explanation by the Government. The older section of the constituency commences within thirty-five miles of the city of Ottawa, and for that district they have appointed Mr. Barry at Campbell's Bay. The second district, the Temiskaming, is about 300 miles from the main or older portion of the constituency, and apparently there is no person appointed there. The third is known as the Abitibi district, and there the Government have appointed Mr. Lucien Ladouceur of Amos, Que. When I was indiscreet enough to suggest a third commissioner I suppose they thought they had better have a good Tory friend who had been assisting them here, so they appointed a man from Ottawa. But they have not taken care of the Temiskaming or Ville Marie district by any one of these appointments, and it will cost the Government more to have either of these commissioners go to that district than to appoint a local man.

I suppose this debate will serve the purpose of leading some people in the country to believe that patronage has been abolished, for I do not know any other good Government purpose that it could serve. Of course, it will have no effect upon me because, since I became a member of this House, I have failed to see that political patronage has been abolished in any appointments that were of a nature to be useful to the party in power. Why, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty) this afternoon in answering some criticisms from this side of the House treated the good faith of the Government in this matter as more or less of a joke. Apparently he thought it was quite a joke that any person should take the contention seriously that the Government were living up to their promises of 1917. He may think the Government is more or less of a joke, Mr. Speaker, but the great bulk of the people of this country do not; they consider the Government is a tragedy.

Mr. EDMOND PROULX (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, I understand this resolution is to be withdrawn.

Mr. COPP: Where did you get that from?

Mr. PROULX: My right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) said at the beginning of his speech that we would have more details of the subject matter of the resolution later on; and while my right hon. friend the Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty) in stating that we had had a few years' experience of this system and found that it did not work too well in some respects, rather implied that there might be some amendments made to the Civil Service Act; and taking into consideration also the fact that there was a ministerial caucus this morning, I infer that the matter must have been discussed there, and some promises must have been made by the ministers to their supporters that amendments would be made to the Civil Service Act this session. So I presume this resolution is going to be withdrawn.

In case it is not withdrawn, I wish to say that I do not intend to support the resolution. I believe that when Parliament some years ago applied the Civil Service Act to the Inside Service it was good legislation, and I believe the Act has worked very well in that respect. Mistakes may have been made, but ministers and deputy ministers also make mistakes. The Civil Service Commission, I believe, is trying to apply the Act to the best advantage. With regard to the Outside Service, I am of the opinion of my hon. friends, the member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) and the member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux), that for positions such as postmasterships in the large cities and towns the Civil Service Commission is the best body to hold competitive examinations and make the proper appointments; in other words, I believe that those positions should be filled on merit rather than as the result of political influence. With regard to the appointment of postmasters and other local officials in rural districts I have no fault to find with the previous practice. When my friends were in power I exercised the patronage in my constituency, I never shirked the responsibility, and I do not think I ever recommended a wrong appointment; anyway, my people never reproached me. I did not always please those who applied for appointment, I had to make a choice from among those I considered best fitted to fill the vacancy, just as the Civil Service Commission have to do now. I think the same applies in all other constituencies. Members of Parliament have a certain standing in their constituencies, and I think they can be trusted to make proper recommendations. My hon. friend from Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) was very generous to-night, more generous than I have known him in the past, he being ready, he said, to concede to us the privilege of making recommendations. Well, I am not going to ask that privilege from this Government; but if they apply to me I will exercise the responsibility of recommending fit and proper persons for any appointments in my constituency.

When I was asked by the Dominion Statistician last fall to make recommendations with regard to the district for the taking of the census, I was not like my hon. friend from South Renfrew (Mr. Pedlow), I did not expect the Government would be so generous as to ask me to recommend any persons as census commissioners or enumerators, so I never volunteered any recommendations. I may say that from applications I have received I must assume that my electors, like the electors of my hon. friend from South Renfrew and of other hon. gentlemen who have spoken to-day, have been deceived into imagining that patronage had been abolished and that those census appointments were open to all electors, irrespective of party affiliations. I may say that I received quite a few applications, which I forwarded to the Dominion Statistician. I expected that he would transmit them to the County Commissioner, and I know that if the applicants were appointed, they would be able to do the work properly. But I am not too sure that they will be appointed; I can see by what the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) said this afternoon that the appointments for the taking of the census are going to be political appointments. It would seem that this is about the only consolation left to Government supporters. They are not going to stay in power very long, and it must be a consolation to them to get a few of their friends appointed in connection with the taking of the census. I do not begrudge them the consolation; I think they are justly entitled to it. If they can make a few friends out of it and thereby save themselves from defeat at the next election, they are welcome to it, but I do not think that they will make enough friends to enable them to bring about that result.

I do not want to prolong the debate, Mr. Speaker. I do not approve of the resolution as drafted because it includes both the Inside and the Outside Service, and I want the Inside Service to remain under the Civil Service Commission. I think it would be a retrograde step to take the Inside Service away from the Civil Service Commission. If the resolution was amended in such a way as to leave the Inside Service with the Civil Service Commission, as well as all appointments to positions in the different cities—in post offices and customs offices—giving only the local appointments to members or to defeated candidates, then I would be disposed to support the resolution. As I say, I am not disposed to support it as at present drafted.

Mr. A. B. COPP (Westmoreland): Mr. Speaker, the discussion on the resolution before the House has disclosed some misunderstanding of the situation. Apparently my hon. friends on both sides of the House have during the last two or three years taken seriously the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) and his confreres in the Cabinet when they were talking of the abolition of patronage. Those who have known the right hon. gentleman as long as I have must realize, however, his ability to make a most eloquent speech, to talk idealism, to pour forth platitudes—but when it comes down to doing things he is still imbued with the old doctrine of the dyed-in-the-wool Tory: "To the victors belong the spoils." In common with his confreres, he says: We are living under conditions of patronage just as we have done all the years that have passed.

Now, I am not deceived, Mr. Speaker, in regard to this matter. I had no confidence in the statement of the Government that patronage would be abolished; therefore I am not disappointed. When my friend, Mr. Coates, wrote to me, as he did to other members of Parliament, asking for information with regard to the areas that were being established in my constituency, for the purpose of collecting Census statistics I replied furnishing him with the information, but I did not, as other hon. members did, waste a moment of time in offering any suggestions or making any recommendations with regard to the appointment of census enumerators or any person else who might be employed in connection with the taking of the census in my constituency. I knew that such suggestions or recommendations would not be acted upon; they had never done so in the past. In spite of the protestations made by hon. gentlemen opposite, they had no idea that any such recommendations would be received or acted upon, they are not deceiving me or deceiving the country in regard to the matter.

As to the suggestion that political patronage in Canada has been abolished, why, Mr. Speaker, it is more rampant now than it ever was. Our friends opposite are using the Civil Service Commission, appointed by themselves to find jobs for some of their own political friends, and they are using that Commission as a buffer between themselves and the people. That is all the Civil Service Commission was ever intended to be; that is all it has ever been used for. It is merely talking nonsense for hon. gentlemen to speak at length about political patronage being abolished; the people of this country know better. They know it, Sir, because they have had the experience and are having the experience every day and every hour. Down in my constituency I have adopted a new arrangement in regard to patronage. By some means or other, my friends opposite have caused unsuspecting people in some localities to believe that patronage has been abolished. They come to me and write to me asking that I recommend them for some positions in the service of the country. Well, Sir, for some time they continued coming to me, and I would tell them: If you want this job do not take a recommendation from me; that would absolutely put you out of business. So I have adopted another course. When a man comes to me who I do not wish to get a job I recommend him and he is sure of being turned down by the powers that be; the more and stronger reasons I have for keeping that man from getting a job, the stronger I make my recommendation, and the more certain I am that he will not get the job. If I had a friend whom I would like to get a job and there is practically no possibility of his getting it, I write a letter to some of my friends who will go to the powers that be and tell them that this man should not have the job because he is rather inclined to be tory—and sometimes he gets a job in that way. In fact, that is the only way that I can work patronage in my own constituency under the present Government.

I am inclined to accept the statement of my hon. friend from Ottawa (Mr. Fripp) who has told us frequently in this House—and he told us emphatically this afternoon—that policical patronage has not been abolished; that it was being handed over to a few individuals who make the appointments to the public service. My hon. friend is either right or wrong. If he is wrong, he is intentionally taking the stand that he does, for he knows. He has been a member of parliament for some years; he lives in Ottawa, where he is in touch with thousands of Civil Service employees; he knows the situation. If his statement is true, Mr. Speaker, it is a disgrace that the Government should stand up and talk about political patronage being abolished and thus try to decive the people. It is a quarrel between my hon. friends of the Government and the hon. member from Ottawa, their loyal supporter; one is right and the other is wrong. With the little knowledge that I have I am rather inclined to believe that my hon. friend from Ottawa is right and that my hon. friends of the Government are still trying to deceive the people in regard to this patronage question.

When the Minister of Trade and Commerce would make his solemn protestations, his eloquent appeals that we should drop party politics, hon. gentlemen on this side would say to me: "Why, how he is mellowing with years." They did not understand the hon. gentleman. They did not understand him then, and they do not understand him now. He can make eloquent pleadings in regard to the situation, but that is what he did as long ago as I can remember him in the province of New Brunswick; what he has done during all his public life he is doing now. Why, Sir, he admitted to-day that we are going back to old line party politics in the selection of 24,000 census enumerators. He is going to follow along the same old lines in which he was brought up and in which, I am sure, he will pass to the other side, notwithstanding the pleasant speeches which he makes in regard to the matter—speeches which do not mean anything to the people of this country.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Before the hon. member for Victoria (Sir Sam Hughes) left, he asked me to state that he wished this motion withdrawn, his object having been accomplished by the discussion that has taken place this afternoon. I therefore, wish to move that the motion be withdrawn. I understand that he has made the same statement to Your Honour.

Mr. McKENZIE: Might I be permitted to say a word?

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member is asking that the motion be withdrawn.

Mr. J. J. DENIS (Joliette): Mr. Speaker, if I may be allowed, I was standing up when the hon. gentleman asked that the motion be withdrawn, and in that case I think I should be permitted to speak.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: I thought no other members wished to speak. My motion is only made in case all are through.

Mr. DENIS: Mr. Speaker, I have only a word to say; I do not want to delay the House. It appears to me that one point which should have been submitted to the Government has not been submitted. I have in my hand a list of the census commissioners for the province of Quebec. As we all know there are in Quebec 65 constituencies, and in some constituencies, there is more than one commissioner, so that there are about seventy commissioners for the census of 1921 in that province. It has been argued that patronage does not exist any more, and that, therefore, these gentlemen who have been nominated as commissioners in Quebec should have been chosen from the people of both parties. If we take the last Federal election as representing the opinion of Quebec in regard to the Liberal or the Conservative party, we should come to the conclusion that the Liberal party is in the majority in that province. Therefore, if these nominations had been made on a non-partisan basis, the majority of the nominees should be Liberals. Are they Liberals or Conservatives? I have my opinion about that, but I shall not pronounce upon the subject. I should like hon. gentlemen on the other side to give the answer, and I am on the floor for that purpose of extending an invitation to them to do so. Out of about 70 nominees, are there 35 Liberals? Are ten of them Liberals? Are five of them Liberals? Are two of them Liberals? Is there one Liberal out of the 70 nominees? I should like to know.

Mr. FIELDING: Is there one righteous man?

Mr. DOHERTY: Does the hon. gentleman really desire an answer to the question? I may say that we never concerned ourselves to inquire.

Mr. DENIS: Then it would surely be impossible that out of 70 nominations, not even one Liberal should be chosen. No one will believe that.

Mr. D. D. McKENZIE (Cape Breton North and Victoria): As regards those appointments to which the hon. member for Joliette (Mr. Dennis) has referred, it is not at all possible that one single Liberal has been appointed. The possibility would be rather the other way. The incredible thing would have happened if the Government had appointed a Liberal where there was a possibility of doing anything else. In the last election of 1917, we were told that appointments would be at least fifty-fifty as the Government was supposed to be fifty-fifty. In my constituency of North Cape Breton and Victoria, there were about 60 or 65 officials, great or small, in connection with the election, and out of those 60 or 65 there were two Liberals. That possibly is the conception of hon. gentlemen opposite of fifty-fifty. They have such a lofty appreciation of their own crowd, that possibly that is the proportion in which they would regard them, although the value and merit would go the other way. The two that I got out of the 65 were got by mere accident. At a place called Big Baddeck, a gentleman by the name of John Cylie was appointed. A gentleman of splendid Irish extraction, who would not act for the Government in the election, and at the eleventh hour they had to take a Scotchman by the name of McInnis. In the other case, they appointed a man who had no learning at all, who could not write his name, but at the eleventh hour he took cold feet and thought he would not be equal to the occasion, and in that emergency they had to appoint his neighbour who was the nearest man who would do the job, as there was no time to look around for anybody else. Therefore, out of 65 where the proportion was to be fifty-fifty, there were only two Liberals and those two appointments were made by the law of necessity and accident, so that nobody is going to surprise me in any way by telling me that this Government, although promising to do these wonderful things and to abolish patronage, has thrown all that to the winds and followed the old-time custom.

In the present series of appointments I see that the same custom is being exactly followed. I do not profess to be able to tell who all the commissioners in Nova Scotia are, but I know the names and personnel of the men in my immediate neighbourhood. Good fellows they are in every way, but they are, of course, of the stripe which they were expected to be under the circumstances. With that, I find no fault, but I find fault with this. For the last four or five years, and particularly for the last three years, we have been promised that all appointments of this class should go to returned soldiers; that returned soldiers were to be appointed to every office for which such men could be found. I know the men who have been appointed in the counties of Victoria, Cape Breton and Richmond, but not one of them is a returned soldier, and I am sure the place is full of men who are returned soldiers just as capable of filling those offices as the men who were appointed. Why were those returned soldiers not appointed? Why did the Government not keep its word in that connection? Here is an army of 24,000 men who will be appointed throughout this country, and what guarantee have we that when the matter gets out of the hands of the Government, any better appointments, as far as returned soldiers are concerned, will be made than the Government have made themselves?

I believe it is true that when a commissioner is appointed in any particular area, he has the selection of his men. He has been appointed on Tory lines for Tory service, not at all because he has given any service to his country overseas. When he comes to make his selections, he will have to pick out and put in office men who are Tory heelers in the different wards, and the returned soldier will not "have even a look-in," as the slang phrase goes. I, therefore, protest against what I may call deception, or perhaps, worse—treachery in making promises to returned men that they should receive offices of this kind and then, when the opportunity has arisen, where 24,000 men are to be appointed, returned men—and there are plenty of them in the country to do the work—are entirely ignored.

It is said that the average pay of those enumerators will be about $100, although, perhaps, some of them will receive more than that and some less. If you put the average at $100 for each of the 24,000, youg have something like $2,400,000 to be expended merely in connection with the enumeration or filling out the schedules. That would be quite an item amongst returned men who are to-day unemployed in this country; but we have no assurance, no guarantee whatever, that from the Atlantic to the Pacific a single returned man will be employed. It should have been made a condition precedent that returned men should get these positions. That is one of the things that should have been stipulated before the making of those appointments was handed over to the census commissioners. I know the men who were appointed in the part of the country from which I come are well-to-do men who do not need those jobs. They are not poor. They are well-to-do merchants, farmers, or contractors. They have lots of money, and are able to get along without a job of this kind, while on the other hand there are lots of clever fellows who have lost a leg, or a hand, or an eye, at the war, to whom such a job would be a God send, but they are brushed aside as no goods, and the positions are given to men who from a financial standpoint do not need them at all. I think it is only proper, in case the matter may yet be remedied and these jobs be given to returned men, that I should bring this matter to the notice of the Government, and I do so in all sincerity so far as the returned soldiers are concerned, but I am afraid there will not be much sincerity in any answer I may receive.

As to the merits of this motion, the situation in the Civil Service is an old story to those of us who have been here for many years. I remember the former Prime Minister making a statement when leader of the Opposition that the trouble with the Civil Service was that it was overmanned and underpaid. That was the statement made by the hon. member for King's (Sir Robert Borden). But did things get better after the right hon. gentleman got charge of things in this country? What happened? For the first three years after the Government came into power, between 1911 and 1914, when the war broke out, 11,000 men, roughly speaking, were dismissed, turned out on the road to make room for others, and 25,000 were put in their places, just for the sake of patronage. That is what has crowded the offices and the departments to such an extent that something had to be done. The ministers themselves did not care to take the responsibility of putting these men out, the deputy ministers could not put them out, there was nobody to put them out, and so the Government had to get Arthur Young and Company and Griffenhagen from a foreign country, and send them sword in hand into these different departments to kill, slay, destroy, and kick out these people for whom the ministers had no use. The departments had become overloaded with these men by reason of promises and patronage, and when these foreigners came to put them out it cost this country, according to the statement made by the senior member for Ottawa (Mr. Fripp), which I believe is correct, $139,666—just to relieve the congestion in the departments that had been brought about by the mis-management of hon. gentlemen opposite.

A couple of years ago, when this matter was brought up in the House, I tried to illustrate conditions in the Civil Service by telling a little story that someone told me about the conditions in the departments in Ottawa. A minister of the Crown promised a man a job. The man came up here looking for the job, but there was no job for him. He knocked about the minister's office for a few days, and at last, in despair, the minister gave him a note to the deputy, "For God's sake do something with this fellow. I must get him out of my office and out of my sight. Put him somewhere." The deputy had to obey, and was perhaps willing to obey, the behests of his master. He told this fellow: "Here is a pile of blue books. Take them out of here and put them away back there. Then when you have done that, put them in that room over there, then you can bring them back here. Keep at it all the time." Well, the man started in to move these books around from one place to the other, and kept at it continually for a week or so. Then he came back to the deputy minister and said: "Mr. Brown, I am not going to stay here. I am going away. There is something the matter. There is a blooming Bolshevist or something in this office that follows me around wherever I go. If I go into this room he is after me. If I go into that room he follows me there, and when I come back here, he is here too." "Oh, don't be alarmed about that," said the deputy, "that is your assistant." Such was the condition of things. The man himself had nothing to do, but he was given a helper to assist him, and I suppose there was somebody else helping the helper. That is the condition the Civil Service has arrived at.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce tells us with gusto and a great pounding of wood this afternoon that in one department he found 475 men who were actually doing nothing, so he turned them out. He had put these men in himself; Griffenhagen found out there was nothing for them to do, so the minister told Griffenhagen to decapitate them. The minister has gained glory in the country for putting them in and now he is looking for more glory for putting them out, and I suppose there will be more glory coming to the Government for putting these fellows in once more again. Out they go, and in they come, and so the merry-go-round will go for the short time ahead of this Government. That is the way things are being done in the Civil Service. Hon. gentlemen opposite laugh as if it were not a serious matter. Do they not think that the people of this country are a serious, sane people? Do they not think that our people are a God-fearing, truth-telling people, and have a right to believe what solemn old gentlemen who are ministers of the Crown tell them? No, they seem to glory in being able to camouflage the people of this country, and think them foolish mortals if they believe for one moment that the Government are serious about anything they tell them.

[Mr. McKenzie.]

And no wonder they reach that conclusion when I find resolutions of this kind being passed in some parts of the country. Here is a resolution that was sent to me, to the effect that there was no patronage in this country, that the Government was keeping to its word, and that it would be a pity to disturb them in the magnificent way they were carrying out their promises in 1917:

> Whereas the Dominion Government in 1918 passed an Act entitled "The Civil Service Act of Canada", by which Act political patronage was abolished and all future appointments and promotions were to be made by merit, and
>
> Whereas we have ample proof that the said Act is operating independent of political leanings, service and merit being the main consideration in appointments and promotions,
>
> Therefore be it resolved that this association places itself on record as being unalterably opposed to any return to political patronage so far as the Civil Service of Canada is concerned, and that a copy of the foregoing resolution be forwarded to the Honourable the Prime Minister of Canada, the members representing Nova Scotia in the House of Commons the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, and to the press of Halifax.

That has come to me from the fair province of Nova Scotia, where there are good honest men living quietly in the land of the apple blossom, men who go to church regularly, say their prayers as they should, eat plenty of fish, and sleep soundly at night, and believe that there is yet such a thing in this world as honesty. Well, in the simplicity of their hearts, they sent in this resolution and requested me to back it up in the House. I have submitted it to the House, not because I believe its contents, but, Mr. Speaker, I have been here too long and have watched the manoeuvrings of hon. gentlemen opposite too closely to be deceived in any way as to what their intention is and the way in which they execute it. But I read the resolution to show how people can be deceived and how they are led to put confidence where it really is not merited.

If the Civil Service Act were carried out properly I believe that it would work well, so far, at all events, as the Inside Service is concerned, and possibly the only way in which that service can be efficiently managed is by means of the Civil Service Act. Of course, it works both ways. It is clumsy and impossible to expect the Civil Service Commission to make appointments in remote parts of the country, and, on the other hand, it would be impossible to ask myself or any other man who lives in the extreme East or the extreme West to make an appointment at Ottawa. For that reason I believe that the Civil Service Commission should be given full control of the Inside Service, as was done by the Liberal government in 1908. But I do believe that as regards minor appointments and appointments that have to be made in country constituencies, they would more properly be attended to by members supporting the Government.

Some hon. gentleman has said that the patronage should be given to defeated candidates and members not supporting the Government. I do not believe that myself. I am a party man; I make no bones about that fact. I believe in the party system, and I think that a proper, honestly conducted party is one of the essentials of clean government in this country. I am in favour of party, not because of any profit that the system could bring to me or to my friends, but because it is indispensable to wholesome government. We have not found any better way of governing this country than by means of the party system. It is therefore absolutely essential that that system should exist, and if the patronage which any party has charge of while in power is given to its friends and the work is properly done, I have no complaint to make. But what I do object to is that there should be deception, that men should parade the country and come to my friends saying: "Vote for me, because we have abolished patronage; we are all alike; there is no difference between us;" whereas, in their hearts, they know that this is not so and that patronage will be given to their friends.

Most extraordinary things happen in my riding, where there is a large population and a great variety of government interests. Appointments are made now and again, and I have frequently tried to help out. On one occasion particularly, where there were two offices vacant, I suggested that one from each party should be appointed in view of the fact that patronage no longer existed. But, nothing of the kind was done. Every time the Government happened to light upon their own friends, nothing but a Tory, and a good Tory, was appointed. Will the Minister of Justice, or the Minister of Finance, or some sage of the Government, tell me how it is that the prophetic vision of the Civil Service Commission has every time lit upon a Tory? Is the olfactory nerve of the chairman, and of those around him, developed to such a degree that, merely by existence in such a Tory atmosphere, they can at a distance of fifteen hundred or two thousand miles pick out a Tory from amongst other mortals? Yet, that is what is happening. So that it is mere camouflage and deception to say that these appointments are made as a result of observation, examinations, literary tests, etc., when these various devices always achieve the end of selecting a supporter of the Government. I would say to the Government at once that if they desire to fulfil their promise that patronage would be abolished they should immediately determine to be honest about these things and to make these appointments in such a way as shall leave no room for suspicion.

Now, before I sit down, I want to have a word or two with the Minister of Justice in regard to his rush to the defence of the Minister of Trade and Commerce this afternoon. No doubt the artillery which was turned on the Minister of Trade and Commerce from the direction of the hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) was pretty hot, and the Minister of Justice, finding that the defence of his right hon. friend who sat alongside him had been badly demolished, thought that it was really time to rush to his aid, heedless of the fact that possibly there was no call from that gentlemen's friends for him to espouse his cause. I do not know how it was, but my right hon. friend's mind drifted into Holy Writ. Now, we do not very often find him in that realm.

Mr. DOHERTY: Force of good example.

Mr. McKENZIE: His law is usually very good, although, I must say, sometimes rather prosy. However, he generally succeeds in reaching his objective; I must do him that justice. As a reward of good hearing, keen attention, patience and good staying powers, one is generally able to get one's money's worth when the right hon. minister is expounding law. But this afternoon he made a dreadful mistake in his incursion into foreign ground. At last he found himself among the prophets; he found himself with Saul and other characters he does not meet very often. I could not understand what he was driving at when he said: "The offence is about to come, but woe unto him through whom it cometh." That is a prophecy. It was uttered at a time when it was half prophecy and half preaching. But it never occurred to the right hon. gentlemen to reflect on the occasion that called forth that prophecy. It was made shortly before the great tragedy of nearly two thousand years ago. "The offence is about to come, but woe unto him through whom it cometh." The right hon. gentlemen never thought of the two principal characters that were going to carry out the prophecy —two striking characters. One of them was Pontius Pilate, and the other was Judas Iscariot.

Mr. DOHERTY: May I ask which of my hon. friends, the hon. gentleman who now has the floor and the hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's, is Pontius Pilate, and which is Judas Iscariot?

Mr. McKENZIE: I have no difficulty in replying to my right hon. friend. I believe myself that Pontius Pilate was a lawyer; I have no doubt about that. He was a lawyer in authority administering justice; so is my right hon. friend.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh!

Mr. McKENZIE: And, if I mistake not, Judas Iscariot was commercially inclined, and in the political arrangements of those days he would be Minister of Trade and Commerce. I have only to say in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, that I would advise the Minister of Justice, to ponder more carefully over what the outcome of his Biblical quotations will be in the future.

Mr. C. A. FOURNIER (Bellechasse): I have learned many things this evening. I have learned that we have spent the whole day for nothing, because this resolution is going to be withdrawn. Before it is withdrawn I have one or two observations to make. Let me say at the outset, Mr. Speaker, that I do not care for patronage. In 1917 I was elected against two opponents. They received eighty votes between them; so I do not care whether they get the patronage or not. One thing that I do object to, is to have hon. gentlemen opposite declare that they are sincere in this matter. I would like them to demonstrate their sincerity. It is useless to seek to disguise matters; hon. gentlemen opposite are Tories. They go to bed Tories, and they wake up in the morning with another name, whether it be Arthur Young, Griffenhagen or something else. Mr. Speaker, you know me. You know that I am a Catholic. I profess no other religion. If I should say to you that I am a Catholic Protestant attending a Synagogue you would laugh at me, would you not? You would say that I was a fraud and you would be right. I leave the decision to you. You can find just as suitable a name to characterize hon. gentlemen opposite when they talk about their sincerity. As to the question of patronage and the making of appointments by the Civil Service Commission, I believe there should be a competitive system. I think it is proper that the Civil Service Commission should make appointments; but as regards this petty appointment and that petty appointment, even in the case of a man who is employed in watching the building of a wharf, that is all nonsense. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, that there should be a little sincerity in this matter for it is costing the country a lot of money. It is all well enough to say that at the Printing Bureau we have saved $600,000, but when we come to the Auditor General's Report we find that there has been a large sum paid for printing done outside the Bureau.

I shall not detain the House any longer except to say that we ought to be a little more serious than to spend a whole day discussing a resolution of this kind and then have it withdrawn. I am perfectly satisfied that what has been said by my hon. friend from Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) is perfectly correct, and it will be hard for hon. gentlemen opposite to go around the country now and protest their sincerity in the matter of patronage—that patronage that was supposed to be abolished and never was.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member for Victoria (Sir Sam Hughes) who was unable to remain until the close of the debate intimated to me that he was quite satisfied with the discussion and was willing to have the resolution withdrawn. I now submit the question to the House as to whether the hon. gentlemen shall have leave to withdraw his resolution.

Resolution withdrawn.

On the motion of Right Hon. Mr. Doherty the House adjourned at eleven p.m.

Monday, March 14, 1921

The House met at Three o'clock.

REPORT

Report of the work of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment for the calendar year ended December 31, 1920.—Hon. Mr. Tolmie.

PRIVATE BILLS

FIRST READINGS

Bill No. 29, respecting the Essex Terminal Railway Company.—Mr. Kennedy (Essex).

Bill No. 30, respecting the Ottawa, Northern and Western Railway Company. —Mr. Devlin.

SECOND READINGS

Bill No. 25, respecting the Kettle Valley Railway Company.—Mr. Green.

Bill No. 26, respecting the Manitoba and North Western Railway Company of Canada.—Mr. Lang.

Bill No. 27, respecting the Quebec Central Railway Company.—Mr. Béland.

Bill No. 28, to incorporate the Slave River Railway Company.—Mr. Tweedie.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

INCOME AND BUSINESS PROFITS TAXES

*Mr. MURPHY:

1. What has been the total cost of administering the Income Tax Act during each year of its operation?
2. What was the total cost of administering the Business Profits War Tax Act during each year of its operation?
3. How many persons are employed in connection with the administration of the Income Tax Act?

Hon. Sir HENRY DRAYTON: Exact information cannot be given in connection with the administration of the Income Tax Act and the administration of the Business Profits War Tax Act separately as the administration of the two Acts is combined. In the year 1917, however, there was no income tax, and the figures given for that year show the cost of administration of the Business Profits War Tax Act to have been: salaries, $51,385.98; other expenses, $6,788.83. Total, $58,174.81.

Business Profits War Tax Act and Income War Tax Act.

Cost of Administration.

	Fiscal year 1918.	Fiscal year 1919.	Fiscal year 1920.
Salaries ..	$72,789.44	$343,015.67	$771,444.75
Printing and stationery	28,583.27	81,614.24	147,930.69
Advertising...	320.39	29,986.52	1,736.00
Postage	1,033.59	17,974.42	51,970.14
Other expenses.. ..	5,470.19	23,206.53	53,295.65
Total.. ..	$108,196.88	495,797.38	1,026,377.23

Accounts amounting to $25,160.63 were received after the books for 1920 were closed, therefore not included. Number employed; fiscal year, 1920: Inside Service, 239; Outside Service, 547; total, 786.

ST. JOHN AND QUEBEC RAILWAY

Mr. CALDWELL:

1. When the Dominion Government entered into an agreement under date of November 9, 1916, with the province of New Brunswick to operate the St. John and Quebec Railway as part of the Canadian Government Railways, what guarantee did the Dominion Government give the province of New Brunswick that there would be an adequate train service maintained on the said St. John and Quebec Railway?
2. Does the Dominion Government know that the passenger service on the St. John and Quebec Railway between Fredericton and Centreville has recently been cut down to a tri-weekly service which is altogether inadequate to accommodate the public on that portion of the road?
3. Does the Dominion Government know that the city of Fredericton and the different towns between Fredericton and Centreville are very much incensed because of the above curtailment of train service?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. None.
2. Tri-weekly service is regarded by the management as sufficient to care for the traffic at present offering.
3. No. When curtailments in train service are contemplated, the management submit all proposed reductions to the Dominion Railway Board, who investigate, and no curtailment is made except with the approval of that board.

RAILWAY CERTIFICATES AND BONDS

Mr. DUFF:

In connection with the issuing of railway certificates and bonds, namely, the Canadian Northern Railway Company, May 1, 1920, $15,000,000, and December 1, 1920, $25,000,000; and Grand Trunk Railway, $25,000,000 and $12,000,000.

1. Were these certificates and bonds all issued through Messrs. Dillon, Read & Co., of New-York?
2. If so, what commission was paid the said firm for handling the $77,000,000 worth of certificates and bonds?
3. What trust company, bank or individual acted on behalf of the Canadian Government?
4. Was Mr. Miller Lash, of Toronto, in any way connected with the sale of any of these bonds or certificates?
5. If so, in what capacity did he act?
6. What remuneration was paid to Mr. Lash?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. Yes.
2. No commission. The different issues were sold to Dillon, Read & Co., who in turn made public issues in New York.
3. A. J. Mitchell, Vice-president for Canadian Northern; Frank Scott, Vice-President, Grand Trunk and Graham A. Bell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, representing the Grand Trunk and Minister of Finance, respectively.
4. The firm of Blake, Lash, Anglin and Cassells, of which Mr. Miller Lash is a member, acted in a legal capacity in connection with the preparation of trust deeds and other legal documents.

5. Acted as advisory counsel with the New York attorneys of the bankers, advising them in regard to the borrowing powers of the company, etc.

6. Fees of Blake, Anglin and Cassels for the C.N.R. issues are as follows: May 1, re equipment issue, $2,000; December 1, re bond issue, $2,500; for Grand Trunk, re bond issue, $5,000; re equipment issue, accounts not received.

INCOME TAX BY PROVINCES

Mr. KNOX:

1. How many people paid income tax in each province?

2. Out of this number how many in each province were farmers?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

1. On income realized during calender year—

Province	1917	1918
Prince Edward Island & Nova Scotia	1,958	5,375
New Brunswick	1,049	2,839
Quebec	11,363	19,567
Ontario	18,034	48,468
Manitoba	6,174	15,599
Saskatchewan	6.030	10,016
Alberta	5,711	8,379
British Columbia	3,187	11,813
Yukon	214	502
	53,730	122,558

2. On income realized during the calender year—

Province	1917	1918
Prince Edward Island & Nova Scotia	17	37
New Brunswick	5	29
Quebec	94	163
Ontario	488	2,042
Manitoba	1,853	4,352
Saskatchewan	3,387	4,377
Alberta	3,011	1,356
British Columbia	104	417
Yukon	3	1
	8,962	12,774

INCOMES OF $200,000 OR OVER

Mr. CLARK (Red Deer):

On how many incomes of $200,000 or over was income tax collected in last fiscal year?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: Fiscal year ended 31st March, 1920, 11 individuals.

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE

Mr. GOULD:

1. Were the tests made by the use of "gas" to combat the grasshopper plague in Saskatchewan in the year 1920, considered successful?

2. Will further tests be made this year by the same agency?

[Sir Henry Drayton.]

3. What was the total expenditure incurred by the Dominion Government in 1920 for the purpose of Research along the line indicated in the foregoing questions?

4. Did the experts of the Government report any probability of a repetition during 1921 of the damage caused by grasshoppers in former years?

5. What information does the Government possess as to parasites killing grasshoppers?

Hon. Mr. TOLMIE:

1. Experiments with poisoned gas to destroy grasshoppers conducted by the Entomological Branch in Saskatchewan, were successful as regards the killing value of the gas upon the insects, but the cost of the treatment, however, was found to be excessive, being at least $20 per acre. Chlorine gas only was used.

