A Great Intrigue,

Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER II.

Lucille paused for a moment outside the drawing room window, to regain her composure, and to wipe away the traces of the tears which had sprung to her eyes so suddenly. She knew that Marie Verner's sharp eyes would detect the signs of her emotion, and would instantly question her, and for some unexplained reason, Lucille shrank from a recital of the extraordinary scene which she had witnessed, and her interview with the young man which had followed it. She felt half ashamed of her desire to conceal it. It seemed almost well, romantic and sentimental, and Lucille had a horror of the sentimental. What did it amount to, after all? She had by chance been a witness in a quarrel between the Marquis of Merle and a kindly gamekeeper, and afterwards the gamekeeper had begged her to take him into her employ. There wasn't much in that!

"I am over-tired and excited!" she said, looking over the lawn, and laughing faintly. "What fools women are! If the man had not been so handsome, I—I shouldn't have made such an idiot of myself!"

As she spoke, there rose before her the vision of the stalwart, graceful form, standing above her, with one upraised hand, invoking a blessing upon her. She felt the beautiful, masterful eyes fixed on her, heard the deep, musical voice, and she tried to laugh again, but failed.

"No, I won't tell Marie," she murmured. "She would never cease to 'chaff' me, as she calls it! Besides, perhaps I have done a foolish thing, after all. The young man may be a bad character—a poacher, or something worse—and the marquis may have good reason for advising him to leave the Court. Well, if I have done a foolish thing, I must abide by it! I've given my word, and I'll keep it!" and the decision brought her a strange sense of relief and satisfaction.

On the way to her room Lucille paused on the great staircase, and looked out through an open pane of the stained window, and her glance fell upon the tower at the end of the terrace, and the tree beneath which she had stood, and Harry Herne had kissed the hem of her dress. Was it fancy, or a trick of the moonlight, or was there really a stalwart figure standing looking up at the house?

With a strange leap of her heart, she turned and went hastily into her room, and almost started guiltily as she saw Susie arranging the toilet table.

Cheap boarding schools do not provide a lady's maid for the pupils, and Lucille, who had never had a servant in her life until now, when she had an army of them, paused irresolutely. "Do you want anything, Susie?" she asked, in her sweetly musical voice. Susie's round blue eyes developed into blue saucers.

"Oh, yes, miss. I've to do your hair, and wait on you, please!" she said.

"Very well," said Lucille, resignedly; "I didn't know. I never had a maid before. And have you lived here all your life, Susie? Here, in Darracourt, I mean."

"Yes, miss," said Susie, plying the brush swiftly and carefully; "I was born here. Father is one of your tenants, miss. He's got the Tarn Farm."

"And so your father is one of my tenants? Have I got any other farms?"

Susie stared at the beautiful face reflected in the glass.

"Oh! don't you know, miss?" she exclaimed, with respectful wonder.

"No," replied Lucille, amused at her surprise. "I don't know anything, scarcely. I mean of the estate? You know, Susie, that it is only a week ago that I learned it was mine, and there has been no time to find out all the particulars."

"I see, miss! Oh, Darracourt is a big place. It's the largest place in the country, and then, Merle Hall, where the marquis lives, comes next, but it's not a quarter so large as Darracourt."

"I suppose the marquis is very popular here, Susie?"

"Popular!" repeated Susie, thoughtfully. "People like him, you mean, miss? I—I don't know. You see, miss, he doesn't go about much. People say he's proud, and it's because he's poor. I don't know why that should be," she added, innocently. "And that's why he lives alone and looks so pale and thoughtful. But he's very grand and polite when he does speak. Father says that he can never forget that Darracourt ought to belong to him—oh, I beg your pardon, miss!" she broke off, frightened and aghast.

Lucille colored for a second, then she smiled, reassuringly.

"Never mind, Susie," she said, gently. "You have not offended me. It is natural that the marquis should regret losing so beautiful a place."

"Yes, miss; my tongue does run so."

"Nerviline" Cures Cramps Ends Misery Instantly

NO REMEDY SO SPEEDY OR EFFICIENT.

A real cramp cure? Yes, a real one—in a twinkling the cramp is a dead one, and the last squirm is over, once you get a stiff dose of Nerviline on the inside. This isn't mere talk—it's a solid truthful fact. No other remedy—not a single one—will cure cramps so quickly and harmlessly as Nerviline. It hits the spot in a jiffy and eases a heap of misery.

"Last Saturday night my stomach felt like an infernal machine," writes T. P. Granger from Hartford. "I was awakened from a sound sleep and found myself suffering the worst kind of cramps. I was so doubled up I could hardly cross the room. I had used Nerviline before for the same thing and took a real good dose. Once I felt the warm, soothing sensation of Nerviline in my stomach, I knew I was all right. It finished the cramps—just one single dose."

Sickness at night is rendered a nightmare of the past if Nerviline is handy. It may be earache, toothache or cramps. Nerviline, in every case will cure at once and save calling the doctor. Nerviline is a family physician in itself. The large 50c. family size bottle, of course, is most economical. Small trial size costs a quarter. All dealers sell Nerviline.

will stand in your place, as it were. The welfare of the estate depends "It was my fault," said Lucille. "You can go now. Will you call me quite early—at seven o'clock, please?"

"Yes, miss," said Susie; and with a gentle "good-night!" Lucille dismissed her.

At eight o'clock the great bell rang, and Lucille made her way to the breakfast room. Mr. Head was standing by the window, with a long paper in his hand, and he came forward to greet her, with that deferential friendliness which a lawyer extends to wards a rich client.

"You are an early riser, Miss Darracourt," he said.

