The Heir of Rosedene

The Game-Keeper's Hut

CHAPTER XXIV. THE SECOND GAMEKEEPER.

Such earnestness would be excusable if he were watching a poacher, but it is rather remarkable considering that at the object of his regard is his mistress—Miss Edna Weston. And yet it was excusable, for that slim figure in the dark-hued velvet made a pretty picture, and it did not need an artist's eye to appreciate the exquisite beauty of the pale face and large, wistful eyes, that looked across into the clear air with such sad dreaminess.

The keeper stood as motionless as a statue until he heard the crisp tread of a man's footstep coming up the gravel path, then he turned slightly aside behind the shrubbery, and transferred his attention to the newcomer.

The visitor was as well known as the mistress of Rosedene herself, for he was none other than the master of More Park—Sir Edward More.

He has altered very little since last we saw him, excepting, perhaps, that he holds himself a little straighter, and that his old expression of irritable impatience has given place to a look of irritable importance.

Edna, seeing him, comes slowly down the steps to meet him, and the keeper from his post of vantage can hear and see them distinctly; can see the quiet, mournful sweetness of the smile that rests like a stray sun-beam upon the lovely face of the girl, and the little jerky, irritable twitch that plays about the mouth of the man.

"Good-morning, Edna!" he says,

And the Worst is Yet to Come-- not notice it—her eyes are fixed dreamily before her.

"Yes; he is in Sweden, botanizing, and says nothing about coming home—as yet."

"How sorry Lady Portfield must be!" says Edna.

"Well—yes; I suppose so. By the way, I had a letter from Morton yesterday," he says, fidgeting with his hat, and looking aside.

Edna turns her eyes upon him with a strange kind of reluctance in them. They have neared the shrubbery by this time, and every word can be heard by the keeper, who still leans on his gun, forgetful of any chance poacher that may be at work at the other end of the preserves.

"From Capt. Morton?"

"Yes," nods Sir Edward. "He has offered us a visit to spend the Christmas, in fact, and we expect him on Thursday."

Edna does not speak.

"It is quite a long time since you have seen each other," resumes Sir Edward. "He has made constant inquiries after you, and was greatly concerned at your illness."

"He is very kind," murmurs Edna. Sir Edward knocks a stray stone out of the path, and goes on with a little more rapidity:

"He hasn't been quite the thing himself; it has been a trying time for all of us."

"I've been very busy this morning," says Sir Edward, getting up alongside her, "over these alterations. I almost wish I'd never begun them; but they are a great improvement. The park will look another place; I hope you will be able to come over and see them soon; you won't know the place, for I've had it turned inside out. It was in a disgraceful state—simply disgraceful, though, of course, it could not have been otherwise, while Cyril was alive."

"Poor Sir Cyril!" murmured Edna. "Eh? Did you speak? He left everything to go to rack and ruin; it would have been better to swallow his pride and let it. But that's altered now, thank Heaven! Yes, the alterations will be a great improvement. Why, you can see them if you come down to the end of this walk; perhaps you are not too tired."

But Edna declared that she was quite equal to the exertion, and they traversed the path down which she had walked months ago to get her first glimpse of More Park.

"There you are," said Sir Edward, pointing to the great red pile, and especially to a patch of new red brick-work at the end of it, with an air of self-satisfaction and proprietorship. "That's the new wing, smoking room, billiard room, library—the other's too large—and a boudoir for Emma; great improvement, eh?"

"Yes, I suppose so," said Edna, looking at it dreamily, as she leaned against the fence.

"You're tired," said Sir Edward, suddenly noticing the pale, weary face. "There's one of your keeper's butts near here, isn't there? Yes, here it is up that path. Better come and sit down."

Edna followed him up the little path, and they came upon a small, thatched building that was too large for a hut and too small for a cottage. It was in the heart of the preserves, and consisted of but one room, in which the second keeper slept at night, so that he might be at hand if poachers were about.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about 50¢.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good. Four 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 10-oz. bottle—then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 10 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup. And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the sneezing, throat tickle, loosenes the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and bronchial asthma. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes. To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Bluff Or Germany Breaks negotiations---Hostile United States---Makes Big Statement

LONDON, March 7. The negotiations at Spa, relating to the shipping question, have been temporarily broken off, according to a German wireless message received here to-day. The Allies, the message said, demanded that all the remaining German ships be handed over unconditionally without being willing to undertake the obligation of supplying Germany with foodstuffs. The German delegates, it is said, received instructions from their Government that the question of shipping, finance and food supplies must be dealt with only as a whole.

PARIS, March 7. Notice of the interruption of the negotiations at Spa with respect to the surrender of the German merchant fleet was received by the Supreme Council at its meeting to-day. Premier Lloyd George addressed the Council with regard to the military terms of the preliminary peace with Germany. The discussion of revivifying the States formerly included in Austria-Hungary, was completed. Secretary Lansing, of the American delegation, submitted a proposal with regard to the German cables at the request of the Italian delegates. It was decided to appoint an inter-Allied conference to inquire into recent incidents at Ljublyana, Croatia.