2. It is hoped to conduct further experiments in 1921.

3. It is difficult to state definitely the actual cost incurred in the experiments with gas owing to the fact that such work was conducted at the same time as experiments with poisoned bait, etc. Approximately, however, the cost of gas experiments was about $300.

SASKATCHEWAN EXPORT LIQUOR HOUSES

Mr. GOULD:

1. How many licenses were granted during the years 1919 and 1920 respectively to export liquor houses in the province of Saskatchewan?

2. Is it the intention of the Government to close up those export liquor houses?

3. If not, why not?

4. If the Government intends to close up those houses, when will this be done?

5. Will those houses all be closed at the same time?

Hon. Mr. WIGMORE:

1. No licenses for export liquor warehouses were granted by the Dominion Government in the province of Saskatchewan in the years 1919 and 1920. The Department understands licenses for such warehouses were granted by provincial authority.

2, 3, 4, and 5. Answered by No. 1.

TAKING OVER OF GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

Mr. TOBIN:

At what date has the Government decided to take over the Grand Trunk Railway System of Canada?

Hon. Mr. REID: The Grand Trunk will be taken over as provided for by chapter 17 of 1919.

IMPORTS FROM GERMANY

Mr. RINFRET:

1. Is it true that in respect of certain goods shipped from Germany, the Customs officers refuse to accept the invoices as they are forwarded and establish themselves a valuation upon said goods?

2. If so, has the Minister of Customs given instructions to that effect?

3. Does that apply to all German goods?

4. If not, what are those to which such rule applies?

Hon. Mr. WIGMORE:

1. After careful scrutiny of invoices of goods imported into Canada from Germany, it has been found necessary for the proper protection of the revenue to instruct Collectors of Customs to appraise all such importations for duty purposes under the authority of section 43 of the Customs Act.

2. Yes.

3 and 4. Answered by No. 1.

RIMOUSKI CUSTOMS OFFICE

Mr. SAVARD:

1. What was the amount collected at the Customs office at Rimouski during the year 1920?

2. How many employees are there and what is their salary?

3. Is the said office directly responsible to Ottawa?

Hon. Mr. WIGMORE:

1. Customs Revenue, $32,305.28; Sales and Excise Taxes, $1,742.54. Total $34,-047.82.

2. Two—Omer Beaulieu, Collector of Customs, $1,440; J. A. Tremblay, Customs Examining Officer, $1,020.

3. Yes.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. CAHILL:

1. How many non-commissioned officers were there in the Dominion Police at the time of the amalgamation with the Mounted Police?

2. How many of said officers are there in "A" Division at the present time?

3. Is it true that all non-commissioned officers of the Dominion Police were placed junior on the seniority list to non-commissioned officers in the Mounted Police irrespective of years of service; and is it further true that a Dominion Police sergeant, with 6 years' service as such, was, upon amalgamation, placed junior to a non-commissioned officer of the Mounted Police with only a few months' service as such?

4. At the time of the amalgamation of the two forces were three inspectors of the Dominion Police reduced to sergeants? If so, why?

5. How many non-commissioned officers of the Mounted Police were promoted to inspectors at the time or subsequent to, the date of amalgamation?

Mr. PECK:

1. What was the amount paid by the Government in 1920 for travelling expenses for Government ministers, officials and all employees on the following railways:

(a) Intercolonial railway.

(b) Government railways excepting Intercolonial, but including all others.

(c) Canadian Pacific railway.

2. What was the mileage the various ministers travelled during 1920 on the railways as divided in question (1)?

3. What was the amount paid by the Government including all the departments in 1920 to the following telegraph companies:

(a) Canadian Pacific Railway Company's Telegraph?

(b) Canadian National Telegraph Companies, including Great North Western, Western Union and all those companies being taken over by the Government?

4. What telegraph companies are the various departments instructed to patronize?

5. What amount of troops were carried (in the demobilization) in years 1919, 1920, west of Winnipeg on the following railways:

(a) Canadian Pacific railway?

(b) Canadian National railway?

(c) Grand Trunk Pacific railway?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Brome?

2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?

3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?

4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?

5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Missisquoi?

2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?

3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?

4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?

5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Stanstead?

2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?

3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?

4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?

5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Compton?

2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?

3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?

4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?

5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Richmond and Wolfe?
2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?
3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?
4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?
5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlement Board in the county of Shefford?
2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?
3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?
4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?
5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. TOBIN:

1. How many returned soldiers have purchased farms through the Soldiers' Settlemen Board in the county of Drummond-Arthabaska?
2. What was the average price paid for the said farms?
3. Have any of the said farms been abandoned?
4. If so, what disposition has the Government made of the said farms?
5. Has any loss been incurred? If so, what has been the net loss to the Government in connection therewith?

Mr. SEGUIN.

1. Has the Militia Department been able to collect, up to date, any amounts overpaid on account of assigned pay, war service gratuity and separation allowance? If so, how much?
2. What amount, if any, is still outstanding?
3. What steps are taken by the Department of Militia to recover the amounts thus unduly paid?

Mr. BOYER:

1. What is the total number of pounds of butter exported outside of Canada, year by year, since 1910?
2. What is the value, year by year, of the exportation since 1910?
3. What is the total number of pounds of cheese exported outside of Canada, year by year, since 1910?
4. What is the value, year by year, of such exportation since 1910?
5. To what countries were our cheese and butter exported, year by year, during said years, specifying the amount and value of each?
6. What quantities of butter have been imported from various countries since 1910?
7. From what countries and what amount from each of them?
6. What quantities of butter have been imported from the various countries since 1910?
9. From what countries and what amount from each of them?
10. Under what brands or the names is our cheese and butter sold abroad?
11. What brands or names of butter and cheese do we import from abroad?

[Mr. Tobin.]

12. What is the quantity in pounds of margarine and its value in cash, or any other substitute to butter, manufactured in the country since 1916, year by year?
13. What is the quantity in pounds and value of such substitutes imported into Canada, year by year, since 1916?
14. Has the inobservance of the law regarding the process of manufacture and the sale of such substitutes, produced in Canada or purchased abroad, been the object of several actions?
15. If so, what is the number of same?

UNOPPOSED MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. FOURNIER:

For a copy of all correspondence, documents, telegrams, reports, memoranda, tenders and contracts, having reference to or in connection with the repairs of the wharf situated at St. Michel, County of Bellechasse, Quebec, from October 1st, 1918, to date.

Mr. CAHILL:

For a copy of all official correspondence between the Government of Canada, or any member therof, and the Government of the Province of Manitoba, or any member thereof, respecting subsection 5, of clause 325 of the Consolidated Railway Act of Canada.

Mr. CHISHOLM:

For a copy of all correspondence, letters, petitions, recommendations, telegrams and documents referring to the appointment of a Postmaster at the Town of Inverness, Nova Scotia, in 1920 and 1921.

Mr. LEGER:

For a copy of all correspondence, telegrams, and other documents, relative to the resignation of Mr. John Sheridan, Indian Superintendent for the North Shore district, in the Province of New Brunswick, in 1920. Also copy of all correspondence, telegrams and other documents relative to his re-appointment to the said position.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—ST. FOY ROUND HOUSE

Mr. GEORGE PARENT (Quebec West): moved:

For a copy of all letters, reports exchanged between engineers and officers of the Canadian National Railways concerning the demolition of the round house at St. Foy, opposite the Quebec bridge, the removal from that place of a mechanical staff to a place called Charny on the other side of the St. Lawrence River; the prorposed demolition of the station on the main line of the Transcontinental Railway at Quebec bridge.

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the mover indicates that the correspondence asked for passed between the directorate of the Canadian National Railways and some other person. It would not be in the possession of the Government.

Motion stands.

AMALGAMATION OF MAIL SUPERINTENDENT'S AND POSTAL INSPECTOR'S BRANCHES

Mr. J. A. ROBB (for Mr. Casgrain) moved:

For a copy of Order in Council passed the middle of this month for the purpose of amalgamating the mail superintendent's department with that of the postal inspector.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Stand.

Motion stands.

DEVELOPMENT OF CANADA'S NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. ROBERT JAMES MANION (Fort William and Rainy River) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, it is advisable that the Government should bring forward a policy having for its object the development of the natural resources of Canada.

He said: Mr. Speaker, only the importance of the subject of the development of the natural resources of this country would make me presume upon the patience of the House even for a short time to take up this question again; but I am so impressed with its importance, and so impressed with the fact that it is the duty of the Government and of this House to work out some policy whereby we may bring about greater development of our natural resources, that I am taking the liberty of once again dealing with this subject.

If one may judge by the many speeches made throughout this country by members of the different political parties in which this question is refered to and by the kindly reception with which the remarks on this question are always received, one must come to the conclusion that it is at least a popular subject. It is worth while, however, to remember that a pound of action is worth a ton of oration, and unless some of these orations are implemented by action, it would be as well that the speeches had never been made. I feel sure that the party which works out some scheme whereby these natural resources will be developed will meet with the applause and approval of the people of this country. I admit it is not an easy question to work out but I believe that if the best of brains of this House are applied to it, it can be done.

Just to illustrate the possibilities in some parts of Canada where the land is looked upon as more or less barren, I am going to quote a statement made to me by Mr. Stefansson, in which he shows the meat producing possibilities of Canada's northern lands to be among the greatest in the world. His statement boiled down is as follows:

North Alaska and Northern Canada have the same climate, vegetation and general natural conditions. Therefore, they have they same possibilities.

Between 1892 and 1902, 1280 reindeer were imported into Alaska. Since 1892 they have butchered more than 100,000. They now have 200,000 living animals and by the middle of May they will have from 260,000 to 275,000.

The Department of Education at Washington was handling the experiment, as the reindeer were introduced to benefit the Eskimos. Last year the Government at Washington began to realize its importance as an industry, rather than philanthropy. They appropriated $25,000 to study the conditions. They came to Ottawa and took our greatest authority on parasitic diseases Dr. Hadwin, of the Department of Agriculture here; got an American Grazing Expert and with Dr. E. W. Nelson, Chief of the United States Biological Survey reported on the industry. They visited Alaska. Dr. Nelson has returned and has testified before the Agricultural Appropriation Committee of Congress that the increase of reindeer in the future will undoubtedly be more rapid than in the past, (due to bad handling) until all available land in Alaska is covered. He says there will be 5,000,000 reindeer in Alaska in 1935. This will allow for the butchering after 1935 of 1,250,000 per year, equivalent to about 3,000,000 carcases of sheep.

The export of reindeer meat began four years ago to Seatle; the sale the first year was a failure, but the last three years it has been very successful. In 1919 dressed carcasses sold at Nome, Alaska, for 22c per lb. In 1920 though beef was going down, reindeer has gone up to 24c per lb., f.o.b., steamer at Nome. In 1920 there were 1,600 carcases sold or 150 tons. Small sales are due to large local consumption and limited freezer capacity of steamers. They figure on shipping 500 tons in 1921.

Mr. Stefansson concludes that Northern Canada, having 2,000,000 square miles as against Alaska's 200,000 has tremendous possibilities for meat producing.

It might be well to point out that in 1919 there were forty-eight million sheep in the whole of the United States. The extract I have read has no particular reference to the question with which I am dealing, but I quote it because it shows the possibility for development of some of what are considered barren lands of this country.

Now to get back to the question of mineral development which I was discussing. Raw materials are the basic elements of commercial progress, and Canada, possessing raw materials in such vast abundance, has an immense advantage over those countries that are not so fortunately endowed. While some of our natural resources such as agriculture, are being developed to a great extent in this country, I consider that the iron, coal and oil resources are being neglected. If you will study the commercial history of any of the great commercial countries of the world, such as Germany, France, the United States and Great Britain, you will find that their commercial development has been directly in proportion to their production of pig iron and steel. Cobden, the great free-trader said that lumber and iron were the daily bread of the manufacturer, and even Kipling has written a poem in which he expresses the view that iron is the important factor in the commercial progress of any nation. Kipling's words many hon. members will, no doubt, remember:

Gold is for the mistress,
Silver for the maid,
Copper for the craftsman,
Cunning at his trade;
"Good" said the Baron,
Sitting in his hall,
"But iron, cold iron,
Is master of them all."

Mr. Speaker, before the war, Germany and the United States were making great industrial progress, and you will realize the truth of this statement if you consult the statistics. The figures show that in Germany and the United States the basic industry that pushed forward the rate of their progress was their iron and steel development. Henri Hauser, a professor in the University of Dijon, France, speaking of Germany's commercial grip on the world, says that Germany's production of pig iron was, in 1880, 2,500,000 tons; 1905, 11,000,000 tons; 1912, 18,000,000 tons. The United States official statistics show that the production of pig iron in that country was as follows: 1870, 1,500,000 tons; 1880, 3,500,000 tons; 1912, 30,000,000 tons; and of steel: in 1870, 68,000 tons; in 1912, 31,000,000 tons.

The authorities claim that Canada possesses these three materials in immense quantities, but notwithstanding this fact we find that her importations of coal, iron and oil in 1919 were: Coal, hard and soft, $70,603,005; iron and steel, including products and machinery, $161,619,059; oil, mineral, fish and others, $45,767,021, or a total of $277,989,085. In 1920, we imported iron and steel amounting to $181,000,000. In 1895, we imported only $8,500,000. If we consider the value of the Canadian dollar in the United States during the past few years it is obvious that we have lost considerably on exchange through importation of such materials as these. Yet these are the very materials which we are supposed to possess in such vast quantities. In previous speeches I have quoted various authorities who state that Canada stands, if not among the very first of producing nations in the world, at least among those who are potentially so. It is claimed that Canada possesses, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, hundreds of millions of tons of iron ore, yet of all the iron ore used in this country within the last two or three years only five per cent has been Canadian. In 1896, the Canadian ore used in the blast furnaces and steel plants of this country amounted to 67 per cent of all the ore used; in 1897, it was 49 per cent in 1898, 42 per cent; in 1916, 11 per cent; in the last three years it has been only four or five per cent. Iron ore shipped from Canadian mines in 1920 amounted to about 120,000 tons, the lowest in twenty years. The most of this came from Michipicoten district, but some from Sellwood, Ontario, (Moose Mountain, Ltd.), and from Frontenac County and Leeds County. And during the twelve months ending November, 1920, we imported nearly two million tons valued at $5,600,000—in addition to importing 54,000 tons of pig iron—three fifths from the United States and two-fifths from Newfoundland. It might be well to state that the deposits of Wabana, Newfoundland, are owned and worked by two Canadian companies, most of their output going to Canadian plants. Since opening these deposits they have shipped, up to and including 1919, about 19,000,000 tons: 13,000,000 to Nova Scotia, 2,000,000 to the United States, and 4,000,000 to Europe. From the lake Superior region of the United States, they shipped in 1919, 49,000,000 tons; in 1918, 63,000,000 tons. That region supplies from 80 to 85 per cent of the United States requirements, and it will be easily seen from these figures that the supply is within sight of exhaustion. It might be reasonable to ask: If Canada, on the authorities I have quoted, possesses hundreds of millions of tons of iron ore, why is it that more Canadian ore is not used in the blast furnaces and steel plants in this country? The reason usually given is that the ore found in Canada is not of a sufficiently high standard of quality, and is not so easily mined as the ore of the United States or Newfoundland. And that is partly true. But there are other reasons. For instance, there are vast plants in the United States which own their own railway and steamship lines and which are thus in a position to mine their ores at a vast advantage over Canadian production. The other day I read from a financial page of one of the Toronto dailies an article dealing with this question, and as it is brief I think I may be justified in quoting it:

One of the reasons for the neglect of Canadian iron ore probably lies in the fact that two of the largest Canadian steel companies, the Dominion and the Nova Scotia, derive their iron ore conveniently from their own immense deposits in Newfoundland, a short distance by water haul from the company's mills in eastern Nova Scotia. Another large Canadian mill, that of the Algoma Steel Corporation at Sault Ste. Marie, is handily located for the use of iron ore from the Mesaba in northern Michigan, south of lake Superior. Some of the lower Ontario steel plants are also located on deep water, more or less convenient to the United States ore. Complaint has been made for years, however, that most of the large deposits of iron ore in Ontario are either unsuited for steel making by themselves, or are of a refractory nature, rendering the smelting a difficult matter.

Recently I glanced through a book written by an authority on this question in which he described the ore used in various countries in Europe, and with the exception of Spanish ore and one or two others—Swedish, I think—practically all the ores produced in many of the countries of Europe (I am speaking as one who is not conversant with the technical side of this question, although I have seen many assays from Canada) appear to me to be much inferior in quality to Canadian ore. This article goes on to say, quoting Iron and Steel, Montreal:

"The continued decline in the production of native iron ore, which now stands at the lowest point in 20 years, is disturbing, but, despite much research and many proposals for state assistance of domestic iron ore production, the problem has received no solution on economic grounds. From a patriotic viewpoint, the situation is distinctly dangerous, but, so far, the attempts which have been made by Canadian steel companies to utilize domestic ores have received the scantest recognition from Federal or Provincial Governments. On strictly economic grounds, this attitude is probably an irreproachable one, but economic considerations are only one phase of national life, and if Canada were to frame its policies entirely on economic grounds it would logically lead to placing our seat of government in that country where we get our raw materials. However, it has not yet been demonstrated that cheapness is the main reason for our national existence. It is quite possible, also, that nothing is cheap that is bought abroad when it can be produced at home. Coal and iron are two things that are cheap at any price in times of national necessity, and it may well follow that they are dearly purchased at any price abroad if thereby our own resources are unutilized and their existence practically negatived."

Now, many authorities have stated, and I have been so informed personally by men who are recognized authorities on the subject, that after examination of the formations in the United States, and the formations in Canada they find them the same, with this exception—in the United States the formations have been worked and developed and thereby have been shown to have greater deposits of iron ore than our formations have as yet been shown to contain. But even supposing, Sir, we admit that the iron ore of the United States is of a much better quality than is the iron ore of Canada, must we also admit failure in our attempts to deal with our ores commercially? It has been stated to me that the ores with a thirty-three per cent iron content are workable on a paying basis; and I have seen assays of iron ore from various parts of Canada which show a much higher iron content. But these iron ores cannot be worked without assistance of some kind. Either aid must be given temporarily, or a through investigation made, by the federal authority, or some government, into this question, to demonstrate the commercial feasibility of working these ores.

If I might interject for a moment another matter, it is to say that there is one branch of the question which is worth discussion and it relates to the Mines Branch of this Department. Unfortunately, for many years the Mines Branch has been more or less of a side issue, and the estimates which have been voted for it are, to my mind altogether too small having in view the importance of the Branch. The salaries of some of the men employed by the Mines Branch, men who are graduates of Universities with the degree of Bachelor of Science, men who have worked there for years, are less in some cases than the stipend we are paying to the cook of the Parliamentary restaurant. That, Sir, is a startling statement to make, but it is the absolute truth. I think it is false economy which permits us to pay highly scientific men such low salaries that because of it we have lost nearly fifty per cent of our scientific men from the Mines Branch, they having gone to private corporations.

During the war we spent a vast sum upon what I might term destructive processes, and I believe that the people of this country would agree to the expenditure of a reasonable amount in investigating such questions as I am now discussing. Canada incurred an immense debt during the war, built up an immense yearly charge on our people, and the only way to reduce this heavy charge is by increasing our population. If we double our population we cut our per capita national debt in two. Canada has a population of approximately nine million people whereas the United States has a population of one hundred and ten million. One reason for the great population in the country to the South is that their natural resources have been developed and their commercial and industrial life built up, partly by our assistance. I believe it is time that we in this country endeavoured to develop our own natural resources, and not leave to posterity this development and the prosperity incident thereto.

An increase of population is one of our greatest needs, and yet our population is not growing as it should. Agnes Laut in Maclean's Magazine of January 15th, 1921 says:

> In spite of newspaper reports our Immigation is not increasing. It is decreasing. If you count up the number of Americans who registered at Ports of entry in Canada from the Klondike boom to the War, you will find the total something between one million and a quarter and one million and one-half. If you then figure up how many Americans remained in Canada you will find the total about 440,000.

There is another point which makes this question of the utmost importance, and that is the railway question in Canada. Unfortunately our railway situation forms a very important problem to the people of this country. We have built our railways twenty or thirty years in advance of our time, resulting in duplication and over-development. We have forty thousand miles of railway of which over one-half is in the hands of the Canadian people. It might be worth while to compare the figures of the Canadian railway system with those of other countries. Canada has one mile of railway to every 200 persons; United States has one mile to every 400 persons; Great Britain has one mile to every 2,000 persons; and Russia has one mile to every 4,000 persons. Canada has four or five times the mileage of railway that Japan has, with a population of 56,000,000; three times the mileage of Italy with a population of 36,000,000, a greater mileage than Great Britain with 45,000,000; or than France with 40,000,000; and equal to that of Germany with 65,000,000. These figures illustrate the over-development of our railways. We have not the population to provide traffic, that is passenger and freight traffic, for our railways. Mineral development would help us to secure railway traffic. In the United States forty-seven per cent of the freight traffic on the railways comes from the mines. In Canada the percentage is very much less. I have discussed this question with some of the higher officials of the Canadian National Railways and they are of opinion that it is of prime importance to the railways of this country. One of them, an important Canadian National Railways official, writing to me a few days ago, used the following words:

> I am keenly interested in this subject which I believe is a vital matter to the Canadian National Railways; in fact I do not know anything of greater importance to Canada as a whole than the development of our iron resources.

There is another side to this question and that concerns not only iron but coal and oil. The iron, coal and oil supplies of the world are not inexhaustible and the time may arrive when the United States may see fit to put an embargo on iron ore, as it has in the past proposed imposing an embargo on coal. If they did that the steel plants in this country would have to close down, in my opinion, with the exception of those in Nova Scotia which get their supply from Wabana, Newfoundland. That would place Canada in a very difficult position. The late James J. Hill, writing in 1910 upon the iron deposits in the United States, said they would be depleted within twenty-five to fifty years. Taking these facts into account surely it is worth while for the people of this country to endeavour to place themselves in an independent commercial position so far as the United States is concerned.

The objection is urged that we have a coal shortage in this country and that we have not the necessary fuel to smelt the iron. In answer to that I would say that Canada in the matter of coal deposits is the second richest country in the world, she is second only to the United States. It is true that it is a transportation problem to get that coal from the extreme East and the extreme West to the central parts of Canada; but I believe the day is coming when we will be able to take the coal from Nova Scotia up to the head of the Great Lakes, and bring it from the Prairie Provinces to the same point, and then we shall be able to develop our iron deposits with coal from our own coal mines. Then there is the fact to be considered that in this country there is some 18,000,000 horsepower of potential electricity of which only about 2,000,000 is now being developed. In some countries in the world electricity is being used for smelting purposes. To a certain extent it has been found expensive for that purpose; nevertheless one concern, the Canadian Steel Forgings of Toronto, and a few other firms, are using electricity for smelting purposes in this country.

In closing you may ask me what I propose after these preliminary remarks. Many schemes have been advanced for the solution of this question. I only mention some of them, as follows: 1. A tariff against the importation of iron ore; 2. A bounty on Canadian ore; 3. Financing private corporations; 4. Co-operation with private corporations; or, 5, a thorough investigation. I repeat, Sir, that no scientific or thorough investigation has ever been made that I know of into the Canadian iron ore question, and that proposition would not meet with opposition. I believe that all the parties in this House would deem it only fair for the Government to look into the question even if they spent considerable money in so doing. We have expended considerable on the lignite question in Western Canada. I commend the Government for that action and I wish them to follow the same course in regard to Canadian iron ores. In my final words I would say: Let some action be taken, for this is one of the methods by which we will help to increase our population; make a market for our agricultural products; give employment to our people; provide freight for our over developed railways; make ourselves commercially independent of the United States; and generally help to put Canada in its proper place among the advancing industrial nations of the world.

Mr. WALTER DAVY COWAN (Regina): It is with a great deal of pleasure indeed that I second the motion moved by my hon. friend from Fort William. He has descanted interestingly and well on the iron resources of Canada and he is much more competent to speak on the subject than I am. One thing however, that he said, particularly interested me. That was his comparison of the Canadian situation with the American situation, in connection with which he showed that the American corporations engaged in these industries are tremendously more capitalized than our smaller industries in Canada. There is no question, Mr. Speaker, that capital plays a very important part in the development of these undertakings. A properly organized industry with a capitalization of $100,000,000 as many of these American companies are, is much more influential in the markets of the world than a less efficiently organized body with a smaller capital. As a matter of fact there is no comparison at all, and recognizing the tremendous problem that confronts us in the mining and manufacturing of our iron deposits, we must take some action as a government and try to equalize conditions as between our own country and foreign countries. Faced as we are with these enormous imports of iron and steel products from foreign countries, we cannot afford to stand idly by and allow our natural resources to be neglected while other countries prosper at our expense.

In supporting the motion presented by my hon. friend from Fort William (Mr. Manion), I wish to put the broadest possible interpretation upon the term "natural resources." I do not restrict it to the mining of iron, lead, zinc, copper or other minerals; I would so broaden our policy that we should develop to the furthest limit the manufacture at home of these and other natural resources. To me the mining of iron or any other metal means blast furnaces, refineries, rolling mills, stamping mills, and everything else necessary to carry that particular metal to its complete manufactured state. That means employment in Canada for vast numbers of expert workmen. As one who in my younger days worked with the workmen of Canada and spent my time as a workman amongst them, I came to know fairly well what they are, and my experience also covered some five years working among workmen in foreign countries, which enabled me to compare our own workmen with foreign workmen. As a result of my experience and observation I say unhesitatingly that in intelligence, application and honesty of service to those who employ them our Canadian workmen have no superiors. To-day our workmen are satisfied with the laws and the institutions of Canada, and it is their desire to remain in the Dominion. The only thing they object to is that they have not the opportunities here that they can get in a big country like the United States, which is so highly developed. Not having those opportunities at home, and desirous of succeeding in life, naturally they go to that country, as my hon. friend from Fort William has said. Therefore we need a domestic policy which will give our workmen the opportunities here which they now must seek abroad and which will give them a share in the building up of this Dominion.

Our nataural resources are not confined to minerals; they include our agricultural lands, and this is what I am most particularly interested in because in the western country these lands are our chief natural resource. There are those who say and believe that if a man gets a section of land and raises all the wheat he can thereon, and ships it out to the head of the lakes and thence through foreign channels to the ultimate market, he is doing his whole duty by Canada. I disagree with that attitude. I believe that whatever we raise here for export should be carried as far as possible through Canadian channels in order that Canadians may secure the maximum benefit, and thereby help build up our Dominion.

We have a great many industries that ought to be encouraged to their limit. In addition to our wheat growers in the West a large number of our farmers raise stock, and they require the by-products of flour mills in order to raise their cattle. Therefore unless we mill all the wheat we possibly can we are seriously handicapping these stock farmers; and with all deference to those who raise wheat alone. I think that those who raise stock are just as good farmers and citizens and just as much entitled to consideration as the wheat growers. Lately we have developed the livestock industry in the province of Saskatchewan, and it is simply amazing to what an extent that development has been carried. We are shipping great numbers of cattle out of the province. That is all well and good. We also slaughter a certain number of cattle for our own needs. Then what happens? Take, for instance, the hides of those cattle, they are sold for a mere pittance. Why? Because our stock men have to ship those hides down to St. Paul, Minneapolis or Chicago, where they come in competition with an enormous supply of American hides; and not only are our farmers forced to be content with a mere pittance for their hides, but they have to pay the transportation charges to that market. Then when they come to buy the manufactured leather goods they have to pay the transportation charges again, and duty, and naturally they complain because the cost of those goods is so heavy. As a matter of fact we have practically no tanneries in the western country, and I submit it would be good policy for us to encourage industries of that kind in order that we may save these transportation charges and give to our farmers a better price for what they produce.

Let us go still further. I am pleased to say that sheep breeding has increased to an enormous extent in Western Canada in recent years. But what happens? The wool has to be sold for a mere pittance, and in this case too we have to pay very high prices for the articles manufactured from that wool. As far as I know there is not a single woollen mill in Western Canada. Our men and women are eager and willing to work in the factories which we should establish to manufacture these raw materials into finished articles, and we have a domestic market for all the goods which we can manufacture. Why, then, should we not develop manufacturing industries to take care of all these raw materials which we are obliged to export at minimum prices and in return pay maximum prices for the manufactured article?

The same remarks apply to our pork. We raise a great many hogs in the West, and these are shipped to Chicago to be turned into bacon, which we again import. We pay transportation charges both ways and our bacon costs us fifty-five to eighty cents a pound. This is an utter absurdity, and I cannot understand why it has been allowed to continue so long, but the fact is we are day after day losing money by this short-sighted policy.

Lest it be supposed that we have nothing but agricultural lands in Western Canada, I come now to another phase of development of our natural resources. We have in Western Canada mineral deposits of great richness. Let me take as one outstanding instance the clay deposits of southern Saskatchewan. I suppose some hon. members may think that this is not worth discussion, but I want to draw the attention of the House particularly to the non-use of our clays in Saskatchewan and to the very heavy loss this entails to the whole Dominion. I have in my hand a report issued by the Department of the Interior, its author being a Mr. Davis. I remember him coming to Regina and he appeared to me as a rather retiring young man but exceedingly bright and alert. He wanted to discuss with us what he had discovered in southern Saskatchewan. He told us that he had been sent out by the Federal Government to investigate the clay deposits of Western Canada, and he said: I want to tell you that you have in southern Saskatchewan the best clays that can be found anywhere in the world. That sounded to me rather an extravagant statement, but I am convinced that he was not at all exaggerating. The work was completed five years ago and his report was issued two years later, and in it I find the following statement:

> Saskatchewan is a comparatively new province with respect to the rest of the Dominion. Within the last fifteen years settlement has been very rapid, and the handiest and easiest materials of construction have been used. In the early days there was a lack of stone or wood for the construction of places of habitation for man and beast, hence the settler turned to the sod, and built himself rude shelters of this material. The resources of the province were unknown, and established structural materials were looked for in the American market. In supplying this demand the American brick makers as far south as St. Louis, and east to Pennsylvania, reaped a harvest.

Our people in Western Canada are to-day and have been for years importing brick from as far as Pennsylvania, three thousand miles away, to build their houses. It means that we are paying tribute to the brick makers of Pennsylvania, it means that we are paying tribute to the workmen in that State, and it further means that we are paying tribute to every transportation agency in that three thousand miles between Pennsylvania and Western Canada. While importing millions of dollars worth of these bricks we are increasing the adverse balance of trade and as a result all of us, whether we live in Prince Edward Island, in Central Canada or on the Pacific slope, have to help to meet this adverse balance. Now, why should we continue to import brick from away down in Pennsylvania when we have in our own country the very best raw material for the manufacture of building brick? Let me quote again from this publication—and I will be as brief as I can:

The importance to the whole Canadian West, of the clay resources of southern Saskatchewan, cannot be overestimated. There is an abundance of high grade clays suitable for the manufacture of stoneware, Rockingham ware, and white earthenware. The fire clays of the Eastern section will make a No. 2 grade of refractory, while the more plastic clays should find a use as bond-clays in the making of retorts and other special refractory shapes. They are also adapted to the manufacture of architectural terra-cotta, paving brick, face brick, and all varieties of burned clay products for structural purposes.

It is evident, therefore, that we have the best of clay and that it covers an enormous area of the country. I may say that this district has been regarded or spoken of as the dry district of the West. Let me say that nature does her work exceedingly well. We have found it rather difficult in that particular area to raise the usual crops, but nature has put these resources there for our use. It is only necessary that we should establish industries in that locality for the development of these resources, so that the building up of villages around them, as is always the case; the construction of dams for the retention of water, and the growing of trees and so on, would very largely overcome the aridity of that section and result in benefit to everybody in that part of the country. I mention this only to show that there has been a grave defect in the work done by the Government. Up to a certain point the work was exceedingly well done. An investigation was made, the minerals were found, a report was issued, but so far as I know no attention has been paid to that report. In proof of that assertion I am going to quote from a speech delivered Thursday in the city of Regina. The government of our province, recognizing that a new spirit had come over the West and that we were no longer content to remain a purely agricultural country, established a Bureau of Industry and placed in charge of it a Mr. Molloy, a representative of labour and one of the most capable and energetic men you could possibly get. One of his associates is Dr. Andrews, in charge of the Research Bureau, and he, speaking on the occasion to which I refer, used these words, according to a report in a Regina paper:

Valuable Deposits of Clay found near Assiniboia.

Dr. W. W. Andrews, in speaking of the value of these recently discovered minerals, said: "The coming season promises to show much development of Saskatchewan's greatest mineral resources, viz. her clays.

What is a matter of great importance to the future development of the clay industry in this region is the existence of seams of excellent coal, 16 to 20 feet thick. These fortunately are near the railway. . . This is a very fine opportunity for the organization of a large local enterprise to supply the home market."

Now, it is three years since this report was made, but even the people resident in our province did not know until a short time ago that these clays existed. This clearly proves that we are not giving publicity, not giving effect to the reports which have already been made. In my opinion we should make this report effective through just such a proposal as is made to-day by the hon. member for Fort William; we should take it in hand as part of our government work and draw the attention of the investing public to what we have.

I may say that I have the honour of being a member of the Engineering Institute of Saskatchewan. They are a body of very capable men; you cannot talk nonsense to them any more than you can to this House. Speaking before that body last Tuesday, Mr. M. L. Moyer said:

I believe the time is not far distant when a full line of pottery and earthenware as well as floor and wall tiles, will be made in our province. I believe that the appointment of a ceramic engineer, whose whole time would be devoted to the work, would result in an undreamed-of development of one of Saskatchewan's greatest natural resources.

I ask that we co-operate with the provincial governments in the work they are now undertaking. It is not sufficient that we should make investigations and reports, without drawing the attention of the investing public to the necessity for the development of these great natural resources. Pottery, earthenware, tile—these things we import in large quantities into Western Canada. What has been the cause? You all know that these things carry a very high freight classification, and the result is that we have to pay enormous prices for what we buy. That particularly is the case since the various bodies interested in increasing freight rates practised lynch law and strangled Canadian business, as they have done recently, by the increase in rates.

