THE TIMES TALKS ABOUT VEN-

of the Monroe doctrine.
"It is begging the question," says the Times, "to assume that the British claim is for fresh territory. The British case rests wholly upon the vindication of our original right. The British contention is that, as British Guiana becomes British by right of conquest from the Dutch, the British territory extends over the whole area possessed by Holland. Every year adds to the value of a settlement in the colony within the Schomberg line. It is no longer possible to admit any question of a curtailment of British urisdiction beyond that line. We are now willing to submit the frontier question to arbitration, but a few years hence it will be equally impossible to admit such a question anywhere within the limits which we believe to be rightfully ours. "It is inevitable that a note such as the United States ambassador, Mr. Bayard, presented to the Marquis of Salisbury on this question some weeks ago should be drawn almost exclusive-ly from Venezuelan forces. It therefore requires the fullest consideration before replying. The toleration which a strong power is bound to display in dealing with weaker neighbors must have its limit, and as far as American representations may assist in induc-ing a settlement without recourse to unfriendly measures, they will not, we imagine, be unwelcome.

THE TURKISH OUTRAGES. London, Oct. 18.-A dispatch from Constantinople says that the commission appointed by the Porte to inquire into the guilt or innocence of the Armenians who have been arrested since Sept. 30, have caused the release of 47 of the prisoners, who are declared to be innocent of any complicity in the rioting. It is now stated that the number of persons who were killed during the recent troubles at Trebizond was 400. The Sultan has vainly urged M. De Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador, to recall the Russian gunboat that was sent to Trebizond. French and Russian steamers have brought a number of refugees from Trebizond to Constantinople. Further news of the riot at Akissar, the Armenians who were killed by bizond, says that four separate Mossiem mobs surrounded the Armenian quarters at 11 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 8 and began to pillage the shops. Being opposed, they fired on the Armenians, and soon a general massacre began. Soldiers joined the mob in firing on the Armenians and in pillag-ing the shops and houses. The scene continued until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when nothing was left to pillage and nobody was left to be killed. The mob then began to disperse. The better class of Turks did their best to protect the lives of the Armenians, They sheltered the women and children and many men in their houses. The mob attacked only the orthodox Armenians, leaving Catholics alone. Only two non-Armenians were killed, both being Greeks. One of these was within a khan, whose resistance led to the killing of all the inmates, numbering 55. No woman or child was killed in the

At 5 o'clock the governor appeared on the scene and proclaimed that anybody found armed would be arrested and summarily punished. Leading Turks obtained permission for the Armenians to lodge in the barracks, where military protection was given, it being feared there might be a renewal of the disorders during the night. An official return places the number of dead at 180, but well-informed persons place it at between 400 and 500. On the same day, Oct. 8, several villages utside Trebizond were burned and pillaged, and many persons were killed. Other villages were partly looted. After matters had quieted down, the foreigners returned to their homes from the y all the foreign and native refugees

Hong Kong, Oct. 18.—Dispatches received here from the Island of Formosa announce that Takao, on the west coast of that island, Jean. was captured on Wednesday last, Oct. 16, by the Japanese. The dispatches also state that the Japanese intend to bombard Tai-Wan-Fu, the Chinese capital, today. That city is held by the Black Flag leader who efuses the terms offered him, namely un-

Paralyzed. McKeesport, Pa., Oct. 17.-Dr. A. L. Black, a well-known physician of this city, dropped dead last evening immediately after dismounting from his bicycle. Toledo, Oct. 17 .- W. A. Baker, a young man employed as a stenographer by the Paragon Refining Company, who formerly lived at Clyde, rode there on his wheel on Sunday morning, a distance of 45 miles. He left here apparently in perfect health, and, as he was an enthusiastic wheelman, the trip was not one that he considered excessive. He was stricken with paralysis soon after dismounting. He is also delirious, and the doctors have little hope of his recovery.

BLUEFISH TOWED A BOAT TO Sayville, L. I., Oct. 18 .- A remarkable

Electric Railway, The New G. T. R. Manager a Fast Train

Man-A Stickler for Discipline.

A corporation known as the Canadian Electric Railway and Power Company will apply for articles of incorporation at the next sitting of Parliament. They will ask for power to build, operate and maintain an electric railway from Montreal to Windsor, running through Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, Toron-to and London, and with power to build branch railways for a radius of 25 miles from the main line. They also ask leave to lease all existing roads, to dispose of electricity for power or heating purposes, and to have full right to perform all undertakings of an electrical company. It is not stated in the application who the promoters are. Charles M. Hays, the new general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, has the reputation of being a fast train man, and it is thought he will roduce the running time greatly between the large cities. He is also said to be a great stickler for discipline.

Grading was completed on the new spur on the M. C. R. at Amherstburg on Monday. Track laying commenced this week.

W. C. T. U, Third Annual Convention of the Kent County Association.

Thamesville, Ont., Oct. 18.—The third annual convention of Kent County W. C. T. U. was held here in the town hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, under the presidency of Mrs. R. P. Wright, of Dresden. A large number of visiting delegates were present. The president delivered her annual address, in which she drew attention to the fact, that the R. C. Church of the United States had declared in favor of prohibition, and also the progress or the temperance movement in our own land. The satisfactory growth of the W. C. T. U.

in Kent was a matter of rejoicing. The secretary's report showed several local unions in the county and three Bands of Hope. The treasurer's report showed the finances in a healthy condition. The reports of superintendents showed activity and industry on the part of the ladies in the numerous departments of the union. Several visiting clergymen were then introduced and made brief felicitous adin the vilayet of Adin, shows that the attack on the Armenians was entirely unprovoked. The bodies of twenty of which the Rev. D. M. Kennedy made an address of welcome to the union, Mussulmans were thrown into wells, which was responded to by Mrs. president, the retiring president, Mrs. R. P. Wright, Dresden; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Sawbery, Chatham (re-elected); recording secretary, Miss Maud McKelvy, Wallaceburg; treasurer, Mrs. George M. Baird, Blenheim (re-elected).

DID SHE BITE?

Her Daughter Says Yes - Defendant's Artifical Teeth Offered in Evidence.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 18.—Christina Vestcott, who is well known in Hartord society, was charged in teh police court with an assault on her 17-yearold daughter, Bessie. The judge reserved decision, and Mrs. Westcott returned to her home. Bessie is staying with girl friends.

The hearing attracted wide interest, for Bessie is one of the prettiest girls in the city, and all the society maidens tripped into the court room to hear the story of her romance and its sequel.

Bessie swore that last Wednesday night her mother asked her if she had been clandestinely meeting Jean Ginnan, a young insurance clerk. Bessie acknowledged that she had. "Are you going to give him up?"

asked her mother. "Never," said Bessie. Thereupon, says Bessie, her mother grasped her by her pretty brown hair, three times, slapped her face, shook her vigorously, and bit her four times on the left arm.

"Now, will you meet him again?" she asked. "Yes, I will! I will! I will! I will! So was Bessie's reply, and then the there!" mother retired defeated.

Complaint was made by the neighbors, and Mrs. Westcott's arrest followed. Her defense was that she was simply meting out proper punishment to a daughter, who would leave the house ostensibly to attend church, but in reality to take long walks with

"I shook her, but I didn't bite her," said Mrs. Westcott, emphatically. "I couldn't bite her, for my teeth are artificial. Each tooth is set in a crown filling separately, and I have to eat my meat with two natural teeth."

"Show the court," commanded her attorney, Mr. Coogan, Obediently the defendant removed her gloves, lifted her veil, and carefully removed each tooth, placing it with care on the rail of the witness box.
"There, she exclaimed triumphantly, while society looked on amazed. "H-m, I'll think it over," said Judge fill. The betting is three to two that Mrs. Scott didn't bite.

Four Men Who Entered a Burning Mine and P rished.

Franklin, Wash., Oct. 18.-Fire broke out last night in the main hoisting slope of the Oregon Improvement Company's mine, causing the death of John H. Glover, S. W. Smalley, John Adams and James Stafford. The accident was caused by August Johnson, who dropped his lamp setting fire to a feeder his lamp setting fire to a feeder of gas. Instead of throwing a shovel of dirt to put it out, he ran down the slope to get the pit foreman. While he was bringing help the timbers caught fire, and five lengths of brattick work were ablaze, and the smoke become so interes as to prevent setting. came so intense as to prevent getting at it. Finding that the fire could not be extinguished, the four men named volunteered to go down and close a door between the main and auxiliary slope. They are supposed to have never reached the bottom alive, but the bodies have not been recovered.

The ladies of the Methodist Church held a successful social here tonight at the house of Councilor Levette. There is a man here who says that when he had a horse and cow everybody wished him good morning. But now that he has neither, or anything else to his name, they still wish him good morning, only in a different way.

GLENCOE. Glencoe, Oct. 18.-Last evening in the lecture hall of the Presbyterian Church was given one of the most pleasing en-tertainments which it has been the fortune of a Glencoe audience to listen to for some time, and those who have been looking forward to the Japanese concert for some weeks had their expectations more than fulfilled. The programme was interesting from beginning to end. The following young ladies dressed in Japanese costumes took part in the programme: Mis Ada Thomas, Miss Georgie Dobie, Miss Jessie McRae, Miss May Younge, Miss Mann, Miss Cassic McAlpine, Miss May Dixon, Miss M. McAlpine, Miss May Dixon, Miss M.

McKinnon, Miss Aldred, Miss Lizzia
Harris, Mis Lizzie Doble, Miss Bessie
MoLarty, Miss Douglas McRae, Miss
Sadie McVicar, Miss Flora Campbell,
Miss A. Younge, Miss K. M. McKellar, and Mrs. Arthur Sutherland.
Their different representations were Japanese scarf drill, Japanese fan drill, Japanese tea, the May pole and grand march. They were all faultlessly executed. They repeated the fan drill by request.

Miss Mary McKinnon rendered an instrumental solo in a very acceptable manner. The little Misses Finlayson as usual sang sweetly and were obliged to respond to a hearty encore. Mrs. Bloom rendered two Scotch songs in a very acceptable manner. Mrs. Faulds also charmed the audi-

Japan. Another delightful feature of the programme was the posing in Greek costume by Miss Georgie Doble, Miss May Younge, Miss May Duon and Miss Besie McLarty. The music by the Peady orchestra was as usual all that could be desired.