Poor Kidney Action Brings Fatal Results. It is well for everyone to realize that from the moment the kidneys fail to remove the poisons from the blood stream, these poisons accumulate and set up the infections that cause disease. What are the indications which give warning of this approaching suffering? Here are a few of the symptoms: That pain in the back, dizziness, swollen joints or ankles, painful urination or brick dust deposita. At the first attack of any of these troubles turn to the old tried and tested kidney remedy—Gin Pills. Take them as directed and you will ward off chronic troubles. Do not misunderstand the name Gin Pills. How they came to be called Gin Pills is this: Gin has long been considered a remarkable curative agent for kidney and bladder trouble. This virtue comes from one ingredient alone in Gin and NOT from the alcohol. That is why the beneficial ingredients in gin can be taken in pill form, without alcohol, and that is what you get when you use Gin Pills.

When you decide to try Gin Pills you are protected. Buy a box from any dealer for 50 cents. If you do not get immediate relief after taking them, all you have to do is ask for your money back and it will be returned. This is certainly a generous offer; but we make it feeling that once you have tried Gin Pills and know the beneficial results they bring, you will continue to use and recommend them. A free sample will be sent if you address your request to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Roast Beef and Olives.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"The trouble is, Jenny, that I can't always make you out. I never know where I am with you."
 "Yes," said Jenny complacently, "but you can never never exhaust me. There's always more where I come from."
 Do you like people who have moods or do you like people whom you always know just where to find? I don't care very much for Mrs. Cameron's friend of mine said to me the other night, "she's such a person for moods. One day you meet her she is mortal and interesting that you have a wonderful time with her and the next day she hardly has anything to say at all. I can't get along with people who blow hot and then blow cold like that. I want them one thing or another."

Milady's Boudoir.

THE AFTERNOON NAP.
 Some women believe that in order to properly secure a little nap during the warm afternoon, it is necessary to disrobe entirely and open up the bed which has been neatly made for the day.
 This takes time and disturbs the neatness of the bedroom, so that when the sleeper gets up, much work has to be done to make it appear as it should. Other women lay themselves down just as they are in more or less stiff corsets, uncomfortable clothes and with the hair dressed neatly and firmly, which hair dressing does not make the most comfortable pillow in the world.
 In hot weather, this latter way of taking a nap is apt to leave the sleeper wet with perspiration, weak and nervous. I would recommend a compromise between the two methods, avoiding the undesirable features of both.
 If one has not sufficient time to disrobe it is better to lie back in a large easy chair and relax every muscle. Have the room darkened and let it be understood you are entitled to fifteen minutes rest without interruption.
 Even this short time will freshen you, if all care and worry are banished for the time. If the house is very warm and with the hair-dressed neatly and flushed and over-heated, I counsel her to remove all her clothing and with a towel wring from tepid water give the body a gentle rubbing, drying well afterwards with a rough towel or two.
 A little talcum powder is pleasant, used after such a sponge bath. Alcohol put into the water from which the towel is wrung also adds to its coolness. If one does not object to its characteristic odor. Then the negligee and the siesta will be found pleasant and comforting.

GETTING ON TO SPRING.
 It's getting on to spring again. The robins soon will sing again. The tulips and the daffodils. Will bud and come to bloom. The skies will soon be blue again. The meadows look like new again. And beautiful and lovely things will smile where now is gloom.
Men do not doubt that spring again will bring the birds to sing again. Men do not view the leafless trees of winter in dismay. Nor sigh when comes the frost to them. Then every rose is lost to them: They know that every sleeping plant shall hear the call of May.
Men know the gentle sun, again, shall bid the brooks to run again; They know the hollyhocks once more shall blossom by the gate; The blue shall find the skies again. The lily dead shall rise again, And all the orchards come to bloom If they will only wait.
 Yet when to them come snow again And bitter grief and woe again, They bow their heads and wail aloud That life's a hopeless thing. Forgetting they shall rise again, 'neath blue and happy skies again, And come from death at God's command To all the joys of spring.

Odd Superstitions.

It has been wisely remarked that an ancient and universal belief is not to be lightly ignored; there must be "something in it."
 Odd numbers have always and everywhere been held in peculiar reverence, and if that is mere superstition, then it only proves that, despite our civilization, we are still superstitious.
 A hen is always given an odd number of eggs to be hatched. Why? There is no reason at all, except superstition.
 Salutes from warships, forts, etc., are always given in odd numbers, yet no valid reason can be adduced. It is a remnant of the old "odd numbers are lucky" superstition.
 Virgil records all sorts of charms and spells practised round odd numbers—never even ones. And we still after two failures, make another attempt, and murmur hopefully: "Third time lucky!" The odd number again; and the old superstition!
 Seven is the favorite Biblical number, and old divines taught that it held a mystical perfection. It's an odd number. Three is the number of the Trinity—an odd number again.
 Falstaff, in the "Merry Wives" is entrapped for the third time. He himself said: "They say there is a divinity in odd numbers" because of the old belief that the odd time would be lucky.
 Physicians of other days always insisted that "bleedings" should be in odd numbers—one, three, five, etc., and never an even one.
 The number two was avoided and had an evil reputation, because on the second day hell was created.

