should not want for company, so refused to submit. I may not enjoy these walks much longer."

"What are you going away?" I asked, in some alarm.

She shrugged her shoulders. "Per-haps! I don't know; certainly I shall have to go sooner or later, but I trust it may not be sooner. When I was shipwrecked here I was on my way to London, to take up my abode with some other relations. They are troubling me with questions, so I have sent up Annie to satisfy them as to my safety. Yet I suppose I shall some day have to go."

She tried to speak earnestly, yet I fancied I detected a ring of regret in her voice, and I quailed before the feeling of desolation which her words brought to my heart.

In that one sentence she had unwittingly shown to me myself—revealed to me the terrible secret which I had been vainly trying to crush from my heart. Even as she had influenced my boyhood, she influenced my manhood.

I loved her with the same unshaken him to accompany me. I knew I ing love which had filled my soul as a boy—loved her even while I felt that such a love might be the means of blighting my life. I knew that no good could come of it, for was she not so far removed from me as the moon was removed from the sea? And yet I felt at that moment that to love her so, be it only for one hour, was worth whole centuries of pain.

She walked with me as far as the cottage, and, peering at the little wicket gate, gave me her hand.

"Good-night, Mr. Trethewey," she said, softly; "it is not good-bye yet!"

Again I raised her hand, and pressed it to my lips; then I dimly remembered entering the cottage; but all seemed unreal save the one overwhelming fact that, fool that I was, I was the slave of Madeline Graham.

CHAPTER XVI.

The next day was Sunday. I rose early and put on my idling clothes, a dark suit of tweed. That I took more than usual pains with myself may be assumed from the fact that my aunt, as I strolled in to breakfast, started, and looked at me from head to foot in no little surprise. Then she sighed deeply, and glanced at my uncle, who also dressed for the day, in a suit of somber black, was sitting moodily by the fire.

For many days past, there had been noticeable a curious change in my uncle's manner. I scarcely observed it at the time, for my heart was too full of other and pleasanter impressions; but afterwards, when I came to think it over, I remembered vividly what had previously passed without remark. To begin with, he looked at least ten years older. His old obsequious laugh was gone; and his eyes had a hard, far-away look, very different to their former happy brightness. Sometimes, as we sat together, he would rise abruptly and pass out of the house, leaving the meal on the table untouched. My aunt seemed to forget her own trouble in watching his; and nothing could surpass the silent tenderness with which she waited upon him, never breathing a word of her solicitude, but showing in a hundred gentle ways her wifely sympathy and devotion.

On the present occasion we breakfasted very late; and as we sat, there came to me, faintly wafted over the distant moorland, the sound of the church bells. My uncle started, listened, and drew back his chair. Then, before we could say a word, he seized his hat, and left the house.

"Gaw after him, Hugh!" cried my aunt—sitting quickly, "No, stay! Maybe 'tis better to let 'em be. Oh, Hugh, Hugh, he's never been the same man since our Annie went frae hame!"

And the tears streamed down her worn cheeks as she spoke, and her voice was broken.

"Don't fret, aunt," I said, gently. "I'm sure Annie is all right—indeed, you know from her own letter that no harm has come to her."

"I'm naw fretting for Annie, it's for father!" was the reply. "I dawa know what there be upon his mind, but he's terrible changed; and what he want, he won't speak it even to me, but keeps it like a canker-worm, gnawing and eating out his life. I were watching him just now, and I knewed well what were passing through 'un's mind."

"What?"

"First he saw thee dressed and smart, and he thought how his Annie, too, would be sitting, ready for church o'Sundays; and then the bells sounded, and all the happy time came back upon poor father's heart. Oh, Hugh! if you and Annie had been different to you another, father would ha' been happy still; but I dawa blame 'ee, lad—it were no fault o' yours!"

But though she acquit-d me in words, there was to a manner a certain affectionate reproach.

"Aunt," I said, "I would out off my hand to put things right; but Annie never cared for me, and I—"

I paused awkwardly, knowing well that I had never loved my cousin.