I now wish to come to another of our resources spoken of by my hon. friend—coal. We have enormous quantities of coal in Western Canada—so great that the amount is really beyond computation. Some of these coal mines—well, it is almost dangerous to speak of them, because people will hardly believe what you tell them. I have before me, however, a report issued by our own Government with respect to a mine which is on the border between Alberta and British Columbia. This mine, which has really not yet been opened up contains the finest of anthracite coal, according to a government analysis. The total amount of coal in this particular mine which has not yet been touched—and which, I believe, is the property of Pat Burns, of Calgary, and his company—the total amount of coal known to be there is 21,570,000,000 tons. Suppose there were only half that amount, or 10,000,000,000 tons. Working 313 days in the year on the basis of an output of 5,000 tons a day, there would be a total output of 1,565,000 tons per year—an amount which would supply practically all the anthracite coal consumed in Canada. At that rate we would have enough in that one mine to last 6,640 years—and this is according to the report of our Federal Government. Well, with such figures before us, what are we going to do?

4 p.m.

During the week-end I read an interesting account of a meeting of the Mining Institute held in Montreal. I quote the following from an article written by the editor of the Mining Journal, who is also, I think, president of the Mining Institute:

> That western coal is the guarantee of our national independence was the declaration made to-day at the Canadian Club luncheon by F. W. Gray, editor of Canadian Mining Journal who was speaking on "The Commercial and National Assets of the Canadian Coal Supply."
>
> Mr. Gray said that in the west lies the future workshop of Canada and that Canada had 17 per cent of the world's supply and 71 per cent of the Empire's supply of coal. The maritime provinces contained 0.7 per cent of our coal reserves, he said, all good bitimunious coal, while the western fields contained the balance.

What ground has he for making such an assertion? If we go to Great Britain, we find that she has enormous deposits of coal. I suppose the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. M. Clark) would say that Great Britain's industrial supremacy depends upon free trade. In my opinion, it has depended, and to-day depends, entirely upon the fact that she has enormous coal deposits, and around that coal area have been built up the biggest industries of the world. If we look at the situation in America, we find a similar condition of affairs in Pennsylvania, Montana, Ohio; wherever you find coal deposits, you find large steel plants and enormous industries growing up around them. As my hon. friend has pointed out this afternoon, in Sydney, Cape Breton, you will find an enormous industrial development. And why? Simply and solely because great deposits of coal are to be found there. Is it then unreasonable for us to say that in Western Canada, with our coal deposits, exactly the same thing will happen as has happened everywhere else? Therefore, I firmly believe that we should have some department of Government which will take a statement such as this, coming from a man thoroughly qualified to speak on the subject and give it such prominence in the various journals of the world, wherever indeed there is a body of men who have money which they wish to invest in enterprises like this, that their attention may be drawn to the matter and that we may receive some benefit therefrom.

My hon. friend referred to briquettes. Let me express as strongly as I can my appreciation of the action taken by the Government in starting a briquetting plant. I understand it is now nearly completed, and I am satisfied that the $600,000 odd spent on it is going to result in great benefit to Western Canada. Three Governments acted in co-operation with regard to that plant and that seems to be a very proper procedure to follow. Why should we have anything but co-operation amongst the Governments of this Dominion, especially in such matters as this? But it must be remembered that the manufacture of briquettes there is only a small part of the game, and I sincerely hope that the Lignite Utilization Board continue their work of experimentation until they are able to manufacture the by-products, many of which can be manufactured there into something of value to the Dominion of Canada.

Just recently a new discovery of coal has been made at Lampman, bordering on the Moose mountains. Geologists have told me very bluntly that it is absolutely impossible for a grade of coal such as is being taken out of that mine to exist there; that it cannot be done; that the coal is not there. But the fact is that the coal is there. It is now proved to be there to the extent of millions of tons, how many millions we do not yet know. This is a high grade of coking coal. And what does that mean? My hon. friend spoke about bringing coal from the West to the head of the lakes. Through this discovery, the highest grade of coking coal has been brought, by one jump, 600 miles nearer the province of Ontario than was dreamed of a little while ago. That is a very susbstantial number of miles to knock off the haulage of coal. Two years ago the Government put a line of railway into the new coal field, and to-day the rails are being laid thereon. I hope it will be completed this summer because I am satisfied that it is going to be of great assistance in the development of the Moose mountain coal deposits.

Just in conclusion, I want to say this. While from Western Canada for many years back has come a very vigorous denunciation of everything in the shape of capitalism, big interests, manufacturers money derived in any way except by working the soil, there has been growing up amongst the young men of Western Canada an entirely different spirit and to-day they are calling for industrial development and new industries. In support of that, I am going to read an extract from an editorial from a western paper supporting what has been done by the Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan, both of which in the past year have established industrial departments:

> The Alberta Legislative Assembly on Wednesday unanimously endorsed the proposal of the government to aid in the campaign for the promotion and development of Alberta's industries, some members expressing the view that the sum should be $50,000 instead of $20,000 as provided in the estimates.

That is for industrial development.

> It may be taken for certain that as a result of the propaganda of Alberta, capital will be attracted to the development of her industries, and industrial population drawn to the province and more enterprise and scientific and business methods employed in the exploitation of the resources already at command. It believes the Federal government has a responsibility towards the natural resources of the country as a whole and a relationship to observe in the supply of essential raw materials within the empire. For that reason it favors the establishment of a new ministry with a national objective and carrying with it a national prestige in order that Canada may be in a position to control the home market and to enter effectively into competition in foreign markets.

They ask for a new minister, but I am not going to go as far as that; I believe that would be an unnecessary step at the present time. But our Government should take every possible means to further the development of the natural resources of Canada through some department especially instructed so to do.

Mr. FRANK S. CAHILL (Pontiac): Mr. Speaker, I merely wish to congratulate the hon. member for Fort William and Rainy River (Mr. Manion) for introducing this resolution condemning the Government for their inactivity and lack of policy in regard to the natural resources of the country. His resolution reads:

> That, in the opinion of this House, it is advisable that the Government should bring forward a policy having for its object the development of the natural resources of Canada.

I think that is deserving of consideration, not so much of the Government as of the people of Canada, who are waiting for an opportunity to take advantage of every means of promoting the development of the country. My hon. friend pointed out that the accomplishment of this Government with regard to the development of the natural resources of Canada consisted so far in giving a lease to a gentleman named Stefansson to raise reindeer in the far North. You will not be surprised, Mr. Speaker, if you learn very soon that Mr. Stefansson's ranch will not materialise into anything of great consequence to the people of Canada. It is more probable that the Hudson's Bay Company will find themselves in conflict with Mr. Stefansson in his lease and that they will find it necessary to buy him out, and that will be last of the reindeer enterprise in this country.

My hon. friend in his good Tory way suggests that there should be a bounty. These enterprises always get back to the same basis with the Tories; they must find a way getting to the treasury of Canada for their friends. With them there is no other way of developing the country than by leading their friends to the treasury; that is the simple and easy way, and while the people, of course, must suffer, that is not a matter of any consequence to our Tory friends.

Mr. MANION: The hon. member has already made so many misstatements of what I have said that, before he goes any further, I had better correct his last one. I did not suggest a bounty; I suggested an investigation.

Mr. CAHILL: My hon. friend suggested a bounty in a resolution which he moved last year. I suppose he has changed his mind. That is the privilege of the hon. gentleman. Before he sat down he suggested that a bounty might be a means, but that an investigation should be held. We, of course, are all agreed that an investigation of the Government should be held at any time. It all comes back to the same old plan of getting at the treasury of going to the trough.

My hon. friend was quite right in criticising the Government for the lack of an energetic immigration policy. How can we hope to develop the resources of this country with a policy of emigration, not immigration? We are spending a great deal of money on an immigration policy, and the sum total of our efforts has been that people are leaving this country faster than they are coming in. My hon. friend pointed that out in the statement of Agnes Laut in Maclean's Magazine. We are giving the people every possible assistance in leaving. We are doing everything we can in Western Canada to get rid of probably the best farmers in the country—the Mennonites. We are doing everything we can to drive them out of the country. I saw in the local press a few days ago the statement at a banquet by the hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Fripp) that three or four ship loads of Poles had been turned back from the shores of Canada. They had landed here and then were told to go back home. That is our immigration policy apparently. Then I notice in this morning's newspaper that some 5,000 or 6,000 of the Six Nations Indians are looking for a home in the United States because they can place no dependence on the laws of Canada. The Canadian Government is driving everybody out, and the few that are left they would tax out of the country.

My hon. friend speaks of railway difficulties in the way of the development of our natural resources. Why, the only solution of the question is immigration and production. If we have overbuilt our railways, we must get people producing on the land, and in the forests, the mines, and fisheries; but you cannot hope to get them if you build up a tariff wall against everything they would bring into this country, and make living conditions such that they cannot face the future here. You cannot tax yourself rich; you can only tax yourself poor. If you attempt to tax people to promote every kind of enterprise in the country, you get to the stage where the taxpayers are unable to bear the burden. My hon. friend is simply following his leader in promoting the idea of taxing every person for the benefit of the special interests. They have their special friends who must be taken care of, by taxation or otherwise. These special friends must be looked after because they are looking after the Government; naturally the Government in turn attempts to support its friends —to lead them to the treasury. That has always been the Tory policy in this country, and it is the policy that has brought the country to the condition it is in today, with an enormous debt and an excessive taxation. The expenditure of the Tory party since they came into power in 1911, exclusive of the war, has been greater than the total expenditure of previous Governments for forty years. But still they continue on that basis, hoping to bring people in by telling them that they are going to tax industry and everything that a man wants to use, just to bolster up their friends in some enterprise. My hon. friend knows, or should know, that his own territory of New Ontario is not being developed. Why? Because you won't allow the people who would develop it to go in there. My hon. friend knows there are only certain classes of people who will settle in Northern Ontario and develop its resources.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Who are they?

Mr. CAHILL: Principally the French-Canadian, and the Scandinavians. They are the only two classes of people who will go into that class of country and develop it.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Why are they prevented?

Mr. CAHILL: Because Mr. Ferguson passed legislation in Ontario, excluding the French-Canadians from Ontario. They are told not to settle in that country. I see the leader of the Government would hold out an olive branch—

Mr. MEIGHEN: I was only wondering why my hon. friend did not get his friends now in office in Ontario to repeal it.

Mr. CAHILL: My friends are not in office in Ontario.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Your leader says so.

Mr. CAHILL: They are the friends of my right hon. friend more than mine. They are a combination of Tories and U.F.O.—a sort of reformed Tory party in Ontario. It would not be bad business for the Department of Immigration and Colonization of this Government to try and regulate to some extent the foolish legislation that has been passed in some of these provinces. We have spent great sums of money to develop Northern Ontario, and then the Ontario Government comes along and cuts off any possibility of that investment being a success.

Mr. KEEFER: How?

Mr. CAHILL: By prohibiting the French Canadians from coming in.

Mr. KEEFER: What legislation prohibits them.

Mr. CAHILL: My hon. friend's leader in Ontario, Mr. Howard Ferguson, prohibits any Frenchman from occupying land there. He passed a law that allowed the government to take his land away if he could not speak English, if you please, whereas English is no more the language of this country than French is. The French people have the same right to insist on their language as the leading language, as English-speaking people have on theirs. But my hon. friend from Port Arthur (Mr. Keefer) would not see that as the situation. It would suit his election purposes better to have Mr. Ferguson's legislation on the statute books, just as it would suit my right hon. friend the leader of this Government better. He made use of just such legislation as that at the last election, and he will make use of it again in the coming election. He will make use of it anywhere he can in Canada, just as he and the Tory party have done in the past.

Mr. MACKIE (Edmonton): May I ask a question? Does my hon. friend take the responsibility of saying that Mr. Ferguson passed a law prohibiting French-speaking people settling in Ontario because they did not speak the English language?

Mr. CAHILL: My hon. friend is asking me to sit down so that I can stand up again.

Mr. KEEFER: When was that legislation passed?

Mr. CAHILL: If my hon. friend was asleep at the time, I was not. It was passed in 1915. If my hon. friend wants to find out about it and will come to my office, I will tell him. My hon. friend knows the legislation is there. They have made use of it. It was put there for a purpose.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Was that legislation passed in Canada or Prussia?

Mr. CAHILL: Oh, not in Prussia. I would not for a moment compare Prussia with Ontario. It would not be a fair comparison. The Ontario methods go far beyond the Prussian methods when it comes to special class legislation and special interests.

Mr. KEEFER: Would my hon. friend oblige me with the name of that Act?

Mr. CAHILL: I told my hon. friend that I would give him the information if he came to my office. For a man living in Ontario, and who took advantage of the legislation my hon. friend seems to be quite dense. If he cannot wait until I get to my office, he can send to the Library for the information, he will find it there.

Mr. Speaker, I only rose to congratulate the hon. member for Fort William and Rainy River on his resolution condemning the Government. The Government has almost adopted the policy this session of allowing their followers the privilege of criticising and condemning them. It will have a good effect in the country. My hon. friend from Fort William and my hon. friend from Regina (Mr. Cowan) will be able to go home to their constituents and say: We insisted on this thing on the floor of the House. That is the kind of independence they display. Why not elect them again? Of course, it does not amount to anything because when it comes to a show-down the motion will be withdrawn. This seems to be a sort of milk-and-water proposition which in any event will not need to be withdrawn. But if it were a resolution of consequence, it would undoubtedly be withdrawn so that our friends opposite would not have to vote upon it.

Mr. ALFRED THOMPSON (Yukon): My hon. friend who has just taken his seat has delivered a tirade of destructive criticism against the Government. Well, my experience in this House teaches me that destructive criticism does not get a man or a party very far. Constructive criticism, on the other hand, is wholesome either for an individual or for a party. I shall not follow the hon. gentleman in his peregrinations through the charges he has laid against the Government. The conditions which confront us to-day in Canada are a sufficient answer for my hon. friend; all he has to do is to look at the savings in the banks and the general conditions throughout the country, the trade we have, compared with other countries, as a result of the war, and so forth to be convinced that he is wrong. I should like to make a few observations on the motion before the House, not particularly with regard to the territory that has been so well covered by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Manion) wherein he touched on the iron ore, the coal and oil situation, transportation, cost of shipment, manufacture, and the amount of ores consumed. There is no doubt that iron and iron products consumed in any country are a fairly good index to the development of civilization in that country. I would rather direct my remarks to what might be termed the hinterland of Canada and the resources which may be found within that vast domain. After all, these great resources are tributary to the great river St. Lawrence and the lake basins at its head, which provide the transportation for the southern portion of Canada. The coal underlying the plains of the West, if it is possible to get it, may be conveyed to the head of the lakes where the iron ores exist and the limestones are, and it is possible that within the next few years we may have great smelting works in the vicinity of the head of the lakes. I hope it will be possible, in the not too distant future, to bring coal from the eastern provinces by our waterways to the interior of our country. You have Provincial Governments stretching across the country in the southern portion of Canada, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia; but the fact is sometimes overlooked by Canadians that away to the north of these provincial boundaries we have a vast domain of country, rich in natural resources and favourable for development so far as climate is concerned, and well endowed with waterways. I refer to that vast section of our country which stretches from the western shore of Hudson bay to the Alaskan boundary, the 141st meridian west. We have there a territory which is some 1,600 miles in length from east to west, and which is approximately 1,000 miles deep from north to south, a vast domain adjoining the western portion of which is the territory of Alaska owned by the United States. Just in passing I should like to refer to that territory of the great republic in order to support the argument which I am about to make with regard to the possibilities of the territory under our own Dominion. The district of Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia in 1867, the year our forefathers confederated Canada. The Americans paid for that territory $7,250,000, and secured from Russia an area covering some 600,000 square miles. Pessimists of that day accused Mr. Seward, Secretary of State for the United States, who made the purchase, of throwing away $7,000,000 of good American gold in the Arctic ocean. They called it the Seward Ice Box, and said it would not bring a dollar to the treasury of the United States. Well, many years have passed, years as many as this Dominion is old, and to-day the territory of Alaska is a very valuable adjunct to the United States. At the World's Fair in St. Louis, there were two pyramids, one representing the gold produced from one mine, the Treadwell mine on the coast of Alaska, and the other representing the amount in gold which the Americans paid for Alaska. One pyramid represented $7,250,000, and the other $21,000,000—from one mine alone. The amount of gold and other metals which the United States have taken from Alaska has paid for that territory, I suppose, fifty times over, to say nothing of the seal fisheries, the salmon fisheries, and other natural resources. The trade of the United States with the district of Alaska, during the year 1920, amounted to $107,000,000. Now, it would be a splendid thing if we had a territory as well populated and as far developed as Alaska, from which we could draw great natural products that could be exchanged for our manufactured goods. That is quite possible in this great hinterland about which I want to address a few words to the House this afternoon. In this vast domain, some 1,600 miles long, as I have said, and 1,000 miles deep, there is territory enough and there are resources sufficient to carve out not one province but three, each as large almost as the three prairie provinces, and perhaps as rich, because no one yet knows what the potentialities of this immense territory are. It is drained by two of the greatest rivers of this continent, and indeed of the world. The Yukon river, which has its rise in Canada, flows through the territory of Alaska, and enters into the Behring Sea; and the Mackenzie River, having its rise in Canada, flows for its whole length through our own territory into the Arctic Ocean. Both of these rivers are similar to the St. Lawrence, and dissimilar to the Mississippi river. The Mississippi river and the country around it are of such a character that from time to time the river overflows its banks in very destructive floods. Nothing of the kind occurs in the St. Lawrence for the reason that at the head of the latter there are great lake basins, which the Mississippi lacks. There are lake basins at the source of the Yukon, and also of the Mackenzie which control the flow of these great streams, producing an even flow throughout the summer months. And this is a great potential fact in the development of our north country.

Some people here think that the climate of the north country is not suitable for either man or beast. Some years ago the Senate instituted an inquiry into the climatic conditions of the North Land. I have here a report of that inquiry, and I propose to quote from the evidence of Dr. (now Sir) Edward Stupart, the head of our Meteorological Branch, as the climate, and particularly the sunshine of the North Land, and more especially that section of country that is in the valley of the Mackenzie river. He says:

For the three summer months—

That is the three growing months—

—a vast area which includes western and northern Alberta, Northern Saskatchewan and the basin of the Mackenzie, almost to the Arctic Circle, lies within the isothermal lines of 55 degrees and 60 degrees. Throughout this whole region the percentage of the possible amount of sunshine seems to approximate 55, and as the hours of possible sunshine at midsummer range from 17 hours the latitude of Edmonton to 19 hours 30 minutes at Fort Simpson, it may be surmised that growth of plants and cereals may be even more rapid in the northern than in the southern districts.

My own experience in the Yukon bears that out: The growth of vegetables in the Northland is surprising to people who have not been there. Throughout the valleys of the Yukon and Mackenzie Rivers it may safely be said, Mr. Speaker, that we have a salubrious climate, a climate where people live and where they have been living for a hundred and fifty years, a soil which would produce the vegetables and the cereals to support a very considerable population. The natural wealth of Canada is drawn from four sources—the forest, the farm, the fishery and the mines. All these sources of our national and our natural wealth, Mr. Speaker, are to be found in this great domain of which I speak. Cereals grow well in the Yukon. The report also shows that cereals grow well in the valley of the Mackenzie. It may be interesting to the House to know that wheat will grow and mature and ripen in the valley of the Yukon, as it does in the far north section of the valley of the Mackenzie. On one occasion I brought to the House of Commons and placed upon the table for members to see a sample of wheat that had matured in the Yukon. After they had inspected it I sent it to the seed analyst or expert at the Farm here in Ottawa. When the return came back to me this gentleman informed me that he had sown one hundred seeds taken at random from that sample of wheat. I was very much interested—and I am sure the House will be equally interested—to know that one hundred seeds germinated—they were one hundred per cent virile. I do not know that all the wheat that could be grown in that Northern country would be so virile, but I am sure that it would be true of a very large proportion of it. I would like to place upon Hansard a few more extracts from this interesting report of the Senate which bears the title "Canada's Fertile Northland," and particularly with regard to the Mackenzie basin. The report shows that this basin is capable of sustaining a very large and prosperous population, that it has great possibilities as an industrial country; and says:

According to one witness, who has had exceptional opportunities for familiarizing himself with the country and its resources, there is in the Peace River section of this country as much good agricultural land fit for settlement, anad yet unsettled, as there is settled in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Albert to-day.

That is a very striking statement. The report continues:

At Fort Providence, latitude 62.30, about 400 miles north of Edmonton, splendid crops of excellent wheat, barley, oats, peas, and other vegetables are raised, while as far north as Fort Good Hope, within fourteen miles of the Arctic circle, or latitude 66.16 and 970 miles further north than the city of Edmonton, cabbages, onions and other garden vegetables are raised.

So much as to cereals. Now I come to touch on the forest resources of the Northland. On this point the report says:

The various sections of the Mackenzie basin possess great forest wealth, the spruce areas in the North extending to the Arctic sea.

This constitutes a tremendous reserve which may yet be tapped and developed, particularly now that we know that pulp and pulp products are such important commodities in the industrial world. The report goes on to deal with animal life and mineral wealth and, Mr. Speaker, it must be remembered that it is not the country at the head of the Great Lakes that we are dealing with; it is not in northern Ontario, or in Nova Scotia, or in British Columbia. The area which is capable of producing so much national wealth is hundreds of miles north of these great sections of our country. What does the report say about the Mackenzie river basin in that regard? It says:

> The mineral wealth of this region is undoubtedly considerable, including deposits of coal, oil, copper, silver, gold, native salt, sulphur, ochre, sand suitable for glass making, tar sands, etc.

Some people wonder why it is that in those northern latitudes we have a climate such as we have. I am frequently asked how much snow fall we have in the Yukon, and frequently my questioners are surprised when I tell them that we have not much more than two feet. They wonder why it is. It may be interesting to the House to know that the climate of the west coast is governed by the Japanese current, the same as the climate of the British Isles is governed by the Gulf Stream. This current comes along laden with moisture. There is no part of the Pacific coast from Alaska to Mexico in which the mountains are more than six hundred miles from the sea. The moment that moisture laden current strikes those high mountains precipitation occurs and the result is we have very heavy snow falls and rain falls on the seaward side of that mountain range, and conversely on the landward side you had a dry belt and small precipitation in winter, and a small rain fall in summer. The same condition prevails in the Mackenzie valley with one other factor added, the Chinook wind, which tempers the winter climate there. Wheat grows there as well as in the Yukon and perhaps even better.

The first great wealth of that country to be developed will be its mineral wealth, and it was so in the Yukon. While the Yukon is capable of supporting a very considerable population, its great wealth so far has been mineral wealth. I have no doubt that in the valley of the Mackenzie, that section which lies between Hudson bay and Mackenzie river, the oil and the asphalt taken from the tar sands will be the first products to any extent. I say that the mineral wealth will probably be the first to be produced. Mr. Speaker, within the last twenty-five years—which is only a short time in the history of a nation—many important things have happened in connection with minerals in Canada. It is quite possible history will repeat itself in the next twenty-five years. It will be twenty-five years ago, on the 17th of August next, since gold was discovered in the Klondike. Since that time the Klondike has produced $200,000,000 of the yellow metal which has come out in a continuous stream and has enriched the countries to the south and particularly the western provinces of Canada. The finding of that gold opened up to us a storehouse locked, padlocked, by nature. But the finding of the gold caused an influx of people into the Yukon, and notwithstanding that the gold development has been lessened there is still a considerable population there. Within the past twenty-five years the Cobalt field was discovered in Ontario, a field which has given to Canada and the world about $200,000,000 of silver wealth. I suppose within the last fifteen years the Porcupine field has been discovered, and it still continues to pour out annually enormous quantities of wealth in the shape of gold. Our geologists tell us that the same rock which underlies the Cobalt and Porcupine regions extends to the far north, and it is quite possible that there may be other Cobalts and other Porcupines within the Arctic Circle. Even another Sudbury may be discovered there, because I am informed that as far west as Manitoba nickel deposits are found. There is no doubt that there are many other Klondikes in the Yukon, but whether they will be discovered in our time or not is in the lap of the gods. But inside twenty-five years, only two and a half decades, there must have been pretty nearly six hundred million dollars of wealth produced from these three camps.

If the oil discovery which was made last summer at Fort Norman is half as good as we are led to believe, it is quite possible that that immense wealth which I have mentioned may be trebled or quadrupled in oil.

I shall not detain the House to refer to the authorities I have in my desk, but Mr. Camsell, of the Geological Survey, states in his report on the tar sands of Alberta that there are at least 150,000 square miles overlaid with these tar sands, rich in asphalt, rich in oil, and rich in tar. The potentialities of mineral wealth of this great north country are almost beyond belief.

Mr. MACKIE (Edmonton): Alberta coal, for instance.

Mr. THOMPSON (Yukon): Alberta has a great coal area. It is said that that province has more coal within its four corners than any other area in this sphere on which we move and live. I think that is true, but I am speaking of the country beyond the northern boundaries of Alberta and the other Western Provinces, and in asking the Government to consider the evidence that I am submitting to the House and to them, I hope they will not confine their investigation altogether to the southern portion of our country. We are often told that Canada is broken in the centre, it has a weak back. You have your coal resources on the Atlantic, you have your coal resources in the West, you have your settlements in Quebec and in Ontario, and on the plains, but in the centre where you should be strong you are weak. And if you look at the map, Mr. Speaker, that is only too obvious. But I say to you, Sir, that within the lifetime of men who are in this House there will be a new territory opened up away beyond the borders of the Western Provinces to-day which will produce great national wealth and will strengthen the backbone of Canada where it is now weak.

I suppose it is likely that the mineral wealth of this country is the first that will be tapped. The discovery of minerals has had a very potent infl.uence upon the movements of the human race. I will not go off our own continent to prove that, Sir. When gold was discovered in California in 1849, I think I am safe in saying, there were not 10,000 white people on that coast between the Arctic ocean and the Mexican line. That was only seventy years ago, and to-day California is one of the great states of the commonwealth with a population of 3,500,000 or 4,000,000. Washington and Oregon were forests and British Columbia was a desert so far as the occupation by whites was concerned—it was certainly given over to the Indians at any rate, and there was not a soul north of that province. In 1856 gold was discovered in the upper regions of the Fraser river, which led to an influx of people into the north, and the great province of British Columbia was carved out of the wilderness. We all know what a strong support it has been to Confederation since that time. Forty years later gold was discovered in the Klondike, and the influx of people established that territory and gave to that wilderness in the north a great people with a stable government. Since 1849 until to-day instead of only 10,000 people between the crests of the Rocky mountains and the Pacific coast there are I presume about 10,000,000 people, in three states one province and one territory very largely because of the discoveries of these precious metals in the rivers and valleys of that territory. All of this is quite possible to be duplicated in the far north in these river valleys which, I have not the slightest doubt, contain vast mineral wealth, because those regions have been examined by our geologists in a very slight way and they come back with reports that indicate the great potential wealth awaiting development.

I do not desire to dilate upon this subject. I just want to touch the mountain peaks, as it were, and in closing my remarks I wish to be consistent with what I said in opening, that a purely destructive criticism is, I think, rather negative, but that a constructive criticism is a wholesome thing either for an individual or for a government. Therefore I propose to make a few suggestions in the hope that the Government may take cognizance of them, examine them and if they think them worthy adopt them.

I have a great deal of experience, Mr. Speaker, in living in frontier countries and in framing legislation for them. In my time I have had a good deal to do with giving to the Yukon territory, which I have the honour to represent, a set of mining laws. A former minister of the crown, Hon. Mr. Oliver, for whom I have a profound respect, was a frontiersman and realized the necessity of having stable laws if the mining industry of the Yukon was to be developed, and during his regime I submitted to him certain suggestions, which were subsequently incorporated in the Yukon Placer Mining Act. Before that Act was passed there was no stability of title for the great basic industry there. Title was based on regulations passed by the Cabinet and capable of being changed by that Cabinet or by succeeding cabinets. Consequently we found it difficult to get capital to invest in our great mining industry, gold. The same condition exists to-day in connection with the oil regions in the Mackenzie river basin and all the other territory which is north of and in fact held by the provinces as part of the public domain. It is not good business for a government to grant oil leases based solely upon regulations. I hope as soon as the Government have the information necessary they will frame an Act of Parliament which will give stability of title in oil leases. You will find, Sir, and our Government will find, that you cannot get capital to invest in an industry unless you have a good stable title, and that stability can be given only by Act of Parliament. So I hope the oil regulations which were recently suspended, but which I believe are now in force, will very shortly be incorporated in an Act of Parliament.

Mr. MACKIE (East Edmonton): No Act of parliament fixing regulations—not in their present form.

Mr. THOMPSON (Yukon): I am not sufficiently acquainted with the oil business to criticise the oil leases. If they were gold leases perhaps I could. But I notice my hon. friend from Edmonton has a resolution on the Order Paper, and I hope that when he discusses it he will suggest where the weak points are in the present oil leases. What I want is security and continuity of title, because oil mining is a little different from placer mining; it requires a very considerable expenditure of money, a good deal of time, and a high degree of skill to locate and develop these oil prospects.

We have here a Geological Survey which, I think, should be recruited up to full strength. I quite agree with what my hon. friend from Fort William said with regard to the depletion of the personnel of that scientific body during the last few years. I hope it will be recruited to full strength as soon as possible and that every man whom the Director of the Geological Survey can spare will go into that north country this summer and commence a survey of the territory which extends, as I say, from Hudson bay to the Mackenzie river. I know it is not possible to do this all in one summer, but I hope the work will be started at once, because it is of the first importance that prospectors going into that country should have geological maps so that they may know where to go to prospect for oil, and where not to go.

Here is another aspect of the question. We developed during the war some of the most famous airmen in the world, some of the most capable topographers and photographers in the world. We all know of the work, which they did in France and of the extent to which that work was valued by the military chiefs. These men are here, and if they are not in the Geological Survey we should get them, equip them with topographical and photographic instruments, send them and their planes and their equipment to Edmonton or wherever the base is, and have them make aerial topographical maps of that vast country. It is of great importance that this should be done, because the eyes of the mineral operators are upon us to-day. Oil is king. We have struck oil in the north, and we want all the reliable information we can get for the people who are turning their attention to these nothern oil fields. It is necessary, therefore, that our geologists should go to that country this summer—and when I say this summer I do not mean that they should leave Edmonton in June when the river opens, go in there and stay from three to six weeks, and then have to start the return journey in time to come out before the river closes. That is what we have done in the past, because we could not do anything else; but we can do otherwise to-day. We are going to vote a considerable amount of money for our air services.

Mr. MACKIE (Edmonton): The river opens in May, not in June. They are ploughing in Alberta to-day. Do not give our country a bad reputation.

Mr. THOMPSON (Yukon): I thank my hon. friend for the correction. Whatever may be the case in regard to the upper reaches of that river, I think there is a lake between the upper reaches and its mouth which does not open until June, and the oil fields are north of that. However that may be, what I am desirous of impressing upon the Government is this: I want these scientists whom we have, or whom we can get, to go there and make a geological survey of that country, make a topographical survey and a photographic survey. And in doing so I hope they will not altogether neglect the Yukon.

Before I take my seat I should like to tell you about the new discovery of silver ore in the Yukon at a place called Kino Hill, 175 miles northeast of Dawson—a place which you will hear of during the next few years. Enormous deposits of silver ores have been discovered there as the result of the operations of geologists in that country a few years ago, whose reports indicatted the possibility of the discovery of silver ores. The facts have borne out the truth of that prediction.

We know nothing about the fisheries of this nothern country of ours; yet we have in the employ of the Fisheries Department one of the greatest living scientists, a man who knows more, perhaps, about fish than any other man in the whole world—Professor Prince. I would like my hon. friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne) to sent Prof. Prince into that north country this summer to make a survey of the fisheries and to tell the people what the fisheries of that vast country are worth. We have had very assuring reports concerning them, but whether or not the conditions are as stated in the reports, I do not know.

Let me point out also that when you place a community in one of these northern countries, a community whose members live upon the natural resources, you have a community which consumes the best goods that the Canadian people can produce, and who pay well for them; because in the early stages of every frontier settlement the people of these newly opened districts are great consumers. This is particularly the case in a mineral country and in an oil country such as we expect to be developed up there. So I suggest that our Government do these things with the idea of opening up that vast country, because if they do they will considerably enlarge the map of Canada; they will bring about the establishment of communities which will be continuous in their life, which will produce their share of the commodities which we use, and consume their share of the things which we produce, and, generally, be a prop and a support to Canada in peace or in war.

Mr. W. A. BUCHANAN (Lethbridge): Mr. Speaker, in my judgment this is one of the most important questions that could be discussed by Parliament at the present time, because it is linked up with some of the other problems which confront us—the problem of unemployment; the problem of our national debt. If it is possible for Parliament and for the Government to bring about a great development of our natural resources, the enormous latent wealth of the country, we would not need to be so much concerned about the future.

I might criticize the resolution as worded, for this reason: the natural resources of Canada are largely under the direction of the provincial authorities. In the Prairie Provinces, however, the Dominion Government still controls the resources, and I feel there cannot be a settled policy in connection with the development of our natural resources until it is finally decided whether the control of these resources shall in the future be with the Dominion or with the provinces. As matters stand at present, there is an uncertainty that holds back both the Dominion Government and the provincial governments from action that would help to bring about the necessary development.

5 p.m.

Now, I am going to deal with two or three of what I consider to be the most important problems in connection with the development of our natural resources in the province of Alberta. A question was put to the previous speaker (Mr. A. Thompson) about the coal resources of Alberta. I asked the Director of the Geological Survey to supply me with the latest information as to the actual resources in coal of that province. He has furnished me with some figures that are startling, and I think the House would benefit by having them placed on Hansard. I quote from the statement:

The following table shows the coal reserves of the province of Alberta as calculated by the Geological Survey:

These reserves include coal seams of one foot or more in thickness to a depth of 4,000 feet.

Coal Reserves of Alberta.

Actual Reserve in million tons.

Anthracite	669
Bituminous	3,224
Sub. bituminous and lignite	382,500
Total	386,393

Probable Reserve in million tons.

