitment of the 1984 general election.

[Translation]

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to this House a petition from residents of Saint-Louis-de-Kent, Richibucto and Kouchibouguac, in my constituency, who are very concerned about certain Budget announcements and who recommend through this House to the Government that full indexing of old age security pensions be re-established.

[English]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from Halifax calling upon the Government to fully index pensions and live up to its campaign promises.

I have a more extensive petition from my riding in Winnipeg calling on the Government to live up to its promise and fully index Old Age Security pensions.

CF MARITIME EXPERIMENTAL TEST RANGE IN NANOOSE BAY, B.C.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a number of people from Vernon, British Columbia, who are concerned about the Canadian Forces Maritime Experimental Test Range in Nanoose Bay, British Columbia. Among their concerns are the procedures for and results of radiation monitoring tests of waters that are adjacent to the area, that Section 1 of the agreement between Canada and the United States authorizing the test range is ambiguous, and that the naval policy of the United States, in neither confirming nor denying the presence of nuclear weapons in the area, is unacceptable.

They urge the House to hold a full public inquiry before the present agreement is negotiated, with power to investigate the above concerns.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour again to present petitions from pensioners who are protesting the intent of the Government to deindex the Old Age Security and demanding that the Government not proceed with that proposal.

As well, to the already considerable list of names submitted from the City of Windsor, I add a thousand on behalf of pensioners who petition the Government not to proceed with the deindexation.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions from constituents in my riding protesting that the deindexing proposals of the Government represent a massive withdrawal from our collective commitment to public pensions and that the losers will be the poor, the unemployed and women. They pray that the House of Commons reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

These petitions come from the City of Thunder Bay, from Nipigon and Red Rock. I note that on one of these petitions is the signature of Mr. Edward Lauzon who recently had the honour of receiving the lifestyle award from the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp).

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present petitions on behalf of my constituents who object to the decision by the Government of Canada to deindex Old Age Security. I have a petition from the residents of Vickers Heights, the residents of the community of Shebandowan, and 158 more from the city of Thunder Bay.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition, organized by the Northwest Territories Seniors Society. It contains some 90 signatures, mainly of old age pensioners from the City of Yellowknife. The petition points out that living costs in the North are considerably higher than in the South and any lowering of benefits to the elderly in the North will cause undue hardship, and therefore urges the Government to reconsider its proposal partially to deindex old age pensions.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

The House resumed consideration in committee of Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority—Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance))—Mr. Danis in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee adjourned at two o'clock, Clause 2 of the Bill and the amendment of the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) were under consideration.

• (1520)

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, it is indeed a great week, not only for the City of Ottawa and for Parliament, but also for the whole of Canada in that two distinguished parliamentarians are celebrating their birthdays, the Hon. Stanley Knowles, who was honoured in the House today on his seventh-seventh birthday, and the Hon. Jack Pickersgill, who is eighty. In fact, both these gentlemen gave much to Canada in Parliament and outside. It seems to me that when we are discussing the punitive measures which have been put forward by the Government toward senior citizens, we should start looking at the work and the contribution of people like Stanley Knowles and Jack Pickersgill. Many people in Canada did not have the opportunity to sit in Parliament. Many people in Canada did not have the same opportunity as Members of Parliament who now sit in the House to accrue pension benefits. There are many senior citizens in the Province of Ontario, and we know that 40 per cent of our senior citizens are living below the poverty line.

What has been the response of the Minister of Finance? Day after day, hour after hour, he talks about deficit reduction and job creation in the House of Commons. I do not think we are asking Stanley Knowles to get out on the job market again. I do not think that Jack Pickersgill should be forced into the employment sector to pay for his costs of living. In fact, for the Minister of Finance to suggest that somehow job creation will be the salvation of the pensions of senior citizens is absolutely absurd and ridiculous. In fact, it is an insult to seniors that he could stand in his place in Question Period today and say that the Government would not be cutting their pensions in August, September, October or November. Does the Minister of Finance really think that the senior citizens are so stupid as not to realize that the provisions of this Budget will be the New Year's gift of the Conservative Party to the people of Canada in 1986? The New Year's bonus will be a 3 per cent annual reduction in the pensions they would have received, if the Minister of Finance had not delivered this heinous document in the House.

I can understand why the Minister was somewhat riled today during Question Period. We have a tradition in this Parliament that as does the Budget so does the Minister. The Minister is on the run. In the first political act of this Government, we have seen the true colour of the Conservative Party and the true colour of the Minister of Finance. We saw it in the committee this morning when the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate moved an amendment which said to the Government: "If you want to cut the pensions of senior citizens by 3 per cent every year over the next five years, we will cut your budget".

What did the Government House Leader say, in a knee-jerk reaction which was so typical of the Government's approach to senior citizens? He said that if we cut their pensions, they would cut the pensions of the poor. He cannot look at any other solutions. Again the Minister of Finance asked us in the House today to introduce some creative solutions or some suggestions. We have introduced suggestion after suggestion after suggestion.

Today, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) proposed another solution which would be to have the capital gains tax exemption available to 4 per cent of the population, the wealthiest in Canada. The money saved could then be spent on the Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is unable to understand our proposals because he does not understand the poverty of elderly Canadians. He only understands Bay Street politics. He only wants to give his Bay Street friends jobs and benefits. He knows he can give a $500,000 capital gains tax exemption, Mr. Chairman. Capital gains with no strings attached, a present for the 4 per cent of the Canadian people who can take advantage of the exemption.

Mr. Chairman, most elderly Canadians have never been able to earn $400,000 or $500,000. If he does not believe us, perhaps he will believe the letters coming in from across Canada. I have been getting letters from Newfoundland and Britsh Columbia, from elderly Canadians across the country who are asking us... There are not many of us in the Opposition. There are 40 in the Liberal Party and 30 in the New Democratic Party. However, we are fighting for the elderly because your so-called Conservative Members are saying nothing.

At least the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) had the courage today to table a petition concerning the problems of people in the North. But where are the other voices? Where are the voices of the Conservatives, the Members from Quebec who have remained silent, who have not said a word to protect our Canadian elderly? Where are they? We have a Conservative majority that made any number of promises to Canadians, but now, when the neediest in our society are being attacked, who is going to protect them? We are, the Liberal Party is. The Liberal Party fought to make the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) face up to the fact that he broke his word, that he did not keep the promise he made in Sherbrooke, that he actually lied or failed to tell Canadians the truth.

Mr. Chairman—

[English]

Perhaps I cannot say it as well as a constituent from Newfoundland who wrote to me. This particular constituent expressed well the message which would best go out, not only to Members and Ministers on the government side of the House, but to all those back-benchers over there who have not yet had the courage to rise in the House and speak out on this issue.

The letter reads:

Dear Prime Minister:

I write on behalf of myself and the other 22 old age pensioners of my small community who depend on our wee pensions as our sole income. Though I am 73 years of age now and disabled because of Parkinson's disease, 40 years ago I was like Mila; a young wife and mother, busily engaged in the war effort and raising a young family at the same time. We never had to go to Government for any hand-out... but believed we would enjoy our lives particularly those of us in an extended period of widowhood; drawing our earned pensions from a very grateful country's bounty and without fear of our meagre incomes being gnawed down in buying power every year through inflation. Now, we are below the poverty line. We have all done our share. Senior citizens should not be expected to pay off the deficit which has grown about 10 per cent—

I am sorry the Minister of Finance is not here to hear the facts which he should be laying on the Canadian table.

The letter continues:

—during the short period your administration has been in power—

The writer was referring to the Conservative administration.

—while the fat oil industry—personified to us by the television cameras shooting the soap opera, Dallas—are let off the hook in the blind hope that these rich mandarins and petromerchants... buy up more real estate in Florida and throughout the sunbelt states... The history of mankind and even true Conservative philosophy... corroborates that man is greedy and that the oil company billionaires whenever possible, will be takers rather than givers—

Please reconsider your decision to make us pay the piper . . . in the so-called sunset days of our lives? We did our share when our bodies were strong, our minds acute, our pockets almost empty but our spirits and optimism high.

We simply cannot be collectively nor individually expected to pay again and again. It is simply not fair, and if your Mr. Wilson is not brought to heel by you, fired or ordered to amend this ghastly Budget to offer us reasonable indexing relief we can never believe your word again. We, senior citizens, can only meet together and talk about the wrong you are seen by us to be intended to do commencing next January. Many of us may not even be around to vote against you when the next national election is called, but some of us shall be and others will have "aged" into our non-chosen slots in society. Please do not add insult to injury by having your Ministers and your back-bencher apologists state that senior citizens who need their pensions to exist, will ever truly support this dastardly act? I think we can write enough letters in the coming months to offset that claim and to place such statements in the same trash can as "your campaign one relating to "sacred trusts" ".

I have discussed this letter amongst my peers and all degree I should send it to you having supported my stand wholeheartedly.

This particular letter was written by Bridget Laurie from St. Thomas, Newfoundland. I have received letters from across Canada. This is another letter from Newfoundland from another senior citizen who believed the Conservative Government when the Prime Minister said that pensions would not be touched.

The back-bencher who does not have the courage to get up and speak against this Budget asks whether my interventions are in order. They are in order because the amendment moved by the Member for Gander-Twillingate is telling the Government quite clearly that if it wants to penalize the senior citizens of the country by 3 per cent, it will have to cut its spending by 3 per cent. We are prepared to support a borrowing Bill to give the Government billions and billions of dollars at the same time as that self-same hypocritical Conservative Government is telling the senior citizens of the country that they will be cut, cut and cut.

Is this the New Year's present for which the senior citizens voted when last September they joined with Canadians from coast to coast to give the Conservative Government an overwhelming mandate? No, they were tricked and hoodwinked. They were fooled by a Government and a Prime Minister who, day after day, made promises which he never intended to keep. They were fooled by a Finance Minister who has now shown the Canadian people quite clearly that he is more interested in lining the pockets of his rich friends than he is in helping those in society who can least afford to pay.

I believe there are a number of Members on the government side of the House who do not support this measure. I believe that the caucus meeting of the Conservative Party last week was a heated one. Young people from coast to coast have shown their courage and said that they will pay the deficit, that they do not want their grandparents to bear the burden of that deficit. Mr. Chairman, I believe the Government wants to reverse its position. It realizes that the power of senior citizens across the country is not to be tampered with and that the support which put this Government in office came, in large measure, from the very senior citizens whom the Government is now seeking to destroy and cut back.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, it is quite obvious that many Members—and not only in the Liberal Party—expect the Prime Minister to take action. Last night in Manicouagan they were expecting the Prime Minister to be true to his word, if that is possible. He even stated in his own book that if he were to make a mistake he would not be ashamed to change his mind. Judging from letters received from across the country, from Newfoundland, from British Columbia, from Ontario, from my own riding, from Hamilton with a petition bearing more than 1,000 signatures, and Friday there will be a gathering where 200, 300, 400, 500 elderly people will come from my constituency to tell this Government what they think of this measure against old age pensioners. We are waiting from some kind of response from the Prime Minister. Before the adjournment, Mr. Chairman, why can he not do something in the House this week by offering an anniversary present to all elderly Canadians who are impatiently waiting for an answer from the Government? There is political unrest throughout the country right now. Mr. Chairman, such unrest means that elderly people are speaking up in most cities to tell their Members, be they Conservatives, Liberals or New Democrats: We do not want our pensions reduced. We do not want to have to pay again and again. We cannot afford to pay more because we already live below the poverty line.

[English]

While the Minister of Finance is seeking borrowing authority for these billions of dollars and telling the people of Canada that they are supposed to cut back and that seniors of the country will have to bear the burden, what can he say to Mr. Gabriele in my riding? Mr. Guiseppe Gabriele has to support a family. There are some seniors who have children who are still at home. He has to support a wife and a child on a combined monthly income of $904.68. His combined expenses are $953.67. Therefore, he is a net loser every month of approximately $49. He has reached the point where he is even seeking help to be able to afford to pay the taxes on his home.

Can the Minister of Finance tell Mr. Gabriele where he is going to get the extra $30 a month that he will lose as a result of these punitive measures in the old age pension and the family allowance? The deindexation of the family allowance is another insidious tax on families which can least afford to pay. That is another example of the distorted priorities of a Government which will give oil companies $1 billion or $2 billion. It will give people who can afford to have capital gains $.5 million. Yet, with regard to the senior citizens and families of the country, the Government says, "Let them eat cake".

I urge all Members on the government side of the House who feel the same as I do to prevail upon the Minister of Finance to retract and to prevail upon the Prime Minister to keep his word. People believed him. Government Members have a responsibility to force the Prime Minister to uphold his promise to the Canadian people because, by forgoing that promise, he has shown the Canadian people what the Conservative Party and the Conservative Government are really all about. It is a blue-blooded Party for the rich. We knew that before September 4, and now the Party is exposing itself in all its hideousness to the people of Canada.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to take part in this debate on a motion which proposes a 3 per cent reduction in the borrowing authority sought by the Government. I would be overjoyed to be able to join in a debate on a motion for an increase in the amount of borrowing authority if it would ensure the capacity of the Government to cancel deindexation. However, since the rules of the House do not allow us to move in that direction, I shall take part in the present debate.

It is obvious that the actions of the Government have aroused the anger and outrage of many Canadians. That is certainly true in the City of Thunder Bay and in other parts of northwestern Ontario with which I am in touch. I find it astonishing that government Members do not have the same experience. I would like them to hear from some of my constituents regarding their feelings about the Government's actions. I received a copy of a letter which was addressed to the Minister of Finance and was sent by two senior citizens of my riding, Elsie and Wilfred Harrison. They write as follows:

My wife and I are recipients of O.A.S. Pensions, we are also in that category where we do not qualify to receive any portion of the G.I. Supplement, and to continue in this avenue may I say that as of the last return we made to "Internal Revenue" we did not qualify to pay any Income Tax. That, sir, will tell you what our financial level is.

During your Budget Speech, and on several occasions since, I have heard you say that if and when the indexing of O.A.S. Pensions is introduced—that is, when the increase will cover only the amount over 3 per cent—the recipient of the pension will not be hurt.

Sir, you have said it once too often for my liking, so I am writing this letter to tell you that if this miserly item is introduced in 1986, my wife and I will be poorer, and in subsequent years, we shall be yet poorer. We, my wife and I, together with our friends cannot understand in what circles you move where "many" people say that this item will not hurt them. Most emphatically will we be hurt, together with thousands of others.

Writing in a similar vein is another senior constituent of mine named Miss K. R. Escott, who writes as follows in a letter that was addressed to me personally:

I wish to add my name to the large number of voters who are unhappy with the 1985 budget as presented by Mr. Wilson and approved by Mr. Mulroney.

They definitely have taken from those who have not to benefit those who have.

I would suggest that both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Mulroney "tighten their belts" for the next five years to the degree where each of these men are compelled to live on the basic old age pension for the remainder of their elected term.

That suggestion would certainly drive the lesson home for Ministers of the Crown who think that this particular sacrifice can be borne with equanimity by our seniors.

Next I have a letter from another constituent, one who has the good fortune to be employed by the grain elevators of Thunder Bay. In another area, he experienced the cancellation of the home ownership savings plan to which he had been contributing for six years. He feels very strongly about that. In reference to the cancellation of the home ownership savings plan, he begins a paragraph by stating:

Also while I'm on the subject of cheating I would like to state that I do not like the way this Government has treated my Grandmother and the senior citizens of this country. You would think that in the 80's the government would stop picking on the people who made this country.

Is there no law against this dictatorship and to what depth will this new Government sink to? In the election the people have trusted the Conservative Party with the affairs of this country . . . and it seems that the people will have to suffer because of the lies that we have been fed.

I hope that you, Ian Angus and Ed Broadbent, will keep reminding the Canadian people of the mistake that was made in 1984. Make sure that the people know that the Conservatives are for the rich. And that they don't forget it.

He concludes with the following observation:

—I feel that these fat cat Conservatives should be put on the budget and earnings of an "Ordinary Canadian" and then made to tighten their belts.

This letter was sent to me by Jim Fiorito, one of my constituents who is employed in the elevator industry. He was recently married and has a daughter. He is concerned about his grandmother and other seniors.

I have a fourth letter which was sent to me from another working man although he is closer to retirement age than the previous writer and has a wife who is already receiving a pension. Mr. Ewald Dombrowsky writes as follows:

—the Budget is very unfair not only for pensioners but also for ordinary Canadians. Where are the Jobs, Jobs, Jobs!!?? . . . Our son is unemployed already 2½ years, he has a family (3 boys) and nothing is coming up here. It is a hard situation.

We hope, you and the New Democratic Party will continue working to ensure fairness for all Canadians.

That last sentence, of course, relates very nicely to the question to which I referred in passing, which is, why is it that members of the Opposition receive letters of this sort and see constituents coming into their offices in large numbers signing petitions to protest the action of the Government while government Members claim not to be seeing that? They may of course be refusing to pass on that information.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare did not appreciate the suggestion that his riding office in southeastern Manitoba was putting constituents on hold when they called in to complain about the pensions, and I can well imagine that he did not appreciate that suggestion. I take it, though, that government Members are not encouraging their constituents in any way to protest the actions the Government has taken and are trying to enforce that regime of silence, which was surely the Government's hope when the Budget was brought down on May 23, a regime of silence in which people in the various quarters would swallow their medicine or run off with the gains that the Budget would give them, each mourning or rejoicing in solitude and silence that which the Budget did.

Surely if members of the Government were to seek the honest opinions of their constituents, there would not be much doubt about what those constituents think. I would suggest to people all across the country, and in fact to all those who are watching us this afternoon, enjoying what we are debating and hoping that it will have an effect on the Government, to make sure that the Prime Minister, who is ultimately responsible for these things, hears from them.

The Minister of Finance does what the Prime Minister tells him to do. Quite clearly, he was on about a six-inch leash yesterday while the Prime Minister mulled over how to get out of the terrible hole he has got himself into regarding this monumental political mistake. I would like to be sure that the Prime Minister at least is aware of what Canadians think, so I urge people all across the country to write to the Prime Minister at Room 309-S here in the House of Commons Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0A2, and be very sure to get those letters in because the Prime Minister's Office certainly wants to know what Canadians think about the actions of Government, good and ill.

In this case, we have an ill action by the Government and constituents ought to let the Prime Minister know that they do not approve. They ought to urge him on this process of cogitation in which he is clearly involved these days as he determines how he can cancel this particular proposal of the Budget without at the same time cancelling the career of the Minister of Finance.

Canadians do want to keep putting on the pressure so that the Government keeps the promises it made during the election campaign of last summer and remains faithful to the expectations that were aroused in the minds of Canadians from coast to coast as more and more extravagant promises were made, even though the Conservative Leader and his Party were well aware of the financial position of the country and well aware of the need that existed for the Government to deal with all those challenges that will get us back toward the full employment that we all seek. I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for giving me the opportunity this afternoon to put some of my constituents' comments on the record and to urge Canadians to put the pressure on this Government that it deserves regarding this very unfortunate feature of the Budget.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: From the outset of the debate on this amendment, Mr. Chairman, it is obvious that we want to establish clearly the intentions of the Official Opposition and the reason why we moved it. Quite simply, Mr. Chairman, ever since the Budget was tabled we find it unfair and inequitable. We on this side of the House, Mr. Chairman, have tried every means to make Government Members, more particularly the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), understand that it is unacceptable in a modern society like ours in 1985 that the deficit be reduced by favouring the rich and attacking the poorest people in our society, Mr. Chairman. Those are poor people who have only their old age security pension, and more particularly others who get nothing more than the pension and the guaranteed income supplement. Mr. Chairman, all Canadians know very well that when we talk about the guaranteed income supplement we are referring to very old and very poor people.

I would invite the Prime Minister to visit my riding of Bourassa. I would also invite the Minister of Finance to visit my beautiful riding of Bourassa and face the elderly residents of Manoir Aimée-Léonard, face the elderly residents of Manoir Gouin, every one of them aged 65 or more, face the senior citizens of Angelica and Cascade homes for the aged, face the senior citizens of Tours Gouin, Sainte-Rita home for the aged, Manoir de Montréal, Manoir l'Escapade, Résidence du Confort—it may be called Résidence du Confort, but they are elderly people—Résidence Manoir Tremblay, Montreal North, and the 15 Golden Age Clubs.

One thing for sure, Mr. Chairman, is that if the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance were to agree to meet with people in my riding and ask them whether they are prepared to accept the 3 per cent deindexation, they would be told: Mr. Prime Minister, what about your election promises, particularly your sacred promise to maintain full indexation? Mr. Prime Minister, you may rest assured that Canadians will remember, and let me tell you something I like to repeat often—you have fooled Canadians on September 4. As the saying goes in English:

• (1550)

[English]

"You can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time, Mr. Prime Minister".

[Translation]

That bears repeating and as the saying goes, you can fool some Canadians some of the time, but you certainly cannot fool them all the time, Mr. Prime Minister. Once again to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance, through you, Mr. Chairman: Do you have enough heart, audacity and guts to meet with elderly people and tell them that deindextion will cost them $1,500 within five years? Do you have that kind of courage, Mr. Prime Minister? And now to Conservative Members, Members on the Government side, this is a humane not a partisan issue, we are not trying to defeat the Government and, as I said, we are not trying to score political points. We are simply asking for very humanitarian treatment. All we are asking is that you urge the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance to reconsider their decision, urge them not to go ahead with deindexation of old age security pensions, and not think it over month after month and thus keep elderly people in a state of anxiety for six, seven or eight months. And I would ask the Hon. Members opposite to ensure this is done as soon as possible.

Mr. Chairman, thousands and thousands of people from coast to coast in this country are protesting against the unfairness and inadequacy of this measure. The Quebec National Assembly has also passed a unanimous resolution condemning the measure and urging the Government of Canada to reverse a decision it considers to be a demonstration of flagrant injustice towards senior citizens who are among the neediest in our society.

Mr. Chairman, I want to extend my sincere congratulations to the Conservative Member, the Member on the Government side who showed some realism and rose today in the House to present a petition—

Mr. Lewis: This was a first.

Mr. Rossi: —it is a first, but he had guts just the same, something you do not have. You will never have guts. Go and hide behind the curtains. You will never have the guts your colleague had when he rose—

The Chairman: Order, please! Order!

Mr. Rossi: You do not have the courage to be human. You do not have the courage to speak to the elderly. You do not have the courage because you are afraid to say what you think. The Members opposite know this. They are all hiding, and they do not have the guts to talk to the elderly in their senior citizens' homes. You all have senior citizens' homes. The Hon. Member from Chicoutimi . . . I see the Minister thinks this is funny—

Mrs. Vézina: Rimouski!

Mr. Rossi: Pardon? Rimouski. Even better. Rimouski. With due respect, I do not want to know about the Hon. Minister's political antecedents, and I certainly will not reveal them to the House.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that the Hon. Member's Conservative colleagues will do likewise, that is, become realists, and I would urge them to go to the senior citizens' homes, Mr. Chairman. The Members here from Quebec all have senior citizens' homes in their ridings. Go and visit them. Do not be partisan. Approach them with an open mind. Ask them what they think about this. I can assure you that when you come back to the House and you want to say what they were thinking, you too will rise in the House, like your colleague, and you too will present a petition, because petitions are being made across Quebec, and I know what I am talking about.

Mr. Chairman, I said that I hoped his Conservative colleagues would do likewise when faced with reality, that they would forget their political partisanship and would consult objectively and realistically with senior citizens.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge Government Members on both sides of the House, especially the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance and above all the Members from Quebec . . . Because tomorrow, the elderly from Quebec are going to march past the Parliament Buildings, and they will want to see you. I would urge all the Ministers from Quebec to go and see their senior citizens, and there will be no faked or pre-arranged interviews. They will speak openly.

Mr. Chairman, in concluding, I want to renew my request to Members on both sides of the House: be human. Once again, we are not out to make the Government fall. This is not a matter of political partisanship. Tomorrow, we will see our senior citizens in front of the Parliament Buildings, on Parliament Hill, and we will be able to listen to their claims, their complaints and to what they have to say, and I would urge all Hon. Members to meet tomorrow and to take action.

[English]

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Chairman, I have been here for some 17 or 18 Budgets speeches, Budget Bills and borrowing authority Bills, and this is the first time I can recall that neither the Minister of Finance, nor the Minister of State for Finance or their Parliamentary Secretaries are in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Benjamin: I have never seen it happen before. When the Government of Canada is borrowing $18 billion, one would think that this would have some kind of high priority. I hope we are not being left to the tender mercies of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, but I see he is sitting in front of the officials from the Department of Finance. If we are being left to his tender mercies, then we are doomed again.

There is a myth being circulated in this country, Mr. Chairman, about the amounts which Governments borrow and their fantastic deficits. In fact, this Government and its predecessors, both Liberal and Tory, have been hypnotized by the deficit. I would hope that there is an Hon. Member in the Cabinet who can answer some questions about the deficit.

Deficits are accrued because we borrow money to pay off previous borrowings and to pay current bills. We also borrow money to invest in the future of the country. What I do not understand as an innocent prairie boy, Mr. Chairman, is that the deficit in 1945 was much higher than it is now and if you put it in 1985 dollars, the deficit at the end of the Second World War was about two or three times as high as it is now. I recall, as an innocent prairie boy, hearing the experts, the financial columnists, the Tories and the Grits all screaming about the deficit. I would like to direct some questions if, as and when the Minister of Finance, the Minister of State for Finance or one of their Parliamentary Secretaries arrive.

In the first place, if we put this money for which borrowing authority is sought into housing, into cleaning up our air and water, into reforestation and a whole host of other projects, that would not be a deficit expenditure. It would be an investment.

Mr. McDermid: We are doing that.

Mr. Benjamin: That would reduce unemployment. Is there anyone around on the government side who can tell me, Mr. Chairman, if it is not correct that if we reduce unemployment now from the 11 per cent to the 12 per cent range down to 7 per cent or 7.5 per cent, we will wipe out the deficit within three years?

There is another area I would like to touch on, and I hope the Secretary of State for External Affairs will pay attention.

Last year the federal Government paid $21 billion in interest on the national debt. Of course, the financial experts emphasized the enormity of that amount. It was at least 5 per cent of the Gross National Product. It required one-third of the Government's revenue, which amounted to $2,500 per taxpayer, to pay the interest on the national debt. That is in 1984. There is a notable oversight there. Ninety per cent of that $21 billion in interest was paid to Canadians. That is the proportion of the federal government bonds held in Canada. The average Canadian taxpayer, if you averaged out the $21 billion, received almost $2,500 in interest. So that all that happened was that we were lending money out and paying ourselves back. In fact, the Government received almost the same amount back as it paid out in interest charges on this mythical deficit.

There is another angle, Mr. Chairman, and I hope the Secretary of State for External Affairs will think about this as well. The Bank of Canada, our central bank, responsible for regulating the national money supply, held government bonds in 1984 to the tune of $17 billion. That is about 10 per cent of the total outstanding debt. The Bank of Canada is wholly owned by the federal Government and the people of Canada. At the end of each calendar year it turns over its net revenue to the Government of Canada. So in 1984, the Bank of Canada received $1.981 billion in interest on the federal bonds it held. It had an operating cost of $129 million. Therefore, the Bank of Canada returned to the Government of Canada $1,832,000,000. Thus the Government of Canada received back 93 per cent of the money it paid as bond interest to the Bank of Canada in 1984. So what is the reason for all this terror and hypnotism on the government side about the deficit?

In 1939, the federal Government paid out only $135 million on a $21 billion debt compared to the $21 billion it paid out in 1984. That is nearly 200 times more last year than in 1939. But the average Canadian lived pretty poorly in 1939. The unemployment level across the country was at 15 per cent. People were on welfare and some joined the Army in order to receive a dollar a day. If what applied then were to apply now, according to the financial exports and the Minister of Finance when he talks about his deficit, I suppose Canadians would be running around eating scraps and wearing rags. The whole mythology of the deficit is not how much the deficit is, but what the deficit is for. The fact is that in all its domestic borrowings, the Government takes back almost as much as it borrows. What it pays out in interest charges it takes back in taxes. That has always been the case and there is nothing new about it.

This might sound like sacrilege around here, but why not add about three billion bucks to this borrowing authority to be put into housing, reforestation and cleaning up our air and water? It will put people to work earning income, paying taxes, and reducing the deficit.

Mr. Dick: And increase inflation.

Mr. Benjamin: It has been done a number of times before by various and sundry Liberal and Tory Governments. They did not buy the Proposition 13 syndrome imported from California. How much of this borrowing is going to go into job creation and reducing the deficit? Not a nickel. It is all going to go off into the same vicious circle. You borrow the money from the taxpayers and collect it back in almost equal amounts. That is where the mythology is in this nonsense about deficits. One thing my friends opposite forget is that you cannot compare an individual living above his means and borrowing beyond his capacity to repay his debt with a Government which has done the same thing because the essential difference is that governments can tax people from whom they borrow the money.

Mr. de Cotret: That is what you want to do.

Mr. Benjamin: That is exactly what you are doing. You tax them to pay for the money you borrowed from them. No little storekeeper, farmer or fisherman can do that. If he runs a deficit, he has to rake it up all by himself. But Governments are different, municipal, provincial and federal. They tax the people they borrow money from and that is how they pay off the borrowings. If I, an innocent prairie boy, am wrong, I hope someone will get up and correct me. I would like to know from someone over there or from the Department of Finance whether it was correct that 90 per cent of the $21 billion in interest payments last year on our debt was paid to Canadians, and that the average Canadian bond holder got about $2,500 from the Government. In turn, the Government taxed them for slightly over $2,400 on those interest earnings. If I am not correct, I hope someone will get up and tell me so and show me so.

We all appreciate the fact that the Government needs to have revenue, and much has been said by some of my colleagues about the options available to a Government of any party, and I want to return to a matter I have raised in every budget debate since 1968. At that time, deferred corporate taxes amounted to a little under $20 billion. They now amount to around $35 billion. No other citizen, individual farmer, fisherman, small storekeeper or anyone else, can defer his taxes. Just try it and you will have Revenue Canada on your neck. But there is in excess of $35 billion in deferred corporate taxes on the books of this country, and if the Government would care to charge the bank rate or 1 per cent over prime as interest on those deferred corporate taxes, you would have about $3.5 billion to put people to work and reduce the deficit. In fact, you would be surprised at how many corporations would be rushing forward to reduce their deferred corporate taxes. You would be amazed, because they would not want to face that interest bill every year. How about that? That is not some socialist dogma. If you lend someone money, you charge him interest, pure and simple. So let us give him a reasonable break; 9 per cent interest on the deferred corporate taxes.

Mr. Chairman, the tragedy is that every year we go through a borrowing authority exercise and we get the free enterprise Governments hypnotized by the size of the deficit, but they do not tell us the whole story. They never have. They do not tell us that most of the borrowings are held by Canadians and it is Canadians who collect the interest. It is Canadians who pay back most of the interest in income taxes. They would pay back more if we had a fair tax system. Well, I would be inclined, if the Government were to come in with an amendment to the borrowing authority Bill, to put $1 billion into housing. Every city in this country has a waiting list as long as your arm for chronic care beds and rooms in senior citizens' homes. I would put $1 billion into cleaning up our air and water. You could put 200,000 young people to work there. Then another $1 billion should go into transportation and reforestation or whatever else. We did it during the war, and we ran a deficit that in 1985 dollars is three times a high as the one we have now. We only had a population of 10 million people then. So do not give me that nonsense about reducing the deficit at the expense of old age pensioners, farmers, fishermen and little storekeepers. It sure as heck is not going to bother Imperial Oil, not at all, not a nickel's worth. Who are we representing here? Make up your minds.

I think it is a travesty, Mr. Chairman, when we are talking about the financing of this country, that we do not have in attendance the Minister of Finance or the Minister of State for Finance. Neither are their Parliamentary Secretaries here.

Mr. Lanthier: Right here.

Mr. Nickerson: And only two NDP Members.

Mr. Benjamin: That has nothing to do with it. You are the guys who have the job, but when are you going to start doing it? When are you going to start showing up for debate on a Bill for $18 billion worth of borrowing? I do not think this House should sit any longer without the presence—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Chairman, I would not want the record to show any inaccuracy, nor I am sure would the Hon. Member who has just spoken. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance is here beside me. I have been sitting here for an hour and 15 minutes listening, during the latter part, to the rather exotic views of the Hon. Member on economic questions. I would not want him to leave the impression that the Government was not represented here by senior Ministers.

Mr. Benjamin: I am glad the Hon. Member joined the Secretary of State for External Affairs in the last few minutes. This debate started an hour and 15 minutes ago.

[Translation]

The Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Please, Mr. Chairman. I have been here since nine o'clock this morning and I heard the trifles of the Hon. Member on television as if I had been present. I give you my word that I have been here since this morning. So, nobody should suggest that I have come in.

• (1620)

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Chairman, we have all been around somewhere since this morning. If you have a Bill for which you are responsible, you are here for it. That applies both to government and to opposition Members. If you are not going to be here, why should the House sit? Why should the Chairman remain in the chair?

I want answers from the Parliamentary Secretary. Is it not correct that the Government of Canada paid to Canadians $1.9 billion in interest charges on borrowings and received back roughly $1.8 billion in income tax? Earnings of the Bank of Canada amounted then to $1.9 billion, and $1.8 billion of it was returned to the Government of Canada, all on government borrowings through the Bank of Canada. Is that not correct?

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: I am told that such a statement is correct in the broad sense, but not necessarily as far as the figures mentioned are concerned.

[English]

Mr. Benjamin: I said, give or take $100 million. When we are talking about $1.9 billion or $1.8 billion, is the Hon. Member agreeing that what I have just said is correct?

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I did not say that it was correct. I said that generally, large sums are granted to Canadians under the terms and conditions outlined but the accuracy of the figures is questioned by my advisers.

The Chairman: Is the House ready for the question?

The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Garneau: As you know, Bill C-51 would give borrowing authority to the Canadian Government and if it is adopted the Minister of Finance and the Progressive Conservative Government would be authorized to borrow $18.2 billion between now and the end of the current fiscal year. It is therefore an extremely important measure within a rather special context, namely the debate over deindexation of old age security pensions.

Mr. Chairman, I consider the debate quite inappropriate in the present context, when we read newspapers and particularly when we hear the Prime Minister answer questions put to him. For instance, I refer to The Globe and Mail of today, June 18, where I can read under the byline of Mr. Richard Cléroux a report from Sept-Îles whose first paragraph is rather significant:

[English]

"Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said last night that the part in Finance Minister Michael Wilson's Budget dealing with pensions for the elderly "deserves to be reviewed" ".

[Translation]

And further on, still in quotation marks, the article reports the Prime Minister as saying this:

[English]

"Mr. Mulroney described the section of the Budget that eliminates part of the protection against inflation for pensioners as troubling".

So said the Prime Minister of the country, Mr. Chairman, and his Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has just tabled a Budget in which he proposes partial deindexation of old age security pensions beginning January 1, 1986. All Members who sit in this House must be rather embarrassed to read remarks such as those quoted in today's Globe and Mail.

Where the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) indicated that the Budget of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) "deserves to be reviewed", and further on, where he used the word "troubling" in referring to the section of the Budget dealing with partial deindexation of Old Age Security pensions, Mr. Chairman, we are entitled to ask ourselves today whether this is not just a big public relations scenario to prepare the public for a political about-face. And if that is the case, I wish the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) would advise this House immediately so that we can stop talking about a question that could be settled without debate. But if that is not the Government's intention, and there is no indication from the Government benches that what the Prime Minister said yesterday in Sept-Îles is to be taken seriously, we will have to continue this debate, because there is no other way for the Official Opposition to bring to the attention of the Government benches and public opinion the fact that we are in total disagreement with this political decision. Mr. Chairman, a Budget is an expression of certain choices. When a Minister of Finance starts preparing his Budget, he has a series of options. And this afternoon when I heard the Minister of Finance informing the House, with dramatic emphasis, that he could not say right away whether the Government was going to maintain full indexation because the financial situation was so terrible, because they had to reduce the deficit, because of the terrible legacy they were left by the Liberals—

Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Finance had a choice. He had options. He had the option of maintaining full indexation of Old Age Security pensions, and in 1985-86, according to the figures we were given, that would cost him $15 million more, which is not particularly earthshaking as the Parliamentary Secretary would agree, and in 1986-87 it would cost $250 million.

Mr. Chairman, so everyone will understand that the Minister of Finance had an alternative, and his officials here facing his Parliamentary Secretary know as well as I do that he had an option: the option of deciding where he was going to put his money. Take the capital gains tax exemption, for instance. This was an option the Minister of Finance had, and he decided to forego $300 million in tax revenue in 1985-86, by granting this exemption to the wealthy in our society.

If we take the $300 million and add to that another option the Minister had ad which he exercised, namely, to forego $240 million in 1985-86 by removing the Oil Export Charge, and if we add that amount to the previous amount, we get a total of $540 million.

It seems Old Age Security pensions cost the Government $8.5 billion, and 3 per cent of $8.5 billion for one-third of the year adds up to approximately the same figure. So the Minister of Finance—

An Hon. Member: That is where the money went!

Mr. Garneau: The Minister of Finance had an option, and I remember what the Prime Minister said in that televised debate: "Sir, you had an option." That is what the present Prime Minister told the former Prime Minister. I say to the Prime Minister today: "Sir, you had an option, and you decided to give the money to the rich and take it away from some of the elderly of this country."

You had an option and you exercised that option. And do not tell the House today that by exercising that option, by giving more money in the form of tax exemptions to the oil multinationals, and tax exemptions on capital gains, do not tell the House that now that you have exercised that option, you have no money left for the elderly. There can be no double standard, and I say to the Minister of Finance: "Sir, you had an option. You had an option." Basically, Mr. Chairman, when we analyze the issue of deindexing pensions for senior citizens, we find that it is all a matter of budgetary options. What I want to do in the next few minutes is to analyse the economic philosophy and general orientation of the Budget.

I should immediately point out that, when I look at this Bill asking for a borrowing authority of $18 billion, which is directly related to the budgetary options, I am not concerned only with the deindexing, or partial deindexing of old age security pensions and family allowances. I disagree with the basic philosophy behind this Bill, with the choices made by this Government and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). The figures which I made public and which have yet to be questioned show that, contrary to what the Prime Minister said before the Budget was brought down and contrary to what the Minister of Finance said during his speech, the Budget is not fair and equitable to the taxpayers. For my part, I would say, and I shall try to prove it, that this Budget is unfair and inequitable to the middle income group in our society which is the group most affected. In addition, the borrowings authorized by this Bill will affect this group by giving them a heavier tax burden.

In accordance with its philosophy, the Government talks a lot about the private sector. The Government wants the private sector to invest and to create jobs, and at the same time, by massive tax increases, it reduces the purchasing power of those who make up the market for Canadian businesses. These massive tax increases made Mr. Reynold of the Wall Street Journal say that the Government wanted to tax the economy to prosperity.

[English]

The Government wants to tax the economy to prosperity.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, I have prepared a few government budgets in my life time, I have read some others, I have had an opportunity as severale other Members in this House to monitor the economic situation in Canada and other provinces, but it is the first time I see any government maintain it has made the right choice when deciding to promote economic growth by way of massive tax increases. This is the first time this would be done.

Those additional taxes which the Government does not like to be told about, that shower of taxes, will take $12 billion worth of purchasing power away from middle-income Canadians in 1990-91 alone. By the end of this decade, with those tax increases imposed on middle-income groups, not to mention other sectors, but looking only at middle-income groups, those tax increases combined with the de-indexing of old age pensions and family allowances will result in the most significant part of our society which represents the market box, our businesses, being rabbed of $37 billion in purchasing power. In terms of dollars, this is twice as much as the Bill now before us.

The general thrust of the budget, the general thrust of the policy behind the budget is basically wrong is my view. De-indexing old age pensions is not the only thing that is unfair and unjust—the whole budget thrust is slashing so many billions of dollars, $37 billion in purchasing power from middle-income groups and senior citizens, this Government is reducing the ability of those consumers to buy goods and services from Canadian businesses.

On the one hand, the Government is reducing purchasing power, our businesses' market, and on the other hand it is asking those same businesses to create jobs. Moreover, the Government has taken a most dangerous road by putting all its eggs in two main baskets, the first being energy, especially oil energy, and the second being Canadian exports to the United States. From the first basket, oil corporations will be getting a tax break that will total $8.5 billion by the end of the decade.

And I say to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier): This is a clear-cut and specific example of a choice. The Minister of Finance had a choice, he had two or three options. He chose to give money to the oil multinationals. Thereafter he should not be telling us he has no more money for senior citizens because the deficit must be reduced. He should tell us candidly, honestly that they had a choice to make and they chose one area rather than the other. So he had a choice, and his option means $8.5 billion in tax benefits to oil multinationals. Even considering that eventually certain grants will not be allowed, that is a net cost of between $4.5 and $5 billion in revenue lost to the multinationals by the end of the decade. They are hoping that those multinational corporations will invest, and that this will create jobs in Canada. So much for the first level, the second being exports.

Because the purchasing power of the Canadian people is being considerably eroded, we have to rely on our exports as a means to support our economy. If I am coming back to the subject of the oil companies, it is because their decision whether or not to invest will be determined by the extent of the market as well as the prices. Those, as it is well known, are dictated by OPEC, the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries. As to the market, it will be influenced by the value of the Canadian dollar and the over all growth of the Canadian economy. Well, these variables are quite uncertain, and insisting on putting all our eggs in the same basket would prove very risky indeed for the future of our economy and especially for our young people who are looking for jobs.

Mr. Chairman, recently I read in Business Week an analysis which had been prepared as the result of consultations with many experts and which indicated that the price of oil could go down as low as $20 a barrel. Norway has already lowered its price to $26 a barrel, and OPEC has decided to hold its July meeting in June to deal with this emergency situation and to take remedial action in an effort to prevent an excessive drop in price. When I see the Government of Canada investing so much money in one single industry and being forced to burden Canadian taxpayers with such a heavy tax load to pay for the tax breaks given to multinational companies, I very seriously question the crucial choice it has made in this area, because I am not sure at all that it will yield the dividends so often mentioned by hon. members on the Government side.

In another basket are our exports: 75 per cent of our exports are directed towards the United States. Already, Mr. Chairman, the American Congress takes a critical view at foreign exports. Figures for the first three or four months indicate a trade deficit of $11.5 billion. For April, and since the beginning of the year, the trade deficit has reached $45 billion.

Mr. Chairman, when we consider a number of products, we realie how unsound was the choice made by the Minister of Finance. As far as steel, timber, hogs, beef and sugar are concerned—we will certainly have a potato war later on this year—we can expect that as long as the value of the U.S. dollar remain high, very strong lobbies in the Congress will pressure the American administration into imposing quotas. That is why I say that pushing our exports so overwhelmingly is quite a risky proposition and I submit that making this choice so aggressively that the government had to cut the Canadian people's purchasing power is a huge mistake in terms of economic direction.

You are aware that members on the Government side love to blame the Liberals for the deficit. However, the turning point of this deficit was the 1981-82 crisis, and it occurred not only in Canada, but also in the United States and in most Western countries. When I have discussions with Tory members not only on party matters but also on economic policy, I often ask them: What would you have done at the time to deal with the crisis? Would you have reduced unemployment insurance payments to avoid increasing the deficit? Would you have refused to implement job creation programs during the winter and to provide employment for students? Would you have been content to sit still while people lost their jobs without giving them any assistance? I think that to ask this question is also to answer it. I note that, with a real growth of 4.7 per cent in the Gross National Product, the Conservative Government has maintained the Winter Works program as well as the summer employment program for students. We are witnessing a growth in the Gross National Product. What would you have done during the depression? Would you have said: We have nothing to give; we have to reduce the deficit. I believe that this is unrealistic and this is the cause of our present problem.

As a matter of fact, with a Gross National Product of between $350 billion and $400 billion, I do not think that the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) found a deficit of $7 billion or $8 billion completely unreasonable or disastrous. If that is what he thinks today, Mr. Chairman, if the President of the Treasury Board finds a deficit of $11 billion disastrous, I would like to ask him how come, after being in power since September 4 and saying all those things about it, his Government has come out with a Budget of $105 billion, which represents a larger increase than the increase in the consumer price index. This is all he could do for a Party which has based its whole political ideology on reducing the deficit. They do not even have the courage the limit the increase in expenditures to the increase in the cost of living.

Mr. Chairman, I can see that the time allotted to me has nearly expired, but I understand that our rules will allow me to come back to this matter later on and I shall continue my comments for the information of the President of the Treasury Board.

[Translation]

Mr. Tardif: Mr. Chairman, I am also very pleased to take part in this debate. With your permission, I would like to tell this House that before getting into politics, I had the honour of serving as president of a community centre for about 10 years. Thanks to this experience, I have been able to learn about some of the concerns of our senior citizens and to understand them. I think that we would be burying our heads in the sand if we failed to recognize that most of our senior citizens, who are now retired, are from very large families or have many children themselves. Contrary to the present generation and young people today, they have unfortunately not enjoyed the same benefits from society as we have throughout the years. They are people who, in many cases, earned $10, $12, $15 a week and who, with such miserable and dreadful salaries, did not have the same opportunities as our young people today who are covered by all kinds of insurance. Fathers and mothers who then had the bad luck to have sick children, and as I said, families were much larger in those days, had to assume those responsibilities, pay those bills, and were often in debt for ten years or more because of the illness of a couple of children.

They are also people who have experienced something that, of course, we did not know, that is the 1929 depression. Those people have also gone through two major conflicts and have suffered numerous hardships and problems during their lifetime. I think that today, in 1985, those people have reached retirement age and God knows that it is a well-deserved retirement. If anyone ever deserved a happy retirement, it is our senior citizens of 65 and over. They are the ones who, after facing so many hardships and problems, have become apprehensive and suffer from some kind of trauma, and unfortunately those people are more often than not traumatized if their medicine is changed by a simple letter. In a word, they are easily traumatized. They have to plan and prepare their budget months in advance in order to buy not treats but the necessities of life. They realize that the economic situation in our country is difficult and painful. They understand that. But they are not ready to accept sole responsibility. Those people do not agree with the kind of policy often stated since the beginning of this debate, a policy stated by the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) when she said last week: "Our senior citizens can make a sacrifice! After all, they are only asked to give up as little as $1 per day. A dollar a day is not much when one earns $30,000, $35,000, $40,000 or $45,000 per year. It is a trifling sum. However, when $1 a day represents a purchase planned for three, four, five or six months, it is a huge sum. And I think that senior citizens are badly underrated when—

The Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I question the figure just mentioned. I would have liked the Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) to quote the Parliamentary Secretary verbatim instead of quoting a figure. I question the figure he quoted.

The Chairman: I think this is a point of debate but, unfortunately, not a point of order. The Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif).

Mr. Tardif: For the Hon. Member's information, I suggest he read Hansard where the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) states, after talking to senior citizens, that most, if not all, had told her they were quite willing to give up what she estimated would be a dollar a day. I am sorry but that is not the right way to look at this problem, because a dollar a day means a lot more to a person who has to live on what he or she gets from the State than it does to someone who is still on the labour market.

Last week, Mr. Chairman, my colleagues, that is, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) and the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre), and I had the privilege of attending a meeting organized on the spur of the moment, where senior citizens were asked to come and express their views and their reactions to what the Conservative Government was proposing to do. People came to see us from all over, from the ridings of Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead, Brome-Missisquoi, Sherbrooke, from my own riding and from Shefford. In some cases, these people travelled 75 or 80 miles to come give us their comments, which they did quite spontaneously. In the circumstances, and I am sorry to have to say so, it is very significant, since the elderly are usually quite passive and more inclined to accept a situation. It really takes something very serious to make them react, and in this case over 200 people came to see us to talk about all sorts of things such as: The younger generation today can thank us for all the advantages and prosperity they have and they should remember that we helped to build the Canada they have today.

There were people who told us: Well, this is the month of June and I have already started to save enough to buy myself a dress for Christmas. Some senior citizens told us they had been saving for two months to buy themselves a radio. Others were saving to be able to pay for cablevision. Well, there was a whole series of statements like that in which people made the point that they had to save for months to pay for what we consider to be the basics of our daily lives. They have to save for months to pay for things that to me are absolutely essential, things we take for granted.

Senior citizens told us they would be very hard-pressed to meet the increasing number of obligations society imposes on them.

In spite of all that, Mr. Chairman, the elderly realize the Government has a deficit, that it has commitments and that it wants to create jobs. They realize all that. What they do not understand, however, and I think they have a perfect right not to understand, is when they are asked to make a small sacrifice after the Government decides to change the military's uniforms and increase our arm contingents in Europe, the oil companies get huge exemptions, and the capital gains tax is removed. Well, Mr. Chairman, you will agree that it does not take a Ph.D. or a seasoned politician to understand that there is a double standard here and that the injustice is absolutely flagrant. And the elderly are certainly not prepared to make a sacrifice and tighten their belts in that case, as the Government would have them do.

● (1650)

There is another aspect I think is important and which I think demonstrates the utter meanness of this proposal. Just imagine, someone who is let us say 75 years old and who is told: Listen, tighten your belt, in a few years everything will be o.k. and you will get full indexation. Just imagine, this person is 75. In a few years, that person may no longer be alive, after spending the last two or three or four years of his or her life in a terrible state of mind, paralyzed at the thought of not being able to pay for his or her very basic needs, not luxuries but basics to which they are certainly entitled because these people certainly have deserved to have a decent life.

In concluding, I may say that the riding I have represented since 1979 has been plagued by many, many problems.

I represent the riding where the major city is Asbestos and no one can talk about Asbestos without thinking about a significant slowdown in mining, particularly asbestos mining. There was a time when the company had 3,000 people on the payroll, but barely 800 are still there now.

I also represent the riding which has been and still is the victim of problems inherent in today's footwear markets. I also represent the riding where many pork producers live. I also represent the riding which experienced a rather serious problem not so very long ago, as Members may recall, the possible shutdown of Domtar operations. As you may have noted there are quite a few problems in my riding but, over the past six years, notwithstanding all those problems, obstacles and economic woes, I have to say that never did a single issue raise such interest in my riding. Never did such a problem prompt so many people to come to my office and tell me: It is unacceptable, it does not make sense, do something about the terrible measure the Government wants to take.

All those problems no matter how crucial never generated as much energy and efforts as people are showing and making in connection with the old age security pensions deindexation.

In conclusion, it seems to me that if we were to stop and consider the issue for a moment, as my colleagues so eloquently suggested, we could identify, image or invent a mechanism which would enable the Government to look elsewhere for the money it wants to take away from the elderly, to get the money from wealthy and well-to-do people so as to protect senior citizens and give them the security they so richly deserve, senior citizens who are entitled to get what appears to me under the circumstances to be the vital minimum, something which is basic and quite essential.

[English]

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak briefly to this amendment to the borrowing Bill that was moved this morning. We are now discussing the Government's budgetary measures and its ability to administer the funds that it is asking the House to give it.

The people of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell are not at all satisfied with the way the Government is managing the funds given to Parliament. The western region of the riding that I represent lies near the National Capital of our country and, therefore, a large number of federal public servants live there. During the last election campaign, many promises were made by government Members. In this document to which I have referred on several occasions, I have outlined 338 promises which had been made to the people of Canada and many of them to the people of the National Capital area, the people who work for the Government.

We saw in the recent Budget cut-backs in federal employment. I do not seem to recall during the last election campaign hearing Conservative Members stating, "Vote for us and you will be fired". I do not recall the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton, the Hon. Member for Ottawa West and other Hon. Members who represent the National Capital Region ever having stood up to the Minister of Finance, the Minister of State for Finance or the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Finance to say that that is not right and that the people of the ridings that they represent did not vote for those measures. They voted for a specific group of promises which were made. However, the Government is not delivering. Why is it that Conservative Members who have ridings in the National Capital Region are not speaking on behalf of the people who voted for them in the last election?

• (1700)

As we move farther away toward the eastern end of the National Capital Region, in the constituency which I represent, the standard of living decreases considerably. There is higher unemployment, which is not uncommon in other constituencies, and the people have very little money to spare. Those people have to live with a Government which has increased the price of gasoline and decreased the purchasing power of senior citizens' pensions. At the same time, the Government is squandering money on all kinds of other things, for itself, its friends and its relatives.

There is a capital gains exemption which a parliamentary committee had requested for the farmers of the country. The Government has now extended that exemption to people who own yachts and condominiums in Florida. Why is it that the Government has enough money to give a break to the people who own a condominium in Florida, when it has no money to assist the senior citizens?

The priorities of the Government are wrong. The people of my riding do not agree with the measures which this Government has taken. I am sure the majority of people in every riding of the country feel the same way. If Conservative Members were not muzzled, they would want to speak on this issue. That is okay. Those Members cannot stand and speak on the issue, so opposition Members will have to repeat it more often. We will do it on their behalf. Perhaps we could call them proxy speeches.

The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition stated on Budget night:

> It is a Budget of broken promises. It breaks the trust Mr. Mulroney said he was going to have with the Canadian people. It hits the average Canadian very hard.
> It doesn't come right out and hit him, it does it in a sneaky and gutless way. The Budget lacks courage.
> A Budget is not just a bunch of numbers. A Budget has to do with people and jobs, with human careers and with meaningful life.

When I look at the priorities of the Government, I can easily understand why Disraeli once said that a Tory Government was organized hypocrisy. The Government made many promises to the people of the country and it has failed to deliver on those promises.

I would like to quote the first promise which was made to senior citizens by the Conservative Party during the last election campaign. It reads:

> Reinstate complete indexing of Old Age Pensions to the actual cost of living, as of January 1st, 1985.

That was a specific promise which was made by the Leader of the Conservative Party of Canada last August. The Prime Minister is now breaking that solemn promise. He is breaking that promise along with hundreds of other promises. The Government has no money for senior citizens, yet it has money to squander on other measures.

The debate today is about fairness. That is the issue about which we are talking. The Government wants to reduce the pensions of our seniors by 3 per cent. Opposition Members are saying that if that is the case, the Government can cut its expenditures by 3 per cent. We know that the people of Canada who are receiving Old Age Security in the amount of $276.34 a month cannot afford to give up any part of that cheque.

The Government is telling us that it will create jobs. As interesting as that may be, what is the policy? Is it a policy which tells our senior citizens to go out and work? If not, why are we asking senior citizens to contribute toward job creation? Most grandparents whom I know are beyond age 65 or age 70. They are not looking for jobs. Most of them are unable to work. As a society, we accepted long ago that those people should receive their pension and that the pension should be universal. That universality should not be destroyed at the rate of 3 per cent a year by the Conservative Government.

Why does the Government want the money? Yesterday I spoke about some of the squandering which is going on, the abuses and the appointments of relatives and friends. Today we discovered, through the media, that the secretary of State for External Affairs has published a book. The book is entitled: The Right Honourable Brian Mulroney, Canada's eighteenth Prime Minister. It is rather unusual that the book was printed by the Secretary of State for External Affairs, for reasons which we all know. The book has many pictures of the Prime Minister. I am sure that hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on it. In order to restore every senior citizen's pension in my riding, it would cost only $60,000 for one year. The Government should scrap the book, take the funds and give back the pensions to the senior citizens. I would like to quote from the book. It reads:

> The work of raising living standards, creating opportunity and recognizing the equality of human beings is one to which we are committed—

The Prime Minister said that. What happened to the Prime Minister who was committed to equality? This book was written very recently. The ink is probably still wet. The same Prime Minister and his Minister of Finance, who were committed to equality and improving the standards of human beings, are now reducing the pensions of seniors. On page 2 of the book there is a lovely picture of the Prime Minister in his office. On the third page, the Prime Minister is quoted as saying:

> There is no obligation more compelling, no duty more irresistible in Canada and around the world than to ensure that our minorities, linguistic and otherwise, live at all times in conditions of fairness and justice.

● (1710)

Of course, we know that that was seconded by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Assiniboine, the whole view about linguistic minorities and otherwise.

This document talks about equality. It talks about protecting people. However, this Government acts in a completely opposite way. There are pages and pages in this document about money which was spent by the taxpayers of Canada to pay for the extravagance of this Government. The Government says we should give it some money. My constituents think otherwise, Mr. Chairman.

I tabled in this House yesterday a petition signed by many people from my riding. I have another petition here which I will be introducing in the House tomorrow. This petition was signed by the senior citizens of L'Orignal, Ontario. These people, like many other people across this country, object to the cut in the purchasing power of their Old Age Security cheque which the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister want to perpetrate on them. The Minister of National Health and Welfare has said in this House that no one wants to cut anything.

What the Minister of National Health and Welfare is doing in this House and elsewhere is trying to convince the people that the Government is not cutting their cheque. He is saying that the cheque will not be less, it is just going to be increased less. In other words, if the cost of living increases by 5 per cent, the pension cheque will be increased by 2 per cent.

I see the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance sitting across from me and I know that he will want to set the record straight, so let me do it for him, Mr. Chairman. I am sure he will agree with me, being an economist, that if inflation increases by 5 per cent and the pension cheque is only increased by 2 per cent, no matter how you cut it, the purchasing power of that cheque is decreased. There is no other way of looking at it. For the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Minister of Finance to try to somehow get the senior citizens to believe that this is not so is not being perfectly honest. They know that our senior citizens know better. They know that if the cost of living increases by 5 per cent and their cheque is increased by 2 per cent, then a step backward of 3 per cent has been taken. That is easy for senior citizens to understand and just maybe this Government should give our senior citizens a little bit more credit. They have been around far longer than myself, the Minister and his Parliamentary Secretary.

Of course, our senior citizens are quite aware of what is going on and that is why they are protesting this measure so vehemently. The Minister of Finance and others are saying that the Opposition Parties are prompting the senior citizens of this country to rebel agains this budgetary measure. I ask you again, Mr. Chairman, is the Government giving the credit due to our senior citizens when it thinks that anyone can stand anywhere and say anything and that the senior citizens will believe it? Is that all the credit and respect the Government has for the seniors of this country? It seems so, Mr. Chairman.

This Government refuses to believe that if the senior citizens are asking for something, it is a legitimate request. The Government refuses to believe it. It thinks it is the fault of the Opposition, but it is not the Opposition who wrote that Budget. It was the Conservative Government and those Hon. Members opposite who right now are hiding their heads in shame over this Budget. I don't blame the Members of the Government I see seated in the back rows on the Government side, almost with tears in their eyes over this Budget. If I were a Tory right now, I would be embarrassed as well. Heaven forbid that would ever happen, Mr. Chairman, and I am sure it won't. It is said that happiness is never having to say you're Tory, and I intend to remain happy.

Mr. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): You were born to be in Opposition.

Mr. Boudria: The Hon. Member opposite says that I was born to be in Opposition. The Tories accused the previous Government of being arrogant when it was in power. Their Government, after nine months, has lost total respect for democracy and for this House when that Member makes statements like that. If that Member does not even know that one gets to be in Opposition by a situation which happens in other ridings other than one's own, then he has failed to understand how this Parliament works. I was not elected to be in Opposition. I was not elected to be in Government. I was elected to represent the people of my riding, and that is what I am doing in this House. I am speaking on their behalf and perhaps the Hon. Member opposite who just made that remark should take the same initiative. He should rise and put his money where his mouth is and say whether he thinks the people of his riding are in favour of that Budget or against it.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, then and only then will the electors of his riding know and understand the position of the Hon. Member opposite.

Mr. Chairman, I am waiting impatiently to listen to the speeches and comments of all Conservative Members of the House. I am afraid however there will not be many because we know they are ashamed of their Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who produced such a terrible Budget.

Mr. Robichaud: Mr. Chairman, I suggest all those speeches are very interesting, but I feel sad when I listen to them. What is basic to all those speeches is the will to stop the Government for a few moments, perhaps a few hours, while trying at the same time to make Government Members realize the seriousness of what they are doing about de-indexation.

This Government's intention to limit the indexing of Old Age Security pensions is irresponsible for all practical purposes. Admittedly, Mr. Chairman, a new government, an inexperienced government can make mistakes. But that kind of mistake is unforgivable. So much so that senior citizens across the land are launching campaigns against a Government that should be defending them, in order to have it back down.

In my own Province of New Brunswick, the movement is gathering speed. The New Brunswick Federation of Senior Citizens last week sent a very clear message to the Progressive Conservative Government. In a press release issued on behalf of its 30,000 members, the Chairperson of the Federation, Mrs. Edna Bourque, stated that recent changes announced by the Federal Minister of Finance are seriously disturbing the peaceful life and severely affecting the quality of life of senior citizens.

Mr. Chairman, the New Brunswick Federation of Senior Citizens is a very important association. As I said, it has a membership of 30,000, and speaks for 265 senior citizens' clubs who have joined the Federation to date. In other words, this Federation is representative of all senior citizens in the Province of New Brunswick.

There is no doubt that the members of the Federation feel that this Government's proposal is cruel, insensitive, and even immoral as it was said. If this Government would listen or had listened to what senior citizens in Canada had to say, certainly it would be ashamed of ever having proposed to de-index old age pensions. Senior citizens have come to me, saying the Government had no right to ask senior citizens to make sacrifices. I was told: "Who do they think they are to decide that senior citizens must make sacrifices?" Mr. Chairman, history tells us that the people being asked once again to make sacrifices are the very same people who have lived through the Great Depression of the late 20's and early 30's. They have also been through World War II. When I think of all the sacrifices which those people have had to make, I do not feel we should or can force them to live through more years of poverty, because a very large number of our senior citizens already live below the poverty line. In New Brunswick, to be more specific, more than 73 per cent of our senior citizens live below the poverty line. How can we, how can a Government dare reduce the income of people who already do not have enough? In terms of dollars, de-indexing old age pensions means that within five years, by 1990, a person living alone will lose something like 15 times $100, and of course married couples will lose twice as much. Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not think that our elders who worked stubbornly to build this country deserve to get so little consideration from their own Government, a Government they would have preferred to trust but in which they can have no confidence of any kind any more. Senior citizens now realize that they have been literally betrayed by the Progressive Conservative Government. That Government was committed to fully index old age pensions to the cost of living effective January 1st, 1985. The Government also made the commitment that no saving from program cuts would be used to reduce the deficit. That was the commitment this Government made to all Canadians. But with their plans to limit old age pension indexing, Canadians have realized that this Government has taken them for a ride, that it did not tell the truth. They have realized that this Government has no concern for us Canadians, especially senior citizens.

• (1720)

Mr. Chairman, this simply cannot be allowed to go on unchallenged. We cannot accept that a government should make fun of us and of Canadians in such a way. Our elders are very much aware of this Government's scheme, they knew they were betrayed. In an interview with the Times-Transcript in Moncton, the Chairperson of the Federation of Senior Citizens has stated, and I quote:

[English]

The organization will start making waves from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean as it launches a campaign against a move which broke sacred trusts and sacred promises. We draw the line at sacred promises as internal peace and tranquility are very important at our age. We cannot understand how a political party could dare do such a thing.

[Translation]

What is worse, Mr. Chairman, how can the Minister of Finance and the government claim that our senior citizens are fully backing their proposal when in New Brunswick alone, 76,000 of them are against it. In fact, they object so strongly to the Government's proposal that they are ready to start a campaign against it.

Therefore it is wrong to claim that our senior citizens are in favour of such a change. Over the past weekend, Mr. Chairman, all hon. members representing New Brunswick ridings were invited to attend a meeting. I must say that all those who showed up were against the measures which the Government is contemplating. It goes without saying, therefore, that nobody in New Brunswick is in favour of this proposal.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I must confess that I am somewhat perplexed when I see what is going on. To me no one can tamper with the indexing of Old Age Security Pensions. That is something Hon. Members opposite know as well as I do. Yet, I wonder why they took a chance with a proposal which they know would prove extremely unpopular with the Canadian people? Tell me why?

I could suggest a somewhat simple and obvious answer. One might be inclined to believe that the Government was setting a trap for us and the Canadian people in general. And we almost fell into that trap. On May 23rd, the Minister of Finance announced a series of unacceptable measures. One of the most unfair was of course the proposed desindexing of Old Age Security pensions. It was not long before people reacted, and rightly so. But while we are debating an issue on which the Government will have no choice but to back down, this session of Parliament is coming to an end, something for which the Government is delighted, because all the other pieces of legislation which are dangerous for us as Canadians and for our economy, will be quickly passed without any time left to discuss them.

In New Brunswick, beside the pension problem, there is a $100 million cut in regional development, a $75 million cut at least in the transport sector which for us is of the utmost importance. Also a $25 million cut in the area of fisheries. Gas price increase will result in additional costs for all our small and medium sized businesses.

The reduction in provincial transfer payment, the freeze of unemployment insurance benefits, the imposition of a surtax, all these measures are just as important and just as unacceptable as the deindexing of pensions.

Mr. Chairman, judging from the breadth and scope of the debate on old age security pensions, it would seem that the Progressive Conservative Government will be busy this summer and will have to beg forgiveness from the Canadian public for having had the audacity to propose policies which go against the interests of Canadian citizens. The pension issue shows that the Canadian people know what they want, and what they want Mr. Chairman, is to have fair and equitable policies.

[English]

Mr. Manly: Mr. Chairman, I welcome this opportunity to make a few comments on the $18.2 billion borrowing authority requested by the Government. We have not received any satisfactory answers about what use will be made of this money.

At the same time that the Government is asking for $18.2 billion, it is coming forward with some very repressive measures. It is implementing cut-backs to senior citizens while it continues the pattern of Government waste. Cabinet Ministers are still using the private government jets to go to different parts of the country when they could use Air Canada.

It is reported in the newspaper that the Government will distribute a glossy External Affairs brochure featuring the Prime Minister in 18 pages of colour photography. The presidential style of the Prime Minister, the patronage appointments and this kind of Government waste contrasts rather sadly with the shabby way in which it is treating the senior citizens of this country. The mean spirited approach of the Government contrasts to some of the genuine improvements previous Parliaments have made to the living conditions of the seniors.

The Government's proposed 3 per cent cut-back in indexing of the Old Age Security program means that next year seniors will be receiving $100 less than they should have received if that indexing had continued. By 1990 they will have lost some $1,500 if deindexing continues.

A debate on this subject is taking place within the Conservative Party. Perhaps it is best typified by my friend, the Hon. Member for Victoria, who is a representative of many seniors in that community. He has had the courage to speak up within his Party and say that he believes that what the Government is doing is wrong. I presume that he does this from a convergence of two factors. First, he naturally is a man of compassion who can see what this measure will do to his constituents. Second, he is a man of reasonable intelligence who can read the political writing on the wall. The combination of these two factors, compassion and the ability to see what is happening politically, lead him to stand up and say that this is a proposal that is absolutely contrary to the wishes and best interests of his constituents and indeed all of Canada.

There is a saying in the scriptures that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Perhaps Members opposite should begin to realize that a healthy respect for the wishes and views of the electorate might be the beginning of political wisdom.

It has only recently become clear that Members such as the Member for Victoria have lost this debate. It seems that the Minister of Finance is taking a hardened position and will not rescind the unpopular and regressive proposal to partially deindex Old Age Security. There might be a possibility of double indexing the Guaranteed Income Supplement. The Conservatives might try to pretend that this will solve the situation, but that is not the case. It may help those who are most adversely impacted at the very bottom of the scale—a great many Canadians are living in poverty—but it will not help those who are just above the poverty line and do not receive the Guaranteed Income Supplement. They have planned for their retirement, perhaps put some money aside and have another pension income to keep them slightly above that Guaranteed Income Supplement. The Government is mistaken if it believes it can solve this problem and get out of its political dilemma while retaining the cut-backs to the Old Age Security. Those Canadians who are just above receiving the Guaranteed Income Supplement will not be assisted and will be pushed further into poverty.

Our Party is making the case very strongly that the Government should not take a half step in retreat but should do the honourable thing, recognize that it has made a mistake and back right off. I am reminded of a song about Big Muddy. An American platoon sergeant who was leading his platoon down a path suddenly found himself in the middle of a swamp. Rather than having the intelligence to turn around, as the song depicts the historical example, "The big fool just kept right on marching". Similarly, rather than marching the Canadian people deeper into big muddy, the Conservative Government should have enough intelligence to recognize that it is taking us deeper into the swamp and it is time to turn around.

During last summer's campaign, the Prime Minister recognized and promised indexation of Old Age Security. The Minister of National Health and Welfare recognized that as a necessity last January. He said there was no need to make any alterations to our Old Age Security provision.

The Prime Minister, the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Minister of Finance have given different explanations for this measure. First, they came up with the rather preposterous suggestion that seniors themselves favoured this move. They said that seniors recognized that there was a need for some sacrifice in order to cut the deficit and the country moving again and they were rushing forward in support of this budgetary measure. Of course, when the Government was challenged to name one organization of senior citizens who supported this move, it was unable to do so.

The fact is that seniors from one end of Canada to the other are solidly opposed to this proposal, with good reason. It is doing them damage. It is undercutting their standard of living. When the Minister of Finance saw that this explanation would not be accepted, he made the statement that the Government had no option because it had to reduce the deficit and find funds to create jobs. He said that the only way they could do that was to cut back on the Old Age Security to senior citizens.

• (1740)

Mr. Malone: Where would you cut?

Mr. Manly: The New Democratic Party gave five options. We indicated that there was not only one area but other areas from which the Government could raise revenues and cut the deficit. We suggested, for example, that the Government could begin to charge interest on some of the deferred taxes.

Mr. Malone: At what rate?

Mr. Manly: We will be glad to hear from the Hon. Member later on if he wants to speak on Bill C-51. I have not heard too many Conservatives speaking on it. They seem to feel a need to heckle, but they have not been willing to rise and speak. They are all a little microphone shy when it comes to standing and defending the Minister of Finance and his proposals.

We also suggested that there could be a minimum tax levied on the rich. Instead of waiting until 1986, the Government could have brought it in now, as was promised last year. The Government could have eliminated the capital gains exemption, or at least tightened it up. This will allow some people to get away with $125,000 in taxes which they might have otherwise paid. In fact, the Government could have cancelled the windfalls to some of the oil companies.

Mr. Malone: What windfalls?

Mr. Manly: There are many areas in which the Government could have taken action to reduce the deficit. Instead, it is prepared to take 3 per cent from Old Age Security recipients next year. I do not think that is the way the Government should be operating if it is interested in justice, as it said it was before it was elected.

Today we heard the Hon. Minister of Finance say that the Government requires a growing percentage of its budget to make interest payments on the deficit. The Government emphasizes that it does not have any options, but we want to emphasize that it has options.

We seem to have returned to a situation which existed in some rather primitive economies—when there was trouble they looked for human sacrifices. For examples, people were buried under London Bridge, and our senior citizens will be buried under the fiscal policy of the Government. They will be sacrificed for the Government's fiscal needs, as it sees them.

Rather than taking a realistic look at the total economy, seeing what needs to be done and what action it could take that would result in justice for everyone, the Government singled out senior citizens as a group which it thought would quietly and passively accept cuts. Indeed, the Government has announced that seniors were in favour of it.

I should like to read a letter from one of my constituents which was directed to the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare. We have heard Hon. Members refer to very similar letters today. This letter is not an untypical one. I am sure Hon. Members on all sides of the House have been receiving such letters, although I have not heard any Conservatives reading from such letters, or even reading from letters expressing the opposite point of view. They have been very quiet. The letter reads:

Dear Sir:

My wife and I watched and listened (CBC The Journal), June 5, 1985) to your response to the criticism being levelled at you and the PC Government for your inconsiderate, ill-conceived action regarding pension indexing for old age pensioners.

You are apparently assured that you have the support of the majority of the old age pensioners? Then, Sir, you are either naive or you have been grossly misled. Are we to sit back idly and watch our standard of living decline year by year? Do you really believe in the welfare of the elderly? Your actions clearly suggest otherwise!

Please allow me to quote some examples of how our standard of living is being steadily eroded. We will quote personally.

A number of areas were outlined in which senior citizens are facing very difficult situations because of increased costs. I should like to list them. Income tax in British Columbia is up 8 per cent in 1985 to raise funds to replace extra billing on medicare. The letter indicates:

Please note we are still being extra billed. We pay twice. This wiped out our supplementary allowance.

British Columbia medical premiums were $204 in 1981 and are up almost 100 per cent to $384 in 1985. The British Columbia hydro rate is up from $40 monthly in 1982 to $53 monthly in 1985. The British Columbia telephone rate is up 4 per cent, as of May, 1985, in addition to the 6 per cent raise in 1984. Property taxes are up $73 for 1985.

Mr. Malone: Who increased those?

Mr. Manly: The letter continues:

Then of course you can consider food costs which continue to rise.

I heard the Hon. Member ask who was responsible for raising property taxes. I presume they were raised by the municipalities. The point being made in this letter is that all costs are rising and senior citizens are having a difficult time making ends meet with the present pension system and with continuing inflation. A cut in the indexation of the OAS is cruel and will make it even more difficult for them. In conclusion the letter reads:

Your present indexing fails to keep abreast of costs. Should you remove it? You do not require us to describe the hardship you are prepared to inflict upon seniors.

We suggest, tactfully, that you and your colleagues stand by and honour your election promises. We trusted you. Are your promises nothing but political rhetoric? We sincerely hope not.

This letter typified the answer of seniors to whether or not they are willing to sacrifice their pensions. The point which needs to be understood by Hon. Members on all sides of the House and by all Canadians is that seniors have already sacrificed. They are the people who lived through the depression. They are the people who were active in the Second World War. They are the people who built and sustained our nation's wealth following the Second World War. They have already made their sacrifices. Now they should be able to live decent lives with decent incomes.

Before my father died he often remarked that his life was easier when he was on pension than at any previous time. That says two things about my father and about his generation generally. First, it says that they did not have an easy time of it. They had to struggle and put up with the depression. They had to enlist in the Canadian Armed Forces. They had the responsibility of raising families in the difficult days following the war. Second, it says that at some point in the past Canada made a commitment to these people and kept it, that they should have a decent pension scheme.

We can always find ways in which to improve it. We owe a great debt of honour to the man who celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday today, the Hon. Stanley Knowles. He was always talking about the need for improvement in the pension plan. Mr. Knowles still sees a number of areas in which improvements are required, as do Hon. Members of my Party. However, right now we are fighting to maintain what has been built, up to this point. Instead of looking for ways in which to improve the system, the Government is undercutting, cutting back and eroding the basic standard of the Old Age Security. Canadians do not agree with that. They say that we should continue to provide a decent income for our seniors. They have been getting that message across to the people on the Treasury benches, yet there seems to be an unwillingness opposite to hear what is being said, or at least to act on it.

The Liberal amendment moved this morning indicated that we should show the Government what it means to be cut back by 3 per cent, by cutting back the borrowing authority for $18.2 billion by 3 per cent. I agree with that kind of symbolic action which might make the Government realize how serious a 3 per cent cut-back is for the seniors of the country.

● (1750)

In the 1960s when the Americans invaded Cambodia they said that they had only gone 20 miles into their territory, that it was only a symbolic thing. Then a bunch of yippies from around Vancouver decided to have a symbolic invasion of the United States south of Blaine. The Americans reacted quite differently in that circumstance. The Government reacts quite differently when it is proposed that its borrowing authority be cut back by 3 per cent as compared to how it acts in response to a proposal that the Old Age Security of seniors be cut by 3 per cent.

The Government has not given adequate reasons for the borrowing of $18.2 billion. I believe that the borrowing authority should be cut back by 3 per cent, just as the Government is trying to cut back on seniors.

[Translation]

Mr. Isabelle: Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to say a few words on Bill C-51 on the borrowing authority of the Government. I rise to speak today because I was quite surprised to realize that, if the Government now finds itself in such a situation, which represents an important political impasse in my opinion, it may be because it has forgotten the basic facts of politics. However, I do not want to make a political speech. I simply want to point out to the Government that, in deciding to give a new direction to our economy, it might have wanted to operate like a private business. I know that many of my honourable colleagues on the other side come from the private sector and I give them credit for having tried to improve the economic situation in Canada. However, what I do not understand, Mr. Chairman, is that they would have used all kinds of tricks to suggest to all Canadian men and women that they were going to create another garden of Eden where everyone would be content, both the rich and the poor, where we would all be one happy family, the economy would prosper and everyone would be happy. This is why the Canadian voters placed their confidence in this Government and elected the party now in power with a large majority last September 4. I know that, on the hustings, people often say, without making formal promises, that they will implement programs with which the voters will be happy and which will make them feel better about living in this country, and this is often why the Canadian public votes as it does. The public made a choice, but unfortunately, as soon as this choice had been made, the Government brought down its first Budget and seemed to discredit itself in the eyes of the population and harmed its own credibility.

The present problem is a political impasse about the deindexing of old age security pensions. I think that the Government made a mistake. The reason is simple. During the campaign, the Members opposite said that everything would stay the same as before, but everything did not stay the same. This has eroded the confidence of people who have no other means to provide for themselves then the pension they have earned after many years and which has been adjusted to the cost of living as the consumer price index has increased.

I would like to say that the indexation to cost of living is a choice that was made by the Canadian society. It was a choice because had it not been . . . And that may be the reason why we have such a huge deficit in Canada, because we have decided to compensate some members of the Canadian society who were retired, who could not earn any income any more and who were powerless in the face of inflation, we have decided to grant them this surplus in order for them to share the life enjoyed by all other Canadians.

So, in effect, Mr. Chairman, it is a choice that was made by the Canadian society as a whole. Obviously, the consumer price index has varied widely from one year to the other. Presently, it is perhaps 5, 6 or 4 per cent. It may climb to 5 per cent at the end of this year. In any event, what is important, the bottom line is that we wanted to give some measure of protection to those whose sole income is their retirement income, to add a little supplement so that they can have perhaps a certain measure of comfort in the final stage of their life.

We are dealing here with people who are absolutely powerless, and that probably explains why, the other day, when I went to the Maison du Citoyen in Hull, where 300 or 400 old age people were celebrating with a banquet the closing of their annual Old Age Week, there was such an outcry against the government's attitude and the measures that have been taken in the Budget concerning the deindexing of the Old Age Security Pensions.

Mr. Chairman, I believe we do not have any right to hit members of the society who cannot defend themselves, and yet this is a political mistake because these people represent 20 per cent of the population. They are a political force we could use. I am sure these 20 per cent will remember for a long time to come the attitude of this government, whatever that attitude may be, toward older people. I believe they will not forget easily and they will pass along to the future generations the memory of that injustsice that was perpetrated to them in this Budget.

It is a matter of basic, fundamental principle for the Canadian society.

I would like to deal briefly with the Public Service, Mr. Chairman. I am familiar with this issue since I live in this area. I have always dealt with people working in the Public Service and you can rest assured . . . There are 102,000 public servants here in the Ottawa-Hull area, peple who work for the Federal Government, and it can be stated that the Federal Government is practically the engine of economic growth in the National Capital area, what with 102,000 direct jobs and all the spin-offs that are created in the whole economy of the region. If my memory serves me right, already in 1979, when the Progressive Conservative government was elected, it was stated that 60,000 jobs would be cut from the Public Service as a whole—and some are saying today: "We should never have said that, that is why we were beaten in 1980". They said then that it would be done by attrition, that nobody would be fired. However, public servants are human beings, they are very vulnerable, very sensitive persons and they are people who must be able to count on something sure when they want to start a family, to establish a home and to plan for their future. So they were told that 60,000 jobs would be cut-off. This 60,000 cut was never done for the simple reason that that government was not reelected at that time. But it seems the philosophy has not been forgotten. A lot of anxiety was created within the Public Service and it seems it is starting all over again. So they said it will be 15,000, but it actually works out to 30,000, because in the normal course of events, 15,000 would have to be hired, but this number will be cut as well as the 15,000 that will be cut right away, so for all practical purposes, Mr. Chairman, this means that about 30,000 jobs are being cut in the Public Service. How they are going to do that? A number of approaches have been tried. They started by saying they were going to get rid of the Patent Office. That worked for a few weeks, but when there was a general protest, the Minister told everyone not to get upset, everything would go on as usual, only a few changes would be made and the planned cuts of 250 or 300 jobs would not be implemented.

Once again, the Government was forced to retreat as a result of general protest, in an area as important as the Canadian Patent Office. So now the Government has reversed its position on the Patent Office and on the universality of pensions. At one time they were strongly in favour of abandoning universality. But here again, they said: Since we are governing by consensus, well it seems Canadians do not want to de-universalize, so we are going to maintain universality.

Now they have another problem, and this afternoon in my riding I was told that at the Queen's Printer at the Department of Supply and Services, they were cutting 325 jobs. Another general upheaval, people crying, others getting angry and others again completely at a loss what to do. Some employees want to leave, others want to drop their careers entirely and are on the brink of a nervous breakdown. I remember when back in 1979, the Government at the time had decided—

An Hon. Member: The Conservative—

Mr. Isabelle: —the Conservative Government, of course, . . . had decided to cut 60,000 jobs, I remember—

An Hon. Member: Who suggested that?

Mr. Isabelle: The Conservative Government, 60,000 jobs. And that reminds me of the years under R. B. Bennett, during the Depression, when people from as far away as Vancouver and Halifax and Newfoundland although Newfoundland was not in Confederation at the time people came from all over Canada to go on a hunger march—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The 20-minute period has now expired. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Chairman, the Parliamentary Secretary . . . The subject matter of the Bill before the House is Government borrowing, and obviously, the $18 billion is going to be used in many ways. We cannot really give a breakdown and say that the amount borrowed is going to be used for a given type of expenditures or a given type of financing. It is much broader than that.

I would like to ask him: Since the proposal to de-index Old Age Security pensions was included in the Budget and, unless the Government changes its mind, is to become effective on January 1, assuming that inflation rises above 3 per cent—and I think that is a very reasonable assumption, because the projections we were given by the Department of Finance indicate a rate of inflation of more than 3 per cent— what is, according to the Department of Finance, the projected savings to the Government for the years 1985-86 and 1986-87? In other words, if the Old Age Security pension is not indexed for the first 3 per cent, how much does the Government stand to save during the months of January, February and March 1986, which is the end of the current fiscal year and how much over fiscal 1986-87?

Mr. Lanthier: From the outset, Mr. Chairman, I should like to correct immediately one aspect of this issue. Since the debate began this morning God knows how many times we heard the word deindexation, which is not mine.

What we in the Department of Finance came up with is indeed guaranteed indexation. It is a guarantee that anything over 3 per cent will be indexed. So please let the record show that what we are now advocating is a long-term measure which will guarantee that anything over 3 per cent will be compensated by the Government, and this is nothing like what happened in the past when people were worried about soaring inflation and had to stand the impact of an inflation increase of nearly 6 per cent in single year.

Secondly, in direct answer to the question: How much would the Government save in the fiscal year 1985-86? According to our advisers here it must be pointed out the savings would be for a three-month period only since the measure would be in force as of January 1. Once in force we would have to include the 3 per cent in absolute figures while keeping in mind as well this statement taken from the Budget speech: "The Government will review the adequancy of payments in light of future circumstances and will increase them as resources permit". So we are going to give the basic 3 per cent, but there is more than that because our policy will be to help those who need most rather than try to help everybody. In answer to the question then, savings during the fiscal year 1985-86 would not amount to much more than $15 million, but they would rise to some $245 million for the fiscal year 1986-87.

Mr. Garneau: Is the Parliamentary Secretary trying to tell me that we are shifting the whole parliamentary machinery into gear and that senior citizens throughout Canada are joining the debates, yet we will save only $15 million in 1985-86?

An Hon. Member: A threat against their security!

Mr. Garneau: A threat against their security . . . Let me finish, I will get back to that.

Mr. Chairman, that is the figure I wanted to have from Department officials. We had our own figures but were unable to have them confirmed. Now they are confirmed. The Parliamentary Secretary may very well claim that the purpose of this measure announced in the Budget is to index anything over 3 per cent. What is at stake here, Mr. Chairman, is a lot more than the 3 per cent, for what it is in fact is an attack through the back door against the universality of social programs.

However, I do not want to go into that again today. The Parliamentary Secretary knows full well that a limited program was implemented because inflation had been rampant for three, four or five years. Under a rationalization program, workers were asked to restrict their salary increases to 6 and 5 per cent, while the indexation of tax tables were restricted to 6 and 5 per cent and a ceiling of 6 and 5 per cent was put on everything. Everyone was on the same footing for a specific number of years. It was two-year program. Another legislation would have had to be passed by another Parliament in order to extend it, whereas the deindexation bill now under consideration is introduced as a long-term measure—

It is all very well for the Minister or the Parliamentary Secretary to say that if conditions improve, old age security pensions will be increased and more money will be paid. But that is not what we are being told at present. We are told that the first 3 per cent of the OAS indexing will be lost. And if inflation exceeds 3 per cent, of course, only that part will be covered. I do not want to complicate matters and try to suggest that pensions are cut by 3 per cent, but future indexing will be restricted. Instead if things are left as they are, senior citizens will be protected and there is no problem.

An Hon. Member: Those are only promises.

Mr. Garneau: This is not a mere promise, it is in the legislation. If nothing is done, they are protected. They are taking some action and then would have us believe that they will be better protected. But I am flabbergasted when I find, for example, tax measures, on pages 18 and 19 of the government's Fiscal Plan. When they were told that the deficit must be reduced in 1985-86, they removed the indexation which would cost $15 million, and then the Minister of Finance during the oral question period this afternoon was almost crying when he said that the deficit was substantial, that steps had to be taken to control the $15 million deficit in 1985-86. They have no money left for seniors. On page 19 of the government Fiscal Plan, with regard to the tax exemption on capital gains, do you know how much the government is losing by granting that exemption? Three hundred million dollars in 1985-86 and $600 million in 1986-87.

And that is precisely the point I tried to make during the question period. And then the Parliamentary Secretary gives us another opportunity to prove once again that if instead of granting exemptions to individuals who made capital gains . . . As far as I am concerned I don't want to fight tooth and nail over this, but if we were to plug . . . and mind you, we would not have to plug too many loopholes to find $15 million out of $300 million. If the government at least took a positive step stating its intention to limit the tax exemption on capital gains to those made in Canada. If the government wants to create jobs this way, it should create them in Canada and not the United States. If it could at least limit the benefits to capital gains made in Canada, the Parliamentary Secretary might consider other solutions. Let us suppose, just for argument's sake that the Parliamentary Secretary has a boat or a yacht riding at anchor on Lake Champlain which is registered in the United States. Having paid $100,000 for it, let us say he sells it for $150,000, something which is quite common with this kind of thing. If the government has its way, the tax exemption on capital gains would be $50,000. For the time being, it is only $10,000. There is not one single Progressive Conservative member who will make me believe that these $50,000 in capital gains made by a Canadian selling his boat at anchor South of the border in Lake Champlain, will create jobs in Canada!

That is why I am saying that if we could partially plug this capital gains tax loophole on productive activities, we could easily find the $15 million we need this year. Why create so much anxiety among our senior citizens because of these $15 million, when we have the money, $300 million in 1985-86 under the capital gains tax exemption, and $600 million next year?

If we look for other ways to do it . . . I can think of the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax: $125 million. We are not asking the government not to abolish this tax, but to maintain part of it; this way, we would have the money to finance the full indexation of the Old Age Security pensions for 1985-86 and 1986-87. If, then, the government found itself again in a spot. Well then they could try again, saying: Listen, in 1985-86, $15 million, in 1986-87 it is $245 million, this is what they just gave us. Well, if that does not deal with the deficit, and there is not other means, I am not saying we are not going to tell them off again because it is not normal that they should cut old age pensions. But if they can find . . . Listen, we are talking about $260 million, it is not even the total amount of the capital gains savings. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that it does not make sense to create such anxiety among our senior citizens, to create such difficulty, to force our senior citizens to come here in Ottawa to demonstrate, to force senior citizens to phone, to write their MPs, to hold meetings, to live in fear of having their income affected and not being about to meet their needs. And for the sake of what, I ask you? For the sake of $15 million, when the Minister of Finance had $300 million to give away in capital gains breaks. And this of course does not include the $125 million for gas and handouts to oil multinationals, which will increase to $920 million next year. And it does not include at all the fact that looking at page 19 of the Fiscal Plan submitted by the Government, personal income taxes in 1985-87 will go up $1 billion while corporate income taxes will go down $450 million, the exact opposite of what is being done in the United States. This is being said on Page 19 of your book, and I am not even including sales and excise taxes with which I will be dealing later. But solely on the issue of old age pensions, Mr. Chairman, I cannot get it into my head that the Prime Minister of my country is willing to disturb senior citizens to such a degree, claiming that this is to control the deficit, when the amount involved is $15 million, a third of the money used to change the Armed Forces' uniforms, $56 million; those $15 million are only about one fourth of that. And I find it simply unacceptable that they should take all the time of the House, forcing us to fight that battle because we are going to fight it to the end, whether they like it or not. We are going to use all the tricks, all the Standing Orders that will enable us to do it because this is the only means we have, in our position, to defend senior citizens. For the sake of $15 million, I do not understand that the Prime Minister of my country could go to all that trouble, to halfway imply that he may review the situation, that he may change his approach, and certainly as far as I am concerned, Mr. Chairman, I have serious questions concerning the appropriateness of that de-indexing measure, and the way the Minister of Finance has exercized his political judgement, his financial judgment. For the sake of saving $15 million on the backs of our senior citizens in 1985-86, $245 million in 1986-87, when they have $900 million available during those two years to give in capital gains breaks. Even if they cut that in half, there would still be money left over to reduce their deficit. I say to myself that this does not make sense, but if the Members opposite will not understand, we will have to go on fighting and opposing that. Obviously, I would not like to be a prophet of evil, but if on the Government side they go on making such political blunders, what has just happened in the Ontario Legislature—

An Hon. Member: Two minutes ago!

Mr. Garneau: To minutes ago, another Conservative Government has gone down.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether these comments were really a question, but I have a few things to add.

First, I would like to point out, Mr. Chairman, that the Progressive Conservative party or this Government were not the ones to create the whole debate over this issue. I therefore want to say to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) that, while we have our share of responsibility as the Government, we were not the ones who tried to create this anxiety, and I did say "tried to create", because I am not sure that it has succeeded. The Opposition has invited me to visit the senior citizens in my constituency. I have seen senior citizens in homes for needy people and in homes for people who are well off, and I also visited senior citizens who are independent. I can assure you that this anxiety was created by a cliche, by a misused term which has been well publicized, namely the term "deindexing", rather than by the facts. If anyone is to be blamed today and criticized for making a political mistake in creating all this concern, you can be assured that only one Party is responsible.

Second, I wonder why the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides should be so surprised at what he is told, and I would like to refer him to the same report he quoted earlier. On page 12 in item B, which lists the measures taken since November 1984, in other words the budgetary measures, at the line "Transfers to persons", we find only a dash for the year 1985-86 to show that the impact in billions of dollars was insignificant. In fact, this is what I said when I quoted a figure of $15 million. We see that the total savings really amount to $300 million, which would include the $245 million saved in the possible and eventual indexing of old age pensions, and naturally, family allowances. These figures are therefore included in this document, with a margin of error of about 16 per cent, as we have just figured out.

Second, I was suprised at something I heard earlier. I can understand what were the feelings of the Minister of Finance this afternoon. I think that there must be some language barrier between two people, one of whom now is and one of whom used to be Minister of Finance, and like the present Minister of Finance, I find it difficult to understand that someone as familiar with business financing as the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), a former bank president, would tell the Government: You extend benefits to some people by granting them capital gains exemptions. I wish to remind him that the Minister of Finance does not call that a gift but an investment. Investing is not necessarily spending. On the contrary! Therefore, bearing that in mind, I would like to put things in their true perspective, namely that capital gains exemptions have been extended in order to create jobs and were not, of course, intended as gifts to the rich like some are trying to imply. Believe me, small businesses are strongly convinced that these capital gains exemptions will contribute to job creation.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order! The 20-minute period has now expired, under the rules.

[English]

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I am just delighted to have a chance to speak to Bill C-51, the Borrowing Authority, and to the amendment which proposes a 3 per cent reduction in the borrowing authority. Surely, the Government would want to support that amendment. If it has seen fit to reduce the benefits to our senior citizens by 3 per cent in January, it should in fairness cut its own expenditures in a similar way.

As I was walking into the House of Commons tonight from a committee meeting in the West Block I saw the fleet of brand new vehicles lined up, with their engines idling, waiting for their $100,000 people to arrive. Surely, if this Government and the Cabinet have seen fit to reduce the purchasing power of the senior citizens by 3 per cent in January, they would not mind tightening up their belts a little and reducing Government expenditures.

The Prime Minister increased his office operation by, I believe, 54 per cent in this fiscal year. I am sure he would not mind cutting back that extra $2 million by 3 per cent. I am sure he would not mind cutting back by 3 per cent his staff which already has been increased by 33 per cent. He is asking the senior citizens to do that. I am sure he wants to be fair and equitable. He promised to do all these things. I am surprised that the Government is holding up the vote on this amendment because I am sure it wants to be fair to our senior citizens.

I believe as we look down the pipe over a period of four years or five years, we see exactly how this Government proposes to operate; that is by stealth, misrepresentation, and by not levelling with the Canadian people. When the Government put out the Estimates of Government revenues and expenditures it was only for 1985-86. But if we project those costs over a long period of time, taking 3 per cent less this year, 3 per cent less next year, and so on, not only to the indexation of the income tax levels but to the standard personal exemptions, and we do that as well to senior citizens pensions, we sort of get them both coming and going.

For instance, let us look at the benefits to the rich, the powerful and the mighty in this country. We see that the surtax only applies for 1985-86 and 1986-87. That is just a little over 18 months. Let us look at the special tax on the banks. It likewise only applies over a very short period of time, amounting to something like $10 million this year in surtax and $100 million next year. We see that the rich and the powerful pay a surtax, but for perhaps only 18 months.

If we look at the low and moderate income groups we see their benefits cut off year after year. Let us look at the modification to the personal income tax scale. It only amounts to $80 million this year, but by 1990-1991 the low and moderate income families will be paying $4.360 billion a year more in personal income tax. I know that Hon. Members opposite do not like to hear this because when they put out the Budget they did not bother showing what the long-term impact would be of the deindexation of the personal levels of income tax.

Let us look at the impact on the Registered Home Ownership Savings Program. It hits at young families and young couples. I met with a young couple in Toronto two weeks ago who told me they were paying $650 a month for rent. They said if they could get the down payment, such as the RHOSP would provide, they would be able to purchase a home by paying only another $150 a month. But this Budget does away with that program, which means that thousands of young couples who might have been able to put aside the down payment for a home using the RHOSP Program will not now be able to do so.

I cannot, for the life of me, understand why when the Minister of Finance was releasing those funds which are held in the RHOSP Program, he did not allow them to be taken out this year and invested in a home, in furnishings or in major appliances. The people I have talked to have told me that they would just roll it over into another fund. So even if those funds are released without taxation this year, they will not be generating any jobs related to major consumer goods, and they will not be providing the down payments for a home.

If we look at the rest of the projections over a five-year period we see that the loss, because of the capital gains tax exemption, jumps from $300 million this year to $1.25 billion by 1990-91. The Minister has portrayed this as a job creation scheme. If he really wanted it to be that, rather than a valentine to his friends on Bay Street in high income brackets, it seems to me that he would have made a provision whereby the capital gains would be invested in Canadian business and farms rather than in anything from a condo in Florida to art and all kinds of things. Clearly what will happen is that people who have a capital gain of $500,000, because most of them will be in a high income bracket, will save themselves $125,000 with no benefit to the country. Surely what we want is a fair tax regime to encourage development and provide jobs.

The elimination of the PGRT will save the multinational oil companies $124 million this year, and $2.449 billion by 1990. That is rather interesting because the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources outlined several weeks ago about seven major projects which she saw going ahead. I have forgotten the exact number of jobs created in the development stage of projects like Venture and Hibernia, but the total number of permanent jobs for those seven major projects was something like 31. We hear of small Canadian owned companies who are afraid of being taken over by these rich multinationals. Not only have they had the PGRT removed with no effective monitoring system to see that those funds are reinvested, but they gain as well because the value of the oil they have in the ground will increase by some $800 million this year. We are seeing a massive transfer from the poor, the middle-income earners, and senior citizens to the rich, the powerful, and the multinationals. How can the Government justify that?

Last fall in his Economic Statement the Minister of Finance made a great thing of the Government's campaign promise to reduce the excise tax on gasoline for farmers and primary producers. It was reduced by some 20 cents a gallon, but in the Budget it was increased by 9 cents a gallon. The Government realized that excise tax would be harmful to the tourist industry so it does not take effect until early September, but that is the time when the harvest in western Canada is getting into full swing. The people in the West are appalled. They cannot understand the duplicity of the Government in removing the tax last fall and then reimposing it when the harvest is really beginning. In western Canada it is being described as the harvest tax. Add to that the fact that the Government, with no exemption that I have been able to find for farmers and primary producers, will reimpose a sales tax January 1 on energy costs, indeed on all farm input costs. So we see a number of items in the Budget which are very harmful to Canadian agriculture.