"The Lawd will punish her!" cried my aunt, bitterly. "I'll ne'er forgive her? If she had stayed at hame like a decent lass, it would all ha' come right 't' the end. But she went w'arree a word, and wherever she be the Lawd will punish her!"

"Nay, nay," I said, rising and putting my hand on my aunt's shoulder—"don't be hard on poor Annie! She'll soon come back, and then all will be explained."

My aunt's manner changed again, and the tears streamed from her eyes anew.

"Oh, Hugh, my lad, think you our lass will ever come back?"

"Of course. 'Twas but a lass's whim for change; she'll soon tire and return. I'm sure no harm has happened to her, and she was always kind and loving."

"Saw she were, Hugh, saw she were! Hugh, will 'ee speak to father and try to cheer 'un?"

I nodded, then stooping, I kissed my aunt on the cheek. The Sabbath bells still rang from the distance, clearly and sweetly. The sun looked in through the window, and a sunbeam trembled on the parson floor.

"Shall you go to church, lad?" asked my aunt, as I moved to the door.

"Not to-day," I replied. "I'm going for a walk on the moor."

She looked at me keenly, and I saw that she guessed my secret; for the truth was, I was hoping and praying to meet with Madeline. With a heavy sigh, she turned away, and began removing the breakfast things.

Once outside, I breathed again. It was a calm, beautiful, sunny day, with just a touch of frost in the clear sparkling air. Far away the sea shone like silver.

I hesitated a moment, then walked down the road toward the lodge gate, toward the very spot where, years before, I had first met George Redruth. No one was about; and a Sabbath stillness lay everywhere; and the faint sound of the far-off bells only rendered it deeper.

I paused at the gate, and looked up the avenue. There was no sign of any one. I longed to walk right up to the great house and inquire for her I sought; but I lacked the courage. What was I, a common over-seer of the mine, to go following the footsteps of a proud lady? If I could meet her by accident, good and well; but I did not wish even her to suspect that I was so anxious for the meeting.

Perhaps she had gone on to church. If so, doubtless George Redruth was in her company. I fretted at the thought and turned away. At last, weary with waiting, I determined to seek forgetfulness in a long walk across the moor such as I had told my aunt I had intended to take.

Quitting the road, I followed a path which led right over the open moorland in the direction of the sea. The air was full of lightness and sweetness; but my spirits by this time had sunk to freezing-point. As to forgetting the one object of my thought, that was simply impossible. My soul was full of one image, which went with me at every step I took.

I had wandered about a mile when I perceived, by the side of a lonely moorland turn—one of those dark, turf-stained pools which cast back the light like polished ebony, and are often mysteriously deep—the figure of a man. He was sitting on a fragment of rock, and looking at the water.

Coming up quickly, I recognized my uncle.

Our eyes met, but he did not speak. Turning his head away, he looked down at the tarn.

"Why, uncle," I cried, "I thought you were at church!"

"Naw, lad," he answered, still with his head averted; "naw, lad, I were in no mood for to kneel and pray. I came out yar on the waste land, and I sat down yar, a-thinking."

I put my hand upon his shoulder.

"Uncle, you're not angry? With me, I mean?"

"Naw, lad," he replied, in the same low, listless tones. "I ha' no call to be angry, least of all wi' thee. Don't 'ee mind me—gang your gait, and les' me gae slaw."

But I remembered my promise to my aunt, and was determined not to leave him so. So I sat down by his side, saying:

"You've no reason to take it so much to heart, it's making trouble, I think, before it comes. I know well why you're fretting yourself so much. It's about Annie; but, take my word for it, Annie's all right, and will soon come back home."

He turned his face toward mine. How strangely wild and weary it seemed, set in its iron-grey hair.

"Sometimes I think, lad, as she'll never come back; and if she do, will she e'er again be the same little Annie I used to know? But it's naw that, my lad, it's naw that as is on my mind."

"Then what is it? Annie, I am sure, is well and happy; so what can it be?"

He looked at me long and steadfastly before he replied.