"We used to get up at six at St. Malo," said Lucille, simply.

"I am fortunate in finding you here so early. My train goes at half-past nine, and there were some few matters I wished to speak to you about. As you are aware, Miss Darracourt, I, and my father before me, have been the legal advisers of your respected uncle. I think I may say that I was something more than that—I may claim to have been his friend."

"Yes."

"In my position as legal adviser I have become fully acquainted with all the details of this large—I may call it vast—estate. Until now, I have refrained from troubling you, knowing well how unfair it would be to expect you, in the first moments of your accession to the property, to listen to dry particulars. I do not intend to inflict them upon you here now. They are set down as concisely as possible in this paper, which I now hand to you. Therein you will find a list of the securities, and, in fact, of the whole of the property which your uncle bequeathed you. There are other particulars which, perhaps, I had better hand to Mrs. Dalton, who will, I presume, undertake the management of the house?"

"I am not sure," she said. "Would it be right—proper—usual for her to do so?"

The reply rather surprised him.

"I apprehend that you would not care for the trouble of the thing. The house is immense, the number of servants very large—a list of them with their salaries was one of the things I intended placing in Mrs. Dalton's hands."

"Give it to me, please," she said, quietly.

He took a heap of papers from his pocket, and, selecting one, handed it to her.

"There is a still more important matter in connection with the establishment," he added. "Your uncle was a man so full of energy that he did not find even the management of this large estate too much occupation for him. But is it impossible for you, a lady, young, and—and—"

"Inexperienced," said Lucille, with a smile.

"Yes, inexperienced, to attempt to cope with it. It will be necessary that you should have a steward."

"What is that?" she asked.

"A general manager, a person who upon him. I ought to have engaged a steward, but I have had so much to do that I have not had time."

"You have been very kind, and must have worked very hard," said Lucille. "I must have a steward, then." She looked down the list of servants. "Are they all here?" she asked.

"Yes, all," he said. "Why do you ask, Miss Darracourt?"

A faint blush rose to her cheeks, and she kept her eyes fixed upon the paper; the next moment, ashamed of her slight embarrassment, she raised her eyes and looked at him, calmly, and steadily.

"There is one other I have—heard of, whose name is not here, I think."

"Indeed!" he said; "then, that is the butler's fault. Permit me to add it to the list."

"His name is Harry Herne," she said, quietly.

Mr. Head was almost guilty of a start, and he looked at her strangely, as he said, rather coolly:

"He is not a servant on the establishment, Miss Darracourt."

"I understood that he was always here," she said.

Mr. Head was silent a moment.

"That is partly true," he said, with marked constraint. "The young man was a favorite of your uncle's, and—well, yes, I think he spent most of his time at Darracourt. He was, no doubt, useful to your uncle."

"Then he would probably be useful to me," said Lucille.

"Just so," assented Mr. Head, tamely. "Exactly. Ahem!" He folded and unfolded the list. "I'll put his name down, if you like," he said; "but in what capacity?"

Lucille was silent. There was something mysterious about this Harry Herne.

"Give me the list, please," she said. "I will think the matter over."

Mr. Head handed the list back, feeling rather confused and bewildered.

"There is not much else," he said. "Oh, yes. I have paid into the local bank here a sum which I deemed sufficient for your present wants. Three thousand pounds. Here is the checkbook, Miss Darracourt. If you want any more—I mean ready cash—you have but to write to me—or telegraph. I will present to you shortly a statement giving the total of your income from various sources. It will prove to be a very large one, your uncle having lived well within his means."

"I shall not know what to do with it," said Lucille.

Mr. Head smiled.

"The Court will consume a large portion of it," he said. "You, no doubt, will have a house in town, and—well, there are plenty of ways of getting rid even of so large an income as yours, Miss Darracourt." He glanced at his watch. "We have still a quarter of an hour," he said. "Would you like to walk in the grounds? Shall I show you the stables? They are considered fine. Your uncle spent an enormous sum upon them, and there is a capital stud."

Lucille said she should be glad to go with him, and they passed out.

"I have no doubt you find the Court rather lonely at present," he remarked.

"It is so large," she answered.

Divorced Life

The Dark Side

Marian's glimpse of the girl speaker on Madison Square, and of her disappearance later with her fashionable and scoffing sister, afforded Marian for the first time a vivid consciousness of some of the forces that were tugging at the foundations of the social and economic order.

The dramatic feature of beholding one of the daughters of the rich engaged in trying to lead the downtrodden toward economic salvation stirred Marian strangely. It jolted her horizon into wider and fuller sweep. It impressed upon her one phase of modern life which she had never seen before. Attached to the episode on Madison Square was an invisible string destined to draw her into curious byways, to show her close-range glimpses of black and almost hopeless pictures of life.

She got off the subway deep in reflection, and started for her abode. Approaching her on the sidewalk, she soon saw the figure of a young man, dilapidated of attire and glum of countenance, an alien creature indeed on this well-kept residential street. To Marian's great astonishment, the man halted as he drew opposite her, and said:

"Excuse me, lady, but would you help a fellow? I'm all in. If I could raise the coin for a bite to eat somewhere, I could brace up an' keep on lookin' for a job."

Marian gave him a searching look and judged that he was telling the truth. Then she did a strange thing for her. "Surely, I'll be glad to help you," she answered. She reached into her purse, took out a new dollar bill, and handed it to her accoster. The latter, dumbfounded at her generosity, stood staring at the currency without making a move to take it. "It's yours," smiled Marian. "Take it. You need it more than I do. I hope it will help you back on your feet. Hard to find work, you say?" she added, as he accepted the unexpected gift, with stumbling thanks.