The tobacco industry is suffering tremendously and the Government has imposed an additional tax of 25 cents on a package of cigarettes. The tobacco farmers say that will be very harmful. A tax levy of some 2 per cent on alcohol has drawn a violent reaction from the grape and wine industry in the Niagara area and other parts of our country. As well, the Government has said it will be reducing the budget of the Department of Agriculture by $50 million a year over the next five years. Given a budget of about $1.25 billion, a cut of $250 million is very significant.

The Budget does not say specifically where those cuts will be. They may be in crop insurance. The Government may ask the provinces to put up half the crop insurance premiums, or a third, along with the federal Government and producers. The cuts may be in transportation assistance or agricultural research. That is not clear, but if you look at the Budget papers it is clear there will be a cut of $50 million a year. Perhaps the cut will be in the milk stabilization program, a program which not only provides assistance to our agricultural producers, but also acts as a unifying or cohesive force to help keep them in business.

Will the Parliamentary Secretary indicate if the budget of the Department of Agriculture will be frozen at its present level, less the $50 million, or will it increase 3 per cent or 4 per cent, less the $50 million? What effect will reducing the borrowing authority in line with the reduction being applied to senior citizens have on the budget of the Department of Agriculture?

The Ontario Federation of Agriculture met on June 6 at a special directors meeting in Toronto. Not only did the regular table officers of the federation attend, but the county directors and county presidents were there as well. It was one of the largest emergent meetings they had at which to consider exactly what to do in response to the Budget.

They passed a resolution at that meeting which Hon. Members should read because I know they are very concerned about the plight of farmers in the country. Tomorrow they will hold a special emergency meeting to plan the strategy for coping with the cut-backs which the Government has made in the agricultural budget and how to deal with the disincentives and lack of action in the Budget presented by the Government.

During the election campaign, the Government promised to introduce an agri-bond program. Obviously the Minister of Finance did not support that program because he was demonstrably against an agri-bond program in his special White Paper on taxation issues in agriculture. He was also against any concessions on Section 31 of the Income Tax Act and changes in the capital gains tax. While he recognized the capital gains provision for farmers in his Budget, he took no action with respect to the agri-bond program. That is regrettable because the Finance committee made a strong presentation for a long term agri-bond program with low interest rates.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to be able to speak on this amendment. Frankly, it has been presented in order to send a strong message to the Government because, in spite of strong protests, representations and pleadings from millions of senior citizens and Canadians generally as well as Members of the Official Opposition and the other Opposition Party in the House, the Government has refused to listen. It has acted in an arrogant and stubborn manner by insisting that it will proceed with the Budget measure to deindex senior citizens pensions and not allow any adjustment for inflation below 3 per cent.

From time to time, Government spokesmen hint that something may be done at some future date to respond to the quite justified concerns over the deindexing proposal in the Budget. However, the Government does not take a consistent line. The Prime Minister speaks in a soft, cajoling, conciliatory manner, suggesting that he understands the concerns of seniors and there is nothing to worry about because action will be taken to respond to those concerns. However, when the Minister of Finance speaks about the same subject, his tone is very different. It is harsh and stubborn, indicating a closed and arrogant mind when it comes to this crucial subject of such great concern to millions of senior citizens and millions of Canadians generally.

All we had to do to confirm this point was listen to the Minister of Finance during Question Period today when he talked about the need to reduce the deficit above all. He talked about the need for senior citizens to bear what we consider to be an unfair and unnecessary share of the burden to reduce that deficit.

It was as if nothing had been said and nothing had happened since the night the Budget had been presented. Anybody who had been listening at all and had not been away on another planet, in his mind if not in reality, would have known that there had been a growing feeling of outrage on the part of Canada's senior citizens and Canadians generally when they recognized what that cold, arrogant and unfeeling Government was fully intending to do in its Budget of May 23 when it talked about removing the indexing of senior citizens' pensions for all inflationary increases in the cost of living below 3 per cent.

How can anyone take anything the Government says seriously about the Budget in general, or about this provision to cut the indexing of senior citizens' pensions in particular, when it is talking out of both sides of its collective mouth? On the one hand there is the soft cajoling, honeyed, yet not credible words of the Prime Minister and, on the other, the tough, arrogant, unfeeling words of the Minister of Finance in the House today. I suggest that those latter words represent the real views, opinions and decisions of that cold and unfeeling Government. That is why the Budget not only deserves to be rejected but that the amendment before the committee deserves to be strongly supported.

The Minister of Finance continues to claim, as he did in the House during Question Period today, that there is no change being made to the Old Age Security pension. He says that if the Budget is adopted in the form in which it has been presented to the House, senior citizens will continue to receive cheques at face value, in amounts that will not be in any way less than face value amounts of those cheques now. No one is denying or debating that point. We are saying on behalf of millions of senior citizens and senior citizens are saying themselves that the sneaky, unfair provision to cut indexing in the Budget will cut the purchasing power—

Mr. Dick: You cut it back by 6 per cent with your six and five.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): —of those cheques, not for a time period of two years but on and on in perpetuity.

Mr. Dick: Not necessarily.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): On and on in perpetuity. We must stand up for the Canadian people and send a message to this arrogant and unfeeling Government through the amendment before the committee and through fighting as hard as we can against an arrogant and unfeeling Budget presented by an arrogant and unfeeling Government.

• (1850)

Frankly, even the Minister of Finance, when he is not in the House, is willing to admit that the provision in the Budget to cut the indexation of the pensions of senior citizens will in fact harm seniors by cutting their purchasing power. In fact, the following was reported today in The Toronto Star about the Minister of Finance when he was in Halifax:

> And Wilson later agreed with reporters' suggestions that there will be a decrease in the "real dollar value" of pensions.

No matter what the Minister of Finance tries to say in the House to defend his indefensible Budget, deep down he knows what is wrong with that part of the Budget dealing with the pensions of senior citizens. While he is not yet ready to admit it to the House, where he should admit it first, he admitted it when faced with this reality from reporters in Halifax yesterday.

The Minister of Finance and other government spokesmen keep saying that the only reason senior citizens are protesting the deindexing provision of the Budget is because of the scare tactics of the Opposition, that the seniors have been stirred up by the scare tactics of the Opposition.

The Government is insulting the intelligence and common sense of our senior citizens. They are able to analyse proposals in this Budget as well as anyone. They are able to make up their own minds about what is wrong with the Budget in general and about what it says when it comes to pensions of senior citizens in particular. Whether it is the Minister of Finance, the Deputy Prime Minister, the Prime Minister or anyone on the government side of the House, when it comes to them saying that senior citizens are only upset about the Budget because of the scare tactics of the Opposition, all they are saying is that they do not attribute enough intelligence and common sense to our senior citizens to think for themselves and make up their own minds. That is an insult to our senior citizens which should be placed on the record. I am sure it will be held against this arrogant and unfeeling Government for a long time to come.

To demonstrate that senior citizens are quite capable of thinking for themselves and making up their own minds about what is wrong with the Budget, I refer the Committee to a press release dated June 13 and issued by Mrs. Yhetta Gold, President of the National Advisory Council on Aging. According to the press release, Mrs. Gold sent a letter to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, from which I want to quote some relevant extracts as set forth in the press release. In her letter she said:

> The May 23 Budget . . . has stimulated seniors to joint together to lobby and advocate on their own behalf. Seniors are saying "Listen to me" to Government.

The tragedy is that the Government is refusing to listen. This is why we have to send a message, on behalf of seniors, to this arrogant and unfeeling Government through the amendment which we presented to the Committee on this Borrowing Authority Bill. In part the press release goes on to state:

> Commenting on her letter, Mrs. Gold indicated that "deindexing has not only brought seniors together but also many other Canadians including youth and business groups".

The press release continues by referring to the response of seniors to the May 23 Budget and "their belief that they should not be penalized any more than the general public". Also it states:

> NACA is encouraged by the response of seniors and their associations and is sure that seniors will continue their efforts—

Another part of the press release reads:

> The letter to Mr. Epp refers to other effects of deindexing. According to the Council "it will provide a short-term saving in exchange for a long-term loss. The stress associated with a tighter and tighter budget will take its toll. More and more senior Canadians will find it difficult to cope with a deteriorating physical, mental and social condition. In time, expenditures for other types of care will limit the savings due to deindexing", according to the Council.

I have quoted from a letter which was sent to the Minister of National Health and Welfare by the President of NACA, the official body established by government to advise government on the needs and concerns of the aging. This demonstrates that what government spokesmen are saying, to the effect that it is only the scare tactics of the Opposition which are stirring up senior citizens, is absolutely wrong, inaccurate and downright false. The letter sent by Mrs. Gold to the Minister shows very clearly that the National Advisory Council on Aging, the senior advisory body speaking for senior citizens, has analysed the government Budget and what it said about pensions. It has figured out for itself, on behalf of senior citizens, that the Budget will reduce the purchasing powers of old age pensioners in ways which will be very harmful to senior citizens, not only now but for a long time to come.

I also draw to the attention of the Committee another very important point which was made in this June 13 press release by NACA. It reads:

> NACA also believes that pre-retirees, the 60 to 64 age group (1.1 million Canadians with an average income of less than $17,000) will be hurt by deindexing OAS. "Many will have to modify drastically their retirement plans and save more to compensate for their loss of income, or delay their retirement", said Mrs. Gold. "The first is not conducive to economic growth and the latter will have Canadians even more anxious about jobs."

These are the words of the President of the non-political and non-partisan National Advisory Council on Aging.

If the Government is not yet ready to listen to what the Official Opposition says about this, surely it will listen to the National Advisory Council on Aging. If it is not ready to listen to NACA, then it is clear why, as I have already said, we have to send a message to the Government on behalf of senior citizens and all Canadians through the amendment before the Committee, that the Budget in general is wrong and in particular it is wrong when it wants to cut the purchasing power of pensions for older Canadians.

There are many other reasons to send a message to the Government through this amendment. The Minister of Finance continues to say that no changes will be made to the Old Age Security pension. If that is correct, why do the budget documents attribute hundreds of millions of dollars in savings from what the Budget says about deindexing Old Age Security pensions, savings which the Government intends to use to reduce the deficit? If everything remains the same, from where will the savings come which the Government says it will get from the Old Age Security system to reduce the deficit?

The truth of the matter is that the Government is changing the Old Age Security system. If that were not the case, it would not have those savings to reduce the deficit. What is even more shameful about what the Government is trying to do in this Budget, in a sneaky and surreptitious fashion, is that in its official Blue Paper of last January, it said that it would not make any changes to the present Old Age Security system. In that Blue Paper, the Government said that the present system was working well and did not require any changes. Let us not let the Government get away with trying to explain the unexplainable, when it tries to justify its Budget and the drop in purchasing power as a result of the deindexation it wants to make to Old Age Security pensions, by saying that it has suddenly discovered that the deficit is so large that it had to do something, that it had to put an extra burden on older Canadians.

• (1900)

The fact is that when that Blue Paper came out, the Government had already been in office for many months. It already had full access to the books of the Government and knew what the financial position of the Government was then and what it was going to be. In its Blue Paper it said that the present system of Old Age Security pensions was working well, that if there were to be any changes, they would be only to improve pensions and the social security system, and that any savings would never, never be used to reduce the deficit.

This Budget shows us how much we can believe what the Government says.

Mr. Boudria: Never believe a Tory.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): The Government ought to be ashamed of itself for pressing ahead with this Budget and for having this borrowing authority Bill before the House. Through the amendment before this Committee we must send a message to this cold, arrogant and unfeeling Government.

In order to try to defend the indefensible and justify the unjustifiable, the Minister of Finance and government spokespersons say that this Budget is going to create jobs.

Mr. Malone: Hear, hear! Good idea.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Members on the other side of the House say "Hear, hear. Good idea". Yes, it is a good idea, but will someone explain to me why there are no forecasts whatsoever in this Budget of the number of jobs it is supposed to create? Where are the forecasts of jobs? There are no forecasts, but there is something else in the Budget which shows what the Government really thinks the Budget is going to do with regard to jobs. The Budget has forecasts about economic growth. The Budget says that while economic growth in the last year of Liberal government was 4.7 per cent, the results of Tory economics would be that in two years that level of growth would be cut in half.

How can hundreds of thousands of jobs be created as a result of this indefensible Budget if, at the same time, that Budget is going to cut economic growth in half? That is Tory economics. That is not job creation. That is not a Budget which helps Canada. In their indefensible budget documents, the Conservatives themselves are admitting that this Budget will hurt the economy and cut jobs. If I am wrong in this, Mr. Chairman, let the Minister of Finance, who is cowering in the back row, come forward and produce the figures of his Department, which he did not have the courage to put in his Budget, which show how many jobs his Budget is going to create and explain how his Budget is going to create any jobs if its result is to cut economic growth in half.

He cannot do that because he knows that even Tory economics will not create hundreds of thousands of jobs with a rate of growth which is less than half of what it was in the last year of Liberal Government.

On behalf of senior citizens and all Canadians, I say that this arrogant, unfeeling Government needs to get the message that it is wrong, wrong, wrong. It is unfair, cruel, and heartless in what it is trying to do through its Budget to senior citizens and middle and lower income Canadians generally. If the Government does not receive the message through this amendment, we will continue to fight long and hard on behalf of Canadians because the Government is not going to do it and Canadians have already started to catch on.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to say a great deal at this point.

Mr. Dick: That's what you said yesterday.

Mr. Riis: The reason I feel motivated to say a few words is that I have been waiting for nearly two days for a single Member of the government Party to rise and answer some of the questions that are being posed by Opposition Members. Why are no Members opposite rising to say that they do not understand why the Government is going to take $1,500 out of the wallets of senior citizens over the next five years?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Because it is wrong. Why should we say that when it is wrong? I gave a great speech today. You didn't listen.

Mr. Riis: I must have missed that speech, Mr. Chairman. Every calculation that I have seen done by our Party researchers and by various financial and economic analysts all show essentially the same thing.

An Hon. Member: They are all socialists.

Mr. Riis: All socialists, my goodness, Mr. Chairman. I will not give a long list of columnists who have been saying the same thing. However, I will quote from Mr. Jeffrey Simpson who writes regularly in The Globe and Mail.

Mr. Orlikow: Which is quite a radical paper.

Mr. Riis: That is quite a radical paper, as my hon. friend from Winnipeg North says. In The Globe and Mail, our effort at a national newspaper, Mr. Simpson, who is a reputed columnist, said the following:

> In Sherbrooke, Quebec, on July 26, 1984, Brian Mulroney promised unequivocally to "reinstate complete indexing of Old Age Pensions to the actual cost of living, as of January 1, 1985.

People who heard those comments would have believed that the Prime Minister was saying that when the Conservatives became the Government they would reindex pensions to their full level. That is what he said and I suspect that is what people would believe. The Prime Minister said:

> Senior citizens are often isolated, poor and in a crippling state of dependence. Recent statistics indicate that more than 60 per cent of women and 40 per cent of men over the age of 65 who live alone have incomes that are below the poverty line.

The Prime Minister was pointing out, as he should, the plight in which the elderly of Canada find themselves. The Prime Minister went on to say:

> The position of senior citizens in our society has slipped drastically in recent years.

That means that the purchasing power and disposable income of senior citizens had eroded over the years and that conditions were worsening for them. The article goes on:

> Allan McKinnon, a former Tory defence minister . . . says there is anger and concern about deindexing of pensions. Alan Redway, whose York East riding is full of seniors, believes the Government must "review the issue".

We have heard from a number of Conservative Members who, when caught by a reporter at a weak moment, said that they were getting mail on this matter and wanted to register their deep concern. We have been debating this issue for two days trying to find ways and means of approving this $18 billion borrowing authority. We have been asking questions and I do not think it is unreasonable to expect somebody from the government benches to stand and say that they really think that hammering senior citizens and slashing their pensions is a good idea.

I am reminded of a Question Period not long ago when the Minister of National Health and Welfare was asked if he could name a single individual who supported the Government's position, let alone a single group. He hummed and hawed and said that he thought he could, then went on to talk his way out of that question.

The Prime Minister of Canada has said that senior citizens are isolated poor who are in a crippling state of dependence. He has also said that their situation in society has slipped drastically in recent years and is slipping even further. Then the first chance the Government gets to provide leadership—and I am pleased to see that the Minister of Finance is here—the Government indicates that the problems of senior citizens, the problems with deindexation and the problems it had identified in the election campaign are going to be ignored.

The Government decided that it was going to ignore the critical problems. Since it wanted to give tax breaks to the 4 per cent of tax filers who file capital gains on the first $500,000 of income from capital gains, it needed to come up with the money some place, so it decided to hammer the 10 per cent of Canadians who are senior citizens. This is not my analysis but is the point that is made by Jeffrey Simpson. He has said that if the 4 per cent is put against the 10 per cent of the population, there is a political problem.

Every single Member opposite knows that there is a political problem in his or her constituency. I would like to think that there is a great deal of pressure within the Conservative caucus to change the mind of the Minister of Finance on this particular issue.

The Minister of Finance and his caucus colleagues were saying that we all have to suffer a little bit and that it is reasonable to ask senior citizens, most of whom live below the poverty line, to take a 3 per cent cut in their disposable income over the next number of years. To be more accurate, that means that by the year 1990-91, senior citizens will have $1.6 billion taken from their pockets in one year. Between now and then, that adds up to $6.6 billion that we will take away from senior citizens.

Jeffrey Simpson goes on to describe an interesting balance. After all, the Minister of Finance said that there was justice and that he had weighed the situation very carefully. However, 1990, the year the $1.6 billion will be taken from the pockets of seniors, is also the year when that 4 per cent of the people who file capital gains will receive $1.25 billion. In other words, we are taking from the poorest citizens of Canada to give to the most wealthy citizens of Canada. At least that is the analysis as I see it, and I trust some of my colleagues opposite will correct me if I am wrong.

The Government is requesting that we cut the income of seniors by 3 per cent, so it is not unreasonable to ask the Government to cut 3 per cent from its borrowing authority. That is the motion we are debating at the moment. The Minister of Finance has said that we should be passing this $18 billion borrowing authority quickly so that the Government can get on with doing the job. Doing the job means a number of things. As the Minister of Finance has indicated time and time again, doing the job means creating jobs. He has said that the Budget he introduced on May 23 will create jobs. Let us take a look a what some analysts have to say about that. Again, I am not referring to a good NDP source but to a post-Budget survey done by the Canada Permanent Trust Company.

The Canada Permanent Trust Company contacted a wide variety of business economists. I would point out that these are business economists and not academic economists. They are people who make their living examining the Canadian economy and advising their clients on what is happening in terms of future economic development.

Interestingly enough, Canada Permanent found that none of the forecasters agree that the Minister of Finance's promise of greater job creation will succeed. Not one single business economist that was commissioned by the Canada Permanent Trust Company could find anyone who felt that the Minister of Finance's promise of greater job creation would succeed. As a matter of fact, 20 per cent of those business economists expected that the jobless rate would be higher than it had been before the Budget. That is a very telling comment because one of the reasons for the Government asking senior citizens to bleed a little bit and one of the reasons for the Government to slap user-fees on a whole variety of things and to raise sales taxes and taxes on confectioneries is because it will create jobs. Yet business economists, people who make their living by predicting the implications of the Budget, say that this will not take place and that as a matter of fact the situation will worsen.

Let us take a look at what else the economists have had to say. Seventy-six per cent of those business economists who were surveyed said that they are unlikely to alter their projections of real growth this year because of the Budget. In other words, 76 per cent of them felt that they had no reason to change the projections of growth or lack of it as a result of the Budget. That is very interesting, Mr. Chairman.

As well, the economists felt that the new tax measures will drastically reduce the spending power of the average Canadian. I think that this is rather important because the Government has asked us to give enhusiastic endorsement to its request to borrow $18.2 billion while we are being told that the small and medium-sized business sectors are falling all over themselves in their enthusiasm to create jobs. Probably everyone in this House believes that the small and medium-sized business sectors would like to expand operations, but to do that, they require one thing: they require a population that has the confidence and the wherewithal to purchase whatever it is that is being produced, whether it be a good or a service.

The Budget that was introduced on May 23, along with the November statement made by the Minister of Finance, takes away from every family in Canada $1,000 of disposable income. As well, over the next five years, every single senior citizen in Canada will lose $1,500 from his or her disposable income. It does not take much imagination to figure this out. I hope that Members opposite will understand what I am about to say.

When so much disposable income is taken away at the same time as people are being asked to buy more in order to assist small business, the logic breaks down somewhere in that process. One cannot expect businesses to expand if people are not prepared to purchase goods or services, yet that is what the Government expects will happen. I suspect that is why the business economists to which I referred a moment ago did not agree that the Minister of Finance's promise of greater job creation will succeed.

I ask Hon. Members opposite who feel that the incentive of capital gains tax avoidance will encourage job creation and expansion to tell me about any Government in the world that has introduced a similar policy that has resulted in net economic expansion and job creation. I do not think Hon. Members could find a successful example of that. It is good in theory but in actual fact, I do not think that it has ever occurred. I challenge Hon. Members opposite to correct me on that assumption if I am wrong.

I would like to end my comments today by indicating why we as New Democrats are less than enthusiastic about giving carte blanche approval to the Government so that it may borrow $18.2 billion and why we are less than enthusiastic about the Budget that was introduced by the Minister of Finance.

• (1920)

A few days ago my colleague from Essex-Windsor gave the House a history lesson. For Members who were not present on that day, I would like to repeat that lesson. He recalled an election campaign which was waged against an arrogant Liberal Government. At the time there was a decline in productivity, a decline in the country's production and a dramatic increase in unemployment. People said that the situation had to change and that the arrogant Liberal Government had to go.

The Tories spoke of optimism, hope, a better Canada and a new era. In Regina, the Leader of the Conservative Party said: "This is a new country. There is no excuse for unemployment in Canada if the Government does its duty." In Moncton, New Brunswick, he said: "The Conservative Party is going to find work for all who are willing to work or perish in the attempt, and take such steps as will end the tragic conditions of unemployment and bring prosperity to the country as a whole." During that election campaign the Conservative Leader said: "I promise to end unemployment in Canada." The Tories were swept into power. The Tories were elected on those promises, with an overwhelming majority.

A Budget was brought down shortly thereafter. The Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Stevens, said that the Budget was wise and courageous. The Budget included major cutbacks in government services. It included reductions in agricultural services to western, central and eastern Canada. It imposed additional taxation on all people of Canada. It imposed new taxes through increases in the sales tax, increases on import duties and what were then called nuisance taxes. Those whose incomes were $10,000 a year saw their taxes increase by 53 per cent as a result of the Budget. However, if a person's income was $1 million, their taxes only increased by 31 per cent. At that time, Social Democrats stood up in the House and said that the millionaires had been very gently dealt with by the Minister of Finance.

That was the election campaign of 1930. The promise of tens of thousands of jobs was made by R. B. Bennett. The Budget was brought down by the Hon. Henry Stevens in 1932. Canadian people got a shot at that Conservative Government in 1935. They realized the disastrous results of the Budget. They knew that the promises which had been made in the 1930 election campaign were empty promises. That Government did not deliver.

The point is that it is nothing new. The rhetoric is the same. The Budget is the same. It is R. B. Bennett all over again. We know how successful those practices were at that time. Mr. Chairman, I see my colleagues opposite questioning some of the comments I have made. Will one Member opposite stand and explain how this Budget is different from the one brought in by R. B. Bennett in 1932? Can they explain how this Budget was different from the major thrust of the 1932 Budget? Can they explain how the promises which were made by the Conservatives in 1932 were any different in principle, thrust, or even words, from the Budget of 1985?

I suspect that is the reason why people today cannot take these people too seriously. They have seen it before. I would encourage people to read what happened during the election campaign of 1930 and the subsequent years until the next election in 1935. They will find that the times and approaches of the Conservative Government then were no different from the times and approaches of the Conservative Government today. That is why we find this Bill inappropriate. This is not the kind of borrowing authority which results in enthusiastic endorsement by members of the New Democratic Party.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address a question to my colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier).

A moment ago, to a question from the Hon. Member from Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) who was talking about indexation, you answered that indexation to the cost of living would not be lost. If inflation were 4 or 5 per cent, pensioners would get 2 per cent.

Now here is my question: Can you tell us whether or not senior citizens will lose the 3 per cent basic OAS indexation, and I said basic, if the Government does not change its position or its mind? Is that 3 per cent indexation of the basic pension going to be lost from the start, regardless of the cost of living and so on? From the start, will senior citizens lose the 3 per cent indexation of their basic pension? That is my first question.

As well, you mentioned in your answer that you had visited many senior citizens homes in your riding. Could you give us the name of these residences so that we could check and find out what comments people have made to you, since you said that they were worried and anxious . . . Indeed, that is exactly what you said, even though you are shaking your head, because we will see what is reported in Hansard. You actually said that these senior citizens were worried and anxious because of assertions made by the Liberals. Now, if they are concerned and anxious, give us the names of the residences where they live and we'll check if they have asked you to rise and to present a petition on their behalf in Parliament.

Mr. Lanthier: To begin with, Mr. Chairman, I will answer the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) and then, I would like to have the opportunity to reply to the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). First of all, it is true that earlier perhaps did not make myself clear. I want to make you understand that I did not say that they were anxious, on the contrary, I said that the old people I visited in old folks homes in my riding felt that some people were trying to make them anxious. And if I gave the impression, earlier, that they were anxious, I was wrong. I am sorry, I did not make myself clear.

Mr. Rossi: I am sorry, but you created anxiety.

Mr. Lanthier: No, you tried to create anxiety and I repeat "tried". I did not say that you succeeded. Alright? Certainly, it is well understood that, the Budget clearly states two things: as of 1986 the Old Age Security payments will be indexed on the cost of living above 3 per cent. Everything above 3 per cent will automatically be indexed—Everything above 3 per cent would be indexed. First of all, because I believe that the thrust of the measures "contained" in the Budget is to assure a maximum indexation and to remove the anxiety of elderly people who are afraid of what happened to them two years ago when they lost 6 per cent in indexation and they could have been lost even more when the order in council was passed. We now offer them the possibility of making long term plans, since anything above 3 per cent will be indexed.

Secondly, and I repeat it again because the Opposite Members are asking about it and they should at least listen to me, regardless of what people tried to say or make others say, that we should namely perhaps reconsider our position or to back down, whatever you want to call it, it is clear that it is more with a political purpose remind than for the good of the elderly. That the Opposition carries on as it was. With your permission I should like to repeat once more what is contained in the Budget, what has been clearly stated and repeated that I quote: "The government will review the adequacy of payments in light of future circumstances and will increase them as resources permit".

• (1930)

I would not want to isolate one part of a sentence and use it for a political strategy campaign. This is really what I wanted to say, and if the record says something else, regretfully, I have to admit that I must have used the wrong expression.

Secondly, I would like to have the opportunity to reply to the Hon. Member—

Mr. Rossi: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) on a point of order.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Chairman, he will have this opportunity, before going any further, to reply to the other Hon. Member. I think I can ask him the question again because he has not fully answered the one I first asked him.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I am sorry. The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) knows that on this particular point it is a matter of opinion. I am sure the Hon. Member will have another opportunity during this debate to ask his question again. I am sorry, but this is a matter of opinion.

Mr. Rossi: I want to repeat my question!

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has actually given you an answer. Later on, if you are not satisfied with the answer he gave you or if you claim that he did not answer your question, you will have the chance to rise and ask your question again. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) has the floor.

Mr. Lanthier: With your permission, I would like to reply to the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Earlier he challenged the members opposite, not the Opposition but the Government Members, to uncover whatever figures might be inaccurate. Most of the figures he quoted were accurate. We checked them. But there is one which is not accurate, when he suggested that needy senior citizens will have their income reduced by 3 per cent. That is not true. First of all, their income will not be reduced by 3 per cent; true, starting in 1986, the indexation of the basic old age security pensions will be limited to the increase in the consumer price index exceeding 3 per cent; so I grant you that they will lose 3 per cent of their buying power. However, the needy will not be losing 3 per cent on their total income, because it has been clearly stated that the guaranteed income supplement will be fully indexed; if we compare the case of the neediest those who receive the OAS, and GIS benefits and of those not quite so poor and who only receive the OAS benefits, as in the case for example of the former prime minister of Canada who will eventually lose 3 per cent of his buying power, starting next year. First of all, the neediest, those who benefit from the fully indexed guaranteed income supplement, will eventually lose about only 1.5 per cent of their income, that is without the additional condition. It is therefore unfair to maintain that the neediest will suffer a net loss of 3 per cent on their total income. I wanted to correct those figures.

Secondly, let us take a look at the forecasts mentioned by the member who is only doing his job as an opposition member; according to some business economists apparently the budget proposals of our Minister of Finances will not create jobs. I have some reservations about the forecasts made by those economists. Remember those about the draconian measures we were forced to take in November; they were supposed to create unemployment, however, since then, some 70,000 jobs have been created and the unemployment rate is the lowest in the last three years, which totally contradicts the economists, forecasts. That is why I have the greatest reservations about the figures which were quoted.

Thirdly, the Hon. Member challenged us to give him some examples of areas where capital gains will create jobs. I will tell you where; the Hon. Member even referred to history and spoke of the time before I was born; I am very flattered that he would go back so far in our history—

An Hon. Member: It has been quite a long time.

Mr. Lanthier: Indeed. But let me describe one in my wonderful riding of LaSalle and more particularly in Ville Emard. Businessmen wanted to transfer their assets to their children but they did not know how to do it, and the children were not really interested. To then, it was that kind of gift that costs more to take than to turn down. The children have now been able to take over those businesses and they will invest money in them, which they have already started to do. The parents are investing too because eventually they will be able in the next 5 years to plan ahead because, we will not change the rules on investments every year by decree. So, each year, they will be in a position to declare capital gains and not have to hand the government their hard earned money. I know three businesses where direct investments are being made either in buildings or equipment thanks to the capital gains tax exemption. Those are the three elements on which I have been challenged and that is my answer.

Now, concerning the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), the main thrust of the Budget is to assure the elderly . . . Mr. Chairman, I repeat that we want to make sure the elderly will not be faced with the same anxiety to which they were subjected two years ago. I am sorry, but I cannot accept the answer the Hon. Member for Bourassa would give. That is fundamentally what the Budget is all about. People are told that five years from now, they will not have to take a terrible 6 per cent loss in one year. That is what is implied in the Budget. As to the deindexation proposal, the senior citizens I have talked to told me two things. First, they understand very well the indexation guarantee we are proposing. Secondly, they understand—and that is what I was told in the letter homes for the aged—that people most in need should receive more. And third, there is something they have told us and which I would like to put on the record. We have a French Canadian expression and I am anxious to see how it will be translated in English in Hansard. They told us—and I am going to tell you exactly where I heard this, it was in a senior citizens club in Ville Emard, you can go and see them if you like, following in my footsteps. Anyway, they told us: "It is about time you stop drawing on our savings". They do not fully understand that notion of capital, but the savings, that means something for the French Canadian. And they fully realized that we had to push the country into debt in order to pay for the social programs. And they told us: We have enough pride not to force upon our children a debt load they will have to pass on to the future generations. We heard this morning that outrageous suggestion that all we have to do in order to come up with $15 million or $180 million more is to force yet an additional load on our country's debt burden.

Mr. Chairman, I believe we must credit our elderly with some intelligence, as the Opposition Leader was saying a while ago. They are worried when first, we create unemployment, and second, we draw on their long-standing earnings.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Chairman, the question is quite simple. You said that anything above 3 per cent will be indexed. I agree with that. I simply ask: the 3 per cent they now have, the 3 per cent that are presently indexed regarding the basic Old Age Security Pension—you said in your speech that anything over and above 3 per cent would be indexed, and I grant you that. This deindexing of this 3 per cent of the basic pension, assuming you do not change your mind by January 1, 1986, will this deindexing measure be implemented, yes or no? That is what I want to know: Yes or no? Will you go ahead with the deindexing of this 3 per cent? I agree with you about the amount above 3 per cent. But I ask you: What about the 3 per cent they now have? That is all. Yes or no?

Mr. Lanthier: Listen, this was called skating earlier, because I did not answer yes or no. Listen well. I have my pride. I am going to choose the answer I am going to give, according to what I understand, and not according to a strategy which seems to be imposed on me. First, it is understood that during the whole year until December 31, nobody loses anything.

• (1940)

Mr. Rossi: Agreed.

Mr. Lanthier: We agree on this. What may happen on January 1, 1986? What may happen? Everything was provided for in the Budget. In the Budget we said by 1990, and if it is by 1990 we can begin now or on January 1. The first 3 per cent will be the share we ask from senior citizens—

Mr. Rossi: This is what I want to know.

Mr. Lanthier: —to make them aware of the fact that we are now in an extremely difficult situation and that social program payments have increased. However, we say this to those who are most in need: Do not worry, as we have more money, we are going to study the situation and it is clearly said, we will see what is going to happen by that time. Of course, it is guaranteed above 3 per cent, it will not be guaranteed under 3 per cent, in as much as we are not going to implement this phase; La Palice would not have said it better.

Let me tell you then that we should not apply the 3 per cent suddenly; it should be related to all the conditions. I did not invent what I said now, it is in the Budget Speech.

Mr. Rossi: That's just like you!

Mr. Robichaud: Mr. Chairman, when the Parliamentary Secretary says that they will closely monitor the situation and make appropriate adjustments, it is but another promise and I simply want to ask him this: Is the government going to take this promise as seriously as the one made on July 26, when it stated: "We are committed to proceed to a complete reform of the pension system in order to eliminate poverty among retired Canadians and to improve their standard of living."

Mr. Lanthier: Listen, I do not want to elaborate on this statement of policy but I heard what you said, and I think we can isolate it and give you the assurance that it will be fully implemented not as a promise but as a statement of policy of this Government.

I have said and repeated it many times, but I do not know if I am getting through. I said that this policy remains as a leitmotiv or modus vivendi, whatever words you want to use. You can be assured that this Government's policy is not only to deal with financial and economic matters but as well to direct our resources as much as possible to those who need help the most. To this end, we will not mortgage our children's future but we will conduct pubic business in a rational way, which will of course lead us to a deficit, while creating new jobs. Our primary goal is still job creation.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to rise in this debate. I have not had the opportunity for a long time to comment on these budgetary measures, Mr. Chairman, and particularly on the cuts to be made to the Old Age Security pensions. I would therefore take this opportunity to try once more to get Ministers and Government Members to understand how important it is for them to immediately cancel the measures they have taken in the past. And I want to say to the Conservative Member opposite that this time, I will deliver my speech slowly so that he too can understand.

Here we go again. First of all, Mr. Chairman, I think it would be appropriate tonight, in this House, to raise the matter—

[English]

—that after 42 years we should indeed bring to the attention of this House officially that there is finally an end to the tyranny of the Tories in the Province of Ontario. At 6.19 tonight the Tories were put to rest in the Province of Ontario and they will be resting for a very long time. I can see that is generating some excitement on the opposite side. Undoubtedly the electoral success of the Tories in Ontario was due to the help of "Brian Wonderful" who went to Toronto to help Premier Miller.

Mr. Dick: No, it was because you left.

Mr. Boudria: The wheels fell off the Tory machine. Undoubtedly they will fall off of Mr. Hatfield's machine and all the other Tory machines. As a matter of fact, I hear he lost a few wheels off his golf cart lately. He will probably lose a few more.

I see we have the Tories somewhat excited. They are an excitable bunch and, frankly, given this Budget, that is understandable.

I want to talk about the effect of this Budget on the agricultural industry.

Mr. Malone: You could not figure out a budget for your piggy bank.

Mr. Boudria: We know that some Conservative Members—

Mr. Tobin: Speak slowly.

Mr. Boudria: Yes, I will speak slowly to make sure that Members on the opposite side understand. Let me repeat that the farmers of this country are not at all pleased with the Budget. Let me emphasize: not at all pleased with the Budget. I see one prominent farmer sitting over there, the Minister of State for Small Businesses. I know he would be very—

Mr. Mayer: You don't have a farmer sitting on your side.

Mr. Boudria: —very interested in the livelihood of the agricultural industry. Some Conservative Members have claimed that the capital gains exemption provision is everything that farmers wanted. Let me read to you what some farmers said. This is a resolution from an emergency board of directors meeting held on June 6, 1985. They say:

Whereas the federal Government has betrayed the farmers of Canada by presenting a budget which totally ignored the results of its own consultative process and the commitments of the Government of Canada, and

Whereas the Government has not only ignored its own promises, it has ignored the legitimate needs of our farmers

Therefore be it resolved that we are demanding that the Government live up to its own commitments made during and after the election campaign and that in order to get this message across to our Government, we recommend the following action steps:

1. That every MP in the province be talked to over the next week and that this be done by a substantial group of farmers in the MPs own area and that we demand that our MP represent our frustration and anger and demand for action to their respective caucuses and Ministers, and

2. That the Executive of OFA and CFA be charged with the responsibility of determining a national plan of action and to bring this back to our June 19 Board meeting, and—

The resolution goes on and on and on. The Hon. Member who is heckling—

Mr. Forrestall: I am not heckling, I am asking you a question.

Mr. Boudria: —will be interested to know, I am sure, that this is a resolution of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. That is the implication of that Budget for agriculture. That was not said by an opposition member of this House, but it was said by objective, non-partisan and concerned citizens of our country, farmers of the Province of Ontario, who collectively and unanimously passed this resolution to send the message to Members across the way. Surely, given the statements made by our seniors and farmers across this country—

Mr. Dick: How would you know?

Mr. Boudria: —surely it is starting to sink in, or it should, that this Budget is just not all it was cracked up to be. Can Government Members not see that this Budget is a disaster? Its orientation is wrong.

• (1950)

Mr. Dick: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member to whom I have been listening for the last ten minutes keeps referring to the Budget. The Budget debate took place a couple of weeks ago. This is a borrowing Bill. Perhaps he does not understand the difference.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I guess I was not going slow enough. Obviously the Member opposite was not able to understand that the reason we did not give the Government money is that it has proven in the recent Budget that it cannot administer it. Surely even he can understand that.

Mr. Dick: It is the first time you have mentioned it.

Mr. Boudria: Let me try it again. I am sure I will convince him this time. This is not the first attack upon the farmers of the country which the Government has perpetrated. It is actually the second major assault on the farmers of this country. The first one took place in this booklet called "Expenditure and Program Review" which was introduced on November 8, now know as black Thursday.

Mr. Kempling: You are silly.

Mr. Boudria: The Hon. Member opposite says that this is silly.

Mr. Kempling: You're silly.

Mr. Boudria: It is silly to cut $6.2 million from the dairy program. Maybe that is what he thinks of the importance of agriculture.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I believe you are close enough to hear, Mr. Chairman, so I will not name the Hon. Member directly. However, you are close enough to hear what he said to the Hon. Member. I am sure that it is not language that should be used in the House. I would not ask you to call him to order except to remind Members that we may differ in opinion, have a profound difference of opinion, but I suggest that to call a Member silly is absolutely unparliamentary.

Mr. Tobin: And childish besides.

Mr. Malone: Let's take a vote on it.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Let's not be silly. I say that in gest, but for the information of all Members of the House, the word "silly", as far as this Speaker can draw from his vast parliamentary experience, is not unparliamentary.

If Members will permit me to add, there is a certain question of order that I think the Hon. Member for Saint Denis is also raising.

Mr. Boudria: As I was saying before the Hon. Member opposite, who is obviously not interested in agriculture, made those remarks, is that on black Thursday the Government of Canada perpetrated its first of two major assaults on the farming industry. Then it cut $50 million from agriculture in the Budget. Let me ask the Member opposite if he knows of farmers who can dispense with $50 million.

Mr. Malone: Yes.

Mr. Boudria: Who can give it back to the Government because they do not need it. If that is his opinion of the farming industry in this country, let me tell him that that is not the farming industry of my riding. The farmers of my riding need assistance and every penny they can get. They have difficulty making ends meet. It is small wonder that farming has been getting into greater difficulties since the Government took office with an attitude like that.

Let me elaborate on those savage cuts perpetrated by the Minister of Finance on the farming industry. For instance, $9.4 million was cut from the departmental operations of the Ministry of Agriculture. Under the heading of "Elimination of Programs", there was a $6.6 million cut in the abolition of Canagrex.

Mr. Malone: That's good stuff.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Boudria: It is rather unusual to hear members say that. Obviously he was not present at the agricultural committee meetings when we heard witnesses and their statements. Perhaps they were speaking too quickly, Mr. Chairman.

In another section of the document entitled "Expenditure in Program Review", under the heading "Cost Recovery"—a euphemism for increasing taxes—there is another $32.3 million in cost recovery, or tax increases, to our farmers. This document continues with these policies against the farm sector.

The Government made a series of promises, not only to the farmers of Canada but to everyone else. I have that list here in which there are 338 Tory promises. Let me read a few of them.

An Hon. Member: What does this have to do with the borrowing Bill?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I will have to repeat it again.

Mr. Cook: Mr. Chairman, there used to be a rule of relevancy in the House. I have not heard much relevance lately. With all due respect to the Hon. Member, I am having great difficulty in determining whether he wants us to borrow more money or less money. It is a borrowing Bill, and even by convoluted reasoning one should connect one's remarks. I hope he will at least relate his points rather than refight a six-day Budget debate, as he has been doing for the last fifteen minutes. I would urge you to please be aware of the rule of relevance and I, for one, would like to see it applied a little more thoroughly.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The debate is on the amendment, that Clause 2 of Bill C-51 be amended by deleting the words "eighteen billion, two hundred million", and substituting therefore "17 billion, 654 million". That motion is by the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate. It is a borrowing authority Bill. The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, as I indicated earlier, and will repeat again since it seems to take time to sink in, we have decided as a caucus that whereby the Government has decided to cut senior citizens' pensions by 3 per cent, we have proposed—

Mr. Gormley: It is not a cut.

Mr. Boudria: —an amendment to cut the Government's borrowing authority by 3 per cent.

Mr. Gormley: It is not a cut.

Mr. Boudria: Because of the Government's inability to manage the funds—

Mr. Gormley: Don't lie.

Mr. Boudria: —that the House has given to it in the past—

Mr. Gormley: Don't lie. Come on, stand up.

Mr. Boudria: We are explaining to the Government again why its budgetary actions are inadequate and why we do not want to give it money through this borrowing Bill. I hope I will not have to repeat that again in five minutes. Perhaps the Member from The Battlefords-Meadow Lake would like to withdraw some of the remarks he has made in the last few minutes, which I am sure Hansard has picked up by now. Can I draw that to your attention on a point of order?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member wishes to draw some matter to the attention of the Chair.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I had been led to believe that it is unparliamentary to call other Members liars in the House. However—

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I would like to know exactly to what the Hon. Member is referring. He has named me in his remarks. I want to find out exactly what he may be naming me for, and be more specific, to see if a point of order is established.

• (2000)

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I believe the Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell asked the Chairman to take note of the fact that the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake may have called him a liar, something I regret to say I did not hear, for many good reasons, one of them being that there was a great deal of noise around the chair.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I really did not expect him to withdraw it. I was about to start describing some of the promises which the Government made to the farming community, how the Government had not delivered and why it should not be getting any more money in this borrowing Bill. The Government has not sufficiently and properly administered the funds which the House has already given it.

An Hon. Member: That is because the Liberals put us in a hole.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I am glad the Hon. Member opposite raises the topic of government waste. He says that the Liberals wasted money in the past and that this is why his Government is in trouble.

If the Government would cut back the 57 per cent increase in the budget of the Office of the Prime Minister, perhaps we could restore indexation to senior citizens in a few ridings. If the Government had not given Roy McMurtry and Lawrence Hanigan salary increases totalling $50,000 or $60,000 per year, perhaps we could restore it in one or two more ridings. If the Government had not spent $1 million on the Shamrock Summit, perhaps we could restore indexation for one year to many ridings.

I will continue. Perhaps the Government should not have wasted $1,000 flying video clips to the Prime Minister when he was in Florida at Christmas, another cost to the taxpayers of Canada. Perhaps the Minister of Communications should not have spent $57,000 flying across the world to the Middle East with his staff and family. Perhaps the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, who is supposed to tell us how to save energy, should not have flown on a jet to Vancouver, only to arrive three minutes ahead of an Air Canada flight, at a cost of $17,000. That amounts to a cost of over $5,000 per minute for the Minister to arrive in Vancouver ahead of time.

The Hon. Member is right. The Government should not waste money. Perhaps the Government should not have wasted $36 million by buying new uniforms for the military. Perhaps it should have thought about not wasting that money before deindexing pensions of seniors. Maybe its priority was wrong.

At an appropriate time later, Mr. Chairman, perhaps I will bring more to your attention about government waste. I thank the Hon. Member across the way for reminding me of that.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Chairman, I welcome this opportunity to speak to the amendment to Bill C-51, because the Budget brought down on May 23 of this year was supposed to emphasize employment, according to the slogans used by the Progressive Conservative Party during the election campaign last summer: 'Job, jobs, jobs.'

Although the Conservative Government stated that its first priority was employment, it has failed to come up with a real strategy. It hopes that tax deductions, including the tax exemption on $500,000 in capital gains, will be an incentive for people to invest and for businesses to create jobs. This is speculative, to say the least.

The most controversial proposal in the Budget is of course de-indexation of Old Age Security pensions. Mr. Chairman, this is a generation that lived through the Depression and World War II, a generation that raised large families and worked at a time when there was no such thing as retirement plan. I think it is obscene to ask a generation that has suffered so much to make even more sacrifices, when the Government gives the wealthy in our society over half a million dollars in tax exemptions.

I would like to say a few words about this tax measure. The proposition that jobs can be created by offering a tax exemption worth $500,000 is very speculative indeed, and I am not alone in holding this view. A number of independent observers think so too. The day after the Budget, one of our economic experts wrote in the press that the Government had failed both to reduce the deficit and reduce unemployment. Mr. Alain Dubuc, whose political objectivity and professional integrity are without question, said in his article that the measures introduced to benefit business would not necessarily bring about an increase in the number of jobs. For instance, eliminating the tax on $500,000 in capital gains may also encourage the purchase and sale of stocks and real estate, without creating a single job. The Government assumes that the Budget will create jobs after creating a climate of confidence. However, this is still speculative rather than a sure thing. That being said, until those jobs are created, if they ever are, the middle class is seeing the erosion of its purchasing power.

Mr. Chairman, yesterday in Baie Comeau, the Prime Minister accused the Liberal Party of scaring senior citizens. Mr. Chairman, the Prime Minister is trying to put the blame on the Liberal Party for causing anxiety among the elderly. The Liberals are not the only ones who are worried about our senior citizens. Read the papers, Mr. Chairman, listen to what senior citizens' organizations are saying and look at the cartoons in the papers. Did you see the cartoon in the Telegraph Journal on June 4? It shows the Prime Minister pushing a couple of senior citizens, while he is saying: "Sure the budget is tough enough on some citizens, but we must concern ourselves with those voters who will be around next election."

The cartoon in the Toronto Star of June 10 shows a senior citizen being tripped. These are not figments of the Liberal Party's imagination, Mr. Chairman. The Conservative Government is following a right-wing policy and is putting all its money on private enterprise. It is determined to reduce the size of Government. It is true that everywhere in the Western world people are questioning the influence of the welfare state and what the degree of Government involvement should be in the economy, but more and more people are starting to think that a mixed economy where the state still has a substantial involvement remains the ideal solution for a country like Canada. The Conservative Government has decided to abdicate its responsibilities in this respect.

Totally oblivious to the fact that we are in a democracy, the Minister of Finance stated in his Budget presentation that for too long, and I am quoting, Mr. Chairman, the Government decided what was good for Canadians. It set priorities, steered activities and subsidized efforts.

Well, Mr. Chairman, was it not the role of a democratically elected Government? I should like to recall a few facts concerning senior citizens, women and poverty. Poverty is the lot of women, particularly elderly women. Being both a woman and elderly is a ticket to poverty in Canada. The odds that an elderly woman will have a low income are about 66 per cent and she has the dubious honour of being poor for a longer time since, on average, she lives seven years longer than her husband.

If being both a woman and elderly is a ticket to poverty, being an elderly woman and a widow is a sure guarantee. More than 50 per cent of married women expect to be widows some day, and 70 per cent of widows and single women aged 70 or more live in poverty. As a rule, a widow does not get anything out of the retirement plan of her husband's employer and is entitled only to limited benefits under the Canada Pension Plan and the Quebec Pension Plan. The situation is not the same for her husband—he continues to get the same pension even after his wife has died.

The income to which a widow is entitled after the death of her husband is less than 30 per cent of their previous income as a couple, and should a widow remarry she almost invariably loses the benefits she might have otherwise. Three out of five women over 65 and four out of five women over 75 are single, widows or divorced.

Mr. Chairman, these few facts are a reminder that women make up most of the elderly group and that they are more directly affected by deindexation. Women have long since been waiting for the day when Canadian society will put them on the same footing as men. Elderly women have long since been waiting for the day when they will be able to live in complete dignity rather than live off social assistance. In my opinion, therefore, pension deindexation is unacceptable to an elderly person since it flies in the face of the most basic principles of social justice. Indeed, Mr. Chairman, what justice is there in reducing from one year to the next the purchasing power of a group of people who are among the most needy in our society? In my opinion, this is an inhumane measure which denies the fine principles contained in the speeches made by the Prime Minister during his election campaign.

I remember the solemn promises made by the Hon. Member for Baie Comeau (Mr. Mulroney) last summer. First, he was to re-establish full cost of living indexing of old age security pensions from January 1, 1985, and he also said that, as soon as its financial position would allow it, the government would provide greater financial assistance to single senior citizens still living below the poverty line, that the New Horizons program would be maintained and that it would be adequately funded. In his usual low and solemn voice, which he uses to try to show how serious his comments are, the Right Hon. Prime Minister therefore made specific promises to senior citizens. From now on, Mr. Chairman, we should perhaps become suspicious when the Prime Minister lowers his voice and speaks slowly. The solemnity of his voice is not proportional to the priority he gives an issue, contrary to what he is always trying to make Canadians believe.

The deindexing of senior citizens' pensions is unacceptable. Even the Prime Minister heard this yesterday evening in Baie Comeau, and he did not succeed in convincing anyone. I therefore believe that it is more than time for him to retreat. It is time to reassure senior citizens and tell them that deindexing will not happen.

Mr. Lanthier: Please! I do not want to discuss the value of the solemn voice of the Prime Minister or of the caricatures, but I would like to comment a few points. First, I completely agree that the situation of some women, especially older women, is deplorable. What was said earlier is quite right. They stay old longer and poor longer. This is a deplorable situation of which the Government is well aware. However, I can tell the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pepin) that our Government did something about it. We were criticized for acting with too much haste, but we were conscious of the difficulties faced by a certain group in our society and we took action to provide pensions for single people, most of whom were women between the ages of 60 and 65. Without waiting for a comprehensive economic study, we immediately took action to alleviate somewhat this obvious inequity of which one group in our society was the victim. Indeed, there remains a lot to be done, but the measures introduced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) are aimed at creating jobs, putting the affairs of the state in order, and bring our national debt under control. But it means bringing down the social programs to what they used to be and developing them progressively, instead of increasing outright our national debt.

I can tell the Hon. Member for Outremont that the government is fully aware of these problems and that we are trying, within the limits of our available resources, to meet the most pressing needs of the less favoured Canadians.

That was my second point. My third point is that Hon. Members have mentioned on several occasions that the 3 per cent cut in purchasing power would affect, as of next year, the income of our senior citizens who receive the Old Age Security pensions and the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

I brought this figure to its proper level a moment ago when I said that it represented slightly less than 1.5 per cent of the total income of the OAS and GIS recipients. It certainly represents 3 per cent of the total income of OAS recipients. But let us turn to the former, those needy senior citizens, for they are those whom I sincerely believe the opposition is trying to help. I am reminded that actually I am lucky there are experts present who can answer this kind of questions—

Mr. Prud'homme: How lucky you are!

Mr. Lanthier: —and make up for my limited competence which I confess, and that is the difference!

So I am told here that this was less than 1.5 per cent of the total income of the people who were in need of it, but this should not be considered directly as a decrease in purchasing power. I would, therefore, like to submit a figure which is based on economic studies and which indicates that the 1.5 per cent indexing loss on total income amounts to a purchasing power decrease of approximately one half of that, because where the food basket is increasing in price, there can be substitute products and the result is only one half of that. Therefore, they should not broadcast figures like 3 per cent as they are now doing, as they were trying to push on earlier. They were trying to equate the 3 per cent possible de-indexing loss to a 3 per cent loss in purchasing power.

On the basis of our studies, we feel that for those who are most in need, the decrease will amount to only 0.7 per cent, according to those economic studies.

Third, I would like to raise another point the Hon. Member for Outrement (Mrs. Pépin) made, and this makes me a little nervous, when it was suggested that we were in—

[English]

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. Some time ago my colleague, the Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell, asked that a ruling be made on comments made by the Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake who used the word "lie" in association with the Member's comments. Since the previous Chairman claimed not to have heard those comments, and since I know that you heard them, I wonder whether you could rule on whether it was appropriate for the Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake to call the Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russel a liar in the House. I am quite sure you heard the comments, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Gormley): I would like to advise the Member—

Mr. Malone: On the same point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Gormley): Order, I would like to advise the Member that the Chair has already ruled on that matter. It is not a point of order.

Mr. Tobin: The Chair claimed it had not heard the comments. I know that you heard them and that is why I asked you.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Gormley): It is not a point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: I was interrupted on the third point. What scares me terribly bad is the reference to a mixed economy, coming from a member of a party that is so near those who would rather nationalize and operate the economy by means of state measures. Recently we have been seeing direct or indirect Government involvements. We have seen how successful that has been in dealing with unemployment and job creation. I think that all Canadians now feel, as they clearly showed on September 4, that Government must get out of our business. The Government is not qualified to manage business. This is acknowledged by all Canadians, and it has been proven. The results are there to see. So, what scares me is when they refer to a mixed economy. I submit that we are now contending with a multitude of Crown Corporations, and it is very difficult to get out of that situation.

● (2020)

I must now show this Government's colours. We are for private enterprise and we are convinced that the numerous permanent jobs we need to create will only be created through the private sector.

[English]

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak on this debate because I have heard so much nonsense from the government benches that I cannot remain silent. Our Party is not opposed to borrowing. Our Party is not as frightened of the deficit as the Conservative Party which now forms the Government. We support deficits and we support borrowing if they are required for reasons which make sense, if they are required to help people who need help and if they provide jobs. We cannot support a borrowing Bill which takes from those who are poor and old and gives to those who already have more than anyone else.

The Government is proposing to take $1.6 billion from the retired people of Canada to give almost all of it, $1.4 billion, to those in the top income levels of the country. That we cannot support. There is nothing which has made me more angry than to hear Conservative Members of Parliament here in the House of Commons and outside say that there is no real concern among the retired people of this country, that they understand what the Government is doing and are prepared to take their share of the burden in getting the country moving in the right direction. They say that all the fuss we hear is caused by the misinformation given to senior citizens by members of the Opposition. That tells me that Conservative Members of Parliament, beginning with the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance, have contempt for senior citizens. They believe that senior citizens are stupid.

Government Members believe that even though what the Government is proposing is good and necessary, somehow those terrible people in the Opposition have fooled and befuddled senior citizens so that they are expressing opposition to what the Government proposes even though what the Government proposes is good and should really be supported. They are really saying about senior citizens that not only are they old and poor but they are stupid. They are not stupid. They understand what is going on and they have reacted in a way which I have not seen before in almost 40 years of political life. I have never seen such unanimous opposition to a proposal made by any Government, federal or provincial, as I have seen expressed in the last few days and weeks to the proposal in the Budget designed to reduce the income of senior citizens by 3 per cent per year beginning in January 1986.

I do not know how the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance came up with the figure of 1.5 per cent. It is quite clear in the Budget that the Old Age Security benefits will not be automatically indexed quarterly, as they have been since 1972 or 1973, by whatever the increase in the cost of living has been in that quarter, but that in each year beginning January 1, 1986, there will be no indexation of the Old Age Security pensions for the first 3 per cent of the increase in the cost of living.

The increase in the cost of living is down right now. This year it is down dramatically from what it was a few years ago, but it is only down to 4 per cent. If it stays at 4 per cent next year, something which is doubtful, then people receiving Old Age Security benefits will have a reduction in their real purchasing power of 3 per cent. The Parliamentary Secretary tried to rationalize his position by saying that the reduction of 1.5 per cent would not be so serious because somehow senior citizens could purchase alternatives.

I would like to bring to the attention of the Parliamentary Secretary an article which appeared in the Montreal Gazette, a newspaper which is neither radical nor revolutionary. This article appeared on May 24 of this year and the headline reads:

> Budget hurts poor, consumer groups say.

Let me read to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary a couple of paragraphs from that article, because they point directly to what he has said and show how wrong he is. The article reads:

> To illustrate the effect of the budget's new taxes on consumers, The Gazette bought the Paré-Julien family a pre-budget sample of consumer goods—including food, vermouth, cigarettes and health-care products—that appear to be affected by the budget increases. The goods came from a nearby Provigo.
> The total bill came to $46.72, including $1.37 worth of Quebec tax on certain items.
> If the Quebec tax stayed the same, the new taxes would raise the bill to $50.66—
> But based on the budget indications, the new taxes would add $3.94 to the shopping basket.

It seems to me that $3.94 on $46.72 is not less than 1.5 per cent. According to my calculations, it is over 6 per cent of that amount. The Parliamentary Secretary is wrong on that score.

● (2030)

Let me put on the record some of the things which Members of Parliament are hearing from senior citizens across the country. Let me begin with a communication which came from the New Brunswick Senior Citizens' Federation dated June 14, 1985, addressed to all Members of Parliament of Canada of all political Parties, all Members of the Senate of Canada, all provincial premiers and all senior citizens' associations across Canada. I am sure the Parliamentary Secretary knows that we terrible New Democrats do not have very much support in New Brunswick, so we cannot be accused of having fomented that. After all, the Conservatives won most of the seats in New Brunswick, so I do not know how the Liberals could have produced it. Someone must have done it. Maybe it was the senior citizens themselves. Despite the arguments of Conservative members, maybe the senior citizens of New Brunswick are not so stupid. Maybe they know what is happening.

I would like to read into the record what the senior citizens in New Brunswick wrote in a circular which was sent to all Members of Parliament. I presume the Parliamentary Secretary received a copy. The circular is from the New Brunswick Senior Citizens' Inc. It reads:

> On June 5th, we held a media conference in Moncton to announce our plans to make everyone aware of the immorality and dishonesty of tampering with Canada's (already inadequate) pension system for the elderly.
> We indicated that we would make waves from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This has indeed happened.

The circular continues:

> New Brunswick senior citizens are a rare breed. There are 76,800 of them. Five hundred new retirees are added to statistics monthly.
> Seventy-three per cent of them are below the poverty level (GIS). Tremendous numbers of these are single ladies and/or widows of lumbermen, fishermen or farmers.

An Hon. Member: Is that relevant to the borrowing Bill?

Mr. Orlikow: Of course, it is relevant. Part of the reason for which the Government must borrow the money is that it has refused to tax those who can afford to pay the money. If that money was collected, the Government would not need to borrow as much. It is taking the money from those who do not have it—old age pensioners. I presume that the Hon. Member who interjected did so because he does not want me to put on the record what the senior citizens of New Brunswick have said.

The circular continues:

> We will go to any limits to stop these troublesome vibrations coming out of Ottawa, upsetting the quality of life of so many.
> You should know that the "social", "physical" and "medical" aspects of a senior citizen's life are extremely interwoven.
> Anything that is done or caused to be done to affect any one or more of these three important aspects . . . will have a nefarious effect on the elderly!

Anything that is done to improve any one or more of these three will have a marked beneficial effect upon the elderly.

That is what the senior citizens in New Brunswick have said.

I have a copy of a telegram which was sent to the Minister of National Health and Welfare and to the Minister of Finance a few days ago. The telegram was sent by the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada. That is a very hard-working group which has been in the forefront in urging improvements in the social security system of Canada for many years. The telegram reads:

National Council of Jewish Women of Canada representing 4,000 women presently meeting in Ottawa at its 23rd biennial convention urges the Government of Canada to continue the indexing of old age pensions. We oppose any measure which threatens the financial security of senior citizens in order to reduce the deficit.

We are beginning to hear from seniors. I received a telephone call in my office last week from the management of a large shopping mall in my constituency. They invited my assistant to go to the mall in order to obtain signatures for a petition which would oppose the deindexing of pensions. They told us that they would be quite happy to set up tables and chairs. They said that the only thing we could not do was put up a sign indicating that we were from the New Democratic Party.

I would like to read into the record the wording of the petition. I would like a Conservative Member of Parliament, who has been saying that we have been misrepresenting the facts to the seniors, to get up after I have finished and tell Members of the House how we are misrepresenting the facts and the situation as it will affect our senior citizens. The petition reads:

That in the opinion of your petitioners, the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security (OAS) program, and

That the annual cut to each and every OAS pensioner in Canada will be $100 in 1986, $205 in 1987, $315 in 1988, $431 in 1989, $553 in 1990 and $680 in 1991 and

That cuts in the OAS fly in the face of a Progressive Conservative campaign promise that "a PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis", and

That deindexing represents a massive withdrawal from our collective commitment to public pensions, indicating the Government favours shifting to a system of tax-subsidized private savings for retirement and

That the losers will be the poor, the unemployed and women

Wherefore, the undersigned your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security program in Canada.

I would urge any Conservative Member of Parliament who believes that any statement of fact in that petition is not true to get up and tell the Members of the House why it is not true.

I was at the shopping mall with a few friends and workers last Friday afternoon from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. We collected 1,500 signatures. The people not only signed their names, they also gave their addresses. Naturally, most of the people who signed the petition live in my constituency. However, people from the ridings of Winnipeg North Centre and Winnipeg-Birds Hill, which are represented by my colleagues, signed the petition. As well, people from the riding of Winnipeg-Fort Garry, which is represented by a Liberal member, signed the petition. People from the ridings of Winnipeg-St. James, St. Boniface and Selkirk-Interlake, which are Conservative ridings, signed the petition. 'Lo and behold, people from the riding of Provencher, which is represented by the Minister of National Health and Welfare, signed the petition.

Conservative members from Manitoba issued a press statement which said that they were not hearing from their constituents. Mr. Chairman, they are hearing from their constituents. They ought not to try to kid their constituents or anyone else that the senior citizens are not upset. I told the Hon. Member for Portage-Marquette, the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board, that unless the Government changed its policy before Parliament recesses on June 28, that I would take a day or two in early July to visit some of the seniors in the towns of Portage la Prairie and Neepawa which are in his riding. I said that I would take the petition with me to see how many of those seniors would sign it. The Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board knows that many seniors will sign that petition. They are not foolish, nor are they stupid. They know that deindexation of old age pensions will have a very adverse effect on their lives.

Let me just quote from two letters, Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his 20 minute period has now expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Chairman, I am quite pleased to see . . . I have the floor . . . My colleague seems somewhat surprised—

[English]

I do not argue with Mr. Chairman. He recognized the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis and I am the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis. I must say that I am very pleased to see so many Hon. Members coming into the House at this time.

[Translation]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, the rules do not allow me to answer allegations. I was challenged a while ago and I had no opportunity to answer.

Mr. Gauthier: There were no allegations. You had nothing to say.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I have already given the floor to the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme).

Mr. Prud'homme: I am also pleased to note that the Government House Leader and the Government whip are here.

[English]

But I will say what I was going to say. Since the beginning of this debate I have been very silent. I have listened very politely to all the arguments which were put forward. It is also well known that I do not participate in debate too often. I do it when I think there are people I should defend, such as those in the arts community who are going to be facing greater problems and difficulty. Then I feel I should participate in the debate. The reason I do so tonight is very simple.

I represent a district in Montreal which is know to have the greatest number of older citizens in the Province of Quebec because it is the oldest centre of Montreal. It is called the Quartier Villeray. I have been asked questions and I must be fair—as I try to be all the time to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of Finance—but I must admit that after listening to their arguments I was under a lot of strain to make sure that the kind of answer I have to the senior citizens in my district was the kind of answer that was fair and honest, and one which no one could hold against me.

[Translation]

I met with senior citizens at various locations. Their financial circumstances are slightly different. In the western section, at the Résidence Saint-Laurent, the people mostly do not get the GIS. They are people who have managed their assets, who have been lucky, who worked differently, who perhaps held positions in the community which enabled them to save money more than others who were not as lucky. However, those people at the Résidence Saint-Laurent asked me the following question: Why should we pay 3 per cent when the further announcement is made, granted, in 1986? I visited some people at the Résidence Berri-Lajeunesse. It is another class of citizens who had a hard time finding a place to live either at the Résidence Berri-Lajeunesse, at the Résidence Jarry, at the Résidence Hélène-Boullé or at the Résidence Louvain.

They had problems members of all parties should know about because we all have to deal with them. They had problems finding a place to live. They finally did, but they need both the OAS and the GIS to make ends meet. That is the only way.

An Hon. Member: Right on!

Mr. Prud'homme: I went a bit further and met residents of the Tournesol, Jean-Valets and Jean-Talon homes. This is another group of citizens I represent in Montreal. They are senior citizens and former residents of the Vieux-Montreal. They are not all from the downtown area. Some are from the center-north of Montreal. My colleagues know that I represent also new Canadian citizens who came to settle here in Canada for all kinds of economic reasons. You know, Mr. Chairman, that these people worked really hard. They saved a little bit of money to send the second generation of young Canadians to the best schools. They made real sacrifices. They have not been able to make provisions for themselves, but they have been good Canadian citizens, raising great children to whom they were totally devoted. All those who know some of those newcomers realize how important children are to them... They will make any sacrifice to give their children a good education and the best training available. Their life achievement is to see their children go to college and then lead a successful life. But all they have for themselves is a meagre pension for which I admit they are very grateful. They know that this is a new country for them, a country that welcomed them and gave them the opportunity to express themselves, to raise children who have become good Canadian citizens, and a country that gives them some protection in their old age. What can I tell these people? I for one am prepared tonight—I read carefully all the statements made by the Prime Minister and his Minister of Finance, and I am prepared to bet that by the end of this session, everything is being put into place in order for the Old Security Pension and GIS recipients to receive full indexation of these benefits. If that is what is coming—I would think that is what is coming, because my colleagues from the other side have constituents as I do, they share the concern I have for our senior citizens, starting with my colleague from Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) who also represents an awful lot of senior citizens in his riding, as compared with other ridings, and who was most eager to sign the petition. Everybody knows the respect I have for the former Minister of National Defence of Canada, the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon), who was an excellent Minister of National Defence. I pay tribute to him, for it is not easy to go against one's party and rise to the occasion. I can tell my hon. colleagues and, hopefully, friends, that I have experienced how hard it is to stand for one's convictions and to vote against one's party. My Whip has also experienced the same situation. We should talk to each other and we should not fear saying it aloud, it is not easy to step out from the ranks. I can tell you that I have known this situation during 22 years. Once in a while, one should not be afraid to stand and be counted. Personally, when I saw what the former Minister of Defence, the Hon. Member for Victoria, has done, I recognized a man who said to himself: "I have listened, now the time has come for me to speak up". And he did so. As I said, the newly elected member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve had the same impulse, as did several others. I look at my colleagues tonight and I wish that if it were possible—but as usual I will not get my wish—we could rise above party politics when dealing with this issue, which would make our elderly people really happy!

• (2050)

Listen, last night, you watched television as I did—

An Hon. Member: Saturday night.

Mr. Prud'homme: Yes, Saturday night, I was on CBC. I thank my hon. friend for repeating it in case some of my colleagues did not know about it. I tried not to blow my own horn.

An Hon. Member: You did not succeed!

Mr. Prud'homme: So, if you want to use that tone, I will follow suit.

An Hon. Member: He does not understand anything that goes on in this debate.

Mr. Prud'homme: But, one should always know how to resist provocation. However, in order to make the debate a little livelier and to please my colleague, I accept to raise my voice a little, without shouting of course. I remember what happened during the last election campaign. That was my eighth and I can tell you one thing, that is that it was one of the easiest for me for reasons I cannot understand. However, I can tell you that when a candidate from another riding came in mine to meet with the elderly at their residences: Tournesol, Jean-Valets, Jean-Talon, Louvain, Berri-Lajeunesse, Jarry, Hélène Boullé, and said: Your MP tries to instill fear in the elderly, they almost loated him out because they felt it was not the way I was addressing them. I simply warned them to listen to everyone but to make sure to place their confidence in the right person. Anyway, our job is not to look at the candidate they chose. I would prefer to convince them, dear colleague who interrupted me, than to rush them. With my sensitivity, it is not like me to—oh you do not like what I am saying, but I can tell you openly that I am not ashamed to speak about what I can do. So it would be a shame for me to go and see these people, our elderly, and try to foster anxiety in them. If some people do that, they do not come from the Saint-Denis riding, I can guarantee you that. However, I can tell you that these people know how to listen. They still remember hearing our Right Hon. Prime Minister then, Mr. Turner, telling them to be aware of the secret agenda. It is policy, and he told them frankly. I do not want to be rude to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), his Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) or his Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). However, faced with a general outcry in every part of the country they should reconsider because I never thought that in politics, it was humiliating to reconsider his position. I can guarantee you one thing; I will not be one of those to shout: "We won, we won", like kids. I suggest that the Prime Minister, a man who is willing to listen to sound representations from members of his own party and from other people, will feel free to back track on this now that he knows Canadians do not want deindexation, not only old people but also their children and their grand-children as well as those who are currently 50, 55 and 60. It does not seem much for young Members of Parliament, but think of those people who planned all their life to build up a pension fund, who will say to themselves: "I did not save enough because I was sure that I would get a pension and the GIS". All of a sudden they do not have that anymore money. I would not want to be charged with being prejudiced but one Member said "What is $100 a year?". Face facts and try to say that to someone to whom $100 means a lot. I would not want to play cheap political games by saying that that represents the breakfast of one single person everyday of his life. But that is what it means actually. One has to figure out what $100 is for those people. It might not mean much for some but $200, $500 and $1,200 for a five years period does make a difference to old people. One must think about that. Although I do not understand the government's position, I still hope that from now until June 28, the Right Hon. Prime Minister, and I should add that I did not consult with my party before taking that stand, but—

An Hon. Member: That is not true!

Mr. Prud'homme: No, I do not do it. I did not do it either in this case. You can laugh as much as you like Mr. Chairman of the national caucus of the government, but I did not consult my party because when I rise, and I do not rise in this place very often, I know what has been said and I have heard a lot so far on that matter. I think it is time to remove the political aspect of it, to understand that elder people are helpless.

My father was an old doctor who looked after those people and I learned from him that one of the saddest things about old people is their helplessness, their fear of the future. They always ask themselves if they will have enough for tomorrow. We all have parents and we can understand their concerns. The Hon.—

Mr. Lanthier: Why do you use these scare tactics? What you say is outrageous.

Mr. Prud'homme: I am sorry. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has an excellent question. He is asking why I am using scare tactics. Well, I am not. Would the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) not agree that it is logical, because the announcement is made, and if nobody spoke up, people would say, of course: You see, nobody is protesting, therefore we will do it. The announcement has not been made by us. It is in the Budget. It is clear. It is absolutely clear. Granted, there will be some "monitoring". I say to the Prime Minister and I ask you, Mr. Chairman, to let us say directly to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and to his Cabinet, that nobody should be ashamed to reverse a decision when it is clear that it is not achieving its purpose. There would be no shame—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Prud'homme: —he should not be ashamed, for instance, to tell us before the end of the session, that he is prepared to reconsider and split this major decision; it was hard to make for him since he was quoted so much as saying the opposite during the election campaign. It is even harder to hear everyday that you have not kept your word. It is hard for a politician to hear that, even harder if he is the Prime Minister of Canada.

We could make an agreement and believe that tomorrow or the day after tomorrow, the Prime Minister will announce that, because of all these representations, he is going to split his decision, that the people who how receive the OAS and the GIS will get the full indexation. It is over, we do not talk about it any more, do not worry, and have a wonderful summer. First part of the decision.

As far as the others are concerned, those who do not receive the OAS, he could go ahead with everything he said, as reported on page 5772, as he has said so often:

So he could go on for those people who are not as worried about their future. These people are less concerned, those who have only their old age pension, because there are always people who are more worried than others.

We will continue to fight so that the people who are not as worried can keep their indexing.

An Hon. Member: He is doing great, is he not!

Mr. Prud'homme: We will keep on fighting so that they can keep their indexing, but the Prime Minister could still say . . . Listen. Last night, he was told off. Mr. Bélanger, if I am not mistaken, asked him in the senior citizens' home: Why not cut the pension paid to Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Desmarais or Mr. Bronfman. You could study that during the summer. I said "study". I repeat for the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, I said "study", monitor, but do not come up suddenly with a surprise at the end of the session, saying: Yes, we are going to play politics, or no, you are going to get half—

I believe my colleagues from the Official Opposition and others would be pleased if the Prime Minister came to us and said: Listen. It is going to be the end of it. I think we received enough representations, because, you know, I do not want and I will never reveal a private conservation I had with my colleagues from other parties, because that is the proper way to behave for any civilized Member of this House. We must have discussions with our colleagues from the other parties, listen to them and get some results. This is what I have done this afternoon with the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) when he argued for a Bill which I find very reasonable.

Thus, I decided to behave sensibly with him. Anyway, I do not see why the Prime Minister, after listening to Members of his party . . . I am looking at you and I could . . . I will not do it, but you know him, we are looking at each other. Be serious. You all have senior citizens in your riding and you have received representations.

An Hon. Member: Of course!

Mr. Prud'homme: Why should we get more than the others? Why should my colleague from northwestern Ontario not get any? Why should the Hon. Member who is pointing at me not get any either? We do not have a monopoly on representations. We are not by monopoly or by virtue the best and you, the bad ones. I think all of us have enough sensitivity to understand that we have brought about a huge problem. You will remember a previous budget that the other Government brought down a few years ago and was then forced to change because of some of its measures were unpopular. I therefore do not see why, Mr. Chairman, and I shall conclude my remarks presently, if you would allow me a few more minutes. But, Mr. Chairman, I think that—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The Hon. Member's time has now expired.

It being nine o'clock, shall I rise, report progress, and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

PATENTS—REQUEST FOR DETAILS CONCERNING CLOSING OF PATENT OFFICE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on May 29, I addressed a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) on the dismantling of the Patent Office. It will be remembered that in the working paper tabled with the Budget and entitled 'New Management Initiatives', on page 21—this is the famous paper of the Hon. Deputy Minister of Canada (Mr. Nielsen), the following suggestion is made: The Government will suggest that the review of patents no longer be carried out by the federal administration and that the examination of patents originally filed in Canada should be contracted out to international research bodies.

Mr. Speaker, I was just paraphrasing an excerpt of that document, and I ask for your indulgence for reading through it a little hastily.

On May 29, I asked the Minister about the proposal made by the Nielsen Task Force. He told me at that time, and I quote:

—the Government is anxious to provide the best possible service at the lowest possible cost . . . and I can assure him that there are quite a few patent applications that must be examined before any employees can be laid off—

In French he used the word "débauchage", but I assume this is correctly translated by "laid off".

—and we must proceed with these applications before any final steps are taken.

Mr. Speaker, this answer suggests that he is in agreement with the recommendation made in that famous document issued by the Deputy Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Nielsen). The question, then, is why is the Government seeking to dismantle the Canadian Patent Office and to have its work done by a foreign agency, which would do the research required to grant Canadian patents at the same time as research for other countries?

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that in 1984-85, for example, 26,947 patent applications were received. More than 90 per cent of them were from abroad. How many people does the Patent Office employ? The jobs of 200 public servants are threatened by this measure. In 1983-84, revenues of the Patent Office amounted to $13,411,000, whereas expenses were only $9,266,000. So, profits for that year reached $4,145,000. These are public figures, Mr. Speaker, I did not make them up. They prove that it is a money making service, a profitable operation serving all Canadians.

• (2105)

[English]

The Patent Co-operation Treaty, which the Minister indicated would have to be signed following amendment in the House to the present legislation, was intended, in the words of the Minister, "to overcome the need for the examination of patents in those countries that adhered to the Treaty".

The signatories to the Treaty recognize that domestic laws vary from nation to nation and that each country must have ultimate control over its domestic patent laws and the patents granted thereunder.

The Patent Co-operation Treaty exists for the benefit of inventors who wish to file patent applications in a number of countries throughout the world. However, experience has shown that it is not economically viable for inventors to take advantage of the terms of the Treaty, unless protection is sought in more than five countries. In 1984, WIPO or the World Intellectual Property Organization office examined only 271 applications under the relevant section of the Treaty.

There would be consequences of the "Nielsen" recommendation concerning the abolishment or withdrawal of the service to Canadians. First, Canada would abdicate its sovereignty over its patent system and would become the only industrialized country in the world which grants patents without domestic examination. On the assumption that 25,000 persons per year still want patent protection in Canada, the staff of the Geneva-based organization will obviously have to be substantially increased, resulting in an export of jobs from Canada to Geneva, Switzerland. Trained professionals in Canada who are knowledgeable in patent law will disappear from the public sector and will substantially be reduced in number in the private sector. The quality and availability of advice to small business will be substantially reduced. That would go against what I consider to be a promise of the Government to encourage small and medium-sized businesses.

What made this question very important was that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) said in a speech in Montreal that there was never any question of him abolishing this service. He said:

Let me state categorically that we have no intention whatsoever of closing the patent office. Nor have we the intention of letting go that substantial body of people whose technical and scientific expertise underpins one of the finest patent services in the world.

I say "hurrah" to the Minister. We have finally received an answer after several weeks of the Minister unknowingly leading people to think that he would close it down following the report entitled New Management Initiatives, by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen).

What will the Minister do? Will he close it down or leave it open? Are we to take the Minister's word in Montreal, or are we to take the word of the Deputy Prime Minister?

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to deal with the matter of the Canadian Patent Office, because the Hon. Member who brought the subject forward discussed a possibility that was studied and a possibility indicated in a report. Again the Opposition is jumping to conclusions when it assumes, if someone studies something or takes something under consideration, that all things are final.

There has been a great deal of confusion about the future of the Canadian Patent Office in the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs since budget night. I want to clarify the situation. To begin with, let me make it perfectly clear that the Government has no intention of doing away with the patent office, nor does it have any intention of letting go, as has already been stated by the Hon. Member who is once again using the old policy of scare tactics, that substantial body of people.

This issue appears to have become magnified out of proportion. The Government intends to reduce our costs by accepting foreign examination results wherever possible. Indeed, this will, as indicated in the budget paper entitled New Management Initiatives, "terminate departmental examinations". However, this does not mean that it will close up the shop.

The confusion probably lies in the fact that the substantive patent examination process consists of three distinct phases, and the Hon. Member is referring to only one of them. One phase is the search, which is to identify earlier, similar inventions. The second stage is the preliminary examination, which is to decide if the invention merits a patent under Canadian law. It is steps one and two of this process which we intend to streamline, although a lot has been done in this regard in the last few years. By acceding to the Patent Co-operation Treaty the Government hopes to be even more efficient. Step three, on the other hand, is not something we can contract out to foreigners and we have no intention of discontinuing that activity.

All of this means that the Patent Office will remain very much in business, doing those things that depend most on its Canadian scientific and technical expertise. There will certainly not be any wholesale dismissal of professional or support staff, nor will there be any reduction in the service offered to the business and scientific community. Indeed, as the Budget points out, we intend to improve our levels of service. Work has already started to find ways to best carry out another important announcement about patents made on budget night; the strengthening of the patent information dissemination through expanded use of the established network of the National Research Council's Canada Institute for Scientific and Technical Information.

We want to be certain that the Canadian patent system is as efficient and effective as possible in meeting our needs as a modern industrial nation. It must enhance transfer of technology between ourselves and the rest of the world, and it must continue to contribute to a strengthening of the climate for investment in Canada.

ENERGY—CLOSURE OF CAPE BRETON HEAVY WATER PLANTS—CREATION OF EMPLOYMENT. (B) REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, on May 29, 1985, I directed a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) regarding the closure of the two Cape Breton heavy water plants. I requested that specific action be taken to create jobs in eastern Nova Scotia. As usual, the Government has failed to take any concrete action when, in fact, the Conservative Member of Parliament for Cape Breton Highlands-Canso (Mr. O'Neil) stated unequivocally that it is the responsibility of the Government of Canada to create the jobs and resolve the high unemployment problem in the area.

On two specific occasions the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) made two commitments. She made a commitment to the workers and the people of Nova Scotia that those two heavy water plants would remain open until such time as new jobs were available and in place. As a result of the Budget the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has reneged on her commitment. It would not be appropriate for me to use the word used by some workers describing the Minister as a "liar". I would not use that word, Mr. Speaker, but that is what they call the Minister. That is what she is doing to the people of Nova Scotia and the workers at those two plants.

There has been no consultation on the closure of those two heavy water plants, not withstanding the fact that the Minister promised the union responsible that there would be meaningful consultation. There has been no impact study of the effects that that will have in Glace Bay and Port Hawkesbury. I find it appalling that the Government of Canada would cut 700 jobs, affecting approximately 300 people, without doing an impact study.

What has the Government done with regard to the closure of the two heavy water plants? The Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) said that the closure of those plants would affect 3,000 jobs. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) arrived in Cape Breton on his private jet. Before leaving Ottawa he said that thousands of new jobs will be created for the people who reside in eastern Nova Scotia. This jellyfish of a Minister said that the Government is going to upgrade a highway and build an industrial park in Antigonish. He said there would be a study with regard to Carbogel. That will create a lot of jobs, Mr. Speaker.

He then went a little further in making another announcement that same day. He talked about having Magna International expand into Cape Breton. That will create another study, Mr. Speaker. There will be another study done on Sydney Steel. He is also going to have another study done of another private company with regard to having a sock manufacturer enter industrial Cape Breton. However, the big announcement of thousands of jobs that the Minister and the Government had promised, and to which they had alluded in the national media, amount to a mere 30 jobs. I suggest that those jobs may be in conflict with an already existing company which operate in industrial Cape Breton.

• (2115)

I say shame on the Government, shame on the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and shame on the jellyfish of a Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I say shame on the Prime Minister who has been referred to both by his own constituents and by workers in my riding as a liar. I say that this is hogwash. The Government ought to take specific action with moneys for Sydney Steel Corporation, the coal industry and a joint venture for the synfuels project. We do not need all government money but we need joint ventures.

The Government ought to conclude a federal-provincial subsidiary agreement on development in eastern Nova Scotia, to include research and development, tourism, fisheries, forestry, municipal infrastructures, small business entrepreneurs and training and education funds. That is what the Government ought to be doing rather than deceiving and, as the workers have said, lying to the people of Nova Scotia.

[Translation]

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is surely not a novice in politics. He has known for a long time about the crucial problems experienced by the heavy water plant of Atomic Energy of Canada in Cape Breton.

[English]

While federal Governments have been as supportive as possible to this industry which has historically been plagued with marketing problems linked to international conditions, the Government has taken decisive action in announcing the closure of these plants. The fact is that there exists a very major over-capacity in Canada's heavy water industry and no immediate solution to marketing difficulties is in view.

In these circumstances, the Government could no longer justify continuing operations at the plants. We found it unconscionable to maintain the status quo at a cost to taxpayers of $100 million per year. We believe that such action would not only have been unfair to the Canadian taxpayer but to heavy water plant workers. They knew that these closures were inevitable and that the indefinite perpetuation of operations would only delay the time when these plants could be replaced with viable long-term industrial activity in Cape Breton.

The Government decided to take the political risk and announce these closures in the May 1985 federal Budget. However, we have not abandoned the people of Cape Breton. As outlined in the Budget, workers will be provided with generous severance benefits, retraining and relocation assistance and financial and career counselling, together with measures designed to facilitate re-employment. In addition, the impact on the affected communities' property tax revenues will be offset for a specific period of time. Another Budget measure is the introduction of a special tax credit which will be instituted to enhance private-sector investment and productive employment in Cape Breton. This will result in no federal income tax being payable by investors for 10 to 15 years.

The unemployment triggered by the plant closures has been significantly offset by announcements made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens). The Minister has announced that $1.5 million in federal funding has been designated to rebuild a burned out fish plant, $4.1 million has been committed for improvements to the Point Tupper pulp and paper mill, and $16 million has been earmarked for improved facilities in the coal mines. In addition, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has appointed an advisory committee on economic development measures for Cape Breton Island, a committee which will start work immediately and submit its first report in September. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has indicated that she is ready to assist in bringing economic renewal to Cape Breton through reliable, sound employment creation.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the Government does not enjoy playing the villain. However, when a very difficult problem exist we try to ameliorate it. Since 1982, AECL has been recommending the closure of the heavy water plants of Cape Breton. Since we came into power, we have studied the problem and the acceptable options considerably. We feel that we have made a responsible decision and put into place responsible measures which will put Cape Breton back on the road to economic renewal.

FINANCE—INVESTMENT OF PENSION FUNDS—BUDGET PROPOSAL. (B) MINISTER'S POSITION

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, on June 5, I asked the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) two questions about the budget proposal which will allow Canadian pension funds to invest $3 abroad for every $1 invested in Canadian small business. I asked the Minister what consultation there had been with Canadians to establish that they were willing to have one-third of their retirement savings invested outside the Canadian economy. The only answer I received was that the people who administered the pension funds wanted this because it would enable them to earn a higher rate. That seemed like a strange answer.

My supplementary question concerned the possible impact, if the Government's three-to-one offer was taken up on a large scale, of an amount leaving Canada which could be as high as $28 billion.

Canadians have at least $90 billion in pension funds. The budget proposal would let pension funds invest up to 7 per cent of their assets in a new small business program, and three times as much, or 21 per cent, in foreign investments. Prior to this, pension funds could invest a maximum of 10 per cent of their assets in foreign investments. With the addition of 21 per cent, there is now a maximum of 31 per cent. The House has just passed the Government's Investment Canada Bill, which throws the country wide open to unfettered foreign ownership, allegedly to create jobs. Nevertheless, apparently the Government is prepared to accept, with equanimity, a flow of capital out of Canada to create jobs elsewhere.

The Minister of State for Finance answered my question about the impact on the Canadian economy of a massive capital outflow, if the program was taken up. She said:

> Mr. Speaker, I assume that the Hon. Member is suggesting that $10 billion invested in Canadian small business is a bad thing.

It is getting increasingly hard to take this Government's dismissive attitude toward serious questions which are asked by the Official Opposition. This is a serious matter and it should be dealt with seriously.

Companies are now being set up. It is happening. Pension funds have generally invested in very traditional kinds of investments. The new companies, which will act as a channel for investment in Canadian small business, will, we trust, bring expertise to entrepreneurial and higher risk investments. We have no guarantee that there will be any limits, other than the percentages which I previously quoted.

I do not understand the Minister's answer that pension funds want this because they can get a higher rate of interest outside Canada. That is a terrible admission of failure. If the Minister is saying that pension funds do not believe they can get a satisfactory rate within Canada, are we to understand that the Government is completely abdicating any improvement in the Canadian economy?

The other point to which I believe we are entitled to an answer is, will the Government be doing any monitoring? Will there be any kind of sensible limits placed on the program? Are we to assume that we again have the kind of open-ended measure which will be demand-driven, which will take on an impetus of its own, and which will leave us possibly facing undesirable consequences down the road?

• (2125)

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the government is worried because pension funds have been slow to invest in Canadian small businesses. However, pension fund assets in Canada now total about $100 billion. Acording to some estimates, only $200 to $300 million, that is one quarter of one per cent, have been invested in limited partnerships. The government has therefore committeed itself to guarantee that a larger part of those funds will be made available to small businesses.

The Budget tries to overcome the lack of interest shown by pension funds by proposing three measures. The first two involve the creation of new institutions, small business investment corporations and small business investment limited partnerships, to facilitate investments. Pension funds will then be allowed to use those vehicles to co-ordinate the research and administration of their investments in small business and thus provide them with limited responsibility.

The third measure would encourage pension funds to make good investments in the small business sector. For each dollar invested in a Canadian small business, these funds will be allowed to invest $3 abroad.

It is true pension funds can invest 7 per cent of their assets in so-called basket investments which, of course, can include investments in small businesses. It is also true that in so doing, another 21 per cent of the assets of these funds could theoretically go to foreign investments.

It is not presently possible to determine how much of this theoretical limit will in fact be used if all basket-type funds are invested in small businesses. However, if pension funds take full advantage of this opportunity, if they invest up to the theoretical limit, they would provide a tremendous economic stimulus to Canadian small business.

The Government will closely monitor the impact of foreign investments by pension funds as well as their direct effects on the economy. If any problems arise, corrective measures will be taken immediately.

Because these measures will encourage investment in the more productive businesses and in high growth firms, we are confident they will contribute to increase productivity and create more jobs for Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted.

Accordingly, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

AGRICULTURE

IMPACT OF BUDGET

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, today, in Toronto, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture is meeting to prepare an action plan in response to the Mulroney-Wilson Budget which has betrayed Canadian farmers. In a statement made on June 6, the OFA said:

The Government has not only ignored its own promises, it has ignored the legitimate needs of our farmers.

Ontario farmers are angry because the Budget did nothing to ease the debt burden hanging over many farmers which, in counties like Bruce, has reached epidemic proportions so that one in three farmers is in serious financial difficulty.

At the same time the Government is increasing farm input costs. For example, it will impose a nine-cent per gallon excise tax on farm fuels on the first of September, just in time for the fall harvest. Imagine a Government so arrogant, so insensitive, so uncaring of the plight of farmers, that it imposes a harvest tax on Canadian agriculture.

In January the Government will impose an additional 1 per cent sales tax on all farm input costs of equipment and supplies. It will also reduce Department of Agriculture programs by $50 million a year.

No wonder the OFA is considering plans today for drastic action, like mass demonstrations, withholding FCC payments, and rotating food strikes. Only strong measures such as these will make the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) understand the serious plight of Canadian farmers.

DISASTERS

WORKERS' MEMORIAL DAY—ANNIVERSARY OF SUDBURY MINING TRAGEDY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, on June 20, 1984, a rockburst occurred at the No. 5 shaft of the Falconbridge mine. This rockburst cost four men—Sulo Korpela, Daniel Lavalle, Wayne St. Michel, and Richard Chénier—their lives, and was the largest mining disaster in Sudbury's recent history. These workers were members of Local 598 of the Mine Mill and Smelter Workers' Union.

I am informing the House that tomorrow, June 20, is the first Workers' Memorial Day, organized by the trade union movement in the Sudbury Basin. It is being held one year to the day after the tragic rockburst which claimed the lives of these four miners. However, this Memorial Day goes beyond that tragic incident and remembers all workers in Canada who have lost their lives on the job. Moreover, tomorrow's remembrance is a tribute to workers everywhere who are the foundation upon which our society is built.

Statistics show that one Canadian worker is injured on the job every 16 seconds, and that occupational accidents and diseases are the third leading cause of death. Indeed, workplace and work related diseases kill more than 900 Canadian workers every year.

It is time to pause and reflect upon the valued contribution workers make to our society. We must never forget the risks inherent in this contribution.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

ONTARIO—END OF 42 YEARS OF CONSERVATIVE PARTY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, June 18, 1985, will always be remembered as a sad day in the history of Ontario. That is the day when one of the finest Governments in the western world was brought to an end by the socialists and their Liberal friends.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nicholson: To suggest, as has Mr. Rae, that Ontario has not had good government for the past 42 years is an insult to two generations of Ontario voters. Under the Conservatives we have seen a health care program second to none, one of the world's finest educational systems, a superb transportation network, and compassionate social programs combined with sound fiscal management.

Mark my words, Bob Rae and the socialists will live to regret their mistake of yesterday, because they will go the same route as the Social Credit Party which voted against the Conservatives in 1963 and 1979. However, that will be a good thing for Ontario, and a good thing for Canada.

POLITICAL PARTIES

PENSIONS—POSITION TAKEN BY LIBERAL PARTY AND NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, during the last two weeks the Liberal Party and the NDP have been acting out a political farce on the floor of the House of Commons. That would be bad enough at any time, but these two Parties have made the old age pensioners of Canada the goats in their performance, and that is inexcusable.

It is fair ball to argue facts, but opposition Members have been using their imagination in arriving at figures far into the future which are actually ridiculous, as well as words that are false. Day after day they have been asking the Government to restore and reinstate the indexing of old age pensions. They know that we cannot restore something that has not been taken away. Then, to frighten the aged further, they move their strawman calculations into the nineties, and weep crocodile tears over the millions which they kid themselves will be taken from the pockets of pensioners in 1991.

There is no Bill before the House to take away any of the indexing from pensioners. There has not been one cent taken off their cheques or their pensions.

Why are the socialists and their spouse, the Liberals, acting like intoxicated drug addicts? I will tell the House why. The Liberal Party and the NDP do not like the proper plan of the Government to remove the indexing from the pay-cheques of MPs and Senators, and they are using the pensioners as a back-door way to save their own indexing. Worse than that, the Liberal Party and the NDP are trying to build their political machines on the backs of the aged, and I say: "Shame".

OLD AGE SECURITY

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT RESPECT ITS PLEDGES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Last week and again yesterday, Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) and I toured Quebec ridings represented by Progressive Conservative Members to find out whether there is any truth in what the Prime Minister and his colleagues have been saying. As you may recall, they claim that senior citizens are quite prepared to make sacrifices and make do with 3 per cent less.

Mr. Speaker, I want to report to the House that in the regions of Quebec City and Sherbrooke, on the Island of Montreal and in the beautiful riding of Baie-Comeau where the Prime Minister, now a lifetime citizen of Westmount, was born, 2,000 people signed a petition against the Prime Minister's decision. In the riding of the Prime Minister, in the City of Baie-Comeau, the Prime Minister's Office tried to influence people but could not prevent 200 elderly residents of Baie-Comeau from defending their rights and signing the petition. The executive of the Baie-Comeau Golden Age Club spoke up in defence of the rights of their 500 members, again in spite of underhanded pressure from PMO officials. All those people urged me to tell the Progressive Conservative Members to stand up on their own two feet and respect the Prime Minister's pledges to maintain full old age pension indexation.

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, very recently the mother of the Chief of Staff for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada (Mr. Crosbie) was appointed to the Saint John's Harbour Commission, which led me to conclude that this would be a method of helping a lot of mothers in Canada, including mine. I understand that these appointments are made on the recommendation of the local Member of Parliament.

I will not complain about the appointment of the mother of the Chief of Staff for the Minister of Justice, but since the Minister is not here I will ask the Parliamentary Secretary to advise me later this day whom I should get to recommend my mother for an appointment to any board or commission, so she can make a few extra dollars to cover her loss in income because of the deindexation of her old age pension.

With all the boards and commissions that we have in Canada, how many thousands more mothers who receive the Old Age Security pension could get appointed to a board or a commission? I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary will advise me as to whom I should get to recommend these mothers for these appointments.

CANADIAN EGG MARKETING AGENCY

DENIAL OF PRODUCTION QUOTA TO NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency is best known to Canadians as that organization which has destroyed millions of eggs in order to keep consumer prices high. Now CEMA has hit a new low. It has denied the Northwest Territories access and a requested minimum quota of 200,000 layers.

Apparently the colonialist mentality of CEMA is such that it would oblige the Territories to import vast quantities of food from the south, but will not allow them to export one of the few agricultural commodities which might be competitively produced in the north, in return. At the same time as it sanctions the importation of millions of dollars worth of eggs into Canada from the United States, CEMA refuses the creation of jobs in the Northwest Territories and the employment of Canadians to produce eggs needed by Canadian families.

If this is to be the attitude of CEMA, then I say let us get rid of it and let us have a fair, open, and competitive marketplace from which both producers and consumers can benefit.

SMALL BUSINESS

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL COMMITMENT TO HELP DEVELOP SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia-Lambton): Mr. Speaker, for those of us who have been small-businessmen, and those of us who are concerned with such entrepreneurs, we recognize full well the onerous regulations and paper burdens which in the past have been placed on our small-businessmen. These burdens have not been without cost to a large number of small businesses which are struggling to develop a lucrative Canadian business.

I am pleased to see that this problem has been recognized and corrective measures have been initiated with the Intergovernmental Position Paper on The Principles and Framework for Regional Economic Development. This document, which was fully endorsed by all Governments, reflects a commitment to develop more effective policies for small and medium sized businesses. A reduction in the regulatory and paper burdens placed on small businesses is a positive step which will undoubtedly benefit all of the 750,000 Canadian small businesses.

PENSIONS

BUDGET EFFECT ON INDEXATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) about a constituent from Scarborough Centre. She is a widow. In August she will be 75 years old. She is a Canadian by choice, and fiercely proud of it. During the Depression she and her husband worked to build a life. He went to war and was severely wounded, and she still receives a small pension from the Department of Veterans Affairs. They worked hard to obtain their dream, a home. However, in 1967 her husband died suddenly. Working as a mail clerk she paid off her small mortgage, and continued to do volunteer work in the community.