Anthracite	100
Bituminous	182,183
Sub. bituminous and lignite	491,271
Total	673,554

Grand total of actual and probable reserves 1,059,947 million tons.

The total area underlain by coal in Alberta is reckoned to be 81,675 square miles.

These figures will give you some idea of the immense possibilities of coal production in Alberta. It may not be known to this House and to the country that Alberta contains about 86 per cent of all the coal resources of Canada, 61 per cent of the coal resources of the British Empire, and over 14 per cent of the coal resources of the world. I make that statement on the authority of the Director of the Geological Survey.

Some members of the House might like to have an idea of the actual production in Alberta. During 1920 Alberta produced over one-third of the coal produced in this Dominion. It produced 6,859,346 tons, while Nova Scotia came second with a production of 6,395,545 tons. I have quoted these figures in order to give the House some information about one of the great natural resources of Alberta, but probably during the session there will be an opportunity to enlighten the House further upon this question.

We have heard something about oil during this session, and from all that can be gathered, I think it is quite possible that one of the greatest oil fields in the world may have been discovered in the country to the north of the capital of Alberta. It may not, however, be known to this House and to the country that efforts to obtain oil are not confined to one section of Alberta, but that efforts are being directed in all parts of that province to discover oil. There is no wild-catting, no careless movement at all; men are putting up real money and making a real effort to discover oil in that province. In the neighbouring state of Montana a great oil field has already been discovered within a very few miles of the southern boundary of Alberta, and that discovery is lending encouragement, to prospectors and actual companies for exploration purposes operating in the southern part of the province, that oil will be discovered there.

We have every reason to be hopeful in connection with those two great resources in Alberta particularly. What I want, however, to direct the attention of the House to is a question that I have frequently brought to the attention of Parliament but which to-day, I consider, is much more important than it has been at any previous time. It relates to the development of our natural resources. It is known to this House, and largely to the country now, that great portions of the southern part of Alberta and the southwestern part of Saskatchewan have been settled, and the problem faces the people to-day whether they will be able to remain and make an existence upon the land, that is, in what is known as the semi-arid or arid belts of those two provinces. In the light of history, I think it can be established that a mistake was made, in the first place, in opening up certain of the southern parts of those provinces. But they have been opened up; practically the whole of the country is settled; but through crop failures every few years, caused largely by drought, those people are not able to eke out an existence, and the governments of the Dominion and of the provinces have to come to their relief every few years. On account of the assistance that has to be granted occasionally by the Federal Government and on account of the fact that the settlement of that country was due to the activity and policy of the federal power, this matter has become a question of federal importance. At this time, it is most important that the Federal Government should co-operate with the governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta in appointing a commission to survey the agricultural resources of the southern parts of those two provinces and to decide what sections of them can be held for settlement and what sections should be opened up for other purposes. There is a solution of this problem, and it lies in the provision of irrigation, wherever that is possible, for the dry areas. We have had experience for many years with irrigation in Alberta, and wherever it has been utilized in those dry sections of the province, it has been a success. I hope to establish to the House this afternoon the real importance of irrigation in connection with the salvation of those areas in the southern parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta that are to-day facing practical destruction as agricultural areas. We have at the present time in Alberta alone one million acres actually irrigated or in a position to be irrigated from works actualy constructed; 130,000 acres will be irrigated from works already designed and authorized, and 550,000 acres are believed to be susceptible to irrigation by works which have been planned and the construction of which may be authorized as soon as the necessary financial arrangements can be made. I do not want the House to gather the idea that it is possible, by means of irrigation, to reclaim all the dry land area in these sections of the two western provinces, because that is not the case. In the first place, there is only a certain quantity of water available for irrigation, and in the second place there is only a certain area of land that can be irrigated. It is estimated that, in the two provinces, it is possible to irrigate or reclaim and make sure of success for agriculture, 5,000,000 acres. I believe, with this area of 5,000,000 acres put under irrigation, a safeguard would be offered to dry farming on bordering lands. As the matter stands at present, when a drought strikes those sections of the West, there is no possibility of carrying along the stock during the fall, winter and spring months, because there is no feed; but with irrigation districts adjoining those areas, it would be possible to provide the feed and save the livestock, and that in itself is important in retaining the people on dry land areas in certain sections of southern Alberta, although I maintain there are other sections where it is impossible to retain them even with irrigation or with irrigation adjoining.

The problems that face Alberta, particularly in relation to irrigation, I can outline in two or three paragraphs. First, there should be the most complete storage of high water and flood flow of all streams in southern Alberta and southwest Saskatchewan. Second, there should be an interpretation as soon as possible of the Waterways Treaty in order to ascertain the water that is available from international streams for use for irrigation purposes in the Province of Alberta. The other problem is that of finance. I might be asked—What business is it of the federal power for me to bring up this question of irrigation? Even if the federal power has no responsibility whatever in connection with the actual development of irrigation districts, the federal power is, at the present time, responsible for the surveying of those lands in order to ascertain whether they can be irrigated or not, and it is also responsible for the streams which would be used to water those lands. So, in that respect, the matter is one of federal importance, and it is of the utmost importance to that part of the country that the federal power should continue these surveys until it finds out how much of that country can be irrigated and how much water is available for irrigation purposes. The question of financing has reached a stage where the Dominion has placed the responsibility on the local authorities, and the question of finances is the most serious matter at the present time. Districts have been formed in southern Alberta, and they are in a position now that they can proceed to construct irrigation works if they can find the money to pay the contractors. I am not presenting a case for help from the Dominion, because the people who want these systems are prepared to pay for the construction of them with their own resources, but the trouble is that on account of lack of information about irrigation systems on the part of investment markets in Canada it is impossible to sell those irrigation bonds without some help from either the Dominion or the provincial authorities, and the Provincial Government of Alberta is being urged at the present time to guarantee the bonds in order that the money may be raised for this particular purpose. These districts are formed in a similar way to municipalities, and they can be bonded in the same way. I shall attempt to establish that it would be in the interest of the country that these areas should be irrigated as quickly as possible in order that they might be made productive, and in order that the people there might be able to meet their obligations as citizens of this country.

In 1919 in the southern part of Alberta and the southern part of Saskatchewan, and in many other sections of Western Canada, practically no crop was raised on what we call the dry lands. Adjoining the city of Lethbridge there is the oldest irrigated section in Alberta, a territory that was irrigated by the old Galt Land and Irrigation Company, and afterwards taken over by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. In 1919 all the lands adjoining that irrigation district were burnt absolutely dry; there was no crop whatever. In the irrigation district the value of the crop raised on irrigated lands, good, bad and indifferent, was estimated by the Canadian Pacific Railway officials to be $54.71 per acre. I would like the House to keep that figure in mind, and remember at the same moment that on the adjoining dry lands there was nothing raised at all. If we could extend irrigation to the districts where it is possible to bring water and irrigate the land, these areas would produce agricultural wealth year in and year out. I might say that one section of country that had been formed into an irrigation district adjoining this Coaldale district of the Canadian Pacific, if it had had water in the dry year of 1919 it would on the same basis have produced $7,000,000 of wealth, but without irrigation it produced absolutely nothing.

This matter is of importance to this Government and to this House as it would remove the necessity for assistance to the settlers in these dry areas in the dry years by providing seed grain and relief to the settlers when they have no crop at all. It would also settle the question of mixed farming in that part of the country, because on irrigated land practically all classes of farming can be carried on successfully. There are members in this House from the province of British Columbia who know what it has been possible to do with irrigation in the arid sections of that province, and those of you who have followed the development of the arid regions of the United States know that there great areas of desert lands have been reclaimed by irrigation and are to-day producing great wealth. I have in my possession figures to show that in the case of certain of the irrigated projects of the Middle Western States, the value of the irrigated crops in 1919 alone was greater than the cost of the construction of the particular project. One of these I want to mention because it borders on the province of Alberta, and is situated in a very similar territory, and that is the Minidoka project in Idaho. In 1919 they produced irrigated crops to the value of $5,926,000, and the project only cost $5,820,000, so that one year's production was greater than the cost of the project.

Now what does irrigation mean to the land out there? Even in the very best of years in southern Alberta, with plenty of rainfall, the irrigated land has surpassed the dry land in production per acre. I have the figures from the Experimental Farm at Lethbridge, where both dry farming and irrigated methods are pursued. I will take what we have called the particularly dry years in that district. The year 1910 was one. Wheat on dry land at the Experimental Farm at Lethbridge produced in that year 11 bushels to the acre, and on irrigated land 25 bushels to the acre. The year 1914 was another dry year. Wheat on dry land at theExperimental Farm produced 24 bushels to the acre, and on irrigated land 54 bushels to the acre. The year 1916 was a really good one throughout the whole of southern Alberta, but I want to give the figures for that year to show that even in a really good year irrigated land produces better than dry land. In that year the average per acre on dry land at the Experimental Farm was 48 bushels of wheat, and on irrigated land 71 bushels. Now 1918 was a dry year in southern Alberta, and in that year on the Experimental Farm 14 bushels of wheat were produced on the dry land and 62 on the irrigated land. The average over this period was 30 bushels to the acre on dry land, and 53 bushels to the acre on irrigated land. I think these figures will prove that irrigation is of the utmost importance to what has been called the semi-arid areas in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

But there is one problem we must consider in connection with irrigation development. This Government and the Provincial Governments were responsible for bringing into these western provinces thousands of settlers. They came in there from many sections of the United States and from across the ocean. They brought all the wealth they had, and they spent it in developments on the land they took up. To-day they are practically worthless, and they consider it is the duty of these Governments to come to their rescue, not by giving them money, but by assisting them in constructing these irrigation systems in order that the land they have taken up may be made to produce wealth, and in order that they may be able to meet their obligations of the past and any other obligations they may have in the future. This can be done under irrigation, and I would urge this Government—I am not criticising the Government for what it has done in the past—to do its utmost in the future to attempt to solve this matter, or they will be compelled to assist these people to move out of that section of the country into other sections where these difficulties do not exist. I say that these sections can be made to flourish by the expenditure of money on the construction of irrigation systems. Might I mention in this connection the fact that during the past year the value per acre of the irrigated crops in the irrigated section of southern Alberta was $49.31 per acre. I do not believe that the dry land on an average will produce much more than a third of that amount this year, taking the whole southern territory and striking an average of the dry land production. The point to be kept in mind in connection with irrigation—and I want to mention it before I close—is the fact that there has been some criticism of the success of the Canadian Pacific Railway system along the main line of that railway. It should not be forgotten that that system was constructed solely for colonization purposes. They brought the water onto the land there in order to induce people to settle upon the land, because they knew that without an irrigation system they could not settle that particular district, and for a great number of years while dry land was in demand and was producing heavy crops, people could not be attracted to the irrigated areas and consequently the Canadian Pacific Railway system on the main line of the railway did not develop to any large extent. But in recent years it has been developing quite rapidly and producing a great amount of wealth. But in the areas I speak of, and this is an important fact in considering this proposition, the people are already on the land. They have their homes already established, with stock and machinery, and their farms are fenced. All they need is a guarantee of moisture, and if they can get that they can make agriculture a success. The only way they can make it a success year in and year out is by the extension of irrigation to all lands that are fit to be irrigated. This is a problem that is very much similar to the drainage problem in the province of Ontario, in the province of Manitoba, and in northern Alberta. In connection with drainage we have to find means of removing water from the land. In the matter of irrigation, on the other hand, it is a case of putting in ditches to bring the water to the land. I am quite sure that hon. members from the province of Ontario appreciate what taking water from the land means, and if they were in southern Alberta they would appreciate the significance of bringing it to the land. This question of natural resources, considered from all angles, is, as I said in the beginning, one of the most important subjects we can deal with in this Parliament; and it should be the business of this Government, as well as of the Provincial Governments, to do all they possibly can to develop our resources, so that we shall create wealth and satisfy those people who are looking for employment. There is no need to be pessimistic in Canada at the present time. It is true we are faced with many financial problems that are extremely serious, but we have immense wealth in this country and all that is necessary is to develop that wealth. If we do that, all will be well with Canada.

Mr. W. G. McQUARRIE (New Westminster): I desire, in the first place, to congratulate the mover of the resolution on having brought it to the attention of the House, and also on the able manner in which he handled the subject. In considering what branch of this manifold subject I should speak on myself, I found a good deal of difficulty. The resources of Canada are so numerous, so wonderful, and so great in extent that it is hard to decide, on a motion of this kind, to which particular resource one should confine discussion. However, as I am particularly interested in fisheries I thought it would not be out of place for me to offer a few remarks on that subject.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that any policy brought forward by the Government for the development of the natural resources of Canada should cover the question of greater efficiency in the development of our fisheries, for they are worth the most earnest consideration. In 1919, the fishery products of Canada amounted to $61,363,502, and in 1920, $56,508,429. You will observe there was a decrease of some millions in 1920 as compared with 1919. The fishery exports of the Dominion in 1919 were $37,137,102, and in 1920 $42,285,055, an increase of five millions. It seems to me that where we have a resource which gives rise to such a large percentage of exports we should do something to develop it. In British Columbia, the fisheries constitute a very important part of our natural resources. In 1919, the value of the fisheries production was $25,301,607, or 44 per cent of the production of the entire Dominion. You will agree with me, then, Mr. Speaker, that, representing as I do a British Columbia constituency, I have a peculiar right to speak on this important subject. I do not agree with the hon. member for Pontiac, (Mr. Cahill), in the view that in speaking on this resolution I am in anyway criticizing the Government, nor do I think that it was the object of the resolution to provoke criticism. I think that as members, on private members' day, we have a perfect right to bring to the attention of the Government such matters as we think worthy of consideration. I do not agree with another thing which was mentioned by the hon. member for Pontiac. I took it from his remarks that he is in favour of an open door for immigration. I certainly agree, as I suppose all other hon. gentlemen will agree, that immigration should be encouraged, provided we get the right kind of immigrants. I think it is important at this time, when there is so much unrest throughout the world, when the eyes of the world are turned towards Canada, and when we may expect large numbers of people to come into our country, that we should see that the right kind of people come to Canada. That is very important, and I entirely agree with the policy which the Government has adopted in that respect of strictly examining all those who wish to enter this country. Now, it may be that my hon. friend desires that certain classes of people should come into Canada who would not be wanted here; and I have in mind that possibly he may desire that certain immigrants from a part of the Empire where there is a good deal of trouble at the present time and who are going in such large numbers to New York and other American ports, should be given free entry into Canada. If that is his idea I certainly do not agree with him.

Now taking up the question of the fisheries I wish to say that I do not desire in any way to criticize the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne). As a matter of fact I would congratulate him upon the manner in which he is carrying out his duties, and upon the attention that he is giving to this important industry. I think I can tell him that those who are interested in the fisheries in the province of British Columbia appreciate very much indeed what he has done and is doing to encourage the fishing industry. Shortly before I left New Westminster I had the privilege of attending a meeting of white fishermen of the province, and at that meeting the president of the association stated that the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries had done more for the fishing interests than had any previous minister. I have no complaint to make either about the fishery officers. I believe that they have been efficient, that they have been doing good work, and that they are good and capable men, but I think that something may be said as to the system under which they have been operating. It is generally conceded, for instance, that on the Fraser river, which at one time was the greatest salmon fishery river in the world bar none, the salmon fisheries have depreciated to such an extent that the people of that country gravely fear that unless something is done the Fraser river will cease to be a salmon stream of any consequence. In fact as one of the fishermen at the meeting I have referred to put it: "If things go on as they have been going, in a short number of years there will be nothing but bullheads in the streams and boneheads on the banks." On a previous occasion I gave some details as to the decrease in the pack of salmon on the Fraser river and I do not intend now to repeat them. I shall, however, offer a few suggestions for the consideration of the minister.

My first suggestion has reference to the propagation methods which have been in use, in the province of British Columbia at all events. Results are what count. The important point is not the output of fry, but the number of mature fish that return. The hatcheries have been operating in British Columbia at the expense of many thousands of dollars a year for many years past. Millions of fry have been turned out at these places with the expectation that they should go out to sea and in due course return as fully grown fish, but unfortunately no results have been obtained. Therefore there must be something wrong with the system. What I submit—and I think I have a good deal of authority for my contention—is that the whole system of hatchery operation has been carried out on the wrong basis. The operation of hatcheries and the propagation of fish has not been according to natural methods—it has been entirely artificial. Now I submit that what is required is a combination of artificial and natural methods, and there should be a return as much as possible to nature. I have before me an article which appeared in the Canadian Fisherman, of September, 1919, which I think sets out the situation better than any words of mine could. I therefore, with the indulgence of the House, propose to read this article:

A NEW ANGLE TO THE SOCKEYE SALMON HATCHERY QUESTION.

Mr. Henry Doyle believes Hatchery Methods can be improved on.

The following statement and interview by Mr. Henry Doyle of the Northern B.C. Fisheries throws new light on sockeye salmon hatchery methods, and opens up an altogether new angle to this important question. Mr. Doyle's ideas will be read with great interest, as he is a pioneer in the salmon canning business of British Columbia and has made a careful and exhaustive study of salmon and their habits.

Mr. Doyle believes that hatchery operations on the Fraser River have been mainly responsible for the depletion of the sockeye salmon.

That fry liberated in rivers and streams that are lake outlets, have been a total loss. Reforms in hatchery operations, modelled more closely on nature's own lines, would, he believes, aid the increase of the sources of supply in the fisheries of the province.

With due respect to the men who believe otherwise and have made statements on the subject recently, Mr. Doyle said he believed sockeye salmon hatcheries operating upon the right lines would prove successful.

"Just because there has been an apparent failure in sockeye salmon hatchery operations under present methods, does not necessarily mean that the entire system is worthless," he said. Mr. Doyle does not think that hatchery work should be discontinued until the improved methods have been tried out. He suggests that officials in charge of hatchery operations sometimes lack efficiency. He said. "The failure of hatcheries to procure any augmentation in the number of sockeye salmon in areas where the hatcheries are situated, is probably very largely due to those in charge lacking appreciation of the necessity of employing distinctive methods for each individual species of fish. One who makes a success of whitefish hatching and applies similar methods to salmon propagation would make a mistake, and even in salmon culture the method of treatment for spring salmon must differ materially from that employed with the sockeye species."

Mr. Doyle's statement on sockeye salmon hatchery methods follows:

"Spring salmon deposit their spawn in streams which flow directly into the sea. A sudden transmission from fresh to salt water would be fatal to the young fish. Nature, therefore, endows them with size and strength to maintain themselves in the blackish water at tidal levels until sufficiently acclimatized to exist in the sea. Sockeye salmon on the other hand, spawn only in rivers having a lake source, and generally then in the small streams by which the lake is fed. This distinctive feature in the natural laws governing the spawning habits of the two species indicates that different methods should be employed in artificial propagation work, but in the past this very important factor has been almost completely ignored.

"Sockeye salmon propagation on the Fraser river commenced in 1884 and year after year eggs were secured from Silver and Morris creeks and other tributaries of Harrison lake. When the fry were being planted they were mostly deposited in the Harrison river, which is the lake's outlet, where the current of this and subsequently of the Fraser river would carry them to the gulf of Georgia before they found suitable currentless water in which to remain while attaining greater growth. In the fry stage sockeyes lack sufficient strength to hold their own against the sweep of the tides, and doubtless practically all perished from too sudden change from fresh to salt water.

"Dr. Charles H. Gilbert, of Leland Stanford University, is unquestionably our greatest authority on salmon life, and his investigations have shown that practically no sockeye, reaching the ocean as fry, return to the rivers as mature fish. It therefore follows that sockeye fry liberated in rivers and streams that are lake outlets have been a total loss.

"Hatchery troughs", continued Mr. Doyle "have smooth sides and bottom and offer no opportunity for the young fish to hide, and Mr. A. Robertson, officer in charge of the Harrison lake hatchery, has pointed out that fish raised therein at least partially lose the natural instinct to bury themselves under gravel when danger threatens. Indeed, he says, they come to know the attendant that feeds them and swim toward him when he appears with their food. It stands to reason that such fish, even when deposited in the waters of a lake, will fail to protect themselves against their natural enemies, and, lacking the instinct to seek shelter, would doubtless swim around until entering the current of the lake outlet, they would be swept seaward and likewise perish in their fry stage upon reaching salt water.

"Practically all the fish reared in the Harrison lake watershed have been liberated as fry in either the lake or the lake outlet. Few, if any, were planted in the streams flowing into the lake from which in the past the parent fish were secured. If my theory is correct, it follows that practically all those produced by hatchery operations have been lost, but in addition, and more important still, stripping the spawning streams year after year of the parent fish, with no attempt made to replace them with hatchery fry, has eliminated natural propagation as a factor in those streams.

"Years ago the Harrison lake watershed was the main spawning area of Fraser river sockeye; to-day its spawning beds are deserted while mature fish pass them by to ascend the Lillooet and Berkenhead; and I believe the depletion of these streams and the consequent diminution in the quantity of salmon in Harrison lake is largely, if not entirely, due to hatchery operations.

"But while the past has been disastrous, the future seems bright. The spring salmon hatcheries of the Columbia and Sacramento rivers have been successful in restoring the runs on those rivers, and all conversant with conditions in those waters know this to be the case. It only remains for us to ascertain the proper procedure for sockeye propagation when success with that species will likewise surely follow."

Mr. Doyle refers to the success which has been had in the Oregon fisheries. As a matter of fact, on the Columbia river they had almost the same experience that we had on the Fraser river, and in 1895 they were practically in the same position there as we are on the Fraser river to-day, that is, their run of salmon had decreased to such an extent that everybody was alarmed and it was feared that the whole stream would be depleted. The Oregon authorities have been studying the subject for some years, and they have worked out a system which, it seems to me, could be very well applied to the Fraser river; and not only to the Fraser river, but also to all the other rivers and streams in British Columbia where the sockeye runs. Their scheme was the building of retaining ponds. According to our methods of hatching salmon, the fry was turned out after a very few months when it was very small and not able to protect itself from its natural enemies, or to withstand the action of the salt water. In Oregon they built a very large retaining pond—of course, a great many of these retaining ponds were built—and then the small fish were kept in those ponds until they were a year and a half old.

Mr. DUFF: Were they fresh water or salt water ponds?

Mr. McQUARRIE: Fresh water. Then the fry were turned out to sea. They were turned out not into an outlet of a lake, as was the case with us almost universally, but into a stream—a gravel stream preferably—which led into a lake. The fish were at an age when they knew something and were able not only to protect themselves, but their instinct was sufficiently developed to prompt them to go out to sea and to come back. The fisheries on the Columbia went from bad to worse until very lately—I think it was about a year or so ago—and a great deal of discontent followed as to the method which they were trying to work out there. But when sufficient time was allowed for these small fish to come back, they found that they did come back in the shape of larger and better fish than they ever had there before, and in such increased numbers that the run approached the greatest run ever known on the Columbia river. At the present time that river has come back to its own, and other rivers and streams in Oregon have also come back to their own, so that the fisheries of that state have been restored almost to normal. What has been done by the Americans surely can be done by us, and I submit to the minister that the system in use in Oregon should be studied very carefully by his staff, with a view to its application to the province of British Columbia.

Another point in connection with the hatcheries is that it seems to me where we are hatching out fish, as we do on the Fraser river, while the Americans in the state of Washington are doing nothing in the way of propagation and are getting our fish, they should be required to assist us to some extent in maintaining our hatcheries. I think that is only reasonable, and I believe if suggested to them in the right way they might be prepared to assist us.

Another suggestion which I should like respectfully to make to the minister is that the administration of the fisheries should be reorganized. At the present time everything is run from Ottawa. Now, although they have competent men here, they are a long way from the Pacific and they are a long way from the Atlantic. I submit that we should have both on the Atlantic and on the Pacific local boards which should act in an advisory capacity, and, if possible, have executive powers. This is not a new suggestion; the matter has been put before the department more than once. It was discussed very thoroughly before the Royal Commission appointed by the Government in 1917 to investigate fisheries conditions on the Pacific Coast. In the report of that commission the matter was dealt with as follows:

> Your Commissioners are of opinion that the plan of organization of the administrative system should be reconsidered with a view to making it more effective in dealing with the important problems of the Pacific fisheries. The outline sketch of the present system, given in the introduction, does not reveal practical co-ordination among the various related services under the control of the Dominion, and there is, moreover, the problem of the overlapping activities of the Dominion and the province. The system is characterized by extreme centralization at Ottawa, and yet only in the Minister of the Naval Service does it there find unity, there being no one official in Ottawa, exclusively assigned to fishery problems, in whom centre all the administrative activities directly affecting the fisheries. On the Pacific Coast there is no connection at all between the different services and the powers of local officials are strictly limited. In the inspection service, for example, although the local inspectors may issue renewal licenses to licensees in good standing, apparently almost everything else must be referred to Ottawa for decision.
>
> The fishing interests have made many representations in favour of more immediate access to executive authority. What is now known as the Pacific Committee of the Advisory Board does not meet the particular need felt. This Pacific Committee consists of the Deputy Minister of the Naval Service, chairman, the Commissioner of Fisheries, the General Superintendent of Fisheries, the Assistant Superintendent of Fisheries, the General Inspector of Pickled Fish, who are all officials of the Department at Ottawa, and the Chief Inspector for British Columbia and a representative of the provincial administration, the Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries; and there has recently been added one non-official member, a resident of the northern part of the province. In so far as this committee makes an occasion, once or twice a year, for certain higher officials to sit in conference, it is valuable, and the presence of the representative of the Provincial Department of Fisheries is of importance, but it is, in the main, only a method by which these officials work out their problems; it does not bring together all the higher officials of the services bearing on the fisheries; and it does not alter the general nature of the system nor create a local organ.

At six o'clock the House took recess.

After Recess

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. McQUARRIE: Mr. Speaker, when the House rose, I was reading from a report of the Royal Commission on Fisheries, 1917, and I would like to read just this further short extract from that report:

> The Pacific fisheries have been producing about 40 per cent in value of the total fishery output of the Dominion, and are capable of great further development. The administrative system clearly should be so adjusted as to operate directly, comprehensively and effectively on the spot; for, as has already been emphasized, the fisheries are a great business and the constitutional position is such that the administrative system must determine, almost from day to day, the conditions under which the business can be operated. Mere changes in organization will not, in themselves, ensure constructive and efficient action and those responsible for results can best shape the instrument they will use. If a local organization is created it might centre in an individual who under the authority of the minister could co-ordinate and direct the local operations of all the different services related to the fisheries, or in a commission, which might include in its membership one or more capable business men with local knowledge.
>
> Larger expenditures will be required even under the most efficient organization, but any wise expenditures will be comparatively small outlays to bring about the increasing national returns, which this highly productive industry can be made to yield. Increased provision should be made for scientific investigation, and it would seem most desirable that the scientific experts should be brought into more direct relationship to the practical daily problems. The present inspection staff is undermanned even for the work now undertaken.

In this report other matters are dealt with, but as I have now taken up a little more time than I expected, I shall not refer to them particularly. They all tend to point out that the fisheries of the Pacific coast can be greatly developed, and, I presume, the same thing would apply to the Atlantic fisheries, and also, no doubt, to the inland fisheries.

The request for a local board on the Pacific coast is very general; it is advocated by the fishermen, boards of trade, business interests, cannery men and, I might say, practically the whole community. We feel we are so far away, that it is very difficult under present conditions to make the necessary progress. The feeling which exists at the present time amongst all those interested in fisheries is a very good one, and I think they are all working and striving towards the same end, which is to increase the fishery output of the Pacific and also to improve the methods of propagation.

The hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Peck) last session made some remarks derogatory to the cannery interests. He stated, I understand, that they constituted a big monopoly, and from his remarks one would infer generally that they were rather unfair in their operations. This is the first time that I have had an opportunity of saying anything on the subject, and I simply want to put myself on record as being opposed to the views which the hon. member for Skeena apparently holds. The cannery men have invested in that business a large sum of money running into something like fifteen million dollars or so; they are good businessmen, good citizens; they are carrying on legitimate businesses, and I do not think they should have been subjected to the criticisms which the hon. member made last session.

I have said that the request for this board is backed by practically the whole community. In April of last year, a delegation representing the Vancouver Board of Trade and the British Columbia fishery interests came to Ottawa and presented to the minister a memorial in favour of this board, which memorial I would crave the indulgence of the House to read, because it states the situation very well and gives the views of the people of British Columbia. This memorial, which is dated April 30, 1920, and addressed to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne) reads:

> For years those interested in the fisheries of British Columbia have urged your department to appoint a local board to control and administer the industry. It is felt that many of the problems which have given your officials great concern, and have been very disturbing factors to all engaged in this branch of our natural resources, might easily have been adjusted if dealt with by a competent local board that was familiar with all the various phases which entered into the questions requiring adjustment.
>
> The lack of such a local board compelled the submission of these matters to Ottawa, where only the leading aspects of the case would be known to your officials and their decisions, based on those leading issues, only partially dealt with the trouble. Adjustments which ignored the minor features of these problems often opened the door to a host of small complaints which grew in volume the longer they were neglected, until eventually they constituted grievances which affected the whole province.
>
> In asking for this board, we do not wish to cast any reflection upon the officials of your department. We believe their decisions were only arrived at after giving the question deliberate and painstaking investigation, and that they honestly believed their findings were in the best interests of the fishing industry of British Columbia. We submit, however, that their lack of familiarity with all phases of the issues was bound to have an adverse influence on their judgment, and that this is always to be expected when questions of this nature are settled by parties living three thousand miles away from the seat of operations.
>
> You as a successful business man of large affairs know, from your own experience, how much better results are obtained from personal interviews than from letter-writing. You can appreciate how points of major importance will be brought out in conversation which it would never occur to a correspondent to mention. Mail order houses unquestionably do a large business, but there is more satisfaction and less complaint when buyers and sellers come into personal contact.
>
> In dealing with Ottawa we must necessarily rely on letter-writing for the presentation of most of the matters affecting the fisheries of British Columbia which require adjustment. Personal interviews involve the loss of too much time and the expenditure of money which often cannot be afforded. As an illustration of this we would mention the British Columbia Fisheries Protective Association and the soldiers' associations wished to send a delegate on this present occasion but were prevented by a lack of funds for the journey and because the loss of earnings for their delegate would also have to be compensated for.
>
> As corrobation of our contention that your officials are not fully cognizant of all the points involved in our fishery question, we would point out that your predecessors have, on at least five different occasions, sent commissioners out to investigate, report, and make suggestions for the guidance of your department in devising regulations for the British Columbia fisheries. We submit that this in itself is a confession of weakness in the present system.

I might mention, of course, that these commissioners were not all appointed by the present Administration, or by the Conservative Administration which preceded it.

The States of California, Oregon, Washington, and the territory of Alaska, all have fisheries problems similar to those of British Columbia. In the cases of California and Oregon control is vested in fishery commissioners possessing full administrative powers, and the industry in these two states is flourishing. Not only are there no contentious questions requiring settlement, but through intelligent, artificial propagation work the fisheries in their waters show actual increases. Shad have been introduced into the waters of both states and to-day California annually ships many carloads of shad to supply the demands of the eastern markets, while Oregon has worked up a successful business in canning this species.

As to salmon, California, after sixty years of strenuous commercial fishing produces more than it did in the beginning, and the Oregon Fish Commission advise us that "Columbia river and several of our coast streams have been holding their own, due to no other reasons, except that there has been a large number of good, healthy, advanced fingerlings turned into the same annually."

The State of Washington has the control of its fisheries placed in the hands of one fish commissioner. This man voluntarily asked that his office be made subservient to a fisheries commission "empowered to regulate fishery operations to the extent of saying how, when and where they may be carried on, and with ample authority to enforce such regulations." He adds: "This commission should take the place of a fish commissioner, for the power to be delegated by the legislature should be to three or four men rather than to a single individual. It can be elective or appointive, and should be apart from politics or partisanship; free to act solely for the interests of the state in rehabilitating and perpetuating a great natural resource now approaching destruction."

I might say here that the State of Washington has now placed its fisheries under a local board.

The laws and regulations governing Alaska's fisheries are in the hands of the Federal Government. The law provides that before any change of regulations are made, public meetings must be held at Seattle, San Francisco, or in Alaska as best suits the convenience of those directly interested, and the subsequent requlations are based on the evidence submitted at such meetings. In addition, the newly prepared Alaska Fisheries Bill was determined and drafted by a local board appointed by the Federal Government for that specific purpose.

In New Zealand, in Scotland, in Norway, and we believe also in France and Portugal, the control and administration of the fisheries is vested in local boards. Not only have these boards become strong factors in fostering and building up the industry, but in all these countries the operations of the industry are carried on much smoother and more effectively than is the case in British Columbia under the methods in vogue there at present.

As previously mentioned, California and Oregon, operating under local boards devoting all their time and energies to the purpose, are showing increased production through artificial propagation accomplishments. Washington is asking for a local administrative board so as to secure the same effect. Washington's case is similar to ours, except that their propagation work is farther advanced and their methods more efficient. Artificial propagation in British Columbia has been a notorious failure; the methods employed are obsolete; and instead of making efforts to modernize the system, more money is now being spent to perpetuate the old policies.

[Mr. McQuarrie.]

British Columbia has a coast line of over 7,000 miles. Along this coast are over 1,000 streams, each possessing its individual runs of salmon. Excessive fishing in each and all of these streams means extermination of the runs unless the commercial depletion is offset by re-stocking each stream with fish secured through artificial propagation. It is not in the public interest to confine the industry of the future to Fraser and Skeena rivers, Rivers Inlet, and a few isolated points on Vancouver Island, where all your hatcheries are at present located. We must be just as particular to build up the thousand small rivers and streams, from which, in the aggregate, the most of our production is obtained. This means more extensive securing of salmon eggs; the building and upkeep of retaining ponds for the resultant fry; some methods for properly distributing the young fish and some authoritative body that will oversee their subsequent development and welfare. It is out of the question for such work to be administered from headquarters three thousand miles distant; the present Vancouver staff have too many duties of their own to undertake work outside of their present sphere; the local administrative board has been found successful by our American competitors and we believe is the only feasible solution of the British Columbia fisheries problems.