"Force," he answered. "Rode the feds all the way from Albany, where I got dumped out of work."

"Live in Albany?" inquired Marian. "Used to. The wife an' I had a nice little place. Couldn't hold on to it, though, when the railroads began layin' men off an' cuttin' down hours. The girl finally flew the coop. Said she couldn't stand the gat any longer. I don't blame her for wantin' to be free. She used to tell me that if I ever started drinkin', she'd hike me. Well, I started—I'll be honest with you."

The man talked dully, with apparently no more than an impersonal interest in the things he was recounting. Then he passed on out of her life, but Marian thought of him often. He proved to be one of the forces which helped level her eye with greater fixedness upon the poverty which scars the faces of society. She shuddered at the thought of innumerable wives who must be losing faith in their husbands and leaving them, as a result of the blows of unemployment.

She began to understand something of the fimsiness of her own cause for divorce, when viewed in the light of the utter and ghastly want into which an industrial depression plunged armies of struggling families.

"Well, have you had an interesting day?" asked Mrs. Kerr, keeper of the boarding house, as Marian passed her on the way up stairs to her room. "Extremely," answered Marian seriously.

"That's good," gushed the landlady. "There's nothing like little old New York. You can't beat our shops even in Paris, and say, aren't the crowds simply marvellous?"

"No, they're terrible," said Marian, feeling to her room.

As she stood before her mirror, making ready for dinner, Marian thought of the hunger that was abroad in New York at that hour, and longed for a place on the fring line of those who were struggling to improve conditions.

Jacques Furnier.

Red McShee says:

The O's an' Mc's an' other Turks have long glommed the whole darn works in baseball's glory book. The Dutch, of course, have copped a share an' other nations here an' there have libbed in for a look. But France held down the ol' back seat an' had to use her good two feet an' limp the S. R. O. King Larry was the only one who got a look-in at the fun—then he began to slow.

But France is pushin' front again. Her onward stuff got started when the Fourrier came out. They tell me he's one classy man, first-basin' for the White Sox clan an' starrin' every bout. When he came down from Montreal he didn't get a chance at all 'cause Chase was on the bag. Jacques warned the bench until last June, when Chase got playin' 'cow-an-moon'—you know, the Fed jump gag.

Jacques went to first, an' right away Boss Callahan bemoaned the day he'd ever mourned for Chase. This husky little son of France was only waitin' for a chance to put France back in place. He leads his teammates with the stick an' in the field makes Chase look sick. The Sox are on the climb. Ol' France is playin' 'em in luck to have this demon French Canuck to fill out Larry's time.

"Britons, Hold Your Own."

The sooner it is recognized that the real objective of German ambition is overseas dominions where the German colonists can emigrate, the sooner will it be realized that the British Empire is fighting for its very existence. Less than twenty years ago Germany began to build up its Navy. Then Germany was a negligible power at sea. To-day she is formidable. The advent of the Dreadnoughts which were rendered inevitable by the experience of the sea fight in the Far East where Togo was victorious gave Germany a chance to start building big ships on a big scale. Great Britain has had to strain every nerve to outpace her. To-day however, she is only second to Britain, and had Britain not intervened she could have easily crippled the French Navy and would have endeavoured to seize on Belgium, Holland and Denmark and obtain complete control of the Baltic Sea and the Eastern seaboard of the North Sea. The peril of the British Empire would have been increased a hundred fold. For within a few years she would have been enabled to confront Britain on the sea and if successful crush her at home by her millions of trained troops. The ultimate objective of Germany is the British Empire. She has enormous resources at home, and an overflowing population which has been emigrating very extensively to the United States, Canada, Australia and other British Colonies. A short time ago, a Newfoundland who was travelling in South Germany told us that last year he was in conversation with a professional man there who took him for an American. In the course of the conversation the German complained that the Kaiser was doing nothing. Asking him what he expected the Kaiser to be doing, he said, well, there's England and her colonies. They are rich and have room for Germans. The Newfoundland then enquired what that had to do with it. He replied, it had everything to do with it. They wanted British wealth and the British Colonies, and they intended to have them. The Newfoundland then asked the German, who told him he was one of the many Socialists of the German professional and middle class, whether the sentiment he was expressing was held by many others in the city. In reply, the German answered in the affirmative and told him it was shared by nine out of ten men of his class. The Newfoundland disclosed that he was a Britisher and a loyal one at that. The German hurriedly closed the conversation and left him. This conversation, incidental as it was, however, is typical of the thought which has been directing German policy for the past twenty years. Here is what the New York Independent said recently:-

"When Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, in his Manchester speech on the 13th of last October, renewed his proposal in behalf of the British Government that Great Britain and Germany agree to take a year's holiday in battleship building, Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, naval secretary of state for Germany, replied:-

The German navy has a purely defensive function, and no aggressive purpose.

Yet within less than a year Germany declares a war so stupendous as to stagger humanity, while the whole armed camp of Europe leaps to the challenge.

We must all prepare for a severe struggle and prepare to go manfully through the period of adversity, which must mark the United action is essential. We read of Irish Nationalist crowds cheering soldiers in Dublin bound for the front, in the midst of their sorrow for the Dublin outrage. We have been stirred by Redmond's patriotic words and Carson's burning hatchet. We have heard of Orangemen joining Nationalist Volunteers and the latter marching side by side with Ulster Volunteers and Orange Processions carrying the Green Flag as typical of a United Ireland. Newfoundland will not be backward in burying the hatchet of local politics. A truce is practically now declared. Let the Legislature meet and the Opposition will vie with the Government in every reasonable measure to do our duty to the Empire, to insure our trade, and to provide for distress which war conditions are certain to entail. A truce to local politics. The Empire is at stake.