This 74-year old lady pays for food for herself and her two companions, cats. She pays property taxes, electricity and water bills, and telephone bills.

● (1415)

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) talks about deficits. Yet he gives billions of dollars to rich investors, speculators, and oil companies. The 74-year old lady in Scarborough Centre talks about nickels and dimes and how the deindexation of her pension will hurt. The deindexation of her basic pension will mean the difference between macaroni and bologna. I ask the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to prevail upon the Minister of Finance and ask him to rise today to admit that he has made a mistake, and that he will reintroduce in the Chamber today full pensions for all senior citizens from coast to coast.

OLD AGE SECURITY

FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a few questions for the Prime Minister on behalf of our senior citizens, but first of all, I would like to congratulate our fellow citizens for standing up for their rights, and I want to greet their representatives who came to Ottawa today to protect those basic rights.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday and the day before, the Prime Minister was in Manicouagan. Last week I was in Vancouver Quadra, and I am sure we both listened to what pensioners had to say. My question to the Prime Minister is therefore as follows: Is he finally going to let himself be swayed by public opinion and reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security benefits? Is he going to do so right now, not later on, not after the House adjourns but now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to congratulate the leaders of senior citizens' groups, who, as always, are behaving with great dignity and for whom we have nothing but admiration. I have met with representatives of senior citizens, both in the riding of Manicouagan and today on Parliament Hill. There are a number of differences of opinion, but there are two elements that keeping coming back. First of all, a serious concern about the future of social programs as a result of our national debt. Senior citizens are aware that social programs could be seriously affected by this appalling situation. Second, there is a particular emphasis on the circumstances of senior citizens who are among the neediest in our society. I have noted their comments and suggestions, and as I said before, we will be making a statement at the appropriate time.

ELECTION CAMPAIGN STATEMENT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in recent remarks that the Prime Minister has made, both in the House and outside the House, he has virtually diluted the Budget of the Minister of Finance into a series of proposals. We all know that he is going to reverse this measure. We all know that he feels that we cannot control the public debt of the country on the backs of those who can no longer protect themselves, the senior citizens.

The Prime Minister used the French word "inquiétude", which means anxiety. There is a lot of anxiety out there and, more than that, the word of the Prime Minister is on the line. Will he fulfil the promise he made to the people of Canada while he was in Sherbrooke last July, by restoring the full protection against inflation that indexation brings? Will he do that now?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the problem we inherited was very well described yesterday by one of the great Ministers of Finance this country has known, the Hon. Jacques Parizeau, who does not share my political views but is a most distinguished and competent gentleman. This is what he said: "In my view, the first federal Budget shows remarkable wisdom in its approach to the Budget deficit. The point is made that the cost of servicing the national debt is gradually eliminating the Government's room to manoeuver and forcing it to cut the costs of other programs and finally eliminate some programs altogether."

That, Mr. Speaker, is the tragic legacy we have inherited here in Canada.

Like Mr. Parizeau, senior citizens realize that the national debt and interest payments on the debt are causing people to doubt this country's ability to support social programs. We will not renege on our responsibilities at the national level nor on our responsibility to senior citizens. We are going to rebuild a strong and prosperous economy in Canada, and that is how we will be able to maintain social programs in this country.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has brought into his camp a former Minister of Finance from Quebec.

I want to remind him, and the House, that I had the honour, as Minister of Finance, to bring indexation into the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I did it with the support of Mr. Stanfield and the entire Conservative Party. The House of Commons agreed that it was the only way to protect our senior citizens against the ravages of inflation.

Why will the Prime Minister not admit that he cannot control the public debt on the backs of those who cannot protect themselves? The only way which our senior citizens have of protecting themselves is through the full indexation of their pensions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition has, indeed, given us half the story. He brought in indexation, but he also brought in deficit financing which has crippled the country and crippled its ability to maintain social programs.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: That's what you did. That is exactly what the Leader of the Opposition did. He inherited a country which was debt free. He inherited a financial statement which was balanced. He transformed that into a great deficit which has crippled the nation and has now placed in peril our obligation to senior citizens.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: You should be ashamed of what you did. You have sown the seeds for the destruction of social programs. We are going to correct it, and maintain those social programs for our senior citizens.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT USES ELDERLY TO REDUCE DEFICIT

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Prime Minister that the people of Baie-Comeau were expecting a better performance today. Yesterday I was in Baie-Comeau and he was here, and you know Mr. Lord, the President of the Baie-Comeau Senior Citizens' Club. Today, these people from Baie-Comeau and Mr. Lord, the president who represents 500 residents of Baie-Comeau, want to know why the Prime Minister is using the elderly, the neediest in our society, to reduce the deficit, and they have asked me to ask the Prime Minister: Why didn't you pick on the rich to reduce the deficit?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, I was in Baie-Comeau, and I heard about the Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie. They told me: Mr. Mulroney, this is the same guy who made a six percent cut in our pensions two years ago. The Liberal Government . . . they made such an impression, there were ten of them in a senior citizens' home, two Members, eight Liberal organizers and eleven residents. People on the North Shore are sick and tired of hearing you trumpet these half-truths among the senior citizens here.

Mr. Malépart: I am sure the people from Baie-Comeau, who said they would be listening to question period yesterday and told me that they were starting to feel disappointed, must feel really disappointed today after hearing the Prime Minister's answer. Yesterday, the Prime Minister . . . his office tried to manipulate senior citizens in his riding to keep us from meeting them, and you know what his office said? The Prime Minister is against de-indexation but his caucus made him do it, Mr. Speaker. That is the kind of manipulation we are getting from the Prime Minister's Office.

• (1425)

INQUIRY WHY PRIME MINISTER DOES NOT MAKE ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. It does not do any good to keep playing games. Pretty soon you are going to say you made a mistake. Why not do the gentlemanly thing while the senior citizens who built this country are here? Why not tell them today, right now, that you are going to protect their Old Age Security pensions? Why not tell them now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there are senior citizens, here in the House of Commons, as there were in Baie-Comeau and Sept-Îles the day before yesterday, when the only question they kept asking and which concerned not the New Democrats but the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie, was: How come a Liberal Member who cut 6 per cent from our pensions has the guts to visit us here on the North Shore? You got a cold reception because the people on the North Shore know what you are like and are sick and tired of you and your half-truths about this issue.

Mr. Speaker: May I remind Hon. Members that any reference to anyone in the gallery, by any Hon. Member of the House, is out of order.

REQUEST FOR INDEXATION AND DECISION BEFORE SUMMER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): My question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. In Sherbrooke, during the election campaign, the Prime Minister promised to index all pensions. Today, outside Parliament, the very same Quebecers and other Canadians discussed the situation once again. They simply want two things: first, indexation of all pensions and second, a decision before the summer.

My question to the Prime Minister is very simple. Do you agree, and if not, why not?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, at this very moment, there is not a single elderly person in Quebec or Canada who has suffered the slightest reduction in benefits, not one. In the months to come, the only thing that will happen is that benefits for the elderly will be increased, and that is a fact. There is not a single person in Canada who has suffered any reduction in benefits whatsoever, and that is the truth.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: Second, in the Budget we made a commitment to monitor the situation very closely, while at the same time trying to create new wealth in Canada and thus be able to help the elderly even more. We have made a commitment to monitor the situation and to improve our assistance to the elderly as soon as feasible.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I say quite simply to the Prime Minister that it is quite true that no pensions have yet been reduced—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: —but it is also true, Mr. Speaker, that no one on this side of the House has said as of this moment that pensions are reduced.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: We have said what the pensioners understand, that it is in the Prime Minister's Budget that pensions will be cut if the Government doesn't change its policy. That's for sure.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1430)

Mr. Broadbent: A reduction in an increase is a cut, and pensioners understand that very well.

ANXIETY OF PENSIONERS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has noted that pensioners are in a state of anxiety. He observed that himself, and Members on all sides of the House are aware of that. Why is it too much for the Prime Minister, before Parliament recesses, to reduce that anxiety by clarifying the situation and stating that, yes, indexed pensions will be fully restored, and to do it before the end of this month?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has just made an important statement, and if he wants to be fair, he will acknowledge first of all that there has been no reduction of any kind in the pension system. Second, the measure in question will not become effective until next January, so we have six or seven months to monitor the situation, as indicated in the Budget, and to take appropriate action as soon as feasible.

I think the Hon. Member, who shares at least the economic philosophy of Mr. Parizeau, would have no objection to my quoting Mr. Parizeau: "The point is that the cost of servicing the national debt is gradually eliminating the Government's room to manoeuvre, thus obliging it to reduce the cost of other programs and finally eliminate programs altogether."

We want equity and justice for the elderly, and the best guarantee that this will be achieved is to have a growing economy, to have a solid basis on which the economy can be rebuilt.

[English]

REQUEST FOR EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister says he has six months to monitor the situation. We on this side of the House do not believe we should put our pensioners through six months of continuing anxiety. That is the difference.

Mr. Dick: You are the cause of the anxiety.

Mr. Broadbent: The Prime Minister made the promise in Sherbrooke in July. His Minister of Health made it at the end of January when the Government knew the debt situation. We learned this morning that the Parliamentary Secretary to that Minister made a public commitment on April 23 that there would be no cut in pensions, no removal in indexation. Considering all that, why does the Prime Minister not do the decent thing, live up to his promise, give back their indexation to the pensioners, and do it this week?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have indicated quite clearly in the Budget Papers our concern about this particular provision, especially as it applies to the elderly poor. That is why we specifically indicated that we would be monitoring the matter very, very carefully so at the earliest possible moment we would be able to take appropriate and helpful action for the senior citizens.

I think it must be mentioned again, in fairness to everyone, that not a single senior citizen has had a benefit cut in any way, nor shall there be. We are in the process of giving ourselves the time to take a look at it, and, as soon as we can, we will take remedial action.

REQUEST BY PENSIONERS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I might say that seniors understand they are going to lose 20 per cent of their purchasing power if his Government's plans are adopted. That is the point.

Every senior citizen whom I have talked to in the last two weeks has asked me to ask the Prime Minister this question. Canadian seniors have suffered through wars and an economic depression and, I suppose, through the betrayal and lies of the Conservatives in last summer's election campaign. What more do they have to do to convince him and his Government that they have no support for deindexation? Their Budget is not viewed as fair by any one of those senior citizens, and all they ask is: will the Government restore full indexation now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): First of all my hon. friend, for whom I have a great regard, has made a profoundly inaccurate statement that there will be a reduction of 20 per cent in their purchasing power. That is absolutely untrue. I know him to be an honourable man and he will want to withdraw that forthwith.

Without any hesitation, Mr. Speaker, I readily acknowledge that this country owes so much to its senior citizens. It strikes me that we owe them, most of all, an economy which will guarantee these programs can be maintained. They know that you cannot borrow, and borrow, and borrow, and spend borrowed money, because that will result in the breakdown of the social programs to which they are entitled. That is why we are trying to be prudent, and realistic, and fair, by rebuilding the economy so we can give more to the senior citizens.

REQUEST FOR COMMITMENT

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, what the Prime Minister owes the elderly in our society is a Government which will not lay the burden of deficit reduction on the backs of the poor. I ask him again, does every senior citizen have to go through another six months of worrying about whether or not they should renew leases—believe me, there is confusion and apprehension in this land—

Mr. Andre: Spread by your Party.

Mr. Dick: You distort the truth.

Mr. Frith: It is being spread by this Government's indecision.

Mr. Andre: Tell the truth and they won't worry.

Mr. Frith: All they ask is one simple thing. Please, before this House rises for the summer break, make the commitment to restore full indexation?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I do not say this about the NDP, but I say to my Liberal friends, having proceeded to cut old age pensions by 6 per cent in 1982, you now have the temerity to go around the country trying to frighten senior citizens. Well, they have got your number. They had your number on September 4. They tossed you out, and they are going to keep you out because of that attitude.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRIME MINISTER'S ELECTION STATEMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Seniors across Canada have never asked for much.

Ms. Copps: Some honesty from the Prime Minister.

Mr. Nystrom: Shut up, Sheila.

Mr. Young: My question is directed to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Seniors across Canada are saying to me they have never demanded much of Canada. They are not demanding very much of Canada now. They are simply saying that they expect the Prime Minister to implement fully the promise he made to them during the last election campaign. Will he not now stand in his place and give the assurance, not only to the House but to the seniors of Canada, that that commitment will be carried through by the end of next week?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as he has throughout this debate, my hon. friend again puts forward a thoughtful point of view. He raises the question of demands. I believe that what the senior citizens of this country are entitled to demand of Canada is a degree of sagacity in the administration of public finances so that their pensions are not gravely and irretrievably imperilled. What we are trying to do is restore a degree of sanity to the public finances so that we can do more for the senior citizens of this country. What they need most of all, in my judgment, is a sound and growing economy so we can do precisely that, a lot more for senior citizens.

REQUEST FOR CONTINUANCE OF FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I simply ask the Prime Minister how many sacrifices does he expect the seniors to make? Does he not think they made enough, because they feel they have? Again, will he not stand in his place and do the honourable thing, and tell the seniors of this country that he intends to follow through on the promise he made to them in the election campaign, and continue to index old age pensions fully?

● (1440)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no senior citizen has been cut in any way at any time. All senior citizens are going to get more, rather than less, from the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: That is the truth. As we have indicated, and I know my hon. friend understands this, as soon as we a can we will be making an announcement which I hope will be appropriate and helpful in the long term.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO CONSTITUENCY OFFICIAL

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In the June 17 edition of the Winnipeg Free Press Mr. Frank Klassen, a staff member of the Minister's constituency office, is quoted as saying:

> I think most people don't quite understand how little it is in dollar terms.

He is speaking about the money the Government is taking through its deindexation program. He continued:

> It means three packs of cigarettes a month that I shouldn't smoke anyway, or half a bottle of liquor that I shouldn't drink.
> So where's the hardship?

That is one of the most appallingly insensitive statements made by a member of the Minister's staff, relating to the condition of senior citizens.

Does this statement by a member of the Minister's staff reflect the view of the Minister? Does he believe that there is no hardship to be experienced by tens of thousands of senior citizens, or does he agree with the National Advisory Council on Aging, which should know its business, and counters the silly propositions of the Prime Minister? It says that there will be a major loss of income and a deterioration of the social and economic condition of seniors. If he agrees with that, will he tell the Prime Minister that now is the appropriate time to make a change in the pension program for senior citizens?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, it is statements such as the one made by the member for Sudbury, in which he indicated that 20 per cent of the purchasing power of senior citizens will be eroded, which he knows is not the case, that create the fear that the Opposition accuses the Government of creating. They have done that for many reasons, one of which is political. I remind the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry of the words he used in the House on June 29, 1982. He said:

> They are saying we are changing the tax system, that we are deindexing down to 5 per cent or 6 per cent for certain tax brackets and changing the pensions and some of the allowances. Yes, we are doing that. We are doing it because we believe there are enough Canadians who feel compassion and concern for their fellow Canadians who are out of work.

I could continue the quotation. That is what the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry said. He can say what he wants.

The point of the matter is that we are trying to protect senior citizens, but, as we have said many times, we can only do that if we get the economy turned around.

EFFECT OF PARTIAL DEINDEXATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister persists in developing the myth that there was a cut-back in the pensions of senior citizens under the Liberal Government. Seniors did not lose one cent because we double indexed the GIS, which this Government refuses to do. We protected the senior citizens.

I am not talking about history; I am talking about the present. Does the Minister repudiate the statement of his staff member, or does the Minister of National Health and Welfare believe that no hardship will be inflicted upon senior citizens, even though his own advisory council, which is not a political body, repudiates that?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry does not want to talk about the past, and does not want to admit that there was a cut for senior citizens for those two years. He will not admit that. I think he should admit what in fact happened.

I met with representatives of senior citizens today. They put their case forward very forcefully, decently, and properly. I have listened and conveyed that to the Prime Minister, as is my job. We will take our counsel from that.

[Translation]

FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. the Prime Minister since the credibility and the value of the word of a Prime Minister are at stake with respect to senior citizens.

During the election campaign, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister promised full indexation of old age pensions, he repeated the same promise in January, and again in April the promise was echoed before senior citizens by the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi, who happens to be the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Will the Prime Minister keep his word before the adjournment of the House next week, yes or no? Will the full indexation promise made by the Prime Minister be honoured before the end of next week?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): You are still trying to confuse elderly people over this issue. There has not been any cut-back whatsoever and the next pension cheque sent to senior citizens will be bigger than the last one. And again the following cheque will be bigger than the previous one. So there is no reason to panic and be worried. Elderly Canadians readily understand that we cannot send them rubber cheques. Those cheques must be drawn on a solvent account, which is why we are trying to bolster the economy and made that one of the Budget's feature. I know it has been accepted, I know there is a problem.

Mr. Malépart: You are paid to solve problems!

Mr. Mulroney: We want to be fair and equitable. We want to be fair and equitable, particularly to our senior citizens. We have always been and will continue to be fair.

INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT WILL RESPECT ITS PROMISE ON FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the pensioners who came from Quebec and who are here on Parliament Hill today did not hesitate to say that the only was the Government can be fair to the elderly is to honour its election campaign promises and others made since then. Again I repeat my question: Will the Government keep its word concerning the full indexation of old age security pensions, and will that be announced before the end of next week when the House will adjourn?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have answered that question from my friend and his colleagues at least half a dozen times here in the House. It has been indicated quite clearly in the Budget that we will monitor the evolution of this case. We are fully aware of our commitments to the senior citizens in our society.

Mr. Cassidy: You ignore them!

Mr. Mulroney: We know we have commitments to those people throughout the country. Indeed one of the leaders of the elderly told me at 11.30 this morning: We know that a cheque from Ottawa is of no use if there are not sufficient funds. That is why the Canadian people want to help us and support our economic recovery programs.

STATUS OF WOMEN

REQUEST FOR FUNDING FOR REAL WOMEN ORGANIZATION

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State of Canada. REAL Women is an organization that represents over 20,000 women of Canada. Like other women's groups, it has requested funding to promote its feelings on women's rights in Canada.

When can REAL Women expect funding for what many feel is every bit as legitimate a request as that of the National Action Committee and the Advisory Council on Status of Women?

Hon. Walter McLean (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for giving me notice of his question. I have met with representatives of REAL Women who have been seeking assistance through the women's program in the Department of the Secretary of State. In the process of discussing with them their application for funds and why that application was refused in the first instance, they indicated that the statements in their own presentation were not according to their principles. I have, therefore, asked them to meet with my officials to clarify their own documents, and have indicated that I will meet with them again.

PENSIONS

ELECTION CAMPAIGN COMMITMENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has said repeatedly today that there is not a senior citizen in the country who has yet suffered from deindexation. That kind of defence is like the hangman telling the condemned that he should not complain until after he has been hanged.

The Prime Minister should know, if he had the temerity—one of his favourite words—to go out to the lawn in front of Parliament Hill, that senior citizens will not go quietly to the noose. They want some action.

There seems to be some confusion. Everyone else in the country has a clear understanding of what the Prime Minister promised senior citizens last summer during an election campaign when he was looking for votes. We are not so sure that the Prime Minister knows what he promised. Will the Prime Minister tell the House what commitment he made in Sherbrooke last July to the senior citizens of Canada? Tell us now, because we are not sure you understand any more.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member wonders whether I had the temerity to go on to the lawn of Parliament to meet the senior citizens. That is exactly where I was, and I did not see the Hon. Member there.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malépart: No.

Mr. Rossi: We were there. You weren't there.

Ms. Copps: Wrong again.

Mr. Mulroney: I acknowledge that I may have missed the Member. He may have been hiding behind the Member for Sainte-Marie.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Or any other Hon. Member.

Our obligation to the senior citizens is one that we take very seriously. We owe them a great deal. Most of all, we owe them a sound and growing economy so we can ensure that these cheques do not bounce on them in the future.

When the senior citizens see 10 per cent, 20 per cent, 40 per cent and 50 per cent of our national income going to pay the interest on the debt, as Mr. Parizeau said yesterday it places in peril the capacity of the country to send these cheques. We have an obligation to make sure that the cheques of the Government of Canada to our senior citizens don't bounce, and that is what would have resulted from the policy of the Liberal Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Tobin: The Prime Minister's sarcasm and smart-alec tone, and slick answers, in referring to a Member who has won a place of distinction in the hearts of senior citizens of Quebec and of Canada in general really shows that this man is not in touch. He has been spending his time with pollsters and not on the front lawn. I was there. You drove by in your car and ran through the door.

CONTENT OF BUDGET

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, how does the Prime Minister expect us to believe his poor mouth story that pensions for senior citizens are being deindexed in order to salvage the program for the future, when in the same Budget he is giving away billions in capital gains, and billions—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: —back to the multinational oil companies? If you are really worried about preserving the economy and social programs, take back the $125,000 gift you have given in capital gains and give senior citizens what they are due, that is, old age security, not insecurity, or anxiety, and not anger that the Prime Minister has lied.

Some Hon. Members: Out! Out!

An Hon. Member: Throw him out.

Mr. Speaker: I invite the Hon. Member to please do what he knows he must, and withdraw that phrase, without explanation. I invite the Hon. Member simply to withdraw the phrase.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. Tobin: Shut up.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I invite the Hon. Member to withdraw the phrase.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I assume the words of senior citizens of this country are not appropriate in this House. That is what you are telling me, because those are the words they used on the front lawn.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that certain things may not be said in this House and may not be said indirectly either. The Hon. Member knows that.

It is being a difficult day. I simply ask the Member to withdraw his statement.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, in the interest of allowing my colleagues who have very good questions a chance to ask them, I withdraw the word for now.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh! Out.

Mr. Speaker: For the last time, I ask the Member to please withdraw the phrase unreservedly and simply.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I would abandon the senior citizens, as the Prime Minister has, if I withdrew that word. They asked me this morning to fight for them.

Some Hon. Members: Out! Out!

Mr. Speaker: In the interest of order, I will ask the Member one last time—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: I will. It is being a difficult day, and for one last time I will ask the Hon. Member to rise in his place and unreservedly withdraw the phrase.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, 2.5 million people will not allow me to unreservedly withdraw the truth.

Mr. Speaker: I am given no option but to name the Member for disregarding a request from the Chair—

Mr. Nunziata: For telling the truth.

An Hon. Member: Kick him out too.

Mr. Nunziata: Throw me out too. He is a liar. He lied to the senior citizens.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I must indicate to the House that I must name the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe for refusing to obey a request from the Chair to come to order.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is with some deep sense of regret, because of the respect that most Members have for this institution of the House of Commons, that I must move the following motion:

That the Hon. Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe be suspended from the service of this House for the balance of this day.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea?

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay?

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn), which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried. I must ask the Hon. Member to withdraw.

And Mr. Tobin having withdrawn:

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Regrettably, perhaps in the heat of what went on at an earlier stage, another Hon. Member, the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), said very clearly in this House that a person was a liar. I think he should have the opportunity of withdrawing.

An Hon. Member: Check the "blues".

Mr. Speaker: An Hon. Member is indicating I should check the "blues". Unfortunately, I have the "blues". I am afraid the point the Parliamentary Secretary is making is correct. I must therefore ask the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata) to withdraw his intervention.

• (1600)

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) was repeating what a senior citizen said earlier today and what a lot of Canadians are saying from coast to coast. My sentiments—

Some Hon. Members: Out!

Mr. Nunziata: My sentiments are known to you and to each and every Member of this House. But for the sake of getting on with the debate on the borrowing authority Bill, I withdraw my comments.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of three, presented by Hon. Members on Tuesday, June 18, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Certain petitions presented by the Hon. Member for Mégantic-Compton-Stanstead (Mr. Gérin), the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), and one petition presented by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, once again I have the honour to submit a group of petitions from citizens who live on Dufferin Street, Earlscourt Avenue, Bristol Avenue, Davenport Road, Pelham Park, Roncessvales Road, Runnymede Road, Bloor Street West, Islington Avenue, Martin Grove Road, Royal York Road, in Weston, Islington, the City of York and the City of Toronto. They all request that the Government maintain full indexation for old age pensions.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure and the honour to present on behalf of my constituents of Ottawa-Vanier a petition signed by many residents of my riding asking the Government and the Prime Minister to keep the promise and the commitment made during the electoral campaign in the summer of 1984 to maintain full indexation of old age security pensions.

[English]

I also have a petition from constituents of the riding of Ottawa-Vanier once more asking the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to keep his word and respect his commitment in the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexation for old age pensions.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions from the community of Hendon and the Nokomis area from senior citizens protesting deindexation of their old age pensions. They petition the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security programs in Canada.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition signed by a number of citizens of Canada who reside in the City of Regina. They, as well as many Members of this House, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security program.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from many, many constituents in the Town of Espanola, pointing out that the Government is planning to reduce the purchasing power of old age pensions by $100 per person next year up to almost $600 by 1990. They point out that pensioners should not be unfairly penalized in order to benefit large multinational oil companies and high-income groups. They call upon the Government to reinstate full indexation of old age pensions.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present a petition on behalf of senior citizens in my riding at the Marjory Carton Centre and other places. These senior citizens numbering nearly 100 petition this House regarding their concerns about the loss of purchasing power and the dangers which will encompass them in the future.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, since I recall that in 1981 the Conservatives in Ontario campaigned on the slogan "Help Keep the Promise", I have the honour to present a petition which calls on the Government of Canada to keep the promise it made during the 1984 election campaign and reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada.

May I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that while you have my best personal regards, it is a happy day for Ontario with the demise of the Conservative Government.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from some people in Winnipeg who want the Government to re-establish the full indexation of pensions immediately.

[English]

CF MARITIME EXPERIMENTAL TEST RANGE IN NANOOSE BAY, B.C.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present a petition from citizens in British Columbia regarding the Canadian Forces Maritime Experimental Test Range at Nanoose Bay. They are concerned that it contributes to the nuclear arms race and militarism in general. They are concerned about environmental damage to Nanoose Bay and its economic value, and they urge the House not to renew the agreement between Canada and the U.S. and to bring to an end all weapons testing at the range and convert it to peaceful purposes.

CHANGES TO OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition from a number of residents of Spadina and nearby ridings. They are concerned that the Government proposes to cut the Old Age Security pension next year by $100, and $100 more each year thereafter. They are concerned that a PC Government would once more index the OAS pension to the cost of living on a quarterly basis as promised by the Prime Minister. They ask this Parliament to reinstate the principle of full indexation of the OAS Program in Canada.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by several hundred constituents of Beaches who say they do not agree with what the Government is doing in deindexing old age pensions, and they petition the Government to live up to the promise it made during the last election campaign that it would fully index old age pensions to the cost of living.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege and honour to present a petition calling on the Government of Canada to live up to its election promise to continue to index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis. This petition is signed by residents of Geraldton, Emo, Atikokan, Dryden and the great community of Kashabowie, Ontario.

I have another petition signed by residents of two senior citizens' apartment buildings in my riding who also call upon the Government of Canada to live up to its commitments to senior citizens.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have a petition bearing well over 200 names of citizens from right across the great riding of Thunder Bay-Atikokan who object to the Budget this Government brought in. They call on the Government to continue to index pensions fully.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions from constituents of my riding who protest that the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security Program. These cuts fly in the face of PC campaign promises that a PC Government would once more index OAS pensions to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis. They pray that the House of Commons will reinstate full indexation of this program in Canada.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table a petition signed by another 2,000 citizens living in Windsor, Ontario, who present the immorality of promises unkept, and who demand that the proposal to deindex pensions in 1986 be revoked, and that there be a declaration made that the promises of the Conservative Party during and after the election be kept.

• (1610)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to rise on behalf of 4,000 residents of the Province of Manitoba. There are 200 signatures from the constituency of Portage-Marquette, 180 signatures from the constituency of Winnipeg-St. James, 50 signatures from Swan River, another 200 signatures from the constituency of Brandon Souris, 160 signatures from the constituency of Provencher, 170 signatures from the constituency of Selkirk-Interlake, and 3,000 signatures from the City of Winnipeg. All these residents of that province say that the deindexation of old Age Security benefits by the Conservative Government places a cruel and unfair burden on senior citizens and that the Prime Minister has totally reneged on his election promise to retain full indexation.

Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to withdraw this unfair measure from the Budget and restore the full indexation of the Old Age Security benefit to all senior citizens. I am pleased to present this petition on behalf of 4,000 Manitobans from all constituencies.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BORROWING AUTHORITY ACT, 1985-86 (No. 2)

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration in committee of Bill C-51, an Act to provide borrowing authority—Miss MacDonald (for the Minister of State (Finance))—Mr. Danis in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee adjourned at nine o'clock p.m. yesterday, Clause 2 of the Bill and the amendment of the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) were under consideration.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Chairman, the subject matter of the amendment before the House today has been the subject matter of Question Period for some time now. That subject matter today prompted an Hon. Member to say words, the saying of which caused him to be removed from the House of Commons. The main reason that this subject matter has been before the House for some time and the main reason for the events of today is that Members find it very difficult to understand the reasoning of a Government that promised one thing, reiterated that promise in December, and then reneged on that promise in the Budget.

We have listened to Cabinet Ministers and to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance try to rationalize the cut in the projected increase of old age pensions which is due to take effect on January 1. Today we listened to the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister try to prove that the disposable income of senior citizens will not be affected by all that much. I presume the Parliamentary Secretary, the Prime Minister, and the Minister of Finance were relying on expert advice received from various quarters.

I found it very difficult to understand what the spokesman for the Government was talking about last evening in this Chamber. He said that there was not really a 3 per cent cut. In fact, he said that the disposable income of seniors was only down by 1.5 percentage points. Then, not satisfied with that, he went even further to say that the cut is really only one half of 1.5 per cent. He then tried to justify that by saying that senior citizens could adjust by buying different products or changing their style of living to accommodate the .75 per cent cut.

I am sure that people who were listening to that argument were racking their brains trying to determine what kind of economic reasoning he was using. Perhaps the hon. gentleman was taking advice from experts who were schooled in the days when economics was called political economy. In those days, one observed the fact and then imagined some other facts in order to come to a conclusion which could only be verified over the long term. However, in those days of Plato and Aristotle, ethics was an issue. After that time, the Romans at least talked about the gods as being the final determining point.

What reasoning can be used for this? We can talk about the law of supply and demand, but if the price of coffee goes up too much, people will turn to tea, postum, or hot chocolate. If there were not enough coffee beans in Brazil, we would substitute. But Mr. Chairman, how can that same reasoning be used with regard to the cut of senior citizens' pensions? What kind of substitution is available with regard to flour, one of their basic commodities? If there were any difference between Red Rose flour and Cream of the West flour, it would only be a couple of cents. You cannot go to a different oil company and pay less money for home heating oil. You can change the name of the supplier, but you do not get it any cheaper. You cannot go to another telephone company to get a cheaper telephone or to a different electric company to get cheaper electricity. Contrary to what the Government of Canada is telling senior citizens, they cannot substitute to make up for this particular cut.

• (1620)

The Government says that it received its advice from experts. When the Prime Minister went to his riding to speak last evening, many people believed that he was going to announce that the Government was reversing its position on old age pensions. I believed that if he was going to his riding to make an announcement, it would be that he was finally digging in his heels on behalf of 700 workers in his riding and was going to negotiate with the United States the removal of the incredibly bad tariff on saltfish that affects his riding.

However, neither of those matters were discussed. The Prime Minister announced that the Government of Canada was going to build a maximum security prison in his riding to provide jobs for the people of his riding. Presumably that was also on the advice of the so-called experts, who advise politicians but who do not know reality in the ridings.

I suppose one could go to any Member's riding and announce the construction of a maximum security prison. I suggest half the constituents would agree and half would not. However, that was the advice of the experts, just as they advised that this measure was not a 3 per cent cut but a cut of 1.5 per cent because senior citizens can adjust, buy cheaper products and change their lifestyle. How can senior citizens change their lifestyle when they must meet mortgages or rent payments, light payments, telephone payments and food payments? It cannot be done.

That is the reason for the motion before the House today. I introduced the motion on the basis that the borrowing authority for which the Government of Canada was asking was not clear in any event. The explanations given by the Minister of State for Finance were inadequate. She did not know what Cabinet Ministers said in response to the President of the Treasury Board since the time that the announced cuts were made in November and one-third of those particular measures taken by the Government were reversed. The Minister of State for Finance could not respond to that question when the Bill was first introduced. Perhaps if she had been able to respond at that time, we would have been able to deal with this Bill much more quickly. However, she could not do so.

Serious questions arise when one examines this borrowing authority Bill in more detail with respect to each Department. These concerns relate to definite figures that were listed by the President of the Treasury Board as savings to the Government of Canada or as revenue from increased fees for the use of federal facilities.

Let me talk about the $200 million that would be saved through extra monitoring regarding the Department of Employment and Immigration and the Unemployment Insurance Commission. I suggest to the Minister of Employment and Immigration that that figure cannot be realistically achieved. She can only reach that goal by introducing many measures that affect many poor people. One step which the Minister probably wants to take is to remove people from unemployment insurance by bringing them into the employment offices. Another probable plan of the Minister is to give these people jobs from government programs that are outlined in the Budget in which funds are allocated to Employment and Immigration for programs under Section 38 or programs being devised together with the provinces. However, there is a danger with respect to direct employment programs under Section 38. A person drawing unemployment insurance who takes a job under the Minister's direct employment program under Section 38 will be taking employment that is not insurable. It is possible that someone entering employment under the Canada Works Program could have his or her payments drop from $260 a week to $200 a week. That would be an injustice to that individual. However, they are mechanisms for lowering the amounts paid out under the unemployment insurance benefits in order to save $200 million.

What are the effects of such action? When the Department of Employment and Immigration announces a work program or an initiative for employment in those parts of Canada with high unemployment, the biggest issue is discrimination. Through its measures, the Government has attempted to put people into existing jobs and take them off unemployment insurance in order to save on unemployment insurance benefits. However, it can only do so if it changes the hiring criteria.

The Government has developed two criteria for employment. Only those drawing unemployment insurance and those who have run out of unemployment insurance benefits can go to work. However, as a result of that action, it is impossible for someone who has never drawn unemployment insurance to get a job under a direct job creation program. In other words, all the young people cannot even get a referral.

The biggest issue facing the Government in areas of high unemployment are these announcements which it makes. Similarly, the Minister of Employment and Immigration stands in the House to talk about the Government's new initiative with respect to the student employment program. While I do not see anything wrong with these jobs going out to private enterprise for the first time, I am concerned when fast food chains in Canada can take advantage of the program. When they would normally hire 30 young people, under this program they will hire 30 young people but have some of their wages subsidized. I am also concerned about these firms hiring people to replace others who would normally take those jobs.

However, let us look at the hiring criteria for this program. First, a candidate must have attended a full time course of instruction during the previous year and must be going to another full time course of instruction. This issue was raised with the Minister some time ago in committee and she said that it would be changed this year. However, it was never changed. Today, there is discrimination in that someone who had not attended a full time course of instruction the previous year, but attended part time instruction and needs that summer job as much as anyone else, is not allowed to get a referral. Someone who only had to complete a few courses is not allowed to be referred to this summer student employment program.

We come back to the question of experts advising Ministers on hiring criteria. Second, you have experts advising the Ministers on the direction in which the funds will go, and, third, you have experts advising the Ministers on absolute figures relating to cuts that will be included in the Budget and in the financial statement.

• (1630)

I suppose it was the experts who advised the Minister of the Environment to cut out the activities of the Canadian Wildlife Service, Mr. Chairman. I suppose it was the experts who advised the Minister of the Environment that she can charge for every telephone call to the weather office or that she can cut out her guided tours in the national parks this year. I suppose they were the same experts who advised the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans on how to do away with the fishing vessel insurance scheme. All of these things have been cancelled as government policy since the financial statement came out in November.

While I am on the subject of employment and immigration, I would like to tell the Minister that in the November financial statement and what is included in the Budget for her Department this year, in the section headed Mobility Grants, there is a cut of about $2.2 million. What happened when that was cut? When that was cut, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, through her officials, had to come out with new guidelines about who qualifies and who does not qualify for mobility grants. What do we see now? In order to get from point A to point B for a person normally qualified for mobility assistance by the Government of Canada, what must happen now? The person has to have a letter saying the job is permanent for over a year. That person also must allow the closest Manpower office to advertise the job for a reasonable period of time. All kinds of restrictions have been imposed. I say to the Minister of Employment and Immigration that she is not only going to save $2.2 million, she is going to save the whole kitty. Nobody will be able to qualify. It will be the exception and not the rule that somebody will receive assistance under that program.

I see, Mr. Chairman, that you are indicating I have only two minutes left and that I have spoken for 18 minutes.

The Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Baker: I want to get on to a very important subject. The reason for my rising today is that the subject relates to the Department of Transport. The Minister of Transport is here in his seat. But I have only one and a half minutes left, is that correct, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Yes, that is correct.

Mr. Baker: Would the Minister of Transport undertake to get a copy of the proceedings later on in the day, because I want to speak for at least 20 minutes, probably 40 or 60 minutes, on a subject relating to his Department? It is a very important subject. It also relates to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Since I have only one minute left, let me tell the Ministers that my subject relates to safety measures in transportation and energy that were not included in the Budget but were supposed to be included in it on which the Minister of Energy had a study done. This was never included in the Budget presented to this House and is not included in the Estimates of the Department. It is another subject of great importance to many people in Canada.

Let me conclude by saying that I hope all Members will participate in this debate as it relates to the senior citizens and the trick played on them by this new Government of Canada. Unless this Government reverses itself, it will see a considerable drop in support in the polls in the next election which will be attributable to the senior citizens.

[Translation]

Mr. Gagliano: Mr. Chairman, I wish to take part in this debate on Bill C-51 in Committee of the Whole to denounce this Government, which wants to govern by attacking the weakest among us, by taking no action and by increasing the tax burden of low income taxpayers and reducing the income of senior citizens.

On April 2, Mr. Chairman, the Canadian Press reported the following comments taken from a study sponsored by the Canada Union of Public Employees, and I quote:

[English]

The Conservative Government is deepening an already serious moral disorder in society by popularizing the philosophy of business first. The law of survival of the fittest threatens to reverse the progress that has been made toward a more caring and equitable society.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, the Budget brought down on May 23 lends support to this analysis and also proves that the Mulroney-Wilson alliance has no idea of the real needs of the Canadian economy.

[English]

First, by increasing taxes, the Mulroney Government dug deep into the pockets of the ordinary Canadian taxpayer. A married person, earning $20,000 a year, with a spouse and two children, will pay an extra $300 a year as a result of the new Budget. If the same individual earned $30,000 a year, the Budget's bite will be even bigger, in the range of about $400. Second, the temporary surtax on high-income individuals is structured in such a way that it will not hit some of the earners at the higher reaches of the income scale. In fact, since the surtax is based on the tax paid instead of the income itself, it will only hit those Canadians who are unable to reduce their taxable income through special tax deductions. Most high-income individuals will continue to pay little or no tax, but the average Canadian will have to pay much more. Third, the Budget eliminates the full indexation of personal exemptions and tax brackets.

This measure raises taxes for all income groups, but the increase is proportionally larger as a percentage of income for low-income individuals. This change amounts to a tax increase, since it means that as a person's income rises, he or she is pushed into a higher tax bracket and pays more taxes.

[Translation]

In addition to all these unacceptable measures, the Conservative Government is directly hitting the elderly by reducing the value of Old Age Security Benefits in real dollars. All Canadian men and women over 65 will lose 3 per cent of the value of their pension income this year, if we compare what they will be receiving under the Budget with the amount allocated under the former Liberal Government.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, since the benefits will be indexed only to that part of the cost-of-living increase that is in excess of 3 per cent, in ten years the elderly will lose about 30 per cent of the expected income they would otherwise have had.

For eight weeks last summer during the election campaign, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) travelled across the country promising "jobs, jobs, jobs." Today, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) should be shouting "taxes, taxes, taxes."

• (1640)

Unlike the legendary Robin Hood, they are stealing from the poor to give to the rich.

Spending on agriculture has been cut back $15 million annually.

There will be a new federal tax of 11 per cent on health and beauty aids, including soap, toothpaste and so forth.

After dropping its energy conversion programs, the Government has added a new 11 per cent tax on materials used to increase energy effectiveness.

Mr. Speaker, I have been trying to understand how, a Government could bring down a Budget that is so thoroughly unbalanced, and why.

I have been trying to understand, and so have most of my constituents, who are typical of the middle class that is the backbone of our country.

Unfortunately, the answer is only too obvious.

The biggest hand-out authorized by the Minister of Finance goes to the oil and gas corporations. The corporation hand-out will cost the Treasury $902 million in forgone revenue for the year 1986-87 alone, as a result of eliminating the tax on oil and gas revenue: $902 million in one fiscal year!

Furthermore, the so-called temporary 5 per cent surtax applying to large corporations, a tax the Minister of Finance is very fond of mentioning, will raise $175 million this year and $285 million in 1986-87.

Considering the annual present of $902 million to the oil companies, there is another $440 million that will have to come out of the taxpayers' pockets. How easy it is to increase the gasoline tax by 2 cents a litre, reduce old age security benefits, and cut back job creation programs to recuperate that money. But the Minister of Finance will probably say that Canada's economic recovery will be initiated by the private sector, particularly by small and medium-sized businesses.

Indeed, Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Finance stated in his Budget speech that Canada's small and medium-sized businesses have become the driving force of the Canadian economy. Unfortunately the May 23 Budget does very little to promote that sector of activities and in fact puts our small and medium-sized businesses in a state of stagnation.

Let us review those measures concerning the private sector, beginning with the capital gains tax exemption. Although very few Canadians will be eligible, that kind of measure would have helped small and medium-sized companies if the Government, through carelessness, had not forgotten that the exemption ought to be turned into an investment. As a result of that negligence, very few investors will be attracted by small and medium-sized companies. Since investment in such companies does not provide tax incentives, nobody will want to invest in venture undertakings. Not only will this measure not necessarily create jobs, but it will promote a climate of excessive speculation. The investor will be satisfied since he can sell out to buy a condominium in Florida, but that kind of deal does not create a single job.

Secondly, investment of funds from pension plans and other retirement income schemes in small businesses. This program is regulated through a series of cumbersome and complicated provisions and prevents owners from investing in their own companies.

Like most small business owners, the Liberal Party would have been in favour of investment provisions similar to those now applicable to self-managed retirement saving plans. In that case the owner and his family could have invested in the company thanks to flexible regulations geared to the needs of small investors. The Conservative Government chose to restrict the program to organizations with huge assets, though it knew that generally speaking those organizations stear clear of risky investments. The employees who contribute to this fund to provide for their retirement years will certainly not want huge amounts to be invested in high risk ventures.

Third, we have the issue of research and development. The Budget proposes that the credit acquired by private companies for their current research and development expenditures be 100 per cent refundable. These companies were already able to obtain a refund equal to 40 per cent of their expenditures the first year and to write off the rest of their expenditures over a maximum of seven years.

We believe that, instead of helping the entire job creating sector of small businesses, this proposal will provoke the appearance of companies which will operate only for a short term and be used as a screen for speculators.

Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Party of Canada considers it essential to create programs to help young Canadians between 18 and 35 to start their own businesses. In addition, our Party finds it just as important to help Canadian unemployed workers aged between 36 and 55 to use their acquired experience to start their own small businesses.

On the other hand, capital losses should be 100 per cent deductible. We should also promote pension funds specifically aimed at small businessmen. Regulations should be made more flexible and the tax burden of smaller businesses should be reduced.

New means of financing should be created and new markets have to be developed. We believe that it would be possible thus to maintain the rate of growth of smaller businesses and to promote the creation of new job producing businesses, but I realize, Mr. Chairman, that the Progressive Conservative Government has decided to reward its closest friends rather than concern itself with creating the jobs which are so badly needed to reduce unemployment.

Mr. Chairman, I should remind you that last month, after eight months of a Progressive Conservative Government, Statistics Canada reported that 10.9 per cent of Canadians were unemployed and that the rate of unemployment for young people under 24 was as high as 17 per cent. Job creation should be a priority for any responsible Government, but the Mulroney-Wilson tandem has found nothing better to do than to increase by about $400 the costs of the average Canadian family.

Instead of "jobs, jobs, jobs", Prime Minister Mulroney should have said during the electoral campaign: "Get ready to be bled white to help fill the pockets of my closest allies!"

[English]

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, today in Question Period, I directed a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare concerning statements made by a member of the Minister's constituency staff in Provencher, as reported in the Winnipeg Free Press. That staff member commented upon the reaction, interest and controversy generated by the Government's move to deindexation by saying:

> I think most people don't quite understand how little it is in dollar terms. It means three packs of cigarettes a month that I shouldn't smoke anyway, or half a bottle of liquor that I shouldn't drink.
> So where's the hardship?

I asked the Minister twice to repudiate that statement. The Minister of National Health and Welfare is supposed to be the spokesperson in Cabinet who represents the interests of senior citizens, but he refused to comment. He refused to say that his staff member was misquoted. He refused to say that he was wrong. He refused to say that he disagreed with those comments. In other words, he was tacitly agreeing to the comments of his staff member, that there is no hardship, that it means only a half bottle of booze or something. That is the way a member of the Minister's staff is treating the plaintive appeal and cry of hundreds of senior citizens about the hardship which they will have to face. This tells us an awful lot about the Government and its attitude toward this issue, that if it can pawn it off or deny the truth, it will get away with it.

In the same June 17 article, a number of Conservative Members of Parliament are quoted as saying: "It is not an issue in my riding", "I have only had one or two calls", "people don't care", "people are not interested", or "it is simply something which is being hoked up by the Opposition".

Today I presented 4,000 names of residents of the Province of Manitoba. Those were the petitions I received last week. They included close to 2,000 names of residents of Conservative ridings in that province. They were not people who were simply making up things. I see the Hon. Member for St. Boniface in his seat. He said that he had only about 15 calls from his constituents. I have several hundreds of names of constituents from his riding who signed the petition. Something is wrong. Either these constituents are not prepared to tell their Conservative Members of Parliament because they are afraid of them or they know they will not listen, or else Conservative MPs have taken their telephones off the hook. Perhaps the newspapers are simply not telling it as it is.

There is no question that there is a large-scale, incredible demand across this country for a change in this program. What we have instead is a Minister of National Health and Welfare who refuses to even acknowledge that there is a hardship. At the same time, we have a letter from the National Advisory Council on Aging, not a partisan group, not a political group, but made up of representatives of different senior citizens' organizations and social agencies across the country, to advise the Government on its policies. What do they have to say in their statement and in the letter that they wrote to the Minister himself? I would like to quote the following from their letter, which states that, according to the Council:

> . . . "it will provide a short term saving in exchange for a long-term loss". "The stress associated with a tighter and tighter budget will take its toll. More and more senior Canadians will find it difficult to cope with a deteriorating physical, mental and social condition. In time, expenditures for other types of care will limit the savings due to de-indexing".

We have a Minister of National Health and Welfare who denies the evidence, facts and proposals put forward by his own advisory council. He does not even care about them. Instead, he apparently agrees with the staff member who says there is no hardship. That is the problem that we are facing and why this debate is going on. Somehow we have to find a way to penetrate into the conscience of the members of this Conservative caucus and make them understand that this is an issue that cuts to the very heart of this country, that we are talking about something that will substantially alter the social structure of Canada, that we will, for the first time in years, make a deliberate policy choice to force more people into poverty.

Statistics Canada has been reporting, I think, for something like two to three decades. It said in every one of those years that there was a slight improvement, sometimes higher sometimes lower, in the number of people coming off the poverty line. It was not always as great as we would have liked, but we have been making steady progress for two decades. It now reports that, for the first time in 20 years, because of this Government's Budget, there will be more Canadians going back below the poverty line, and 250,000 of those will be senior citizens. That is a Statistics Canada report, it is not from a political partisan group. It is reaching a point where we can no longer comprehend what is going on in the inner circles and inner discussions of members of this Conservative caucus when fact after fact is laid on the table that the results of their actions will be to push more people into poverty, it will make it harder for older people in particular to purchase their goods and services . . .

Mr. Andre: Blush when you say that.

Mr. Axworthy: I don't blush at all, Mr. Chairman. I just gave the figures, and this Minister is like his colleague, the Minister of National Health and Welfare. He is beyond comprehension; he is beyond conscience, he is beyond understanding. He does not understand that for 20 years we have had progress and improvement, and because of the actions of his Government, of which he is a part, we are now going to take a step backwards. That, Mr. Chairman, is a clear sign of the kind of Government we have. It is a Government without a conscience, without understanding, without comprehension.

Mr. Riis: I don't think they care.

Mr. Axworthy: It is even beyond not caring. You have to wonder about a Government that deliberately, consciously, takes a decision to put more people into poverty, and then has the Prime Minister stand up day after day, along with the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and deny it.

Is it any wonder that the group of senior citizens who mobilized on the front lawn of this Parliament today said, and I won't use an unparliamentary expression, that they don't trust this Government anymore, that they don't believe what it says, that they have lost all sense of confidence in anything it stands for? It would be somewhat understandable if it had made a mistake in the Budget. It is a new Government, there are a bunch of rookies in Cabinet, it would be understandable if, maybe in their rush, they went ahead and did things of which they did not perceive the consequences. That is possible. But we had the Minister of National Health and Welfare today in the House standing up and acknowledging, by his approval of the statements of his own staff member, that there will be no hardship. I wonder what kind of reports he is reading. What kind of funny books, what kind of fantasyland is he existing in? It is time for that Minister to be shifted. It is time to try to find somebody in that 211-member caucus who understands the issues. Can you possibly have a Minister of National Health and Welfare who is so incapable, so absolutely obdurate and indifferent to the plight of his constituents that he is not even prepared to say that he was wrong or that his staff member was wrong and, yes, there will be hardships? Mr. Chairman, the evidence is so clear, and it is so obvious.

We are here to say that we have time and time again asked members of this caucus to talk to their Minister, say to him, for goodness' sake there is nothing wrong with acknowledging a mistake. Goodness knows, Mr. Chairman, enough mistakes have been made by the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister to fill history books. Why are they so reluctant on this on issue not to concede that a serious and unpardonable action has been taken and that it is creating the kind of reaction across this country that is seriously undermining the confidence, security and well-being of hundreds of thousands of Canadians?

I proffer another piece of evidence which I think is in its own way significant. Last weekend, the combined posts of the Canadian Legion from Manitoba and northwestern Ontario, some 51 Legion posts—and there are many Conservative Members from Manitoba I know who are members of those posts—stood up and, in an unanimous standing vote, recommended that Government restore indexation. The reason I say it is important is that these are people who have had their veterans' pensions protected, and you would think they would say, okay, we are protected, we are secure. Instead, they have the willingness and the courage to stand up, on behalf of other Canadians less fortunate than they, to make a case. Fifty thousand Legion members from the Province of Manitoba and northwestern Ontario are now united against this Government's action. Once again, they stand up and say, we don't know what is going on.

We had the Prime Minister again in one of his incredible performances of dissembling in this House this afternoon saying that somehow by reducing people's income by $1,200, by introducing a regressive sales tax that will reduce their purchasing power for basic staple goods, this is adding to their security. What kind of incredible, convoluted reasoning is that? Then they fall back on the defence that somehow we must all sacrifice to get the deficit down, but the Budget does not ask all Canadians to sacrifice. There are a number of Canadians who are getting major benefits under this Budget. The common stock of Canada is held by 11 per cent of Canadians, and a capital gains tax has just been brought in that will benefit by hundreds of millions of dollars a very privileged, wealthy group of Canadians.

When the Minister of Finance got up in the House yesterday and asked, well, what would the Opposition do? My colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides, said," I will tell you what do do, cut the capital gains benefit at least in half and that would pay to restore the indexation. That is a fairly simple solution. You want an answer; you got an answer."

Time and time again the economic evidence is becoming clear that the capital gains tax exemption will do nothing to stimulate growth in this economy. It would be different, and we would certainly adhere, if it were going directly into stimulating investment in productive Canadian enterprise. If the capital gains tax were targeted so that the money would go to investors who are adding to the productive capacity of Canada, then we would say that the Government has a case.

Instead, the capital gains exemption will, in a large part, be used by people who will invest in the United States and buy land in Florida. The article in The Wall Street Journal said it all: Yes, the capital gains exemption in the Canadian Budget will help stimulate the economy, it will help stimulate the United States economy. That was in The Wall Street Journal. That newspaper was thanking us very much for being a good neighbour once again.

In terms of actually adding to the productive enterprises of Canada, every economic analyst has said that there are some real questions to be answered. Look at the exemption that exists on real estate. What does a number of transactions and speculation in the real estate market do to build a new factory or to provide for a new productive capacity to produce new goods and services? Not very much, Mr. Chairman. We are going to get a lot of speculators rich. Those speculators are laughing at the Conservative Government right now. They are really finding this whole exercise to be humorous because the Government has given them everything for which they asked while they are giving nothing in return.

Look at the statistics that came out yesterday. The so-called economic miracle about which the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance talked has created not 1 per cent of an increase in capital investment in this country in the nine months the Conservatives have been in Government. The Government was supposed to be building the base for a new Canadian economic industrial structure, but there has been no increase in capital investment. I can tell you why this is so, Mr. Chairman. If I were thinking of investing in a new plant expansion, I would ask myself where the market would be and who would buy the new product or service. The Budget is pulling $37 billion worth of consumer demand out of the economy. It hits most heavily on the low and modest-income Canadians.

Mr. Dick: How many years?

Mr. Axworthy: Over the next five years. The great economic analyst, the Member from Mitel, makes a comment.

The Budget hits hardest on families that are making $20,000 or $30,000 per year. The purchasing power of those families will be reduced by 20 per cent or 30 per cent. The man or woman who makes $200,000 will be hit with a decrease of only 4 per cent in his or her purchasing power. That is the kind of economic miracle we are being asked to support and that the Prime Minister has told us the senior citizens support.

No senior citizen and no Canadian would support the kind of economic policy that is purely and simply designed to aid those with major advantages while allowing for no major benefits for the other 24.5 million Canadians. Therefore, that is what we are debating. We are debating the fundamental unfairness of the deindexation of senior citizens' pensions which will not in any way, shape or form help stimulate the economy. In fact, it will only help pay for the members of the Prime Minister's club. That is where the money is going.

I shall return to the point. Surely it is time for the Government to reconsider its position. Surely it is time for it to do some new calculations and substantially reduce the major windfalls that it has given to oil companies, capital gains speculators and a number of other wealthy Canadians in order to restore the deindexation.

Let us make no mistake. We are not talking about restoring indexation on only the GIS, we are talking about restoring it on the Old Age Security which benefits all senior citizens. As well, we are not only talking about those who are already senior citizens, we are talking about the 1.1 million Canadians who are now at the age of 60 and must plan their retirement and look forward in the next five years to the kind of income security they will receive. They also know that their incomes have been substantially reduced, that their purchasing power has been taken away and that their ability to plan for their future will be substantially eroded. On top of the people who are presently being affected, there are another 1.1 million Canadians who will become senior citizens and will no longer be able to deal with their income security problem.

We are talking about a lot of people whose problems could be easily fixed through some reorientation on the part of the Government. We recognize that it is difficult to swallow having the Minister of Finance totally embarrassed. All Canadians know that it was an incredibly bad Budget, but Conservative Members have to live with it. Surely they should have enough wit and common sense, though, to understand that it needs to be fixed because we cannot allow millions of Canadians to pay for those kinds of benefits that are unacceptable—

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Penner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Chairman, I have a few comments to make following up something raised by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry about the comments made by the staff member of the office of the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I want to take this opportunity to make an unsolicited correction to a remark I made in the House the other day during Question Period about the same Minister's office. At that time, I said that my office kept getting calls from constituents of the Minister claiming that they were being put on hold when they called the Minister's office. I had an opportunity to check with my office later that evening and found that I should not have said that we kept getting those calls. We were getting those kind of calls, but we are not getting them any longer. To be fair to the Minister, I wanted to put that on the record.

The kind of calls that we are getting are calls from constituents of Progressive Conservative Members like the Minister of National Health and Welfare, people who do not have access to the petitions that are being circulated which they would like to sign in order to register their protest against the Government's plan to partially deindex pensions. These people are having to phone my office to see if petitions can be sent to them. I am sure others have phoned the offices of other Members of Parliament who are actively opposing the deindexation proposal here in the House of Commons. I hope that these people will continue to do so, although I wonder at what point everyone who could possibly have signed a petition will have signed one. Then we will have the case of a Government which has rightfully made much of the need to operate with a consensus finding itself in the position of opposing a consensus that is one of the most air-tight ones to which we have come in a long time. Business, labour, senior citizens, opposition Members of Parliament and government back-benchers have all come to the same consensus. If the Prime Minister ever wanted to show that he has the respect for consensus that he has claimed, this is the opportunity for him to show that he means it.

I know that sometimes during the rhetoric of Question Period, the Prime Minister is asked to do things that of course he will never do within that context. He is asked to admit that he has made a mistake. I do not ask the Government to admit that it has made a mistake. All I ask it to do is to respect the consensus. I ask government Members to do what they said they were going to do if they formed a Government, which was to respect the consensus that has developed.

We will not ask for any more of a miracle than for the Prime Minister to rise to say, "I notice that there is a consensus in the country against this measure and out of respect for that consensus, I would like to announce on behalf of my colleagues that we are going to withdraw this particular measure". No more need be said. There need be no self-deprecating remarks. In fact, I think the Prime Minister probably has enough talent for rhetoric to use that as an opportunity for self-praise. We would even put up with that. We would put up with whatever we need to in order to bring the Government around on this issue, preferably before the end of June.

Without exaggerating the extent to which seniors all over the country are lying awake nights worrying about whether or not the Government—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blaikie: I said without exaggerating because I think that that kind of rhetoric is not helpful. The fact remains that there is uncertainty and I think that it ought to be cleared up as soon as possible.

• (1710)

I wonder what the Government has in mind when it talks about monitoring the situation. Clearly it can only monitor the effects of a proposal after it has been implemented. If the Government is thinking about changing its mind, then it must be for a reason other than the effects which it is monitoring. Clearly, the Government cannot monitor the effects of the Budget in the short term. Budgets take a long time to have any effect on the economy. The Government must be monitoring political circumstances and public opinion. If it is monitoring that, then surely it is finding that there is a consensus against this particular measure. I hope that a respect for that consensus will soon be forthcoming.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few comments on the motion which was presented by my colleague from Gander-Twillingate. The purpose of the motion is to cut the borrowing authority which is requested by 3 per cent. Basically it is a symbolic gesture. However, I think it is a very significant gesture.

The Government has presented a proposal. I have been in the House for a number of years and in the provincial legislature before that. Usually when budgets are brought down they are not proposals. They show what are the intentions of the Government and the direction of the Government's program for the year in which the Budget will apply. When the Budget was brought down, I felt there were a lot of pitfalls which related to poor Canadians, average Canadians and, certainly, senior citizens.

Coming from a riding in Atlantic Canada, I think it is fair to say that we might be the first to recognize what is happening. We have a very high percentage of senior citizens in Atlantic Canada. Indeed, Prince Edward Island has the highest per capita rate of senior citizens of any province or region of the country. It was obvious on budget night in which direction the Government was moving. When I looked at the cuts which were projected in the Budget, it was quite easy to realize that consumer spending was being cut and, in some cases, drastically reduced.

We went to Atlantic Canada two weeks after the Budget had been brought down. A number of groups came before us in my province and in my riding of Egmont, in the town of Summerside. After those people had had the opportunity to study the Budget for two weeks, they told us what they believed would be the real impact.

During the hearings in Summerside, we heard disturbing evidence. An elderly gentleman, 82 years of age, told me that his wife had passed away a few years ago and that he had been living with his brother-in-law, who had recently passed away. He told me about the circumstances in which he found himself. He is paying $280 a month for rent on a small two-bedroom home which he has in Wilmot. I know the rents in that area, and that is certainly not classed as above average accommodation. It would be categorized as a modest type of accommodation. In total, the man was paying $3,360 a year for rent. In addition, he told me that he was paying $1,800 a year for light, heat and water. He said that he was burning oil. I can understand that as most people in the area, and certainly a person of that age, would not have access to wood. Fuel oil in Atlantic Canada is very expensive. P.E.I. has the highest energy costs in the country, next to the Northwest Territories. In most cases, the rates are twice as high as in other provinces.

In my home, I have a propane stove, a freezer, a refrigerator, a washer, a dryer, a television and a few lights. My light bill is approximately $78 a month. I consider that to be expensive. I have an apartment in Ottawa with an electric stove and all the facilities which I have in my home in P.E.I., with the exception of a freezer. However, I pay approximately $18 a month in Ottawa for the same services. My wife lives in the home by herself during the week, as our family has grown up and moved away. Therefore, the use of electricity in my home is about the same as it would be in my apartment in Ottawa.

I would like to return to the situation of the gentleman whom I was talking about earlier. He is left with $200 a month for food, clothing and transportation. Could any Member in the House today live on that kind of money? If the gentleman had to take a taxi to the doctor or the store, the minimum charge would be from $3.50 to $5. The gentleman told me that he had approximately $3,000 in savings. He told me that his wife had been ill before she died and that her medical expenses had cut into any savings which they had. He told me that he would like to save the $3,000 for burial purposes.

The gentleman also told me that his only son had been killed in the Second World War and that he did not have any real relatives. The gentleman was in a deficit position of $310 a year. As of January 1, 1986, that gentleman will lose 3 per cent of his OAS. That is very sad. He will have to make other arrangements. However, I cannot find a senior citizen's unit which would be any less expensive than his present accommodation.

Canadians in that age group are finding themselves in a very difficult situation. The Government has picked on the weakest people in our society. Those people are unable to fend for themselves. I think that is desperately wrong.

● (1720)

During the meeting of the Maritime Premiers in my province, they stated that it was totally unacceptable to deindex the Old Age Security as far as the Maritime provinces were concerned. I can sympathize not only with the seniors but with the Premiers to a degree because this is making it very difficult for them. I believe we should look at the proper consultation method we heard so much about during and since the election campaign. We were going to have a great consultative process, certainly with the provinces. The consultative process I envisaged taking place was a meaningful one. Indeed, when the Premiers of the provinces of this country made their feelings known to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of Finance, and the provincial Ministers of Finance made their views known to their counterpart, the federal Minister of Finance, they assumed that they would not only be heard but their suggestions would be acted upon. I understand that the Premiers did make their position known before the Budget. If they did do so, certainly it fell on deaf ears.

We met with agricultural groups when we were in Prince Edward Island and Atlantic Canada, and we know that farmers are extremely hard hit by this Budget. Inspection fees were part of the statement of the Minister of Finance in November. Both farm organizations and farmers and those of us in the Opposition Party were able to mount enough of an attack that we did get it across to the Government that it could not do what it announced in the first place. However, the Government did not back down as it should have. It was a very ill conceived plan to put an inspection fee, for instance, on potatoes and red meat because, as I have said before in the House, it is a protection for the consumer and it should come out of general revenue and not from the hard pressed farmers of this country. I would like to quote from The Guardian of June 6, 1985:

> Federation President Ray O'Brien told the Atlantic Liberal task force the recent federal Budget has all people in Atlantic Canada, not just farmers, concerned the federal Government has "totally abandoned" any notion of special consideration or assistance because of geographical position.
> "Prince Edward Island and Atlantic Canada agriculture and business alike will die a natural death unless we can change the philosophy of our federal politicians and bureaucrats", Mr. O'Brien said.

He went on to say, and I quote:

> A major disappointment in the federal Budget cited by the federation was the absence of provisions to help farmers in severe financial trouble because of high inflation, high interest rates, energy costs and all other farm inputs.

He continues, and I quote:

> The new Budget lowers the gasoline and diesel oil rebate for farmers, and coupled with the additon of 2 cents per litre which will be added to farm fuel costs, Mr. O'Brien said the rebate will be "almost nullified".

I was at an all-candidates committee meeting during the election campaign. We met with the National Farmers Union. The Conservative candidates had a wonderful program for the farmers. One thing they were going to do was take off the excise tax on gasoline and diesel fuel. All the farmers in my province thought it was going to stay off for the next 100 years, but what did the Government do after being elected with this massive majority? It took off roughly 3 cents a litre according to the November statement of the Minister of Finance, but it was to take effect January 1, 1985 which is this January past. It was to have a sunset clause of January 1, 1987. That sounds like three years, and I don't like to use the word "deception", but that sort of wording is very deceptive.

Many people, without really thinking it through, would believe it was for three years. However, the Conservatives promised that tax would come off, period. There was no sunset clause mentioned when we met during the election campaign. There was nothing like that mentioned by the candidates, the Hon. Member for Malpeque, the Hon. Member for Cardigan, along with candidates from the New Democratic and Liberal Parties. I do not believe the Hon. Member for Hillsborough was there. This was a bit of trickery, and I think it has to be pointed out that it did sort of trick the people when the Conservatives indicated to them that it was coming off carte blanche, would never be put on again, and then just giving them two years.

On top of that, there is the addition of two cents per litre added added to farm fuel costs. As the Federation of Agriculture points out so clearly, the rebate is almost nullified and, of course, on January 1, 1987, they will be in a minus position again with two cents per litre more.

We also heard from our seniors. Mr. Robert Betton Senior who represented the Federal Superannuates' National Association was very vocal. I would like to quote from an article by Andy Walker:

He also made a case for old age pensioners, calling the budget "despicable". Betton explained many seniors live below the poverty line, seniors housing is scarce and the cost of living is high.

We also heard basically the same thing from the National Farmers Union that we were told by the Federation of Agriculture. We heard how the New Brunswick seniors felt. There were many things that crept in during the November financial statement of the Minister of Finance and this Budget. I have a letter here from Mr. Theriault the Tignish Fire Department. He said he was talking to Mr. McGuire on the telephone today who suggested Mr. Theriault put in writing their concerns regarding the federal Department of Radio Communications. He says their licence fee has double from last year, from $52.50 to $118. They added a pager system on the same frequency and the cost per year for the licence is $236.

He called the office in Charlottetown, believing there was a mistake somewhere, but he was assured that was the proper amount and everyone operating a VHF radio communications system has to pay the increase. He said they do not mind some increases in order to reduce the national debt, but why pick on volunteer fire departments who raise most of their money from card games, bingos, donations and so on? Obviously volunteer fire departments all across the country use VHF and pager systems, and their costs have been doubled. These people do a tremendous service to every town, village and rural area right across this country. We should support them. The hon. gentleman opposite shakes his head. If he wants to answer this letter, I will send him a copy.

Mr. McDermid: I will be happy to.

Mr. Henderson: It's from Donald Theriault, President of the Tignish Fire Department. I have his phone number here. I will certainly make sure that the Hon. Member gets a copy of it if he would like to reply to it. I would be pleased if he would reply to it and justify those costs.

• (1730)

We met with fishermen's organizations and looked at the budget of the Department involved. There was a projection of a $40 million reduction for 1985, and another $25 million reduction for 1986. I am glad the President of the Treasury Board is here. I hope he understands that his colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, needs an awful lot more money. The ports and harbours of this country are begining to get in very bad shape. I am told by departmental officials in Prince Edward Island that they cannot even do minor maintenance. The Government is being penny wise and pound foolish. If a port project costs $50,000 this year, given another winter and damage by ice and one thing and another, it will cost $200,000 or $300,000 next year. There is no way the Minister should come into this House unless he has a Budget of $150 million for all of Canada. Then we have the recreational harbours to look after. I am on the committee concerned and I can tell the Minister that his colleagues in that committee are pretty angry about the amount of money—

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Penner): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I had hoped that it would not come to the point where we would still be speaking about this issue at this point. We had been assured that pensions, health care and all those things we have taken to be part of our social fabric in this country would be well protected under a Progressive Conservative Government. We were assured by the Prime Minister on numerous occasions that those programs were a sacred trust. He reiterated that from one end of the country to the next. Prior to Christmas we saw some messages from the front bench that the sacred trust was beginning to break down. The opposition and others interested in health care pursued the Government at that time and it appeared there was no problem. If you could take the Prime Minister and his front benchers at their word, indeed those programs would be well protected.

However, when we get to May 23 and see the Budget, we see that the Government is proposing to save some money by reducing the amount of increase in OAS payments to the point where its purchasing power will be eroded by 3 per cent per year over the next number of years. There is no limit. The Government has simply announced in its Budget that this will begin on January 1, 1986.

Since the Budget was announced, my Party has been raising questions in the House on this issue, urging the Prime Minister and other Ministers to rethink this proposition and admit that senior citizens do not deserve this kind of treatment. They cannot protect themselves against inflation. A good many of these senior citizens disposed of their assets after they reached 65 and no longer have anything to provide an additional income for their old age.

Mr. McDermid: What did they do with it?

Mr. Althouse: They sold it off and turned to cash and gradually spent the cash to stay alive. There are hundreds of people like that in my riding.

Mr. McDermid: Farmers?

Mr. Althouse: Farmers, too.

Mr. McDermid: They were taxed on capital gains, weren't they?

Mr. Althouse: Some of them sold even before the capital gains tax came in, my friend, and they are in great difficulty trying to find enough money to live on right now. I can take you to any number of farmers who sold out 10 or 15 years ago, before the capital gains tax came in, at a price which was perhaps one quarter to even a tenth of what that same land might be worth today. They are almost destitute. They require the 3 per cent increase to keep up with inflation because inflation has not slowed down for these people.

Mr. McDermid: Are they on the GIS?

Mr. Althouse: Yes, some of them are on the GIS. They are not going to be able to get the 3 per cent on the OAS under the proposal in the Budget. At the end of next year they will have lost approximately $100 in buying power. At the end of 1987 they will have lost $305 in buying power, and so it goes. By the time they get to 1991, it will be something in the order of $2,284 per annum of lost buying power, simply because they are not getting enough money to keep up with inflation. The laws of Canada have always supplied that protection except for a brief period when the Liberal Government brought in the six and five program.

Mr. Dick: It started in 1974.

Mr. Althouse: They are now going to lose 3 per cent per year. Inflation has not stopped. If we look at the Consumer Price Index, we see that the cost of food increased this year by an amount in excess of 3 per cent. All items excluding food are up more than 4 per cent. Coming as I do from a prairie community where the cost of energy represents a large expense for senior citizens, we should also look at the effect of inflation there. The aggregate increase in the cost of energy is 7.3 per cent. Transportation costs, which is also of great importance to people who live in small towns and villages and find it necessary to travel to larger centres to visit doctors and obtain health services, have increased more than 5 per cent.

Our senior citizens will face all of these cost increases but their cheques, instead of going up by 3.9 per cent, the full rate of inflation at the moment, will only go up by .9 per cent. Yes, the Government is correct, the cheques will continue to be slightly larger, but they will not buy as much.

I think this issue might have been made more clear if, on the presentation of the Budget, it had been described as a head tax or poll tax. In effect, that is what it is. Seniors are being asked to bear an additional 3 per cent tax per year. If this were billed as a poll tax, the response would have been much more immediate. As it was, seniors waited to look at the Budget themselves and saw that it said "will take place effective January, 1986". They saw those words and understood what they meant. They began sending petitions to their Members of Parliament and we have been presenting those petitions. They have now begun sending delegations to Ottawa, one of which arrived here today.

I would like to spend a few minutes reviewing a few of the things the members of that delegation told us. They spoke very clearly and succinctly. I should explain to the front-benchers opposite some of the values held by our senior citizens. These values are held by all citizens in certain parts of the country, but when I watch the activities of certain Members on the front bench opposite, I see very little evidence of them.

Mrs. Fraser, a retired health services worker from Halifax, told us that there are people in her city suffering stress related diseases which were triggered by worrying about their financial circumstances. Their budgets are very restricted now and they know that their expenses will continue to increase while their Old Age Security pensions will be cut by 3 per cent.

Mrs. Fraser cited three examples, one of a high blood pressure case, one of a heart attack, and another of a problem brought on by intense feelings of insecurity due to worrying about the future. To many younger people, that may not seem possible. However, many older people, who have only their futures to prepare for, take this very seriously. Some of them do not have enough social activities to keep them occupied and worrying becomes an obsession.

Having grown up in the time in which they did, they feel betrayed. During the election campaign they were promised that deindexation would not be pursued by the new Government. Page 60 of the Progressive Conservative Handbook says, "A PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis". That is what the seniors expected. On page 11 of the Consultation Paper on Child and Elderly Benefits it says, "In the Government's view no change is required in the OAS-GIS payments system".

Everyone thought that meant that there would be no change, that we would continue to have the automatic indexing of the consumer price index on a quarterly basis, and that pensioners would have that to rely upon. However, that has not happened. That which was portrayed as a sacred trust was only an election platform. It was only meant to sooth anxieties caused prior to Christmas when some front-benchers started to make noises about deindexation and changing social programs. With the presentation of the Budget, we learned that sacred trusts and questions of confidence were no longer that important.

The Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance forget that our senior citizens were raised to believe that a man's word was the most treasured commodity in existence. They saw those words, that trust, and that confidence broken. Their old fashioned values are now very much in question. Senior citizens want to know their pensions are being discounted by 3 per cent annually starting in 1986. They have had no answers. There have been no excuses other than some vague murmurings that the country cannot afford it.

The motion which is before the Committee presently proposes the reduction of the borrowing authority by 3 per cent. The Government is asking for $18.2 billion of borrowing authority. Three per cent of that would be approximately $560 million. That is the amount of money that we are asking seniors to give up by the end of 1987. This borrowing authority is over and above that which the Government will collect from Canadians through taxes. This borrowing authority will basically go to increase the deficit. This motion proposes to reduce the borrowing authority by $550 million and to put the onus on the whole country to provide the money that the Government has asked senior citizens to provide over the next two years.

That is a very simple proposition. I think the Government and the country can accomplish this. We should not burden our senior citizens, many of whom have spent a lot of the money they saved for retirement, perhaps because they lived longer than they expected or because inflation ate it up faster than they expected it would. They have little choice now but to rely on the OAS and the GIS. I think it is grossly unfair for the country to expect them to take up part of the burden through this deindexation. I hope that the whole House will see the errors of the Budget and will continue to put pressure on the Minister of Finance, the Prime Minister, and the entire front bench to withdraw this onerous proposition.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Chairman, I welcome this opportunity to take part in a debate that is very important to all Canadians and especially to the elderly. In fact, the scope of this debate goes beyond the economic needs of the elderly. Mr. Chairman, this debate is about the integrity of politicians generally and the integrity of one person in particular, and I am referring to the person who holds the highest public position in this country after the Governor General. Mr. Chairman, I am referring to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. In recent weeks, since the Budget was brought down, we have seen how surprised and disappointed Canadians were at the cavalier, underhanded and insidious way the Prime Minister and his Government accomplices have been trying to conceal tax increases telling the elderly: "Now, we are all friends and we are all one happy family", and then cutting 3 per cent off their pensions while using a lot of complicated words to confuse the issue.

I see the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) is here, and I am happy to see him, Mr. Speaker. The Parliamentary Secretary is a most intelligent man, and I am sure that if he were not anxious to keep his position as Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance, he would have publicly refused to defend a Budget that cannot be called faire and equitable. I know he is smart enough to realize that the word "fair" just cannot apply to a Budget like this one, when we see what it holds in store for the elderly, for families, for the average Canadian, and that at the same time, it contains measures that make the oil multinationals riches and give capital gains tax exemptions to the wealthy. This Budget is a typical example of a double standard.

The President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), who ought to be good at arithmetic, will not have to do a lot of figuring to conclude that the presents he is giving to the rich in this country, the tax exemption on capital gains which will apply mainly to 4 per cent of the population, are going to come straight from the pockets or purses of the elderly. The President of the Treasury Board should climb down from his ivory tower and look around in the real world.

Recently, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) and I were able to meet with senior citizens in the Quebec City area, the Eastern Townships and even in Baie-Comeau. These meetings not "packaged" meetings like some Conservative Members tried to arrange, not meetings of the party faithful but meetings with real people, whatever their political colour or affiliation. I can say we had no hesitation in visiting ridings represented by Conservative Members. The first question we asked people was: Do you know who your Member is? That was the first question and the hardest. In Louis-Hébert, for instance, where I visited two senior citizens' homes, only one person out of 40 people I met was able to name the Member for the riding. In Montmorency-Orléans, the results were the same. But in the Eastern Townships, Mr. Chairman, I found that the people knew who the Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) was. She has no problem. People know her. The senior citizens we met told us what they had to say, and they are asking the Conservative Members to come home, to come back to their ridings and listen to them. They will realize that the Prime Minister is on the wrong track. They will realize that slavishly applauding what the Minister of Finance has to say is not getting results. They will realize they are betraying their constituents and failing to meet their commitment to defend their interests.

Mr. Chairman, these Members who are supposed to represent Quebec have now become Ottawa representatives in Quebec. This is not why you were elected, dear friends. When I hear the Member over there from the Chambly area who speaks only from the safety of his seat, I wish he would rise to speak once in a while. His constituents have also complained of never hearing him speak. They have told me, Mr. Chairman, that they saw him during the campaign, but that, since then, all he does is to parade a little and he never goes to listen to them. I think that it would be in his own interest to go back to his riding because, if he does not remember his constituents, I can tell you, Mr. Chairman, that his constituents remember him.

Mr. Grisé: Quite right! And they will vote the same way again.

Mr. Lapierre: I am speaking about the Chambly riding, Mr. Chairman, and the people there remember him quite well.

An Hon. Member: He will not be there after the next election.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Speaker, I would like to give a few examples of comments we heard during our trip. I can tell you that, in Louis-Hébert, many senior citizens do not want to sign their lease even though it is due on July 1 because of the uncertainty caused by the indecision of the Government. It is one step forward and two steps back. The senior citizens no longer know where the Prime Minister is going, and in fact, the Prime Minister does not know himself. Senior citizens are saying: We worked all our lives, we deserve a safe retirement after so many efforts. We believed the Prime Minister on July 26, in Sherbrooke, when he said in his honeyed tone that he would index fully the pensions of senior citizens. What has he done since then? He has betrayed them completely. And he has his bunch of people of no account behind him who agree with all this. They really have a short memory, Mr. Speaker. They were all there in Sherbrooke on July 26. They came to our area pretexting a caucus meeting while the whole time they were there for a course on the behavior of an ideal candidate and especially on what not to say. They were told: What the Prime Minister, at that time the Party Leader, says, you should repeat word for word. Since then, Mr. Chairman, they have learned their lesson too well. They have not even been able to change the vocabulary. They have continued to repeat the line of the Prime Minister. Wake up, for heaven's sake. The people of your constituencies, the people of the Montmorency-Orléans riding have said: We would like to see our Member of Parliament, we would like to know how she is doing. They want to tell her about their concerns. They told us: Tell her to get out of Ottawa or wherever she is. They said: perhaps Mr. Mulroney is sending her on a lot of trips, but she should travel less and protect our pensions. This was the reaction in the Montmorency-Orléans riding. Afterwards, in the Eastern Townships, Mr. Chairman, we called a meeting of 75 representatives of senior citizens' groups and we had 250 participants with two day's notice.

An Hon. Member: We should not forget the Hon. Member for Champlain; he is here.

Mr. Lapierre: We have not come to Champlain yet, but we are getting there, Mr. Chairman. These 250 representatives of senior citizens' groups all went back home with piles of petitions for people to sign. They will make sure that they awaken this bunch of deaf-mutes. The problem is not only that these people need their 3 per cent. It is that they are very disappointed to see that their new Members of Parliament, who were supposed to represent their regions, are too deaf to hear anything. They do not hear the cries for help, the appeals for justice of senior citizens, which is incredible. As for the Hon. Member for Portneuf (Mr. Ferland), instead of clowning in the House, he should rise to defend the senior citizens of his constituency. They are not wealthier than those of my own riding, and I do not understand how he can laugh at their problems.

Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to support the amendment now under consideration. It would give the Government some time to reflect on its decision. They say: We are going to tighten the belts of seniors by 3 per cent. And as somebody told me in Quebec City the day before yesterday: Mr. Mulroney may very well ask us to tighten our belts, but the problem is, there is not a hole left. So this is what they are demanding. What appreciation do they have of the work, of the hard work done by the people who came before them?

I for one, Mr. Chairman, will not accept that the people who built this country be penalized. And if they do not have that sensitivity . . . You know we went to Baie-Comeau also, and in Baie-Comeau, the supposedly true blue Conservative fief, the leader's hometown, imagine, Mr. Chairman, the Baie-Comeau Senior Citizens' Club, all of its executive signed the petition asking the Prime Minister to back out. The Prime Minister was referring to his great friends in Baie-Comeau, the people who are so close to his heart. The Prime Minister no doubt recalls his aunt Jeanne, who changed his diapers when he was younger. Aunt Jeanne told me: "Tell Brian", and I am quoting her, Mr. Chairman, she told me: "Tell Brian he has no right to do that to me. Tell Brian he has no right to touch senior citizens, because he promised the opposite." This is what his aunt Jeanne asked me to tell him.

And the Prime Minister, rather than listening to his Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who comes from Bay Street, should go back and see his aunt Jeanne in Baie-Comeau. He should go back to Maison Père Méthot in Baie-Comeau and listen to real people talking, those people who say: Not only he wants to reduce our income by 3 per cent, but in the meantime he is pushing prices up. One lady told me: Listen, not only did he add another tax on cigarettes and I had to stop smoking, but he had the gall to put a tax on soap, on shampoo, and on toothpaste. Is the Prime Minister asking me to stop washing myself? This is what that person told us. Because this has come to be a luxury under this Government.

And everything went along the same line, and it was unanimous. I will tell you another one, Mr. Chairman. The famous Taverne des Amis in Baie-Comeau, the Prime Minister's friends' Tavern. I was there also, and each and everyone signed a petition, except a couple of organizers who told us: Listen, you know, Brian is not for that. He is for giving full pension to seniors, but his caucus is against it. Do not worry, he is on our side, but his caucus, that gang of dinosaurs he has around him, are forcing him to do it. Those were notes they had received from Mrs. Savard, the Prime Minister's assistant in Baie-Comeau. They even tried to manipulate seniors before we arrived, Mr. Chairman.

This goes to show the intellectual honesty of that gang. How come they have so short memories? So, if you think you are going to get yourself out of that, you are in for a surprise!

Senior citizens will not be had. And if the Minister of Finance thought that because seniors are retired they cannot defend themselves, he is in for a surprise, because the older people we met on our mission will not be screwed. They are determined and they want to give the Prime Minister a lesson in honesty. And that lesson he will get it, he got it today. One lady told him the truth right to his face, what everyone is thinking in Canada. You will see it on the newscast. That lady told the truth to the Prime Minister. My colleague Tobin also told the truth to the Prime Minister, except that there are different rules inside and outside the House—

An Hon. Member: Disgusting!

Mr. Lapierre: And talking about that, the Hon. Member over there said "disgusting".

● (1800)

[English]

What you are doing is disgusting.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Mr. Lapierre: You cannot even fulfil your promises. Your leader in my area, in Sherbrooke, on July 26 said that he was going to fully index the old age pensions. What are you doing today? You are trying to put the old people into poverty.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Mr. Lapierre: That is what you are doing. I have a letter here dated June 6, from one of my constituents who writes:

Surely we all realize that the elderly have paid their dues and that we all owe them respect, our gratitude, and peace of mind during the "autumn" of their lives. The cumulative loss of revenue over the years that this "government" is inflicting on this group of people is surely not going to help this country's economy.

With a fixed income and prices of every commodity rising each year the "government" undoubtedly has as one of its objectives to bestow on this group of people the ultimate degradation of mankind: poverty of mind, spirit and body which is nothing less than throwing away this land's only resource worth measuring: its human beings.

This letter written by Mr. van Doorn continues:

This is the first letter I have ever written to protest or approve any Government's decision. This letter has no other intent than to cast a vote. I am pleased that I did take the time to voice my opinion. I feel it is time that imaginative measures are taken in Parliament and shed the old practices of burdening the people with ever higher demands on target groups. It is true that justice for all is a myth but it remains nevertheless an honourable goal to strive for.

Since Jake Epp and the entire Conservative "Caucus" had not yet received any nay votes on this subject yet I have taken the liberty of sending a copy of this letter to Minister Epp.

Mr. McDermid: Send a copy of your reply.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. van Doorn concludes by saying:

In God we trust, in the government we despair!

Mr. van Doorn is from Granby, Quebec.

Mr. McDermid: Send a copy of your reply.

Mr. Lapierre: My reply is pretty simple. He is right on. He touched the fundamental values of this whole exercise. It is a question of respect for the elderly. It is a question of equity and justice. If you guys cannot accept the fact that those people have already paid their dues, that's too bad.

[Translation]

If you cannot accept the fact that those senior citizens have already paid their debt to society, that they have gone through the worst years, the war years, the depression years and that you are again asking them to make sacrifices, Mr. Chairman, it is simply not good enough. And we will fight like mad to make sure that this will not go through. We fight to catch out the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi who said that he did not have to keep his commitments. You will not get away with it. And I can tell you, Mr. Chairman, that an increasing number of senior citizens will come here, that your constituency offices will be flooded with calls, with pleas for justice and equity. Mr. Chairman, this is the first stretch part of a long fight if you will not change your mind. You are duly warned because it is unacceptable that after giving his word, the Prime Minister is trying to find a means of escape and to lie bluntly to the Canadian people.

Mr. Speaker, I must conclude my comments now because, unfortunately, I am only allowed 20 minutes. I could speak for hours on end of the gratitude we should feel towards older persons. I know that senior citizens in many constituencies share my opinion and that is why nothing can stop us. If we have to filibuster, we will do it, if we have to go in every constituency to stir you up, we will do it. But we will not let the matter rest there.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, I have a few comments for the record today. I want to ask the Parliamentary Secretary a question regarding one of the concerns people have with our present tax system. Our tax system is unjust and biased in all kinds of ways. The Parliamentary Secretary is well aware of the tax system and appreciates the point I am making.

Perhaps to make the point a little more clearly, let me say that in 1981, 239 individuals had an average income of $615,000 a year and paid no tax at all. That is a familiar situation we have talked about for some time.

● (1810)

If we look at the tax regulations presently in place we find that in 1985 a married taxpayer under the age of 65 years whose only source of income is dividends from taxable Canadian corporations will be able to receive $51,206 in dividends without paying any federal or provincial income tax. That is at the moment; it does not include the capital gains exemption which has been brought in, and so on.

I should like to indicate to the Parliamentary Secretary that this has driven a lot of the economy underground. Many transactions go on unrecorded and consequently untaxed. Does the Parliamentary Secretary have a ballpark figure which the Department might use to describe the size of that underground economy in Canada?

[Translation]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier).

Mr. Lanthier: I would like to reply, Mr. Chairman. We have just launched a far-reaching economic program. First, no one should put words in my mouth, for I am not convinced that the Budget is not fair, that it is inequitable. I repeat that, in my opinion, the Budget is fair and equitable.

Second, Mr. Chairman, there was a reference to people who do not pay income tax. A moment ago, we heard that we are a bunch of rookies, and that came from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). It is true that we are new Members, but still the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry has been in Government for 20 years. We were businessmen and we did bring that experience with us in the Government. From what we have learned in the business community, we know that the only way to avoid paying taxes is not to make any money in the first place.

An Hon. Member: There are other ways.

Mr. Lanthier: That is the basic principle in accounting and if you consult an accountant he will tell you that the only way to avoid taxes is not to make any money. One can have an income and deductions, and still earn an income from capital. That is what Governments have been doing for 20 years and God knows how heavily indebted Canada is. Those two parties seemed to have the same Whip a moment ago, as if this were Queen's Park. In any event I think that people do not pay any income tax because they have legitimate and quite legal deductions. We will eventually change some of them in a Budget.

Besides, some of those people made contributions and were entitled to deductions. I know that I contributed to MURBs and invested in films and have earned income since then. But those schemes turned into losses.

However the obvious inequities ought to be eliminated and, since I come from capitalist circles, I have already heard those expressions from people with socialist leanings. I have heard those objections before and I can assure the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) that, in my opinion, most people who earn large incomes generally pay taxes. Rather than talking in general terms, I would like to see the personal income tax returns of people who earn $600,000 a year, if I heard correctly, and do not pay taxes. They may have some kind of income, but if the income comes directly from their own capital, if they gave themselves salaries which were not real salaries, that is something else again. I would have liked to hear about specific cases before discussing the general issue. In any event the new Budget has closed the loophole through a minimum tax which will be levied. The tax is in the budget and will eventually be levied. I think that a correction has been made, but I wonder if you are satisfied with my answer. However, I do not have any data and the Department has no data about the so-called underground economy. However, we know that it exists, barter exists.

Listen: An accountant who has his lawn mown and keeps the books of the mower is nothing new. It is perhaps new to you, but when you said a while ago that you were real people, if you had lived in the real world instead of going around with your eyes closed, you would be aware of that. Now, in the real world, barter exists. It is unfortunate, but we will deal with it, and I think that the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Beatty) as well as the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) are trying to step up investigations in that area of human activity which has always existed but which is hard to monitor, I agree. According to my advisers here, I am told that we do not know much about the underground economy in Canada.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Chairman, it was interesting to listen to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary. He indicated that I could relax, that I did not have to worry any longer about all these folk who do not pay any income tax, because the Government is committed to bringing in a minimum tax, and it says so in the Budget. However, also in the Budget it says that the Minister of Finance will bring in deindexation of the pensions of senior citizens, and we are told that that is not really in there, that it is just a proposal. We are told that deindexation is just a proposal, but that the minimum tax is a commitment. When the Minister of Finance brings in his minimum tax Bill, I will be the most surprised person in the world. I do not think we will ever see a minimum tax.

Mr. McDermid: Will you support it?

Mr. Riis: Certainly I will be supportive of a minimum tax, if it is a reasonable one.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Riis: Quite frankly, I think it is another proposal.

Mr. Gormley: What is reasonable for the NDP?

Mr. Riis: Fairness, justice and equality. I do not want to get side-traced by my colleagues.

One of the reasons we have not been enthusiastic about endorsing this $18.2 billion borrowing authority is that we have many questions about what the Government says it will do or has already done and what the facts actually tell us. Hon. Members opposite say that because the new Government has been in place for over nine months, because it has an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons, because of the new Cabinet, the new thrust, the new era and the new Budget, all sorts of new investment will take place and that, therefore, economic expansion will occur, jobs will be created and the unemployment rolls will be eliminated. This is what we have been told day after day. I see some Hon. Members nodding in agreement.

Today is Wednesday, June 19, and I looked at the business section of The Globe and Mail which contained an article headlined: "Expected investment does not materialize". This article was written by Bruce Little, a very credible economic reporter. It goes on to explain in some detail—actually, too much detail, and I do not think it is necessary for me to repeat all of it—the various areas of investment which have simply failed to materialize, for obvious reasons. For example, it indicates that new orders expanded by an anaemic 0.7 per cent in the first three months of the new year.

Mr. McDermid: When did the Budget come in?

Mr. Riis: It came in in May, but I remember the Prime Minister saying that virtually the day after the election, thousands and thousands of jobs would be created. However, how many were lost?

Mr. Blenkarn: On July 5 we will see how many more jobs we have.

Mr. Riis: I do not believe that.

An Hon. Member: You don't believe anything.

Mr. Riis: I believe the facts before us which indicate that the expected investment has not materialized. Once again, Mr. Chairman, we find that the Prime Minister and his colleagues say it has happened; they say it has already happened. The Hon. Member in the back there says that investment is flowing into the country. Because of the dismantling of FIRA all of this foreign money is coming into the country in bucketfulls. Have you noticed what the figures are in terms of investment coming into Canada? Is there a mounting tidal wave of capital moving up over the southern border? Absolutely not. It is not taking place.

• (1820)

I am pleased to see the chairman of the finance committee here as well, because he will remember a few months ago when the foreign bankers were making a presentation and—of course, they are well aware of how the community outside of Canada feels about Canada in terms of its investment potential—the question was put, once this Investment Canada Bill is put into place, can we expect a significant increase in foreign investment in Canada? Their response was, Mr. Chairman, no, there will not be any significant increase; there might not even be any noticeable increase at all. Those were foreign bankers who, I suspect, talk with some sophistication about how the outside world plans to view Canada in terms of investment potential. They said dismantling FIRA and instituting Investment Canada will result in no particular change in foreign investment.

We keep hearing on the one hand that there is more investment. The Globe and Mail says it is not taking place. We find that it says—

Mr. Blenkarn: Then why did you not oppose the Bill?

Mr. Riis: Why did we not oppose the Bill? We oppose the Bill, Mr. Chairman, to point out the hypocrisy and the naivety of the business minds of the Members who sit across in the opposite benches, these people who tell us about their business sophistication. They say that investment will take place; it is not taking place. They say that foreign investment will roll into Canada; it is not coming into Canada.

Then I guess the crowning glory of it all was when they said, listen, we have a great idea on how to expand business. We will take a lot more taxes from the people of Canada so they will have their disposable incomes reduced so they cannot buy as much, and that is going to assist business to expand. The economic logic of that escapes me. I just cannot believe that these people have the courage to say that a great idea is to take disposable income away from people, that is how they will be encouraged to go out and buy. Then they say, oh, no, we have a better idea, a better incentive. A better incentive is to provide a capital gains exemption and then all those hundreds of thousands of Canadians will—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, order.

An Hon. Member: The Hon. Member forgets, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Riis: They have forgotten however, on the whole aspect of having no capital gains tax, that only 4 per cent of all of the people in Canada who file taxes file capital gains. That means 96 per cent of Canadians are not even touched by this prospect. Ninety-six per cent are not going to fall over themselves because of this windfall profit of capital gains. There it is, the nub of it all.

Who are those 4 per cent? Are they your average Canadian citizens? Are they ordinary Canadians or are they, for example, the president and chief executive officer of Bow Valley Industries—I have just had a report passed over my desk today which indicates that Mr. Gerald Inair, who is the president and chief executive officer and whose cash compensation for the year was only $408,000 plus, was given a little over $2 million in interest-free loans. I am not saying anything nasty about this individual. He is a chief executive officer and presumbably his board of directors feel that that is what he is worth. The point is that he is the kind of person we are talking about, Mr. Chairman. We are not talking about Mr. and Mrs. Average Joe citizen in Canada. We are talking about Gerald Inair, the half a million dollars per year income type person.

Again to reiterate, we are less than enthusiastic about endorsing this $18.2 billion borrowing authority because it reflects so much hypocrisy. It reflects, if you like, almost a dishonesty on the part of the Government by saying these things will happen when the facts have demonstrated that they have not happened, and that quite the contrary has taken place. I just wanted to have an opportunity to put that concept on the record. Thank you very much.

[Translation]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier). I remind him that about four minutes of the 20-minute period remain.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, I shall be brief, since I do not intend to be trapped into extending the debate. When I use the word "deindexing", I always do so against my better judgment, for it is a pure invention of what I call the Queen's Park odd couple. It is nowhere to be found in the Budget Speech.

Opposition members are trying to scare Canadian pensioners with that word. What we find in the Budget Speech is the Government's assurance to fully compensate any increase in inflation above 3 per cent. So, opposition members should stop telling us that it was used in the Budget Speech, for it is nowhere to be found.

Yesterday, we were challenged right and left with all sorts of figures which I think I have laid to rest. Today, I should like to challenge hon. members of the NDP who support this amendment and oppose this bill. I should like them to try to prove that the Prime Minister was wrong when he stated that 271,000 had been created since September 1984, that 159,000 jobs were created in April and May, the greatest number for a two month period in 12 years, not to mention the fact that unemployment in May had dropped from 10.9 per cent to 10.5 per cent, that most of these new jobs have been permanent ones, and that the greater increase have been in youth employment. I challenge them to prove these figures wrong. It is not enough for them to say they do not believe them, they should quote figures of their own.

Hon. Members opposite claim that only 4 per cent of Canadians will benefit from the capital gains tax exemption. I cannot question this figure, for it is true. But even so, an analysis of Canadian taxpayers who declared capital gains on their Income Tax returns, shows that 55 per cent of them are families earning less than $40,000 a year. These are no millionaires and we are not doing them any favour. First of all, they are not millionaires, for no family earning less than $40,000 a year can be considered rich nowadays. They are just ordinary people. Second, capital gains are not outright gifts, as we keep repeating, they are investment oriented. Yesterday, I quoted a few examples from my own riding, indicating exactly where these job-creating investments would take place.

Mrs. Killens: Mr. Chairman, I welcome this opportunity to speak on behalf of the elderly in my riding. There are 12 senior citizens' homes in my riding, and residents have asked me to take a message to the Prime Minister. The motion to amend Bill C-51 before the House today asks the Government to reduce its borrowing authority by 3 per cent, because we in the Liberal Party believe that the Government should not apply a double standard. If the elderly must tighten their belts and suffer a 3 per cent cut in pension benefits, it is only fair and equitable that the Government should do the same. For two days I have been watching the situation in the House and listening to speeches, and when I look at the Conservatives opposite, I get the impression that many of them are delighted to see the Opposition fight the battle for them. I think if they were really honest with themselves they would come out and say so. I understand the situation. I had the same thing happen to me when we were in power, and I realize that they may not be in a position at this time to rise in the House to voice their objections. However, their constituents will tell them they are disappointed in their behaviour in the House.