It has been suggested you might be adverse to voluntarily handing over to such a local board as we ask for, the administration and control of the fisheries of British Columbia. We do not believe, however, you will view this question so narrowly. You have already demonstrated a broader-minded policy by diverting some of the Ottawa work and responsibilities to chief inspectors in Vancouver, Halifax and other points. This is the first step in the direction of the goal we are seeking. You have also divested yourself of the administration of operations of Vancouver harbour. It is only reasonable to suppose that if the direction of Vancouver harbour matters warrants the establishment of a local administrative board to operate and control them, an industry so vast and with such diverse and intricate problems as our fisheries contain, would be still more in need of local administration.

The board we are asking for is one that would be as fully administrative in every respect as is the Vancouver Harbour Commission. It would be non-political, and should consist of commissioners whose term of office would be sufficiently long as to give the industry the full benefit of the knowledge and experience they acquire. These commissioners should be three in number, one a bona fide experienced fisherman, one a practical cannery man, and a third, who would also be chairman, a returned soldier of qualified legal attainments. Neither the fisherman or canner commissioners should be permitted to remain interested in the commercial industry, and all should be provided with sufficient salary to make them independent.

In asking for the appointment of this board we are voicing the desires of the vast interests represented by the Vancouver Board of Trade; the interests of those engaged in the fishing industry in any and every capacity; and we are acting in the interests of the public at large. We do not wish you to look upon it as a plea from the salmon industry alone, for development upon proper lines, and under proper control, is just as much needed for our herring, pilchard, halibut and other deep sea fisheries, as well as our shell fishes. A local board dealing with this newer development can avoid much of the mistakes which have led to friction in the salmon industry, and by carefully studying the situation from the beginning, can so regulate matters that the industries will be protected and production of new fish will keep pace with commercial demands.

The other fisheries referred to, cod, halibut, herring, whales, and all the other fish we have there, are of course very important. In British Columbia we have practically every kind of fish except lobster. We have no lobsters in British Columbia.

Another suggestion I would make is that something should be done to eliminate the natural enemies of the salmon, and in this connection I wish to refer to the report of the Fisheries Commission before mentioned. I shall quote just a short extract:

> The destruction of salmon, in various stages from the egg to the mature fish, by seals, ducks, eagles and trout is very great in the aggregate. Trout are very plentiful in the streams where the salmon spawn and consume large quantities of the eggs and the fry. The checking of this wastage is obviously in the interests of conservation. Witnesses before the commission did not, however, suggest very definite methods of dealing with the problem. Restrictions on the taking of trout for the market might be removed from salmon streams and the fishing of sportsmen encouraged; and at some expenditure by way of bounties, or otherwise, it is believed methods could be found for reducing the number of seals.

The most dangerous enemy of the salmon is the seal, particularly on the Fraser river. There are at the present time on the sandbars at the mouth of the Fraser thousands of these seals, and I am told that they are taking more fish than the fishermen themselves, and that they even take the fish out of the fishermen's nets. This condition is not a new one, but I am sorry to say that nothing has been done of any practical value to meet the situation. Various half-baked schemes have been tried, but without any practical results. The seals are still there and, if anything, in greater numbers than ever. Something like two years ago the Department of Fisheries did try to do something in the way of destroying seals. They mined one of the sandbars, but it was very difficult to do much in that way, because as you all know, a seal is a very wise creature and it is difficult to put up any job on him. But after taking weeks, the officials finally succeeded in mining this sand bar. They were able to set off the mines when there were a good number of seals there, and according to their report they killed about 500. I might mention that there was for a time a bounty on seals, but it was not large enough to encourage anyone to get after them for the reason that when you shoot seals the majority of them sink, and it is only once in a while that you can get one. In order to secure the bounty, you must produce a part of the seal—I think, one of the ears—in order to substantiate the claim that you have actually destroyed it. So that that arrangement was not very satisfactory. Now the fishermen have suggested that the proper method of meeting the situation would be the use of cross lines. These lines are, of course, dangerous to other species of fish, particularly to sturgeon. We have still some sturgeon in the river and in the lakes adjoining it, and some of these fish sometimes attain a weight of 1,500 pounds. This may possibly be regarded as a "fish" story, but it is true, nevertheless. The department has gone so far as to accept the suggestion of the fishermen, but in such a restricted way that it was considered by the men rather in the light of a joke. The department offered to put on two crews of two men each, and allow them to use cross lines for one week. The fishermen do not consider that good enough; they are of the opinion that nothing can be accomplished thereby. They suggest, however, that during the months of December, January, and February they be allowed to use cross lines, and in addition, that they be given a bonus of $5 per seal. If that is not satisfactory to the department, then they urge that the department put on a number of crews and allow them to work there for three months. They claim that they would undoubtedly catch quite a number of seals and this would have the effect of intimidating other seals and inducing them to leave that district, because, as I explained before, the seal is very wily, and when he finds that the Government is really after him I have no doubt he will quit. I think that this is something that should be seriously considered. There is no question that the menace exists; and there is also the trout menace to cope with. This is serious, and nothing is being done in the matter at all. As a matter of fact, I think that trout eggs have even been placed in some of the lakes and streams in that district.

I would also suggest that something be done to build up a Canadian fishing community. This is something we have not got at present. On the Atlantic coast there are, of course, a great many fishermen who are good citizens and who help to build up the resources of the country, besides contributing to its population. In our country, unfortunately, the Japanese predominate; and although the Japanese fisherman is an industrious worker, he does nothing towards the building up of the country. Unquestionably he makes money out of the fishing industry, but most of it he sends away to Japan. Most of the Japanese keep themselves and their families on their boats. Of course, they can never be assimilated in this country.

According to the list which has been given me, a great many nationalities are represented in our fishing communities, but very few of them are Canadian; indeed, very few are British. This, I think is wrong. I think we should have a fishing community there composed of our own people, for Canadians should be given the advantage of our own natural resources. Of course, I understand that there is great difficulty in eliminating the Japanese, who apparently are there to stay; but it does strike me that it is not right that conditions should be such as prevail at the present time. If a number of Canadians went to Japan and predominated in any industry, as the Japanese predominate in the fishing industry in British Columbia, there would be some trouble over there, and it is safe to say that some means would be adopted to alter that condition. I am convinced that the fisheries of the Pacific Coast, of the Atlantic Coast, and of the interior, can be greatly developed under a proper system of control; and if you can double or treble the fishing products of the Pacific Coast, for instance, you will help your railways as well as your steamships, besides assisting a great number of our people. The bulk of our fish is exported. I have in my hand a card sent me from Prince Rupert, showing the number of fishing craft there at the docks, and on the back of it is written the following:

> Halibut is marketed in Prince Rupert three times weekly. This photograph represents one day's arrivals. This shipment represents $17,000 to transportation companies and requires exactly one-third of the available express refrigerator cars to handle.

If you take the whole shipment of halibut from Prince Rupert alone, you will find that many hundreds of cars are required during the course of a year from our national railways to take care of the transportation of this product. A large number of our ships could be used to take our canned salmon to other countries. I say, therefore, that to encourage the fisheries of Canada is to help in no small way to meet the situation with which the Government is now faced,—a large deficit in the operation of its railways and steamships.

Mr. John A. CAMPBELL (Nelson): The importance of the subject covered by the resolution cannot, I think, be over-estimated. This fact has been demonstrated in the annual meetings of corporations such as banks and other financial concerns during the past few years. At almost every one of these meetings presidents and managers have given considerable attention to the question of the development of our natural resources. By way of illustration I would quote from a statement made by the President of the Canadian Pacific Railway at an annual meeting, I think, in 1919, as follows:—

> With the vigorous development of the country's natural resources and the necessary extension of the markets of Canada, we have every reason for confidence in the future prosperity of the country.

This subject is one which, possibly, has been as widely discussed as any other before the people at the present time. It has furnished a prolific crop of speeches at general meetings of boards of trade, Canadian clubs, and public associations generally which have met during a number of years past in Canada. The question arises first as to the extent of our natural resources. We are accustomed to hearing the statement that our resources are unlimited. As a matter of fact, I doubt whether we know very much about what our natural resources really are; and it is doubtful also whether in some cases statements on the subject have not been very much exaggerated. At any rate, we know that our natural resources, whatever they may be, are of no use to us unless they are developed. They are no more useful to us than is a withered arm to a man. They do not provide work for the people; they do not provide wealth with which to discharge our national debt; nor do they in any other way assist us. Instead of having a policy for the development of these resources, we have at present a policy—if there really is one—which tends rather the other way. There are now handicaps that prevent the proper development of our natural resources. For instance, the present tariff, in my opinion, has the effect of retarding such development, rather than of assisting it. The importance of this development is set out in an article appearing in the Toronto Saturday Night:

> Our resources are now our reserves. Not only are they owned by the citizens of Canada, but they must be employed to lighten the burden of the war.* * * How all this is going to work out may only be imagined, but one would think that even if the state does not set up businesses for itself, it will have to reach down into business and see that our "great natural resources" are developed into profitable enterprises, to the end that all the people will not go broke paying war taxes.

Now this is the sentiment which has been expressed far and wide. It is the sentiment which has been expressed already in this House and we shall hear more of it; but the point is that the expression of the sentiment has not got us anywhere up to the present time. What we now want is some active, definite policy which if pursued to the end will result in the development hoped for.

Before I enter further upon the consideration of this subject in a general way, I would like to bring to the atention of the Government a matter in regard to which I asked a question last year. The answer to that question was rather general, and in the light of information subsequently obtained, inaccurate. The question I asked had reference to the Economic Development Commission. I inquired when the commission was appointed, what work had been done and what its cost was. The answer given to me was:

No report has been made but the duties of the commission being largely suggestive and advisory, their views on certain subjects have been discussed informally with the Government for the purpose of advising or assisting the Government touching many subjects upon which it has been advisory to take action by legislation or otherwise.

The cost of the commission to that date was given as $23,200.48. The answer being so delightfully general, inconclusive and unsatisfactory I set myself to find out if I could not get information in regard to this commission from some other source, and I obtained a copy of the Order in Council appointing it. The Order in Council is dated 28th June, 1915. I will not read it but merely mention in a general way what appeared to be the intention in the appointment of the commission. In the preamble it is stated:

The Prime Minister observes that the need is everywhere recognized of stimulating greater production in Canada.

A little further on there is this clause:

That before export the product should be converted through manufacture in Canada into the form in which it is proposed to be consumed or used.

Further on the question of the marketing of our food products is recommended to the commission; and later the question of opportunities for a vigorous and effective policy of immigration is commended to the commission's consideration. Still further on it is set out that "transportation whether by land or water carriage, for reasons above indicated, is closely connected with the problems under consideration." It would appear from this Order in Council that the commission when it was appointed was given a sort of roving commission to investigate matters generally in connection with production and distribution.

To obtain further information I searched Hansard and found that the matter was brought up on May 9th, 1916. In reply to a question on that date the then Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, said:

There have been reports made to me some times written and sometime oral.* * * I do however believe that a good deal of really important and interesting work has been done.

In conclusion Sir Robert Borden said:

I believe they will have a full report before next session.

The question again came up in 1917 in connection with an item in the estimates to provide for the expenses of this commission, and particularly in regard to the sum of $750 voted to Mr. E. H. Godfrey. In reply to a question by the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) the Minister of Railways made this statement:

They have reports ready and these reports have been edited by Mr. Godfrey who was paid $750 for that work.

Now, Mr. Speaker, although I was informed last year that no reports had been furnished, yet at an earlier period two members of the Government stated that reports had been supplied and the gentleman referred to had been paid $750 to edit those reports. It would now be in order for the Government to explain these contradictory statements, give us the information asked for regarding this Economic Development Commission, and produce reports which are stated to have been made.

It may be that the commission in question was appointed to arrive at some policy along the lines of the resolution we are discussing. If that is the case nothing of the kind seems to have resulted from its activities. Surely the House is entitled to be furnished with some information as to how the $23,000 mentioned has been spent. It would appear to me that if we want an example of how not to do a thing we have a very fitting illustration in the case which I have cited.

The objects to be achieved by the development of our natural resources are briefly as follows: To create wealth; to provide raw materials for our industries and to adjust trade balances, I am not one of those who believe that the matter of exchange depends very much, if to any extent, upon the situation relatively regarding trade balances; but still it is always advisable to increase our exports as much as possible, and the development of our natural resources will help, to a large extent, to bring that result about. Another reason is that such development would have a tendency to put the West and the East in a similar position. I do not think that even in this event the West would depart from what it thinks is the proper policy to pursue in the interests of the whole country; but if manufactories spring up in the West and develop our natural resources, then the situation there would be similar to that in the East. And the West could not be accused of advocating a policy solely in its own interest.

The resolution calls for a definite policy in connection with our natural resources. I have not the temerity to formulate such a policy and hand it to the Government; but there are a few matters that I might briefly mention which I think should be taken into consideration in connection with any policy upon which the Government themselves may determine. In the first place I would advocate a systematic survey of the territory wherein lie these natural resources which await development. As I intimated previously we really do not know what we have in the way of natural wealth, and such a survey should necessarily precede the actual development. Already in this debate mention has been made of the work which the Geological Survey has done in this connection, and I desire to emphasize the remarks of the hon. member who made that reference—I think it was my hon. friend from the Yukon (Mr. Thompson).

Unfortunately the Geological Survey Department at the present time is very much undermanned and underpaid. It has been doing a great work, particularly in connection with our mineral resources, in the way of pathfinding or pointing out where such resources may be found. But the staff of this department is very much below its normal strength, and in my opinion, not only should the staff be brought up to normal, but it should be greatly increased and the salaries increased also, because there is no question that more men are required to carry on the survey, and by reason of the inadequate salaries many of the best qualified members of the staff have left the department to take more remunerative positions elsewhere.

Another illustration I might give is in connection with forestry. A little while ago in one of the forestry journals I read a statement to the effect that: There is no use at the present time trying to take up the subject of reforestation. The first thing we must do is to endeavour to protect the forests we have. We have immense stretches of timber and pulpwood, especially in the northern parts of Western Canada, and the amount of destruction by fire each year is really criminal. In my opinion the only way by which we can prevent this destruction is by the use of an aeroplane fire protection service. I will not go into details, but this work has been done very efficiently and very satisfactorily in the United States. I am corresponding at the present time with a young Canadian who had been in the Canadian Air Service overseas, but who when he came back to Canada found no opportunity of continuing his flying activities in Canada, and so took a position in the United States Air Service. He is now doing excellent work in California. He has told me what the Air Service is doing there in the way of fire protection—work that it is utterly impossible to accomplish except from the air. In northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan where there are hundreds of thousands of acres of pulpwood and timber only a few men are employed in the summertime in fireranging work, and it is utterly impossible for them to cover the ground thoroughly or to do anything in the way of controlling or extinguishing fires when they do break out. As many as a dozen fires are sometimes raging in a district extending over a distance of a few score miles in area, and the fireranging staff is utterly inadequate to cope with even one of those fires. During the past twenty-five years one-half of the timber resources of that north country has been destroyed.

But a necessary prerequisite to any plan of developing these natural resources is the transfer of those resources in the western provinces to the provincial authorities. I do not propose to discuss this question at this time as there is a resolution on the Order Paper covering the point, but until it is finally settled we cannot expect to have any definite policy agreed upon. The Federal Government has intimated that it proposes to transfer those resources to the western provinces, and, of course, if that is done there would appear to be no particular reason why a definite policy should be formulated by the federal authorities in respect to such resources and naturally the provincial authorities must wait until the natural resources are under their control before they can decide what policy they will pursue.

Another point that has already been touched upon is co-ordinating the development of our natural resources with the upbuilding of our National railway system. As an illustration I might mention that last year the Canadian National Railway built a branch line twenty-five miles northeast of Melfort, Saskatchewan, through a well settled country. Beyond this district is another area of good land which is not so well settled, being subject to flooding at certain periods of the year. This is known as the Moose Range area comprising about one hundred and nineteen thousand acres. When the railway is extended the best route will be through this area. The natural thing to do in connection with the extension of the railway and the development of the country would be to drain that area, and it could be done at a cost of about $2.50 an acre. When drained the land will be just as good as that through which the railway is already built and which is well settled. I understand, however, that although this project had been practically decided upon, the Estimates have been cut down so that it is not possible to undertake the work this year. Here is something which on the face of it the Government should take in hand in the interests of the whole country. This is a case where the expenditure of a few dollars will be returned a thousandfold, not only directly in the upbuilding and development of the country, but indirectly, which is just as important, in the furnishing of traffic for that railway; and with the extension of the line through this district it will be eventually well settled, and justify still further railway development. I will not pursue this illustration further, but it seems to me that at this particular time it is important to point out that we must co-ordinate the development of our country and the development of traffic for our railways. It is far more important that such development work as this should be taken in hand than that some other public works such as drydocks or canals be constructed.

I had intended to take up at some length the question of the development of our mineral areas, but I shall content myself with merely referring to the anomaly that arises from the fact that although the Department of Mines is divided into two branches—the Geological Survey and the Mines branch—neither of them has anything to do with the actual mines or mineral areas, these being looked after by the Department of the Interior. Besides there is no mining law so far as the Dominion is concerned. Those who engage in mining have to depend on regulations which are subject to change from time to time. The situation is entirely unsatisfactory, and until the Federal Government enact proper mining legislation there can be no satisfactory mining development in the territory which is owned by the Dominion Government. The provinces of Ontario and British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces, and the states to the south of us, all have mining laws; but the federally owned areas which are known as mining lands are governed entirely by mining regulations which, as I have said, may be changed from time to time. Some one has said: it is better to have a poor mining law than good regulations, because then there is the element of permanency and the miner can govern himself accordingly. I might continue indefinitely on this subject, but I shall content myself by emphasizing the fact that one of the first things this Government must do if they wish mining to be developed in the territory over which they have control is to enact mining legislation along the lines pursued in Ontario or in British Columbia.

Last year I mentioned another matter which is of great importance not only in the interest of mineral development but to the returned soldiers, namely, the question of prospecting by means of parties of returned soldiers. It was stated by the Minister of Mines a year or so ago that such a scheme would not be feasible, but since that time it has been worked out in other countries. I understand that in Australia a scheme of that kind is now in operation; British Columbia also has a similar plan. I am not sure whether it is in force as yet, but in any case it looks feasible and I have no doubt that if it is not already in operation it will be put into effect very shortly. There would seem to be no reason why an interesting and profitable occupation should not be afforded our returned soldiers in that way, with the result not only of discovering but also of developing our mining areas.

The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Manion) has mentioned the scheme in connection with reindeer outlined by Mr.

Stefansson. Great credit should be given to Mr. Stefansson for the information which he has given to us in connection with the north country. We now know that the map of Canada has been rolled back many miles; that the north country, which has hitherto been looked upon as a vast, barren waste, is capable of supporting a considerable population and of producing as much meat in the way of reindeer and caribou as the southern country is producing by its cattle and sheep. I understand that Mr. Stefansson has already secured from the Government a lease or concession of some kind in respect to the southern half of Baffin island and that he is now purchasing reindeer to put on this territory in order to demonstrate the feasibility of the project.

I might continue indefinitely on this subject, Mr. Speaker, but I intimated that I would not take up very much time, and as there are other speakers on the programme and it is the desire, presumably, to conclude the debate this evening, I shall give way to the others.

Mr. T. E. SIMPSON (West Algoma): Mr. Speaker, in rising to support this motion I desire to compliment the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Manion) for bringing the matter before the House and affording to hon. members an opportunity to discuss the development of our national resources, a subject which, to my mind, is one of the most important that can be considered at this time by Parliament or the Canadian people.

I listened with a great deal of interest this afternoon to the hon. member for Yukon (Mr. Thompson) describing in a splendid manner the natural resources of that country situated so far to the north. I could not help being impressed by the great possibilities that lie before this country in the proper development of its natural resources. But vast as they may be, these resources are of no real value in their undeveloped state; only as we develop them and bring them into use can they contribute anything toward the comfort or sustenance of man or toward the liquidation of our national debt. Take for example, the great basic industry of agriculture. We have approximately 450,000,000 acres of land in this country suitable for agricultural purposes, but only about one-tenth of it is at present under cultivation.

9 p.m.

From this vast area that is not being cultivated no wealth is being derived. Only by pursuing a proper policy of immigration, a policy of encouragement to emigrants who are familiar with agricultural pursuits, can we hope to increase very materially the acreage under cultivation. I want to commend the policy of the Government in that regard. They have been trying to encourage the coming to Canada from Great Britain and the United States of persons who have had agricultural experience and who are willing to come to this country and settle on the land.

The hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) this afternoon made some reference to the immigration policy of the Government. He said that he had read in the press an item in which it was stated that two or three shiploads of emigrants—I think they were Poles—had been refused admission to this country by the Immigration Department, and he expressed his regret on that account. But, Mr. Speaker, unless those immigrants had agricultural experience and were prepared upon entering this country to go on the land, the immigration authorities were perfectly right in refusing admission to them. We do not want shiploads of immigrants coming to Canada at this time to compete in the labour market with our own Canadian citizens, many of whom are out of employment.

We have also heard it stated, not only in this House but elsewhere, that the policy of this Government was not in the best interests of the farmer; that it made his agricultural implements dear and did not provide a proper market for his products, and that as a result it was militating against agricultural development in this country. I would like to quote some figures which I think should set hon. gentlemen right on this question. In 1914 the number of acres in farm crops in Canada was 33,436,675; in 1917, 42,602,288; in 1919, 53,049,640, an increase in area under crop of over 10,500,000 acres in two years and of almost 20,000,000 acres in five years. Then, let us compare the values of the farm crops produced in these different years. In 1914 the value of the farm crops produced was $638,580,300; in 1917, $1,144,636,450 and in 1919, $1,452,437,500. This, I submit, does not indicate any serious set-back to this great natural industry under the policy of this Government.

It has been stated also that farms have been abandoned in Ontario. Let us look into the figures for Ontario as applying to the period to which I have just referred. The acreage under cultivation in Ontario in 1914 was 8,973,700; in 1917, 8,233,500; in 1919, 9,915,884. The acreage under cultivation in 1917 was a little less than it was in 1914, but in 1919 there were 1,682,384 more acres under cultivation than there were in 1917. This, I think, Sir, should be a sufficient answer to the statement that farms in Ontario are being abandoned.

With some of our important natural resources, such as coal, fisheries, and oil, I shall not deal to-night; they have been referred to at length by hon. gentlemen who have preceded me. I should like to refer briefly to our timber and mineral resources. The forest area of Canada is estimated at nearly 600,000,000 acres, about two-thirds of which is covered with marketable timber, so that the House will realize the great wealth producing possibilities of this national asset. What I should like to impress upon the Government is the necessity, not only of preventing wastage by fire of this great national asset, but of seeing that the timber is manufactured into the finished product in Canada, in Canadian mills, and with the employment of Canadian labour. In order to see the benefits which would accrue from a policy of this kind, let us look for a moment at the pulp and paper industry. A few years ago there were practically no pulp and paper mills in Canada, and practically all the pulp wood that was cut in our forests was exported to the United States. The provincial legislatures, however, yielding to strong representations that were made to them, placed an embargo on the export of pulpwood from crown lands. What was the result? To-day, we have many pulp and paper mills in operation in this country. In several instances, flourishing towns have grown up in Canada as a result of industries having been placed in those particular localities, and I will cite just two or three instances in northern Ontario. The town of Espanola, with a population of 3,500 people grew up solely as a result of a pulp and paper mill having been placed there. The same thing is true of Iroquois Falls, with a population of about the same number, and Smooth Rock Falls, where the mill has not been in operation so long, with a population of about 1,500. There are other places where mills are just being erected and not yet put into operation, such as Kapuskasing. I believe a mill is operating at Timiskaming in the county of Pontiac.

But there is another important result. Instead of exporting all our pulpwood, for which we receive a very small amount, we are exporting finished product, and for the first ten months of the present fiscal year, exports of pulp and paper amounted to the splendid sum of $142,579,053, as compared with $83,576,178 in the first ten months of 1919-20 and $67,403,247 in the corresponding period of 1918-19. This is, I submit, a sufficient argument to prove the wisdom of home manufacture, even without our taking into consideration the effect of this export business on the balance of trade and on the stabilizing of our Canadian dollar. But while there is an embargo on the export of pulpwood from crown lands, there is no embargo on the export of pulpwood cut on lands that have been alienated from the crown, lands that are owned by private parties. What do we find? We find that in the first ten months of the present fiscal year, 1,243,112 cords of pulpwood were exported, in its natural state, to the United States, with the result that we receive only the sum of $16,396,940 for that vast quantity of pulpwood, whereas, had it been manufactured into the finished product, into newsprint, in Canadian mills, we would have received approximately $85,000,000 for that same amount of pulpwood. In addition to that, we had employment only for the lumberjacks, or what might be termed the lower class of labour, in cutting that wood, whereas United States mills provided the artisans or the highly-skilled workmen, and the wages to those highly-skilled men were paid in the United States. This is not the way to build up our country, and I would strongly urge that an export duty be placed on pulpwood cut on lands that have alienated from the crown. If that is done, this vast quantity of pulpwood will be manufactured in our Canadian mills and will provide employment to Canadian workmen instead of to workmen in the United States.

I had intended to deal at some length with the iron ore industry; but it has been gone into and dealt with very thoroughly by the hon. member for Fort William, and I will make only a few brief observations. We have in Canada some twenty blast furnaces, some of which are not at present in operation; but those that are operating, are using only a very small percentage of Canadian ore, only about four or five per cent, the reason for this being that, while we have vast quantities of iron ore in this Dominion, that ore is of a low grade, low in iron content and high in sulphur and other deleterious matter, and in order to bring this Canadian ore up to a marketable condition, it is necessary that it be given certain treatment which is termed "beneficiation." It requires roasting or briquetting, and different methods of treatment. The capital expenditure for the plant necessary for this process and to develop the power necessary to operate such a plant is such that marketable ore cannot be produced cheaply enough to compete with United States ore. It is, therefore, necessary, if we intend to develop our iron and steel industry, to have it grow and expand in this country to a sufficient extent to take care of our requirements, that some assistance be given to its development.

This afternoon the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill) took a pretty strong crack at the system of bounties, stating that this was a good old Tory policy; that it was the same old Tory plan of letting your friends get into the trough or the public treasury. I should like to remind my hon. friend that it was not the good old Tory party that gave the iron and steel bounties, as he said, but the Liberal party. It was the hon. gentleman who represents the constituency of Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding), who was then Finance Minister, who was largely responsible for those bounties being given, and I want to commend him for that because I think I can convince my hon. friend that it certainly was a wise policy to pursue at that time and has proven a success. I think all will admit that as a result of those bounties on iron and steel, which were given between the years 1896 and 1912, it was possible for the steel industry to become established in this country—an industry which now plays such an important part in the industrial life of Canada. I want to point out that the Dominion treasury did not lose one cent through giving those bounties, but on the other hand has received directly from the steel industry a greater sum than was ever paid out in bounty.

I have been able to obtain the figures covering only four large steel industries operating in Canada, and covering only the four years from 1915 to 1918 inclusive. In this four year period these four corporations paid directly into the Dominion treasury in customs duties $9,327,377, considerably more than one-half the amount paid out by way of bounty in the whole period, and when you take into account the customs duties that the other steel companies operating in this country have paid during the whole term of their operation I think all will admit that in that way alone much more has been returned to the Dominion treasury than was ever paid out by way of bounty. In addition to that, many employees of these steel corporations are drawing good, substantial salaries, and during the last three or four years I have no doubt that a nice snug sum has been paid into the treasury by way of income tax from these employees. But in addition to the amount that was paid directly into the Dominion treasury, we must take into account the general benefit to the country of these steel corporations. Let me give, for example, the amount that these four companies paid in freight during the four-year period to which I have referred. No less a sum than $30,625,323 was paid by these four corporations in freight in the four-year period from 1915-1918. These concerns employed during that period an average of 20,000 men and paid out in wages in that time $85,269,075. So I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this country lost nothing, but on the other hand, has been the gainer by a very large amount, through the bounties which were paid during the 15-year period from 1896 to 1912. I submit, further, that if it was a good policy to render assistance to the steel industry at that time, is it not worth while considering whether a similar policy would not be in the interests of the country in connection with our iron ore development at the present time?

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Maisonneuve): Mr. Speaker, I was very much interested in listening to the very able speeches that have been delivered in support of the resolution proposd by my hon. frind from Fort William and Rainy River (Mr. Manion), and I wish to congratulate the mover for the non-partisan spirit which he displayed in presenting his views to the House. His motion reads:

> That in the opinion of this House, it is advisable that the Government should bring forward a policy having for its object the development of the natural resources of Canada.

That is a large order for the Government, and you will note in the language of the resolution an implied condemnation of the Government which my hon. friend supports so steadfastly. It is not so much a policy that this country wants at the present moment for the development of the natural resources of Canada; it is an up-to-date Government that is required. The present Administration has been in office ten years, yet the resolution as drafted by my hon. friend implies that in all those long years they have done absolutely nothing to develop the natural resources of this country. But, Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to speak this evening in any carping spirit.

I agree with my hon. friend who has just taken his seat (Mr. Simpson) that the policy of the Mowat Government for the development of the pulp industry in the province of Ontario has been an excellent one. It has been followed in my native province, thanks to the wisdom of the late Premier, the father of my friend, the present member for West Quebec, Hon. S. N. Parent, confirmed since by Sir Lomer Gouin. As a result of that policy, we have seen a great development in the province of Quebec. Cities and towns have sprung up on the St. Maurice river, on the Saguenay river, and on the St. Francis river. The present prosperity of the province of Quebec, from an industrial point of view, is largely due to the wise policy of the two heads of the local government —the late Hon. S. N. Parent and Sir Lomer Gouin. By that policy we have forced the Americans who heretofore had come to Quebec, depleted the Crown lands of pulp wood, and manufactured the finished product in the United States, to transplant their capital and their factories in the province of Quebec, and we now have a population of skilled working men, who in the next few years will make our province prosperous in a still greater degree.

As I stated a moment ago, it is a very large order which my hon. friend has placed in his resolution, viz., the development of the natural resources of Canada. It seems to me that it should be the A. B. C. of the policy of any Government to develop the natural resources of this country. After this terrible war Canada, above all things needs development to meet the problem of unemployment which remains unsettled. We must also attract capital into this Dominion, and favour sound immigration. I regret, by the way, that the Government has deemed it proper to abolish that excellent body which has done yeoman service during the last fifteen years; I mean the Conservation Commission. I am not aware that the United States have abolished their Conservation Commission, which has been of such great service in that country. The Conservation Commission was started under the Roosevelt administration, and it was because of the urgency of the question that the Laurier government instituted a similar commission in Canada. From the returns published from time to time, the Conservation Commission of Canada has been of great assistance to our industries generally. Through its activities and research work we have learned what immense natural resources we have in Canada.

One of my friends this afternoon spoke of the rich coal deposits in Alberta and in British Columbia. Through the Conservation Commission an estimate has been made of the amount of coal in Canada; and we have also seen by statistics published what inexhaustible resources we have in the water powers of this Dominion. It was my good fortune to visit the province of Alberta during the month of September last, and I must confess that I was amazed to find that that province contained such untold wealth in coal deposits. Indeed, I believe that if we can solve the transportation problem and the intricacies of the labour question in western Canada, this country, with its immense coal deposits in the East and in the West, can, and should, be independent of the United States.

But, Mr. Speaker, as Kipling says: "East is East, and West is West." I am not on my feet to speak of the West. Other speakers have extolled to the seventh sky the potential wealth there is in the Yukon Territory, in British Columbia, in Alberta, in Saskatchewan, in Manitoba, and in Central Canada. I intend to say a good word this evening for the dear old province of Quebec, and incidentally, for the Maritime Provinces. In the old province of Quebec, and especially in the district which I have the honour to represent jointly with my hon. friend the member for Bonaventure (Mr. Marcil), and my hon. friend from Matane (Mr. Pelletier), we also have great natural resources which are only awaiting the action of an up-to-date government to take hold of and fully develop them. The Gaspé peninsula is the oldest section of Canada. When Jacques Cartier sighted the shores of this country, he planted the cross at Fontenelle, near Gaspé basin; therefore, that is the gateway of Canada. It is a very picturesque country. The mountains remind one of the Alps, and the Baie des Chaleurs is reminiscent of the blue waters of the Mediterranean sea. But there is something else besides the picturesque in that country. We have natural resources. In the interior of the peninsula, we have nearly three million acres of virgin timber lands which are awaiting the opening up of that country through the construction of a railway. Now, I am not pleading for a government railway in the interior of the peninsula; far be that from my mind. I am only recalling to the House of Commons the fact that last year my good friend from Matane introduced a private Bill with a view to obtaining a charter for the construction of a railway from Amqui on the Intercolonial railway, to the harbour in the Gaspé basin, through the interior of the peninsula. The best evidence was adduced before the Railway Committee in favour of the construction of that artery, and yet, in spite of our efforts to convince the majority of the committee that the charter should be granted, we were defeated by a few votes.

Mr. PELLETIER: One.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Yes, one. But a few days before, this Parliament had renewed about forty charters for the West. I do not begrudge my western friends the support which they obtained from the majority, but I claim that they should have had the generosity to favour the project which was presented by my hon. friend from Matane. If this railway were built, the three million acres of virgin timber lands would immediately become of very great value, and we should witness a repetition of that industrial progress that has taken place in other parts of the province of Quebec. There are water powers which could be harnessed in the various rivers which traverse this peninsula. We have also in the interior very rich deposits of zinc, of lead; and traces have been found of shales, asbestos, silver and even oil. Yes, I can invite all my hon. friends in the House to "strike oil" in the peninsula of Gaspé.

Mr. Speaker, I said a moment ago that the railway which was projected by the legislation presented last year by my hon. friend from Matane (Mr. Pelletier) would start at a point called Amqui on the Intercolonial and would run through the peninsula as far as Gaspé basin. Gaspé basin is a land-locked harbour, open practically all the year round. It is the nearest point between Canada and Liverpool, shortening the round trip by 1,100 miles. I say this in all sincerity in the presence of my hon. friends from Halifax and even from Sydney. Gaspé, Mr. Speaker, is destined to be the national harbour of Canada.

