The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

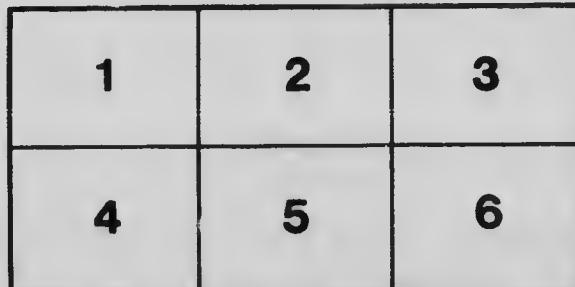

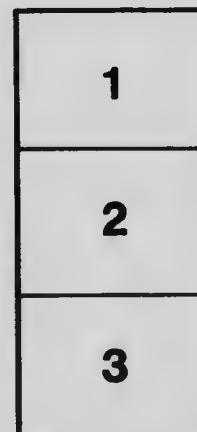

National Library of Canada

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▽ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Bibliothèque nationale du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

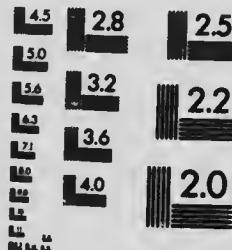

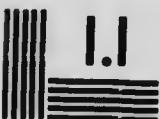

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier piat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second piat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporta une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▽ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

PREFACE

THESE texts have been prepared specially for use by young students in the matriculation classes of high schools. Conciseness and point have been the aim of the compiler, only such information being given as the practical teacher would deem it wise to bring to the attention of his pupil. The book does not pretend at all to be exhaustive. The question has been, "What can the pupil learn?"

In the text of Caesar all long quantities have been marked in Book IV. This guidance, together with what the pupil ought to have learned from his Introductory Grammar, should be enough to enable him to "walk alone" fairly well during the rest of his studies. He should know that a vowel is short before final t, long (according to the precision of the Roman method) before nf and ns; that final o and i are nearly always long. He should know the ordinary long vowels of grammatical inflection, such as in vocābat, urbēs, etc. He should know the vowels of such words as amicus, lēgātus, dēspērō, rēx, rēgis, rēgō, rēgis, dūx, dūcis, dūcō, dūcis. The idea of marking all long quantities is a good one—for beginners, also for many teachers who have not in their youth made an accurate study of quantity. But surely the beginner should soon be allowed to feel that he has learned something and to experience the delicious sensation of knowing. Help he certainly should have, as he goes on, in things unknown. But let us give his memory a chance.

In Caesar, Book V, therefore, quantities are marked only in special cases. In the Vergil quantities have been marked in order to facilitate the pupil's progress in scanning.

In editing the text, the aim has been to follow the commonly accepted version, with the tendency to yield to the authority of Meusel for Caesar and Ribbeck for Vergil. Only important variations are given in footnotes.

In framing the exercises on Caesar, the objects kept in view have been simplicity and drill, the intention being to fix the facts of vocabulary and grammar, in the mind of the reader.

The notes have been planned to help in difficulties of translation and to cultivate the habit of studying syntax.

Every teacher and every school library should have good recent editions of Caesar and Vergil complete. The following are recommended:—

Caesar: Allen and Greenough, reëdited by Greenough, D'Ooge, and Daniel (Ginn & Co.); Harper and Tolman (American Book Co.); (Kelsey and Harkness are valuable, but older editions). Vergil's Aeneid: Knapp (Scott, Foresman & Co.) and Carter (Appleton). These books have been consulted in the preparation of the present text.

The grammatical references in this edition can be concisely looked up in Hagarty's "Introductory Latin Grammar." For fuller reference every teacher and honor student should have the latest standard Latin grammars, particularly Hale and Buck, Allen and Greenough (new), and, of course, the practical and concise Bennett.

INTRODUCTION

CAIUS JULIUS CAESAR

100 B.C. — 44 B.C.

1. Life of Caesar. — Caius Julius Caesar (Gaius Iulius Cesar) was born in 100 B.C., or according to some authorities two years earlier. His family was aristocratic and claimed descent from Iulus, son of Aeneas, the Trojan founder of the Roman nation. Caesar was well educated in childhood and by his mother carefully trained in the simple old Roman virtues.

A Democrat

From his earliest years he was identified with the democratic cause led by his uncle Marius. He defied the aristocratic leader, Sulla, by refusing to divorce Cornelia, daughter of Cinna, a follower of Marius. Sulla said he saw in him "many Mariuses."

A Soldier and Orator

After Sulla's triumph in 82 B.C., Caesar barely escaped with his life, and, finding military service in Asia, remained away from Rome. In 78 B.C., on Sulla's death, Caesar returned to Rome and prosecuted Dolabella, a corrupt governor of Macedonia. He won such fame for oratory in this case that he set out for Rhodes to perfect himself in rhetoric. On his way thither he was captured by pirates. On paying his ransom of fifty talents ($50,000), he laughingly promised to come back and crucify his captors, a promise which he soon fulfilled.

A Rising Politician

On returning to Rome he devoted himself to politics and secured promotion through the usual grades of office. He was Military Tribune in 78 B.C., Quaestor (paymaster of the forces) in Spain in 68 B.C., and Curule Aedile (commissioner of public buildings, police, and games) in 65 B.C. In the latter office he roused great enthusiasm among the people by his lavish expenditure of money upon games and buildings, but plunged himself into enormous debt.

He spared no pains to advance himself politically; was elected Pontifex Maximus (high priest) in 63 B.C., and became Praetor (presiding judge in the law courts and magistrate next in rank to the Consuls) in 63 B.C.

In 68 B.C. his wife Cornelia died, and the following year he married Pompeia, granddaughter of Sulla and cousin of Pompey the Great. After serving as Praetor he went to Spain for a year as Propraetor and returned with enough money to pay his debts.

Triumvir

By a "political deal" he became Consul in 59 B.C. Caesar formed what has been called a Triumvirate (or coalition of three influential men) with Pompey, the military idol of Rome and leader of the Optimates or aristocratic faction, and Crassus, the wealthy representative of the commercial middle class. In virtue of the agreement thus entered into, Caesar, after holding the consulship, was to go to Gaul as proconsul or governor of the Roman province of Transalpine and Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum for five years. To cement the union, Pompey married Julia, Caesar's daughter. As consul, Caesar accomplished many reforms in the interest of the people. He then went to Gaul and soon afterwards his term of office was extended to ten years. As proconsul he held military command and acted as magistrate of the assizes.

Campaigns in Gaul

For eight or nine years (58 B.C. to 49 B.C.) he campaigned in Gaul. Legally he exercised authority over only the southeastern portion of Gaul, but he soon found pretexts for asserting his power as far as the Atlantic and the Rhine. He compelled the Helvetians (or Swiss) to return home when about to seize the lands of their neighbours; drove the German prince Ariovistus out of Gaul, thus gaining the friendship of the Aeduans (Bellum Gallicum, Book I); conquered the Belgae, the north-western third of the Gallic nation (Book II); subdued the Veneti and thus brought the Atlantic coast under Roman sway (Book III); crossed to Britain twice and overawed its inhabitants; built a bridge across the Rhine and taught the Germans that they must stay at home (Books IV and V); quelled several revolts, and finally, after the desperate siege of Alesia, crushed a great insurrection under Vercingetorix (Books VI and VII).

During the winters between these campaigns it was his custom to return to Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum and hold the assizes. He was thus able to be near Rome and keep alive his political influence in the city.

Quarrel with Pompey

In 54 B.C. Julia died, and in 53 B.C. Crassus was slain in battle in the East. Two links between Caesar and Pompey were thus broken. Pompey's friends of the Senate, moreover, were determined to crush Caesar and prevent him from securing the consulship again in 48 B.C., when he would be at liberty to return to Rome. He was ordered to disband his legions and return as a private citizen. He refused unless Pompey gave up his command. On Pompey's refusal, Caesar defied the Senate, crossed the river Rubicon, which separated his province from Italy proper, and at the head of his legions marched on Rome, receiving homage on every side. Pompey, his army, and the senators fled in dismay to Greece. Caesar seized the government and prepared to follow Pompey. After subduing Spain he crossed over to Greece in 48 B.C., and at Pharsalia defeated Pompey's splendid army of 50,000 men with his own ill-fed and badly equipped force of 23,000.

Master of Rome

Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was murdered by the king, who thought to please Caesar. Caesar, however, showed a humane spirit towards his enemies. He wept over the loss of life on the battlefield and turned away in horror from the dead face of his fallen rival. Caesar followed up his victory, subduing Asia Minor in the short campaign about which he wrote the famous letter, "Veni, vidi, vici." By his victories at Thapsus in Africa (46 B.C.) and at Munda in Spain (45 B.C.) the Pompeian party was crushed. Returning to Rome, Caesar was vested with supreme power, though all the forms of the republic were kept up.

His Death

Not long was he to enjoy the power ambition and military success had placed in his hands. He strove hard to reform the State and by the exercise of his arbitrary authority removed many evils. Among the more important of his reforms was the Julian Calendar. Enemies soon sprang up. Partly in jealousy and partly through mistaken zeal for republicanism when it was no longer possible, they accused him of aiming at kingly power. A band of conspirators, among whom was Brutus, his trusted friend, struck him down with daggers on the Ides (15th) of March, 44 B.C., as he sat hearing petitions in the Senate chamber at the foot of Pompey's statue.

2. Caesar's Character and Person. — Caesar was great as a politician and statesman, great as a soldier and general, great as an orator, great as a scholar and man of letters. Everything he attempted, he did thoroughly. He was shrewd, self-possessed, dignified yet charming in demeanour and of commanding presence. He was "ambitious, but nobly so." He coveted power, but aimed to use it for his country's good. In war he was merciless even to women and children where treachery had been shown himself; but in the hour of his triumph over political enemies he showed a most forgiving spirit. He was the idol of his soldiers. In private life his earlier career was marred by vices prevalent in his time.

In appearance, he is described as tall and slender, with sharp features, sinewy neck, large nose and lips, and keen dark eyes. Physically he was, as a result of athletic training, capable of enduring great hardship and fatigue.

3. Caesar's Literary Work. — His narrative of the Gallic wars was merely a collection of field notes, written hastily in his spare time as he conducted his campaigns. Yet they are regarded as a perfect model of the elegance, lucidity, and severe simplicity that characterized the best Latin prose. Not at all ornate and entirely unimpassioned, one would scarcely believe they were written by an orator as a record of events which he hoped would bring him to distinction and power.

He wrote seven books on the Gallic war (Commentarii de Bello Gallico); an eighth was added by Hirtius. Caesar also wrote three books on his Civil War with Pompey and is said to have written a treatise on grammar. Cicero praises the purity and simplicity of his style as a writer, and as a orator he places him first. Quintilian says that if Caesar had devoted himself to public speaking he would have rivalled Cicero.

4. Caesar's Military Achievements. — In his eight campaigns in Gaul Caesar "stormed more than 800 towns and subdued 300 tribes, engaged with more than 3,000,000 men, swept over a million human beings from the earth, and took a million more prisoners to be sold into slavery." As a consequence of the terror with which he inspired the Gauls, Britons, and Germans, the tide of barbarian invasion of Italy from the North was turned back for four centuries. Besides these conquests he asserted his personal authority over Spain, Africa, and Asia Minor.

5. Caesar's Army. — Caesar had in Gaul at first five legions and later eight. The legionary soldiers were

Romans or Italians. Besides these he employed a large number of native Gauls as cavalry, and some slingers and archers from Crete and other countries. The organization may be described as follows:—

The legion consisted of ten cohorts, each about 360 strong. The cohort was divided into three maniples, and each maniple into two centuries. Although the century, as its name implies, originally consisted of 100 men, in Caesar's time it was but 60 strong. Of course the number varied through the vicissitudes of war. Losses were not made up in the legion. When new troops were required new legions were levied. To each legion was attached a body of about 300 native cavalry, bringing the total up to nearly 4000 men.

6. The Officers in Caesar's army were as follows:—

1. Imperator or Dux, Caesar himself, commander-in-chief or general.

2. Legati, staff officers or lieutenants-general, men of senatorial rank appointed by the Senate. They were the commander's deputies, being placed at the head of detachments of one or more legions.

3. The Quaestor, or paymaster general. He was also Commissariat officer and quartermaster-general. It was his duty, besides administering the finances of the province, to provide the army with food, pay, clothing, arms, equipment, and shelter. He could also take command as a combatant officer.

4. Tribuni Militum, or military tribunes. There were six in each legion and they ranked somewhat the same as colonels with us. Each was on duty for two months. Under Caesar they were not intrusted with tactical command, but looked after routine and internal economy, such as enrolment, supplies, courts-martial, etc. They were young men selected for their social standing rather than their military knowledge.

5. Centuriones, or non-commissioned officers, about the same as sergeants, plebeians chosen from the ranks for merit. They commanded the centuries and were therefore 60 in number to each legion. They went through a regular gradation of promotion. The chief centurion of the legion was called primipilus, and held a position in the legion similar to that of the sergeant-major of a regiment.

7. Baggage.—(a) The heavy baggage of the legion was called impedimenta and was conveyed in carts (carri) or on beasts of burden (jumenta). A legion with its baggage collected at its own rear under a small guard was said to be impedita or encumbered. Where several legions were marching in the presence of the enemy the baggage of the whole body was collected at some distance in the rear, and the legions were then said to be expeditae, unencumbered.

(b) The personal "kit" of each soldier, weighing about sixty pounds, was done up into a pack called sarcinae and carried by means of a pole over the shoulder. It contained, besides weapons and armour (tela, gladius, scutum, galea, lorica), food for two weeks (usually unground grain), cooking utensils, trenching tools, and two rampart stakes.

8. A Roman Camp.—Caesar's battles were won as much by the spade and pick as by sword and lance. Before going into battle and always when halting for the night, a carefully prepared fortification (castra) was made, this operation usually occupying three or four hours. A trench (fossa) was dug around the four sides of a square or oblong. The earth was thrown inside to form the rampart (vallum). There were four openings or gates (portae). The general's quarters, called the praetorium, was near the front gate. The legions and cavalry were drawn up in regular lines, with "streets" (viae) between them. The following diagram illustrates the camp:—

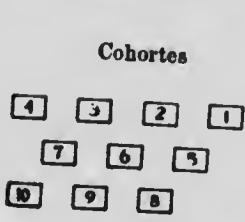

9. Method of Fighting. — Of course Caesar's tactics varied with circumstances, but the ordinary battle-line was the acies triplex, a threefold line with the four senior and best cohorts of each legion in front, and three in each of the rear lines. Each cohort to the rear covered a space equal to its own front between the cohorts in front.

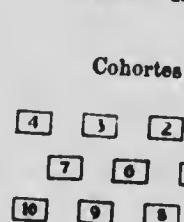

For instance:—

² Centurio posterior.

The senior centurion of the legion was the primipilus. The junior centurion was the posterior of Maniple III of Cohort X.

Strength of the cohort: 36 front (12 files to each manipule), each file ten men deep = 360. The cohort was in size like a small battalion, the legion like a division or brigade. The legion, however, was the smallest unit of tactical command.

BOOK IV

SUMMARY OF THE PREVIOUS NARRATIVE

Book I. — In 58 B.C. Caesar suppressed the Helvetii, who were seeking to leave home. He also drove the German prince Ariovistus out of Gaul.

Book II. — In 57 B.C. he overawed the Belgae, who had combined to resist his interference in Gaul. In this campaign he won the hardest battle of his life against the Nervii.

Book III. — In 56 B.C. he engaged in a naval war with the Veneti, a rugged tribe of the Atlantic coast, and one of his lieutenants received the submission of Aquitania, the only part of Gaul remaining to be conquered.

Book IV, 1-20. — In the early part of the summer of 55 B.C. Caesar defeated two German tribes who had, after being driven out of their own country by the Suevi, seized upon lands on the Gallic side of the Rhine and were making alliances with the neighbouring Gauls. He then built a bridge across the Rhine, and after crossing and making a demonstration of a few days against the Germans, returned and destroyed the bridge. His object was merely to hold Gaul in security from outside interference. For this reason he now decided to invade Britain and punish the inhabitants for giving aid to their kinsmen, the Gauls.

C. JULII CAESARIS
COMMENTARII
DE BELLO GALLICO

LIBER QUARTUS

August, 55 B.C. — Caesar had spent the earlier part of the summer subduing the Germans north of the Rhine. He now prepares to invade Britain.

(In Book IV all long routes are marked.)

20. ¹ The common reading is majorum.

21. Ad haec cognoscenda, priusquam periculum faceret, idoneum esse arbitratus C. Volusenum cum navi longa praemittit. Huic mandat, ut exploratis omnibus rebus ad se quam primum revertatur. Ipse cum omnibus copiis in Morinos proficiuntur, quod inde erat brevissimus in Britanniam tructus. Huc navis undique ex finitimis regionibus et quam superiore aestate ad Veneticum bellum efficerat classem jubet convenire. Interim consilio ejus cognito et per mercatores perlato ad Britannos a compluribus Insulae civitatibus ad eum legati veniunt, qui policeantur obsidem dare atque imperio populi Romani obtemperare. Quibus auditis liberaliter pollicitus hortatusque, ut in ea sententia permanarent, eos domum remittit et cum illis una Commium, quem ipse Atrebatis superatis regem ibi constituerat, cuius et virtutem et consilium probabat et quem sibi fidem esse arbitrabatur, cuiusque auctoritas in his regionibus magna habebatur, mittit. Huic imperat, quas possit, adeat civitates horteturque, ut populi Romani fidem sequantur, seque celeriter eo ventrum nuntiet. Volusenus perspectis regionibus omnibus, quantum ei facultatis dari potuit, qui navi egredi ac se barbaris committere non auderet, quinto die ad Caesarem revertitur quaeque ibi perspexisset renuntiat.

22. Dum in his locis Caesar navium parandarum causam moratur, ex magna parte Morinorum ad eum legati venerunt, qui se de superioris temporis consilio excusarent, quod homines barbari et nostrae consuetudinis imperiti bellum populō Romano fecissent, seque ea, quae imperasset, facturos pollicerentur. Hoc sibi Caesar satis opportune accidisse arbitratus, quod neque post tergum hostem relinquere volebat neque bellum gerendi propter annus tempus facultatem habebat neque has tantularum rerum occupatiōnēs Britanniae antepōnendās jūdicābat, māgnum 10

Caesar's landing

24. At barbarī, cōnsiliō Rōmānōruīn cognitō, praemissō equitātū et essedāriīs, quō plērunique genere in proeliīs ūtī cōsuērunt, reliquīs cōpiīs subsecutī, nostrōs nāvibus ēgredī prohibēbant. Erat ob hās causās summa difficultās, 5 quod nāvēs propter māgnitūdinem nisi in altō cōnstituī nōn poterant; mīlitibus autem ignōtīs locīs, impeditīs manibus, māgnō et gravī onere armōrum oppressīs simul et dē nāvibus dēsiliendum et in fluctib⁹ cōsistendum et cum hostibus erat pugnandum, cum illī aut ex āridō aut paulum 10 in aquam prōgressī omnibus membrīs expeditīs, nōtissimīs locīs, audācter tēla conicerent et equos insuēfactōs incitārent. Quibus rēbus nostrī perterritī atque hūjus omnīnō generis pugnae imperitī nōn eādem alacritātē ac studiō, quō in pedestrib⁹ ūtī proeliīs cōsuērant, ūtēbantur.

25. Quod ubi Caesar animadvertisit, nāvēs longās, quārum et speciēs erat barbarīs inūsitatior et mōtus ad ūsum expeditior, paulum removērī ab onerāriīs nāvibus et rēmīs incitārī et ad latus apertum hostium cōnstituī atque inde 5 fundīs, sagittīs, tormentīs hostēs prōpellī ac submovērī jussit; quae rēs māgnō ūsuī nostrīs fuit. Nam, et nāvium figūrā et rēmōrum mōtū et inūsitatō genere tormentōrum permōtī, barbarī cōnstitērunt ac paulum modo pedem retulērunt. Atque nostrīs mīlitibus cunctantibus, māximē 10 propter altitūdinem maris, q̄r̄ decimae legiōnis aquilam ferēbat, contestātus deōs, ut ea rēs legiōni fēlīciter evenī-

Hōc cum vōce māgnā dixisset, sē ex nāvī prōjēcit atque in hostēs aquilam ferre ¹⁵ coepit. Tum nostrī cohortatī inter sē, nē tantum dēdecus admitterētur, ūniversī ex nāvī dēsiluērunt. Hōs item ex proximis nāvibus cum cōspexissent, subsecūtī hostibus adpropinquāvērunt.

26. Pugnātum est ab utrīsque āriter. Nostrī tamen, quod neque ordinēs servāre neque firmiter insistere neque signa subsequi poterant, atque alius aliā ex nāvī, quibuscumque signis occurrerat, sē aggregabat, māgnopere perturbabantur; hostēs vērō, nōtis omnibus vadīs, ubi ex ⁵ lītore aliquōs singulārēs ex nāvī ēgredientēs cōspexerant, incitatīs equīs impedītōs adoriēbantur, plūrēs paucōs circumsistēbant, aliī ab latere apertō in ūniversōs tēla coniciēbant. Quod cum animadvertisset Caesar, scaphās longārum nāvium, item speculatōria nāvigia militibus com- ¹⁰ plērī jussit et, quōs labōrantēs cōspexerat, hīs subsidia submittēbat. Nostrī, simul in āridō cōstitērunt, suis omnibus cōsecūtīs in hostēs impetum fēcērunt atque eōs in fugam dedērunt, neque longius prōsequi potuērunt, quod equitēs cursum tenēre atque Insulam capere nōn ¹⁵ potuerant. Hōc ūnum ad prīstinam fortūnām Caesari dēfuit.

Britons sue for peace

27. Hostēs proeliō superātī, simul atque sē ex fugā recēpērunt, statim ad Caesarem lēgātōs dē pāce misērunt; obsidēs datūrōs quaeque imperāsset factūrōs polliciti sunt. Unā cum hīs lēgātīs Commius Atrebās vēnit, quem suprā dēmōnstrāveram ā Caesare in Britanniam praemissum. ⁵ Hunc illi ē nāvī ēgressum, cum ad eōs ūrātōris modō

Britons renew hostilities

30. Quibus rēbus cognitis p̄incipēs Britanniae, qui post proelium ad Caesarem convēnerant, inter sē collocuti cum equitēs et nāvēs et frūmentum Rōmānis dēesse intel-legerent et paucitātem militum ex castrōrum exiguitate cognōscerent (quae hōc erant etiam angustiōra, quod sine impedimentis Caesar legiōnēs trānsportāverat) optimum factū esse dūxerunt, rebelliōne factā, frūmentō commeātū-que nostrōs prohibēre et rem in hiemem prōducere, quod, hīs superātis aut reditū interclūsis, nēminem posteā bellī

Itaque rūrsus, conjūratiōne factā, paulatim ex castris discēdere et suōs clam ex agrīs dēducere coepērunt.

31. At Caesar, etsī nōndum eōruin cōsilia cognōverat, tamen et ex ēventū nāvium suārum et ex eō, quod obsidēs dare intermisserant, fore id, quod accidit, suspicābatur.
Itaque ad omnēs cāsūs subsidia comparābat. Nam et frūmentum ex agrīs cotidiē in castra cōferēbat et quae gravissimē adflictae erant nāvēs, eārum māteriā atque aere

The Roman foraging party attacked

32. Dum ea geruntur, legiōne ex cōnsuētūdine ūna frūmentātum missā, quae appellābātur septima, neque ullā ad id tempus bellī suspicioēe interpositā, cum pars hominum in agrīs remanēret, pars etiam in castra ventitāret, i-5 qui prō portīs castrōrum in statiōne erant, Caesarī nūntiāvērunt pulvērem mājōrem, quam cōnsuētūdō ferret, in ea parte vidērī, quam in partem legiō iter fēcisset. Caesar id, quod erat, suspicātus, aliquid novī ā barbarīs initū cōsiliī, cohortēs, quae in statiōnibus erant, sēcum in eam 10 parte proficiſcī, ex reliquis duās in statiōnem cohortēs succēdere, reliquās armārī et cōfestim sēsē subsequī jussit.
Cum paulō longius a castrīs prōcessisset, suōs ab hostib⁹ premī atque aegrē sustinēre et, cōfertā legiōne, ex omnibus partibus tēla conicī animadvertisit. Nam quod, omni ex 15 reliquis partibus dēmessō frūmentō, pars ūna erat reliqua, suspicātī hostēs hūc nostrōs esse ventūrōs noctū in silvīs dēlituerant; tum dispersōs, dēpositīs armīs, in metendo occupātōs subitō adortī, paucīs interfectīs, reliquōs incertīs ōrdinibus perturbāverant, simul equitātū atque essedīs 20 circumdederant.