"If my lass went away, it mun ha' been because o' trouble; and if 'twere trouble, 'twere a kind that she were prone to tell even to her awn father. That letter my Annie writ came from a sore heart—maybe a heart some villain had broken; and what I think, lad, other folk think too—I ha' seen them whispering it to one another, and looking at me!"

"Of course I understood him well enough; for the same thought had often enough been in my own mind."

"Whatever has happened," I said, "be sure of one thing—Annie is not to blame! Uncle, do you know what I have often suspected? My cousin left us only for a little while, because she wished to be out of George Redruth's way."

"What d'ye mean?" he cried, starting, and trembling violently.

"There was something between them. He had won her heart, perhaps. Then, distrusting him, and knowing the great distance between their stations, she said to herself, 'I will go away for a time till I am cured, or till he has left the place.'"

My uncle frowned thoughtfully, and shook his head.

"Naw Hugh—there be more in't than that; but, whatever it be, I'm sure the young master had no hand in't. I know you never liked 'un, Hugh; but Master Jargo has a kind heart, and would never do a dirty deed. Why, I ha' knawed him and served him ever sin' he were a boy, and I'd trust 'un wi' my own life."

In pity for his trouble, I forbore to tell him all I know. Even had I done so, I believe his simple faith in the "master" would have remained firm.

"It's of summat else I'm thinking, lad," he said, after a pause; "summats that were tawid me 'other day by John Rudd. Three or four days after Annie went away, John Rudd he saw her in Falmouth, alawng wi' that Yankee chap, Johnson, the over-seer."

He noticed my start of surprise, and continued:

"They were standing talking together on the quay, and Annie were crying. Maybe there's summat in it, and maybe naw; but sin' the night she went, over-seer chap has been away—folk say, in London. Putting this and that together, Hugh, my lad, what do it all mean?"

I was as puzzled as himself; but I hastened to assure him of one thing—the utter impossibility of there being any intimate relationship between my cousin and the pseudo American. He looked somewhat incredulous, for in his simple eyes Johnson was a stylish and important person, very likely to find favor in the eyes of a young woman.

He rose wearily and held out his hand.

"Les' me to think it out, lad. My mind be fixed that summats 'twrang, and I shan't sleep till I knaw the truth, the whole Gospel truth. I ha' been praying and praying that things be nawt as I ha' feared, for if any living man had played the villain wi' my Annie, Lawd help him! Lawd keep him from the reach o' my hands!"

As I looked into his face, I could not help echoing the prayer. I felt certain, at the same time, that his fears and suspicions had shot greatly in excess of the truth. I knew that scandal was busy with poor Annie's name, and that much of the scandal must have reached his ears; but I could not yet bring myself to believe that Annie's flight betokened anything seriously wrong. Of one thing I felt, nevertheless, certain—that if wrong had been done, George Redruth was in some way responsible.

I stood and watched my uncle, as he wandered away in the direction of our home; then I turned my face again toward the sea, and wandered on. As I went, the moor grew open and wilder, strewn with great stones and boulders like fragments of the wreck of some past world; some high as menhirs translated thither in some prehistoric period of wondrous floods—when the arid waste on which I trod was the oozy bottom of a troubled sea.

Here and there fed wild cattle, black and horned, like those that haunted the woods of Ancient Britain. In solitary places the buzzard hovered, and by the brink of lonely tarns the heron waded, rising up as I approached, with sleepy waft of wing.

At last, after a ramble of several miles, I approached the sea margin. My path was now on the stony edge of low lying cliffs, at the base of which the waters thundered for ever. Here I found a lonely promontory of black granite, stretching out into the sea, and whitened at its limits by the chalky droppings of innumerable seabirds. On a rocky island a few yards from the extreme point of the promontory, sat a flock of cormorants; as I approached, they turned their snake-like necks, but did not rise.