Both sections of the Opposition, through the official leader of the Opposition, Mr. Kent, have conveyed to the Premier their intention to do their

Change of Program

AT ROSSLEY'S.
To-night there will be an entire change of Programme. The Rossleys with Percy Orth and Joe Burkhart will present another of their laughable farce comedies which the people like so much. The pictures are very excellent and last night the audience was very enthusiastic over the pictures showing the wonderful guns on one of the battleships; the King addressing his troops; the air ships to be used in warfare were loudly applauded. On Monday next one of the finest two reel films ever witnessed in St. John's, and released May thirteenth.

Wedding Bells.

CLARK-REES.
A pretty wedding was celebrated at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, at 3 p.m. yesterday, when Miss Daisy, daughter of Mr. John H. Clark, clerk in charge of the G.P.O., was united in marriage to Mr. Alfred Rees, of the Postal Telegraphs. The bride who looked charming in a dress of cream silk, with pearl trimming, veil and orange blossoms and carrying a beautiful bouquet of roses and asparagus fern, entered the church leaning on the arm of her father, and attended by her sister Miss Ada E., and Miss Louise Noonan, as bridesmaids, both looking very pretty in dresses of pale blue silk with hats to match and carried bouquets of roses, sweet peas and fern. The groom was attended by Mr. F. R. Clark, brother of the bride. Prof. Allen presided at the organ and after the ceremony, the bridal party left the church to the strains of the Wedding March and proceeded to Weston Cottage, the residence of the bride's father, where a reception was held, only the immediate relatives being present. At 5.30 the party drove to the railway station, where amid the congratulations of hosts of friends and showers of rice the happy couple left for Gambo, where the honeymoon will be spent. The young couple are very popular as the large number of beautiful presents received by the bride testify.

The Fall of Four Great Heroes.

History records that Alexander the Great, who was the pupil of Aristotle at fourteen, and who reigned over the Macedonians at sixteen, while his father was absent, and who succeeded Philip when he was nineteen, after climbing the heights of his ambitions fell from his lofty eminence. Alexander, with his temples bound in chaplets dipped in the blood of countless nations looked down upon a conquered world and wept that there was not another one for him to conquer, then set a city on fire and died amid scenes of debauch.

Hannibal, one of the greatest soldiers who ever lived, after having passed the Alps, to the amazement of Rome, and having successfully fought and conquered the armies of the mistress of the world, stripping three bushels of gold rings from the fingers of her slaughtered warriors, fled from his country. He died by poison administered by his own hand, unintentionally, in a foreign land.

Caesar, considered as a general, a statesman, and a ruler, has had few equals and probably no superiors. After conquering eight hundred cities and dyeing his hands in the blood of millions of his enemies, after having pursued to death the only rival he had, was assassinated by those whom he considered to be his best friends.

Bonaparte, the greatest general of modern times, after having filled the earth with the terror of his name, dejected it with tears and blood, and clothed the world, as it were, in sackcloth, as it were, in sackcloth upon a lonely island in the South Atlantic.—Ex.

The Volunteer Movement.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Whilst we all rejoice at the admirable spirit of loyalty and enthusiasm that was the chief characteristic of last Monday's meeting, and whilst there can be only one opinion as to the desirability of sending a contingent of troops to assist the Motherland in her hour of trial, the question that suggests itself to some of us is, are we in a position to do so? If we can answer that question in the affirmative, there is no further room for debate, but, Mr. Editor, I submit there are many loyal citizens in this country to-day who are not prepared to say "yes" to that question. At the opening meeting held a few days ago presided over by the Governor, the Premier Sir Edward Morris intimated, in somewhat ambiguous terms it is true, that the financing of this project should be taken up by wealthy patriotic citizens outside of the Government. If this is correct, it behoves us to consider what financial obligations we are likely to be called upon to bear. In the first place the contribution of 500 Volunteers fully equipped, with the additional cost of transportation and allowance for families left unprovided for, is going to cost some one not less than $250,000. Upon whom is this charge to fall? If the country is determined the contingent shall go, then the country only should be called upon to pay. In other words, this work should begin and end in the Government of the Colony. In Canada and Australia when like offers are made they come from the Government, and as I understand in our own case the Government promised this contingent to the Imperial Authorities, it is clearly their duty to bear all the costs of the promise. It might mean that our Government would have to impose certain taxation to raise the necessary revenue, but even so, if they feel that the country demands that this contingent be sent, they should have no compunction in levying such a tax, and then if some of our wealthy patriotic citizens chose to contribute to this fund, well and good, but the whole movement should, in my opinion, begin and end in the Government of the Colony.

If on the other hand the Government do not feel that they can adopt any such course, then let us drop our public meetings and go to our homes and quietly sing "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the King" by our own firesides.

Yours truly,
"EYES FRONT."

Commendable Action of National Dock Laborers.

At an Emergency Committee meeting of the National Union of Dock Laborers and Riverside Workers, held recently, the following resolution was approved:—
"That, as it is essentially necessary in the collective interest of the people of the United Kingdom that every facility should be given towards the distribution of food and material for the country's defence, we hereby instruct our members in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales to spare no effort in assisting the Government in this respect. We also agree that where disputes are in existence, or pending, likely in any way to hinder the distribution of such commodities, a truce should be at once declared until further notice, and that no fresh disputes should be entertained until after the war is over."—Liverpool Express, Aug. 8.

Choosing a Bride.