33. Genus hōc est ex essedīs pugnae. Prīmō per omnēs partēs perequitant et tēla coniciunt atque ipsō terrōre equōrum et strepitū rotārum ōrdinēs plērumque perturbant, et cum sē inter equitum turmās īsinuāvērunt, ex essedīs dēsiliunt et pedibus proeliantur. Aurīgæ interim paulātī ex proeliō excēdunt atque ita currūs conlocant, ut, sī illī a multitūdine hostium premantur, expeditum ad suōs recep-tum habeant. Ita mōbilitātem equitum, stabilitātem peditum in proeliis praestant, ac tantum ūsū cotidiānō et exercitatiōne efficiunt, uti in dēclivi ac praecipiti locō incitatōs equōs sustinēre et brevī moderāri ac flectere et per tēmōnem percurrere et in jugō insistere et sē inde in currūs citissimē recipere cōsuērint.

34. Quibus rēbus perturbātis nostris rovitāte pugnae tempore opportūnissimō Caesar auxilium tulit: namque ejus adventū hostēs cōstitērunt, nostri sē ex timōre recēperunt. Quō factō, ad lacessendū hostem et ad committendum proelium aliēnum esse tempus arbitrātus, suō sē locō continuit et, brevī tempore intermissō, in castra legiōnēs redūxit. Dum haec geruntur, nostris omnibus occupatīs, qui erant in agrīs reliquī discessērunt. Secūtae sunt continuōs complūrēs diēs tempestātēs, quae et nostrōs in castrīs continērent et hostem à pugnā prohibērent. Interim barbarī nūntiōs in omnēs partēs dūmīsērunt paucitātemque nostrōrum mīlitum suis praedicāvērunt, et, quanta praedae facienda atque in perpetuum sui liberandī facultās jarētur, sī Rōmānōs castrīs expulissent, dēmōn strāvērunt. His rēbus celeriter māgnā multitudine peditatūs equitatūsque coactā, ad castra vēnērunt.

Britons defeated in pitched battle. Caesar returns to Gaul

35. Caesar etsī idem, quod superiōribus diēbus accidērat, fore vidēbat, ut, sī essent hostēs pulsī, celeritāte perīulum effugerent, tamen nactus equites circiter trigintā quōs Commius Atrebās, dē quō ante dictum est, sēcum rānsportāverat, legiōnēs in aciē prō castrīs cōstituit. Commissō proeliō, diūtius nostrōrum mīlitum impetum hostēs ferre nōn potuērunt ac terga vertērunt. Quōs tantō patiō secūti, quantum cursū et virib⁹ efficere potuerunt, complūrēs ex iis occidērunt, deinde omnibus longi latēque aedificiis incēnsis sē in castra recēpērunt.

36. Eōdem diē lēgāti ab hostib⁹ missi ad Caesarem dēpāce vēnērunt. His Caesar numerum obsidū, quem ante imperāverat, duplicāvit eōsque in continentem addūci jussit, quod, propinquā diē aequinoctii, infirmis nāvibus, s̄ hiemī nāvigationem subiciendam nōn existimābat. Ipse idōneā tempestātem nactus, paulo post medianam noctem nāvēs solvit; quae omnēs incolumēs ad continentem pervēnērunt; sed ex iis onerariae duae eōsdem quōs reliqui portūs capere nōn potuērunt et paulo infra dēlatae sunt.

Treacherous attack by the Morini

37. Quibus ex nāvibus cum essent expositi militēs circiter trecēnti atque in castra contenderent, Morini (quōd Caesar in Britanniam proficiscēns pācātōs reliquerat), spē praedae adducti, pīmō nōn ita māgnō suōrum numerō circumstetērunt ac, sī sēsē interfici nōllent, arma pōnere jussērunt. Cum illi, orbe factō, sēsē dēfenderent, celeriter ad clāmōrem hominum circiter millia sex convēnērunt. Quā rē nūntiātā, Caesar omnēm ex castris equitātum suis auxiliō misit. Interim nostri militēs impetum hostium sustinuērunt atque amplius hōris quattuor fortissimē pugnāvērunt et, paucis vulneribus acceptis, complūrēs ex his occidērunt. Postea vērō quam equitātus noster in cōspectum vēnit, hostēs, abjectis armis, terga vertērunt māgnusque eōrum numerus est occīsus.

38. Caesar posterō diē T. Labiēnum lēgātum cum iis legiōnibus, quās ex Britanniā redūxerat, in Morinōs, qui rebelliōnem fēcerant, misit. Qui cum propter siccitatēs palūdum quō sē recipērent, nōn habērent, quō superiore annō perfugiō fuerant usi, omnēs ferē in potestātem La-⁵ biēni pervenērunt. At Q. Titurius et L. Cotta lēgāti, qui in Menapiōrum finēs legiōnēs duxerant, omnibus eōrum agris vāstatiſ, frūmentis succisiſ, aedificiis incensiſ, quod

Menapii sē omnēs in dēnsissimās silvās abdiderant, sē ad Caesarem recēperunt. Caesar in Belgis omnium legiōnum ¹⁰ hiberna cōstituit. Eō duae omnīnō civitātēs ex Britanniā obsidēs misērunt, reliquae neglexērunt. His rēbus gestis, ex litteris Caesaris diērum vīginti supplicatiō a senātū dēcrēta est.

C. JULII CAESARIS
COMMENTARII

LIBER QUINTUS

54 B.C. — Fleet built for second invasion of Britain.

(N.B. — Hereafter quantities are marked only in special cases.)

1. L. Domitio, Ap. Claudio consulibus discēdēns ab hibernis Caesar in Italiam, ut quotannis facere consuērat, legatis imperat, quos legionibus praefererat, uti quam plūrimas possint¹ hieme nāves aedificandas veteresque reficiendas cūrent.¹ Earum mōdum fōrmamque dēmon-₅ strat. Ad celeritatem onerandi subductionesque² paulo facit hūmiliores, quam quibus in nostro mari ūti consuevimus, atque id eo magis, quod propter crēbras commūtationes aestuum minus māgnos ibi fluctūs fieri cognoverat; ad onera ac multitudinem jūmentorum transportandam₁₀ paulo lātiores, quam quibus in reliquis ūtimur maribus. Has omnes āctuārias imperat fieri, quam ad rem hūmilitas multum adjūvat. Ea, quae sunt usui ad armandas naves, ex Hispania adportari jūbet. Ipse, conventibus Galliae cīterioris perāctis, in Illyricum proficisciatur, quod a₁₅ Pirustis finitimam partem provinciae incursionibus vāstari audiebat. Eo cum vēnisset, civitatibus milites imperat certumque in locum convenire jubet. Qua re nuntiata, Pirustae legatos ad eum mittunt, qui doceant nihil earum ²⁰ reruni publico factum consilio, seseque paratos esse demon-strant¹ omnibus rationibus de injuriis satisfacere. Per-cepta oratione eorum, Caesar obsides imperat eosque ad certam diem adduci jubet; nisi ita fecerint, sese bello ²⁵ civitatem persecuturum demonstrat. Iis ad diem adduc-tis, ut imperaverat, arbitros inter civitates dat, qui item aestiment poenamque constituant.

2. His confectis rebus conventibusque peractis in citeri-ore Galliam revertitur atque inde ad exercitum proficicitur. Eo cum venisset, circumitis omnibus hibernis, singulari militum studio in summa omnium rerum inopia ⁵ circiter sessentas ejus generis, cūjus supra demonstravi-mus, naves et longas viginti octo invēnit instructas neque multum abesse ab eo, quin paucis diebus deduci possint.
 Conlaudatis militibus atque iis, qui negotio praefuerant, quid fieri velit ostendit atque omnes ad portum Itium ¹⁰ convenire jubet, quo ex portu commodissimum in Britanniā trājectum esse cognoverat, circiter millium passuum triginta a continenti; huic rei quod satis esse visum est militum reliquit. Ipse cum legionibus expeditis quat-tuor et equitibus octingentis in fines Trēverorum profici-¹⁵ citur, quod hi neque ad concilia veniebant neque imperio pārebant Germānosque Transrhēnānos sollicitare dicebantur.

Trouble with the Treveri

3. Haec civitas longē plurimum totius Galliae equitatuvalet magnasque habet cōpias peditum, Rhēnumque, ut suprā demonstravimus, tangit. In ea civitate duō de principatu inter se contendebant, Indutiomārus et Cinge-tōrix; ē quibus alter, simul atque de Caesaris legionum-⁵, que adventu cognitum est, ad eum vēnit, se suosque omnes in officio futuros neque ab amicitia populi Rōmāni dēfecturos confirmavit quaeque in Trēveris gererentur ostendit. At Indutiomarus equitatum peditatuinque cōgere iisque, qui per aetatem in armis esse nōn poterant,¹⁰ in silvam Arduennam abditis — quae ingenti māgnitudine per mēdios fines Treverorum a flūmine Rhēno ad initium Remorum pertinet — bellum parare instituit; sed posteaquam nōn nulli prīncipes ex ea civitate, et familiāritate Cingetorigis adducti et adventu nostri exercitus perter-¹⁵ riti, ad Caesarem vēnērunt et de suis privātī rebus ab eo petere coeperunt, quōniā civitati cōstīlere non possent, veritus, nē ab omnibus dēsererētur, legatos ad Caesarem mittit: Sese idcirco ab suis discedere atque ad eum venire nōluisse, quō facilius civitatem in officio con-²⁰ tinēret, ne omnis nobilitatis discessu plēbs propter imprudentiam läberetur: itaque esse civitatem in sua potestate, seseque, si Caesar pernitteret, ad eum in castra venturiū, suas civitatisque fortūnas ejus fidei permissurum.

²⁵
4. Caesar, etsi intellegebat, quā de causā ea dicerentur, quaeque eum res ab instituto cōsilio deterrēret, tamen, nē aestatem in Trēveris consūmere cōgeretur omnibus ad Britannicum bellum rebus comparatis, Indutiomarum ad se cum ducentis obsidibus venire jussit. His adductis,⁵ in iis filio propinquisque ejus omnibus, quos nominatim evocaverat, cōsolatus Indutiomarum hortatusque est, uti in officio manēret; nihil tamen sēcius principibus Treverorū ad se convocatis, hos singillatim Cingetorigi conciliavit, quod cum merito ius a se fieri intellegebat,¹⁰ tum māgni interesse arbitrabatur ejus auctōritatem inter suos quam plurimum valere, cuius tam egregiam in se voluntatem perspexisset. Id tūlit factum graviter Indutio marus [suam grātiam inter suos minui] et, qui jam 15 ante inimico in nos animo fuisse, multo gravius hōc dolōre exarsit.

Caesar ready to sail

5. His rebus constitutis Caesar ad portum Itium cum legionibus pervenit. Ibi cognoscit sexāgintā nāves, quae in Meldis factae erant, tempestate rējectas cursum tenēre non potuisse atque eodem, unde erant profectae, rever-tisse; reliquas paratas ad nāvigationem atque omnibus rebus instructas invēnit. Eodein equitatus totius Galliae convēnit nūmero millium quattuor prīncipesque ex omnibus cīvitatibus; ex quibus perpaucos, quorum in se fidem perspexerat, relinquere in Gallia, reliquos obsidum loco secum ducere decreverat, quod, cum ipse abesset, motum Galliae verebatur.

Dumnorix the Aeduan gives trouble

6. Erat unā cum cēteris Dumnorix Aeduus, de quo ante ab nobis dictum est. Hunc secun habēre in primis cōstituerat, quod eum cūpidum rerum nōvarūm, cūpidum imperii, māgni animi, māgnæ inter Gallos auctōritatis cognoverat. Accēdebat hūc, quod in concilio Aeduorum Dumnorix dixerat sibi a Caesare rēgnum civitatis deferri; quod dictum Aedui graviter ferebant, neque recūsandi aut deprecandi causā legatos ad Caesarem mittere audebant. Id factum ex suis hospitibus Caesar cognoverat.
10 Ille omnibus primo precibus petere contendit, ut in Gallia relinquetur, partim quod insuētus navigandi mare timēret, partim quod religionibus impediri sese diceret.

Posteaquam id obstinate sibi negari vidit, omni spe impetrandi ademptā, prīncipes Galliae sollicitare, sévocare singulos hortarique coepit, uti in continentē remanērent: metu territare: non sine causā fieri, ut Gallia omni nobilitate spoliaretur; id esse cōnclūm Caesaris, ut, quos in cōspectu Galliae interficeret verēretur, eos omnes in Britanniam trāductos necaret fidem reliq̄uis interponere, jūsjūrandum poscere, ut, quou esse ex usu Galliae intellexissent, communi consilio administrarent. Haec a compluribus ad Caesarem deferebantur.

7. Qua re cognita Caesar, quod tantum civitati Aeduāe dignitatis tribuebat, coērcendum atque deterrendum, quibuscumque rebus posset, Dumuorigēm statuebat; quod longius ejus āmentia in progredi videbat, prospicieudūm, ne quid sibi ac reipūblicae nocēre posset. Itaque dies circiter viginti quīnque in eo loco conimoratus, quod Corus ventus navigationem impediebat, qui magnam partem omnis temporis in his locis flare consuevit, dābat operam, ut in officio Dumnorīgem continēret, nihilo tamen secius omnia ejus consilia cognosceret; tandem idoneam nactus tempestatem, milites equitesque concendere in naves jubet. At, omnium impeditis animis, Dumuorix cum equitibus Aeduorum a castris insciente Caesare dōnum discedere coepit. Qua re nūntiata, Caesar, intermissa prōfectione atque omnibus rebus postpositis, magnam partem equitatū ad eum insequendum mittit retrahique imperat; si vim faciat neque pāreat, interfici jubet, nihil hunc se absente pro sāno facturum arbitratus, qui praesentis imperium neglexisset. Ille enim rēvocatus rēsistere ac se manu defendere suorumque fidem implorare coepit saepe clāmitans līberum se liberaeque esse civitatis. Illi, ut erat iimperatum, circumsistunt hominem atque interficiunt; at equites Aedui ad Caesarem omnes r̄ver-tuntur.

8. His rebus gestis, Labieno in continente cum tribus legionibus et equitum millibus duobus relicto, ut portūs tuēretur et rem frumentariam prōvidēret, quaeque in Gallia gererentur cognosceret, consiliumque pro tempore et pro re caperet, ipse cuin quīnque legionibus et pāri nūmero equitum, quem in continenti relinquēbat,¹ ad sōlis occasum naves solvit et lēni Africo prōvectus, media circiter nocte vento intermisso, cursum non tenuit et, longius delatus aestu, orta lūce sub sinistra Britanniam relictam conspexit. Tum rūrsus, aestūs commutationem secutus, rēmis contendit, ut eam partem insulae caperet, quā optimū esse ēgressū superiore aestate cognoverat. Qua in re admodum fuit inilitū virtus laudanda, qui vectoriis grāvibusque nāvigiis, non intermisso rēmigandi labore, longarum nāvium cursum adaequārunt. Accessum est ad Britanniam omnibus navibus meridiano ferē tempore, neque in eo loco hostis est visus; sed, ut posteā Caesar ex captīvis cognovit, cum magnae manūs eo convenissent, multitudine navium perterritae (quae cum annotinis privatisque, quas sui quisque commōdi fecerat, amplius octingentae uno erant visae tempore) a litore discesserant ac se in superiora loca abdiderant.

trēcentis, qui praesidio navibus essent, de tertia vigilia ad hostes contendit eo minus veritus navibus, quod in litore, 5 inolli atque aperto deligatas ad ancoram relinquebat, et praesidio navibusque Quintum Atrium praefecit. Ipse noctu progressus millia passuum circiter duodecim hostium copias conspicatus est. Illi, equitatu atque essedis ad flumen progressi, ex loco superiore nostros prohibere et, 10 proelium committere coepérunt. Repulsi ab equitatu se in silvas abdidērunt, locum nacti ēgregiē et nātūrā et opere munitum, quem domestici belli, ut videbantur,¹ causā jam ante praeparaverant; nam crēbris arbōribus succisis omnes introitūs erant p̄aeclusi. Ipsi ex silvis rāri propugnabant, 15 nostrosque intra munitiones ingredi p̄ohibebant. At milites legionis septimae, testudine factā et aggere ad munitiones adjecto, locum ceperunt eosque ex silvis expulerunt paucis vulneribus acceptis. Sed eos fugientes longius Caesar prosequi vetuit, et quod loci naturam, 20 ignorabat, et quod, magna parte diēi consumpta, munitioni castrorum tempus relinquī volebat.

10. Postrīdie ejus diei māne trīpertīto milites equitesque in expeditionem misit, ut eos, qui fūgerant, persequerentur. His aliquantum itineris progressis, cum jam extremi essent in p̄ospectu, equites a Quinto Atrio ad Caesarem venerunt, qui nūntiarent superiore nocte, 5 māxima coorta tempestate, prope omnes naves adflictas atque in litore ējectas esse, quod neque ancōrae funesque subsisterent, neque nautae gūbernatoresque vim tempestatis pati possent; itaque ex eo concursu navium magnum esse incommodum acceptum.

11. His rebus cognitis, Caesar legiones equitatumque revocari atque in itinere resistere jubet, ipse ad naves revertitur; eadem fere, quae ex nūntiis litterisque cognoverat, cōram perspicit, sīc ut, amissis circiter quadraginta navibus, reliquae tamen refici posse magno negotio videbentur. Itaque ex legionibus fabros deligit et ex continenti alios arcessi jubet; Labieno scribit, ut, quam plurimas possit,¹ iis legionibus, quae sint² apud eum, naves instituat. Ipse, etsi res erat multae operae ac laboris, tamen commodissimum esse statuit omnes raves subduci et cum castris una munitione conjungi. In his rebus circiter dies decein consūmit, ne nocturnis quidein temporibus ad laborem militum intermissis. Subductis navibus castrisque ēgrēgiē mūnitis, easdem copias, quas ante, praeidio navibus reliquit; ipse eodem, unde redierat, proficisciatur. Eo cum venisset, maiores jam undique in eum locum copiae Britannorum convenerant, summā imperii bellique administrandi communi consilio permisā Cassivellauno; cuius fines a maritimis civitatibus flumen dividit, quod appellatur Tamēsis, a mari circiter millia passuum octoginta. Huic superiore tempore cum reliquis civitatibus continentia bella intercesserant; sed nostro adventu permoti, Britanni hunc toti bello imperioque praefecerant.

ab iis, qui praedae ac belli inferendi causā ex Belgis transierunt (qui omnes fere iis nominibus civitatum appellantur, quibus orti ex civitatibus eo pervenerunt) et bello, illato ibi permanerunt atque agros colere coeperunt. Hominum est infinita multitudo creberrimaque aedificia fere Gallicis consimilia, pecorum¹ magnus numerus. Utuntur [aut aere] aut nummo aureo aut taleis ferreis ad certum pondus examinatis pro nummo. Nascitur ibi plumbum album in mediterraneis regionibus, in maritimis ferrum, sed ejus exigua est copia; aere utuntur importato. Materia cujusque generis ut in Gallia est praeter fagum atque abiētem. Leporem et gallinam et anserem gustare fas non putant; haec tamen alunt animi voluptatisque causā. Loca sunt temperatiora quam in Gallia, remissioribus frigoribus.

13. Insula naturā triquetra, cuius unum latus est contra Galliam. Hujus lateris alter angulus, qui est ad Cantium, quo ferē omnes ex Gallia naves appelluntur, ad orientem solem, inferior ad meridiem spectat. Hoc pertinet circiter millia passuum quingenta. Alterum vergit ad Hispaniam atque occidentem solem; qua ex parte est Hibernia, dimidio minor, ut aestimatur, quam Britannia, sed pari spatio transmissus atque ex Gallia est in Britanniam. In hoc medio cursu est insula, quae appellatur Moua: complures praeterea minores subjectae insulae existimantur; de quibus insulis non nulli scripsérunt dies continuos trigintā sub brūmā² esse noctem. Nos nihil de eo percontationibus reperiebamus, nisi certis ex aqua mensuris breviores esse quam in continentis noctes videbamus. 14. Ex his omnibus longe sunt humanissimi, qui Cantium incolunt, quae regio est maritima omnis, neque multum a Gallica differunt consuetudine. Interiores plerique frumenta non serunt, sed lacte et carne vivunt pellibusque sunt vestiti. Omnes vero se Britanni vitro inficiunt quod caeruleum efficit colorem, atque hoc horridore¹ sunt in pugna aspectu; capilloque sunt promisso, atque omni parte corporis rasa praeter caput et labrum superius. Uxores habent deni duodenique inter se communes et maximo fratribus cum fratribus parentesque cum liberis; sed si qui sunt ex his nati, eorum habentur liberi, quo primum virgo quaeque deducta est.

15. Equites hostium essedariique acriter proelio cum equitatu nostro in itinere confluxerunt, tamen ut nostri omnibus partibus superiores fuerint atque eos in silvas collesque compulerint; sed, compluribus imperfectis, cupidius insecurti, non nullos ex suis amiserunt. At illi, intermisso spatio, imprudentibus nostris atque occupatis in munitione castrorum, subito se ex silvis ejecerunt, impetuque in eos facto, qui erant in statione pro castris collati, acriter pugnaverunt, duabusque missis subsidio cohortibus a Caesare atque his primis legionum duarum, cum hae per exiguo intermissio loci spatio inter se constitissent, novo genere pugnae perterritis nostris, per

16. Toto hoc in genere pugnae cum sub oculis omnium ac pro castris dimicaretur, intellectum est nostros propter gravitatem armorum, quod neque insequi cedentes possent neque ab signis discedere auderent, minus aptos esse ad hujus generis hostem; equites autem magno cum periculo, proelio dimicare, propterea quod illi, etiam consulo plerumque cederent et, cum paulum ab legionibus nostros removissent, ex essedis desilirent et pedibus dispari proelio contendenter. Equestris autem proelii ratio et cedentibus et insequentibus par atque idem periculum inferebat.¹⁰ Accedebat huc, ut numquam conferti, sed rari magnisque intervallis proeliarentur stationesque dispositas habarent, atque alios alii deinceps exciperent, integrique et recentes defatigatis succederent.

Caesar wins a victory. Britons disperse

17. Postero die procul a castris hostes in collibus constituerunt rārique se ostendere et lēnius quam pridiē nostros equites proelio lacessere coeperunt. Sed meridiē cum Caesar pabulandi causā tres legiones atque omnem equitatum cum Caio Trebonio legato misisset, repente ex omnibus partibus ad pabulatores advolaverunt, sic uti ab signis legionibusque non absisterent. Nostri, acriter in eos impetu facto, reppulerunt neque fine in sequendi fecerunt, quoad subsidio confisi equites, cum post se legiones vidarent, praecipites hostes ēgērunt, magnoque eorum numero imperfecto, neque sui colligendi neque consistendi aut ex essedis desiliendi facultatem dederunt. Ex hac fūgā protinus, quae undique convenerant auxilia discesserunt, neque post id tempus umquam summis nobiscum copiis hostes contenderunt.

Caesar attacks Cassivellaunus

18. Caesar, cognito consilio eorum, ad flumen Tamesim in fines Cassivellauni exercitum duxit; quod flumen uno omnino loco pedibus, atque hoc aegre, transiri potest. Eo cum venisset, animum advertit ad alteram fluminis ripam magnas esse copias hostium instructas. Ripa autem erat acutis sudibus praefixis inunita, ejusdemque generis sub aqua defixaes sudes flumine tegebantur. His rebus cognitis a captiuis perfūgisque, Caesar, praemissso equitatu, confestim legiones subsequi jussit. Sed ea celeritate atque eo impetu milites ierunt, cum capite solo ex aqua exstant, ut hostes impetum legionum atque equitum sustinere non possent ripasque dimitterent ac se fugae mandarent.

19. Cassivellaunus, ut sūprā demonstravimus, omni deposita spe contentionis, dimissis amplioribus copiis, millibus circiter quattuor essedariorum relictis, itinera nostra servabat paulumque ex via excedebat locisque impenitibus ac silvestribus sese occultabat atque iis regionibus, quibus nos iter facturos cognoverat, pecora atque homines ex agris in silvas compellebat et, cum equitatus noster liberius praedandi vāstandique causā se in agros ejecerat,¹ omnibus viis sēmitisque essedarios ex silvis emittebat et magno cum periculo nostrorum equitum cum iis configebat atque hoc metu latius vagari prohibebat. British attack on naval camp fails. Cassivellaunus submits

22. Dum haec in his locis geruntur, Cassivellaunus ad Cantium, quod esse ad mare supra demonstravimus, quibus regionibus quattuor reges praeerant, Cingetorix, Carvilius, Taximagulus, Segovax, nuntios mittit atque his imperat, uti, coactis omnibus copiis, castra navalia de improviso adoriantur atque oppugnant. Ii cum ad castra venissent, nostri, eruptione facta, multis eorum interfectis, capto etiam nobili duce Lugotorige, suos iucolumes reduxerunt. Cassivellaunus hoc proelio nuntiato, tot detritus, acceptis, vastatis finibus, maxime etiam permotus defectione civitatum, legatos per Atrebatem Commium de ditione ad Caesarem mittit. Caesar cum constituissest hiemare in continenti propter repentinus Galliae motus, neque multum aestatis superesset, atque id facile extrahi posse intellegere, obsides imperat et quid in annos singulos vectigalis populo Romano Britannia penderet, constituit; interdicit atque imperat Cassivellauno, ne Mandubracio neu Trinobantibus noceat.