In presenting this motion, the Liberal Party is acting on behalf of thousands of elderly Canadians across the country. This was demonstrated on Parliament Hill today, where we saw Canadian flags from all over the province. They came in large numbers. Since they are not particularly wealthy, Quebec senior citizens all chipped in to rent buses and come to Ottawa to tell the Prime Minister they do not want a cut in their pensions.

I went to meet them. You know what they are afraid of? They are afraid because they think this is only the first of a series of cuts. They told me: This is only the beginning. And believe me, they are right!

Senior citizens have been calling my office in Montreal to protest. They are also calling to congratulate the Liberals and their Members for defending them and their rights. They ask me where to go to sign petitions. Like everyone else, I have received hundreds and hundreds of them. And this is only the beginning. They feel they have been deceived and betrayed by this Government. They are anxious and concerned. They know they cannot afford to cut back any more on what they spend.

I have here a letter from one of my constituents who is single and retired, and who sent me this little budget, a personal budget. I will take the time to read it to you to show the kind of impact that a 3 per cent cut can have on the budget of a single individual.

Income including pension benefits and supplement totals $606.20. Expenses: rent is $240. Hydro: $21.47. Heating: $57. All this is monthly. Telephone: $17. Life insurance and insurance against fire and theft: $20.83. Water taxes: $5. Monthly food bill: $216.50. This adds up to $577.80, leaving $27.40 per month.

This single person has exactly $27.40 to pay for the following: clothing, any medical drugs that are not covered by the card, dental care, glasses, cigarettes, house cleaning supplies, appliance repairs, transportation, newspapers, recreation and personal care (toothpaste, soap, hairdresser, cosmetics, and so forth). Twenty-seven dollars and forty cents a month to pay for all that!

On page 84 of the Budget Papers, under Item 6, the following terms were used to announce that the Budget is increasing the price of personal care products by 11 per cent. It says, and I quote:

> The exemption from sales tax applying to a range of consumer goods is being ended, effective July 1, 1985.

This government has re-examined a number of these tax exemptions, as has the Ministerial Task Force on Program Review (headed by the Deputy Prime Minister) which has recommended a repeal of several of them. These exemptions have resulted in a significant erosion of the federal sales tax base.

In response to these concerns and to spread the burden of deficit reduction over a wider range of consumer goods, the budget proposes the repeal of the federal sales tax exemption for the following: candy and confectionery; pet food; soft drinks, including carbonated beverages, non-carbonated fruit-flavoured beverages containing less than 25 per cent natural fruit juice, and concentrates for making such beverages; health goods such as medicated creams, lotions, shampoos, soaps, and bandages.

This is a hidden tax, Mr. Chairman, because it is applicable at the manufacturer and group level. But again I say that for a retired person living alone, with the kind of budget I have just described and who has only $27.40 a month to pay for clothing, transportation, shampoo, soap and what have you, it is catastrophic. We Liberals have been accused of spreading fear among senior citizens. We in the Opposition did not spread fear, it is page 16 of the Budget which has created such anxiety among elderly Canadians. It is a bad decision and an error in judgment on the part of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), it is a political error on the part of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). The Government ought to admit its mistake and should have the courage to reconsider its decision.

[English]

I have here a letter dated June 7 which came to my office in the morning mail today. It is from the Federation of New Brunswick Senior Citizens which met in New Brunswick on May 27 and 28. This is what the letter has to say:

The following statement was announced Tuesday in Moncton at a Media Conference by the President: "N.B. Senior Citizens have once again been disturbed in their quality of life. Their internal peace and tranquility is most important at this stage of their lives."

The recent announcements violate a sacred trust, and to Canadian Seniors many things and principles are still sacred.

Tampering with old age security (already inadequate) is immoral, indecent and dishonest.

You can consider this letter as coming from the 76,500 N.B. residents aged 65 and over, seventy-three percent of them below the poverty level, eighty percent of these single ladies and or widows.

Yes we are for measures for reducing deficits—Yes we have paid all of our lives—Yes we are still paying like everyone else—Yes we want a strong Canada—very very few of you are listening to what Senior Citizens are saying. At this time enough is enough!

Fifty-eight percent of Canada's Seniors are below the poverty level. That is a National disgrace!

We will not allow you to legislate our peace of mind, quality of life and the eroding of our mental and physical health under the guise of saving a few dollars.

The letter is signed by Mrs. Edna Bourque, President, and Mr. Bernard Richard, Executive Director.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, I have here figures which show the injustice perpetrated on our senior citizens. According to an independent study, over 750,000 Canadian men and women will have fallen under the poverty line by 1990 because of the last Budget. Of all these Canadians, 200,000 will be senior citizens. The Budget of the Progressive Conservative Government contains nothing to improve the situation of the 4.1 Canadians, or 20 per cent of the population, who are already living in unacceptable conditions. On the contrary, the Wilson Budget will increase the financial distress of the poorest members of our society. The deindexation of old age security pensions will affect senior citizens. By 1990, this will mean a loss of about $1,200 in real income for a couple and $560 a year for someone living alone. What we must remember is that the Government will take away $1.6 million from pensioners before 1990. These figures have human faces, Mr. Chairman. This is why I do not understand why the Government has not decided to reconsider, to reassess the situation and to reinstate full indexation for all senior citizens.

The National Advisory Council on Aging sent me a communiqué requesting the reinstatement of indexation. Here are a few passages from this communiqué:

"It is the first time we see such conviction and cohesion among older Canadians", write Mrs. Yhetta Gold, Chairman of the National Advisory Council on Aging in a letter adressed to the Honourable Minister of National Health and Welfare. "The Budget of May 23 . . . has incited older Canadians to rally to put pressure on the Government and to defend their own interests. Senior citizens are telling the Government: Now listen here!"

Deindexation has not only united older Canadians, but it has brought together many other Canadians, including young people and business groups."

The letter to the Minister of Health also mentions other effects of deindexation. According to the Council, "it is a short-term saving in exchange for a long term loss".

● (1840)

What they say is rather interesting. They continue:

"The stress caused by an increasingly tight budget will have harmful effects——on senior citizens.

More and more Canadians will find it difficult to adjust to their physical, mental or social condition, which will then deteriorate. In time, the cost incurred for all kinds of care will limit the savings brought about by deindexation."

Mrs. Gold seems to be talking about the higher cost of health care, which will result from the stress caused by the reduced purchasing power of our senior citizens.

The National Advisory Council on Aging also believes that people on the eve of retirement, those aged from 60 to 64, of whom there are 1.1 million in Canada, whose income is lower than $17,000 a year will be badly hit by deindexation. "A great number will have to change their retirement plans and try to save more to compensate for their loss of income, or else they will have to postpone their retirement. The first option will reduce economic growth and the second will increase competition on the labour market."

The communiqué concludes as follows:

Let us not forget that older Canadians, in addition to their political influence and their strength at the polls, also have a substantial purchasing power.

The Government had a social contract with Canadian pensioners and this contract has been broken. During the election campaign, the Government had promised to provide more protection against inflation for pensions. This promise has also been broken. Senior citizens could not believe that the Government would reduce their pensions. They were expecting instead additional protection. I repeat that the Government had promised to provide more protection against inflation for pensions. The reason why my colleague was thrown out of the House this afternoon goes to prove the quotation I just made; everything goes to prove why my colleague was expelled this afternoon.

Mr. Chairman, full inflation protection that is basic to every pension plan: a pension that is reasonable at age 65 becomes inadequate at age 75 if that protection against inflation is not guaranteed.

The poor are asked to tighten their belts in order to make a $5.6 billion gift to the affluent. This budget is unfair to the poor. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said that he kept his mind open on the budget, and that he would be willing to make changes if needed.

On behalf of the senior citizens and the poor, Mr. Chairman, I ask him not to delay his decision. Every day counts for our seniors. They are all anxious, they are going to fight to the finish.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman, it is my duty to point out some inaccuracies that crept up hopefully by mistake. Earlier, it was suggested that a person living alone wouuld lose, and I said "would lose", I am quoting in order not to be myself quoted out of context, "would lose" $560 a year. Therefore, if that is the kind of statement that is made to the public at large, it comes as no surprise that they should be anxious. I would therefore like to put the record straight about those $560: this would be an overall amount over the forthcoming five years, under all the provisions that are of course already referred to in the budget.

Second, on these cuts, again that term should not be used the way it is being used by Opposition Members. There is no cut. Nobody is losing money with that. Understand? People will still be increased until December 31, and after December 31 we have options which are very well outlined in the budget. So there is no cut.

Second, when there is reference to, rhetoric, semantics like "reverse", "backtrack", "recognize the error", all that points to the basic goal of this debate. It is purely of a political nature, and it is a shame that senior citizens, should be used, while taking advantage not of their credulity but of their sensitivity, to such vile purposes as the political aims as are now pursued.

I do not believe they have had the honesty to tell senior citizens that everything is provided for in the budget in order that, when the Government feels it is in a position to help them without digging into the old earnings, as I have been told in my constituency, when it becomes sure that the cheque we will then be giving them will not bounce, as hinted today by the Prime Minister, the whole measure will be reviewed. And as the economic situation evolves, as the measures we have been taking to create more wealth produce their benefits, as job creation becomes obvious, as order is restored in the affairs of the state, and as the national debt is checked and the deficit controlled in the first place.

Second, I would also like to put the record straight on the matter of deindexing. There has been references to some promises we made, suggestions that we promised protection. This is basically what we promised, and this is basically what has been achieved. Referring to the budget speech itself, or rather the document that goes with it, it is clearly stated, and I quote: "Recipients of these transfers will be protected from rapid increases in inflation but will no longer receive compensation for inflation as measured by the CPI below 3 per cent a year." etc.

In effect, this is protection. The difference between the protection we are offering and the protection that was offered by the previous government is this: the present government, or rather the previous government had established a floor, saying we will protect you from 6 per cent and up to 100 per cent, and senior citizens were to make do with that. We, on the other hand, are establishing a ceiling, that is, up to 3 per cent, senior citizens are asked to contribute. Above 3 per cent, the government will step in. I believe that this will enable older people to do some long term planning, sparing them the fear of having to face spiralling inflation such as we have experienced in recent years. I believe they will be spared the fear of having their income eroded by this evil of modern society which is called inflation.

Obviously, I deeply regret the statement that was made a moment ago by the Hon. Member for Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic (Mrs. Killens) when she mentioned and tried to ennoble the sad incident that happened today during question period. I am sorry to say that the person who was expelled from the House deserved it, and I regret even more deeply to see such a behaviour being supported by a party for which I once had some respect. That party was badly shaken today. I was the first today to applaud when someone withdrew a statement. In my view, an honest person is not one who never makes any mistakes but one who know how to correct them. So I must say that the hon. member disappointed me in that regard.

● (1850)

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order! The Hon. Member for Bourrassa (Mr. Rossi) on a point of order.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Chairman, I suggest what the Hon. Member has just said concerning an Hon. Member being expelled from the House was not relevant to the topic being debated at this time.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I am sorry. No, we will not pursue this any further, even on a point of order. It is not a point of order, to start with.

The 20 minute period has now expired. Resuming debate.

[English]

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure in this debate to follow my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic, and expand on her very fine presentation. I will start by first dealing with the rather skillful intervention by the Parliamentary Secretary on the government side who, despite his attempt to discredit the credibility of my colleague, cannot deny that we are talking here about a Budget. That is a document which spells very clearly the intention of the Government to deindex pensions above 3 per cent.

A Budget is not, as the Parliamentary Secretary would like us to believe, a White Paper, something which says we "might" do certain things or we may not. The Budget spells out its intentions and its will by the use of words such as "we will" deindex. Therefore, the Parliamentary Secretary fails in his intervention to establish credibility. He fails to deal with the fact that the fear of deindexation has been introduced by the words of the Budget. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I cannot accept his criticism of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Michel-Ahuntsic, because she quite rightly was speaking on what is written in the Budget. The Parliamentary Secretary cannot wipe out her words by stating that the Government "may" do certain things during the next few months, until the words of the Budget are modified.

I am very honoured to take part following the fine speech by my colleague, because for me as well it is important to speak on behalf of the senior citizens in my riding. In the last few days I have seen the spontaneous arrival of petitions to my office in a surge the like of which I have not seen in the last 17 years. It is a new experience for me. It tells me that our amendment today reflects a profound sense of preoccupation based on fear with respect to the proposed deindexation in the Budget of this Tory Government. We are proposing with our amendment a certain measure because we want to put pressure on the Government. We want to bring this Government to its senses and we want to make sure that the Government, as a result of the efforts of the Official Opposition, understands that there is a widespread preoccupation with deindexation in the country. By our amendment, we are speaking on behalf of the senior citizens of Canada in every riding.

I could not believe my ears when in the last few days I heard the Minister of National Health and Welfare using the argument that deindexation is intended to create jobs. That linkage, Mr. Chairman, is absurd, and it is understandable that senior citizens in the country have started to come forward to stress this absurdity. It is not by diminishing the purchasing power of pensioners, or by threatening to do so at the beginning of January next year, that you create jobs.

There is a contradiction on the part of the Government itself when it proudly states in the House that in the month of May it has created so many jobs—.55 per cent of the labour force. We are glad to hear that jobs are being created, but in the corresponding month of May, 1984, jobs were created at the rate of .5 per cent instead of .55 per cent of the labour force. Therefore, it is incredible that the Minister of National Health and Welfare would have us believe that the proposed deindexation will be a means which will achieve job creation. That is absolutely absurd and almost counterproductive. No one in his or her right mind would buy that argument.

There is another red herring which is coming up in debate, and in Question Period in particular. That is, the Prime Minister and others are saying they will monitor the situation between now and the end of the year to see whether or not this will become a reality. Keep in mind that the measure in the Budget says it "will" become a reality. The word "will" in English is used, not "may", and that is important to remember. I ask you, what will you monitor in the next six months since, by your own text, the measure will come into effect on January 1, 1986? What is there to monitor, or is that a code word for conducting Gallup polls?

Perhaps this notion of monitoring is another way of saying "we will reconsider". Well then, we on this side of the House, and I am sure many back-benchers on the other side, wonder why it is necessary to keep the seniors in a state of anxiety for six months. Why not accept the fact that a mistake was made in the Budget? Why not pursue the matter to the ultimate conclusion and announce any day before the end of this month the decision that this idea of deindexation is going to be removed once and for all?

There are good reasons for doing that. You do not reduce the purchasing power of senior citizens because that means you weaken their economic condition at a time when, if anything, they need to be strengthened. You reduce the money going into the economy, you reduce retail sales, and basically and fundamentally you weaken the social security thrust which has been developed in this country over the last few decades and given Canada one of the most outstanding security systems in the world. If you do anything, you build on it. You strengthen it.

I was very impressed by what we were told this morning by senior citizens who came to the Liberal caucus to speak to us. They made the point that they should not be penalized because they are over the age of 65 and did not have the opportunity to receive an income based on a full-time activity. They should not be penalized because there were perceived as perhaps being politically disorganized. Why should they all of a sudden be asked in the name of an absurd notion of creating jobs to accept an erosion of their income of 3 per cent per year, because that is what deindexation is all about.

Over the next five years that will mean the average senior in your riding and mine, Mr. Chairman, will lose several hundred dollars of purchasing power. I ask you, is that the yardstick by which the Progressive Conservative Government of Canada wants to be measured? Evidently it is not, otherwise we would not have a picture of discomfort on the faces of PC back-benchers during Question Period each day.

Mr. McDermid: You are dreaming.

Mr. Caccia: There is already a gap between the position being taken by the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister.

Mr. McDermid: No, they are absolutely consistent.

Mr. Caccia: Yes, there is, because the Budget document spells out the determination of introducing deindexation in no uncertain terms. The word is "will", not "may". The Prime Minister has indicated on a number of occasions that he is listening, that there may be an announcement, the position is not firm, and he considers that the Budget statement is not a Budget statement as far as deindexation is concerned, but rather a White Paper or trial balloon. It is something to be used to see whether the action is acceptable or not. That is a rather shaky way of going about the business of the nation.

We want to be reasonable on this. We are saying, as we have been saying all the time, let us recognize the mistake, but let us do it quickly and remove the anxiety. The Parliamentary Secretary was quite right when he got up and said we cannot say the measure is in place. He is right, the measure is not in place, but there is the threat and the threat causes the fear.

Mr. McDermid: No, the opposition causes the fear.

Mr. Caccia: The Parliamentary Secretary is not sitting in his seat and I cannot remember his riding as well as I should be able to, but he says that we are causing the anxiety. We are saying to him—

Mr. McDermid: You should know better. How many years have you been around here?

Mr. Caccia: —people read the Budget and they know what words mean. When the word "will" is in the Budget, that means a determination to do something and that is what senior citizens across the nation are telling us. Yesterday a delegation of senior citizens came into my office and brought to my attention a proposal to amend the Excise Tax Act which was in the Budget. They brought to my attention something I had not noticed before and about which they are very concerned and distressed. It has to do with the taxation of health goods for the first time. The items affected by the new taxation coming into effect on July 1, are items such as aspirin, acne and wart treatment products, and bandaging materials.

• (1910)

The Hon. Member is saying a lot of seniors are using that. I will challenge him to say that senior citizens do not use contact lens solutions. In fact, they are increasingly used as one gets older and relies on them.

Mr. McDermid: I wasn't even referring to what you are talking about. You are so arrogant you think everybody is listening to you.

Mr. Caccia: The Hon. Member should resume his seat and speak from there if he wants to intervene in the debate. He should know procedure of the House.

Mr. McDermid: We are in Committee of the Whole. We can speak from anywhere.

Mr. Deans: Why are you so mean?

Mr. Caccia: No, that is normal stuff, nothing unusual. The list goes on beyond contact lens solutions. It includes diagnostic materials, dietary supplements, decongestants, skin remedies, eczema, psoriasis, and dermatitis treatments, hair and scalp medications, laxatives and liniments, muscle strain and ache remedies, ointments, podiatry care products, salves, sinus treatments, sore back treatments, and tonics. I cannot believe that the Government would focus on our elderly citizens by imposing a tax on health goods to come into effect on July 1.

The amendment which we have put foward is intended to put pressure on the Government to realize that it has made the wrong decision and that there is no point in trying to fool the Canadian public into believeing that there may be a monetary necessity for this. It should not attempt to fool the Canadian public by saying that jobs will be created through this measure. It should do the decent thing and announce that deindexation is out once and for all. It should make this announcement before the summer to remove the anxiety of senior citizens across the country.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Chairman, I sat up last evening thinking at great length about the impact of the Budget. In defence of the Budget over the last two or three weeks, the Government has raised a number of factors about which I have serious doubt. I was not clear on where it was deriving its information. Much of the debate during the last week or so has been on the subject of deindexation of pensions, and quite justifiably so, because I think that is the hardest of the measures incorporated in what I consider will no doubt be an ill-fated document.

Even during the Budget debate itself I felt that not enough thought had gone into the critical analysis of what the Budget contained. We were justifiably preoccupied with the pensin issue. We must remain totally preoccupied with that issue until the Government recognizes that it has moved in a way which the majority of Canadians find unacceptable and is prepared to back away from that provision. To back away from that provision will be no sin. There will be momentary derision, no doubt, but in the long run the majority of Canadians will applaud when the Government finally announces that it is going to change its attitude.

Mr. McCurdy: I know I certainly will.

Mr. Deans: My colleague from Windsor-Walkerville says that he will applaud, and I know that my colleague from Thunder Bay-Atikokan will applaud as well. That is to be expected. More importantly, many of the elderly people who came here today to represent, to the Government and Opposition Parties, the concerns of senior citizens across the country will applaud as well.

It may well be true that on this day in 1985 a number of elderly citizens, if asked, may say that they would no longer support the Conservative Party. I have no doubt that if the Government backs away from this measure, many of those people will rethink their position and return to the Conservative Party. Those people are by tradition and background Conservative.

Mr. McDermid: None of them left.

Mr. Deans: I am talking about those who have. I am not suggesting that they have all left. The Government should not get the idea that it must put its head down and bull its way through in order to achieve its purpose. There is nothing wrong with the Government admitting that it made a miscalculation and that its view of how this measure would be accepted was a little tainted by opinion given by those who did not understand. There is nothing wrong with saying that the Minister of Finance attempted, to the best of his ability, to do what was right but failed to hit the mark and will therefore move away from that position.

Within two or three months, those who write about the Government on this issue will write with more favour than they are writing today. They will recognize that it takes strength to admit that you are wrong. It takes strength to admit that something has been done inappropriately. That is an evidence of strength rather than weakness. Weakness is when you hold on to something which you have long since believed is no longer appropriate. It is weakness when one looks at the facts and circumstances, clearly seeing the conclusion, but failing to accept it. The Government must recognize the difference.

This is a new Government and I can well understand that it does not have the experience of many long years of fighting. I say with great respect that it has not developed the necessary skills to be able to back away. The Prime Minister has taken some steps to move away from this unacceptable policy of partially deindexing the pensions for retired Canadians. He said that the Government has changed it from a policy to a position to be considered, monitored, analysed and ultimately changed. The Government has yet to come to the point of determining how and when this change should take place.

Some of my colleagues in this Party and others in the House have made what I believe is a reasonable analysis of the impact of this measure. We have also made an analysis of the financial impact of the deindexing provision. I am prepared to concede that our analysis is open to question, as are all analyses. However, our analysis of the financial impact is as good and supportable as any other at this point.

The one thing that we know for sure is that if inflation continues—there is no reason to doubt that it will not—pensioners will fall behind in their purchasing power. The real problem at the moment which is yet to be confronted is the impact on those pensioners now as a result of their having to concern themselves about their financial future. That is the impact which the Government seems to fail to address.

Let me suggest that the Government would do well to listen rather than talk. It has indicated from the start of its mandate that it will be a consultative Government. Let me suggest to Members who care to listen that consultation is a two-way street. It is not simply meeting with someone so you can tell them the realities. It is letting them explain their view of a problem and then coming to a consensus on the issue. That two-way consultative process continues to be lacking in this issue.

I believe it was a White Paper published by the Minister of National Health and Welfare in which the Government determined that there was no need to consult on the matter of pensions because the Government did not intend to change it. With that in mind, it is clear that the Minister of Finance, the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Prime Minister himself did not embark on any discussion of the necessity for or desirability of change.

That is not only the position stated in the White Paper by the Minister of National Health and Welfare. It was clearly the position of the Department of Health, as stated by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister when he travelled to Toronto, I believe, in April to meet with a group of seniors when he indicated that there would be no change in the old age pension. Therefore, those who represent the pensioners did not feel the urge or the necessity to indulge in any discussion about indexing or the basic pension that was then available to pensioners.

In those circumstances, it was a shock to pensioners—particularly those who were at the meeting—to discover that the Government had changed its mind without even giving them a hint, asking for their reaction or suggesting to them that their view would be appreciated. Within one month of assuring that no change would take place, the Government simply changed its mind. Is it any wonder that seniors are angry? Is it any wonder that they are confused and do not quite know whether they can trust those who speak on behalf of the Conservative Government?

I say to the Government that on statistical grounds alone, with a financial base as the bottom line, it is not unreasonable to suggest that we can afford to index pensions as they have been indexed in the past. On numerous occasions our Party has offered ways to raise the necessary capital to offset what would be lost by continuing the indexing provision.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader is coming over to read what is on my button. It says, "Don't blame me, I didn't vote for him". It is a picture of the Prime Minister. This is what senior citizens wore today as they sat outside on what was not a particularly pleasant day.

From a purely financial point of view, I do not think it is unreasonable to believe that we can afford to index pensions for senior citizens in Canada. Therefore, how should the Government change its position and when? I believe that one should not inflict on those people the kind of mental torture that goes with worrying about whether or not one's income next year will be sufficient to meet one's requirements. Therefore, the change should be made now. That would begin to address what has become quite justifiably the preoccupation of Members on this side and many people across Canada. However, that is not all that is wrong with the Budget. There is much more wrong with the Budget than meets the eye.

We asked that the Government table its borrowing Bill within a matter of days of the introduction of its Budget in order that we could clearly see the entire picture of what the Government intended to spend in its estimates, how it intended to raise revenues and what the Government required by way of borrowing. I commend the Government for doing that. It is appropriate for us to look at the entire package now in this, the last of the three very closely related matters dealing with the fiscal and financial policy of Canada.

Let me turn to a Toronto Star editorial. I believe it states quite well what many of us have been concerned about. The headline states "What About those Jobs?" It says:

Talk about the luck of the Irish. Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's budget may escape the scrutiny it deserves just because it is so badly flawed. The budget does nothing for jobs. The budget has weakened the prospects for growth. The budget will shift income from working Canadians to the rich. But all that seems to have been lost in the shuffle.

Do those words sound familiar? It seems to me that we have been saying that since the moment the Budget was brought down. Let me continue:

When Mulroney launched his assault on the elderly, he struck an exposed Canadian nerve; Canadians from all walks of life have coalesced around the elderly, and in their outrage they have temporarily overlooked the rest of the budget's inadequacies.

Had the Mulroney budget not taken aim at the elderly, more Canadians would be asking how massive new tax hikes are going to foster job creation and increased economic growth. They would be wondering how a $500,000 tax break for the wealthy is supposed to reduce unemployment. They would be questioning how a $2 billion cut in transfer payments to the provinces is going to promote better education and training for Canada's youth. They would wonder why wealthy Canadians need more government assistance to prepare for their retirement. And they would be asking how Canadian pension funds invested abroad will strengthen domestic industry.

● (1930)

The Mulroney budget is not a blueprint for tomorrow. It is a leap of faith to the right. If full indexation for the elderly were restored without delay, we might see the broader debate that the budget deserves.

This Prime Minister and government were elected on the promise of "jobs, jobs, jobs". The budget needs to be measured against that promise to 1.3 million unemployed Canadians.

Mr. Dick: You said 1.8 million yesterday.

Mr. Deans: I will come to that in a moment. This is understated.

Mr. McDermid: You are always overstating.

Mr. Deans: The article continues:

The Budget also needs to be measured against its own stated goal: Deficit reduction. Since most of our post-1980 deficit—

Mr. Dick: Are you saying the story is wrong?

Mr. Deans: I would like to say something if people on the other side could keep quiet for a moment. It is not often I am attacked by the jawbone of an ass.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Deans: The article continues:

Since most of our post-1980 deficit growth has arisen because of the recession and its attendant high unemployment, it's only reasonable to alssume that little progress can be made in trimming the deficit until more people are back at work. Where are the programs in this budget to do that?

These questions put the government on the spot. Answering them, in the context of the budget, may prove impossible. Yet if the Mulroney government has a vision of where it wants to take the country, that vision is embodied in the budget. Answer those questions the government must.

I want to stop at that point. That is an analysis done by the editorial board of The Toronto Star. While we may not all agree with everything that is in The Toronto Star, I think it is fair to say that its analysis is not an unreasonable one. In fact, there is an element of truth in it. That element of truth is borne out by reports today in The Globe and Mail. In The Globe and Mail today we find this headline "Expected investment does not materialize". The article reads:

The waiting game for signs of new business investment in Canada is beginning to get a little frustrating.

I will not read the whole article, but it goes on—are you telling me, Mr. Chairman, that I have but one minute?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Time flies, yes.

Mr. Deans: Let me take a few little pieces out of this article. The reporter goes through an analysis of figures produced by Stats Canada of Canada's performance in the first quarter of this year over last year, an analysis which shows that in almost every single category to be measured there has been a lag in the economic growth that must take place, an analysis which shows that in durable goods there is a drop this month over what had taken place in January, an analysis which shows in orders for hard goods there is a drop, in new orders there is a drop and in the backlog of unfilled orders there is a drop. Production by manufacturers was at a level of only 76 per cent of their capacity—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I am very sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member.

Mr. Deans: There was a drop in the first quarter—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regretfully must interrupt because we have already exceeded the 10 minute period. I am very sorry. There may be other opportunities for the Hon. Member for Hamilton.

Mr. Deans: Let me finish my two minutes because I have 20 minutes later.

● (1940)

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman, I welcome this opportunity to rise in the House and remind the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) that I will not be asking him any questions since most of the time, all he does is read texts prepared by public servants. I will tell him about the messages I received from senior citizens on the trip I made with the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) to Quebec City, which is represented by Conservative Members, the City of Sherbrooke, the Eastern Townships, Montreal in the ridings of Rosemont and Hochelaga-Maisonneuve, and Baie-Comeau.

Mr. Chairman, everywhere, senior citizens expressed the same views as the person who spoke to the Prime Minister this morning outside the House of Commons and who everybody saw on television. I will not repeat what the person said, because they are not parliamentary, but they were an expression of how all senior citizens feel about the Prime Minister, not only because of the official commitment he made in Sherbrooke on July 26 about reinstating full indexation of Old Age Security pensions, but also because of the paper tabled in the House by the Minister now popularly referred to as the Minister of Social Injustice Canada, the Minister who in January tabled a paper in the House of Commons where it says that any discussion on restructuring and improving social programs will not be used to reduce the deficit. This was in the paper, and when you get to the part about senior citizens, there was a section on families with children, family allowances, and so forth, and a section on senior citizens, where it said that in our opinion, Old Age Security benefits and the Guaranteed Income Supplement should not be changed.

Not only is the Prime Minister not meeting the commitments he made during the election campaign, he is also reneging on statements made here in the House of Commons, but in the Standing Committee on Health . . . I must admit I had my doubts, since I remembered what happened to Bill C-26 and did not trust the Minister of Social Injustice or the Prime Minister, but I took the trouble to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) the following question: Can we start discussions in committee with the assurance that there will be no changes with respect to senior citizens? The Minister solemnly gave us that assurance. At the time, 92 groups representing Canadians came here at taxpayers' expense to express—since September 4, the Prime Minister has been bragging about being the one who consults the people—they came to express their views in the sincere and profound belief that the Prime Minister and the Minister of Social Injustice Canada would keep their word. And the discussions were strictly about improving the family allowance.

Ninety-two groups from all over the country, and what they got from this Budget brought down by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) was a deep sense of disappointment and betrayal. We had an economic summit with groups representing business, labour and social agencies, to name a few. This little demonstration cost one million dollars or $1,000 a minute. None of the groups at the meeting, neither business, nor labour, nor consumer groups, suggested to the Prime Minister who was acting as master of ceremonies, that he should reduce the indexing of old age security pensions, family allowances, and what is even more serious, the child tax credit. No one suggested such a thing, Mr. Chairman. We saw what the Prime Minister was really like when the budget was brought down.

This afternoon, the Prime Minister attempted to ridicule me because of my waistline. It is a fact that his waistline is smaller than mine, but the real difference between the two of us is that I have my heart in the right place and he does not. I am intellectually honest and sincere and he is not. I simply wonder whether the Prime Minister and the Progressive Conservative Party will give back the $1 million of the taxpayers' money wasted just for marketing, just to advertise the pleasant smile of Little Brian from Baie-Comeau, who is a citizen for life of Westmount.

This $1 million was wasted to do the opposite of what people had suggested at that meeting. Among those present at the economic summit, name just one organization or individual who suggested partial deindexation of the old age security pension.

If the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) knows one, he can rise and say so. It was not the organization of employers. It was not the Chamber of Commerce. It was not the labour federations. It was not the consumer associations. It was not the senior citizens' groups nor the community organizations of Canada.

An Hon. Member: It was Brian's Club!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman, people will long remember this Prime Minister. John Diefenbaker would never have dared to do such a thing! Mr. Clark would never have dared to take such action and to spend $1 million of the taxpayers' money just for his own publicity. I simply hope that the Progressive Conservatives will repay this money.

I spoke this afternoon of the consultation held in Baie-Comeau and of the fact, that in spite of the tricks used by the Prime Minister's Office to try to manipulate them, senior citizens held their ground. They deserve our congratulations.

There is one thing that the Conservative Party has forgotten. It is not because senior citizens have reached age 65, 75 or 90 that they no longer have the intelligence they had when they were 40. And there is another thing the Conservative Party, and the Prime Minister have forgotten. It is not because those people have reached age 75 that they do not have the energy they used to have when they were 50. And a third thing the Conservative Members and the Prime Minister in particular have forgotten. It is not because those people are 75 or 90 that they no longer have their mind set to work as they did when they were 40. They were senior citizens in the first place, and I am proud that it all started in Quebec, in Montreal, at the Velodrome, they were senior citizens aged 70, 85, 90, who volunteered every day at the booth where unfortunately the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mrs. Bretrand) would not meet them. They stood up as volunteers. You saw some of them here on Parliament Hill, Mr. Chairman. Those are not 40 year old people. They are not people who have been sitting on the benches at some university. They are people who at age 16, 14, or 12 started raising kids. They are people who entered the labour market, who worked 60, 70 hours a week, with no labour unions, no fringe benefits, and who put out their own money to have their children educated. They are here now. They paid with their own money to get health care for their children. They had no health insurance. And now there are Members here who have the gall, the nerve, and the cowardice to ask those people.

The people from Baie-Comeau said: What does the Prime Minister have against senior citizens? Since the beginning, you saw it in Bill C-26, and I understand that it hurts you but get used to it; when we tell you the truth you are shocked, but I am here to get elected. Mr. Chairman, the estimates . . . Instead of borrowing money to increase the Defence budget by $1.32 billion, if those people on the other side had a heart, they would have protected the old age security pensions. In the budget, instead of trying to save on the backs of senior citizens—$250 million next year—they would have chosen to save senior citizens rather than enhancing the image of the Prime Minister, rather than wasting $56 million to change the colour of army uniforms. They would have chosen to save senior citizens in each and every constituency, but instead all the Conservative Members chose to hurt senior citizens as far as their pension cheques are concerned, in 1986, to spend $400 million to send, 1,000 additional soldiers to Europe.

Mr. Robichaud: And the ministers' offices.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman, my colleague reminds me of the ministers' offices, of the Prime Minister's office: $1 million just for the charade the Prime Minister went through at the Economic Summit, the failure of the so-called outstanding mediator; it has been nothing but failure since the beginning and even in Ontario, with Miller who was defeated, Mr. Chairman. In Baie-Comeau, those people were disappointed by their boy.

An Hon. Member: The boy from Baie-Comeau.

Mr. Malépart: To thank those people, those senior citizens who made sacrifices to enable their boy to get an education and to reach the position of Prime Minister, they take 3 percent from them and say: what's a few bucks. To an Hon. Member who gets the old age security pension, it is not serious to lose a few bucks but if you get only the old age security pension and have only $27 a month left for clothing and to have your appliances repaired, for your leisure activities, you do not have enough already, and you need every cent.

In Montreal, . . . not only the people from Sainte-Marie but also those from Hochelaga-Maisonneuve, and I want to congratulate my neighbour, the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) who was courageous; he knew he was here to defend his constituents' interests and not to sell them the stories of the Minister of Finance. When he met with senior citizens, he signed the petition and said: I was elected to stand up for you and I will do so, but there are not many from Quebec. I would like to name them one by one.

I should like to tell you what older citizens think of the former president of Iron Ore. I have the impression that in four years from now, he will find it hard to get a job at the Manpower Centre. They gave me the cartoon—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order! The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) knows quite well that this is not allowed in this House—

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman, if I cannot show it, I will describe it. The constituents of Hochelaga have given me their cartoon of the Prime Minister where he is shown as the new Robin Hood, but a Robin Hood in reverse. The new Robin Hood takes $5 from the pockets of older people and hands it to the rich. That is the truth, that is how the senior citizens visualize the Prime Minister, this government and the Budget.

However, there is another very important matter that we must keep in mind, Mr. Chairman. You know that very soon it will be July 1, Canada Day, and it will be the first time that our little new Robin Hood will act as our Prime Minister on Canada Day, but our bright boy from Baie-Comeau is not devoid of imagination, Mr. Chairman. He would very much like all Canadians to remember him. Did the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier), who is an expert in high finance, advise the Minister of Finance to take the decision which I will now make known? Is it the Prime Minister or "little Michael" from Toronto? Not too many Conservative Members bragged about the fact that as of July 1, every man, woman and child of this country will receive a gift and know that the Prime Minister of Canada will be with him, always, from then on, wherever he goes. I do not know whether that brilliant idea came from the Prime Minister, our "brilliant" little boy from Baie-Comeau, lifetime citizen of Westmount, or from "little Michael"—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: A point of order.

• (1950)

[English]

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member has referred to two Members of the House of Commons, Members of Cabinet, by their first names without referring to them as Hon. Members or the Right Hon. Prime Minister or the Hon. Minister of Finance, or their ridings. He is doing it in a ridiculing manner which I think is really not fitting for the House. I would ask the Chair to rule and bring the Hon. Member to order for referring to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance by their first names.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: On the same point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) on the same point of order.

Mr. Rossi: The Member opposite should understand that the French term "brillant", or brilliant, is not synonymous with Brian Mulroney. The Member used the term to indicate somebody bright up here. It is not the same thing.

An Hon. Member: Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Allow me, before I rule, to offer some advice.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: No, no. I should like to draw to the attention of the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) that indeed Hon. Members should refer to each other Members by the name of their riding or their title in cabinet.

Mr. Malépart: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I believe everyone is anxious to know what the gift will be and where the presence of the Prime Minister and Conservative Members will be felt. Starting July 1, they will all be there. Do not forget—and perhaps the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) can tell us who thought of putting a—

Mr. Lanthier: That is offensive.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order.

[English]

Mr. McDermid: Point of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Will the Parliamentary Secretary resume his seat.

[Translation]

So it is the same point of order as earlier. The Hon. Member for Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) knows perfectly well, besides he was reminded of the fact a few minutes ago, that such exhibits are not allowed in the House of Commons.

Mr. Malépart: I wanted to make this little demonstration. I understand, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Lanthier: That is ridiculous.

Some Hon. Members: Point of order.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: No, order. Hon. Members know they are not allowed to show exhibits, and I ask them to be patient and, please, not to arouse the wrath of—

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Chairman, I can understand the frustration felt by both Conservative members, because they would prefer the public not to know that starting July 1, the bar of soap will be taxed 10 per cent, that starting July 1, toothpaste will be taxed 10 per cent, that starting July 1, shampoo will be taxed 10 per cent. I understand their frustration. I would be ashamed if I were them. I would like to know who among them had this bright idea. When we see that they are cutting 3 per cent from senior citizens, these are basic necessities. Who in heaven has decided to include soap? Do you know what I was told by a senior citizen who had just learned about this? I appreciate that the Hon. Member for LaSalle would prefer to hide the facts. I appreciate that he is ashamed, Mr. Chairman. He did not speak up on this issue. That person told me: Mr. Malépart, I have quit smoking because of this government. But will I have to quit washing because of this 10 per cent tax? I think, Mr. Chairman, that ridicule never killed anyone, and they haven't left it at that.

An Hon. Member: He says that it will smell "blue".

Mr. Malépart: Even kids' candies are being taxed, Mr. Chairman.

I am aware that I am not allowed to . . . and I know that none of the Conservative members wants the truth to come out. It is rather humiliating and embarrassing. But is anyone of them aware that, effective July 1, consumer prices will rise at the expense of our senior citizens, Mr. Chairman? Not satisfied with that, the government states that it will pocket the first 3 per cent in inflation. Conservative members must be very disappointed, Mr. Chairman and I can understand why they do not want me to disclose the exact content of the Budget.

But I should like to return to the subject of poor families with children. I know about the Child Tax Credit, but does my hon. friend who does not know the difference between brilliant and Brilcream realize that family allowances will be reduced by 3 per cent? But poor families will face a cut of 3 per cent as well under the child tax credit. In his budget, the poor are losing 6 per cent. Whose idea is that? And then, those people will be upset when Canadian men and women of all ages, throughout the country, describe the Prime Minister as a new-fangled Robin Hood who takes from the poor to give to the rich.

I would like to know why the Child Tax Credit has not been fully indexed, as it was under the Liberal government in 1982. Why are you going to cut, for the poorest family of all, 3 per cent of family allowances and another 3 per cent on the tax credit? It amounts to a net loss of 6 per cent.

I do hope that the aspiring minister, the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier), will give me an answer.

An Hon. Member: He will expire.

Mr. Malépart: I do hope that the aspiring Minister will tell me who is the genius who decided to impose a 10 per cent tax on soap, which is not considered an important item, and toothpaste, shampoo, and ladies, who are listening to us, lipstick as well will be taxed. Gentlemen, you are going to pay for it.

Because this budget raises many questions, and if my time has expired, Mr. Speaker . . . Has my time expired? I am sure that all Members will be prepared to listen to me as I disclose the positive aspects of this Budget. Thus, if Hon. Members agree, I have one more point to make regarding housing.

An Hon. Member: Right on!

Mr. Malépart: My colleague—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order! The Hon. Member's time has expired. Is the Hon. Member asking for unanimous consent?

Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret but there is no unanimous consent.

The 20 minutes allowed have expired.

[English]

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Chairman, I was not going to stand and participate in this debate, and I know that Members on the other side would rather that I not say what I am going to say, but I got provoked into coming down and participating because rarely have I seen and heard such hypocrisy as I have over this amendment. Rarely have I seen and heard such hypocrisy on this particular issue.

The previous speaker said, where did the Government get this idea of deindexing up to 3 per cent. Where did they get it? Of course they got it from the Liberals. I want to tell them that the senior folks in this country watching on TV do not have short memories; they have long memories. They remember that it was the Liberal Party that brought in the six and five program, the program that started the whole deindexation process. In fact, the Liberals deindexed to six and five when the inflation rate was up around 11 per cent. A whole 5 per cent was taken from seniors' pensions because inflation could not be controlled. The Liberal Government had to fight the deficit on the backs of the seniors.

● (2000)

Now these sheep in sheep's clothing have come to power and they are pretending that they are the greatest defenders of old age pensioners. I am sure they also remember, as the senior folks who are watching tonight will remember, that the only reason we got indexation of old age pensions, family allowances and personal income taxes was because there was a minority Government which needed the support of the NDP. In 1972 to 1974, the Government was brought dragging and screaming into the 20th century with indexed pensions. Have they forgotten that? I doubt that the senior folk who are watching today have forgotten that. I have never before heard from more "hypo-Grits" than I have in the last few weeks.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Rodriguez: Now Liberal Members are acting like the pot calling the kettle black. On the other side there is a group of Members who got elected under false pretences. Others have used harsher language in describing them. I am just putting before the people of Canada the facts as they exist.

There is no doubt that during the election campaign the Prime Minister promised that he would restore full indexation to pensions, and said that the social programs of this country were a sacred trust not to be tampered with. Then the heat was put on when the Government wanted to break up universality, something which it fought against when the previous Government talked about attacking universality. In fact, at that time, Monique Bégin had to practically threaten to resign before the Liberals backed off.

Back in November the Prime Minister said that any savings from social programs would never be applied to the deficit. Then we heard a statement from the Minister of National Health and Welfare who promised that no moves would be made to tamper with the old age pension program. We need only listen to what government Members say and then transpose that to what they actually do.

It is not for me to call government Members names. It is not for me to say that they have been uttering terminological inexactitudes. They have been condemned by their own actions as compared to their own promises.

What is a promise? What is a commitment? Is it any wonder that young people across the country think so poorly of politicians? Is it any wonder that the credibility of politicians has been undermined by the actions of so-called responsible individuals who have presented themselves before Parliament? How can they break trust on such fundamental promises as those that were made during the election campaign?

I have received letters from groups representing senior citizens and I want to read some of them for the record. The senior citizens of the community of Skead wrote me a letter, a copy of which was sent to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance. The letter reads as follows:

Honourable Sir,

The motion passed at an Emergency Meeting of the Skead Senior Citizens Club is quite plain. The "Seniors" would like to make it clear that our time of restraint has been a continuous one, having experienced the rationing of World War I, the depression years and the lean times to bring World War II to an end and the present depression. The budget has hit the wrong end of the spectrum in its projected fairness.

Seniors, although well trained in restraint, rationing have an understanding of your problems, but feel that their share in this regard has been fulfilled.

An early move to delete this part of the budget would be just and fair.

We of the Skead Senior Citizens Club are pleased to be able to present their views to you, Sir, and feel that our position is well founded.

Yours truly,

Steve Popowich
President Skead Senior Citizens Club

How could the Government betray the trust that these people put in it? How could it betray the trust of those who have helped to build and make this country the great country it is? There are people in this country who, when they worked, had no pension plan. The great free enterprise system never saw fit to supply pension plans, so many of those workers who are retired today live strictly on the old age pension.

Mr. McDermid: That's why we have the supplement.

Mr. Rodriguez: They have to apply for the supplement. They have to bare their souls to a Department of bureaucrats. Is this the thanks they get? The Parliamentary Secretary said that they get the supplement. Is that not fine? They can get the supplement. That's the thanks that this Conservative Government is prepared to extend to those who have made their contribution toward building this country. The Parliamentary Secretary can just sit there and make snide remarks.

I have another letter here and it is from the President of the United INCO Pensioners. The letter is addressed to the Prime Minister and reads as follows:

The many thousands of pensioners, their spouses and widows in our region were shocked on learning of government plans to de-index their pensions. We deplore the unprecedented action of government in gouging the elderly after promising before the election they would not do so.

The recent consultation paper on Child & Elderly Benefits states, "In the government's view no change is required in the Old Age Security/Guaranteed Income Supplement payments system". This statement has led pensioners to believe their status quo would be retained while the deficit would be taken care of by reducing unnecessary spending in so many other areas.

In view of the above we feel justified in demanding that election promises be kept, the Consultation Paper be adhered to and most importantly, that all plans to reduce indexing of pension payments be cancelled now.

Yours Very Truly

Stan Racicot, President
United Inco Pensioners,

The Government prided itself on consultation. It said that it would consult and seek consensus. None of these pensioners' groups were consulted with respect to something that was so fundamental to their wellbeing and standard of living as the deindexation of old age pensions.

The Government talks about consultation. However, it implements a change and is now creating a great furore across the country. Over the last couple of months, senior citizens have had to organize themselves, travel to Ottawa, and put themselves through a great deal of stress, when at this stage in their lives we should not be putting them through all that. And the Government has the gall to say that it will monitor. Monitor what?

● (2010)

I know that Friday is coming. On Friday I would not be at all surprised if the Minister of Finance stood in the House, when the press have all gone to bed for the weekend, and announced that the Government will not proceed with the change. I would not be surprised if that is the strategy. If it is the strategy of the Government, then I think it should do it. It should stick to the plan and do it this Friday.

I think it is extremely cruel what this Government is doing to senior folk. In their retirement years they should be sitting back and enjoying the rest of their lives. They should not have to live for the next three or four months with this sword of Damocles hanging over their heads. That is not the Canadian way.

We were very critical of the arrogance of Pierre Elliot Trudeau and his Liberal Government. Quite rightly so. A more arrogant Government one never saw. Now we have got the son of the Trudeau Government. Trudeau II lives and breathes! It is sitting over there. The arrogance of that Government! What was announced in the Budget is really not a budget item. Night is day; winter is summer. It is the old double-speak. 1984 has come and gone.

Mr. Belsher: Where would you have announced it?

Mr. Rodriguez: Where would I have announced what? We in this Party would not have announced any deindexation of old age pensions.

The other anomaly at which senior citizens are looking is not only that their pensions have been deindexed, but they are also being told that they must again make a sacrifice so that their grandchildren can get jobs and the Government can bring down the deficit. That in itself is questionable. However, those people are reading, hearing and seeing that wealthy Canadians are being allowed better breaks. I am speaking specifically of the capital gains exemption.

Canada now has the dubious distinction of being the only country in the industrialized western world which does not tax capital gains. Even the people in the Department of Finance argued against that move. On budget night I was watching the stockbrokers on Bay Street. When it was announced that up to half a million dollars of capital gains would not be taxed, they all threw their paper and pencils in the air. One shouted: "Happy days are here again!" Of course happy days are here again. The Budget is a rich man's budget. Senior citizens in the country have quickly recognized that what the Government is taking from them by deindexation it is putting into the pockets of the wealthy. It is highway robbery. The Government should be charged with grand larceny. It is theft.

To rub salt into the wounds, we have this unbelievable mistiming by the Minister of Finance. It was not bad enough that he deindexed old age pensions, he started travelling the country to defend the Budget. Some of the most incredible statements came from the Minister of Finance. In Montreal he said that the problem in Canada is that it has too few rich people. The problem is not that we have too few rich people, it is that we have too many poor people. That is the problem. It has been reported that his comment of having too few rich people created a lot of "suppressed guffaws". The Minister of Finance said:

> But that brings us face to face with another one of those sobering realities . . . No matter how we define the term, Canada has an acute shortage of rich people.

I think we have a surfeit of Tories, not a shortage of rich people.

While the Government was constructing the Budget, it held the national economic conference in Ottawa. That conference was to be part of the consultation process. At no point in that process did the question of the deindexation of pensions arise. At no point did the Government raise the question. There was no proper consultation process. The Government decided that it needed $1.6 billion from senior citizens, so it cut their pensions by 3 per cent.

Mr. Chairman, I see you are giving me the signal that my time has expired.

Some Hon. Members: No, continue.

Mr. Rodriguez: My colleagues on my right said that I should continue. I would only continue if I had the unanimous consent of the House.

Mr. McDermid: I am sorry, I cannot give that.

Mr. Rodriguez: That does not surprise me.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The Hon. Member asked for unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: After a great deal of deliberation, there is not unanimous consent.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to have the opportunity to speak on Bill C-51. I am interested in finding out exactly why the Government will not back down on the issue of senior citizens' pensions. Surely the Government has heard enough arguments. Hundreds of senior citizens visited Parliament Hill today calling for this scurrilous tax to be removed. The Government is not satisfied simply to increase the tax on low and middle-income families, it wants to put more people below the poverty line. Some 750,000 people will be placed below the poverty line over the next five years.

● (2020)

The Tories are determined to tax low-income people, to cut down on the indexation of their old age pensions. They are tearing apart the very social fabric of our country by increasing the exemptions for high income groups and increasing the taxes for low income groups. That has to be the most treacherous act which has ever been perpetrated on the Canadian people. It is not only politically stupid—with which I am sure every single back-bencher will agree—but it has to be a political disaster. The counterpart of the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown was roundly defeated by some 5,000 votes in the last Provincial election and if the Government hangs a few hookers, or whatever, around the necks of these Tory back-benchers, he will lose by 5,000 votes in the next election.

Mr. McDermid: Are you referring to my constituents as "hookers"?

Mr. Foster: No, I am talking about this Budget as being a millstone around your neck. If you want, you can call it a "hooker", but I can tell you that the senior citizens out in the lawn today were calling it worse than that. I don't know if there is anyone else other than the Prime Minister who makes any decisions, but if the Prime Minister or the Minister of Finance hangs this millstone around the necks of Hon. Members opposite for the summer, the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown will be facing as damaging an election situation in Brampton-Georgetown in three years as his counterpart faced in this last election.

The Premier of Ontario in 1981 was elected, I believe, by 15,000 votes. In this election, the Tory candidate, the chosen, the anointed one in that riding, lost by some 5,000 votes. It is rather interesting to note that every one of the seats which were held by former Tory premiers in Ontario, whether in Lindsay—or in London are now represented by a Liberal. I am just trying to point out, Madam Chairman, to the Tory back-benchers that they are facing incredible political problems.

Mr. Dick: What has that to do with the borrowing authority?

Mr. Foster: It is not only politically stupid, but I think the Government has totally lost its credibility with this Budget. It is typical Tory gall to impose a loss of some $400 or $500 on the average middle or low-income family and at the same time give high-income families, those earning over $50,000, relief from capital gains.

Mr. McDermid: You asked for that.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Chairman (Mrs. Martin): Order.

Mr. McDermid: You asked for that.

Mr. Prud'homme: Madam Chairman, I rise on a point of order. First, I would like to congratulate you for being our Chairman tonight.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Prud'homme: I am sure Hon. Members on both sides of the House will give a chance to the Hon. Member to speak. I cannot hear what he is saying at all. I think we should show more discretion. I am sure you, Madam Chairman, would like to rule very firmly the first time you occupy that very dignified position.

The Acting Chairman (Mrs. Martin): I was attempting to call the House to order. I think that is a very good point. Would Hon. Members please be quiet so we can hear the speaker?

Mr. Foster: I was just pointing out to Hon. Members opposite, who are really getting nervous, that they all went into that caucus meeting last weekend with high expectations, and then Monday morning they came out with long faces because the Prime Minister said, "Boys, we're going to hang tough". And all those Hon. Members, including the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown, got the word that they were going to hang tough and they said, "Oh, brother. Last summer was a hot summer but it will be hotter this summer if we have to defend that deindexation of the old age pension". I just think, Madam Chairman, that we have a Tory Party which is very concerned.

It is incredible that by this Budget the Government will take away up to $1500 from a senior citizen couple over the next four years while exempting $500,000 capital gains from tax. It is not just keeping the promise it made to farmers because of the real problem in transferring family farms, and so on, it is giving to all of the friends of the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance and the President of the Treasury Board on Bay Street and St. James Street.

Mr. Dick: Jean Chrétien works on Bay Street, doesn't he?

Mr. Foster: Those are the guys who own condos in Florida. They've got all kinds of capital gains sitting around and all they have to do is cash them in and take their $125,000, at the same time preying on the senior citizens of this country who were out in front of this place today calling upon the Prime Minister to keep his promise.

I have hundreds of signatures calling on the Government to back down on the deindexation of the old age pension. We are seeing the true blue colours of the Minister of Finance, and I am told he is blue right down to his underwear. His Budget takes away from the old age pension by deindexation year after year, grinding the pensioners down each year. That is why the senior citizens are upset and why they are sending hundreds of petitions to Hon. Members on this side of the House. They are also sending them to the other side of the House. There have been a couple of Hon. Members over there who rose and said they did not support this deindexation. The Hon. Member for Western Arctic the other day presented a petition calling upon the Government to back down.

The Government really has no credibility, because it is not only preying on the senior citizens of this country but is preying on the low-income families with very little means. I have an article here from Maclean's magazine of just last week. Maclean's magazine called upon a very reputable company to do an examination of the impact of the Budget. It is a very objective neutral analysis by Clarkson Gordon Company of the impact on a working family with three children. The husband is a lawyer who earns $20,000 a year. The spouse is a nurse who earns $18,000 a year. Clarkson Gordon said this family will have imposed on it an income tax increase of some $205 a year. This is a family renting a house and driving a 1973 automobile. The parents are both professional people in the middle income area.

● (2030)

Mr. McDermid: A lawyer making $20,000. I sure would not go to that lawyer if that is all he is making.

Mr. Foster: Unless the Tories are earning $100,000 of $150,000 a year, where they can take advantage of a $500,000 tax-free capital gain, they do not want to talk to them.

Mr. McDermid: That from a doctor of veterinarian medicine, and you know how much they make.

Mr. Foster: The Hon. Member is going to find out that these people vote and they will all be voting in 1988.

It was a brilliant move by the Minister of Finance, Mr. Speaker. He held off imposing the 9 cent a gallon gasoline tax until the tourist season was over, but where was the Minister of Agriculture? In September, when this tax goes into effect, we are just getting into the heavy part of the harvest. Do you know what they call that tax, which farmers are not exempt from, out west? They call it the Tory harvest tax. That is the way this Government works. The Minister of Finance made a big thing of taking the excise tax off of gasoline for farmers last fall, but he did not say anything about putting it back on.

Mr. McDermid: Whatever you had for dinner, I want some.

Mr. Foster: A lot of the focus has been on the deindexation of old age pensions, and rightly so, because these people do not have much opportunity to earn extra money. But clearly the people in the middle and low income tax brackets are really being hurt by this Budget. I predict that by the time the crescendo of this Budget really hits, by mid-summer or fall, we will be hearing just as loud a scream from those people as we are hearing from the senior citizens.

Then we have the deindexation of personal income tax exemptions, which adds an extra $95 of taxes to this working family I have been talking about. These things are adding up one another, and not just for one year. The deindexation of the personal tax exemption increases year after year. If we look at the modification to the indexation of personal income tax rates we see it is only $80 million this fiscal year, although that is a lot of money. But in 1990 it is $4.36 billion. We can see that the screams of the low and middle income families are going to get louder and louder.

The estimate of what it will cost this particular family as a result of the tax increases on things such as cigarettes, pet foods and other items is $100. The Minister of Finance thought he was being cute. There were a few taxes which apply right away, then there are taxes which will apply July 1, September 1 and January 1. But people are not stupid. They know what he is doing. All we have to do is pick up Maclean's Magazine of June 3 to see what the average family will pay as a result of this Budget. As we see here, this Budget will mean $970 in increased taxes in the first calendar year.

It is a vicious Budget, Mr. Chairman, one that typifies our Prime Minister. He does not care about the poor and middle income or the old age pensioners. He cares about his rich friends on Bay Street. He is looking after them and the big multinational oil companies. I really think he should be ashamed of himself and back off on this move as soon as possible.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Outremont, I believe.

Some Hon. Members: No, no, no!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Pépin: Today hundreds of elderly people—

An Hon. Member: Thousands!

Mrs. Pépin: —came here to voice their opposition to the deindexation of old age security pensions. Their point of view is as logical as it is evident. Why should the Government give a gift to the wealthiest people in our society through a $500,000 capital gains tax exemption, whereas senior citizens will see their purchasing power decrease year after year? Within five years each senior citizen will lose $1,800 in pension benefits, leaving $4.5 billion more in the federal treasury. Meanwhile the surtax on corporations and individuals who earn more than $40,000 a year will last only 18 months. Mr. Chairman, the Mulroney Government expects sacrifices from the generation of Canadians who lived through the crisis of the 30s and World War II, who raised large families and were on the labour market when there were no retirement plans. It is unacceptable! The principles of social justice from which the Mulroney Government draws inspiration are warped.

The Progressive Conservative Party is forcing the elderly to live through a nightmare and its Members ought to be ashamed. Most Canadian men and women have lost faith in the Government because of the way it treats senior citizens. They are worried, and rightly so.

Mr. Chairman, they are also worried about unemployment. Newspaper headlines were rather eloquent on that issue after the Budget presentation. One could read: "Wilson Budget Hard on Individuals, Soft on Businesses", Minister of Finance Slashes and Hits", "Middle-class Bears Budget Brunt", "Less State and More Taxes", "Wilson Cozies up to Oil and Gas Companies".

"Jobs, jobs, jobs" cry becomes "tax, tax, tax".

[Translation]

What is particularly insidious about this Budget is the somewhat sneaky way in which an increased tax burden is added to low- and middle-income Canadians. The deindexation of social programs will not be felt immediately, but from year to year, low-income groups will lose more and more of their purchasing power.

Last week, in answer to a question about what senior citizens would think of this drop in their purchasing power, which is already not very large, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) stated that senior citizens realized that their grandchildren should not be asked to shoulder the deficit alone. Unfortunately, that answer goes to prove that a Progressive Conservative Government is unaware that older people who live on government benefits often find themselves below the poverty line.

On the subject of poverty, I would like to deal briefly with employment and women. It should be noted that staff cuts in the Public Service will affect mostly the lower salary levels, namely women. With respect to on-the-job training, the Progressive Conservative Government had pledged to support the introduction of effective programs to help women prepare for technological change and new careers. During the election campaign last summer, a combination of tax incentives and grants was considered among other things for that purpose. Now, the Progressive Conservative Government is going to cut back training programs by $78 million this year. This means that about one sixth of the spending cuts of the Progressive Conservative Government will be at the expense of working men and women who need to improve their skills. There is nothing in the Budget to help women face the technological change. Since the Progressive Conservative Government is eager to reduce the Government's involvement in the economy and hand it over to the open market, women will have to fall back on their own resources to adapt to technological change.

With respect to equal employment, the Human Rights Commission had been entrusted with the necessary enforcement measures. Now, with the real cuts in departmental budgets, that is with deindexation, it is more doubtful than ever if the Commission will ever dispose of enough human and financial resources to perform its role, and this, Mr. Speaker, does not include the cuts to be brought in by Mr. Nielsen's group as of September and February next. Employment equity, to say the least, does not seem to be a priority for the Progressive Conservative government, which greatly concerns me for the future.

In this Budget, the Progressive Conservative government has completely ignored part-time workers men and women. Thirty per cent of them would rather hold a full time job. The occurrence of poverty in families where the head of the household works part time is five times greater than in those where the bread-winner works full time. When we consider that 72 p. 100 of part-time workers are women, their anger is easy to understand. It shows total lacks of interest on the part of the Prime Minister towards the specific problems women are up against, in the labour market. Because of a complete lack of strategy on the part of the Government with regard to the labour market, women holding part-time jobs will still have to face a series of problems that seem insignificant to hon. Members opposite, for instance lack of access to social benefits and pensions, a low rate of pay, a high number of women in ghettos, a minimal number of unionized workers, a lack of opportunities for promotion or retraining, no security of employment and inadequate day-care services.

Mr. Chairman, with regard to the impact of the Budget on immigration, two things should be remebered, the de-indexation of department funds will mean gradual reduction in the amounts allocated to the immigration program. That was to be expected on the basis of the estimates. The Consultative Council on the Status of Refugees appropriations remain the same, however the funds allocated to the Immigration Appeal Board have been reduced by $2.5 million, inflation factor included. Today, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) introduced a special bill to increase the number of members on the Immigration Appeal Board from 16 to 50. I hope that I will have an opportunity to discuss this bill and explain that the new procedure of reducing the quorum from three to one is unacceptable for refugees.

We have yet to see which changes the government intends to make in the way refugee status is granted. The fact that the immigration program budget will be reduced in real terms is not a good omen, especially since the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration is considering a raise in the immigration level from 90,000 to 200,000 this year. It would seem ridiculous to cut services for immigrants when we are planning to double their number.

The first victims of those cuts will be the immigrants themselves. But in the long run, all Canadian men and women will suffer from this conservative immigration policy. Without the benefit of those services, immigrants will be more vulnerable to economic vagaries and they will be more dependent on welfare and unemployment insurance.

I referred earlier to the bet taken up by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) concerning employment as related to immigration. The Conservative Government is taking up another bet, i.e. to offer quality services to immigrants by having them provided by humanitarian organizations and this of course without granting the latter any funds.

That tallies with the Progressive Conservative Government's philosophy: privatize some activities and commit others to outside organizations. Already the lease the Government had signed with the Avion Hotel in Toronto for people claiming refugee status has been brought to an end. The Government expects charitable organizations to provide services to immigrants. When we know that in times of economic recession those organizations have to cope with reduced funds, we realize that the Progressive Conservative Government intends to have the quality of services to immigrants subjected to economic circumstances. It is a mean thing to do, to say the least. This is another way to penalize the neediest for the sake of deficit reduction.

In concluding, Mr. Chairman, I want to point out that whenever budget cuts are being dealt with, the Progressive Conservative Government equates them with increased government efficiency. For instance, the Government will state that in order to improve the efficiency of its manpower adjustment programs, it has decided in 1985-86 to cut by $78 million the funds allotted for General Industrial Training and for Critical Trade Skills Training. However, management efficiency has no relation whatsoever with the decrease or increase in program costs. A better management efficiency simply means a different work organization, or improved working methods.

So I call upon the Government to tell Canadian men and women about its new magical management methods for improving government efficiency with less money. If they do not tell them, people will simply fear, and rightly so, a reduction of services combined with a reduction of costs.

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased to be recognized to take part once more in this debate. I know that our colleagues opposite have not had much to say yet today.

An Hon. Member: They are quiet people!

Mr. Lapierre: As the Hon. Member says, they are quiet people.

Mr. Chairman, I have just been made aware of another serious repercussion of the Budget. My colleague from Montréal-Ste Marie (Mr. Malépart) has just told me that the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation has announced today that it would eliminate 16 jobs at its regional office in Sherbrooke. I have just been told that in Trois-Rivières, 10 jobs... and in Laval they will make the decision for the Trois-Rivières area.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier) has been trying since this morning to have us believe that the Budget is just and fair. I wonder how the Hon. Member can say something like that. Is it fair that remote areas should be faced with administrative decisions taken in Longueuil or in Laval because of unilateral action by this Government.

[English]

Mr. McDermid: Tell them about complaining to me about deindexing the Members' pensions, like you were the other day. Tell them about that.

[Translation]

M. Lapierre: Mr. Chairman, I am . . . The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) says: Just like they did with the provinces. He has the audacity to say that now, when they have announced a $2 billion cut in transfer payments to the provinces. What does that mean, Mr. Chairman? It means access to universities will be limited to children of the rich. Even access to medical care will be reduced . . . We know this is part of the Hon. Member's philosophy, we know that access to medical care could hinge on the ability to pay user fees.

The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown is trying to be cheap, something which is natural to him. But I can tell him that I am willing to make a number of sacrifices rather than ask my grandparents to make any. I am not willing to let my grandmother—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order.

[English]

Mr. Cook: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I have listened to speeches that bore little relevance to a borrowing bill and the fact that the Official Opposition wants to cut it by 3 per cent. I have heard the beginning of a third speech which has no relevance to this at all. I respectfully submit to the Chair that the Chair pay attention and enforce the rule of relevancy in this debate.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Chairman, I rise on the same point of order. Knowing the Chief Government Whip, I am absolutely sure that what he just said when he asked the Chair to pay attention was not exactly what he wanted to say. I have been watching the Chair since the beginning and the Chair has been very much following the debate. It is very difficult for the Chair to render judgments on everything that is going on.

I am positive that no one would argument that the Chief Government Whip wanted to say that the Chair was not paying attention to the debate. It is absolutely impossible.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for North Vancouver-Burnaby, I presume on the same point of order.

Mr. Cook: Mr. Chairman, I will accept what the Hon. Member said. I did not mean to state that perhaps you were not paying attention. Obviously I would not attempt to embarrass the Chair in any way, nor do I intend to. However, I would suggest that perhaps a little more relevance might be in order in this debate. I have yet to see it and I would like to see it.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: For the benefit of all Members, I would like to remind Members what the debate is about. We are on an amendment suggested by the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate that Clause 2 of Bill C-51 be amended by deleting the words "Eighteen billion, two hundred million" and substituting therefore the words "seventeen billion, six hundred, fifty-four million". The debate is on the amendment.

[Translation]

Mr. Lapierre: Mr. Chairman, that is precisely the point I was making but if the Hon. Member fails to recognize that those $18.2 billion are part of transfer payments to the provinces, if he does not pay enough attention to what is being said in this place to realize that the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation falls under government's jurisdiction, I cannot accept his judgment.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask you to excuse the Hon. Member since I referred only to the main elements of those $18.2 billion and to the amendment. Why do we want to cut the government borrowing authority by 3 per cent? Because it has been so insensitive to the plea of older people that it did not realize what a 3 per cent reduction meant for them. So, we thought we could make the government aware of the importance of such a reduction if it had itself to do with revenues cut by 3 per cent until the end of the year. The amendment would force the government to reflect on the situation older people will go through once they have paid their housing, food and other bills. I hope the Hon. Member will think about it before he goes to bed tonight, that he will reflect upon the impact of a 3 per cent cut for a widow or an older citizen who lives in an apartment or a home with only $27 left for personal expenses at the end of the month. If the Hon. Member finds such action too complicated, I suggest he speak to his neighbours who live on old age pension and he will know what a 3 per cent cut means.

Unfortunately, the Hon. Member is the living example of the government opposite, Mr. Chairman. They do not know what a 3 per cent reduction means for some people when it is often the difference between luxury and basic essentials. I know a lady from Baie-Comeau who told me that she had to travel by taxi to Haute-Rive twice a month at $12 a trip. That means she has to pay $24 each month to get medical care and if the government goes ahead with this bill, she might be forced to cancel her treatment. I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will feel responsible every time an older person goes to the grocery store to buy the cheapest stale bread because it never occurred to him that his own parents could have lived through that sort of hardship. If that is his way of showing his appreciation for the work of our seniors, Mr. Speaker, I will not have it. I do not accept that our senior citizens, who have built this country, be treated in such a way, and if the Government hopes to convince Members from this side of the House to cut the income of senior citizens, and to make us believe this is right, it is mistaken. Senior citizens and average Canadians will not accept that.

An Hon. Member: They should!

Mr. Lapierre: The Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid), instead of talking while seated, should at times stand up for the poor people in his riding, rather than protect only the rich! I want to tell the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) that if he has no compassion for the poor, I think it is selfish and unacceptable and I hope his colleagues—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order! The Hon. Member for Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine (Mr. Gray) on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure-Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I want to say, in conjunction with my colleague's point of order, that if we are going to talk about the borrowing Bill perhaps the supposed Official Opposition would say how many tax dollars it is costing us to have this shenanigan in the House this evening, and perhaps they could explain to the people that we want to get on with the business of the Government. They should recognize that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. After great deliberation, the Chair has come to the conclusion that it is nine o'clock. Shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It being nine o'clock, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at eleven o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 2(1).

The House adjourned at 9.02 p.m.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, Members will note the change in business for today with respect to certain items. There have been consultations between the Parties and, accordingly, we have agreed that we will deal today with certain items of legislation. Bill C-44, to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, will go to second reading, and be referred to the standing committee; followed by Bill C-26, which I understand will be concluded in third reading today; followed by Bill C-27, the Bill relating to equality rights under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, amendments of statutes, which will go to third reading and, finally, Bill C-36 which is a Bill relating to amendments to the Aeronautics Act.

Later today I can monitor the progress of these items of legislation. We will be proceeding with Bill C-39 and Bill C-24 in due course. I will continue to consult with the Opposition House Leaders with respect to these matters, for tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on the same point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I will not take the time of the House since there was agreement between the House Leaders, but I wish to say that I am very disturbed at the change that is taking place because the House Leaders had made excellent progress, at page 5753. For once we were happy, we knew what we were about to discuss and now it is all changed again. I must say, and I would like to be on the record, that I am very disturbed by that sudden change when we were doing so well in the debate to attract the attention of Canadians on an issue that is very important.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, on the business as outlined by the Government House Leader, it is true that we have been meeting continuously over the course of the last two weeks or even longer to find ways to make progress in terms of the legislative program. The outline as we have heard it is indeed the outline of the legislation that we agreed to deal with today and tomorrow. I am hopeful that we will in time not only deal with that legislation but of course return to the other legislation and continue our assault on the Government's inadequacies with regard to the pension program.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It should be a short debate then.

Mr. Deans: However, what the Government House Leader has indicated was, in fact, what we did discuss and agree upon.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Government House Leader's statement a few minutes ago does reflect the discussions we have had. I also want to say that we look forward with great anticipation and desire to the return of Bill C-51 to the floor of this House.

WESTERN GRAIN TRANSPORTATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport) moved that Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to rise and speak on second reading of Bill C-44 which was introduced in the House on April 26 last. I presume by now that all Members will have had a chance to look at the Bill and will recognize that it is a Bill that, among other things, covers a number of housekeeping items, but in addition contains some very positive and constructive provisions.

Bill C-44 contains amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act. During the previous debate which took place in this Chamber in 1983 and 1984, it became clear that there were a number of deficiencies in the Act and a number of amendments, amendments which should have been considered and incorporated at that time but were not. It is with that in mind that we are presenting this Bill.

Further, during the course of the application of this Bill, the experience has brought about a number of other deficiencies such as the propensity for the very wide and erratic fluctuations in the producers' freight rate and the fact that certain producers are excluded from being represented on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. In recognition of this, our Party while in Opposition identified a number of these issues and made a number of commitments to correct these deficiencies, and to introduce a number of improvements into the Act which will provide a better, more simplified and stable system for the producers of grain in western Canada.

In our Party's western caucus meeting in Prince Albert last July the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) stated and I quote:

> Any legislation affecting western grain transportation must be designed to work for producers... A Progressive Conservative Government will make the amendments to the Western Grain Transportation Act required to guarantee a growing and confident agricultural sector in western Canada.

• (1110)

Bill C-44, in conjunction with other initiatives undertaken by this Government, represents a fulfilment of that undertaking. In the Prince Albert declaration, we outlined our policy with respect to grain transportation, and I would like to take a few moments to review those commitments and our actions as a Government.

In Prince Albert, we made a commitment to freeze the existing freight rates paid by producers from any further increase pending the results of the legislative review of the Western Grain Transportation Act as it applies to the producers' ability to pay. Bill C-44 contains a ceiling provision ensuring that for the next two crop years, the crop years of 1985-86 and 1986-87, producers' freight rates cannot rise above the existing level, which is on average $7.70 per tonne. The amendment does allow for the rate to drop, and I am pleased to note that the CTC has indicated that on average, producers will be paying $6 per tonne to ship their grain in crop year 1985-86.

Second, we made a commitment to remove the 31.5 million tonne volume cap contained in the legislation which acts as a disincentive to increased production and exports. The volume cap provision in the Western Grain Transportation Act has been strongly criticized by most of the major farm groups in western Canada. The proposal to remove the cap contained in Bill C-44 was developed in western Canada by the Grain Transportation Administration and has been endorsed by the Senior Grain Transportation Committee, which represents a cross-section of the entire grain industry, including the producer groups and representatives of the elevator companies. We believe that given this broad support and the clear benefits of the tally system which we are proposing and have agreed to implement in the system will address the basic problems caused by the 31.5 million tonne volume cap which exists in the current legislation.

Third, we committed ourselves to imposing a moratorium on branch line abandonment and to stop any tampering with the physical aspects of any line until the legislative review is completed and all other options and innovations for continued branch line use explored. The moratorium is in place. In December, there was a request of Commissioner McDonough of the western CTC to undertake an examination of alternatives for branch lines affected by abandonment and Commissioner McDonough is due to report by June 30. I look forward to his recommendations.

Fourth, we made a commitment to immediately examine ways and means to provide improved services and equitable rates for grain producers who are discriminated against geographically. I am pleased to inform the House that we are currently negotiating with the British Columbia Railway an agreement whereby producers in the Peace River block will benefit from the Western Grain Transportation Act. Given the importance of transportation links with the West Coast and the new Pacific Rim markets, this agreement will help develop the agricultural potential of the Peace River area. As well, the Commission under Commissioner McDonough is mandated to bring forth recommendations with respect to grain transportation services in this area and other frontier areas as well.

Fifth, we promised to include in the Western Grain Transportation Act the federal Government's commitment to branch line rehabilitation. Bill C-44 will ensure the provision of a branch line rehabilitation program funded by the Government of Canada until at least March 1990.

Sixth, we made a commitment to ensure that the railways will be much more accountable to grain producers and that they will hold annual accountability meetings with producers. Bill C-44 requires that the railways publish an annual statement of grain investment plans and will require the railways to hold annual producer meetings in all western provinces similar to those which have been held by the CNR this year and similar in nature to the accountability meetings that are held by the Canadian Wheat Board on a regular basis.

Seventh, we made a commitment to protect all the specialty crops under the Western Grain Transportation Act from railway demurrage charges. I am happy to report that no demurrage is currently being levied by the railways in this area.

Eighth, we made a commitment to remove the distortion in freight rates applying to grain and oilseeds and the processed versions of these products consistent with maintaining equal opportunities for economic development in all regions of Canada. In connection with this, the process which has been established has been done so by events over which we have had very little control.

The Hall inquiry, which was created as a result of the legislation, has completed its findings and issued a report. The Hall Report was tabled in the House on April 30. We are currently engaged in discussions with producer groups and all representatives of the grain transportation, production and handling industry. We are looking forward to the reaction to that report. The Government will have more to say on that issue in the next few weeks when the review process is established. The recommendations of the Hall inquiry are included as part and parcel of that total review.

Ninth, we made a commitment to examine ways and means to improve access to, and utilization of, producer cars which producers in all parts of Canadian Wheat Board designated areas considered to be an important and very basic right. My colleague, the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board (Mr. Mayer), is currently consulting with those involved to ensure that the producer's ability to order his own car is maintained. Producer cars remain an important and vital element of the grain transportation system.

These commitments represent a comprehensive grain transportation policy. We have acted promptly to turn the commitments into action. Both the Prince Albert statement and Bill C-44 are based on considerable consultation and discussion with producers and their organizations. We have listened to their concerns and we have acted to address the problems which they have identified. We have acted in such a way that, we believe, is consistent with their desires. I am pleased to note that the contents of Bill C-44 have been well-supported generally and endorsed by producers, producer groups and all those engaged in the production and handling of the transportation of grain.

Essentially, Bill C-44 can be divided into three groups: first, the clauses dealing with the freight rate ceiling, second, the clauses which put in place the tally adjustment proposal and remove the volume cap and third, the clauses which provide a greater voice for individual producers and increased railway accountability.

With respect to the freight rate ceiling, we believe that this amendment will provide an important degree of certainty for producers in planning for the next two crop years. During the past several years, producers have been severely affected by unstable prices, rising input costs and high interest rates. Added to that burden has been a rapidly increasing freight rate that has gone from an average of $4.85 per tonne on August 1, 1983, to $7.70 today. That represents an increase of 58 per cent in less than two years.

We recognize that no one action alone will cure all the problems which face our agricultural sector. However, we believe that measures like the ceiling, combined with other initiatives such as the fuel tax rebate, the Western Grain Stabilization pay-out, the reduction in interest rates, the red meat stabilization plan, the moratorium on Farm Credit Corporation foreclosures, the capital gains initiative which is in the Budget and relief from high interest rates for those farmers who were locked into severely high interest rates under the provisions of the FCC, should help to break the spiral of rising costs and thereby improve the financial health of the farm community. That is the goal of our agricultural policy. I am pleased to bring in this Bill which will complement and reinforce the actions which have been taken heretofore.

These initiatives will go a long way to help restore a healthy and vibrant agricultural environment. I would indicate that if the ceiling provision is triggered, the savings experienced by producers will be absorbed by the railways. We believe this should encourage the railways to be more sensitive in controlling their costs so that any rate increase will remain below the ceiling.

To provide further stability and certainty to the western farmer, we are going to institute a tally adjustment system and remove the 31.5 million tonne volume cap. One of the principal benefits of the tally system will be to eliminate the wild year to year fluctuations in the producer's share of the freight rate which were caused in party by the volume cap. Also eliminated will be the complex interim and final adjustment provisions which have been severely critized both inside and outside the House.

The result will be a simplified rate setting mechanism generating fair, stable rates. The producer rate will be more closely related to the actual costs incurred when his grain is shipped than it is at present, thus providing the producer with a more accurate and predictable picture of his total cost. Under the current system, rates in the future could fluctuate by $5 per tonne year over year. This kind of instability could lead to distortions in shipping patterns, which makes planning more difficult for producers and shields any true sense of the costs involved.

The tally system is quite straightforward and simple. Any amount of the Government's commitment, which is essentially the Crow benefit plus its share of inflation costs, not utilized in one crop year will be carried forward as a credit for producers. Any over-payment by Government will be set off against this credit. It is anticipated that over and under-payments will tend to balance out, leaving no significant outstanding credit remaining over the long term.

There is a $150 million limit which will act as a protection device, ensuring that no excessive balance remains in the tally. In farming, as in any business, it is important to know your costs and the tally system will give producers the stability they need to plan for the years ahead. The Senior Grain Transportation Committee recognized the value of this proposal and I hope all Hon. Members will agree that it represents a significant improvement over that contained in the current legislation.

Bill C-44 also contains a number of changes to the Western Grain Transportation Act to strengthen the role of producers in shaping the grain transportation system. Producer representation on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee will be increased from four to eight. Alberta will now have two, Saskatchewan will have three, Manitoba will have two, and for the first time British Columbia will have a representative. As promised last November, B.C. producers will have the right to choose their representative, which will take place after this legislation is passed. As a further change to the Senior Grain Transportation Committee, we are making the specialty crops representative a full voting member instead of just an observer in recognition of the growing importance of these products to western agriculture. Under the current legislation, that representative sits on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee as an observer only and does not have voting rights. This will be changed in this legislation and that representative will be a full voting member.

Bill C-44 will also require the railways to publish their annual statement of grain investment plans which now goes only to the Minister, the CTC, the grain transportation administrator and the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. We believe it is important that the railways demonstrate publicly their commitment to grain transportation in return for the substantial benefits they have received under the Western Grain Transportation Act.

As I said earlier, to further enhance their accountability, we will require the railways to hold meetings with the producers in each western province every year in order to discuss grain transportation issues. We think this will not only provide an opportunity for producers and railways to iron out some difficulties, but as well it will probably be most productive in giving the railways an opportunity to put forward what they see as their future plans regarding technological change and improvements in the system, and perhaps get a better spirit of co-operation in the grain production, handling and transportation system as a whole.

• (1125)

This is much more than just a public relations exercise. Both producers and the railways, we believe, need a better understanding of each others problems and opportunities if we are going to have a transportation system which best serves our farmers. The railways are doing this already with some degree of success, and I think that the encouragement in this legislation will make it a process which will be expected and which will be productive.

In a nutshell, Mr. Speaker, these are the amendments we are bringing forward. Bill C-44 does not pretend to address every issue. It deals with a number of specific and pressing matters which we felt needed immediate action. As well, the initiatives which are contained in this Bill fulfil a commitment which was made during the course of the election campaign and prior to it. There are many other issues surrounding the Western Grain Transportation Act. We believe these can most appropriately be dealt with during the comprehensive legislative review. I can assure Hon. Members that all aspects of the Act will be included in that review.

We believe that these amendments are positive. We believe they will improve the legislation and provide a better system for producers. We believe they are non-controversial and reflect representations made by farm organizations in western Canada. We believe that these amendments deserve the support and speedy passage by this House. We have the opportunity now to make these changes in time to benefit the producers during the 1985-1986 crop year. I urge all Members of the House to keep that in mind during the course of our future deliberations on this measure.

This is not an end, Mr. Speaker. I am sure that over time more changes to the Western Grain Transportation Act will be required. However, I believe it is a start in improving the Act and I hope that the House will support that objective.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have an opportunity to say a few words on behalf of my Party with respect to Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act. I believe the most interesting thing about this Bill is that the Minister had a lot of concerns and hesitations in supporting the Western Grain Transportation legislation when it was brought into the House a couple of years ago. However, we see in the legislation before us today only two substantive amendments and a number of housekeeping amendments to the Bill. Clearly the Minister must have been very supportive at the time the legislation was brought into the House.

As I recall, the Minister had some 14 objections to the legislation which was originally introduced in the House and now it seems that most of those objections have totally vanished, at least to the point where the Minister is concerned about bringing in amendments to the legislation. For instance, he was very concerned about the distortion between raw grain transportation prices as well as processed products. He was very concerned about increases in the transportation costs to the agricultural community. In fact, the initial price of grain has been reduced.

The Minister was also very concerned about distortions in the diversification of the western economy, yet there seems to be nothing in the Bill with respect to that. He felt the original Bill was far too generous to the railways and yet there is no action with respect to that. He was concerned about the erosion of the powers of the Canadian Wheat Board, yet there is no action in the Bill relating to that. I think we have a Bill here about which either the Minister has changed his mind or he is not concerned enough about to propose any more than two substantive amendments.

The press release issued by the Minister when the Bill received first reading said that the amendments would help western producers this coming year and give them more certainty in planning future crops. I would be interested to know exactly how this Bill provides additional help to western farmers in the 1985-86 crop year. The Minister has talked about the commitments of the Prince Albert declaration. He has talked about the actions which the Government is taking in agriculture. Any farmer in the red meat or grains industry will tell you that there has never been such a desperate situation with regard to commodity pricing. The Government has allowed 17 million pounds of subsidized European beef to come into the country.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) went to the United Kingdom saying that he would have great relations with the United Kingdom and solve all the problems. That is the problem with the Prime Minister. He is trying to solve every problem himself rather than giving some of that responsibility to his Minister. He is clearly making a bollix of it. At least, 1,000 carcases of subsidized beef are coming into Canada each week. There is a countervail on our hogs.

When the Minister talked about solving problems for the Canadian agricultural industry, he certainly was not referring to the red meat industry. When the President of the United States returned home after the Quebec summit, he imposed a countervail on hogs and unilaterally established a bonus program of $2 billion from reserves of grain to subsidize their wheat sales. That will have a devastating impact on western agriculture. It will reduce the price of grain by 10 to 15 per cent, all of that in spite of the great song and dance team in Quebec City.

I will not take the time of the House to recite all the other promises in the Prince Albert declaration which the Government has broken. However, it has reimposed 9 cents a gallon on farm fuel. In Western Canada that is called the "harvest tax" because it goes into effect on September 1. The Government broke its promise on agri-bonds. It is imposing a 1 per cent sales tax. The Minister talked about action in the farm debt crisis, but there has been no action in that area in the Budget or the Estimates of the Department.

Perhaps one of the worst breaches of promise by the Prime Minister was his failure to freeze freight rates at the 1983-84 levels. This Bill freezes them at the 1984-85 levels which are at least 20 per cent higher than those of 1983-84. Three days before the Bill was tabled in the House, the Canadian Transport Commission reported the rate scale for the upcoming year. The new rates for 1985-86 are in fact 22 per cent lower than the rates for 1984-85.

The Minister rushed the Bill into the House for first reading on April 26 because he knew that if he did not he would look very silly after April 29 guaranteeing that the rates would not exceed a level 22 per cent higher than what they already were. If this Bill had frozen rates at the 1983-84 levels or the 1985-86 levels, it would mean something. By choosing the 1984-85 rates, the high point in the cycle, the Minister is giving nothing to western farmers. His freeze is meaningless. The Minister is trying to take credit for a rate reduction which occurred naturally in any event.

The gift for which the Minister is trying to take credit is more or less like giving away the sleeves of his vest. With the reduced volumes, the rates in the crop year 1986-87 are not likely to exceed the levels which he froze them at last year. In Prince Albert last July, the Prime Minister made the very serious promise that he would freeze the rates at the 1983-84 levels rather than at the higher 1984-85 levels. Western farmers are very aware of that commitment and feel the Government should have carried through on it.

The Minister spoke about removing the volume cap. I feel that the amendments proposed in this Bill are commendable, but they do not really remove the volume cap. They simply create a new system for setting rates where the increases in volume over the cap in one year are set against years when the cap is not reached. It is assumed that over time these years will even out so that the producer will pay the same amount, but will not see the large fluctuations in rates which have occurred in the last two years. Unfortunately, while the new tally adjustment is fair for the system as a whole, it is not fair to individual producers whose year-to-year shipments do not necessarily reflect the over-all swings in the system. For example, a farmer who pays a higher rate than he should in one year is not necessarily the same farmer who will benefit from a lower rate the next year.

We support the changes scheduled for the Senior Grain Transportation Committee. We are in favour of seeing the representation increased. We would be interested to know why there have been no elections to fill the existing positions.

The branch line abandonment agreements have been signed with the railways, completing the promised program. The full commitment has been kept. It is the present Minister who has cut back the work to be done this year and moved the whole program back. Perhaps it is a good thing to put the commitment in the Act. It will save future cuts by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) or the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen).

We are all aware of what the Deputy Prime Minister is doing in that regard. He chooses a couple of bankers from Toronto or Montreal who study the Estimates of the department under consideration and make massive cuts. Each year for the next five years, $50 million will be cut from the Department of Agriculture. That will have a devastating impact on that department. We do not know exactly where the cuts will be made, but there is clearly a commitment in the Budget to cut the expenditures of the Department of Agriculture. I would like to know if any of those cuts will apply to western grain producers. I am sure the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) has access to that information. It would be very useful if he would provide that to the House this afternoon because from reading the budget documents, it is not clear where those cuts will occur. There is great apprehension.

Yesterday, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture met to plan action in response to the Government's lack of action in its Budget and the increase in farm input costs as a result of increased sales tax and excise tax on fuel.

The Minister mentioned the Hall committee report which came out in April. He has had ample time to consider its recommendations. He certainly objected to the current method of payments when the Bill was originally introduced and favoured a freedom of choice with regard to the Crow benefit payment. However, he never clearly identified what that freedom of choice position meant.

Many of his caucus colleagues were opposed to railway payments. That was one reason for the establishment of the Hall commission. Although it has reported, the Minister, to my understanding, has not yet indicated his preferred method for making that Crow benefit payment. The Minister of State for Transport (Mr. Bouchard), has taken a clear stand. He supports the UPA position in Quebec. Many of his caucus colleagues from Alberta favour a direct payment.

We would like to know if the Minister's position with regard to the Hall committee is to pay the railroads, pay the grain producers or a combination of those? Clearly, while this legislation makes a few substantive amendments, it does not deal with the 14 main objections made by the Minister when the original Western Grain Transportation Act was passed. Some of the objections he made at the time were the reduction of the power of the Wheat Board, the distortion in pricing between raw grain and processed products, the increased cost to the agricultural community, a concern about diversifying the western agricultural economy and the too generous payments to the railroads. This Bill does not address those concerns or many other recommendations made by the Minister at that time.

When this Bill goes to the Standing Committee, I hope he will be able to clarify his position on those more substantial issues. While we agree with a freeze on transportation rates, the campaign commitment was to freeze them at the 1983-84 level, not at the higher level as the Minister has done.

Essentially he is giving away nothing. It will not only have a zero impact in the coming year, it will have a zero impact in the following crop year. In light of all the other objections he raised to the original Western Grain Transportation Act, we can only assume that these amendments are the only ones that the Minister believed essential to be introduced at this time. Either he has forgotten about those other objections or it was simply a smoke and mirror operation.

We are looking forward to the Minister clarifying his position on these many other points and objections which he has made in the past and therefore we support this Bill in order for it to go to committee.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Hon. Member would permit a question?

Mr. Speaker: Only by unanimous consent.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this Bill with some mixed feelings. The Minister will know from the bitter times of 1982-1983 and part of 1984 why my feelings are somewhat mixed. Of course, one definition of mixed feelings is watching one's monther-in-law go over a cliff in one's new car.

The system for sharing the cost of transportation of grain and other agricultural commodities in Canada, particularly from western Canada, has been in place in one form or another since the 1890s. Governments and Canadians since that time have recognized that because of our geography and the distance which we must move our commodities to reach export positions, as well as the activities of our competitors, that grain producers should not be called upon to pay the entire cost of transporting grain to export positions. As a nation we agreed to share the cost of moving that grain because its export benefits the country to the tune of some $4 billion or $5 billion a year in foreign exchange.

The activities of our competitors placed our grain producers in an awkward situation on a number of occasions. Furthermore, Argentina, one of our competitors, produces most of its grain within 200 miles of salt water—certainly not more than 500 miles. As well, the Government of Argentina has been moving that grain to export positions at no cost to the grain producers. Australia produces most of its grain within 200 miles of salt water. However, our average haul of grain to export positions is approximately 1,000 miles.

The United States has access to a massive inland water system, which is the cheapest way to move heavy bulk commodities like grain, and it was heavily subsidized and built at the taxpayers' expense because the U.S. corps of army engineers built it. Moreover, the United States subsidizes its grain producers by an amount of $8 to $12 a tonne. The European Economic Community has subsidies between $20 and $24 a tonne. We cannot expect our grain producers of western Canada to compete against the treasuries of those competing nations and organizations.

Those of us who live in the West want to ensure that the rest of Canada understands that situation as well as the fact that public funds being invested for capital improvements in the railway system not only helps to move grain but all commodities. Presently, grain only represents approximately 15 per cent to 20 per cent of the track capacity through British Columbia, while the remainder is taken up with other commodities. Therefore, this is not only a benefit to grain producers.

When the previous Government set out to destroy the Crow rate, it was our position that the railroad claims for losses were excessive, and that the Government should receive an equivalent value of equity ownership for any money given by the Government of Canada to the railroads for capital improvements. In other words, if $300 million goes to CN, the Government's equity ownership in shares in CN is automatically increased by that amount. On any funds going to Canadian Pacific, the Government of Canada should get common voting stock of an equivalent value. It seems to us that public investment, investment by taxpayers, is just as much entitled to a return on the investment as any private investor.

Why do we as a nation continue to hand the railroads money and get no return on it? That is a good sound private enterprise principle to which I am trying to educate my colleagues in the Liberal and Conservative Parties. If you are going to give Canadian Pacific money, take common equity voting shares in return and when a dividend is paid, the taxpayers will get something back on their investment. Taxpayers are just as much entitled as a private investor to an opportunity for a return on an investment. We will keep trying to persuade the Minister and the Government to act in that manner, which is an even more responsible use of public funds.

The Minister spoke about the rate freeze. I urge him to correct his Bill to state that the rate established for the 1985-86 crop year shall be the maximum rate for the ensuing two crop years. He himself was talking about freezing the rates at the 1984-85 level of $7.70 a tonne, yet in the next breath the Minister said that was something like a 53 per cent, 55 per cent or whatever figure increase in costs for western grain producers. He sounded to me that he thought that was too high an increase. I certainly agree with that. Why not have the Bill say that the rate that comes into effect for the coming 1985-86 crop year shall be the maximum rate for the ensuing two crop years? Then you would have a genuine three year rate freeze.

I want to say to the Minister that we have had discussions, but I want to remind him about the situation in Prince Rupert. First, he mentions that there is no demurrage being charged on railway cars for specialty crops. When the committee was in Prince Rupert a while back, we were informed by employees who work around those terminals that some of the shippers and receivers are using those railway cars as storage. They let them pile up, back up. There are loaded cars sitting for weeks and months at a time waiting for a ship to come in. That is a very bad misuse of our railway cars. I would urge the Minister to take a second look at that matter. Perhaps he could check into whether there is an abuse. He has the power to make the shippers and receivers pay demurrage on those excessive delays to those kinds of shipments.

Second, when the committee held hearings in Vancouver and Prince Rupert, we were urged to make use of the old grain terminal at Prince Rupert. We were told that it should not be closed down but used for specialty crops and for surge capacity and cleaning and drying facilities. That terminal is still a good terminal. The federal Government a number of years ago put quite a few million dollars into upgrading it. It needs to be kept in place. If the consortium, the Prince Rupert Grain Company, does not want to operate it, then the Minister should.

I have come to the point about the argument concerning moneys provided under the Western Grain Transportation Act being paid to the railroad or whether that should be paid directly to the producers. We oppose the payments directly to producers for a number of reasons. We are not alone in our opposition. The three Prairie pools oppose it. The Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities opposes it, the Saskatchewan Cow-Calf Operators opposes it and the National Farmers Union opposes it.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Yorkton-Melville (Mr. Nystrom) and myself had an opportunity to meet with officers of UPA in Quebec last week. I suppose that is probably the largest farm organization in the country. The UPA adamantly opposes any direct payments to producers. I hope that is sufficient to persuade the Minister that he will not mess around with those payments, that he will continue to pay the railways and that he will finally agree to take equity ownership for any money given the railroads for capital investment.

The Minister in the Bill is increasing the number of representatives on the Senior Grain Transportation Committee by adding a representative from the Peace River district. We agree with that. We feel that if the Government is going to be expanding the membership of the committee, and here I am making a pitch for my own province, that that committee should adequately represent the Province of Saskatchewan. Why should the producers of 50 per cent or more of all the grain in western Canada not be represented 50 per cent? We would like to see the Minister increase the number in the Bill from eight to 10, so the Bill would read one representative from the Peace River country, two representatives each from Manitoba and Alberta and five from Saskatchewan. That would be a fair producer representation based to some degree on numbers, certainly based on Saskatchewan production, which is more than both Alberta and Manitoba put together.

The Minister is expanding the membership and moving the representatives for the non-permit bookholders, that will be the producers of specialty crops and so forth, to actual voting membership status rather than observer status. We agree with that. Again, the Minister will recall that when we were debating the original Bill, he and I succeeded in getting that observer status. We also succeeded in getting a representative on the committee from the trade union movement involved in the grain transportation business and grain handling.

I am asking the Minister if he would be willing to do it himself or accept an amendment that moves labour representative from observer status to full status. We think it would be proper to have two representatives from the labour movement, one from part of the labour movement involved in the transportation of grain, namely the railroad workers, and one representative from those who handle the grain, the grain handlers, longshoremen and so forth. We should have a representative from each of those categories. I would like the Minister to consider that, but we can talk about it some more in the committee. We think the committee could have representatives from other fields.

We have representatives from the producers, the elevators, the shippers, the haulers, the bureaucrats, the shipping companies and the truckers. Why can we not have representatives from the labour movement, as well as representatives from the port and harbour commissions involved in grain movement? I think they should also be on that committee. Should there not be a representative from Prince Rupert, one from Vancouver and one from Thunder Bay on the committee? There is also the St. Lawrence Seaway to consider. At least its representatives should be there as observers.

Grain producers have been waiting two years since the Bill became law. Farmers and all other people involved in the industry are waiting to get on with shaping the future of grain transportation. While we want the Peace River district and non-permit book holders to be voting representatives and to give advice to the Minister and the administrators, we also want to get on with the business of the committee. The Minister could put the committee to work and put these amendments entrain at the same time.

Section 62 of the Act provides for a full-scale review of all effects of the original Bill brought in by the Liberals to kill the Crow so that, as Hall said, the review could be done two years later. This would be after the committee had been fully constituted, had completed its collection of data, and had made small technical and regulatory changes which may or may not make the provisions of the Bill more or less useful.