A large sum was realized.

The Struggles of the First Directory Compiler.

Prominent Londoners of 40 Years Ago Who Still Live.

Parts They Played in the Early History of the City.

Churches, Schools, City Government, Cemeteries, Military and Businesses that Yet Survive.

London in 1856 and 1857! Few things give one a more realistic picture of times that are past than a city directory. A directory a year old is looked upon merely as a catalogued list of names; a directory 40 years old assumes the dignity and importance of a history, and is always given one liot was one of the board of trustees of the most coveted positions in the library of citizens fortunate enough to possess one. Dr. Geo. C. Davis has furnished the "Advertiser" with a copy of the first London city directory of the years named. It was the property of his father and is neatly bound in leather, the binding being lettered in gold. The typographical work, the citizens of London than any other which is credited to the Atlas, is worthy of a later date and much more improved facilities. The compiler of the 300 odd pages of now really interesting matter was one George Railton, notary public. He complains somewhat in his preface about a lack of advertising, just as modern directory compilers do. Railton pleaded that he was a novice at book-making and thought it necessary to excuse the zeal of his canvasser by the perseverance of the compiler. In a postscript he says: A TERRIBLE JOB!

"Unaided and alone I had to contend with the inexperience of a novitiate, besides the indifference of the public, to encourage that which some were pleased to call a useless undertaking; because, for sooth, they knew everybody' and that 'everybody knew them.' Numberless objections and evasive answers were urged by the householders (fearing additional burdens by taxation) so that the mere gathering of the names was extremely tedious. Fresh trials and difficulties were met with in the printing, which is not to be wondered at in getting out a book of 300 pages, perhaps the largest job of the kind exe-cuted in London." What a terrible job was directory making in '56! Speaking of the free circulation of the directory in outside towns Mr. Railton says:

"Already has good resulted from it merely, and who looked upon it only as a swamp village, intimated that his partner did business on the other side,' but had not 'penetrated' any farther into the 'interior' than Chatham. Upon my recommendation he came here in propria persona and enlarged his business by some hundreds of dollars." No doubt this was before the days

Of the N. P.! THE COMMON COUNCIL. The Provincial Legislature was then in its second session. John Wilson (politics not defined) was the member for London town. J. Shanly, Esq., 40 years ago as now, was master in chancery. He was then also deputy

Wm. Barker was mayor of London. and the aldermen and councilors were as follows: Ward No. 1-Aldermen, Schram, James Moffat; councilors, R. S. Talbot, John Blair. Ward No. 2-Aldermen, Elijah Leonard, Wm. McBride; councilors, John O'Neil, Samuel McBride.

Ward No. 3-Aldermen, David Glass, Marcus Holmes; councilors, John Clegg, John Arnold. Ward No. 4—Aldermen, Francis Smith, T. W. Shepherd; councilors, Wm. Glass, W. T. Kiely. Ward No. 5-Aldermen, Daniel Lester, G. G. Magee; councilors, J. Hitch-

ings, Robert Smith. Ward No. 6-Aldermen, John Carling, Thos. Peel; councilors, Paul Phipps, Ed. Garrett.

Ward No. 7-Aldermen, Wm. Barker, Samuel Stansfield; councilors, John Wells, Robinson Orr. The council met every Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. (an improvement on the present style) and no doubt adjourned for tea. There were eight committees in all. Three suffice now. Then a committee dealt with educational matters, another with the city's railroad, and another with licenses; one dealt with hospital affairs, another police, another education and printing. The finance and assessment, improvements, and gas and water committees more nearly corresponded with the present committees. John Scanlon, one of the assessors, still lives. Dr. Nelles then enjoyed the distinction of coroner, while Wm. Baskerville and Patrick Wallace were two of London's seven constables. The latter is still in active service. Mr. A. S. Abbott, afterwards city clerk, was then one of the tax collectors. He was also chairman of seven license inspectors (quite a regiment compared with the present single officer), as well as secretary of the school trustees and assistant chief of the fire department. A. Grant, S. McBride and G. Taylor were captains of the three fire engine

HOSPITAL AND CEMETERIES. The city hospital was situated two and a half miles out of the city on the Hamilton road. It had a capacity for 40 patients and fortunately was celdom crowded.

The list of doctors is not given, but there were five cemeteries—St. Paul's (now a splendid residential locality fronting on Dundas street and otherwise bounded by Salter's Grove, now Queen's Park, and what are now Rectory and Campbell streets). The conditions of tenancy were somewhat rigorous. None but iron fencing was and no other than the Church of England burial service was performed. The Wesleyan Methodists had a cemetery just across Campbell street where the tall chimney of Bennett's factory is now the only monument and lumber piles the only mounds. Here today, as well as across the road in the old St. Paul's Cemetery, forsaken bones sometimes startle laborers in making excavations. The Roman Catholic burying ground was then on the Hamilton road overlookthe beautiful winding south branch of the Thames, two and a quarter miles from the city, and still a charming portion of the farm land. Young men of the present generation who a decade ago would go swimming with other boys at the "old clay banks" at night would sit about the fire on the river bank, while their eyes would almost burst from their scekets at the stories of the older boys of wraiths that came floating over the water at night, and when the fire burnt out the bravery of most of the boys was away below zero. St. Andrew's Church had then just acquired the old Free Church burying ground north of the present military school, and anent the closing of which a proposition is now on foot. The United Presbyterian Cemetery was situated on con. 2, London township, about one mile from Blackfriars' bridge. Blocks were sold to members at 20 shillings, and a discrimination of 10 shillings was inflicted upon non-members. The late Lawrence Lawless, sr., was postmaster, and R. J. C. Dawson, the present postmaster, was a mailing clerk. It cost 12 cents to send a halfounce letter, or a half-pound book to Great Britain.

Mr. W. C. L. Gill, the present city registrar, was then deputy county registrar. SCHOOLS. contained the following London schools and places of instruction: County board of public instruction, London grammar school, the old Union Colonial Church The present Judge Wm. El-School. of the grammar school, while the late Rev. Benjamin Cronyn, D.D., was chairman both of the grammar school and county board. The late J. B. Boyle was then principal of the Union School, and on the staff of teachers was Mr. Nicholas Wilson, yet in active service on the Collegiate Institute staff. Mr. Wilson, without exception, has taught (and chastised) more of living man. The younger boys had heard their fathers speak of "Nick," and they in turn had also heard their fathers speak of him-and always well. A teacher of three generations! No wonder the boys look up to the patriarch with awe and listen attentively to a repetition of some of the scholastic misdeeds of their forefathers. CHURCHES.

The late Nev. Benjamin Cronyn, M.A., B.D., was rector of St. Paul's Church. The church wardens were L. Lawrason and W. W. Street. Rev. Dr. Hellmuth held among other clerical offices that of "missionary to fugitive slaves at London."

AEneas Smith was elder of the Presbyterian Church in affiliation with the church of Scotland. In this connection the directory contains the following interesting paragraph:

"Since the disruption 'at home' this congregation has become inconsiderable and scattered. At present they have neither a place of worship nor a minister; but occasional services are held within the Mechanics' Hall, of which printed notice is usually given. London affords the only instance upon record of the Church of Scotland having been deprived of its property by the Free Church, and while the adherents of the establishment seem not to forget it, neither do they appear to recover from it."

St. Andrew's (Free) Church, on North street, now Queen's avenue, was the city representative of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. Rev. John Scott was minister, and William Clark —for on a recent visit to Detroit a Scott was minister, and William Clark merchant who had 'heard' of London ruling elder. A Gaelic service was also held in connection with this church.

> The Congregational Church was sit-Clarke was pastor. The building was burnt a few years ago. The Right Rev. Dr. Pinsonault was Bishop of the Catholic Church, on Richmond street. There were two Wesleyan Methodist Churches - North Street (late Queen's avenue) and St. James' Street. Rev. John Douse and Rev. J. Preston were pastors respectively. Rev. line. John J. A. Proudfoot (still living) was pastor of the United Presbyterian Church, York street. The other churches were Methodist. New-Connection, Clarence street, Rev. J. H. Johnston: Bible Christian Church, Horton and property. Wellington streets, (now used as a carpenter shop), Rev. R. L. Tucker; Baptist Church, corner York and Talbot streets, Rev. Charles Campbell. There was an African Episcopal Church at the corner of Thames and Horton but the pastor's name was not given.

MILITARY. In the absence of the regular troops three companies of enrolled pensioners kept the city in a proper state of subjugation. The force had an excellent band. Robt. Reid, John Carling. Alfred G. Smyth (still living), and the late Wm. Glass were lieutenants in the first battalion of London Militia. Dr. Brown, who died only the other day, was medical officer to the enrolled pensioners, doing garrison duty. A. S. Abbott, W. C. L. Gill, Verschoyle Cronyn and J. B. Smyth (all living), were among the ensigns of the first battalion, while Samuel Mc-Bride was a captain of the second battalion; David Glass, Robt, Reid, lieutenants, and Richard Bayly, Samuel Barker and John Pannell, ensigns. Mr. W. C. L. Gill was also a lieutenant in Rifle Company No. 1.

E. Jones Parke was in those early days solicitor for the Port Stanley Railway Company and the Commercial Bank. V. Cronyn was vice-president of the London Cricket Club, of which C. S. Hammond, James Greer and James Gillean were members. Even then the Mechanics' Institute was fifteen years old, and Samuel McBride was one of the vice-presidents. Robert Reid, A. G. Smyth and the late Senator Leonard were on the committee.

