

Terms—15 shillings per annum

Vol. III

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1839.

(12s. 6d. if paid in advance.)

No. 43.

The Chronicle. Published every Friday afternoon, by Lewis W. Deane & Co. at their Office in Mr. D. M. Millan's building, Prince William Street.

Table with columns for Day, Date, and Price. Includes entries for Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

Bank of New-Brunswick—Thurs. Even. 10 to 12. Discount Days, Tues. and Friday. Hours of business from 10 to 3.

Commercial Bank—Henry Gilbert, Esq. President—Discount Days, Tuesday and Friday. Hours of business from 10 to 3.

Bank of British North America—John Branch, Esq. Manager—Discount Days, Wednesday and Saturday. Hours of business from 10 to 3.

New-Brunswick Fire Insurance Company—John M. Wilson, Esq. President—Office open every day from 10 to 3.

Savings Bank—Hon. Ward Chipman, President—Office hours from 10 to 3.

Marine Insurance—A. B. Bell, Broker. The committee of Underwriters meet every morning at 10 o'clock.

Marine Assurance Company—Jas. Kirk, Esq. President—Office open every day from 10 to 3.

GOING RATHER TOO FAR. BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE REPORTER.'

The children of the Honourable Theophilus seemed now worked up to a climax. The horrors he was imagining were in fact contrast with the comforts he was enjoying, and the delusion of imaginary suffering diminished not a jot from the sense of present luxury.

it with all his might and main at the audience who were congregating at the door of the theatre where this scene took place.

'Hold your tongue for a fool!' was the audible answer; on which, gentle rejoinder Penelope forthwith continued her hysterics.

'Now sir,' resumed Dumstornville in his voice of thunder, 'as I said before, if I were not the most gentle and peaceable man alive, I should be in a most confounded passion to see the honour of my family thus compromised.'

'The Honourable stamped on the broken glass very energetically, and lucky it was for mine host and his son, as they were not very modern eccentrics, had it been built in the last fashion, it would certainly have quitted under the Honourable's paroxysm.'

'Now, do listen to me! do listen to me! You know I would do anything to make you happy! You know I would, if you were ever so ugly!—Yes, now, pray, look at me, and you will see that I am as handsome as you can see.'

'The Honourable stamped with his foot, and dashed himself away; but Penelope was bent on entering his chamber, and speaking in a coaxing, pleading voice, as though she were getting a spoiled child.'

'The Honourable Theophilus thought a moment before he submitted to an amplification, but this most unphilosophical mistake was very speedily dispelled by a gentleman who was no philosopher at all.'

'Now, if the arrival of Alexander Dumstornville, Esq., excited some consternation in the present little assembly, among whom he threw himself so unceremoniously, the circumstance could scarcely be wondered at, as he never went anywhere without creating a sensation.'

'The Honourable better understanding this, thought he might venture on a reply, so he just assured the gentleman that "he did not know what he meant."' rumbling of an earthquake, with an accompaniment of thunder in his voice—now, sir, if I were not the most gentle man alive, I should be in the most terrible passion.

'Hold your tongue for a fool!' was the audible answer; on which, gentle rejoinder Penelope forthwith continued her hysterics.

'Now sir,' resumed Dumstornville in his voice of thunder, 'as I said before, if I were not the most gentle and peaceable man alive, I should be in a most confounded passion to see the honour of my family thus compromised.'

'The Honourable stamped on the broken glass very energetically, and lucky it was for mine host and his son, as they were not very modern eccentrics, had it been built in the last fashion, it would certainly have quitted under the Honourable's paroxysm.'

'Now, do listen to me! do listen to me! You know I would do anything to make you happy! You know I would, if you were ever so ugly!—Yes, now, pray, look at me, and you will see that I am as handsome as you can see.'

'The Honourable stamped with his foot, and dashed himself away; but Penelope was bent on entering his chamber, and speaking in a coaxing, pleading voice, as though she were getting a spoiled child.'

