DEATH OF FREDERICK PIERCE

"Fred Pierce is dead." These were the words that, softly spoken, informed the people of Athens as they assembled for worship on Sunday evening that a prominent citizen had passed away. Few knew that he had been ill; fewer still that his condition was serious. For several days he had been affected with a gripe which developed into pleuro-pneumonia, but it was not until Sunday that his case was considered critical. He passed away about 6 p.m.

The death of Mr. Pierce will be learned with sincere regret by a host of friends, near and far, for he was regarded as being not only a progressive, enterprising citizen of Athens but by the travelling public was esteemed as one who was in many respects a model landlord.

Fred Pierce was a son of William Pierce of Rear Leeds and Lansdowne, in which township he was born. He learned the trade of carpenter and builder and it was as a first-class mechanic that, about thirty years ago, he was first known to the people of this village. One of his first works was the building of the Gamble House, of which about twenty years ago he became landlord. He gave to this position the same close attention to every detail that had characterized his mechanical labors, and the result was his hotel soon became widely known as one of the very best country hotels in Ontario. For a time Mr. Pierce was associated with the late J. B. Saunders in the milling business, and about four years ago he entered into partnership with Phil. Wiltse in the dry goods business, a business connection that existed at the time of his demise.

A KIND FAREWELL

The Baptist parsonage was the scene last evening of a large and representative gathering of friends who met to bid Rev. L. M. Weeks and family farewell and to mark the occasion by the presentation of a well-filled purse. The popularity of Mr. Weeks was evidenced by the numbers present and the tone of the addresses made by prominent citizens and the ministers of the various churches.

The parsonage was filled almost to overflowing and all the speakers testified in the warmest terms to the strong hold which Mr. and Mrs. Weeks and their family have upon the good-will of the people of Athens.

The programme of the evening consisted of music and addresses interspersed with pleasant social intercourse. Miss Jessie Taplin and Miss Berney favored the company with charming instrumental solos, while the Misses Dunham, Miss Marie Weeks and Miss Slack rendered pleasing vocal selections. Under the able chairmanship of Rev. S. J. Hughes, M.A., the speakers of the evening were then marshalled. The chairman himself spoke most felicitously and was followed by Rev. R. B. Patterson, M.A., Mr. A. E. Donovan, Rev. I. N. Beckstedt, B.A., Principal Massey, W. C. Dowaley, M.A., and Reeve Holmes. Principal McIntosh, in his absence, sent a well worded and fraternal letter. All these gentlemen expressed the warmest regard for Mr. Weeks and his family, recalling the many happy associations connected with their stay in Athens and the helpful influences that have emanated from their home.

Mr. C. H. Smith then read the following address to Mr. Weeks from the congregations of Plum Hollow and Athens:—

To the Rev. L. M. Weeks, B.D.
Dear Sir and Brother,—Your many friends here learned with deep regret that you are about to remove from Athens. To sever the strong and sacred ties that have bound you to the people of this community for the past three years is no trifling matter. As you have gone in and out among us these years, you have acted the part of a Christian gentleman and a warm-hearted earnest pastor. In these times when the supply of efficient men for the varied offices of the Christian ministry is greatly diminished we deeply regret to lose you from among us. You have indeed made many friends in all the churches. The words you have spoken and the influence for good you have exerted will not die—you may pass on to another field of labor, but your work for the Divine Master will remain.

On behalf of your friends, irrespective of church or denomination, in the two sections of this community you have served so faithfully, we desire to present to you this purse of money. It may help to oil the machinery brought into use when a pastor undergoes the hardship of moving from one charge to another. We beg to assure you that this is only a slight token of the esteem and affection in which you and your estimable family are held in this part of fair Ontario. We most earnestly pray that the Great Head of the Church may go with you and that you may have health, happiness and success in all your future ministry.

Signed on behalf of your many friends

At the close of the address, Mr. Bert Bullard handed the purse, which contained $112, to Mr. Weeks, who then replied in suitable terms, expressing the heartfelt thanks of himself and Mrs. Weeks and stating the principles upon which he had tried to conduct his ministry.

When Mr. Weeks had concluded his response to the address, refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in enjoyable conversation.

The Baptist people in losing Rev. Mr. Weeks are losing a faithful and efficient pastor, and it is evident that the congregation feel this very keenly. Mr. Weeks removes in a few days from his work here to Ottawa, leaving behind him an excellent reputation for good citizenship and Christian service.

LESSON IX.—JUNE 2, 1907.

Moses Called to Deliver Israel.—Exod. 3: 1-14.

Commentary.—I. God appears unto Moses (vs. 1-4). I, priest of Midian—Or prince, or both priest and prince—"the original has both meanings"—Clarke. Led the flock—For about forty years Moses had been serving as a shepherd, caring for the flocks of his father-in-law, Back of the wilderness (R. V.). That is, the western side, for in the Hebrew Orientation the spectator is always supposed to face the east, which is hence called "the front." Moses led his flock westerly or northwesterly, through the desert strip, to the elevated ground of Horeb, where were the most fertile valleys of the peninsula, and where there was water when the lower wells were dry.—Terry. During all these years he had been holding communion with God, and was being prepared for his life work. But think of a man with power and ability such as Moses had, being held down for forty years with a "bush burned yet this was evidently God's plan. Mountain of God—Sometimes called Horeb, at other times Sinai. "The mountain itself had two peaks; one was called Horeb, the other Sinai." Clarke. But Newhall thinks that Horeb was the name of the district and Sinai the name of the mountain. It was called the mountain of God because here God appeared to Moses, and afterward from the same mountain revealed His glory and proclaimed the law to the Israelites.

2. Angel of the Lord—Not a created angel, for he is called Jehovah (vs. 4-6). This was none other than Jesus Christ, the Redeemer of Mankind. A flame of fire—Representing God's majesty, power, and showing that He was about to bring destruction to His enemies, and light and comfort to His people. The bush—The thorn-bush, a species of acacia, common in the Sinai peninsula. Burned—1. As an emblem it instructs. 2. As a miracle it admonishes. 3. As a magnet it attracts. 4. As a monument it warns. "Hon. Con." "This is it. An emblem of the state of the Israelites in their distress. 2. Of the state of every true Christian." Not consumed.—Showing that this was fire from heaven. 3. Why the bush did not burn.—He desires it possible to see the cause of this strange appearance. God will reveal to listening souls all they need to know to be able to follow and obey him. 4. God called "out of the bush"—Flame is the best symbol of God; 1. It is immaterial. 2. It is glorious. 3. It is mysterious in its nature. 4. As light, it is everywhere omnipresent. 5. It enlightens the world. 6. It is a source of life, beauty and power. 7. It is undefiled and undefeatable, absolutely pure. 8. It is terrible as a destructive force. 9. It is warming, cheering and life-giving. 10. As said, Moses—Moses being thus addressed by name, must have been more surprised by what he heard than by what he saw.—Benson. Put off thy shoes—Putting off the sandals is a very ancient practice in worship. The rabbins say that the priests perform their duties with bare feet in token of purity and reverence. All Mohammedans, Brahmins and Parsees worship barefooted to the present day.—Nevin. "This was required of Moses as a token of his reverence for God, of humiliation for his sins, of his putting away all impurity in his life and of his submission and readiness to obey God's will." 6. I am the God—God does not say "I was" the God of thy fathers, but "I am" their God. The patriarchs were still living. God is not the God of the dead but of the living (Exod. 2: 27). Of Abraham, etc.—That is, the God who entered into covenant relation with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. The promises made to them were now about to be fulfilled. Afraid to look—He was overawed by God's presence.

11. God calls Moses to deliver Israel (vs. 7-10). 7. seen the affliction—that is, I have considered their afflictions. He counts the sighs of his people and puts their tears into his bottle. 8. am come down—When God did something very extraordinary he came down to do it, as in Isa. 64: 1. So Christ came down from heaven to save fallen man, and a large—Canaan was large compared with Goshen, with milk and honey—A proverbial expression; but actually true words of God to Canaan. The milk and honey are typical of the richness and fulness of God's grace. 9. the cry—unto me—They did not merit God's salvation, neither was he attracted by their excellences or their virtues; and it was sufficient for him that they needed the great deliverance which he was able to give. 10. I will send thee—About forty years before this Moses had undertaken to deliver his people in his own way. Now he had learned the other lessons God would teach him and ference between God sending a man and a man running unaided.

11. God promises to be with Moses (vs. 11-14). 1. who am I—Moses was the best prepared for this work of any man living; eminent for learning, wisdom, experience, and yet he says, "Who am I?" "The better prepared any one is for service, the less opinion he has of himself," that I should go—"Doubtless he was affected by the remembrance of his former failure."—C. H. M. "The work to be done was great and dangerous. 1. His life might be in danger. 2. What could a shepherd do to influence a king? 3. It was not likely that the Egyptians had ever heard of him. There is a vast difference between 2,000,000 people who were doing their work and those who were doing nothing. 4. To organize and discipline such a host would require great patience and ability. 5. It would be difficult to induce the Israelites to risk all, and leave Egypt for an unknown land. 12. will be with thee—My counsel shall direct thee, and my power shall bring all these mighty things to pass. This shall be a token—The burning bush is a token. The verse is often read as if the subsequent success of his mission to Pharaoh, and the consequent worship upon Sinai, were to be regarded as the tokens that he had been sent. Success itself was an obvious token then, but the hesitating Moses wanted a present sign. The flaming bush was the token that he would bring Israel to the promised land.—Whed. Com. 14. I am that I am.—Literally, "I am who I am." That is, "I am that I am." Only one who exists in himself. Absolute self-sufficiency, and consequent unchangeableness and eternal activity, are implied.