OTHER FEATURES. The directory also contained the city bylaws, liquor and other licenses, and the directory proper. Among the advertisements were the following of Londoners still living, or institutions still in existence: A. G. Smyth, general agent; John Elliott, Phoenix foundry; James Gillean, books; Hunt's mills, Hyman's tannery, London foundry; D. Macdonald, insurance agent; Edward Adams, grocer; City Hotel; F. B. Beddome, general agent; Chapman's bookbindery; Wm. Saunders, chemist; John Gurd, gunsmith; J. Shanly, barrister; Davis, the jeweler (then conducted by the late John Davis); James Glen, tailor; Western Hotel (then kept by Peter McCann); Labatt's brewery; Daniel Lester, grain dealer; B. A. Mitchell, druggist; R. &. W. Reid, wholesale stationers; E. Jones Parke, barrister; John Law, plumber; W. G. Telfer, agent and broker; W. & T. Carling, brewers; T. Partridge, attortained the call from Leeburn and Union Church to Rev. James Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton having accepted the call, his induction was fixed for Tuesday, Sept. 29. Rev. S. J. Harris, of Binbrook, pastor of Binbrook, Tyneside and Caistor Baptist Churches, has accepted a call to the Baptist Church at Boston, Ont., near Waterford. Many in Binbrook will deeply regret his departure. Ed. Stover, D. Britton and J. Eden, jun., have taken action against the township of Malahide, claiming $2,000 damages for injuries sustained by a threshing engine falling through a bridge at Glencolin on Sept 14 last. Dr. J. J. P. Armstrong visited the school at Sixth Line, Moore, Monday afternoon, finishing up vaccinating the children of the schools in the township. The doctor has vaccinated 260 persons since the smallpox scare. The fall convention of the Christian Endeavor Union of the counties of Kent and Essex will be held at Essex town on Tuesday, Oct. 22, morning, afternoon and evening. The morning session will commence at 10 o'clock. A Huron county pioneer, Mr. Alex. Mitchell, of Stanley, is dead. He was

86 years old, having been a resident of the township for 60 years, and helped to chop the Bayfield road when it was all bush. Mrs. Mitchell died on the 7th of June. About 1 o'clock Thursday morning ginning in the morning at 7 o'clock with a grand rally at the sunrise prayer and praise service, to be held in the church under the leadership of their highly-esteemed pastor Rev. J. G. Fallis.

Geo. Harris, of Chatham, attempted to steal a ride to Windsor on a Grand Trunk freight train Wednesday morning. About six miles from Windsor a brakeman discovered him, and Harris claims that he was thrown off while the train was in motion. One of his ankles was sprained, and he was sent to the Emergency Hospital, Detroit.

Rev. R. S. Cooper, B.D., of Kirkton, who was recently stricken with par-alysis, has lain at death's door ever since, and there is little if any hope of recovery. He had been incumbent of Christ Church, Invermay, for the past 28 years. He was also for many years rural dean of Bruce. He is about 59 years of age and has a family of small children.

On Wednesday evening a good representation of the attendants of the Congregational Church, Woods on, met and paid a high tribute to Miss connection with the church and Sunday school. Miss Woods leaves for Brantford, and will take with her a flattering address from the Sunday school and two beautiful volumes presented by the missionary society.

Windsor folks ere beginning to be a little frightened over the prevalence of typhoid fever. Judge McHugh is with it, as are several of the school teachers. Dr. Lambert, health officer, attributes the trouble to the condition of the sewers and defective plumbing. A. W. Joyce, chairman of the health board, says there is no more typhoid fever in Windsor than there is anywhere else. Miss Mary McHachren, of East Ald-borough, one of the oldest residents of the township, is dead, aged 92 years. Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Healey and family, of St. Thomas, left on Thursday for Orange county, Florida, where they will reside in future. Mr. Healey has taken up 160 acres of land and will go more particularly into poultry and dairying. He will cultivate fifteen acres of oranges.

In view of the anticipated removal of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Vansyckle from their old home in South Yarmouth, their friends and neighbors visited them on Tuesday evening with well-filled baskets, to the number of 60 or more. The Scrap Bag-

Though somewhat conservative in its | choice of subject, the Atlantic Monthly is the criterion of literary style and artistic finish for all the other publishing houses in the country. Treatment is everything! To secure matter which almost approaches the classical in style, and yet never breaks out in those irregularities and unconventionalities with which lofty genius must always cause the proprietors to shudder, would seem to be the aim of the editors of this irreproachable magazine. In view of which, I would call attention to the following gem, almost flawless in its setting, which appeared in the October number: SECOND THOUGHTS.

I thought of leaving her for a day In town, it was such iron winter At Durdans-the garden frosty clay, The woods as dry as any splinter,
The sky congested. I would break
From the deep, lethargic country air
To the shining lamps, to the clash of the play,

And, tomorrow, wake Beside her, a thousand things to say. I planned-oh, more, I had almost started;

I lifted her face in my hands to kiss-A face in a border of fox's fur, For the bitter, black wind had stricken her, And she wore it, her soft hair straying

Where it buttoned against the gray leather snout. In an instant we should have parted; But at sight of the delicate world within, That fox-fur collar, from brow to chin, At sight of those wonderful eyes from the mine-Coal pupils, an iris of glittering spa,

And the wild, ironic, defiant shine As of a creature behind a bar One has captured, and, when three lives are past,

May hope to reach the heart of at last-All that and the love at her lips combined

To show me what folly it were to miss A face with such thousand things to say.

And beside them such thousand more to spare, For the shining lamps, for the clash of the play.
Oh, madness! Not for a single day

Could I leave her. I stayed behind.
—Michael Field.

"Oh, no." "Or her cleverness."

"The idea is absurd."

"I can't understand it at all. They say she was married first by a justice and afterwards by a minister."

"I shouldn't wonder. She naturally wanted to make awfully sure of him." "Of course. It is the only way she could keep him. But I am glad she has caught some one. Mamie is a dear girl, and it would be cruel to say anything against her."

"Indeed it would. I wouldn't do it for the world."

"Neither would I."-Chicago Past.

"Never less alone than when alone" has been traced from one author to another, and many claims have been made to its first employment. It was certainly used by Cicero.

It requires a man of strong nerve to visit Herman, the great, at his villa at Whitestone, Long Island. The writer accepted an invitation from the magician to call upon him at that place the other day, and when he went away he was glad to mingle again in every day affairs. Herman's home stands 11 miles from any other residence. It consists of 28 acres, dotted with stables and greenhouses. In response to the newspaper man's bell-ringing an automatic dwarf figure opened the door, and extended a tray on which was the legend: "Please Leave Your Card." This having been done the figure vanished down the hall and shortly returned with a note from the professor bidding the visitor enter the reception room. Here were noticed innumerable curios and souvenirs from the princes, presidents, rajahs and other rulers of countries. Shortly the host entered and asked the visitor what he would have to drink. When he replied: "Brandy and soda," a wicker table rose from the floor with brandy glasses and soda bottles on it. Examining a large landscape painting, it suddenly shifted in-to a figure of Venus, and when the scribe looked into a cheval glass in the Japanese room he saw himself reflected in oriental costume. In this modern wizard's home all things were as seemed not, and every moment one felt as if he were in fairyland .- indianapolis Sentinel.

The boys, many of them, will be put bodily this winter into kilts over short plaid trousers, with knitted golf stockings, high laced shoes, blue bonnets, the coat and skirt of ordinary cut and color, and a plain leather pouch swung from the skirt belt. Boys who have outgrown their kilts with the kindergarten and attend, what they proudly call a "real school," have persuaded their mothers to lean more and more to a military uniformity of garment, until we bid fair to evolve a distinct dress for our school boys, as is seen in England.

Dark blue, almost the naval blue, is the color preferred for these school suits, with all the decorations done in black silk braids and black enamelled buttons. The caps are blue trimmed with patent leather. and so accoutred the young men regard themselves as well equipped for study, games and above all for their pseudo milltary drills, without which no properly conducted boys' school dares offer any inducements to its pupils.

LOI THESE ARE COLLARS.

Suggest Sashes, Muffs, Capes and What Not, But They Are Simply Collars.

The new collars are worthy of attention. They cleverly display the modiste's art and also her heartlessness. For the latest Parisian creations known as collars are said to be as uncomfortable as they are original. But the novelty of the new gowns is dependent largely upon them, hence they are not to be ignored.

Novelty is their aim, and to attain this end feathers, lace, jewels, ribbons and fur tails are brought into combination. The variety of styles in vogue is so great that they vary from an historical neck adornment to a simple silk ruffle.

To see them at their best one must get a back view of the maiden of the period. No matter how simple a collar may appear | pilfered from the public treasury by a in front it is pretty certain to develop some eccentricity before it reaches the extreme back. It is there that a plain stock develops with a bow of astonishing proportions or is finished with a cluster of fur tails or some other odd device.

A ribbon stock of velvet or silk is the usual foundation upon which the new collars are built. They are then jewelled, lace trimmed or adorned with feathers or

The latest fancy to delight the hearts of Gotham women is known by the popular name of Marlborough collar. It encirales the throat with a stock of Persian silk which at the back spreads out into a large full bow, the upper loops of which show a tendency to curl about the neck. Fastened to the knot in the center of the bow is a tiny mink's head, from which two furry tails dangle over the back of the gown. This collar is also shown in American Beauty rose velvet with the little head and tails in black Persian lamb. It is then called the "Consuelo." It is an adjsutable collar and may be worn with any costume. For street wear it is generally seen in Persian silk or chameleon velvet, with the fur matching the trimming of the cos-

The butterfly bow is the feature of another novel collar. It is caught at the back of a stock and the ends of the wings reach nearly to the waist line. This collar is exquisite in silk gauze, wrought with jewels, for an evening gown,

Stock collars of velvet, with a large rosette-like bow at the back, are selling in the shops as the latest collar novelty. The stock is either plain or has little tabs of lace falling over it.

Another new collar novelty is one that the nervous woman should only gaze at from afar. It is made of a silk stock, with faulike projections at either side, which reach so high that they touch the ear. These projections are of the silk, with an edge of lace or a tiny ruffle of chiffon. They are said to be the most unpleasant things to wear ever invented.