I was referring a moment ago to the vast mineral deposits which have been found in the interior of that peninsula; and in this connection let me say that I am always somewhat humiliated that some points of our country are better known and better appreciated by foreigners than by Canadians. It is true that as far back as 1844, investigation in the interior of the peninsula was started under Sir William Logan, but since that time very little has been accomplished by the Geological Survey of Canada in that oldest section of our Canadian territory, and the reports we have are from foreigners. I will make an exception in one case. I refer to Mr. Mailhiot, a young engineer of very brilliant parts, who published not long ago a report of the mineral resources of Gaspé. I shall not weary the House by reading the whole of the report but will simply read a few sentences.

> The whole of Gaspesia offers a vast field for prospecting. No systematic work of that kind has yet been done and the rudiments of its geology are barely known. In a word Gaspesia, with its many peaks of igneous rocks, its batholithic and laccolithic masses, is a field which has a future before it of tremendous possibilities.

I have the report of J. C. Beidelman, mining engineer, on the zinc and lead deposits found in the interior of Gaspé:

> Mr. Walter Harvey Weed, mining geologist of New York, and for over 20 years with the United States Geological Survey, examined the district in detail. I have taken the liberty of quoting from his report on the main property as follows:
>
> "The ore occurs in well defined fissure veins whose outcrops on the cleared tract are distinct and traceable across the plains . . . while no definite statement as to the genetic relation of ore and rock is perhaps warranted, an experience of many years in the mining fields of North America makes me feel positive that the observed geological relations are extremely favourable.

He says further:

> The geological evidence indicates that the ore will extend a great distance downward a depth of 1,500 feet or 15 years supply for a 200-ton mill from this one ore shoot is quite possible.

Then I have the evidence of Dr. Coleman, professor of geology in the University of Toronto, who says:

> Some veins. . . have been followed for distances of about 3,000 feet, and it is probable that they extend still further under the cover of superficial deposits.
>
> From what I have seen of other zinc fields, I am strongly of the opinion that the present area will prove on development to be one of the few zinc and lead fields of the world producing a high grade zinc-blende, minus the usual complex ores, and if the depths are sustained, as I thoroughly believe they will be, then this field has a future before it of tremendous possibilities.

You have there, Mr. Speaker, the evidence of three of the most renowned engineers in America—two from New York and the other from Toronto—about the zinc and lead deposits in the interior of the Gaspé peninsula. Mr. Coleman further says that:

> One must compare those mines with the famous Joplin mines of the United States.

He goes on to say:

The ore assays about 8 per cent of zinc and 4 per cent of lead, and the association of minerals permits an easy separation of the two metals. It is compared by Weed to that of the Joplin district of Missouri, and in general character it is surprisingly like the ores of that famous zinc mining region, in spite of the fact that the geological features of the two districts are as different as possible.

Dr. Coleman suggests that for the development of these mines the railway project which was presented to the House last year should be realized. He goes on to state:

Many years ago it was suggested by a geologist who was working in the region that the best route for a railway to the seaport of Gaspe basin would be across the tableland south of the Shickshock mountains, but the present railway follows the coast and does nothing to open up the interior. A railway through the heart of the peninsula would disclose important ore deposits, like that of the Federal mine, as the Canadian Pacific caused the discovery of the Sudbury nickel ores and the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario opened up the Cobalt silver region.

As I stated a moment ago traces of shale, asbestos, silver, oil, and various other minerals have been found in the interior of the Gaspé peninsula. But Mr. Speaker, the wealth of that region is not only to be found in land. Its wealth also lies in the adjacent waters of the Baie des Chaleurs and the gulf of St. Lawrence.

We have our fisheries, as I stated a moment ago. I shall not weary the House with any figures. Suffice it is to say that the fisheries of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and especially the Gaspé and Magdalen fisheries, are renowned the world over. It is always a matter of regret to me that even in centres, such as Montreal, Quebec, Three Rivers and Ottawa, we have on our tables every Friday fish caught in the Baie des Chaleurs or the gulf of St. Lawrence, but which has come back to us from Gloucester in the State of Maine. As your are aware, Mr. Speaker, by the Treaty of 1818 the Americans are allowed to fish within the three-mile limit in the Magdalen Island district. I do not understand why we should import any fish at all in view of the enormous supplies which we could get from our own seashore. This brings me to a very annoying neglect—the lack of attention given by the Department of Marine and Fisheries to the great fisheries of the gulf of St. Lawrence and of the Pacific ocean. I am not speaking without warrant. I have under my hand the organ of the fishermen of Canada, the Canadian Fisherman, and I read in its issue of February last the following headlines:

Strangling an industry.
How the Fishing Industry of the North Pacific is being Bluffed and Humbugged by the Canadian Government railways.

The article severely condemns the attitude of the Department of Railways and Canals for not providing refrigerator cars for the transportation of fish from the Pacific coast. The same reproach applies to the Department of Railways and Canals as regards at least the section of country which I represent. I do not know how the Maritime Provinces proper are treated in that respect by the Department of Railways and Canals, but I know that the people of Gaspé have for the last ten years been clamouring for refrigerator cars to facilitate the transportation of fish from the seashore to the cities of Quebec, Montreal and Toronto and the other centres of Central Canada.

Not long ago a delegation from Gaspé met the Premier of Quebec and presented a petition to the Provincial Government on behalf of the Gaspé fishermen. This was the language used by the gentlemen who accompanied the delegation:

You are doubtless aware, Sir, of the very large part that the fisheries used to play in maintaining the settlers on the North Shore of the river and gulf of St. Lawrence, and particularly the Gaspesian coast and peninsula. Through a lack of proper appreciation and encouragement, the fisheries no longer afford a remunerative livelihood to the inhabitants of those regions, and skilled and experienced fishermen are abandoning the industry for work in the logging camps and pulp mills and other industries. But the worst feature, Sir, lies in the fact that the boys and youths of the coastal settlements are not engaging in the fisheries and we are in grave danger of losing a class of workers whose particular vocation requires a training from childhood. A fisherman can become a lumberman, but a lumberman cannot become a fisherman so readily, as there are certain features in the fisherman's work which call for a certain skill acquired only by long practice.

We are impelled at the present crisis to approach your government with some suggestions to remedy the unfavourable conditions hindering the development of the Quebec sea fisheries. The worst of these conditions may be summed up under three heads—First, lack of adequate transportation facilities to carry our fish to market. Second, lack of the means to provide fishermen with the bait necessary to carry on an uninterrupted fishery during the short season of open water. Third, lack of modern facilities to increase the average catch of fish and lessen the hazard and uncertainly of the present methods of fishing.

I shall not dilate on those grievances. But, Mr. Speaker, you have there notice served on the Government of what are the present requirements of the fishing population of the Gaspé peninsula. We should have proper transportation; and I have a motion on the Order Paper under which this feature of the fishing industry will be considered at the proper time. But at the moment I wish to call the attention of the Government to the necessity of providing the fishermen with freezers in various local centres; and I would suggest that those freezers should be organized on the co-operative system. That system has been adopted in the Old Country and is working very satisfactorily there. I again ask the Government to look into this matter and to establish for our fishermen these local freezers to assure them a continuous supply of the necessary bait.

Coming back to the question of natural resources in general, Mr. Speaker, and to the remarks I made at the beginning of my address this evening, namely, the opening up of the interior of the Gaspé peninsula, I claim that in my humble judgment the best asset in the natural resources of Canada it not to be found in the fisheries or the mines, but in the population itself. The best asset of Canada is its population, particularly if it is a population of settlers. Now, Sir, the opening up of the interior of the peninsula of Gaspé would add to that district at least fifty large centres. Many years ago that country was surveyed by engineers and traversed by missionaries and voyageurs, who were unanimous in their view that we had between the two ranges of mountains a splendid valley, with good soil, where there could be planted at least fifty parishes, that could attract settlers and maintain them on the land. Mr. Speaker, is it too much to ask that the pioneer population of Canada, which has shown so much attachment to the land of its ancestors, should be favourably considered in connection with the railway policy of the Government? After all, Canada is the greatest farm on the continent of America, and we must look to the farmer as the mainstay of our country. I claim, Sir, with some pride, that the race to which I belong is above all a race of farmers. Think, then, what the result would be if by the construction of a railway in the interior of the Gaspé peninsula fifty parishes were established; think of the industry of that population, of the increase in its numbers, and of the national wealth it would represent. Leroy-Beaulieu, the great economist—and many who came after him have said the same thing—once stated that the capital value of a man, a woman or a child could be placed at one thousand dollars. Mr. Speaker, I want to help my good friend the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) in the dilemma in which he finds himself to-day. He has to find a means of raising revenue to meet the financial condition of Canada, the serious railway problem of Canada, the interest charges on the national debt. The greater the population of the country the greater will be his revenue, because the country is developed in proportion to the extent and activity of its population.

Now, Sir, the fifty parishes which I would like my hon. friend to establish in the interior of Gaspé will soon increase their numbers, because the race from which I spring has demonstrated that, once given a start, it never stops. At the time of the cession of the country to Great Britain the census of Canada showed, according to our historians, a population of 60,000 or 70,000; to-day the French Canadian population of the province of Quebec only is, if my information is correct, about 2,500,000. The same economist, Leroy-Beaulieu, stated a few years ago that the rate of increase in the French population in Canada was unique in the history of the world; that the population was doubling itself every thirty years. Well, that means that in thirty years the French Canadian population of the province of Quebec will be 5,000,000, and in sixty years, 10,000,000. And what is sixty years? Even a century is but a moment in the history of a nation. Now, I come back to what I said a moment ago: the best asset of Canada, its greatest wealth, is its population—and, I may say, its farming population. Let the Government develop a policy of expansion; let the Government encourage colonization, the taking up of farms, and we need not worry about the future of Canada. These are my last words, Mr. Speaker; I did not intend to speak at such length, but as I was speaking of the population of the province of Quebec, I could not but give a few facts which are in themselves quite illuminative.

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (East Edmonton): Mr. Speaker, I believe I have a first duty to perform in coming to the defence of the hon. Minister of Immigration and Colonization (Mr. Calder) after the onslaught that has been made against him during his absence by the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Cahill). If I may judge by the gentleman's prophecy, I doubt very much that he would be a better minister of immigration than the present minister; for in Saskatoon, when the hon. member for Pontiac was there during the boom days, this is what we found on his barn door sign:

Frank S. Cahill says Saskatoon will have 100,000 population in 1920.

The population of Saskatoon at that time was about 40,000; it is now about 20,000. I wonder whether the other 20,000 pulled out with my hon. friend from Pontiac and followed him to his constituency, or whether in the manipulation of their affairs he drove them out of the country. That is a matter for him to answer, but in view of that record and that prophecy, I say that the Minister of Immigration has nothing to fear.

Next, Sir, I would like to say a word in connection with the remarks made by the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux), who says that what is wanted is a government. I always thought that you could judge people by their works; and if I read aright the political history of this country, during the period of fifteen years that hon. gentlemen sitting opposite were in power, they were quite as impotent as any administration that is known in the political history of Canada in taking any initiative in developing our natural resources. This Government has gone through a period of great difficulty, it is now about to adopt policies of development and settlement, and it is not amiss that the members of this House should, from time to time, bring to the attention of the Government the various matters which agitate us personally in our provinces. Kipling has been quoted this afternoon on iron ore. We have in Alberta 360,000 Kiplings who say that that province, properly treated in the development of its natural resources, will rival any other province in the Dominion in fifteen years. Those are the Kiplings we have.

I intended to take you this evening from Athabaska Landing on the river Athabaska down to the Mackenzie basin and back and tell you what is disclosed to the eye in that province; but all the various matters which I could speak of on that trip have been spoken about by members of their respective provinces, and it will suffice for me to say that all that has been said by the respective members for their respective provinces—we have all those things included in the province of Alberta. I will, therefore, dispense with going through the itinerary. I intended to take you down to Pelican Rapids, a water-power which rivals many of the water-powers to be found in other provinces. I intended to take you down to Pelican gas wells where they pick the ground with a stick and light the gas which flows to cook their meals. I intended to take you down to Grand Rapids which, if harnessed, would rival the Niagara Falls, and I intended to take you down to McMurray where you have 500 times the world's normal consumption of oil to be taken from the tar sands. I expected to show you what wonderful wealth we had in the development of the timber of that country. I intended to pass you on the Mackenzie basin where 4,000 square miles of oil have been discovered by the Imperial Oil Company and others. But I will refrain from going into those matters tonight, because the subject has been covered so well by other members for their provinces, that it suffices for me to say that we have everything you have spoken of and it only remains for you to come and make the trip which I have made in a canoe and you will see all this exposed to the eye, it only requiring somebody to tell you what you do not know yourself or for you to see what you do know yourself.

My complaint is a real one and I join with the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux). I want action. But there is a difficulty which has been brought to the attention of this House, one that is real, and it was brought to our attention by the hon. member for Lethbridge (Mr. Buchanan) who, by the way, finds himself in a very awkward position to-day by having the farmers from his constituency coming to Ottawa to ask him to protect them on their hay. He did bring to the attention of this House that, so far as this resolution deals with the western provinces, a great difficulty stands in the way of the adoption of a policy by this Government, in that the western provinces are clamouring for their natural resources. It seems to me that if we have reached such an impasse between the provinces and the Dominion in dealing with that question, we had better slit the Gordian knot in two and have done with it and then let the provinces adopt whatever policy they like with regard to their mineral resources, or else the Dominion of Canada should take a stand and immediately make it possible for us to have both population and the wealth taken out of the country which is teeming with it and which can be seen by anybody as he who runs and wishes can see.

The transportation difficulty is one that is always thrown up to us in the western country and it is a real one, but it is one that ought to be solved in the course of a few years if any of those natural resources are given a great impetus by this Government. The labour question is one that has been solving itself very rapidly within the last couple of years.

I should like to assist the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) in his railway project in Gaspé and in the development of the natural resources of Gaspé; but it strikes me that there is only one question in which the Dominion Government has any jurisdiction in the province of Quebec and that would be the fisheries, except for tidal waters. If I am mistaken, I may be corrected by the hon. gentleman, but I assume the natural resources of Quebec belong to that province, and that question is one for Quebec to deal with except as regards such assistance as the Dominion Government is actually giving to-day to the various provinces in a general way, being a plan more to co-operate or co-ordinate with the provinces than a plan to develop as an initiative from the Dominion itself. My hon. friend's speech, therefore, this evening would have been better delivered in the Provincial Legislature than in the House of Commons.

I have one subject about which I am extremely touchy, and it is the oil question which I hope to be able to speak upon this evening, under the heading of another resolution. I should like to see the question of our natural resources settled as soon as possible or this Government take a stand in the development of our natural resources. The resolution, therefore, is one that I am prepared to support if it comes to a vote, because I think it is time that some action should be taken. For instance a great deal has been said as to the coal resources of Alberta. Let me tell the House that the coal resources are not entirely confined to Alberta; you will find coal deposits at Birch mountains in the Mackenzie district, Cariboo mountains, Norman, Great Bear lake, Peel river; and the same belt extending from Fernie to Brazeau and Yellow Head pass continues on the east of the Rockies up to the Laird river. None of those deposits have been discovered by the Dominion Government or by any effort of the Dominion Government whether under this regime or any other regime; they have been discovered by prospectors who have gone through this country and who have made their reports which have been generalized by some department at Ottawa. The central plain of the Mackenzie has oil, gas tar sands, gypsum and anhydride, marble, limestone, salt, coal and brick slate. To the east are all the minerals usually found in metamorphic rock such as gold, cobalt, nickel, iron, maganese mica, copper, etc. All these again have been discovered by individual prospectors and there has been no policy by this Government or any other government to assist in their development. What we are asking under this resolution is that this Government should announce its policy in regard to these natural resources. That cannot be done very easily unless you determine first of all whether the western provinces are entitled to their natural resources or not. Personally, I should like to see those natural resources passed over to the western provinces as fast as possible. We have a great deal of difficulty, being 3,000 miles away, in getting the attention we should have. If we write a letter, it takes two or three months before we get a reply and before the red tape has been done away with in this city, we are handicapped by finding that we have to start all over again in some other department. We should, therefore, like to see the natural resources handed over to the provinces so that we could give those natural resources the attention they deserve. It is not for me to say to this Government what it should do. One of two actions should be taken—the natural resources should be transferred to the provinces or the Dominion Government should take action in developing them.

Before taking my seat I wish to make one observation upon the criticism which has been offered by the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) in regard to the railway charter which the hon. member for Matane (Mr. Pelletier) sought to get before the railway committee. If I remember rightly, the attitude of the railway committee was this: that the hon. member for Matane should produce evidence that the incorporators or directors of the company were men of means, financial men, that they did not want a charter merely for exploitation purposes, and that the railway which they proposed to build would not at some time or another be foisted upon this Govcernment as other railways have been from time to time, making public ownership in this country merely the taking over of defunct railways instead of railways constructed by the people for the people. That evidence was not produced before the committee by the hon. member and as a consequence the charter was refused.

Mr. PARENT: Does my hon. friend know of a single case in which evidence was produced before the railway committee as to the financial standing of the incorporators?

Mr. MACKIE (East Edmonton): I do not know of any such case but I do know this, that after private individuals have embarked on a railway enterprise in this country to which the Dominion Government was not a party in any shape whatsoever, and after people have settled along that line of railway, these individuals and the people who have so settled have come to this Government and said: It is your moral duty to take over this road. We say to-day in the face of the fiasco which has been permitted in this country by all Governments in their railway policy that this Government should put its foot down on granting charters to private individuals who may open up the country and after people have settled along the line tell this Government "it is your moral duty to take over the road."

Mr. PARENT: Does my hon. friend not know that there is a general law applicable to every citizen of this country?

Mr. MACKIE: A general law to what effect?

Mr. PARENT: The Railway Act under which the holders of charters are required to fulfil certain obligations and under which the public interests are protected, a general law stating the conditions by which a company shall be incorporated and shall fulfil its obligations to the country.

Mr. MACKIE (East Edmonton): I quite agree that that might be a solution. The Railway Act might be amended in such a way as to say who shall and who shall not get a charter and if that is a solution I shall be very glad to assist my hon. friend in bringing it about. We have in Alberta the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway. The Provincial Government came down here and begged the Dominion Government to take over that road because it was in a state of liquidation, but there was only a small population at the end of the steel at McMurray, nevertheless the people said: Since you got us to come here and promised us a railway we are entitled to have the Dominion Government take over the road, so as to keep faith with the people. It is true it was not your promise but itis your duty to take over this road as part and parcel of the National Railway System. The same thing happened with the Edmonton and Dunvegan railway and it was only after refusal upon refusal that the Canadian Pacific took over the road under a working agreement for operation only. And so it has been all along. We are told by the Minister of Railways demand after demand is made upon his department that certain private lines should be taken over by the Dominion Government as a moral obligation so as to give service to the people along these lines that were built by private enterprise. Hon. gentlemen opposite should remember these things when they have an opportunity to speak on the railway Estimates, when they will no doubt be castigating this Government for its policy of public ownership. As a matter of fact the only policy of public ownership that we have is the taking over of defunct private enterprise, not because we want to but because of mistakes of past administration to which the railways are a living testimony. The Government has no alternative but to take them over. The Government therefore should put its foot down on that sort of thing. If the hon. member for Matane or any other hon. gentleman can produce the evidence required I would support him as a member of the Railway Committee, or if any hon. gentleman is willing to come forward and suggest a remedy that is feasible the difficulty can be solved.

In conclusion I wish to say that the resolution has my hearty support. I hope the Government will take heed of it and adopt a policy of either giving over to the provinces their natural resources or taking some step themselves to develop them so that the provinces will benefit directly and the Dominion indirectly.

Mr. WILLIAM DUFF (Lunenburg): Mr. Speaker, at this late hour I do not intend to take up a great deal of the time of the House, but I could not sit in my seat without expressing an opinion or two on the important question now before the House. I think every hon. member will agree with me that the question of the natural resources of this country is one of the most important that this House could discuss now or at any other time. I could spend the whole time which I intend to take in discussing the natural resources of only my own province, the province of Nova Scotia. We have in that province our great coal mines in the island of Cape Breton, in the county of Pictou, and in your own county of Cumberland, Mr. Speaker. We have also our great lumber industry, our great fishing industry, and our great agricultural industry. But it is not my intention at the present time to discuss the natural resources of my own province, because they are well known not only to the people of Canada but to the whole civilized world and also because there are other hon. gentlemen who can discuss them a great deal better than I can. I intend to spend a few moments in going further afield. I think it was the hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) who said that East is East and West is West, and I intend to go west for a little time and speak on the natural resources of the far western province on the Pacific coast. I had the pleasure during last September, October, and November of spending about eight weeks in the western provinces, and it was certainly a most interesting trip. One reason, no doubt, why I found it so interesting was because it was my first trip west of Toronto, and I assure you, Mr. Speaker, as I passed through the great province of Ontario and the Prairie Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, and came at last to British Columbia, I was seized with the idea that Canada certainly was the greatest country in the world, a country of which every man, woman and child in this Dominion may be justly proud. My only regret was that I had to spend such a short time in the different great cities and towns in those western provinces.

During my visit to the great province of British Columbia I was struck with the immensity of her natural resources. Owing to my early training I was perhaps impressed more by her great fishing industry than anything else. During the time at my disposal I had the opportunity of discussing first hand this great industry with people who were interested in it. I heard what they thought of it and of its great future if proper steps are taken for its development. But most of all I was struck by the fact that the present Government was not doing its full duty, or its partial duty, by the people of British Columbia, in the matter of the fisheries of that province.

We had the pleasure this afternoon and evening of listening to the speech of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. McQuarrie). I followed it with attention, and I must congratulate him on his grasp of the situation with respect to the salmon industry of that province. I agree with him that that industry is capable of much greater development, and I hope that his prayer to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne) will be answered but I have no faith that it will. I noticed that when he first rose to speak he endeavoured to eulogize the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. He said there never was such a minister in charge of that department before. I regret that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is not present to hear what I have to say. However, I will not speak for myself, but will use the words of the hon. member for New Westminster himself. As I said, he began by eulogising the minister, declaring that he was the greatest man that was ever in charge of that department in Canada. If this is the fact, why is it that two years ago the hon. member for New Westminister (Mr. McQuarrie), found it necessary to bring to the attention of the minister a state of affairs in his province which was anything but creditable to the department? On looking through Hansard I find that the hon. member made a very excellent speech in this House about two years ago on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, and in the course of his remarks he referred to the great salmon industry of British Columbia, calling to the notice of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the same gentleman who is at present in charge of that department, certain grievances in British Columbia, and in no uncertain tone informing the minister what he expected to be done. Now, it seems to me that if, after two years, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has not heard the cry from Macedonia, it is not competent for the hon. member for New Westminster to get up in this House and congratulate the country upon having the best Minister of Marine and Fisheries with which this great land has ever been blessed. What did the hon. member for New Westminster say on the occasion to which I refer? I read from Hansard of 1919, at page 426, the following:

> "I am very sorry indeed that he did not find it convenient to come to our province. All the signs point to trouble in connection with the British Columbia fisheries. In connection with those fisheries we have had Royal Commissions, we have had International Commissions, we have had investigations of all kinds; but the situation does not appear to have yet been cleared up. Great dissatisfaction exists not only in connection with the Fraser river fisheries, but also as regards the whole of the fisheries of British Columbia, and I tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the fisheries of that province amount to something."

The rest of the hon. member's speech this evening, after his preliminary remarks eulogistic of the minister, was only a criticism of the Government and the Marine and Fisheries Department. After bestowing some praise on the minister, he began, as he did in the speech from which I have just quoted, to criticise the administration. His whole speech, of something like an hour and a quarter, was critical of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and his department at Ottawa. The only good thing he could say in reference to the officials of the department was the fact, in connection with the great salmon industry of British Columbia, that they were getting rid of the seals in the waters of the Fraser river because, he said, the seals were destroying as many salmon as the fishermen were catching. I presume the hon. gentleman was speaking from the book, and from information given him by one of the officials of the department. But I should like to know, and I am sure you would be interested to know too, Mr. Speaker, how in the name of all that is good and great any official of that department can tell how many salmon the seals destroy, or how they can establish the fact that the salmon industry has been injured by these aquatic enemies of theirs. I admit that the seals must feed on some kind of fish, but the hon. gentleman will find that in addition to salmon they have other varieties of food. He said that one of the good things to the credit of this department in connection with the salmon industry was its endeavour to blow up the seals on a certain reef in the Fraser river. It seems to me that if that is all that we can credit the department with, so far as this great industry is concerned, they are condemned out of the mouth of the hon. member for New Westminster.

My chief reason for rising to-night was to say a word or two on behalf of the great halibut industry of British Columbia. During my tour in the West, in company with my distinguished leader (Mr. Mackenzie King) and the two other hon. gentlemen, who were of the party, the hon. member for Quebec East (Mr. Lapointe), and the hon. member for North Essex (Mr. Kennedy), I had the pleasure of staying for three days in the city of Prince Rupert, and whilst there, not only members of the Board of Trade and citizens generally, but fishermen of the district, interviewed me and stated their grievances, requesting that not only I but the other members of our party would take up their case on the floor of the House. The halibut fishery of British Columbia is a very important one and is capable of great development, and I say without hesitation that it is a public scandal that the present Government, especially that of the Minister of Railways and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, should treat the fisherman of Prince Rupert in the way they have been doing. I repeat, Sir, and emphasize this statement, that it is a public scandal and a disgrace for these two hon. ministers to treat the fishermen of that city in the manner complained of, and if they cannot better conditions there, I think it is their bounden duty to resign their portfolios and let others take charge of the affairs of their departments. What has happened? As I say, the halibut industry of Prince Rupert is a highly important one. For instance, on the first of this month no less than 415,000 pounds of halibut were landed at that port. But what did the fishermen find when they came to the city of Prince Rupert to land and sell their catches? They were told by the business men of that city, the men who handle fish and ship it to points in Canada as well as to Chicago, Boston, and other ports in the United States, that there was no means of transportation to cope with their catch. This quantity of fish, as you will readily realize, Mr. Speaker, would require something like about 150 refrigerator cars, but the Department of Railways had no cars, or practically none, to handle this great catch. And that has been the case for the last three or four years. Now, is that the way for a government to treat people engaged in a great industry like the halibut industry of the British Columbia coast? It certainly is not, and the Minister of Railways merits condemnation for the manner in which he has dealt with this industry.

The hon. member for Maisonneuve (Mr. Lemieux) referred to an article in the Canadian Fisherman. In order that the House may appreciate the exact condition of affairs, I should like to refer to this article. It appears under the caption "Strangling an industry," and the sub-head reads: "How the fishing industry of the North Pacific is being bluffed and humbugged by the Canadian Government Railways." Now, Sir, this House was startled a few days ago, when the Estimates were laid on the Table, to find what the deficit on the Canadian National railways would be this year. But, Mr. Speaker, it is not surprising that there should be deficits in the affairs of the country, and particularly in the Department of Railways, when the present Minister of Railways is handling the great transcontinental system of Canada as we have witnessed. What the Government should do, if they desire to administer the affairs of the railways properly and to secure traffic, is to see to it that every day all this abundance of fish that comes to Prince Rupert is properly taken care of in the way of transportation. I am told that the daily freight would amount to something like $24,000, and it seems to me that the Government and the people in charge of the railway system, should see that better transportation facilities are available. I presume that this article which I shall read, is written by the editor of the journal in which it appears. It is as follows:

> In all our experience of the many drawbacks which militate against the proper development of our Canadian fisheries, we have never seen anything to equal the nonchalant manner in which the officials of the Canadian Government Railway Systems have treated the urgent needs of a great industry, and the whole story is one of "passing the buck," unfulfilled promises, humbug and absolute indifference.

That is what the editor of the Canadian Fisherman says about the way in which the present Government and their officials are handling the railways of this country. The article goes on to say that for some years Prince Rupert has been suffering from a shortage of express cars, and the people and business men of that city have done everything in their power to direct the attention of this Government to the necessity for better transportation facilities, but without avail. At the meeting of the Canadian Fisheries Association, held in Vancouver in June, 1920, this matter was thoroughly discussed by hundreds of delegates present, and the following resolution was passed:

> Whereas the matter of providing adequate refrigerator car facilities is of the greatest importance to the fishing industry, particularly at all points of production furthest removed from the markets.
>
> "And Whereas a shortage of such facilities has for some time seriously interfered with the proper marketing of Canadian fish, especially at the port of Prince Rupert,
>
> Be It Therefore Resolved, that the Canadian Fisheries Association in convention assembled, requests its executive to communicate with the Hon. Minister of Railways setting forth these facts and respectfully urging that he take immediate steps to provide additional refrigerator car space sufficient to take care of the needs of the port of Prince Rupert and other shipping points on the Canadian Government railways.

Although this resolution was forwarded to the Minister of Railways and to the president of the Canadian National Railways at Toronto, nothing was done, and on July 8, of the same year, the Prince Rupert branch of the Canadian Fisheries Association passed another resolution as follows:

> Whereas at the Annual Convention of the Canadian Fisheries Association at Vancouver a unanimous resolution was passed urging upon the executive to press the matter of providing an adequate supply of express refrigerator cars for the fish business,
>
> And Whereas the general manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific in an affidavit has stated that one hundred additional cars are required to take care of this service,
>
> And Whereas announcement has been made that an order has been placed for an additional thirty cars for this service,
>
> Be It Therefore Resolved that we urge upon the executive to press this matter before the proper authorities with a view to relieving the present very inadequate facilities at an early date.

The article in question goes on to state that both resolutions were placed before the Minister of Railways and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Now, Mr. Speaker, this was a matter that affected the Minister of Marine and Fisheries as much as it did the Minister of Railways, and if the Minister of Railways was negligent in his duty in seeing to it that a sufficient number of cars were provided for this business, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in the interests of this great industry, should have urged the matter upon his colleagues and endeavoured by every means in his power to have the situation remedied.

But nothing was done. All they did was to promise a certain thing was to be done and the promises were never fulfilled. Now, what happened? Owing to the fact that the Government Railways refused to, or at least did not, provide the people of Prince Rupert with refrigerator cars a great number of the boats which always came in the past to that port to land their fish were compelled to go to American ports. I think the members representing British Columbia constituencies will bear me out when I say that a number of these boats, finding insufficient refrigerator cars at their disposal were compelled to go to Seattle and other ports in the United States in order to sell their catch. Consequently the Government Railways lost all that business and the Canadian people lost in a variety of other ways. Now, Sir, the progressive people of Prince Rupert were not satisfied with the way things were going on. Although they telegraphed and wrote the Minister of Railways and his officials they still kept after them. It seems that some official of the Government wrote to Prince Rupert and said: "The Government had ordered one hundred cars to be built at the works of the National Car Company at Hamilton." The people of Prince Rupert never placed too much confidence in the word of that official and they asked the Canadian Fisherman to send a representative to Hamilton and see if these cars were being built there. Here is what that paper said:

A representative of the "Canadian Fisherman" was then sent to interview the National Car Company at Hamilton to find out what progress had been made with the construction of the 100 long promised cars. He went there on February 9 (of the present year), and interviewed one of the highest officials of the Car Company and his report is that—

"The Car Company has been and is at present closed down. It is expected to resume operations in a week or so. No start has been made on the construction of the promised cars, and the only information adduced is that the Car Company expect to start work on an order of 1,000 freight cars for the Government and that it was hoped that the thirty refrigerator cars would be put through at the same time."

The article goes on to say:

To sum it all up: there is certainly no chance of these thirty express refrigerator cars being delivered in March and the promises of the railway officials amount to nothing but bluff and humbug.

This statement is made by a responsible newspaper, Sir, the Canadian Fisherman, a journal that is interested in the fisheries of the country. It certainly would not use such strong language unless the conditions warranted it. The people of Prince Rupert had been waiting two years for refrigerator cars in which to ship their fish and they got no satisfaction from the Government of Canada nor the Minister of Railways nor the officials of the Canadian National Railways. The article from which I have been quoting goes on to say:

The whole matter reflects the spinelessness of the present Governmental Administration. There seems to be no backbone to it and no definite policy appears to have been worked out to pull the country up from the mire it has sunk in through the ravages of war. A huge debt hangs overhead but no effort is made to nullify it and instead of confining expenditure to the development of remunerative natural resources the Government in power has incurred still greater obligations by the purchase of duplicating railroad systems and the building of steamships which could have been constructed elsewhere at lower cost. One would have thought that an opportunity to control the haulage of a huge fishery would have been seized upon by the Government in an effort to make their railroad system pay. But that common axiom of plain business has been ignored by the present Government who are really to blame for the state of affairs existing in their own railroad system.

It is no use blaming the minor officials for negligence in the Prince Rupert affair. The blame lies on the men higher up and we do not hesitate to name the Minister of Railways, Hon. Dr. Reid for his indifference to the request for more equipment, and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, for his lack of interest in the development of a great fishing port. If the latter had given more time and thought to fishery matters, his influence in the Cabinet could easily have secured action in the matter of supplying Prince Rupert with more refrigerator cars.

The whole fishing industry of Canada will suffer from this species of humbug until we get a Department of Fisheries with a responsible official at the head of it and a minister who will give ear and action to the plain suggestions of the industry along the lines of sane development.

The foregoing are not my words but the utterances of the Canadian Fisherman and I am sure they must impress every member in the House. As far as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is concerned, how can we expect him to give the time necessary to the administration of his department, and to the promotion of one of the great industries of this country, in view of his business affiliations? "A man cannot serve two masters." The minister candidly acknowledged in a speech he made last week that he was interested in a great many other concerns. I say, Sir, that any member of the Cabinet who is interested in many other concerns outside his own department cannot give that attention which is required of him to the business of his department and the affairs of the country.

Mr. Speaker, I only rose to say a few words in regard to the Prince Rupert fishing industry. I do hope that the Minister of Railways and the Government will see that these people get the necessary refrigerator cars to handle the fish which goes into that port three times a week. The fishing industry of Prince Rupert should be encouraged. There is no reason why the Government should not give Prince Rupert the proper accommodation. If they do so the population of that port will increase by leaps and bounds, and it will be a most advantageous thing for the section of the Canadian National railways connecting with that port.