in the name "I am," and by adding the relative clause, "who am," the thought is added that these attributes belong only to Jehovah. Absolutely independent in being and action, nothing can hinder him from performing his will; unchangeable, what once he has promised must forever be his purpose.—Whed. Com.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS. Lessons From the Call of Moses. 1. God teaches his workers. 1. Humility. "Moses kept the flock of eighty years, and he led the flock to the back side of the desert" (v. 1). For eighty years, forty in Egypt and forty in Midian, God was preparing Moses to be a laborer together with him for the deliverance of Israel. The instruction of his mother, education in Egyptian lore, familiarity with the court, experience as a statesman, renown as a warrior—all these were in God's plan for him as the deliverer of his people (Acts 7: 21, 22). "But his training in Pharaoh's home was as nothing compared with his sojourn in the desert. One was valuable, the other indispensable. 2. Holiness. The presence of a holy God made the place where Moses stood "holy ground" (v. 5). This revelation to Moses of a "bush burned with fire, and not consumed" (v. 2), was both a type and a pledge of the communication of God's holiness to us through the Crucified One. From the lips of Moses, the people of Israel, and from the pen of Moses, the Church of God received the message: "Ye shall be holy; for I am holy" (Lev. 11, 44; 1 Pet. 1: 16). 3. Headfulness. "God called unto him" and he said, "Here am I" (v. 4). When God calls we must listen. When he commands we must obey. Whether the call be to sweep a room or visit the sick, to sow the field or reap the harvest, to work in the shop or write in the office, to mend the garment or to entertain in the parlor, to work in the city slums or preach in the city church, the call should be instantly heeded and cheerfully obeyed. 4. God chooses his workers. "Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh" (v. 10). Jesus said, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and bring forth fruit" (John 15: 16). As surely as God chose Moses to be Israel's leader, and Aaron to be Israel's priest, and Miriam to be Israel's singer, and the twelve to be his apostles, so surely does he now choose those to be workers together with God the Father, as ambassadors (2 Cor. 5: 19, 20); workers together with God the Son, as sufferers (Rom. 8: 17); workers together with God the Holy Spirit, as witnesses (Acts 1: 8, margin). 5. God cares for his workers. "I have surely seen the affliction of My people... in Egypt... And I have also seen the oppression" (vs. 7, 9). Is there a tender suggestion of rebuke in the sentence? Had Moses, so surely chosen, thought God had not seen and did not care? A blind boy stood on the corner of a city street. "Shall I help you across, my little friend?" a gentleman asked. "Oh, no, thank you; I am waiting for my father." "Can you trust your father?" "Oh, yes; when he has my hand I feel perfectly safe." "Why do you feel safe?" "Oh, because my father knows the way. He can see, but I am blind." "God chooses the work. "I am come down... to bring them up" (v. 8). "I will send thee... that thou mayest bring forth the children of Israel" (v. 10). We need to be careful lest in our natural enthusiasm we assume the leadership of Christian work. Made work is the first attempt of Moses, premature, called out by human sympathy. (Exod. 2: 11), wrought in the fear of man, and in the pride of human strength (2: 12), and ended in discouragement and failure (Exod. 2: 13-15). While work done with God, at his direction, in the light of his smile, constrained by His love (2: 25, 26), makes the heaviest burden light, the heaviest task easy (Matt. 11: 28, 29).

6. God wants willing workers. "Who am I, that I should go?" (v. 11). God is pleased when like Abraham we respond. "Behold, here am I" (Gen. 22: 1); when like Isaiah we say, "Here am I; send me" (Isa. 6: 8); when like Paul we cry, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" (Acts 9: 6). We are not equal to any task, nor worthy of any work; but it is not a question of our wisdom or our ability, but of God's pleasure and His power. 7. God gives Himself to His workers. "Certainly I will be with thee" (v. 12). With thee to subdue the proud heart of Pharaoh; to raise the poor, afflicted slave children of Israel; to endue thee with power and bestow all thy burdens. God never says, "Go ye" to any child, but He also says, "Lo, I am with you" (Matt. 28: 20).

LOVED HIM LIKE 62. Maiden's Letters Failed to Quash Conviction for Abduction. Toronto, May 6.—An application has been made at Osquode Hall to quash the conviction of Ross Howard, of Brantford, for abducting Euphemia Wilson, of Charlotteville Township. Some of the girl's letters to Howard were filed. They contain numerous protestations of undying love, supplemented by scores of X's, said to represent kisses. "The roses are red, and the violets are blue, and don't forget I love you like 62" is one of the maiden's poetic efforts to attach the affections—of the swain. The girl is 14.

KILLS SELF FROM REMORSE. Struck His Mother, and Sorrow Made Him Take His Life. St. Louis, Mo., May 6.—Overcome by remorse because, in a fit of impatience, he had struck his aged mother and discolored her eye, Edward Linné slunk into the basement of his mother's house and blew out his brains with a revolver. Linné was an interior decorator of sensitive, artistic temperament. Painting and sketching were his hobbies, and he had slept made him nervous. When after a night of toil with the brush his mother called him in the morning he arose from the bed and struck the aged woman. He then left the house, but returned later and asked his mother's forgiveness, weeping like a child. The mother readily forgave him, but he could not forgive himself.

HE WOULD NOT DRINK. ATTEMPT TO POUR IT DOWN HIS THROAT A FAILURE. Fighting Parson Gives Surprise to Dakota Cowboys—Eastern College Man Showed How Hard He Could Punch—Pained and Bruised the Cattlemen, But Now They Are Friends. Hays, S. D., May 6.—Rev. McVey, not long assigned to ride circuit in this forbidding land, has two new permanent additions to his congregations, who sit and watch him with a reverence akin to worship. They come jingling in Sunday after Sunday, spurs clicking and chains rattling, and when he preaches in this town, which is one Sunday in three, they are here. When he preaches elsewhere, they are faithful and during the week they ride hard for the "Broken Square outfit over to the Missouri bottoms. Their conversion is a matter of recent occurrence, and some coercion. But it is all wool and a yard wide. "Weary" Carney and "Doc" Temple have had their own way with this country so long that they regarded the coming of a new element into its life with much aversion. Had it been a new outfit they would have tolerated it and taken it to their hearts after testing it out with shot and much kidding. But a "gospel sharp" a "sky pilot," a "hot air artist" they simply wouldn't have it, and they so said in various brooded periods when the news first came to them as they sat on the bar at Big Steve's place buying drinks for all and sundry. But in spite of their official dislike of the situation, he dropped into town one night about 10 o'clock, in a continental train and carried his own suit case up to the little wooden building that answers to the name of a hotel. Doc and Weary were on hand to size him up. He was a bit of a surprise to them. They saw a well-built young fellow of about 28, who moved with the same eager spring as the muscles that characterize their own movements. His eyes didn't look as if they were burned out with too much of the midnight oil, and he did not wear a clerical coat, which puzzled them sorely. "He sure is the real thing, Doc," said Weary, after a long study of the old ledger, which was the hotel register. His brand is on the herd book, Reverend John McVey, and his home ranch is round Boston way unless I forgot all my joggery. They hung about for a time, and soon he came down from his room for supper in the dining room. As he summery through the office he was santerly hailed by Weary, "Have a drink, stranger," he called. Rev. John McVey turned and looked at him pleasantly and said: "No, thank you, I'm just going in to eat supper. Supper smells too good to spoil it with a drink beforehand." This was sufficient proof to the cowboys that the new minister was a mollycoddle. Whereupon they framed up a plot to serve him drink whether he liked it or not. For several weeks they let him alone till they learned his habits. They found that on a certain Saturday he was to ride to a distant town for preaching on the following day. His route lay across the prairie, and in one lonely place the road ran between the gentle rolls of a draw, through which in the spring the water seeps and flows. It was in this draw that the story was told on the Saturday which was to be memorable to them. He was joggling along thinking over his sermon and they descended on either side yelling, swinging their ropes and occasionally perforating the air with their guns. When they got near enough Rev. John McVey saw that they were both somewhat intoxicated. He reined in his pony and gave them good day with some passing remark about the beauty of the weather. They answered not except to range on either side of him and order him to drink from a flask of liquor which they held out to him. He refused again, saying that he never drank in the middle of the day. "Well, it's time you learned how," said Doc, "especially if you are going to ride herd for lost souls out in this here country. We don't need no mollycoddles here and they don't go. We don't like 'em. Men out here has got to drink when they are asked and where they are asked. And the liquor that they offer them both be, to their wonder. But he dismounted with a sort of I-hate-to-do-this air that they couldn't understand. "You intend to make me drink this, do you?" he asked. "Sure thing," "I don't think so," he said, and with that he landed Doc Temple such a straight arm punch on the point of the jaw as sent him to the grass and out completely. Then he turned to Weary Carney, who had pulled his gun, and knocking the weapon up, doubled that instructor of the clergy up with a terrific

THE HOUSE FELL. FAMILIES OWE THEIR LIVES TO WOMAN'S DREAM. Tenant Has Vision That Structure She Lives in Has Collapsed and Buried Inmates in Ruins, and Immediately Moves, Followed by Others. New York, May 6.—Dreaming that the house in which she was living, No. 223 Third street south, had collapsed and buried all the tenements were buried in the ruins, Mrs. James Martin, who lived on the second floor, refused to stay in the house longer. The other tenants, hearing of her dream also moved. The house collapsed yesterday afternoon. Workmen were excavating on the adjoining lots at Nos. 223 and 230 Third street south for a new building when the crash came and many of them had narrow escapes from serious injury. Several children playing in the street were hit by flying timbers, but none of them was seriously injured. The house at No. 223 is owned by Samuel Sloan, of Manhattan. E. Marcus, a contractor, started excavating and sent word to Sloan that he had better shore up his house, as the excavating might weaken the foundations. The shoring was not done. Mrs. Martin on Sunday night had the dream about the house falling in upon them. She insisted that they move immediately, and did so on Monday night. The family of Ralph Nicola, who lived in the basement, left at the same time.

SEVEN MEN MUTILATED. Dynamite Explosion in a Montagny Lumber Shanty. Quebec, May 6.—A terrible explosion in a lumber shanty in the upper part of Montagny took place a few days ago. The shanty is situated between the townships of Moore and Armand, and was occupied by a party of men who were breaking the ice-jam in the river, for which purpose they were using dynamite. The dynamite cartridges were being dried on the stove in the shanty, in which there were at the time seven men, all of whom were about the stove. One of the men came along with a pot, which he unthinkingly placed on the stove with a sudden jar, and immediately there was a terrific explosion, which knocked down the seven men, all of whom were badly mutilated, five so horribly that they are in a critical condition. The names of the five unfortunate men are: Emilio Robin, Art Robin, Cleophas Colin, G. Morin and Simeon Picard, jun.

KISSED THRICE. Charges Up Kisses on Her Dentist's Bill. Columbus, O., May 6.—Fixing a price of $3 on a kiss, Miss Cora Wilson, 20 years old, a homely, to-day asked for the arrest of Dr. R. B. Cochran, a dentist. She claims that she went to Cochran's office to have a set of false teeth made and fitted in her mouth, and that while the dentist was performing his duty he made love to her and helped himself to three kisses. She could offer no resistance, she says, as she was in the dentist's chair and he stole the smacks just before putting his instruments into her mouth. Dr. Cochran made part payment on them, giving him $11. His bill was $20. A week later she says, he called her to his office by telephone and demanded the remaining $9. She refused to pay him, claiming that, as he had stolen three kisses, they were square. Then, she claims, he took the false teeth from her mouth by force. Miss Wilson described each kiss in detail to the police to-day, and Dr. Cochran denied having kissed her even once.