However, women need not despair, for there are many simple collar novelties this season, as well as these elaborate creations. The Pierrot ruff, which is high in favor, is nothing but an unassuming little ruffle, and the idea of finishing the neck with just a plain frill of silk or lace is high in favor with some of the most fashionable women. Other new collars, which, if not so plain, are almost as comfortable. have a stock of medium height made of soft satin, and from this fur tails hang Cown over the corsage in clusters. Plain bands of iridescent galloon finish the neck of some of the new cloth gowns, and others show a stock of ribbon laid in tiny plaits. Many of the Parisian tailor-made frocks have a stock collar of embossed leather. A French cloth walking costume recently seen was deep mauve in color with a stock collar in white leather embroidered with a conventional design in green. It is invariably the color which makes or mars the costume, and yet women will persist in wearing any collar which Dame Fashion proclaims the vogue. The same style of collar cannot possibly be becoming to all types of women, and the sooner they learn this the better dressed they will appear. A sensible plan is to wear a modified form of the fashionable coliar, changed to suit the individual requirements of the wearer. Women with short, fat necks should avoid the collar with appendages which reach to the ears, while women with a crane-like neck should hesitate before donning the gown cut somewhat low and finished with a simple little silk ruffle.

The economical woman glories in the adjustable collar. Many different collars will change the effect of a bodice, as long as that bodice lasts. In the way of neck adornments, filmy Marie Antoinette fichus are much the vogue. But that's another story, as Kipling would say.

Sir Charles H. Tupper Flies Into a Tantrum Over an Exposure.

Rich Convicts Set Free Because of Alleged Sickness, in the Penitentiaries.

The Langevin-McGreevy-Connolly Outrage Recalled-A Foolish Telegram by the Junior Tupper Fitly Answered by Mr.

Laurier.

Delta, Oct. 17.-When Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper sulked in his tent because he could not have his own way, and then hastened back to make his peace with the custodians of the loaves and fishes at Ottawa, people smiled indulgently and said that he would grow out of it. Their generous expectations seem to have been justified, for yesterday he gave to the world another exhibition of the impulsiveness of youth, that reckons not upon consequences, with the result that people in this part of the country acquainted with the circumstances are laughing at him. Mr. Laurier is very much delighted with Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. The Min-ister's achievement has served a three fold purpose. It has, in the first place, shown with what deep concern the Government regards the triumph of the Liberal leader in the Province of Ontario; it has, in the second place, as-sisted him in the exposure of official corruption at the capital; and, in tht third place, it has presented Sir Charles in a most foolish light before the public. In addressing a great mass meeting here yesterday, Mr. Laurier said there were several things upon which a man in his position had to speak, and at almost every meeting he had to go over the same ground. He would not have spoken of the scandals today but for the telegram which he had received from the Minister of Justice, which he would read, and which would cause him to speak once more of the things that had grated on his feelings. me speak again," said Mr. Laurier, "and let me give once more my views of that question, since he does not seem to have understood them properly, not that my words were not explicit, but I think he did not bring to bear on that question all his legal acu-

Mr. Laurier then briefly reviewed the investigation instituted by Mr. Tarte in 1891, which resulted in establishing the fact that a million dollars had been conspiracy entered into by Sir Hector Langevin with Thomas McGreevy and others, the disclosure of which caused a shuddering horror to pass through the whole body politic. Sir Hector the whole body politic. Sir Hector Langevin, on the presentation of this evidence, was simply asked to relinguish his portfolio of Minister of Public Works, and was sent over to the other side of the House. He was sent over to the desert, as the scapegoat, laden with the sins of Israel, and, though Sir Hector was sent into the desert, he never went far into the wilderness, but always kept close to the pastures in which he had luxuriated so long. Mc-Greevy and Connolly were charged with the conspiracy, found guilty, and sentenced to twelve months in Judge Rose had told them distinctly that the sentence would be light upon them, because, as he well knew by the evidence, there were men behind them n high places far more guilty than they were. They did not spend twelve months in jail—scarcely three months. They were pardoned, and for what reason? The reason given to the public was that in confinement the health of Mr. McGreevy and of Mr. Connelly was not as good as it would have been in the open air. He (Mr. Laurier) could believe it. It required no medical skill to know that when a man was in confinement his cheeks were not as ruddy as if he were walking about in the open air. It required no medical skill to know that behind the bars of the jail Mr. McGreevy and Mr. Connolly had not as good an ap-petite as if they had been in the open They were discharged. Hardly had they been discharged than they were banqueted in Montreal.

THEIR NAME IS LEGION. I said, the leader went on, that if we are to adopt that principle, that simply because a man's health suffers in jail it is a case for relief, in which the Governor-General, representing her Majesty the Queen, is to exercise the prerogative of mercy-I say, and I said a few days ago at Merrickville, there are in the fails of Toronto and Mon-treal hundreds of men who are justly entitled to the same mercy and relief as that which was shown to Mr. Mc-Greevy and Mr. Connolly. But I have received this telegram from Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, dated Ottawa, Oct. 16,

"To Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, Delta,-You are reported in the Mail and Empire of the 15th inst. to have stated at Merrickville as follows: 'There were convicts in the jails of Montreal and Toronto, he said, speaking of the liberation of Messrs, McGreevy and Connolly, who had just as good a reason to regain their freedom. The Government would not interfere with the former, however, because they had not sinned on behalf of the Conservative Administration."

"I need not remind you, as a counel of long standing, and a Privy Councilor as well, that this statement directly concerns the office of Minister of Justice. I beg of you, therefore, in justice to my department, to favor me promptly with the names of the prisoners to whom you refer. Not a single case of the kind has been reported to me or brought under my notice. (Signed) Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper." The names of the prisoners to whom refer? Yes, I will give it to Si Charles Hibbert Tupper. The name of the prisoners to whom I referred is legion. (Cheers.) There are legions of prisoners who are entitled, just as much as Mr. McGreevy or Mr. Connolly, to this relief, which was extended to them, and I forthwith proceeded to answer Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper in the following language:

"Delta, Oct. 16, 1895. "To Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Minister of Justice,—If no case has been reported to you I advise you, as a philanthropist, to inquire into the matter and you will find that the health of all prisoners is affected by confinement. They are all entitled to the same tender mercies extended by the Government to Messrs. McGreevy and Connolly. (Signed) Wilfrid Wilfrid that if the health of a prisoner is so poor in jail that he has to be liberated and if the following day he is ready to be banquetted in Montreal or any other city, that he is suffering from the kind disease which would entitle him to the compassion of the Government? Yes, legion is the name of the men who are entitled to the same mercy of the Government, and if the same mercy is not extended to the legion I say again as I said at Merrickville, it is because they have not sinned in behalf of the Government sitting at Ottawa. The audience was greatly tickled at Mr. Laurier's clever rejoinder to the

PRISONERS WHO HAD A "PULL." Hon. Mr. Laurier recently made a strong protest against the policy of the men in power at Ottawa, which dictated the liberation of McGreevy and Connolly, the convicted associates of Sir Hector Langevin, after serving a month or two of their sentence. Mr. Laurier did not hesitate to allege that there were convicts in the jails of the country who had just as good reason to regain their freedom as had these two pets of the present Domindon Administration. Immediately Sir Charles H. Tupper "flew off the handle" and sent a long telegram to Mr. Laurier, at public expense, calling for "names." The message is described by the Toronto News, a journal friendly to the men in power, as ludicrous, and as lacking in "his father's political sagacity." Mr. Laurier's prompt reply, given in another column, will meet with public approval.

There is no reason for doubting that McGreevy and Connolly were liberated start than many of the old nobles got. because they had been the confidential agents of the Government, and it was necessary to set them free, or there ought to have the right to create our would have been such an exposure of own lords, dukes, marquises, earls, etc., driven its members from power. No sooner were these men let out of jail than their political friends organized a banquet in their honor, and they the money, and if the American young appeared then to be in the pink of condition. There was indeed no healthon the Conservative side of the House of Commons last session foolish Mr. Tupper had he would never have sent such a demand to Mr. Laurier. A reference to the penitentiary returns for 1894, compiled in Mr. Tupper's own department, and laid before Parliament this year, will show that hundreds of convicts were sent to the hospital, not because they had a mere "tired feeling," but because they suffered from disease. Some of the convicts could be cured, others suffered from such incurable maladies as consumption. But they were not released. Why? Mr. Laurfer makes the reply, and it cannot be gainsaid. No convict regards imprisundoubtedly there are many prisoners electric railway cars in cities. in jail who would enjoy better health if free than is possible under confinement, but that is not regarded as a valid excuse for their release, though it was in the case of the favored of-

A prominent city doctor strongly protests against the burning of tree leaves and other garbage at this season of the year. He asserts that the practice is the direct cause of bronchitis, sore throats and lung maladies. A far better way of disposing of the refuse would be to have it used as a fertilizer for gardens or fields. Thus the public health would not be menaced, and the soil would be benefited.

THE NEW PAVEMENT. The new asphalt pavement will be completed within the next day or two. So far as non-experts can judge, the contractors are making a good job of it. They know that if the pavement does not come up to expectations, it will be the last of the kind laid in this city. When the pavement is finished, it will be necessary to keep it clean; if it is kept in a dirty condition, especially during dry weather, it is most unsatisfactory. This is a matter which the proper civic committee should see to at once. Then it may be necessary to warn horsemen to promptly accustom themselves to drive especially in wet or frosty weather. Driving on asphalt has certainly to be conducted with greater care than on the rough stone road or macadam, or accidents are sure to happen. First let the horses get their "asphalt step," and when they are accustomed to the pavement let it be remembered that a too quick haul up, or fast driving on the new roadway when it is wet, is always attended with danger.

In the spring of 1877, when Hon. Alexunder Mackenzie was Premier, potatoes were worth $2 per bag on the Hamilton In the fall of 1895, with Sir Mackenzie Bowell for Premier, the price is 20 to $25 cents. Both these are extreme prices, but let's hear no more about how the N. P. helps the farmer.

WHY NOT CREATE CANADIAN LORDS, DUKES, EARLS, ET AL., FOR THE AMERICAN MATRI-MONIAL MARKET?

Canada does not yet possess all the powers of self-government that would be advantageous to her. She should be given the right to create lords, dukedoms, earldoms, baronies, knighthoods, and all the orders of nobility prevalent in Great Britain and other old world countries. Without that right, without_lords, dukes and earls, and only a limited number of imported baronets and knights, Canada must continue to be at a great disadvantage, as we shall show.

