Town and County News.

Hannon's Opera House Company, composed of 18 players, will be in Guelph on Saturday and Monday week.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Church, Winterbourne, on Thanksgiving Day, presented Miss Lucy M. Bond with a handsome gold watch in recognition of her services as organist in the church. Accompanying the present was a flattering address.

ing address.

PRISONER ESCAPED. — David Cudney was arrested for stealing a pair of trousers from Mr. John Hamilton, West Garafraxa, some two months ago. He was committed on Wednesday last, and while in the house of the constable bolted out of the door without coat, boots or hat, and fied. He has not yet been found.

and fied. He has not yet been found.

As Mr. Christopher Vallentyne was stepping on the cars at Acton station, the cars gave a sudden jerk, throwing him on the ground. In falling his face struck the steps, imficting a severe wound. Fortunately Mr. H. McMillan witnessed the accident, and with presence of mind succeeded in lifting him out of the road of the wheels, otherwise he would have been run over.

HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE.—We would draw attention to the important sale of valuable household furniture, horse stock, &c. belonging to Mr. W. A. Bookless, and which takes place at his residence, Liverpool Street, hear the Congregational Church, on Tuesday next, the 26th inst., and as everything must be sold, buyers may lay their calculations to secure some of the bargains that doubtless will be going on the occasion.

Child Drowned.—On Saturday last a child aged about five years, only son of Mr. George Copeland, Eramosa, was drowned by falling into a barrel which was sunk in the ground to answer the purpose of a well. It appears the little fellow went for a pail of water, and not returning as soon as he ought to, his sister was sent out to look for him, and she found him sticking in the barrel head downward and quite dead.

Serious Runaway. — The Waterloo Chronicle says.—On Saturday evening last as Mrs. and Miss Schwendemann, of Paisley Block, were on their way home from Berlin, and within a short distance of this Village, their horse took fright and ran off at a furious rate down the embankment. When near Mr. Kleeber's hotel the horse suddenly turned, capsizing the buggy and throwing the ladies out on the frozen ground, injuring Mrs Schwendemann, it is feared, severely.

SALEM ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—At the annual meeting of this Society the following officers were elected:—Alex. Allen, re-elected President; George Burnett, Vice-President; James Davidson, re-elected Physician; Wm. Allen, re-elected Chaplain; Thos. Black, E. Wissner, A. S. Findlay, W. A. Gordon and Arch. McLelland, re-elected Directors. An amateur concert is being talked of for the annual celebration. An effort is being made to amalgamate the Elora and Salem Societies.

Lecture by Mr. George Ma the Writings of Thomas

The Mercantile Library Lecture course was opened last evening at 5teinway Hall. The lecturer was Mr. George Macdonald, the riovelist and poet; and the subject selected was "Thomas Hood." It was not a lecture, but a talk about Hood and his writings, and the talk was delightfully free and easy. There was a large and appreciative audience, but Mr. Macdonald could not have been more at home with his hearers had, he been in a drawingroom, a round the fireaide with a few friends, instead of with nearly two thousand eager faces locking into his with an intentness of interest that knew no weariness. Mr. Macdonald is a Beotehman, with a Scotch face, Scotch beard and Scotch accent, and, what is said to be remarkably rare in a Scotchman, a very quick perception of humor. The lecturer commenced with a reference to the sadness of Hood. He showed how natural this was, not only to Hood, but said that the man who would laugh heartily with you would be very likely to weep with those who weep. A little sketch of the circumstances of Hood's life came in here, accompanied by a comment on his braveness when he wrote tunny things on his sick bed, that his family might be provided for. The lecturer declined to define humor, because it was just as impossible to do so as it would to define laughter. "Faithless Sally Brown" was read as an instance of Hood's ability to draw a picture. Then followed a reading of three songs—"The Boat Song," "What can an Old Man Do?" and "Autumn." These were read to indicate the the musical power of Hood, or his ability to make songs, as the bards used to make them—to sing them as well as to speak them. Then there was a selection from "Ruth," beautifully read, and its wonderful minuteness of descriptive power commented on. As an illustration of pathos the most pathetic of all Hood's poems, as Mr. Macdonald thought, followed -namely, "The Death Bed." The lecturer said he did not mind how pathetic a poem or any other writing was made, so long as you gave the least glimmer of hope in it. This Hood did in the

She had another morn than ours.