I am sure the Minister will take this under advisement. In any event, I am sure he has taken the advice of his own administrators and advisory committee which recommended a delay in the completion of the review period for at least two years. They recommended this delay because the changes and effects appeared to be greater and different from those contemplated by the former regime. I suspect the Conservatives plan even more changes, although the Minister has not dared to bring them in because they would open up other parts of the Act with which perhaps he does not want us to deal at this time. He does not want us to talk about Section 45, which brings me to the whole issue of variable rates. I presume the Minister received, yesterday or this morning, the written submission of the three prairie wheat pools. I do not know why he is reluctant to have us deal with Section 45. The former Minister, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), built in enough protection against variable rates to last him until after the election. That time has run out, as has the protection.

Last year CN applied under the minimal protection of Section 45(2) to offer lower rates. When CTC demanded proof that it would benefit farmers, the railway withdrew its application. However, starting this December there will no burden of proof and the variable rates nightmare will be upon us again.

It is our position that if railroads want to set a lower rate to move grain under certain circumstances, for example on weekends or in slack time periods during the shipping season, that if they lower the rate for one grain producer, they must lower it for all grain producers. There should be no discrimination. The wheeling and dealing between CN and Northern Transportation Limited in an attempt to obtain a variable rate on a certain part of trackage in central Saskatchewan might be nice and might reduce the costs of grain producers along that line. However, what about grain producers along other lines? It is discriminatory and unfair. Railroads should not be allowed to do it. Certainly, they should not be allowed to apply for variable rates until the grain transportation committee is in place and has had time to do a lot of work, and until the review period has been completed.

The three pools made a recommendation in their submission indicating that Section 45(2) be amended as it did not apply prior to the completion of the comprehensive review in Part V, Section 62 of the Act, particularly Section 62(b).

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired, unless the House chooses to let him continue by unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has given the Hon. Member unanimous consent.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues for their consideration. I just want to complete my remarks on the variable rates and on one other small matter before I resume my seat.

The three wheat pools went on to indicate that that Section did not apply prior to the 1986-87 crop year, except in respect of a lower rate which would, in the opinion of the commission, encourage and reflect efficiencies gained from the loading or unloading of railway cars on weekend. Given that the legislation also calls for a comprehensive review in 1985-86, which included the entire Section relating to the rate scale, it is their belief that Section 45(2) was included with the understanding that Section 45(1) would not apply until the general review had been undertaken and completed. We cannot have a ridiculous situation where there is an ongoing review and the railroads open up the nightmare again with applications for variable rates.

I hope the Minister will consider bringing in the amendment at committee which the three prairie wheat pools requested. Perhaps he does not want us to deal with Section 62 relating to a full-scale review next year. That is much too soon to be of any real value in determining the effects of the legislation. We think that it should go back an additional crop year or two, so that the vagaries of prairie weather and the differences in productions and export sales over the previous two or three years could be taken into account and that there will be no adverse effect upon the review period itself.

Before the election the Minister, when he was trying to convince western farmers that they would be protected by the Conservatives, said that he wanted a three-year moratorium on rate increases. That was better than nothing, but where is it today? It is a freeze at the higher level of the 1984-85 crop year. In order to keep his commitment to western grain producers, I think he will accept our suggestion that the maximum rate should be that of 1985-86 and should apply for the two subsequent crop years.

In conclusion, I say to the Minister that we will have three or four amendments. I will endeavour to get copies of them to him today or tomorrow, as we have not quite finished preparing them. This will provide him with an opportunity to look at them before discussing them with us when the committee meets to consider this bill next Tuesday, I presume it is. I assure him that we think the improvements in the Bill outweigh its deficiencies. We are hoping that he will agree to some changes and additions to the legislation which we believe would make it even better in correcting some of the things that are wrong in the original Western Grain Transportation Act.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Mazankowski, seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn, moves that Bill C-44, an Act to amend the Western Grain Transportation Act, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Benjamin: Order.

Mr. Speaker: With respect, I called the question. I asked whether the House was ready for the question and nobody objected. I am therefore in some difficulty.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport.

OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-26, an Act to amend the Old Age Security Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs.

Mr. Speaker: Let me indicate to Hon. Members that I have had the opportunity to examine Motion No. 1 and Motion No. 2 on the Notice Paper in amendment at the report stage of Bill C-26, an Act to amend the Old Age Security Act. I have found them both procedurally in order and therefore intend to group them for debate. A vote on Motion No. 1 will apply to Motion No. 2.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-26, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 10 to 14 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"lived with that person for at least one year,"

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-26, be amended

(a) by renumbering Clause 11 as subclause 11(1)

(b) by adding immediately after line 2 at page 9 the following:

"(2) For the period commencing on the day this Act is assented to and ending on August 31, 1985, the definition "spouse" in section 2 of the Old Age Security Act shall be deemed to read as follows:

" "spouse", in relation to a pensioner, includes a person of the opposite sex who has lived with the pensioner for at least one year and the pensioner and that person have publicly represented themselves as man and wife;"."

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in this very important debate on Bill C-26. We all know the admirable objective of this legislation which is to enable the elderly, that is, widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 65, to receive the Old Age Security pension or the supplement, and we in the Liberal Party are very pleased with the Bill, but we do have a problem with certain discriminatory provisions.

Mr. Speaker, a Government that discriminates on the basis of marital status is not acting according to the spririt and the letter of the Canadian Constitution. Mr. Speaker, this very Parliament made a commitment not to indulge in any discrimination on the basis of language, sex, and so forth, and now one of the Government's first pieces of legislation is in fact telling single people who are members of a religious order, for instance, that they will not be eligible for pension benefits when they turn 60. Just because they decided to dedicate their lives to the education of our young people, and to the community, they will have to wait until they are 65. We are telling divorced individuals who have had problems during their working lives, problems in their marriages—Mr. Speaker, this is fairly common—that they are being penalized for not sticking with their husband or wife. That is what we are telling them. We are saying: no, no, no!

Imagine, Mr. Speaker, around the card table at the senior citizens' club, a women who is 61, whose husband died during World War II and her partner who got a divorce because while her husband was away from home, he found himself a young chick—

Mrs. Champagne: Such language!

Mr. Lapierre: The first woman is getting a pension and the second is not. That is the kind of situation you will hear about at the senior citizens' club in Saint-Hyacinthe. That is the kind of situation the Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne) will have to explain to senior citizens in her riding. Why penalize people who were divorced or separated on perfectly legitimate grounds? Mr. Speaker, you will agree that this is intolerable. We cannot afford to discriminate in this way. I know, and I am very pleased to see the Minister of State (Youth), because although she is very busy with youth, she is also concerned about senior citizens because she has their respect. I know she cannot go along with these provisions, that she will go to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and tell him: You do not realize what you are doing. Do you realize you are going to cause quarrels among old friends? They are going to be watching you. Mr. Speaker, these women unfortunately do not always have the resources to defend themselves. They are not always in a position to come and demonstrate or let the Government know the error of its ways.

Mr. Speaker, we all know that old age means a lot of loneliness. There are elderly women sitting in their living rooms right now who are wondering why they are being penalized because they were separated from their husbands and why they are being penalized because they got a divorce, for all kind of reasons. Is it up to the Government to make that kind of moral judgment? That is what I cannot tolerate in this Government. I cannot tolerate that people make judgments on the marital status of individuals. And that is what we are doing. If we did not intend to do this, why not say: We have the resources to do so much. That is, reduce the eligible age across the board to 64, 63 or 62. Do it in stages, but be fair. Be fair, because you will soon realize that people in our communities and in senior citizens' clubs across the country are going to be upset when they realize they are getting a raw deal because of their marital status. How dare you brand these people who have had problems in their lives? This is something I cannot tolerate. I think life has been hard enough on them already without the Government adding to their burden.

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) engaged in a heroic struggle to try and make Government Members understand this. He circulated petitions across the country, and not even the thousands of signatures on these petitions were able to make this Government budge one bit, a Government that is obviously too insensitive to budge. Ever since they came to power, Mr. Speaker, they have been attacking the elderly in our society. We are not going to stand for that. We cannot tolerate a Government that has no respect for the people who built this country. We cannot tolerate that people who made sacrifices for years and years so they could give us the Canada we know today should be penalized either by de-indexation or because of their marital status.

Unfortunately, we are faced with a dilemma: we want to help widows and widowers, and we are sorry for those who are single, separated or divorced. Imagine the case of a single person who has helped his parents and his brothers and sisters all his life, and in fact given up his personal life to help them, and who today is being penalized for having made that sacrifice. Imagine the case of a person who got a divorce for whatever reason and who today wonders: What did I do wrong? Why will the Government not give me my pension and why is someone else who is widowed entitled to one? Imagine the problems in implementing Bill C26! Departmental officials are already telling us it is impossible to implement. Imagine the case of a person who was widowed recently or someone who has not heard from her husband for years. Is she separated? Is she widowed? Mr. Speaker, a distinguished lawyer like yourself will know that the application of a discriminatory piece of legislation creates all sorts of legal problems and I do not understand why the Government did not extend the application of this Bill to everyone.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Montreal-Sainte-Marie, to whom I want to pay homage because if there is one Member in this House who is concerned for senior citizens, he is the one, has organized a major operation called "Justice pour personnes âgées". I am convinced that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) will agree that his Bill is discriminatory. He even raised the issue himself by wondering what the courts could do if its application were to be questioned.

Mr. Speaker, we have had many opportunities to debate this matter in the House and I do not understand why not one single Member on the other side seems to share our concerns. I cannot believe that it is only in Liberal constituencies that there are single, separated or divorced people! For my part, I know that in the riding of Brome-Missisquoi, there are many single, separated and divorced people, and I do not understand why their Member of Parliament, who has a lot of influence with the Minister of National Health and Welfare because of her duties, did not come to their defence. I am still waiting for her speech in this House to defend people living alone, just as I am still waiting for her speech on the indexation of old age security pensions. I have read her statements with great disappointment, but this Bill was introduced to correct an unfair situation as we all know that people living alone face more hardship and are in a more difficult financial situation. However, in trying to correct one injustice, this Bill has created another one which is even more serious. Mr. Speaker, this is what we find difficult to accept, and I hope that, after having had the opportunity to listen to our many representations, our colleagues will reconsider and admit that you cannot discriminate against older people on the basis of their marital status.

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak briefly to the amendment to the Old Age Security Act which I put forward for consideration today at report stage of Bill C-26. The amendment concerns the definition of common-law spouse in Bill C-26.

As the Bill is currently drafted, the definition of common-law spouse requires that there be a public representation as husband and wife with a cohabitation period of at least three years where there is a bar to marriage and if there is no bar to marriage, this period is reduced to one year. With this amendment to Bill C-26, the Old Age Security Act, the definition of common-law spouse will simply state that the minimum cohabitation period required is one year.

When I spoke on Bill C-26 at second reading stage, I raised this matter as I could not see any reason that a distinction between common-law spouses who had a bar to marriage and those who did not might be of significance. In fact, it merely serves to discriminate against a small portion of potential beneficiaries. I am sure this discrimination was completely inadvertent, but I am pleased to have this opportunity to correct it.

As well, this amendment brings the Old Age Security Act in line with another piece of legislation which is currently at committee stage, Bill C-47, an Act respecting divorce and corollary relief. I would like to mention a couple of points that have come up. It should be clearly understood that this allowance is subject to an incomes test. The other thing I would like to point out is that it will go a long way toward assisting spouses who are between the ages of 60 and 64 inclusive who have lost their partners and have been discriminated against in the past. This amendment will ensure fairness in the application of the Act.

Because of the words of the previous speaker, I would like to mention one other thing. It is the intention that when this series of Acts is completed, it will be possible for two women to be drawing an allowance, one the legal wife and the other the common-law wife. After all, the reason they are drawing allowances is because they are both between the ages of 60 and 64. Although they are products of the shattered marriage, there is no difference in their need. Consequently, it would be possible for both of them to draw the allowance.

I would like to thank the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) for allowing me to speak to this amendment. I would suggest that it would be appropriate to hear from the Hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) who will present Motion No. 2 standing in her name.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I am both pleased and sad to rise to speak to Bill C-26. I am pleased, for we will speak before the present "minister of social injustice" and the former Minister of National Health and Welfare—

An Hon. Member: They are not listening!

Mr. Malépart: —in the Conservative Government of Mr. Clark who is now the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie). I wish he were still Minister of National Health and Welfare—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malépart: —because he was much more open. Mr. Speaker, I can understand why the "minister of social injustice" would rather not listen to my remarks, for he knows I am right.

Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment under consideration. But with respect to the principle of the Bill—

An Hon. Member: He is talking about you guys!

Mr. Malépart: —it still is a measure which discriminates against people living alone and others who are single, separated or divorced. As a token of appreciation on the part of this Conservative Government, 80,000 people in Canada will soon find out that they are being penalized and ineligible for the spouse's allowance—and 80 per cent of them are women—simply because they are single, separated or divorced.

As we have seen in the current debate concerning the elderly and the deindexation of old age security pensions, it is more of the same from a Government which operates on the strength of opinion polls, makes hackneyed pronouncements, a faithful image of their leader the Prime Minister. When those people promised to make widows and widowers eligible for the spouse's allowance, it was simply because they had to say something during the election campaign to attract the elderly.

Since the Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne) is in the House, I recall that she intervened during the election campaign after an article was published in the newspaper La Presse. She called a press conference right then and there to claim that the bad Liberals in her riding and the surrounding regions were saying that the Progressive Conservative Party would reduce old age security pensions. And I recall she had boasted that her Party would help widows and widowers as well as needy people living alone. I reacted immediately, called the journalist in question and explained to him that the Conservatives wanted to discriminate against people who are single, separated or divorced. The Minister of State then responded by saying: We will index pensions every three months. I said to the journalist: That is the way it is now. To that she replied: It is the Canada Pension Plan we will index every three months. I am not blaming her today, she did not know what this Government would do—deindex old age security pensions.

Mrs. Champagne: Do not put words in my mouth.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, if the Minister of State (Youth) wants it that way, I will get the newspaper articles, it is all there in black and white. If you want a debate on that issue, I would be pleased to argue with you.

Mr. Prud'homme: On channel 10!

Mr. Malépart: If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to get back to the Bill before the "minister of social injustice"—

An Hon. Member: He is not listening!

Mr. Malépart: —and next to him his colleague the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. I like to give credit where credit is due, and if the present Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development who, in 1979, had agreed that the spouse's allowance should continue to be paid to the beneficiary when he or she became—

• (1230)

[English]

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It may be due to the English translation, but I am wondering if it is appropriate for the Minister to be referred to continually as less than the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I wonder if that is appropriate conduct on behalf of the Hon. Member, as he is twisting the usage of a ministerial title.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not think it is unparliamentary.

[Translation]

The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how people translate, but I translate the feeling of the people, what they think of the current performance of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). They call him the Minister of Social Injustice—

Mr. Ferland: This is not what he said!

[English]

Mr. Malépart: All people in Canada.

[Translation]

I will not repeat Mrs. Denis' comments, in which she voiced what she thought of the Prime Minister. You have read it in the papers.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would like to give credit to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) a Progressive Conservative Member who, when he was Minister of National Health and Welfare in 1979, decided and rightly so, with the support of the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party at the time, to maintain the spouse's allowance after one of the spouses had deceased. At that time we, Liberals, said in committee: We are in agreement with that, Mr. Minister, but will your measure be retroactive because those who were not eligible before will be penalized? The Minister had given an open, gentlemanly answer: "Yes, that is reasonable. If you will allow me, I will go back to the Cabinet, because this involves extra expenditures, and I will return to you with an answer". The then Minister—he was not a Liberal but a Progressive Conservative Minister—was discharging his responsibility as a Minister of National Health and Welfare should, as the defender of senior citizens, of poor families—

An Hon. Member: Charlie Brown.

Mr. Malépart: —of persons in need as Mrs. Bégin did so well, my colleague is saying. It must be added to the credit of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development who was then Minister of National Health and Welfare, a determined man who won his point in Cabinet and everybody celebrated, not because it was a Liberal or a Progressive Conservative or a New Democratic victory, but because it was obtaining social justice for our seniors. Sadly, Mr. Speaker, I gave courteous notice to the current Minister of social injustice. Before the Christmas holidays, I started with that. Honestly, I believed it was a technical oversight, everybody being subject to human error. The Minister of National Health and Welfare was forewarned. I made representations. Some groups appeared before the Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs and they all expressed the same views. It was at the time when the Prime Minister, this government and even the Minister of social injustice were bragging that unlike the former government they were going to consult. All the groups came here, but the Minister did not budge. Not only was the minister unable to win his case in Cabinet to help women of 60 and 62 years of age, single, separated or divorced persons, maybe he did not have the guts to attend the meetings, but he only tried to sell the stories of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and act as spokesman for high finance in Ontario. He did not fulfil his role which was to act fairly towards our senior citizens in need. Never mind the rich people. One of my constituents, a battered woman, now abandoned by her husband, made sacrifices to rear her children alone and pay for their education. She is living on welfare alone, which does not mean below the poverty line but rather below the extreme poverty line. The present Minister of National Health and Welfare answered that woman as follows: My dear lady, I understand your concern, but the government will continue to help you through social welfare. In other words, what it means is: "My dear lady, you are poor and you find it difficult to make ends meet, but you should find solace in the thought that you are always on our mind". The government absolutely refuses to act to remedy the situation.

There is a 63 year old lady, a Mrs. Denis who lives in the vicinity and who does not belong to any senior citizens group who came yesterday on Parliament Hill to give the Prime Minister a piece of her mind, just like that, simply because she was outraged. When she spoke, she expressed what each and every senior citizen in this country feels about the Prime Minister and his government. This is not something we should be proud about, for the Parliamentary system and people involved in politics really suffer when a Prime Minister is taken to task like that. And if we suffer, it is because of the actions of a number of individuals. We have now reached the report stage. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) again will have the opportunity to correct me if I am wrong when I say that his responsibility is not to stand up for big business, but that he is here to do what Mrs. Bégin, his predecessor and former Minister of Social Affairs, used to do and what a Conservative colleague of his did more recently, namely, to stand up in Cabinet and ask for additionsl funds to help these people. The Minister of National Health and Welfare is well aware that when he grants the spouse's allowance, which is similar to the Old Age Security pension for those on Social Welfare, the government gives with one hand and saves 50 per cent with the other. The Minister is indeed well aware of that. It has nothing to do with party politics; it is simply a matter of social justice for all the people concerned.

I remember, on Remembrance Day, the three party leaders and their supporters in the House rising to pay tribute to those who had lost their lives on the battlefield. I wondered at the time who was going to take care of all these women who had to live away from their husbands who had gone to war and who had suffered because of the war, and whom the government rewards today with a firm "No". In each and every riding of this country, there is at least one person between 60 and 62 years of age who is single. She is generally the eldest in a family of some 10 children who has spent her live in a rural community and quit school very early to help her parents raise her brothers and sisters. And now, having paid her dues to society, she has to try and find a job on the labour market, because she is told that she should have married and become a widow.

Mr. Speaker, I realize that my time is about to expire, but you can rest assured that I will continue to press my point when we deal with the next amendment.

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have a second amendment to propose to Clause 11. This amendment would result in a change to the Old Age Security Act to reduce the period of cohabitation to one year in the case of common law unions, which change would come into effect immediately after Royal Assent. Without this amendment, the present definition requiring a minimum of three years of cohabitation where there is an obstacle to remarriage would remain in effect until September and deprive a number of people who have been living in such a situation for over a year and less than three from being eligible to make use of this provision.

• (1240)

[English]

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on Bill C-26 this afternoon as well. First, let me say that I am pleased that under the provisions of Bill C-26, approximately 85,000 widows and widowers in this country will now receive the spouse's allowance. Those 85,000 people, of course, are primarily women. I come from a riding in Saskatchewan which is very much a rural riding. It has a lot of small towns and villages and there are a lot of retired farmers. As I travel through those small towns in rural Saskatchewan I find that in home after home there is a woman living by herself. For some reason, women tend to outlive men, perhaps particularly in Saskatchewan. I find there is a tremendous amount of poverty among those women in my riding. They are living in dire straits with very little to live on. Life is very difficult for them. There have been many sad cases in my riding year after year where a spouse has passed away—almost certainly the man—and the wife is left with no money whatsoever. She has had to turn to social services to get some money in order to buy her daily food, to pay her heating bills or to buy clothing. So, Mr. Speaker, I welcome, indeed, the Bill which is before the House today in terms of the fact that it will provide a spouse's allowance for some 85,000 people.

At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I would like to reiterate the argument our Party has made many times before in this House with respect to pensions. I think primarily, of course, of the person who sat near me for many years in the House of Commons, Mr. Stanley Knowles, the former Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre. He made many, many speeches in this House with respect to pensions. He was the champion sans exception of the cause of pensioners in Canada. Before him, of course, there was J. S. Woodsworth, the former national Leader of the CCF who also made the cause of pensions a very important issue. If we go back to the beginning, we find that it was Mr. Woodsworth and a few Hon. Members of this House, along with the Liberal Government of Mackenzie King, who decided to bring in the first pension plan in Canada. It happened at that time to be a minority Parliament and Mr. Woodsworth and his colleagues in those days said, "We'll keep this Government in power for a little while in return for some good progressive legislation for Canadians", and the primary result of that legislation was the first old age pension plan in this country. The pension was very small. It did not take effect until, I believe, age 70, and there was a means test attached to it. But because of J. S. Woodsworth and a small group of Hon. Members of Parliament many years ago using their power in a minority Parliament as leverage, we received in this country our first old age pension plan.

The legacy was passed on when Mr. Woodsworth passed away and, in a by-election in 1942, Stanley Knowles was elected to this House. He took up the cause of championing the needs of senior citizens and pensioners in this country. He made speech after speech in this House over the years about the problems senior citizens face. He tried to get the pensions improved so that the people who built this country, who laid its foundation, could live in dignity. He made many speeches about the problems of widows and widowers and the fact that many of these people do not have money to live in dignity in these small towns and cities of our land. So it is his legacy, I suppose, that we bring into this debate today.

One thing I am sure he would have pointed out is that, in a way, this legislation is really discriminatory because it applies only to widows and widowers between the ages of 60 years and 65 years. If a person is between the ages of 60 and 65 and is divorced, he or she does not qualify for the spouse's allowance. If a person is between the ages of 60 and 65, is single, has never been married, even though he or she is poor and would qualify on the basis of the means test, he or she would not qualify because of not being a widow or widower.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, in this 20th century, having proclaimed a few months ago Section 15 the equality section of the Charter of Rights, are we doing the right thing? We are discriminating on the basis of marital status, on the basis of whether it is a marriage in the traditional sense or a common law marriage. The amendments moved in the House today will, I guess, bring this legislation in line with the Divorce Act, which will become law in this country in a few months time. I just wonder whether it is right and proper that we should have that kind of discrimination built into the Bill which is before us today, although, as I said before, I support extending the spouse's allowance to those 85,000 Canadians who need it, many in my own riding and most of them women, I would assume. It relieves these women who have no other source of income of having to make that trip downtown to ask for social aid.

I think as far as it goes, Mr. Speaker, this legislation is a very good move. This legislation will cost, I believe, $190 million in the next year, and in the first year it comes fully into effect it will cost $300 million. I think that is a very good thing in terms of those 85,000 people. But when it comes to the single people of this country—and according to statistics there are a lot of single poor, both men and women, living in big cities in small one-room apartments, living in small towns in little tiny houses—between the ages of 60 years and 65 years and unable to work,—those people will not qualify. Why is it that a married person should qualify over someone who is not? That really makes me hesitate. Why is it that someone divorced because of incompatibility or whatever, would not qualify while her next door neighbour, whose husband has passed away, would qualify even though she has exactly the same kind of background and economic ability to pay her own way? I think we should look at those very important questions.

What I would like to argue for, Mr. Speaker, is bringing down the pension age year by year to the age of 60 for everyone, and it should be universal just as medical care in this country is universal. The basic old age pension is now universal for people at the age of 65 years or over. I think we should bring down, one year at a time, as their country can afford it, the pension age to age 60 years for each and every citizen and not just for widows and widowers who happen to live in poverty.

This benefit also, of course, has attached to it a means test. One receives the spouse's benefit if one needs it because one has very little or no other source of income. Of course, we all want to help people in our society who are in need. We hear Hon. Members of the House and members of the media sometimes saying, "Why does Pierre Trudeau need a pension? Why does someone that wealthy need a pension?" Why does the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) need a pension? He is probably a pretty good farmer and will be a fairly wealthy guy when he becomes 60 years of age.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Why does Ed need a limousine?

Mr. Nystrom: I did not hear the interjection but I believe it was confirmation of the Minister of Transport's wealth. The arguments are made that we should take all this money and spend it on the poor in this country. But the problem with that, Mr. Speaker, is that we then have to establish a means test. We would have a ruthless division of classes in our country—one that has and one that has not—and that creates a lot of turmoil.

● (1250)

Mr. Mazankowski: Are you arguing for or against a pension for me?

Mr. Nystrom: I am arguing for a pension for him regardless of his wealth, regardless of how much money he may or may not have, because they should be universal. That is my whole point. I support this Bill because it helps 85,000 widows and widowers, but I do so with a certain amount of hesitation. It discriminates against single and divorced people. The concept of universality is once again going out of the window. Regardless of one's background, we should all qualify for the pension. If you have children, you should qualify for the family allowance. If you are an older and poorer person, whether you are married or single, you should still qualify for the spouse's allowance. That is what I hesitate about regarding this Bill. So I urge the Minister to bring in legislation as soon as possible which does not discriminate against single or divorced people.

I want to conclude by quoting the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) when she spoke to the House on May 10, 1984, when she was in the Official Opposition. She said:

> The fact that we have 600,000 elderly Canadians living in poverty in a country as rich and bountiful as Canada, in a society supposedly as compassionate and humane as ours, is a national disgrace.

We have a lot of senior citizens living in poverty. She said it was over 600,000. A recent Ontario report said that 42 per cent of pensioners in Ontario live in poverty.

Mr. Mazankowski: There will be more with the new Government.

Mr. Nystrom: I conclude by asking the Government, why is it partially deindexing pensions for these people when it has those facts, when it knows about the suffering and misery? Why is it doing this when this will put more people into poverty, with those who are poor already becoming even poorer? I think the Government should listen to the sentiments of the Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands and apply them while in government. If not, this will be a one-term Government, and that might indeed be the best thing for the people of Canada.

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, while listening to the Hon. Member it came to my mind that the government Department which deals with social housing, the CMHC, just announced the closure of about 17 offices across the country and the downgrading of another 17. One of those was in the Minister's riding in Kingston.

I think most of the important points have been made by previous speakers and perhaps I could just add a couple of things which have not been mentioned. Whenever I hear someone talking about extending or increasing pensions to people over the age of 60, I always think about those people in institutions subsidized by the federal and provincial Governments. Regardless of what pension increases the House of Commons votes quarterly, or of what extension is granted to new groups of people, it should be kept in mind that people in institutions such as senior citizens' homes or nursing homes in Newfoundland or anywhere else, see no increases. If you say that you are extending or increasing the pension as of January 1, they do not see an increase. They listen to the news and hear that they are going to qualify now for an additional pension or that their pension is being increased, but they do not see the increase. The point is that the money these people receive is determined by the provinces and is called a comfort allowance. It is a strange system we have which makes how much money you receive from the federal Government depend on the province you are in. It depends upon the decision of the provincial administration. I suppose you could go right through our social security system and you would see the same principle in effect.

I have listened to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and other speakers talk about this measure being income tested. As one speaker outlined, possibly two people could qualify, one being the legal or common-law spouse of the other. In that situation I can see disputes arising and appeals being made to the Department of National Health and Welfare. Well, there is a principle that the Department has been following which is very confusing. I suppose, for the sake of federal-provincial relations, since the new Government took over, it is a good thing. I am referring specifically to pensions from that particular Department which are in dispute or under appeal. Regardless of whether it is the OAS, the GIS, or the allowance under this Bill, a disability pension or whatever, if the appeal, say, takes a year and the persons concerned received social assistance in the meantime, that is, welfare, they are not told that what they are to receive will have first gone to the provincial Department of Social Services concerned.

Since the new Government took over this is done in two days. Either the provincial Department hears about the person applying and goes directly to the Department of National Health and Welfare and tells them they owe us x number of dollars from that person's cheque retroactive to such and such a date, or else the social assistance officer goes to the individual who qualifies for the federal payment and says, "We want you to sign on the dotted line that you received x number of dollars from us and we are going to recover that from the Department of National Health and Welfare". As I say, it is good for federal-provincial relations but is not very good for the person who qualifies for the pension. You could have someone who is owed $8,000 in disability payments by the federal Government because his claim goes back four years, but he is then sent a message that his cheque has been sent to the provincial Government so that they can claim all the money he received from the Department of Social Assistance.

The Government has done something else with which I vehemently disagree. Since the Government came into power it has centralized in Ottawa the sending of cheques to people from this federal government Department. Since March 31, people in the Province of Newfoundland have not received their cheques on time. They have been a week or nine days late because of that change in administration. I suppose the post office is at fault, but certainly the Minister of National Health and Welfare can go to the Minister responsible for the post office to ensure that those cheques arrive on time.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare should realize, as should every Cabinet Minister, that everyone receiving a pension from this government Department is expecting it on a specified date. I have received letters from people saying that for the first time they had to go to the local merchant to borrow food while waiting for a cheque for which they never had to wait before. The Minister of National Health and Welfare should look into that matter. The shortcomings of this legislation have been pointed out and perhaps the Government will open its eyes and extend this benefit to everyone between the ages of 60 and 65.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I would like to join in the debate on Bill C-26, an Act to amend the Old Age Security Act. It is a very important piece of legislation which goes some way toward correcting an imbalance in society but, in our view, it does not go far enough. The Government indicated that it was going to make this change on November 5, 1984, but it will not be implemented until September. It will take the Conservative Government almost 11 months to implement a measure which could have been implemented last fall.

Mr. Malone: We can't implement when you are filibustering.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, it was not we who scheduled six, seven, eight, or nine opposition days in a row. We had a great time telling the Government all the things it was doing wrong, but the Government was not bringing forth legislation. We would have been quite happy then, as we would have been last November, to have had this legislation implemented. However, the Government, in its collective Conservative wisdom, decided that it had to move slowly.

The Act which extends the spouse's allowance to all low-income widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 65 excludes a large section of the population in that age group. I speak of those individuals who never married or became divorced or separated from their spouses. We are putting them into a separate category. Even though their income may be the same as that of a widow or widower, under this Bill they are not entitled to support from the people of Canada.

The real issue is whether we should be treating all people who are over 60 equally regardless of their marital status. I think we should. I would encourage the Government to ensure that this Act is changed to give all Canadians who are 60 years of age and over and need additional income the support that they deserve. I do not think it is fair to tell single, divorced, and separated Canadians who do not have enough money that they must go on welfare. These people have worked for years and years in the service of the country by keeping the economy moving. We have a responsibility to treat them in an equitable manner.

This issue was raised in a discussion paper entitled Equality Issues in Federal Law under the auspices of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General (Mr. Crosbie). I will quote one section which deals deals with the spouse's allowance program. It says:

> The spouse's allowance program raises another issue. Currently the allowance is paid to the spouse of a pensioner between the ages of 60 and 64 and to the surviving spouse if the spouse in receipt of Old Age Security dies before the survivor reaches the age of 65. There is currently a proposal to extend this benefit to all widows and widowers between the ages of 60 and 64. However, if an individual is single, separated or divorced and aged 60-64, no allowance is paid, even if the individual's needs meet the test for benefit to spouses. A decision has been made to allocate funds to married couples as opposed to single individuals in the age bracket 60-64. One of the rationales for this is that unmarried persons can get assistance from provincial welfare programs, although they receive smaller benefits. Given that there are only limited resources to provide for needy people, this group was selected. The question is whether marital status is an appropriate reason for choosing between equally needy people, particularly when the criteria for receipt of an allowance is need.

There can be no difference, Mr. Speaker, need is need is need. If you need money to survive, it does not matter whether you have never been married or are now a widow or widower. Justice suggests that we should treat them equally.

In the last Parliament, a committee of the House examined pensions. There was a minority report filed by the former Member for Nanaimo-Alberni, Mr. Ted Miller. In it is a section entitled "People Under 65". It reads:

During the course of its hearings, the Task Force received submissions discussing the plight of people, largely between the ages of 55 and 64, who are ineligible for benefits under any public pension program. Though we had neither the mandate nor the time to examine the particular needs of this group, there was concern among witnesses and Task Force members that many people under 65 face severe hardships with little support from public sources.

These problems frequently include ineligibility for any sort of public pension benefits and long or frequent periods of unemployment. The community from where the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) comes and the community of Atikokan in my riding have endured the shut-down of basic industries. There are people who worked in those industries for 30 or 40 years who are still in their mid-fifties or early sixties and cannot get jobs. Even if the jobs were available, due to the severe conditions under which they worked in the mines, their bodies are not as willing or able as they used to be. If we were to provide some support for those who are 60 years of age and over, we would at least raise their standard of living.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I encourage the Government to accept our proposal and provide full justice for all who are 60 years of age and over in order that they too can get the income support which they need to survive in our society today.

[Translation]

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I am also very happy to take part in this debate on Bill C-26, which is in itself an excellent initiative for the people who will benefit from its provisions, namely the widows.

Nevertheless, I find this Bill clearly discriminatory and odious in the way it treats certain people.

During the last few weeks, many of my colleagues had the honour and the privilege of tabling a number of petitions which in their preamble deplored the discrimination and the class distinction the Government was making with respect to people who were separated, divorced or single. I think this aptly describes a situation that I find totally unacceptable and highly reprehensible.

Mr. Speaker, I shall, if I may, go back briefly in time, and recall that Canada's divorce legislation was originated by an Act of Parliament passed in 1968. At the time, and this is, after all, not so long ago, couples who had experienced a certain number of problems were being given a chance to legalize their situation. We must not forget that if a person who had the misfortune to have made an unhappy marriage for which there was absolutely no remedy, then decided to take advantage of this legislation, that person was almost automatically singled out and ostracized by the community. These are the people who will be hurt by Bill C-26. Because of the law and the attitudes of our society at the time, in 1968 and 1970, divorced persons were seen as people who were different, and families felt a sense of shame when a member of the family got a divorce. These are the people who today, in many cases, are over 60 years old. These are the very people who are being told today that because of the Budget, they are going to be deprived of what their friends will be entitled to because they are widows or widowers. So I think it is despicable to deprive these people of what in the circumstances would seem to be essential and fundamental.

We must also recall that in the late 60s and early 70s, in almost every divorce where there were children, custody was usually given to the mother. At the time, our social legislation was not as advanced as it is today, and here again, these women have been victimized, in addition to being branded as second-class citizens and having to suffer the ostracism of their neighbours and the effects this had on their relations in their community. They were responsible for the education of their children, they had very limited financial resources. These are the people who in many cases went through absolute hell, and today, now they are 60, they are being told that the provisions of Bill C-26 do not apply to them but if the economy improves, we might review the situation and consider the problem.

The fact that they are being excluded on such ridiculous grounds is, I think, an incredible insult to all these people who are divorced, separated or single. It is an unconscionable affront to these people who have the same rights and privileges as anyone else. It has often been said in this House, and rightly so, that the Canadian Constitution was so good for Canada because it prevented class distinction and put all Canadians on an equal footing.

In my opinion, in view of the way this Bill is designed, it is an extremely regressive measure. We are regressing 15 or 20 years in the past because of a measure which creates a social class of needy victims who have already been victimized in the past and on whom has now been placed an intolerable burden.

Everyone recognizes that 80,000 people will be penalized by the Bill and will be deprived of this assistance which, in many cases, their spouse will be able to obtain. Everyone also recognizes that the very great majority of these 85,000 people are women, women who have been fighting and organizing for years to gain an equality, a justice and an equity which are still not apparent in this Bill.

I therefore believe that, as parliamentarians, we have a duty to ask this Government to put this whole issue back on the table and to consider granting these 80,000 people the most basic justice if we do not want them to become innocent victims.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we shall witness a reversal on this issue within the next few days and that this will be followed by amendments which will ensure that these people will be treated more fairly.

This afternoon, an amendment was introduced to make common law spouses eligible for these benefits. If I may, I would like to enumerate all the problems which could be the result of trying to identify these people through such a mechanism.

Will the Government be able to intrude in the private life of people to determine whether they are entitled to the benefits or not?

My colleague is telling me with good reason that 80,000 people are being branded in Canada at a time where we are trying to see justice done and to make sure that all Canadians will be treated fairly according to the principles of social justice, and in closing I would like to ask all my colleagues to reconsider this issue and to try to understand what will be the life of these men and women who will be deprived of the benefits of Bill C-26 if it is not amended.

Mr. Lapierre: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) on a point of order.

Mr. Lapierre: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Earlier during the debate, I referred to the war and everyone understood that I meant the 1939-45 war. Unfortunately, I said 1914-18, but everyone understood that I was obviously referring to a widow of the 1939-45 war.

• (1320)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Very well. The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): In any event, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member was not even born in either war!

Mr. Lapierre: Not even the Korean war!

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say a few words about this Bill which we support and, as you know, we do not intend to delay the proceedings at the report stage. I would simply remind the House that we are considering Motion No. 1 in the name of the Government to amend:

Old Age Security Act

Clause 1 by striking out lines 10 to 14 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor: "lived with that person for at least one year."

The effect of this amendment or this motion is of course to implement a recommendation of the committee and the Minister to reduce from three years—the previous requirement—to one year the time for becoming eligible under this measure. That is how it is going to be once the Bill is passed, it is defined as living together for one year.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a few comments on Bill C-26 as well as on the significance of this amendment. As you may recall, Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to extend the spouse's allowance program to needy people living alone and aged 60 to 64. Most people affected by this measure are women. It is therefore an important Bill which responds to a social and economic need in our society. However, Mr. Speaker, only widows and widowers are eligible under this Bill, so it excludes people who are single, separated or divorced. Again I say that 80,000 people between the ages of 60 and 64 would be eligible if the Government had been more generous towards them and had seen fit to establish a more extensive and comprehensive program. This measure therefore discriminates against certain people, most of them, I repeat, Canadian women aged 60 to 64 who fail to meet the spouse's allowance eligibility requirements.

Mr. Speaker, in my riding, and I find this example particularly striking because it was part of my life, there are many female members of religious orders who have taken a vow of chastity and live in a state of celibacy. These women are not eligible for the benefits provided under this Bill, because they do not meet the requirements: they are neither widows nor widowers—there are also male members of religious orders—and I think this discriminates against these people, should they, for whatever reason, wish to leave their religious order and live a secular life.

Mr. Speaker, the Progressive Conservative Government, which is so proud of its consultation policy, did not bother to consult people between the ages of 60 and 64 before tabling this measure, that I am sure of, because if they had, in the riding of Ottawa-Vanier at least they would have met a lot of women, single women who have worked hard in an environment that is not always easy, in a city like Ottawa that is largely dependent on Parliament,on the Government, a public service city. We all know that until recently, the majority of public servants—and it may still be the case today—have been women, many of of whom are between the ages of 60 and 64, and were left with an income or pension that puts them on the poverty line. If we had only bothered to think about these people, if we had considered all these women who in many cases have worked hard for very low salaries, and who are now retired and have no security, Mr. Speaker, and who today, we might as well admit it, are in many cases forced to depend on provincial or federal grants for housing, for medical drugs, for transportation, and for a host of other services which they would much rather pay for themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to set the record straight on this piece of Government legislation which we are endorsing because it does extend an existing program to a substantial number of Canadians. However, once again, we earnestly request this Government to expand this measure to another 80,000 men and women who should be eligible but are not covered by this measure.

[English]

Unfortunately, while supporting the Bill—we will not delay it and I think I am the last one to speak on this side, although perhaps there is some other Member who might want to speak—I want to repeat the point again that I am disappointed and so are my colleagues in the Liberal Party that the measure is not extended to deserving Canadians, those who chose not to marry and those who are separated and divorced. They are the ones being excluded from this extended coverage. I regret that.

In my day-to-day meetings with constituents, men and women have said to me, "We feel disenfranchised". I say this with a lot of heart because they feel they are being left out of a very important program. We have tabled petitions. I have personally tabled several petitions asking the Government to reconsider this measure and to modify it so that these people who have chosen not to marry, who are divorced or separated can be included.

The Conservative Government, Mr. Speaker, has missed a golden opportunity for meaningful reform. It has wallowed in indecision. God knows that the Conservatives are undecided even on Old Age Security. Nobody knows where the Conservatives stand. One day you hear the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) say something and the next day you hear the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) say something else. Canadians, especially seniors, would like to have the assurance that this Government thinks about them, cares for them and will give them the security they deserve without adding anxiety, which is such a difficult and common feeling among our elderly. Anxiety is something seniors do not need. Anxiety has been created by the Conservative Government over these pensions. Anxiety has been created by indecision on the part of the Government as to where the Government is going and what it is going to do for the senior citizens.

If the Hon. Member on the other side has something to say, he should stand up and make a speech for 10 minutes. I will sit down and invite him to do so right now.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure again to participate in this debate. I think there are certain close parallels that reflect and mirror this piece of legislation and the pension issue in the recent Budget. It seems that to this Government numbers mean nothing. It seems that to this Government individuals mean nothing. We talk about thousands upon thousands of individuals who are between the ages of 60 and 64 some perhaps are not married, and some perhaps are separated or divorced. Do they mean less to the Government than those who have a different type of marital status? We as a society cannot afford to discriminate among individuals on that sort of basis.

If we are prepared to move and move in a progressive direction as the Bill has done, we should be prepared to move progressively all the way for all individuals, recognizing that the problem facing a 64-year old married person is the same as the problem faced by the 64-year old woman in Sault Ste. Marie who may not be married or who is divorced. We must begin to realize that if we are prepared to recognize those problems and if we are prepared to say we have to help those between the ages of 60 and 64 because they cannot help themselves, then we cannot allow or afford to discriminate. We cannot allow marital status to dictate whether or not they receive something. The only basis for the decision should be need. If a divorced or separated person has that need, that financial compensation should be there as it is for married people.

We are losing sight of the lot of the individual. We are looking at it in terms of thousands. Perhaps when we look at it in that light, it simply becomes a statistic, and we throw statistics around loosely and easily. We should narrow it down to the lot of the individual, to the specific needs of individuals who feel and know that they are being discriminated against.

We have received letters from such individuals suggesting that they need the money as much as other people do. They ask why they are being kept out of it when other people are not. They are the same types of letters as the ones we are receiving on the pension issue, saying that we have to get our financial house in order, that Canada is a great country, that it is full of opportunity, but asking why the decision was made to bring down the deficit on their backs. Pensioners were told that their pensions were a sacred trust. A commitment was given that their pensions would not be touched or altered. We are involved in the same debate at this point, because we are talking about a commitment to people which should be honoured.

When we talk about commitment, we should also talk about consistency, honesty and integrity. If the Government is prepared to make that social contract with the elderly, if it is prepared to say to these people that it will not touch their pensions, then it ought to follow through on those commitments. Anything short of that is simply not good enough. That debate is very much relevant to and alive in Bill C-26. If we are prepared to tell Canadian society that we, as a Government and as a Parliament, are prepared to step in and offer assistance, we ought to cover the entire clientele. If we are not prepared to do that, perhaps I would rather not do what we are doing. I would rather not do it in a piecemeal fashion and at the same time boast and say how great we are because we are moving in such a direction. It ought to be done with some sense of compassion for all individuals who feel the need for that financial assistance.

Indeed, the Bill points in the right direction. I do not think anyone in the House of Commons would rise and suggest that this is somehow completely unwarranted. It is moving in the right direction, but why not enlarge it and encompass the entire Canadian community? Why not enlarge it to make it more progressive? Why can the Government not admit that while it is moving in the right direction, that direction is not wide enough? Why can it not admit that while it is trying to satisfy the needs and aspirations of that community, it is not fulfilling all that is desired? Why can the Government not rise in its place and say that it will be extended to those individuals against whom the Bill discriminates? That is leadership, that is conviction. It would mean rising and admitting some shortcomings. It is the same argument that we have debated for the last two and a half weeks on the whole question of pension deindexation.

It is leadership to admit to the country that a mistake was made in the budget paper, that it was a regressive mistake and that the Government reneged on a promise. That is leadership. Leadership is not showing Canadians that it is prepared to be tough, not to back down, or that it is prepared to be arrogant, despite the pleas, calls, letters, protests and questions which have been asked during Question Period.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the Hon. Member please speak to the motions before the House?

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I thought I was. I was trying to indicate that on this particular motion the Government has an opportunity, which it could take, to make the Bill more compassionate and fair. That was the message I was trying to bring to the attention of the House, in an attempt to bridge the current debate which is gaining in public momentum on Bill C-26.

The Government should say that it is moving in the right direction but that that direction should be expanded to include individuals such as the ones who have written to us and perhaps to Hon. Members opposite. These individuals are asking the Government not to discriminate on the basis of whether they are divorced, separated or married. They say that the decision should be based upon need, fairness and age. If it is good for one 62-year old person of a certain marital status, it should be good for others.

I believe those are the issues on which Hon. Members in my Party and in the NDP have been rising. We are speaking to the fairness and legitimacy of this particular proposal. We cannot afford to allow a Bill to pass which discriminates against certain individuals. It is our task and responsibility to rise in our places, not merely to give the Bill our blessing, but to play the role for which we were elected. We do not mean to be obstructionist, but it is our role in the House to improve upon and comment upon legislation, and to point out a certain direction which we think the Government should take. Indeed, it would be leadership if the Government were prepared to expand the Bill to make it more progressive. If the Government did so, I am sure there would be no opposition; Hon. Members would not rise to talk on another subject related to the Bill. Reciprocal leadership would be displayed on the part of this Party. We would say that the Government did the correct thing and, therefore, we would give it speedy passage. That is leadership, not only on the government side but also on the opposition side.

I believe that the role of the Opposition is not to obstruct. It is to ensure that the legislation is what Canadians want, not what the Government wants, not what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or his Government may think Canadians want. When we talk about this particular issue, Canadian want fairness for all people who are 60 to 64 years of age, regardless of their marital status. When we talk about fairness, we are talking about pensioners who say: "Leave our pensions intact and give us full indexation".

The message for the Government on this Bill and on the pensions issue is: Let us provide some leadership and give Canadians the legislation they demand and rightfully deserve.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In that there is one minute remaining, could I ask a question of the Hon. Member who just sat down?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I was about to ask for unanimous consent of the House, but I do not think the Hon. Member would get it.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I want to speak on this Bill, particularly as it relates to the riding of Spadina. It extends, for low-income widows and widowers, the spousal allowance to about 85,000 people in Canada. Of course we support that. One has to; I am sure it will be unanimously supported.

This leads me to asking the following question: Why take a course which benefits a very limited number of needy people? There are many equally needy single and divorced people. In fact, for whatever reasons, there are a great many divorced people in Canada, many of whom are or will soon be of pensionable age. There is also a growing number of single people in the country. This benefit is being extended to a relatively small group and, in a sense, to a shrinking group, according to present population trends. This is very evident in the riding of Spadina. As between the 1971 census and the 1981 census in Spadina, there was a sharp increase in the number of single people. Most of these people will not ever be in line for the benefit of this legislation. Many of those have low incomes; many of those are going to be hurt by the Government's deindexation of the Old Age Security pensions next year and in the years ahead. Why does the Government try to kid the public by taking away with a shovel and putting back with a teaspoon? It takes away from all the pensioners in Canada, starting next January and increasing cumulatively every year, $100 a year, then $200 a year, then $300 a year and so on. It takes that away from them and then it undertakes to give back to a few.

If the country were as poor as the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) tells us it is, perhaps it would be justified to say that it can only give to a few, although it is not clear why it should be given to a widower and not to a divorced person. Why is a widower or a widow more needy than a divorced person, or a single person? That is not clear. Of course, in fact the country is not anywhere nearly as poor as the Prime Minister has said. This country makes huge tax gifts to people who need such gifts very little or not at all. It makes them on the worn out, discredited claim that those people will use the money to create jobs. That is a theory that the former Liberal Government worked to death during the last dozen years, and this present Tory Government is doing the same thing, to take from the senior citizens in order to give to the friends of the Government and to try to cover what it is doing by giving back a little bit to a tiny number of senior citizens.

The people in Spadina are not fooled. They are not amused. They have been out petitioning with a petition that states the facts clearly as to what will happen in 1986 and 1987. Generally—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Could I please ask the Hon. Member to be very, very specific at the report stage of the Bill at which we are and speak precisely on either Motion No. 1 or Motion No. 2?

Mr. Gormley: What is the motion, Dan?

Some Hon. Members: What is the motion?

Mr. Heap: These people want to know what the motion is. If they don't know—he is asking what the motion is, Mr. Speaker. He clearly does not know.

Mr. Gormley: We know.

Mr. Heap: The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the clear intent of both these motions is to cover up with a few dollars what has been taken in many dollars. The people in Spadina will not be fooled. I thank you.

Some Hon. Members: Question, question.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, the reason why I am taking part in this debate is quite simple: it is somewhat the continuation of the debate held the other evening, and I am under the impression that the government still does not understand what it means to look after our less fortunate citizens.

You referred a while ago to relevancy and I will readily stick as much as possible to the proposal so that my colleagues will not have to call me to order.

I still have actual cases in mind. I have always thought that in politics one has to state one's case clearly, because people will only grasp the issues if one understands perfectly the purposes we are trying to achieve. Therefore, I will refer to some examples I gave the other evening about the homes located in my constituency, which you know quite well, Mr. Speaker, as I know yours also. There are homes for senior citizens in both our ridings.

The bill now under consideration is exclusively meant for people who have a status in the community, either widows or widowers, and my colleague from Montréal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), my colleague from Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), my NDP colleague as well as my colleague from York have explained the matter very clearly. People of the same age are excluded because they have a different status, and now we are told that if they have been living together for one year, they may qualify. But I know of specific cases involving people that I met, and I know that this is also a problem for my colleagues in this House.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mrs. Bertrand) knows of many such cases in her constituency. My friend and colleague from Terrebonne (Mr. Toupin)—I could name them all—we have the same kind of people and the same kind of problems. The actual problem in a home that I will call, for example, Berri-Lajeunesse, in Montréal, is that people there have little money and managed, as I said recently, to find a place to live, let us say apartment 404, and because they have a different status, they get a pension, unlike their neighbour who is divorced or separated or still, which is most unfair, who is single. I would like to draw the attention of my colleagues especially to the case of the single woman. We all know, we especially from Quebec, and I would like to draw the attention of my English-speaking colleagues——especially from Quebec, who have known in the past, not at this time and not in the future unfortunately, but in the past. There was always one person in these families who sacrified most of the time for all kinds of reasons but whom happened to be the one who did not get married, because Thérese, Pauline, Céline and Marc looked after papa and mama, after grandpapa and grandmama. There was always one in our families. The example could be multiplied; in every district you will find that. These people have consecrated——devoted their lives taking care of their old parents while others have married and those who have married, who have raised children, who have even become widows or widowers, will qualify. But their sisters or brothers who remained single cannot qualify. I hope I have very well understood the thrust of this legislation.

[English]

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, at first glance, we find this shocking, deplorable. I want to warn my friends opposite: We will support the legislation . . . Why? Because we want to give more money to people who have long been ignored, but still we cannot refuse to consider a group which will benefit immediately. This is why I assure you . . . I did not consult anyone but I think the agreement is . . . we will vote for this legislation as soon as possible, probably today or tomorrow or within the next few days. But still I would like this House to consider the situation of those who have been ignored, and as I said, the ones that are ignored so very often as we all know, and it has been said time and again, are mainly women, because they live longer—the average life expectancy being there to prove it—and most of all the lonely, single women. They are again being ignored in this legislation.

I am aware that we are going to support this legislation. However, I would appreciate it so much if the Government, my colleagues, the most distinguished Member for Brome-Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) when I say these things, I believe in them, and I know she can exercise her charming, composed and benevolent influence because this often is more productive with the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney)—could be convinced that something will have to be done in the future for those who have been ignored by this legislation on which we are getting ready to vote today or tomorrow or in the days ahead as I said.

In my view, in the name of fairness, we must make good, I would not say that injustice but to say the least, that oversight.

There are so many things that could be said on that, Mr. Speaker, and I am somewhat amazed that there has been no reference to past experience.

When I first came here, several years ago, I remember very well, at that time, the universal pensionable age was 70 and all the political parties said . . . and certainly, my honourable friend, the ever-charming and distinguished Member for Brome-Missisquoi and Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister will remember as well as I do that in our election platforms, we wanted to promise old age security pension at age 65. What did we do then? Under the leadership of an extraordinary Prime Minister, because I served under that man, the Right Honourble Lester B. Pearson—I have always been known to be a "Pearsonian", since very often one identifies oneself with the name of the Prime Minister under whom one was first elected. Then your new Members could be called "Mulroneyans", including you, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Gormley: Laurier!

Mr. Prud'homme: —the "Trudeauists" . . . My colleague says that perhaps it was under Laurier. I must recognize that he was and will remain in Canadian history one of our great Prime Ministers.

• (1350)

[English]

Mr. Gormley: What about Laurier?

Mr. Prud'homme: He understood very well. Laurier understood very well what Canada was all about. He better than anyone in this country understood absolutely how this country came about. If my colleague would like me to speak about Sir Wilfrid Laurier, I will do so some other time.

I remember that Lester B. Pearson made a proposal that was accepted. At that time, we thought we did not have enough money to give pensions to people who were between the ages of 65 and 70. Some Hon. Members here will remember that, and if I am wrong about it, and I do not think I am known to be too arrogant, I will not mind being corrected. I remember that the new plan of Mr. Pearson was that since we could not provide the money for everyone at that time, we would provide pensions that first year for all those who were 69 years of age. The next year—

Mrs. Bertrand: That's what we are doing now.

Mr. Prud'homme: Yes, but to everyone. I want my hon. friend to understand that we provided pensions for everyone, not just the bachelors. The following year, we provided pensions for those who were 68, then 67, and then 66, and then we achieved the provision of pensions for everyone between the ages of 65 and 70. There was no discrimination. Now we are being asked to forget 80,000 people for the benefit of others who——are widows or widowers.

I think that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare realizes now that there is something unfair about this legislation for our brothers and sisters who, althougth 60 to 65 years of age, are not eligible.

I am glad to repeat in front of my whip—

Mr. Gauthier: Your favorite whip!

Mr. Prud'homme: —of my favorite whip that I hope the House will vote on this bill as expeditiously as possible. However, we can imagine the discrimination against some older people living in homes for the aged because it is even worse for senior citizens who live together than for those who live alone by themselves. In the same building, on the same floor, there are some senior citizens who get the pension and others who do not, simply because they are divorced or separated from a spouse who did not deserve them, or simply because they are single. These are the people who will be discriminated against as of September 1. Therefore, I ask, urge and beg the government to think these things over and to arrive at a solution with a view to avoiding a repetition of this unfortunate situation.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to take part in the debate on the amendment to Bill C-26. Our Party fully supports Bill C-26, but what we want as Liberal Members of the House is to make sure that the Bill does not leave any stone unturned and that as many Canadians as possible are protected under the provisions of this measure. I take this opportunity to congratulate my colleague the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on the excellent speech he made in the House of Commons earlier today, and to commend the Hon. Member for Monteal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) for his work in this case. Mr. Speaker, objective and impartial as you are, you have certainly appreciated, and rightly so, the outstanding work done in this case by the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie and of course the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis.

[English]

What we are talking about here today is something that will ensure that more people are protected by Bill C-26. In its present form, Bill C-26 will enhance the standard of living for certain Canadians, but it will create an injustice whereby some 80,000 Canadians will be discriminated against. There is no doubt that the Hon. Member for Longueuil (Mr. Leblanc) would agree with me that this is unfair. He would no doubt want to speak on behalf of his constituents, if he were permitted to do so, to state in the House that Bill C-26 would be much better if it applied to every Canadian in need between the ages of 60 and 64.

If a person between the ages of 60 and 64 is divorced or separated and has the same financial need as a person who is widowed, why should we want to discriminate against that person? I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that you, just like I, would not want to discriminate against single, divorced or separated Canadians. We would want all Canadians with little or no means to be provided with the financial assistance that they so richly deserve at an age when they have contributed so much to our society.

I have discussed the following issue in this House in the past, but I would like to repeat myself just in case some Hon. Members were not giving their undivided attention to me at that time. I know that I cannot say that I am doing this in case some Hon. Members were not present because all Members are always present in the House, as you have decreed in the past, Mr. Speaker. Just in case some Hon. Members were not paying attention when I raised this issue before, let me raise again the following proposition: it is a fact that single and divorced Canadians will be discriminated against because this Bill will not assist them.

Let me describe certain instances in which single Canadians will be discriminated against. If a Canadian citizen is divorced and is no longer receiving alimony or other benefits from a former spouse, potentially that person is in the same financial difficulty as a person who is widowed. Both of them have lost the person who assisted them financially.

● (1400)

In conclusion, I urge the Government to consider the Liberal amendment.

Mr. Speaker: It being two o'clock, the House will now proceed to Statements by Members, pursuant to Standing Order 21.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

PENSIONS

CALL FOR RESTORATION OF FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, since gray power has come to the fore in Canada, elderly Canadians have been actively protesting the Tory Budget's intention to cut indexation next January and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has been looking to find a way to sneak out of that ill-founded policy. There are ways to do it. He can simply announce today, as he should, that the policy of deindexing has been dropped. He won't though, since such directness is not part of his style.

Already there are predictions that somehow, in the next few weeks or months, the Canadian economy will undergo some magical rejuvenation which will make deindexing unnecessary. Then the Tories will try to paint themselves as true-blue heroes. Nobody will be fooled, because Canadians will not allow themselves to be fooled again by the Tory gang.

Canadians are recalling the old saying: "Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me". No, Canadians will not allow themselves to be fooled again by the Tory gang and by the Prime Minister's lack of credibility.

When the announcement comes changing the deindexing provisions of the Budget, and it will, the Prime Minister or the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will announce the change sitting down.

Now is the time for them to announce that deindexation will be discontinued.

INTERNATIONAL FREEDOM FESTIVAL

WINDSOR-DETROIT CELEBRATIONS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House to a significant event which will occur in Windsor, beginning tomorrow. The most significant national holidays in Canada and the United States are July 1 and July 4 respectively. It was to commemorate these nearly coincident national days that the Windsor-Detroit International Freedom Festival was inaugurated by Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip in 1959. Since then it has grown to become the largest international festival in the world and is attended by millions from both sides of an undefended border which was once the destination of both my slave and abolitionist forefathers.

Occasionally there are fireworks in this House over relations between Canada and the United States because we, just as much as the Americans, take pride in our independence and freedom. In Windsor and Detroit next week we will have the largest annual display of fireworks in either country, when we, as two equal peoples, celebrate our friendship, freedom, and honour—heroes in the cause of human rights. We hope you all will come on down to the Banana Belt and have a good time.

SPACE WEAPONRY

UNITED STATES STRATEGIC DEFENCE INITIATIVE—JOINT COMMITTEE DELIBERATIONS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, for a number of weeks now, I, and I am sure all Members of Parliament, have been receiving letters and other communications from constituents in connection with the invitation to Canada from the United States to participate in the Strategic Defence Initiative research program.

While the letters started some time ago, the volume has increased dramatically since the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) indicated the Government's desire to consult with the Canadian people on the subject of SDI research.

Many Canadians are happy to write to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), or their Member of Parliament, but many more, including the East York Peace Committee, with which I recently met, are anxious for an opportunity to express their views before an all-party committee of Parliament. Party task forces have their place, but they are no real substitute for a parliamentary committee.

I was delighted last week when all Parties set aside their differences and agreed to establish a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons to investigate the subject of Canada's participation in SDI research, and to report by August 23. That will provide a vehicle which will enable all Canadians to have an input into a decision which will be of enormous significance to us all.

THE MEDIA

PRESS GALLERY REPORTING OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords-Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, is the Parliamentary Press Gallery exercising responsible journalism? The very worthy Report on House of Commons Reform which was tabled this week is typified by The Globe and Mail as "a challenge to the Prime Minister". Columnist Don McGillvary says it won't work because the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) would have to "surrender power". These writers are either overly cynical, dim-witted, or perhaps both.

As a journalist who entered politics, I well remember the tendency of some journalists to become a self-ordained political opposition. Unfortunately, in recent years, the Parliamentary Press Gallery has not distinguished itself, both in quality and in intellect. Most Ottawa Press Gallery members pale in comparison with legislative and parliamentary reporters in other world capitals.

Our Press Gallery is preoccupied with controversy, division, and sensationalism. Because of this, the Press Gallery discourages the very kind of debate that it desires. Objectionable behaviour, unparliamentary language, rat packs, and disorder are the stuff of headlines in the national news.

Sensible, thoughtful, and intelligent debate in the House of Commons and in committee is seldom, if ever, reported. Most of this reasoned debate takes place before or after Question Period, when the media benches are entirely empty and the reporters have gone home.

Fairness, accurate portrayal, and balance are what jounalism is all about. It is time our Press Gallery woke up.

EMPLOYMENT

CRITICISM OF EQUALITY LEGISLATION

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton-Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I am shocked and disappointed that the federal Conservatives have broken yet another election promise regarding affirmative action to hire the handicapped. Groups representing hundreds of thousands of women, minorities, and handicapped, are profoundly upset and say that the Mulroney Government's proposed equity scheme has fundamental flaws and will fail.

The federal legislation should have responded to the Abella Royal Commission Report: Equality in Employment, but instead it will not contain any mandatory program for affirmative action, any mechanism for enforcing companies' compliance with the legislation, or even any mechanism to monitor the so-called law.

In this lip service approach, all a company will have to do is declare that it is an Equal Opportunity Employer, even though the Government knows that such voluntary action is branded as useless by all who are experienced in the field. Without proper monitoring, groups will have no basis for complaints.

To add insult to injury, only companies dealing in contracts of more than $200,000 will be eligible, instead of the $20,000 limit which was proposed in the Obstacles Report that was commissioned by the Liberal Government. An enormous number of companies which do business with the Government will be left out completely from complying. The new law will be absolutely toothless.

Kathleen Ruff, of the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, stated on June 12, 1985:

—this is not employment equity, this is misleading advertising, this is a dishonest statement on the part of the Government. It is a broken promise.

Jim Derksen, National Chairman of the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped, said June 19—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his 90 seconds have expired.

S.O. 21

FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORT

CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING—CONTRIBUTION OF HERMAN "JACKRABBIT" JOHANSSEN

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, Herman "Jackrabbit" Johanssen has reached the venerable age of 110 years and is celebrating that fact at a large party which will be held this afternoon.

He is convinced that his long life is the result of the skiing and canoeing he enjoyed after he came to Canada in 1902.

"Jackrabbit" Johanssen certainly provides splendid evidence of the beneficial effects of such athletic activity.

Although canoeing was developed by the native peoples during their long centuries on this continent, Canadians should be grateful to Mr. Johanssen and other Scandinavian immigrants for their introduction of skiing to our country.

Cross-country skiing has become a vital part of winter life in many Canadian communities. Mr. Johanssen's contributions to that have been recognized at the Canadian Ski Museum in Ottawa.

Entire families enjoy cross-country skiing in my city of Thunder Bay, and sport organizers there have been working hard to bring the World Nordic Games to our community. Participation in these amateur sports does much to improve the fitness of Canadians and to extend the vital life of senior citizens.

The desire of seniors to lead a full life depends on the incomes which are provided by adequate pensions. Mr. Johanssen joins with other seniors, and most Canadians, in demanding full indexing, on a quarterly basis, of the Old Age Security pension and the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

OLD AGE SECURITY

PENSIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Pierre Blackburn (Jonquière): Mr. Speaker, I was very disappointed during Question Period yesterday when some Members opposite hurled abuse at the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian people must wonder about the operation of this House. What they saw was an attention-seeking device designed to draw the attention of the medias to an individual.

Now, how much did this little game cost the taxpayers? The proceedings of the House were halted for over an hour, and yet Members opposite know that unparliamentary terms are out of order in this House. Who are the victims of such manipulation, Mr. Speaker? Our senior citizens, those people to whom we owe so much respect and who are disappointed and disillusioned when they witness such goings-on.

The Members opposite keep on spreading uncertainty after bringing the country on the verge of bankruptcy. They allowed the country to live beyond its means and if we do not act now to cut the deficit, in a few years we will no longer be able to afford our social programs since the cheques will be returned by the bank marked "no sufficient funds".

On the subject of pensions, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has said over and over again that no change will be made to the old age security pension before 1986. The GIS is fully indexed and the OAS is also indexed, but only when inflation exceeds 3 per cent.

Our Prime Minister has also undertaken to monitor the situation closely and even to make some changes before 1986, circumstances permitting. That is the truth, Mr. Speaker.

AGRICULTURE

EFFECT OF EUROPEAN BEEF IMPORTS AND UNITED STATES LEVY ON PORK

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, what is happening to agriculture in western Canada? The European Common Market is dumping its highly subsidized beef into Canada, and if New Zealand and Australia fill the quota allowed, plus that from the United States and Nicaragua, Canada will have even more imported beef this year than last year. Who loses? The beef producers of Canada do.

The United States Government is imposing a levy on Canadian pork entering its country, claiming that government subsidies in most provinces in Canada make it impossible for its hog producers to compete. Who loses? The hog producers of Canada do, including those in Alberta who suffer a double whammy. Albertans receive no government subsidy, and must also pay this levy, making it virtually impossible for hog producers in Alberta to compete or survive.

Grain producers are suffering from depressed prices, millions of grasshoppers, accumulated interest, and customs duties on farm equipment. Who loses? Our grain farmers do.

When our livestock producers and grain farmers go bankrupt, who loses? The consumer, who will then pay right through the nose for his food will lose.

A voluntary tripartite stabilization act, with no subsidization, and the payment of the Crow shortfall to producers in Canada, will help. Let us give our western Canadian farmers an opportunity to survive.

PRESS REPORTS UPHELD

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I did not want to take part in the question period today, but the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley)— —has just made what I consider to be a very inconsiderate attack on the press.

[English]

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Prud'homme: Is it the fault of the press—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Prud'homme: Don't hold my time up.

An Hon. Member: You can't take it, can you?

Mr. Prud'homme: Is it the fault of the press, Mr. Speaker, if promise after promise is broken? Is it the fault of the press if billions and billions of dollars have been given to the oil industry? Is it the fault of the press if the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon), a very distinguished Hon. Member of this House, and the Hon. Member for Hochelaga-Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosier), signed a petition, joining with the millions of the people who disagree on the question of deindexing of the pensions?

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Mr. Prud'homme: Is it the fault of the press, Mr. Speaker, if new and hidden taxes will be announced? You are going to celebrate July 1 when hidden taxes will be thrown at the people of Canada. Is it the fault of the press—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

INDUSTRY

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY—COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, the recently published report of the Commission of Inquiry on the pharmaceutical industry, headed by Commissioner Harry Eastman, made some valuable recommendations. Three important areas of investigation were as follows: first, the speeding up of the authorization processes for new drugs while ensuring their safety and efficacy; second, providing that compulsory licences ensure that licencees pay their fair share of research and development costs and that royalties are distributed in a way designed to encourage research in Canada; and, third, providing more information to consumers on substitutability and prices.

All in all, Sir, the report gives authoritative directions for our pharmaceutical industry, and it is to be hoped that the recommendations will be implemented in a timely manner so as to ensure the availability of safe, effective, and reasonably priced drugs, to encourage research and development in Canada, and to increase the proportion of Canadian manufactured pharmaceuticals sold in our domestic market.

PRIME MINISTER'S ELECTION PROMISE

Mr. Speaker: Oral Question Period. The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): We will try to keep it a little quieter today, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

My question is directed to the Prime Minister. Everyone in Canada, except maybe the Prime Minister, knows perfectly well that in Sherbrooke last year, in July, he promised to maintain full indexation of Old Age Security benefits.

Has the Prime Minister forgotten his promise? Is he going to keep it?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated that we are fully aware of our responsibility towards the neediest in our society, and that is why we have been taking major steps to provide assistance for this particular group in our society.

I have also mentioned that the Budget provides that we will monitor the situation and that we will make a statement on this question as soon as possible.

[English]

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker yesterday the Prime Minister and his Minister of Finance accused some of us on this side of the House of scare tactics. But the Prime Minister told this House yesterday that if he did not deindex old age pensions and withdraw partially the protection against inflation, the Government's cheques to our elderly citizens would bounce. If that is not scare tactics, I wonder what is. Frankly, that has dropped the Prime Minister's own credibility to NSF.

For the benefit of the Minister of Finance, Mr. Speaker, that means "non-sufficient funds".

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I ask the Prime Minister: how is he going to restore that credibility?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I was merely referring to what I think is an historical fact, that the deficits which began during the time my right hon. friend was Minister of Finance have led to a crushing burden—and I say this with no unfairness; I think it is a fact—which places in peril the capacity of the country to do that which we must do, namely, supply services to our elderly citizens. There were no scare tactics involved at all of any kind.

My right hon. friend indicated when he was seeking the leadership of the Liberal Party that he planned to cut the deficit by 50 per cent in seven years. He has yet to indicate how he proposed to do it, but he has certainly recognized by that statement the debilitating nature of the public debt which is indeed jeopardizing programs. So we have to try to reignite the economy, with new jobs and new wealth, so we can do more for our senior citizens.

• (1420)

REQUEST THAT COMMITMENT BE KEPT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister tried that charge in answer to my second supplementary yesterday when I could not reply. I want to recall to him and the Minister of Finance that when I had custody of the country's finances we brought in the last two surpluses in Canadian history—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): And they were your first two Budgets.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): These figures are borne out by the national accounts. In the four-year period over which I had custody of the country's finances the average deficit was $711 million, compared to the $34 billion of the current Minister of Finance.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Then what happened?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): My question really relates to trust in government. The Prime Minister has broken a promise. At the same time that he broke his promise to our senior citizens his Minister of Finance was giving a $125,000 cash bonanza to everyone wealthy enough to have a capital gain. Will the Prime Minister keep his word, given in Sherbrooke last July? Will he restore his credibility and restore trust in government by restoring full indexation of senior citizens' pensions?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): My right hon. friend refers to the two surpluses. His last two surpluses were in his first two Budgets, and the next two Budgets began the process of this country going belly-up.

Mr. Nielsen: The father of the deficit.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Some $711 million against $34 billion.

Mr. Mulroney: He is blaming people here for the $34 billion. Don't look over here; it was your predecessor who did that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We gave you $32 billion, you blew it up to $38 billion, and now you are back down to $34 billion. You did a great job.

Mr. Mulroney: My right hon. friend is trying to run from responsibility for the $34 billion deficit. I never tried to hang that one on him. It was his Party that did it, but his trying to run away from that responsibility indicates the extent to which he is fearful of the implications, and quite properly so. It is that kind of economic mismanagement which gravely imperilled the capacity of the country to sustain the programs we must provide for our elderly. My right hon. friend knows that better than most people in this House, and certainly better than any other Member of his own Party.

REQUEST FOR REASSURANCE OF ELDERLY ON PENSIONS ISSUE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister, who, considering the kind of answers he has just been giving, should not be surprised to hear the kind of comments Mrs. Solange Denis made to him yesterday on Parliament Hill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister the following: In Sherbrooke, he said that he expected the deficit would be $40 billion. When he made his promise, he knew what he was doing. In January, when he promised Canadian men and women that he would protect Old Age Security pensions, he knew what the situation was at the time. Could the Prime Minister stop playing games and reassure the elderly, who are waiting for a forthright and honest decision from the Prime Minister?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I can tell, Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think it would be better if we took the advice we got in the beginning, and try to be a little quieter today.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, what I was going to say was that I can tell Hon. Members opposite do not want to listen to the truth, because they are going to get some of it now.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We have had in this country a situation where there is going to be—

Mr. Nunziata: Name that Member for you know what.

Mr. Nystrom: Doesn't Brian tell the truth, Mike?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We are going to have—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Normally one assumes that, when someone asks a question, he at least wants to hear the answer.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, those Hon. Members do not like to hear that the debt of this country has been growing at 25 per cent per annum. That is three times faster than the country has been growing. You cannot go on like that forever. In 1979 interest on that debt was $8 billion; it is now $25 billion. That is now greater than what the federal Government is spending on medicare, Old Age Security and the Guaranteed Income Supplement. If changes in the finances of the country are not made soon, that 25 per cent per annum growth will double the debt every three years and the country will not be able to afford any programs. That is the reason we have to make the changes.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members will recall that the Minister of Finance admitted right after the election that he did not tell the truth during the election campaign, so I do not know when he will do so.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER HONOUR PROMISES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Prime Minister. Mrs. Denis explained to him yesterday that she could not make ends meet with the kind of income she had. Starting July 1, his Government has decided to put a 10 per cent tax on soap, toothpaste and all other basics. Her purchasing power is diminished as it is—

Mr. Speaker: Is there a supplementary, please?

Mr. Malépart: Since the Prime Minister is aware that these elderly Canadians do not have adequate incomes, will he, starting January 1986, keep his word and provide full indexation of Old Age Security pensions for all elderly Canadians?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member speaks about poverty—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Are you third in the batting order, Jake?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): —he puts his finger on an issue which I think all Members of the House who take these issues seriously are aware of, and the concern it raises. I would also point out to him that poverty did not come into existence only after the last election. If he looks at the statistics he will know that poverty is an issue which has to be addressed not only by the federal Government but by all levels of government, and society generally. The point I make is this. No matter the political philosophy he or I may have, surely the best manner—

Ms. Copps: Capital gains is politics.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Sheila is back.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): —of approaching the question of poverty is to increase our ability to create a better economy. The federal and provincial Governments would then get more revenue, and non-governmental organizations such as volunteer agencies will get more money. We can then help those who need the help. That is the way to address poverty. One cannot simply throw statistics around and say that poverty happened after a certain date. Poverty existed when he was a member of the Liberal Government.

FULL INDEXATION REQUESTED

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who has left the impression in recent days that the Government is going to do something about restoring benefits to Canada's pensioners. We would all like that decision to be announced soon, but I would like him to clarify another matter concerning who will get the benefit of this restored justice, if I may put it that way.

Considering that double indexing the GIS in the way the Liberal Government did it in 1982 would leave about 1.3 million Canadian pensioners out in the cold entirely, will the Government assure the House that, when it takes corrective action, that action will be full reindexation of all Canada's pensioners?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, if there is a statement in that regard it will be made at the earliest possible moment, and my friend will be among the first informed.

Mr. Broadbent: We are just hoping that that will be made before the end of this month so we will be around to listen to what the Government has to say.

Oral Questions

● (1430)

REQUEST FOR COMMITMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's former friend from Quebec, if I may put it that way, who had a chat with him outside the House yesterday, indicated very clearly that pensioners and other Canadians want a full restoration of indexation for all of Canada's pensioners. Why will the Prime Minister not make a commitment that that is the kind of action the Government plans to take?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I readily accept, as I know my right hon. friend opposite did in other circumstances, the fact that the Prime Minister of the country will, from time to time, get remarks that are not always the most pleasant to hear. I understand the sense of frustration which comes about in difficult economic circumstances. That is why I went out to see the pensioners yesterday. That is why I spent the time to speak with them and to hear the case which they wanted to make again yesterday. I feel that it is a responsibility of the Prime Minister of Canada to listen to people, not to give them the finger, and to take his medicine when he has to.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, if the Prime Minister had listened to pensioners before his Government brought in the Budget, he would not be hearing "No way, Charlie Brown", from pensioners after the Budget.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, whether we are going to maintain a consistent and adequate universal pension for all Canadians or are about to turn our pension system into a system of welfare is a very important matter of principle. Will the Prime Minister indicate to the House that when the Government announces its decision it is not going to distinguish between recipients of the GIS and other pensioners but will restore justice to all, that is to say, bring in full indexation for all of Canada's pensioners?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I heard an opinion from another pensioner in Sept-Îles the other day—and the press were there to hear it—who said that they knew that the Government had inherited a bad fiscal situation and is trying to work its way out of it.

Mr. Broadbent: That was George Hees.

Mr. Mulroney: I think the statement was reported as saying that they feel that Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Desmarais, and Mr. Bronfman do not need it, and it should be given to the elderly poor in our society who need it most of all. That, too, is an opinion.

Mr. Broadbent: What's your opinion?

Mr. Mulroney: All I can tell my hon. friend is that if and when we have a statement to make, my hon. friend will be the first to know.

CONCEPT OF UNIVERSALITY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Hearing the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Minister of Finance, and the Prime Minister answering in the way in which they have been reminds me of the saying that it is better to hang together than to hang separately, as they surely will if this matter is not cleared up soon.

The Prime Minister's answers to the Leader of the NDP indicate that he wants to walk away from the concept of universality to which he committed himself as recently as last December. Will he assure the House today that any solution he is contemplating to get himself out of this deindexing fiasco will respect the concept of universality and that all of Canada's senior citizens, not only those receiving GIS, will receive the benefits of full indexation of OAS as promised in Sherbrooke last July?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have a lot of respect for almost every Member of this House but I do not have for that Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): The reason I do not is because he knows the rules of this place and thinks he can abuse them. He thinks he can abuse Members and that they will still respond to him.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Go get your Bible for God's sake.

Mr. Foster: Answer the question, Jake.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He has to listen to every Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Speaker: I think all Hon. Members know that comments about other Hon. Members should be kept to an absolute minimum.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, let it be noted that when I choose people to abuse they are big strong parliamentarians who can stand on their own two feet, not 2.5 million old men and women in this country who cannot defend themselves in this place. Let that be noted.

Mr. Speaker: I invite the Hon. Member to please ask his question.

EFFECT OF BUDGET

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, do the Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Health and Welfare realize that if they do not restore full indexation of the OAS now, every person who is presently 55 years of age will lose 48 per cent of their OAS purchasing power by the time they collect their first cheque when they are 65 years of age? Do the Minister of National Health and Welfare, the Minister of Finance, and the Prime Minister believe it appropriate that people who are currently 55 and will collect their first cheque when they are 65 years of age will get only half of the Old Age Security that is currently being received by senior citizens?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I did not say I was not going to listen to him. I said that I could choose whom I would respect.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): The Member knows that the figure of 48 per cent which he used is wrong. The Liberal critic for health and welfare used the figure of 20 per cent yesterday.

Mr. Frith: And I stand by that.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): That was wrong, and he knows it is wrong, and he is doubly wrong today. Let us get back to the exact issues and numbers, rather than the projections which the Member and others in his Party have made.

FULL INDEXATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister has avoided saying whether he will honour the promise he made during the election campaign and when he will make an announcement concerning a policy change aimed at restoring indexation. Can the Prime Minister at least assure us that, when the decision is announced, it will be full indexation of old age security pensions and not simply a measure which would benefit only the guaranteed income supplement recipients?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): If any change is to be announced, Mr. Speaker, a statement will be made in the House of Commons at the appropriate time.

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, would the Prime Minister give us the assurance that those comments concerning supposedly wealthy retired people do not mean that the commitment made by the Prime Minister with respect to universality being a sacred trust will be abandoned? Will the Government keep its word and maintain universal pensions, and therefore restore full indexation of all and not only of some of the old age security pensions?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the New Democratic Party was referring to comments on this issue made by somebody outside the House yesterday. I took it upon myself to mention another statement reported in the press and made by an elderly resident of Sept-Îles who is also entitled to voice an opinion, and it was in that sense that I mentioned it.

[English]

REQUEST THAT BUDGET PROPOSAL BE WITHDRAWN

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. I have just returned from three weeks of travel from Vancouver to Halifax with the Committee on Equality Rights. The budget proposals are a travesty of this principle, for we are participating in unequal justice.

Does the Minister agree that justice unequally applied is justice denied? The anger and views which were expressed on the Hill yesterday are exactly the anger and views that I heard across the country. Quite frankly, Mr. Minister, your crocodile tears for seniors and your capital gains for your buddies on Bay Street are not appreciated. Will the Minister end the sense of insecurity, and insensitivity of his proposals for the seniors, and discontinue the deindexing for seniors?

● (1440)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me comment on some of the elements of that question. I want to remind the Hon. Member that the Budget has included a wide range of measures that demonstrate the desire of the Government to introduce a degree of fairness into the approach we are taking to deal with the deficit problem.

We have said that there will be a minimum tax in 1986. There will be a surtax on upper income Canadians. There will be a surtax on large corporations. There will be a tax on the chartered banks. There will be other measures taken to introduce a degree of efficiency, and remove a lot of waste that is in the operations of the Government as they were carried out by the previous Government.

These steps are demonstrating that we mean business about coming to grips with this problem, but in a way that demonstrates that it is a national effort and everyone will be participating in the most appropriate way.

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): The Minister's stockbroker mentality does not seem to understand the impact of his inhumane proposals. You have just added a whole bunch of proposals for your Bay Street friends but none of them are as concrete as what you have now proposed for seniors.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Finestone: You know, there are financial and human costs—

Mr. Speaker: Order. May I just remind Members that questions and answers should be put through the Chair.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, the tea and toast are getting a little colder.

Will the Government restore full indexing now so that poor elderly women will maintain their purchasing power and have peace of mind to enjoy this summer, or will they have to live with your stockbroker mentality?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear! Now, now!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Members for their round of applause.

Let me ask the Hon. Member whether she advised those senior citizens whom she met in the last couple of weeks that their cheques will not be cut on July 1, but increased? What about August 1 and September 1? Did she say they would be increased again on October 1, or did she leave the impressions that have been left by her colleagues, that the amounts will be cut? I do not believe she did.

I also do not believe that she spent any time stressing—

Mrs. Finestone: I listened to them.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If she is not going to let me finish my answer, obviously she does not have any interest.

TIMING OF GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. He has finally told us where he will be making the announcement with regard to his backtracking on the deindexing of pensions. We want to know when he will tell us? Will it be by the end of next week?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, all that I indicated was that, if and when we have a statement to make on this, I think that we quite naturally would want to make it in the House of Commons.

REQUEST FOR JUNE STATEMENT

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has clearly said that he would make a statement in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Keeper: What we want to know is whether he will make that statement by the end of next week because, if he does not do it then, pensioners will have to wait until next September, and that is too long.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no pensioner has received any cuts at all of any kind, nor will they. As I have indicated, there are measures in the Budget which will allow us to monitor this very carefully. That is why it was placed there in the first place.

I did indicate to one of his colleagues earlier that, if and when a statement were to be made, I believe it ought to be made in the House of Commons.

Mr. Keeper: When?

REFORM OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

IMPLEMENTATION OF COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Government House Leader. This week the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons tabled an excellent report concerning revised rules and decision-making in the House of Commons. Considering the growing sense of cynicism and frustration across the country on the part of the electorate—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nunziata: That man speaks the truth.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Ravis: Considering the sense of frustration and cynicism across the country on the part of the electorate at the way that all parliamentarians behave themselves in the House of Commons while conducting the nation's business, how serious is the Government with regard to parliamentary reform and the timetable for implementing the recommendations?

Mr. Gauthier: Thank you for the question.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Thank him for the question.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, who comes from the great city of Saskatoon, for asking this outstanding question. When he talks about cynicism, I wish he would not keep referring to the Liberal Party that way.

With respect to the substance of his question, indeed this is an outstanding report. All Members of Parliament share the enthusiasm for the report by the Hon. Member for St. John's East and his distinguished colleagues, representing all Parties. I can say that, as a manifestation of the fact that we take this committee and the recommendations seriously, we intend to implement, entirely, the first report so that it will benefit us when we come back to Parliament, if we adjourn, next September.

All that I can say is that we think this is an excellent report and we will give it the most urgent attention. You can rest assured that there will be consultations, as there have been in the past, with opposition Members to make sure that we have the best possible implementation of that excellent report.

NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY

NORTHWEST PASSAGE—SUMMER VOYAGE BY U.S. COASTGUARD VESSEL

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Canadians have been informed that next summer the Americans intend to send an icebreaker from the U.S. Coastguard into the North. When a similar incident occurred ten years ago, the Government of the day insisted that the sovereignty of Canada be respected. Is it the intention of the Right Hon. Minister to ensure that no ice breaker, even from one of the countries friendlist to Canada, will come into our territory to try to take our sovereignty away from us?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I regret questions that are deliberately anti-American at any time. I think Members of the House would agree that this is a particularly inappropriate time for the official spokesman on external affairs for the Liberal Party in Official Opposition to be attacking the United States of America. Most Members on this side of the House extend our sympathy and encouragement to the people of that country at this time.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): With regard to the specific question that has been raised, as he would know, the action that is being taken by the Government of the United States does not compromise in any way the sovereignty of Canada over our northern waters, or affect the quite legitimate differences of views that exist between Canada and the United States on that question.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Saint-Maurice): The Hon. Minister knows that we have the obligation in Parliament to defend the interests of Canada against anybody, especially when the Government of Canada pretends that it is very close to the Americans. After the great summit in Quebec we have seen our farmers and fishermen taxed by import quotas in the United States, against the best interests of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Chrétien: Will the Minister tell the American Government that when they come to the Northwest Passage this summer they are in Canadian waters and must ask permission from the Canadian Government to be there?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we will do better than that. We will have Canadians on board to guide them through waters which we consider to be ours.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

SHIPBUILDING

HALIFAX INDUSTRIES LIMITED

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The Minister is aware of the financial difficulties of Halifax Industries Limited which has been working on three government icebreakers. Mr. Dick Martin, Executive Vice-President of the Canadian Labour Congress, is sending a telex to the Minister's office this afternoon to underscore the seriousness of the situation.

The Nova Scotia Government would like to help. Will the Minister take the steps required at the federal level to ensure that new owners are found for Halifax Industries Limited, and that employment is maintained for up to 700 workers?

• (1450)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member will be pleased to know that we have had ongoing discussions with Premier Buchanan and Development Minister Thornhill on the subject. There is now a matter before us which we hope to be able to deal with very, very promptly, touching on the situation to which the Hon. Member has referred.

GOVERNMENT PLANS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Minister suggests early action. If needs to be very early. I would suggest, if necessary, even an emergency Cabinet meeting to ensure that this is acted upon this week.

The difficulties HIL is experiencing are symptomatic of the difficulties facing the shipbuilding industry generally. Does the Minister have any plans to save the entire shipbuilding industry from the bankruptcy that so many fear these days?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member will be pleased to know that the Government is always alert and is always ready to take action. In fact the Halifax shipyard question is on the agenda before the CCERD Committee tomorrow morning.

FISHERIES

SPRING LOBSTER SEASON—REQUEST FOR EXTENSION

Mr. Pat Binns (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. However, in his absence perhaps the Acting Minister or his Parliamentary Secretary night wish to answer.

The spring lobster season ends on Sunday, June 30, and since most fishermen do not fish on Sunday they would have to haul their lobster traps on Saturday, June 29. Will the Minister extend the season to Monday, July 1, so that our lobster fishermen will not lose a day's fishing which collectively would amount to over $3 million in landed value?

Mr. Mel Gass (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague, the Hon. Member for Cardigan, who has raised a question that is on the mind of every fisherman in Atlantic Canada. It is not only on the minds of fishermen from P.E.I. but also on the minds of fishermen from St. Georges Bay, Nova Scotia, who have also made the same request. I can inform the Hon. Member that we are considering the matter and we will have an answer for him, probably next week.

OLD AGE SECURITY

PENSIONS—INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT WILL MAKE STATEMENT

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He made new overtures today during the Question Period in replying to one of my colleagues when he said that he was ready to make the announcement in the House.

We all know that the House will be sitting until June 28. Will the Prime Minister stop fooling around with the anxiety and uncertainty of senior citizens and make his announcement immediately to stop this charade?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, all I did was to say in reply to a question from my hon. friend that, if we had such a statement to make, and I have already shown my genuine concern for the situation of senior citizens, it would be made in this House, as this would seem normal and desirable.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER GRANT WISH OF ELDERLY

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

All these ifs and maybes will not help senior citizens pay their rent at the end of the month. The Prime Minister is aware that we are very close to July 1, when senior citizens will have to renew their lease for a full year, including part of 1986, which will be affected by his decision. Will the Prime Minister finally make up his mind and tell senior citizens that he was wrong, that he will reverse his stand and that he will respect the wishes of his own Aunt Jeanne in Baie-Comeau, who signed the petition and told the Prime Minister: Brian, we have done our share in life, you have no right to touch the pensions of senior citizens and you promised you would do no such thing. Will the Prime Minister at least listen to his Aunt Jeanne and grant the wishes of the elderly?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): My Aunt Jeanne, whom I loved very much, died 11 years ago. The Hon. Member has given me some good news. In fact, this an extraordinary piece of news. If I may, Mr. Speaker, I shall leave the House immediately to make a phone call.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

EXPORT OF MILITARY EQUIPMENT TO CHILE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please. Is the House ready for another question? The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister will know that on Tuesday of this week his Secretary of State for External Affairs said in the House that the Government had made known to the authorities in Chile its revulsion at the practices of that regime, practices of torture, brutality, and indiscriminate killing of innocent people.

Since the Prime Minister's Government has been in power, he has authorized, through his Secretary of State for External Affairs, the export of over $11 million worth of military equipment to the Chilean army and the Chilean national police force. Why has the Government permitted these exports when it expresses its revulsion at the brutality of the Government of Chile?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raised this question the other day in the House of Commons with regard to an export by a small Canadian company, the purpose of which was to protect people from being blown up by bombs. I think those facts are now known to the House. It is also known that because I was concerned about the application of Canadian export policy, some months ago, before the Hon Member raised this question, I ordered a review in dept of the practices of the Government with regard to the standards we apply to exports.

It is a very difficult and complex question. It is easy to state the principle. It is much more difficult to apply it in practice. I say in all sincerity, Mr. Speaker, that I would welcome suggestions by the Hon. Member of ways in which we could apply that important principle in practice that will not, for example, contribute to the blowing up of people whose work it is to protect against bombs and other explosions.

GRANTING OF EXPORT PERMITS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops-Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, perhaps any support of the national police force of Chile or of the Chilean Armed Forces could be considered inappropriate by the Government, considering the behaviour of the Chilean police force and Armed Forces, in terms of their abuse of human rights.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Specifically, why did the Minister approve $11 million in exports of military equipment to Chile, including parts for tanks, and from Standard Aero of Winnipeg the overhaul of engines for the Chilean Air Force? Why did he allow de Havilland, a Crown corporation, to export spare parts for the Chilean Armed Forces aircraft?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that is a repetition of the earlier question. I noted with some interest that the Hon. Member said perhaps the way to deal with these questions is simply to state a principle and cut off all exports. He knows better than that, Mr. Speaker. I would seriously ask him to address a very difficult question, a question as to how we apply in practice a principle which would be applauded by all Members of this House—

Mr. Heap: Spare parts for tanks?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —that we should not be contributing to the ability of oppressive regimes to oppress their people.

I have started a review in the Department of External Affairs.

Mr. Heap: What about those peaceful tanks?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I would welcome, and I sincerely invite, specific suggestions by the Hon. Member if he is indeed serious about this question as to ways in which we could define the practices.

TRANSPORT

POLICIES TO IMPROVE HANDICAPPED PERSONS' ACCESS TO TRANSPORTATION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Maurice Tremblay (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State (Transport) who, I think, is responsible for the transportation of handicapped persons in this country. I have also been informed that the committee set up five years ago to study policies for improving handicapped persons' access to transportation has been disbanded. I would like to hear from the Minister whether this is true and, if so, what kind of impact that action will have.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Hon. Member for Bourassa will listen to what we have to say concerning handicapped persons. Indeed, we have decided to disband the committee which used to advise the Minister on matters relating to the transportation of handicapped persons, but we are happy indeed to announce in this House the establishment of an action committee on the transportation of handicapped persons in Canada, with much more specific terms of reference, which will directly advise the Minister on all means of transportation in order to enable us to adapt those means of transportation to the needs of the handicapped.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of nine, presented by Hon. Members on Wednesday, June 19, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

POINT OF ORDER

RETRACTION OF STATEMENT MADE DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, at 2.05 p.m. today, I absolutely unwittingly, and inadvertently, misled the House when I said that the Hon. Member for Victoria (Mr. McKinnon) signed a petition concerning the deindexation of old age pensions. That is not the case. Therefore I withdraw, absolutely and completely, my remarks concerning the very hon. gentleman from Victoria, and I thank him.

PETITIONS

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a group of petitions from various ridings.

They come from the City of Yellowknife, NWT, as well as from the ridings of Montreal-Mercier, P.Q., Capilano, Vancouver Centre, Vancouver East, Vancouver-Kingsway, Vancouver South, Vancouver Quadra and Vancouver Burnaby, BC.

Also from the ridings of Trois-Rivières, and Gamelin, PQ, Red Deer, Alberta, Restigouche and York-Sunbury, NB, as well as from the City of Winnipeg, Man.

The undersigned ask the government to consider needy single, separated and divorced people between 60 and 64 years of age as mostly dependent on federal assistance, arguing that its decision to grant spouse's allowances only to needy widows and widowers between 60 and 64 years of age is outright discriminatory.

[English]

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions to present, containing almost 600 names of people from Saskatchewan, mainly from the Prince Albert area. In the majority, these petitioners are pensioners. They say that the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on them by the deindexation of their Old Age Security program. They ask the Government to reconsider and to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by over 500 constituents of the riding of Trinity, mostly old age pensioners. They ask the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to respect his commitment in the 1984 election campaign to maintain full indexation of old age pensions.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 1,500 residents of Manitoba, most of whom are from my constituency, but some of whom are from Winnipeg-St. James, Winnipeg-Assiniboine, Provencher, Selkirk-Interlake and Portage-Neepawa. These petitioners call upon the Government to stop the proposed deindexation of pensions and say that the losers will be the poor, the unemployed and women, and that the wealthy will be the winners.

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I should like to present several petitions from constituents of Gloucester, New Brunswick——asking the government to reconsider its position on Bill C-26 and to expand the fiscal measures promised in Bill C-26 in order to include the individuals who are single, separated or divorced.

[Translation]

I also have another petition, Mr. Speaker, this one from the federal constituency of Verdun-Saint-Paul, in Quebec, asking this government to grant the spousal allowance to citizens between the age of 60 and 64 who are single, separated or divorced, who are in need and who are among a category of our population most dependent on government assistance.

I also have a petition, Mr. Speaker, from the federal constituency of Skeena, in British-Columbia, which was signed by many residents of that riding asking this House to humbly acknowledge that single, separated and divorced persons aged between 60 and 64, are in need and are part of the category of population most dependent on government assistance and that the government has a duty to expand its assistance to include those persons in need who are either single, separated or divorced.

I also have, Mr. Speaker, a petition from the riding of Ottawa-Vanier, my own riding, and the petitioners are asking the government to reconsider its position on Old Age Security pensions, to be true to its word and to reinstate full indexation for our senior citizens who are entitled to their old age pension.

[English]

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): I have another petition from my riding of Ottawa-Vanier, humbly asking the House to accept a petition which, in their own words, views the Budget of the Conservative Government as harsh and merciless toward senior citizens because it eliminates full indexing of old age pensions. They ask the Government to reconsider this measure and to hold to its promise made during the last election campaign.

[Translation]

I also have another petition, this one from residents of a senior citizens' home, Fatima, in the constituency of Ottawa-Vanier, who are asking the government to change its position concerning desindexation of Old Age Security Pensions, to be true to its word, to revert to a better attitude and to fully index the old age pension for those who need it.

Mr. Speaker, I have yet another petition, this one signed by residents of Charlotte Street, in my riding, people who live in a senior citizens' home and who are asking the government to reconsider its position, to be true to its word and to stop thinking that savings can be made on the backs of older people and to give our elderly fully indexed pensions for all Canadians.

I have another petition, Mr. Speaker, this one from constituents of the Ottawa-Centre riding. It is signed by several residents of this great constituency of Ottawa-Centre who are asking the government . . . It reads as follows: In the opinion of your petitioners, the Conservative government's budget is harsh and merciless for senior citizens since it removes full indexation of Old Age Security pensions. They ask the government to reconsider its position and to give older people who are eligible fully indexed pensions.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have petitions on other subjects? He knows that he can simply indicate to the House that he has other petitions on those subjects and present them now.

• (1510)

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I have, if you have noticed, talked about several petitions. Two petitions, in my view, are interspersed here. I do not have them in order, I regret, but I would like to—

Mr. Speaker: That is the practice. Does the Hon. Member have any new subjects to introduce? Otherwise he can simply indicate to the House that he has more petitions on the same matters, and those petitions will be treated with exactly the same respect as the ones he has already presented. He knows that.

Mr. Gauthier: With all due respect, Mr. Speaker, if you insist that you should decide how I present my petitions, then I will present them again tomorrow. I thought it was the Member's prerogative and choice as to whether he files them or reads them. I really do not understand, but I will wait until tomorrow, Mr. Speaker, if that is your ruling.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member does understand totally.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I too have a couple of petitions to present which I am duty-bound to do. One is from the people in Pioneer Village in Regina, Saskatchewan, Regina West constituency, calling for the House of Commons in the current budget debate to restore full indexation for Old Age Security programs in Canada commencing January 1, 1986.