The quantity of fat cattle was not as good generally as for several markets past. Trade was fair with prices for purchasers about steady, and exporters, or when there were a few low bids reported, were slow sales at about the same prices as on Tuesday last. Exporters' prices ranged from $3.00 to $3.25, but only one deal was reported at the latter figure, the bulk selling at $3 to $3.10 per cwt. Bulls sold at $2.00 to $2.25. Feeders and Stockers—Hogs ranged as follows—Steers, 1,100 to 1,250 lbs., $4.00 to $4.75; steers, 1,000 to 1,000 lbs., $3.25 to $4.00; hogs, 100 to 300 lbs., $3.00 to $4; stockers, 300 to 500 lbs., $2 to $3.50; common stockers, 200 to 300 per cwt. Milch Cows—Prices ranged all the way from $30 to $40 each, and one extra quality cow brought $70. The bulk of sales were made from $17 to $25 each. Store good cows would have sold, and one dealer stated that good to choice cows would be in good demand next week. Sheep and Lambs—Receipts of sheep and lambs were light, and prices firm. Export rates, 20 to 25c per cwt. Range, $5 to $5.50; good yearling lambs, $2.00 to $3; common lambs, $1.50 to $2.50. One load of choice yearling ewes and wethers sold at $3.25 per cwt.; spring lambs sold at $3 to $7 each. More prime quality lambs are wanted. Hogs—Mr. Harris, who got over 1,000 hogs on Wednesday and Thursday, reports prices unchanged at $3.40 per cwt. for select and $3.15 for lights and fats. Bradstreet's Trade Review. Quebec—Inclement weather is against general trade. The latter in this section is reported quiet, but a better movement is expected following warmer weather. Similar conditions prevail in city retail trade. Outside labor is well employed, but the lack of help is seriously felt. Hamilton—There is now a better tone to retail spring trade. General lines are not being briskly. Wholesale business is active, although hampered by slow deliveries of goods. Values held firm. Collections are generally fair to good. London—Trade continues brisk in all lines. Country business is a little on the quiet side, but an improvement is looked for as soon as the farmers are through with seeding. Building operations here will this year be on a large scale. Factories are increasing their plants and there is need for dwellings. Ottawa—The volume of business moving is fairly large. Dry goods men still complain of slow deliveries. Fall and winter orders are coming in briskly. Local industries are busily engaged.

ECZ MA AGAIN OVERCOME ZAM-BUK CURES A CASE WHICH FOR TWO YEARS HAS DEFIED EVERY REMEDY TRIED. A Farmer's Grateful Testimony. No case of eczema, skin disease, or irritation should be despaired of until Zam-Buk has been applied. The case of Mr. Francis Penoit, of St. Anne's (Man.), is a powerful illustration of Zam-Buk's efficacy. He says: "I suffered from eczema for two years, and tried a great number of remedies. None of them, however, seemed to do me any good. The ailment was mostly in my legs, and both these were actually run from the knees down. A small sample box of Zam-Buk was given to me, and even so small a quantity as that did me a little good. I then obtained a proper supply, and by the time I had used a few boxes I was completely cured." Zam-Buk differs from ordinary salves and embrocations in containing no animal oil or fat. It is compounded from rich, healing, herbal essences, and is an ideal natural combination of power and purity. It is highly antiseptic, and instantly kills bacilli and disease germs, which settling on to wounds and skin diseases set up festering, blood poisoning. TRIAL FOR LIFE

And no word was spoken between them for some minutes. At last: "Heaven have mercy on you, most miserable of women!" said Miss Elmer.

And longer the friends talked, but the dreaded name was not again mentioned between them. The two children, who had been sent out into the garden to play, now came in, and the confidential conversation was interrupted.

Mrs. Russell showed her lodger up into her private apartments, where fires had been lighted, and her luggage conveyed, and bade her good-night at the bedroom door.

Laura entered the neat and quiet chamber, where the snow-white curtains of the windows and the bed, and the clean hearth and bright fire, diffused an air of purity and cheerfulness through the scene.

She could not sleep, but, drawing an easy chair beside the little table before the fire, she fell into deep and severe thought upon the subject of the probable assassin of the baronet.

Painfully and intensely as she thought, she was still, as it were, extremely conscious of the sound of her own breathing, and she heard Ruth Russell and her children moving about; she heard the murmuring of their evening prayers at their mother's knee; she heard that poor mother take them into the little chamber adjoining the back parlor below; and she thought of the little ones who were so peacefully sleeping, and she thought of the old-fashioned clock in the passage below.

Laura sat intently thinking as the hours slowly passed. The clock struck twelve, and still she sat and thought; and still she never changed her attitude; two, and she had not once even looked up, or remembered that it was at that witching hour on the preceding night that the awful cry of murder had rung through the hall, and the inmates, arousing the sleepers, were still buried in thought between two and three o'clock, when she was startled by the sound of steps heard in the deep silence, coming up the walk from the little gate to the cottage door.

She started up, and she listened and heard a light, cautious tapping at the cottage door, and heard the landlady go to the door, and ask in a low, trembling voice, "Who's there? What do you want?"

"It is I, Ruth, and I want to come in," answered a low voice without. "Oh, my Lord in heaven, have pity on us! Oh, why do you come here?" inquired the poor woman, in a low, wailing voice.

"Because I am dying to see you and the children, Ruth. Think what a long exile I have had from you both, my dear."

"Oh, where do you come from, and why do you come, knowing the danger?" "I come from abroad, because I could not longer live away from you, Ruth. I have been but a few hours in London, and have only within the last hour discovered your residence."

"But the danger, the danger of returning?" "Oh, my dear, I am forgotten; besides, the danger is very much modified by an agent that has occurred within the last twenty-four hours. But all this time you are keeping me out in the cold. Come, let me in, there's a duck."

"Oh, heaven of heavens, to what straits I am reduced!" again complained the poor woman. "Come, come, Ruth, this is a very cold reception. Unbar the door, there's a darling."

in the east, when Laura Elmer, worn out by two nights' watching, dropped asleep in her chair and slept heavily for many hours.

When she awoke it was broad day; the sun was high in the heavens. She opened her eyes and looked around in astonishment at finding herself in a strange place, and it was some seconds before she could remember how she came there. Then full consciousness of her misfortunes returned; the murder of Sir Vincent Lester; the imprisonment of Ferdinand Cassinove; her own change of residence; the discovery in regard to Mrs. Russell's husband; and, lastly, the strange nocturnal visit, all recurred clearly to her memory.

Her resolution was soon taken. She arose and bathed her feverish face, and arranged her disordered hair, and then rang her bell.

Mrs. Russell, pale and haggard, as with fatigue and care, entered the room, saying: "No; I have not been in bed all night. I have something to say to you this morning, Mrs. Russell; but first sit down; you look, indeed, quite unable to stand."

Mrs. Russell dropped into the nearest seat. Miss Elmer resumed her easy chair, saying: "I am exceedingly sorry for you, Mrs. Russell, but that does not alter the course of my duty. I must tell you that I heard the arrival of your visitor last night, and overheard much of your conversation, by which I was enabled to identify the individual. This morning I must lay before the police all the particulars with which I have become acquainted, as well as my own private suspicions. As I cannot consistently continue in your house while engaged in this ungracious work, I must leave you to-day. But you will permit me to pay you for the whole term for which my lodgings were engaged; and I wish you, besides, to rest assured of my esteem and friendship, and willing services in everything in which I can aid you without incurring the cause of justice."

"Miss Elmer, I cannot complain, cruelly as I suffer in this affair; I know that you are perfectly right in all that you do, but poor as I am, I cannot and will not receive payment for the lodgings that you have occupied only a day, and that you leave this morning, not from caprice, but from a sort of necessity," said Mrs. Russell, weeping piteously.

"I am glad you perceive I can do no otherwise than I am about to do. But for your children's sake, I wish you to permit me to pay for the whole term for which I took the lodgings; it is usual to do so when one leaves before the term is up."

"Yes; but not when they have been occupied but for a day, and are left from us, as let us say no more about it, Miss Elmer."

Laura perceived that to press this point would only wound the sensitive self-respect of the poor woman, and desisted. "You forbear making any inquiries about my visitor of last night, Miss Elmer; yet this piece of information I will volunteer. He is off again, and I know not where he has gone, or when he will come back, or if he ever will return," said Mrs. Russell.

"And after the manner of such villainage, he has taken away all your funds with him," said Laura, indignantly. Mrs. Russell evidently could not deny this fact.

"Then I will tell you when he will return—as soon as that money is exhausted, Mrs. Russell, I should think you would be glad of any law that would free you entirely from such a boast of prey."

"Ah! but my children." "Even for their sake it were well that such a moral leper were swept from the face of the earth, lest the very relationship should contaminate them. Were I in your place I should deliver that monster up to justice with less compunction than ever I killed a venomous serpent. I should do it to save my children from the fatal infection of his presence and example. I should consider my mother's duty the most sacred on earth. Oh! it is a lamentable weakness in any woman to shield a worthless and depraved man, at the risk of perpetrating an evil example to her innocent children. And, Mrs. Russell, I think that I shall be doing you and them a good service in bringing this incorrigible villain to justice," said this severe young Nemesis, who was beginning to lose patience at the mendacious weakness of the flesh betrayed by poor Ruth Russell.

"Ah! but you don't know. You haven't been tried in such a way. Besides, if ever you were to talk with him, you would not think so ill of him," said the meek little woman. "I am very sorry for you. I do not willingly wound you, only I would be glad to see you with a clearer moral vision, and a greater moral strength," replied Laura, gently. "I do not complain, and now, Miss Elmer, will you at least breakfast before you go?" "Yes, thank you." "And when shall I order a cab?" "Immediately after breakfast, if you please," Mrs. Russell.

The landlady left the room to fulfill these directions, and immediately after breakfast Miss Elmer went out in a cab to procure new lodgings. Her circumstances did not permit her to be fastidious. She secured the most respectable lodgings to be found nearest to Newgate, and into them she removed in the course of the same forenoon.

She sent her new address to Dr. Clark, with a request that he would call upon her at his earliest convenience. And the doctor, astonished at the change of quarters, for which he could not account, called on her in the afternoon.

He found Miss Elmer busily writing at the centre table of her gloomy new parlor. She arose to meet him, saying: "This is very, very kind, Dr. Clark. You find me making minutes of a chain of evidence, or rather of probabilities which I wish to submit to you. I feel sure that you will give me the clue to the real murderer of Sir Vincent."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the doctor, in amazement. "Let me hear!" Miss Elmer commenced and related all the circumstances of her fragmentary acquaintance with Sir Vincent Lester's protégée, Helen Ravenscroft; the mysterious stranger that waylaid and followed her carriage; the midnight interview and angry words that passed between this stranger and the baronet upon the occasion when she accidentally discovered them together; and finally the conversation that had recently passed between herself and poor Ruth Russell, in which she was enabled to put certain disjointed incidents together, and identify the mysterious "light-haired man" with a certain notorious scoundrel who had fled from justice years before.

"Now, deep in my heart is the conviction that this man and no other was the assassin of this unfortunate baronet."

"Good heaven, and yet you do not know the circumstance that makes this the most probable thing in the world!" exclaimed the doctor. Laura looked up, full of interest. "That criminal fled from trial and Sir Vincent Lester was the principal witness against him; indeed, without the testimony of Sir Vincent Lester, I doubt if it would have been possible to convict him," said the doctor.

"And there is the motive established at once for the assassination!" exclaimed Laura, with increasing excitement. "The very strongest motive that can possibly actuate human nature—that of self-preservation."