> Imported, duty free, baronetcies and knighthoods have really no material value to this country, but there are many reasons for believing that live lords, live dukes, and live earls, if existing in plenty here, could divert to the Dominion annually many millions of hard cash that are now gathered into the coffers of needy old world nobility.

> If we had the power to put on the market a fair supply of lords, dukes, and earls, there is no reason to doubt that the titled possessors would, in due course, induce United States heiresses, pining amid simple generals and captains, and other plebelan surroundings, to seek in Canada that eminence which they now find in British upper-

There need be no difficulty in finding titles. What more striking designation than Lord Komoka? or the Duke of Medicine Hat? or the Marquis of Munceytown? or the Earl of Waubuno? or the Baron de Port Stanley?

But how would our new nobility obtain their prestige? They would have one advantage over some sections of the old world nobility. They would have no past, no crooked limbs in their ancestral tree to explain away, no shady matrimonial episodes to conceal. The new nobility could begin with a clean slate, because they could plead that lack of knowledge of their predecessors which has been a colonial privilege from the earliest days. But admitting that the newness of the titles might be an objection, it could only be temporary, and then all noble houses must have a beginning. It would not be difficult for Canada to give the new nobles a more reputable It is the public interest that we are chiefly concerned about, however. We in order that some part of the millions now sent to Great Britain annually because of the craving for titles that exists among the rich over the border. may be diverted into Canada. We need to look with favor on young men unless they are lords, dukes, marquises, earls, et al., it is the duty of our rulers in defense of the country, to see to it that they are enabled to set the manufactory of titles at work at the earliest possible moment.

In this age of competition for the world's gold, Canadians should not be hampered.

Mr. Pell, secretary of the St. George's Society, Toronto, reports many persons yet without work in that city. He says there is "an unusually large number of able-bodied men applying for aid to get back to the old country." The city relief officer says that 573 applied for relief during September. This is not a pleasant outlook for the winter.

"EXCUSE ME, SIR."

Mrs. Mary Graves' Words as She Stepped in Front of the Train

Which Killed Her at Talbot Street-The Coroner's Jury Finds a Verdict of Accidental Death-The Grand Trunk Exon-

The last words which Mrs. Mary Graves spoke as she stepped in front of the Grand Trunk train at the Talbot street crossing on Tuesday evening were, "Excuse me, sir." They were addressed to Mr. Fred N. Soper, as he laid his hand on her shoulder to prevent her being struck by the incoming accommodation.

The coroner's inquest into the circumstances surrounding the accident was held at the police station last night before Dr. Flock and the jury which viewed the remains on Wednesday morning, and of which James Nine witnesses Dunn was foreman. were examined, including Mary, the 15-year-old daughter of the unfortunate woman; John Fletcher (engineer), John Davidson (fireman), S. W. Priestley (brakeman), and John Walmsley (conductor), the crew of the passenger train which struck Mrs. Graves; John Gillett, the crossing watchman, and Frank Holman and Fred. N. Soper. The evidence throughout went to clear the Grand Trunk from any responsibility. Mrs. Graves had been drinking some that day, and was returning home with a small supply, procured with her last 10 cents. She approached the crossing at a brisk pace, and with her head bent forward, and taking no notice of the approaching train, stepped on the first rail and was struck. Messrs. Holman and Soper were the persons seen by some bystanders to try and stop the progress of the woman. Mrs. Graves had passed them at the oatmeal min on the north side of the track, and appeared to be deep in thought. She walked towards the crossing despite the warning of the watchman, and Mr. Soper placed his hand on her shoulder. Instead of pausing then. Mrs. Graves turned sharply, said "Excuse me, sir," relieved herself, and increasing her pace almost to a run, she kept on. A second more and she was struck. The evidence of the train hands principally referred to the rate of speed at which the train was going when the accident happened. Six to seven miles an hour was the general estimate. Driver Fletcher has been at the throttle 45 years, and Conductor Walmsley has been punching tickets for a quarter of a century. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death, and exonerated the company's employes from all blame. It was recommended that cars on the west side of Talbot street should not be allowed to stand within twenty feet of the crossing.

FAIRLY ACTIVE.

Dun & Co.'s Statement of the Business Situation in Canada

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly statement of trade in Canada says: Wholesale trade at Toronto continues fairly active. Dealers in drygoods, groceries and hardware all report improvement as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The demand is partly stimulated by the stronger tone of the leading articles of merchandise. Cotton, metals and sugars continue firm at top prices, and it looks as if they might have a further advance. Remittances are fair; but in many cases they are not up to what had been anticipated. The colder weather held to some improvement in the retail trade, but this business is being monopolized by a few houses. The limited receipts of wheat at Toronto account for the higher prices paid there for this cereal. Ontario wheat has been a small crop the past season, while the Manitobo crop was large. The exports of Manitoba wheat are likely to be proportionately smaller than last year, and there is no reason to fear small supplies. The advance in sterling exchange is a feature. Indications point to the resumption of gold exports at New York at a season when imports are in order. There was a quiet business on the Toronto Stock Exchange this week. Fluctuations were frequent in the leading speculative issues, but they were unimportant.

The trade distribution at Montreal taken as a whole may be described as moderate in extent, and healthy in character. The general tendency in values continues upwards, the only exception to the rule being the reduction of half a cent in green hides. The dry goods trade report a fair sorting trade with the country, but city retail stocks are still large. Fall business is somewhat disappointing. Clothing men say that October payments from Manitoba and British Columbia show considerable improve ment. In groceries there is a fair movement. Iron and heavy metals are rather quiet, but there have been marked advances in Canada plates, iron pipe and wire. In the oil and paint trade there has been quite a lively week, and in wool the improvement is demand and values is well maintained. Dairy products are bringing a little better figures, the advance in cheese for the week being from three-eighths to half a cent, and transactions in choice creamery butter have been reported at 201

The failures for the week are 46, against 43 for same week of last year.

A Practical Suggestion, Which, if Carried Out, Would Prove a Blessing to Thousands of People.

The question often arises, "Why are women such sufferers from all sorts of unexplained and apparently indefinable ills?" It is easily explained. Find a woman whose bowels are regular, and who gives proper attention to herself in this particular, and you will find a perfectly well woman in nine cases out of ten The careful woman in this respect always has a clear, healthy look, a bright eye and a good complexion, while the one who neglects these charges of Dame Nature is usually sallow looking, with a blotchy skin and sunken eyes. The bowels are the natural drains of the system, and when clogged lead to disease and general ill-health. The deductions of a famous doctor on this line led to the production of Karl's Clover Root Tea, which is nature's grandest remedy for constipation and all kindred ills.

This eminent practitioner concluded that to treat this trouble successfully a remedy would be most efficien and this celebrated medicine was compounded directly from roots and herbs to meet his views. Its success has been marvelous. Mrs. W. P. Warden, of Otin, Mass. says of Karl's Clover Root Tea: "I have tried many different kinds of medicine without receiving any benefit, and had given up all hopes of any cure or even relief. A Paper on "Faithfulness" by Mrs. Tilley -Reports from Several Circles-Thanks-Farewell.

After the usual devotional exercises, the result of the election of officers was announced. Mrs. Austin, of Toronto was chosen provincial secretary, Miss Annie M. Brown, Toronto, recording secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Ami, of Ottawa, vice-president, and Mrs. Tilley, city, by virtue of her office as Dominion secretary, is president. The result was received with applause. Ottawa was chosen as the next place of meeting. Mrs. E. M. Tilley, of this city, presented a lengthy paper on "Faithfulness," which she had read at the women's meeting of the lay workers' convention of the Diocese of Huron. Mrs. Tilley had been led to the preparation of the paper by its having been again and again brought before her eyes and borne upon her mind, the sad hindrance to God's work, the dishonor brought upon his name and character, and the bad example set to others, who in their turn are influenced by their indifference and lack of faithfulness in duty on the part of professed followers. The paper first dealt with the members" responsibility in church services and work, and how surely unfaithfulness in these things affects others. The great blessing lost by neglect of, or unfaithful attendance at, the sacra-ment of the Lord's Supper, was secondly spoken of, and in conclusion Mrs. Tilley urged upon the members to put away the dullness, the apathy and the indifference, and are each day at their very best, remembering CIRCLE REPORTS The Cup of Cold Water Circle, Hamiton, was organized in February, 1891, with eleven members. Meetings are held every two weeks, and are led by different members. No money had ever been raised by entertainments or amusements of any kind. The members pay 5 cents a meeting, whether present or absent, and 1 cent meeting toward sending two delegates to the annual convention. The work of the circle was principally confined to visiting. During the year the members had been compelled to part with one of their number, Miss Maude Burnham, who died in Febru-

The Royal Helpers' Circle, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, in Guelph, was organized with twenty members in July, 1892. In the year just closed the membership had been increased to 33. The funds raised were devoted to refurnishing of the ward in the general hospital. The Watching Circle, of St. James' Church, Stratford, had a membership of 59. Thirty-nine were resident, 17 scattered, and three had joined as individual members. One of the scattered members had organized a circle in Morpeth. All funds were raised by free will contributions. Mrs. Gibbs, of Port Arthur, presented a general report on the circles of that town. There were five circles altogether, four of which were interdenominational, one being in connection with St. John's Episcopal Church. Three of these were formed six years ago, and have ever since constituted the relief corps of the town. During the six years nearly $3,000 have passed through the treasurer's hands. Perhaps the chief feature of Port Ar-thur's work was the purchase of an ambulance for the town at a cost of $600. The circle in connection with St .John's Church has procured a solid silver communion service. Many com-mittees are working in the circle, one of which has to take care of the chancel and communion linen and service find the lessons and keep the chancel in order. Another circle specially devotes its efforts to the procuring of Christmas dinners for the poor. Last winter it sent out 27 baskets, in each of which were a turkey, groceries and toys for the children of the household. The circles were especially careful in their methods of raising money. With the exception of $70 raised by a concert, the entire $3,000 was the result of free will offerings.

Mrs. Austin, of Toronto, reported verbally on the work in York county.