The sun was warm and bright, the sea calm and shimmering like steel. I threw myself down on the rocks, and, with face upturned to the clear skies, closed my eyes. A large black-winged gull wheeled, screaming, over me, and then sailed slowly away. All I heard was the low murmur of the billows breaking sadly on the rocks beneath me—that sound which "deepens silence," and has such solemn meanings for the troubled human soul.

Suddenly another sound broke upon my ear. I started, and listened. The sound seemed to come from the sea itself, and was like a mormid singing. I rose quickly, and, crossing the rocks, walked in the direction from which the voice came.

Approaching the edge of the crags, I looked down, and saw beneath me in the very shadow of the promontory, a quiet creek. The rocks fell sounder, leaving a space of sandy beach, some twenty yards broad, and closed by the still waters of the sea, which broke in a thin fringe of white foam on a sunny slope of white pebble and golden sand.

It was a nook just such as the fabled merwomen or sirens might have chosen when the world was haunted, and such fair creations brightened the sunshine. But what am I saying? It was haunted still, and by one far sweeter and more winsome than any mere creature of a poet's fancy!

Lying like a basking seal on the loose shingle just under the rocks, and looking up at me with sparkling eyes, was the colored girl from Demerara; and standing on the water's edge, with her face looking seaward, was Madeline Graham.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 3, 1899.

The Coming Convention.

The meetings in connection with the fourth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which are to be held in this town on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next week, will no doubt be of an interesting character. Such leading workers as Mrs. A. J. Rutherford, Dominion president, Miss Charlotte E. Wiggins, Dominion Superintendent of Franchise, Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, National and World's organizer and lecturer, and others are expected to be present and will add interest to the meetings. Mrs. Rutherford is a native of Beaufort, Ontario, and was educated at the Institute of that city. For a number of years she held the position of recording secretary in the Dominion W. C. T. U. with acceptance, until the death of Mrs. Williams she was called to the position of larger trust and responsibility. She is a most pleasing speaker and her ability and grace appeal strongly to the listener. Miss Wiggins is very well known throughout Ontario in connection with W. C. T. U. and Y. P. S. C. E. work. She is winning in manner, most pleasing in appearance and an active speaker. Mrs. Williams is already known in Wolfville through her visit here some weeks ago. She has been lecturing and organizing during the past month in this province with great acceptance, and a number of new unions testify to her power in this her special line of work. An interesting feature of the convention will be a model L. T. L. conducted by Mrs. Fields. The exercises for the children may be expected to be especially attractive. The meetings will be held in the Baptist church morning, afternoon and evening during the three days, and a mass meeting is being arranged for on Sunday afternoon. We trust that the occasion of the visit of the White Ribboners to our town may be suitably marked, and that our citizens generally will do all to make their stay here pleasant.

Baptist Church Roll-call.

The annual roll-call and reunion of the Wolfville Baptist church which was observed on Monday evening, proved a most delightful season. Social tea in the vestry occupied the first part of the evening and at half past seven the members repaired to the upper room for the roll-call. The majority of the names were responded to and words of greeting read from many of the absent ones. Among the letters was one from Mr. J. W. Bares, the oldest surviving member in which he reviewed in an interesting manner his long and eventful connection with this church. The programme concluded with brief address by the pastor Rev. Dr. Trotter, Rev. Dr. Sawyer, and others, and the audience departed, feeling that "it was good for us to have been there."

On Tuesday evening the B. Y. P. U.

had a similar gathering in lieu of its weekly devotional service. After a social half hour the roll was called by the secretary and the members responded with a word of experience, a verse of Scripture, or "present," as they felt inclined. Coffee and other refreshment were served, and the pleasant evening closed all too soon.

Town Council Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the town council was held on Wednesday evening, with the Mayor and all the Councillors except Councillor Harvey present, with the Recorder.

Comdr. DeWitt, chairman of the police committee, presented a report, showing that the sum of $89.00 had been collected so far during the year in fines and license.

The following bills were read and ordered paid—

Table with 2 columns: Name and Amount. Includes T. P. Collins & Co. $7.83, C. H. Borden 1.00, Harry Schofield 17.00, Chas. H. Borden 2.80, Wm. Sutton 3.20, C. R. H. Starr 0.40, W. W. Cook 2.60, Est. A. L. Calloun 15.24, Town Clerk (postage) 2.97, Davison Bros. 20.75.