"Oh, then, let us go at once to some magistrate and lodge this information, procure a warrant for the arrest of this man, and, if possible, an order for the liberation of Mr. Cassinove."

The doctor smiled compassionately, saying: "Ladies know but little of the formulas of law, my dear Miss Elmer, else you would be aware that though we may procure a warrant for the arrest of this man we cannot possibly procure the liberation of your Cassinove. Having been duly committed to prison to answer the charge of murder, he must remain a prisoner until his trial shall have ended in his acquittal or otherwise."

The doctor left the other words unspoken. "Oh, but that is very hard," said Laura. "It is; and I must remind you of another set of circumstances—namely, that the evidence against Ferdinand Cassinove, whom we believe to be the man much stronger than that against the man whom we believe to be the assassin of Sir Vincent. Indeed, I doubt whether you have any evidence to give that would justify any magistrate in issuing a warrant for arresting the man upon the charge of having murdered Sir Vincent. If a warrant should be issued for his arrest at all, it will probably be upon the old charge. But we can soon satisfy ourselves. We will repair at once to a magistrate and lodge the information we possess. I will wait while you put on your bonnet."

Laura Elmer did not keep the good doctor waiting five minutes, but went into her adjoining chamber and in a few seconds returned, shawled, bonneted and gloved for the expedition. The doctor handed her into his carriage, and they set out for Bow street.

Arrived there, they had to wait some time before the magistrate was at leisure to attend to them; and when at length he was disengaged, the doctor requested that the office might be cleared, as the information he had to give had best be given in private. The character and position of Dr. Clark insured a prompt attention to his request. When the office was cleared of all except the magistrate, his clerk, the doctor and Miss Elmer, the latter advanced, and being sworn, made her statement. Now everything, even remotely connected with the tragedy of Lester House, was of the utmost interest to the authorities. Miss Elmer's statement received a candid and attentive hearing, and the magistrate thought the information of sufficient importance to justify him in issuing a warrant for the apprehension of the accused.

Miss Elmer and Dr. Clark had the satisfaction of seeing this warrant placed in the hands of an experienced officer before leaving the magistrate's office.

From Bow street they repaired to Newgate to comfort the prisoner there with the intelligence of the clue they had obtained to the real assassin. Meantime the officer with the warrant sought the accused first at all at the cottage of his wife in Chelsea; but Ruth Russell and her children had fled with all their luggage, nor could any one tell whither they had gone.

CHAPTER XXVI. From gloom to glare; from the prisoner's cell at Newgate to the drawing room at Beresleigh House.

"Among Women of the World. Tell me, Fanny, how much would you give to have blonde hair like mine?" "I do not know. How much did you

Beresleigh House was one blaze of light. Crowds of carriage blocked the way for some distance up and down the street before the front of the house.

The occasion was this: The young Duke and Duchess of Beresleigh had returned from their bridal tour, and were receiving their "dear five hundred friends" at home.

The drawing rooms, superbly furnished, beautifully adorned, fashion and celebrity of society.

At one end the young duchess, the beautiful and happy bride, stood to receive her guests; the loveliest where many were lovely.

Her dress was arranged with her usual artistic taste. It consisted of a full lace robe, light as a gossamer, worn over rose-colored silk, delicate blush roses in her hair, and pearl ornaments on her neck and arms. Never had Rose been happier than upon this evening, though even now she was not perfectly happy.

We assure any of us at any moment of our lives. The shadow of Rose's light was the thought of Ferdinand Cassinove in his prison cell, and of Laura Elmer sorrowing in her gloomy lodgings. But the heart of Rose was full of hope; she had great confidence in the innocence of Cassinove, and great faith in Providence; she was doing, after her means, to do, all in her power to serve Cassinove; and she had in her own heart not a single doubt either of the perfect rectitude of young Cassinove or of his final acquittal and full exoneration from suspicion. Therefore, she put away all her nervousness; turned her back upon the shadow and faced the sunshine; dispensed her smiles with equal sincerity and affability; and even, at length, joined the dance. It was while she was still dancing, that she noticed her own especial footman lingering near the door, as if anxious, yet afraid, to enter.

Seeing this, and surmising that he might be the bearer of some note from Laura Elmer, she took the earliest opportunity, when the dance was over, to move near the door, and beckon the man to her side.

He came in, and drawing near, said: "I beg pardon, your grace, but there is a person below who is very urgent to see you upon the most important business."

"Well, show him into the library, Miller, and say that I will see him there in a few minutes; will you do yourself better there in attendance?" "Yes, your grace," said the servant, bowing and retiring.

Rose entered the library, which was lighted but by one chandelier hanging from the ceiling over the central table. At this table stood a "fishy-looking" looking man, with his hands in his pockets.

Rose, kindly wishing to put this impoverished-looking gentleman at his ease, advanced toward him, speaking pleasantly, and saying: "You have come to me from Miss Elmer or Mr. Cassinove? Pray take a seat, sir."

"No, madam, I have not come from Mr. Cassinove or Miss Elmer," said the visitor, in a singularly sweet and clear voice, as he turned around and bowed deeply to the young duchess.

NATURE'S PRUNING

One great difference between the forester's management of trees and that of the horticulturist or the arboriculturist lies in the manner of pruning. The horticulturist does not trust the tree to grow as it pleases; he carefully directs and prunes the branches so that it will best serve the purpose intended.

The forester leaves all this to nature; he trusts in what is called "natural pruning." His theory is this: that, in the course of the growth of the trees, the light will be cut off from the lower branches of the trees as branches are formed higher up. In order to grow—indeed, in order to live at all—these branches must have light; (whether they require much or little depends on the species in most cases having secured notable successes.) Consequently, when the light is cut off from them, they cease to flourish and finally die.

At the point where the dead branch joins the main stem of the tree new layers of wood are put on the tree, owing to the yearly growth in diameter of the main stem, and the dead branch is gradually weakened at this point until, through the action of the wind, the whipping of other branches or some other cause, the branch is knocked from the tree. All that remains of that branch henceforth is the knot in the stem of the tree that is still retained within the stem. In this way, as the tree grows it is cleared of branches to a greater and greater height until finally there is left a long stem of branches to a height of fifty, sixty or even a hundred feet. Such a tree will produce the better grades of lumber, free from knots, and hence the kind the forester most desires. The same result might have been attained by taking an axe or saw and lopping off the branches; but the original expense of this, together with the interest thereon, would amount to so large a sum that it would take a large proportion of the receipts of the sale of the timber.

PEEVISH AND CROSS. Peevish, cross babies are sick babies—the well baby is always happy. Perhaps there may be nothing to indicate just what is the matter, but you may depend upon it there is something troubling the little one or he would not be cross. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets will remove the cause and make baby happy. They are a certain cure for the minor ills of babyhood. Thousands of mothers keep them continually in the house to guard against the sudden illness of baby. A Tablet now and again will keep the little one well. Mrs. James Jewers, Beaver Harbor, N. S., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby as occasion required since the baby was a day old. They have always helped her, and now at a year and a half old she is a fine healthy child. The Tablets, I think, are indispensable to mothers of young children." Sold by druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

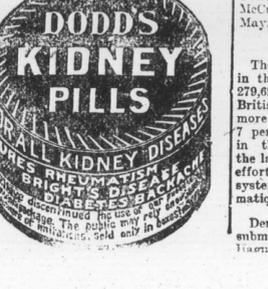

SAILING SHIPS WILL SURVIVE. The ability of the schooner to meet the requirements of present day conditions, while the square-riggers have been found wanting, can be readily understood when we take into consideration the numerous advantages possessed by the fore-and-aft rig, that are essential to the ideal carrier.

Operating expense, the prime factor in all transportation problems, is here reduced to a minimum, for there is no motive power so cheap as the free winds of heaven, and no other craft so well adapted to utilize and control this force. The sails are of handy form, and can be readily handled from the deck by a handful of men, or with steam power if desired. The schooner can sail several points nearer the eye of the wind than a square-rigger is able to do.

Built on the old snipper model, they sail like witches, and owing to their peculiar construction can be readily loaded and discharged. They require but little ballast, and having no heavy top-lamper, can, if necessary to the trade, take on immense deck loads. In the lumber traffic of the Pacific Northwest we find these vessels leaving port with huge deck loads towering ten to fifteen feet above the rail. Occasionally they get caught in a blow and have to sacrifice a portion of the deck load; but where one meets such a mishap, dozens reach their destinations safely and land their cargoes intact.—From "The Luck-Be-Of-Our-Sailing-Fleet," by James G. McCurdy in The Outing Magazine for May.

World's Submarine Cables. The total length of submarine cables in the world is about 450,000 kilometers—270,622 miles, of which 80 per cent. are British, 10 per cent. American, a little more than 9 per cent. French, and about 7 per cent. German. A great advance in this domain has been made during the last few years by Germany, whose efforts tend to constitute an independent system, observes the Memorial Diplomatique.

Dear Sir—Being laid up with lame back, I thought I would drop you a line to tell you that your St. Leg's Lumbago cure will do all you claim for it, as I have only used part of the bottle and I feel no returning symptoms of the disease.

I may say I have been troubled with lame back for the last ten years, and tried several other patent medicines but without results. I can heartily recommend it to any troubled with lame back, and I feel safe in saying that it's the cheapest medicine on the market.

May 6.—The writer recently saw a flock of several hundred red wing blackbirds. They should be welcomed, as the selfish sparrow has driven away some elegant birds. These sprightly visitors in early spring appropriate some grain of the farmers, but live chiefly on hurtful seeds and insects.

Some who tapped the maples on our streets, intimate they will not do so next year. Young trees with large tops to sustain cannot endure annual bleeding. Nature has her way of settling accounts with all who transgress her laws.

IRON BLOOD PILLS

NATURE'S SPRING SYSTEM CLEANSER

As the neat house wife cleans her house every spring after being closed up during the winter months, so our system needs the cleaning of its impurities. Iron enters largely into the system and no better purifier can be used than a course of Lamb's Iron Blood Pills.—They give tone to the system, cleanse and supply new blood. Instead of a pale, sallow complexion the iron they contain supplies the lack in the blood corpuscles. A few boxes will cause a rosy cheek, a healthy look and new courage to do our daily work. Try them. 25c box or 5 boxes for $1.00

The government has refused to grant licenses in the town of Midland, pending the appeal against the judgment quashing the local option by-law. It is said the government may not grant any licenses this year in municipalities where the by-law carried and was subsequently quashed on technicalities.

VALUABLE MEDICAL PRESCRIPTION

Recommended by a Well-known Toronto Doctor, Whose Love for Humanity is Greater than His Prejudice Against Proprietary Medicines.