AIR CANADA WITHDRAWAL OF TICKET RESERVATION SERVICE IN SASKATCHEWAN

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition, which I know will be of particular interest to my good friend from Saskatoon West (Mr. Hnatyshyn). This petition calls upon the Government of Canada to ensure adequate and fair provision of airline services to all Canadians, and states that the recent action by Air Canada to close its entire Saskatchewan ticket reservation service would detract from the fair and equitable provision of service. I have the honour and the duty to present a petition with some 2,200 names on it, just from the City of Regina.

IMPACT OF DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 258 residents of the Province of Quebec, mostly pensioners, who say that, in their opinion, the Budget places an unfair burden on pensioners because of the deindexation of the Old Age Security Pension Plan and who ask the Government of Canada and Parliament to re-establish full indexation of old age security pensions in Canada.

[English]

CALL FOR RETURN OF BRUCE CURTIS TO CANADA

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions, one from a group of Canadians who call on the Government of Canada to enter a transfer of offenders' agreement with the State of New Jersey so that Bruce Curtis can be discussed as a possible candidate to come back to serve his sentence in Canada, where he will be close to his family and to those who offer him comfort and support.

OPPOSITION TO PROVISIONS OF BILL C-26

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from a group of Canadians who protest the discriminatory legislation introduced by the Government which benefits widows and widowers between the ages of 60 to 64, but ignores others in poverty in that age category.

And finally a petition by another group of Canadians dealing with the partial deindexation of the pensions of senior citizens and calling upon the Parliament of Canada to reject the Budget and, in particular, that provision. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a petition on behalf of the residents of Wynyard, Saskatchewan, in my riding, who wish it to be known that they are opposed to the partial deindexing of pensions which will mean a reduction in their real spending power in 1986 of $100, escalating up to 1991 when that reduction in spending power will be as high as $680 for the year. They urge the Government to reindex pensions as was promised during the election campaign.

OPPOSITION TO PROVISIONS OF BILL C-26

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from the ridings of Dartmouth, Halifax East, from the riding of Laval-des-Rapides, from the riding of Victoria, from the ridings of Edmonton South, Edmonton West and Edmonton East, from the ridings in Montreal as well as the riding of Restigouche, New Brunswick, from the riding of Winnipeg—

Mr. Benjamin: Which one?

Mr. Marchi: All of them there are so many of them—again from the riding of Restigouche, as well as from the riding of Edmonton South. I am doing the House a favour because I am not reading them all out. There is another petition from a riding in Montreal, another from the riding of Victoria and the last one is from the riding of North Vancouver, Burnaby.

All of these petitions call upon the Government to expand Bill C-26 to include those individuals between the ages of 60 and 64 who may be single, divorced or separated, to qualify for the spousal allowance and make it fairer and more equitable for all those Canadians in those age groups to take part in and take advantage of the financial assistance that would be provided under Bill C-26.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): I have another two petitions from my own riding of York West. The first one comes from hundreds of senior citizens from the Eagle Manor Apartments which is a senior citizens home in York West. They are advocating and asking this Government to maintain and enhance the full indexation of their Old Age Security pensions and not to proceed according to the budget measure announced on May 23.

The second petition from the riding of York West is from individuals, from seniors and non-seniors alike, who are also asking that this Government maintain the full indexation on their Old Age Security cheques. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by some 260 Canadians who are calling upon the Government to restore full indexation of Old Age Security pensions. These Canadians reside in the federal riding of Nepean-Carleton which until now has been represented by a Conservative Member of Parliament.

Mr. Benjamin: Not for long.

REQUEST FOR MAIL DELIVERY SERVICE IN GLOUCESTER, ONT.

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, Nepean-Carleton is still well represented by a Conservative Member of Parliament.

I would like to present a petition from 565 residents in 424 homes in my riding from the Chapel Hill area of the City of Gloucester requesting the Canada Post Corporation to effect whatever measures are necessary to provide them with door-to-door mail delivery, including the consideration of alternate day delivery, as soon as possible.

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition to present on behalf of a number of citizens of the wonderful and beautiful City of Yorkton, Saskatchewan, which is the most beautiful city, of course, in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Nunziata: How beautiful is it?

Mr. Nystrom: Much more beautiful than your City of Toronto, by the way.

[Translation]

Please forgive me for wandering from the point, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

I have a petition to present on behalf of these good citizens of the City of Yorkton and their petition, too, complains about the Government taking away in part their indexed pensions which will leave a lot of them living in poverty. They say that the big losers in particular will be the poor, the unemployed and the women. Thank you.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition signed by hundreds of residents, mainly senior citizens, from the City of Regina who join with hundreds and thousands of other Canadians across this land in urging the Government not to deindex the pensions partially but to maintain the full indexing of the pensions so that our senior citizens can retire with some sense of dignity.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition from residents of the City of Toronto who point out that the Government plans to cut the old age pension by $100 in 1986, $207 in 1987 and so on and so on. They remind the Government of the Progressive Conservative promise that a PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis, and request Parliament to ensure that the Government will reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program and guarantee this to the citizens of Canada next year.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions here from seniors in Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands protesting the Government's action in the May 23 Budget in cutting the indexing of their Old Age Security pension, which will result in the loss of $100 in 1986 and cumulatively adding to that until it will be a $680 loss in 1991. They say that this flies in the face of the promises that were made very solemnly by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) during last summer's election campaign and they call upon the Government to index fully Old Age Security for all seniors.

• (1520)

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of tabling a petition from the normally warm hearted citizens of the banana belt who are now showing considerable heat about the actions of the Government with respect to the deindexation of pensions and petition the Government to revoke its proposal to deindex Old Age Security. This is in addition to the thousands already submitted from Windsor on this subject.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a total of 786 further names to add to those petitioners. The first set of petitions is from the constituency of Essex-Kent and in particular such towns as Wheatley, Leamington, Cottam and Harrow, and I am pleased that I am able to present these petitions on behalf of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Essex-Kent (Mr. Caldwell), indicating the opposition of the various people who live in that Conservative constituency to the Budget that the Government has brought down with its broken promises and its damage to senior citizens.

I have a second petition from Windsor West and I am pleased to be able to present this petition indicating the petitioners' unhappiness and sense of betrayal with respect to this Budget.

Finally, I have two sets of petitions from the grand constituency of Essex-Windsor. Many of the petitioners are from Belle River and they express their deep, deep sense of frustration that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is not prepared to follow through with his recent statements that he intends to make changes and will not announce when he will do so.

The final bundle of these signatures from all parts of Essex-Windsor demonstrate to me as I hope they will demonstrate to the House the tremendous base of popular opposition that exists to this Budget and the widespread hopes across this country that the Government will quickly change its policies.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise before you somewhat saddened but nonetheless with the obligation to bring to your attention many, many signatures on a number of petitions from the constituents of Mount Royal riding and particularly from the Town of Côte St. Luc. I think these people are wonderful because they are responding to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who said that he felt that he had heard from the people with regard to the Government's current Budget and that they were in favour of it. These wonderful citizens from—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I ask the Hon. Member to summarize the petition, please?

Mrs. Finestone: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to but I wanted to mention where these people live. They come from MacMurray, Caldwell, Cavendish and Emerald Streets and they are petitioning to tell the Minister of Finance that they do not agree with his new proposals, and that on the grounds that the provisions will severely limit the purchasing power of the elderly and will therefore cause a great hardship to them, they have affixed their signatures and wish to deposit in their names through me this petition, which describes their great disappointment with the Budget presentation and the deindexation which was included in the last Budget. This petition is signed by 100 people from the streets of Trent, Wolseley, Rand, Cavendish and Earnscliffe.

I have another petition which has been signed by the women of my riding and of Côte St. Luc who bring to the attention of the Minister of Finance that 58 per cent of the recipients of Old Age Security are women, two out of three of those who receive Guaranteed Income Supplements are women, they are all living in poverty already and any deindexing is a form of a cut-back on the principle of universality. They have deposited their complaint in that regard and they come from Mackie, Decarie, Van Horne, MacDonald and Chester Streets.

Last, I have an additional submission, which is again in the interests of removing the restrictive clauses and reinstating full indexation to our pensioners. It is signed by people from the Streets of Dufferin, Monpetit and Côte St. Luc.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay-Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon), and I are pleased to see that the Hon. Member for Essex-Kent (Mr. Caldwell) has been making his case on this matter to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) in person.

I have the honour to present petitions from constituents primarily in the riding of Thunday Bay-Nipigon who protest that the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security Program and that this deindexation represents a massive withdrawal from our collective commitment to public pensions. The losers will be the poor, the unemployed and women. These constituents humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security Program in Canada forthwith.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege and duty to present petitions on behalf of my constituents who are concerned about the Government's action with regard to the deindexation of Old Age Security. I have a petition that is signed by leaders of the unions at Great Lakes Forest Products Limited in Thunder Bay who say that deindexing represents a massive withdrawal from our collective commitment to public pensions, indicating that the Government favours shifting to a system of tax subsidies and private savings for retirement.

I also have a petition from the residents of the Niagara of the North, Kakabeka Falls, and surrounding area, part of which I share with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp), and the petitioners say that the cuts in the OAS fly in the face of a Progressive Conservative campaign promise that a PC Government would once more index the old age pension to the actual cost of living on a quarterly basis.

Finally, I would like to table petitions bearing the signatures of 359 residents of the riding of Thunder Bay-Atikokan who say that, in the opinion of the petitioners, the May 23 Budget imposes undue and unfair hardship on pensioners by deindexing the Old Age Security Program. That brings my total to date over five days of presenting petitions to well over 1,200 signatures.

ALLEGED DISCRIMINATION IN BILL C-26

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to table, first of all, a block of five petitions from the Nicolet-Yamaska riding, where a few hundred people are protesting vehemently against the obviously discriminatory provisions—

Mr. Boudria: With good reason!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): —contained in Bill C-26 as concerns divorced, separated and single people.

I also have a bundle of 10 petitions from the same Nicolet-Yamaska riding, where people are revolted to see that the provisions of C-26 do absolutely nothing for people over 60 who are separated, divorced or single.

I also have a petition from the federal constituency of St. John's East, in which region of our beautiful country people are also protesting against an unprecedented social injustice and are respectfully asking this Government to reconsider its position.

I also have another petition, Mr. Speaker, from the constituency of Dauphin-Swan River in Manitoba from people who wish to present the same grievance to this House.

I also have a petition, Mr. Speaker, from Saint John, New Brunswick, where people also deplore the injustice and discrimination resulting from Bill C-26.

I have another petition from the same constituency from people who find the provisions of Bill C-26 completely unfair and discriminatory.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have a last petition from the constituency of Charlesbourg, in Quebec City, where people also deplore the unfortunate provisions of Bill C-26 which are very unfair for divorced, separated and single people.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions that I wish to present to the House today.

First of all, I have here a petition signed by 34 Golden Age Club members from Limoges, Ontario, in the Glengarry-Prescott-Russell riding, who ask the House to blame the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) for bringing out a budget which adversely impact upon senior citizens by desindexing their Old Age Security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I have also a petition signed by 67 Golden Age Club members from Fournier, in the Glengarry-Prescott-Russell riding, who are protesting the government decision to deindex Old Age Security pensions.

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which is signed by 70 residents of Vankleek Hill, Ontario. Vankleek Hill is a very beautiful town in my riding. Those people are protesting the provisions of the Budget which will impact adversely upon 200,000 senior citizens of the country by deindexing their pension.

Finally, I have a petition which is signed by the residents of Hawkesbury in the great riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell. They also state that the Budget will be unfair to senior citizens in deindexing their pensions.

I have further petitions.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition which deals with a different but equally important issue. The petitioners, all residing in the Restigouche riding, ask the House to oppose the discriminatory provisions of Bill C-26 which will exclude some senior citizens between 60 and 64 years of age from the benefits of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have a similar petition signed by a number of Montreal residents, and another one signed by a number of Laval-des-Rapides residents, who are so well represented in the House by my colleague and friend.

I have also a petition signed by some residents of the Vancouver South and Vancouver Quadra ridings in British Columbia. They want the House to know that they are against Bill C-26 because it discriminates against people 60 to 64 years of age who are single, divorced or separated.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker; I will have more of the same type of petitions to present tomorrow.

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a few petitions signed by residents of my constituency, that is from the villages of Cap-Pelé, Robichaud, Haute-Aboujagane, Saint-Joseph, Shédiac, as well as by people from Moncton, Fredericton and Barker's Point.

Also some people from Cap-Pelé, Shédiac, Scoudouc and Memramcook.

Those people demand, Mr. Speaker, through this House, that Parliament take into account the fact that 80,000 persons could suffer from social injustice and discrimination, if the Prime Minister does not make the suggested alterations to Bill C-26.

I also have on the same subject, Mr. Speaker, several petitions, among others, one signed by residents of Darmouth and Halifax. Another petition comes from Brampton-West.

Mr. Speaker, I have another one from Ottawa West and one from Nepean-Carleton.

I have another petition signed by residents of the Northwest Territories.

I have another petition from Surrey-White Rock, in British Columbia, another from Capilano and a last one from Nanaimo, in British Columbia. All those people, of course, are asking that the spouse's allowance be extended to every needy single person aged 60 to 64.

Mr. Speaker, on another matter, I have a petition from my constituents who deplore the measures announced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his last Budget about the partial deindexation of old age pensions. They demand that the government reconsider its decision about that bill.

[English]

RETENTION OF ONE DOLLAR BANKNOTE

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition on behalf of 1,700 residents of Ontario and Quebec, mostly from the National Capital Region, who are calling on the House of Commons to ensure that the one dollar banknote remains in circulation in Canada and that it not be replaced in its entirety by the one dollar coin.

[Translation]

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a few petitions from constituents, citizens from various constituencies.

First of all, I have a petition signed by more than 5,000 persons from, I should say, the beautiful constituency of Montreal-Sainte-Marie, who are asking the Right Hon. Prime Minister to amend Bill C-26 to provide help for people aged 60 to 64 living alone, whether single, separated or divorced.

I would also have another petition from people residing in the federal constituency on Elgin, or Prince Edward Island. Some 40 people are asking the Right Hon. Prime Minister to amend Bill C-26 to stop discriminating against 80,000 persons in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, a petition signed by proud citizens of Edmonton, Alberta. They asked me to table on their behalf a petition asking that the Minister of Social Injustice in Canada amend his ways and introduce amendments to Bill C-26 now before us.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition, signed by a group of citizens from the constituency of Gloucester, New Brunswick. They ask the Right Hon. Prime Minister to recognize a degree of social justice for 80,000 persons victimized by Bill C-26 which, if not amended, will discriminate against persons who are single, separated or divorced, 80 to 85 per cent of whom are women, as we know.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition signed by citizens from a very particular group, being from the city—

Mrs. Bourgault: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mrs. Bourgault) on a point of order.

Mrs. Bourgault: Mr. Speaker, about a month ago, we had agreed . . . the Chair had agreed that petitions to be presented and all dealing with the same subject should be grouped rather than introduced separately. Mr. Speaker, under the rulings made earlier, it was agreed that Hon. Members should not use the Standing Order on petitions to extend the time of the House by introducing petitions on one subject successively rather than in one group. For instance, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) should—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member. I appreciate the point of order, but the Chair does not feel that the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has to this day abused the rules in the way he presented his petitions. It is my view that some of them deal with Bill C-26 while others deal with another subject. There it is! For the time being, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie may go on presenting his petitions.

Mr. Prud'homme: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on the same point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, before you, your successors or anyone else in the Chair make a ruling that could prove unfortunate . . . It reads very well, and if there is something sacred in our British parliamentary system, it is the right to present a petition. What do you expect, if you are dealing with an issue, if a group of persons or an individual presents a petition it is quite proper that the names and object of the petition be made public, this is not a case where one simply says: I have a pile of petitions, here they are, thank you.

● (1540)

That is contrary to British parliamentary procedure, because the right to present a petition is a sacred right. Indeed it is quite clearly expressed: . . . who now exercise their ancient and unchallenged rights.

I rather doubt that anyone can give that right a definition which differs from what was intended, the right of the people to have their day in court. I would suggest that it cannot be done in a disorderly manner by saying: Here, Mr. Speaker, I have received a pile of petitions, I present them, thank you. I think people have that right, and since a basic principle might be established today I want us to reserve judgment on that.

Mr. Gauthier: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier on the same point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Since the Hon. Member for Argenteuil-Papineau (Mrs. Bourgault) raised the point, Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer the House to Beauchesne's—

[English]

—Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, Citation 692 reads:

While a Member may, if he desires, present a petition from his place in the House during Routine Proceedings and before the Introduction of Bills, he may also present his petition by filing it with the Clerk of the House.

So the "may", Mr. Speaker, means that an Hon. Member while in his place may choose the option of reading his petitions from his place or filing them in groups with the Table. Therefore, I submit that the Hon. Member has not abused the rules.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: With all respect, that was a decision given by the Chair. I would like to point out—

[Translation]

Order, please. I think that the procedure to present a great number of petitions without taking too much of the time of the House was followed a few moments ago by the Hon. Member for Westmorland-Kent (Mr. Robichaud) who, I think, presented about twenty petitions in a very short time. So far I do not think at all that the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has abused the time of the House. I would therefore ask the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie to continue to present his petitions.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my opinion on the same point of order. This is the second or third time that we have experienced certain difficulties about this and I think the procedure should be explained to the Hon. Member. The petitions may indeed deal with the same issue, put the people from the various ridings want to be clearly identified, they do not want to be lost in a melting pot. I am finished, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think that the Chair does not object to the fact that the Hon. Member might mention the name of each riding from which the petitions originate. The problem comes up when a Member makes lengthy comments after mentioning the name of the riding from which the petition comes. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie.

ALLEGED DISCRIMINATION IN BILL C-26

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, to get back to the petition I was presenting to the House, I was saying that the petition was on behalf of people from Toronto and Sudbury, but they also include members of the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, and they are asking the Right Hon. Prime Minister to amend Bill C-26 to eliminate any discrimination.

Mr. Speaker, my last petition is from the riding of Victoria in New Brunswick. One hundred residents in this riding asked me to present a petition, and they want the Minister of Social Injustice Canada to amend Bill C-26 so that everyone, whether single, separated or divorced, can benefit under this legislation.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately the petitions took so long that the Parliamentary Secretary, who was to present the questions to be answered, is not here.

This is a great honour for me to be able to respond. Mr. Speaker, Question No. 341 will be answered today.

MILAP GRANT

Question No. 341—Mr. Skelly:

1. Did the Minister of Employment and Immigration give administrative power over the MILAP grant to Mr. Thor Peterson of Campbell River on the advice of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and, if so, for what reason?

2. Is Mr. Thor Peterson using any of the grant to provide (a) wages to (b) expenses to (i) himself (ii) his wife (iii) his brother and, if so, in each case, how much?

3. Is the Minister of Employment and Immigration aware of any member of Mr. Thor Peterson's immediate family working as a confidential employee of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and, if so, who?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): 1. Mr. Thor Peterson of Campbell River, B.C. was asked by the Minister of Employment and Immigration to act in the position of chairperson for the West Coast Fishery Central Community Adjustment Committee (CAC) organized under the Modified Industry and Labour Adjustment Program (MILAP). The Minister of Fisheries and Oceans was consulted as the MILAP policy framework calls for the appointment of CAC chairpersons by the Minister of Employment and Immigration following consultations with the regional ministers concerned.

2. The committee may claim eligible costs paid by the committee for reimbursement of: chairperson and subcommittee chairperson fees and travel and other expenses incurred while performing authorized services for or on behalf of the committee; travel and other expenses of committee members while performing authorized services for or on behalf of the committee; consulting fees for research and studies; and actual costs for necessary stenographic and clerical services, rental of premises, office supplies and services, printing and photocopying, and such other expenses as may be approved. West Coast Fishery Committee claims approved as at May 1, 1985 for:

(a) Wages—(i) $5,500 to Mr. Thor Peterson for Chairperson fees; (ii) nil; (iii) nil.

(b) Expenses—(i) $1,649 to Mr. Thor Peterson for travel and other expenses; (ii) nil; (iii) nil.

3. At the time this question was placed on the Order Paper, the Minister of Employment and Immigration was not aware of any member of Mr. Thor Peterson's immediate family working as a confidential employee of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. The Minister has since been advised, by the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, that Thor Peterson's daughter Anne works as a special assistant (constituency) in the Office of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans.

OLD AGE SECURITY ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of report stage of Bill C-26, an Act to amend the Old Age Security Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs and on Motions Nos. 1 and 2 (Mr. Epp (Provencher)) (p. 6021).

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, before the adjournment of the debate for Question Period at two o'clock, we were discussing Bill C-26. Our Party, of course, although we are in favour of the principles of the Bill—we are obviously in favour of anything which will increase benefits to people between the ages of 60 and 64—is of the view that the Bill could be much further enhanced if we were to remove the discriminatory clauses which make life so difficult for the 80,000 Canadians who will be discriminated against. I was about to describe to you at that time, Mr. Speaker, and I am sure you will recall it vividly, that single, separated and divorced people would be discriminated against.

Let me describe to you, Mr. Speaker, some of the difficulties we see. I was describing to the Chair before the adjournment that, for instance, in the case of a divorced person whose former spouse was perhaps contributing toward support and who subsequently died, that person would find herself in a similar condition to being a widow, because essentially she would be living alone with no other means of support than her own.

There is a further complication, Mr. Speaker. In some debates in the past I challenged this Government to arrive at a proper and equitable definition of a widow in terms of this Bill. Perhaps some Hon. Members of this House would say that "widow" or "widower" are both fairly easy to define because it means "one whose spouse has passed away". That is perhaps so, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to give you some instances where the Government could really get itself into a situation which would make it impossible to define who would be eligible for benefits and who would not. There is the case of a person who is widowed and will be receiving benefits. What about the case of a person who is widowed and then remarries? Of course, everyone will agree that that person is no longer a widow. But what happens to a person who is widowed, remarries and then divorces? Does that person go back to the original status of widow or widower? Will that person then be eligible for benefits?

There are numerous examples I could give to you, Mr. Speaker, and perhaps I will because I see you are insisting that I explain it further. I can describe to you just how these provisions are discriminatory and how the Government has got itself into a kind of situation, Mr. Speaker, which is totally unacceptable. The only legitimate thing to do is to expand those benefits, at least the one-year provision we described in the amendment. What we really want, and what we have been trying to convince the Government of for a long time through the presentation of petitions here today and on many other days, is that it should make benefits available to all needy people between the ages of 60 and 64. The "minister of social injustice", otherwise known as the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), would surely understand that. In order to restore his proper title I am sure he will want to correct the provisions of this Bill which make the present legislation so discriminatory.

Motion No. 1 (Mr. Epp (Provencher)) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 2 also standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Provencher (Mr. Epp). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 2 (Mr. Epp (Provencher)) agreed to.

Mr. Epp (Provencher) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Epp (Provencher) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-26, which has been in the House of Commons for some period of time, is a further effort by the Parliament of Canada to improve the benefits for Canadians in need of Old Age Security, specifically the spouses allowance. At the time this Bill was introduced I said I believed it would have the support of every Member of the House. During the discussion on the Bill there have been proposals, as recently as a few minutes ago, that it be extended to Canadians who are single, separated or divorced. We have looked at that very seriously and I guess there are two points which have to be made. The first is that those who say the legislation is discriminatory should be careful because, if that is the case, then one could make that charge against the spouse's allowance as well. If you discriminate against single people on the one hand, you could then discriminate against married people on the other, and I do not think we want to discriminate against either. It is my hope as the Minister of National Health and Welfare that over the life of this Parliament, as the economy improves, we can examine some of the proposals made by Members on both sides as well as those people who approached the committee regarding Bill C-26.

I think Members on all sides have had the experience of people coming into their office and explaining that they are unable to receive a pension by virtue of their marital status, that is, as widows they were not eligible for the pension their spouse would have received had he or she lived. What this Bill does is to extend to a group of needy Canadians a benefit for which they become eligible by reason of age and marital status. Therefore, Members of this House, and others who follow them, will no longer have to say to these people that they are not eligible for any benefit other than social assistance.

This legislation will affect approximately 85,000 Canadians, of whom it is estimated 72,000 are women. The legislation is targeted very specifically, not only to the most needy of that age group, but to women who are in greatest need. They have this need, frankly, because they have been homemakers and mothers for most of their lives. They have not been in the so-called workforce and have not contributed to society in a specific financial way. They are, after the death of a spouse, then faced with the prospect of having to go into the workforce, something which they have not done for many, many years. As well, the work that is available to them, if it is available at all, is generally low-paid physical work which, by reason of age or health or both, they are incapable of performing. It is for those compelling reasons that the Bill was brought forward.

There is no question that we in government examined whether we could have gone further. I have said both here and in committee that the Government would like to move as far as it can on this pension issue, but we had to examine very carefully the financial realities. But despite restraint, despite the deficit and the costs it imposes on all Canadians, I believe the country is willing to move forward on this proposal on its merits.

We in this House hear a lot about pension reform. I am in favour of a very strong approach to pension reform. Those Canadians who are retired or close to retirement have limited flexibility in retirement planning, obviously. But those Canadians who are in the workforce or coming into the workforce have to recognize that planning for retirement is something that should be looked at much sooner than statistics indicate most Canadians do, that is in the last 10 years of their working life. If one starts thinking of it at the end, so to speak, and then starts to make plans, much of one's flexibility is lost. The House has a responsibility, and I have the mandate, for pension reform, not only incrementally as is being done through Bill C-26. I am not here to discuss the Budget right now. That is for another time.

• (1600)

Mr. Nystrom: You wouldn't dare.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Oh, no I would dare. The provisions in the Budget for the Pension Benefits Standards Act have been lauded by everyone. They provide the flexibility to enable people to plan for and develop a pension plan. The House must move further in that direction. The matter of a homemaker's pension and extended benefits under the Canada Pension Plan along the lines followed by the Quebec Pension Plan commend themselves to most Members of the House.

I do not look at pensions only in the narrow confines of the budget debate or the confines of Bill C-26, but rather realize that pension planning takes an entire lifetime. Our society must realize that it is necessary for Canadians to plan for retirement. I know that many people have had a limited amount of income which makes that very difficult to do, but we must educate young people just entering the workforce about retirement planning. I know that people do not like to think of that time in their life because they have other priorities, but they should not ignore the necessity of pension planning.

Our demography in Canada is changing. It is of very little value to argue the narrow issues of whether pensions are at the proper level or how many people are living in poverty. We must address the causes of poverty and what changes can be made by society in order to alleviate or reduce that problem. I am well aware of the number of elderly people living below the poverty line. I do not think there is one Member of this House who would not wish to allocate more money to that segment of the population if it were possible. However, we must bear in mind the financial situation of the country. Government and society must address the issue of a population study.

The Green Paper on the Immigration Act dealt in part with the population future of Canada. At the present time, approximately 12 per cent of Canada's population is over the age of 65. It is projected that in 12 to 15 years that age group will make up between 18 and 20 per cent of our population. Therefore, we must become much more aggressive and co-operative in studying our health care system in order to provide proper health care. We must put a much greater emphasis on preventive health care and health promotion, because Canadians over the age of 65 access the health care system substantially more than the rest of society. It is necessary to realize that from the point of view of future planning.

We are in our first generation of health care. Public health care in Canada began in the Province of Saskatchewan and has evolved and developed for 25 years. That system is good as is their pension system. We must all realize that while the system is good, it must be adjusted to meet present realities. The House has the very distinct opportunity and responsibility to plan together for retirement income and the health care system. Other aspects obviously must be added. The Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight) who is also the Minister responsible for CMHC, realizes that from the point of view of housing. There are various components which must be given much more emphasis, and that is what the Government and I intend to do.

In conclusion, I appreciate the support of Members of the House for Bill C-26. I believe it is a progressive and good step. Eighty-five thousand Canadians will receive approximately $600 a month for which they are not presently eligible. Of those, 85,000, 72,000 are women living in the most difficult circumstances. Those are the strong points which commend this Bill to the House. I appreciate the views put forward by Members in committee, which views have been noted by the Government. I appreciate the fact that all Members want to have this Bill passed. The passage of this Bill will enable us to put this program in place for September 1, 1985. I thank the House for supporting this Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak on third reading of Bill C-26, and I can give the Minister the assurance that the Liberal Party, the Official Opposition, intends to support this Bill. However I believe that the point the Official Opposition has been trying to make is, that all the arguments mentioned by the Minister to justify granting the spouse's allowance to widows and widowers, and all the examples he gave his constituency office, apply equally to individuals who are single, separated or divorced.

Mr. Speaker, it is true that this is just one step, but Bill C-26 must be followed as soon as possible by the next step.

Mr. Speaker, when this Bill is implemented, and when, starting September 1, and in the months thereafter, people come with their problems to our constituency offices, I hope the Minister and his Conservative colleagues will remember they were forewarned by the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about the more general subject of pension reform the Minister referred to earlier. I think that if we really want to make any progress in this area and ensure that the next generation will have an adequate retirement income, we cannot afford to study the issue piecemeal, as was proposed in the Budget. We cannot afford the so-called bandaid approach.

I agree with the Minister of National Health and Welfare that young people must be persuaded to save money for a decent retirement, but how can we urge 1.5 million unemployed, how can we ask them to save money for their retirement when they do not have enough money to keep body and soul together?

I think that what the Minister said earlier about pension reform in connection with employment and housing is quite true. Unfortunately, the Government is doing the exact opposite. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) has made his own review of the situation. The Minister responsible for Housing makes his own decisions, and tomorrow he is going to announce closings and changes everywhere, without consulting a soul, and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) makes his own decisions again.

Mr. Speaker, the very important question arises: Can the private and public sectors absorb 1,400,000 unemployed? Can the private and public sectors respond to the Government's request to eliminate full unemployment? My answer is: no. What other means do we have to solve the unemployment problem and help solve problems for people who want to be able to retire?

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the parties and all intervenors, from all parts of the socio-economic sphere, should look at the broader rather than the sectorial aspects of the question. There are quite a few men and women who are now 59 or 60 years old and who are employed in the textile or footwear industry for instance, who work even if they are ill, and who are obliged to remain on the labour market for financial reasons. A large percentage of these people are not interested in going back to school to learn new technologies, and at the same time, we are telling young people who are trained: Stay home and collect unemployment insurance.

Mr. Speaker, I have an example of this in my riding, in the tobacco industry. This particular business had a surplus of 60 employees that it would have to lay off. Normally, according to the collective bargaining agreement, the last 60 hired would be laid off. The union and management agreed to offer early retirement to whoever was interested. The company did not rely on the Government alone, but offered all employees who were 55 and over and had a fair number of years of seniority, $30,000 in cash, in fact what the company calls its private pension. Mr. Speaker, to my astonishment, not 60 but 120 employees accepted the offer and applied for early retirement.

Because of this, not only was part of the productivity problem of this company resolved, but jobs were also created for younger workers because 120 people were offered the choise of retiring at 60 with a decent income.

For my part, I am convinced that if business, labour, the consumer groups and the Governments really got together, we could not only reduce unemployment, but also improve the income and the quality of life of people who wish to take early retirement. We had an example of early retirement programs in the shoe and textile industry because of plant shut-downs and designated zones. I am personally convinced that, as far as the unemployment insurance fund is concerned, if the Governments really wanted to do it, if we were to add all the money allocated to social programs, whether we are speaking about unemployment insurance, old age security or social welfare, all programs which obviously represent enormous amounts of money, which admittedly comes from the taxpayers and do not belong in the pockets of Members of Parliament, and including the social housing programs which are important to provide assisance to the needy because it is a fact that in certain places, there are two classes of poor people, namely the lucky ones who have the same old age security pension or welfare cheques as others, but who live in low rental housing, and the others who are not so lucky because, in Montreal, there is a waiting list of 1,500 people for this type of housing, and who, with the same income, namely the old age security pension or welfare cheques, have higher expenses because they did not have the good luck to find a low rental appartment—

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that we must act urgently to allow people to take an earlier retirement, and I honestly believed that a new Government with 211 Members in Parliament had a marvelous chance to do something else than apply band-aid measures and that it would develop some real policies in this regard. In European countries where such things have existed for hundreds of years, retirement plans were not invented by Governments, but rather by unions and workers. The workers themselves manage the pension funds. Whether in France, Germany or somewhere else, pension plans were not invented by the Governments, but by the workers. The business managers who administer their own pension funds are the ones to decide how the money will be invested and they are the ones who tell the Government what should be the amount of the contributions and benefits. However, in Canada, while the Quebec Pension Plan works well in my opinion, we must be honest as far as the Canada Pension Plan, which applies to all the other provinces, is concerned. Everyone knows that any surpluses in the fund are lent at preferential rates to the provinces. Politicians of all parties will have to stop putting their heads in the sand. The money contributed by all taxpayers to pay for a retirement fund will have to be invested to provide better returns than at the present time. It is no secret that the provincial Governments, except in Quebec, want an increase in contributions, but not in benefits. Why is it? Because they want a surplus in the fund which they will be able to borrow to build and pave roads. However, I think that we must have the political will to stop the Canada Pension Plan from being a means to finance or to assist the provinces, and this is one of the basic reasons for creating a real program for retired citizens.

Looking at the recommendations contained in the Budget, and even at those submitted by the Committee on Health, Welfare and Social Affairs under the Liberal Government, some improvements are being made but still a large group of citizens in need are completely ignored. When one wishes to open the door to the private sector, which for years has had a chance to get into private sector retirement plans, there are thousands and thousands of employees in small businesses who for various reasons do not have private plans. And as long as we do not make sure that the Quebec Pension Plan and the Canada Pension Plan will provide a reasonable amount to allow for a budget with the basic Old Age Security pension, I do not think we will have solved the problem. People who will come here after us in 20, 30 years from now will be making the same speeches we are now making, and will still be doing patchwork.

Mr. Speaker, I will conclude on this. There is still reason to rejoice in the fact that, as of September 1st, 85,000 people will benefit from the spouse's allowance, but I will tell the Government it could have chosen to give something else to those people, instead of the spouse's allowance. Because it is indeed rather strange that one should get the spouse's allowance after having had no spouse for 20 years. This could have been the basic Old Age Security Pension that could have been made accessible, and as we know there is a difference dollarwise between the spouse's allowance and the basic pension. But even though I have been quite critical of the Minister, I must recognize that some commendation is deserved for helping 85,000 people. It is my hope that next year we will discuss helping 80,000 other persons, and the year after we will be doing the same for couples.

• (1620)

[English]

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on third reading. Let me start off by picking up on what the Minister said about our pension and medicare system. He made reference to the fact that the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight), myself, the Hon. Member for The Battlefords-Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley), and the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Hnatyshyn) come from the Province of Saskatchewan where medicare first got its beginning. It actually started with hospitalization around 1946-47 around the time I was born. We had medicare in 1961 under Premiers Douglas and Lloyd. I think Saskatchewan led the way in social legislation and the kind of legislation we have before the House today. This kind of legislation is a positive step forward.

As we said before, there are a number of people who are discriminated against through no fault of their own who find themselves in poverty. I am referring to widows and widowers who are the ones, along with other pioneers who built this country, laid the foundation and made Canada what it is today. We as a younger generation ought to make sure that these people can live in dignity and have enough income in order to purchase the necessities in life. I support the measure before the House today.

We should keep in mind that about 42 per cent of the pensioners in Ontario, according to a recent study made public a few days ago, live in poverty. If 42 per cent in Ontario live in poverty, that percentage is surely a lot higher in Newfoundland, Manitoba and other provinces that are the so-called have-not provinces. We should be doing as much as possible to make sure that we extend to the seniors as many benefits as possible.

[Translation]

As I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, we are all in agreement on Bill C-26 now before us. I would like to commend the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) for this measure. It will extend the spouse's allowance program to Canadian widows and widowers who are now in need, people between the ages of 60 and 64 who are now facing great difficulties in our society. As the Minister mentioned, there will be 85,000 people who will be helped by this measure, and they are mostly women.

But, Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I must say before this debate is concluded, and it is this: I support the legislation, as I said, but the Bill still is discriminatory. It discriminates against people who are single, people who are divorced, because under the Bill the spouse's allowance will be allowed to persons who are widows or widowers, but there will be nothing at all for those who did not marry or were divorced. And I wonder, Mr. Speaker, why such a discrimination? This is discrimination in our country and it is totally unfair, because we can find many examples of women or men who never married or who were divorced and now find themselves in the same economic and social situation as a neighbour who was married or whose spouse is now deceased, and then one neighbour will get the allowance while the other will not. In our society this is totally unfair.

As I said before dinner, we proclaimed the Charter in this country a few weeks ago—

[English]

We have the equality clause in the Charter of Rights. Here we are talking about equality on the basis of sex and everything else. Even though it is not in the Charter of Rights, this is an act of discrimination against single and divorced people.

In any case—

[Translation]

—I agree, we all agree on that, Mr. Speaker. Maybe we can all vote together for this legislation, and again I applaud the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

[English]

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, there are just a couple of words that I want to say. I will not hold up the debate for very long. I think it is important to keep in mind that the measure before us today with its deficiencies cannot be held in isolation as far as assisting the needy is concerned. I wish the Government of Canada had a united front as far as assisting the poor and the needy is concerned. It is all well and good to say, "We are doing this as a positive measure to assist people with income", while at the same time you do not assist them very much when you increase fuel taxes. You do not assist them when you increase the sales tax and extend it. Those things affect the very people you are trying to assist in the legislation before us today.

All this has to be taken into account when one talks about a Government that is sensitive to poor people and people who need assistance. It does not help either, Mr. Speaker, to pretend sometimes that you are considering such and such a measure that will affect people adversely. Take, for example, the postal rate increase. That increase was approved ages ago by Cabinet. It is in effect now. Not very many Members know that. I have had that verified. Many things have to be kept in mind and you take them as a whole. Is the Government of Canada being fair and honest when it says it is being sensitive to the poor people, to the people who are affected by this legislation in the rural areas? They are the same people who were affected when the Minister in charge of housing, who was in the Chamber a moment ago, cut back on the home repair program. I say that because the new criteria for getting money for home repair mean, with the present cuts, that only people in certain economic circumstances who would benefit from this legislation can now take advantage of that program. To cut back on that program is not assisting those people at all.

We considered recently the end of the oil substitution program. The criteria for that affected the very people we are talking about today, the poor people. When you look at it all, it is done on the basis of a means test. A lot of the programs in CMHC under the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) are so directed. When Cabinet Ministers consider legislation such as this, they should think about their own Departments and how they can assist poor people. This is what the Minister of National Health and Welfare is attempting to do under this piece of legislation, although not completely. It is not good enough for poor people who are recipients of various government programs to have one Department that is trying to help and another Department, bringing in new regulations because of the Budget or the financial statement which discriminate against the same people, especially if the new regulations involve additional fees or charges.

● (1630)

I have another suggestion for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. A few moments ago he said that he was listening carefully to this debate and that he would see what he could do about some of the suggestions that had been made. In a previous debate I made a point about the fact that in the event of borderline cases, cases which have to be appealed or have to be decided upon by an independent board, all cheques emanating from the Department of National Health and Welfare or portions thereof are seized by provincial administrations because the individuals are on social assistance. If a person is really poor and is receiving social assistance, as is the case for many people affected by this legislation, the people about whom we are talking, this situation is not good enough. I could never understand how we got into that bind in the past. In fact, I cannot understand it today. I suppose it is because of good federal-provincial relations that when someone receiving social assistance suddenly becomes eligible for a federal pension or a payment from the Department of National Health and Welfare, the amount of money paid out by the provincial administration is taken 100 per cent from the federal payment, that is, the moment the person became eligible and throughout the appeal period. On the basis of the financial return to the federal Treasury, I hope the Minister agrees with me on the needs of the persons applying and qualifying for pensions but not receiving them because they are seized by provincial authorities with the agreement of the federal Department of National Health and Welfare.

I should like to put the example of a person receiving $8,000 before the Minister. That is a good figure to use because many of the appeals which go to the Minister's Department under its payment structure are around that figure. If that person has received $8,000 from the provincial Department of Social Services from the time he or she became eligible, and if he appeals through the Minister's Department, half of the $8,000 is paid from the federal Treasury in transfer payments under the Canada Assistance Plan. These payments are made at the end of every month. In effect, if $8,000 is paid out by a provincial Department of Social Services or Department of Welfare, $4,000 of it comes from the federal Government.

What happens after a person becomes qualified to receive cheques in the amount of $8,000 from the Department of National Health and Welfare? We must remember that a judgment had been reached prior to this point. Whether it is the Canada Pension Plan, a disability pension, an old age pension or a payment under the particular legislation before us today, a decision has been reached, the person qualifies, and what does the Government of Canada do? It passes $8,000 along to the provincial Government. How does it work? The provincial authority pays out $8,000, half of which is retrieved under the Canada Assistance Plan, so it actually paid out $4,000. Along comes the payment from the Department of National Health and Welfare which goes to the provincial administration, and it ends up with $8,000 plus $4,000, for a total of $12,000 for paying out only $8,000.

I have tried to figure out how that is rationalized on the accounts at the end of the year. I still have not been able to do so. I cannot find anyone to tell me exactly how that amount is recovered. We are not talking about a large figure or about a great number of people, but we are talking about people in great need. According to my calculations, the provincial administration would stand to benefit $4,000 from that $8,000 pay-out.

I am sure the Minister of National Health and Welfare will check into the logic of what I have just said. He will find out that what I have said is correct. It has been going on for years. I am not accusing the Minister of implementing this when he took office. However, because of his good relations with provincial Tory Governments, the system of transferring money has become much easier since last September 4. In any event, he should check it out.

I would suggest that when someone is owed money by his Department, the Minister should pay 50 per cent of it to the provincial administration and the other 50 per cent to the recipient. Recipients believe that they are appealing pensions to which they are entitled. Therein the Minister of National Health and Welfare would be doing a great service for not all that many people, but for people who have been completely misled by the information which they received vis-à-vis their pension payments.

In conclusion, as I mentioned on another occasion, let us not forget that there are many people in the country who believe that when their pensions are increased or they suddenly become eligible for pensions, they will benefit in real terms. However, what about people on fixed incomes? We must remember that the amount of money a person receives depends upon the province in which he or she resides. I have never understood why provinces with some of the highest costs of living have the lowest payments. There are people between the ages of 60 and 65 today, with their children or grandchildren at home, who are receiving only the widow's allowance from the provincial Department of Social Services. Some provinces say that people 18 years of age and over who are able-bodied cannot receive any money under their social assistance schemes or do not qualify for family allowance payments. There are people operating under very tight budgets. We must keep in mind that many of them will not see any benefit at all because their social assistance payments will be removed. As well, people who are institutionalized and subsidized by this Government, directly or indirectly, only receive what is called the comforts allowance, whether it comes from social assistance, the federal cheque or wherever. As I said before, I have never been able to figure out why the comforts allowance in one province is higher than the comforts allowance in another province or why some of the richest provincial Governments—and Mr. Speaker knows the ones about which I am talking—have the lowest comforts allowance.

Sir:

I have the honour to inform you that Hon. Antonio Lamer, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber to-day, the 20th day of June, 1985, at 5.45 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

I have the honour to be,

STATUTE LAW (CANADIAN CHARTER OF RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS) AMENDMENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice) moved that Bill C-27, an Act to amend certain Acts having regard to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have had an opportunity both at second reading and in committee to make my representations with respect to this Bill. I believe that this Bill has the unanimous support of the House in terms of its content. There is one amendment on which I will say a few words and repeat an undertaking that I believe the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) brought to the attention of the House, both at second reading and at committee, which resulted in a change to the Bill. I would like to also make one or two comments prior to doing that.

I think it is very important to understand that the purpose of this Bill is not to change policy. This Bill was brought in because lawyers in the Department of Justice thought that more than 55 Acts of Parliament as they stood would be viewed by courts as unconstitutional. As a result of that there were changes that were made, some of the changes being very significant.

In my view, and this is a personal impression, the powers with respect to search and seizure were long overdue, were absolutely necessary and as a result of a case that went to the Ontario Court of Appeal, the Southam case, we found that dramatically changed the search and seizure provisions which I think inure to the protection of individual rights. I certainly applaud this change in so many statutes. We even see statutes now with respect to the Income Tax Act where the powers of search and seizure have been dramatically circumscribed.

With respect to the question of the Immigration Act, which was the subject matter of the only amendment in the Immigration Act, the Act as it read previously, Section 29(2) and Section 29(3) said this:

(2) At the request or with the permission of the person with respect to whom an inquiry is to be held, an adjudicator shall allow any person to attend an inquiry if such attendance is not likely to impede the inquiry.

(3) Except as provided in subsection (2), an inquiry by an adjudicator shall be held in camera.

There was no practical criticism with respect to the handling of this particular procedure prior to this Bill. The Hon. Member for Spadina brought up the point that as a result of the prospective amendment, which was Section 112, of the new Bill that what might happen with respect to this matter is that there could be circumstances under which a refugee might not want to disclose publicly to some people who might be in attendance or to some newspaper reporters who might be there the circumstances under which he was claiming the status of refugee for fear that certain consequences might ensue. This might very well be not only to him, but to members of his family. It might be people behind the Iron Curtain, it might be people in Chile, it might be people in many other countries where the public circumstances would be of such a nature that great harm could occur to the family.

This is something that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), myself and all members of the Committee thought was a legitimate criticism and which prompted an amendment which I thought was satisfactory and which was agreed upon. That amendment is as follows: Section 112(3) now reads as a result of the amendment, Mr. Speaker, "except as provided in Subsection (2), an inquiry by an adjudicator shall be held in camera unless it is established to the satisfaction of the adjudicator on application by a member of the public that the conduct of the inquiry in public would not impede the inquiry and that the person with respect to whom the inquiry is to be held or any member of that person's family would not be adversely affected if the inquiry were to be held or conducted in public".

In addition to this particular amendment, there was an undertaking that representatives for the Department of Immigration and Employment and the Minister would closely monitor the actual workings of this amendment to ensure that no harm occurred in circumstances where potential refugees were making application for that status.

The Bill as a whole, and I have said this before, is a grat improvement because it puts in constitutional order many federal statutes that, with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, might very well be held to be unconstitutional. It is no panacea. It is not the end of the process. Many Bills come before Parliament now that the Charter is here, where the Charter provisions have to be taken into consideration in terms of the due process. It is a start. It is a very, very substantial move forward. It is not the end of the line.

I hope that all Members of all Parties will believe that this is progress.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, this is not a substantial step forward in this Bill, but speaking for Her Majesty's Official Opposition, we are certainly not going to delay the movement of this Bill forward. It will have our support. What a great opportunity has been lost to Canada in this Bill to see some real progress in implementing the equality provisions of the Charter. What the Government spokesman—and I note the absence of the Minister who has taken little personal interest in the Bill from what I can see—the Parliamentary Secretary, who has followed the Bill and who I congratulate for his own personal dedication to moving the Bill forward to this point, indicated in his remarks really tells the whole story.

• (1650)

The story is that the lawyers in the Department of Justice thought that there were certain technical changes that ought to be made to bring some of the statutes into compliance with the requirements of the Charter. What has been lost is an opportunity to move ahead by implementing some of the significant provisions in the Charter which also require that the laws of Canada be changed.

I had the opportunity to spend a few days on the subcommittee of the Parliamentary Justice Committee. That subcommittee heard witnesses who told it about all of the things that have been left out of this Bill. They have been left out of the Bill because the Government considers them to be grey areas, as it said in its document on equality.

What has been done is just the technical minimum. There has mostly been changes in language like trying to find ways of making words that are usually of a masculine connotation not connote one sex or the other. Although I approve of that process, it does very little to advance the rights of women and of others for whom the Charter was brought forward and for whom there was a three-year waiting period that led to that great day on April 17 when the full provisions of the Charter came into effect. These people have found that the Government's approach toward implementing the Charter equality provisions is to make technical changes that have been recommended by lawyers.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We just picked up where you left off.

Mr. Kaplan: My hon. friend, the government House Leader, observes that they just picked up the work that we were doing. I do not think that that is an accurate statement. My clear recollection of the approach of the former Liberal Government was to ask lawyers to go over all the legislation to find what needed to be changed to comply with the Charter and to prepare amendments to do that. They were not asked to prepare discussion papers and to call these issues grey areas, but were asked to propose the amendments that ought to be made to bring the Charter into full effect in this country.

The time that I have spent with the subcommittee has given me some great insights into the real shortcomings of this piece of legislation. For example, I asked a lawyer who appeared before the committee what advice she thought the law officers of the Crown must have given the Government about changes that were needed. She said that she felt that the Government was in a sense hiding behind its grey area theory and was saying that more discussion was needed. I asked her for a concrete example of the sort of thing that the Government was calling a grey area but that would be patently obvious to any lawyer and indeed to any Canadian who would think about it that an amendment to a law of Canada would be required by the Charter. The example to which she referred was the rights of handicapped people to exercise their franchise.

Now, of course there is nothing in the law that prohibits the handicapped from voting, but what the Government knows very well is that the way polling booths are established on voting day, absolutely no consideration is given to whether the handicapped can get into the polling station or not. Every Member of this House knows from his or her own experience that there are a great many polling stations into which handicapped people cannot enter. The lawyer to whom I spoke was confident, as I am, that this issue must have been brought to the attention of the Government and that some provision could have been brought forward to give the handicapped an option to vote in federal elections through mail-in ballots, as is done in a number of other countries, or perhaps at a polling station to which access is physically available. However, that does not appear in this legislation. I regret very much the fact that this is a technical Bill. I regret very much that the Government has taken that attitude toward the implementation of the provisions of the Charter.

I would like to tell Hon. Members about something else I experienced while participating on the subcommittee that is looking into these so-called grey areas. Last night, the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen) attended our meeting to explain to the subcommittee what he called the enthusiasm of the Department of National Defence for making equality a reality for women and others who have been closed out of full participation in the important work done by the Armed Forces.

The Minister showed mean-mindedness toward change. He told the committee that the Department was prepared to obey the law and to implement the provisions of the Charter. What he meant by that was that if, for example, the 10-year old girl who appeared before the subcommittee in Toronto the day before asking for the right which is now denied women to be a pilot could raise the support, could go to court, could win her case, could finance and appeal which would surely be forthcoming against a verdict that would be supportive of her, if the Department could examine the clause which gives it the right to override the Charter in certain limited circumstances, and if the Parliamentary Committee could not be persuaded to rubber-stamp the present arrangements of the Department of National Defence, then the regulations would be changed.

The Minister told us that there was a group examining various alternatives for increasing the participation of women in National Defence. He said that inquiries were being made of our NATO partners in order to find out what they were doing because God forbid that Canada should show a role of leadership in giving women equal rights in National Defence.

What the meeting last night boiled down to was that the Charter was not the impetus for the Minister of National Defence to put anything new on the table as far as women are concerned. He was telling us about recommendations that were made in 1971 by a Royal Commission which examined management practices within the Government. He showed us how much progress had been made in his Department since 1971, and I suppose that progress was made by the former Liberal Government, in implementing recommendations now 13 years old. However, would the Charter lead this Minister to do anything new? Absolutely not, and that is very regrettable.

I mentioned the Minister of National Defence specifically because he appeared before us last night. I think that any Canadian can see from this Bill that every Department of Government has acted in virtually the same manner. They have proposed technical amendments, bankruptcy law amendments and changes in language to conform to sexual equality, but regrettably progress in creating greater equality will not come from the Government. It will come from private citizens who will insist on their rights and will take the trouble to go to court and from those who, if defeated, can afford to appeal.

On the subject of appeal, the Governement has taken a pretty clear position, although there was some difference between the positions of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), on whether or not Canada would be prepared on any basis whatsoever to assist Canadians in bringing cases to court to establish the meaning of the Charter. So far, the word on that is that no financial assistance will be given by the Government for the bringing of lawsuits to establish this type of right.

I conclude by indicating that Liberal Members will not obstruct this Bill. However, all of us regard it as a very great tragedy that an occasion that was looked forward to so much as being the moment when underprivileged groups would have their rights recognized is being deferred to the committee that is reviewing the document about grey areas and deferred to individuals who are determined and supportive enough to take their cases to court.

• (1700)

I want to close by expressing the optimism which I feel for the spirit which I detected in the Justice subcommittee. It is working with very great vigour and it is working extremely long hours. It is determined to travel to all parts of the country. However, the subcommittee cannot hear everyone who wants to be heard. Over 800 groups and individuals want to be heard. Obviously, the subcommittee would never be able to conclude its work and submit a report if it heard all of them. However, I think there is some basis for optimism that the subcommittee, even though it is dominated by government Members, may well make recommendations which will take us beyond the very limited and technical advances which have been made in Bill C-27.

STATUTE LAW (CANADIAN CHARTER OF RIGHTS AND FREEDOMS) AMENDMENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Justice) that Bill C-27, An Act to amend certain Acts having regard to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak on third reading of Bill C-27.

It was required three years ago that the Bill be adopted this spring. The three years were required to review all federal legislation in order to bring that legislation into line with the equality rights section of the Charter. It was thought that three years was time enough to cover a good deal of the legislation.

Unlike the previous speaker, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan), I am somewhat disappointed. In fact, my caucus colleagues, especially the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), are disappointed at the small amount which has been done and the very narrow interpretation of the mandate by the Minister in drafting the Bill. He has taken a very legalistic approach. He has changed several words, but he has often fallen short of the intent of the original mandate. However, the changes which have been made, with one exception, are changes which we would not wish to oppose. Therefore, we will support the Bill.

I would like to reinforce what the previous Member said about the rights of the handicapped. Very strong committee work has been done during the last several years on the rights of the handicapped. It is a pity that the work which was done by that parliamentary committee was not reflected in this Bill. In the same way, generally, the rights of women are ignored. For example, rights of pregnant women were unfortunately denied in a Supreme Court case. A woman was discriminated against because she was pregnant, but the court held that she was not discriminated against because she was a woman. Men can make jokes about how men might be pregnant. The Mayor of Montreal lost his bet on that point. The fact is that something should have been done to correct the situation once the Supreme Court had pointed out that inequality in the law.

More generally, I find that there is an unsatisfactory tendency, which is reflected in the legislation, to treat the principle of equality in the wrong way. It is similar to the equality of the elephant and the mouse. The elephant is free to step on the mouse, and the mouse is free to step on the elephant. As a French writer suggested, the law in its majesty forbids rich and poor alike to sleep on park benches or to steal bread. That is not the intent of the Charter and of the people who supported the Charter in the matter of equality.

Equality must be not equality of strength, it must be equality of personal dignity. In other words, a weak person has the same personal dignity as a strong person. To set the rules in such a way that the strong can take advantage of the weak, is a denial of equality, not an affirmation of it.

I wish to speak on the amendment to which the Parliamentary Secretary spoke. I am glad the amendment was made, even though the Hon. Member for Burnaby voted against it in its final form. I would have voted against it had I been in his place. Nevertheless, we support the legislation as a whole. I appreciate that the Parliamentary Secretary outlined the amendment which was proposed originally, the objections which were made by myself and others, and the revised amendment as it appears before us. I also appreciate his reaffirmation of a commitment. As I understand it, it is a commitment to draw to the attention of immigration officials that it is our expectation that the rights of refugees will be sustained. A further commitment was made to monitor the operation of that clause to ensure that it does not fail, or, if it does fail, to ensure that action will be taken.

The amendment which was moved originally by the Hon. Member for Burnaby in committee, which, in its revised form, is now in the Bill, is something which we can live with on an experimental basis. It leaves the onus where it was in the original law, and where it should be. That is to say, a hearing at which a person makes his claim to refugee status will be held in camera unless some member of the public, journalist or other, can show that it would not hinder the progress of the hearing or endanger the claimant or his family to hold it in public. I regret that we have introduced that amount of uncertainty in a process in which a person's life or liberty, and the lives and liberties of other people, may be endangered in ways which neither a journalist nor other people concerned are likely to realize. I believe that the rights of the journalist should not take precedence over the rights of the refugee claimant. The penalty, if something went wrong for the refugee claimant, may be far greater than any possible penalty if something went wrong for the journalist. I regret that the Ontario Supreme Court decision was so quickly adopted by the Government and applied here. I am speaking, of course, of the Southam decision. However, the revision of the amendment in committee, and the assurances of the Parliamentary Secretary, help to reduce the risk and potential damage to refugees.

I wish to point out an anomaly. When the committee pulled Section 112 of the Immigration Act, it decided to make a move toward the application of the Charter. However, the committee did nothing else to remove certain kinds of inequality which exist in the Immigration Act. People who step off the plane at Pearson International Airport, Mirabel or anywhere else, who are regarded by the first officer whom they meet as possibly inadmissible are sent for examination by an immigration officer. He may send them to detention after which, when they go to an inquiry, they have the right of counsel.

● (1710)

At the point when they are sent for that first examination before an immigration officer, they are denied the right of counsel. Not the law, but the guidelines issued by the Executive Director of Immigration, forbids access to counsel, legal or otherwise. That refugee claimant, probably a stranger in the country, would hardly speak English—we don't get many refugees from English-speaking countries—although he or she might speak in a dialect which would be hard to understand. That person who does not know our laws is confronted with uniformed officers—perhaps he is on the run from uniformed officers in his own country—and he is denied the right of counsel at the point when he makes his first statement in front of an immigration officer.

That is unjust, Mr. Speaker. It is a denial of the right of counsel which our charter upholds for all people in Canada. This has been affirmed by the Supreme Court to the extent that it has maintained that a refugee claimant within our borders has the right to a judicial hearing with all that goes with it.

There are other inequalities which the committee overlooked in examining the Immigration Act. For example, a Canadian citizen who applies to sponsor a relative to immigrate into Canada, and whose appeal is denied by officials, has the right to appeal to the Immigration Appeal Board. However, a permanent Canadian resident, non-citizen, does not have that right. That is something which the Minister has addressed in legislation which she tabled yesterday. There are other problems with that legislation, but it is possible that if those problems are corrected it may be passed and adopted. Why is it not adopted in this Bill? Why is it not put forward when it is recognized that the courts will demand and require, if asked, that we give the same right to the permanent resident as is now enjoyed by a Canadian citizen?

With respect to the right of counsel, it is required in our Charter that everyone has the right to counsel when he is in danger of being deprived of life or liberty. Generally speaking, that means that if any of us are required to answer questions of any police force, we have the right to have counsel with us. People who are detained in an immigrant holding centre do not have that right.

Last fall, when the RCMP and CSIS separately interrogated people who were detained at the Avion Detention Centre near Pearson International Airport, these people were not given the right of counsel. We are told that the investigation by the RCMP and CSIS was necessary because they had to protect the Queen and the Pope from terrorists. Apparently no one told the RCMP or CSIS that the Queen and Pope had left the country several weeks before those interrogations took place. Members of CSIS, by law, are allowed to read the newspapers, but apparently they do not, so these interrogations were held for reasons undisclosed and without the people being interrogated having the benefit of counsel.

Another point which concerns refugee claimants particularly is the right to work and to support themselves by their work. Some are given work permits, some are not. There are various circumstances and administrative decisions, but there is no law which supports their right to work. That is something which should have been considered in this Bill. The same applies to the right to schooling or medical care under our health insurance law. Our public schooling and public health services are not readily and certainly available to refugee claimants who have been admitted and who are awaiting determination of their status. That is a matter of equality, Mr. Speaker, which should have been addressed in this Bill and was not.

I agree with those who say that the Bill is good as far as it goes. Except for a little uncertainty with respect to the treatment of in camera hearings for the refugee claimant, it is generally good, but it could and ought to have gone a good deal farther. When further consideration is given to this subject, as I hope it will be, it is quite important that people understand that "equality" means equality of human dignity and the protection of human dignity. That means the protection of the weak against the strong who can look out for themselves, rather than some mechanical and superficial bureaucratic approach which increases the power of the strong as against the weak. That principle has to be straightened out, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to make any serious progress in introducing equality into our statutes.

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, it is not my desire to prolong the debate on C-27 at this stage of the proceedings. I know there is an agreement to pass it in short order. However, I want to point out to the House that Bill C-27 is really one step in a process which, in the view of many parliamentarians, ought to be an ongoing process; that is the comparison of all Bills and legislative provisions brought before the House of Commons and the Senate to the provisions of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

When Parliament agreed to, and did pass, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, it was clear that those provisions applied to all legislation passed by the Parliament of Canada. In order to pursue that legal position, there ought to be some ongoing method for examining legislative provisions to ensure compliance with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. In fact, some steps have been taken to ensure that such a process is included in the procedures of Parliament, both in the House of Commons and in the other place, and that matter has been given consideration by the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan), as Chairman of that committee, and our other colleagues on the committee, have considered this matter and have recommended the passage of a resolution to the effect that all Bills be referred to the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and other Statutory Instruments for examination to determine whether provisions of the Bill comply with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Such a resolution was passed by the other place on February 26, 1985, and I think it ought to be considered by the House of Commons.

We realize that the same matter is under consideration as a result of recommendations of other parliamentary committees, particularly the Special Committee on Reform of the House of Commons, and all the recommendations might be brought together. We realize also that it would take time to review the situation to determine what exactly is the appropriate process to ensure that Bills and legislative provisions brought before the House of Commons are examined in this way to ensure compliance with the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

I merely want to take the opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to record this interest in the records of the House of Commons and to recognize that the process of examining statutory provisions in relation to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms is an ongoing process and ought to be enshrined in our procedures.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. I would not want to delay the study of this Bill, but I would like to make a few comments on Bill C-27, an Act to amend certain Acts having regard to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Mr. Speaker, there are grey areas in the Charter of Rights, especially concerning Section 15, and, to use a controversial euphemism, the matter has obviously been put off indefinitely or again referred to a committee for further study. I would simply like to share with the House a few opinions or points of view on minority groups, be they official languages minority groups or ethnic or linguistic minority groups. In my opinion, the House should know——that Section 15 does not preclude affirmative action programs. Many of us remain in the dark on the Government's position. We all agree that Bill C-27 is not the be-all and end-all of justice and equity; it does not radically change any laws. I think on second reading of this Bill I made a comment that a lot of the changes proposed were indeed semantical changes, words that were used to replace some other words.

● (1720)

[English]

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the question which is of some concern to us and which I would like to share with the House relates to minorities who feel that their rights are being breached and would like to launch court appeals against certain sections of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. More particularly, I have in mind the Court Challenges Program which made it possible for certain minority groups—Anglophones in Quebec or Francophones outside Quebec—to obtain from the federal Government either financial or legal assistance to appeal against the implementation of a provision of the Charter.

Mr. Speaker, the House will recall that last April 30 marked the end of the Court Challenges Program administered by the Secretary of State (Mr. McLean). The Government has not yet deemed it advisable to re-establish this program. I often rose in the House to ask questions to find out what would happen to the program and I must say that I have not yet received a direct or satisfactory answer from the Government. They seem to be dragging their feet on this issue. They told us: Yes, the matter is under review, we will have an announcement to make in the near future.

I want to emphasize to the House that a financial and legal assistance program is important to official languages minorities. I say so because I think most Members of the House share that opinion. We believe that minority groups should be helped and supported by the majority. And we also believe that the federal Government is the agency and, perhaps, the level of Government most capable and best equipped to help minority groups defend and uphold their rights before the courts.

When I mention linguistic rights, I think in particular of certain groups from Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. I can say offhand that there are presently at least two cases in Alberta and one in Saskatchewan. We all know that the Government must or should take heed of the invitation from the Supreme Court regarding Manitoba.

Concerning this program of court challenges, in my view, the government has a duty to allocate funds and also human resources at the department concerned in order to help groups to have their rights recognized by the courts. If we have a Charter of Rights, Mr. Speaker, and if our minority groups, in order to assert, to clarify and to have their rights recognized, have to pay from their own pocket, then I believe a society such as ours, a society which views itself as open, generous and most of all understanding must put in place a program which is generous toward these groups who are eager to benefit from it, especially at the financial level. I know full well, for instance, having met recently with people from Alberta, that there is a case being heard in court about Section 23 of the Charter, concerning the schools. I also know of another case in the criminal courts, involving an individual wanting a trial in French.

It is essential, Mr. Speaker, that minority groups, and I refer to Manitoba, have the assurance within the next few days that such a program will be put in place, a program of financial assistance for court challenges, in order for these groups to get organized within the next weeks or months with a view to prepare their case to be submitted to the courts. They must have a well documented case so as to ensure good representation of the linguistic minority in Manitoba. I suggest that if the federal government and the Manitoba government accept the invitation made by the Supreme Court and endeavour to present arguments concerning the delay for translation of the statutes of Manitoba which, as we know, have been declared invalid, yes, and ultra vires because of the fact they have been enacted in English only, then I believe that if we want to be fair toward the francophone minority in Manitoba, we must immediately assure them that a program will be available, providing money for court challenges. In this way, people will be able to claim from the federal government the assistance they need in order for them to have their rights recognized by the courts following this important decision by the Supreme Court.

Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to delay the passage of the bill, but I would like the government to consider these problems that are viewed as important by all, that is human rights, the rights of Canadian citizens, and I would like the government to introduce within a few days in the Parliament of Canada this court challenges program. I know that all Hon. Members will recognize the importance of such a program which is valuable and indeed essential and which, I reiterate once again, Mr. Speaker, is urgent. It is absolutely essential that the government give us the assurance, thus eliminating any doubt, any concern we might have, that the federal government will step in to help minorities, be it in Manitoba, in Alberta, in Ontario or in Quebec or anywhere else in this country, in order for these minorities to have their rights recognized by the courts.

If I may hold the floor a few more moments, Mr. Speaker, I might add this: if the court challenges program is to be extended to include other provisions of the Charter, consideration might be given to including challenges to Section 15. I think that it would be a positive step that we on this side, would readily approve and heartily endorse. However, I repeat before concluding that it is extremely important to act without delay. The Government must assure us that it will act quickly on this matter, put forward a court challenges program and extend the former program if necessary. You can implement it as you like, but there has been enough talk about it already and it is greatly needed. I know that all Members agree with me. We are asking the Government to make haste in this matter.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and the Bill read the third time and passed.

Aeronautics Act

AERONAUTICS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are seven report stage motions to Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act, notice of which has been given pursuant to Standing Order 79(5).

Motion No. 1 is a straight deletion of certain lines and I find that this motion is procedurally in Order. It will be debated and voted on separately.

However, Motion No. 2 is of concern to the Chair. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall) is attempting to introduce an amendment of substance by way of an amendment to the interpretation clause of the Bill. This is contrary to the practice of the House and there have been many rulings from the Chair in this regard. I would also refer the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to Beauchesne's 5th Edition, citation 773(10).

Motions Nos. 3 and 6, also standing in the name of the Parliamentary Secretary, seem to be somewhat linked to the proposal set out in Motion No. 2. However, it is the Chair's opinion that both of these motions can stand on their own merit and should be put to the House for debate. It would be my intention to group them for the purpose of debate, but, if necessary, they will be voted on separately.

Motion No. 4 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 5 and 7 will be combined for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 1 to 8 at page 3.

He said: Mr. Speaker, without commenting unduly or unnecessarily on your interpretation of the other amendments, I would, with respect, suggest that they achieve exactly the same purpose. I can address all of them by addressing the first proposed amendment which Your Honour finds acceptable. The purpose of the amendment made in committee was to achieve a certain purpose. Those amendments were made to satisfy the demands of the industry and it was the intent of the committee to accept the interventions of the Air Transport Association of Canada in regard to this.

On reflection, it was found that it did not achieve the purpose of the committee, hence the amendments at report stage which are in front of you. They are there in part because officials of the department, members of the Air Transport Association of Canada, and members of the committee have become quite aware that the amendment moved in committee will not apply to all of the financing situations which could arise under this particular set of circumstances.

Consequently, with the same aim of first meeting the Air Transport Association's concerns with regard to the definition of "owner", and to meet the intent of the committee, we have put forward a basic amendment and amendments that give effect as in other parts of the Bill.

The use of the term "registered owner" would have the effect of limiting the provisions to those who actually have control of the aircraft. Prior to the amendment it might have extended to those who have a security or other financial interest. Since Your Honour finds that that is a substantive amendment, I can only repeat that it was an attempt to meet the intent of the committee and the intent of the Act itself. With respect, if Your Honour finds the first motion in order, perhaps we could deal with that and I may have a word to say about the other three. However, I suggest, with respect, that they do not substantially change the Bill.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I would like to echo the words of the Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Forrestall). The committee heard very clearly that there were some problems with the definition as it was applied in the real world of aviation. A number of us recognized that in committee and encouraged officials from the Department, as well as members of the governing Party, to reconsider. I have some concern that your ruling, which I have respect for, means that unless Motion No. 2 is ruled in order and allowed to pass, all we will be doing is deleting one definition without replacing it with the other. I respectfully suggest that we consider that because there is a need for that definition to be in that Bill in order to ensure that this Bill can function in the way that it must. We will be supporting Motion No. 1.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. President of the Privy Council and Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) on Motion No. 2.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to address your concern with respect to this motion. I believe there is a disposition to allow this motion to go forward by unanimous consent of the House. If that is agreeable to Members present we could have this motion accepted on that basis.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, what the Hon. Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has suggested is most reasonable. We will be happy to give unanimous consent.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, we also find that proposal satisfactory.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow Motion No. 2 to go forward?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Since unanimous consent has been given to allow Motion No. 2 to be put to the House, it is my intention to group Motions Nos. 2, 3, and 6 for debate.

• (1740)

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 2 also applies to Motion No. 3 and Motion No. 6. However, a negative vote will necessitate a separate question having to be put on motions Nos. 3 and 6.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 1 by adding immediately after line 12 at page 3 the following:

" "registered owner", in respect of an aircraft, means the person to whom a certificate of registration for the aircraft has been issued by the Minister under Part I or in respect of whom the aircraft has been registered by the Minister under that Part;".

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause

(a) by striking out line 33 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"both the registered owner and operator of the aircraft".

(b) by striking out line 37 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"regulations requiring registered owners and operators".

Motion No. 6

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out line 4 at page 44 and substituting the following therefor:

"7.3 (1) The registered owner of an aircraft may be".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared for the question.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, in a few words I want to comment on the amendments which we will support. Very clearly these are as a result of representations made to us in committee by the industry, through COPA, and we believe it is an appropriate rephrasing of the wording and a way of ensuring that the intent of the Act is met.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to endorse the comments made by the previous speaker and confirm that we agree to the proposed amendment which is consistent with the representations already made by witnesses who appeared before the parliamentary committee.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Dartmouth-Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motions Nos. 2, 3 and 6 agreed to.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan) moved:

Motion No. 4

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 20 to 46 at page 25 and lines 1 to 16 at page 26 and substituting the following therefor:

"5.5 (1) All holders of Canadian aviation documents that impose a standard of medical fitness shall as a requirement of their licensure, report on a regular basis as directed by the Minister to a physician and an optometrist recognized by the Minister for the purpose of determining medical fitness under this Act.

(2) All persons while receiving medical examinations under subsection 5.5 (1) shall be required to disclose to the examiner, the details of any consultations they may have had with other medical practitioners regarding their health including any treatments or drug prescriptions they have received since their last examination under this Act.

(3) All holders of a Canadian aviation document that imposes a standard of medical fitness who have reached the age of forty years, shall provide the Minister with a written disclosure of all prescribed medical treatments received on an annual basis for as long as they hold such a document.

(4) The Minister or a medical adviser designated by the Minister, may require the holder of a Canadian aviation document, to undergo more frequent examinations to those mentioned in subsections 5.5 (1) and may prescribe any further tests that may be necessary to determine the medical or optometric fitness of the licence holder, in accordance with accepted medical practice.

(5) The Minister may make such use of any information provided in section 5.5 as he considers necessary in the interests of aviation safety."

He said: Mr. Speaker, of all the aspects of this massive change to the Aeronautics Act, I suggest that this has probably been the most contentious. We have heard representations from a number of groups who were concerned first, with the initial wording in the Act, then concerned with the clause as amended.

It essentially involves a question of rights and obligations. It was my understanding that, according to the original clause, a private medical practitioner was required to have his patient, the holder of an aviation licence, to inform the Department of Transport of a medical condition within a specified period. Second, if this was not done, the medical practitioner would contact the Department of Transport.

As a result of discussions in the Transport Committee with a number of groups, and as a result of the circulation of draft wording by myself, with the assistance of the office of the Member for Regina East (Mr. Benjamin), the Government introduced an improved version of that clause. Quite frankly, when we sent to committee I was in agreement with the Government in its approach. However, as I listened to the witnesses and read material, I felt that we were making a fundamental error. We were removing the onus from the holder of that aviation licence to meet the requirements, particularly the medical requirements.

Therefore, we have before us an amendment which in effect amends my wording but changes the onus and puts it on the holder of the licence, whether it is a pilot or air traffic controller, where the onus belongs. The amendment states that the holder of an aviation licence must regularly report to a physician and an optometrist recognized by the Minister. Furthermore, that person must disclose to the medical examiner any medical consultations he has had in the past and indicate any medication he is taking. This will enable the Department of Transport physician to have all of the information he requires to make a technical evaluation of the capability of the individual to meet the requirements of the aviation licence.

Since the committee prepared its report we have heard representations again from the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association. Let me cite some of their comments with respect to Section 5.5:

We feel that we would be considered irresponsible and negligent if we failed to provide you, and the good members of your Committee, with the attached first-hand information as to how alarmed some knowledgeable and experienced physicians are over the subject matter. Dr. Bruce Lockhart, Dr. J. N. Armstrong, Dr. R. Webb and Dr. John Lockhart have all warned us that the present provisions of section 5.5 of Bill C-36 are contrary to the providing of a healthy atmosphere in which pilots may best perform their duties with utmost professionalism and care.

Furthermore, Dr. Webb wrote the following letter to COPA:

First, it has always been my understanding that every pilot is ultimately responsible for his aircraft and for his ability to fly it. This Act only serves to undermine this personal responsibility and place it in the hands of a Physician and of a Government bureaucracy.

A Physician already has too much paperwork initiated by third party requests which ask us to prove, in effect, that their client, our patient, is "not lying". We resent being placed in such a "big brother" position, which is what this legislation will do. If the medical problems being screened were of such significant frequency and importance, then ' would not object, but where is the documentation to support such a Draconian measure? Although improvements can always be made, the current system already serves us well.

Second, and probably more important, this proposal will ultimately impede access to preventive health care for pilots. Pilots are only human and if their livelihood is threatened by reporting a health concern to their family physician, they are more likely to try and treat the problem themselves. For most medical complaints, this approach is not unreasonable, but for something more insidious and persistent, the results could be tragic.

For example, a recurring stomach pain/indigestion might imply a peptic ulcer to a pilot, who knows that he might be grounded if this was proven correct. However, left untreated, it might progress to a severe haemorrhage, with serious consequences for the patient, and increased costs for the taxpaper; or it could be even more sinister—a carcinoma!

● (1750)

I would urge you to make every effort to have this portion of the Act altered. Pilots need encouragement to seek medical attention when necessary—not to be threatened by punitive legislation. Physicians do not want to be forced into a "spying" relationship with their pilot-patients.

Sincerely,

R. J. Webb, M.D.

Well, Mr. Speaker, we know the Government has good intentions in terms of how it has written this particular clause. The Government's intention must be to protect the travelling public as well as the crews, the pilots themselves, the air traffic controllers and also citizens at large who may be on flight paths. We heard of only one instance before the committee of a link between a medical problem and an accident. In that case, the Department of Transport know of the individual's medical condition and was unable to do anything about it. We cannot see on this side of the House how this forced reporting by the physician to the Department of Transport will change that. It certainly would not have changed it in the instance in Toronto.

In closing, I would encourage the Government to accept this modification to the Bill. I want to thank you for your ruling which finds that it is in order Mr. Speaker.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have a few observations with respect to my distinguished colleague's amendment in this regard. This amendment, and the purport of it was moved while we were in committee. The Hon. Member is quite correct in bringing to the attention of the House the extent and the degree to which this particular section was debated with some liveliness and in some depth.

The effect of this amendment with respect to the medical reporting section of Bill C-36 would have the effect of deleting any reporting requirements on the part of doctors and optometrists and substituting an obligation on the part of a pilot to submit to regular examinations by these doctors and optometrists.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

AERONAUTICS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Transport; and Motion No. 4 (Mr. Angus) (p. 6067).

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, when we were so graciously interrupted with respect to the due process of law enactment, I was replying to my colleague's comments and observations in support of his amendment.

As I was saying, the amendment presently before of us would have the effect of deleting any reporting requirement on the part of doctors and optometrists, which is proposed in the pertinent Section of the Act, Section 5.5, and substituting an obligation on pilots to submit to regular examinations by doctors and optometrists designated by the Minister and, during those examinations, to disclose details of all medical treatments or medications undergone since the last required or mandatory examination. The amendment also provides that the Minister may require pilots to undergo further medical tests or more frequent required examinations.

We suggest that this amendment would do very little to improve the existing situation, since the current legislation includes all the matters mentioned in the amendment by my hon. friend, except the compulsory optometric examinations and written reports to the Minister after age 40. Furthermore, the proposed amendment does not in fact address the issue that Section 5.5 was designed to answer, that is, how to make the Department aware of hazardous medical conditions. That principle lies at the root of this particular Section of the Act.

The Department, and I think all Canadians, are anxious that medical developments which occur between mandatory examinations in fact be reported. The small number of pilots who deliberately conceal dangerous medical conditions during required examinations is not so small as to make unimportant the provisions of the amendments before us to Bill C-36. As I said, only a small minority of pilots deliberately conceal medical conditions, but the effect of concealment on aviation safety can be tremendous. This problem has been recognized by the Department and by the medical profession itself.

In Ontario, coroners have found that undisclosed medical conditions were factors in at least four fatal accidents since 1978. In each case the coroner's jury recommended that there be some reporting mechanism available to all doctors who examine pilots and indeed holders of aviation documents.

In 1984 the Ontario Medical Association passed a resolution asking the federal Government to pass legislation authorizing doctors to report conditions on pilot patients that would make them unfit to fly and to protect doctors making such reports from legal or disciplinary action. In fact, departmental doctors in every region of Canada receive calls each year from doctors inquiring wehther they will be protected from such action if they report a condition of a patient that makes his continuing to fly hazardous.

The provisions of Section 5(5) are similar to those found in the motor vehicle legislation of most provinces requiring doctors and optometrists to report conditions of patients that might affect their ability to operate a motor vehicle safely. In the case of motor vehicles, and even more so in the case of aircraft, the effects of an accident can be so serious to the public at large that the public interest requires that the usual principle of doctor/patient confidentiality be breached.

The section also makes it mandatory for a pilot to inform any doctor he consults that in fact he is a pilot. This is important because it may affect the choice of treatment prescribed by the doctor, since the chosen treatment may also have an effect on that same pilot's capacity and ability to safely fly an aircraft.

In short, I cannot accept the amendment as it fails to address the issues of providing a mechanism for doctors to make reports concerning conditions that may create safety hazards; protecting the reporting doctor from legal or disciplinary action and requiring the reporting of hazardous medical conditions that may arise between the required medical examinations.

Perhaps I should add, Mr. Speaker, that the report does not result in immediate licence withdrawal, or suspension. The only consequence will be that the pilot will be asked to undergo further medical examinations by departmental doctors. If the licence is withdrawn after these examinations the pilot will still have available to him the review procedures set out in the Bill itself. For those reasons we do not believe that we can accept the amendment.

However, I would like at this time, subject to your direction, to ask unanimous consent of the House for permission to introduce an amendment to the Bill. It addresses the concerns of the mover of the amendment in front of us, and goes some distance in dealing with part of the difficulties that we found with this.

• (1810)

The amendment I would introduce has to do with records, notices of decisions, application of certain provisions and a repeat of applications, limited by the fact that I would require unanimous consent to do that. I have had some consultations and I think the Chair would find an agreement to grant such unanimous consent.

Mr. Angus: Point of order. Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the Hon. Member, but I am at a loss because, while he did share with me a potential amendment that may come up later, I have not seen the amendment he has referred to. Although I would be more than happy to give consent, I think in fairness I should have an opportunity to take a quick look at it before I do that; I may be hanging myself out to dry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): If I may just add, and maybe we can pursue the matter further, we should first of all dispose of the fourth amendment now before the House and then come to the amendment suggested by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Forrestall: Point of order. Mr. Speaker, my difficulty arises from my concern about the grouping by the Chair of Motion No. 5 and Motion No. 7. My difficulty is, without unanimous consent or served notice, and if we go past this particular part of the Bill you may not let me go back to that part where I might more properly deal with this. I am simply seeking unanimous consent to do that or giving notice, so that when we vote on this motion—and we lose both because a negative vote on this one will negative Motion No. 7—I will not lose the proper place to inject this amendment.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps to assist the hon. gentleman, the Parliamentary Secretary, are we given to understand that this is an amendment to an existing amendment that is being discussed in the House? It is a new amendment to a different section than we are presently dealing with. Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary can explain what he is trying to do and what he is talking about.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I am sure the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) wishes to assist the Hon. Member, and also wishes to assist the Chair in this matter. If I understood the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary correctly, he seeks a reassurance as to his capability of presenting the amendment when we do reach Motions Nos. 5 and 7 which are grouped. If that is what he is seeking I can reassure the Hon. Member on that very specific issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I should like to deal briefly with Motion No. 4 which was moved by our colleague and which has just been turned down by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall).

I regret the government's decision, because I feel this was a very good amendment. Members of the Official Opposition would certainly have supported this amendment which aimed at easing a difficult situation. Of all the provisions in this Act, this is probably the most controversial. This is the one about which we have received the greatest number of testimonies and objections. I had thought that, in a spririt of cooperation and understanding, the government would have accepted this amendment.

I am the son of a physician and so is my colleague the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). We both know the important and confidential role physicians play in the lives of their patients. Well, Clause 5.5 of Bill C-36 would require physicians to behave like inquisitors and obtain from their patients informations about their professional and personnal lives which I feel are not absolutely necessary in the present circumstances.

I think that the government's desire to protect the travelling public who uses airplanes is commendable. Its purpose is both important and acceptable.

I felt that Motion No. 4, moved by the hon. member, reflected a healthier physician-patient relationship. I suggest we should make pilots, air traffic controlers and other people involved in air transportation responsible for advising their physicians of their respective types of work and professional status. I do not think it is wise to require a physician to ask questions and obtain information about their professional lives.

I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary, while dealing later with another clause, will try to make up for it by proposing a sort of compromise amendment. I feel it is a small step in the right direction. It is not the big step we wish the government had taken, but at least we will be prepared later or to accept the amendment the Parliamentary Secretary has referred to.

● (1820)

[English]

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I just want to clear up something. I take it that the matter which the Parliamentary Secretary wants to present has nothing to do with Motion No. 4; that we are only dealing with Motion No. 4 and that the motion he wishes to present has to do with subsequent motions, is that correct?

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. Of course my proposed amendment does not deal directly with the amendment that is before us. I dealt with that in a few words before. I said that because of the grouping, as I understood it, I wanted to simply serve notice that at an appropriate time after my distinguished colleague moves the next amendment, I will want to address that amendment by indicating to the House that while we do not support the precise wording of that amendment—and perhaps I should not anticipate but I would like to explain my concern to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin)—I would seek the unanimous consent of the House to introduce a somewhat comparable motion that would make the language of the next motion more compatible with the rest of the Act, and quite acceptable to us.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): In my opinion, the nays have it. I declare the motion negatived.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 4 (Mr. Angus) negatived.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, there has been consultation with our colleague the Government House Leader, and I believe you will find that the House is ready to adopt a motion, provided that in the next few minutes we go through not only the report stage but also the third reading of Bill C-36.

I would like to know the House Leader's decision.

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, it is a great honour for me to be asked a question by that great reformer, the member of the task force on reform of the House of Commons. He has worked so hard on reform of the House of Commons.

The Hon. Member has raised the question of today's Business of the House. I was approached by the House Leader of the Official Opposition who requested that when we complete third reading of the legislation now before us, we might seek the unanimous consent that at that time, the motion that the House adjourn for the evening, as if it were nine o'clock be proceeded with. We would then be able to deal tomorrow with the two items to which I had referred earlier. On the basis of the request of the House Leader of the Official Opposition that we adjourn the House after conclusion of third reading of this Bill, and after seeking the advice of the New Democratic Party, notwithstanding the fact that I love dearly sitting here, I think you will find the unanimous consent to have the House adjourn for the evening, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to concur in that and tell the Government House Leader that we made some great progress today and, as usual, the Opposition has been very co-operative.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Motions Nos. 5 and 7 will be combined for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan) moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 1 by adding immediately after line 3 at page 44 the following:

"7.3 (1) An individual who has held a valid aviation document for a period of two years from the satisfaction of a suspension or other penalty imposed in relation to that document may apply to the Minister for removal of that suspension or penalty from his record, provided that there have been no subsequent infractions on record in relation to that document.

(2) The Minister may, upon application to him by an individual pursuant to subsection (1), delete from the record of that individual any reference to a suspension or other penalty imposed under this Act where, in the opinion of the Minister, aviation safety would not be compromised thereby.

(3) Any decision of the Minister made pursuant to this section may be appealed to the Tribunal pursuant to subsection 6.1 (3).

(4) Where the Minister refuses to delete a suspension or other penalty from the record under subsection (1) and the Tribunal has, if appealed to under subsection (3), upheld the decision of the Minister, the individual may, upon the expiry of a further two year period from the date of the Minister's decision under subsection (2), again apply to the Minister for removal of the record of that suspension or penalty pursuant to subsection (1)."

● (1830)

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 25 at page 53 and susbstituting the following therefor:

"first occurs, but any such suspension of revocation of licences or certificates made prior to the coming into effect of this section shall be subject to the review procedure referred to in section 6.1 (6)."

Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus) on a point of order.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the House would be willing, by unanimous consent, to agre to separate Motions Nos. 5 and 7 in order that we can deal with the matter which the Parliamentary Secretary will be putting forward.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan offering to withdraw his motion?

Mr. Angus: I do not believe I can withdraw the motion at this point. However, I am willing to do that once the two motions have been separated.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, the difficulty is in the combining of Motions Nos. 5 and 7. While we are prepared to seek unanimous consent of the House to move an amendment which is somewhat similar, because we are in agreement with the principle in Motion No. 5, we are not prepared to accept Motion No. 7. That is the dilemma which I leave with the Chair.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent to separate Motions Nos. 5 and 7?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan on a point of order.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, as a result of consultations with the Parliamentary Secretary, I would like to withdraw Motion No. 5.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Does the Hon. Member have unanimous consent to withdraw Motion No. 5?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion withdrawn.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, as a result of the consultation process, I believe there would be an agreement of the House to grant unanimous consent to permit me to introduce an amendment to Bill C-36 at this time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, my colleague proposed an amendment which would allow any reference to a suspension of a licence, or any other penalty imposed under the Act, to be struck from the record after two years if no further infractions had been recorded within that period of time. We generally support the principle which is involved in the amendment. To that end, I would like to move the following amendment:

That clause 1 of Bill C-36 be amended by adding, immediately after line 3 on page 44, the following:

«7.21 (1) Any notation of a suspension by the Minister of a Canadian aviation document under this Act or of a penalty imposed in accordance with sections 6.6 to 7.2 shall, on application by the person affected by the suspension, or penalty, be removed from the record respecting that person kept by the Minister after the expiration of two years from the date the suspension expires or the penalty amount has been paid unless

(a) in the opinion of the Minister, the removal from the record would not be in the interest of aviation safety; or

(b) a suspension or penalty under this Act has been recorded by the Minister in respect of that person after that date.

(2) The Minister shall, as soon as practicable after the receipt of an application under subsection (1), by personal service or by registered mail, notify the applicant of the decision of the Minister in relation thereto.

(3) Subsections 6.1(3) to (9) and section 6.2 apply, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of a decision of the Minister referred to in subsection (2) of this section.

(4) No application under subsection (1) shall be considered by the Minister within two years from the date of a previous application under that subsection in respect of the same applicant."

I think the point which was made by the distinguished Member is indeed a good one, and we are most pleased to join with him in making it part of the record.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and his colleagues for accepting the principle that we put before them in committee, and in the notice which we tabled in the House quite some time ago. The amendment is to ensure that a lot of the so-called minor infractions that individuals may have on their records will be allowed to be removed, as long as they are not habitual in the sense that every six months or every year they are found to have not filed their papers on time, or other infractions.

I want to indicate briefly why we proposed the amendment. In doing that, I would like to give an example. We have had several representations from pilots, mechanics and engineers whose careers have been damaged because they did not cross a "t" or dot an "i".

One example is that of the owner of a small engineering firm in northern Ontario. He has been a pilot for 15 years. In 1976 he was hired to ferry a small aircraft to another destination some 2.5 hours flight time away. He left with enough fuel for four hours, and was flying under normal conditions. However, two hours into the flight he had to make a forced landing because he was out of fuel. The landing was successful and there were no injuries. I would respectfully suggest that it was to his credit that he was able to do that.

He then received a letter from Ministry officials which alleged that he may have taken off without sufficient fuel for the trip. He advised them that the plane, which was owned by another individual, had a fuel pump problem and was pumping fuel overboard. No action was taken at that time. In 1981, he applied for his certificate of air worthiness for an aircraft which his company owned. The aircraft had not been in operation for some time. When he made his application, he forgot that that particular aircraft had a compulsory requirement to overhaul the propellers every five years. That period of time had elapsed a few days before he made his application to the CTA. His engineer's licence was suspended for 30 days for making an application for an aircraft which was not airworthy.

• (1840)

In the letter suspending him, he was told that the stiff penalty was necessary considering he may have taken off without enough fuel as a pilot almost five years earlier. This man's business came to a halt for 30 days. At that time his only recourse would be to the Federal Court of Canada. Through this amendment, at the very least, he will have an opportunity to have that record wiped clean. I say "opportunity" because clearly he will have to apply to the Minister and the Minister, according to this clause, has the right to say yes or no. If he says no, then the pilot will have an opportunity, as I understand, to take that to the appeal process.

I am pleased that we have once again been able to improve a very valuable Bill, to ensure that what passes this House is an effective instrument for doing what the Government, the Department and the industry wish it to do. I am pleased to have been a part of it and to have had this amendment accepted.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, my distinguished colleague has once again moved that document holders have access to the civil aviation tribunal which, in itself, is proposed in the Bill and which is one of the greater innovative aspects of this new measure. The amendment is unacceptable for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is the fact the Department processes some 700 suspensions—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. With deep regret—and I am sure I am speaking on behalf of all Hon. Members of the House—but I believe the Parliamentary Secretary has already risen to address the motion and I cannot, therefore—

Mr. Forrestall: Oh, I am sorry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I say that with deep regret on behalf of all Hon. Members of the House.

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The motion is therefore carried.

Motion (Mr. Forrestall) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The House will now consider Motion No. 7 in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus).

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I want to make clear at the outset that this amendment, combined with the amendment we just passed, in effect deals with the period between the day that this Act is proclaimed and a point two years prior to that. It is the only time when, realistically, it is to apply. The intention is to allow those individuals who have been found guilty and have had a sanction or punishment placed upon them in the last two years to have access to the very valuable appeal system which has been established under this Act.

Until this Act passes, their only recourse is in effect to the same people who investigated them, who analyzed the situation and who decided on the appropriate punishment. What we want to do, Mr. Speaker, is to give them an opportunity to have that reviewed. I know that the Parliamentary Secretary will say that there are too many, that we will open the floodgates. While I recognize the number of infractions may be 700 or more over the last two-year period, clearly there are two groups.

There is the group which will feel that the infractions are of a minor nature and are not worth the time, effort and dollars to take the matter to the appeal process, things like failing to put in documentation on time—which was the case I read into the record earlier of missing the deadline for the propellor check. There is a second group however, which in that two-year period may feel they have been grievously wronged and we believe they should have the opportunity to present their case to the independent appeal tribunal. They should be given the opportunity to say they think a mistake was made, that justice has not been served either by their conviction or by the penalty in terms of their business, recreation, or whatever. I think very clearly we should give them that opportunity.

I understand there are regional variations in terms of the kinds of sanctions, depending on the investigating officers and the officials involved, so that one infraction in Atlantic Canada may be treated differently than the same infraction in western Canada. Because of that situation, as we perceive it, there needs to be that independent body to appeal to.

In the Enforcement Manual of the Department of Transport under the Table of Sanctions it states under Guidelines:

> Although a purpose of the Table of Sanctions is to enhance consistency, the recommended sanctions are not hard and fast rules. Rather, they are suggested criteria from which deviations may be necessary according to the situation.

It is further stated, and I quote:

> Mitigating circumstances are events that do not constitute a justification or excuse for the offence in question, but which in fairness, may be considered as extenuating or reducing the degree of moral culpability. Mitigation does not alter the fact of a violation nor does it provide a defence. It relates not to the offence but to the sanction. The sanction may be moderated in light of mitigation.

They list the mitigating circumstances as: lack of intent, misunderstanding or misconception and honest mistake. And under "aggravating circumstances" which is a severe category, it states:

> Aggravating circumstances are events that show a significant degree of moral culpability in the violation. Examples are:
> (i) deliberate actions done with intent to commit a violation;
>
> (ii) negligence;
>
> (iii) Recklessness; or,
> (iv) habitual non-compliance shown by a series of recurrent violations.

When one compares the mitigating circumstances and the aggravating circumstances, one sees some similarities. A misunderstanding or a misconception could result in negligence. Which shall it be? An honest mistake may lead to recklessness. The point I am trying to make is that if we do not give those people who have been found guilty of an infraction over the past two years that option to go through an appeal, they are lost for at least two years. Clearly, they can wait for two years to decide to apply to have their record cleansed, but I do not think that we should set them aside as a separate category. I believe we should allow them access to justice. We should give them that opportunity, should they so desire, to appear before an appeal tribunal and state their case. The Ministry could then state its case and the tribunal could say yes, we agree, or no, we do not, or you are guilty but the treatment was too harsh.

● (1850)

In conclusion, I encourage the Parliamentary Secretary to throw away his notes and say yes, they will support this resolution.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and his notes.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would be inclined to throw away my notes but my answer would be no. It is not a question of 700 impositions of penalties over a two-year period. That is roughly the number on an annualized basis. To allow these to come before the tribunal for resolution would have the effect of backing up the very important other work the tribunal is charged with doing. These suspensions are imposed in accordance with the rules of natural justice and only after the document holder has been provided with full procedural safeguards. To allow recourse to the tribunal with respect to previous suspensions would effectively in my judgment, tie up the tribunal not only in its ongoing and very important work, but for years to come.

I might just make one other point. In light of the fact that the suspensions would have already been served, nothing would be gained other than having the document holders' record amended. I might just note in connection with that, with respect to the length of time which might have passed since the suspension was imposed, it might be very difficult if not impossible to have all the evidence available to enable the tribunal to make a fair and just decision. I would also point out that the amendment proposed earlier today, as has been acknowledged by my colleague, has the effect in part of removing notations of any infractions on an individual's licence. For those reasons I regret, because I know of the care, concern and sincerity with which the amendment was put forward, that we are uanble to accept it.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I find the Parliamentary Secretary's arguments a little bit specious. Just remember that people who have these things on their record have been charged, tried, found guilty and penalized by the same outfit. I think that flies in the face of our democratic jurisprudence.

Mr. Forrestall: They will be removed within two years.

Mr. Benjamin: Take the case of, say, a mechanic working for an airline in northern Quebec who replaced a fuel pump on a Cessna 172. The fuel pump he used had more hours on it than allowed for the type of aircraft he was working on. However, it could have been used for another 400 hours in several other aircraft before it had to be replaced. He simply made an error in the type of aircraft he put it in. No failure occurred. Certainly there was no malice on his part. However, the Government suspended his licence for two weeks. Not only did he not have an income for that period of time, the fact he has a suspension on his record has caused problems in advancing his career and his present employers worry about having him as a mechanic in the future for fear there might be another mistake.

Surely that is the kind of situation where the person involved should not have to wait another two years. He should be able to go to a tribunal and present his case. In this particular case, it seems to me, he deserves the right to have his case reviewed without the expense of going to Federal Court, but without this amendment he cannot do that. He can only wait for another two years or go to the expense of applying to Federal Court.

Surely there must be dozens of instances like that. Under this new legislation, once it is proclaimed, the person concerned will be able to start with a clean slate. His record is clear. He has no further problems advancing his career. I do not understand why the Ministry is so worried about this section. I doubt very much that there will be hundreds and hundreds of appeals. Those who are guilty of serious infractions will know better than to apply. For those who have been penalized in a manner which coincides with the remarks made by my colleague from Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus), being the difference between the honest error and negligence, a substantial difference I submit, surely the holder of a licence under this legislation should at least have an opportunity to appear before the tribunal and ask for his record to be cleared. Waiting another two years is that much more difficult for them in that kind of case.