Considerable time was spent in discussing assessment and other matters relating to the town government, after which on motion the meeting was adjourned.

The Statistical Year Book of Canada for 1898 (14th year of issue) is to hand. The Year Book has always been a most useful publication, but under the able and careful supervision of Mr. Johnson, the Dominion Statistician, it is growing better and better. The large amount of information which it contains, and the succinct manner in which it is presented make the year book invaluable to news paper men and of the highest value to all Canadians who wish to be posted in the affairs of their country.

The death of Hon. Peter Mitchell occurred at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, on Wednesday last week. Mr. Mitchell was a native of Newcastle, N. B., and was for many years one of the political leaders of the Province. He was one of the fathers of Confederation and was Minister of Marine and Fisheries in the first Dominion government. He was 74 years of age.

Our enterprising contemporary, the Atlantic Weekly of Dartmouth, issued a fine number last week containing illustrations of scenes in and about Dartmouth with portraits of many of the leading citizens of that progressive town.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

I feel it to be a duty as well as a pleasure to say what OZONE has done for me. I had suffered intensely for seventeen years with acute Rheumatism. I frequently had to walk the floor all night as the pain was so great. Two months ago I heard of and commenced taking OZONE, and have had but little pain since.

Other members of my family have taken OZONE and received great benefit.

An October Wedding.

HARRISON—ROACH. The home of Mr. J. Frederick Roach, Clarence, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Wednesday morning, October twenty-fifth, at nine thirty o'clock, when the assembled relatives and friends witnessed the marriage of his youngest daughter, Clarissa S., of last year's Freshman class of Acadia, to Charles Ashley Harrison, of Mangerville, Sunbury Co., N. B. To the beautiful music of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, the bride and groom were led by the best man, Mr. Howard H. Roach, brother of the bride and a member of the class of '99, with the groom. Then came the maid of honor, Miss Edna Corning, of B. S. P., followed by the brides with her father. The party took their places in a bower of green decorated with white, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. M. P. Freeman, of Biltown, uncle of the bride, assisted by the pastor, Rev. E. L. Steves.

After congratulations the party was served with refreshments. The bride was charming in her dress of white organza with veil of tulle fastened by white flowers, and wore a handsome brooch of opals and pearls, the gift of the groom. The bride's gifts to her maid consisted of stick-pins set with pearls.

The presents were numerous and beautiful and were a slight token of the esteem in which the bride was held by her friends. The choir, of which she has been a member, giving a valuable pickle dish in silver and cut glass.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison left on the afternoon express for Halifax and St. John en route for their future home in Margerville, N. B.

DEAR EDITOR,—Perhaps you would like to hear from an uncle more, Autumn has come at last and the crops are about gathered in. Potatoes are a fair crop, slightly affected with rot.

The most stirring business is milling. Moore Horn mills are doing their best on straw this year. Messrs. Fallerton are always on the rush for bran.

A. D. Schofield, foreman of Fallerton's mills, has a very fine colt, by De Francis. A trotter, you bet!

Daniel H. Scott, of North Hanson, Mass., is visiting his daughter Mrs. A. D. Schofield. He is accompanied by his son, George H. Scott, of Rumford Falls, N. B.

Mrs. Thomas Long is visiting her sister, Mrs. O'Leary, in Mass. She expects to arrive on Saturday next.

Game is quite plentiful, but who dare carry a gun and game bag and pay fines. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor I am Yours for ever, A MOUNTAINEER.

Handsome War Maps Free.

Canadians are showing a keen interest in the Transvaal war. The Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, have placed their readers in a position to intelligently understand the situation by sending each reader of that great paper a handsome colored map, with complete information regarding all points mentioned in dispatches. This map will be followed up by another to be issued by the Family Herald and Weekly Star to its readers at the close of the present troubles; a comparison of the two will clearly show what Great Britain has gained by the war. Family Herald subscribers will no doubt appreciate the publishers' generosity, which cost, it is said, thousands of dollars. The Family Herald sends never to forget their subscribers. It is no wonder they have such a large number.