Order of Cootie.

Coblenz, March 2.—The "Order of the Cootie" was recently organized among American forces on the Rhine. Beneath the crest showing a "cootie" rampant, are the words "Coot Mit Uns."
 Only veterans of three months' scratching experience are eligible.

LONESOME.
 I'm lonesome when the winter ends; the winter takes away my friends, by twos and threes and scores; they live through summer, spring and fall, but winter comes, with blizzards and storms and storms that drive me down the road, with my friendless, forlorn, and I'm lonesome— for old friends I yearn, I look for them at every turn, but see my friends no more. An old gent cannot make new friends, as down the sunset slope he wanders, with halting steps and slow; the more the bells of evening ring, the more his soul's affections cling to friends of long ago. The winter bore my friends away; I lost a comrade every day, and some days two or three; I wonder why death's angel comes, to steal my friend, with muffled drums, and why he sidesteps me?

Nature's Food Hogs.

The war on the wood pigeon nas opened the eyes of a good many people to the fact that there are food hogs in Nature as among human nature. The voracious wild pigeon eats nearly its own weight in food every day and as a serious menace to farm crops. Any good it may do in destroying noxious insects and weeds is in a sort of proportion to the harm it will do.
 Considering the food problem, Londoners may well be startled at the fact that the number of mice in the City has increased by 25 per cent. since the outbreak of war. Mice work untold harm in the granaries and warehouses where food is stored. They need to be kept down, for they are prolific breeders. In one year a pair of mice may be responsible for a thousand descendants. Every man should be his own Field Piper to-day. Gluttonous Sparrows.
 Then take Mr. Reynard. He puts the stopper on any great development of poultry farming in all the Southern shires. Sussex, for instance, is particularly well adapted to poultry farming, but the existence of Reynard in large numbers forbids big ventures. We rid our country of the wolf, and the badger is growing extinct, yet we allow the fox to flourish for the sake of sport, then cry out that eggs in war time are prohibitive in price. Many birds, as everybody knows, are our best friends, because they eat up the insect life that would otherwise make it impossible for men to exist on the face of the globe. But why should sparrows be allowed to become so numerous? They are able to work untold mischief in our orchards and are great thieves among the corn. Does anyone know of any good done by sparrows? Yet we deliberately encourage these quarrelsome birds out of sentiment.

Big Ben

EVERY clock that wears the trade mark Westclox on its dial has to prove its right to it.

It must pass time-keeping tests before and after it is fitted in the case. It must alarm at the right time. Before it leaves the factory it must be qualified to give you satisfactory service.

All Westclox are made in the same patented way. Needle-fine pivots of polished steel greatly reduce friction. Like Big Ben, all Westclox keep good time.

Your dealer has them. Ask to see the Westclox line. Big Ben is $4.00.

The Church and the League of Nations. An Appeal to Christians.

We desire to appeal to our fellow-Christians of all communions to unite with us in supporting the ideal of a League of Nations as an essential Christian means of attaining international justice and peace.

We regard a League of Nations as the sense of a substantial and organized co-operation of all nations sincerely interested in the object of securing the peace of the world, the abolition of war, and the guarantee of freedom to the weaker States and races — as being now accepted by the consent both of leaders and of public opinion.

most serious and lasting kind rests upon all who form and influence opinion to watch, and support, and strengthen this great and far-reaching design. That obligation rests upon all men and women of good will, and without such general comradeship the object will hardly be attained. Opinion must apply the "steam," the perseverance, the vigilance which will be needed for success.

But as Christians, and speaking to those who share with us that great allegiance, we recognize a special Christian responsibility in this matter of a League of Nations, not as against others, but for the common good. For though we believe that, in the world as we have known it hitherto, war for defence or for principle may be an inevitable duty, and have accordingly supported with profound conviction the struggle of the Allies against Germany and what Germany has represented, we know that the purpose of God, as our Lord has made us to know Him, is a purpose of peace, to make war to cease in all the world. We know it as fundamental and comprehensive Christian truth that love is the only true constructive principle of common human life, and that love acts by subjecting all the forms of selfishness, self-aggrandisement, and sensitive pride, in nations as in individuals, to the strong and wholesome control of duty towards the general interest, and of common loyalty to the Kingdom of God. Care for the weak and the backward, jealousy for the freedom and growth of all peoples, self-control by the nations at times of exasperation and strain, are in our eyes part of the working of this great and royal law, against which of course all forms of human fault, folly and weakness constantly contend.