I doubt very much if a tribunal will be handing out in a wholesale manner all kinds of forgiveness and wiping clean of records. I also doubt very much if the Ministry was 100 per cent right in all cases. I have yet to find anyone anywhere in this mortal coil who is 100 per cent correct or 100 per cent wrong. I will admit that even my friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, is not 100 per cent wrong, but there can be administrative errors. There can be extra zealous action taken in one instance but not in another. We all know that can happen. Therefore, there should be no reason why that ability to appeal to a tribunal immediately this act comes into force cannot be allowed to happen.

I urge the Parliamentary Secretary to say that the officials in the Department are worrying too much and there is no reason why this amendment cannot be accepted. I hope he will have a change of heart in the next few seconds and say that they will allow this change because of the instances my colleague and I have presented where redress should at least be considered or a wiping clean of a slate over something that occurred some time ago. Having the opportunity to do that at least is the full extension of just treatment. I hope his officials will drop a note over the balcony to the Parliamentary Secretary saying "sure, we can buy that". Then the Parliamentary Secretary can get up at his leisure and say that the Government can accept this amendment. That will make everybody happy, including the Parliamentary Secretary and the officials from the Ministry. I hope the points which my colleague has made and what I have just said will have some impact and weight with the Government and that it will now decide to accept this amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Forrestall: That last amendment did not carry.

Mr. Ouellet: Yes it did. Nobody said no.

Mr. Forrestall: I very clearly said no.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): There were no nays brought to the attention of the Chair.

Mr. La Salle: Really, he said no.

Mr. Forrestall: I clearly said no.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order. There were no nays heard by the Chair. The question may be put to the House again if there is unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent of the House to put the question again?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benjamin: No.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Come on, Les, for heaven's sake.

Mr. Forrestall: There was a no.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I just want to make a few closing remarks. This is my first experience in the House of taking legislation through most of the stages on behalf of my Party. I would like to thank all Members of the Transport Committee, and particularly the Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Forrestall) for the level of debate. There was agreement to disagree on some items, but it was at all times in a manner which was extremely parliamentary.

It is particularly pleasing to me that I, along with some help, was able to introduce some changes and have the majority of them, in one form or another, accepted by the Government and incorporated into this Act. In all, I think six specific changes were made, most in the section on the medical reporting provision, to improve the wording and the intent. Although I was not successful with a couple of amendments, I understand the rationale of the Government. Although I would have preferred it otherwise, I do appreciate that. We must now give approval to the Bill as amended and move on to other matters in the House.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, due to the fact that the Aeronautics Act has not been amended for 60 years, this is rather an auspicious occasion. I would like to recognize the work done by the departmental people in bringing this Act together, consolidating the regulations, and consulting from one end of the country to another. They prepared some of the finest briefing notes that I have ever had the privilege of dealing with with respect to legislation. Out of respect for this and a number of other things, I will not express my great disappointment. On at least five occasions in the last 45 minutes I indicated, through great difficulty in a procedural sense, our objection to the clause which you said was carried and which I negated, both by voice and shaking of the head.

Six associations submitted briefs and appeared before the committees and we should pay some attention to the work that they did. They were the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association, the Canadian Medical Association, the Air Transport Association of Canada, the Canadian Airline Pilots Association, the Canadian Association of Optometrists, and the Canadian Business Aircraft Association. All of these associations expressed their general support for the Bill and its thrust and indeed welcomed it. Submissions by the associations were limited to a relatively small number of issues, essentially of a housekeeping or clarification nature, except for Section 5.5, the medical reporting provision, which was the subject of much more comprehensive discussions of which you will be aware as a result of discussions here in the Chamber this afternoon.

A total of 11 amendments were made to the Bill at committee. These included a new definition for "pilots-in-command", an amendment limiting the Minister's authority to require a bond or letter of credit to where there had been a history of non or late payment of charges, an amendment clarifying the statutory defence of "due diligence" with respect to violation of the Act and regulations—

Mr. Prud'homme: We will give you your amendment. We will it to you.

Mr. Forrestall: As a result of consultations, my House Leader may be able to correct the matter. I will just thank the members of the committee for their co-operation.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise a point of order. There is something in the air. The Opposition Members are being the most reasonable and wonderful people in the world.

Mr. Prud'homme: Always.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They continue in this wonderful mode tonight.

Mr. Benjamin: Don't overdo it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No, I won't overdo it. There was a question raised with respect to the last motion before the House at report stage. The observation was made that the position of the Government side was placed on the record by the Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Forrestall) and you did not hear any dissenting voice with respect to that motion. By virtue of discussion, we have come to an agreement in the House. I think that by unanimous consent the House would revert back to report stage and the last motion which was in fact carried would, by unanimous consent, be withdrawn and recorded as a negative vote. We could then proceed to third reading stage. If you put that proposition to the House, I think you would find agreement.

● (1910)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is there unanimous consent to revert to report stage of Bill C-36?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Aeronautics Act

The House reverted to the consideration of Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Aeronautics Act, as reported with amendments from the Standing Committee on Transport.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan) moved:

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-36, be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 25 at page 53 and substituting the following therefor:

"first occurs, but any such suspension or revocation of licences or certificates made prior to the coming into effect of this section shall be subject to the review procedure referred to in section 6.1 (6)."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): The question is on Motion No. 7 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Atikokan (Mr. Angus). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I declare the motion lost on division.

Motion (Mr. Angus) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): For the record, we will proceed to concurrence.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Transport) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I should like to commend the committee members for their work on this bill. I should also like to congratulate the minister, as I did on second reading, for his decision to introduce this bill which is similar in many respects to the one put forward by the former administration.

I want to thank the Department of Transport officials who worked for months and even years to prepare this bill and all those who submitted briefs to the committee supporting the bill or making proposals to amend it and make it better.

After so many years, it is appropriate that the Aeronautics Act be brought up to date. I hope that the sections on security, more particularly, will have a favorable impact on all air transport users in Canada.

On behalf of the Official Opposition, I want to support this bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Shall I call it nine o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 45 deemed to have been moved.

HEALTH—NATIONAL EPIDEMIOLOGICAL CENTRE PROPOSAL. (B) MONITORING OF BIRTH DEFECTS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay-Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, on April 23, 1985, I raised a question with the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) regarding the funding for research in this country as it relates to the tracking, primarily of birth defects, but illnesses in general. I was referring to the Canadian Congenital Anomalies Surveillance System, and concerns raised about the lack of proper funding to do the kind of job that must be done in order to monitor birth defects.

My interest in the question stems from personal knowledge of situations, as well as an awareness of what is happening to our environment. While we know that particular forms of wildlife and plant life are indicators, or barometers, of the impact of man's treatment of the environment, we must also recognize that the human body is also a barometer. Unfortunately, some of those indicators show as defects in new born children. We see throughout the land what are called "hot spots". These are areas of the country where a particular defect in human beings is above average, whether it is congenital heart defects, missing limbs or other defects. There are hot spots out there and they are beginning to become documented.

It is my position that we should do what we can do to ensure that the necessary funds are available to continually track those defects that result from what we do to the environment but cannot see. For example, there are the effects of PCBs and radiation or lead poisoning that we cannot see immediately. One's arm does not drop off or one's skin does not change colour from low levels of radiation. However, in the long term, they may have some impact.

One method for sending a warning signal is by tracking birth defects. For example, there is very sound evidence of effects on unborn children as a result of mothers who smoke or consume alcohol. We warn expectant mothers to stay away from radiation from video display terminals. However, do we warn them to stay away from an area like Serpent River in Elliot Lake where the mine tailings were flowing into the river? What was the effect of that radiation on the young men and women who lived at Quirke Mine site, north of Elliot Lake, right beside the Serpent River? Do they have children today who are not completely formed or did they have children who did not live to see today?

I believe the time has come to put our efforts into this early warning system. While we may not be able to help those young children who are the evidence of the effects of what we have done to our environment, we should be able to use it to discover what caused this problem so that we can make changes in our laws that govern how we handle substances that have an effect on the human body.

We may find that man had nothing to do with these effects but that a natural phenomenon caused the high incidents of a particular abnormality. However, we have a responsibility to society to research this as much as we can. One technique is through full epidemiological analysis of births in this country.

• (1920)

I would like to see us go even farther than that and have a system in Canada that would compile information on diseases, on illnesses, on defects and put all of that in one computer with automatic sharing of information with the provinces and municipalities. It should include death records where there are high incidences of death from specific illness in certain communities.

We have to remember that something happening today does not impact tomorrow. The folks in Kenora who are worried about the PCB spill will not know for 20 years, for all intents and purposes, if that spill has had any effect on them. We need that kind of tracking system so we can work backwards and find out where the common element is.

Let me come back to Quirk mine site at Elliot Lake. Where are all the young people and the adults who worked in the Ontario Ministry of Corrections Institute today? We should track them. Let us find out what has happened to them. Is there an above normal incidence of birth defects in their offspring? We will never know the answers until we begin to track situations. That is why on April 23 I asked the Minister to consider this question. I note that he indicated at his Health Minister's meeting on May 16 and 17 that they would look to the future together. Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary can respond and tell us that the Ministers have looked at the question and will be providing the funding necessary for such a program.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, the accidental PCB spill in Northwestern Ontario has created renewed interest in the immediate and long term effects of environmental contamination. For this reason, questions have been raised in this House regarding the federal of monitoring programs and their role both in the detection of high occurrence diseases and the study of their causes. I would like to describe the goals and expectations of the monitoring program and clarify the Government's position as regards environmental diseases.

Health monitoring has been defined as a thorough and onging review of all the aspects of the outbreak and dissemination of a disease that are useful to the implementation of effective control measures. The word "control" therefore involves the collection and systematic and ongoing assessment of a whole range of data on health and the communication of information to all parties that take part in control efforts. A surveillance system serves two main purposes. First, it must help assess the various health risks and provide an opportunity to use information gathered to design specific programs to fight diseases or to adjust existing programs to new conditions. Second, it must help establish differences between various population groups as far as the risk they run to contract a disease is concerned and thus facilitate the gathering of essential information on the thrust to give to such programs as well as provide for the assessment of action which has been taken.

Without minimizing the Government's concern over the recent PCB spill, it should be clear that this type of accident is not a surveillance issue in the usual sense. In fact, no practicable disease surveillance program could be expected to detect health effects such as cancer or birth defects from such a spill. The timing, location and extent of the contamination is known, as is the toxicology for short-term health effects. Persons who may have been exposed can be medically evaluated and have their health status checked periodically.

[English]

Guidelines on the transport of hazardous chemicals are being strengthened. Also there have been new regulations under the Environmental Contaminants Act which govern the disposal of waste oils containing PCBs. The Department of National Health and Welfare is working with its provincial counterparts and is seeking their participation in an enhanced sharing of provincial health data and federal disease surveillance services. This type of federal-provincial co-operation is required to increase the sensitivity and efficiency of our current disease surveillance systems. In this way, we will be able to further refine out surveillance abilities.

AGRICULTURE

RESOLUTION CONDEMNING BUDGETARY CUTS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, last night the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture met in my constituency to express their dissatisfaction and frustration with the federal Tory Government, and more particularly with the Finance Minister's Budget. These Federations moved the following resolution and asked me to read it to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson):

Whereas Mr. Brian Mulroney during the last election campaign made a written promise to provide agriculture with long-term financing at stable and affordable rates, and

Whereas farm financing was not addressed in the recent Budget,

Therefore we, the members of the Glengarry, Prescott and Russell Federations of Agriculture jointly demand that the Prime Minister of Canada fulfil his campaign promises, and be it further resolved that we demand that the cuts of $60 million in the Agriculture programs announced November 8th 1984 and the proposed $50 million cut in the May 23rd Budget be cancelled and that full funding be immediately restored to the Agriculture Department.

It was evident that a feeling of anger and betrayal was expressed by the farmers of my riding last night. The agricultural community will not forget the unfulfilled promises of the Prime Minister.

POLITICAL PARTIES

STOCKHOLM MEETING OF SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTIES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex-Windsor): Mr. Speaker, this week in Stockholm, Social Democratic Parties from around the globe met to consider joint action to deal with the grim economic crisis in the world. The Members of the Socialist International endorsed a report from their economic policy committee stressing three broad conclusions.

The first of these conclusions is that, to spur world economic recovery, the industrialized countries must reject the prevailing approach of fiscal cut-backs and high interest rates, and plan a joint strategy of expansionary public expenditures focused on community needs. Second, the dangerous debt crisis of the developing countries must be tackled with what amounts to a redistribution of purchasing power to poorer countries to help revive world economic demand. Third, solutions to the debt crisis will require an international conference to forgive debts for the very poorest countries, reduce interest payments for others, and tie repayments to export earning levels in the Third World. I call on the Canadian Government to provide leadership in such international action to respond to this debt crisis.

SHIPBUILDING

SUPPORT SOUGHT FOR INDUSTRY

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, the preservation and creation of jobs are uppermost in the minds of all Members of this House. The shipbuilding and repairing industry has a ready-made capacity to create jobs now. The most efficient Canadian yards are using modern technology and advanced systems of management.

Governments in other countries have traditionally supported their shipyards in ways which make free competition virtually impossible. Previously, through subsidies and grants, Canada supported the shipbuilding industry in an amount approximating $4,000 per employee per year. Yards were busy. Today Canadian yards are struggling to survive.

Work is going on offshore at the expense of Canadian workmen. Welfare rates for a single unemployed person amount to over $4,000 per year. Unemployment insurance payments come to another $13,000 annually. Support, therefore, for the shipbuilding industry would achieve a net gain for every additional job created. Those workmen would then be paying income tax and contributing to social welfare programs, instead of drawing upon them.

A buoyant shipbuilding industry would be the shot in the arm needed by our steel industry, and would have numerous spin-off economic benefits. The shipping industry in a country such as ours, with its miles of coastline and an inland waterway comparable to none other in the world deserves the support of a Government such as this which has always put its priority on jobs, jobs, jobs. It deserves more.

HUMAN RIGHTS

WELCOME EXTENDED TO FRANCO-MANITOBAN DELEGATION

Mr. Léo Duguay (St. Boniface): Mr. Speaker, some twenty of my constituents left Winnipeg by train this week to come to Ottawa. They have come to join their friends from Ontario and celebrate the tenth anniversary of the Franco-Ontarian Festival.

Mr. Speaker, 1985 is also the centennial of the death of Louis Riel. This delegation has come to Ottawa precisely to celebrate both anniversaries and it includes the character of Louis Riel and of his Métis supporters who are with us today to commemorate that event.

The past century, Mr. Speaker, was a stormy period in the history of the West. Various cultures and religions came together and clashed for the first time. It should be remembered that Louis Riel put his foot down to prevent Canadian surveyors from imposing their foreign system on us. However, 100 years later, Canada has made tremendous progress as far as respecting human and cultural rights is concerned. Canada must keep on showing the way. In this spirit of tolerance, co-operation and faith in the future, I welcome Louis Riel and the Francophone delegation from Manitoba. Welcome in Parliament, welcome in Ottawa and enjoy yourselves at the festival!

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

RESIGNATION OF HON. RENÉ LÉVESQUE AS PARTY LEADER

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, Quebec Premier Lévesque announced his retirement after 25 years in politics. I am sure all Members of the House will agree with me that we must pay homage to this man who devoted 25 years of his life to the service of the people of Quebec. Let us recall that, 25 years ago, Mr. Lévesque began his political career with Jean Lesage's Liberal team and that he made a significant contribution to the quiet revolution, a step forward in the evolution of the people of Quebec.

Even though I did not share the political aspirations he entertained in recent years, I would suggest that Mr. Lévesque is to be commended for promoting the cause of all Quebecers, upholding the French language in Quebec and throughout the rest of Canada, and boosting Quebec's economy.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Members of the House wish him a happy retirement, active surely but perhaps less stressing than his political activities.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

LAC LA HACHE INDIAN BAND—EFFECT OF URANIUM MINING

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, in the last few days Indian people from the Lac la Hache Indian Band, and environmentalists, have blockaded the road to the uranium mine at Wollaston Lake operated by Eldorado Nuclear Ltd.

The uranium deposits at Wollaston Lake are among the largest and richest in the world, and Eldorado Nuclear plans to keep mining there for at least 20 years. Then Eldorado will leave, but it will not take its garbage with it. Indian people will have to live with radioactive pollution for generations and generations.

● (1110)

Indian people take very seriously not only their aboriginal rights but also their aboriginal responsibilities to take care of the land for future generations.

When a 76-year-old elder toured the mine and saw what was happening, he said:

> I almost cried when I saw what they have done to the land. If I would have known I would never have let this happen to my trap line. They didn't tell me all the problems uranium makes. I didn't know the mining would pollute the water, or that uranium is used in nuclear bombs. The mining companies should not be here. This is Indian land.

As inhabitants of planet Earth, we desperately need to realize that the struggle of the Lac la Hache Indians is also our struggle. We too have a responsibility to preserve the earth for future generations. The mining and the pollution must stop.

MULTICULTURALISM

TORONTO INTERNATIONAL CARAVAN—A HERITAGE CELEBRATION

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale-High Park): Mr. Speaker, today is the first day of the Metro Toronto International Caravan. For the next nine days Torontonians and visitors will have the opportunity to sample the myriad cultural heritage that makes up Canada.

Caravan was born as the idea of Zena Kossar. The very first Caravan of 1969 had only 29 theme pavilions, and lasted five days. It has grown to 48 pavilions and nine days. The aim of Caravan is to promote the cultural traditions that contribute to the Canadian mosaic. As an international cultural festival, it brings together nationalities from the four corners of the world. During the nine days, Caravan's visitors will enjoy dance, folk art, cuisine, and music.

Toronto will be alive with the sounds of many languages and the music of many cultures. Caravan is not just a festival of cultural activities, it is a celebration of heritage. It is a reflection of the cultural kaleidoscope that is Canada. Canadians from many cultures can share with each other the riches of their traditions. I can think of no better way to celebrate life and to promote understanding than through this international festival.

I invite all Canadians to come and celebrate with us.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, there are rats in the House of Commons. They chew up the carpet. They make their nests in Rat Pack T-shirts. They leave tracks all over Hansard. They even crawl up on the television cameras to look at their reflections in the lens. As a result, Canadians from coast to coast have an infestation of rats on their television screens.

The rats are shrill; they squeak and they scream.

The Hon. Member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell (Mr. Boudria) speaks like Picasso paints. After listening to a speech by the Hon. Member for York South-Weston (Mr. Nunziata), one is left with the impression that if the Member were ever to play the violin it would sound as if the strings were still in the cat. It is sad that the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) sounds like a failed attempt to make her own perfume. The Member for Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) uses statistics like a drunk uses a lamp-post—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

THE BUDGET

CUT-BACKS—POSITION OF NEW BRUNSWICK ECONOMIC COUNCIL

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland-Kent): Mr. Speaker, when the Liberal caucus of the Atlantic region recently visited Eastern Canada, Liberal senators and MPs were pleased to hear a most interesting brief submitted by the New Brunswick Economic Council, an organization held in very high esteem by the business community.

The Council's well-considered views certainly deserve the attention of all Hon. Members. The Council felt that the $2 billion tax credit which the Government has granted multinational oil companies will be only marginally productive. This tax credit should have been made conditional on new reserve discoveries and job creation, as a sort of incentive for the industry, which would have justified the government's decision to raise the price of gas by two cents a litre.

The Council was also concerned about the fact that small and medium-sized businesses, as well as medium and low income families are called upon to assume too big a share of the tax burden. It was also concerned about the impact the freeze on equalization payments will have on the less affluent provinces.

The New Brunswick Economic Council was equally concerned about the $200 million cut in the area of economic and regional development expansion, the $50 million cut affecting the agricultural industry, the $25 million cut affecting the fisheries, as well as cuts affecting the transport industry.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I think that the government would have been well advised to listen—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the time allotted to him has expired.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MIDDLE EAST—RESOLUTION OF TRAGIC SITUATION

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, once again world attention is focused on the Middle East and the political tensions which exist there. The plight of the innocent United States citizens who are being held hostage is a tragic result of unresolved national and international problems. While the welfare and rescue of the victims of these problems have to be our paramount consideration, we must look beyond that to the broader reasons for the situation which exists.

What can Canadians do, given this violent and difficult situation? First, we can declare our utter revulsion at the tactic of using innocent victims to advance a political cause. More than that, Mr. Speaker, we can look beyond that to view with sympathetic understanding the situation which besets the Middle East, and use the good offices of our Government and our government officers to take an interest in the tragic situation which has developed, and do what we can to assist in resolving the broad problem. We must consider the victims first, but we must consider the broad problem next.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE BUDGET

PENSION INDEXATION—REQUEST FOR FULL RESTORATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I understand, Mr. Speaker, there is an emergency cabinet meeting going on, and I can understand why, but Parliament sits five days a week and there is not much scope for questioning here.

An Hon. Member: They are flocking in.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Here they are. Good. Glad to see you.

An Hon. Member: You smoked them out.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): My question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The attack on senior citizens is only one of the flaws, albeit a very major one, in the Budget. I understand there is an emergency cabinet meeting and I hope the Minister of Finance, or the Prime Minister, will be able to come out of that meeting today and tell Parliament, either today or on Tuesday, that there has been full restoration of the indexing of old age pensions for all old age pensioners in order to fulfil two promises of the Prime Minister, first, that indexation would be preserved and, second, that universality of our social programs is a sacred trust.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the emergency cabinet meeting to which the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition refers was planned six weeks ago.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): So it is not a great emergency. There is wonderful imagination being expressed over there on the other side of the House. Since the premise of the question of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition is wrong, there is no point in answering the question.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I think there is every point in answering that question, Mr. Speaker. The Minister will be more and more rudely embarrassed over the next few weeks unless the issue is resolved soon.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING FAMILY BENEFITS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Minister of Finance should know that the combined effect of deindexing the baby bonus and the avalanche of new products to be covered by the new sales taxes means that the average Canadian family with an income of $25,000 per year will lose about $670 of disposable income per year. When the Minister of Finance attends the meeting of his colleagues this afternoon, will he also review a strong possibility—and we urge it—of restoring full indexation of family allowances?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Let me remind the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, as I have done practically every day—and it is not quite getting through his head—of the reason why we are making these decisions. There is a very, very serious financial problem with which the country has been faced, starting from his third Budget. This is the nature of the problem which we must address now or we are going to lose programs in the future, and not just scaling back on the rate of increase in these programs. I remind the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition again of those numbers. The debt has been growing at the rate of 25 per cent per annum for the last three years. That means it has doubled in three years. If it continues in that direction, it will be doubled in another three years.

In 1979 we were paying $8 billion in interest on our public debt. It is now three times that amount, at $25 billion. We are now paying more for interest than the federal Government spends on medicare, Old Age Security, and the Guaranteed Income Supplement. Surely the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, who was a Minister of Finance for four years, understands that problem. Surely he, who spoke out against the deficit, who spoke out in favour of making some changes which would reduce the deficit, can get that through his head, take a leadership role in this country, and start to explain that to Canadians—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The answer is becoming very long.

• (1120)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I understand the problem of the public debt in this country. We undertook to do something about it, but never on the backs of the weak, the disadvantaged, the sick, the elderly, and the unemployed.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): If the hon. gentleman wants to refer to my record he can look at the national accounts. He will see that during the four years that I had custody of the finances of the country there was an average annual deficit of $711 million and the last two surpluses in Canadian history. He could only wish for something like that.

EFFECT ON MEDICAL SUPPLIES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question relates to the new sales tax on products like aspirin, antihistamines, bandages, needles for medical purposes, poison ivy treatments, and diaper rash treatments. Why is the Minister broadening his scope to tax sick people and babies? Why is he into that as well?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make two points. The policies put in place by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition from 1972 until 1975, when he left, are the basic policies which have gotten us into the mess we are in today. He knows that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I invite the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition to sit down and discuss the finances of the Government of Canada at any time and any place, in order that he may understand them better than he does now, because he is not showing any awareness of the problems today.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR DETAILS OF POSSIBLE CHANGES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Speaker, today, Canadians are delighted to see that the Prime Minister got the message at last and has called an emergency Cabinet meeting to correct the injustice caused by the Budget proposal concerning the elderly and low-income families. Could the Minister of Finance give the House the assurance, first of all, that he will reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security pension, as his leader promised on July 26, and second, that he will reinstate full indexation of the child tax credit and family allowance benefits, as his Minister of National Health and Welfare promised to do in January, and finally, is the Minister going to withdraw this idiotic proposal to levy a 10 per cent tax on soap, shampoo and drugs like cough medicine?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I can understand that the Hon. Member who asked that question may not understand the finances of the country as well as his Leader should. I can repeat the same answers that I have given to similar questions before, but I do not think that would serve much purpose. He can refer to Hansard to read the answers which I have given, which underline the very serious importance of this deficit problem and the necessity of getting control of the government debt which will double every three years.

Mr. Nunziata: Not on the backs of the seniors.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I know the Hon. Member for York South-Weston will never understand the problem.

Mr. Nunziata: Not on the backs of the seniors. When will you ever understand that? Show some compassion.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I know the Hon. Member for York South-Weston will never understand the problem because he could never get himself out of the gutter.

Mr. Nunziata: We care about seniors on this side of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie on a supplementary question.

[Translation]

ALLEGED INJUSTICES CONTAINED IN THE BUDGET

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. I think the Minister of Finance should realize that if he wants to save money, he can reverse his decision to send 1,000 soliders to Lahr and spend the $400 million over the next four years on the poor in this country. My supplementary is as follows, but first I can inform the Minister that I will be sending him a number of documents to help him correct the injustice caused by the Budget. Does the Minister of Finance realize, and I have a document here, does he realize that in a confidential document that is yet to be published by an advisory committee on social welfare, the point is clearly made that the Minister's Budget is making the poor poorer and the rich richer, and I quote: "Does the Minister realize that by 1990, a family with an income of $15,000 will lose $2,422 and a family with an income of $80,000 will make a profit of $6,287? Does the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, that is long enough for this question.

• (1125)

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me remind the Hon. Member again of the basic thrust of the Budget. It is first and foremost to create jobs to generate the wealth that is necessary to be able to support the social programs that the country wants. That is why we have done so many things in the Budget to encourage the generation of wealth by small business so that it will create those jobs and generate the revenues for the programs.

Second, I want to remind the Hon. Member—because he tends to forget—that there are many elements of fairness in the Budget. We will introduce a minimum tax in 1986. We are going to put a surtax on large corporations. We will put a surtax on upper income Canadians. We will put a special tax on the chartered banks. We are going to close a number of loopholes that have benefited upper-income Canadians.

All those measures are designed to generate a balance of fairness in the Budget. That is important for all Canadians to understand, and I hope that he will address that point himself.

PENSIONS

MINISTER'S 1980 STATEMENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. In 1980 the Minister of Finance told a press conference that a proposal to deindex pensions would be the thin edge of the wedge, a move that could be followed by removing indexing of old age pensions, baby bonuses and other programs.

Does the Minister still agree with his statement then, when he said that "the Tories agree that the federal deficit must be reduced but believe there are other ways of achieving it". Does he still agree with that statement, and not the thrust of his Budget as opposed to what he said in 1980?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let us look back to 1980. I believe the deficit was $10 billion or $12 billion. It is three times higher than that now. The debt of the country was half of what it is now.

Surely the Hon. Member understands the significant and fundamental difference in the financial picture of the Government of Canada. During the five years between then and now the previous Government let the finances of the Government of Canada go totally to hell, and that is why we have to make some changes now.

They are changes with which I am not happy. I do not like making any cuts in programs. I do not like cutting indexation. But I look at the options that are available to us. I say to myself, to the Hon. Member and all Canadians, that we have tried to address this problem in the broadest possible way so that the load is spread as thinly as possible. That way we can address this problem fairly, equitably, and over a period of time to reach some solutions so that we can maintain these programs in the future.

REQUEST MADE BY SENIOR CITIZENS' ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister knows, I have been talking to senior citizens across the country for the last three weeks and they are saying very clearly that they do not want the Government to do what the Liberal Government did to them and limit indexation on their pensions.

Yesterday some 13 organizations, representing 1.3 million senior citizens, said very clearly that they want indexation fully restored as of January next year. Will the Minister stand up in the House and give those seniors that assurance today, or certainly before next Friday?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have talked to senior citizens and senior citizen groups as well. I know what they are saying, and I have a good deal of sympathy for what they have said. If I were in their shoes I would say: "Yes, please restore the full indexation to the GIS recipients as well as the OAS recipients". But I also say to them that I cannot do that, looking at the finances of the Government of Canada and the nature of the problem.

I say to the Hon. Member that if he can give me some good idea of where we can find that money, we will have a look at it. However, I tell the Hon. Member that, in the course of developing the Budget, we have looked at every nook and cranny in government spending. Every Department of Government will be affected. We simply must look at this in the broadest possible way, broader than simply the impact on one group of Canadians.

• (1130)

TAX RATES INQUIRY

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, again my question is for the Minister of Finance. Last week members of my caucus gave 11 proposals by which the Minister could have raised the revenue to reduce the deficit without taking the money out of the pockets of senior citizens. Seniors understand that very well.

Would the Minister change the marginal tax rates for those individuals who paid a higher rate of tax prior to the Liberals changing it in 1982? In that way he can raise the revenues but will not have to rob seniors. That is exactly what he is doing now and seniors understand it. What the Minister is doing is taking a big chunk of money away from seniors and giving it to the wealthy. Will the Minister not reconsider that proposal?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I looked at the proposals which the Hon. Member and his colleagues put forward. There is one consistent theme through those proposals. Each one of them would result in some job loss.

The Hon. Member has to think back to the basic thrust of the Budget. On the one hand we are trying to create jobs. The reason for those jobs is to generate the wealth to pay for the social programs which not just the Hon. Member wants but all of us here on this side of the House want as well. That is a fundamental element of the Budget. If we cannot create the jobs, then we will not be able to afford the size of government we have today. That is why we have put the major thrust of the Budget on creating jobs, encouraging the small business community, giving it that encouragement to continue what it has been doing for the last nine months, which created 271,000 jobs.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Questions and replies are becoming speeches again. The Hon. Member for Trinity.

HEALTH

ARTHRITIS—RESEARCH FUNDING

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Can the Minister confirm that many thousands of Canadians of all ages, particularly older Canadians, suffer from arthritis and that his Department therefore allocates funds to research and treatment of this very painful disease?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I apologize to the Hon. Member. I did not get the last part of her question.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, can the Minister confirm that thousands of Canadians of all ages, particularly older Canadians, suffer from arthritis, and that his Department therefore allocates funds to research and treatment of this disease?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her patience. I believe what she said is correct, that arthritis is a disease not only debilitating for Canada's seniors, but others as well. If she is asking me the exact amount beyond the medical research or the NHRDP, I do not have those exact amounts available right now.

SALES TAX ON PAIN RELIEVERS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is very simple. Will the Minister of National Health and Welfare inform the Minister of Finance that the extension of the federal sales tax to pain relievers, such as ASA, used in the treatment of arthritis should be dropped, particularly at this time as senior citizens are losing income?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thought that was where the Member was going to in her first question but, as I said, I did not get the last part of it.

What the Hon. Member asks whether we want to look at sufferers of arthritis or other diseases. There is no question that part of people's disposable income is used for the purchase of drugs. She understands it. I understand it. A lot are protected through provincial pharmacare programs. Again, one can say that is not total or in every province, but there is that protection. I think the Hon. Member should also understand that these costs are not only borne by the individual but by society generally. There is no cut in seniors' income, as the Hon. Member likes to infer. There is a reduction in the escalation of the increase they would have had normally. I think, when one looks at balance, it is a position that has been taken by the Government over the long haul to try to get our finances back in order.

PENSIONS

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Just an hour ago the Minister of Finance met with Mr. Burt Hamner who is a member of the executive of the Ottawa-Carleton Senior Citizens Council, and who has met with thousands of senior citizens across Ontario over the course of the last month concerning the Government's deindexing proposal.

This Mr. Hamner was the last senior citizen the Minister of Finance will meet before the special Cabinet meeting this afternoon. The message he has was clear—restore universality on indexing and don't go part way—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Cassidy: —over—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question, please?

Mr. Cassidy: Will the Minister of Finance assure the House that when the Government does reverse its proposal in the Budget it will restore full indexing, and not simply partial reindexing of the Guaranteed Income Supplement?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I had a very good and useful meeting with Mr. Hamner. He has met, as the Hon. Member suggests, with a large number of seniors over the last two or three weeks. We had a very worth-while discussion. I would say to the Hon. Member in response to his preamble that we are not doing anything about universality. Every senior citizen who is eligible for GIS will continue to receive GIS. Every senior citizen will receive an Old Age Security cheque. I caution the Hon. Member not to spread or imply these changes in policy which he knows are wrong.

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the same Minister. He knows that universality is the maintenance of purchasing power and this simply means sending a $1 cheque to each senior in the name of universality. Does the Minister remember that in 1982, the Progressive Conservative Party opposed the measure taken by the then Liberal Government, which was to provide deindexing old age pensions while maintaining the purchasing power of the Guaranteed Income Supplement?

Could the Minister guarantee that the Progressive Conservative Government solution will not be to resort to the inadequate compromise of the Liberal Government in 1982, but rather to fully index all OAS pensions?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think that question has been responded to on a number of occasions. I would suggest to the Hon. Member that there are a lot of issues Canadians are interested in today. Maybe in the interests of addressing matters of concern to all Canadians he might look at some of these other issues.

PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. In a letter dated February 16, 1984, the Prime Minister wrote to a senior citizen in my constituency:

> —clear and justified exceptions to the ban on indexing must be made for all social programs designed to protect the ordinary or disadvantaged Canadian from the ravages of inflation for which they are not responsible.

Why has the Government abandoned this position?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we have not abandoned this position. I would ask the Hon. Member to be a bit more temperate in the comments he makes.

No changes have been made in the payments that senior citizens are receiving in July, August, September, and October. We have said quite clearly in the Budget that we are watching the progress of the economy. We are monitoring the situation up until January 1. A decision will be taken in order to respond to any changes in circumstances that warrant any change.

PUBLIC SERVICE PENSIONS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Finance. In that same letter the Prime Minister said:

> Public servants have paid for and are entitled to indexed pensions, and our Party remains committed to the premise that pension contracts should not be altered unilaterally by the Government.

Is the Minister of Finance saying that senior citizens have not paid for and are not entitled to fully indexed pensions? Why has the Government moved away from fully indexed pensions for senior citizens? Will the Government not immediately drop this devastating position?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me make it quite clear to the Hon. Member, and through him to his constituents, that we are very sensitive to the plight of senior citizens and are worried about the anxiety that has been created by this debate. I would also say to him that the position of the federal finances is such that we have to look at a range of issues, matters, and measures to address the problem of the debt. I have gone through these numbers for him and for other Hon. Members before, so I will not repeat them again. However, if we do not start to save money today, we will lose total programs in 1990.

• (1140)

EFFECT OF BUDGET ON ELDERLY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Last evening I attended a meeting in Hamilton with about 250 senior citizens, sponsored by United Senior Citizens, and a lady said to me that at the end of each month she has absolutely no money left over from her old age pension. She is diabetic, and she pointed out that, with the government provision, she would either have to cut back on food or on needles. Is the Minister prepared to see that happen?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the simple answer is no, I am not prepared to see that happen. However, I think the Hon. Member also knows that there is a range of means by which that particular problem can be dealt with. I hope he discusses them with his constituent.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister perhaps suggesting a food bank, or some charity? How is it that the Minister can see the need for upper-income groups to have more money and better return on their investments, but he cannot see that that woman is representative of a large number of senior citizens who cannot afford to take a cut in their purchasing power? Why does the Minister not now admit that he made an error and that there is in fact a need to maintain the indexation in order that women, like that woman and others, are not forced to make those kinds of choices?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me try to respond to that question in the most reasonable way, and with some logic. Around the end of the war, for every person who was retired there were five people working. That is now down to about 3 or 3.5 people working for every one person retired. By the year 2010, there will be only two people working for every one person retired. Thus it is very important that those people who are working are working in the most effective way, and have jobs. That is why I say to him, and through him to his constituent, that it is very important that we generate economic activity in Canada, so that those two or three people who are working can continue to support the programs which are important to senior citizens.

For that reason we have said that there are elements of the Budget which are designed to generate jobs and economic activity. We will continue on those because they are proving to be effective—271,000 jobs have been created. We want to build on that, so that his constituents and others like her can feel secure that progress will continue—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am afraid that again the answers are becoming long.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

THOROLD TUNNEL TRAFFIC

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. There is concern in my riding about the transportation of dangerous goods through the Thorold Tunnel under the Welland Canal. In the absence of a provincial policy, what is the policy of the Minister of Transport regarding this matter?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the particular issue to which the Hon. Member referred. However, I have to advise him that this is a matter which falls directly within the jurisdiction of the Department of Transportation and Communication of the Province of Ontario. I understand, as well, that they are examining the problem and looking at ways and means of using alternative over-water routes, which would be appropriate in the circumstances.

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

CHALK RIVER NUCLEAR LABORATORIES

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for whomever is answering for the absent Prime Minister today. In the last election campaign the Prime Minister made a clear-cut and positive commitment to the science community in Canada. To quote him specifically, with regard to the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories he said:

A PC Government will not only maintain this facility, it will consider providing additional funds to allow greater involvement.

How can the Prime Minister honour this commitment to the science community at Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories when his Government has stated that it will cut $100 million, or 50 per cent of the Government's research and development funding, from Atomic Energy of Canada Limited? How does this honour his commitment to the science community?

Miss Carney: Excuse me, Mr. Speaker, but could the Hon. Member repeat the question part of his remarks? I did not know it would be directed to me.

Mr. Hopkins: Mr. Speaker, that is indicative of how much interest there is for the science community on the government benches.

How can the Prime Minister honour his commitment to the science community at the Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories when his Government stated that it would cut $100 million, or 50 per cent of the Government's research and development funding, from Atomic Energy of Canada Limited? How does this honour the commitment of the Prime Minister to the science community?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I asked the Hon. Member to repeat the question because I could not believe he would actually put that question when he has full knowledge, as a Member of Parliament, that the move we did on cutting the R and D funding was done with the assistance and the active help of AECL, which has a corporate plan that involves the privatization of some of its facilities, charging the users of its research fees to collect the benefits of the research, and other measures which will ensure that the R and D facilities continue.

The R and D commitment will continue. It is just that Canadian taxpayers will be paying less, and the users of the R and D will be paying more.

JOB SECURITY

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, that is exactly the answer I wanted to hear from the Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hopkins: She knows full well, as do other Members on the Government benches, that no concrete arrangements have been made—none—to pick up the dollar cuts which the Government is about to implement. I have had meetings with those people—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, on both sides. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question?

Mr. Hopkins: How can the Prime Minister, the man who made this commitment to the science community, honour this further commitment, and I quote: "job security for employees of Chalk River Nuclear Laboratories and job security for their children"? What does the Prime Minister's failure to uphold this commitment really tell—

Mr. Speaker: With great respect, the Hon. Member has asked a supplementary question.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I did not hear a question in that rhetoric. However, I would make the point that the Hon. Member said he was happy with my answer.

Mr. Hopkins: I did not say that I was happy.

Miss Carney: AECL certainly would not have brought forward a corporate plan which allowed for the privatization of some of its assets and allowed for user-pay, without having some concrete program in mind to execute it.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

POSTAL RATE INCREASES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Canada Post. Canadians have just witnessed a farce in which Canada Post printed new stamps before it received approval for postal rate increases, a farce in which the Minister paid more attention to the President of Canada Post than to ordinary Canadians. After such a performance, how can Canadians have any faith that the Minister has their interests at heart, when all he did was set up a study rather than hold the line on postal rate increases?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is quite correct in saying that Canadians have witnessed a farce. The last farce they witnessed was from the Hon. Member when he rose in the House of Commons and defended the unions and the illegal strike in Canada Post.

The Government was faced with the choice of allowing the increase in the price of postage, or increasing the federal deficit by a further $170 million, or cutting service to Canadians. I would be interested in knowing from the NDP what option it would have chosen and, in particular, what sort of leadership it is prepared to show workers in Canada Post by asking them to improve productivity.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, Canadians want to know that the Minister is listening to them rather than simply trying to get off the hook by bashing unions. Canadians over the last 60 days have made it clear to the Minister that they want improved postal service.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is again becoming a preamble to a supplementary. Is there a question, please?

Mr. Keeper: Yes, Mr. Speaker. My question is the question that all Canadians are asking. How can the Minister expect to be believed when he says that he has their interests at heart, when what he has done is listen to the postal corporation rather than ordinary Canadians, and why does he not improve service instead of raising postal rates?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I think the question that all Canadians are asking is how the NDP can get up in the House of Commons and defend the illegal strikes. I think, also, that Canadians are asking how the NDP intends to ensure that improved postal service is given to Canadians. I think Canadians are asking, as well, whether or not the NDP is opposed to a study which will ask some pretty fundamental questions about the nature and type of service that Canadians will be receiving between now and the turn of the century, for example, in terms of competition with the private sector, in terms of the exclusive mandate of the Post Office, in terms of improving competition, in terms of improving service. If the NDP has nothing to offer in those areas, that is fine, but I think the vast majority of Canadians will welcome that study and will say that it is high time that Parliament took a look at the Post Office to ensure that the mandate of the Post Office is brought up to date.

AGRICULTURE

FARM FINANCIAL REVIEW BOARD RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture. As the Minister is well aware, the policy of the former Government on agriculture has put the country in a devastating position. Could the Minister tell the House whether any of the recommendations that were brought forth by the Farm Financial Review Board in the Bruce-Grey pilot project will be acted on by the Government?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member's question, I certainly appreciate his interest in the pilot project and, indeed, the interest shown by other Members. I want to indicate to him that I received the final report of the pilot project from Bruce-Grey on May 17 and we have had an opportunity to review some of the recommendations. I want to compliment and congratulate those who participated, and in particular the Hon. Member for Bruce-Grey for the leadership which he demonstrated.

Last week we had a meeting in Ottawa of the Farm Credit managers across the country. Next week we meet the chairpeople of the Farm Credit Appeal Boards so therefore we will have the benefit of three different recommendations. I can assure you that we will look very seriously at moving forward with some of the recommendations because they indeed make a great deal of sense, given the problems in the industry.

SCIENCE COUNCIL OF CANADA

SIZE OF BUDGET

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister and it concerns the Science Council of Canada. The professionals and the business people who studied the Science Council recommended a review by disinterested parties in 1987-88. Yet the document tabled on budget night by the Deputy Prime Minister recommended gutting the Council without any form of consultation whatsoever. This flies in the face of the words of the Prime Minister at the Economic Conference that consultation cannot lead to consensus—

Mr. Speaker: Again the preambles are getting long. Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Berger: This flies in the face of the Prime Minister who said that consultation cannot lead to consensus unless the process is open and broadly based. Can the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that the final private sector report did not recommend cutting the Council's budget significantly? Who did make this irresponsible decision to gut the Science Council, and can he explain why?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the decision in respect to the Science Council as it was announced in the Budget Papers of May 23 was presented in the context of a review of a large number of programs having to do with support for science and technology and research and development by the Government of Canada. The review had shown that the government support system had grown overly generous over the years, and the Budget introduced a number of measures to provide support in a more rational and in a more relevant manner.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Skeena.

EXPO '86

NATIVE PAVILION PROJECT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. As he is no doubt aware, the Government of Canada funded the Teepee Pavilion at Montreal at Expo '67 to help promote national and international understanding of the vast and rich heritage of Canada's aboriginal peoples. To date the federal Government has refused to fund the construction of the Native Pavilion at Expo '86. My question to the Deputy Prime Minister is this. Since today is the absolute deadline for construction to be able to proceed for the Native Pavilion at Expo '86, does his Government intend to provide financial assistance to the native people of Canada for their pavilion?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will take that question as a representation and ensure that the matter is considered. I must confess that the teepee program does not ring a large bell with me, but I will look into it immediately and take the question as a representation.

DEADLINE FOR FUNDING

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister again. The federal Government has spent about $250 million on the Expo '86 site. The Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has been involved, the Secretary of State has been involved, as well as the Prime Minister's Office which indicated on June 4—

Mr. Speaker: Order. We are into a preamble to a supplementary. Is there a question, please?

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, since today is the final deadline for construction on the site, will the Deputy Prime Minister indicate whether his Government will be putting funds forward, or not, for the native people of Canada?

[Translation]

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, the question asked by the Hon. Member for Skeena actually deals with a specific point when referring to Expo '86 in British Columbia. The application as originally submitted was not acceptable. Expo '86 being a transportation, a communication exhibition, the application was not appropriate to Expo specifically; this is the reason why it was turned down. I do not think it suited the program under which it was made, the Native Economic and Developing Board, and this is why it was turned down. But I can assure the Hon. Member that over these last two years, the previous Liberal Government only accepted 39 applications; over these last eight months—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid).

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

PROTECTION OF EMPLOYEES' PENSION FUNDS

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The Budget proposes an availability, or greater availability, of pension funds for investment purposes. May I ask the Minister what steps are being taken to protect or insure the pension funds of employees who are participating in a fund against bankruptcy, receivership, or dissipation of such funds?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for his question. As he probably knows, we have already some provisions in the Pension Benefits Standards Act for that aspect. However, we have created a special advisory committee to address this matter through the bankruptcy legislation and we are expecting recommendations from them in the near future. We hope to introduce these recommendations as well.

THE BUDGET

TAX MEASURES—MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, on March 1 on a television program called Question Period the Minister of Finance told the country that a general tax increase would dampen demand and he did not want to go that way. Can he tell us what has made him change his mind, recognizing that he is imposing more than $4 billion in additional taxes on the Canadian public next year.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think I have addressed this question in the House before, but I will do it again for the Hon. Member as he probably was spending some time back in Saint-Henri rather than being in the House. There is no question that when I made that statement, and I still would make that same statement, I was not in favour of raising taxes in the country, but we found that if we were going to be able to do as much as we thought was necessary to address the deficit problem, we had to get the deficit lowered. We had been looking on the spending side to meet that objective, but we are not able to do so without putting more pressure on the Atlantic provinces as well as some parts of Quebec and British Columbia by cutting programs further than we had. It is for that reason that we had to use some measure of tax increase in order to address the deficit problem.

• (1200)

REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri-Westmount): Mr. Speaker, we are talking about a declaration that was made on March 1, not last year but this year, shortly before the Budget was tabled. I suggest to the Minister of Finance that he knows that that was a mistake. We hope that during the summer months he will rethink his position and return here in the autumn with something that is more—

Point of Order—Mr. Nickerson

Mr. Speaker: I have already indicated earlier today with respect to the Hon. Member that he should ask his question, please.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, can we look forward to having the Minister of Finance rethink his position on these additional taxes during the summer months?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, a tremendous amount of thought went into the Budget. Therefore I do not think that the additional thinking the Hon. Member suggests I do will result in any changes. I would suggest that the Hon. Member spend the summer months giving some thought to the general direction of the Budget which contains what we are trying to do to generate jobs and to address the very serious problem of escalating government debt. Surely when he returns to the House on September 9, he will ask better questions than the ones he has just asked.

CLERK OF PETITIONS' REPORTS

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that the petitions, with the exception of three, presented by Hon. Members on Thursday, June 20, 1985, meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

Two petitions presented by the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) and one petition presented by the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) do not meet the requirements of the Standing Orders as to form.

I have notice of a point of order from the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson).

POINTS OF ORDER

RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS IN VOTES AND PROCEEDINGS OF JUNE 20, 1985

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order that will be of interest to parliamentary purists. In reviewing Votes and Proceedings for June 20, it would appear that the description of what happened during the debate in the Committee of the Whole examination of Bill C-36, particularly as it relates to Motion No. 7, is not a description of exactly what happened.

According to Votes and Proceedings, Motion No. 7 was negatived in the Committee of the Whole and then we went on to third reading. My recollection, as substantiated by the written record in Hansard, is that Motion No. 7 was in fact carried in Committee of the Whole, the report of the committee was concurred in and third reading debate began. At a point in time thereafter, by unanimous consent, I believe, the Committee of the Whole was reconvened, had further debate on Motion No. 7 and on that occasion negatived Motion No. 7.

I wonder, Sir, if you would be kind enough to review that situation and perhaps have Votes and Proceedings reflect what actually happened. At the same time, I would ask you to look at the electronic record of the last part of the debate on Bill C-36. I think you will see that there were several errors in procedure made, not the least of which was the holding of a meeting of the Committee of the Whole with the mace still on the table.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for his intervention. I shall indeed examine the record.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The comments made by the Hon. Member need to be examined. If they are in fact true, we will have to make the appropriate corrections.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I was present last night. I would like to bring to your attention the fact that everything that was done was with the unanimous consent of everyone present.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member's point was that I review the record, and of course I will do that.

DISALLOWANCE OF SUPPLEMENTARY QUESTION DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Earlier in the Question Period, you made a decision which effectively disallowed me a supplementary question. It is a point of order if not a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: It is neither a point of order nor a question of privilege. Is the Hon. Member objecting to a decision I made with regard to the allocation of questions during Question Period?

Mr. Berger: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: That is entirely within the jurisdiction of the Chair.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: If the Hon. Member has a grievance to make, he can come to me to make it. However, it is neither a point of order nor a question of privilege.

PETITIONS

Mr. Speaker: Before I proceed to petitions, and I expect that there are a few to be presented, may I bring a small problem to the attention of Hon. Members who are presenting petitions? When Hon. Members present petitions in bulk and all on the same subject, something which has been occurring, unless the back of the first page of all of the petitions is signed, the Table Officers are having substantial difficulty identifying which petitions were presented by which Members. Could I therefore ask Hon. Members today and in future to make sure that they endorse the back of the first page of each petition?

DEINDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, as you know, I have been signing the backs of these petitions as requested since we began presenting these hundreds of petitions asking the Government to reconsider its views on the deindexation of Old Age Security payments. I am at a loss to know where to start today because I have hundreds and hundreds of petitions and I hope you will be patient with me, Mr. Speaker. I will try to group them in order because they deal with two or perhaps three subject matters.

The first petition I humbly submit is presented by citizens of the Ottawa area who form part of a group of citizens known to be very active in the senior citizens' group, the Ottawa-Carleton Senior Citizen Council, and it is signed by a couple of hundred and perhaps even 300 people asking the Government to reconsider its view and to keep its promise that any savings which may result from program changes will not be applied to the reduction of the deficit, that deindexing of the old age pension, having a drastic effect on incomes of senior citizens, should be reconsidered and that the Government should maintain full indexing of pensions.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR MAINTENANCE OF FULL INDEXATION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): I also have the pleasure to present a petition on behalf of many residents of the province of Ontario, which petition was signed in Ottawa this week by members of the Fédération des aînés francophones de l'Ontario at their seventh annual conference on June 17, 18 and 19, 1985. This petition humbly showeth, that in the opinion of the petitioners, the Budget of the Conservative Government is harsh and without pity as far as senior citizens are concerned since it removes full indexation of old age security pensions, and the petition asks the Government to maintain full indexation of all pensions and to abandon its deindexation proposal.

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE

Mr. Jean Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I also have another group of petitions which deal with the spouse's allowance and which, as you will note, have been signed by hundreds of residents of my constituency, who ask the Government to reconsider once again its proposal to restrict spouse's allowance to widowed people, thus excluding all single, separated or divorced people from the legislation to extend the spouse's allowance to needy people between the ages of 60 and 64. Mr. Speaker, I believe that you will find these petitions to be in order. I have numbered them as well as I could and the Clerk will be able to put them in order if need be.

REINSTATEMENT OF FULL INDEXATION OF OLD AGE SECURITY

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which has over 1,000 signatures and is mainly signed by the senior citizens of Ottawa-Carleton. The signatures were collected by the Senior Citizens Council of Ottawa-Carleton and it will continue to collect signatures over the summer. The petition protests the actions of the Government and states that requiring large numbers of low-income pensioners to suffer additional reductions in real income is heartless, especially as so many already exist on incomes which are below the poverty line. The petition calls on the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security forthwith. Other copies of this petition are being tabled by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) and the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Carleton (Mr. Turner).

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and the duty to present a petition which is signed by 271 citizens, mostly from the constituencies of Regina East and Regina West. There are also a few signatures from Humboldt-Lake Centre. The petition asks that the House of Commons and the Government retain full indexation of the Old Age Security pension starting on January 1, 1986. Your petitioners are duty bound to ever pray.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have petitions with several hundred signatures from constituents in my riding, representing the towns and villages of Wadena, Claire, Southey, Quill Lake, Naicam, Watrous, Viscount, Colonsay, Meacham and Peterson. The petitions call upon the House of Commons to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security pensions in Canada. Your petitioners humbly pray that the House of Commons accedes to their wish.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present several petitions which were signed by people throughout the riding of Algoma. They call upon the Government to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security pension. The petitioners call upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to keep the commitments which he made during the last election campaign. They point out that senior citizens should not be responsible for providing income to the multinational oil companies and high-income groups. The petitions are signed by people who live in the communities of Hilton Beach, Bruce Mines, Spragge, Spanish, Blind River, Manitowaning, Sault Ste. Marie, the Spanish River Indian Reserve near Massey, and Espanola, Ontario. The petitions are signed by several hundred constituents from the riding of Algoma.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition which contains in excess of 4,000 signatures. It was signed by residents of the City of Hamilton. It is the first of what I anticipate to be a number of similar petitions. The petition asks the House of Commons to impress upon the Government the need to stop the proposal which will deindex old age pensions. The petition asks that the Government maintain in full force and effect the indexing provisions which presently exist for both the Old Age Security and the Guaranteed Income Supplement.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which was signed by a number of people from the riding of Yorkton-Melville. The petition also protests the very regressive move which was made by the federal Government to deindex pensions partially. It is something to which I am sure the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald) is very much opposed, and she has the freedom to speak in the House on it. I am very pleased to table this petition in the House which protests the partial deindexation. It calls upon the Government to index fully the OAS and the GIS for all the senior citizens of the land. Those people have built this land and have made it the great country which it is today.

DEINDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present to this House a petition signed by 60 residents of Orleans and of the ridings of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell and Ottawa-Carleton, who want to tell the Government that they disagree with the cutbacks in old age security pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a few more petitions signed by 34 residents of the village of Embrun in the beautiful riding of Glengarry-Prescott-Russell and by 103 residents of the village of Wendover, which you probably know well, also in Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

An Hon. Member: It is a nice village.

Mr. Boudria: These people also want to express their disagreement about the Government's proposal to reduce the pensions of senior citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I shall have several hundred more petitions to table in coming days to convince this Government to change its mind and to give back their pensions to senior citizens.

[English]

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present two petitions, one on behalf of a group of senior citizens from a building in my riding at 2100 Russell Road in Ottawa. They call upon the Government to reinstate full indexation of the Old Age Security benefits.

I have another petition which was signed by hundreds of senior citizens within the National Capital Region, under the sponsorship of the Senior Citizens Council of Ottawa-Carleton, which also requests the Government to reinstate full indexation of Old Age Security payments.

REQUEST FOR FULL INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

[English]

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present a petition on behalf of approximately 150 residents of the Lepage Senior Citizens' Home in my riding. They call upon the Government to maintain full indexation of Old Age Security payments.

[English]

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox-Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a number of petitions which protest the deindexing of Old Age Security payments. The petitions are signed by numerous communities in the riding of Comox-Powell River. The communities include Powell River, Lund, Saltery Bay, Gillies Bay, Campbell River, Sayward, Zeballos, Kyuquot, Gold River, Tahsis, Courtenay, Comox, Cumberland, Fanny Bay, Union Bay, Royston, Merville, Black Creek, Oyster River, Port McNeill—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is extending the usual practice. Would he finish his list quickly, please?

Mr. Skelly: Yes, Mr. Speaker, as quickly as I can. The petition is also signed by people from the communities of Port Hardy, Port Alice, Mahatta River, Holberg, San Josef, Winter Harbour, Bella Coola, Bella Bella, Ocean Falls—

• (1220)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that what he is doing is extending the normal practices of petitions.

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, if I might quickly—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member can simply indicate he has a number of other communities in his petitions and end the matter.

Mr. Skelly: If I might just complete the list and then we can—

An Hon. Member: Come on.

Mr. Speaker: It was a very simple request made to the Hon. Member that he simply indicate he has a number of other communities and get to the substance of the petition, please.

Mr. Skelly: Then I will possibly raise the rest of them on Tuesday and be willing to submit the petitions which, basically, outline a substantial concern with the failure of the Government to live up to its promises to provide security of income. The petitioners also feel that there are many other people being exposed to deindexing and there is a lack of protection of pension income, which is contrary to the promises made and that it is an extremely serious situation.

SUPPLEMENTARY FISCAL EQUALIZATION PAYMENTS 1982-87 ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-39, an Act to provide for the making of supplementary fiscal equalization payments to certain provinces for the period April 1, 1982 to March 31, 1987, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Finance) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

[Translation]

Mr. Claude Lanthier (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, our Government provided the Opposition lets us to do so quickly, will authorize payment of $285 million in lump sum supplementary fiscal equalization payments to the six provinces that are receiving equalization payments. This is in addition to some $5 billion the provinces will be receiving annually under the fiscal equalization program.

In making this announcement, our admirable Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) stated, and I quote:

> These payments are substantial and should be of considerable assistance to the poorer provinces in meeting their commitments, especially with respect to essential services.

The Minister of Finance also mentioned that these amounts were the most the Government was able to afford in this respect, in light of its own serious financial situation, something the provinces can appreciate.

The decision follows consultations held with the provinces in recent months. It takes into account the concerns of the provinces about the level of equalization payments resulting in some cases from the expiry of the special transitional guarantee introduced in 1982 by the former Government, and which has brought about a significant decline in federal transfer payments, especially for Quebec and Manitoba. Our most admirable Minister of Finance will soon be reviewing the equalization program with the provinces, in connection with the general review of fiscal arrangements between now and March 31, 1987.

Generally, the equalization formula is based on the population of a province and on its capacity to raise revenues, so that payments vary from province to province. The Minister of Finance has stated that the Government will make these supplementary lump sum payments which in fact it did not have to make under the present fiscal arrangements, in its concern to be fair and equitable to the provinces, at a time when financial restrictions are the order of the day at all levels of government. The Minister noted that over-all Federal transfers to the provinces, within the framework of equalization and established programs financing, are estimated to rise from $19.7 billion for the past fiscal year to $20.7 billion for fiscal 1985-86. For 1984-85, equalization payments would total $5.403 billion.

Mr. Speaker, the Bill will eliminate the shortcomings in a formula which is no longer readily applicable as a result of changing trends in the economic situation since it was first implemented.

The provinces have been made aware of the situation, of course, and some of them were not in complete agreement. Other provinces endorsed the measure since they considered that we had established a program which took their concerns into account.

The most significant consideration at this third reading stage is that the provinces are waiting for their payments. The Government is prepared to make those payments should the House co-operate and give speedy approval to the Bill. Since we do have a number of Bills to study and pass before the House adjourns next week, I seek the co-operation of all Hon. Members. I should think that everything has been said about this issue, so I urge all Parties in the House to show goodwill and adopt this Bill as soon as possible.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): In response to the invitation of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Lanthier), Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to co-operate on behalf of the Party I represent. But there are still some disturbing facts which, in 1986-87 and even in 1985-86, will put some provinces in a difficult situation. We are now at the third reading of Bill C-39, the Supplementary Fiscal Equalization Payments (1982-87) Act.

Mr. Speaker, I must point out that no amendment has been made to this Bill even though the Opposition did make strong representations. We came up with particularly convincing arguments during the second reading debate and before the committee, and the Minister of Finance of Quebec had made serious representations of his own. In these circumstances, the arguments I made last April 18 are still valid, mutatis mutandi, in the sense that although this measure does provide equalization payments for certain provinces, as it is drafted it falls far short in the case of the Province of Nova Scotia.

It is unfair as well to the Province of Manitoba and, as far as Quebec is concerned, I think that the qualifier I used last April has lost none of its appropriateness—this Bill is inequitable.

The Parliamentary Secretary mentioned the interim payments formula. Hon. Members will recall that the interim payments formula had been included in the 1982-87 fiscal arrangements as a kind of guarantee to the provinces in case the new formula that had been adopted did not produce results.

It was obvious, that whatever happened, the Government in power from 1985-86 would have to review this formula since the results were positive in some provinces and negative in others. It would therefore be necessary to amend the guarantee formula so that the provinces would not have to come back once more in 1986-87 to wait in line before the Office of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) or the Office of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to try to obtain a more equitable treatment.

• (1230)

[English]

Mr. Speaker, the Province of Nova Scotia, for example, received $620 million in 1984-85 in equalization payments. This includes the $72 million which Nova Scotia received in transition payments. As of 1985-86 these transition payments will no longer exist. Bill C-39 offers only temporary compensation to the Province of Nova Scotia. The compensation will only apply in the fiscal year of 1985-86. The federal Government has announced that it will renegotiate fiscal arrangements with the provinces by March 31, 1987. This means that no provision has been made for Nova Scotia for the fiscal year 1986-87. Nova Scotia is left at the mercy of the federal Government and will have to count on a special lobbying effort in order to defend its own interests.

The fact that Nova Scotia must now rely on political lobbying is particularly unfortunate. Equalization was established precisely to avoid the need for poorer provinces to come begging on a discretionary basis to the federal Government.

I am sad that the Conservative Government is politicizing the principle of equalization. This is particularly unfortunate for Nova Scotia at this time because it is highly unlikely that the Government will undertake the very political energy talks without consideration to the equalization negotiations. Equalization is in danger of being used as a carrot, or a stick, rather than as an instrument of national unity.

The financial and economic agenda of Nova Scotia has not yet been addressed. The Budget heralds a new era for the Canadian energy industry. Next year's financial and economic situation of Nova Scotia is still up in the air.

Bill C-39 is also unfair to the Province of Manitoba. Under the new equalization formula Manitoba received $439 million in 1982-83, which included $169 million in transition payments. In 1983-84, Manitoba received $466 million, of which $163 million were transition payments. In 1984-85, the province received $479 million, of which $138 million as in transition payments. In general, Manitoba received 30 per cent of its equalization thanks to these transition payments.

Now that the transition program will be ending, the equalization payment to Manitoba will decline from $479 million to $407 million. This is a reduction of $72 million. Despite the fact that this Bill will provide some compensation for this current fiscal year, equalization payments to Manitoba will be reduced substantially in the fiscal year 1986-87.

[Translation]

As for Quebec, the formula proposed by the Minister of Finance in Bill C-39 is completely inequitable. Because the Government of Canada did not want to maintain, for the last two years of the fiscal arrangements, the transitional guarantee provisions which had been in effect during the last three years of these arrangements, the Province of Quebec will incur very substantial losses. For instance, after receiving $3.7 billion in 1984-85, Quebec will get only $2.7 billion in 1985-86, which means a loss of $290 million. In 1986-87, it is forecast that the equalization payments received by Quebec will amount to $2.9 billion, or $172 million less that in 1984-85.

If we consider the normal growth in equalization payments which should be generated from one year to the next, the loss for Quebec is substantial, and Bill C-39 only makes up 15 per cent of the equalization losses suffered by Quebec because the transitional guarantee provisions no longer apply.

During the debates on this issue, the Quebec Finance Minister had clearly indicated how the decision of the Conservative Government would affect the cash flow of the Quebec Treasury. Following the comments made by the Quebec Finance Minister, the Prime Minister of Canada said that the door was still open and that further negotiations could take place. For all practical purposes, he suggested that there would be some improvement, but as usual, this was only a smokescreen, statements for the press which had no concrete results since the Bill has come back to us in the same form.

To my knowledge, there were no further intense negotiations with Quebec, but it is quite clear and obvious that the Government of Canada did not change its approach and that Quebec will lose hundreds of millions of dollars in 1985-86 and 1986-87, which will result eventually in a heavier tax burden for Quebec residents.

When we considered Bill C-39 at the second reading and committee stages, the Budget had not yet been brought down. However, Mr. Speaker, according to the indications given by the Minister of Finance of Canada last May 23, provincial transfer payments will have decreased by $2 billion in 1990-91. This means that Manitoba, Nova Scotia and Quebec will be affected not only during the next two years under the present fiscal arrangements, but also that they must expect other cutbacks beginning in 1986-87. The same will be true for all the provinces who receive equalization payments and transfers.

I respectfully submit, Mr. Speaker, that those two measures, the one introduced in Bill C-39 and the announcement made in the budget, raise financing problems for our Confederation as a whole.

Unless the Canadian Government is ready once again to renege on its election promises and jeopardize the universality of social programs, I do not see, once the Conservative Government has slashed $2 billion from its payments to the provinces, how the latter will manage to administer the post-secondary education programs, health care, medicare, and the Canadian Assistance Plan without increasing their own taxes, or imposing user fees which the Progressive Conservative Party fought when they were the Opposition.

Let us not hide our heads in the sand. The message set out in Bill C-39, and driven home by the Budget, is telling Canadians the Conservative Government is getting ready to renege on another of its election promises, even though in December 1984 the debate on the universality of social programs seemed quite clear.

This Conservative Government is sending out the message that it will try and do indirectly what it would not do directly last December.

Successive Liberal Governments have developed over the years a series of programs aimed at strengthening Canadian unity with a balance of services offered to all citizens of Canada, in whatever village, town, city, region or province they lived.

Those programs brought in a whole concept of funding for this confederation of ours, a concept which is jeopardized not only by Bill C-39 but by the message the Minister of Finance delivered to this House and the Canadian people on May 23, 1985.

I do not believe Canadians are ready to accept such a change without a substantive debate amongst the Canadian people and the Governments that operate those programs, whether provincial or federal. I do not believe that Canadians are willing to see their medical care, hospital care, and post-secondary education programs slashed, but they are not willing either to shoulder the fiscal burden of those programs that have been contracted between the national Government and the provincial Governments, either to have the axe fall on those programs or to alter the funding and transfer the full fiscal burden of the administration of such programs from the federal Government to the provincial Governments.

This is why the Official Opposition will not support this Bill on third reading, because it is inadequate and because it is not fair to the provinces of Manitoba, Nova Scotia and Quebec, not only for fiscal year 1985-86 but also for fiscal year 1986-87.

[English]

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I intend to be fairly brief in speaking to this matter.

First, I want to commend my friend, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) for his very careful analysis of the present situation and thoughtful review of what might well be the consequences of what essentially is a stopgap measure. We cannot provide adequate financing to the provinces in this way and expect them to be able to do any long-term planning.

Quite clearly, the intent of the equalization payment program was to allow provinces to be able to plan for their health care needs, educational needs and housing needs to an extent with some degree of assuredness. Therefore, they would need to know what kind of equalization would be available on a long-term formula basis so they could anticipate what financing would be coming from the federal Government. My friend from the Liberal Party has set that out well.

When there are gaps in the federal Government's commitment to ongoing finance, it causes concern because the provinces are left in a position of subservience in making representations on an annual basis to the federal Government. They must try to accommodate the federal Government's desire to establish new budgetary provisions. It will be very difficult for at least two of the provinces most directly affected to anticipate their revenues for the fiscal year 1987.

I would be remiss if I did not point out the battle that was fought by all provinces, particularly the Province of Manitoba initially, to confront the federal Government when it became apparent that the payments that had been proposed were woefully inadequate. I think it is fair to say that some degree of recognition should be paid to that province's Government, as it must to all Governments of the provinces, that they managed to exert the pressure that brought us to this point today.

Let me repeat the intent of the equalization system because, as the name implies, it is a way to try to provide a share of the substantial wealth that is generated in the balance of the country to those provinces which do not have the same economic capacity. The purpose of this plan is to assure the citizens who live in those less advantaged areas of an opportunity to enjoy an adequate level of public service for themselves and their children. It will enable those who live in the less economically fortunate areas of the country to have a standard of education that will enable their children to have the same employment opportunities in any part of the country and to participate in the ongoing events of Canada.

When we tamper with equalization payments, it is not simply a Government to Government arrangement. It involves people, a commitment from people who live in the more fortunate areas of the country to share with the people who live in the less economically fortunate parts of this country. In this way, growth will take place from coast to coast.

I want to caution the Government that in the case of Nova Scotia, as with Manitoba and probably Quebec, there will be problems in two years unless a new regime is put into place before 1987. Negotiations must be completed and a long-term proposal for equalization that is acceptable across the country put in place before we reach that period of uncertainty when it may once again be necessary to lobby the Government to become the main instrument to achieve fairness.

The fact is that this Bill must be viewed as a stopgap, and therefore inadequate. However, it is with that in mind that we accept the commitment of the Government at this point that it is prepared to move to negotiate an arrangement that will ultimately result in a fair distribution of wealth, which will ultimately provide the maintenance and advancement of many programs provided in those areas that are so dependent on equalization payments to sustain their economy.

I believe that there will be a much more intense debate on this subject in a year and a half to two years from now. I anticipate that debate to be centered on what will take place as we enter the 1990s. It will primarily reflect the intransigence that the Government has displayed in recognizing the necessity for the maintenance of the social system in Canada. If the Government takes the same approach to equalization as it has with respect to the financing of social policy and reneges on its commitment to fair and equitable economic growth through equalization, we will see a battle being fought not unlike the battle presently being waged against the deindexation of pensions.

Mr. Crosby: The OAS.

Mr. Deans: The deindexation of the OAS. I might say, with respect to that matter, that I am somewhat concerned about the deindexation of the GIS with the ultimate deindexing of the CPP and other matters that the Government has fixed upon as being necessary in order to achieve its long-term goals. However, I do not intend to debate that here today.

We hope that the Bill will pass today and that the Government will make a serious attempt between now and 1987, presumably when a new agreement will be achieved, to rethink its views on the fair distribution of social systems, with particular emphasis on making sure that the educational system in the provinces that have less economic stability will be able to grow and provide for the needs of the people in that area. Furthermore, we must ensure that, in the case of health, the Government will be able to provide adequate health care facilities in areas where health care facilities even now are in need of upgrading. With those comments, we will allow the Bill to pass.

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I want to say just a few words. The hon. gentleman said there was a deal made. I can assure the hon. gentleman that there are no deals with regard to my expressing a few words of concern.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): The House Leaders agreed.

Mr. Baker: I am going to say a few words regardless of any deals that have been made behind the scenes because we are talking about a very important subject. We are talking about equalization payments. We are talking about equalization payments that are supposed to equalize opportunity across the nation to provincial Governments for the amounts of money needed in order to get an equalization of services across the country. In other words, what the provinces cannot make up for in their normal tax revenues, what they cannot raise locally within a province to make up the average amount necessary, is given to them as an equalization payment every year. In other words, the rich give to the poor. The federal Government, through this mechanism, is supposed to go a long way in trying to give the poor provinces of Canada adequate funds to allow them to have some semblance of services. Regardless of whether you live in Newfoundland, Alberta or Manitoba, at least the services given to the people should be approximately the same.

The Parliamentary Secretary, in introducing this Bill, condemned the former Liberal administration and said there had been cuts.

I would like to remind the Parliamentary Secretary, as far as this Bill is concerned, of what is contained in the Budget in one sentence on page 18, which reads:

> To spread the burden of expenditure reduction fairly, the Government will also be seeking to limit the rate of growth of transfers to provinces to yield annual savings of $2 billion by the end of the decade.

It says, "To yield annual savings of $2 billion by the end of the decade." It goes on:

> In 1990-91, they would represent about the same share of total program expenditures as they do today.

In other words, there would be an extreme limitation from what the former bad, terrible Liberal Government had in place. This Government in the Budget it had just presented is going to have annual savings of $2 billion by the end of the decade. That sets it in focus. If the Liberals reduced equalization payments, then there is now going to be a further substantial reduction in the rate of increase.

If you look at the services provided across this country that are supposed to be subsidized through the equalization formula so that they will be approximately equal, you will see a great diversity of them. You could go to the richest province, some people claim that that is Alberta, and you would see assistance in the form of workmen's compensation that is not as good as that which you would see in Newfoundland. There is a great divergence. You would see less of a minimum wage in Alberta than you have in Newfoundland. You would see great differences in the services given to the general public.

It must be borne in mind that a lot of the measures serving the public are the decisions of the provincial administrations. When you get into the payment of welfare, of social services, you see a great difference. Sometimes you see the poorer provinces receiving equalization payments giving better services than some of the richer provinces.

If you get hurt in Alberta and you have to go on workman's compensation and then you go back home to Newfoundland to live, you discover that your payment is less than if you had been hurt in Newfoundland and were still living in Newfoundland. If you were working in Newfoundland at minimum wage, you would find it higher than the minimum wage paid in Alberta. By the same token, if you were in any other province in Canada you could have some services in daycare centres, the cost shared by the federal Government, but in Newfoundland you would not have that same service. That is a decision of the provincial administration.

Where you really see the difference in services to the general public, Mr. Speaker, is in the area of infrastructure. A provincial government Department tries to do certain things. If its responsibility is in transportation, it would try to upgrade and pave roads. If its area is municipal affairs, water and sewer services, the Department would try to improve that. Where do they get the money from? If you looked at provincial Governments, in the poor provinces you would see that half of the money given, if you took the percentage, comes from the federal Government in equalization payment. That is the purpose of the equalization payment, to have an equality of services even in infrastructure.

The Newfoundland Government, the Nova Scotia Government or the New Brunswick Government could not pave the number of roads they are paving or what they are doing without these equalization payments. It boils down to what their priorities are. It boils down to what happens in their Cabinet meetings and what happens to the equalization money, because it represents a blank cheque, Mr. Speaker.

Transfer payments over the years have become blank cheques. It was not too long ago that you made a payment according to a percentage of what a provincial Government spent, say, on senior citizens' homes or nursing homes. Then we changed it to block funding, so provinces got the funding which increased as a percentage every year. It was given with no strings attached. The provincial Government could decide what it was going to do with the federal money. We saw provincial Governments throughout Canada putting a freeze on building senior citizens homes but still receiving the money and the increase and then redirecting it in different directions.

When you talk, as the new Budget does, about reducing these transfer payments to $2 billion annually, you are not really giving the provincial Governments a chance to do what they are supposed to do and I am not saying they are doing what they are supposed to do because they are not.

Take a look at some of the so-called poor provinces, Mr. Speaker. There are people in Canada today in 1985 who do not have community water systems, yet there is supposed to be equalization under the equalization formula. People in some communities are drinking contaminated water out of an existing system or from wells that pick up surface water from the highway. When you realize that that is the case today in 1985 in a great many ridings represented by MPs in this Chamber, you have to say that something is wrong. Somebody's priorities are wrong. It just so happens that it is the priorities of the provincial Governments that are wrong. No matter how much money is given to the provinces in equalization payments, they have formulas for supplying services to the general public.

Perhaps there should be even more strings attached to equalization payments.

• (1300)

People in Ottawa and in other major centres across Canada think nothing of turning on taps and drinking tap water. It is a normal occurrence. They do not think about it until they visit communities such as some in my riding of Gander-Twillingate and discover that they cannot turn on taps because they do not exist, or when they turn on taps that the water is not drinkable.

When we look at equalization of services across the country, at equalization formulas and at the Act, they look great. It sounds good to equalize payments across Canada and to equalize services to the general public. However, when we look at some of the smaller communities in the country, we discover that they have no drinking water. In 1985, in this great country of Canada, there are schools with no drinking water and there are wells which contain contaminated water. We have to wonder about equalization in services when we drive down unpaved roads in some communities and there is dust everywhere. The women in those communities will tell us that they cannot hang out their clothes or that it is difficult to paint their houses because of the dust. We must remember the actual rationale behind equalization payments.

No matter what is the decision of a provincial administration, whether it is good or bad, whether it tries to save money when it should not be trying to save money, and regardless of how it treats the poorest within its provincial jurisdiction, the federal Government cannot say that it will try to save $2 billion annually under the equalization formula. In the meantime, it introduces a Bill in the House and kicks in $200 million to make it look good. However, in reality, it is cutting back $2 billion annually from the equalization formula.

When we look at the services to the general public and at what Members of Parliament have to deal with every day, we see some incredible differences in provincial legislation dealing with payments to individuals. For example, we find that some provinces have 90-day rules respecting welfare or social assistance. When individuals attend welfare offices, they are asked what amount of money they made in the last 90 days. If a person has made more than he would receive on welfare, he has to wait until it runs out. In the meantime, what is he supposed to do if he has children attending school and has to pay perhaps as much as $100 per child for school books? He has to live, but he is faced with the 90-day rule. We must remember that the Government of the province in which he lives is obtaining half its budget from the federal Government in equalization payments. The rules indicate that there must be an equalization of opportunity in Canada, but we see, for example, a Tory Government in the Province of Newfoundland with the audacity to turn around and make the 90-day rule.

Other provinces will tell welfare recipients who are living with people over 18 years of age that they cannot obtain anything from welfare. What does this mean to a woman on widow's allowance with three children over the age of 18 years living at home, who cannot find work, and is not receiving payments from a provincial Government which is receiving massive equalization payments from the federal Government? However, if she moves to Ontario or to some other province, she discovers that the system is completely different.

I could point to things like minimum wages and workmen's compensation. They are much better in Newfoundland than they are in Alberta, Saskatchewan or British Columbia. They are equal to those in Ontario, but they are not better than those in Manitoba or in Quebec. In fact, Quebec has one of the best minimum wage schemes in Canada.

My point is that regardless of what provincial Governments do with their money, regardless of how bad they are—and just by accident, they are Tory Governments and there is no equalization in services to the general public across the country—we cannot have a federal Government which is prepared to cut back even further or will not even give provincial administrations a chance. The new federal Government is saying that it will cut back by $2 billion annually to provincial administrations.

It is all right for the Government to introduce this Bill which provides a momentary increase, a drop in the bucket, a smidgen of hope, but we must keep in mind what it did after it introduced this Bill—it slashed by $2 billion annually.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

OIL SUBSTITUTION AND CONSERVATION ACT CANADIAN HOME INSULATION PROGRAM ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-24, an Act to amend the Oil Substitution and Conservation Act and the Canadian Home Insulation Program Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Stevens (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

[Translation]

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker . . . do sit down my friend!

Mr. Speaker, we are about to complete our study of Bill C-24, a legislation providing for the termination of the Canadian Home Insulation and Canadian Oil Substitution programs.

Hon. Members from both sides of the House will agree, I am sure, that this bill has been fully considered. On more than 90 occasions, comments were made during debate on second reading.

The closer we look, the more we realize that the current state of the economy compels us, as the Government, to speed up the rationalization process of the budgetary spending under various programs, including the Canadian Oil Substitution Program and the Canadian Home Insulation Program.

Our Standing Committee on National Resources and Public Works has held most constructive hearings and heard testimonies from such organizations as the Canadian Gas Association and the National Association of Insulation and Energy Conservation Contractors. There seems to be general support for the government's decision to phase out these programs.

The years during which the need for these programs was the greatest are long gone, a fact that is well recognized both by the public and the industry. And I dare hope, Mr. Speaker, that it is also acknowledged by Members opposite.

Since it is necessary indeed, essential, to reduce the national debt, it would therefore be utopian at this stage to try to lessen the deficit burden while advocating a welfare state.

Thus, Bill C-24 represents the will of this government to strive even more to stabilize its spending and balance its budget as any conscientious administrator should do. Moreover, it should be kept in mind that the decision to bring to an end sooner the COSP and CHIP programs is also due to the fact that conditions have greatly changed since their inception. Our government recognizes, Mr. Speaker, that since the Canadian market place has undergone a change, the state's role in the substitution of oil and the conservation of energy must also change.

The CHIP program has created a market for home insulation products and has led to the sitting up of a specialized installation industry throughout the country. Moreover, the CHIP program has succeeded in making owners aware of the importance of energy conservation and of the benefits of insulation in terms of greater comfort and lower heating bills.

Mr. Speaker, it is of the utmost importance for all Canadians to understand that future conservation depends on present investments. Some 2.8 million Canadian homes have received financial aid and before the program is terminated, over $1 billion will have been spent. Substantial energy savings have been made and the over-all assessment of the program shows that such expenditures have proved worthwhile.

The COSP program has shown that since 1980, significant savings have been made in terms of heating costs through the conversion from oil to natural gas, electricity or wood. The program has promoted the development and marketing of high performance systems, for example, slow-combustion gas heaters, electric heat pumps and controlled combustion stoves.

The COSP and CHIP programs have made it possible to conserve some 75,000 barrels of oil per day or its equivalent in other energy forms.

• (1310)

Of course, Mr. Speaker, this is an outstanding achievement in the management of our energy ressources. Further progress must be made with regard to oil substitution, the upgrading of heating systems and energy performance of existing houses, and this, by reinsulating them and making them airtight. Such progress will require different environment and energy markets than those existing when the COSP and CHIP programs were implemented.

The role of our Government in this new process will not be to subsidize but to educate the consumer. Energy conservation measures will enable consumers to enjoy substantial cuts amounting to 30, 40 and even 50 per cent of their heating costs. It is about the best investment available to homeowners which would be worthwhile without government assistance. Of course, as some ministers have already pointed out, the industry will still get assistance for the research and development of products resulting in lower heating costs for our Canadian families.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot expect the Treasury to use borrowed funds to provide grants for consumers to invest in energy conservation. It is obvious and logical that the government should play a more limited and balanced role and should be aware of the need for information of users and suppliers on unresolved technical problems and on improved energy use.

I am convinced that this is the path we must follow, away from massive intervention and Government subsidies which can so easily result in arbitrary decisions and abuse, and that we should opt for government guarantees for better quality work and better decisions by home owners for reducing energy consumption.

Mr. Speaker, we have believed for too long that our prosperity was due to our natural resources, to governments and to foreign investment. We came to believe, and some of us still do, that we could stop being a working society and become a leisure society. We have become used to enjoying the profits instead of taking pride in our work. We will have to realize that our strength lies in our human resources. When individuals are strong, our institutions are strong as well. If our institutions are strong, the country will be strong. Mr. Speaker, that is why I feel I must support Bill C-24, because it arises from that sense of responsibility that all Canadian men and women must have if they are to take an active part in the economic development of our country.

Mr. Speaker, Bill C-24 is a very clear expression of our desire to stop the increasing balkanization of the energy sector. To do this, we must confirm the present division of powers and jurisdictions with the provinces and put an end to the tradition of interference in this area, a legacy from the previous government.

Bill C-24 arises from the present Government's desire to build a national, not a federal, consensus on our goals for developing our energy resources.

Mr. Speaker, I have said before that there is still a lot of potential for oil substitution and energy saving in Canadian homes. Although conversion is fluctuating in this country, far more than was the case when the COSP was introduced four and a half years ago, and especially in key markets in Ontario and Quebec, where three-quarters of the conversion potential is located, we believe that oil substitution will proceed at a steady pace.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to recall the Government's role with respect to energy savings: its responsibility is to educate consumers and to guarantee better workmanship. The Government has indicated that a program based on these principles is being considered.

Bill C-24, Mr. Speaker, paves the way for more worthwhile energy savings measures, with the help of a strong and independent private sector. This is far more desirable than massive intervention in the market and is also entirely compatible with the new challenges and measures resulting from the energy accords with Newfoundland and Alberta, which will provide a much stronger basis for Canada's energy supply industry.

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal-Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member made a nice speech, but he operates more or less like his colleague from LaSalle, in that he read a speech prepared by Government employees.

An Hon. Member: They can read!

Mr. Malépart: They can read, but they can't write!

Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, what the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) just said is full of inaccuracies. He says that the Government's finances are such that it is obliged to put a stop to insulation programs, to deprive citizens on modest and low income of the means to insulate their homes, which makes heating bills more expensive. Their bills are going to go up even more because of the 9 cent tax for carrying one gallon of heating oil from one location to another, and at the same time, the Hon. Member, together with his Prime Minister, would rather spend $56 million just to change the colour of our soldiers' uniforms, instead of maintaining programs to help Canadians insulate their homes and create jobs in Canada. That same Member, along with the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) and the Prime Minister, thought it would be better to do away with programs which made it possible to insulate the homes of senior citizens and middle and low income families. He supported cut-backs even though these programs did create jobs throughout Canada. As to the aspiring Minister of Finance from LaSalle, he has decided to spend $100 million a year—that is $400 million over the next four years—to send additional troops to Lahr. That is a paying proposition for Lahr's Tiffany Club, but it is not going to create employment in Canada, in Quebec, or anywhere else, Mr. Speaker.

• (1320)

That is the kind of reasoning we get from the Member for LaSalle, Mr. Speaker, a Parliamentary Secretary yet, and the same thing goes for the Member for Champlain. I can hardly wait to see him leave for his riding this weekend so he can tell his constituents how much money he has wasted. A million dollars for the Economic Summit where our national president and Prime Minister acted as master of ceremonies, $1 million for that summit means a waste of $1,000 a minute, half a million dollars for the Tory show in honour of the President of the United States in Quebec City! Then the Member for LaSalle, the Minister-in-waiting, tells me he has no money left. He would be well advised to go back to school because the Government did have money. It is true, we all agree that the deficit has to be reduced, Mr. Speaker, but not at the expense of poor Canadians.

The Member for LaSalle, I mean the Member for Champlain will explain to his constituents why he would rather hand out $2.5 billion to the multinational oil companies—they have posted profits of $130 million—than help middle and low income people.

The insulation program was a source of employment in all regions, his riding included. Not only is he satisfied with that, Mr. Speaker, not only does he support cut-backs in those programs, but he even learned recently that, because of the stand-pat approach of those Members, the CMHC offices in his region and in the region of Sherbrooke are going to be administered by the offices in Longueuil and Laval.

Mr. Speaker, housing programs such as RRAP have also been adversely affected, so there will be no more rehabilitation and insulation projects in most rural areas, but fortunately there are good Liberal Members in Montreal and we managed to salvage some of that money.

Mr. Speaker, I am looking at my Member for LaSalle who is behaving like a jerk, showing off as he usually does. I think that the Hon. Member for Champlain this weekend . . . I can understand why the Prime Minister decided to keep all of you here in Ottawa last weekend, you could not show your faces in your ridings where the people were waiting for you. Mrs. Denis explained here on Parliament Hill that, since the Members did not go to their ridings—

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, I can very well understand the frustration expressed by the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). I realize that for the past four years he has had to keep his mouth shut, but I should like him, under these circumstances, to deal expressly with Bill C-24, and quit talking about deindexation.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think that so far . . . No, I am not going to hear any more views on this point of order. I think that so far the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie have generally been to the point. In view of his long experience of the House, he will continue to deal with the bill. I feel that comparisons are in order. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has the floor.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, once more the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) got his lesson smack in the face. Next time before you stand up, I hope you will remember this lesson.

Coming back to Bill C-24, Mr. Speaker, I think that the Home Insulation Program provided an important and essential service to Quebec—Quebec especially—and other parts of the country. But job creation was an equally important factor. This program made it possible—

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member from the Liberal Party will have the opportunity later on, during debate, to make a speech. This is a period for comments and questions, and some of our own people, among others, would like to ask questions.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member has been allotted a 20-minute period.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I was just about to—

[English]

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand the point made by the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Wadell). I think that the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is speaking on debate.

Mr. Waddell: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understood him to be on debate.

[Translation]

Now, if the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) would kindly ask a question, then we could continue with the debate, and the Hon. Member would be recognized.

[English]

I thank the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway for raising his point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, you must have noticed that the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) is hard of hearing and only seems to understand after being told repeatedly. Today, I should like him to tell me why he is so pleased to terminate a program which created jobs in his own riding, helped improve there the quality of lodgings, and why he would rather spend $56 million for new uniforms and $400 million for more troops to patronize the "Tiffany" establishment in Lahr.

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, when I hear the demagogic comments of my colleague for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), who told us—listen for once, my friend for Montreal—Sainte-Marie—that we are wasting millions of dollars, he should remember Sport Select and Maislin. As for blaming anyone for the $211 billion deficit, the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie should first look in the mirror, and he should do the same as far as deindexing is concerned.

As for Bill C-24, we said that it had been good, but you are too deaf to hear. We said that this legislation had been good, but the situation in Canada can change, like it did last September 4, and the Hon. Member should be aware of it. You should take better care of the business in your own constituency instead of looking at what our Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is doing. Things will go much better that way. As for the $56 million on one side or the other, as you say youself, you do not even though from where these figures come. They are simply plucked out of thin air. You should mind your own business, my dear colleague, and it will be much better for Parliament!

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker, I have two questions for the Hon. Member and while it is rather difficult for me to ask them in French, I shall try. Wait until I have finished asking the question.

Here is the first one. The Hon. Member said that it was impossible for the Government to continue to allocate funds to such programs for ordinary Canadians because of the deficit problem. I would like to know in that case how the Government could find money to give to the big oil companies in Canada. The Financial Post, which is not an NDP newspaper, said that probably $9 billion would go to big oil companies. At the same time, it is impossible to continue to provide subsidies for ordinary Canadians to conserve energy. Why is this?

For my second question, I want to refer to a letter dated January 15 of this year in which the Hon. Member stated: I am beginning to believe that we are being held hostage by these companies which think only of their own profits and that the Federal Government is letting us down.

[English]

In other words, he writes to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and says that we are being held hostage by these large oil companies which are only concerned with personal profit. Then the Government gives away $5.6 billion through the PGRT taxes to the oil companies, another couple of billion dollars in windfall profits on old oil, and at the same time it takes money from the ordinary people by discontinuing the $500 grants for home conservation and $800 grants for converlting furnaces. How does the Hon. Member square that with the problem of attacking the deficit?

[Translation]

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, as far as the first part of the question is concerned, it is quite clear, and I believe that the Minister told this herself to the Hon. Member in committee, that we were confident that these companies would launch new projects, that many jobs would be created and that, with new tax revenues, we would be able sooner or later to offer programs of a better quality than the existing ones. At the time, the Hon. Member had seemed to agree with the Minister. I do not know why he is asking me this question today.

As for the second part of the question, Mr. Speaker, I recall very clearly the letter read by my colleague, and I call him my colleague because he is a Member of Parliament and not because we belong to the same Party. In this letter dated January 15, if he goes back to the facts and quotes me properly, he will realize that we were then talking about the price of gasoline. To my knowledge, and the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) would do better to listen to what I am saying, Bill C-24 does not concern the price of gasoline, but two Canadian programs, namely CHIP and COSP I can understand that the Hon. Member opposite would like to read my letter time and again, but could he please refrain from quoting it out of context? This letter dealing with gas prices is no way relevant to a bill on home insulation. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, since this letter has been mentioned, that it should have been sent out in the ridings of Montreal-Sainte-Marie and Ottawa-Vanier as well, because the price is 47 cents in my own riding, less than in the Ottawa-Vanier riding.

[English]

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) made such a good speech that is inspired me to make a comment.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) fails to understand the Western Accord. I thought the Western Accord was designed to stop giving money to the oil companies and, at the same time, stop unfair taxation. I did not think that he understood that, and today he has confirmed it. To accuse the Government of giving money to the oil companies is nonsense. We are stopping that. That is what the Western Accord is all about.

I was in the Chamber when we presented a Budget which would have placed a tax of 17 cents on a gallon of gasoline. That was a heavy tax for someone who drove a Cadillac, but for someone who drove a Toyota it would not have amounted to very much. The senior citizens of the country who did not have a car would have paid no tax. That Budget was defeated by the opposition Parties and replaced with a Budget that took the tax from the Cadillac and placed it on home heating fuel, which every senior citizen had to pay. That was the rhythm of 1979 and 1980.

Having done that, the Government then brought in a program which gave bonuses to people who wanted to insulate their homes. That means that it was collecting more money from senior citizens through the home heating oil tax, and giving it to people who were rich enough to own a home in the first place. Their property values and their profit increased. However, the program took money away from those who were living in rental accommodations. It took the money away from the poorest in the country and gave it to those who really did not need it.

I am proud to belong to a Government which is now going to end that. I was pleased to hear the remarks of the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne), which supported what the Government is doing.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On resuming debate, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan).

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to speak today on Bill C-24. I feel the Bill is typical of the kind of Government which we have. It is a Government that takes from those who need the most. What does it offer in return? It offers studies, proposals, and a promise to look at the impact of its actions. It is a Government that lives on hindsight. It does not care about the future.

This Bill ends the hope of energy security in the country. The Government says that it is okay to cut off incentives for consumers, because Canadians are energy conscious now. That is far from the truth. This week, the International Energy Agency said that Canada was one of the most inefficient users of energy resources in the western world. What did the Government do? It cut off the incentives which helped Canadians to conserve energy and save on their energy costs.

The report of the International Energy Agency was very interesting. It said that Canadian energy efficiency started out at the same level as the United States ten years ago, but has become an energy waster since that time. The International Energy Agency is a very reputable organization. It has criticized the Government for ending the Canadian Oil Substitution Program and for phasing out the Canadian Home Insulation Program. In fact, the report predicts that under the Government's current policies, Canada is likely to maintain its poor performance on energy efficiency through to the year 2000, unless the Government changes its policies.

The Government is gambling with our energy future. It is becoming complacent. It says that we have enough oil and gas. It says that we do not have to worry about the future. That is wrong. That is the attitude which the report warns against. The International Energy Agency forecasts a tight oil market by the end of the century with an "increasing risk of massive upward price movements in the event of any disruption of supplies". Yet, the Government is cutting off the incentive to conserve energy, not only with this Bill, but with the many other worth-while energy conservation programs which have been cut.

The Canada Energy Audit Program will be ended. That program featured 10 specially-designed energy buses which provided special mobile energy audit services throughout Canada. That is another program for Canadian consumers which has been cut.

The Government has ended the Atlantic Canada Capital Investment Program. It is hard to believe that it could find more things to cut in Atlantic Canada, but somehow it managed. That program provided financial assistance to companies undertaking energy conservation, with a three to six-year pay-back period.

In addition, the Government has ended the Industrial Conversion Assistance Program, which helped industry to convert from oil to natural gas-fired boilers. Not only has it decided to cut the program, the Government has now said that it will pay only 50 per cent of the costs for those who have taken part in the program in good faith.

The Government does not care about people. All it cares about is the establishment. It wants to take money from Canadians—just like it is doing to our senior citizens—and give it to the multinational oil companies.

The Government has taken yet another service away from consumers. It has decided to end the Energuide labelling program. That provided consumers with energy consumption data for home appliances. The program did not cost the Government very much, but it helped consumers quite a lot. That does not seem to matter to the Government.

What did the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) offer Canadians in return? After cutting all the programs she said that the Government would announce the details of its conservation program "after discussions with the provinces". How considerate! In the meantime, consumers lose. They will not get anything back.

What is the Government doing to ensure that our energy future will be secure? It is doing nothing. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources promised, on a number of occasions, that she would replace the Petroleum Incentives Program. However, when she talked to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), he said no. He is too busy taking money from the pockets of pensioners. What incentive is there in the country to look for new sources of oil and gas? The Government is not planning for the future. In fact, the Government is setting us up for a potential oil and gas disaster by encouraging Canadians to become more dependent on foreign, imported oil. Where will that leave us in Canada? If the price of oil shoots upward rapidly, as it has in the past, where will that leave Canadians? It will leave us, as once was predicted, "freezing in the dark".

This Government is making us more dependent on oil and our non-renewable energy sources while it is completely ignoring the development of renewable energy sources, and the Government is going to make things even worse. In its Budget or, as it is now called, "a set of proposals", this Government says it will begin putting taxes on goods which have been exempt in the past. Not only does it have the nerve to take away the grant which helps consumers insulate their homes, but Government is now making it more expensive to insulate by putting taxes on insulation. It is putting taxes on wood stoves, which is a viable alternative to oil. It is becoming more and more obvious that the Government does not care about this country's future energy needs.

Last November the Government cut the energy division of the National Research Council so that the momentum which had been built up in the past into developing new forms of energy has now been lost. The Government tells us the private sector will look after research and development into new forms of energy. That is how this Government looks after our energy future.

When we debated this Bill during the winter, we asked that the Government at least consider extending the Canada Oil Substitution Program for six months because there were so many problems in trying to instal gas lines in the winter when the ground was frozen and covered with snow. It was bad enough that it was cutting the program, it did not give Canadians a chance to take advantage of the it. However, it did not budge. It did not allow an extension of the program, even though it knew many Canadians were going to be disappointed. The Deputy Minister of Energy, Mr. Paul Tellier, told us why. He said, and I quote:

> The Minister was under pressure to extend . . . as you know in the case of CHIP the program is being reduced, scaled downed and is being terminated at the end of this fiscal year. In the case of COSP, the program was terminated last March 31. Because of the difficulty of doing some connections during the winter months, the Minister was under pressure to extend that program until June 30. I know that three month extension would have cost $40 million.

The Deputy Minister went on to say, and I quote:

> In the context of general government restraing programs, the Minister decided not to reopen that decision that was taken in the context of Mr. Wilson's economic statement of last November.

The Government could not find $40 million to help out Canadian consumers, but the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) could find $1.3 billion to give to the multinational oil companies this year. This Government is becoming quite expert at taking away from ordinary Canadians who cannot afford to be picked on by this Government. It does not matter to this Government that the CHIP and COSP programs have been estimated to save at least 115,000 barrels a day of oil equivalent.