Evangeline Division celebrated its 21st anniversary Monday evening. A goodly number of members and their guests were present, but the Division room was not crowded as on former occasions. The entertainment was of the usual kind and of average quality. The W. P. Rev. W. H. Langille, gave an address of welcome and a reading, then a brief history of the Division was given by one of the older members and this was followed by a number of readings, recitations, dialogues, and music by Miss Florence Harris and her brother Walter, and Miss Fulton, of Acadia Villa School. In the meantime an enthusiastic brother, with the help of a few sisters, had prepared hot coffee, sandwiches and cake, and after indulging in these good things and a little candy the Division sang the closing ode. Evangeline is doing very well—a number have been initiated this month.

Miss Annie Patterson is visiting friends in Boston and New York. She is missed in choir and church and social circle. Miss Florence Harris, and Miss Fulton, of Acadia Villa, are supplying her place at the organ.

The Methodists are planning for one of their celebrated "goose suppers" at the full of the moon, Wednesday, the 15th inst.

The weather during the whole of October was simply perfect, and our farmers have had plenty of time to harvest their crops in the best of order—all are in except turnips. The bulk of the apple crop has been sold at a high figure, and potatoes are now going to market at a fair price. It has been a fair year for farmers. All the cattle were driven from the dike on Wednesday. The fine weather and good feed send them to the barn in fine condition.

A few friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Patterson, Tuesday evening to remind them of their "crystal wedding."

Miss Sluwer entertained a number of her young friends in Grand Pre and Hortonville Tuesday evening.

Miss Josephine Havelis remained with friends in Grand Pre until Monday, and then went to Windsor and across the river by boat to Burlington to visit her friend Mrs. (Rev.) Geo. W. Whitman in her new home.

The boys celebrated "Hallowe'en" in a quiet way by blocking and "dressing up" and calling on the neighbors for a little treat. A bit of harmless fun is all right.

The Agricultural Societies will hold the annual meeting Tuesday, Nov. 7th. Anqueton is getting a scorching. F. L. lowing the burning of Parker's barn, the shed at Walter's brick yard and went out at 8 a.m. Tuesday, about noon. None of the other buildings or machinery were burnt. The burning of the kiln of bricks had been completed, and the bricks were not damaged. Loss estimated at $400 to $500—no insurance.

The fine weather of October has gone with the last day of the month—"Hallowe'en"—and November has come with a tempestuous gale of wind and rain, but farmers are ready for it and cattle are gathered home at the "byres."

Wednesday, Nov. 1.

D. A. B. Steamer Changes. On and after Saturday, 4th November, the Steamship sailings of the Dominion Atlantic railway steamers will be as follows:

Wolfville Division, S. of T., is to hold a "rally" next Monday evening in their hall. All the members are earnestly requested to be present. A good time is planned for.

Halloween passed off with the usual festivities. Considerable harmless fun was indulged in by the young people but so far as we have been able to learn nothing severely occurred.

A number of social gatherings were held in town on Halloween. A party of young people drove up from Windsor and made a "surprise" party at the residence of Mr Geo. L. Starr.

The Royal Hotel will in future be heated by hot water. This popular hostelry is continuously making improvements so as to be up to the times, and is winning its way in popular favor with the travelling public.

We have received a very tastefully printed announcement of the marriage of a former Wolfville boy, Mr Charles R. Higgins, now cashier of the Astoria National Bank, Astoria, Oregon, to Miss Maud, daughter of Mr and Mrs Daniel K. Warren. The marriage took place on the 18th ult. The ACADIAN extends best wishes.

The reception given by the Y. W. and Y. M. C. A. of Acadia, last Friday evening in College Hall, was a very pleasant occasion. The hall was prettily decorated and furnished and presented a very pretty appearance. The guests were received by Mr Glendinning and Miss Clark. The museum was thrown open and received a large number of visitors.