23. Obsidibus acceptis exercitum reducit ad mare, naves invenit refectas. His deductis, quod et captivorum magnum numerum habebat, et non nullae tempestate deperierant naves, duabus commeatibus exercitum reportare instituit. Ac sic accedit, uti ex tanto navium numero tot navigationibus neque hoc neque superiore anno illa omnino navis, quae milites portaret, desideraretur; at ex iis, quae inanes ex continenti ad eum remitterentur et prioris commeatus expositis militibus et quas postea Labienus faciendas curaverat numero sexaginta per paucae locum ¹⁰ caperent, reliquae fere omnes rejicerentur. Quas cum aliquamdiu Caesar frūstrā exspectasset, ne anni tempore a navigatione excluderetur, quod aequinoctium suberat, necessario angustius milites collocavit ac, summa tranquillitate consecuta, secundā initā cum solvisset vigiliā, ¹⁵ prima luce terram attigit omnesque incolumes naves perduxit.

NOTES

BOOK IV

Chapter 20.

Si tempus deficeret (trans. "if the season were too short") : the historical indirect for si deficeret. What is the rule for the mood of a subord. clause in indirect discourse? Explain the change of tense (see Sequence). — magnō sibi usui: double dat.; sibi of interest, usui of tendency or purpose served. — fore : = futurum esse. — Distinguish mōdō (adv.) from mōdō (abl. of modus). — adisset, perspexisset, cognovisset : historical indirect for fut. perf. indic. Why the mood, why the tense? — Decline loca and portus in sing. and plur. — Gallis : dat. of interest, mod. incognita. — illō : adv.; compare eo. — Distinguish use of quisquam (any) from that of quis and aliquis. — Quanta esset : what kind of question? Explain the mood. Note other examples in this sentence. Explain the tense and translate into Latin: "He cannot find out how great the island is, what tribes inhabit it, what experience in war they have, and what customs they observe."

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Decline in agreement exigua pars, his locis, omnis Gallia, omnibus bellis, magnō usui, eas regiones, maior multitudo.
2. Give gender of pars, aetas, locis, hiems, auxilia, tempus, usui, portus, regio, magnitudo, natio, institutis, navium, and refer to rules.
3. Recite prin. parts of proficiisci, intellego, gero, deficio, adisset, cognosco, incolo, utor, reperio.
4. Compare maturus, magnus, idoneus.

Chapter 21.

Cognoscenda : gerundive agreeing with haec. Give the gerund construction and note any other way of expressing this purpose.

— priusquam faceret: priusquam takes indic. of fact and subjunct. of anticipated possibility. Here the possibility is represented as one that occurred to the mind of the person quoted. — periculum: risk, hazard; here translate "make the attempt" or "venture." — ad se: se here is indirect for the speaker. The direct would be "return to me." Trans. into Latin. — revertatur: note the primary (vivid) sequence after mandat. What would the historical be? — Quam . . . classem: here Quam is a rel. adj. mod. classem in the same clause, "what fleet he had built." Our syntax requires "fleet" as the antecedent, "the fleet which," etc. — perlato: give principal parts of perfero. — qui pollicentur: rel. of purpose. Be careful not to translate this as if it were indic. pollicentur; say "ambassadors come to promise." Observe the primary sequence and give the historical substitute. — dare: inf. as noun, the obj. of pollicentur. The ordinary construction would use the phrase se daturos (esse) as the obj. — imperio: what case do verbs of obeying govern? — Quibus auditis . . . pollicitus. Great care should be taken in rendering these participles into Eng. A literal mixing of the absolute phrase with a participle qualifying the subject is not proper; say "Having heard these, he made liberal promises, etc., . . . and sent them back home." — domum: when is motion towards expressed without the prep. ad? — Unā: adv., "together," "along." — Atrebatis superatis: abl. abs. defining the time of the occurrence, "when he had conquered," etc. — et virtutem: et = both. — sibi refers to Caesar; indirect for the person quoted; C. would say "mihi fidelem eum esse arbitror." — Cujusque: "and of whom," "and whose," not from quisque. — Magni habeo, "I esteem highly"; magni (pretii), gen. of value, one phase of the gen. of description; habeo, I hold, deem, or consider. — Huic imperat, etc.: the subjunctives in this are puzzling. Trans. as if it read as follows: Huic imperat (ut) quas civitates possit adeat ("visit what states he can"), (ut eas) hortetur ut . . . sequantur ("and urge them to espouse the cause of Caesar"). The verbs depending upon imperat are adeat, hortetur, nuntiet. With ut suppressed they form abbreviated clauses of purpose or indirect command. — possit: subjunct. because in a subord. cl. indirect quotation. — seque: se means Caesar, the person quoted; direct statement ego veniam. — Huic: note the case governed by impero; also the Latin equivalent for Eng. inf. after the verb of commanding.—Quantum: a neuter substantive, subject of potuit, the whole clause acting as a noun in the acc. of extent mod. perspectis; trans. “as far as his opportunity allowed, seeing that he (qui = cum is) dare not.” — audēret: subjunct. with causal relative (see Grammar).—Nave and die: explain the abl. in each case. — perspexisset: subjunct. either of an indirect question (quae, interrog. from quis) or of a quoted relative clause (quae rel. from qui).

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

Give prin. parts of polliceor, permaneo, constituo, hortor, sequor, nūntio, do, egredior, audeo, revertor, perspicio.

Chapter 22.

Navium parandarum causa: change this to the gerund construction. What limitation to the gerundive in the gen. plur. ? — moratur, vivid present, the regular tense with dum = while, where the imperfect would be expected. — legati venerunt qui se excusarent: compare qui pollicantur in chap. 21. Note the difference in sequence. — de superioris temporis consilio, “for (concerning) their conduct (policy) in the past.” — homines: to be taken as an appositive to the understood subject, “because, (being) uncivilized people . . . they,” etc. — consuetudinis, objective gen. mod. imperiti, an adj. of knowledge. What adjectives are modified by the gen. ? — populo: dat. indirect obj. of fecissent. Bellum tibi infero is the more usual phrase. — fecissent: why does quod take subjunct. here ? — imperasset = imperavisset: subjunct. in a quoted relative clause. Trans. into Latin “We will do what you shall have ordered.” Note that the pluperf. subjunct. corresponds in indirect historical sequence to the fut. perf. indic. of direct discourse. — pollicerentur, see excusarent above. — has tantularum rerum occupationibus, “these engagements in such trifling affairs”; tantulus, diminutive of tantus; rerum, possessive gen. — quod volebat: note quod with indic. Why ? Contrast quod fecissent above. — belli gerendi facultatem: gerund or gerundive ? — Britanniae: dat., indirect obj. of anteponendas, “preferred to Britain.” — anteponendas: gerundive of necessity. With esse it makes what is called the passive periphrastic. — eis numerum imperat: dat. of person receiving the order, acc. of thing ordered; "demands a large number from them" or "levies a large number upon them." — in fidem recipit, "takes them under his protection," "into his keeping." — Coactis contractisque, "gathered up and brought in." — quot, "which number," lit. as many as. — quod praeterea navium, etc., "what war ships he had besides"; "all the war ships he had"; navium, partitive gen. mod. quod. — Huc accedebant: "to these were added," "there were in addition to these." — ā millibus, "at a distance of eight miles." — tenebantur quo minus possent, "were detained and prevented from being able" (see use of quo minus in Grammar). — ducendum: gerundive of necessity with exercitum. — arbitrabatur: cannot mean "which he (Rufus) might think sufficient" because a relative clause in virtual indirect quotation would require the subjunct. It must mean "which he (Caesar himself) thought sufficient" expressing the bare fact, not as a quotation.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Principal parts of relinquo, cogo, jubeo.
2. Distinguish accidit and accedit.

Chapter 23.

nactus: see nanciscor. — tertiā vigiliā: abl. of location in time, "somewhere in the course of the third watch," i.e. between midnight and 3 A.M. The night (i.e. the space between sunset and sunrise, however long or short it might be) was divided into four periods, called "watches." About September 1 each of these would be about three hours long. Only the day — sunrise to sunset — was divided into hours (hōrae). — ulteriorem portum: these ports cannot be accurately located, as the whole coast has suffered alterations from the action of the ocean. The main port of embarkation was probably between Boulogne and Calais, and the portus ulterior at either Ambleteuse or Calais. — se, "him," the speaker. — paulo tardius, "rather slowly"; compare tardē. — horā quartā: about 10 A.M. It had taken about eight or nine hours to sail thirty miles. The point reached was off Dover. — expositas, "drawn up in view." — ita montibus anguste, etc., "so closely was it bordered by mountains." The Ms. reading angustis ("mountains so close") seems awkward. — adigi: inf. pass. of adigo. — posset: what use of the subjunct.? — dum . . . convenirent: dum (=until) takes indic. for fact and subjunct. for anticipated possibility. Here, not "until they actually assembled," but "for them to assemble." — horam nonam: about 3 P.M. — cognovisset, vellet: subjunct. of indirect question, unless these are to be taken as quoted relative clauses, i.e. "what (he said) he had learnt." — ut rei . . . postularent: these two ut's = "as"; postularent is subjunct. because in a subord. clause quoted in indirect discourse. — ut quae, "as being things which." — haberent, "involved"; same reason for mood as in postularent. — administra-rentur: to be taken with monuit as if ut of purpose were expressed before ad nutum. — litore seems to be a bare abl. of location (without the usual in); it may be explained as an abl. abs.; trans., however, "off an open and level shore." Somewhere near Deal, seven miles north of Dover. — his dimissis: be careful in translating these participles. Write this sentence out as an exercise in Eng. composition. — sublatis: see tollo. — constituit: note the different meanings this verb may have.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Decline his rebus, ulterior portus primis navibus, cuius loci (be careful of the plur.), celer motus, uno tempore (sing.).
2. Prin. parts of solvit, attigit, expositas, adigi, tollo.
3. Trans. having dismissed this man; having obtained (nancisor) these ships.

Chapter 24.

cognito . . . praemisso . . . subsecuti: note this chain of participles, "on learning the plan . . . , sent forward cavalry . . . and following up with," etc. — genere: why the case? — consuērunt = consuēverunt: why the perf.? Distinguish consuesco and consuevi. — copiis: often explained as abl. of accompaniment without cum; really an abl. of means or manner. — navibus: abl. of separation. — prohibebant: note the tense; continuation here means sustained effort, "tried to prevent." — has causas: has here points forward. — nisi, "except." — militibus (dat. of agent) . . . et desiliendum et consistendum erat: "the soldiers had (both) to leap down, gain a footing, and . . . "; the gerundive is impersonal. Why? — locis, manibus: abl. abs. — oppressis: dat. agreeing with militibus; trans. "the soldiers (being) in ignorance of the locality, with their hands occupied, and (they themselves) being weighed down," etc. — illi, "the enemy," lit. "those others." — cum . . . conicerent: trans. as if coniciebant; on what principle does cum take the subjunct. here? Where we say "when they were hurling," the Latins said, "just about the time when they would be hurling"; trans. cum here "while." — Quibus rebus: abl. of means with perterriti. — generis: gen. depending upon imperiti; see consuetudinis, chap. 22, line 4. — alacritate: abl. with utebantur. — quo: abl. with uti; on what principle is quo neut. though one of its antecedents (alacritate) is fem.?

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. What adjectives are modified by the gen.?
2. What verbs appear to "govern" the abl.? What is the real relation?
3. What is the usual Latin mode of expressing the agent with the passive voice? What exception?
4. Decline grave onus, eadem alacritas, pedestre proelium.

Chapter 25.

Quod ubi: Eng. cannot use a rel. pron. here; trans. "when C. observed this." Note the Latin tendency to introduce a sentence with a rel. — naves longas: obj. of jussit. — et species: et = "both." — inusatitior may be rendered (1) "rather strange" or (2) "more strange" (than that of the onerariae). — barbaris: dat. of interest mod. inusatitior. — usui nostris: what construction? — pedem rettulerunt, "fell back," "retreated" (of a short space). — qui . . . aquilam ferebat, "(he) who," "(the one) who." — ut . . . eveniret: verbs of asking, persuading, warning, exhorting, commanding (except jubeo), take an object noun clause of purpose. — legioni: dat. of interest with feliciter. Explain the other datives in this sentence. — Cum dixisset: cite the rule for cum (when) with the subjunct. — inter se, "one another." — ne . . . admitteretur: see note above on ut . . . eveniret. — Hos: trans. as if it read cum hos conspexissent. Why is hos put first? — hostibus: what case does appropinquo govern?

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Decline species inusitator, latus apertum, miles cunctans, vox magna, tantum decus.
2. Prin. parts of verto, moveo, constituo, consisto, pello, propello, refero, cunctor, do, prodo, desilio, praesto.

Chapter 26.

Pugnatum est : note this impersonal construction instead of pugnauerunt utrique. — utrisque: why plur.? — atque: supply quod. — alius aliā ex navi, “one from one ship, another from another” (lit. “a different man from a different ship”). — occurserat, aggregabat: sing. because alius is sing.; trans. in the plur. — aliquos, “any” in the sense of “some.” — ubi . . . conspexerant, . . . adoriebantur: this combination of tenses is significant. The pluperf. in the “when” clause gives the meaning of repetition, “whenever,” etc. This sense is strongly marked in the imperf. of the main clause, “whenever they saw, they would attack.” Ubi in this connection is exactly like cum with the same combination of tenses; contrast with this ubi conspexerunt = cum conspexissent, “when they saw (once).” See ubi animadvertisit, chap. 26, line 1. — impeditos, “(these) hampered (men),” or “hampered as they were.” — ab latere aperto, “on the exposed side,” the right side because the shield was carried in the left hand; ab here denotes the quarter from which the thing is viewed. — universos: disting. from omnes. — coniciebant, “kept hurling.” — quod cum animadvertisset: cf. quod ubi animadvertisit, chap. 25, “when he observed (once).” — quos . . . conspexerat . . . submittebat: note the same combination of tenses as above with ubi = “whenever”; “whomsoever he saw (from time to time), to these he would send.” His noticing and ordering took place once; but after that he repeated the act of sending. — simul = simul atque, conj., “as soon as.” — suis: abl. abs. — neque potuerunt, “but they were not able”; neque often has this adversative force (= sed non). — longius, “any great distance.” — potuerant: bring out the exact force of this tense as compared with the preceding potuerint. — Hoc unum . . . defuit, “C. lacked this one thing to complete his usual (old-time) good fortune”; Caesari, dat. of interest with defuit.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Prin. parts of insisto, occurro, adorior, compleo.
2. Gender of species, magnitudo, ördo, res, dies, virtus, onus, motus, alacritas, navis, altitudo, legio, litus, dēdecus.

Chapter 27.

Quae imperasset (= imperāisset): subjunct. of a quoted subord. clause. Direct discourse would have the fut. perf. indic. Trans. into Latin "We will do what you shall have ordered." — Hunc illi . . . : hunc is the obj. of comprehenderant, illi the subject; egressum modifies hunc; trans. "Him on disembarking they had seized and cast into chains, though (cum) he was bringing Caesar's instructions as a messenger"; cum, concessive, takes the subjunct. — modo: abl. of modus, "after the manner of." — eius rei culpam in multitudinem contulerunt, "hid the blame of that affair upon the mob." — propter . . . petiverunt: "owing to their thoughtlessness asked to be pardoned," i.e. because it was not intentional wrongdoing. — Caesar questus . . . : do not trans. literally. Write the simple facts in Caesar's order. Then put together in a good Eng. sentence, something like this: "C. complained because after sending . . . and seeking . . ., they had . . . but said . . ." — obsides imperavit, "demanded hostages"; what would obsidibus imperavit mean? Substitute a clause telling what C. demanded. — arcessitam modifies partem. Trans. "when summoned." — diebus: abl. of time within which, really location of time. — daturos: supply esse. — suos, "their men."

Chapter 28.

post diem quartum quam est ventum: trans. "four days after Britain was reached"; post diem quartum quam to be taken as = die quarto postquam. The phrase post diem quartum is treated as a comparative followed by quam ("than"). Note the impersonal est ventum. The passive is purposely vague as regards "who reached?" — leni vento: described as an abl. of accompaniment or attending circumstance; this, however, is only another way of designating here the abl. abs., which is really an abl. of the situation; trans. "in a gentle breeze." — solverunt, "cast off,"

"weighed anchor." — cum adpropinquarent: consider the reason for the subjunct. — ut nulla posset: why subjunct.? — earum: what kind of gen.? — aliae . . . aliae, "some . . . others." — referrentur: subjunct. coörd. with posset. — propius occasum: notice that the adv. here has the power to govern an acc. — magnō sui periculo, "at great peril to themselves"; sui, shading between a possessive and an objective gen.; periculo, abl. of the situation, circumstance or manner. — tamen: this marks the adversative idea that the danger was not realized, for they escaped to the continent; trans. "These, however, cast anchor, but when (or since) they were being filled by the waves, they were compelled to put to sea in the face of the night, and so made for the mainland." — adversā nocte: abl. abs., "the night being against them," as when we say "in the teeth of the storm."

Principal parts of co-orior, proveho, jacio, peto.

Chapter 29.

accidit ut: notice the noun clause of weakened result, acting as subject of accidit. — consuēvit: why perf.? — quibus: abl. of means. — transportandum curaverat, "had had the army transported"; transportandum, a gerundive of necessity, "looked after the army as one to be transported." Trans. into Latin "He will get a ship built." — Compluribus . . . facta est: "when several ships had been wrecked and the rest—owing to the loss of ropes, etc.—were useless for sailing, great uneasiness (as was inevitable) arose throughout the army." Notice the flexibility of the Latin period as regards parentheses. — totius exercitūs: subjective gen. with perturbatio = totus exercitus perturbatus est. — Neque enim: trans. neque as non. — quibus . . . possent: subjunct. of result following the relative of characteristic (= ut eis): "no ships of such a kind that in them they would be able to be carried back." Ignore this in translating, "no ships in which they could." — usui: dat. of purpose or tendency. — omnibus: dat. of interest with constabat. — constabat, impersonal verb, "it was agreed," or "well known"; subj. is oportere, of which the subj.

is the impersonal hiemari; a chain of impersonals, "it was well known that it behooved that the winter should be passed." Trans. "it was clear to every one that the winter ought to be passed in Gaul." — in hiemem, "for the winter."

Principal parts of frango, deligo (bind) — disting. from deligo (choose).

Gender of nox, aestus, facultas, funis, hiems, pax.

Chapter 30.

Quibus rebus . . . : this long sentence should be translated carefully. Do not render the participles and cum clauses literally; break the sentence into three, dividing at conlocuti and producere and rendering quod by "for," thus: "On learning . . . , the chief-tains . . . , who . . . , held a conference. When they saw . . . , and learned. . . they thought it best to renew the war, cut off our men . . . and prolong For they felt sure" — Romanis : what kind of dat.? Give the rule for prepositional compounds of sum. — militum, castrorum: classify these genitives. — hōc: adv. of degree mod. angustiora, "all the smaller"; or abl. of cause, "by reason of this." — factu: see Grammar on supines. — duxerunt: secondary meaning of duco, "think, deem." — frumento: abl. of separation with prohibēre. — his superatis: render as a condition = si hi superati essent. — reditu: see frumento above. — transiturum: supply esse, subj. neminem.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Describe the uses of the two supines.
2. belli inferendi causa: give three equivalents: 1, ad; 2, ut; 3, supine (justify the supine).
3. Principal parts of loquor, intellego, claudio, intercludo, infero, confido (name the semi-deponents), discedo.
4. What is the adj. for nemo? State peculiarities of declension in both.

Chapter 31.

ex eventu navium, "from what had happened to the ships." — ex eo, quod, "from the fact that"; eo, abl. of id, "this, namely, that," etc. (quod a subord. conj. introducing a noun clause). What is the relation of the noun clause? — fore = futurum esse, subj. id; here quod is the rel. pron. — suspicabatur, "began to suspect"; the imperf. sometimes has this force. — comparabat, conferebat, etc.: what do these imperfects picture? — materiā, aere: why abl.? — quae... naves, earum: lit. "what ships . . . of these"; say "the timber and bronze of those ships which." Note the Latin tendency to put the rel. clause first and include the antecedent noun in it, followed by a demonst. pron. — ad reliquias reficiendas: give the causā construction. Which is the neater? — usui: dat. What use? See chap. 20. — cum = "when," with administraretur. — summo studio: abl. of manner, or, possibly, of accompaniment. See Grammar for omission of cum with the latter. — reliquis: abl. of means with navigari. — ut navigari posset efficit: "made it possible for the voyage to be made"; the ut clause is a noun clause of weakened result, obj. of efficit; navigari is impersonal.

Decline aes, copper, and aēr, air. Note their gender.

Chapter 32.

geruntur = gerebantur. What is the rule for dum, "while"? See chap. 22. — frumentatum: supine. Which? What use and with what restriction? — septima: what is the case construction in Eng. and Latin with passive verbs of naming, making, etc.? — cum, "since." — ventitaret: frequentative verb from venio. — in statione, "on guard." — quam consuetudo ferret, "than usual," lit. "than custom warranted or bore." Why subjunct. ferret and fecisset? Give the Latin direct discourse of what the messengers would say to Caesar. Observe the operation of sequence in this. — consilii: partitive gen. with aliquid, "some new plan." — aliquid initum (esse): this phrase is in apposition to id. — secum: se refers to Caesar, the speaker referred to in jussit. Express in Latin the command in Caesar's own words. — processisset: the ordinary pluperf. subjunct. with cum, "when," (=Eng. pluperf.indic.); lit. just about the time when he would have, etc. Ignore this of course in translating. — suos, "his own men." — premi, sustinēre, conici: bring out the exact force of these present infinitives. — Nam quod, etc., "for because, as all the grain had been harvested from the other parts, there was only one part left"; frumento is abl. abs. — delituerant: do not overlook the tense. — tum dispersos . . . : the translating of these participles is a good exercise in Eng. composition. First write down the several facts as simple sentences in the order of the Latin, then express in a properly connected Eng. sentence. Notice the agreement of each participle: dispersos and occupatos with object of perturbaverant; adorti with subject; interfectis with abl. abs. paucis. — equitatu: what two constructions may circundo have?

Principal parts of appello (call), appello (or adpello) (bring a ship to port), maneo, suspicor, suspicio, consercio, meto, delitesco, adorior.

Chapter 33.

per omnes partes: "in all directions." — terrore equorum: if this means "the terror inspired by the British horses," equorum is subjective gen. = equi (Romanos) terrent; if it means "the terror caused the Roman horses," it is objective gen. = equos (Romano-rum) terrent. Probably the former, as rotarum is certainly subjective, and besides the Romans were fighting practically without horses. Some take equorum, applied to the British horses, as objective, as if terreo meant "I fear." — pedibus, "on foot," abl. of manner. — si illi premantur: note the conditional force of the pres. subjunct.; the ideal or vague future, "if the others should be hard pressed." Look up the Grammar on conditional sentences. — habeant: what use of the subjunct.? Note the sequence. — expeditum receptum, "a ready retreat." — praestant: note the two meanings of praesto: 1. intrans. "stand at the head of, surpass, excel, be better"; 2. trans. "cause to stand forth, exhibit, display." — brevi (spatio), "within a short space." — consuērint = consuēverint, perf. subj. of result, after tantum efficiunt uti.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Decline ipse terror, magnus strepitus, multi aurigae, declivis locus (sing. and plur.), usu cotidiano, breve spatium, longus tēmo.
2. Give rule for gender of masculine nouns in third decl.
3. Principal parts of curro, flecto, praesto.

Chapter 34.

Quibus rebus: abl. of means, mod. perturbatis. — perturbatis nostris: elther dat. wth auxilium tulit or abl. abs. — novitate: abl. of cause, "owing to the novel mode of fighting." — adventu: abl. of location of time or time when. — alienum (tempus), "unfavorable" (llt. "another person's"). — suo loco: the usual in is omitted. — geruntur: note the tense with dum. See chaps. 22 and 32. — qui erant in agris reliqui, "the rest (of the Britons) who were in the fields." — continuos dies: acc. of extent of time. — quae continerent: rel. of characteristic and subjunct. of result, "such as to keep," llt. "which would keep"; quae = tales ut eae. — sui liberandi: trans. as if se liberandi; "of freeing themselves"; sui with the gerundive in the singular may be explained by the fact that the so-called reflexive form sui, commonly translated "themselves," is really the neut. sing. gen. of suus, a, u:n, meaning "their own personality." — si expulissent, "If they once expelled"; the pluperf. subjunct. here does not express "contrary to fact"; it is the indirect historical sequence for fut. perf. indic. of direct discourse. Trans. into Latin "a great opportunity will be given us, if we expel" (shall have expelled). — daretur: why subjunct.?