The following very valuable prescription, by an eminent and successful physician, will be appreciated by many who are suffering from la grippe, cold, cough, pneumonia, or any throat, lung or stomach trouble, or run-down system, as it is a certain cure, and will save many a doctor's bill. It is almost a certain preventive as well. "When you feel that you are taking cold or have chilly feeling or aching in any part of the body or head, or feel weak, tired, dizzy, unfit for work, pain in the head or back of the neck, do not neglect these dangerous symptoms, but send immediately to your druggist and get a bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen), and prepare as follows:

Psychine, 2 teaspoonfuls.
Sherry, whisky or water, 2 teaspoonfuls.

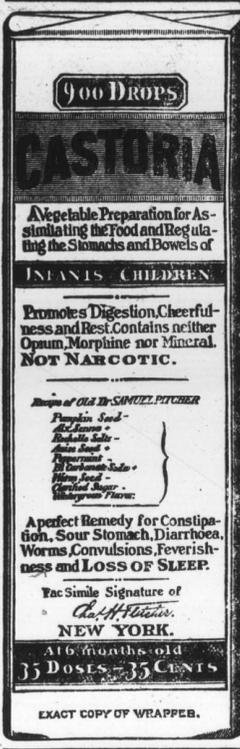

Choice of the latter can be made according to the judgment and preference of the patient.

Mix thoroughly and take regularly before each meal and at bedtime." This prescription has been used in thousands of cases and has been so universally successful that a number of leading physicians regularly prescribe Psychine in their practice for any of the above troubles, or any run-down, wasting or constitutional difficulty. It is the most reliable and valuable home remedy. It tones up the entire system, giving a feeling of youthfulness and vigor, adding many years to the life of those who use it.

"Years ago I was almost a physical wreck and was suffering with lung troubles. Friends and neighbors thought I would never get better. I began to doubt myself. Losing faith in my physician, I secured another one who recommended the PSYCHINE. It was surprising beyond description the effect it had. I seemed to gain with every dose. Inside of two weeks I was able to attend to my household again. There are no symptoms of consumption about me now."

REMARKABLE INVENTION FOR THE CULTURE OF 'HAIR'

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!
The Company's Guarantee

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles (hair roots), without resorting to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfill and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board. Dr. W. M. VOIGT, referring to the invention says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable. An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

The Athens Reporter

On common fences the continuous wire stays are sure to bend and the locks to lose their grip under continual pressure of your horses or cattle. And once they do, the top wire, soon followed by those below, will sag and destroy the efficiency of your fence. Nothing like that can happen to our Dillon Hinge-Stay Fence. The short, stiff hard steel wire in our hinge-stays cannot bend when the lateral wires are weighted down, owing to their being so short and jointed at each strand wire. Pressure of a horse on the top wire brings the "hinges" in the stays into action and prevents them from bending, and when pressure is relieved the fence springs back into place again. The lateral wires are High-Carbon Hard Steel and rolled to provide for expansion and contraction by heat and cold, and are also crimped at the intersections of the stays and strands to prevent the stays from slipping sideways—therefore no locks are needed. Buy the Dillon Hinge-Stay Fence. It's "twice as strong." Twice as good an investment. Catalogue free.

The Fashions as Predicted for the Summer

June being the traditional bridal month, the usual fashion article in this number of the New Idea Woman's Magazine is devoted to the bride and her attendants. New materials for the wedding gown, and graceful drawings showing the latest ways of making the same are given, as well as suggestions for the bridesmaids and maids of honor. The Girls' Letter contains many valuable hints for the selection of a trousseau and will undoubtedly prove helpful to the girl with moderate means who wishes to spend sensibly her allowance for this purpose. Ideas for bridal luncheons and anniversary dinners also appear in this issue. Another illustrated fashion article is devoted to the discussion of jumper fashions, which will, without doubt, occupy the most important place in summer wardrobes.

NEW GRANOLITHIC WALKS

The wooden sidewalks in town are in a wretched condition, and their repair or replacement has been the subject of serious consideration by the council. With the high price of lumber and considering the wooden walks require reworking about three times in twenty years, it seems extravagant to even think of lumber when permanent walks may be secured at no greater cost, and perhaps for less money. The council has wisely taken this view of the matter, and at its meeting Friday evening decided upon the construction of a large amount of granolithic walk, to pay for which debentures will be issued covering a period of twenty years. A by-law was passed providing for the work, and as soon as possible an engineer will be put on to make a survey and report to the council, after which tenders will be asked for and the work of construction proceeded with.

No, gentle reader, the above paragraph doesn't refer to the Athens village council; it tells of what the council of Winchester is doing. Our council may take some such action, but it hasn't happened yet.

Keep the Balance Up

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. No body can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength and endurance.

A Warning

To feel tired after exertion is one thing; to feel tired before is another. Don't say the latter is laziness—it isn't; but it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, is running down, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It's a warning, too—and sufferers should begin taking Hood's at once. Buy a bottle to day.

IMITATION PEARLS.

They May Be Detected by the Hole Drilled Through Them. The means of ascertaining the genuineness of pearls, which are frequently imitated with marvelous skill, is especially important to the layman, even though the jeweler may quickly detect them. Imitations are usually lighter than real pearls and generally are brittle, although some are made solid of fish scales and do not break so easily, while the holes, which in the real pearl are drilled very small and have a sharp edge, are in the false larger and have a blunt edge. As a rule, the imitation pearls are like hollow spheres of glass colored internally with a coating imitating the orient of natural pearl.

The manufacture of these articles embraces two series of operations—the tube glassblower, besides, gives to the production of the spheres. They are produced by the glassblower, who by aid of an enameled lamp solders the extremity of a tube when the substance is of the right consistency. In this way are obtained very regular little spheres that serve for the composition of the ordinary quality of false pearls.

In the more beautiful imitations the tube employed is slightly opalescent, and the glassblower, besides, gives to the little spheres while they are yet malleable certain slight perceptible inequalities of surface by gently tapping them with a small iron bar. This gives them a still greater resemblance to natural pearls, which are very seldom absolutely regular.—Exchange.

WEIGHT OF PLANETS.

It is the Mass of the Body That Counts With the Astronomer.

If a ham weighing thirty pounds were taken up to the moon and weighed there, the "pull"—the attractive force of the moon upon the ham—would amount to only five pounds. There would be another weight of the ham for the planet Mars and yet another on the sun. A ham weighing thirty pounds at New York ought to weigh some 800 pounds on the sun's surface; hence the astronomer does not speak of the weight of a planet, because that would depend upon the place where it was weighed. But he speaks of the mass of the planet, which means how much planet there is, no matter where it might be weighed.

At the same time we might, without any inexactness, agree that the weight of a heavenly body should be fixed by the weight it would have in New York. As we could not imagine a planet in New York, because it may be larger than the earth itself, what we are to imagine is this: Suppose the planet could be divided into a million million million equal parts and one of these parts brought to New York and weighed. We could easily find its weight in pounds or tons. Then multiply this by a million million million, and we shall have a weight of the planet. This would be equivalent to what astronomers might take as the mass of the planet.

A Use For His Hat.

A funny incident of a drawing room meeting was recently noticed. A grave looking gentleman, with an unusually tall hat, entered and, seeing no rack in the hall, placed his hat on the floor just behind the door. Pretty soon another grave man entered, with a large, dripping umbrella, and, peering anxiously for the usual receptacle, saw in the gloom the hat resting on the floor. His eyesight was probably poor, for he mistook it for one of the new umbrella holders, and in it he deposited his dripping umbrella. This was an example for those who follow, and in a short time the solemn looking hat was stanchly holding a dozen umbrellas. At the end of the meeting the water in the hat was an inch in depth.—London Tit-Bits.

A Thirsty Cat.

"Perhaps you think the old water in the mill joke has been worked to death, but I've found a new variation of it," said a south side man recently. "You know, I have a small negro girl as a nurse for my children, and one of her duties is to tell stories to the kids just before bedtime. They always listen intently to what she says, and last night I decided to listen too. This is what I heard: 'As I do eat, she got thirsty, an' got thirster an' mo' thirster, an' finally she went to a pan ob milk sittin' in de pantry to get a drink ob watah.' 'I told the story to our milkman this morning, and he didn't laugh at all.'"

Absentminded.

The judge was at dinner in the new household, according to the Philadelphia Ledger, when the young housekeeper asked: "Did you ever try any of my biscuits, judge?" "No," replied the judge, "I never did, but I dare say they deserve it."

Department.

The new steamer was on its first trip, with a lot of handlubbers on board. "Isn't she behaving beautifully, captain, in this heavy sea?" exclaimed an enthusiastic marine reporter. "Yes, sir," said the gruff captain; "a great deal better, sir, than the passengers are."

Does Your Girl Swim?

Wedderly—Can the girl you are engaged to swim? Singleton—I don't know. But why do you ask? Wedderly—Because if she can you ought to be happy. A girl who can swim can keep her mouth shut.

A man rarely has reason to regret the things he doesn't say or the letters he doesn't write.

How "Bu-Ju" helps your kidneys.

"Bu-Ju" soothes irritation and heals inflammation. "Bu-Ju" increases the excretion of urine. This flushes the kidneys—opens up the pores—clears the system of all poisonous deposits—and makes the kidneys well and strong. "Bu-Ju" takes away the pain in the back and through the hips—cures the weakness and nervousness—and relieves all bladder troubles. "Bu-Ju" will give you practically a new pair of kidneys, that will do their work in nature's way. "Bu-Ju" does all this—and more—at a cost to you of only 3c. a day.

MARKHAM, ONT., Dec. 1st, 1905. "I had suffered almost continually for seven years with Kidney Trouble. Could scarcely walk, and was unable to attend to my farm work. Saw 'Bu-Ju,' the kidney pills, advertised and procured a box from my druggist. After taking the first few pills, I feel much relieved; and after taking half a box, was able to do a full day's work. I know one box of 'Bu-Ju' saved me $40.00 doctor's bills and I think they are the finest pills made." JAMES ABBOTT.

You have No Reason for Not Using Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them. Well, we'll admit that the drug cures do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo. Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy. One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach, when they had sick headache. And there is nothing better. The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It won't hurt you any more than will the soda. There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo. If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should. Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will get it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time. If you are using a drug remedy, will you not discard it? Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all must sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain. If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again. 10c. and 25c. at dealers or by mail. B. N. Robinson & Co., Coaticook, Que.

He Aims To Change Climate

(Chicago Chronicle)

Undo the awful work of Noah's flood, change North America into a tropical paradise, make Minnesota, and North Dakota and Manitoba flourish like California or the Carolinas, destroy our winters within five years.

That is the last before the Canadian parliament to-day. It isn't a dream of a lunatic. It is an earnest proposition as ever legislators considered.

The plan is to build a canal between the Arctic and the Atlantic, melt the ice-blocked sea and allow the warm current from the mid-Atlantic to permeate the frozen fastnesses of the Arctic.

The plan is to build a canal between the Arctic and the Atlantic, melt the ice-blocked sea and allow the warm current from the mid-Atlantic to permeate the frozen fastnesses of the Arctic.