The man who goes to choose a bride should caution his eyes, and falcon-eyed, or he will harvest woes: it is a most important chore—more so than going to the store to buy a suit of clothes. If you have dreams of pleasant nights around the fire, and home delights, sidestep the giddy maid whose thoughts are all of hats and gowns, and other female hand-me-downs, of show and dress parade. And always shun the festive skirt who'll never miss a chance to flirt with men, at any cost; she may seem sweet and charming now, but, as your one and only frau, she's sure to be a frost. And when you see a woman near, who hankers for a high career, and combs her hair back straight, who says she's wedded to her art, whose brow is high, whose tongue is tart—oh, Clarence, pull your freight! Select a damsel safe and sane, who has no folly in her brain, who wants to build a home; if you can win that sort of bride, peace shall with you and yours abide, and crown your old bald dome.

A Woman's Voice.

(By Theodosia Garrison, in the 'De-linicator,' New York.)

O heart! what is it you hear above the noise of a nation,
Above the sound of clamor and shouting
And men making ready for war?
Only a single voice, little more than a broken whisper,
Patient and unprotesting—only the voice of a woman.
Yet I hear it above the sound of guns
And the turmoil of men embarking.

There's no use praying any more; the prayers are done and said;
But daytime going through the house, or nighttime in my bed,
They trouble me, the old prayers, still ringing in my head.

The young men from the papers, they brought the word to me;
I'm thinking of their mothers, how glad they ought to be,
Who never said 'Good-by' to them and let them off to sea.

As strong as any man he was, and bold to do and dare,
And why should I be hearing, then, all night above the prayer,
A little lad that's calling me—and wanting me—somewhere?

He said what he thought was right: 'Let you be proud,' he said,
'That you gave a son to the fight; 'Tis a glory over your head!'
'Tis never a good man's words I'd scorn,
And he said what he thought was best;
But I knew my pride when the lad was born,
And his head was warm on my breast.

'Let you be proud,' he said,
'Twas the word that stabbed me through;
Proud—and my one son dead
In a land I never knew!
'Tis the women know when glory's worn
(Tho' he meant the word for the best);
I knew my pride when the lad was born,
And his head was warm on my breast.

Only a woman's voice—patient and unprotesting,
But I hear it above the sound of guns
And the turmoil of men embarking.

C.E.W.A., Topsail.

It has been customary for the Church of England Women's Association at Topsail, to hold a Strawberry Festival every summer, towards some Parochial Church object.

This year, on account of the anxious state of people's minds, with regard to the terrible war now raging in Europe, several of the sisters of the Association hesitated, as to the advisability of having any festival at all this summer.

However, a plucky little band of ladies of the Association rallied round their energetic President, determined to be up and doing.

When cleaning the store room it is a convenience to have a lead pencil tied to a string which is tied around the waist, then when you have put something away in a box you have the pencil at hand with which to mark the name of the article on the outside of the box, thereby saving time when you come to hunt for it.

On Worthless Compliments.

By RUTH CAMERON.

When is a compliment not a compliment? Did you ever ask yourself that question? Or do you find approbation from any source so sweet a morsel that you never stop to analyze it? There are a great many people who are obligingly uncritical of others' opinions—that is, when these opinions are favorable to them. In the opposite case—well, that's quite another matter. Then they are sure to analyze the motives most carefully and to find that envy or jealousy of a mean disposition on the part of the critic is at the root of the criticism.

To return to the main road, the true value of approbation is determined by two factors: the conditions under which it is given and the judgment of the person who gives it.

A neighbor of mine was most delighted the other day because her dressmaker said that she had the best figure she had ever fitted. "And she ought to know something about figures," said my neighbor, fairly bristling with delight. So she had. That is, one factor in the approbation was entirely satisfactory, but how about the other—the conditions under which it was given? The dressmaker is new to the town and is trying to build up her trade. My neighbor is a very dressy woman whose patronage means considerable. Furthermore she has a circle of well-to-do friends. Of course one doesn't want to be invidious, but does it seem altogether impossible that the dressmaker may have had

If we would save time and work, we should follow the example of the Japanese and eliminate all useless things in the house. A profusion of things in the room detracts from the feeling of space and makes endless care and dusting necessary.

Some of the edible wild vegetables are the following: Dandelion greens, pokeweed tops, lambs' quarters, otherwise known as pigweed; the leaves and buds of the cowslip or marsh marigold, and the garden pest known as purslane.

War News.

THE MIGHTY STRUGGLE.

LONDON, Aug. 19. Complete silence is maintained as to the fortunes of war in the big fight which is understood to be in progress somewhere along the line extending through Belgium and Luxembourg. The despatches give evidence of the presence of masses of German troops pushing their way to the front behind an impenetrable screen of cavalry whose dashes in search of information as to the whereabouts of the troops of the allies have resulted in sharp clashes and heavy casualties. The Commanders of the allied forces of France, Britain and Belgium, will not permit anything about their positions to be made public, and since the official note made known the presence of a large expeditionary force on the continent, its movements have been hidden from the outside world. At Brussels, it is said, the position has not changed since yesterday, when it was reported from Brussels to be excellent for the allies. The fate of the Liege forts is not definitely known. German despatches describe them as being in the hands of the German army since the arrival of heavy artillery, while the Belgian military authorities assert that they are still intact and holding out bravely. In Alsace Lorraine, the French turning movement through Southern Alsace appears from French reports to be progressing favorably for the French. This seems to receive confirmation in the despatch sent out by the Wolff Bureau, the German official news agency, saying that two batteries of guns were captured by the French who continued their forward march. All these reports, however, refer to preliminary meetings of opposing bodies of troops leading up to the great battle which may already have begun. Even leading Frenchmen take occasion to point out to their countrymen that the decisive conflict is yet to come, and that too much reliance is not to be placed on reports of demoralization among the German troops. On the sea it is reported that a naval encounter on the North Sea has occurred, but this is without official confirmation. On the Russo-German-Austria frontier, fights of small importance are recorded.