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Principal parts of consisto, lacesto, praedico (are), praedico (ere), pello, expello, cogo, venio.
2. Gender of dies, res, tempestas, pars.

Chapter 35.

ut effugerent: noun clause of weakened result, in apposition to id. — si essent pulsi: pluperf. subj. for fut. perf. indic. of direct discourse; see expulissent, chap. 34. — tanto spatio, "over as much ground," a rare use of the abl., where one would expect the acc. of extent. It may be identified wth the abl. of the route over which or way by which, which is rather common. See Hale and Buck's Latin Grammar, 426, b. — Quos, the obj. of secuti: "Having followed these as far as their speed and strength would permit."

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Principal parts of video, fugio, nanciscor, constituo, verto, occido, occido, caedo, cado, cedo, incendo.
2. Compare diu, longè, lâtè, grâviter, bene.
3. Distinguish meanings of vis (sing). and vires (plur.).

Chapter 36.

His : dat. of interest with duplicavit. — die : abl. abs., denoting cause, "as the day of the equinox was at hand, and his ships were weak"; why die fem. (see Grammar)? — hiemi : dat. Indirect obj. of subiciendum. — quae = et eae, trans. "and his ships" because naves is omitted in rendering naves solvit, "cast off." — incolumes, "unharmed"; disting. from tutus, "safe" (before the event). — delatae, see defero.

Chapter 37.

cum essent expositi: the common pluperf. subjunct. after cum, "when"; trans. as indic.; see note on processisset, chap. 32. — con-tenderent: note sharply the change in tense; also reason for subjunct. (See previous note.) — proficisciens, pacatas: a good example of the difference between the so-called pres. and the perf. participle. — non ita magno numero, "with not so large a number" (as afterwards appeared on the scene); numero, abl. of manner or circumstance; there is no need of supplying the sense of cum, "together with"; in fact, it might be explained as abl. abs. or abl. of the situation. — si nöllent: historical Indirect in a quoted subord. clause, for pres. Indic. of direct discourse; trans. into Latin "lay down your arms if you do not wish yourselves to be killed." — sese here does not denote the speaker, but is closely reflexive to its own verb. — orbis facto: the orbis or hollow circle, with officers and baggage in the centre, corresponded to the modern hollow square. It was a desperate measure in case of attack from all sides. Note the gender of orbis. — ad clamorem, "in response to the outcry"; hominum belongs to millia. — suis auxilio: double dat.; see chap. 20. — amplius horis = amplius quam horas, acc. of extent of time; amplius, plus and minus may omit quam without disturbing the case. Here the usual change to the abl. is made. — occidērunt : what difference in meaning between this and occidērunt? — Postea quam : to be taken as a conjunctive phrase, "after." — vero marks the contrast between the desperate but successful defence of the Romans and their relief. Notice that magnus numerus is evidently intended as a stronger expression than complures.

Principal parts of caedo, cado, occido, occido, verto.

Chapter 38.

rebellionem : note that this is not best translated rebellion, but "renewal of war"; rebellionem facio = "I renew the war." — siccitates : it is not common to find an abstract noun in the plur.; trans. as sing. — quo reciperen = (aliquem locum) ut eo reciperen, "a place to retreat"; quo (adv.) = ut eo is a rei. of characteristic followed by the subjunct. of purpose. — habērent : subjunct. of cause after cum. — quo perfugio : modifier of erant usi. — anno : abl. of time when. — constituo : review the different meanings of this verb. — Eo : adv. — ex litteris, "in pursuance of a despatch from Caesar"; note the meanings of littera in sing. and plur.; ex here suggests the idea of a result growing out of something. — supplicatio : "thanksgiving." The ceremony was really a humiliation before the gods; lit. "a bending of the knee," and at times meant supplication for delivery from distress. It was usually a three days' cessation from business, but on special occasions the time might be increased. The people each day went in solemn procession to the temples of the gods, whose images were taken down and placed, as though banqueting, before richly spread tables. On this occasion it was a political triumph for Caesar, secured by his friends in the face of bitter opposition from his enemies in the Senate.

CAESAR, DE BELLO GALLICO

NOTES

BOOK V

Chapter 1.

ut . . . consuērat (= consuēverat): what does ut with the indic. mean? — legatis imperat uti naves aedificandas curent, “orders the lieutenants to see to the building of ships”; see Grammar on Noun Clauses of Purpose with verbs of asking, commanding, etc. Note this use of the gerundive with curo in a causative or factitive sense, “get a thing done.” — quam plurimas possint, “as many as they possibly can,” more emphatic than quam plurimas. — possint, subjunct. because in a subord. clause virtually quoted in indirect discourse. — modum formamque, “style and shape.” — subductionesque: some read subductionisque. The former is acc. plur. governed by ad (“for the purpose of beaching them”); the latter is gen. sing. depending upon celeritatem (“quickness in beaching”). — facit humiliores: sc. eas. — quam quibus as though quam eas quibus, quibus, abl. with ūtī. — id (facit) eo magis, “this (he does) the more”; eo, adv. of degree. — minus magnos, minus adv. of degree. — fieri: give the exact force of the tense. — ad onera (transportanda) ac multitudinem transportandam, “for transporting cargoes and the large number of baggage-animals”; transportandam, gerundive, agrees with the nearer noun multitudinem, but belongs in sense also to onera. — paulo latiores (eas facit). — Has actuarias imperat fieri, “these he orders to be built as rowing-vessels”; actuarias, objective pred. adj.; impero commonly takes ut and subjunct., but in the passive the inf. phrase may be used. — quam ad rem = ad quam rem. — multum: adv., really acc. of extent. — adportari jubet: compare with the construction of imperat. — vastari: note the tense. — audiebat: note the tense. — civitatibus milites imperat: see note on obsides imperat, Book IV, chap. 27; “levies soldiers upon the states" or "demands soldiers from the states": dat. of the person receiving the command and acc. of the thing ordered. — qui doceant: note the mood; subjunct. of purpose after the rel. of characteristic; "send envoys to inform him." — publico consilio, "by public consent" or "as a matter of state policy." — demonstrant: indic. of fact, but demonstrant would be subjunct. of purpose with qui. — paratos facere, "ready to make," a use (rare in Latin) of the complementary inf. with an adj. — omnibus rationibus, "by every method," lit. "all means." — ad certam diem, "by a definite day." — fecerint: perf. subjunct. because in a quoted subord. clause, primary sequence; the direct discourse would call for the fut. perf. indic., "unless you shall have done so." — arbitros dat: "appoints judges" or "arbitrators." — qui aestiment: note the subjunct., "to estimate the damages and fix the penalty." What would historical sequence call for here?

Chapter 2.

Eo cum venisset . . . : observe the following outlines in translating: Eo cum venisset, omnia hibe circumivit atque, singulari militum studio, sescentas (naves) ejus generis cuius . . . et longas (naves) viginti octo instructas (esse) invenit, "on arriving there, he made the rounds of all the winter camps, and found that through the extraordinary zeal of the soldiers," etc. — singulari studio: abl. of cause or means. — in, "in the midst of." — cuius = cuius generis naves; trans. as if quod. — supra demonstravimus: in chap. 1, the humiliores et latiores actuarias. — abesse ab eo, quin . . . : lit. "were not far from this, but that they might be launched in a few days"; say "were within a little of being in a position to be launched in a few days." Even this is overloaded as compared with ordinary Eng. "they were within a few days of being ready for launching." — quin: see Grammar on Subjunctive Uses of quin with certain negative expressions of doubting, hindering, lacking, etc. — paucis diebus: abl. of time within which. — negotio: dat. with praefuerant. — quid velit: subjunct. of an indirect question. — trajectum: noun = "crossing," "passage across." — millium: gen. of description with trajectum; passuum, partitive gen. depending upon millium. — Huic rei: dat. of purpose; "for this purpose." — quod satis esse . . . :

"what seemed to be sufficient soldiers"; militum, partitive gen. depending upon satis. — legionibus expeditis: see Introduction, under Baggage.

Chapter 3.

plurimum valet, "is the strongest"; plurimum: adv., really acc. of extent. — Galliae: partitive gen. — equitatu: abl. of specification. — ex quibus alter, "of these the one," i.e. Cingetorix; this alter would naturally be followed by another = "the other"; but Indutiomarus is used instead. — simul atque, "as soon as." — in officio futuros (esse), "would be loyal." — neque = et non. — defecturos, "fall away from (or desert) the friendship of the Roman people." — gererentur: subjunct. of an indirect question. — At Indutiomarus . . . observe the following order: at Indutiomarus equitatum . . . cogere instituit bellumque parare iis abditis . . ., "But Ind. determined to collect cavalry and infantry and prepare for war, hiding in the . . . (which with vast extent, etc.) all those who" — ingenti magnitudine: abl. of manner mod. pertinet. — et familiaritate . . ., "both by their intimacy with"; Cingetorigis, gen. of possession, "the close connection of C. (with themselves)." The outline of this sentence is as follows: sed posteaquam principes venerunt et . . . petere coeperunt (quoniam . . . vererentur), Indutiomarus (veritus . . .) mittit; "After several chieftains came . . . and began . . ., Ind., fearing . . . sent . . ." — Sese . . .: supply "saying" before this. — idcirco, "for the following reason," referring to the quo clause. — noluisse: note the tense; compare with nolle. — ad eum = ad Caesarem. What would he say in addressing C.? — quo facilius (quo = ut eo), "that he might the more easily"; see Grammar on quo, of purpose, with comparatives. — in officio contineret, "keep the state loyal." — ne, "for fear lest." — omnis nobilitatis discessu, "through the withdrawal of all the nobility"; discessu, abl. of cause. — esse civitatem: acc. and inf. continuing his statement, "that consequently," etc. — sese: Ind. himself, the speaker. — ad eum, "to Caesar." — si permetteret: historical indirect for fut. indic. of direct discourse.

Trans. into Latin: "The state is under my control and I, if you will permit, will come to you and intrust my own fortunes and those of the state to your keeping."

Chapter 4.

Caesar, etsi: Caesar is the subject of jussit. To avoid this long gap between subject and verb, say, "although C. knew." — dicerentur, deterret̄eret: note the tense; why the mood? — ab instito consilio, "from his original purpose." — omnibus . . ., "when all things . . ." — in iis, "and among them." — filio: abl. abs. continuing, or repeating, the construction of his aductis. — consolatus . . ., "he consoled Ind. and urged him to . . ." ; the uti clause is a noun clause of weakened purpose, obj. of hortatus est. — quod ("which") . . . : trans. "this he both knew to be done by him in accord with this man's merits, and he thought . . ." — cum . . . tum . . ., "both . . . and . . ." — merito: abl. of cause. — magni interesse, "it to be very important"; magni (pretii), gen. of value; look up Grammar on interest and refert. — valere: this inf. phrase is the subject of interesse; "that the influence of the man (eius) whose remarkable good will . . ., should be as great as possible. . ." — perspexisset: subjunct. because the subord. clause is really quoted in indirect discourse from Cæsar's thought. — Id factum . . ., "at this fact Ind. was annoyed; namely, that his influence should be lessened"; the phrase gratiam minui is in apposition to id factum. — qui . . . fuisset: qui = cum is (causal rel.), hence subjunct.: "whereas he had already been of an unfriendly spirit towards us." — animo: abl. of description; see Grammar. — hoc dolore: abl. of cause, "owing to this resentment, his anger became much more inflamed." — exarsit: from exardesco.

Principal parts of tango, dēsero, consulo, lābor, exardesco?

Chapter 5.

portum Itium: see map of Gaul. — codem: adv., "to the same place." — omnibus rebus: abl. of specification, "in all respects," or abl. of means, "with all things." — Eodem convenit: notice that Latin says "assemble to a place," where we say "assemble at." — quorum . . . perspexerat: does this denote the fact stated independently by the narrator, or part of the quoted thought implied in decreverat? How would these two be distinguished in Latin in this subord. clause? — decreverat: see verb decerno. — abesset: historical indirect for fut. ind. of direct. He would say to himself, "I fear an uprising when I shall be absent." — Galliae: is this a possessive or an objective gen.?

Principal parts of revertō, decerno, instruo.

Chapter 6.

una cum, "along with." — in primis: adv. phrase = "particularly," "especially"; lit. "among the foremost." — rerum, imperii: objective genitives with adj. of desire; see Grammar on adjectives that are modified by the gen. — animi, auctoritatis: gen. of description, mod. eum, "high-spirited and possessing great influence." — Accedebat huc quod: "there was the additional fact that"; the quod clause is the subj. of accedebat. — deferri: note the tense, not "had been offered"; the offer was still standing. — quod dictum, "this statement"; dictum, the neut. of the perf. part. used as a noun. — graviter ferebant, "resented." — neque . . . audebant, "but they had not the courage to send"; neque, as often, is adversative here, = sed non. — Ille: Dunnorix. — primo, "at first." — omnibus precibus, "by all sorts of entreaties." — quod . . . timēret: not "because he actually feared the sea," but "because he alleged he feared." On what principle does quod here take the subjunct.? See Grammar. — insuetus navigandi: see note on cupidum imperii in this chapter. — quod diceret: a peculiar case of attraction; trans. simply "because he said," as if it were quod dicebat; it does not mean "because he said he said." — religionibus, "religious considerations," or "scruples." — uti remanerent: noun clause, obj. of hortatus est (really a weakened adverbial clause of purpose). — territare: best taken as complement of coepit from previous context; so interponere, poscere below; although these infinitives may be taken as historical = territabat, etc. — fieri, "that not without cause was it happening that"; acc. and inf. governed by the verb of saying implied in territare; the ut clause is a weakened clause of result, acting as a noun, subj. of fieri. — nobilitate: abl. of separation.

— id esse consilium . . .: “that this was Caesar's design, to take over into Gaul and kill there all those whom he feared,” etc.; notice traductos necaret = traduceret et necaret; ut . . . necaret is in apposition to id; vereretur, verb of a quoted subord. clause.

— reliquis: ind. obj. of interponere. — jusjurandum ut . . . administrarent, “an oath (to the effect) that they would carry out”; the ut clause is in opposition to jusjurandum, implying purpose in a weakened way. — ex usu, “of advantage to.” — intellexisse: represents a fut. perf. ind. of direct discourse; quod intellexerimus, administrabimus. — communi consilio: abl., “by common consent.” — deforebantur: note the tense.

Decline omnis nobilitas, commune consilium, jusjurandum.

Chapter 7.

quod . . . tribuerat: “because he had so much respect for”; really “had assigned (in his own mind) so much importance to”; dignitatis, partitive gen. — coercendum (esse): bring out the full force of the gerundive. — posset: why subjunct.? Supply coerceri atque deterreri. — prospiciendum: supply esse statuebat. — ne quid . . . nocēre posset: “(precautions should be taken) so that he should be able to do no harm (to prevent him from doing any harm) to himself (Caesar) and the state”; quid is adverbial acc. of extent mod. nocēre; what verbs govern the dat.? — dabat operam ut: “exerted himself to”; what is the exact meaning of the tense? — nactus tempestatem: why not abl. abs.? — impeditis animis: “when the minds were occupied.” — retrahi: account for the infin.; see note on actuarias fieri, chap. 1.

— si vim faciat neque pareat, “if he offers violence and does not obey,” or “if he should offer,” etc. The pres. subj. here may be accounted for in two ways: 1. as primary sequence, indirect discourse (implied in jubet) or fut. indic., si faciet neque parebit, vivid future (see Conditional Sentences); 2. as a vague future.

— nihil . . . facturum: “thinking that this man in his (Caesar's) absence would in no way act as a sane person”; pro, “in accordance with,” “as befits.” — qui neglexisset, “seeing that he had ignored” (qui, causal rel. = cum is). — Ille enim: this implies an ellipsis, “(and in this he was not wrong) for”; compare Greek καὶ γὰρ. — civitatis: pred. gen. of possession, "belonged to a free state." — hominem: here appears to be contemptuous, "the fellow."

Which tenses of reverto are usually deponent?

Chapter 8.

His rebus gestis . . . : this sentence is too long to translate literally: turn relicto into a verb ("he left Labienus"), and put a period at solvit, saying at ipse "(while) he himself." Omit et (after solvit) and translate then, "He was carried on by . . . , but, about midnight the wind dropping, he was stayed in his course and, drifting too far (longius) . . . , beheld Br. passed by on his left" (sub sinistrā). — rei frumentariae: dat. of purpose, mod. providēret. — pro, "according to." — pari numero quem, "the same number as." — ad solis occasum, "towards sunset"; possibly "toward the West." — rursus, "back again" (= reversus). — remis contendit ut, "he rowed hard to." — caperet, "take," "reach"; a seaman would say "make." — quā = in quā. — egressum: a noun. — aestate: abl. of time, mod. cognoverat. — virtus, "endurance" (lit. "manliness"). — qui, "for they." — navigiis: abl. of means, mod. adaequarunt. — non intermisso . . . : here the abl. abs. denotes manner or means; "by not discontinuing." — Accessum est . . . : impersonal passive with navibus as abl. of means; trans. "Britain was reached by all the ships about noon." — neque: adversative = sed non, "but not an enemy." — ut cognovit: ut with indic., what force? — manūs, "bands," "forces." — conveniscent: the ordinary pluperf. subjunct. with cum of plain time; "just when they would have assembled"; trans. as if indic. In these when clauses referring to the past, Latin seemed to represent the fact as viewed through the eyes of another, i.e. a sort of oblique narration, the same as we so often meet in quoted subord. clauses. — perterritae: fem. because referring to magnae manūs. — quae: antecedent navium. — privatis (navibus). — sui commodi (causā), "for his own convenience." — erant visae (esse), "were seen (to be)." — discesserant, "had quit the shore."

Chapter 9.

castris: dat. of purpose, mod. idoneo. — Break up this sentence as follows: "C. landed his army and selected a place When he learnt . . . , he left . . . to act as . . . and hastened . . . , fearing," etc. — consedissent: why the mood? — qui essent: what use of the rel.? Explain these datives. — de tertīā vigiliā, "in the course of the third watch"; de means "at some time taken out of." — eo minus: eo, an adv. of degree = "the." — navibus: dat. of interest, mod. veritus; disting. naves vereor and navibus vereor. — deligatas, "fastened"; disting. deligo, ere, and deligo, are. — relinquebat: be careful of the tense. — praesidio navibusque, "over the guard and the ships"; do not mistake this for the "double dative"; what are the constructions of praeficio and praesum? — Illi: the enemy. — equitatu: abl. of manner or means. — naturā et opere, "by nature and by art." — arboribus succisis: abl. abs. denoting means, "by the cutting down of trees"; succisis from succido. — Ipsi: the men themselves as opposed to their fortifications. — rari: ap-positive adj. to ipsi, "in scattered parties." — ingredi: complement of prohibebant; trans. "from entering" (see Grammar on verbs of hindering). — testudine facta: the testudo here was a shelter consisting of shields held shingle-fashion overhead and resembling the shell of a tortoise. Sometimes testudo was applied to a portable shed, carried about as a shelter to men fighting or working beneath it. — aggere adjecto: a mound made of earth, sods, and any other material that could be carried in baskets or hands and heaped up. — eos fugientes: eos, the obj. of prosequi; the subject pron. of prosequi is not expressed; "C. forbade pursuing them in their flight." — et quod . . . et quod, "both because . . . and." — munitioni: dat. of purpose with relinqui.

Principal parts of relinquo, veto, coedo, succido, consumo.

Chapter 10.

in expeditionem, "as a flying column"; it meant an army moving rapidly and unencumbered by baggage (see Introduction). — aliquantum: acc. of extent. — itineris: partitive gen. — extremi: this is ambiguous; it might mean "the rear of the enemy," or "the rear of the pursuing force just visible from the camp." It is usually taken the latter way. — qui nuntiarent: rei. of purpose. — quod . . . subsisterent . . . possent: the reason here is a quoted one, part of the indirect discourse whose main statements are made by the infinitives adflitas esse, etc. — eae acceptum: acc. with inf. because part of the report.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Decline litus molle, arbores crebrae, pauca vulnera, is dies, superior nox.
2. Gender of navis, funis, vis, tempestus.

Chapter 11.

in itinere resistere, "defend themselves while on the march," i.e. not to discontinue their progress while beating off attacks from the rear. — sic ut, "namely that," a clause of result giving the general conclusion based upon what he saw. — amissis . . . , "although, etc." ; the abl. abs. here is concessive. — magno negotio, "at considerable trouble." — refici posse, "capable of being repaired." — Labieno: dat. — ut instituat: clause of weakened purpose, giving the substance of the command conveyed in his letter. It is a noun clause, obj. of scribit. — possit: if Caesar wrote posset, it would be a rather abrupt change to historical sequence in the midst of a sentence in vivid primary sequence; see sint and instituat. — iis legionibus: abl.; the legions treated as the means or instrument. — sint: the indic. sunt would be a parenthetical explanation of fact, not part of the quoted command. It does not seem natural. — multae operae: gen. of description. — commodissimum esse: the subject is the inf. phrase naves subduci, etc.; what is the relation of naves? — ne nocturnis . . . : lit. "not even the hours of the night being allowed to intervene for the labor of the soldiers"; trans. "the labor of the soldiers being discontinued not even during," etc.; observe the position of ne . . . quidem, inclosing the emphatic word. — quas ante (reliquerat), "as (he had left) before." — eodem: adv.; "to the same place." — majores . . . convenerant: read this sentence over rapidly as a study in the flexibility of Latin for purposes of eu-phony and emphasis. — summā imperii bellique administrandi: “the supreme command and management of the war”; summā, here a noun = “sum total.” — fines: obj. of dividit. — quod: rei. to flumen; explain the case of Tamesis. — millia: what case? — Huic . . . cum reliquis . . ., “between him and the other states continuous warfare had existed.” — adventu: abi. of means with permot. — toti bello . . .: what case? do not translate literally; say, “had appointed him commander-in-chief for the war.”

Chapter 12.

quos natos . . .: quos is the subject of natos (esse); the phrase quos natos (esse) is the subject of proditum (esse) and makes with it the object of dicunt; ipsei is the subject of dicunt; trans. “who according to their own tradition were born on the island”; another reading ipsā would mean “on the island itself.” — iis nominibus . . .: lit. “by those names of states”; trans. “by the names of those states.” — quibus: abi. of source, mod. orti; “from which they were sprung before coming thither”; lit. “from which being sprung they came.” — illato: what difference between bellum infero and bellum gero? — Hominum est . . .: lit. “of people the multitude is boundless”; trans. “the population is vast.” — Gallicia: adj.; “Galiic (buildings),” “those of the Gauls.” — consimilia: con intensifies; “exactly like.” — ad certum pondus . . ., “ascertained to be of a definite weight”; lit. “tested to a . . .” — pro nummo: pro = “as,” “for”; lit. “instead of,” “as the equivalent of.” — Nascitur, “is produced,” or “found.” — exigua: contrast Caesar’s information with the state of affairs as realized in modern times. — aere . . .: bring out the emphasis; “the copper they use (is) imported.” — cujusque, “every”; what kind of gen. is generis? — ut, “as.” — haec: notice the gender; “these (creatures).” — animi voluptatisque causā, “for fancy and amusement.” — Loca: trans. “the climate.” — frigoribus: abl. abs., “the cold being less intense.”

Gender of pondus, aes, fagus, abiēs, lepus, ānser, fās; plur. of locus, frigus.