He lives in Russell, Manitoba, where it is nothing to see the mercury down to 40 below zero on a winter's morning. He is a farmer on a large scale, one of Canada's rich men. His hobby is to make all North America a continent of mild winters and less torrid summers.

The plan has just been presented to the Canadian Parliament, and it is now in the hands of Frank K. Oliver, minister of the interior for the Dominion of Canada. He has given over it very carefully, and as proof of his own conviction that it is possible he has communicated the details to several scientists of world-wide fame with a request for an opinion.

Lord Kelvin has been consulted and will report later. Minister Oliver has communicated with Mr. McMillan, informing him that he may be encouraged in his scheme and asking for more particulars.

Once upon a time, as geology plainly proves, North America enjoyed as balmy a climate as there was in the world. The remains of mammoths and trees in the northern shrubbery are to be found all along the edge of the Arctic circle and in northern Siberia.

The great flood of Noah's time would all this. It made North America a land of bleak winters and scorching summers. It blocked up the channel to the Arctic and kept the warm waters of the Atlantic from leaving those ice-blocked northern shores. All this, and more, has been Mr. McMillan's life study.

He speaks about it frankly. His arguments are unimpaired by the talk about his plan with a writer to the World Magazine he grew enthusiastic.

"Now, precisely what I would like to know is, what do you think of the plan?" he asked, and he answered the question himself. "I don't think it is a bad plan. It is a great stretch of open ocean to the north of the Arctic circle, and the south of the British Isles, the south of Greenland corresponds in this particular to Norway and Newfoundland to the north of France. Were it not for the moderating influences of this great stretch of open ocean the winters in Europe would be of arctic severity."

"What caused the once open ocean to the north of Canada to be turned into a sea field? Beyond doubt the fact that the great ocean current which at one time flowed from the Atlantic into the Arctic became impeded by some barrier."

"It is a scientific fact which you can verify by consulting the maps of the world. The bed of the Atlantic there is a channel on the east side extending from south of the equator northward and to the northeast, through the Faroe and Shetland islands at a depth of 670 fathoms. This passage is about 250 miles wide and I believe that the ocean current which the current between the Atlantic and the Arctic oceans formerly flowed."

"Now, precisely what I would like to know is, what do you think of the plan?" he asked, and he answered the question himself. "I don't think it is a bad plan. It is a great stretch of open ocean to the north of the Arctic circle, and the south of the British Isles, the south of Greenland corresponds in this particular to Norway and Newfoundland to the north of France. Were it not for the moderating influences of this great stretch of open ocean the winters in Europe would be of arctic severity."

"That is to say, in four or five years the world would be a different place. The Arctic, being deprived of its warm current, gradually cooled down and the rains descended. The moisture-laden air of the Atlantic and Pacific flowed in and the rains continued until the freezing point was reached. Probably it took a year or two to freeze the Arctic all over, but even now it is covered by a comparatively thin coating of ice."

"Now if this sunken ice across the channel were to be removed the warm current from the Atlantic would immediately be restored. That, this ice coating would rapidly disappear."

But how to do it? Mr. McMillan recognizes that the work of clearing away the ice obstruction in the channel connecting the two oceans is one of the most important things that any government can undertake to do.

"My proposition," he went on, "is to yield to the British government and to get it to approach the United States government also with the object of attaching a section of the fleets of both powers to undertake the work after the several countries interested have given pledges and such securities as may be considered adequate."

"If the iceblock of the Arctic be stranded on one large island or on two small ones, besides coming against the north of Greenland, I would propose to break up the ice by starting in to work at the east of Greenland and then proceeding north and west. The work could also be commenced at the head of Davis Strait and Bering Straits to convey it away."

"I might point out to you that when this scheme of mine has been carried out, as it will be some day, the area of habitable land in Canada would be more than double that of the whole United States. Moreover, Greenland, with a mild climate, would become a valuable, and you can depend upon it that the United States would try to get possession of it."

"The Fight of the Copper Kings." Among the important articles in the May McClure's is C. P. Connolly's "The Fight of the Copper Kings," which may well be considered a continuation or sequel of the author's famous "Story of Montana," that appeared in McClure's in the latter part of last year. The article gives the astounding details of the bitter fight that has been waged between F. Augustus Heinze and the Amalgamated Copper Company, the notorious offshoot of the Standard Oil. This battle Heinze, as the leader of the people against the trusts began at about the age of thirty, and the article traces the

Many a married man remembers that he was doubly blessed when he enjoyed single blessedness.

Mines-Senator Clark also studied in the same school, by the way-gives the details of his early mining operations in Montana, his memorable raid on Canada, and his sudden return from his Canadian successes, to Montana to protect his Rarus mine from the Boston companies who owned properties adjoining the Rarus.

These Boston companies claimed that the ore in the Rarus "apexed" in their properties, therefore belonged to them, and that the best thing that Heinze could do was to sell out to them for whatever they offered. Heinze replied to Bigelow, the president of the Boston companies:

"Mr. Bigelow, you have a great deal of property in Montana which is subject to the same kind of litigation as that which you say you will thrust upon me. If your programme is fight, you will find that I am prepared. Before you and I have finished, I will give you a fight that will be heard of from one end of this continent to the other."

That Heinze kept his word and made good his threat everyone knows, and Connolly's description of that fight which became the fight of the Amalgamated when they took over the Boston companies, is absorbing. Not the least interesting portion of the battle came about when Clarke selected Heinze for his "indication" and made him his lieutenant in his political campaign for reelection to the Senate. The spectacular campaign that Heinze waged for Clark and his ultimate success reads like the lines of an extravaganza, and sets forth "practical politics" in its most exaggerated form.

THE PAY OF BISHOPS. The High Clergy of England, Complaining of Magnificent Poverty.

Not so many years ago the Bishop of London was more than contented with his plutocratic lot; now he is complaining that his pay of $50,000 a year is not sufficient to keep him and the palace which are thrust upon him. The present bishop is a bachelor, and has no pleasures upon the rows and rows of rooms he has to keep in order; but an unshapely one would think that $50,000 a year would do it. He is not alone, however, in his complaining. The Archbishop of Canterbury is with him, and mourns because $75,000 a year will not sustain him. The Bishop of Winchester has $38,000 a year, and cannot keep his own big palace on it. All this complaining is heard on the intimation that Parliament intends cutting down the pay of bishops—a reform being threatened akin to that which was helped along by Anthony Trollope's clerical rascals. When the Bishop of Winchester for instance, was able to buy from the revenues of his sees, without feeling the loss, the necessary number of fresh carpets every year or so, he had an income of something more than $200,000; and now what has he got? Nothing but a paltry $36,000.

The late Mr. Harcourt, himself the son of a dean, was wont to talk about bishops in a way that indicated that their old-time wealth did them no spiritual good. His conversations on this subject might have pleased John Morley, but Harcourt had to be discreetly silent in the presence of Gladstone. The bishops themselves had another point of view. One day the Bishop of London, not this one, was driving in the suburbs in his splendid carriage, when to him, from an ancient cottage, approached an old woman, who exclaimed:

"Oh, me lad, me lad, what would St. Paul say if he saw you now?" "Why, my dear woman, he'd say, 'What a blessed change!'"—Harper's Weekly.

Butter Colored to Suit. So aniline dyes are not "injurious to health." We can continue to use "glit edge" butter without a qualm, but with the commissioners on foods sanction to color eatables the table will soon resemble the rainbow. For why stick to yellow butter? Why not blue or green to match the floral decorations? There is already a call for peach butter in Washington, D. C., and it would be lovely to have the tiny golden balls purple ones, for of course the carrot-colored wont care what color the half-fed cow's butter is dyed, and purple and yellow make a lovely combination.—Boston Herald.

He Knew the Others. An up-country business man was once introduced to Abbot Lawrence, says the Boston Herald.

"Mr. Smith," said Mr. Lawrence, with a musing air, "I don't think I know you, do I?" "Well, you ought to," was the reply. "I've traded with you for 20 years."

"Always paid your bills, perhaps?" "Of course." "That accounts for it," said Mr. Lawrence. "I know the others."

Alma-Tadema's Lucky Number. Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, the distinguished painter, is a strong believer in the luckiness of numbers. His lucky number is 17.

His wife, he will tell you, was 17 when he first met her; the number of the house which he took her when they were married was 17; his present house bears the same number doubled, and the first spade was put to the work of rebuilding it on August 17, 1886. It was on Nov. 17 that he and his family first took up.

Minard's Liniment Lumberman's Friend. The honing of the blade is of the highest importance. Nine tenths of the self-shavers hone their razors themselves, and nine-tenths of these hone them the wrong way. Even the majority of barbers, who are supposed to know, use the old-fashioned method. They draw the razor across the bone with the edge. The proper way is to draw it against the bone. And this saves time by getting the greatest cutting force from the tool.

Here are the proper directions for honing a razor: To bring a dull razor to an edge, dip light side of rub stone in cold water, do not use hot water; rub on bone until you create a thin layer; lay razor perfectly flat, so that both back and edge touch the stone; draw razor across the bone from heel to point against the edge; hone in this way until your razor is sharp; test razor on thumb nail; if it adheres from heel to point, then you have an edge. Floating after same directions it is impossible to get a "wire edge," which happens to almost every shaver.

Town Swallowed by a Lake.

In the eastern portion of Lawrence county is a lake, covering about twenty acres, which has a history of interest. There are still living a number of old citizens who remember when it was dry land.

Fifty years or more ago a prosperous country village stood on the spot where the lake now is. The town was called Oakville, and it was one of the most important places in this section of the State in those days. Suddenly the land on which the town was located commenced to sink, and finally about twenty acres went down, carrying with it all the buildings, and many stocks of goods were entirely lost. It is said that the town sunk almost in a night and that the merchants didn't have time to remove their stocks of goods.

The lake where the old town formerly stood is teeming with many kinds of fish and many fishermen visit the place during the spring and summer. Fish ricks and picnics are held there, but the majority of the people who attend these gatherings little dream that a half century ago a large village stood on the spot which is now covered by the lake.

Wanted to Get Into Prison. Felix Gonzales, of Socorro, sentenced to a term of two years in the penitentiary on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and whose case, upon appeal was decided in favor of the lower court, had some difficulty in getting into prison. As soon as he heard that the Supreme Court had affirmed the sentence of the lower court he went to the penitentiary near this city and said to Supt. Trelford:

"I have been sentenced for two years and I want to begin serving my sentence as soon as possible."

Supt. Trelford was unable to accept the man as a prisoner because he had no commitment papers. When so informed Gonzales left the prison and after an hour returned with his commitment papers duly signed and certified. He was then placed in a cell to begin serving a two years sentence.—Santa Fe New Mexican.

Bad Weather for Tanners. A manufacturer of patent side leather remarked: "I can safely state that never since patent leather has become the staple which I believe it is have finishers been so confronted with such weather conditions as during the past winter. They could not make much of it during the excessively hot weather on account of the sticking together, and they could not safely finish it in cold weather, but they were nearly two months laboring under such unfavorable weather conditions that they could not finish it. It may not be generally understood that finishers must have bright, sunny weather to lacquer leather, and when we are deprived of that everything is held under suspension."—From the Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Mr. Blinks said nothing. "And they're going to invade Washington and make a speech to the President, and all?" Blinks still silent.