"FEAR GOD! HONOR THE KING!" LONDON, Aug. 20. Kitchener's soldierly homily to the men of the British Expeditionary force, which directed every soldier to keep his active service pay book in his pocket, is as follows: "You are ordered abroad soldiers of the King to help our Shot His Friend In a Nightmare.

Extraordinary Case Reported From Ireland.

How a sleepy passenger in a motor car made a midnight road smash more exciting by defending himself with a revolver against fancied highwaymen, was related to County Westmeath magistrates at Mullingar recently, by Daniel Flood, a local justice of the peace.

Mr. Flood, J.P., is also an auctioneer, and recently held an auction on the land of a friend and client, Mr. Henry Bole. When the auction, at Colehill, County Longford, was over, he undertook to drive Mr. Bole in a motor car towards Mullingar. Apparently his passenger client went to sleep during the drive.

Just about midnight, when all had gone well to within seven miles of Mullingar, the car collided at a bend in the road with a motor cycle and side car. It was not a bad smash, and Patrick Halligan, the cyclist, called in two passing cyclists to help in putting things right. All were working about the car, and restarting the engine, when Mr. Bole woke up.

"Hands up, or I fire!" Bole cried, from the darkness. Mr. Flood stepped up to reassure his friend, but Bole pulled the trigger of a revolver, and a shot struck Flood in the arm.

"What are you shooting for?" cried the auctioneer. "Shoot straight, if you want to shoot!"

The sleepy passenger did not recognize his friend, and murmuring, as though in a nightmare, "You are a brave man," held the revolver levelled as though to shoot again.

"Then I charged him," related Mr. Flood. "I charged up into the car and got hold of his pistol arm, but the revolver went off and a bullet struck me in the right thigh."

When the helping cyclists had time to jump to the auctioneer's aid again in this new development of the accident, Mr. Bole became thoroughly, if rudely awakened. The friend he had shot was carried to a farm near by, and a constable finally arrested Mr. Bole, who was now charged with wounding.

Police Sergeant Scott said he found Mr. Flood wounded in the house of a farmer. Bole was lying unconscious by the side of the road with a cut on the head. When he recovered later and was cautioned, he said, "Could it be possible?"

The case was adjourned, and Mr.

Bole admitted to bail.—Lloyd's News, London.

Household Notes

A strong solution of borax and hot water poured down the sinks and drains will rid them of any offensive odor.

There is no economy in buying small pieces of ice. Know the size of your ice box and buy a piece to fill it.

Do not clean shoes too often. Sometimes they only require rubbing up. Do this with a pad made of old velvet.

Acid fruits should never be prepared with a steel knife. The best preparing tools are nickel or silver knives.

When making hot starch always use scapy water, as it gives the necessary shine to linens, and the irons will not stick.

From the button side of a waist in a folded bath towel, buttons turned downward, it will prevent them from breaking.

Kerosene will do the work of any of the cleaners placed on the market and is much less expensive. It is excellent for cleaning the tub and tiles in the bathroom and equally good for the oiled floors.

Stomachs Kept Doctor Busy

"An old-fashioned doctor, a number of years ago, told us stomachs kept him busy. And he argued that a more conscientious care of the stomach would practically put his profession out of commission."—National Food Journal, June, 1914.

It was a new process of milling that had considerable to do with keeping this old doctor on the jump. This process—which made flour look white and pretty—unfortunately removed nearly all of the really vital mineral elements of the wheat—the invaluable phosphate of potash, etc.

This kind of milling has now become almost universal. Think what it means to deprive the system of these elements which are necessary for its daily rebuilding?

Grape-Nuts

—a delicious food

made of wheat and barley, contains all the nutriment of the grains, including their mineral elements. Many forms of stomach trouble are due to a lack of these elements in daily food; and a regular ration of Grape-Nuts and cream along with other food is admirable to set one right.

FORMING A MERCANTILE FLEET.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. President Wilson to-day approved the plan to have the Government buy a number of ships to be used in taking American foodstuffs abroad. It was tentatively agreed that an appropriation of $25,000,000 would be asked of Congress for the purchase of ships.

BRUSSELS STILL.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 19. It is officially announced here that the position of the Belgian army continues excellent, and there is no chance of any incursion toward Brussels. No Germans are now reported in or around Landen. The German cavalry camps are in the Gembloux region, north of Namur, but there is no movement of troops in that district.

ALLEGED GERMAN VICTORY.

LONDON, Aug. 19. A despatch received by the Wireless Press Bureau from Berlin, says that an encounter took place at Staltpophen, in East Prussia, on August 17th, when a division of the German 1st Army Corps defeated a Russian force, capturing 1,000 prisoners and six machine guns. Many Russian guns which could not be taken by the Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBB-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Destructive Fire at Bell Island.

The house and store owned by Mr. Abraham Carbage, at Bell Island, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning.
About 1.40 a.m. Mr. Carbage was awakened by the crackling of burning wood, and only had time to arouse the inmates of the house before the building was all aflame, the occupants escaping in their night attire. The volunteer fire brigade responded, and though they rendered good service, the fire had gained headway rapidly and was quickly beyond control. The men's efforts were then directed to saving the adjacent houses.
All the stock in the store as well as the furniture of the dwelling was totally destroyed.
We learn that the building and stock are partially covered by insurance.
NO IMPROVEMENT.
The S. S. M'gile reached Humbermouth yesterday from the Straits and Capt. Google sent the following report to the Reid Co.:—
"Foggy weather since leaving; made every port of call in the Straits; no improvement in codfishery."