Chapter 13.

triquetra : adj., supply est. — natura, abl. of specification. — angulus, "corner." — alter, "the one"; as opposed to inferior, "the lower" (instead of a second alter, "the other"). — quo: adv., "whither." — appelluntur: disting. from appellantur; "are brought to port," "put in," "call" (of a ship, but not to be confused with appello, "I call"). — inferior: Cornwall; does it look south? — Alterum (latus), "the second side." — vergit, "tends." — ad Hispaniam: how accurate was C.'s geography? — quā ex parte, "off which side." — dimidio minor, "smaller by half"; dimidio, abl. of difference. — pari spatio transmissus: transmissus is a noun, "passage across"; spatio is abl. of description, mod. transmissus. — atque: with expressions of comparison ("same," "equal," "other") atque is rendered as or than, an out-growth of its meaning and; "of the same distance as." — In hoc medio cursu, "in the midst of this channel." — Mona: the island Anglesey, still called by its inhabitants "Mon"; not the Isle of Man, which was formerly called Monopia; account for the case of Mona. — subjectae (esse), "to lie in the way," "to be opposite." — dies continuos: acc. of extent; noctem is the subject of esse. — sub brūmā: "about the time of the winter solstice" (brūma = brevissima dies, 22d day of Dec.); notice here sub with the abl. denoting location at rest in time; not the same as in sub noctem, "at the approach of night," acc. of implied motion. — de ec, "concerning that." — reperiebamus (imperf.): implies a continued effort to discover. — nisi certis . . ., "except that by accurate water-measurements"; ex aqua = "obtained from water" by means of the water-clock (clepsydra). — ut fert opinio, "as their opinion has it," "according to their opinion." — millium: gen. of description, mod. longitudo; the exact length is 590 Eng. = 610 Roman miles. — Tertium (latus), "the third side," i.e. the northeast side; C.'s geography is of course slightly astray. — angulus . . . spectat, "the general direction is towards." — in longitudinem: not literally "in length," though translated that way. — millia octingenta: acc. of extent; the true measurement is 550 Eng. = 570 Roman miles. — in circuitu: a departure from the ordinary abl. of specification without a preposition. — mil- lium, gen. of description, mod. insula; passuum, partitive gen. mod. millium.

Principal parts of two verbs appello.

Chapter 14.

a Gallica . . . , "differ much from the Gauls in custom"; iit. "from Gallic custom." — frumenta: plur. = different kinds of grain. — quod . . . efficit: quod, rel. pron. — hoc, "on this account;" abi. of means. — horridiore aspectu, "of a more dreadful appearance," abi. of description to the subject of sunt; the readings horridiores and horribiliores would make aspectu an abi. of specification. — capillo, abi. of description. — deni, "groups of ten"; what class of numeral? — eorum: pred. gen. of possession. — habentur, "are deemed." — quo (adv. whither), "into whose house." — deducta, "married." — quaeque: fem. of quisque.

Principal parts of sero, vivo, difero, rado.

Decline lac, caro.

Chapter 15.

proelio: abi. of manner. — tamen ut, "with the result, however, that." — fuerint, "proved"; perf. denoting the final occurrence. — cupidius, "too eagerly." — ex suis, "of their number." — illi, "the enemy." — spatio, "interval" (of time) — nostris: abi. abs. — in eos facto, qui, "upon those who." — duabusque: omit "and"; say "when two cohorts," etc. — subsilio: dat. of purpose. — his primis: a continuation of the abi. abs. cohortibus. — spatio: abi. abs. — novo genere pugnae, "new kind of fighting." — incolumes: disting. from tutus. — Illi, "the enemy."

Principal parts of configo, compello, consisto, perrumpo.

Chapter 16.

cum . . . dimicaretur: a causal clause; dimicaretur is impersonal. — possent, auderent: subjunct. because the subord. clauses express part of what was perceived, being quoted in virtual indirect discourse; they represent facts viewed only as possibilities through the eyes of the person quoted as perceiving them. — cedentes,

"fugitives" (lit. "retreating ones"). — minus aptos, "ill adapted"; minus, adv. practically = nōn. — hujus generis: gen. of description, mod. hostem. — equites . . . dimicare: still depending upon intellectum est. — illi, "the enemy." — consulto: adv. — cederent: why subjunct? also desilirent, contenderent? — dispari proelio: abl. of manner. — ratio, "method." — et cedentibus et . . ., "both to those retreating and to those pursuing"; we should express this, "brought just the same danger to pursuers as to the pursued." — par atque idem: the same in amount and identical in character. — Accedebat huc ut, "there was the additional fact that"; ut clause of weakened result, subject of accedebat. — intervallis: abl. of manner, or it might be interpreted as abl. abs., both amounting to the same thing in meaning. — haberent, etc.: explain these subjunctives. — alios alii, "one another." — integri et recentes, "unwearied and newly arrived men." — defatigatis: dat., indirect obj.

Chapter 17.

rari: adj. = in scattered parties. — lenius, "less vigorously." — sic uti . . ., "in such a way that they did not keep back from." — finem sequendi fecerunt: trans. freely. — subsidio: ndo and its compounds govern an abl. of the thing relied upon. — cum . . . vidarent: causal, telling why they relied. — ege runt: see ago, "drive." — sui colligendi: gerundive, mod. sui, = se colligendi, gerund governing se as obj.; see note on sui liberandi, Book IV, chap. 34. — consistendi, desiliendi: gerunds. — quae undique convenerant auxilia = ea auxilia quae, etc., "those reinforcements which"; lit. "what reinforcements." — summis copiis: abl. of manner, "in full force."

Chapter 18.

ad flumen in fines: notice the Latin idiom: two adverbial phrases of motion, mod. duxit, "to the river (and) into the territories," where we should use one phrase of motion, mod. "led" and an adjectival phrase, mod. "river," "to the river Thames (i.e. a place) in the territory." — quod flumen, "which river." — omnino here = "only." — hoc = (in) hoc (loco). — ad alteram ripam, "on the other bank," i.e. adjoining. — eiusdem generis . . . sudes, "stakes of the same kind." — flumine: abl. of means, mod. segebantur. — cognitis a captivis: a = "from." — ea celeritate, "with such speed." — cum . . . extarent, "although only their heads were above water"; what is the literal translation? — capite: abl. of means, just about the same here as the abl. of difference used with comparatives. — ut . . . non possent: result or purpose? What difference in the negative? — ripas dimitterent, "quit the banks."

Principal parts of ago, tego, tango, figo, frango, etc.

Chapter 19.

contentionis, "of keeping up the strife." — relictis, "being left"; trans. "keeping about 4000." — servabat, "was fed" note carefully the tense. — excedebat, "kept withdrawing." — iiis regionibus: abl. of the route followed or way by which; see in quibus; say "in those regions through which." — compe'lebat, give the tense its value: "would," etc. — cum . . . ejecerat . . . emittebat: see note on these tenses in Book IV, chap. 26; "when ever our cavalry sallied forth . . . , he would let loose . . . and engage . . . and (all the while) kept hindering." — vagari prohibebat: complementary inf.; what is the construction with other verbs of hindering? See Grammar on quin and quominus. — Relinquebatur ut, "the result was that." — neque . . . et: take neque as = et non; "both refused to allow (did not allow) . . . and . . ." ; or, better, omit "both." — discedi: impersonal passive; "a departure to be made," or "his men to depart." — longius, "any great distance." — tantum noceretur, "only so much injury was done"; tantum, acc. of extent; noceretur, impersonal, why subjunct.? — in agris vastandis, "in the way of devastating." — hostibus: dat. with noceretur. — quantum . . ., "as the legionary soldiers could accomplish by toilsome marching."

Chapter 20.

Interim Trinobantes . . .: an awkward sentence unless broken up; take out ex qua . . . vitaverat, and treat it as a separate sentence after the rest, thus: "meanwhile the T. . . send envoys

. . . and promise. . . This was the state from which . . . His father . . ., while M. himself . . ." — fidem secutus, "espousing the cause of C." — petunt ut defendat, "ask him to protect"; ut clause of purpose, obj. of petunt. — qui praesit, "some one to be in authority"; rel. of characteristic in a clause of purpose. — His imperat obsides, "upon these C. levies hostages," or "from these he demands hostages"; his, dat. of person receiving the command; obsides, acc. of the thing demanded, = ut obstabdes darent. — exercitui: dat. of interest or the person benefited. — ad numerum, "to the (required) number."

Chapter 21.

militum injuria, "wrong-doing on the part of the soldiers"; militum, subjective gen. — quo: adv., "whither," "to which." — convenerit: perf. subjunct. in a quoted subord. clause. — satis magnus, "tolerably large," or "quite a large." — contendit, "hastens"; compare this meaning with that in chap. 17.

Gender of palus, pecus, impetus.

Chapter 22.

Dum . . . geruntur: what idiom in the tense? — ad mare (cf. ad ripam, chap. 18), "on the sea," i.e. close to the sea; reconcile this with the meaning in ad Cantium. — regionibus: dat., indirect obj. of praeverant. — de improviso, "unexpectedly" (lit. "from the unforeseen"). — imperat uti . . .: what kind of uti clause? — Cassivellaunus hoc proelio nuntiato . . .: an awkward sentence to render into Eng.; say, "Cass., when this battle was reported, as he had sustained so many losses, had had his territories devastated and especially as he was alarmed . . . sent envoys . . ." — neque multum, "and (since) not much"; neque = et non. — extrah!: some take this in the sense "wasted," i.e. if he remained in Britain; it seems better, however, to take it "spun out" or "employed" (on the continent). — quid vectigalis, "what tribute"; partitive gen. — penderet: dependent deliberative subjunct.; note the sequence. The direct deliberative would be quid pendat? "what is it to pay?" — interdicit atque imperat, "cautions and commands"; interdico commonly means "restrain" or "forbid." — ne noceat: negative purpose clause as obj.

of imperat, "not to," etc. ; observe the vivid sequence. — neu = et ne, used in purpose clauses ; neque = et non in clauses of fact.

QUESTIONS IN GRAMMAR

1. Distinguish pendo and pendo.
2. What case do praesum and noceo govern?
3. Explain the different constructions of impero.

Chapter 23.

quod, "because" ; this introduces the reason for returning in two trips. — commeatibus, "divisions," "relays" ; abl. of manner. — tot navigationibus : probably abl. abs., "the voyages being so many" ; but trans. "in so many voyages." — hoc (anno). — quae . . . portaret : subjunct. by attraction, because forming part of a result clause and sharing the idea of tendency or possibility ; it may be regarded as a clause of characteristic = talis ut ea, etc. — desideraretur, "was missing" ; lit. "looked for in vain." — remitterentur : certainly the subjunct. by attraction, coming under the result clauses of which caperent and reicerentur are the verbs. — et prioris . . . et quas : lit. "both after landing the soldiers of the first division and (those ships) which Lab. had caused to be built" ; Eng. requires symmetry in the "both . . . and" clauses : say "both those which had landed . . . and those which." — prioris : why not primi? — numero sexaginta, lit. EXERCISES

CAESAR, BOOK IV

NOTE. — The object of writing Latin is to ensure accurate knowledge of the language, partly for the purpose of mental training and partly with a view to future reading. No study is of value unless pursued in the scientific spirit, and scientific study means: —

1. The accurate and painstaking observation of facts and laws.
2. Careful exercise of the memory.
3. Practical application, or the obtaining of results through the individual efforts of the student. In natural science this is called laboratory work. In its elementary stage it does not consist in making new or startling discoveries, but in learning to handle materials.

Applied to Latin this "laboratory work" is to be found in the reconstructive process known as Latin Composition. It serves the purpose of mental drill and fixes the facts of the language clearly in the mind for future use. A finished Latin style is the result of years of study and practice. For the university matriculant the best results can be obtained by concentrating on vocabulary and grammar as applied to sentence structure. Continuity and gracefulness of style must be left to a more advanced stage.

Chapter 17

Word Review. — 1. at a distance, halt, resolve, show, gentle, gently, gentler, more gently, provoke, on the day before, on the day after, at noon, at midnight, at daybreak, at sunset, at nightfall, at 2 A.M., at 2 P.M., in three days, on the third day. — 2. fodder, I forage, suddenly, make a sharp attack, put an end to pursuit, repulse, rely upon, support, drive headlong, collect, give an opportunity, flight, forthwith, reinforcements, depart, ever, full forces, strive.

Exercise. — 1. When Caesar saw that the enemy had taken up their position at some distance from the river, he resolved to display a few men on the hills which were in front of the camp. 2. He ordered (impero) an attack to be made at noon more fiercely than on the day before, and the fighting to be continued (that it should be fought) till evening. 3. In the afternoon he sent out several cohorts to forage in the fields which were in the rear of the camp, but, the enemy making a sharp attack upon them, he promptly ordered a general advance to be made (his men to advance in full force) and the enemy to be driven back. 4. The latter retired some distance to the neighboring hills, and after awaiting reinforcements till sunset, decided that they ought not to keep up the struggle any longer.

Chapters 18 and 19

Word Review. — 1. altogether, cross on foot, with difficulty, notice, the other bank, draw up, sharp stake, fasten in front, beneath the water, cover, send forward, immediately (2), follow up, speed, withstand, conmit one's self to flight. — 2. lay aside hope, dismiss, watch, freely, I plunder, lay waste, road, fear (noun), wander, line of march, allow (suffer), fire (in general), a fire (caused for purpose of destruction), I set on fire, harm.

Exercise. — 1. Having crossed the Thames on foot he drew up the bulk of his forces on the opposite bank and awaited Caesar. 2. The latter, learning his plan from prisoners and deserters, sent forward cavalry and ordered them to ford the river and compel the enemy to quit the banks. 3. Cassivellaunus, giving up all hope, withdrew from the scene, and thereafter merely watched the movements of our army from the hilltops. 4. Whenever he thought an opportunity was afforded, he would emerge from the woods, and after making a swift attack, would betake himself suddenly by some by-path to the impassable woods again.

Chapter 20

Exercise. — Meanwhile, Cassivellaunus having been driven out of the open country (fields), the Trinobantes sent envoys and asked Caesar to protect them from ill treatment by their enemies. Their speech was as follows: "We promise to give you hostages, and we will do all you command. Send some one to occupy our throne and command our army. If you do this we will espouse your cause and the man you send (shall have sent) will never have to flee for his life (death will never have to be avoided by flight)."

Chapter 21

Exercise. -- Several other tribes now sent in deputations and said they were willing to surrender. They informed him where Cassivellaunus was hiding, and promised to lead his forces into the woods and marshes of this enemy. The latter, having strongly intrenched himself, was awaiting an inroad from Caesar in one of (ex) his towns. When Caesar had delivered his assault upon this town on two sides, the natives, after a short delay, rushed out of the town and many were slain.

Chapter 22

Exercise. — Meanwhile Cassivellaunus had despatched messengers to the kings of Kent, and ordered them to gather forces and make a sudden descent upon Caesar's naval camp. The Romans, when this attack was made, sallied forth and inflicted considerable loss upon them. Cassivellaunus, now giving up all hope, surrendered and agreed to pay tribute to the Roman people.

Chapter 23

Exercise. — 1. I must repair my ships and take back my army. 2. He hoped to receive these hostages by the fifth day. 3. He ordered these ships to be launched. 4. He said he would carry back the army in two divisions, because he had many prisoners and had lost not a few ships. 5. If Labienus had caused more ships to be built, Caesar would have brought all his (men) back safe in one trip. 6. Some of the first convoy having been driven back to the continent, Caesar stowed the rest (of his men) closely and set sail shortly after nine o'clock in the evening. 7. Land having been sighted at day-break, they were all disembarked in safety before noon.

VERGIL

AENEID, Book II, 1-505

VERGIL, AENEID II

INTRODUCTION

PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO

70 B.C. — 19 B.C.

Life and Works

Early Education. — Publius Vergilius Maro¹ was born in 70 B.C. in Andes, a settlement of Cisalpine Gaul or, as we should call it, northern Italy, near Mantua. His parents were humble rustics, but gave their son the best education their means would allow. At the age of twelve he was sent to school in Cremona; at sixteen, having assumed the "toga virilis" (or garb of manhood), he went to Mediolanum (Milan). Here he remained one year. Thence in 53 B.C. he removed to Rome for instruction in rhetoric and philosophy. His tastes favored philosophy rather than rhetoric.

The Bucolics or Eclogues. — How long he stayed in Rome we do not know, but he must have made the acquaintance of some very influential men. In 41 B.C. we find him back in Cisalpine Gaul, living on his farm. From this he was ejected by one of the soldiers to whom land had been assigned by the victorious Triumvirs.¹ At this time he began the writing of his earliest important poems, the Bucolics or Eclogues.² They are ten short pastoral poems, dealing with shepherd life or with passing events as viewed from the standpoint of a simple rustic. The Eclogue known as the first had for its theme his gratitude to Octavianus for the restitution of his farm from which a soldier had expelled him. Another deals with his friendship for Asinius Pollio, governor of the district, to whose influence he largely owed the protection accorded him in regard to his property. The Eclogues were written between 43 and 37 B.C.

The Georgics. — The scene of his life now shifted to Rome and Naples, where he made the acquaintance of Maecenas, afterwards the prime minister of Augustus. During this period he also travelled in southern Italy and probably in Greece. Maecenas took Vergil, along with other literary men of the time, under his protection, and Vergil became so intimate with him as to introduce the younger poet Horace to his notice. At the suggestion of Maecenas, Vergil wrote the Georgics (Greek, γεωργός, a husbandman), a didactic poem on the chief operations of farming. Book I deals with field culture or the growing of grain; Book II, with trees and vines; Book III, with cattle and horses; and Book IV, with bees. The object was not so much to give instruction as to ennoble or idealize agriculture as the favorite occupation of well-to-do Romans of his day when not engaged in war. Maecenas probably wished, by the help of Vergil, to turn cultured men's thoughts away from war and thus lay the foundation for the policy of peace which afterwards characterized the rule of Augustus. The poem was completed and read to Augustus in 29 B.C., after the triumphant return of the emperor from the East.

² Minor poems of an earlier date are attributed to him; namely, the Morētum; the Cōpa; the Culex; the Ciris. His authorship of these, however, is doubtful.

NOTE.—To understand Vergil's life, the pupil should take his Roman History and study carefully the events connected with the death of Julius Caesar, the Second Triumvirate, the quarrel between Antony and Octavianus, and the magnificent rule of the latter as the Emperor Augustus.

The Aeneid, 29-19 B.C.—In 29 B.C., immediately after the assumption of the title of Augustus and all the imperial dignity it implied, Vergil was asked to undertake a great national epic. He chose as his theme the legendary connection between the ancestry of the Romans and Aeneas, one of the heroes of the Trojan war. The poem was called "Aeneis" or The Aeneid. The object was political. It sought: (1) to impress upon the Romans the grandeur of their ancestry as derived from the Trojan prince Aeneas, and through him from the gods (Aeneas was reputed to be the son of the goddess Venus); (2) to reconcile the Romans to the rule of Augustus as the lineal descendant of Aeneas and one who inherited his princely virtues.

Vergil's Death.—In 19 B.C., i.e. after ten years' labor, the Aeneid had been completed in the rough. Vergil intended to revise and polish it, but on returning from Greece, where he had met Augustus on his way home from the East, he was suddenly taken ill with fever and died at Brundusium. He was buried at Naples, and the following is said to have been the epitaph written by himself:—

"MANTVA ME GENVIT, CALABRI RAPVERE, TENET
NVNC PARTHENOPE : CECINI PASCVA
'RVRA DVCES."

"Born at Mantua ; died at Brundusium ; buried at Naples ; author of Bucolics, Georgics, and the Aeneid."

Publication of the Aeneid. — There is a commonly accepted story that on his death Vergil bequeathed his writings to his friends, Varius and Tucca, with instructions that they should publish nothing that he had not declared ready for publication. In the case of The Aeneid, which Vergil had wished them to burn, they disregarded his behest and gave the poem to the world after making such corrections as were absolutely necessary. In thus acting as his editors, they complied with the request of Augustus.

Personal Characteristics. — Vergil is described as large-framed, of a dark complexion and awkward in manner and appearance. Still he is reputed to have been an excellent reader. In private intercourse he was regarded as one of the gentlest souls of that select coterie of literary friends that graced the court of Augustus and enjoyed the hospitality of Maeceenas. His health was never good, a weakness of the throat and a proneness to headache being his constant afflictions.

Literary Style. — Vergil was scrupulously painstaking in composition. He devoted himself to but one work at a time, composed a limited number of verses each day, and laboriously revised everything he wrote. The gentleness and tender refinement of his disposition found expression in his writings. He produced little that was stirring or impassioned, picturesqueness in description and a sort of dreamy, half-melancholy pathos being his leading characteristics.

Even the young student will soon discover in Vergil's style certain mannerisms: e.g. a fondness of minutely elaborated similes; the use of hendiadys, a sort of redundancy by which "one idea is represented as two"; the use of the plural where one would expect the singular.

The student, as he translates, should study incidentally the beauties of poetic expression found in Vergil. The story, of course, of the Aeneid appeals to the imagination. The melody and rhythm of the heroic verse constitute a charm to the musical ear, and attention to the verse structure ought to be no small part of the study of the text. Vergil's word pictures may also be made a profitable basis of study, as regards vividness of detail and method.

It should be remembered also by young students that they are reading one of the masterpieces of the world's literature,—a poem which became famous immediately after its publication, and retained that fame down through the ages, ranking with such immortal works as Homer's Iliad, Milton's Paradise Lost, and Dante's Inferno.

It is a grand national epic. It was studied as a textbook by Roman boys at school in Vergil's own times. In the Middle Ages Vergil's was a name to conjure with, and his writings were held in almost the same reverential awe as Holy Scripture.

THE STORY OF THE AENEID

The City of Troy.—There was in ancient times a rich and powerful city called Ilium, or Troja (Troy), situated on a peninsula in the northwest of Asia Minor, near the Hellespont, or Dardanelles. Modern excavations have revealed the fact that on the same site more than one city of different dates have fallen to ruin and been buried by the drifting sands. To us the existence of Troy is poetical, not historical, though founded on historical fact. The Trojans were evidently of Greek origin, and were to that part of Asia Minor an imperial race. At the time of our romance, King Priam ruled, and the splendor of the city was far-famed.

The Trojan War.—According to Homer and other early Greek poets, there was a great war of ten years' duration between Greece and Asia, called the Trojan War, approximately dated 1090–1080 B.C. The beginnings of Greek history, as distinguished from legend or romance, are to be sought about 700 or 800 B.C. The following is the poetical version of the origin of the war. The Goddess of Strife or Discord had offered as a prize a golden apple, inscribed, “to the fairest,” which was claimed by each of the three deities, Venus, Juno, and Minerva. Paris, a son of King Priam, on account of a prophecy at his birth, that he would be the ruin of his country, had been exposed upon Mt. Ida, near Troy, and had been brought up as a shepherd boy. He was tending his flocks one day, when along came the three goddesses, disputing as to their claims to the Apple of Discord. They agreed to make Paris, who had grown up a beautiful youth, the umpire. Bribed by Venus by the promise of the most beautiful woman in the world for wife, he awarded the prize to her, the Goddess of Love and Beauty, thus incurring for himself and his ill-fated city the undying displeasure of the slighted two. Minerva's bribe of wisdom and Juno's of wealth and power he had rejected.

Venus made good her promise in the mischievous style that might have been expected. Paris, now reinstated in his princely rights, was on a visit to the court of Menelaus, king of Sparta. Menelaus was absent from home. His queen, Helen, prompted by Venus, became enamoured of Paris, and accompanied him back to Troy. Helen had been the much-sought-after beauty of all Greece. Many princes had sued for her hand, and at her betrothal all had sworn to her father to protect the honor of the man to whom she should be given as wife. Menelaus now reminded them of their oath. A mighty army and fleet were assembled from all Greece, under the command of Agamemnon, brother of Menelaus, and king of Argos and Mycenae. Troy was invested. Achilles, Ulysses, Diomede, the two Ajaxes, and many other valiant heroes brought each his quota of men. Ships were drawn up on shore and a camp was fortified. For ten years the siege lasted, and on the plain between the hillside and the sea many bloody battles were fought, in which, the poets say, the gods in form of men did combat on either side. Hector, Priam's son, and strongest champion of Troy, was slain by Achilles. Achilles in his turn was laid low by a shaft from the bow of Paris, which struck the hero in his only vulnerable spot, namely, the one where his mother, the sea-nymph Thetis, had grasped his heel when she dipped him, an infant, in the river Styx to insure his immortality. Achilles was succeeded by his son Pyrrhus, or Neoptolemus.

But the hopes of the Greeks flagged. Finally, by a ruse,—the trick of the Wooden Horse,—the city was taken and burnt. King Priam was slain at his own fainly altar.

Aeneas finds Rome. — Aeneas, a prince of royal blood, collects a band of refugees and, with his aged father, Anchises, and young son, Acanthus, or Iulus, starts out in quest of a new home. He is the agent of Fate. The destinies and household gods of Troy have been intrusted to him by the shade of Hector. In twenty ships for seven years he wanders round the shores of the Mediterranean, blindly seeking some distant western land. Sicily is visited, and here Anchises dies. A storm drives the fleet on the shores of Carthage, then a newly building city on the coast of Africa. Dido, a Phoenician princess, has founded the city, which is destined to be the rival of another city, Rome, as yet unbuilt. Aeneas, shipwrecked, strays into Carthage, meets the queen, and is received as a royal guest. Venus again plots mischief. Dido's heart — to protect Aeneas from ill usage in a barbarous land — is inflamed with love for Aeneas. Here the Aeneid begins.