The following resolution was passed: "That we earnestly advise our members to obtain money for carrying on their philanthropic or church work by free will offerings or self-denial, or in cases where entertainments are held for this purpose, we urge that they shall be of such a character as shall bring no discredit upon the name of the Master or those who serve him." The finance committee reported that $88 68 had been received towards convention expenses, of which $87 68 was taken as a collection at the First Presbyterian Church. The accounts paid so far were $68 40, leaving a balance of $20 20.

THE CLOSING MOMENTS. "Can a circle make regular rules for itself?" asked one delegate when the question drawer was opened. "We had some members who frequented drinking places. We made a rule prohibiting the same, and the parties left the

"Of course," replied Mrs. Tilley, "and a circle has the fullest liberty to eay who can become members. I do not doubt but what your circle will flourish a great deal better in consequence of its action." Another delegate wanted to know if there was any difference between an

"Why are there not more circles of King's Sons?" asked another. Mrs. Tilley replied that the St. Andrew's Brotherhood had been formed in many places, thus taking the place of the King's Sons. The Christian Endeavor, too, was partly responsible for the scarcity of Sons' Circles. "And how many members are there in dear Mrs. Gibbs' circle?" was the information a fourth delegate sought. Mrs. Gibbs-Twenty-eight in my circle; 105 in the five circles in Port

A few minutes were spent in giving personal testimony as to the benefit of the order to the spiritual life of the members, and Mrs. Gibbs was called on to make a few closing remarks. Touched by emotion at the thought of parting with so many of her co-workers after three pleasant days in convention, Mrs. Gibbs arose, and with tears in her eyes referred to the sadress of the moment. She was simply overcome, and asked the workers to forget anything she had said which may not have sounded just as gentle as if spoken by Mrs. Tilley. She wanted the Daughters to pray for her and remember her as she passed over the great lake on the way to her home. 'And I want you to simply make one public demonstration-that, God helping, you will be more active. Every woman who has made such a resolve will lift up her hand with me.' Every hand was raised. "God be pronounced, and the numerous delegates, after many a farewell handshake, departed for their respective

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 18.—Wm. A. He says in part: "After countless delays that are sufficient to drive insane an American accustomed to pushing affairs to an immediate conclusion, my hopes for winding up my affairs here are in a fair way of being realized. Yesterday I received the cheering intelligence that the committee on investigation is about ready to begin operations. It will be headed by Shaik Pasha, an official of the Sultan's court, and a favorite with the Sultan. Today I received a call from the Pasha, accompanied by the interpreter of the English consul and a retinue of army officers and attendants. Myself and my native interpreter and a friend whom I can safely trust, composed our side of a private conference which was then held.

"I laid before Shaik the names of the men I had every reason to believe were guilty of murdering Lenz, Immediate prosecution of the undertaking is promised by the Pasha."

Mayor Little occupied the chair, and on the platform with him were Bishop Baldwin, Canon Richardson, Rev. Wm. J. T. Hill, Rev. Benjamin Clement, Rev. A. L. Russell, Rev. E. N. English, Mr. Verschoyle Cronyn, Rev. Robert Johnston, and Mr. H. E. Gates, who was elected secretary of the meeting. Rev. W. J. Clark sent a letter of sympathy and regret at his inability to attend. Other clergymen seated about the hall were Dean Innes, Canon Dann, Arch-deacon Davis, Rev. J. G. Stuart, and Rev. Mr. Cunningham. Others present were: Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Parker, Mr. John Labatt and the Misses Labatt, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Complin, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Arnott, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Pearce, Mrs. Thornley, Mrs. J. W. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Macbeth, Mrs. (Rev.) English, Mrs. and Miss Hutchinson, Miss Carling, Mrs. Frank Leonard, Misses Ibbotson (Montreal), Mrs. Chas. Shanly, Misses Kibbe, Mrs. Evans, Jos. T. Marks, Hubert Ashplant, C. R. Sayer, ex-Mayor Taylor, and many others.

In opening the meeting, the mayor said that in his connection with municipal affairs he had seen the great ne-cessity of such a body of organized charity to prevent the overlapping by charitable societies, and to put down professional pauperism. Certain people made a habit of going from place to place to seek relief, while really deserving cases could not get help be-cause they had not the effrontery that the others had. He then introduced BISHOP BALDWIN.

The Bishop of Huron said that the meeting would have to consider the most feasible way of so systematizing the charities of the city that they might be given in the best possible manner, and might afford the greatest amount of relief. All were one, he said, as far as the need of charm, was concerned, and he drew attention to some of the necessities of the case. Some people, by attending different churches, obtained more relief than they should, and to prevent this a central committee was necessary. This was done in the associated charities with you" was sung, the benediction of Boston, and all societies dispensing relief by this means obtained a bird'seye view of all the charity work of the city. The central body was not one to dispense the charities of any one Churches and societies would be body. Churches and societies would be able to go on now, as in the past, only they would have the report of the central office before them, and would know with whom they were dealing. The bishop spoke of three expressions of the associated work. The first expression would be an information bur-When Walker Whiteside, then a youth eau. Secondly, there should be a labor bureau, and, thirdly, a savings bank should be established, at which the

Dr. Arnott said that the meeting was an indication of the bursting out of the theoretical faith of Christianity. Lots of people began to accept charity with the best intentions in the world, who finally degenerated into mendicants, and apart from the relief itself, the idea of enabling people to do for themselves was a most laudable The meeting, therefore, was one of the most important and significant that had been held in his time. Doctors should devote atention to the prevention, as well as the cure, of disease, and he likened past charitable efforts in recent years, and he has time before him. to an attempt to relieve or cure char-Though not heroic in appearance he has a ity, while no attention had been given mobile, wonderfully expressive face, a voice to the prevention of it. It might be rich and flexible, and a magnetic personality argued that the expenses of a paid that tage among the poor. He did not believe that it could be, and emphasized the necessity of employing a first-class man for the first year. Without this central oversight, the charitable organizations would go on manufacturing paupers and increasing the evil.

JOSEPH MARKS. Mr. Joseph Marks, representing the judgment, though one can scarcely u ler- Industrial Brotherhood, said that he stand the surprising liberties he takes vith the text. Mr. Whiteside is to be praised need of such an organization to the great after the deserving poor. Such an organization would be the means of bringing charitably disposed people closer together. Mr. Marks took occasion to thank the various church representatives for the sympathy and help extended while the Trades and Labor Council conducted their relief bur-eau last winter. Then he drew atten-tion to the fact that poverty could not exist except as a cause, and held that as long as machinery was invented, throwing hundreds and thousands of men out of work, and while men still worked ten hours a day, every man so thrown out of work was entering into competition with the common laborer on the street, and thus instead of becoming a benefit to men, became a curse. This was the conclusion curse. This was the conclusion that the Industrial Brotherhood had arrived at. When they thought of the wealth of the country, of its timber, minerals and fisheries, they also came to the conclusion that the people did not know how to produce the wealth of the country. the country.

REV. ROBERT JOHNSTON. Rev. Robt. Johnston drew Mr. Marks' attention to the Bible passage which said that when men began to remem-ber God, and when this world received back Him who is the true King, and dethrone from their hearts and their society he who has usurped God's throne, then, and not until then, would the evils of poverty cease. Mr. John-ston continued, and spoke of the rounders who traveled from church to church and from society to society. For their own sake, the central bureau should be established. Mowever, Mr. Johnston pointed out the danger of an organization acting unconsciously. Ten men would do acts which any single man would be ashe med to associate his name with. After all, charity was largely the outburst of individuals. He urged them not to make it an object of limiting their charity; rather should they give more. One com-pensating advantage of the combination would be that it would have much more weight when seeking aid from the board of aldermen. In conclusion Mr. Johnston deprecated the attempt or purpose to make the organization almost non-religious. If such was the purpose, he grieved. There was no orthree days it has spouted at the late of two thousand barrels a day, and shows no sign of letting up. An acre of ground surrounding the well has been diked up, and is covered with oil a church—no organization in the Christian land that should not acknowledge tian land that should not acknowledge

Owing to the poor accoustic proties of the hall, Rev. Canon Richardson and Dean Innes did not quite catch the drift of the discussion, and the mayor briefly explained. Archdeacon Davis then moved, seconded by Rev. Mr. Cunningham, that in the opinion of the meeting it was desirable that the organization as proposed should be formed. Mr. George Taylor favored scheme, and Rev. Robert Johnston asked if the workings of the labor bureau would clash with the already established wood yard of the Salvation Army Mr. Hubert Ashplant said that the practical working of the scheme had been thought out, and would be brought efore the committee. Staff-Capt. Collier said that as far as he could see the bureau would in no way interfere with the work of the Army. They would be pleased to work in harmony with the organization. Dean Innes asked if anyone present had had experience in the successful vorking of such a society. Rev. Canon Richardson said that one ad existed in Hamilton until last year, out there was no relief officer representing the mayor ther

CIVIC INSURANCE. No. 1 committee meets tonight and an in-

Probably every insurance agent in town has tendered on the blanket policy of $100,000, by means of which, at the mayor's suggestion, the city will in future protect its laborers. Had it been in force when Matthew Miller and Henry Wallace were caught in the sewer much trouble would have been saved. Litigation over these matters has cost the city $2,000, which is more than enough to pay the premiums on the policy for five years. No more than $1,000 insurance is estimated for any one man. Some rate cutting by the insurance men is talked of.

TURNING THE CORNER. Last night the Barber Company's men completed their work at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets, and at noon today the first car made the turn of the corner since fair time. At present the corner is simply used as a "Y" to allow the cars to return by a different track from which they came down town. By this means the two car service is done away with, and the half dozen motors which have been tied up at the fair grounds loop are brought into service again to the intense gratification of citizens who live in an easterly an bour rate so as to get it down pat. Sunday School Room at Dundas Center Church About Completed.

Description of the New Building-Splendid Heating and Ventilating Facilities-Will Seat 1,000 People.