Mr. HUME CRONYN (London): I would not venture to intrude in the debate at such a late hour did I not wish to point out to the House that pertinent suggestions, and I think constructive suggestions, have already been made which might aid in solving some of the questions which have arisen in the course of this debate—not indeed that they could hope to solve anything like all of them, because, as you well know, the debate has ranged over a wide field. I do not think, for instance, that any of the suggestions made could solve the question of the shortage of refrigerator cars; but in other respects I believe the establishment of a National Research institute would be a start towards solving the problem of the utilization of our natural resources. I do not pretend to traverse the ground which has been covered in former sessions in this respect, but I would just like to recall very shortly what has been done up to date and what remains to be done.

Four or five years ago the Research Council, an honourary advisory body, was appointed to look over the field to see what could be done and to advise the Government on action. Their report—and I will not delay the House longer than to simply mention the final conclusion—was in favour of the establishment of a research institute. Subsequently parliamentary committees sat during two sessions to consider this question, and then brought in a unanimous report in favour of the establishment of such an institute. That report was debated by hon. members on both sides of this House, and I think representatives from seven provinces spoke in favour of the report, which was unanimously adopted by the House. I am bound to say, Sir, that my disappointment last session was exceedingly keen when Main Estimates and Supplementary Estimates appeared without one copper being provided for the establishment of such an institute. I am perhaps the more delighted after such a disappointment to see in the Speech from the Throne this session, the, to me, two magical words, "Scientific research;" and my reason for rising tonight is to urge upon the Government, and particularly upon the right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) speedy action along this line.

It may be asked how such an institute would help in the development of our natural resources. The Research Council prepared, and the Parliamentary Committee considered, a Bill to be brought before the House looking to the accomplishment of the purpose I have mentioned, and the very first function of the institute as stated in that Bill is as follows:

> The Institute shall have charge of:
>
> (a) researches undertaken to promote the utilization of the natural resources of Canada.

Such an institute would undoubtedly be the rallying point where all such matters could be referred, to be discussed and upon which appropriate action might be recommended. Because in such an institute not only would laboratory tests be carried on, but when those tests showed that a certain process was technically successful, the Institute would apply a commercial test as well to determine whether such a process would be profitable.

Not only has this House, but I think it is fair to say that the country at large, has approved and applauded the establishment of a research institute. I have had occasion to go through several provinces since last session, and in more than one of them I was asked to give addresses on this subject. I found an exceedingly lively interest displayed in the question, and even in those provinces where perhaps the predominating industry is agriculture the members of various clubs and other institutions appeared to be fully awake to the importance of this movement. And our manufacturing industries as well are alive to its importance and are anxiously looking forward to a step being taken in this direction. Only the other day I noted, as perhaps some other hon. members may have done, the discovery that pitch pine could be made into excellent pulpwood for the manufacture of paper. Heretofore pitch pine if mixed with spruce spoiled the pulp, but by scientific research, carried on in the laboratories of the pulp and paper companies, a method was discovered of treating it alone, when it was found that not only was its fibre somewhat longer than that of spruce, but that properly treated it made an excellent grade of pulp. What does that mean? It means, as I understand it, that in the limits already handed over to operating companies the supply of pulpwood has, through this discovery, been increased from twenty-five to forty per cent. So there is a natural resource of our country put upon the market simply by scientific research. "Well," it may be said, "that was done by a private concern. What need is there of a research institute?" It is only a week ago that I received from the Pulp and Paper Association a strongly worded resolution in favour of the establishment of a research institute so that their members might take advantage of its work and go further afield into discoveries such as I have just mentioned.

I want to close my remarks with a personal appeal to the veteran Minister of Trade and Commerce under whose immediate control this matter comes—and I regret that at this late hour he is not present—so that he may give his personal attention to the proposed Bill and perhaps see his way clear to introduce it into the House. Not long ago my hon. friend from Red Deer (Mr. Clark) termed the right hon. minister the Nestor of the House—and rightly so—for of whom could it be more truthfully said in the flowing words of Homer?

> The smooth tongued chief from whose persuasive lips sweeter than honey flowed the stream of speech.

I trust that he will add to his many honours by this piece of progressive legislation, and then would we, in classic phrase, wish that his years should be as his eloquence, Nestorian.

Mr. GUSTAVE BOYER (Vaudreuil-Soulanges): (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I have listened with much pleasure to the speeches that have been delivered on this question of the country's natural resources. We have heard about coal mines and gold mines, about colonization and fisheries; in a word, about all those things which, if systematically developed, would give birth in Canada to an era of still greater prosperity. But of all those natural resources, one seems to have been forgotten—I mean the most natural of all natural resources, the maple industry from the standpoint of maple sugar and syrup making.

In 1904 I had the pleasure to speak for the first time about this industry which had been neglected and seemed likely to disappear. That first speech had aroused some hilarity in this House. Honourable members did not at that time attach any importance to the serious side of this question; however, the following years awakened public attention and both the Dominion and Provincial Governments—especially that of the province of Quebec—after taking hold of the question, made quite a success of it.

In 1904, the revenue derived from our maple industry hardly amounted to $1,200,000. Last year, it is marvellous, we must acknowledge it with pleasure, the maple products have increased remarkably in quantity and yielded more than nine million dollars. I think that of all the natural resources of this country there are none that pay more than this one, taking into account the short space of time required to produce and its amazingly easy sale.

As I have said, when this question was raised for the first time in this House in 1904, it was not taken in earnest. In the following years I brought up the same question and finally succeeded in getting an amendment to the Food Inspection Act which to a certain extent prevented the adulteration of sugar and syrup.

This amendment was not sufficient yet to give all the required protection to the farmers, to the sugar and syrup producers, but at last in 1913 or 1914 the government of the day thought proper to listen in earnest to the request of the sugar producers of Quebec and Ontario, and they altered to a large measure the amendment to the Food Inspection Act. Since then we have seen all the provinces, encouraged by this protection, give more serious attention to this industry. In the past the farmers produced a pure maple syrup which they would send to the cities, and this the manufacturers would compound with other syrup or sugar, or other ingredients, and out of a gallon of pure syrup they would manufacture ten or fifteen gallons of this spurious article, which they would then sell for the pure product. The name was all that remained of the genuine article. Large quantities were thus made which were sold at the same figure as the pure maple product. With the help of societies established in the province of Quebec, we succeeded in a large measure in stopping this adulteration, I do not say that the present Government have done all in their power to have the law observed, but I must render justice to the late government, especially to the present Postmaster General, who then did his utmost to have the amendment that I had suggested to him, accepted. Now, these city establishments, where pure maple sugar and syrup were turned into compounds, and which were sold for the genuine article have disappeared.

Last year the Montreal Bank of Commerce made a report whereby the value of the total output of this article was stated to be worth nearly a million dollars.

At the present time, I must add, that if that industry was developed on a larger scale, if the farmers would apply themselves to this industry as they do to all the others, they could not even yet with all their united efforts turn out enough maple sugar and syrup to meet the demand. We have an enormous demand from the United States, we also have much demand from European countries where our product has only been known for four or five years. Unfortunately we can not meet all the needs. Yet we have in the province of Quebec and in a part of the province of Ontario, a large number of maple groves which might be worked to advantage. We have in the province of Quebec admirable sugar bushes which might be worked with larger profit; but they are left idle. There are in the country about 55,000 owners of maple bushes who could carry on this industry, but barely 15,000 do so. Now, when I see that this industry brought last year nine million dollars to the producers, I feel convinced that no industry could pay better than this one, not even excepting dairying, which is nevertheless reputed to be our national industry. And why? Because the maple sugar and syrup crop is gathered in a short time, barely three weeks, during a season when the farmer has almost nothing to do, and from bushes generally growing on rocky land which would otherwise give no return. Even now, many farmers—notwithstanding the possibility of a good yearly return, and attracted by the high prices for wood owing to the dearness of coal, cut down their maple trees for fuel. They thus destroy a capital which could give them a yearly income of much greater value than could the return from the capital represented by their sales of fuel wood if invested at six per cent. They realize at one time more than the sugar and syrup would bring them, but it is once for all, never to be repeated, for what is destroyed is destroyed for ever, and is a dead capital.

This motion gives me the opportunity to call the attention of the House to this eminently national resource, essentially ours. Apart from the Eastern States of the American republic, and some parts of the province of Ontario, nowhere in the world can such a succulent product be found as our maple sugar. Our syrup and our sugar are not known. When they become a thing of ordinary consumption, no one will want to use any other sugar than ours, I mean as a sugar de luxe. That is why the Government should undertake an educational campaign.

Both the Federal and the Provincial Governments have done something for that industry. In the subsidy given to the provinces, the Federal Government has allowed a small amount which the latter are to distribute according to their judgment. The province of Quebec has made the most of this small grant.

I claim that the Dominion Government, while they have done something in the right direction should do more. They should increase the subsidies of the provinces for the encouragement of agriculture.

I believe that the Government should give larger grants and impose more rigorous conditions. The Quebec government have made a good use of what has been given to the province; and I believe the Dominion Government should be encouraged by the results obtained and might increase the subsidies.

Now, with a view to securing results from the help granted this industry, it would be well to apply the Adulteration Act very vigorously. I know that during the last six years, the enforcing of this Act has been much neglected. During the war, the general food commissioner had called to Ottawa the president and directors of the Pure Maple Sugar Co-operative society and had asked them not to be too exacting, not to require the strict enforcement of the law, for, as he said, sugar war scarce and people had to be rationed; representing to them that it would be better not to make complaints and allow the work of time to better the situation. We were agreeable to this request, but unfortunately as usual tolerance bred license. To-day it has become necessary that the law should be enforced rigorously and that all those who adulterate maple sugar or syrup should be very severely punished. Should the Government be willing to return to the very good practice of treating the offenders with severity, we would have increased production. If the farmers accomplished anything in that industry these last year, it was because the prices were very high, and they felt themselves protected. The price for sugar has even been excessive, I admit: sugar has been as high as 35 cents a pound and syrup $3,00 a gallon. This was due to the circumstances, and we understand that this can not continue. The farmers realize thoroughly that they will have to return to more normal prices, and that the industry will not suffer thereby, for the consumer has also to be thought of. The reverse would be detrimental to the producer, for should the prices remain at the high level, consumption would likely decrease considerably, because everybody would not be able to pay such prices. The farmers are very reasonable; they are ready to admit that the prices might come down and yet afford a sufficiently remunerative profit. However, prices must not fall disastrously low, as happened in 1914; for in that case the farmers would give up sugar-making. I believe that if we encourage the farmers, if we show them that we mean to encourage them, they will persevere in this industry, and it will be all benefit for us ali, as a large output will tend to regulate the prices. I deem that the Dominion Government, along with the educational propaganda in favour of agriculture which they carry on with such good results, should also do their share in this campaign and not leave it all to the provincial authorities. All the provinces have not the same degree of interest in this question. The Federal Government, who know the needs of each province, since they make a constant and thorough study of them, should give the Department of Agriculture all necessary authority for the spreading of knowledge useful to this industry, and to impress the farmers with the idea that instead of being cut down, as they are too extensively now, the maple bushes should be preserved with care. The Conservation Commission aims at reforesting certain parts of the country. It is much easier to preserve our forests than to do any replanting. In certain parts of the country our beautiful forests are being destroyed without mercy, without judgment, without purpose, I make bold to say. Our maple forests are precious not only from the viewpoint of what they are worth as timber or fuel, but also from that of the benefit they can annually yield to the gatherer of the sap. They should be husbanded with judgment.

I am very much pleased that this motion should afford me an opportunity of speaking on this question. I have often addressed the House on this matter, and as I mentioned at the beginning of my remarks, the first time I did so, it was not without causing some hilarity.

Hon. members were not accustomed to hear about maple syrup and maple sugar, but later on they ascertained that this industry was flourishing in the country. Who would have thought it, Mr. Speaker; a commodity that was yielding only $1,200,000 two decades ago, yielded as much as $9,000,000 last year. The dairy industry, the returns from which amount to millions and millions of dollars does not yield one-tenth of the profits accruing from this industry, if the amount of labour and the season at which the work is done are taken into account.

I think the Government should see to it that this natural resource be taken care of. Our coal measures, our gold mines, our fisheries, all those natural resources must be developed, the future of this country is dependent upon it; however when since creation we have at hand an industry whose development is so easy and which is a gift of God, let us try to get from it all possible returns, not only for ourselves, but for the country as a whole. Having developed that industry upon a large scale, we shall be able to make the most of the good name of our maple sugar and maple syrup abroad, where it will be said: Here is a product peculiar to Canada. We received lately from France orders for the shipment of tons of maple sugar. From Chicago we were asked for twenty-five thousand pounds of sugar in one pound loaves, for sugar yellow in colour so that they might call it "Golden Sugar." We could not fill those orders. Production is too meagre yet.

At this time, the United States are coming into Beauce to get hundreds of thousands of pounds of sugar and yet I must state that sugar is carelessly manufactured in the county of Beauce. I see that the hon. member from Beauce (Mr. Béland) is here; I am pleased to make these remarks in his presence. There are some parts of the province of Quebec where some splendid sugar is manufactured—sugar of the first quality. In the county of Beauce, there are localities which turn out good sugar, but many places where bad sugar is made in the province of Quebec are to be found in Beauce. We have done our utmost in that direction, however that district is so large and the producers are so numerous that they could not be taught in a few years. With the help of the hon. member from Beauce, of the local newspapers and of the schools which were opened in that district, we are in hopes that the farmers there will eventually occupy a foremost place in that industry. The county of Beauce alone turns out as much maple sugar and maple syrup as all the rest of Quebec and that part of Ontario where there is sugar-making, and the producers of that district will presently be in the forefront of that industry as they are in other farming activities. When we read history, when we learn in what manner our fathers endeavoured to develop that industry, tapping the maple trees with axes and letting the sap flow into wooden buckets we acknowledge their process was a very primitive one. However they have not yet reached that point in Beauce; they collect the maple sap in very small vessels while it would be much advantageous to collect it in larger ones. Yet, I do not wish to speak ill of Beauce whose progressive inhabitants will discard ere long the ways of the past, and I shall proceed with my disquisition. Americans are coming into that county to get a dark sugar we would not place upon our table and we do not like to see manufactured any longer in the province of Quebec. The association I just mentioned to you is above all an educational association. We advocate betterments which ought to be introduced in the sugar industry. What we succeeded in doing elsewhere for butter and cheese with the result that we now have good butter and good cheese, we would like to do for maple sugar; our desire is that good maple sugar be turned out in every part of the country. Americans are coming into Beauce to get dark sugar for which they pay as high a price as they would pay for good sugar. The sales of these products in that district amounts to seven or eight hundred thousand dollars. That sugar is shipped to the United States where it enters into the manufacture of chocolates and especially into the making of chewing tobacco. Why do they use that dark sugar which has not undergone all the changes which good sugar has to undergo? It is because that sugar, although not in such a condition as to be placed upon our table, still preserves the original taste of the maple, all the relish of the sap. Such is the reason why. But that is only fortuitous and should not be our ultimate aim.

The county of Beauce is one of the most beautiful districts of the province, and it is the duty of its inhabitants, who are in many respects, a very progressive people, not to be content with present satisfactory prices, but to endeavour to improve their products; not only would they get the same fair returns, but they would also add to the good reputation of their province. It is a very large district, containing immence forests, and therefore, we would not be justified in charging its people with apathy. There are great handicaps which prevent the proper development of this vast territory and its progress is retarded by the high prices which are being paid by the adjoining country for inferior products.

Our observations, however, do not apply to all producers in the district of Beauce; on the contrary, there are some who could teach a good many things to the other manufacturers of the province.

I trust that my hon. friend from Beauce will take my remarks in good part and that he will communicate them to his constituents in the same spirit as I have given them.

In the county of Vaudreuil, which is very small as compared with the county of Beauce, we have but a few sugar factories. But our products are of the highest order and they always command the maximum prices. Why? It is because our farmers are using modern and national methods. They are well rewarded and very much encouraged thereby. I have seen in my constituency, maple bushes of only a few acres, to give their owners a profit of six or seven hundred dollars.

I am calling the attention of the House upon this matter and I am sure that the hon. Minister of Agriculture, who is present, will understand what I mean, because he has in the person of his strict and official representative, the Deputy minister a man who knows particularly well the maple sugar industry.

I was pleased to notice that the Hon. Minister of Justice has listened to my remarks. He belongs to the province of Quebec; he knows what our maple sugar is and I am sure that his thought will not concentrate exclusively on coal or gold resources, which are sometimes very disappointing, and that he will devote a little of his influence to the development of the maple sugar industry.

Mr. H. S. CLEMENTS (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I promise that at this late hour I shall occupy the attention of the House for only a few moments. I do not intend to go fully into the subject matter of the resolution; I rise only to reply to the hon. member for Lunenburg, who, I regret, is not in his seat. I regret also that I have not been able to follow the hon. gentleman who has just spoken (Mr. Boyer).

The hon. gentleman for Lunenburg (Mr. Duff) made the bald statement that he spent eight days in British Columbia. I assume that he spent probably one day in Victoria and two in Vancouver. He said that he spent three days in Prince Rupert; the remainder of the time would be occupied in travelling between these three points. Having spent this much time in our province, the hon. member assumes that he knows the fisheries of British Columbia. Well, in my opinion the hon. member knows very little of the fisheries of British Columbia. It might be as well for him to give his attention to the province from which he comes; I hope he knows more about the fisheries of his own province than he does of those of British Columbia.

The hon. gentleman indulged in a tirade against the Minister of Marine (Mr. Ballantyne) and the Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid). He laid great stress on the shortage of cars at Prince Rupert, and he discussed the halibut situation and the salmon situation in British Columbia. Why, one would think that the hon. gentieman had been raised in that province. I should like to discuss the natural resources of British Columbia and those of the Dominion generally but time will not permit. I want to say, however, to the hon. member for Lunenburg and to all hon. members of this House that the late Liberal government from 1895 to 1911 had created the greatest combine in connection with the fisheries of British Columbia that ever existed. I represent probably three-quarters or more of the total fishery districts of British Columbia, the remainder being represented by the membr for Skeena (Mr. Peck). Let me say to the member for Lunenburg that in 1911 when Prince Rupert budded out as a growing town, having been practically planted by the late government—I lived in Prince Rupert and I know the conditions—a merchant or a hotel keeper could not buy a single fish in Prince Rupert for home or hotel use. That condition was the result of the combine brought about by the late Liberal government so far as the fishing interests of the province were concerned. When the Government of 1911 took office, through the efforts of hon. Mr. Hazen, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and of myself as a private member, regulations were put into force with a view to breaking up the combine in British Columbia, and Prince Rupert was put on the map as a fishing town, being allowed the privilege of having American and foreign fishing boats unload their catches, take on bait and buy supplies and equipment. That was accomplished by the present Government.

Now, so far as the canning industries were concerned, under the old conditions it was useless for any individual fisherman to apply for a cannery license or a seining license—and I am speaking of purse seining or drag seining; even gill-net seining—the whole thing was controlled by this combine. But things were changed when the Liberal government went out of office in 1911. The present Minister of Marine and Fisheries (Mr. Ballantyne)—all credit to him—threw the fisheries of British Columbia absolutely open so that any one might, by paying the necessary fee, obtain a license to can or to fish. The present Government and the Union Government absolutely broke up that monopoly which had been created by the Liberal government prior to 1911, and to-day we have absolutely open fishing in that province.

I regret that I did not have the opportunity of listening to the remarks of the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. McQuarrie). Since 1911 I have had the honour of a seat in this House as a representative from British Columbia. I have always, from that time up to the present, advocated that the rivers and streams leading up to the natural spawning grounds of the fish in that province should be cleared and the natural spawning grounds preserved so that the fisheries could be kept up and maintained. But, Sir, from 1895 up to 1911 practically every stream entering into the natural spawning areas of the fish in that province had been jammed, and not a dollar had been spent in clearing them or providing for the care of the natural spawning grounds. But I want to give the present Government credit for spending a good deal of money in this connection. Since 1911 steps have been taken to remedy this condition, and so far as I know the great majority of these streams to-day are cleared so that the fish can ascend to their natural spawning lakes and areas.

I suppose my hon. friend from New Westminster has discussed the hatchery situation in British Columbia and in the Dominion. We have always maintained—of course there have been arguments pro and con—that the hatcheries of British Columbia—and I suppose the same would apply to the Atlantic coast—have not been rendering the service which many of the cannery men would like to see rendered. But I agree with some of the professors and some of the cannery men that large rearing ponds in connection with our hatcheries in British Columbia would be a great asset.

My hon. friend from Lunenburg censured the Minister of Marine and Fisheries for the neglect of the halibut fisheries of British Columbia, stating that they had been depleted and were practically lost to the fishermen. Well, I venture to say that if the hon. member were in his seat he would not be able to tell me where the halibut grounds in British Columbia are. I say that in all sincerity, and without any desire to reflect upon the hon. member in any way; I want to be as kind to him as I possibly can. Now, many who know the situation better than I do have always contended that Hecate straits belong to the Dominion. But that area, as many hon. members will know, lies between the mainland and Queen Charlotte islands, and by all natural events and observations, that water, in my opinion at least and in the opinion of many experts, belongs and always did belong to the province of British Columbia and the Dominion of Canada. The late Government—and I am sure the hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) knows the situation as well as I do—knew that all that water of Hecate strait was fished out by the Americans, and the immense halibut banks which existed in those waters have been absolutely destroyed. The halibut which is brought into Prince Rupert to-day is all caught beyond the three-mile limit and many hundreds of miles from Prince Rupert and, indeed, there is a little halibut caught on the west coast which finds its market in Prince Rupert.

I regret the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Peck) is not in his seat. There is no doubt there was a few months ago a certain shortage of cars in Prince Rupert to handle the fishing trade, and I say, in all sincerity, that if I believed the Minister of Railways (Mr. J. D. Reid) was deserving of censure in that regard, I would certainly give it to him; but so far as I can judge the situation, the minister is not to be censured at all. Last session, orders were given for refrigerator cars; I think money was voted for the purpose, and if the car companies fell down in the delivery of those cars, it seems to me that the matter was entirely up to the management of the railways and not to the Minister of Railways. The number of cars which were ordered had not been delivered, but the management of the railways divided up what cars they had throughout the Dominion; Prince Rupert received its fair share of refrigerator cars, and so far as I know to-day no great complaint is coming from Prince Rupert as regards any shortage of cars in that city.

I rose simply to answer the hon. member for Lunenburg (Mr. Duff) in regard to the fishery question. I would certainly like to have had the opportunity and pleasure of discussing many of the natural resources of Canada and especially the pulp industry, because I have many large pulp concerns in the constituency which I have the honour to represent, and there is room for many more. I hope I have not censured the hon. member for Lunenburg too much, but I trust that before he rises again in this House to discuss the fisheries of British Columbia he will get a little better posted upon the subject. If he does so, it will be more in his interest and the interest of the province from which he comes.

Hon. Mr. BELAND (Beauce): (Translation.) Mr. Speaker, I did not intend taking part in the discussion this evening, had it not been for the rather unpleasant remarks made to the House by the hon. member for Vaudreuil (Mr. Boyer). It is always a great pleasure for me to hear the hon. member. The House at least the hon. members who are acquainted with the French language, are aware that he is a splendid speaker to whom one could listen for hours. My hon. friend, in his speech, has, to a certain degree, established a few indisputable facts, but on the other hand, he tarnishes unnecessarily the reputation of a district, a reputation earned by years of intense production of our truly renowned maple sugar and maple syrup which are known not only in Canada, but also throughout Europe.

The last part of my hon. friend's speech might be described an advertisement for the electoral district which he represents so well in this House; but when the hon. member attacks the county of Beauce and its maple products, and seems to complain of the superior qualities of these products, which according to him, are superior in appearance only—instead of taking our farmers to task, he should remember that Providence herself has willed it so. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the quality of the maple sugar and the maple syrup which is produced in Beauce is mainly due to the special qualities of the maple trees of the county, qualities such as cannot be claimed for the maple trees in Vaudreuil. This is due to natural conditions, Mr. Speaker, to those fine hillocks and rolling lands which gather and above the sun's rays in greater abundance that could be expected in a flat country, like Vaudreuil.

My hon. friend referred especially to the methods of sugar making in the county of Beauce. He has given us to understand by his transparent, though veiled remarks, that the methods in use in Beauce were old fashioned ones. This proves but one thing, and that is, that the hon. member for Vaudreuil is not acquainted with the Beauce district. If he had taken the trouble, or rather if he had given himself the pleasure of visiting our splendid rural district, when the sun is fast melting the snow, and its warm rays are causing the sap to ascend and the buds to burst forth he would have found that sugar and syrup in Beauce are manufactured by methods as perfect as science can teach in these days. I fear he has not however visited us for a quarter of a century.

But let us say no more of this rivalry between the member for Vaudreuil and myself. I will only add that, if American manufacturers of maple candies, toffee, or the so-called maple syrup, give the preference to the Beauce products, it is not because it is darker, but because it is sweeter, if I may say so, than the syrup that comes from the Eastern townships and the counties of Vaudreuil and Soulanges. With a pound of the Beauce maple sugar, the Chicago manufacturers can make a greater quantity of maple candies than he could make with one pound of sugar bought from my hon. friend the member for Vaudreuil.

There is in Canada an enactment known as the "Maple Products Act." This Act forbids all manufacturers, whoever they are, to mark their products as maple, when they contain any substance other than the condensed sap of the maple itself. Several members who spoke in the House last year and this year have approved of this special provision of the law, Mr. Speaker, I have come to doubt its usefulness.

That is not the point. The law is useless because, on account of the high prices of pure sugar and syrup, it is impossible to find a sufficient number of consumers to dispose of all the maple syrup and maple sugar produced in this country. Now, let me point out that, some years ago, there was in certain states of the Union, a legislation similar to that which is in our statutes, concerning maple products, and the American producers almost unanimously requested their respective Governments in each one of the states, to repeal the Act. In the province of Quebec, and particularly in the county of Beauce, there is a movement on foot—and one that is taking considerable proportions, as evidenced by the petitions signed by thousands of syrup and sugar manufacturers, which I have already laid before the House—in favour of amending or repealing this Act. Of course, the manufacturer has no kindly feeling towards the city producer who may place on the market a so-called maple product which is distinctly a fraud. But the producers of Beauce, at least if I understand rightly the petitions I have had the honour of laying before the House, are willing to have their pure products altered, that is, mixed with cane sugar or syrup which are selling at a much lower price, provided that it would be specified and specifically marked on the container that it is a mixed maple product.

You can obtain—and it has been scientifically demonstrated—just as wholesome and nourishing a syrup as the pure maple syrup by mixing the latter with cane sugar; that mixture will keep a long time and that is very difficult in the case of pure maple sugar. One of the reasons why we cannot sell an unlimited supply of our excellent and delicious maple syrup of Beauce, is that it cannot keep indefinitely. Unless you have a small refrigerator at home, the heat in the summer will cause a fermentation of the syrup. The consumers in the cities who are aware of this fact, buy only a small quantity of maple syrup in order to avoid the trouble of having it spoil by fermentation. That is why it is difficult to sell any large quantity of pure maple syrup, unless it should be for industrial or manufacturing purposes. To-day, petitions are being circulated throughout the county of Beauce and are being signed by thousands of people, asking the Government and Parliament to either amend or repeal the existing Act. I do not know whether the Government will give their consent. Of course there may be room for argument against the proposed amendment, because it would always seem very nice to say: Maple syrup is such a dainty thing, so fine and delicious and precious, that we must not allow any alteration of it. But we must also consider the mercantile and industrial point of view. For instance, you will realize that if you allow maple syrup manufacturers in Montreal, Toronto or Quebec, to make a syrup containing, let us say only 25 per cent of pure maple, provided that it would be specified on the container, whatever it may be, there will not be the same objection to the placing of that product on the market and it will have the advantage of keeping indefinitely and could be sold at a much lower price.

Mr. Speaker, I need not say any more. Whatever may be said against the maple sugar of Beauce, either by people settled in the west end of the province of Quebec, Vaudreuil, for instance, or in the eastern townships where my good friend who is sitting beside me (Mr. Robb) resides, they may say that it is black, red or brown, or anything else, but the fine connoisseur who wishes to taste the real thing, the real maple sugar or syrup, will pass through the counties of Vaudreuil and Huntingdon and through the Eastern Townships to land in our own district where he can find a product to which nothing in the world can ever be compared.

Mr. PIERRE F. CASGRAIN (Charlevoix-Montmorency): (Translation.) I would like to say a few words on the subject, but it is rather late and as we have done a good deal of work to-day—I am not speaking of myself but of other hon.

gentlemen who took part in the debate—I beg to move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I would submit that we have exhausted about as much time on this motion as surely to satisfy every hon. member. I know the subject is of importance, but really we cannot afford to talk day after day in a more or less aimless discussion so far as any specific object is concerned.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I would submit that the discussion to-day has not been aimless, as my right hon. friend has suggested. I think this is one of the most important questions we have had before Parliament, and I do not think it is unreasonable at 15 minutes to 12 o'clock—within a few minutes of midnight—to ask that we should have an adjournment.

Mr. MEIGHEN: If I knew just what the aim was I would withdraw the word "aimless." I know some good can come from the discussion; I am not disputing that, but what more good can come from this discussion I am at a loss to understand. I only want to get through with the discussion so that we can get down to the business of the House.

Motion (Mr. Casgrain) for the adjournment of the debate negatived.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I must draw the hon. member's attention to the fact that having moved the adjournment of the debate, and that motion having been lost he is now precluded from taking part in the debate. Any other hon. gentleman, however, who has not done so has the right to speak.

Motion (Mr. Manion) negatived.

REGULATIONS GOVERNING OIL AND GAS PERMITS AND LEASES

Mr. H. A. MACKIE (East Edmonton) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Regulations for the issue of oil and gas permits and leases in the Northwest Territories of Canada approved by Order in Council dated February 11th, 1921 (P.C. 331), are detrimental to the development of the oil industry both in law and equity and the purport thereof is to unduly discourage private initiative and unduly protect large financial interests by allowing the same to take full possession of the oil fields of the Territories.

He said: I regret having to speak on this matter at this hour, more particularly as hon. gentlemen who are absent from the House intended to participate in this debate, but I cannot allow this opportunity to slip by in view of the urgency and importance of this matter to those who intend to avail themselves of the opening of navigation in the northern portion of the province of Alberta to go to the northern fields of Mackenzie. Prior to December last, oil regulations for the unsurveyed territory of Mackenzie permitted an individual to locate 1,920 acres of oil lands. In the month of December an Order in Council was passed changing those regulations. This Order in Council became effective on the 27th day of December, and the regulations were so amended that any locator might take 640 acres of land, and, upon discovery of oil, he had the privilege of choosing 320 acres, the other 320 acres remaining the property of the Crown. That was called in the province of Alberta the "checker board" system, but was not looked upon as very unfavourable to the locator. Then, without any warning whatsoever, an Order in Council was passed in January, 1921, suspending all oil regulations in the North West Territories. A new set of regulations was promulgated by another Order in Council, No. 331, assented to on the 11th day of February, 1921. At the time I put this resolution on the order paper there were four distinct objections which I intended to take, two of which, however, have been removed by a subsequent Order in Council. One objection which I intended to discuss was the retroactive effect of the Order in Council as contained in clause 51 of the present regulations, but inasmuch as an amendment has been made and the retroactive effect has disappeared, it is useless for me to enter into a discussion of that feature of the regulations.

Another objection which I intended to discuss at the time the resolution was placed on the Order Paper was contained in section 44, which made it impossible for provincial companies already incorporated to maintain their holdings and develop as they had intended to, but since the resolution has been on the Order Paper that has also disappeared so far as all applications which have been received in the Department of the Interior are concerned. There is an objection, however, still remaining. I must read the section at the pain of occupying a considerable length of time, because I apprehend, Mr. Speaker, there are very few members of the House who are acquainted with the regulations, not being particularly interested in them, and I wish hon. members to understand them so that the House may receive the benefit of their opinions for the special benefit of the people in the province of Alberta, and also for the general benefit of the whole Dominion. Section 44 of P.C. 331 reads:

> Any company acquiring by application, assignment or otherwise a permit or lease under the provisions of these regulations shall be a company incorporated under part one of the Companies Act, chapter 79, R.S.C., 1906, and amendments thereto, and the charter of such company shall provide for the issue of the shares of the capital stock of such company without any nominal or par value, in accordance with section 7 (B) of the said Act.

Now any application or assignment of location in the Northwest Territories can only be made under this section to a company holding Federal letters patent. I say that this is an indirect way of amending the law of the various provinces, because the object of the Government in passing this regulation is stated to be the prevention of speculation. If that is the only object of the Government they have not succeeded because the law can be circumvented. For example, a person possessing one location or holding by assignment, say, eight or ten locations in that country, can easily assign to a company incorporated by federal letters patent for one million dollars more than he otherwise would, and that one million dollars can be used for bonusing or for purposes of speculation, as the case may be. In some of the provinces the speculative aspect has been absolutely wiped away by the appointment of boards. The regulation obliging a company to incorporate federally merely retards the development of that country. Another reason given for imposing this regulation is that a provincial company has no power to hold lands in the North west Territories. I have been unable to find any decision bearing on the point. I submit that the regulations should be altered, and that it should be permissible for any provincial company to hold those oil locations situated in the Mackenzie district.

If the Minister of the Interior framed these regulations with a view to preventing speculation, he had in mind what he called "wild-catting;" but I understand that that has already been provided for in the Criminal Law. If he had in mind swindling, that is also provided for in the Criminal Code. If he meant unlicensed or uncurbed selling and watering of stock, that too has been dealt with in different laws; and if he meant the prevention of vending of prospective oil properties, or of promoting companies and securing capital for their development, then I say that he has been ill-advised in passing this regulation. If by this section, the prospector is not permitted to have the expert or specialized aid of a broker to find a market for his holding when he wants to cash in, or if he is deprived of the services of a professional promoter when he wants to raise cash, then section 44 is ill-advised and I submit that the Government should change it and permit provincial companies to hold and develop oil locations in the North West Territories.