'The Honourable Theophilus thought a moment before he submitted to an amplification, but this most unphilosophical mistake was very speedily dispelled by a gentleman who was no philosopher at all.'

'Now, if the arrival of Alexander Dumstornville, Esq., excited some consternation in the present little assembly, among whom he threw himself so unceremoniously, the circumstance could scarcely be wondered at, as he never went anywhere without creating a sensation.'

'The Honourable better understanding this, thought he might venture on a reply, so he just assured the gentleman that "he did not know what he meant."'

Because the machinations of the Countess which we have so often denounced have prevailed—because the female influence of certain odious persons—persons who scrupled not to attempt to sacrifice the fair, young and beautiful party of a Noble maiden at the shrine of their own sacred anti-English schemes, had succeeded for a time in placing the Queen in a position of the most fearful difficulty, by publicly proclaiming that there shall be no ministry in England, even should it be by the Queen, welcomed by the Peers, and accepted by the Commons, unless approved of by a vulgar German Vrow and her cliques!

Her Majesty is represented to have said that "she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood." Her Majesty, with all due respect to the lady, is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

(From the London Age.) Because the machinations of the Countess which we have so often denounced have prevailed—because the female influence of certain odious persons—persons who scrupled not to attempt to sacrifice the fair, young and beautiful party of a Noble maiden at the shrine of their own sacred anti-English schemes, had succeeded for a time in placing the Queen in a position of the most fearful difficulty, by publicly proclaiming that there shall be no ministry in England, even should it be by the Queen, welcomed by the Peers, and accepted by the Commons, unless approved of by a vulgar German Vrow and her cliques!

Her Majesty is represented to have said that "she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood." Her Majesty, with all due respect to the lady, is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

It is not to be understood as meaning that she would rather be reduced to a level with a private subject, than be deprived of the society of those to whom she was personally attached and who have been the friends of her childhood.

Steam from Glasgow to New-York—A joint stock company is now forming at Glasgow for carrying passengers and merchandise between the Clyde and New-York, by means of an iron steamship of great power and capacity, to sail at the rate of, at least, sixteen miles an hour, thereby making a passage nearly a monthly voyage to America.

The thirty sixth child of Wm. Smith, of Coddish, Ireland, was baptized by the Rev. M. P. Fay, in the month of April last. The father is in his 55th year and has had four wives.

In the East Indies, the Amerees, with 22,000 men, were about to attack Sir John Roebuck, who was close to Hydrabad.

EXTRACTS FROM THE NARRATIVE OF SIR FRANCIS HEAD. Continued from our last.

Your Lordship cannot have forgotten the total defeat which the Republicans experienced by resolutely attempting to drive me from this inviolable position, and as the British population of the North American Colonies were eager spectators of the conflict, your Lordship will, I am sure, pardon me for expressing the feelings of mortification and depression with which I now recollect the prophecies which, ever since the commencement of the political war, I have waged here, have invariably foreboded that I should not be supported by the British Government.

"It is not of my power" (I stated in my despatch No. 24, dated 6th of April last) "to describe to your Lordship, without the appearance of exaggeration, the joy and gladness expressed to me by all parties at the constitutional resistance I have made; but I will not conceal from your Lordship that there is one question at this moment in almost everybody's mind, namely, "Will the Lieutenant-Governor be supported by the Home-Government?"

My Lord, there is no portion of your Lordship's instructions which I am not at this moment preparing to carry into effect. I have made it generally known that I am about to surrender to the Provincial Legislature the casual and territorial revenues of the Crown; and I have also informed the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, and the members of the Legislative Council, of the revision of the Land-granting Department of the Crown; and I have also informed the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, and the members of the Legislative Council, of the revision of the Land-granting Department of the Crown.

It will, I hope, be liberally construed as no want of confidence in your Lordship, and as a mark of the respectability of the highest possible practical authority, namely, by Mr. President Jackson, of the United States, who, in his message pronounced the British Colonies to be the most respectable and the most valuable of the British Empire.