The Department of Energy, Mines and Resources admits that without these two programs, 75,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day would have been used. That is a reduction in equivalent oil demand of 25 to 30 million barrels a year, but that does not matter to this Government. It seems to think that we will always have plenty of oil and gas to look after our needs, so why worry about conservation? Why worry about looking for new sources of oil and gas? Why worry about trying to find new ways of heating our homes and saving on energy costs?

We have to start worrying about this Government, Mr. Speaker. Our energy future is very insecure with these kinds of policies. No one likes to predict the worst, but at least we should be prepared so that we do not make the same mistakes after learning from the OPEC crisis in the early 1979s.

I would like to go back to the International Energy Agency and its report of this week which was released at the close of meetings of the agency's governing board which elected Mr. Paul Tellier, the Deputy Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources as its next chairman—and I would like to congratulate him on his appointment. The report warns that a surplus of energy resources, which is what we are now experiencing, may turn to shortages which could spark a new energy crisis like the oil shocks of the 1970s. We have to be prepared for that. We cannot let our reserves sit and wait for a better price.

We need incentives for offshore and frontier development. We need to bring on Venture, Hibernia and the Beaufort Sea and, of course, continue to develop the rich resources in the west. We must be prepared for shortages, we must have the resources developed, and this Government must provide the incentive. The Government cannot look at the present situation, when OPEC is having trouble keeping the oil price stable and there is a possibility that the world price for oil could go as low as $20 a barrel. The Government cannot be fooled by the present surplus in energy resources which we are now experiencing because things change and they can change very quickly.

The International Energy Agency states, and I quote:

> Unless the IEA countries achieve further major improvement in the efficiency with which energy is used, and a major expansion in the production of energy resources, they could once again become vulnerable to oil supply disruptions in the 1990s similar to those of 1973-1974 and 1979-1980.

Canada is one of the most inefficient users of energy. The Government must listen to the predictions of the International Energy Agency because, after all, the agency was formed in 1974 in response to the OPEC oil crisis in an effort to co-ordinate the energy policies of western countries and avert further instability in the energy market. Now the agency is telling us something. It is time the Government listened instead of taking the grants and incentives away from consumers which would help them save on their energy consumption and energy dollars. What is this Government doing? It is doing the opposite.

This Government plans to take money away from our senior citizens and plans to offer great tax incentives to anyone who may want to invest, even if the investment is in a condominium in Florida. We cannot afford to gamble with our energy future. The Government has to act. We need incentives to conserve. The Government owes Canadians the right to a secure energy future. We need to develop new sources of oil and gas. We need to find ways of using alternate and renewable energy sources and we need to conserve the sources we have.

This Government should not be taking away from Canadians, which is exactly what this Bill does. The Government should be giving us policies which let us know it cares about the future, that it cares about Canadians. This Government does not care about Canadians. Its idea of making the public energy conscious is to increase the price of gasoline by two cents a litre. That is the way it impresses upon Canadians that they should conserve; it ups the price of gasoline.

The Government has been receiving a lot of strong messages lately. It is time it acted on the good advice it has been receiving from seniors and now from the International Energy Agency which has criticized the Government for cutting the programs in this Bill and gambling with the energy future of this country. The agency says this country must start to conserve its energy sources. This is not going to happen with the introduction of such a Bill. This House cannot support a piece of legislation which does this to our country.

• (1350)

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I believe that that Member, who studied this issue, is reading someone else's speech. He could not have delivered that from his own knowledge base because it is the complete opposite of reality. The Member said that Canada is an inefficient user of energy. That may or not be true, but it is certainly the conclusion of a report. The Member knows that high prices for any commodity, particularly oil, leads to conservation, and that low prices lead to inefficient use. He sat in this Chamber and voted for those low prices which have created the problems we presently face.

The Member voted for a policy which provides for companies to sell their oil and the Government to take their money, leaving no money to search for oil. This Government is introducing a policy which would impose high taxes unless the companies continue to look for oil. That will lead to exploration for that commodity about which he is so concerned. How can the oil company look for oil if the Government takes all its money? He was told that in 1980. He lived through the period when the companies stopped looking for oil because it was not profitable and they did not have the funds.

To say that you are in favour of conservation, and therefore prices should be low, is a complete contradiction of the reality of the market-place. This applies not only to oil but to chairs, tables, and typewriters. If they are high priced, people will buy fewer of them and if they are low priced, people will buy more of them. The Member knows that one-third of the known oil in the world is found in the tar sands. The only way in which that can be economically processed is to raise prices. If the Member is truly concerned about security of supply in this country, he must realize that oil must be sold at a price which will create jobs to develop it. If we move in that direction, we could begin to export energy which would bring revenue into the country which would, in turn, create more jobs. That is what the Government is devoted to.

I would like the Hon. Member to stand in his place and admit that high prices lead to conservation, job creation, and the development of security of supply. Low prices lead to consumption—

Mr. Waddell: No way.

Mr. Hawkes: —job loss and fear about the future because the oil will not be processed. Surely the Hon. Member has the guts to stand in the Chamber and admit to those very basic realities.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, at no time did I talk about the need to have a low price. That is another subject altogether. The Member said that I was in the House and voted for the National Energy Program. He is right, I did, and the National Energy Program did an awful lot for the country.

Mr. Hawkes: A lot of damage.

Mr. MacLellan: It did a lot of good for this country. It may not have done as much for the multinational companies, but it did an awful lot for Canadians. They are realizing this more now as time goes on. Under that National Energy Program was the Canadian Home Insulation Program and the Canadian Oil Substitution Program.

The Member talks about developing the heavy oil of the tar sands. How are they going to be developed? Is the Hon. Member saying that the philanthropic oil companies are going to develop them without squeezing everything they possibly can out of the Government first? If they don't get everything they want, they won't do it. Give me the guarantee that these developments will ensure a secure energy future and the development of Hibernia and Venture. The newspapers have been reporting that the oil companies feel that the Western Accord has been good but does not give them enough. They want further benefits including lower royalties from the provinces. I believe that the Government will knuckle under again and give further benefits to the oil companies to the detriment of policies and programs for ordinary Canadians. I will be the first to have told you so.

Are the jobs which we need going to be created? We have asked the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources how many jobs will be created. She has no idea. We have asked in committee whether any studies have been done. The Deputy Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said that they had not. Members opposite say that we will be able to export oil. We are already exporting more oil than we are importing. We are exporting light crude oil which is taken out of the ground without any windfall profits for the multinational oil companies. It is piped into Chicago, depleting our reserves of oil, without any assurance that it will be replaced. The Hon. Member tries to say that the policies of this Government are good.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, we now see the difference between the Liberal Government and the Conservative Government. They are exporting oil, Mr. Speaker, but the Hon. Member did not complete the analysis. They are exporting oil to Chicago for less money than the refineries of Canada are paying. Since this Government took over we have been exporting oil $7 or $8 a barrel cheaper to American refineries than we are selling it to Canadian refineries. Did the Government promise that to the Canadian people when it ran for election?

The Member of the Conservative Party says that the Liberal Government kept the price too low, thereby encouraging consumption, and therefore the Conservative Government will raise the price to discourage consumption. Did the Government say that when it ran for election last September?

Mr. Gauthier: He said "freeze, freeze".

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rise on behalf of the New Democratic Party to speak on third and final reading of this Bill. I would like to congratulate my colleague, the Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan), who covered the waterfront in his debate. I hope the Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) will not leave because I have a couple of comments to address to him. He said that the purpose of the Western Accord was to stop giving money to the oil companies. He should look at the reality of the Western Accord. The Western Accord in fact gives straight windfalls to the oil companies. Oil found before 1974 in Canada was called "old oil" and was priced at about $28 a barrel, much lower than world price. The price of that oil was raised to world price, about $37 or $38, on June 1 as a result of deregulation through the Western Accord. That resulted in a big windfall.

The Independent Petroleum Association of Canada reckons that there was a windfall of about $400 million to $500 million to the holders of that old oil. The old oil is held by Texaco, Shell, and Imperial.

Mr. Hawkes: Pensioners.

Mr. Waddell: Sure, pensioners. Imperial is owned by Exxon, and Texaco is owned by Texaco in the United States. That was a straight windfall for those companies. The price of new oil, that found after 1974, went down slightly. That oil is held by small Canadian companies.

There is a recently formed group called the Small Explorers Association of Canada. They wrote a letter to the Alberta Energy Minister and said that as a result of the Western Accord's favourable treatment of the big oil companies, the smaller ones could be moved off the property. These are small companies in his home province of Alberta. Therefore, they lost as a result of the Western Accord while the big companies won.

● (1400)

The Hon. Member claims that the Government stopped giving money to the oil companies. The second effect of the Western Accord is that it will remove some $5.6 billion in taxes from the oil companies by 1990, according to the Government's own figures. It will not collect those taxes under the PGRT that it could normally collect.

Third, the Government is giving money to the oil companies through other forms of tax relief. It will end the PIP grant system which is direct grants to explore in the frontiers and offshore. However, I predict that it will be replaced by the old super depletion allowance and other tax advantages which the oil companies had.

Let me quote the President of Texaco Canada, William Gatenby, who was speaking to the annual meeting of the Regina Desk and Derrick Club. He said that the oil industry "supports and confirms all the concessions agreed to in the Western Accord" and the Budget, especially the fact that the industry would no longer be singled out for a high rate of corporate taxation. The poor oil companies had a 10 per cent increase in profits between 1983 and 1984, totalling approximately $32 billion. They have been given windfalls and tax advantages, subsidies and favourable treatment.

We forget that the Western Accord allows the oil companies to export and sell off some of the cheap Canadian oil now so that they can make a quick dollar from those exports. The Canadian consumer will have to pay for the more expensive resources from the Arctic and tar sands. There are winners and losers in most games of life. During the last two weeks in Question Period, we have heard that the losers are clearly the pensioners because the deficit must be reduced. It is the pensioners and consumers who must pay as a result of a two-cent per litre increase at the gas pumps and an increase in sales tax.

The Conservatives, who talk so much about research and development and small business, have attacked those small, lean and efficient Canadian alternate energy companies. Therefore it is the pensioners, the motorists and the alternate energy companies who are the losers as a result of the Government's actions.

I am holding the brief of the Canadian Petroleum Association that was presented to the Senate Energy Committee in April of 1984. When I reread it, it became clear that the Conservative energy policy, the Western Accord, was in this brief and written by the big oil companies. The Canadian Petroleum Association promotes a two cent a litre increase at the pump, the abolition of the PGRT and the phasing out of PIP. The companies ask for more tax incentives.

The oil companies want to get rid of the back-in provisions on the East Coast. That will be the Government's next step. The Minister's prediction of the creation of 300,000 jobs was taken from this brief in which the oil industry says 300,000 jobs will be created. We heard it said that this industry would be the engine of economic growth. I am from the West Coast and realize that the oil industry will help provide jobs, but it is a capital intensive industry that is primarily foreign controlled. How do we know that they will not take this money and run? The Minister disagrees. I suggest he look at past investment figures to see that smaller Canadian companies have invested more than the large multinational oil companies. The interests of the multinationals are not necessarily the same as ours. They have a world-wide interest, basically an American interest.

According to the Financial Post, the Government's energy policy will give $9 billion to the oil companies without the benefit of a study as to how many jobs will be created. It takes these steps on the hope and prayer that money will be reinvested. What kind of policy is that in view of what the Hon. Member for Cape Breton said about the world oil picture? There will be a drop in demand and then an increase which will cause supplies to drop. In 1969, Bruce Wilson, a distinguished former oil industry executive, told the committee dealing with this Bill that since 1969, Canadian supplies of light crude oil, which is the basis of our transportation fuels, is declining and will continue to decline.

We are about to make the same mistake that we made before the first energy crisis. Before the first oil crisis in 1971, we exported oil. The oil companies, which want to export, ask for more money and more tax breaks in order to find more oil. When they find more oil, they say that they must export it and then ask for more money. Although they may create some jobs in that process, it is nothing compared to the jobs that can be created by the manufacturing and alternate energy industries.

Presently, the world is burning oil at 900 billion gallons a year. One-fourth of the recoverable oil that existed when the first well was drilled just over a century ago has been burned. Exploration has already found about two-thirds of the oil that we will ever discover. At the present rate of consumption, there is roughly a 60-year supply.

The United States, which consumes one-fourth of the world's oil supply, and which has only one-tenth of its oil reserve, will look increasingly for its oil supplies to the Persian Gulf where what is left of the world's oil will be increasingly concentrated. In the next six years, the supply will be concentrated in the Persian Gulf, which is perhaps the most instable area of the world today. That is the energy fact to which my friend was referring.

Quite frankly, I believe that we have the seeds of the next energy crisis in the Western Accord. It gives more money to the oil companies in vast windfalls, favours multinational companies over Canadian companies and favours the export of oil. Between 30 per cent and 44 per cent of our light crude oil production is being exported. We are the second largest customer of the United States. We supply approximately 12 per cent of their oil and Mexico supplies approximately 14 per cent. For that reason, it is important to consider what has been said by the International Energy Association. A story in Canadian Press states:

> Canada is one of the most inefficient users of energy resources in the West and will continue to be through the year 2000 if the federal Government sticks to its current policies, the International Energy Agency warns in a report released yesterday.

What does the federal Government do? It cuts back on home insulation and off oil programs. It cuts back on research and technology conducted by the NRC, one of the world leaders in photo voltaic cells, solar wind and small scale hydro. These are fields in which we can make money on export markets but must research now. However, the federal Government cuts back in these areas because it is preoccupied with the deficit. It is against subsidizing industry purely on ideological Conservative principles, but will give money to the oil companies through the backdoor with such things as tax breaks and windfalls.

There is no energy policy in this country. Its energy policy is simply to follow the advice of the Canadian Petroleum Association, as evidenced by this Bill. It is clear from this debate that the Government is not amenable to change. I accept some of the remarks by the Parliamentary Secretary when he said that there was some consensus in the hearings, that perhaps these programs should be phased out, but phased out when?

I will give three examples from Minutes of the committee meetings. Gordon Patterson, chairman of the customer services division of the Canadian Electrical Association testified that the Canadian Electrical Association has sent a telex to the Minister requesting an extension of the program until the end of August. The Parliamentary Secretary admitted that the program was cut off in March because that was the end of the fiscal year, forgetting that it was still cold in March in some areas of Canada. The Association was prepared to accept cancellation of the program, but felt that an extension should be granted to permit installations where contracts had been signed before the March 31 deadline.

I draw Your Honour's attention to page 19:10 of the committee minutes for Tuesday, April 16, 1985 for the evidence. I have another piece of evidence. Jeff Passmore, Director of Conservation, Renewable Energy Council, said that the termination of the Canadian Oil Substitution Program should have been given a one year warning as was the case with CHIP and, failing that, at least an extension until June or July, 1985. He spoke at the committee meeting on Tuesday, April 2, 1985. He said:

It was very bad timing from the woodstove industry point of view to end the program on March 31, right in the middle of the season.

Third, John Guenin, Executive Director, Canadian Wood Energy Institute testified on Tuesday, April 2, 1985 that March 31 was not the best time to end the program. He suggested that June at least would be a better time. Fourth, there was a letter from the Electrical and Electronic Manufacturers Association of Canada. This association called for an extension of the program to August 31, 1985. A telex was sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in that connection.

The Canadian Gas Association appeared before the committee hearing. It requested an extension of the deadline. This goes on and on. These were not difficult requests. The Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) wrote to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) and said that in parts of his riding it was difficult to buy equipment. He said in the Flin Flon Electric Shop there were a number of applications on which they were prepared to commence work. The company could not because there was no equipment in stock. It would have to come from Toronto and Montreal. They asked for the program to be extended, but no, the Government would not.

The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp) wrote to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and said that many home owners wished to take advantage of COSP but there was a delay in installation and they needed assistance. He said that Northern Ontarians seeking shelter from rising oil prices deserved special consideration.

I have a letter from a person who lives in West Vancouver, a Mr. Michael Down. The letter was sent to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), with a copy to me. He said that the Government should not terminate the Canadian Oil Substitution Program because it contributes to conservation. This view is supported by the Economic Council of Canada. Mr. Down goes on to point out the benefits and the difficulties with megaprojects and how small scale energy is so important. He asked for an extension of the program.

Why would the Government not extend that program? Would that not make sense in view of the International Energy Agency saying that Canada has a real problem in energy consumption? My friend from Calgary said that one way you deal with it is price, that price leads to conservation. I agree. Price does lead to conservation, but there are penalties for price. If we want more conservation, let us triple the price of oil or quadruple it. Obviously that does not make any sense. It hurts the economy.

I have some evidence from John Helliwell, the distinguished professor of economics at UBC. He is an energy economist who suggests that the Western Energy Accord, the rising prices and the tax advantages will lose jobs in the long run in Canada. As we have to pay more money for energy, it will hurt parts of the economy, obviously. There are countries such as Saudi Arabia and Mexico, oil producing countries like Canada, which hold down the price of oil as the National Energy Program did. You can make the argument that it is a subsidy, but there are other ways of subsidizing.

We can go to higher energy prices. There may be ways of subsidizing by giving the home owner a break, and what about the pensioners? We could give an energy credit or we could give a subsidy to people to insulate their houses or to switch from expensive oil to more abundant natural gas, to wood heat or electricity, which is renewable, or to solar energy, which is also renewable and is the energy wave of the future. I think that is uncontested.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton-The Sydneys dealt with the International Energy Industry which is an indictment of us in Canada. We should all be worried. We are all complacent. We are being lulled to sleep. We alternate between complacency and panic when it comes to energy. We should be very careful as to what is being said to us. The President of Mobil Oil of the United States was quoted in the Washington Post a few months ago as saying that another energy crisis could be in the making. Mr. Edge, Chairman of the National Energy Board, said to the Energy Resources Committee the other day that in real terms, oil prices will be higher in the 1990s. Why then are we cutting back on alternates and conservation? Why? I guess to deal with the deficit. Why did we not put a windfall tax on the $500 million we give to the oil companies? That is the choice governments have to make. That is why they are Conservatives and we are not. We take a different view of the situation.

Let me talk about sacrifices in conclusion. This Bill is causing the alternate energy industry to make some sacrifices. It is just like the Budget. The Minister of Finance on September 27, 1980 said to get rid of indexing for old age pensioners that would be:

—a very sneaky way of bringing in a tax increase.

He also said:

—the federal deficit must be reduced but believes there are other ways of achieving it.

What hypocrisy. He said that in 1980. Now the Minister turns around and attacks the pensioners. In this Bill, the Government turns around and attacks small business, the ordinary Canadian with the $500 or $800 grant, one of the few things he gets from the Government.

The oil and gas belongs to us. It does not belong to the multinational oil companies. It belongs to the people of Canada generally. They are entitled to a good rent for it. The people of Canada generally have a responsibility to conserve it. We should not be exporting it at the rate we are because we will run short. We will have to go to the tar sands and the north and deal with very expensive energy.

This Bill today is a failure because it is based on ideological reasons. It does not make sense practically and in light of what the International Energy Industry has said about Canada needing to conserve. This comes at a time when we have lulled ourselves into believing, because of temporary market forces, that oil prices are going to go down. I say in the long run we are flirting with another energy crisis.

I have suggested to the Government that it postpone the Bill for three or four months to give those people some more time who want to conserve and take advantage of the program. The evidence in committee is overwhelming that people wanted that extra time. I do not see why the Government cannot accede to that request. We cannot propose an amendment because of the Royal prerogative in spending money.

A country that makes the same mistake twice is really a fool. That is what I think we are in this Bill.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few brief comments on third reading of Bill C-24. The last time I spoke on this Bill, we were 15 days away from the implementation of one of the measures proposed in the Bill, namely the termination of the energy conservation program. I simply want to add a few comments on the scope of this measure, especially with regard to energy conservation, and to deplore the fact that the government is compelled today to introduce a measure which I believe will in fact discourage consumers who still need government assistance in order to insulate their homes.

[English]

As I said, the last time I spoke on this matter, it was about 15 days before COSP was to terminate, and CHIP was to terminate in about a year from then. I indicated that we in my riding felt particularly bad. I represent a riding in Ottawa which has some of the city's oldest housing stock. Although we have used these programs to better our housing stock and to conserve energy, we still have a lot of housing which requires attention and would have benefited from a government assistance program that encouraged insulation of our homes.

[Translation]

I would like first of all, Mr. Speaker, in the brief comments I have to make, to join all Hon. Members of this House in congratulating the Deputy Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, Mr. Paul Tellier, who was elected President of the International Energy Agency, based in Luxembourg, and to wish him the best success in his new role.

I regret that Canada ranks today, along with Luxembourg, as one of the countries which conserve the least and waste the most energy. This statement does not come from myself, it was made by the Agency in a recent report. I read in Le Droit newspaper dated June 17, and I quote: "The Agency—referring to the International Energy Agency—was critical of the Canadian government's decision to terminate the subsidy program for home insulation and to reduce the scope of the measures aimed at encouraging industries to conserve energy and to switch to alternate sources of energy".

Mr. Speaker, I think that at this point where we must take special care to preserve for the future generations the natural resources which we inherited, it is important that this Government should seriously consider the comments made by such an important body as the International Agency, set up in 1974 if my memory serves me right, for the purpose of advising and counselling member countries on matters of energy.

When he addressed the issue, the Minister told us that Canadians are aware of federal programs, of the need to conserve energy, of the benefits of insulation, of the benefits to be derived from better conservation. I have no doubt, Mr. Speaker, that some Canadians are aware of all that, but I would point out to the Government that in January 1985, we had here in Ottawa some 13,000 applications for natural gas, for converting from oil to gas, filed with companies, and of course they could not all be processed. Because of winter and bad weather conditions, the companies involved did not have enough time to make the necessary changes to the systems, furnaces and, heaters before the program ended.

Therefore, we had unprocessed applications from a number of Canadians who wanted to benefit from the insulation programs, the conversion programs, but could not because the Government cancelled those programs introduced by Liberal Governments.

Mr. Speaker, what struck me during the second reading discussion of Bill C-24 was the near-unanimity on the value and benefits of those two programs. I do not think there was one Member, at least whom I heard, who condemned or criticized those two programs. I think both those programs had their usefulness and still have, and I had hoped the Government would have given greater attention to the issue of insulation and oil substitution.

I remember the Hon. Member for Brampton-Georgetown (Mr. McDermid), speaking for the Government, used up quite a number of minutes explaining where and how those programs had tremendously promoted public awareness of energy needs. I was therefore surprised to find that his Government was terminating two programs which, to everyone's satisfaction, were good, needed, worthwhile, and meeting modern and basic requirements.

[English]

I am at a loss to explain why some Members rise in the House and start talking about the cost of oil or gas, using the argument that low prices will encourage waste. Actually, I do not think any Member would disagree with that statement. If we put it into context and go back a few years, we realize that the price of oil in 1973, if my memory serves me correctly, went from some $3 per barrel to some $38 per barrel today. If the Government of the day had not intervened at that time, God knows that inflation would have been much higher, much more serious and much more severe than it is today.

The Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Baker) made the point to the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) that today it is a reality that this Government is selling oil at the Chicago price. This means that Canadian refineries in Toronto are actually purchasing oil at about $7 per barrel more than Americans have to pay. Perhaps he could explain that to the House. How can he argue that it will contribute to energy conservation? Perhaps he has some wisdom which I fail to understand.

In any event, there are four points which I should like to make. I believe a great number of people still want to convert from oil to gas and would like to have a program which encourages insulation. As I said before, Mr. Paul Tellier will be presiding over the International Energy Agency. He is one of our good, solid Deputy Ministers, and was chosen as chairman of an agency which told us in its annual report that we use energy very inefficiently in Canada and that we should move to correct this problem now. As far as this agency is concerned, it sees nothing in the way of government policy or Canadian policy which will change things. We will still be inefficient and facing a difficult problem come the year 2000, and we should anticipate the difficulties which will arise.

I am sure Members on all sides of the House will agree that the programs have been useful and effective. Many of us think that the cancellation of CHIP and COSP will have an adverse impact upon employment, because the bottom line is jobs. If jobs were created by encouraging insulation of Canadians' residences and if jobs were created by converting programs from oil to other sources of energy, that was good. This Government cancelled them.

• (1430)

Fifth and last, we will fall further behind in our efforts to achieve energy self-sufficiency and meet our energy goals, but I think we all agree that we have to be self-sufficient. God knows we have tried hard to do that and I would hope, Mr. Speaker, in closing, that the Government would seriously consider putting forth measures that would encourage energy conservation. If they do not like the programs that the Liberals put forth, then let them come in with something different, but with the same purpose in mind, to encourage Canadians to better conserve, to encourage Canadians to see that we make sure that the generations that follow us will have the same advantages, the same resources and at least have the benefit of some security of Canadian resources.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, two speakers have mentioned the difference in selling price in Chicago. I guess they have persuaded me that perhaps they really do not understand the difference, and I would just like to put it into context.

If one went out to buy a case of apples and the apples were fresh and prime, they would cost more than a case of apples that were bruised or getting old. It is the same with crude oil. Some crude oil is a good barrel of crude oil which refines into such things as aviation fuel and gasoline for cars. That kind of barrel sells for a much higher price than a barrel of heavy crude which breaks down into, for instance, asphalt rather than aviation fuel. That is the difference in the price of a barrel of oil. It is very difficult. There are in the pricing market in Alberta something like 32 different types of barrels, each priced separately. If you start comparing, if you like, the bruised apples with the good apples, that is the kind of problem you are going to have with a price comparison. The price of Canadian crude as of the Western Accord is simply the world price for the quality of the crude, whether it is good or not so good. Wherever it is sold, it is sold at that price.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, to put this whole question in context, the fact of the matter is that last year the federal Cabinet gave approval to the National Energy Board starting in December, to reduce the export charge. That is what it is called, an export charge on oil exported to the United States. It is a mechanism that is there to encourage exports of oil from Canada to the United States. There are two charges. One is an export charge for exports and the other is a Canadian charge, both levied by the federal Government. It has nothing to do with the National Energy Board, the oil companies or anybody else. They did not reduce the charge to Canadian refiners.

Since that time it has gone from a 48 per cent, 49 per cent reduction to total elimination now in the Budget. What you saw, starting in January, was a $7 a barrel difference between oil delivered at the gate in Chicago and that same oil delivered at the gate in Toronto. That is $7 cheaper to the United States than to Canada. That is the export charge, that is what we are dealing with.

The hon. gentleman brought up the matter of heavy crude for asphalt and so on, and that is quite correct, but let me remind him that in the Minister's own province all seven refineries produce asphalt from heavy crude and those refiners were having to pay $7 and $8 more a barrel for Canadian oil than did the Chicago refiners. That is an incredible system, Mr. Speaker, a disgraceful system. To have that total export charge on exported oil eliminated while Canadians still have to pay the charge at the refinery is absolutely disgraceful, a first I suppose for any country in the world. Then, again, good relations with the United States, and the Canadian consumer have to suffer.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I have some comments on the Hon. Member's discussion of the National Energy Program. We have debated everything else and I will tie it in with the particular Bill.

I might say there is nothing that has been more maligned than the National Energy Program. A lot of myth has built up around it. The fact is that the National Energy Program wanted to make Canada self-sufficient by 1990. So did the Clark Government program in 1979. We are self-sufficient. This is June 1985. The reason we are self-sufficient is that we have had an economic downturn, we found more oil than we thought was available, we have practised conservation, but we are self-sufficient right now and that is something to be pleased about. We are also the most wasteful user of energy in the industrialized world, next to Luxembourg.

The National Energy Program wanted to have 50 per cent Canadian ownership. We have the most foreign-owned industry of any of the industrialized countries. Right now the figure is about 44 per cent Canadian-owned and about 56 per cent owned by countries abroad. That is still bad.

The National Energy Program erred in that it brought in PIP grants, these very rich grants that moved a lot of the exploration from the western sedimentary basin, and I hope some of the central Canadian Members will listen to this, out to the frontiers in the north. That hurt Alberta and Saskatchewan. The grants were ill-advised in the sense they were very wasteful. They totalled less than $8 billion. They helped some small Canadian companies to get into the major play so they were successful there, but for $8 billion we could have bought Imperial Oil and had instant 50 per cent Canadianization.

The problem with the Petroleum Gas Revenue Tax was not that it was getting money from the oil industry. For the first time the oil industry was really paying taxes. That is what they did not like, that is what they hated, but there were some problems with the tax because it was like a provincial royalty. We western Canadians do not like the federal Government to have royalties because they are our resources, they belong to the provinces, although they are to be shared with the rest of Canada, under the Constitution. They are the vehicle of economic growth in western Canada if they are used properly. That is why we were critical of the PGRT.

What does this Government do? It attacks perhaps the most successful aspect of that National Energy Program, which was the conservation programs. They were working.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) might like to respond to the comments. I am sure they were all directed at him, since it was his speech that everyone was commenting on.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong the debate, but I just want to say that I think the Hon. Member for Gander-Twillingate made the proper response to this. He knows a lot more about oil prices than the Hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). Also, I have a lot of respect for my hon. friend from Calgary West. I think this whole debate is an interesting one, but I would like to finish my remarks. I still deplore that the Bill has to be passed by the Government today and it is, I think, going to cut off a lot of incentive for conserving energy.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Dick: Mr. Speaker, there have been some consultations, and if you look closely at the clock, you will notice that it has just struck five.

Mr. Speaker: Do I sense that there is unanimous consent for this proposition?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) is rising not to indicate disagreement but to ask me to say something traditional at this moment because of the specialness of Monday for many Members of the House of Commons. I would wish everyone an especially happy Saint-Jean-Baptiste Day and a happy weekend. It being five o'clock p.m., pursuant to order made Thursday, June 13, 1985—

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

NORTHERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY LIMITED DISPOSAL AUTHORIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport) moved that Bill C-53, an Act to authorize the disposal of the Northern Transportation Company Limited and the forgiveness of its debt to Her Majesty and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof, be read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport.

He said: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-53 authorizes the federal Government to dispose of the Northern Transportation Company Limited. Agreement in principle has been reached with the Innuvialuit Development Corporation and the Nunasi Corporation. The agreement is being finalized this week and the enabling legislation will give the Government the authority to complete the sale.

By way of background, Mr. Speaker, let me say that the Northern Transportation Company Limited was established under private ownership in 1931 as the Northern Waterways Limited. It operated several small vessels from Waterways, Alberta to Lake Athabasca, Great Slave Lake, the Mackenzie River and Great Bear Lake. In 1934, the company was renamed the Northern Transportation Company Limited, still under private ownership. In 1936, NTCL was acquired by Eldorado Gold Mines Ltd.—later Eldorado Mining and Smelting, now Eldorado Nuclear—which was then a private company involved in mining on Great Bear Lake.

Under Eldorado ownership, the NTCL served Eldorado needs and continued to operate a common carrier service in the Athabasca and Mackenzie area. In 1944, Eldorado Mining and Smelting was nationalized under the War Measures Act because of its radium and pitchblende mining operations at Great Bear Lake. NTCL came under government ownership as part of the Eldorado package.

From 1945 to 1957, NTCL slowly grew as traffic increased. Community resupply became an important activity and thereby NTCL was fulfilling a very important public role.

In 1949, NTCL was declared an agent of Her Majesty, pursuant to the Government Companies Operations Act. In 1957, NTCL began operating into the Canadian western Arctic to resupply the Distant Early Warning Line radar stations established by the U.S. Air Force. This was a further example of NTCL's contribution to government objectives in the North.

In 1957 to 1972, NTCL traffic continued to grow, particularly in later years, as oil and gas exploration was developed in the Mackenzie Delta. In 1962, the NTCL main operating base shifted from Fort McMurray, Alberta, to Hay River, Northwest Territories, with the completion of the Great Slave Lake Railway. Athabasca operations continued but there was no operational link between the Athabasca and the remainder of the NTCL system.

In 1965, NTCL acquired the assets of Yellowknife Transportation Limited, one of its competitors on the Mackenzie River. In 1972, NTCL reached a peak of over 400,000 tonnes of cargo carried. In expectation of further increases, NTCL engaged in a major capital expenditure program involving purchase of new tugboats, barges and shore equipment. In 1973, NTCL bought Grimshaw Trucking and Distributing Ltd. of Edmonton. Between the period of 1972 and 1976, NTCL traffic declined drastically, owing to the failure of the anticipated Arctic gas pipeline to proceed and to reduce exploration activity. In that period of time NTCL suffered some severe financial losses.

In 1976, NTCL was recapitalized through conversion of some $24.9 million of federal government debt into equity. Between 1977 and 1981, NTCL recovered its financial position, which peaked in 1981 with net earnings of $4.3 million and a return on invested capital of 11 per cent.

In 1981, NTCL incorporated Nortran Offshore Ltd. and refurbished two vessels for seismographic geotechnical work under Nortran. From 1981 to the present, NTCL has remained profitable, although at a somewhat lower level than the 1981 peak.

That gives you a brief history, Mr. Speaker, of the development of the Northern Transportation Company Limited.

Presently, NTCL is a federally incorporated company under the Canada Business Corporations Act. The company's head office is in Edmonton, Alberta, with its main operating base at Hay River, Northwest Territories. It is the largest operator of tugboats and barges in northwestern Canada and is the primary means of marine transportation for residents of the Mackenzie River watershed, the western Arctic, and the Keewatin Hudson Bay coast. NTCL operates 26 tugboats and 171 barges. NTCL owns Grimshaw Trucking and Distributing Limited, a trucking company operating in Alberta and the Northwest Territories. It also owns Nortran Offshore Limited which offers seismographic-geotechnical vessels for charter in the Beaufort Sea.

• (1110)

In 1984 NTCL carried 236,000 tonnes of cargo on its 5,000 mile marine system and employed 564 people during its peak summer season. Some of the highlights of its 1984 financial performance are that it generated revenue of $40.9 million and it earned $1.55 million from operations, with net earnings of $1.34 million, a return on invested capital of 5.1 per cent, and a return on equity of 3.6 per cent.

What is the justification for privatizing the Northern Transportation Company Limited? NTCL was not made a Crown corporation by design, but rather by accident through the nationalization of its then parent company, Eldorado. NTCL never had a clearly defined public policy mandate. Although the resupply activities carried out by NTCL are very important to northern residents, there is no reason why resupply operations cannot be carried out by a privately owned company. We believe that the private sector is capable of and willing to provide the service required.

NTCL itself has had aspirations in the past to diversify into related business areas. These aspirations were discouraged because it was not thought appropriate for NTCL to become involved in new areas already well served by the private sector. Privatization of NTCL would free the company to pursue entrepreneurial opportunities.

Northern Transportation Company Limited has been a candidate for privatization on several occasions already. The company was on the short list to be privatized in 1979, and in 1984 the previous Government announced plans to sell NTCL. The process for the sale of NTCL has been public for some time and there have been no expressions of public concern over the issue of privatization.

Mr. Benjamin: Oh, you're kidding.

Mr. Mazankowski: As I said, the previous administration offered NTCL for sale in August of 1984 and, after a lengthy process of providing information to interested parties, three offers were received in November of 1984 for the purchase of the company. The offers were evaluated on the basis of price, native-northern participation, and commitment to community resupply. Northern Industrial Carriers Limited of Edmonton was selected as the preferred offerer provided it could attain a satisfactory level for northern-native participation. Other offers came from the consortium of the Denendeh Development Corporation, the NWT Metis Development Corporation, and Arctic Transportation Limited, and a consortium of the Inuvialuit Development Corporation, the Nunasi Corporation, and NTCL management personnel. After lengthy negotiations, the final offer of NIC was rejected in March 1985. The rejection was on the basis of an inadequate level of native and northern participation and a reduction in price from the original tender.

It was then decided that new offers would be invited from groups that had earlier been involved in the sale process. Three offers were received: one from the consortium and the Denendeh Development Corporation, the NWT Metis Development Corporation, and Arctic Transportation Limited; the second from the consortium of the Inuvialuit Development Corporation and the Nunasi Corporation; and the third from Arctic Offshore Limited and Northern Arc Shipbuilders Limited. Again the offers were evaluated on the basis of price, native-northern participation, and commitment to community resupply. The IDC-Nunasi offer met all of the criteria set for evaluation. In addition, it presented several other attractive features, notably the fact that IDC and the Nunasi represented the majority of NTCL's resupply customers.

At present, six Inuvialuit communities and 12 Inuit communities are served. Whether one applies revenue-tonne miles or tonnage as compared to NTCL's over-all community resupply services, the percentage attributable to these communities is in the range of 90 per cent to 95 per cent. The offering group is made up entirely of the northern Inuit.

Just to give you a brief run-down on the IDC group, this corporation was created by the Committee for Original Peoples Entitlement to pursue entrepreneurial opportunities on behalf of the Inuvialuit people of the Mackenzie Delta and the Western Arctic. These people live in communities as far east as Holman Island and Paulatuk. The IDC received its current capitalization of the Inuvialuit land claim agreement signed in 1982. This involved a number of businesses, including aviation, catering and support for the Beaufort Sea oil operation. The corporation's head office is in Inuvik, Northwest Territories. Its president is Randal Pokiak and its general manager is Peter Coolican. The Nunasi Corporation pursues entrepreneurial activities on behalf of the Inuit people of the central and eastern Arctic, and acts on behalf of Inuit living in Coppermine and east, and Keewatin, as well as throughout the eastern Arctic. Nunasi has not been the beneficiary of land claim funding since no land claims agreement has been reached with the Inuit. The company owns a small airline in the Keewatin, and until recently had a significant shareholding in a gold mine. The corporation's head office is in Ottawa and its president is John Hickes.

Also involved is the firm of Trimac. Although not a shareholder in the IDC group, Trimac will play an important role by providing administration and management advice to the company. Trimac is a large diversified Calgary-based company involved in bulk trucking, general construction, pipeline construction, oilfield drilling and consulting. The company is very well respected in the western Canadian transportation industry.

The IDC-Nunasi group has agreed to a binding commitment to maintain NTCL's community supply. The fact that the ownership will represent the majority of NTCL's customers strengthens the degree of commitment even further. In addition, NTCL's long-term debt to the Government, currently some $27 million, will be retired on closing, using cash in the company. As I said, closing of the deal is planned for the end of June. Negotiations between Government officials and the IDC-Nunasi are going on and progressing well.

I hope that all Hon. Members of the House will agree to give this particular legislation speedy passage. I should say that I will be offering a couple of amendments at some point with respect to the impact on the company as it relates to income tax. The thrust of the amendments are that, for income tax purposes, the company will be in the same position after the sale, with the transfer of property, as if it had always owned the property. The portion of the amendment dealing with the debt recognizes that the debt, which is now owed by an agency of Her Majesty to Her Majesty, will not remain with the privately owned company. Really, what the amendments do is to clarify the technical issues involving NTCL's tax status. It is not a change in the substance of the Bill whose purpose remains unchanged.

I hope there might be some disposition to proceed with this Bill in all stages in the House. If not, I would certainly be prepared to appear before the standing committee to offer further elaboration at that time. But perhaps there may be some discussions about how we might proceed in order that we might receive passage of this legislation before the end of the week.

• (1120)

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I know that the Minister has been very busy with many things this morning. However, the Transport Committee met and we agreed that we would be meeting tonight on both the Western Grain Transportation Act amendments and the Northern Transportation Company. I have no knowledge of any discussion about the latter Bill going through all stages in this Chamber. We have agreed that we would deal with both Bills tonight.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, if that has been the arrangement, I would certainly have no objection. I merely want to stress the urgency and importance of having the Bill passed before the end of the week. I would certainly be glad to appear before the committee this evening.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, let me add my words of appreciation and some sympathy to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). We know that he has had a very harrowing weekend and we recognize the difficult circumstances under which he is operating. Therefore, we appreciate his being in the House today to introduce the Bill and provide us with information related to the sale of the Northern Transportation Company Limited.

However, there are a number of questions that should be answered. Therefore, we would appreciate his appearance at the committee as well as the provision of somewhat more enlightened and expanded comments during the second reading and report stages.

We treat this Bill seriously, not only because of its importance to northern Canadians but also because it is an important precedent in the ways and means of the privatization of a number of Crown corporations. I would give the Minister of Transport a somewhat backhanded compliment by saying that at least he has been able to privatize one Crown corporation, while his colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), has made more than enough speeches throughout the country about what he will do but has done nothing in ten months. However, while the Minister of Transport has at least been able to bring this privatization almost to fruition, I would add that one reason he has been able to do so is that it was an initiative begun by the previous Government. Obviously his achievement is a result of having a major advantage as a result of the foundations being well laid approximately a year ago. That would explain the difference between his level of accomplishment and that of his colleague, who is absolutely floundering and staggering in his attempt to accomplish his goal. I read recently a speech made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in October in which he said that all these Crown corporations will be signed, sealed and delivered by Christmas. However, one has yet to pass by the hallowed portals, which only shows that the large sip between the sip and the drink of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion must be carefully watched.

When our Government introduced the Crown Corporation Bill over a year ago, it was our belief that it was an important principle that any sale of a Crown corporation had to be examined by Parliament. We believed that it was an essential ingredient in a process that any Government undertook in providing for the sale of a Crown corporation. I suggest that the wisdom of that belief is borne out in today's legislation because it gives us an opportunity to have a greater degree of public scrutiny and examination of a very important issue concerning the way in which the Government sells a Crown corporation.

As the Minister pointed out, these matters should not be approached in an ideological fashion but, rather, in a pragmatic way. We must ask if the existing Crown corporation is serving a public purpose. While that may be defined in different ways by different Parties and Governments, it is a primary test.

Although most Members in the House believe that history began last September 4, that was a test which we applied in November of 1983 when we first announced that we had commissioned the board of directors of Northern Transportation Company Limited to examine the prospects or reasons for the sale of the Northern Transportation Company Limited.

I want the Minister to consider carefully the fact that we asked the board of directors to become directly involved in the assessment and evaluation and to become major partners in the sale. It is my understanding that since the new Government came to power, the board of directors has been basically frozen out of any involvement in this particular sale. That is of some concern. Under basic corporate law in this country, the board of directors, whether that of a private or of a publicly held company, has major responsibilities to act not only as stewards for the shareholders, which, in this case, is the Government, but also to provide for a more sensitive and at times knowledgeable appreciation of the intricacies of a company than you might have from a government Department.

• (1125)

The board of directors is a very important policy-making body, a very important monitoring body and a very important decision-making body. One of the key questions I want to raise and bring to the attention of the House is, why was the board of directors of this Crown corporation, which had been initially involved last year in the preliminary discussions of the sale, according to its President and chief operating officer, Mr. Cameron, not been directly involved? The experience gained and the background enjoyed in running this company has been ignored. I think it may have something to do with the fact that there was a substantial hiccup in sales when the Government made its first overture to northern carriers. It then had to withdraw and move on to a second range of buyers simply because it did not use or exploit the background information that might have been supplied by that board of directors. I do not think it is necessarily within the purview of a government Department to be in the sense the vendor of such a thing, because it is unquestionably the responsibility of the Minister. I believe the initial judgment or assessment that we have to make in this case is that when one comes to making choices about privatizing, it is very important to follow wisdom, which is to involve the interested parties who are essential to a sale. In this case to sidetrack the board of directors from the outset is a very serious mistake and one for which I hope we would receive some rationale. It suggests some of the reasons for the problems that were encountered when bringing this sale to fruition.

I am a little concerned that the Minister did not share with this House the kind of information gained by the initial assessment and evaluation done by First Boston, which had been set up to do a proper financial accounting of the company to determine its level of assets, prospects and so on, which would help Parliament, and in particular the standing committee which will be working in a very strict time frame, to get a better financial judgment as to the pluses and minuses of this sale. I go back to the Minister's own words. Is the Government undertaking the right kind of financial deal in making this sale? We do not know because we do not have First Boston's report. I do not think there is anything particularly confidential there. If there were, it could be raised, but I say to the Minister across the House that it may be of some importance to the committee to have access to the results of the First Boston study. I think it would give us some proper background as to what were the various financial statements and results. I say this in particular because it is important to go back a little in history to clear the air. Certain of the Minister's colleagues a year or so ago raised a number of questions when they were on this side of the House concerning the financial arrangements of NTC sales and made some fairly strong charges concerning the management of the company.

As we said at that time, that was something which, in a way, was an attempt to put these people into a precarious position and to assess their reputation. I think the responsibility of the Minister should be at least to give us the results of the First Boston study to clear the air and not to leave some of those questions outstanding as they were last year. At that time when I held his position I said I could not answer those questions until we had done the proper financial study, which we were prepared to do through an independent party. Many of those individuals, among them the past President, Mr. Montpetit, deserve and have the respect of this House, and we should recognize that by attempting to come to deal with those financial issues.

I do commend the Minister of Transport for following through on the original terms of reference. They were to ensure that there was substantial participation by northerners and native people. When we initially examined the concept of the sale, we thought it was an ideal opportunity to provide incentives for the newly emerging entrepreneurial class of native people in northern Canada. We thought it would provide them with an opportunity to have a good stake in a company which directly affected their interests. At that time we had several discussions and participated in negotiations with native organizations. They made a very strong case that NTCL was a prime candidate to enable them to get a major toe-hold in a northern transportation system which they could own and operate. That was one of the primary justifications we used in November 1983 to begin the process leading toward the privatization of this particular company.

• (1130)

When the Minister originally made his announcement concerning the sale to Northern Industrial Carriers, at that time it did not contain participation or involvement of northern native organizations in particular. Obviously the second bid which has been accepted by the Government, at least on its face value, fully meets that test and the criteria which we put forward as being a justification for the sale.

I hope Hon. Members of the House will take full recognition of the fact that this is a very important step in northern Canada. As some Hon. Members who represent northern constituencies are fond of saying, and rightfully so, sufficient attention is not paid to the affairs and interests of northern Canada by Members of the House. They tend to be pushed off to the sidelines too often.

One of the most important and exciting developments which I witnessed when I was in the Ministry of Transport was the way in which a number of native organizations, partly using money from land claims as their basis of capital, were undertaking a new way of meeting their economic objectives. They were moving toward the notion of self-sufficiency, not only in local government terms but also in economic terms. My Party and I believe very strongly that this is one of the signposts for the future. If we are to alleviate the severe economic deprivation of northern native people, perhaps one of the most important ways in which Government can assist them is by giving them the equity, capital and operations which allow them to grow, expand and develop economic investments in their own community. As any number of groups at the bottom of the economic ladder try to climb up it, they do so by developing a stake in their own community and by developing the ability to obtain a good capital base upon which to build.

This sale of NTCL is a very important step forward. It will enable native people in northern Canada to acquire an important company. It is an important company in that it supplies a very important service. With the right kinds of conditions, it can be a real foundation for the expansion and development of a number of other offshoots, not only in transportation. It will at least give them the basic capital and the administrative development and experience upon which they can grow and evolve into fairly major economic operations.

The Bill is important in terms of being a first step in privatization and the principles adhered to. It is a very important example of the way in which Government can assist native people—and for that matter other groups—in their economic development. Rather than divorce itself from them, it can facilitate their development of economic self-sufficiency.

This raises several questions which I hope the Minister will answer. He mentioned in his statement that the $24.5 million outstanding loan to the Government would be written off. I believe he said that it would be written off by the proceeds from the sale. If that is the case, we would want to know the sale price. Also we would want to know what kinds of conditions and arrangements have been made. Is it simply a write-off trade? Will further equity be coming back to the Government? In other words, what kind of financial arrangement has been arrived at?

The second component would be: What kind of continuing commitments has the Government made, particularly in terms of resupply in the Keewatin area? As I recall the situation, the present contract went into 1989. I believe that is the present arrangement. In some years, in particular in 1983, the level of subsidy for that was over $600,000. I believe last year, if I am not mistaken, the company paid some money back to the Government, about $300,000. As a result of the way in which the resupply agreement has been worded, there is a back-up commitment by the Government of Canada to ensure that the resupply continues to pay any additional costs over what is returned by way of revenue. It is very important to know at this point in time whether that is simply running until 1989. Is there a long-term commitment from the Government to maintain that subsidy? In particular—and I do not believe the Minister mentioned it in his opening remarks—to what degree has a term of reference or a set of directions been given to the Canadian Transport Commission to ensure that the agreement is lived up to in terms of resupplying essential communities, to ensure that it will be honoured? I am not saying that there should be any mistrust, but we must remember that it is the only source of supply for certain parts of northern Canada, including the northern part of Manitoba, the province from which I come, and the Churchill supply area. What kind of agreements or arrangements will be made with CTC to monitor the performance of the company in its resupply commitments and in redefining its terms? What commitment is being made by the Government in the long-term interests of the area?

When we talk about privatization, there are many private companies which receive transport subsidies. I have heard Hon. Members opposite say that perhaps too many companies receive such subsidies. However, I want to express a note of caution. In the last Budget papers tabled by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), there was a very clear statement that the Government intended to reduce the number of subsidies under transportation. Of course, we assume that that would primarily mean in Atlantic Canada. The key question would be: Would this affect or have an application to the Keewatin supply area under NTCL? I think it is very important for the Minister of Transport to outline clearly those conditions.

I should like to refer to another set of issues, those affecting or impacting on local residents, particularly in the Territories. As I understand it, some real concern has been expressed over the last several months about the need to undertake impact studies of both an economic and environmental kind in terms of the consequences of the sale. The Minister did not indicate whether such studies or impact assessments had been made. Some assurances should be provided to the affected communities which have a singular reliance upon the company for their well-being and livelihood. We require further information and clear guarantees from the Government as to what in fact has been done. What kind of assurances have been given to these communities as a condition of sale? Has CTC been assigned a role to determine the conditions of licence and the performance of these conditions?

Those are very clear-cut questions. When this company has been privatized, the only two areas in which the Government will be able to provide some continuing level of guaranteed assurances would be through its subsidy payments on the Keewatin supply route and through the licensing arrangements under CTC. We have not received any information from the Government in either case as to what it intends to do. There are a number of questions related to the sale, but I want to make clear that we as a caucus and as a Party support its basic principle, because in fact it was an initiative which we took. We did so because it made good sense at that time. I suspect it makes even better sense now. One clear question had to be answered at that time, and I believe the Minister referred to it in his opening address. If the company were to expand its operations, if it were to diversify and supply alternative services, it would need more equity to do so. There seems to be no good reason why the Government of Canada should be paying for that new infusion of equity capital. That comes back to what the conditions of sale are and what in fact are the financial arrangements that have been made; to what degree the reserves of the company have been used up; what kind of capital will remain and what kind of return on the capital will be allowed so that it will not be so totally stripped that it would not be able to take advantage of that area.

The second major reason, as I said, that we strongly endorse this Bill, is the opportunity that this provides for self-sufficiency for native organizations in northern Canada. I think that, in the long term, that might prove to be a valuable and important segment of this area.

We would say, by way of an opening of a series of comments, that we support this Bill in principle but many questions need to be answered. We will try to assist the Minister as much as we can so that this transaction can continue, as long as we are able to receive the kind of assurances that I have requested this morning.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I ordinarily would not welcome any opportunity to speak on a Bill which allows the Government to get out of its obligations to provide guaranteed and essential services to the residents of northern Canada, or to any part of the country for that matter. I am happy to say that the Government's initial plan to sell to a southern private company fell through and it is in fact now planning to sell this company to a consortium of two Inuit corporations. I want to say to the Minister that had he done otherwise, he would not be getting this Bill through in the eleventh hour of this session.

The whole issue of privatization, like deregulation, has been a matter of some debate in this House and all over the country for the last several years, ever since the Proposition 13 syndrome and Reaganomics were imported into this country and grabbed on to by both the Liberal Party and the Conservative Party.

It does provide an opportunity to consider the purpose and the value of Crown corporations, particularly in the instances where it covers part of the economy that is a natural monopoly, small markets or isolated areas where an essential public service has to be provided. Over the years, in this country as well as others, Governments of the stripe of the Liberal or Conservative Parties have got into Crown corporations, not because they believed in them, not because they thought there was an essential public service that Government could best provide through ownership by the taxpayers of the nation, but for a number of other reasons. One was to bail out some outfit that was going broke and to help out the banks and the bond holders and private investors, and the other was because the private sector could not or would not fulfil an essential public need. Where was the private sector in the 1930s when it came to fulfilling essential public need in northern Canada? It could not or would not provide that essential public service, and starting in 1934 the people of Canada began providing that essential public service in the thinly populated northern isolated area.

The other thing is that in the mindless drive toward privatization there seemed to be a strong tendency under the previous Government as there is under the present Government to sell off the winners and leave the taxpayers stuck with only the losers. Hardly anybody is going to rush forward to buy a Crown corporation that is losing its shirt, although the Government may well end up having to sell parts or all of several other Crown corporations. I am thinking of a couple of aircraft manufacturers and a few others that were taken into public ownership, not because the Government believed there was an essential need to have a Crown corporation in the aircraft industry to preserve a qualified capacity for the manufacture, production, research and development in the aircraft industry. It was done for other reasons. Those reasons were part of it, but there were other reasons as well, partly to preserve jobs and partly to bail out those who were losing their shirts and stop them from pulling out of the country or just folding up completely.

The taxpayers are just as entitled as any private investor to the opportunity to obtain a return on the investment they make. That is why I do not understand the rush to sell the winners. I know they are easier to sell because they are making money. NTCL has been very profitable, certainly for the last five or six years. Those are easier to sell. If it were only as easy to sell off the losers! There is no imperative that the Government be in the kind of business that some of those losers are in, but it is in for a variety of other reasons, and they remain losers.

Those public corporations that provide essential public services, that fill a public need and serve the national interest, and at the same time obtain a return on investment in a profitable situation for the taxpayers, are surely the kind, given the combination of all those three things, for the keeping in the public sector of which there is total justification. They should be kept as Crown corporations.

As a matter of general principle, my Party believes that there are certain sectors of the economy, and particularly in isolated or thinly populated areas or areas with a small population and small markets, where the private sector cannot or will not provide the services that people need. Those are legitimate areas for Government to establish Crown corporations on behalf of not only those people in the areas affected or in the services that they require but also to serve the national interest. Otherwise we would never have built a railroad.

We make an exception in this case because at least NTCL is being sold to the people of the North. It is too bad that all of the aboriginal groups who bid on this company could not have got together and been given joint ownership and joint control. Then they would all be involved and we could be certain that all areas of the North currently served would continue to be served as well as they are now, if not better, and that any changes in the future because of development decisions and needs of corporate development would be made by those people themselves with all the interests of the North at hand. Just the same, we believe that the IDC and Nunasi corporations will do a better job than some private sector outfit from the south who would go into it to make a buck, get rid of the parts that lose money, and give little or no attention or consideration to the needs of the people in all parts of northern Canada.

What we would really have liked to have seen in this bill are clauses which would guarantee services to the North, guarantees that the purchasers, whoever they might be, would continue to provide the excellent services that the company has been providing and some guarantees that the company will continue to invest its profits. The company has been very profitable over the last number of years and its profits should continue to be invested in the further development and improvement of the Northern Transportation system.

● (1150)

We believe that the proposed purchasers will do all of those things because doing so affects all of them. It will be in their own best interests to reinvest profits and to improve the operations of the company so that it will be even better than it is now. There can be no question that NTCL has been doing a good job and has been meeting an essential public need that up until now the private sector has been unable and unwilling to meet. We do believe that the proposed purchasers will do these things, but we want a guarantee that they or anyone to whom they may sell all or part of the company in the future will continue to do the same. However, there is nothing in this Bill that provides for that. There may be something in the agreement of sale providing for that, and I understand that the Minister has said that there is. I wish that he would show us the agreement of sale. Perhaps he will do so later. The Bill itself is completely vague on that matter.

Over the last five years NTCL has made profits of somewhere in the order of $20 million. It has certainly made profits of over $14 million in 1979, 1980 and 1981. I do not have at hand the figures for the last couple of years but I believe the profit picture was good in both of those years as well. I also recognize that the company indicates in its annual reports an extraordinary item, it being payments of debt to the Crown. Even so, it has still reported a profit in each year. Of course, the Bill provides for the forgiveness of the Crown debt so that it will not be an expense that will have to be borne by the new owners. That brings me to two questions.

First, as I mentioned earlier, should the Government be selling a profitable operation for which there are no competitors? In fact, the economic reality is that there is no room for competition because of the high cost of providing services in the North and because of the smallness of the market. The question to be asked is, should the Government be selling the company no matter to whom, particularly when it is a winner both in terms of the services it provides and the profits it makes? Can the Government not provide this service at a reasonable rate itself and still make a return on its investment, no matter how small?

After 50 years of efforts by the Government and investment by the taxpayers, this company has finally become a very successful and worth-while operation. Then and only then does the private sector rush in saying that it cannot have all these publicly-owned corporations interfering in the private sector. The private sector wants to pick up the action and it wants the gravy off the top. This applies not only in this instance but in the case of airlines. Where the hell was Canadian Pacific when we needed it? As soon as Air Canada started making money, then the pressure was on and the demand was there for the private sector to involve itself in air transportation to provide competition.

Mr. Mazankowski: You helped build that private sector.

Mr. Benjamin: The taxpayers built it, paid for it and they are still paying for it. Where is the private sector when we need it in areas of essential public services?

I do not question the intentions, motives and abilities of those who are proposing to purchase the NTCL, but even they, through their representative organizations and institutions, have over the years told Parliament and said publicly that they would prefer the Government to continue to operate this company and provide its services. I suspect that if it had not been for the efforts of the southern private sector to purchase this company under the previous administration and again under this one, the native organizations in the North would not have moved to purchase it themselves. I doubt if many Inuit and Dene people would want to be entirely at the mercy of southern private-sector corporations. When they were faced with a policy under the previous administration and now under the present one to privatize this corporation, it seems to me that they had no choice but to get together to offer to buy it in order to keep it in northern hands. Therefore, what is provided in the Bill is the next best thing to leaving it the way it was.

Second, if we decide to sell this corporation, will the taxpayers get fair value for their investment? After the Crown debt is forgiven—and we can only assume that the Minister plans to do so since there is a provision in the Bill to do so and a Royal Recommendation to appropriate the funds to do so—this company will have net assets of some $68 million, if my calculations are correct and I think they are. Yet all we have heard through the news media—not from the Minister or from the agreement of sale—is that the Government expects to receive about $25 million. If that is so, we do not know, because the Bill does not tell us and the Minister does not tell us, why that does not appear in the Bill itself.

Finally, the Minister has asked the House to give an order of reference to the Standing Committee on Transport to study the role and responsibility of the Government of Canada with respect to northern transportation services and infrastructure, and the standing committee will be meeting and travelling to the North in September and perhaps October to study all of that and report back to the House. The committee will be meeting to study this issue over the next weeks and months. While it is doing that, the Minister will be selling off the primary instrument of national policy with respect to transportation in the North. Does the Minister not think that he should not, on the one hand, ask Parliament to study something and then, on the other hand, go ahead and do whatever he was planning to do in any event? We know that the Government has done that with acid rain, with star wars and with free trade. Therefore, we are not surprised, but we are upset and disappointed.

I do not suppose that there would be anything drastically wrong with postponing the implementation of the agreement of sale until the study of the northern transportation infrastructure is completed by the Transport Committee. The Government could then proceed to implement this Bill. I would be happy if the Minister would agree to make sure that the Bill reads that it will only be put into effect by Royal proclamation and not until after the Transport Committee has made its study, reported to the House and the House has dealt with that report. In fact, there might even be some things in that report that would lead the Minister to adjust the legislation.

● (1200)

I believe, when all is said and done, that the Government ought not to sell Crown corporations, particularly the winners, and Parliament ought not to support such sales, generally, especially without any guarantees in legislation about just who the purchasers are going to be—and I am speaking generally here because we know who it is going to be in this case—just how much the Government—meaning the people of Canada—will receive in return for the sale of the investment they made, and what will happen in the future if the responsibilities formerly held by the Government in trust to the people of the North are not met by future owners. I want to tell the Minister through you, Mr. Speaker, that we will have amendments to this effect when the Bill goes to committee, and I will give the Minister copies as quickly as I can. We are afraid that the government majority in this place will not be persuaded by logic, good thinking or anything else in its suicidal mission to rid the people of Canada of all their hard won and profitable operations, such as it did with the patent office and with Teleglobe Canada.

The Minister waited quite a while to bring in this Bill. I believe the announcement was made of the completion of the agreement on May 17, but, obviously, the negotiations had been going on for a long time prior to that.

Mr. Mazankowski: It wasn't by design.

Mr. Benjamin: The Minister had an agreement in principle with a previous purchaser three or four months ago, but that sale did not go through. There is nothing in this Bill that appears to be specific as to any particular offer of purchase. Nowhere is it mentioned who will buy the corporation or which parts of it or how much of it. The Bill could just as easily be used to sell off any other Crown corporation by simply changing the name of the Bill, because the Bill is that general and vague. So the minister waited until June 12 to introduce the Bill and expected that seven days later it would be debated and passed. Of course, when we are into the dying days of a session of Parliament, the pressure is on the Minister, on every Hon. Member of this House and on the standing committees to rush through as much legislation as possible by the end of the month.

There are a number of clauses in the Bill which give the Minister the power to do practically anything he wishes with this company. If this Bill was introduced for other Crown corporations, Ministers of the Government could sell them for a song to whoever, including perhaps their friends. They could sell our Crown corporations to someone other than the stated purchaser in press releases. They could sell them for more or less than initially indicated or for much less than the fair market value of the company. Perhaps the rush to get this legislation through is more related to giving the Minister this power than to selling the company before the summer. That is hard to say. While we agree that the purchasers we know of are going to be the best kind of purchasers, we feel that the Bill could serve as a model—all one would have to do is to change the title—for future sales of all other Crown corporations. We worry about that. If that were to happen in subsequent months or years, I can assure the Minister that he will have difficulty getting it through at the beginning of the session, let alone during the last couple of weeks.

Clause 3(3) allows the Governor in Council to exempt any parts of the corporation from sale and allows the Minister to transfer the control of those portions, so exempted, to any government agency or other Crown corporation. That is not so bad because we would like to see him keep the whole thing, but he may also give it to "to any other person or body", to quote the Bill. We find that a little disturbing. If the prospective purchasers were to decide that they do not want some portion of the company, the Minister has the authority under this Bill to let anyone else have that portion. Why has the Minister not indicated in the Bill to whom he is selling NTCL? He has a buyer. He has made various announcements. Why could he not have given us all of the details? If he wants to sell a corporation to someone, why can he not be specific? If the Bill had been specific, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), any other Minister, or the Cabinet could not change the terms. They could not dispose of some parts and not others. They could not sell off or give away parts of a corporation to any other persons known or unknown.

We do not want to obstruct this legislation, but we will want the Minister to give us more detail in committee this evening. We would like him to be a lot more forthcoming and open than he has been. Now that the Government has decided to whom it is going to sell, there is nothing wrong with making all the terms of the purchase agreement fully public. Once this Bill passes, the Minister, I am confident—I accept his word—will proceed to sell to whom he is saying he will sell. I do not know if I would be that trusting of other Ministers, but I believe this Minister and I accept his word.

Initially, the Government had accepted a bid from an Edmonton trucking company but requested some native involvement in order to soothe the native community in the North. That failed to happen and, thank goodness, bids were reopened. Another consortium of southern controlled development companies entered into the bidding. Again, the Government—and I compliment the Minister on this—decided to sell to two of the native corporations which had offered to buy, namely, the Inuit people. That agreement was announced in principle on May 17. But we must prevent this Bill, as is, to be used to sell off other Crown corporations, particularly winners, in the same manner. I can accept this sale in this instance, and in this instance only, because I trust and believe in the Minister's intention to sell to whom he says he will, but, as I said before, Mr. Speaker, the same Bill could be used, by changing its title, to sell of almost every other Crown corporation, winner or loser. The Government is determined to make its point about privatization by selling off this corporation because it feels that since it is in the North, no one in the south will care much, but those people up North will, no matter how few they are. Either way, as a matter of general principle, our Party would be opposed to selling off Crown corporations, particularly those which are winners, and the people of Canada can share in the cost of those losers which provide an essential public service to a small market, an isolated area or a thinly and widely scattered population. However, the bid which has been accepted appears to us to be the best. While co-operation between the Inuit and the Dene would be nice, I suppose a thousand years or more of conflict is not likely to be resolved over a joint board or a split sale in the operations of NTCL.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Minister can let me know this evening, or now if he wants, whether any consideration was given to retaining a minority interest in the company of 15 per cent, 20 per cent or 25 per cent. The Government would then have representation on the board of directors and would therefore have first-hand knowledge about what is going on. Another thing, which I know the Minister would be conscious of and conscientious about, is the fact we have heard nothing about what protection there may be for the very experienced management and the employees of the company once the sale is completed and down the road a number of years. This is not an easy operation to run and it is obvious that the management and the employees of the company have been doing a darn good job. We are not suggesting it is perfect; there are always going to be some complaints, always some areas where new or additional services could be or should be provided. But, generally speaking, they have done an excellent job and we want to know what protection there is for the management and the employees of the NTCL.

I would like to close by saying that the Government will not find any obstruction on our part over this Bill for the simple reason that we know or understand who the purchasers are. Had it been otherwise, this Bill would not be going through in this session of Parliament, I can assure the Minister of that. We hope the Minister will accept some if not all of our amendments later this day. Even if he does not, we are prepared to proceed with this because it will serve as an experiment where the people of the North own and operate something which is so essential to their own as well as the general public good.

On the assumption that this will go through by this Friday, we wish the new owners well. We hope the Government will, in subsequent years, provide all the co-operation necessary, including any assistance they might want or need or ask for to help improve and make a better success of the company's operations. I hope that eventually other residents of the North, particularly the Dene, will become involved in ownership and operation of this corporation. That is something I hope the people of the North can work out among and between themselves with the assistance and co-operation of the Minister and his Department. I also hope, Sir, that the Minister will give serious consideration to retaining some percentage of ownership in order to maintain the national presence, not just for the sake of doing so but in support of the provision of an essential service in northern Canada. I believe everyone in Canada is willing to provide that support and participation through the Government. I do not think it was necessary to sell off 100 per cent of the company, but if that is the Government's intention, I am confident that this Minister at least will provide all the help and assistance he can in the years ahead to make sure that those people can proceed to improve and enlarge upon this vital element of northern Canada.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure this afternoon to speak in favour of Bill C-53 which would grant to the Minister of Transport the authority to divest himself of equity in the Northern Transportation Company Limited. I guess there are two points for discussion. First of all, the Bill grants to the Government of Canada that authority; the second part is the actual sale itself. I think it will be essential at this evening's meeting of the Standing Committee on Transport, when we delve into the sale, that information requested by both the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) and the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) be made available. We should have before us the sale agreement and the memorandum of sale so that parliamentarians can be aware of what we are really getting ourselves into.

I believe that NTCL should be privatized. There is no reason why the Government of Canada should be in the business of operating barges on the Mackenzie River to the Beaufort Sea, Hudson Bay or anywhere else. It can be quite reasonably and sensibly done by Canadians in a private capacity. Why should the Government of Canada be operating trucking companies such as the Grimshaw subsidiary of NTCL? There is no reason for it. The Minister explained that the Government had got into the business by accident when it took over the old Eldorado uranium operation in the war years. Before that time, water transportation services had been provided by private companies and by the Hudson Bay company at one time. Roman Catholic missions operated their own water transport system from time to time. So the service had been provided by the private sector prior to nationalization by the Government of Canada. There is absolutely no reason why we cannot go back to the private system.

As a Crown corporation NTCL was in a very privileged position. It had certain friends in Ottawa who made sure that it was protected when it came to matters such as the issuing of water licences. Other firms which wished to get into the business found that their applications were not dealt with at the same rate of speed and with the same alacrity that NTCL's applications had been dealt with.

I think that at the same time as we are putting NTCL back into the private sector, we should take an over-all look at the regulatory regime which governs water transportation in northern Canada. No longer should NTCL be in this privileged position, enjoying what is tantamount in certain areas to a monopoly. We should allow proper competition. We should allow small operators to get into the business to provide specialized and localized services. I foresee that in the immediate future we might have what you might call two trunk operators, NTCL and ATL. They would provide service throughout the whole waterway. Specialty services such as stand-by supply vessels for the Beaufort Sea oil and gas industry can be provided by others. For service into small communities there is no reason why local operators cannot get themselves smaller barges. You do not have to run 1,500-ton barges into snowdrifts. You can operate more effectively with smaller barges. This would be a good opportunity for local entrepreneurs to set up business and provide a valuable service to the smaller communities. I hope the Canadian Transport Commission will take a new view of the regime and open up the market. Let us have competition in the market for water services. Let us have flexibility so that services can be changed rapidly to meet rapidly changing demands.

● (1220)

Many customers of NTCL and other firms are in the oil and gas business. One year they need delivery to one point, but in the next year the market has changed and they need delivery to other locations. It is necessary to have a system which can respond rapidly to changes in demand. Small operators must be allowed to set up easily.

The Government should ensure that vessels in operation are seaworthy and that the crews of those vessels have the necessary qualifications to operate the vessels safely. However, the Government should not concern itself about what charges are made to transport goods from place to place in particular vessels. And that is not a concern of the Government of Canada.

The Hon. Member for Regina East takes a very patronizing attitude—

Mr. Benjamin: Regina West.

Mr. Nickerson: I am sorry, the Hon. Member for Regina West, I stand corrected. I have heard him on a sufficient number of occasions to be able to remember his constituency. He has a very patronizing attitude to the people in the North. He says that the people who live there are not quite up to scratch as compared with the intelligent people who live in Regina West.

Mr. Benjamin: Come on, I didn't say that.

Mr. Nickerson: He says that the Government has to help us out by keeping a handle on things up there. I can tell the Hon. Member for Regina West that the operators and businessmen in the Northwest Territories are just as competent as are those in Regina or anywhere else in the country. We do not need the Government to hold our hands, thank you very much.

In the near future there will be some changes in the nature of the industry as there have been already. The resupply of communities is not as important in the general scheme of things, especially in the revenues generated for the shipping companies, as it was previously. There is no reefer service on the Mackenzie or the Beaufort Sea any more, as far as I know. Produce and groceries are not transported by water any more but, rather, by truck, air, or other quicker methods. The supply of petroleum products to some of the more remote communities is very important. They would like to be assured of having petroleum products delivered on a regular basis.

However, the future of the shipping industry is not so much in the area of community resupply as it is in the area of service to the oil and gas industry. That is the big customer of NTCL and other operators. The future may be in the transportation of heavy machinery for the oil and gas industry and there may be a greater concentration on coastal routes than on river routes. NTCL no longer has a real presence on Lake Athabasca, especially since the uranium mine there has been closed down. As roads push further north along the Mackenzie River, water supply in those areas will not be quite as important as hitherto. The centre of the industry is moving northward, with a greater emphasis on service to the oil and gas industry than there was previously when community resupply was the biggest activity in which NCTL and its few competitors engaged.

As a politician I cannot resist the temptation to make a few remarks about the inconsistency of some of my friends in the Liberal Party. Liberal policy has always fluctuated with wide swings. When the Liberal Party said one thing, one could never take for granted that that would be done as opposed to something entirely opposite. Privatization has always been the policy of this Party. NTCL was on a short list in 1979 when the Progressive Conservative Party formed the Government for much too short a period.

During the 1979 and 1980 election campaigns my Liberal competition went to places like Hay River, which is the centre of operations for NTCL, and tried to put the fear of God into the employees of NTCL. They said that the PCs would sell the industry out from under the feet of the employees and sell them down the river. The Liberal pitch was that they would not sell NTCL but would keep it as a Crown corporation guaranteeing all the jobs for life whether they were needed or not. They said that there was no way they would privatize NTCL.

Only a couple of years later when the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry became the Minister of Transport, his very first act was to reverse totally the Liberal Party policy. He said that they were going to sell NTCL. That makes one wonder whether you should ever vote for Members of the Liberal persuasion having seen them swing around 180 degrees in a matter of months. Their words are not really to be believed. However, I believe the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry was correct in coming to the conclusion that NTCL was a prime candidate for privatization and that the interests of northerners and of all of Canada would be best served by having northern water transportation in private hands.

Let us look at how this policy decision has been effected in private practice. If we were to be honest with ourselves, we would have to admit that the whole issue has been a comedy of errors from start to finish. The privatization process has dragged on for well over a year. People have not known where they stood. This has been particularly hard on the employees of NTCL who did not know what was going to happen to them. They could not get a straight answer from anyone. It all started when the former Minister of Transportation appointed an American firm of financial consultants to carry out the privatization of a Canadian corporation. I cannot understand why he had to choose an American firm. Are there no Canadian financial consultants who could have done the same thing?

I have heard many prospective buyers of NTCL complain that they were unable to get the necessary information to put in a rational bid. Prospective buyers could not get that information and I know that Members of Parliament could not get it. There is no way that people in general could find out what the Government had for sale. Not only have the customers of NTCL been left up in the air for that period of time, they still do not know what will happen. The whole decision-making process during both administrations has been shrouded with secrecy. Nobody knew what was for sale or what the perspective bids were. Why could we not have had a system which would provide a form indicating what was for sale and which listed all of the assets and necessary information? In that way, there could have been a process whereby the bids were opened publicly to show who bid for what and for how much. The whole process would have been open and would have prevented any complaints about political persuasion in particular circumstances.

• (1230)

We saw the Northern Industrial Carrier fiasco when apparently a conditional sale was made and the prospective purchaser could not then meet the conditions of that sale. I suspect the purchaser did not know what he was getting into the first place, but that delayed matters even more. The employees, customers and others did not know what was happening.

If it is this difficult to privatize a rather small Crown corporation like NTCL, I certainly do not envy the Minister when he tries to privatize Air Canada. I hope he has learned some of the difficulties and how to overcome them when he goes to bigger and better things.

Mr. Mazankowski: You have to admit that I am a cautious man.

Mr. Nickerson: The Minister says he is a cautious man. He certainly has been cautious for many months in this respect. One reason why it is difficult for the Minister is that there are many small details to address even in a small privatization exercise like this. The Minister is extremely busy and it is difficult for him to devote the necessary amount of surveillance to what is going on in this privatization process.

As all Members of Parliament know, there are a few of us who are overworked, 18 hours a day for seven days a week, and others who are essentially underworked and do not have that much to do. If we ever go through an exercise like this again, perhaps it would make sense for the Minister to give a parliamentary secretary or other Member of Parliament some responsibility to oversee what is going on with a particular piece of legislation or a privatization such as this. I am sure it would assist the Minister to make use of a Member of Parliament who is konwledgeable in the area and knows the actors in the game. It would prevent the occurrence of a situation such as this and the procedure would go much more smoothly if the Minister had someone with political and economic expertise overseeing the procedure.

I have some questions relating to the prospective purchase. I hope they will be answered later tonight but let me put them on the record now, as has been done by previous speakers. We would like to know why this particular bid was chosen rather than others. I understand that my time is almost up. May I request unanimous consent of the House to carry on for another five minutes?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member to continue?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Nickerson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We would like to know where Trimac fits into the picture. That is a Calgary based trucking company which is involved in oil field hauling and pipeline construction. Some people are rather suspicious of its role in this plan. They feel that Trimac may be attempting to acquire Grimshaw and use it as a backdoor means of obtaining operating authority for their trucks into the Territories. This would be of great concern to the territorial trucking industry and the Government of the Northwest Territories, whose policy it is that an indigenous trucking industry be developed and big operators from the south do not come in and ride over the local operators, some of whom are very good and have developed much expertise in the various aspects of trucking. It is to be hoped that they will develop even more expertise in oil field hauling.

The interest of Nunasi in the Keewatin operation is very easy to see. That is obviously where they have their great interest. They are very concerned with the operation in the Hudson Bay area, servicing the various Keewatin communities. I wonder whether any thought was given to the possibility of splitting off the Hudson Bay operation of NTCL, which is quite different from the Mackenzie River-Beaufort site of the operation, and having that divested separately, perhaps into the hands of Nunasi. They would be a very likely purchaser of that part. Was any thought given to divesting the NTCL operation to people with particular interest in those various aspects of the service that it delivered?

The question of divestiture to collectivities rather than individuals is cause for some concern. The Government in the North has always looked upon people in terms of groups, particularly ethnic groups, rather than individuals and Canadian citizens. I believe that sometimes it might be better if we could deal with individual people, regardless of race, who come together to form a business corporation rather than having an over-all emphasis on groups put together because of ethnic origins.

Other speakers today have referred to the difficulty with having ethnic groups bidding for private corporations which service areas inhabited by ethnic groups. Undoubtedly it would be preferable to have someone running a shipping company who simply has business and commercial interests rather than being concerned with such things as land claims and aboriginal rights.

Whichever ethnic group would have been successful in bidding on this commercial venture, it is likely that it would have left a rather bad taste in the mouths of others. If we do anything like this in the future, I would like to see a more business oriented approach rather than looking at it in terms of ethnic collectivities. Inuvialuit Development Corporation has showed itself in the past to be a rather efficient business organization, but it is associated with the COPE organization which has been known, from time to time, to play hardball politics. There is some alarm on the part of people who are not in that COPE area as to what might happen in the future. I hope that their fears are unfounded, but when much of the service area of NTCL is not represented in the new ownership, one can certainly understand why some of that alarm might exist.

My final point deals with the future of the Town of Hay River. It is a transportation centre and does not have much else going for it. The Government has gone out of its way to virtually destroy the fishing industry in that town. Its only real raison d'être is transportation. The centre of the transportation element there is the Northern Transportation Company Limited. People in Hay River are very concerned about what will happen as a result of this privatization. Most of the employees of NTCL, in fact a good proportion of them, especially those involved in maintenance aspects and the loading of barges, live in Hay River.

● (1240)

Under at least one of the proposals, Hay River would also have become the head office of NTCL. People in that community were looking forward to that eventuality. Now they do not know what will happen. Some of the feelings of mistrust that have been generated in Hay River must be resolved. People must be aware of what is going to happen to them. Governments must not abandon Hay River and the people of Hay River in their eagerness to divest themselves of NTCL.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there any questions or comments? We will now resume debate. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall).

Mr. David Dingwall (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I will be relatively brief with my remarks. I must say at the outset that I am in agreement with the sale of this Crown corporation, but I have a number of points I want to share with the Minister while he is in the House. They are concerns and queries about what is taking place. Much has been said with regard to the contents of the Bill and the effects this particular divestiture, if you will, of Crown assets will mean to the Government of Canada and to the people affected.

I hope this piece of legislation, which is in essence a selling of a Crown corporation, will not serve as a precedent for the selling of Crown corporations. In this Chamber and indeed on many other occasions we have heard the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) talk about his desire to sell various Crown corporations of the Government of Canada. We have heard him in the House. We have heard him on the campaign trail and more recently we have heard him talking to the Canadian people when criss-crossing the nation. Unfortunately or fortunately, however one views the issue, that particular Minister has not met with very much success.

I guess it is in order to congratulate the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) for being able to put this package together and ultimately consummate a deal with the new purchasers, although I think it would be fair to say that this deal and package commenced some time ago and he, as the Minister responsible for transport, has picked up the file and seen it through to its conclusion.

There are a number of items in the Bill, well intentioned as it is, that ought to be reflected on by members of the Government as indicated by Party spokespersons for my Party. We are not going to oppose the Bill in a very drastic way, in fact, we will approve it, but I ask the Minister to reflect for a moment that if the Crown is to purchase the assets of a private company, whether the assets are fixed, real assets or what have you, that it be clearly spelled out in the legislation as to what Department of the Government will be acquiring them and what Department and Minister will be responsible. I think also the legislation should make mention of the tabling of the annual report and which standing committee of the House of Commons the matter would be referred to. When you have the reverse, as in this case, the same degree of clarity or specificity is not provided for.

I say to the Minister in all good faith that the legal draftspersons would argue, and maybe with some justification if one looked back over a period of time and viewed precedents with regard to the divestiture or the selling of a Crown corporation, that perhaps some of the things my Party and indeed Members of the New Democratic Party have referred to ought not to be included in the legislation.

I say to the Minister through you, Mr. Speaker, that this is an opportunity for the Minister not only to consummate the deal that he and I believe is important for all Canadians to take place, but also it is important that the Minister and his Department reflect upon the broader picture with regard to the selling of Crown corporations. In the substance of the Bill and the way in which it is written, it ought to be changed. For instance, why can the purchaser not be named in the Bill? I pose that question to the Minister. I hope he will have an opportunity later to wrap up and respond. If by naming the purchaser in the Bill itself will in some way affect the agreement of a sale that has already been consummated, I think that should be clearly stated and spelled out. If not, if there is no damage nor effect with regard to the selling of the Crown corporation by stating the name of the purchaser in the Bill, why can the purchaser not be named in the legislation?

Concerning the impact study, I am not very clear in my own mind about a certain aspect and perhaps the Minister will afford himself the opportunity to elaborate. It seems to me to be logically consistent that in selling off assets which will affect Canadians in the northern part of Canada, that Canadians and Parliament, either before a standing committee or on the floor of the House of Commons, ought to have in their midst the results of an impact study.

I share some knowledge about these matters. Confidentiality has to be first and foremost with regard to negotiations. I want the Minister to think, and perhaps when he has an opportunity, he can comment on whether the results of an impact study impact negatively with regard to the agreement of purchase and sale he has now consummated. I would think that it would not. If it does, I believe there is an onus upon the Minister of Transport to state that clearly as early as possible so that Members who will be asking questions will know in advance that the answers are not readily available and are not readily available because of good and valid reasons. The whole issue of confidentiality pertaining to what is included in the agreement of purchase and sale ought to be looked at very carefully.

Often governments and representatives of Government Departments will say without ample justification if there is the slightest doubt, "We are going to earmark this as confidential. Therefore, it ought not to be referred to or included in the Act itself." An impact study should be the first step the Minister ought to proceed under and that that impact study should be shared with Members of Parliament. Perhaps my comment may not be valid in that the Minister may in fact appear before the committe and in his usual articulate way answer those questions and in fact table an impact study. Perhaps he could rise in his place today to explain whether or not one has been conducted and, if so, whether Hon. Members will receive copies of it.

● (1250)

The Bill indicates that the terms and conditions of the sale are to be approved by the Governor in Council. It is my understanding that the deal has been consummated. Would the Minister table, with the consent of the other party, the terms of the agreement? I should like to return to Section 99 of the Financial Administration Act which indicates, if my memory serves me correctly, that the Government of Canada gives a directive to Crown corporations through the auspices of their boards of directors. I would like to ask the Minister whether there has been such a directive and, if so, whether he will table it. That is not to suggest that it will contain each and every item in the agreement of purchase and sale, however it may provide us, as Members of Parliament, with a better understanding and a clearer view of some of the general subject matters touched upon by the Minister in his dealings with the purchaser. The Minister has been in the Chamber a lot longer than I have.

Mr. Baker: Too long.

Mr. Dingwall: Some may say: "Too long". I would not necessarily agree with that; we will have to wait and see. However, in the spirit of a good debate and in the spirit of being knowledgeable of the subject matter, I think it would be helpful if parliamentarians could see the items to which I referred. It would be helpful to us not only in terms of this particular debate, but they could be used as well in future debates. I should like to know, at the earliest convenience of the Minister, whether a directive pursuant to Section 99 of the Financial Administration Act has been given to this particular corporation and, if so, whether he will table it.

My final point concerns the board of directors of Northern Transportation Company Limited. There are specific provisions in the Bill to exclude certain provisions of the Canada Business Corporations Act. However, could the Minister elaborate at some point in the proceedings on why the board of directors seems to have been prohibited or excluded from the sale which is taking place? I have yet to hear a reasonable explanation as to why it would be excluded. Pursuant to the Canada Business Corporations Act and to the Crown Corporations Act, members of boards of directors are liable for the actions of Crown corporations.

I hope the Minister will answer my concerns relating to Bill C-53, for I believe they are important for the purposes of debating the subject matter at hand. It could be argued effectively that they could have effect upon subsequent sales of Crown corporations and how the formats of Bills will be drawn up. I do not want the Minister or his departmental officials to use the old adage that some of this information is confidential and therefore they ought not to include the name of the purchaser, that they have already consummated the deal and ought not to include it because it may have an effect 99 years down the road. I think we have to be a little more aggressive, a little more liberal, in making certain that legislation, whether it be this Bill or subsequent ones, is right, just and in the best interests of Canadians.

I am not clear as to the mechanics of the loan which will allegedly be written off by the Government, nor its exact dollar amount. I think the figure of $24 million has been used, but if there is additional information available on that aspect, I hope the Minister in his wisdom will share it with Hon. Members while he is present in the House today. I hope the terms and conditions of the sale approved by the Governor in Council will be explained either here today or referred to the standing committee for examination. It is important for Canadians to know these terms and conditions, not 10 years after the sale has been finalized, but at the same time the sale takes place.

I know there are a number of consequential amendments to the Canada Development Corporation Act, the Financial Administation Act and others, which will flow from this particular piece of legislation. I am happy this Bill is before the House. I agree with its general thrust, the selling of a Crown corporation. I hope the Minister, in all his wisdom, will take into account some of my concerns regarding the sale of Crown properties.

Mr. George Baker (Gander-Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a few comments about this Bill and the statements which have been made so far in the Chamber today. I agree with the comments of speakers on both sides of the House concerning the advisability of this piece of legislation, but I should like to take exception to some remarks which were made in a philosophical way about the policy of the former Government as it related to this Bill. I can see no inconsistency with the former Government when it initiated this legislation, but I saw some inconsistency in the comments of the Hon. Member who represents this area of the country, particularly in his argument justifying the fact that the Government brought forth this Bill. In effect, that Hon. Member said that a member of the New Democratic Party showed a patronizing attitude when he talked about the needs of people in northern areas and that those people could supply their own transportation companies, that they were well equipped to do so. I do not doubt that at all. I do not doubt the wisdom of the Government in bringing forward the legislation.

I represent a relatively northern area of the country and understand how seasons change—that sometimes it is necessary to use snowmobiles or aeroplanes to transport goods and other times it is necessary to use trucks. It must be borne in mind that the profitable part of this operation in northern Canada, as the Hon. Member outlined, is the transportation of goods and services to the oil industry.

There is another element here that I am confident would have been explained in a much more thorough manner by the former Minister of Transport had he been in the position today of having this Bill about to go through the House of Commons. It is that the Government of Canada has a real responsibility for the transportation of goods and services. It has a responsibility to make sure that when it brings in legislation like this that it is going to protect people who make use of that transportation service, whether or not it be for the transportation of fuel, as is the case with this transportation network we are talking about today. In other words, when you get down to the human element of people who are living in northern areas who depend upon a transportation system for their fuel or for their food or for any other commodity, that has to be borne in mind by the Government of Canada. What I am talking about is direct subsidization or indirect subsidization to that particular carrier.

It seems as if the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) only has one thing on his mind when he talks in the House of Commons about changing the structure of transportation in this country. To him the bottom line is saving money for the Government of Canada. That goes across all boundaries of philosophy. One cannot say, for example, that this Minister of Transport or the Government of Canada is anxious to get rid of Crown corporations. When it seems that it can save money by creating a Crown corporation for transportation purposes, it does it. For example, in the November statement the transportation company called CN Marine is being made into a Crown corporation to save the Government of Canada $20 million or $40 million a year.

The main element in legislation introduced in this House, to accomplish what the Government wants to accomplish, that should be borne in mind is how it affects people, not so much the oil companies that it serves or big business that it serves, not so much that portion of the transportation system that snows a profit to the transportation company but that portion of the system that affects people. It should also be borne in mind who these people are. These people are, in most of our isolated and northern areas, primary producers of one sort or another. They could be trappers, fishermen or loggers, but they are people.

If one adds up what the Government of Canada has done as far as the northern areas are concerned, it has to be looked at from the point of view of how much the transportation costs are being increased. How can any operator today budget, for instance, for the increase on the tax on fuel that was recently brought in in the Budget? Considering services to the general public, it was not beneficial in the northern areas to have the postal Crown corporation cut back the number of hours of the small post offices from 40 to 30.

My main interjection in this debate is that under the former Government, I am confident there would have been guarantees given to the people affected by any legislation that would have been brought forward. The Government of Canada would say that perhaps that was a waste of money and that perhaps it should be getting away from subsidizing services to the general public. That is the bottom line, is it not, of any Government, service to the people of Canada and not necessarily for a company to make a profit at the end of the year?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Transport.

FISHERIES ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Thursday, May 23, consideration of Bill C-32, an Act to amend the Fisheries Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Forestry, and Motion No. 1 (Mr. Skelly) (p. 4983).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We are now on Motion No. 1. The Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) had the floor, but he is not here.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) has an all-Party agreement.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) on a point of order.

Mr. Henderson: I think the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans has an all-Party agreement. I do not see the official fisheries critic for the New Democratic Party here at this time. However, I think the Minister has a statement to make and I will put the time to him.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, the matter to which my friend alluded is correct. There is an understanding between the Government and the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party as to how to dispsose of this Bill in short order. My only concern, and I say this to the House Leader for the New Democratic Party, is that the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) is not in the Chamber at the moment. If the Hon. House Leader for the New Democratic Party wishes me to go ahead and outline what I think the understanding is, I will do so.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I apologize, my colleague had to go to his office for a moment. We called him to tell him that the Bill was coming up. Unfortunately, he has not been able to get back. He is in the Confederation Building and he should be here momentarily. It would be fine for the Minister to proceed.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of my friend.

Let me put it very succinctly. Bill C-32 amends the present Fisheries Act and clarifies certain powers of the Minister. The Bill has been before the House and in committee since the first week in March and, of course, it is now at report stage. An agreement has been reached between all Parties concerned that with the addition of several amendments to Bill C-32 as presented to the House there will be a further provision which will have the effect of what could loosely be called a sunset provision. The effect will be that Bill C-32 as amended and as passed by this House today, if that indeed happens and I think it will, will cease to have any force and effect on December 31, 1986. The effect also of the so-called sunset provision will be that unless the present provisions of Bill C-32 are re-enacted before that date or unless some of the provisions of Bill C-32, perhaps with other additions or deletions, are re-enacted by December 31, 1986, then the present provisions of the Fisheries Act will spring back into effect.

• (1310)

What it means, put very simply, is that it has been agreed that we will pass these provisions and they will have effect until December 31, 1986, unless changed by legislation before then, and that if that is not done, we will be back to where we began with the present clauses of the present Fisheries Act.

The Government has agreed to this unusual procedure on the basis of common sense. It was clear that members of the New Democratic Party did not want to allow this Bill to go through as presently constituted, and as a consequence, it would be impossible to legislate Bill C-32 before the close of this present parliamentary Session. That would mean that I as Minister of Fisheries would be in a position of leaving at risk my legal authority during the summer months and until such date as the House could next attend to this particular piece of legislation.

When I say that this procedure has been agreed to on the basis of common sense, I think that that is an appropriate way to describe it. I as Minister of Fisheries feel very strongly that it is better to have a temporary provision which at least establishes some stability with respect to the legal regime under which the Department must operate in the interests of the fishing community than it is to leave things at risk any longer. There has been some suggestion that in view of the Court of Appeal ruling which dissolved the injunction contained in Mr. Justice Collier's decision of last summer, there is no risk. It is my view and I think the view of other Members of the House that there is a risk. It is a risk to the welfare and interests of the fishing community that I, upon very careful consideration, am not prepared to take.

My hon. friend, the fisheries critic for the Official Opposition, is present in the House. I wish that my friend, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly), were here as well. However, I think the effect of this action would be that Motion No. 1 which stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River would be accepted. I wonder if I could, through you, Mr. Speaker, ask the Hon. Member if my understanding on that is correct? Is it correct that the amendment contained in Motion No. 1 would—I am sorry, I have made an error.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Minister. I understand that there will be amendments forthcoming on motions that are grouped, being Motions Nos. 2 to 9. However, perhaps the Chair could dispose of Motion No. 1.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, I think it would be better if we outlined the understanding first. Put simply, the understanding I have is that Motions Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 would be withdrawn by my friend, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River. I wonder if the Hon. House Leader for the New Democratic Party could listen carefully to this. Motion No. 11 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River contains the suggestion of a sunset clause. Unfortunately, on legal advice and the advice of the drafters of the legislation, I find that we cannot proceed that way, and I will explain what we have to substitute for it. I would suggest that Motion No. 11 be withdrawn also on my undertaking which has been discussed with the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River, that I would introduce a motion which will have exactly the same effect. I see that the Hon. House Leader agrees with that?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to accept the undertaking of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) that the motion that he will introduce on behalf of the Government will achieve exactly the same end as Motion No. 11 would have achieved. Motion No. 11 would have had the effect of creating a termination date for the existing legislation and would have enabled the Government then to bring forward additional, supplementary or even new legislation in the year 1986.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out, though, that there is one thing that should be brought to the attention of Hon. Members and that is that Motion No. 11 refers to the date December 31, 1985, as being the expiry date. By agreement between myself, the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River and the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson), the expiry date will be December 31, 1986. That is understood.

Mr. Deans: I am told by a nod that that is true.

Mr. Fraser: Mr. Speaker, that leaves us with Motion No. 3 and Motion No. 12. It is agreed that Motion No. 3 introduced by the Hon. Member for Egmont will be passed, but with a change. The change proposed in the motion put by the Hon. Member for Egmont presently reads:

—and, subject to paragraph (a), taking into consideration the interests of user groups and after consultation,—

I understand that my hon. friends are prepared to accept a change to that which would read:

—and on the basis of consultation—

I think that that has been agreed upon by my friend, the Hon. Member for Egmont, and the Hon. House Leader for the New Democratic Party.

Motion No. 12 which is a motion standing in my name is accepted by all Parties and the change to the Bill proposed by that motion reads as follows:

4. Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any existing aboriginal or treaty rights of the aboriginal peoples of Canada.

In addition, I wish to move a motion, a copy of which is held by my friend, the Hon. Member for Egmont and the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party as well, I believe. This is the motion which in effect makes possible—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does this mean that the Chair could dispose of the other motions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On Motion No. 1, is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) to withdraw the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 1 (Mr. Skelly) withdrawn.

• (1320)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall Hon. Members who put Motion No. 2 to Motion No. 9, with the exception of Motion No. 3, be allowed to withdraw?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motions Nos. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9 withdrawn.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont) moved:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-32, be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 19 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"and, subject to paragraph (a), taking into consideration the interests of user groups, and on the basis of consultation, to maintain and develop the eco-".

He said: Mr. Speaker, with respect to Motion No. 3, I just want to clarify that we do have an all-Party agreement that the Minister make the change from "and after consultation" to "and on the basis of consultation". This is agreeable to our Party and I believe if you ask for unanimous consent, you will find it forthcoming, Mr. Speaker. We in the Official Opposition are quite happy with that change.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans) moved:

That all the words after the word "groups" in the motion standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Egmont be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

"and on the basis of consultation, to maintain and develop the eco-".

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt Motion No. 3 as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed to.

Motion No. 3, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Hon. Member for Comox-Powell River (Mr. Skelly) to withdraw Motions Nos. 10 and 11?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motions Nos. 10 and 11 withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Fraser) to move a motion to replace Motion No. 11?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Fraser: I believe you have a copy, Mr. Speaker, of what is in effect a replacement to Motion No. 11. I am wondering if, in the order of chronology, we might deal with Motion No. 12 first?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Minister to proceed with Motion No. 12 prior to Motion No. 11?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans) moved:

Motion No. 12

That Bill C-32, be amended by adding immediately after line 40 at page 2 the following:

"4. Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any existing aboriginal or treaty rights of the aboriginal peoples of Canada."

He said: Mr. Speaker, in the interests of time, I am not going to say more than a few words about this particular motion except to draw to the attention of the House the fact that this motion makes it abundantly clear that whatever rights the native people of Canada, our fellow citizens, have as of the date of the passing of this legislation are inviolate, and I can only repeat the words of the motion which are "nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to abrogate or derogate from any existing aboriginal or treaty rights of the aboriginal peoples of Canada". I believe we have complete agreement with respect to this motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 12 agreed to.

Hon. John A. Fraser (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans) moved:

Motion No. 11

That Bill C-32 be amended by adding, immediately after line 40 on page 2, the following:

"5. (1) The definition "fish" in section 2 of the Fisheries Act, as enacted by subsection 1(1) of this Act, is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

" "fish" includes shellfish, crustaceans, marine animals and the eggs, spawn, spat and juvenile stages of fish, shellfish, crustaceans and marine animals;"

(2) The definition "fishery" in section 2 of the Fisheries Act, as enacted by subsection 1(2) of this Act, is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

6. Section 2.1 of the Fisheries Act, as enacted by section 2 of this Act, is repealed.

7. Paragraph 34(m) of the Fisheries Act as enacted by section 3 of this Act, is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(m) authorizing a person engaged or employed in the administration or enforcement of this Act to vary any close time or fishing quota that has been fixed by the regulations."

8. Section 4 of this Act is repealed.

9. Sections 5 to 8 shall come into force on January 1, 1987."