On Sunday afternoon at 2:45 the dedicatory services in connection with the opening of the Sunday school room of the Dundas Center Church will be held, and from that time on until the church proper is complete, the congregation will worship in the building. It will be early in February—about a year from the date of the fire-before the church will be in shape for opening. Lately the efforts of the large gang of men en-gaged in construction have been centered almost entirely on the school room. It will be far enough ahead to admit of service being held therein on Sunday, but the place will have an unfinished flavor. Yesterday carpenters were busy at work planing, hammering and sawing, bricklayers and plasterers were busy putting on the finishing touches, glaziers were setting the richly-tinted windows, and iron workers were fast building the iron railing, which will prevent small scholars from falling on the heads of people on the main floor below. The plan of the interior construction is as admirable and convenient as the exterior is novel, and architecturally beautiful. The audience will face the south, and the auditorium forms a complete semi-circle. From the speaker's platform, the superintendent will be able to obtain a view of every class in the building, while at the same time partitions will enable the different classes to be free from the vocal interruptions of their neighbors. The gallery presents the appearance of a mammoth horseshoe.

Chairs will be placed in position down stairs until the regular furniture is ready. The walls will be of stucco, with an adamant ceiling. The seating capacity of the Sunday school is 1,000 persons. The main entrance to the Sunday school is on Maitland street. It leads into a vestibule, and then into a hall twelve feet wide, from which the staircases run on either side to the galleries. The school will contain a ladies' parlor and seven class rooms on the ground floor, the rooms being of an average size of 12x15 feet. These will be divided off by doors, so that the whole ground floor can be thrown into one at any time. The gallery is divided into nine class rooms, radiating from an imaginary center. There are also two rooms on the first floor which can be used as extra class rooms and choir vestry. The heating arangements are already complete as far as the Sunday school is concerned, and fires have been burning for several days. There will be four furnaces—two for each building. They will be inclosed in a circular fireproof furnace room, and air will be supplied through an air shaft running under the floor to the back of the building. Splendid ventilation has been provided for by two large vent stacks for carrying off foul air. They will be 72 feet in height.

Although the dedicatory service on Sunday will take place in the afternoon, Rev. Isaac Tovell, Hamilton, will preach in the building in the morning. He will preach again in the evening. A number of addresses by prominent church workers will be delivered in the Afternoon. The church building presents a handsome appearance; the mottled purple brick which looks so dirty in the individual brick, presents a pleasing appearance as a whole, and the further the building progresses the better the effect. The six feet of Cleveland and Credit Valley stone above the ground line set off the mottled purple brick with its colored mortar settings, while the trimmings of buff Ohio stone give added beauty to the harmonizing effect of the soft warm colors.

To allow citizens and visitors an opportunity to study and admire the fine points of the Romanesque style of ar-chitecture, something ought to be done with the trees that crowd so thickly about it. The trees may have had a mission when the old church was in existence, but the beauty of the new building is of such a surpassing character that it would be too bad to hide it under a bushel. Modern churches in large cities, especially when fronting so close to the street, as a rule, are surrounded with beautiful lawns, but never with thick-setitng trees.

George Donnelly Assaults Wm. Hogue With a Glass-Committed for Trial _Policeman Becomes Suddenly Ill in Court.

George Donnelly, a character well known to the police for the past twelve years, is in prison again, with two charges registered against him. P. C. Darville accuses him of being drunk and disorderly, while William Hogue charges him with assault. Donnelly's brother Harry is also locked up, charged with being drunk and disorderly and also assaulting a policeman in the execution of his duty.

About 10:30 o'clock last night Wm.

Hogue and his younger brother George, expert linemen on the street railway, went into the bar-room at the Metropolitan Hotel to have a drink. The two Donnellys were in the room at the time, and walking up direction. Large crowds watched the big to the bar asked George Hogue to buy cars swing around the corner, and the them a glass of beer. ready to receive them. Harry was managed by P. C. Weir and Darville and handed over to the other officers, and George was then placed under arrest. Both fought desperately and in the struggle George Donnelly caught hold of Weir's right hand and pulled the thumb out of joint. Both prisoners were in the Police Court this morning and looked much the worse for their escapade. George wanted trial by jury, and was commit-ted on the evidence of Wm. Howe and Houghton Avey, whose stories were the same.

The hearing in the case of Harry Donnelly, charged with assaulting P. C. Darville, was brought to a sudden and unexpected termination. P. C. Weir was in the box, telling how the double arrest had been made and how he (Weir) had received a sprained thumb. The police magistrate ran short of writing paper. A fresh supply was being brought when P. C. Weir, who remained on the witness stand, was taken very ill and had to be removed from the room. The case, together with the drunk and disorderly charges, was adjourned for a week.

Harry Donnelly's ball was fixed at $400—two sureties of $200 each
John Kelly, of London West, was charged with receiving cedar blocks alleged to have been stolen from the city's dumping ground near Dundas street bridge. Kelly promised to return them, stating that he understood when he got the blocks that they were of no value to the city. Henry Payne, who also got several loads, will pay for his. The case of John Keys was enlarged for a week.

MR. LAURIER IN KINGSTON.

Great Non-Political Reception and Torch-Light Procession in His Honor.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—Sir Richard Cart-wright and Mr. Tarte, M.P., have joined the leader, and speak at Sydenham today. Mr. Tarte brings with him a very satisfactory account of the sit-uation in Quebec. The Liberals of the eister Province are, he says, rejoicing at the success of Mr. Laurier's meet-ings in Ontario, and at the cordiality with which he has everywhere been received.

There was a large crowd of citizens at the city station to greet the visitors. Mr. Laurier, after returning the saluta-tions of the many friends whom he met, was driven to the house of Mr. Pense, whose guest he was. Daring the evening a reception was held at the Hotel Frontenac, under the auspices of the Young Liberal Club, at which Mr. Laurier had the pleasure of meeting many of Kingston's citizens, who, ir respective of political divisions, came to do honor to a distinguished Canadian ellow-citizen. During the progress of the reception the band of the 14th Battalian played a number of selections Mr. Pense, in inviting Mr. Laurier to address a few words to the assemblage, paid a high tribute to his fine qualities and great abilities. Mr. Laurier asknowledged the honor done him in his most felicitous vein. At the conclusion a torchlight procession was organized, and Mr. Laurier was escorted to the residence of Mr. Pense. A BRIGHT WOMAN SUICIDES.

Dr. Abbie Seymeur-Affliction Preyed on Her Mind. Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 18.-Dr. Abbie J. Seymour, a distinguished woman physician, an artist of repute, and the intellectual peer of any of either profession, deliberately took her own life last night by throwing herself in front of a fast West Shore train near the waterworks station. Her skull was crushed and her face unrecognizable when the body was found. The only means of identification except from papers in her pocket book were her crutches. She had been compelled to use orutches singe last spring, when she suffered an accident to the nerves of her hip while attending the Post-Graduate Medical College at Chicago. This affiction had preyed upon her sensibilities until her mind had given entrance to melanchola. She appeared much depressed in spirits yesterday, but none of her friends conceived that she contemplated suicide. The deceased was 42 years old.

Her husband had his ear close to Dutton's lips, listening with feverish anxiety for any more words. The patient again lapsed into unconsciousness, and Mr. Warren replied:

'Dear, dear!" she exclaimed. "I for-What? Has he told you, too, about the 'President'?" "No, no! I forgot to make him give up the keys. I was so disturbed by his cruel talk about you-What keys, Marcha?"

"Why, Freeman's. Didn't I tell you? I had fallen asleep, and when I opened my eyes there was Golding searching Freeman's clothing. He admitted that he had taken Freeman's keys." "That's a piece of good luck."

"Good luck, Nicholas? What do you "Why," responded her husband awkwardly, "don't you see that if he went through Freeman's clothes if will damage his statements if he dares to make any against me?" This was not the reason why Mr. Warren regarded Golding's search as good luck. It had flashed upon him that if Golding had once searched the garments he would do so again, and, start?" therefore, if it seemed best to do so, the pebble that had been taken from the vest pocket could be replaced without danger of detection. he replaced it he could avoid telling her altogether. While these thoughts were racing through his mind, and while he was speaking, his eyes were fixed upon

"I wonder if he will get well?" he muttered. Mrs. Warren was profoundly disturbed by her husband's expression and his too evident attempts to keep something from her. She recalled the promptness with which he had taken he rifle from over the fireplace and driven Dutton from the house, his words, snoken when she had borne Dutton from the blazing cabin, recurred to her, and then came the imaginary scene between the two men as set forth by Golding. Motive! She knew only too well the powerful motive that had actuated her husband in the first instance, and in that same instance she had seen the demonstration of his temper. Could it be possible that Golding was right? That Dutton had goaded her husband into a fury, had attacked him, and that Dutton's injuries were due to her husband's violence?

She could not think for a moment that her husband had been the aggressor-in spite of the scene with the rifle-but she could not dismiss the possibliity of an encounter between the two men that Mr. Warren should insist on keeping to himself. How much better it would be if he would trust She could not ask him further about it, not now. "I wish you would confide in me, Nicholas," she said sadly, and she went to the window and looked absent-

Mr. Warren gazed after her regretfully, fearfully. He started toward her, hesitated, and at last turned away and went into the kitchen, saying, with forced confidence:

'Everything's going to come out all right, Martha.

He returned to his milk pails and finished the morning chores in mechanical fashion, his thoughts still dwelling upon diamonds. When his work was done he again took the pebble from his pocet and studied it. The file had made no sensible impression upon it, and he was glad of it. If the file could have proved anything, it would have demonstrated the worthlessness of the stone. Now, unmarked, it could be replaced, if that seemed advisable, and no one would ever know the temptation to which it had subjected him and to which he had partially yielded. Would an expert in precious stones recognize this as a diamond of value? Was it possible that this was the "President"?

Mr. Warren went to the barn and replaced the file in the tool box. Then, obeying an impulse that he could not wholly account for, he put the pebble in one of the compartments of the chest and locked it.