Under those instructions, I had successfully conducted with democracy in America, and in the event of the eventual result of this noble struggle, I had only required of his Majesty's Government the support of his Majesty's Government, as being the representative of the representatives of the people.

Moffat's VEGETABLE LIFE PILLS AND PHENIX BITTERS. FEVER AND AGUE POSITIVELY CURED. FEVER AND AGUE POSITIVELY CURED. FEVER AND AGUE POSITIVELY CURED.

Others who have emigrated to that rich and promising portion of our country—men who went out in full of hope, and confident of winning a competence from the luxuriance of the soil or who carried to the outposts of our settlements the mercantile or mechanical experience won in the crowded cities and towns of the older States, have either returned with shattered constitutions and depressed spirits, or they remain in their new homes, dragging out a weary life, at last to sink, under some disease to which they are predisposed by that fever of the West, the Fever and Ague.

Try the Life Medicine, and you will yet anticipate your most sanguine expectations, for they will certainly restore you to health and vigour, and will be met at its first approach, and combated at every stage. Seldom find of itself, it reduces the strength, and impairs the powers of the system, and in the manifestation of disease, Nature is unable, unassisted, to resist the fever. The Life Medicine, will, taken strictly as recommended, in a few days, and give to the weak and trembling victim of disease, new health, life, and strength.

Moffat's Vegetable Life Pills and Phoenix Bitters. The universal estimation in which the celebrated Life Pills and Phoenix Bitters are held, is sufficiently attested by the increasing demand for them in every State and section of the Union, and by the voluntary testimonials to their remarkable efficacy which are every day received from a greater or less degree of suffering, and by the improvement in general health, for an instance in which they have failed to do good. In the most obstinate cases of chronic disease, such as chronic dyspepsia, torpid liver, rheumatism, asthma, nervous and bilious head-ache, costiveness, piles, chronic debility, scrofulous swellings, and ulcers, and all other chronic affections, they effect cures with a rapidity and permanency which few persons would credit, and to which thousands have testified from long and happy experience. In colds and coughs, which, if neglected, superinduce the most fatal diseases of the lungs, and indeed in all general diseases, medicines, if taken but for three or four days, never fail. Taken at night, so promote the insensible perspiration, and so reduce the system of febrile action, that the patient, in a few days, is enabled to resume his usual avocations, and to produce a most delightful sense of convalescence in the morning; and though the usual symptoms of a cold should partially return during the day, the repetition of a suitable dose at the next hour of bed-time will almost invariably effect permanent relief, without further aid. The effect of these pills, in all cases, is to reduce the heat of the system, and to produce a most delightful sense of convalescence in the morning; and though the usual symptoms of a cold should partially return during the day, the repetition of a suitable dose at the next hour of bed-time will almost invariably effect permanent relief, without further aid.

Agents for the Life Pills and Bitters: At North Bridge, Mr. John Elliott; Gagetown, Mr. J. B. Bonnell; Fredericton, Mr. James F. Gale; W. Y. Thos. Esq.; St. John, J. A. Lewis, Esq.; Sussex Vale, Mr. Smith; Jamess (Grand Lake), Mr. James Crowley, Digby (N. S.), Hopewell, Peter M. Chas. Esq.; Amherst, Allan Chipman, Thos. Prime, Esq.; Pictouville, Mr. Thos. Farrer; Saint Andrews, Mr. L. C. Black, Sackville, June 7, 1839.

NEW BOARDING HOUSE, Digby, N. S. THE Subscriber having taken that rental and extensive premises, recently held by Captain Reynolds, for a General Boarding Establishment, begs leave to inform his friends and the Public in general, that as Digby presents many local advantages and inducements to Families and others to visit it for the improvement of health, &c., his establishment, he trusts will combine every convenience for the comfort and accommodation of those who may favour him with their patronage and support. DAVID EDGAR.

June 7, 1839. THE Lord Glenelg, &c. &c. F. B. HEAD.