We do not undertake the difficulties and the intricacies of the task; it will demand the fullest political skill that statesmen can supply. But we are equally sure that this is a movement far too large, deep and significant to be left to experts. The demand for it comes from the heart conscience of the peoples; and the force of the public conscience and will in the nations is the indispensable condition, the measure, of its success and its permanence.

We know also, and too well, how to a general acceptance of the project in name and in vague shape is from anything approaching realization. It is a commonplace of politics that agreed measures are sometimes the hardest to pass. There is a long road to travel and there are many enemies. To say this is only superficially inconsistent with what has been said about agreement. No one who has given any thought to the history and conditions of true progress will doubt that real advances and elevations of standard are never secured without an arduous struggle against counter-forces to which the weakness and selfishness and baselessness of human nature always contribute. The principles of good are powerfully resisted by principles of forces of evil of which we only imperfectly discern, at any time, the nature and the workings.

Therefore it is that we must both welcome, from whatever source they come, forces making for these great ends, and also try as Christians to make our own Christian contribution to the cause. We believe indeed that it is mainly where the Kingdom of Heaven in Christ works either as heaven in the mass, or by direct power of its divine law, that there is any such real strength as can prevail in difficult movements of this kind. To these considerations there remains to be added that the Church is entrusted with spiritual weapons in whose efficacy its faith believes. By the prayer of faith and hope, earnest, humble, and constant, great things are wrought; prayer both corporate of Christians in the congregation, and individual prayer which the simple and childlike as well as the skilled can offer.

A Conference of leaders of the Christian Churches of Britain, convened by the Archbishop of Canterbury, was held at Lambeth on October 29th, 1918, "to consider from a religious point of view the most effective mode in which the support of the Christian Churches can be given to the project of a League of Nations." With this end in view, the Conference appointed a Standing Committee, and requested us to issue this Message to the Christian people of the United Kingdom to invite their co-operation in supporting the project.

That we are able to do this un-ly is for us a special happiness, and an earnest of success.

With the prayer for God's Blessing and guidance.

We are, etc.,

lift. But those thin cables broke even in the highest wind owing to the other attached balloons. Again, the present "sausage" was not then in use, and the spherical type had a habit of twisting round and round, and twisting up the net with it.

It was in 1917 that a certain officer in the Kite Balloon Section of the R. A. F. was sent to Italy on special duty, and while there had the scheme explained to him. It at once struck him that, although a gigantic undertaking to curtain a frontier, the idea of protecting a town or any limited area by means of balloons was very feasible. Besides, balloons had progressed since their early experiments, and winches and other devices were very much up to date. Returning to England, he obtained permission to experiment in Richmond Park. Success did not come at once.

There were balloons lost, and some men killed before the end of February, 1918, when the plan had become more or less perfect, and aerial aprons became a standing feature of London's defenses.

War Memorial Suggestion.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—I noticed in this morning's News the Patriotic Committee were open for suggestions how they would best act, as to a "War Memorial," most suitable to commemorate the deeds of our brave boys. Now Sir, my humble suggestion I am going to throw in with others:—

Patriotic Committee, I say to you, that hundreds of weary lives would be made so much brighter, if as a War Memorial you would devote your funds in buying a suitable building to be used as club-rooms for the factory employees of our city. I speak especially for the girl workers; Oh! how they would appreciate such comfort as this, and what it would mean to them after a long day's toil to be able to enter a nice cosy club-room in that building, carpeted nicely with everything bright around them music of some sort, the evening finished up with a nice cup of tea, etc. I ask you, won't you give this suggestion of mine, serious consideration. Go yourselves, and visit the factories before deciding, and then I am sure self will soon be forgotten, and your hearts will overflow with love and pity, for those who toiling so hard all day, sometimes having to stand from 7 o'clock until 6 p.m., with no words of sympathy, but the regular cry from the Managers: "Hurry up now, so much work has to be finished to-day to make this place pay," and that employee has to grind away, not even having time to think of the strength that is also going. Go and meet them as they leave those factories at 6 p.m. Look at the tired faces yourselves, and then you will best judge how best to place a War Memorial in memory of our brave boys.

Stop these brothers and sisters of yours, and have a chat to them.

I remain,
Yours truly,
JULIA SALTER EARLE,
President "Ladies Branch of the N.I. W.A."

Home Parks as Big as Countries.

Naturalists have expressed a fear that, with the exploitation of the waste places of the earth, the bigger wild animals, especially if they are more trouble than they are worth, like lions, tigers, the rhinoceros and the hippo, will be crowded off the map by all-encroaching man.

There is reason in this fear, and however much the tiger or the jaguar, say, or even the great snakes, may be disliked, yet there is a sentiment in the world against rendering any species extinct. This idea, with others, has led to the establishment of great national parks, which are really great game preserves.

One of the largest of these is in Canada, and is called Jasper Park. It is a land of lake and river and mountain between the Saskatchewan River and the Yellowstone Pass. It is nearly as big as Wales, and is the haunt of bears and elks, of beavers and skunks and foxes, and its rivers teem with fish.