The Aeneid. — Book I takes up the story with the wreck of Aeneas' fleet off Carthage. Aeneas is invited to linger in the city. A banquet is given in his honor. Aeneas at the close is asked to tell the story of the Fall of Troy and his subsequent wanderings.

Books II and III are Aeneas' story, II of the destruction of Troy, and III of his wanderings — the Latin Odyssey.

Book IV tells of the love of Dido, Aeneas' departure from Carthage, and the suicide of the queen.

Book V describes the return to Sicily and the anniversary games in memory of the death of Anchises.

Book VI recounts the arrival at the shores of Italy — the "promised land" — and the descent of Aeneas through the Cumæan Cave into the lower world and his interview with the shade of his dead father, Anchises.

Books VII-XII form the triumphant close. Aeneas lands on the shores of Latium, in the kingdom of Latinus. The king's daughter, Lavinia, is betrothed to Aeneas, but Turnus, a native prince, who is also a suitor for the hand of Lavinia, disputes the claim of Aeneas, and makes war upon the Trojans. After a long and bitter struggle, the latter are successful, and Aeneas slays his rival Turnus. Aeneas thus becomes a Latian prince, and the prophecy is fulfilled. The remnant of Troy has found a new home in the West.

Three hundred years later, 753 b.c., Romulus, a descendant of Aeneas, founds the city of Rome.

Metre of the Aeneid

1. The difference between modern and classical verse should be understood. The former is based upon accent, the latter was based upon time, quantity, or the length of syllables. Of course in the case of long syllables accent played a subsidiary part even in classical verse.

2. Dividing a verse into feet or measures (the same as bars in music) is called scanning.

3. Vergil's metre, like that of Homer, is the dactylic hexameter, or six-foot measure, having the dactyl (— ˘˘) as its basis. In the first four feet spondees (— —) may be substituted for dactyls on the same principle as in music, ⌂ ⌂ = ⌂ ⌂ ⌂. The fifth is almost invariably a dactyl and the sixth a spondee or unfinished dactyl in the form of a trochée (— ˘).

NOTE.—In all classic verse the final syllable of a line or verse might be long or short at pleasure. The pause at the end of the verse admitted of a certain elasticity in the final quantity, or perhaps was treated as a rest in music.

Scale

4. The following is the scale of the dactylic hexameter:—

1	2	3	4	5	6
- u u	- u u	- u u	- u u	- u u	- u ^

To get the cadence of this verse the student ought to read several lines of Longfellow's Evangeline, which is one of the few successful modern imitations.

5. A verse with a spondee in the fifth place is so rare as to be called a spondaic verse (see v. 68).

Quantity

The quantity of a syllable (or the time taken in its pronunciation) depended (1) upon the actual quantity of the vowel contained, or (2) upon the consonantal close of the syllable. The following rules of quantity will be useful:

Rules for Long or Short Syllables.

1. A syllable containing a naturally long vowel (see Grammar) is of course long.

2. A syllable in which a short vowel is followed by two consonants (not a mute and liquid, e.g. pr, cl, tr) is long.

The vowel is then sometimes said to be "long by position."

In this edition only the vowels naturally long are marked in the text. The student must cultivate the habit of distinguishing the syllables made long by "position," and should familiarize himself with the natural quantities of vowels so as to be able to scan independently.

3. A syllable in which a short vowel is followed by a mute and liquid may be long or short.

If the consonants belong to different words the syllable will most probably be long.

4. A vowel followed by a vowel is usually short,— exceptions Aeneās, ipsius, ūnius, etc.

Elision

Final syllables are sometimes to be slurred or rapidly passed over. They are then said to be elided and do not count in the metre.

Rule for Elision.

A final vowel or final syllable ending in m is elided when the next word begins with (a) a vowel or (b) the letter h, e.g.:

cōnticu|er(e) ūm|nes īn|tēnti|qu(e) ūra ten|ebat
 ēt brevi|ter Tro|jae sūp|rem(u)m aud|i^ure lab|orem
 quām qu(am) ani|mūs memin|iss(e) hor|rēt luc|tuque refugit

In the above, study (a) the elisions; (b) the syllables "long by position."

NOTE. — In the scanning marked above, the "long" mark extending over a vowel and a consonant, with a "short" mark over the vowel, means that the vowel is naturally short but that the syllable is "long by position."

Caesura

Theoretically the term "caesura" is applied to any "cutting" or break occurring when one word ends and another begins within the same foot, e.g. after conticuēre, after omnēs, and after ōra in the first verse of Book II quoted above.

The caesura, or caesural pause, is a break somewhere about the middle of the line. This is a regular part of the rhythm and is only slightly variable. It is usually in the third foot; occasionally, in the fourth.

The following shows the caesura after omnēs:

conticu|ēre om|nēs || in|tenti|qu(e) ūra ten|ēbat

In the following line the caesura comes in the fourth foot, after Aenēas:

Inde to|rō pater | Aenē|as || sic | ūrsus ab | altō

STORY OF BOOK II

Book I has told of the wreck near Carthage, of Aeneas' reception by Queen Dido, and the banquet held in his honor. The closing lines of Book I relate how the queen, after the feasting is over, calls upon Aeneas to tell the story of the fall of Troy and his subsequent wanderings.

1-56

A hush falls upon the revelling throng. Aeneas begins: "Woe unutterable, O queen, thou biddest me renew, how the Greeks o'erthrew the power of Troy and her lamentable kingdom. . . . Although my mind shudders at the remembrance and has recoiled in grief, I will begin."

The Horse and Laocoön. — He tells of the discouragement of the Greeks after ten years of fruitless strife; their last desperate artifice—the building of the Wooden Horse, filled with armed soldiers—and their pretended departure for home. Really, they withdrew only to the island of Tenedos to await developments. The Trojans rejoice at their departure, sail forth from the city, and in exultation view the scene of the deserted camp and mock the ugly monster left behind. Some propose to destroy it. But in an evil moment, Thymoetes, through either treachery or folly, suggests that it be brought within the city. Seeing the uncertainty of the multitude, Laocoön (Lā-ōc-o-on), a priest, warns them against the proposal, and to show his contempt, hurls a mighty spear at the hollow side of the beast. It gives forth an ominous sound. But the Trojans heed not.

57-198

Sinon. — Just here a youth, a Greek, Sinon by name, is dragged before King Priam. He has surrendered himself to some shepherds. He tells a pitiful tale of persecution by Ulysses and condemnation to death in the Grecian camp. He excites their pity, and the king, promising him the freedom of the city, bids him explain the meaning of the Horse. This is his opportunity. Cunningly he describes it as a substitute offering for the Palladium (Image of Pallas, or Minerva), which, having fallen from heaven, had been preserved as a sure protection by the Trojans, but which had been stolen from the temple of the goddess by the unholy hands of Diomede and Ulysses. If the Trojans violate or destroy the Horse, destruction for Troy has been prophesied by Calchas, the seer. But if, on the contrary, they bring the Horse into the city, then doom awaits the land of Greece. The Trojans are persuaded.

199-231

Laocoön's Fate. — As if to confirm the infatuation of the Trojans, a horrible portent is sent by the angry goddess. Twin serpents leave the shore of Tenedos and swim the sea, with blood-red manes and eyes of fire and hissing tongues rising high above the waves. Awe-struck stand the Trojans. The horrid creatures make for the shore, single out Laocoön and his two sons, and in their slimy coils strangle them and feed upon their limbs. They then seek the shelter of the temple and nestle at the feet of the goddess. The meaning is plain. It is a punishment for violation of the monster.

232-249

The Horse Enters. — No longer doubting, the Trojans proceed to bring the Horse into the city. A breach is made in the walls. Hempen ropes are hitched to the neck of the beast, wheels are placed beneath the feet, and, with dance and song, youths and maidens draw the structure, teeming with ruin, right into the heart of the city. A sound of arms is four times heard within, but the Trojans heed not. Cassandra, the frenzied daughter of King Priam, gifted with prophecy, warns them, but as usual her warning is not believed.

250-271

The Fleet returns; Sinon opens the Horse by Night. — In drunken slumber the Trojans rest from their revels. Night "in deep shade enshrouds both earth and sky and the wiles of the Greeks." The ships steal back from Tenedos. A torch signal from the commander's vessel prompts Sinon to draw the bolts and release the warriors from their voluntary prison. The guards of the gates are slain, the Greeks from outside pour in, and the work of destruction begins.

272-297

Hector's Shade warns Aeneas. — In the dead of night by Aeneas' bedside stands the spirit of the slain Hector, bearing the household gods of Troy. Disdaining answer to Aeneas' fond inquiries as to the cause of his long absence and squalid appearance, Hector informs Aeneas of the destruction now in progress, and urges him to flee and seek a new home for the household gods he now gives him.

298-434

Aeneas rushes into Battle. — Awakened, Aeneas rushes to his father's housetop in the suburbs, removed from the scene of strife, and sees in the distance the flames and hears the shouts and groans of men in combat. A mad desire to hurry to the rescue seizes him. Forth he rushes in arms, he knows not whither. Priest Panthus tells him that the city is doomed. Onward he rushes to the citadel. Companions gather round him, last of all Coroebus, the betrothed of Cassandra. Aeneas inflames them to desperate deeds, and many Greeks are laid low. Androgeos and his party are suddenly entrapped and slain. Their Grecian armor is taken as a disguise, and under this protection Aeneas and his men attack and kill many Greeks. The Greeks begin to flee, but an accident turns the tide of battle against the little band of Trojans. Coroebus sees Cassandra being dragged from the temple of Minerva. He rushes to her rescue, followed by his companions. They are now subjected to a twofold slaughter. Their friends on the roof of the shrine overwhelm them with darts, and the Greeks, returning, recognize the deception. Back from all parts of the city flock the Greeks. Aeneas' party is broken up and most of them are slain.

435-505

Destruction of Priam's Palace.—Resistance in the streets now being impossible, Aeneas passes to the palace of the king. Here the whole fury of the Greeks has centred. Pyrrhus, son of Achilles, in glittering armor leads on the attack. Above, on the roof, the Trojans offer desperate resistance, hurling down towers on the Greeks below. But numbers tell. Pyrrhus with battle-axe smashes in the great front door. An opening is forced, and women's shrieks resounding through the halls tell the story of capture and destruction. "Door-posts, proudly decked with barbaric gold and spoils, have fallen; the Greeks hold all where the fire fails."

506-804

Priam is slain; Aeneas flees.—The remainder of Book II describes the final tragedy in the fall of Troy; namely, the death of Priam, ruthlessly slain at his own altar by Pyrrhus. Sickened by the sight, Aeneas turns to his home, resolved to flee. On his way he espies Helen crouching in terror at the altar of Vesta. Of Vesta?—what an irony of fate? Vesta, the goddess of purity and chastity, protect a guilty woman? In rage he is about to slay her, when he is suddenly restrained by his goddess mother, who, true to her erring protégée, diverts the anger of her son and reveals to him by a sort of magic picture the gods—not Helen—as the true destroyers of Troy. Poor Helen is but the unhappy instrument of Fate in all this pitiful tragedy.

Thoughts of home, of aged father, tender wife, and infant son requiring protection, displace all desire for revenge on the guilty Helen. Home he hastens. With difficulty he persuades his obstinate sire, Anchises, lame and helpless, to accompany him in flight. With Anchises on his shoulders, the boy Ascanius (or Iulus) holding him by the hand, and wife Creusa hurrying after them, Aeneas passes through the dangerous streets seeking the open country. In the confusion and darkness Creusa is lost. On reaching the outskirts of the city, Aeneas discovers the loss and, frantic, rushes back in quest of his wife. Suddenly she appears to him as a phantom, bidding him be reconciled to her fate, confiding the child to his keeping, and urging him to seek a new home.

'Lacrimas dilectae pelle Creusa.
 Nōn ego Myrmidonum sēdēs Dolopumve superbās aspiciam aut Grāls servītūm mātribus ibō, Dardanis et divae Veneris nurus, sed mē māgna deūm genetrix his dētinet ōris.
 Iainque valē et nāti servā commūnis amōrem.
 Haec ubi dicta dedit, lacrimantem et multa volentem dicere dēseruit tenuēsque recessit in aurās.
 Ter cōnātus ibi collō dare bracchia circum ;
 ter frūstrā comprēnsa manūs effūgit imāgō par levibus ventis volucrique simillima sounō.
 Sic dēmum sociōs cōsumptā nocte revisō.
 Atque hīc ingentem comitum adfluxisse novōrum inveniō admirāns numerum, mātrēsque virosque, collectam exsiliō pūbem, miserābile vulgus.
 Undique convēnēre animis opibusque paratī,
 in quāscumque velim pelagō dēducere terrās.
 Iamque iugis suminae surgēbat Lūcifer Idae dūcēbatque diem, Danaique obsessa tenēbant limina portarum, nec spēs opis ullā dabātur ;
 cessi et sublātō montēs genitōre petivi.'

" This having said, she left me all in tears,
And minding much to speak ; but she was gone,
And subtly fled into the weightless air.
Thrice rought I with mine arms to accoll her neck ;
Thrice did my hands' vain hold the image escape,
Like nimble winds, and like the flying dream.
So, night spent out, return I to my feres :
And there, wondering, I find together swarmed
A new number of mates, mothers, and men ;
A rout exiled, a wretched multitude,
From each-where flock together, prest to pass
With heart and goods to whatsoever land
By sliding seas me listed them to lead.
And now rose Lucifer above the ridge
Of lusty Ide, and brought the dawning light.
The Greeks held the entres of the gates beset,
Of help there was no hope. Then gave I place,
Took up my sire, and hasted to the hill." — SURREY.

Notice here the veil of tender sadness thrown over the scenes of that terrible night. "A tale of woe" indeed it is; but the light burns low, and the lurid glare of the burning city is softened into the dawning light of that desolate morning on which, with hope faintly struggling into their breasts, the exiles are to face the world in quest of a new and distant home. And the central figure of it all is Aeneas, with the wound of Creusa's loss still aching. What a hush would fall upon the listening throng in Dido's banquet-hall as Aeneas thus sadly draws to a close this terrible chapter of his life!

LIBER II

Aeneas begins his story

Conticuēre omnēs intentique ūra tenēbant.
Inde torō pater Aenēas sic ūrsus ab altō :
Infandum, rēgina, jubēs renovāre dolōrem,
Trōjānās ut opēs et lāmentabile rēgnūm ēruerint Danaī, quaeque ipse miserrima vidi et quōrum pars māgna fui. Quis tālia fandō Myrmidonum Dolopumve aut dūrī miles Ulixī temperet ā lacrimis ? et jam nox ūmida caelō praecipitat, suādentque cadentia sidera somnōs.
Sed si tantus amor cāsūs cognōscere nostrōs et breviter Trōjae suprēmum audire labōrem, quamquam animus meminisse horret lūctūque refūgit, incipiam.

Hector appears to Aeneas in a dream

Tempus erat, quō pīma quiēs mortālibus aegrīs

 In somnīs ecce ante oculōs maestissimus Hector vīsus adesse mihi largōsque effundere flētūs, raptātus bigīs, ut quondam, āterque cruentō pulvere perque pedēs trājectus lōra tumentēs,
 — hei mihi, quālis erat, quantum mūtātus ab illō Hectore, qui redit exuviās indūtus Achillī, vel Danaūm Phrygiōs jaculātus puppibus ignēs —, squālentem barbam et concrētōs sanguine crīnēs vulneraque illa gerēns, quae circum plūrima mūrōs accēpit patriōs ! ultrō flēns ipse vidēbar compellare virum et maestās exprōmere vōcēs :
 ‘ Ō lūx Dardaniae, spēs ō fidissima Teucrūm,

 Tum vērō manifesta fides Danaūmque patēscunt
 Insidiae. Jam Dēiphobī dedit ampla ruīnam
 Vulcānō superante doīnus, iam proximus ādet
 Ucalegōn, Sigēa Ignī freta lata relūcent. 310

Exoritur clamorque virūm clangorque tubārum.
 Arma amēns capiō; nec sat ratiōnis in armis, sed glomerare manum bellō et concurrere in arcem cum sociis ardēnt animī; furor iraque mentem praecipitant, pulchrumque morī succurrit in armis.

Panthus tells of destruction

Ecce autem tēlis Panthūs elāpsus Achīvūm, Panthūs Othryadēs, arcis Phoebīque sacerdōs, sacra manū victōsque deōs parvumque nepōtem ipse trahit cursūque amēns ad Ilinina tendit.
 'Quō rēs sumna lccō, Panthū? quam prēndimus arcem?'
 Vix ea fātus eram, gemitū cum tālia reddit:
 'Vēnit summa diēs et inēluctabile tempus Dardaniae. Fuimus Trōes, fuit Ilium et ingēns glōria Teucrōrum; ferus omnia Juppiter Argōs trānstulit; incēnsā Danaī dominantur in urbe.
 Arduus armātōs mediis in moenibus adstāns

Death of Coroebus

Heu nihil invitatis fas quemquam fidere divis!
Ecce trahebatur passis Prianeia virgo

AENEID, II

NOTES

1-13

Aeneas begins his story.

1. Conticuēre . . . tenēbant: note the tenses; the perf. of the sudden hush; the imperf. of the continued situation: "All were hushed and, attentive, held their gaze." intenti really means "strained." What does intenti modify?

For conticuēre, see conticēscō.

2. torō ab altō = ab alto toro. — ōrsus, see ōrdior.

3. infandum: mod. dolorem; "unutterable"; supply me as subj. of renovare.

4. ut: "how." — opēs, "power" (lit. "resources").

5. ēquerint, perf. subjunct., depend. question. — quaeque ipse miserrima vidi, "and the very sad sights I myself have seen."

6. fandō: abl. of gerund from (for), fāri, fātus; "in telling"; abl. of the circumstance or situation, substituted for the pres. part.; note the caesura in the fourth foot.

7. Myrmidonum: partitive gen. mod. quis; quis should be repeated as an adj. before mīles. — Ulixēs: peculiar gen. of Ulysses, Ulysses.

8. temperet: potential subjunct. "who would refrain?" — et jam adds another reason for refusing, "and now too." —

MINERVA

Umida, "moist, dewy." — caelō = de caelo, abl. of source or separation.

9. praecipitat, "drops" as a curtal.; notice the dreamy, nodding rhythm of this line, intensified by the alliteration; "and the setting stars invite slumbers."

10. si tantus amor: sc. est tibi; "but if thou hast so great a desire to learn our misfortunes and briefly to hear the last struggle of Troy." Notice how naturally a simple Engi. translation lends itself to musical rhythm.

12. meminisse, "at the remembrance," lit. "to remember"; this use of the inf. as a sort of adverbial modifier of horret is characteristic of poetry. — luctū refūgit: note the perf.; "has recoiled in grief"; luctu, abi. of manner or cause.

The Greeks build the wooden horse and pretend to have returned home.

13. Fracti: see frango. — Fātis: the three sisters, Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos, who were represented as spinning the lives of men as threads.

14. Danaūm = Danaōrum, a poetic form: the Greeks at this early time had no common national name. — tot jam labentibus annis: abl. abs.; "so many years now slipping by," "as so many years were," etc.

15. instar: see vocab.; in apposition to equum; "as large as a mountain." — Palladis arte, "art of Minerva," i.e. weaving; the next line explains; not literal weaving, but crossing the planks on the ribs.

16. abiete: pronounced in three syllables as = objete; what gender?

17. votum (equum esse).

18. Hūc dēlecta. . . . "Hither they stealthily (bring and) shut up in the dark side, men of choice physique, having cast lot, and utterly fill the huge caverns of the womb with armed soldiery."

— virūm = virorum. — dēlecta virūm corpora: lit. "picked bodies (not bands) of men"; "bodies" in the literal sense of "physical frames"; notice the poetical collective sing. mīlite = mīlitibus.

19. cavernas uterumque, "caverns and the womb" for "caverns of the womb," as if they were two separate notions; this figure is called hendiadys (Grk. ἕν, one; διδ, through; δύο, two), "one idea expressed as two"; it is a common figure in Vergil.
21. in conspectu, "in sight (of Troy)." — fāmā: note the cases here; "island well known by fame."
22. dives opum, "rich in resources"; what adjectives are modified by an objective gen.? see Grammar.
23. tantum: adv.; "only, merely." — sinus: in apposition to insula. — male fida: male = non; "faithless, treacherous." — carinis: dat. of interest.
24. sē: obj. of condunt. — proiecti: see proieciō.

25-39

The Trojans rejoice and visit the scene of the deserted camp. They debate as to the meaning and proper disposal of the horse.

25. abiisse: sc. eos as subj. — rati: perf. part. of reor; sc. sumus. — ventō: abl. of means. — Mycēnās: Mycenae, one of the two cities (the other was Argos) ruled over by Agamemnon. Why refer here to the home of Agamemnon?
27. juvat: impersonal; "it delights."
28. locos: this masculine plur. is rare; the prose form would be loca.
29. hic: adv., "here"; sc. erat or possibly tendēbat from the next clause. — manus, "band." — tendēbat, "used to stretch (his tents)"; note the impressive repetition of hic.
30. classibus: dat. of interest and possession; "place for the fleets"; why plur.? Was it one national fleet or a collection of independent contingents? — aciē: abi. of manner, or = in acie, of place.
31. innuptae, "unwedded," "virgin" (Αθήνη Παρθένος, hence the temple called Parthenon in Athens, which city was sacred to Athéné or Minerva). — Minervae: objective gen.; "gift to."
33. dūcī hortātur: what would be the prose construction? supply equum as subj. — arce = in arce.
34. dolō: abl. of manner; Thymoetes had a grudge against

King Priam, who had put his wife and son to death. — jam, "now at last." — ferabant, "were tending" or "setting" as a wind.

36. At Capys . . ., "But Capys and those whose minds had better purpose." — quorum, poss. gen. mod. menti. — menti: dat. of possession; sc. erat.

38. pelagō: dat. used poetically for in pelagus. — Danaūm = Danaōrum. — insidiās, dōna: plur.; may be rendered "all such snares and gifts."

37. subjectisque: the -que joins two modes of destroying; the aut . . . aut distinguish the destroying in either of the ways mentioned from the exploring; trans. "either, on the one hand, to plunge into the sea or (lit. 'and') burn by placing flames beneath . . . or (on the other) to bore and test the hollow lurking-places of the womb."

39. incertum: to be taken predicatively; "in uncertainty." — in, "between"; the gender of vulgus?

Laocoön warns the Trojans and hurls his spear at the beast in defiance.

40. catervā: abl. abs.

41. ārdēns: "in hot haste."

42. procul: sc. exclamat.

44. carēre dolis, "are void of guile"; careō is mod. by an abl. of separation.

45. hōc lignō: either "by this wood," instrumental abl., or "in this wood" = in hōc lignō, local abl.

46. in nostrōs mūrōs, "against our walls."

47. Inspectūra: denotes the intention "to look into." — urbī = in urbem, poetical dat. of the goal.

48. error, "deception," "fraud" (lit. "mistake"). — equō: dat. — nē credite: what would the classical prose construction be? See Grammar on negative commands.

49. et. "even." — timeō Danaōs, etc.: one of the best known quotations from Vergil.

50. validis vīribus, "with might and main;"

51. curvam compāgibus: take after alvum; "at the belly of the beast rounded with joints"; or, more freely, "at the ribbed arch of the belly."

52. contorsit: see contorqued. — illa: i.e. hasta.

53. insonuēre cavae: cavae is predic.; "rang hollow."

54. si fāta: supply nōn lueva (n. plur.) fuisse; "If the fates of the gods (deūm = deōrum) had not been adverse, if our minds had not been perverted"; laevus = left-handed, wrong, distorted, ill-omened; this use of lueva in two senses is a species of synecdoche. — fuisse: contrary to fact in the past.

55. impulerit: poetic for impulisset; "he certainly had (=would have) impelled us." — foedāre: in prose this would be ut foedāremus; the int. is a complement.

56. stāret . . . manērēs: the Ms. reading; "Troy would now be stan up and thou, high citadel," etc.; the imperf. subjunc. denotes what is contrary to fact in the present. See Grammar on conditional sentences. Other texts read stāret . . . manēret or stās . . . manērēs; but the sudden change of person is more plausible. Why, therefore, doubt the Ms.?

Trojan shepherds bring in a Greek, who arouses pity and tells his tale.

57. Ecce manūs . . ., "Lo Trojan shepherds were meanwhile dragging to the king, with great clamor, a youth with hands bound behind his back, who voluntarily had presented himself, unknown, to them as they came." — manūs: acc. of specification. — terga: poetic plur.

59. Dardanidae: nom. plur. of Dardanidēs, ae, ae, ēn (or am), a, ā; a Greek first deci. noun; such a noun is called a patronymic, i.e. a name based on the father's name; "sons of Dardanus" = "Trojans." — venientibus: dat. Ind. obj. of obtulerat.