The store occupied by Messrs E. B. Bishop & Son has undergone quite a change and presents a much improved appearance. Part glass has been put in and the building has been thoroughly re-decorated. This is the store formerly occupied by the late James S. Morse and one of the best in town. The stand is ago of one and the Messrs Bishop will no doubt do a remunerative business there.

At the coming service last Sunday in P. P. Martin's church, the pastor, Rev. P. M. MacDonnell, tendered his resignation to the congregation at the end of the service. We understand that Mr MacDonnell is going to Scotland for some time, in accordance with plans made some time ago here. Three years ago he was born in the same place. His departure will regret his departure from our town.

A Wolfville Boy Wedded.

The wedding of Mr Chas. R. Higgins and Miss Maud Warner, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents, in Warrenton, Wednesday afternoon, was one of the chief social events of the season. The appointments were charming. The spacious parlors were very tastefully decorated in woodland green, many Indian baskets being used with artistic effect. The ceremony was simple but beautiful. Rev. Henry Marcotte pronouncing the impressive words that united bride and groom. The bride was becomingly attired in dainty white organdie and carried an arm bouquet of exquisite roses. The countless elegant gifts were arranged in the library, mute testimonials of love and esteem. After the ceremony delicious refreshments were served in the dining room, the tables being charmingly decorated with smilax and delicate ferns. Mr and Mrs Higgins took the evening train, going to Monterey to spend their honeymoon. They will return about the 1st of November and will make Astoria their home. Mr Charles R. Higgins is well and favorably known in Astoria business and society circles. He was formerly in the employ of the People's Bank of Halifax, serving that institution in its several branch houses until he was attached to the Quebec branch. In 1893 he accepted a position as assistant cashier in the Astoria National Bank, which situation he still retains. The bride is one of Astoria's most popular and accomplished young ladies, and is the youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs D. K. Warren. After completing a course of study at Riverside Seminary, B. S. P., she gave her attention to music, studying with Soubirou of Denver, and later with the best teachers on this coast.—The Morning Astorian.

The Salvation Army.

THE LIFE OF THESE SELF-SACRIFICING WORKERS OPEN ONE OF HARDSHIP.

While on Duty Capt. Ben. Bryan Was Stricken With a Supposed Incurable Disease and Forced to Relinquish the Work—He Has Now Recovered His Health.

From the News, Alexandria, Ont. The life of a Salvation Army worker is very far from being a sinecure. Their duties are not only arduous, but they are called upon by the regulations of the Army to conduct out-door meetings at all seasons and in all kinds of weather.

workers frequently gives way. Capt. Ben. Bryan, whose home is at Maxville, Ont., is well known through his former connection with the Army, having been stationed at such important points as Montreal, Toronto, Guelph and Brockville, in Canada, and at Schenectady, Troy, and other points in the United States.

The story of his illness and subsequent cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills reads like a miracle, and is given in his own words as follows: "While stationed at Deseronto, in July, 1897, I was attacked with what the doctors called 'Chronic Spinal Meningitis'.

The Rev. Ebenezer Enkie, one of the fathers of the Secession Church, was at the commencement of his ministry settled in the moorland parish of Portmouk, in the county of Kintyre.

"What tell'st ye that?" said the minister. "What tell'st me, sir? It's the clash of the country-side."

"Ay, but, Margaret," said Mr Enkie, "the clash of the country's no' aye to be depended on. We shouldn't lend an ear to idle rumors. Has ye nae better authority for saying that I'm gann to leave ye than country clatter?"

"The Voice in the Sick Room." Speak in low, cheerful but perfectly distinct tones. If there is anything to be said which the invalid must not hear, go outside of the room to say it, for there is nothing which so irritates the sick person as whispering.

Eggs for all Iils.