He would not read that which was certainly the best of his longer pieces. He did not know how any one could do it in large assemblies. He referred to "The Bridge of Sighs." But he would read that which was not so good a poem, but which was far more successful, and which, as Hood's son had well said, flashed into popularity. The lecturer then read the "Song of the Shirt," with an unfamiliar power. The lecture was closed with a number of extracts from "Miss Kilmansegg and her Precious Leg." Each of these readings was interspersed with a commentary that was alternately light, grave, gay, humorous and earnest. The hour's lecture seemed to be a delightful event.

Dreadful Episode of the Slave Trade.

The Times, of India, describes the capture of a slave dhow, near Ras-el-bad, in the Gulf of Persia, by the boats of H. M. ture of a slave dhow, near Ras-el-bad, in the Gulf of Persia, by the boats of H. M. steamship Vulture. When the capture was completed, it was found that the crew and passenger, including the slave merchants, comprised thirty-six Arabs, all heavily armed. The number of slaves it was impossible at the time to estimate; so crowded on deck and in the hold below as the dhow that it seemed, but for the aspect of misery, a very nest of ants. The hold, from which a most intolerable stench proceeded, was several inches deep in the foulest bilge water and refuse; below, there were numbers of children and wretched beings in the most loathsome stages of small-pox and serofule of every description. A more diagusting and degrading spectacle of humanity could hardly be seen; whilst the foulness of the dhow was such that the sall-ors could hardly endure it. When the slaves were transferred to the Vulture, the poor wretched creatures were so dreadfully emaciated and weak that many had to be carried on board and lifted for every movement. How it was so many had survived so many hardships was a source of wonder to all that belonged to the Vulture. On examination by the surgeon, it was found that there were no less than thirty-five cases of small-pox in various stages; and from the time of the first taking of the dhow to their landing at Butcher's Island, Bombay, fifteen died out of the whole number of one hundred and sixty nine. at the bookstores.

The current of air created by the flames in the Boston fire was so great that fragments of paper were carried sixteen miles way. Leaves of checkbooks and ledgers were found at Quincy, Hanover and East Weymouth. Cinders fell in Abington, Hanover and Pembroke. A charred 850 note was picked up at East Abington. The glare of the conflagration was seen by night at Concord, N.H., and the light was distinctly visible interty miles at see, and was also noticed off the Isle of Shoals.

Ma. BRECHER appointed the Sunday after the recent election for the baptism of children. Due notice had been given from the pulpit, and among the array of little ones presented was a bright, curly headed boy, and Mr. Bescher proceeded with the service;—"This child, Horsoe Greeley, I bap—" It was too much for the congregation, and the mounce-for the recent election for the baptism of children. Due notice had been given from the pulpit, and among the array of little ones presented was a bright, curly headed boy, and Mr. Bescher proceeded with the service;—"This child, Horsoe Greeley, I bap—" It was too much acknowledgement.

During the rejoicings at Clifton, after the close of the poll, Mr. Thompson took occasion to allude to his long connection with the Reform party, and to announce that, as in the past, so he would be found acting with them in the future. This knocks the Tory idea of Thompson's neutrality square on the head.

The St. Catharines Times, commenting on the recent Welland election, says: It is not denied that the John A. Macdonald party brought from forty to fifty thousand dollars into the county to bribe and corrupt the electors. They sent into the county they would be county to work they sent into the county they would be county to bribe and corrupt the electors. They sent into the county they would be supposed to the county to fifty thousand dollars into the county to fifty thousand the county to fifty thousand the county to fifty thousand samely county five Cabinet Ministers and at least half a hundred more large and small political workers, amongst whom are such famous and notorious names as Wm. McDougall, A. W. Lauder, from Ferguson, James Cotton, J. C. Rykert, Angus Morrison, M. C. Cameron, J. G. Moylan, J. H. Cameron, Canavan, Farrar, Kingsmill, Ald. Smith, Ruf. Stephenson, and we don't know how many more lights of various degrees of magnitude. Besides this, they issued orders under the severe penalty of dismissal that every employee on the Canal must work and vote for the corruptionist candidate. The same was done to all Government officers along the lines, and the result was that many were obliged to vote for King who did so with the greatest possible geluctance.

The Presbyterian Tercentenary.