HIS HOLINESS POPE PIUS TENTH PASSES AWAY.

While the nations of Europe are engaged in the throes of a conflict that promises to surpass in magnitude anything yet recorded in history, the news of the death of His Holiness Pope Pius X comes flashing from continent to continent, conveying to the world the information of the loss of a great man, and to the Roman Catholic Church that of their Supreme Ruler.

For a short time past His Holiness had been ailing, and it is quite safe to assume that the heart of this great man who was such an advocate of peace, was deeply moved by the seriousness of the present struggle amongst the nations, which did not tend to improve his condition.

At 1.45 a.m. to-day came the sad intelligence. "The Pope is dead." His Holiness Pius X was in many respects a striking contrast to his predecessor, Leo XIII, who was not only a great Pope, but a great statesman as well, a scholar, held in reverence by the whole world. Pope Pius too was a scholar and a leader, but unlike his predecessor was one of the people having sprung from lowly parentage.

Pius X, Giuseppe Melchiorre Sarto, was born on June 2nd, 1855, at Riese, Province of Treviso, in Venice. His parents were Giovanni Battista Sarto and Margherita (nee Sanson), the former a postman, died in 1852, but his mother lived to see her son made a cardinal.

His early education in Latin was received from the arch priest of his town, who gave him private lessons. Later he studied for four years at the gymnasium of Castelfranco Veneto, walking to and fro every day.

In 1859 he received the tonsure from the Bishop of Treviso, and was given a scholarship of the Diocese of Treviso in the seminary of Padua, where he finished his classical, philosophical and theological studies with distinction. He was ordained in 1880, and for nine years was chaplain to the pastor at Tambolo where he had to assume the duties of the parish priest to the pastor being invalided, while laboring assiduously in the care of his flock he was perfecting his knowledge of theology, besides conducting night classes for adults.

In 1887, he was named arch-priest of Salzano in 1887, and during his ministrations in that office, he restored the church, enlarged the hospital, and showed his great solicitude for the religious instruction of adults. In 1875 was made a canon of the Cathedral of Treviso, and as such filled various offices, being spiritual director of, and rector of the seminary, examiner of the clergy, and vicar-general. On the death of Bishop Zanelli in 1878 he was elected vicar-capitular. In 1884 he was appointed Bishop of Mantua, and during his bishopric he taught dogmatic theology at the seminary for several years. He cultivated the Gregorian Chant in company with the Seminary. The temporal administration of his see imposed great sacrifices upon him, and in 1887 he held a diocesan synod, and by his attendance at the conference gave the example of pastoral zeal.

In 1893 Leo XIII created him a cardinal under the title of San Bernardo Alle Terme at the secret consistory, and three days later he was recognized Patriarch of Venice, retaining meanwhile the title Apostolic Administrator of Mantua. Cardinal Sarto was obliged to wait eighteen months before taking possession of his new diocese because the Italian government refused its exequatur, claiming the right of nomination as it had been exercised by the Emperor of Austria. This opposition was not raised because of any personal objection to Cardinal Sarto. The International Eucharistic Congress of 1897, the centenary of St. Gerard Sagredo in 1900, the blessing of the cornerstone of the new belfry of St. Mark's, and also of the commemorative chapel of St. Grappa in 1901 were events that left a mark on him and his people.

After the death of Leo XIII the cardinals entered into conclave, as is the custom upon the death of a Pope, and after balloting Giuseppe Sarto was elected on August 4th, 1903 by a vote of 55 out of a possible 60. His coronation took place on Sunday, August 9th, 1903.

In his first Encyclical the new Pope showed his great zeal for the direct interests of the church. His efforts were at all times directed to the promotion of piety among his flock. He was familiarly called the "Children's Pope" because of his recommending that the first Communion of children should not be deferred too long after they had reached the age of discretion.

During the whole of the reign of the illustrious Pontiff, the Roman Catholic Church has seen great practical and lasting results in the interests of doctrine and discipline. The whole world has recognized his apostolic spirit, his strength of character and his looked upon him as an humble and devoted follower of the Prince of Peace. Naturally the world, irrespective of race or creed, will regret the passing of such a great man as Pius X.

A Serious Offence.

To-day a young man named Norman was before court charged with a breach of the Lottery Act. The nature of the offence is the worst and most criminal that ever came under the notice of our authorities and can scarcely be believed. The facts in the main are that Norman made up a sweepstake or guessing competition as to the quantity of fish that would be exported this year from the Colony. In July last he got parties in Calgary and other Canadian places to sell tickets for him at 20c each, telling them that the prize for the winner would be $500, and that the profits of the undertaking would be devoted to the Marine Disasters Fund. Judge Knight commented strongly on the offence and pointed out the seriousness of bringing such a dire calamity that ever fell upon this country into a money making scheme that represented personal greed and gain. His Honor thought fit to impose the maximum fine of $200 but in view of the accused pleading guilty, the prisoner was fined $100 or two months' imprisonment.

There passed away at her residence Prescott Street, this morning, Mary, relict of the late Capt. John Hartery. The deceased had been suffering from a serious internal malady for some months past, during which time she bore her illness with exemplary Christian patience and resignation. She was of a charitable disposition and her many friends will learn with regret of her demise. Though feeling the loss of their departed friend keenly they will console themselves with the thought that death has come as a happy release from the suffering she has so patiently borne.

THE DUTCH ALARMED.

LONDON, To-day.