"I declare," snapped the lady, "you're the most tantalizing man in existence. There you sit like a statue never saying a word to show that you don't know what you're talking about."—Atlanta Constitution.

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house. Hint of Strong Sentiment. A negro moved into the town of Stigler and rented a house. As soon as the white people found out the facts a committee visited the place, put a stick of dynamite under one corner and touched it off. The negro had not stopped running when he saw that the sentiment in Stigler is against letting negroes settle there.

What an Aeronaut Lacks. The trouble with Mr. Santos-Dumont is that he trusts to science and not inspiration. No man can fly unless he can fly. To fly and to determine to fly and fly. To fly and to make a go of it one must feel an impelling desire to kick the earth away from him, and grab hold of the circumference of a sphere and pull himself into a streak of pleasure without unnecessary delays, procrastinations or what the old Latin writers used to call morose business. Given that impulse to move and the laws of gravitation become void and a man can track around a streak of lightning and go on for thirty or forty yards without much trouble. What Santos-Dumont needs is less science and more enthusiasm in his work.—Emporia, Kan., Gazette.

A manufacturer of patent side leather remarked: "I can safely state that never since patent leather has become the staple which I believe it is have finishers been so confronted with such weather conditions as during the past winter. They could not make much of it during the excessively hot weather on account of the sticking together, and they could not safely finish it in cold weather, but they were nearly two months laboring under such unfavorable weather conditions that they could not finish it. It may not be generally understood that finishers must have bright, sunny weather to lacquer leather, and when we are deprived of that everything is held under suspension."—From the Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Minard's Liniment used by Physicians. Tantalizing Man. "I see by the paper," said Mrs. Blinks at the breakfast table, "that a delegation of women suffragettes is coming to this country."

Mr. Blinks said nothing. "And they're going to invade Washington and make a speech to the President, and all?" Blinks still silent.

"I declare," snapped the lady, "you're the most tantalizing man in existence. There you sit like a statue never saying a word to show that you don't know what you're talking about."—Atlanta Constitution.

Value of Vanadium. PROPER CARE OF A RAZOR. It is not generally known that a razor works on the same principle as a saw. The cutting edge of the blade is of the highest importance. Nine tenths of the self-shavers hone their razors themselves, and nine-tenths of these hone them the wrong way. Even the majority of barbers, who are supposed to know, use the old-fashioned method. They draw the razor across the bone with the edge. The proper way is to draw it against the bone. And this saves time by getting the greatest cutting force from the tool.

Here are the proper directions for honing a razor: To bring a dull razor to an edge, dip light side of rub stone in cold water, do not use hot water; rub on bone until you create a thin layer; lay razor perfectly flat, so that both back and edge touch the stone; draw razor across the bone from heel to point against the edge; hone in this way until your razor is sharp; test razor on thumb nail; if it adheres from heel to point, then you have an edge. Floating after same directions it is impossible to get a "wire edge," which happens to almost every shaver.

Hotel Where Charlotte Corday Stopped.

A good deal of old Paris is disappearing just now, and among the latest bits of the antique city to be threatened is the little spot upon which Charlotte Corday found a fleeting place of rest as she entered the city on her errand of death.

It stands on the street which prior to the days of the revolution had been known as that of the Vieux Augustins. It now is the Rue d'Argout. The building is the Hotel de la Providence. Charlotte arrived in Paris from Caen on July 9, 1793, slept at the hotel on that and the following night, and on the morning of the 11th walked quietly out of it to slay the monster Marat.

The bedroom is still pointed out which the Norman heroine occupied, and some regret is felt that the place has to be demolished. But the march of progress is merciless. The buildings are needed to extend the Rue de Louvre, and soon human feet will tramp on the spot where the Norman heroine slept her last calm sleep of maiden freedom.—London Globe.

Scientific Farming. It is not sufficiently recognized that agriculture is a scientific pursuit and that in order to get the very best returns out of it a man could to advantage utilize a special scientific education as truly as does the doctor or lawyer or the engineer. It is not merely because of the increased material return that such education for the farmer is of value. The intellectual and moral dividends would be means of such training be equally increased. It is a great loss in human power and happiness that thousands of men engaged in one of the most scientific of pursuits should go about it without getting the same moral and intellectual satisfaction that comes to men in other callings in which the professional element has been more consciously recognized.—Boston Transcript.

Compliment for President Hadley. President Hadley, of Yale, not long ago entertained at dinner the son of one of his classmates, the youth being a Yale freshman. The conversation turned to football, and what the president had to say on the subject was news to the freshman, who realized the fact with considerable surprise. He listened for some time, and then said to Mrs. Hadley, "Do you know, Mrs. Hadley, that only illustrates the old saying that one can learn something of anybody."—Boston Herald.

FREE TRADE FOR BRITAIN.

Hon. Mr. Asquith Tells the Premiers That Britain Cannot Give Preference.

London, May 6.—Today's prices of the Imperial Conference proceedings were mainly devoted to the speeches of Sir James MacKay, of the India Office, and of Mr. Asquith. The speeches of Sir Robert Bond and General Botha are briefly summarized. The remaining speeches will be issued to-morrow.

Sir James MacKay said the interests of India did not call for any change in her fiscal system. It was not menaced by the restrictive tariffs of foreign countries, which sold India £18,000,000 worth of goods and bought £66,000,000 worth. Under reciprocal preference India had the heritage of the whole empire, and any preference granted the United Kingdom by the self-governing colonies should also be granted to India.

General Botha said he had no mandate, but expressed the opinion that the resolution of 1902 should stand. He did not think any good would result from pressing on the mother country any advance on that. The respective Governments should be free to manage their own affairs.

Sir Robert Bond joined Sir Wilfrid Laurier in supporting the resolution of 1902. His Government desired to cooperate in all possible ways in the policy of preference between the United Kingdom and the colonies.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr. Asquith said Sir Wilfrid Laurier had pointed out on several occasions what the basis of unity must be. Each member of the empire must look first to its own interest, and would best serve the whole by so doing. The colonies had received full fiscal independence, and had even used it to build up tariff walls against the mother country.

Mr. Asquith said Sir Wilfrid Laurier had pointed out on several occasions what the basis of unity must be. Each member of the empire must look first to its own interest, and would best serve the whole by so doing. The colonies had received full fiscal independence, and had even used it to build up tariff walls against the mother country.

He stated all these difficulties in no spirit of criticism, but in order to show the difficulties in the way of an advantageous preferential tariff in favor of this country, even where there was a system of protection. In a free trade country where duties were levied for revenue purposes only, the difficulty would be more greater. Britain now offered the freest possible market. Preferential tariffs would involve the giving of less to other people, not of more to the colonies. They involved the setting up of a system of new duties, which would be an infringement of the root principles of free trade. It was a question of principle. There was no possibility of such a compromise as had been suggested by the previous speakers. Mr. Asquith proceeded to consider on what preference must have been given, if at all, in 1905. Five million five hundred thousand pounds represented the value of articles, wholly or partly manufactured, imported from the colonies, £32,500,000 the raw materials, £27,750,000 the food, drink and tobacco. That meant that preference to the value must be in respect to raw materials and foodstuffs. If such preference were granted, the very citadel of free trade would be attacked, sources of supply would be restricted and prices raised. He was aware that this view was disputed, but the Government adhered to it, and the people of Britain had expressed their agreement. In the case of articles of necessity, where there was no chance of local production fully making up the deficiencies, the levying of a duty must sooner or later raise the price to the consumer. For these reasons the home Government, speaking for the people, could not accept the principle of preferential trade by way of a tariff preference.

He thought, however, that the discussion had thrown light on other methods by which the inter-imperial trade relations might be improved. Reference had been made to possible improvement in the means of communication, especially by steamer services; to the increase in the number of commercial agents of the colonies; to the desirability of removing or reducing the Suez Canal dues, and establishing mail communication to the Australasian colonies via Canada. All these were matters on which the Government would be fully ready to co-operate with any practical proposals. He said this morning, as he felt that in the performance of his duty it had been necessary for him to enunciate a general policy which did not accord with the views of the colonial representatives.

TIN CAN TO BELL.

HOW PRINCE RUPERT PASSED OUT OF ROMANCE.

And Into the Ranks of Plain, Everyday Towns, Where the People Are Summoned to Worship in the Ordinary Way. Prince Rupert, May 6.—An event of more than passing interest occurred at Prince Rupert on Friday evening, the 19th of April, the presentation of the first church bell to Bishop Du Vernet for the use of St. Andrew's congregation, Prince Rupert. A social evening was spent in St. Andrew's Hall, attended by nearly all the residents of the place. Coffee and cake were provided by a committee of ladies. The bell was presented by Mr. John Trainer, manager of the United Supply & Contracting Co., on behalf of the donors, Messrs. McLennan & McFesty, of Vancouver, and the United Supply Co., who brought the bell up from Vancouver and gave the fixtures, etc. After Mr. Trainer's speech, Mrs. Anderson, wife of the contractor of the Supply Company, stepped forward and rang the bell, the first church bell ever rung in Prince Rupert or on Kaien Island. Bishop Du Vernet returned thanks for the bell, mentioning that beginning with a tin can beaten by a Chinaman for the first service, then a frying-pan, then the G. T. P. triangle, they had at last risen to the dignity of a church bell.

RESCUED MARINERS.

EXPLOSION BURST SHIP'S DECK AND KILLED FIVE MEN. Plymouth, Eng., May 6.—The British steamer Westgate, from Rosario March 24 for the Tyne, arrived here to-day, and landed the survivors of the crew of the British tank ship Silverlip, which was destroyed by an explosion of benzine in her cargo while passing through the Bay of Biscay. The Silverlip, Captain Becken, which belongs to the Shell Transport and Trading Co., of London, was on her way from Singapore on May 1, when an explosion of benzine in her cargo burst the vessel's deck and set fire to the ship. The engine and four crew members were killed and four others of the crew were seriously injured. The 48 survivors of the crew were rescued by the Westgate and brought to this port.

Cowie, of Logisborough, Scotland, to demonstrate to the fishermen of the Maritime Provinces the Scottish method of curing fish. Mr. Cowie is recognized to be one of the best experts in Scotland on herring curing, and that his labors in Canada have been satisfactory is evidenced by the fact of the department re-engaging him.

HON. HERBERT HENRY ASQUITH.

"HOW ABOUT KING DAVID?"

Dr. Torrey's Reply May Lead to a Lawsuit. Montreal, May 6.—Dr. Torrey is facing a suit for defamation of character, brought against him by Norman Murray, on account of a retort alleged to have been made by Dr. Torrey in St. James Methodist Church the night before last.