61. animi: obj. gen. mod. fidēns "confident in mind." — in utrumque, "in either direction," "for either purpose."

62. versare: these infs. are in apposition to utrumque.

63. studiō: abl. of manner or cause. — visendī: obj. gen.; "on all sides thronging rushed the Trojan youth in eager haste to see."

64. circumfūca: see circumfundō. — captō: dat. ind. obj.

— inlūdere: another poetical inf. complement (see foedāre 55) = in inludendō.

65. accipe, "hear." — crīmīne, "charge," "accusation."

66. omnēs, "learn of them all" (the Greeks). This line, being unfinished, is called a hemistich. See also vv. 233, 346, 408. These lines are a reminder of the fact that Vergili died before he could perfect the poem. See Introduction, on the death of Vergili.

67. ut, "when" = ubi: note the indic. — turbatus: does this accord with fidēns animī? How?

68. Phrygia = Trōjāna; Troy was in Phrygia. This is a spondaic verse. Scan it.

69. aequōra: poetic word for "seas"; note the gender and ō; give other exceptions in -or.

71. locus (est). — super: adv.; "besides."

73. quō gemitū: abl. of means. — conversī: sc. sunt. — com-pressus: sc. est. — et, "also."

74. fārī: see note on dūci, 33. — quo sanguine crētus: sc. sit; why subjunc.?

75. memoret: jussive subjunc. — quae . . . captō, "what confidence as a captive he is entitled to" (lit. "what confidence there is for him a captive," dat. of possession).

76. haec: n. plur., obj. of fātūr.

76-104

"I am a Greek. A relative of Palamedes, who was condemned to death for opposing the continuation of the war, I shared in the hatred Ulysses entertained for that prince. At last, by the aid of Calchas, the priest and prophet -- but why weary you? Put an end to me and please Ulysses."

77. cūncta . . ., "All things truly (lit. 'true') to thee, O king, will I confess, whatever betides." — fuerit: fut. perf.; "whatever turns out to have happened."

78. vēra: n. plur. adj. — mē: sc. esse.

79. hōc p̄imūm: sc. dīcam. — nec si . . ., "nor if Fortune has made Sinon wretched, will she also, with all her malice, make him a cheat and a liar."

80. improba: an adj., emphatic by position. — finxit, finget:

Ango used of moulding clay; cf. Eng. action, actions, finger.
— miserum, vanum, mendacem: obj. predicates.

81. Fandō . . ., "If perchance in conversation any mention of Palamēdēs, son of Bēlus, has reached your ears, and his fame renowned in story." — Bēlidēs: patronymic; how declined?

83. quem falsā . . ., "whom, though innocent, the Greeks, under false charge of treason, sent down to death on accursed testimony, because he was denouncing the war, but (whom) now they mourn when bereft of light."

85. lumine: abl. of separation.

86. illi me . . ., "me as a companion to him and one near related by blood, my father, being poor, sent hither to the war (in arma) from my earliest years." — illi: dat. of interest or possession.

88. rēgnō, "in his sovereignty"; abl. of specification.

89. conciliis = in conciliis. — et nōs, "we also." — nomenque decusque: the first -que = "both"; ignore it.

90. invidiā: abl. of means or cause; "after, through the hatred of Ulysses (I speak things not unknown), he retired from these upper shores;" a euphemism for death.

93. mēcum, "to myself."

94. dēmēns: in apposition; "nor, fool that I was, did I keep silent." — me . . . ultōrem prōmisi, "vowed myself his avenger"; vitorem is an obj. pred. — quā = quae, indef. form in fem. sing. and neut. pl. of quis. — tulisset, remeāasset: pluperf. subj. here in indirect discourse, historical seq., represents the fut. perf. indic. of direct discourse. — tulisset, "brought it to pass."

97. prīma mali lābēs, "my first slip down the path of evil." — mali: adj. used as noun, poss. gen. mod. lābēs.

98. vōcēs, "sayings."

99. conscius, "conscious of guilt." — terrēre, spargere, quaerere: historical infinitives, = terrēbat, etc.; notice that the subject, Ulixēs, is in the noun. case. — vulgum: here inasc. ; usually neut.

100. Calchante ministro, "with the aid of Calchas" (lit. "Calchas being his helper"). Calchas was the soothsayer of the Greeks at Troy. The sudden interruption of the sentence (aposiopēsis) is for dramatic effect, i.e. to increase their curiosity and arouse their sympathy.

101. revolvo, "repeat" or "unfold" (lit. "unroll," probably of a scroll unrolled as it is read). — quid, "why"; adverbial accusative.

. 102. ūnō ūrdine = in ūnō ūrdine. — habēbis, "hold," "deem," "consider."

103. id audire, "to hear that," that one is a Greek. — jām-dūdum, "long since"; a peculiar modifier of the imperative; trans. "inflict (lit. 'exact') the penalty long since due."

104. Ithacus, "the Ithacan"; contemptuous for Ulysses. — velit, "would wish"; potential subjunct.; similarly mercentur. māgnō (pretiō), "at a great price," abl. of means. — Atridae, "sons of Atreus," Menelaus and Agamemnon.

105-144

Encouraged to proceed, Sinon slyly unfolds the plot of Ulysses and Calchas to slay him. An oracle demands blood for the slaying of Agamemnon's daughter as a sacrifice. Sinon is doomed, but escapes. He appeals for protection and pity.

105. causās, "the reasons" for this treatment; others read cāsūs, "vicissitudes," "misfortunes."

106. artis, "cunning."

107. fictō pectore, "with feigned emotion" or "with false heart." — fātūr: see for, fāri.

108. fugam: obj. of mōlīrī. — cupiērē = cupiērunt.

109. longō bellō: abl. of cause, mod. fessī.

110. fēcissent, "that they had done so"; a wish contrary to fact in the past. — aspera pontī hiems, "rough storm of the sea."

111. euntēs, "as they were departing," mod. illōs.

112. jam, "now," "at last." — hic equus trabibus acernis contextus, "this horse framed of maple beams." — trabibus: abl. of means.

113. tōtō aethere, "throughout all the sky"; abl. of location.

114. suspēnsi: mod. subject of mittimus. — scitantem, "inquiring"; some read supine scitatum. — Phoebus = Apollo.

115. adytis, "from the shrine," the Greek "holy of holies." — dicta, "words," "utterances."

116. plācāstis = plācāvistis. — sanguine et virgine caesa, "by blood and a virgin slain" or "by the blood of a slain virgin." This is an example of hendiadys; see note on v. 18. The maiden was Iphigenia, daughter of Agamemnon, sacrificed at Aulis on the east of Greece before the fleet sailed.

118. reditūs, "your returns," plur. because they went to their several homes. This is the subject of quaerendi (sunt). — animā: abl. of means — litandum (est): impersonal gerundive, "atonement must be made."

119. Ut, "when"; arrange thus: ut quae vōx ad aurēs vulgī vēnit.

120. obstipuēre: perf. 3 pl. of obstipēscō. — per īma ossa, "through our very bones." — īma: lit. "lowest," i.e. right to their extremities.

121. cū fāta parent, "(wondering, as we did) for whom the fates were preparing." — parent, poscat: subjunct. of depend. question, suggested by tremor.

122. Hic: adv., "hereupon." — Calchanta: Greek acc. = Cal-chante.

123. quae sint ea nūmina, "what mean those divine 'heavens'?" nūmen means the will of a god signified by his nod. — dīvōm = dīvōrum. — sint: why subjunct.?

124. crūdēle: mod. scelus. — canēbant, "were foretelling"; canō, "sing" = "prophesy," because the oracles were delivered in verse.

125. artificis, "of the schemer." — tacitī ventura vidēbant, "silently watched coming events." — tacitī: an adj.

126. bis quīnōs: poetic and impressive for decem; why the distributive? See Grammar. — tectus, "concealed"; mod. ille.

129. compositō: abl. used as adv.; "by arrangement." — rumpit vocem, "breaks into speech" (lit. "makes speech break forth"); vocem is acc. of effect.

130. adsēnsēre = adsēnsērunt. — et quae . . . tulēre, "and what each feared for himself, they bore (when) turned to the destruction of one wretched (mortal)." — quae: n. plur. mod. by conversa; note the tense of timebat, "had been fearing"; and of tulēre, a completed act.

132. infanda, "accursed" (lit. "unutterable"); account for the gender of dies here. See Grammar. — parārī = parābantur. historical inf.; what is the case of the subject?

133. salsae frūgēs, "the salted meal" sprinkled on the heads of victims before sacrifice. — — tempora, "temples" of the head; a special meaning in the plur.; tempus really means a section, cf. réurw, cut. — — vittae: sc. parārī = parābantur.

134. lētō, "from death"; strange that this should be a dat. of interest.

135. lacū: abl. of location without the prep. — — in ulvā, "amidst the sedge."

136. dēlitui: see delitēscō. — — dum vēla darent, "for them to set sail"; dum, "until" takes the subjunct. here to denote a mere expected possibility viewed as a purpose. — — sī forte dedis-sent, "if haply they should have done so"; this is indirect discourse, historical seq., for the fut. perf. indic.

137. spēs: is the subject of the sentence, sc. est. — — patriam: is the obj. of videndī. — — mihi: dat. of possession (or interest).

139. fors et: a phrase = "perchance"; this results from parataxis or independent syntax, e.g. fors (est) et, "there is a chance and they will." — — quōs . . . poenās: double acc. wth verb of asking; "of whom they will demand." — — nostra, "our flight," because the crime attached to the whole family.

141. quod, "wherefore" (lit. "as to which," acc. of specification). — — te: obj. of ōrō, v. 143. — — vēri: obj. gen. mod. conscia.

142. sī quā=sī quae (fidēs) "whatever faith." — — quae restet: subjunct. with rel. of characteristic. — — mortālibus: dat. of possession; trans. "wherefore, I beseech you by the gods above and by the deities conscious of truth, by whatever faith still remains inviolate anywhere among mortals."

143. miserēre: imperative. — — labōrum; obj. gen.; what verbs govern the gen.?

144. nōn digna ferentis, "(a mīnd) bearing things undeserved."

145-198

The plot thickens. From tears, Sinon, encouraged by Priam, passes to an explanation of the horse, as a substitute for the Palladium, and predicts ruin for Troy if they destroy it, and deliverance if they bring it within the city.

145. Hīs lacrimīs, "in response to these tears." — — ūltrō, "(pity him) to boot"; we grant him more than he asks.

146. Ipse primus Priamus: take these together. — virō: dat. of interest; “(removed) from the man.”

148. āmissōs Graīōs: this is commonly explained as a rare acc. instead of the gen. obj. of oblīscere (imperative): “forget the lost Greeks”; but why could it not be for āmissōs esse, “that the Greeks have been lost”? — hinc jam, “henceforth.”

149. ēdissere: imperative of ēdisserō; “recount these things truly in reply to my question.”

150. Quō, “to what end” (lit. “whither”). — statuēre: perf. indic.

151. religiō, “religious purpose”; “what is its religious purpose or (what) contrivance of war (is it)?”

153. sustulit: see tollō. — vincīlīs = vinculīs, abl. of separation mod. exutās; “freed from chains.”

155. nūmen, “divinity.”

156. quōs fūgī: note the transitive force of fugiō. — deūm = deōrum. — hostia, “victim.”

157. fās mihi: sc. est. — jura, “obligations,” “ties.”

158. virōs: not “mankind,” but “the men.” — ferre sub aurās, “bring to light.”

159. sī quā tegunt: (quā = quae, n. plur.); “whatever (lit. ‘if aught’) they conceal”; arrange the latter part of the line thus: nec teneor lēgibus ullis patriae.

160. Tū modo . . ., “Do thou, O Troy, only abide by thy promises and being kept, keep faith, if I bring (lit. ‘shall bring’) the truth and pay back a great price.” — promissiō: abl. of location.

161. ferām, rependam: fut. indic. in a vivid future condition. — māgna: n. plur.

162. fidūcia belli, “confidence in the war begun.” — belli: obj. gen.

163. auxiliīs, “by the aid”; abl. of means. — ex quō: sc. tempore; “ever since” (lit. “from what time”).

164. Tydidēs, “son of Tydeus,” Diomēdes, or Diomedē, Greek champion next to Achilles in prowess. — sed enim: omit enim in translating.

165. adgressi, “having essayed.” — templō: abl. of separation. — fātāle: mod. Palladium.

167. corripuēre: perf. indic.

168. ausi: sc. sunt.

169. ex illo: sc. tempore.

163-170. "But ever since the impious son of Tydeus and Ulysses, the inventor of crines, having essayed to tear the fateful Palladium from the holy temple, after slaying the guards of the citadel on high, dared with blood-stained hands to touch the virgin fillets of the goddess, from that time forth the hope of the Greeks began to ebb (historical inf.) and having slipped away, began to be carried backward." The metaphor at the close refers to the "ground swell" of a wave washing up some object and sucking it back again.

171. ea signa: (lit. "those signs") "signs of that." — Tritonia = Minerva.

172. positum: sc. est; note the abruptness of omitting cum ("when") before arsere.

173. luminibus arrectis, "in her starting eyes," abl. of location. — salsusque . . . "and a briny sweat coursed o'er her limbs."

174. ipsa: the goddess herself. — sōlō, "from the ground" (sōlum). — dictu: abl. supine; see Grammar.

176. temptanda: sc. esse. — canit: see note on 124.

178. nī repetant: subjunct. in a subord. clause of indirect discourse; but notice ārexēre in v. 179, indic. because part of an explanation thrown in by the author, not quoted. — Argis: loc. abl. of Argī, -ōrum; Eng. name is Argos.

179. pelagō: abl. of the way by which (really the means).

180. quod, "as to the fact that"; quod a conj. — patriās, "native," adj. mod. Mycēnās; why does the poet select Mycenae as their destination? Of what cities was Agamemnon king?

181. deōs comitēs, "preparing the gods as their companions," i.e. to bring back the good will of the gods. — remēnsō: perf. part. of remetior; an instance of a deponent. perf. part. used in a pass. sense, "having retraversed the sea, they will arrive unexpectedly."

184. quae piaret, "to atone for"; rel. of characteristic = ut ea. — statuēre: perf. indic.

185. tamen . . ., "yet this mass Calchas bade them raise up huge and high with woven oak beams and build it to the sky."

186. caelō: poetic dat. of the goal for ad caelum; the force of tamen is rather difficult to see; he means that what he has said may account for the mere building of the horse; but "why make it so high?"

187. portis: abl. of means or the way by which.

188. antiquā sub religiōne, "beneath its ancient holy shelter."

189. violasset: the pluperf. subjunct. in indirect disc., historical seq., for the fut. perf. indic.

191. imperiō: dat. of interest. — futūrum: sc. esse.

192. manibus: abl. of means.

193. Asiam: this is all indirect discourse; pred. renturam (esse).

— Pelopea moenia, "walls of Peiops," i.e. "Grecian walls."

— Pelops, the mythical hero of the Peloponnesus or lower peninsula of Greece, in which were the cities Sparta, Argos, Mycenae, the homes of Menelaus and Agamemnon.

194. nostrōs nepōtēs: obj. of manēre ("await"), here transitive.

195. insidiis: abl. of means; "through such wiles and the cunning of perjured Sinon."

196. crēdita: sc. est; crēdō takes a dat. of the person and in that connection in the passive must be used impersonally, e.g. mīhi crēditum est; here, however, of the thing, it is used transitively and personally; "the story was believed." — capti: sc. sunt or sumus; "and we were ensnared by wiles and forced tears, whom neither Tydeus' son nor Larissaean Achilles, not ten years, not a thousand ships, subdued."

197. Tydidēs: Diomede. — Larissaeus: = "Thessalian" because Larissa was a town in northern Thessaly, though not the birthplace of Achilles.

198. carinae, "keels" put for "ships," a figure called synecdoche, i.e. the part for the whole.

199-227

Laocoön's fate. — Twin serpents from Tenedos attack the priest on the shore and destroy him with his two sons. Then they seek the shelter of Minerva's statue.

199. Hic aliud . . ., "Hereupon another greater and much more (multō magis) dreadful (sight) is presented to (us) wretched ones."

— aliud: iit. "another thing."

201. ductus: "drawn," i.e. "chosen." Laocoön was priest of both Apolio and Neptune, the two guardian deities of Troy. It was they who, according to the myth, built the walls of Troy.

202. ad sollempnes ārās, "at the accustomed altar."

204. orbibus: abl. of description; possibly of manner.

205. pelagō: dat. ind. obj. of incumbunt; "bear down upon the sea" or "are breasting the sea."

208. volumine, "in writhing" or "in coils."

209. Note the alliterative and imitative harmony in the repetition of the hissing sound of s. — tenēbant, "were gaining."

210. "Suffused as to their blazing eyes with blood and fire." — oculōs: acc. of specification.

212. visū: abl. of cause from visus, ūs; "at the sight." — agmine certō, "with unerring aim."

213. Lāocoönta: note the Greek acc. for Lāocoöntem. — pri- mum: adv.

215. morsū (lit. "with their bite"), "with their fangs."

216. post: adv. — auxiliō: dat. of purpose.

218. medium, "his waist." — bis collō . . . : collō is dat. ind. obj. of dati; terga is acc. of specification; circum is an adv.; "twice having thrown their scaly backs (lit. 'being thrown as to their backs') about his neck, they overtop him with their heads and towering necks."

221. vittis: acc. of specification.

223. quālis mūgitus: sc. est (lit. "of which kind is the bellowing when"); "such as is the bellowing when a bull, wounded, has fled the altar and shaken off the erring blade from his neck"; the perfs. fūgit and excussit may be taken as gnomic aorists, i.e. perfects describing a universal truth as deduced from past experience "what has been, always is." This perfect is habitual in similes.

225. lāpsū, "with gliding motion." — dēlūbra ad summa, "to the shrine on high," i.e. Minerva's temple in the acropolis, where all the temples and other public buildings, including Priam's palace, were situated.

226. arcem, "the stronghold." — Tritōnidis: gen. of Tritōnis, an epithet of Minerva.

Notice that the actual death of Laocoön is passed over.

228-249

The Trojans, already wavering as a result of Sinon's story, are now convinced that the horse is sacred and that Laocoön and his advice are to be abhorred. They make a breach in the walls, and with pomp and rejoicing bring the monster into the city. Heedless of certain ominous sounds from within the horse and of the warning of the ill-fated Cassandra, they persist.

228. cūnctis : dat. of interest ; trans. as a possessive.
 229. merentem : turn as adv. ; "deservedly."
 230. ferunt = dicunt.
 231. qui . . . laeserit : causal rel. = cum is, with the subjunct.
 — tergō : dat. = in tergum.
 232. ad sēdēs, "into the city" (lit. "the homes").
 233. A hemistich : see note on v. 68. — nūmina, "the majesty."
 235. accingunt : here used intransitively for accingunt sē ; "they gird for the work." — operi : dat. of purpose. — pedibus : dat. ind. obj. of compound subiciunt ; "beneath the feet they place glidling rollers" (lit. "the glidlings of wheels").
 236. collō : abl. ; "from the neck."
 237. "The fateful contrivance 'scales' the walls with its teeming load of armed men." — scandit : a bold expression, but very suggestive.
 238. fēta armis, "teeming (lit. 'pregnant') with arms."
 239. sacra, "hymns" (lit. "sacred (songs)"). — contingere gaudent, "delights to touch," a poetic use of the complementary inf. for contingendō.
 240. mediae urbi = in medium urbem.
 241. dīvōm = dīvōrum. — bellō : abl. of means or specification.
 242. Dardanidum = Dardanidārum, "Trojans," as the sons of Dardanus.
 243. uterō, "from the womb"; abl. of source.
 245. sacratā arce : sc. in; the poetic tendency to use the bare abl. of location.
 246. fātis, "with warnings of the future"; abl. of manner.
 247. òra, "her mouth," poetic plur. — crēdita : here the regular construction of crēdō is decidedly abandoned. See note on v. 198. Look up the story of Cassandra.

248. dēūm = dēōrum. — quibus esset: causal rel. = cum nobis.

250-267

Night falls on the Trojans wearied with rejoicing. The Greek fleet steals back from Tenedos. Sinon opens the horse and releases the heroes. The guards of the gates are slain and the horde from without is admitted.

250. vertitur, "revolves." — Ōceanō, "from the Ocean," i.e. the Atlantic or the West, the home of darkness.

252. fūsi, "scattered"; see fundō.

255. "Through the friendly stillness of the silent moon."

256. litora nōta, "well-known shores," because they had lived there ten years.

257. extulerat: the pluperf. conveys the idea of suddenness.

263. Pēlidēs, "the son (really grandson) of Peleus." This was Neoptolemus or Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, who had succeeded his father in the war. — primus: this presents serious difficulties. Does it mean "first in order of exit"? Then why mention him seventh? Does it mean "foremost," "peerless"? But Machaon was comparatively obscure in the war. Perhaps it means "peerless" or "foremost" as a physician and son of the god of healing, Aesculapius.

265. somnō vinōque sepultam, "sunk in drunken slumber"; a case of hendiadys.

266. portis, "through the gates"; abl. of the way or the means.

267. agmina cōscia, "confederate bands," because in the secret. — jungunt, "unite."

268-297

In my dreams Hector appears in woe-begone plight and urges me to flee, taking with me the national gods of Troy, which he places in my hands.

268. quō: abl. of time. — mortālibus: dat. of interest.

269. dōnō: abl. of means; "by the gift." — dīvūm=dīrōrum.

271. visus: sc. est. — largōs, "copious."

272. ut, "as."
273. perque pedēs . . ., "pierced through his swollen feet with thongs." — lōra: acc. of specification where lōris, abl., would have been expected.
274. ei, "alas." — quantum, "how (changed)"; acc. of extent.
275. exuīlās indūtus, "having donned the spoils of Achilles." — indūtus: really a perf. pass. part., "clad in"; but here used as a deponent. — redit: seems to be vivid pres.; possibly for redit.
276. jaculātus: "having hurled." — puppibus: dat. = in puppēs. — ignis, sanguis, crinis: note these masc. exceptions in -is. Mention others you have met.
278. gerēns: note the zeugma (double meaning) in this verbal word; "wearing a beard and hair" and "carrying wounds." — plūrima, "in large numbers."
279. ūltrō, "of my own accord."
281. Teucrūm = Teucrōrum.
282. tenuēre: perf., sc. tē.
283. exspectātē: voc. of expectātus mod. Hector appositively. — ut, "how," i.e. "how gladly."
284. labōrēs, "hardships."
285. defessi, "In our weariness."
287. mē quaerentem vāna morātur, "heeds my idle questions." — morātur, "delays over," used transitively.
288. dūcēns, "drawing."
289. nātē dēā, "thou goddess born." — nātē: voc. — dēā: abl. of source or origin.
291. datum: sc. est.
292. "If Troy could be defended by (any) right hand, even by this (of mine) would it have been defended." — possent: contrary to fact in the pres.; or with a general application to all time. — fuissent: contrary to fact in the past.
294. his: dat.; "for these."
295. māgna: take in this order, quae statuēs māgna; "which thou shalt build up to greatness"; the adj. is an obj. pred.
296. vittās Vestamque potentem: a hendiadys; "the filleted image of the mighty Vesta."

297. adytis penetrālibus, "from the innermost shrine"; adytum was the "holy of holies," the sacred inner recess of the temple whither no profane foot entered.

298-317

Aeneas, awakened, hastens to his father's roof-top and gets the first glimpse of the conflagration. A sudden impulse to rush to arms seizes him.

298. diversō, "in divers quarters"; adj. mod. lūctū. — misenetur, "are confused."

299. magis atque magis: mod. clārēscunt; "clearer and clearer grow the sounds." — quamquam sēcrēta, "although the house of my father, Anchises, stood back (recessit), apart and concealed by trees."

301. ingruit horror, "the horrid din of arms rushes in upon me."

302. summī fastīgia tēctī, "the very peak of the roof-top."

303. ascēnsū s̄c̄rō, "I climb." — arrēctīs, "attentive," "eagerly listening," "strained" (lit. "directed toward").

304. "As when a flame seizes upon a corn-field, when the south winds are raging, or a sweeping torrent with its mountain flood lays low the fields, lays low the joyous crops and the labors of the oxen, and drags the forests headlong; in puzzled wonder stands the unwary shepherd, catching the sound on the high summit of a rock."

306. sternit: note the rhetorical emphasis given by the repetition. Note the details of this simile,—the hopeless scene of destruction, the irresistible rush of flame or tide, the sudden bewilderment of the person most interested (the shepherd)—and apply them to the case of Aeneas.

309. manifēsta fidēs, "the truth is clear."

311. Vulcano, "Vulcan," the god of fire, therefore fire itself.

312. Ucalegōn: the owner put for his house. — Sigēa . . . "and the broad channels of Sigeum gleam back."

314. nec sat ratiōnis: "nor in arms have I sufficient purpose"; it is a senseless proceeding.