A despatch to the Daily Express from Hague says a bulletin posted here states that Germans and Belgians are fighting bitterly at Dieste and Aerschot on their way to Antwerp. This news is causing the greatest uneasiness here. For the first time in the present crisis the Dutch realize the terrible peril which Germans have brought to their very doors. For Germany's advance on Brussels can have no other object than an attack on Antwerp.

GERMAN CAVALRY NEARING ANTWERP.

LONDON, To-day.

The advance of German troops around and above Brussels, even into what are practically suburbs of Antwerp, is indicated in Reuter despatches from Antwerp, which report that German cavalry have been encountered near Herenthals, fifteen miles east of Antwerp.

DEATH OF THE POPE—HIS PATHETIC WORDS.

ROME, To-day.

The Pope died at 12.0 o'clock this morning. He had been ill for several days but alarming symptoms did not develop until Wednesday morning. Throughout the day Doctors Marchisava and Amici devoted the utmost energies to stimulating the patient and keeping him alive. The Cardinals were notified of the Pope's grave condition. Some of them who entered the sick room described the impressive and heart-rending scenes, especially when the Pontiff, rousing himself from time to time, spoke. Once he said: "In ancient times the Pope by a word might have stayed the slaughter, but now he is impotent."

A Grand Feature—The Lie

AT THE CRESCENT.

"The Lie," a two reel dramatic illustration of a Scotch stirring story, pleased the large number that witnessed the feature show at the Crescent Picture Palace last night. It is a remarkable tale of the highland country in which an aged father and his daughter are the principals. The gambler, who was successfully frustrated in his endeavours to deprive the son of Auld-McGregor of a life's savings, is an important character which adds much interest to the best

Gold Seal feature we have ever seen in this city. The "Trials of Alexander" is a universal comedy of club life that calls for much laughter. After numerous interruptions he succeeds in gaining the confidence of his fiancée. "The Lightning Bolt" is another drama in which Wallace Reid and Dorothy Davenport are featured in a one reel story that will appeal to every patron and second only to the headliner, which is in a class by itself. See "The Lie" and M. J. MacQuarrie who together with Pauline Bush, and two other stars, give a magnificent portrayal of difficult roles. The prima donna was given a grand ovation when she rendered the beautiful song "If this rose could tell all it knows." Miss Clark's popularity was clearly evidenced last night and she should be heard in this pleasing rendition. To-morrow "The Loper's Coat."

War News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Aug. 20.
At last there is definite news from the front in Belgium. The Kaiser's legions are being hurled in full force against the Allies' lines of defence, northeast and south of Brussels. The attack, which began last night, started at Tirlemont, 29 miles E.S.E. from the Belgian capital. The German forces simultaneously attacked the Belgian army headquarters at Louvain, 18 miles E. and N.E. from Brussels, and at Dinant, 20 miles south of Namur on the Meuse. The Germans began their advance at Tirlemont with a heavy artillery fire, under cover of which their infantry moved from their entrenchments to meet the Belgians. A fierce hand to hand conflict ensued, the immediate result of which, the Belgian War Office announces, was that the Germans were hurled back. A despatch to the London Times from Belgium, the exact origin of which was stricken out by the censor, says: "The Germans continue to push forward their patrols in that part of the country where the allied armies are ready to receive them. The damage to the German detachments is invariably great. German scouting parties have been seen all around Namur, and two forts at Maizent and Dave were engaged for the better part of the day; the former particularly, extracting heavy toll from the invaders. Some of the exploits of the French are nothing short of amazing. There would appear to be little exaggeration in the accounts already published.
The German prisoners had beetroot and carrots in their knapsacks. They declared they had been living upon these for several days.

A FRENCH CAPTURE.
HAVRE, Aug. 19.
The Austrian steamer Dnorah, barley laden, was captured off Guernsey by the French despatch boat Orion. The Austrian steamer Emilia for Trieste, has been brought into Algiers as a prize of war.

BATTLE IN PROGRESS.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
A despatch from Brussels says a fierce battle is in progress between the Belgians and Germans along an extended front. The Daily Express estimates that two hundred German ships have been captured at sea, by the British, French and German warships, valued at three hundred million dollars.

JAPAN AND THE U. S. A.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
Sir Edward Grey, in a message to the State Department, Washington, explained England's position regarding the Japanese ultimatum to Germany. It is believed there was no necessity for America becoming involved, particularly if England has given assurances, as is possible, for the behaviour of Japan in the future. There is not the slightest possibility of Japan interfering in German Samoa. England would not permit that. Credence is given to the report that Japan has engaged with England, that her action will not extend beyond Chinese waters. It is believed this will suffice to meet all American requirements.

VATERLAND INTERNED.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
A despatch from Rome says the German gunboat Vaterland has been forced to disarm at Nanking, China.

A RUSSIAN OPINION.
PARIS, Aug. 19.
Count Witte, the Russian statesman, who is on his way from Biarritz to Russia, in an interview, says the war will not last more than three months.

ENGAGEMENT IN LIMBERG.
BRUSSELS, Aug. 19.
An engagement is reported to have taken place in northern Limberg. An important Franco-German battle is expected.

FIRED ON ITALIANS.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
A despatch from Rome to the Star says, refugees from Magdeburg, Germany, report that German soldiers fired on 3,000 Italians confined in barracks there, killing 7 and wounding 16, because some of them shouted "Hurrah for Italy."

WAR UNPOPULAR.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
It is officially stated in Paris that the mobilization of the Austrian army has been accompanied by much disorder, even open mutiny, owing to the unpopularity of the war among many classes.

ITALY ANTI-GERMAN.
LONDON, Aug. 19.
A despatch from Genoa says an anti-German sentiment is being shown by crowds in various cities of Italy.