There is room for them, and a few more visitors as well.

Then there is the Yellowstone Park in Wyoming, U.S.A. It is 3,575 square miles in area, and includes a lake twenty-two miles long.

New Zealand has two national parks. Lake Wakatipu, 112 square miles in extent, is the centre of the one in the southern island, and the other in the north island includes the famous Lake District of the southern hemisphere.

Some people think it time the Government of the Old Country did likewise, setting aside the English Lake District, the lovely Trossachs, and the Lakes of Killarney for national possessions. But, among other things which the Great War has caused to be laid aside for the time being, probably this may be included as a "dead cert."

Veteran Tells of a Terrible Experience.

Before He Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Postmaster of Hereford Points the Way to Health to Other Sufferers from Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Hereford, Que., Mar. 7th. (Special.)—Mr. A. Peabody the veteran postmaster here, is one of the many old people who claim to have received a new lease of life through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. Peabody is in his 84th year, but wonderfully strong and active for one of his age. But he was not always thus. "For six years," he says, in telling his story, "I suffered from kidney and bladder trouble. I had those sharp streaky, lightning pains through my muscles, even to my finger-tips.

"In March, 1917, I was taken with a shaking chill and deadly pains through my abdomen, groin, and the small of my back. I was confined to my bed for three weeks, during which time I often had to get up as often as twenty or thirty times a day.

"I tried many remedies, but got little benefit till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. In three days I got relief, and three boxes cleared all the pains out of my system. I also rest much better at night.

"I am always glad to tell other sufferers from kidney and bladder trouble what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me."

"Ask your neighbors about Dodd's Kidney Pills."

The Sky Curtain.

When the "Daily Mail" recently published a wonderful photograph of the balloon-nets which scared the Goths in those days when we sought Somnus, never knowing what a night might bring forth, quite a number of people said, "I told you so."

We recalled to memory certain whispers which went the rounds last spring. Of course, the tales that were whispered grew with the telling, for to curtain the sky gave room for imagination. It seemed even more wonderful than the submarine-nets beneath the sea. And yet the sky was curtained.

It is not a year since London tried a system that proved so efficient an obstacle to raiders. One wonders that it was not tried much, much earlier, for it was in 1912 that the Italian Government experimented with aerial aprons as a means of aerial defence. Various stations or units of these aprons were placed along the Italian frontier early in 1913, but they were not put to practical use in the Great War, for to curtain a whole frontier, any part of which might otherwise be crossed by enemy airmen, was no mean task. It would have necessitated thousands of balloons. During those early experiments very elementary types of balloons were used that could obtain a great height. This was largely due to the thin cable used, which weighed little, and so allowed for a greater Evangelists in Newfoundland.

A Review of Their Work.

L. C. MORRIS.

Though the visit of John R. Mott is fresh upon us, it may not be out of place to add a word or two about it; for like the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, John R. Mott has gained world-wide renown. As a layman, he stands a peer among his associates, and his life-work has won for him the admiration of all Christendom.

His special feature has been along the line of missions, and also in connection with Y. M. C. A. work. In these departments he has long been a master—not a master in authority, but a master in counsel and co-operation. Herein lay, and still lies, much of his success. Many good men defeat themselves, and forfeit their influence, and never become great because they unduly assert their own personal opinions and refuse to take advice from those who know, and who should know, the best course to adopt. John R. Mott is great, and his greatness is increased by his agreeableness. Perhaps it was his agreeableness that caused the mistake which occurred at the last meeting which he held. At any rate it was generally understood that it was not John R. Mott's choice.

As most of our readers are aware the visit of this good man to our city was mainly due to the broadness and Christian liberality of the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, the late Bishop Jones. The object of the visit was to consult upon Y. M. C. A. work, and to hear from the visitor his opinions upon the great question of foreign missions. To this end a banquet was tendered, and meetings convened, and those who attended were representative of the highest and best in our community. Pulpit and press supported the movement, and for the time it seemed that the cause of missions was going to get a great boost. But it was not so. There was some sort of collapse in the end; and when the good man took his departure all the interest which he created, and all the great things which he said, were forgotten and his name was dropped and his visit barely remembered.

It was early in July, 1914, that John R. Mott came to St. John's, and some said that the outbreak of the war was the cause of his work collapsing; and it may just be that such was the case, but there are others who hold a different view, and who think that the collapse was caused in the following manner.

While John R. Mott was in the city his name was on every lip, and the cause with which his name is so universally identified, was directly before the public. His last meeting was held at the College Hall, on Sunday evening, July 5th, at 8.15. The meeting was published in the papers as being a missionary meeting, and the chief feature of it was to be the address by such a great man upon such a big question. It was to be a missionary meeting, and the public were so instructed.

From the pulpits of the city churches the announcement was made that this meeting was to be held, and to emphasize its importance special services were placed upon it. It appeared that the evening services were really closed a few minutes earlier than usual, in order to give the people a chance to be at the hall on time. The meeting was for men only, and was attended by one of the largest audiences that the hall ever seated. Governor Davidson occupied the chair. His Lordship the late Bishop Jones was on the platform, and with him were the principal clergymen of the city and also several representative citizens.