The sound of a bell warned him that breakfast was ready and he left the barn. As he went out he saw Will Spencer entering at the kitchen door. T've a good mind to tell him all he thought. "He's a good head and he's faithful." There are few human beings who do all. Not even the "President" could * have tempted her. Had she not receivjoy, feel the need of a confidant. Mr. Warren was no exception. For hours, it seemed days, since Dutton had appeared upon the scene but half a day before, he had been groping in the dark with his temptations, his fears, and his memories. He knew that he ought to confide in his wife, and he would, sometime, but not now. He assured himself with disingenuous sophistry that it would not be right to add to the burdens under which she already suffered. Might it not be a relief to talk to Will? And might not some good come of it in the way of advice? "I never was so glad to see you, Will," said Elsie tremulously, as her lover folded his arms tenderly about "I feel so dreadfully alone with all the unhappiness about me, all the mystery, and things happening that I don't know about and wouldn't understand if I did, for they won't tell me anything, Will, not a word." "Remember, Filsie," responded Will, "that it's only a little time since the trouble began. Perhaps they will make it all clear today."

Elsie shook her head. "Their manner," she said, "shows that they mean to keep it from me especially. "It concerns me, somehow, Will, and I cannot feel easy. I dread the day. What will happen next?"

"We can't tell that, of course, but how is it likely that anything else should happen? It seems to me the worst is over." "That's because you are not here, where the atmosphere seems heavy with dread. Aren't women more sensitive than men to such impressions?"

"I'm afraid you've got me there, Elsie," answered Will, smiling goodhumoredly. "The ways of women are past finding out." "Please don't make fun of me. I am very frightened." "I don't mean to make fun of you. You mustn't be frightened; it isn't like you. You haven't forgotten, have you, that Granite folks look on you as quite a herolne? Haven't you shot a bear, and didn't you rescue a baby from drowning-"Never mind those things, dear. This is different. Can't you see that it's so much harder to bear up and be brave when you don't know what kind of misfortune may be threatening? Yes, I can understand that; but for the life of me I can't see that any misfortune is threatening. Would you like to have me come over this afternoon? I can manage it, I think."

"Oh, do, Will! You are so good." There's no "Nothing of the sort. goodness in doing just exactly what gives you the greatest pleasure. I'll come after dinner, getting here about half-past one." "Couldn't you come earlier?" "Not very well. There's work that must be done at the mill, and I've agreed to be there sure this morning. But I can fib it so as to get away after I'll come through Newcomb's woods, and you can meet me at the other side of the meadows if you like." "Of course I will. When will you asked Mr. Warren, as he came in from the barn. "I've been to breakfast," he replied, "and I've got just about time to get to the mill before work begins. I shall be over this afternoon, though, and if there's anything I can do you must let me know." "Glad to hear it. I was half thinking of asking you to come, though I don't know as there's anything to be

"Good morning, Mrs. Warren," said Will, as that lady came in from the sick room. "I suppose you've had a hard night of it?" "It has been trying," she responded,

"but the patient is improving. I think he will get well." "I certainly hope so," exclaimed "We should all hate to have a murder mystery in Granite."

He regretted his words as soon as he had uttered them. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Warren gave any sign that they felt them especially, but Will could see clearly enough how a murder mystery might affect Mr. Warren. He, too, had been tormented with that scene in the sitting room, when Mr. Warren had, apparently unprovoked, aimed his rifle at the stranger in the doorway, and he had seen how others might put this and that together, if they knew all, and suspect Mr. Warren of attempted homicide at the least. Will told himself repeatedly that he had no idea that Mr. Warren had committed the assaut on Dutton. He laid it to the two tramps whom he and Elsie had seen, but he was at a loss to supply the tramps with motives sufficient to induce them to attack a lonely wanderer like themselves, bind him and set the house afire over his head. The whole matter was a hopeless mystery to him, and for Elsie's sake he would have been content to leave it so. The young man left for his work as oon as the Warrens sat down to breakfast, taking his way across the meadows that stretched, a pleasant interval, along the further side of the road that passed the house. He was pursuing the same course that Elsie would take in the afternoon when she should start for their rendezvous. Breakfast proceeded for the most part in silence. Grandpa Kirk came in late, grumbling a bit because he had overslept, and laying the fault to the fact that he had been permitted to dose so long in his chair during the evening. Mr. Warren evaded his wife's eyes, uncomfortably conscious that he was meriting reproof, and fearful that if he looked at her she would somehow read in his expression the fact that his thoughts were fixed beyond his power to change them upon Dutton's diamonds. The words, "the 'President,'" recurred to him again and again in connection with his speculation about the pebble that he had hidden in his tool chest. Mingled with his anxious thoughts about the pebble were the disquieting warnings of conscience. He was doing wrong, and he knew it. No sophistry availed him while his wife sat opposite and suffered her own sorrow in silence. She was blameless through it diamonds with perfect indifference? How unworthy of her he felt! He wished that he still had the pebble in his pocket. If he had he would slip into the sick room and restore it to its proper place, and let Golding do what he would to get possession of the sick

"I'll get that pebble again after breakfast," decided Mr. Warren. man's property. Accordingly as soon as the meal was over, he hastened to the barn. The tool chest was in a little workshop partitioned off in one corner. There was but one door into it. The room was half roofed over with loose boards that had been laid merely to prevent hay on the loft from dropping down to the carpenter's bench. A hen was chattering noisily up the loft when Mr. Warren entered the barn and turned toward the workshop. Under ordinary circumstances he would have gone to find the eggs that she had concealed, and under ordinary circumstances, too, he would have noticed that the noise she made was not at all like the contented, selfsatisfied clucking with which respectable hens announce the advent of new eggs. No ordinary event of farm life could appeal to him now, the more especially as, when he stepped into the workshop, he saw that that caused him to rush forward and drop on his knees before the tool chest and try to lift the cover. It would not yield, and he gave a deep sigh of relief, but the perspiration of fresh agitation, not to say terror, broke out upon him. By what enemies was he surrounded? By what demons were the forests peopled? Somebody had been attempting to break the lock of the chest! A hatchet with one end of the blade broken off lay by the chest. It had been inserted between the cover and the body of the box, and in prying the blade had broken.

Mr. Warren hurriedly found the key and tried it in the lock. It worked with difficulty, for the machanism had been strained; but it turned, and the next instant he had the pebble, which he no longer doubted to be a diamond, in his hand. Then he started up with determination to find the man who had attempted to rob him. Not ten minutes could have elapsed since he went to breakfast. There was but one way into the barn, through the wide open doors. The fellow had undoubtedly been at work when Mr. Warren had started from the house, and had desisted at the sound of approaching footsteps. Where could he have gone? Not out by the door, or he would have met the farmer. There was no other way. Warren then recalled the excited noise of the hen on the loft. The intruder had climbed up over the hay, making his way from the carpenter's bench, from which he could easily reach the loose boards of the half roof, and the mother hen, disturbed in her dignified occupation, had expressed her resentment in unmeasured terms.

The fellow must be up there now, though the silence of the hen would seem to indicate that somehow he had made his escape. There was no way, however, unless he chose to drop from the tiny window in the peak of the gable, from which to the ground was a fall of more than thirty feet.

These points occurred to the farmer all in a flash, even as he was running from the shop to the nearest perpendicular ladder that led to the hay left. As in many barns, the left was shaped somewhat like the letter U, the space between the arms of the letter representing the carriage and wagon room on the ground floor. Warren climbed up to that arm of the that extended over the workshop. There was comparatively little hay there, and to climb over it to the floor of the main loft would be no difficult matter. The farmer seized a pitchfork and mounted the pile, stabbing the hay as he went, thinking that the intruder might have concealed himself under it. On the other side of the mound, where there was a little open space before the immense, closely-packed supply of hay for the coming winter, lay the hen whose chattering should have warned him that an intruder had come to the barn. Her neck had been wrung.

Mr. Warren stopped and picked up the hen, looking at her in growing bewilderment. It was not a long pause, and it made no difference in the escape of the marauder, for even as the farmer was mounting the ladder and climbing the mound of hay, a man had crept around to the other arm of the U, and when Mr. Warren found the hen he had dropped through the opening in the loft over the manger of the stall where the doctor's horse had been stabled the night before.

He then crept to the open part of the main floor, and, not daring to go out by the doors, he raised a scuttle, and adjusting it so that it would fall after him, he dropped upon the refuse heaped under the barn, made his way to the pig pen at the back, scaled the two or three fences that intersected the cattle yard, and before Mr. Warren had half finished his search, was safe from observation in the edge of the forest that remained intact on the slope of Baker Mountain and extended almost to the Warren farm.

> (To be Continued Tomorrow.) The Age of Niagara Falls.

The savants are having a very interesting time in determining the age of Niagara Falls, and from the most recent papers on the subject it is quite evident that great diversity of opinion exists among those who have made it a matter of investigation. Life is full of problems. The diversity of our common nature suggests equally interesting questions. Why are thing so? Why not otherwise? Now for instance the minor ailments that afflict us. Why should toe ache not be agreeable instead of painful? Why should so many fraudulent and flesheating substitutes for Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor be imposed upon the people?

Mr. Arthur Wallace called the attention of the committee to the gravel the east side of Colborn street, between Dundas and Queen's avenue. The engineer explained that the gravel, had been placed there by the street railway company when their track allowance was being repayed. The company has been notified to remove the obstruction.

J. C. Evans, contractor for the carpenter work in the City Hall alterations, appeared before the committee in regard to his account. He objected to taking $125 as a settlement for the extras put in. Mr. Graydon, however. thinks Mr. Evans is receiving sufficient for his work, and says that had penalties for breach of contract been imposed, he would have been deducted $200. The dispute will be settled by arbitration,

The Aylmer Express reports: "Mr. and Mrs. Chute, of Aylmer, desire that we should publish their testimonial and let other sufferers know what WILLIAMS' ROYAL CROWN REMEDY (Nature's Liquid) had done for Mr. Chute. He writes: For ten years or morell have been a sufferer with dyspepsia, and doctored with six of the most skilled doctors in this part of the country, but with little relief and no benefit in return for the very large doctors blist that I paid. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, but all to no purpose, until April, 1893, I took to myself a wife, and it so happeaed that three years previous to our marriage she had been in poor health and used part of a bottle of Royal Crown Remedy, and knowing of its excellent qualities she prevailed upon me to give it a trial. I purchased one bottle of the Remedy and Pilla, and by the time I had taken three bottles I was restored to good health, and my neighbors say that I am looking healthier than I have done for years. I believe Royal Crown Remedy to be the best value for the money on earth, and am, thankfully yours, WILLIAM CHUTE."