Since the memorable reunion of the Cld and New School branches of the Presbyterian Church and their "memorial year" in 1870-71, probably nothing has been of more historic interest in the denomination than the celebrations in the country, as follows:

The list of specially invited guests was very large, and included the living ex-Moderators and Clerks of the General Assembly, the Professors in the Theological Seminaries, the members of the Boards of the Church, Presbyterian members of the Church, Presbyterian nembers of the National, State and Municipal Judiciary, and editors of Presbyterian newspapers. The following was the order of the proceedings: At ten a.m., the ministers and elders in attendance met at the rooms, No. 1, 334 Cheshnut-st., and marched in procession to the church. After appropriate opening services, this memorial address was delivered by the Rev. S. J. Wilson, D.D., L.L. D. Historical papers were read at the afternoon session, as follows: One by the Rev. R. M. CHAPTER XXVI.

The important letter which was to apprise them of this ought to have been at the cottage at least an hour before noon, but unfortunately its bearer, Jamie Welsh, the most faithful of letter-carriers, was not the most speedy. How he managed to loiter most of the day in his journey was never sufficiently explained, but certain it is that he did not make his appearance in Matthew Greigson's latchen till dusk, by which time Matthew had returned from the sad work of the day, and he and Ailie were sitting by the fire, full of mourning and sorrow, when Jamie came shambling in with that simple smile on his face which he always wore, and which sufficiently betrayed his mental deficiency.

which sumcentry betrayed his mental deficiency.

The inmates of the cottage, supposing that he was on one of his usual wandering tours through the country, and hadlooked in for refreshment, received him their usual kindly way, and Allie hastened to set before him a substantial supply of milk and scones. The sight of his food was sufficient to engross all Jamie's attention and forthwith he set himself to the work of mastication with an earnestness which admitted of no diversion of his feeble mind.

admitted or no diversion or his leenie mind.

"Been far the day?" asked Matthew, in a listless way, for he was in no mood for talking, as he was in the habit of dong to Jamie, and spoke now only because the thought Jamie was growing sulky at his silence.

And so, in truth, he was, for nothing offended the half-witted fellow more than to refrain from speaking to him.

"Maybe I hae," he replied drily.

"Are ye gaun west or east the night?"

"Ay am I; either the ane or the ither, but I ken best mysel'."

"That's very true, Jamie."

"There's siething, at ony rate," went on the simpleton, "Iwadna hae been here the nicht had it no been tae sair you."

"The seir me Janie, in what way?"

here the nicht had it no been the saryou."

"Tae sair me, Jamie—in what way?"

"Hoo can I tell? But it maun be worth something or I wadna hae gotten sic a bonny white penny for comin?."

Aha! see here it's, lad; its no every day ye see a penny like that."

Saying which, Jamie dived his finger and thumb into his vest pocket, and extracted a bright new half-crown, which he exhibited in triumph.

"But you don't say, Jamie, that you got that for comin' here the nicht?" said Matthew, whose curiosity began to be aroused.

said Matthew, whose curiosity began to be aroused.

"Div I no? Aha, but he ken na better. Puir silly folk like you never ken naething. It tak's me tae keep ye a' right. Noo, I'll wager ye'll no guess wha gied me the big white penny."

"Weel, no; I really canna."

"See that—hoo feekless ye are. And I'll wager ye'll no ken what it was for."

"That's true tae Jamie. I canna ever

"That's true tae Jamie. I canna even gues."

"Hech, sirs, but ye are far ahint," returned Jamie, bestowing a look of unmitigated pity on Matthew, in commiseration of his ignorance. "But," he added, complacently, "it's a guid thing there's ae wise man in the parish."

"There nae doot o' that, Jamie. The country side wad dae ill wantin' you. And noo, my man, are ye gaunna tell me wha gied ye the siller for comin' here?"

"Was't no?"

"And what was the message, Jamie?"

"Oo, ye'll sune see that," responded the other, as he remeved his greasy cap and took from thence first his pocket handkerchief, and the letter, which he had carefully deposited within the lining.

had carefully deposited within the lining.

"A letter!" exclaimed Matthew.
"Who can it be from? Hand me my spectacles, Ailie."

Matthew recieved so few letters now adays that the arrival of this one, and by such a messenger, caused some little wonder both to Ailie and himself. She therefore stirred up the fire to agree light by which it might be read, while Matthew with his pruning knife cut the cavelopen. Before doing this he deliberately examined the address, but the plain and beautiful handwriting was strange to him, and that helped him in noway to a knowledge of the sender.