The Governor gave the usual chairman's address and paid a high tribute to the speaker of the evening, and made direct reference to the great missionary work which the latter had accomplished. The Governor then called upon the speaker, and in doing so said that he was to speak upon missions. Everybody was full of the topic and expectation was at its highest. John R. Mott was to speak, and missions was the topic. Of this there could not be any mistake. The press had published it, the pulpits had announced it, and the people expected it.

Amid the applause of the moment the speaker arose, and then began the greatest disappointment that ever St. John's audience experienced. The speaker did not make any reference whatever to the topic which the chairman had announced; nor did he say why he was taking up the topic upon which he did speak. He began an address upon "Impurity and the social evil, and for the space of one hour dealt out its nauseous mitter. At the close of the meeting the people filed out of the building, but never before did such a disappointed audience leave the College Hall.

Much comment was indulged in as to who had blundered. Some said that the topic had been changed on the advice of one of our city doctors, and others thought that the committee had changed it. However the question of missions was dropped, and a very doubtful question, as far as public discussion goes, was substituted for it, and a great opportunity was missed. Perhaps some may have thought that the question treated upon was just as necessary as the one announced, but the majority of the people thought differently, and some of them think so still, and they have yet to be convinced that the public discussion of immorality is conducive to the interests of morality.

John R. Mott's visit to St. John's was worthy a better wind-up than it had. His name and fame are household words, and he is looked up to as a tower of strength. He did a lot of good while in our midst, but the glory was robbed from his idealism, and the grandeur of the man as he appeared to his admirers who had heard of him, was dimmed by the final address which he gave. It should not have occurred. Everything has its proper time and place, and such a great man as John R. Mott should not have finished his public speaking in such an inglorious and disappointing manner as he did. "If nothing else, it was an indictment of the good man himself; but it was more, it was a breach upon the public—a breach that never was, though it should have been, explained.

Cape Broyle Welcomes Hero.

Pte. R. Shannahan who enlisted on October, 1916, and went overseas, to fight in the cause of freedom, was one of the boys who came back on the Corsican and was accorded a big welcome home on the evening of his arrival at Cape Broyle. The little town was on a fete with bunting, as amid volleys of musketry the train pulled in towards the station. Enthusiasm was also, by the loud and continued blasts of his whistle gave us to understand that he was glad our hero was returning safely home. On Thursday, March 4th, the ladies of Cape Broyle gave an evening party in the schoolroom, in his honour. The room was nicely decorated and draped with the flags of the Allies, while in the centre was erected the motto, "Cape Broyle Welcomes Our Hero."

At six o'clock P.M., the doors were flung open and from that time till 9 p.m. the people were gathering until the schoolroom was fairly packed. At 7.15 our hero put in his appearance—three cheers were called for, to which the voices of the people cheerfully responded until the walls of the schoolroom shook with the echo. He and his dear relatives were then escorted to front seats by Mr. James Rice, who acted as Chairman. He was then greeted with a song by a troupe of males and females, who appeared on a stage erected in the school for that purpose. The song was entitled, "Welcome Home to Terra Nova" and was selected by Miss Annie G. O'Brien who presided at the piano. The men of Cape Broyle then presented him with a beautiful gold watch suitably engraved and magnificently wrought, and an address of welcome neatly printed on satin. The address was read from the stage and the presentation was made by Misses Lydia Rice and Amelia White.

Our hero warmly thanked the gentlemen for their grand address and splendid present and said he could not sufficiently find words to express his thanks to the ladies for the grand reception they had given him. He brought his note of thanks to a close by saying how glad he was to be back and his only sorrow was to return without his chums of Cape Broyle. The singing of the National Anthem brought this part of the proceedings to a finish. One part of the school was then cleared for the dance—an attractive feature to the young folk, while in the other part of the room teas were served. The promoter of this happy reunion for a worthy purpose and her active committee may well feel proud of the success of their efforts, for nothing essential in the ceremonial that usually features in welcomes home, was lacking. As regards quality, quantity and variety the table appointments left little to be desired, and all partook of a hearty meal. Dancing was kept up until the approaching hour of midnight reminded the wearied revellers that the hour was come for prayer, and they retired to their homes for a much needed rest.

ADDRESS
From the people of Cape Broyle to Pte. R. Shannahan.