315. glomerāre manū bellō, "gather a band for war."

316. mentem, "my thoughts"; distinguish here animū, "the feelings," "heart," "emotions" from mentem, the intellectual, reasoning part of his being.

317. pulcrum: sc. esse; "it occurs to me that it is a glorious thing (how glorious it is)."

318-335

Panthus, a priest, tells Aeneas of the peril.

318. tēlīs: abl. of separation. — Achīvūm = Achīvōrum.

319. Ōthryadēs, "son of Othrys." — arcis . . ., "priest of Apollo in the citadel"; hendiadys.

320. sacra: n. pl; "the sacred images of the vanquished gods"; another hendiadys.

321. trahit: zeugma; "carries the images . . . and drags the boy." — cursū: (lit. "with running") "in frantic haste." — ad limina, "to my door." — tendit, "makes his way."

322. quō . . . locō, "How stands the general safety?"; rēs summa, the supreme consideration, the welfare of the state. — prēndimus, "what stronghold have we (Trojans) seized?"

324. summa diēs, "the final day and the inevitable hour."

325. Fuimus Trōes, "we Trojans have been," i.e. "have had our day," "we are a thing of the past."

326. ferus: may be rendered as an adv.; "in angry pride." — omnia, "all power." — Argōs: acc. pl. of Argī, -ōrum; "to Argos"; why is ad omitted?

327. incēnsā, "hold sway in a city in flames."

328. adstāns, "standing close."

329. miscet, "insolently spreads the flames."

330. portis: abl. of the way, or means.

331. "All the thousands that ever came from great Mycenae."

332. obsēdēre: perf. of obsideō. — angusta viārum = angustā viās.

333. stat ferri . . ., "the edge of the sword stands unsheathed with gleaming point, ready for death." — mūcrōne: abl. of description, mod. aciēs.

334. vix prīmī . . ., "scarcely do the foremost guards of the gates essay battle, and it is in blind (or aimless) warfare that they resist."

336-354

Aeneas collects a band of followers and incites them to reckless daring.

336. tālibus dictīs: abl. of cause or means. — nūmine, "by the will of the gods."

337. quō: adv.; "whither." — Erīnys, "the fell Fury," the War Fiend.

338. aethera: Greek acc. sing. for aetherem.

340. oblāti, "meeting me" (lit. "presented").

342. illīs diēbus, "during those last days (of the war)." — forte, "by chance."

344. gener, "as if in truth a son-in-law," "with all the zeal of a son-in-law"; he was only betrothed; read the story of Cassandra.

345. qui nōn audierit: causal. rel.; "in that he heeded not." — praecepta, "warnings." — furentis: (lit. "raving") "frenzied," because inspired with a supernatural gift of prophecy. Note the pathos; even her lover heeded her not.

346. A hemistich.

347. audēre in proelia, "bold for battle."

348. super: adv.; "furthermore." — hīs: sc. verbīs; "in these words." — fortissima . . ., "hearts uselessly brave."

349. pectorā: in apposition to juvenēs, or to be taken independently as another vocative. — vōbīs: sc. est; "if you have"; dat. of possession. — audentem extrēma (n. pl.), "one daring extremities." — cupidō certa, "fixed desire."

350. quaē sit rēbus fortūna, "what the fortune of affairs is," depend. quest. — rēbus: dat. of interest.

351. excessēre . . . dī: it was a common notion that the gods deserted a doomed city. Josephus relates that before the fall of Jerusalem, voices more than human were heard crying on the day of Pentecost, "μεταβαλνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν," "let us go hence."

352. quibus: abl. of means; "by whose grace."

353. moriāmur: subjunct. of exhortation; note the inverted order of events: "Let us die and rush into battle"; an example of hysteron proteron (a rhetorical placing of the "cart before the horse"). It means, of course, "Let us make up our minds to die and (then) rush into battle."

354. "The one safety for the vanquished is to hope for no safety;" i.e. you must risk your life in order to save it.

355-369

They attack the Greeks.

355. lupī ceu = sicut lupī, or the Greek λύκοι ὥς.

356. raptōrēs: to be treated as an adj.; "ravenous." — improba ventris rabiēs, "hunger"; improba denotes that which is excessive, troublesome, painful.

357. caecōs, "blinded (made reckless) by fury," i.e. to prowl at random. — relicti, "left at home."

358. exspectant: sc. eōs. — faucibus: abl. of manner. — siccīs, "parched," "blood-thirsty."

359. mediae urbīs iter, "the road that leads to the heart of the city" urbīs, poss. gen.

360. cavā, "encircling" (lit. "hoilow").

361. fandō, "in story"; abl. of means.

362. explicet: potential subjunc.; "who would (or could) unfold." — lacrimis aequāre labōrēs, "match our sufferings with his tears."

363. domināta, "after holding sway"; depon. participle.

364. sternuntur inertia: inertia may very effectively be taken as predicative or proleptic; "lie helpless."

367. quondam, "at times"; usually "formerly," "once upon a time." The question here is whether Vergil means 367 as a broad and general statement ("the vanquished" generally) applied with particular reference, in the next line, to the Trojans ("and on such occasions the Greeks fall"), or whether victīs simply means the vanquished of this night. The first seems the better interpretation.

— victīs: dat. of interest; render as possessive gen.

368. ubique, "everywhere"; disting. from ubique, "wherever."

369. pavōr: note the long o, an archaic form; possibly here explained by the caesural pause. — plūrima imāgō, "many a form of death."

370-401

The destruction of Androgeos and his band, who mistake us for comrades. The Trojans, encouraged by the mistake, disguise themselves and slay many unawares.

370. catervā: abl. abs. — Danaūm: partitive gen. mod. pri-mus. — sē: obj. of offert.

371. socia agmina crēdēns: sc. nōs esse.

372. inscius, "in his ignorance." — amicīs: adj.; "friendly."

373. morātur: sc. vōs.

374. rapiunt feruntque, "plunder and pillage," = the Greek φέρειν καὶ ἀγεῖν.

374-375. We have here a good example of parataxis or independent, collateral syntax, where ordinary discourse would call for hypotaxis or subordination: "others are plundering . . . ; but are you now for the first time going . . . ?" Hypotaxis would read, "while others are plundering . . . , are you," etc.

377. fida, "trustworthy." — sēnsit . . . dēlāpsus: a Graecism for sēnsit sē dēlāpsum esse; the literal rendering would be "having fallen, he perceived the fact."

378. pedem cum vōce, "backward checked both foot and voice."

379-381. "Just as one who unawares amidst thorny brambles, treading heavily on the ground, presses a snake, and in alarm suddenly shrinks back (from it) as it rises in anger and puffs out its dark blue neck." — inprōvisum: adj. mod. anguem; note the gender of anguis and sentis. — sentibus: abl. of location without the prep. — humī: loc. gen. — nītēns, "struggling," "bearing hard" — trepidus: adj. mod. quī. — pressit, refūgit: instantaneous perf. to denote suddenness. — attollentem: inod. eum, understood object of refūgit used transitively, lit. "from it as it raises its wrath." — colla: acc. of specification; "swelling as to its neck."

382. visū: abl. of means; "by the sight." — abibat, "began to retreat" (lit. "was in the act of retreating").

383. circumfundimur, "crowd around him"; passive in a middle voice or reflexive sense = nōs circumfundimus, "pour ourselves around him." — dēnsis armīs should be taken together as abl. of manner.

384. locī: obj. gen. mod. ignārōs; see Grammar on adjs. that govern the gen. — captōs, "held spellbound by fear," sc. eōs.

385. adspirat . . ., "favors (smiles upon) our first effort." — labōrī: ind. obj. of compound adspirat.

386. successū . . ., "exulting in success and pride of heart." — successū and animis: abl. of cause.

387. quā: adv.; "where" (lit. "by which way"). — salūtis iter, "the path to safety"; cf. mediae urbis iter, 360.

388. dextra: nom. mod. fortūna, "propitious." — sequāmūr: subjunct. of exhortation; similarly mūtēmus and aptēmus.

389. īsignia, "emblems," the devices on the shields indicating their nationality. — nōbis: dat. "upon ourselves."

390. Dolus an virtūs: sc. sit. — in hoste, "in the case of an enemy"; "when an enemy has to be dealt with." — requirat: potential subjunct.; "who, in the case of an enemy, would ask whether stratagem or valor (is to be employed)?" or, "whether such a thing is trickery or courage," meaning that it is all one.

392. īsigne: here a noun (really neut. of īsignis), "the shield of beauteous design" (lit. "the beauteous design of the shield").

393. īndūtur: here used as deponent. — Argivum: adj.; "Argive," mod. ēensem (note the gender).

394. ipse, "too," "also."

396. Danais: dat. ind. obj. of īnmixtī. — haud nūmine nostrō, "under a divinity (or auspices) not our own"; abl. of accompaniment.

398. Orcō: dat. = ad Orcum, Hades, god of the lower world.

399-400. alii . . . pars = alii ("some") . . . alii ("others"); note the plur. scandunt with sing. pars.

400. formidine: abl. of cause; "through base fear."

402-434

Coroebus reveals their stratagem by rushing in to rescue Cassandra. The band of Aeneas is scattered.

401. īndūntur = īndūnt sē, a middle voice; note the gender of alvus.

402. nihil: acc. of specification mod. fidere. — quemquam: subject of fidere. — divis: dat. mod. fidere. — fās: sc. est; the subject of est is the inf. phrase quemquam fidere, etc.

403. Priamēia virgō, "Priam's daughter." — passīs: from pandō, "spread out"; the phrase is an abl. of descript.; note the gender of crīnīs.

404. ā templō adytisque: hendiadys for ā templī adytīs; it was for this crime that Ajax (the Oilcan) was punished by shipwreck by Minerva.

405. tendēns, "directing." — lūmina: poetic here for "eyes."

406. Note the effective repetition of lūmina; "her eyes (I say)." Note the pathos.

407. nōn tulit, "brooked not."

408. medium: probably mod. agmen, though it might mod. sēsē. — peritūrus, "ready to perish," i.e. "to certain death."

410. Hic: adv.; "here."

411. miserrima caedēs, "most pitiful slaughter."

412. faciē, errōre: abl. of cause; "through the appearance of our armor and the deception (errōre) of our Grecian plumes." — errōre, "misunderstanding arising from."

413. gemitū, irā: abl. of accompaniment; "with a cry of rage (hendiadys) at the rescue of the maiden." — ērōptae virginis: obj. gen. mod. irā; some take it as a subjective gen. denoting the cause not the object of the anger.

415. gemini Atridae: Menelaus and Agamemnon. — Dolopum: a Thessalian tribe led by Achilles and later by his son Pyrrhus.

416. "As at times opposing winds, when a whirlwind bursts, engage in conflict." Zephyrus was the West Wind; Notus, the South-East Wind; Eurus, the East Wind.

417. Eōis equis, "rejoicing in his steeds of the Dawn."

418. stridunt, "whistle"; note the imitative alliteration of the hissing s.

419. imō fundō, "from the lowest depths." — aequōra: observe the gender and short o; Nereus was father of the sea-nymphs or Nereids. — spūmeus: proleptic; "till he foams."

420. si quōs, "whomsoever" (lit. "if any").

421. tōtā urbe, "through all the city"; abl. of the way.

422. mentīta tēla, "the lying weapons."

423. ōra sonō discordia signant, "they mark our speech (lit. "mouths") differing in sound (from their own)." — sonō: abl. of specification.

425. divae armipotentis: Minerva.

426. jūstissimus ūnus, "by far the most just"; ūnus used for emphasis.

428. dīs aliter vīsum: sc. est. "It seemed otherwise to the gods"; as they proved by allowing his untimely death.
429. plūrima pietās, "thy great piety."
430. lābentem, "in thy fall."
431. cinerēs: voc. ; note the gender and declension.
432. testor: sc. vōs.
433. vītāvisse: sc. mē as subject. — vīcēs, "chance encounters with"; vīcēs implies interchange and here may mean the "give and take" of hand-to-hand fighting. — et sī Fāta . . . "and if the Fates had been that I should fall, that I earned it by my hand"; with meruisse, sc. mē as subject.

435-468

The scene shifts to Priam's palace, whither Aeneas hastens in despair. A terrific battle is in progress. Aeneas enters by a postern and ascends to the roof.

435. Note the nervous haste of this and the next two lines shown in the omission of the predicates. — aevō: abl. of cause.
436. gravior, "rather sluggish." — Ulixī: subjective gen. ; "wound from Ulysses."
437. vocātī: sc. sumus.
438. pugnam: obj. of cernimus, 441. — ceu: = velut sī.
439. forent: = essent, condition contrary to fact in a contemporaneous sense.
440. sīc: merely sums up the sense of the previous clause. — Martem indomitum, "unbridled warfare"; a repetition of ingentem pugnam.
441. āctā, "advancing" (lit. "brought to bear upon them").
442. In scanning, pārietibus lengthens a naturally short a because the i is thickened into a consonant = j sounded as y; see rule for a vowel before two consonants, Metre, p. 12, Introduction.
443. nītuntur gradibus, "are forcing their way up step by step"; gradibus is abl. of the way by which. — clipeōsque . . ., "and in self-defence (protectī) they present their shields to the darts with their left hands."
445. contrā: adv. ; "on the other hand." — domōrum: poetic plur.

446. his: mod. tēlis. — quandō, "since."

447. extrēma jam in morte, "(being) now in the extremity of death," "on the verge of death."

448. veterum decora . . ., "high adornments of their sires of old"; there are two readings here, — illa and alta; the former would mean "those famous."

451. instaurāti animi, "our courage is renewed." — succurrere: complement to instaurāti. Note the method displayed in this description: 1. The external view from the street — the Greeks assaulting, the Trojans on the roof defending. 2. A closer view of the defence — an experience of Aeneas as one of the defenders, after he had entered and joined the Trojans on the roof; terrible and widespread slaughter of Greeks caused by a falling tower — the failure to stem the tide of assault. 3. The climax — Pyrrhus in glittering armor — the main door smashed in — the despair within.

453. Līmen erat . . ., "An entrance there was with (lit. 'and') secret doors and a well-worn thoroughfare between the apartments of Priam, one with the other (inter sē), a postern gate (now) deserted, by which unhappy Andromache once used to betake herself"; the and's denoted by -que after caecae and after postēs should be ignored as mere connectives of apposition.

455. To get the full force of this picture the pupil should read, either in the original or in a translation (say Pope's), Homer's picture of the last farewell between Hector and Andromache in the Iliad, Book VI. The reference to the child Astyanax is almost meaningless without an acquaintance with this famous scene. Read the story of Andromache's fate.

457. ad sōcerōs, "to the house of her husband's parents" (lit. "parents-in-law"). — avō: poetic dat. = ad avum.

458. ad summī fastigia culminis, "to the slopes of the roof-top."

460. Turrim: obj. of convellimus and impulimus; divide this sentence as follows: "There was a tower standing . . .; this, having assailed it . . ., we tore up from its high foundations and drove headlong." — ferrō, "with axes" (lit. "with steel.")

462. solitae: sc. sunt; this predicate agrees in gender and number with the nearest subject, nāvēs, though understood in sense with omnis Trōja and Achāica castra.

469-505

Pyrrhus leads on the attack, gains an entrance through the front door and slaughters the occupants.

469. vēstibulum: here "entrance" explained and repeated in prīmōque limine.

471. quālis ubi . . ., "such as a snake, that has fed on poisonous (mala) herbs — one which, swollen, beneath the earth the cold winter had been concealing, but now renewed, with old skin cast, and shining with youth it rolls into the light its slimy back, with breast uplifted, towering towards the sun, and in its mouth it darts with three-forked tongue"; ignore ubi, "when," in translating.

Examine this simile carefully, giving (a) the details that form a parallel in the comparison; (b) the details inserted merely to heighten the effect of horror and dread so far as the serpent is concerned.

Look up the story of Achilles' death and the coming of Pyrrhus.

478. tēctō: = ad tēctum.

479. Note that dūra belongs to limina; correptā and bipenni form an abl. abs. phrase.

480. Observe the exceptional gender of postis and cardō.

482. lātō ōre fenestram, "an opening with broad mouth."

485. in līmine prīmō, "on the very edge of the threshold," so bold were they in defence.

486. domus interior, "the interior of the dwelling," on the same principle as summus mōns, media urbs.

487. aedēs, in the plur., "house"; in the sing., "temple."

488. ferit: from feriō, "strike"; see Vocabulary.

489. tēctis ingentibus: abi. of the way by which.

490. amplexae . . ., "hold the doorposts in fond embrace and imprint kisses thereon." — amplexae: perf. part. of amplector, mod. mātrēs.

491. vī patriā, "with his father's might." — patriā: adj.
492. valent: = possunt; "avail to." — āriete: a lengthened as before two consonants, t being given the j or y value; see note on v. 442. — cīēbrō, "frequent blows of the . . ."
493. ēmōti, "dislodged." — cardine: abl. of separation, mod. probably ēmōti, but possibly prōcumbunt.
494. Fit via vī: probably a studied brevity by way of limitation. — aditūs: may be taken as acc. of effect; "break an entrance."
495. militē: poetic collective sing. = militibns; cf. v. 20.
496. sic: belongs to fertur . . . furēns; "not so furiously does a river — when after bursting the barriers it escapes foaming and breaks down the opposing dykes with its flood — rush upon the fields in a heap and drag down herds with their stalls through all the plains."
500. Neoptolemum: = Pyrrhus; Pyrrhus meant "red-haired"; Neoptolemus, "late to the war"; the latter was a sort of "nickname."
501. centum nurūs: properly nurus means a "daughter-in-law," but, as Priam had only fifty sons, the expression must include by poetic license his fifty daughters along with the wives of his sons. Homer (Iliad, vi, 244, 248) mentions fifty sons and twelve daughters; the idea of fifty daughters is obtained from other writers.
504. barbaricō, "barbaric," really "foreign" because captured in war. It also has a special reference to the East.

APPENDIX

HEROES AND IMPORTANT PERSONS IN THE TROJAN LEGEND

N.B.—The information contained in this Appendix is most important for the sake of a literary knowledge of Vergil's story, and should be carefully studied by the pupil.

ON THE TROJAN SIDE

Hector

In the Homeric legend the chief champion of Troy is Hector, eldest son of King Priam. The death and burial of Hector form the climax of Homer's Iliad. The story of his farewell visit to Troy from the battlefield and his leave-taking of his wife, Andromache, and infant son, Astyanax, as told by Homer in Iliad, VI, should be read by the student. Achilles pursued him thrice round Troy, slew him, and dragged the body at his chariot wheels to the Grecian camp on the shore. The aged Priam ventured unarmed and unattended into the camp, and secured by entreaty from Achilles the body and a twelve days' truce for the funeral ceremonies. See Homer, Iliad, XXII and XXIV; also Aeneid, II, 270.

On the taking of Troy, Astyanax was hurled from the battlements and Andromache became the consort of Pyrrhus, by whom she was subsequently deserted. She then married Helenus, brother of Hector, who had come to live in Epirus.

Aeneas

In Vergil's legend, Aenēas, by a sort of apostolic appointment, succeeds to Hector as the leader and protector of the Trojan race. He becomes the founder of Rome, and through his son, Iulus (or Ascanius), the ancestor of the family of Julius Caesar. He is represented as the son of the goddess Venus and Anchisēs, a descendant of Dardanus. He would therefore be a member of the Trojan royal house and a kinsman of Priam. Aeneas, after a vain attempt to save Troy, left the city, carrying Anchises on his shoulders, and leading Ascanius by the hand. His wife, Creusa, following behind, was lost in the terror and darkness, and later appeared to him as a phantom, bidding him godspeed in his mission to find a new home for the remnant of the Trojan race. Acting on the mandate of the Fates, as conveyed to him by the shade of Hector (Aeneid, II, 270-297), Aeneas carries forth the Penates, or household gods of Troy, and after seven years' wandering around the Mediterranean at the head of a small band of Trojan refugees, he lands in Italy. Here he conquers the Etruscan prince, Turnus, marries Lavinia, and settles down in the kingdom of his father-in-law, Latinus. In the Aeneid he is repeatedly called pater (as the father of the Roman nation) and pius (in recognition of his dutiful reverence to heaven's will and his filial love for Anchises).

Priam

The king of Troy who witnessed the height of her splendor, as well as her downfall, was Priam. His wife was Hecuba. He is said to have had fifty sons, and one legend gives him also fifty daughters. His sons, Hector and Politēs, figure in Aeneid, II, the latter murdered before his father's eyes in the captured palace. Paris, a son, was the cause of the Trojan war. Priam was slain at the family altar by Pyrrhus.

Paris

Paris, also called Alexander, second son of Priam and Hecuba, was the fated cause of ruin to his native city. At his birth, owing to a prophecy as to his future, he was exposed on Mt. Ida, but survived and was brought up as a shepherd. Here he acted as judge in the contest for the golden apple of discord between Venus, Juno, and Minerva. Having awarded the apple to Venus, he was by her allowed to carry off Helen from Sparta, thus bringing destruction upon Troy. He is described as effeminate and luxurious, though capable of being roused to deeds of valor. In fact, his name Alexander ("defender of men") was, as it were by an irony of fate, conferred upon him by the shepherds of Ida for his bravery in defending themselves and their flocks. One legend makes him the slayer of Achilles. At the capture of Troy he received a wound of which he soon afterwards died, the nymph Oenóné, his former bride, having refused to heal it.

Cassandra

Cassandra (see Aeneid, II, 342 and 403) was daughter of Priam. Being beloved by the god Apollo, she was inspired by him with the gift of prophecy, but as she spurned his love he, because unable to withdraw the gift once bestowed, ordained that her prophecies should never be believed. On the capture of the city, she fell to the lot of Agamemnon, and accompanied him to Mycenae.

ON THE GREEK SIDEAchilles

Achilles was the most valiant champion of the Greeks at Troy. He was king of a petty state in Thessaly, leader of the Myrmidons and Dolopians. Because Larissa was an important town of Thessaly, he is called Larissaeon (or Thessalian) Achilles. The anger of Achilles in his quarrel with Agamem-non over a captive maiden, Chryseis, and the vengeance he wreaked upon Hector for the death of his friend Patroclus form the theme of Homer's Iliad.

The Sons of Atreus

The brothers, Menelaus and Agamemnon, were the persons highest in authority among the Greeks at Troy. Menelaus was king of Sparta, husband of Helen, and instigator of the war. Agamemnon was king of Argos¹ and Mycenae, and commander in chief of the Greek army at Troy. When the fleet was at Aulis on the coast of Boeotia in northeastern Greece waiting to sail to Troy, he sacrificed his daughter Iphigenia to appease the adverse winds (see Aeneid, II, 116). On his return home after the war he was murdered by his wife Clytaemnestra and Aegisthus.

Ulysses

Ulysses (Greek, Odysseus; Latin, Ulixes) was king of Ithaca, an island west of Greece. He was noted for his resourcefulness and cunning. The many adventures through which he passed on returning home from Troy form the subject of Homer's Odyssey. A legend states that Ulysses was with great difficulty induced to go to Troy. When Palamedes came to Ithaca to fetch him, he feigned madness by yoking an ass and an ox to a plough and sowing the seashore with salt. Palamedes exposed the trick by placing his infant son, Telemachus, before the plough, thus incurring the undying hatred of Ulysses (see Aeneid, II, 82). Ulysses and Diomede entered Troy and carried off the Palladium. On the death of Achilles, Ulysses was by vote of the chieftains awarded the arms of that hero.

¹ Argos here means the Peloponnesus or southern peninsula of Greece, in which were situated Sparta, Mycenae, and the city of Argos.

Diomedes

Diomedes (Greek Diomēdēs) was the son of Tydeus and king of the city of Argos. He was, after Achilles, the bravest hero in the Greek army at Troy. He assisted Ulysses in stealing the Palladium.

The Two Ajaxes

1. Ajax, son of Telamon, king of Salamis, was called Ajax the Greater. He ranked as one of the bravest heroes at Troy. On the death of Achilles he was defeated in the contest for the armor of the chieftain by Ulysses. As a consequence he became insane, and rushing forth from his tent slaughtered a flock of sheep, thinking they were Greeks; he then slew himself.
2. Ajax, son of Oileus, king of the Locrians, was called Ajax the Less. According to Vergil he was shipwrecked and drowned on his way home, as a punishment from Minerva for a crime against Cassandra in the temple of the goddess on the night of the capture of Troy.

Pyrrhus

Pyrrhus ("the golden-haired") or Neoptolemus ("late-comer-to-the-war") was son of Achilles. He came to Troy, after his father's death, from the island of Scyros, where he had been born and where he was reared from childhood by his grandfather, Lycomēdes, king of the island. At Troy he figured as leader of the Greeks in the capture of Priam's palace and as the slayer of the aged king.