"How about King David?" Mr. Murray had asked, interrupting the remarks of the evangelist on the evil consequences of infidelity. "King David was a better man than you," the doctor is alleged to have replied, "but there is hope for you, even though you were arrested for selling obscene literature on the street."

This retort has led to a threat of an action for damages, of which notice was served on Dr. Torrey by Messrs. Beauchamp & Desjardins. Dr. Torrey explained to-day that his words had not been accurately reported, but that they had been made rather more cutting than they had originally been. "In the first place," he said, "I did not institute any comparison between King David and Mr. Murray; I said merely that David had been a great very great sinner, but that he had been saved, as Mr. Murray could be, even if he had been arrested for selling obscene literature on the street. You see, I did not make a positive assertion, but merely said that salvation was possible for him even in such a case. I'm not worrying about this action." Dr. Torrey continued, with a smile of cheerful assurance; "but if I am delayed in this city, and so cannot go on to fill my engagements, some one will have to pay me the damages I suffer, as Mr. Murray will find it his cost. At the rate of one hundred and fifty dollars or so a day, he will be surprised at the way the bill will amount up. If Mr. Murray wants an action he will get one, and probably more than he cares for. He has absolutely no case and he will have to pay for any losses I suffer through his suit."

ANGLICAN WOMEN.

Miss Tilley Again President of Auxiliary. Toronto despatch: The second morning session of the Diocesan Women's Auxiliaries of the Anglican Church was devoted almost entirely to business and reports from the various mission fields. Rev. Mr. Wittaker, late of Herschell Island, is leaving shortly for Fort McPherson. An interesting account of this post was given, in which it was described as a wild, desolate region, with the inhabitants so few and far between that there is barely one individual per 100,000 acres. At the close of the morning session Provost Mackenzie, of Trinity University, gave a stirring address founded upon a portion of the Lord's Prayer: "Lead us not into temptation." The afternoon meeting was opened by Miss Cummings, who spoke of the improvement and surprising increase of the Leaflet, a publication devoted to Christian work. Several papers giving the history of

NEW POSTAL RATES.

United States Publishers Send Complaints to Washington. Washington, May 6.—The Postoffice Department is receiving complaints from publishers against enforcing the recent amendment to the postal convention with Canada. After hearing Chas. A. Munn, of The Scientific American, and Robert F. Collier of Collier's Weekly, to-day the Postmaster-General furnished a statement reviewing the history of the negotiations, and stating that as Canada would not consent to a continuance of the old rates, but two alternatives remained to revert to the conditions of the Postal Union and charge one cent for each two ounces of fraction thereof, or to effect a compromise. The latter was successful, but the best arrangement the department could make was for a one-cent rate for each four ounces or fraction thereof, bulk weight, prepaid by the sender. The statement adds that, "having full control of her own postal affairs, Canada has the right to determine the conditions upon which she will admit matter from other countries to her mails, and it is not within the power of the United States to secure an extension of time in the enforcement of the amended convention."

HINTS FROM EXPERT.

ARTHUR P. GREENE TELLS HOW HE STEALS DIAMONDS. Examines Stones on Trays and Simply Causes One or Two to Disappear—Arranges Those Left so That Clerk Will Not Miss Any. New York, May 6.—Fashionably dressed, easy of manner, and with the same nonchalance with which he probably would describe an exclusive social function in which he had taken part, Arthur Preston Greene made from the witness stand in United States Commissioner Shields' court yesterday a remarkable confession of how he had stolen many thousands of dollars' worth of jewels and precious stones from the London firms of Tiffany & Co., and London & Ryder.

Asked to give a detailed account of his exploits, Greene said he had left New York on the Baltic on February 18, and "visited" the two jewellery establishments on February 26 and 27, obtaining from Tiffany a diamond brooch and from London & Ryder a brooch with an emerald centre surrounded by five large diamonds, a loop diamond brooch containing five stones, a bar pin of eleven diamonds and a large unset diamond. "I was quite alone in both places," he continued in suave tones. "I asked for diamond brooches, and I was shown a tray of the gems. As I admired them, first from one position and then from another, I would shift them about on the velvet tray, deftly arranging them from side to side, and at the proper moment I simply caused one of the pins to disappear, arranging the others so that its absence would not be noticed."

WERE ATTACKED BY A WOMAN AND HER BULLDOG.

New York, May 6.—A despatch to the Herald from Sioux City, Ia., says: Expecting to meet her sweetheart, Miss Bessie Greenmeyer opened the front door of her home this evening for three masked robbers, who marched in with pistols drawn. Defying their threats to kill her if she made a sound, the young woman screamed loudly and gave battle. The girl's sister-in-law, Mrs. A. G. Greenmeyer, ran from her room upstairs with her bulldog, Tige, and promptly attacked the intruders. But for the danger of killing one of their own number, the men would have shot the dog, and possibly the woman, but the burglars fled as best they could to escape the teeth of Tige. The commotion aroused the neighbors, and the men, with some of their apparel missing, bolted for an alley, where the police later found their masks.

CUT TONGUE OUT.

ROSSI, THE TENOR, LOST HIS VOICE, AND TRIED TO COMMIT SUICIDE. Milan, May 6.—Arangelo Rossi, the tenor, who was with the Conried Opera Co., in San Francisco during the earthquake, and who as the result of the fright he experienced has not since been well, endeavored to commit suicide yesterday. This calamity weighed so deeply on his mind that he went crazy and yesterday he cut out his tongue with a pair of scissors. He was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

A HEAVY SEA.

Chief Officer of the Manchester Commerce Thrown Overboard From Bridge. St. John, N. B., May 6.—Capt. Barry, of the British steamer Manchester Commerce, who arrived to-day from Manchester, reports a peculiar accident on the voyage. On Saturday last in mid-ocean Chief Officer Davies, who was on the bridge, was sent overboard by a lurch of the steamer in a heavy sea. No one saw him go, but one of the stewards by a fortunate chance happened to reach the deck a minute later and saw a man in the water. The captain was hurriedly called from the chart room, and the steamer put about and a boat was lowered. After an hour Davies was rescued.

HORSE WENT DOWN.

London Man Had a Narrow Escape in New Brunswick. Moncton, N. B., May 6.—Mr. J. F. Sherlock, of the Sherlock-Manning Organ Company, London, Ont., who arrived here to-day, relates a thrilling experience yesterday in attempting to ford a stream between Rexton and Bouchette. When a few yards from shore the horse disappeared in the swift-running stream, and Mr. Sherlock and the boy in charge of the team jumped from the chestnut buggy, and Mr. Sherlock in water up to his neck, reached the horse's head, while the driver cut the harness and freed the animal, and after a hard struggle they reached the shore. The buggy was flung out later by a farmer.

A COUNT NOT A DESPERADO.

COUNT OTTO VON WALDSTEIN KILLED BY A POSSE.

San Francisco, May 6.—The Examiner says to-day: The supposed desperado who was killed at Willows on Monday night after a running fight with a posse of officers, has been identified as Count Otto Von Waldstein of Austria, scion of a noble family of history, nephew of a Cardinal, and of Prince Wartenburg, one of the richest men in Franz Joseph's Empire. The identification yesterday by Miss Mary Fitzgerald, of this city, who knew him well after the body of the young nobleman had been exhumed from the potters' field, was complete. Count Otto died in a fight with a posse, believing he was being attacked by a band of robbers. The posse thought it had run down Smith, the murderer of John Mareovich, of Oakland. Count Otto Von Waldstein left Austria and family six years ago because of a love affair. He fought through the Boer war. He wandered to America a poor man without a profession. He followed the reclamation service through the west. He quit work in Placer County the day before his death and was walking to San Francisco.

A BARONESS CONVICTED.

Louise De Massey Found Guilty of Manslaughter. New York, May 6.—"Baroness" Anisia Louise de Massey, the pattern designer, on trial for the killing of Gustav Simon, a shirtwaist manufacturer, was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree, with a recommendation of mercy. The jury, to whom the case was given at 3 o'clock this afternoon, returned a verdict a few minutes before midnight, and the prisoner was remanded to the Tombs until May 9th for sentencing.

Gustav Simon, a wealthy shirtwaist manufacturer, was shot in his office on November 19th, and died a few hours afterwards. Mme. de Massey, popularly known as "Baroness" de Massey, was employed by Simon as a shirtwaist designer, and was arrested while leaving the building in which Simon's office was located, a few minutes after the shooting. She acknowledged she had a disagreement with Simon over the question of wages, and had left the manufacturer's office a few minutes before her arrest, but has consistently maintained throughout her trial that she had nothing to do with the shooting.

BURGLARS FLED.

WERE ATTACKED BY A WOMAN AND HER BULLDOG. New York, May 6.—A despatch to the Herald from Sioux City, Ia., says: Expecting to meet her sweetheart, Miss Bessie Greenmeyer opened the front door of her home this evening for three masked robbers, who marched in with pistols drawn. BODY FOUND IN HARBOR.

Disappearance of Prescott Mariner at Ashland, Wis., Cleared Up. Belleville, Ont., despatch: The body of Captain Theobald Prescott, who disappeared suddenly at Ashland, Wis., last fall, was found floating in the harbor at that place. Such is the text of a telegram received to-day by his son Edward, of Belleville, and which cleared up the mystery of his father's sudden disappearance shortly before the close of navigation last fall. He was first mate on the steamer Nimrod, of the Giesbert Line, and when the boat was ready to leave Ashland on her last trip he was missing. Now thought to be tripped and fell into the harbor, Casey had been sailing the lakes from boyhood.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Got the Right Man. Alleged Perjuror From Auburn, N. Y., Arrested at Falls. Niagara Falls, Ont., despatch: Chief Constable of the Ontario police, arrested last evening a man supposed to be Herman Bartells, wanted at Auburn, New York for perjury. He was registered at the Clifton House as W. Warner, of Toronto. The man stoutly denies he is Bartells, the Auburn fugitive. However, the chief felt confident he had the right man and locked him up. He was later identified as the man wanted. The case of his watch is engraved "H. B."

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Climbing Fence When His Gun Discharged. Fergus despatch: While Ed Youngson was visiting Fort Ross, of Nichol, two miles from Fergus, he was enjoying a day's shooting in the bush near the house. He was out in the morning, had dinner, and returned to spend the afternoon in the woods. Not returning to supper time, a search was made, when he was found dead. While climbing over the fence his gun discharged, blowing the top off his head. Deceased was 46 years of age and unmarried. Dr. Robinson, coroner of Guelph, was notified, and arrived here to-day, but considered an inquest unnecessary.

It is notable, says the Montreal Gazette, that the make of cheese at present judging from the boardings, seems to be largely turning on white, which is in contrast with the conditions prevailing at the opening of last season when as a result of the decided scarcity of colored cheese in England and the premium on that class of goods, the factorymen at the beginning of the season confined their attention almost exclusively to colored, the natural result being a scarcity of white, which at the beginning of May commanded a premium of 8¢ per lb. over colored. This year the conditions seems to be reversed and the price of white if now either on a parity with colored or a shade high.