Dear Friend:—It is with deepest feelings of pleasure and pride we assemble here this evening to offer to you our warmest greetings and to bid you a hearty welcome home. Needless to say we are glad to have you back again, but our gladness is mingled with sorrow, as no doubt yours also is when you realize that three of those who enlisted from here are not with you to-night to share with you our gladness, but God knows best and they, like many others of our brave heroes, have made the Supreme Sacrifice, and are now sleeping peacefully over seas and under the shell torn sods of France and Belgium. While we extend our heartfelt greetings, we are not unmindful of the grief which the parents, wife, brothers and sisters (God bless them) feel in the loss of those three loved ones, but there is mingled with pride, the thought of knowing that their loved ones died that we may live to enjoy the privileges of liberty, which thank God through yours and every other soldier's sacrifices have been preserved to the universe and to us. In conclusion then we again welcome you back. Any words of ours are fruitless to convey to you our feelings, but we ask you to accept this small souvenir as a slight mark of the esteem and admiration we hold for you. That the Almighty

REFILL

Dear Friends:—When entering this school to-night, I did not expect to receive such a splendid welcome as you have given me. Words fail me to express to you how surprised I am to receive such a grand address and liberal present. I cannot sufficiently explain in words how grateful I am to the ladies for this kind and generous reception. I have had very great pleasure in responding to the many complimentary remarks which have been passed my way since my return home, but as making speeches is something which I have never been called upon to perform, I know you will not expect a very elaborate effusion from me. I can only say, I tried to do my duty, and came through very luckily, thank God, only receiving two slight wounds. I have noticed in your address to me your kind reference to the friends of the boys I left behind, and I can assure you my only sorrow was to return without them. I am glad to be back home again, and from my inmost heart I sincerely thank you all.

BUSINESS 100 YEARS AGO.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)
ARTICLE 4.

I have always thought that Trinity Cove, one of the most prominent centres in which the Irish youngsters had their feet on their arrival in Newfoundland, and the invaluable interesting letters of Mr. Kelso, published in my last article that as early as ninety youngsters arrived at Trinity in one of Mr. Garland's vessels and we can easily assume the rigour and hardship to which they were subjected during the voyage across the Atlantic. Those vessels did not have been over one hundred tons, and in Newfoundland a comparatively few years ago, the Government had to pass an Act limiting the tonnage of such vessels on our vessels to and from Labrador. I remember about 1878 there were 110 men, women and children arrived from Labrador on a schooner of about 70 tons. I went aboard, and I can assure you, I will never forget my experience, and I trust I may never witness a sight again. How they lived under such surroundings has been a matter to me from that day to this. It was only through the mercy of that fever or some other epidemic did not break out amongst them. A time in years gone by I wrote the condition of affairs in the "Standard" and other newspapers. Never, the Government woke up at all, and had this last relic of barbarism abolished by Act of Parliament.

Migratory Immigrants.

It is my opinion that the Irish who arrived at Trinity in Slade's, Garland's and other vessels, after a time, moved to Bonavista Bay, and became residents of King's Cove, Knight's Cove, Broad Cove and other settlements where their descendants are to be found to-day in great numbers. Many of them must have gone north to Fogo, for instance, because we were performing his sacred duties and died there, in 1797, which is recorded on the tombstone erected over his remains in that settlement. He would not have gone there unless there were a considerable number of his people in that district. In fact, the Irish youngsters became scattered over the whole country. Last Spring I asked that sturdy and independent planter Mr. William Reid, of St. John's, who has carried on an extensive fishing business in Englee for many years, to try and ascertain for me the names of the earliest settlers in that thriving little village up north. Mr. Reid is a highly intelligent man, an antiquarian on a small scale, and delights in gleaming all information possible about our country and our people. He found out and interviewed the patriarch of the village one of those human repositories of local tradition, and ascertained the fact that the first inhabitant of Englee was an Irishman named Shaun Moe (undoubtedly John Moore). Then there were William Canning, a native of King's Cove, Bonavista Bay, Henry Gillard, of Twillingate. The last two Canning and Gillard were herring catchers about 90 years ago. Gillard married Mary Ann Hendry. There were also Wm. Shelley and James Blake, natives of England, and Jacob Moran, born in the United States, who died at Englee and lies buried at South West Brook. He was familiarly known as Sailor Jack. Mr. Reid would have procured further information for me, only he could not spare time, having to devote all his energies to looking after his fish, as he has done for the past forty years, to see that no discoloration would occur amongst his cargo, which would be the means of importing some bogus scientists amongst us to pass their opinion upon a subject that they know nothing at all about. I should like to see the scientist from abroad that would give any information to Messrs. Wm. Reid, John Toole, Fredk. Moore or some others of our practical fishermen as to how they should catch or cure fish. If the authorities wish to know the reason of the fish being discolored, etc., let them ask one of these old-timers, or better still, let them view the fish they ship to market, and ask them how they turn out such a first class article.

English Deserters.

The English youngsters did not come out in such large numbers by each ship as did the Irish. The majority of them shipped on board British vessels on a voyage to Newfoundland, and when they arrived here they jumped the ship, married, settled down and carried on the fishery. Of course great numbers were shipped at Poole, Bristol and other ports in England by the representatives or principals of Newfoundland firms who lived in England, and a fine class of men they were. These English youngsters, honest, industrious and big-hearted fellows, and very many of them became our most enterprising and successful planters, seal-killers and master-mariners. Again large numbers deserted from the men-of-war ships that were moored in our harbors during the winter months in years gone by, and I can remember several of them, who were very old men, when I was a small boy, and a pity it is that I cannot relate some of their personal experiences. De Jubainville says that the legends of Ireland are just as interesting as those of ancient Greece, but I maintain that the legends and traditions of Newfoundland are more interesting than either one or the other.