For countless ages the long-suffering hen has been an overworked creature. Her humble occupation of laying eggs has brought her little glory, and yet she has never complained. She has cheerfully performed her duties, and when old age has incapacitated her for further usefulness as an egg producer, she has accepted with fortitude her fate as the central figure in the homely pot-pie or the enigmatical boarding-house stew.

Now, however, fame promises to perch on her brow, and her faithfulness to duty is about to be rewarded. A French chemist has discovered that hens can not only digest iron easily, but that it is transmitted to the albumen in their eggs.

Here are untold possibilities for the hen. She may eventually drive the manufacturer of pills and powders out of business entirely. If we have dyspepsia the hen will lay an egg for us that will cause us to feel at peace with all the world.

THE GOOD HEALTH

Promised by Paine's Celery Compound.

Nothing Vague or Indefinite About Results.

There is nothing indefinite about the kind of "good health" that is promised by Paine's Celery Compound and that is so strongly vouched for by letters that come from our best people.

Every man or woman whose nervous strength is overtaxed, or whose life is a busy one, and full of mental worries, will soon feel the invigorating and vitalizing effects of one or two bottles of nature's health-giver, and see his or her health improve after the first dose of this great of all remedies.

As a matter of course, the real sharp man cuts the meek one. Purchase the "blue book" is the book that is never read.

When you deliver a chair for the repair man to bottom, you should give him a receipt for it.

Behold the fool saith: "Put not all these eggs in one basket," which is but a manner of saying: "Scatter your money and your attention." But the wise man saith: "Put all your eggs in one basket and watch that basket."

The English is the father of countless jokes. We borrow one of the youngest from an exchange.

Some—Railway carriage on the Midland railway. Enter a colonel with some bag and case of guns.

Dr. T. J. Barnard, widely known for his work among the homeless children of England, recently said: "I have lived in the East End and worked there for thirty-two years. I did not begin my work on a temperance basis.

Dr. Dio Lewis was wont to tell the fatherly story of his own mother's hardships.

"There was a house full of us little folks, and my father was given over to strong drink. Every day my mother went up to the garret after he had left the house, and when she came back to us her face was white and her eyes light that we knew she had been talking with God."

Here are some hints toward health: Drink less—breathe more. Eat less—chew more. Cloth less—bathe more. Ride less—walk more. Sit less—dig more. Worry less—work more. Waste less—give more. Write less—read more. Prate less—practice more.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

A small delinquent who had been exported to ask God to make him a good boy, prayed, "Please, Lord, help me to be good, and if at first you don't succeed, try, try again!"

"You've got an awful cold, Smithers. Why don't you go to the doctor and get him to give you something for it?" "Give me something for it? Man, he can have it for nothing, and welcome."

"Will you trust me, Fanny?" he cried, passionately, grasping her hand. "With all my heart, Augustus, with all my soul, with all myself," she whispered, nestling on his manly bosom.

"My dear, I should most certainly urge the propriety of a second dividend."

"You are wanted around the corner!" exclaimed the citizen, confidently. The policeman laughed aloud. "I know better," he replied. "When I am wanted I can't be found. Since I have been found I can't possibly be wanted!"

An Ohio editor says that hay fever is caused by kissing grass widows. A Missouri editor says it is caused by a grass widow kissing a fellow by moonlight.

Some—Railway carriage on the Midland railway. Enter a colonel with some bag and case of guns.

There's one thing about the north pole," asserted the returned explorer emphatically. "The crowd leaned eagerly forward to learn the result of his expedition."

"Francis," said the little girl's mamma, who was entertaining callers in the parlor, "you came down stairs so early that you could be heard all over the house. Now go back and come down stairs like a lady."

"No, dear, I am glad you came down quietly. Now don't let me see you here if you again not to come down quietly. If you can't be heard all over the house, you will. Now tell these ladies how you managed to come down like a lady the second time while the first time you made so much noise."

Mark Twain on the Jew.

The Jew is not a disturber of the peace of any country. Even his enemies will concede that. He is not a loafer, he is not a sot, he is not a rioter, he is not a quarrelsome. In the statistics of crime his presence is conspicuously rare—in all countries.