His operations were closely watched by Jamie, and when from the inside of the envelope Matthew pulled forth the folded pieces of paper, he loudly exclaimed—

"Twa letters in ane: that's no fair;

"Twa letters in ane: that's no fair;

"Twa letters in ane; that's no fair; that's cheatin'! I sud hae gotten twa white pennies."

Neither of the two enclosures being sealed Matthew opened the first, and no sooner had he done so than he leapt from his chair with a loud joyous err—

leapt from his chair with a loud joyous cry—

"Oh, Ailie, he's safe yet!" he exclaimed. "This is frae him tae Maister Harry. Oh, but we hae been mista'en, clean mista'en, after a'."

"Heaven grant it, Matthew," gasped Ailie; "is the letter frae Maister G——,"

"Whisht; no a word. It's a secret, and manuna be breathed. He says sae here. Oh, but I maun awa' in search o' Maister Harry. He canna learn the joyfu' tidn's owre sune."

"But, Matthew," cried Ailie in the utmost excitement, "where is he? and what has he no come—?"

"Whisht, Ailie, I tell ye no a word enoo. Pil tell ye a' aboot it when I come back."

And, as he snoke Matthew rushed to a enoo. I'll tell ye a' aboot it when I come back."

And, as he spoke, Matthew rushed to a corner where lay his stick and bonnet, and, seizing them, rushed from the house at the top of his speed.

"Puir creature, he's daft," said Jamie, gazing afier him. "Ye sud see tae him, mistress; he is no fit tae gaug at large.

But to this sagacious remark Allie paid no heed, her state of happiness and excitement being nearly as great as that of her husband.

"Look me, if they arena baith daft," said Jamie, as he shambled to the door and made his exit from the cottage. "I dinna ken what this parish is comin' tae. I'll sune be the only wise man in it; and hoo am I tae haud them a' richt I watna."

Meanwhile Matthew, at a speed greatly beyond what his years warranted, ascended the ravine, and struck through the fields, intending to cross the park and go to the mansion in search of Harry. But he had not to go so far. He met him near the extremity of the park, and fresh from the presence of his father and Nathan the text Harry's joy on receiving the tidne cannot be described. He could not at first believe it, so convinced was he

CASH I

TREMENDOUS SUCCESS!

Ready Pay Principle Victorious!

THE NEW STORE

"CASH" is now doing Double the Amount of Trade for Ready Pay that any Credit Establishment in Guelph is doing.

Because for Ready Pay a small profit only is asked, the money is turned over five times when Ready Pay is made, but the credit system entglis an extra per centage added in marking goods, in order to guard against bad debts. The man who gives credit cannot buy his goods as well as the man who does not.

WHY?

Because he has to buy his stock on credit, and is thereby deprived of the large saving to be made by buying for cash, but the man who sells for ready pay has the money in hand when he goes to market, and can take every benefit that the trade will offer. Such being the case, who can wonder at he great rush there is going on at present at the new store. "OASH" is creating quite a panic among the slow coaches who have been living at their ease on large profits, and he is now going to make a shaking among the dry bones.

Hurry up with your money. Don't forget the spot,

MINKERIES.—The rapid disappearance of fur bearing animals from the Dominion is hadrally railing the pice of all classes of fur. This more especially applies to mink peltries which in a very few years have more than doubled their yalue. Mink are a species of weasel, and consequently do well in confiement, and they are so extremely prolific that one pair will stocks very extensive minkery in four years; from which time, if properly attended to, at least 50 per cent. of the oldest may be taken for their skins. Great care should be used in the construction of the cage. The best plan is to dig a square pit, brick it up, and then fill in with sandy soil, in which they can burrow. Supply water, all the animal food they will eat, afford them a shrubbery in which to gambol and they will thrive. By all means avoid planking in their enclosure, as their sharp teeth will soon effect a release. Usestone or brick. This fall a full grown pair of mink are worth from $10 to $14, according to condition. Canadian trappers and speculative farmers should enter upon their breeding, as it is carried on already very extensively in the New England States and with increasing success.—Montreal Witness.

HARVER'S MAGAZINE.—We have received the December number of this Magazine from W. E. Tunis & Co. For sale at the Bookstores.

A young officer of the British House of Commons wore a tremendous pair of "moustaches," on which one of the members said, "My dear fellow, now the war is over, why don't you put your moustaches on the peace establishment?" "Had you not better put your tongue on the civil list," was the prompt and happy retort.