Scott's Traits.

The Scotch immigration to this country was never very numerous, but what they lacked in numbers they made up in natural commercial ability, keen intelligence, as well as thrift and economy so characteristic of their race. They grasped the first source of employment that came to hand and eventually struck out in business for themselves. Their natural adaptability for business enabled them to quickly forge to the front in the commercial life of our country, and we have an example of what they have done, and can do, in the enterprising and time-honored firm of Baine Johnston & Co., whose house-flag was known in all the great centres of commerce before Queen Victoria was born, when the Great Napoleon was crowned by Pope Pius VII., when he was at the zenith of his power and glory after the battles of Jena, Wagram and Austerlitz, and when he was defeated and exiled to the island of St. Helena after the battle of Waterloo, and the same grand old firm is with us to-day, ever foremost in the commercial life of our country, with the same vigor and success, thanks to the energy, foresight and enterprise of Mr. Walter Baine Grieve, as it was 100 years ago, or I should have said far more so. Mr. Grieve, like Julius Caesar, with his immortal 10th Legion, can call all of his faithful servants by name as he kindly greets them. The Irish and the Scotch always worked in harmony. The Scotch with a determination to succeed always stuck to their business, but the Irish and many of the English were of a roving disposition and emigrated to the United States, Canada and elsewhere, and thus we find the Irish race scattered over the civilized world. I came across a good story told by a prominent Irish member of Parliament a short time ago. The member lived in Pretoria, the capital of the Transvaal, South Africa, with a few associates, for some time. It was their custom on Sunday and holidays to hire "rickshaws" (small two-wheeled conveyances drawn by Kaffirs), to take them out to a small holiday resort some few miles away. On a certain Sunday morning three "rickshaws" were hired, as was their custom, and one of them observed that his "driver" was the bearer of a lighter skin than that possessed by his two confederates. They had a very enjoyable day, and on their return to Pretoria in the evening one of them asked the of fish. John Ivany, of Bonavista, I have supplied with a younger some time since. I wish the "George" was arrived, the season will be getting so late before she can return with lumber, which we certainly cannot do without any longer, and her salt and other goods I wish very much to lay hold on. The "Active" I suppose it is useless to look out for yet awhile.

I had thoughts of sending the "Gannet" on to Nova Scotia for the lumber, but was fearful lest you might disapprove of it, as you mentioned the "George" only, and without reference to any other vessel.

With respect to the Trade at Catalina, it seems to go on smartly, and I expect it will, provided Joseph Curl and Mr. Martin can agree together, as I would wish, but concerning this point I have my doubts. The former no doubt understands the outdoor business well but as to keeping accounts and tending shop, it is certainly out of his line, neither can I have time for such work without neglecting the others.

I have no reason to think otherwise of Curl, than that he is honest and industrious and a good judge of fish, but that he is of a hasty temper and extremely tenacious of his authority.

MOTOR CARS

Make your Motoring season an enjoyable one by owning the Car that all other motorists look upon with envy—the Buick Six is the most envied car in St.
 John's.

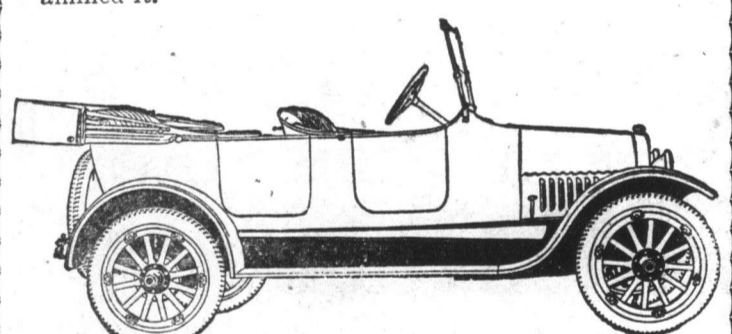

The Buick is always ready to take you anywhere you desire to go—it never falters.

When you press the starting pedal of the Buick, you are assured immediate response—the Delco starter is always on the job to turn over your engine every time you require it.

Buick Cars are luxuriously equipped, and upholstered in genuine black leather—no imitation. Strength of construction is an inherent quality of all Buicks. With the new Sixty Horsepower Valve in Head engine sixty miles an hour is easily accomplished, besides hills are made short work of.

A new and valuable feature is the entirely enclosed valves and engine, thus keeping out all grit and dust and giving longer life to the car, consequently the Engine is noiseless.

We shall be happy to let you look over our 1919
 Buick Six which recently arrived—you will be convinced why it is the most envied car once you have examined it.