There is another paragraph in the regulations about which I wish to say a few words, and I shall endeavour to conclude as soon as possible. I have reference to the division of the property which the locator is at liberty to stake. Under the present regulations, a locator may go into the Mackenzie basin and locate 2,560 acres of land and drill, and when he has found oil the Government will issue a lease to him of one quarter of this area, three-quarters reverting back to the Crown. Now, I take the position that nothing is indicated in the regulations as to what disposition is to be made of these three-quarter sections, and if the Government wishes at any time it may allot them to any financial company or individuals on whatever terms it may see fit. Whoever acquires these three-quarter sections, which have been practically proven up by the locator in his drilling, has three times as much power as the one who has actually located the ground and developed it up to the point where he is entitled to get the lease. The holder of the three-quarter sections has three times the quantity of land, three times the wealth, and three times the financial backing of others, and it would be easy for the person acquiring these three-quarter sections, under whatever terms the Government may choose to sacrifice one of them to put out of business the man who has actually drilled and found oil, obliging him to surrender to powerful interests.

At the present time the regulations actually prevent men from going in and prospecting that country, and only large financial companies can get into that territory with any reasonable certainty that they will be able to acquire any of the Crown lands which are to be disposed of after the oil has been found. The regulation, I submit, has been based on the assumption that we have railways running in that country and that you can dump off all sorts of tonnage in the Northwest Territories, that there are facilities for taking oil out, that everything is lovely, and that you can just take the oil to the refinery. These are not the conditions. An estimate made by the Imperial Oil Company, to ascertain whether enough oil could be got to warrant the building of a pipeline, shows that they will have to be guaranteed the production of 20,000 barrels per day. Ling, one of the officials of the company, says that the present well yields 800 barrels per day; and they take it that they will get twenty-five producing wells. They will not get a gusher with every hole drilled unless they break all records. An American geological report says that the Texas record is 27½ dug holes to one producer. Taking the average at Norman to be ten, they will have to drill 250 holes to get enough oil to warrant development.

The cost of these 25 wells will be:

Cost of freight on one well outfit, including lumber, 200 tons at $20 per ton	$ 40,000
The Albertas outfit weighed 113 tons without lumber or season's grub. The Hudson's bay rate of freight in 1921 is 13 1/20 c. per pound, or $27 per ton. Cost of drill and 1,000 feet of 6-inch casing	15,000
Cost of lumber, timber, tools, etc.	8,000
Fares of 7 men in and out at current rates	2,700
Wages of 7 men, averaging $400 a month, by 12 months	33,600
Total per drilling outfit	$ 99,300
Cost of 250 wells at 2 wells per rig per season: $99,300 by 125	$12,421,500

With four rigs they would drill 25 wells in about 3 years. As soon as oil is found on one location, it would be good business to locate a new claim. How many claims they would be holding to get 25 producing wells it is difficult to say, but not less than 25. They would be paying to the Government on these twenty-five locations the gross total of $32,000 annually. It would take five years to build the pipe line, but in the meantime the Government would take from the locators to the tune of $160,000 while the pipe line was being built. Here then is the outlay before any returns can be looked for. First the pipe line costing $55,000,000. (I will grant you, for instance, that it is not going to be every company that will build a pipe line; and I assume that no Government would permit a company to build a pipe line unless there were some guarantees that they would permit other operating companies to use the same pipe line; but for one company that they build that pipe line there is the initial cost of $55,000,000.) Secondly, the wells will cost $12,421,500; and in the third place the rentals will amount to approximately $160,000. Finally for a refinery we will allow the sum of $3,000,000, and you have the sum total of $70,572,500 before any returns can be secured.

Now we will assume that under these regulations a company has expended the necessary moneys to get the requisite number of wells dug to warrant them in constructing a pipe line. The first thing the company is confronted with is that somebody else comes along who has not spent one cent in proving that property and he can go to Ottawa and say to the Minister of the Interior who does not sit in this House, by the way, I want to buy your three-quarters, true, I want to secure them under whatever terms you will allow me. Then he goes in on those three-quarters which have been proven and paid for by some locator and developed by somebody else's own money, and enters the field in competition, I say, Mr. Speaker, that these regulations are nothing short of a monstrosity and should be altered without any delay. If the Government wants to go into the matter of public ownership then let them define that policy; it is not my own by any means. But between allowing the man to go in and get 2,560 acres of land and turn three-quarters of that back to the Government, after it has been proven by private enterprise, by the money of individuals and the money of companies—I say between that and public ownership there is only one thing to do. It is to let the field lie dormant and prevent the development which ought normally to take place. It is quite clear to my mind that the Government in taking rentals as they do are penalizing capital and preventing it from working. The system of withholding three-quarters of the ground after the oil has been found is a means of scattering holdings and is discouraged by authorities, that can be looked up in Hager's Practical Oil Geology, pp. 159-164. What the Government ought to do, I submit, is to encourage development and make it possible for private enterprise to develop that territory, then reap their benefits from imposition of royalties. The Government need revenue and can get it if there is production; but until there is production the Government should not impede development of that country by their regulations and they should not penalize capital for trying to work.

[Mr. H. A. Mackie.]

If the Government were anxious about the Empire let them read Allan's First Annual Report, Alberta Resources, in which it is stated there is enough oil in McMurray's sands for the Crown's security or 500 times the world's normal consumption. In 1912 somebody came from London, saw the Minister of Interior and told him to cancel the tar-sand regulations, and they stand cancelled up to the present time except that an Order in Council has been passed in favour of one General Lindsay of Ontario who has located the best parts that are known to him in the town site of Mcmurray. If the interests of the Empire are at stake in the matter of oil read the report of Mr. Allan for the Province of Alberta and he will indicate that there is enough oil hidden there to satisfy the Empire's requirements. I do not know why the regulations should have been suspended so far as tar-sand is concerned. If there is that much oil to be extracted from tar-sands we need not bother ourselves about the Mackenzie field and prevent everybody from getting into it. I am sure the Minister of the Interior has never been off the train from Edmonton towards those fields and does not know the first thing about them. There is a method of getting down to that country and it is an expensive one. Why should we endeavour to hold up the development of a field which can only be reached by navigation of rivers on a course of over 1,400 miles following the sinuosities of those rivers. When the closest well in the North West Territories would be something like 600 miles from Edmonton. Why should you prevent development by these regulations I cannot understand unless there is some ulterior motive which I dare not suggest?

Now the answer may be made to me: So far as rentals are concerned you need not bother about that; all you have to do is to get down there with your drill and you do not pay rentals any more. That is true if I get a drill down the first year. But first of all I must locate and the session is short. I cannot locate and get out and arrange my financial affairs and get in again in the one season; and it is incumbent upon me to pay 50 cents an acre. I pay rental the first year on everything that goes back to the Crown, and I must necessarily pay to the Crown one dollar for the second year's rental. The third year I must prove to the Government that I am performing certain work in order to be released from paying the rental; and the fourth year I must have a well, or I must take a report to the Government that I am about to make a well. Then when I have done all this, the Crown steps in and takes three-quarters of the ground I have actually proven to be useful to the Dominion of Canada. I say that the regulations are quite unreasonable, and every man in the province of Alberta who is interested in the development of that field has taken the same position. There is also this point: If a man has proven enough in that territory to make it worth while to construct a pipe line, he must pay the Government rentals whilst he constructs a pipe line.

My object therefore this evening is to bring this matter to the attention of the Government and to show that the regulations were extremely unfair in the beginning—so unfair and so inequitable that before this resolution was spoken to in this House two amendments had been made by the Government to their own regulations, which were absolutely unworkable. I would have preferred that the other amendment had been made so that whoever gets into that country and drills and finds oil shall be at liberty to purchase or acquire the other three-fourths of his claim on some terms giving him preference. That is the amendment I seek this evening in speaking to this resolution; or else that this House places itself on record in favour of fair oil regulations such as I describe.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING (leader of the Opposition): I do not know whether my right hon. friend (Mr. Meighen) had in mind starting a second attack on the Government from his own side of the House, but if he desires to continue the discussion further, I would draw his attention to the fact that it is now Tuesday morning, and as we have been in session a long time, he should now allow the House to adjourn.

Rt. Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): I must say frankly that I was not inviting any attack from any side of the House or thinking that a government so undeserving of such would ever receive it.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Now that it has come I would prefer to have it over, if that is at all possible, although I do feel that we have sat a long time. While I am on my feet I will set an example in brevity, without discourtesy, I hope, and endeavour to see if it will be possible for the Government to survive the last attack.

The oil regulations are under fire to-night from the hon. member for East Edmonton (Mr. Mackie) on the ground that they are too exacting as against the oil prospector or developer, and that as a consequence there will be reluctance on the part of those who otherwise might perhaps journey into the far northern Territories and stake claims there. If I caught the substance of his charge, it is this: that too high rentals are taken, that insufficient inducements are given, and that consequently there can only be development by men of large means. Now, I am quite free to admit that under the regulations that we passed only a few weeks ago there can be actual development in that district only by the investment of large sums of money. And no regulations that would protect the public interest at all could be operative that would permit development except by the expenditure of large sums of money, for the simple reason that otherwise development cannot be undertaken. The regulations were designed to apply to an oil field, not wholly in prospect but actually, to some extent at least, proven. The regulations that were in force before were in considerable measure attractive to the prospector because they were applicable to a field only in prospect and in no degree at all proven. They were changed because by the discovery of oil at Fort Norman, some fourteen hundred miles north of Edmonton, the Territories oil field became an established field—of what extent we do not know—and thereafter it was felt the regulations should be such as would do ample justice to the general interest of the whole country in that field.

Now, what are those regulations? They provide that any person of eighteen years of age or upwards can stake a claim not exceeding in all 2,560 acres or four sections of land, and he may stake it in four different areas, each being rectangular and of any size he chooses. Upon staking the claim and complying with the regulations—which must be done within a certain time after the staking, I think thirty or sixty days—he pays 50 cents an acre the first year, and thereafter $1 an acre for the land that he retains. The regulations also provide that he must within two years have a drilling outfit on the ground capable of drilling for oil within the area staked, and if he has that drilling outfit on the ground, showing that he is a real oil borer, and not merely a company promoter, then the rental for the second year is not charged; and if in the third year he proceeds to drill, then for that year as well the rental of $1 per acre is not charged, but he must pay in any event on the oil that he produces a royalty for the first five years of not less than 2½ or more than 5 per cent; and for the next five years a minimum of 5 per cent and a maximum of 10 per cent. Those royalties virtually amount to the entire rental that he pays to the crown. He is permitted to retain a quarter of the land he stakes, and the other three-quarters revert to the Crown; but he can choose the land he retains anywhere within the area that he stakes so long as he makes it a square piece of land.

Now, it is argued by the hon. member that land may afterwards be taken up by somebody in the city of Ottawa, and that the man who went up there and took the risk and discovered the oil will derive no advantage from the other three-quarters, although he paid rent on that land at 50 cents an acre. It is true he paid that rent, but it is not true that anybody in Ottawa could get that land; it reverts to the Crown solely. It is quite possible that later on it might be found equitable in the regulations providing for the disposition of the other three sections, or three-quarters of the land staked, that the man who staked the first 640 acres should have a prior claim upon it.

These regulations have been framed mainly after the regulations applicable to the Alaska oil field, although there is not a proven field as in the Territories. But it may be afterwards held equitable to do as is done in Alaska: to give a prior claim to the entrant for the 640 acres, and to provide, say, that tenders shall be called on a royalty basis for the oil in the other three sections of land, and that after the highest bona fide tender is received the entrant for the 640 acres shall have the right to that oil at the price tendered by the highest bona fide bidder. That is not the law to-day, it is true; but it is the law to-day that nobody else can get that oil. That portion of the land originally staked is simply held until it is found what is going to be equitable having regard to actual development. And it is quite within the power of the department to issue further regulations providing that a fair and just preference shall be given to the man who has taken the risk and made the discovery.

Mr. MACKIE (East Edmonton): That is all I am asking.

Mr. MEIGHEN: As to what shall be the general policy with regard to this oil, speaking on the subject a few weeks ago I referred to the regulations that had been in force for many years excepting oil from royalty. It will be observed that as regards this field that exemption does not apply. Not only is that so, but regulations are now in force specifically requiring royalties—a minimum of 2½ per cent and a maximum of 5 per cent for the first five years, and thereafter a minimum of 5 per cent and a maximum of 10 per cent. In the United States, I believe, provision is made whereby a preference is given as to the rest of the land to the entrant for whatever share he is entitled to there on a royalty basis of 12½ per cent. Something like that might possibly be later on found suitable in Canada. But it does seem to me that the regulations as they stand now, having in view the fact that no provision is yet made for the disposition of the other three sections, are not prohibitive by any means and should not deter anyone who really wants to develop oil in that territory, because anyone who really wants to do so must certainly have money at his back; otherwise he has no real intention of developing oil. The cost of getting in is great; the cost of boring is high; the cost of maintenance is very high; and after the oil is bored it must be got out, and that cost is very great indeed. It is estimated that a pipe line from that district would cost twenty or thirty millions of dollars. Now, there is one object to be served above all others, and it is this: to take care that the regulations are such, so far as we can frame them, as to discourage the practice of promoting companies and selling stock where there is no real exploitation under way; the regulations are designed to forbid, as far as they can, that being done. It does seem to me that the first requisite is that the innocent public shall be protected against those who look upon that district as merely a chance to fly kites and to do an oil business upon paper. The field should be reserved for those whose intention is to get oil and to serve the needs of the public by getting oil. There is no preference given to anybody in this regard; any who have the money and who intend to get oil will go up under these regulations; there is no reason in the world why they should not. It may be found by experience that preference should be shown in advance to those who take the one section. That is the only thing that seems to me to be worth consideration now, and that is under consideration.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Will my right hon friend pardon me if I interrupt him? At the beginning of the war, in the session of 1914 or 1915, we enacted a law giving the preference to the Home Government in respect to oil produced in Canada. Has that statute been made use of?

Mr. MEIGHEN: No. That is not quite the fact, though I know what the hon. member refers to. A regulation was passed at the suggestion of the Home Government reserving from entry oil in the forest reserves and parks owned by the Crown, and that regulation was fully complied with until a few months ago—if my memory is correct, about nine months ago—when certain lands in the Rocky Mountain Reserve—I am not sure whether it applied to others or not—were opened under the oil regulations. The idea was in that reservation that oil was going to be a war necessity of the future and that unless the necessary steps were taken the oil of Canada might get into the hands of citizens of other countries and the purposes of our own country be forestalled. I think that was the idea underlying the reservation. Against that, though, it can be said—and said very emphatically after the experience of the war—that even though leases for oil lands be held by outsiders, even though others come in with their capital and get these leases and own them to the exclusion, say, of Canadian or British capitalists, the Government of Canada in time of war has absolute control of the whole situation; can prevent the export of oil or the export of anything else—indeed, in time of peace can do the same.

Mr. LEMIEUX: Is there not a clause in the leases to that effect?

Mr. MEIGHEN: Yes. But aside from that, the power of expropriation exists, and the course of the war showed that there really was not the peril in that regard that was anticipated. Consequently I as Minister of the Interior did not see that we were serving the interests of Canada by continually tying up these territories. I thought it was better that we should find out just what they contained and reserve to the whole country a just and fair interest therein. Special regulations, therefore, were made applicable to the oil in the Rocky Mountain Reserve, holding a very considerable proportion for the state in case oil should be discovered, much along the line of the regulations that are not under discussion. These regulations, let me explain to the House, are different for the Northwest Territories from those that apply to the provinces. The reason is this: in the provinces there is no proven field as yet on any considerable scale; it is largely a matter of prospect and hope. In Alberta three refineries, I think, or three oil wells, are now being developed, but the amount of production is not relatively very high. In this Fort Norman well the flow is large. The best reports would indicate that the flow is very considerable indeed—that there is a very large field of oil; how much it will prove to be, only time will tell. The flow is on such a scale that undoubtedly it is a field of very considerable dimensions. The regulations, therefore, applicable to the Territories, fix definitely the royalty that can be charged, and they are such as not so much to encourage people to come in to look for oil, but to encourage people to go in who are going to bring oil out. That, in one word, distinguishes the regulations that should apply and do apply in the case of a proven field from those that are more applicable to a field that is still in prospect.

Now, I have no word at all to say in derogation of the rights of the hon. member (Mr. Mackie) to put this resolution on the Order Paper and to address the House upon it. I know that he as a member for his district is vitally interested in the prospect of oil development in the Territories as well as in his own province. But I submit to him that inasmuch as the regulations stand to-day in such shape that the department is quite in a position to give, if experience shows it to be necessary, a fair preference, as respects the other three sections, to the entrant for the one section; and inasmuch as up to now others cannot enter for these other three sections—the state only is interested in them; they are reserved to the state and to the state alone—it is scarcely right to ask the House to find that there is not sufficient inducement offered to the prospector, or that the oil regulations are such as to throw undue restraint around the development of the industry in the Northwest Territories.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Mr. Speaker, I submit to my right hon. friend that it is unreasonable to ask the House to proceed any further with the discussion this evening.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I think we should close, too. I am sure the debate is over; I think that with all I have said, perhaps the hon. member will withdraw his motion.

Mr. MACKIE: Mr. Speaker—

[Mr. Meighen.]

Mr. SPEAKER: I would direct the attention of hon. members to the fact that if the hon. member addresses the House at this stage, the debate will be closed.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Is it not possible that other members may wish to speak to this resolution? This is an important subject; it amounts to a charge against the Government, and I do not know whether my hon. friend is prepared to withdraw that charge at the present stage. It is unreasonable to expect hon. members, after midnight, to take up an entirely new subject, and I do not think my right hon. friend (Mr. Meighen) was fair to the House when he caused us to proceed with this new subject at a late hour.

Mr. MEIGHEN: It is an old subject.

Mr. MACKIE: Other gentlemen informed me they wished to speak on this matter; but I had one purpose to serve, and that was to bring to the attention of the Government what I think I have presented clearly, and if I had an opportunity to reply, I think I could make it yet more clear that the regulations are not as they ought to stand. I do not, however, wish to press this resolution to a vote, and unless hon. gentlemen really want to speak on it, I will withdraw the resolution after making one or two comments on the remarks made by the Prime Minister.

Mr. SPEAKER: Is it the pleasure of the House that the hon. gentleman shall have leave to withdraw his resolution?

Mr. MEIGHEN: I have no objection to the resolution being withdrawn, but the hon. gentleman said that he would like to make one or two comments by way of reply.

Mr. SPEAKER: It is rather an unusual situation. The hon. gentleman rises to close the debate. He must either close the debate or withdraw the resolution.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I do not want to do the hon. member an injustice. He said he wished to withdraw the resolution after making some comments by way of reply.

Mr. SPEAKER: I did not catch that remark of the hon. gentleman. It would be a most unusual procedure for an hon. member who is about to exercise his right to close the debate, to move the adjournment thereof.

Mr. MACKIE: I will let the matter stand as it is, as I shall not crave the indulgence of the House. There will be days when Supply comes on, and some one will speak on this matter again.

Resolution withdrawn.

On motion of Right Hon. Mr. Meighen the House adjourned at 12.40 a.m. Tuesday.

Tuesday, March 15, 1921

The House met at Three o'clock.

RETURNED SOLDIERS—SPECIAL COMMITTEE

FIRST REPORT

Mr. HUME CRONYN (London) presented the first report of the Special Committee appointed to consider questions relating to pensions, insurance, and the re-establishment of returned soldiers, as follows:

> Your committee recommend that their Quorum be reduced from thirteen to seven members. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Mr. CRONYN: By leave of the House I would move that the report of the Special Committee apointed to consider questions relating to pensions, insurance, and the re-establishment of returned soldiers presented this day, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT PRESENTED

Fourth Annual Report of the Editorial Committee on Governmental Publications dated 1st March, 1921—Right Hon. Sir George Foster.

CIVIL SERVICE BONUS

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX (Maisonneuve): I would like to ask the right hon. the Prime Minister on behalf of a large number of people who are interested in the matter, if it is the intention of the Government to give the usual bonus to the Civil Service this year.

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): The matter is under consideration, and I expect that a decision will be reached by the end of this week or the beginning of next.

CAPTAIN HENRY C. H. ADAMS, H.M.C.S. AURORA

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. CHARLES MURPHY (Russell): For the purpose of asking a question, I desire to bring to the notice of the right hon. the Prime Minister a report which appears in this morning's paper of a speech delivered yesterday before the Canadian Club at Vancouver by Captain Adams of the H.M.C.S. Aurora, in which, when referring to the ships of the Canadian squadron, he is alleged to have said:

> Although these small ships were very good in their way, what the Dominion required was a striking force in time of war.

And later, that

> England to-day is paying $17 a head of population for the maintenance of the great navy which protects us. It is time that Canada stepped in the breach and assumed her fair share of this burden.

I would now ask the right hon. gentleman if Captain Adams, when speaking as he is alleged to have spoken, did so with the knowledge or authority of the Government and if not, will the Government bring to the attention of Captain Adams the fact that the question of Canada's naval requirements is one to be determined by the representatives of the Canadian people, and not by one of their employees even though he be the captain of a ship.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. gentleman is perhaps in order in submitting his question, because it is one of public import, but he is not in order in making an argument under the guise of a question, which he did in the latter portion of his remarks.

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): I must admit that I have never had the alleged speech drawn to my attention until this moment, nor did I know until the hon. gentleman arose that we had a captain in our service by the name of Captain Adams. I do not know whether I should assume that Captain Adams is aware that the laws of Canada are made by the representatives of the Canadian people, but if I have any reason to believe that he does not know that, we will take occasion to inform him.

ARMOURIES FOR PUBLIC MEETINGS

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Shelburne and Queen's): I should like to draw the attention of the Government, and particularly of the Minister of Militia and Defence, to a despatch in the Montreal Gazette of yesterday, upon which I shall put a question to the hon. gentleman. The despatch is concerning an incident at Windsor, Ontario, where an official of the Canadian Government is reported to have made a statement which may be regarded as an interference with freedom of speech and a just cause of offence to a neighbouring people. I shall not read the whole speech, but very briefly it is to the effect that the Ontario Referendum Committee had arranged to hold a meeting in a Government building, the armouries, that it was contemplated that among the speakers at that meeting would be an American gentleman sometimes known as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, and that the Commanding Officer of the Militia who was in charge of the building refused to issue a permit on the ground that this gentleman was coming. The Commanding Officer is reported to have said:

> The Referendum Committee is welcome to use the armouries for meetings, as it has in the past, but I will not countenance bringing foreign agitators from the United States to Canada. We have trouble enough without that. England did not want Johnson, and Canada does not want him. Canadian or English speakers will be welcome.

Without comment, I desire to ask my hon. friend the Minister of Militia and Defence whether he is aware of the facts of the case, and whether it is the intention of the Government to uphold this official in his refusal to allow a public meeting to be held in the armouries.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (Minister of Militia and Defence): In answer to my hon. friend's question I may say that yesterday morning a gentleman named the Rev. Mr. Oaten called at the Department of Militia and Defence and requested the privilege of using the Armoury building at Windsor for the purpose of a meeting under the auspices of the Dominion Alliance, and I at once gave instructions by wire to the headquarters of the Military District at London, in which district the city of Windsor is, to grant permission for the use of the Armoury upon the usual terms—the usual terms being that the buildings are not required at that particular time for military purposes, that a fee of $10 is charged, and that a patrol from the local fire brigade will be maintained during the meeting to protect the property.

Mr. MURPHY: During a temperance meeting?

Mr. GUTHRIE: The policy decided upon by the Government in regard to the use of these Armoury bulidings for the purposes of public meetings is briefly this: Any reputable body of citizens may have the privilege of using the buildings providing they comply with the terms I have just stated. That for the last ten months, at all events, has been the policy of the department. I know nothing about the meeting of the man who is known as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, whose name was not drawn to my attention. I knew nothing of the alleged refusal at Windsor, but I gave orders yesterday morning and the telegram went to military headquarters at London. The news will go to Windsor, so I assume the meeting will take place in due course.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. F. S. CAHILL (Pontiac): I should like to ask the Minister of Railways whether it is his intention to lay on the Table of the House this year a report of the Canadian National Railways, and, if so, when?

Hon. J. D. REID (Minister of Railways and Canals): I have not yet received a report from the management. I expect it shortly and will lay it on the Table immediately on receipt of it.

CANADIAN MERCANTILE MARINE

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): With reference to the question asked by my hon. friend, I might say to the Minister of Railways that there is a general desire, not only on the part of members on this side of the House, but in the country as well, to have some information regarding the expenditures and the financial operations of the Canadian Mercantile Marine. Does the minister intend to give to the House a detailed statement of the financial operations of the Mercantile Marine showing the business for the year ended December 31 last?

Hon. Mr. REID: I intend within a very few days to give to the House my annual statement with reference to the railways. So far as the Canadian Mercantile Marine is concerned, I may inform my hon. friend that it is the intention of the Minister of Marine (Hon. Mr. Ballantyne) to make a statement regarding the operations of that branch of the public service. I understand that he will have that statement ready within a few days.

Hon. A. K. MACLEAN (Halifax): May I ask the Minister of Railways to state precisely on what date he and the Minister of Marine purpose presenting the statements to which reference has been made. If he cannot do that, will he tell the House whether those statements will be made before or after the Easter holidays?

Hon. Mr. REID: I am sorry I am not in a position to answer my hon. friend, for the reason that the Minister of Marine (Mr. Ballantyne) is ill just now and I do not know how long he may be confined to his house.

BY-ELECTIONS—DATE OF WRITS

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING (leader of the Opposition): I notice in the press the statement that the Government intends to issue the writ for the by-election in York-Sunbury, but that the issuance of the writ for the by-election in Yamaska will be deferred to a later date. Is that report correct? If not, will the Government inform the House when we may expect the writs for the several vacancies now existing?

Rt. Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): I did not authorize the report in question and know not how it reached the press. The matter stands in exactly the same position as when inquiry was last made, and my answer must be the same.

TARIFF REVISION

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. S. W. JACOBS (George Etienne Cartier): One of the Government organs this morning states that there will probably be no general tariff revision this session. Will the Minister of Finance affirm or deny that statement?

Hon. Sir HENRY DRAYTON (Minister of Finance): I am afraid I must deny it. I can very truthfully say that I had nothing to do with the publication of that report. However, I may say that the work is going on not only day by day, but by day and night.

Mr. JACOBS: May I ask the Minister of Finance, notwithstanding the statement he now makes, whether there will be a general tariff revision this session?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: The work is in progress—

Mr. LAPOINTE: Tedious.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: It is not so tedious, perhaps, as the hon. gentleman may think; there are several very interesting facts in connection with it. For example, there are very strong demands from Quebec for a very heavy protection on tobacco, and I am sure that is something that must interest my hon. friend. It gives room for a great deal of anxious thought. The time at which the tariff will be completed depends very largely, not only on the amount of detail work there is, but on the frequency of demands made for consideration of different items.

DATE OF BUDGET SPEECH

On the Orders of the Day:

Hon. CHARLES MURPHY (Russell): Will the Minister of Finance say whether there is any truth in the statement published in the Ottawa correspondence of the Montreal Star on Saturday last to the effect that his Budget Speech will be delivered about a week or so after Easter?

Hon. Sir HENRY DRAYTON: There, again, I fear the answer must be the same as I have already given.

Mr. PARENT: No answer at all.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: That may be, but, unfortunately, I can do no better.

Mr. FIELDING: "Wait and see".

FOREIGN AGITATORS AND ELECTIONS

On the Orders of the Day:

Mr. C. G. POWER (Quebec S.): With reference to the previous question put to the Minister of Militia and answered by him, I should like to ask him, in his capacity as Acting Solicitor General, whether or not he can tell the House that the presence in Canada of foreign agitators during an election is not distinctly contrary to the provisions of the Dominion Elections Act passed last year?

Hon. Mr. GUTHRIE: Speaking from recollection, I think there is some clause in the Franchise Act passed last session in regard to this point. However, my memory is not very clear on the subject. I will therefore refer the hon. member to the provisions of the Act.

Mr. POWER: That being the case, will the Acting Solicitor General be pleased to confer with the Minister of Militia in order that the Minister of Militia may not go wrong on the law of the land?

AUDITOR GENERAL'S REPORT

On the motion of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen (Prime Minister), that the House go into Committee of Supply:

Hon. W. L. MACKENZIE KING (leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before this motion carries I should like to point out to the Government the impossibility of this House proceeding intelligently with a consideration of the Estimates until it has before it the full report of the Auditor General. There is no single right, or duty, or function of the Commons of greater importance than that of exercising careful scrutiny and control over public expenditures. Of so great importance has that function been recognized, that Parliament has framed special machinery by law with a view of insuring the control which the House of Commons should have. A part of that machinery is the Consolidated Revenue and Audit Act which has a special provision respecting the presentation to Parliament of the Auditor General's Report. That provision has been drafted by Parliament with the object of ensuring the presentation of the Auditor General's report in complete form to the House of Commons at an early date. May I quote to the House the chapter and section to which I refer? It is chapter 24, section 48 of the Revised Statutes and reads as follows:

> The Minister of Finance shall cause an account to be prepared and transmitted to the Auditor General on or before the thirtieth day of June in every year, showing the issues made from the Consolidated Revenue Fund in the fiscal year ended on thirty-first day of March preceding, for services directly under his control.
>
> Such accounts and reports of the Auditor General thereon shall be laid before the House of Commons by the Minister of Finance on or before the thirty-first day of October next following, if Parliament is then sitting, or if not sitting, then within one week after Parliament is next assembled.

Hon. members will see that the provisions of the law in regard to the presentation to Parliament of the Auditor General's Report are in brief—that the report should be presented to Parliament, if it is in session, not later than the 31st of October, but if assembled at a later date, then within one week after it has assembled. This Parliament assembled on February 14th. We are now at the 15th of March, more than one month after the date of reassembling, and we have not as yet before us the full report of the Auditor General, nor are we able to obtain from the hon. the Minister of Finance, a statement as to when the full report will be presented. Mr. Speaker, I desire to point out that the Government is acting in direct violation of the law of the land in not presenting this report to Parliament in accordance with the provisions of the Act to which I have just referred.

[Mr. Power.]

When this matter was brought to the attention of the hon. the Minister of Finance a day or two ago my hon. friend made rather light of it. He stated that in delaying the presentation of the report he was but following an immemorial custom, or something to that effect. I have taken the trouble to compare the dates of presentation of the Reports of the Auditors General to Parliament in the last Parliament under the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier with a corresponding number of years of this Parliament, and I should like to give to the House the facts respecting the differences under the two Administrations.

The Parliament of 1907 assembled on November 28th, of that year, for the session of 1907-08. Volume 3 of the Report was presented on November 28th, 1907, the very day on which Parliament assembled; volume 1 on December 2nd, and volume 2 on December 17th. In other words all of the reports of the Auditor General were before Parliament before the end of the calendar year of 1907. Parliament in the session of 1909 assembled on January 21st. On January 21st of that year the Auditor General's Report was brought down—there was not the loss of a day. Parliament for the session of 1909-10 assembled on November 11th, and volumes 1 and 3 of the Auditor General's Report were presented on the following day. Volume 2 was presented on January 12th, 1910. Parliament for the session of 1910-11 assembled on November 17th. On November 21st, four days later, the full report of the Auditor General was presented to Parliament. In other words in the last Parliament of the Administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier the Auditor General's Report twice within that time was presented in full before the end of the calendar year in which the fiscal year ended, and in no instance was the report later than February 23. Now, the fiscal year ends, as hon. members know, on the 31st of March, so that during the years of the Liberal Administration which I have just mentioned there was in each one a period of from over one to three full months when the House had before it the Auditor General's Report, thereby permitting a full discussion on the Estimates before the end of the fiscal year had been reached.

Now let me contrast with that statement, the facts in regard to matters as they have developed under the present Government. Parliament for the session of 1917 assembled on January 18th, 1917. Volumes 1, 2, 3 and 4 were not brought down until April 19, three months after Parliament reassembled and nineteen days after we had entered on a new fiscal year. Parliament for the session of 1918 assembled on March 18th of that year. Volume 4 of the Auditor General's Report was not brought down until April 22nd, over a month after Parliament had assembled and twenty-two days after we had entered upon the new fiscal year. Parliament for the session of 1919 assembled on February 20th, 1919. Volume 4 of the Auditor General's Report was not brought down until April 22nd, over two months after Parliament had reassembled and twenty-two days after the beginning of the new fiscal year. Parliament for the session of 1920 assembled on February 26th of that year. Volume 4 of the report was not brought down until May 17th, nearly three months after Parliament had reassembled and a month and a half after the beginning of the new fiscal year. In other words, Mr. Speaker, there has been a violation by the Government of the statute governing this matter for every year during the past five years. We seem to be getting into the practice of ignoring completely the statute which has been framed, as I have already mentioned, for the express purpose of enabling the Commons to exercise control over public expenditure which it is its first and most important duty to perform. There are possibly a number of explanations for this delay. I should hesitate to say that it is a deliberate device on the part of the Government to prevent Parliament from having information to which it is rightly entitled in considering matters of public expenditure. I do not hesitate to say, however, that one cause is that members of the Government have not been attending to the business of administration as they should have been attending to it. We witnessed the spectacle last year in Ottawa that for the greater part of the fall months it was impossible to bring together a quorum of ministers. Some ministers were in Switzerland, others were in Spain, others were in Belgium, others were in France, others were in England, some were on the Atlantic coast, others were on the Pacific—they were everywhere excepting in Ottawa attending to their several departments. The result is that instead of public business being in a form which permits of Parliament proceeding in an expeditious and intelligent way we are obliged day after day to call for reports which instead of being presented promptly are not only still incomplete but so incomplete that the Government can give no definite information as to when they will be available. May I also mention this fact? Hon. members opposite have been saying throughout the country in a somewhat boastful manner that the Opposition have done very little in the way of criticism of Government expenditures before the Public Accounts Committee. I ask my right hon. friend how it is possible to criticize expenditures when the volumes which contain the particulars in regard to these expenditures are not presented to Parliament in accordance with the requirements of the law. Let me point this out: The hon. the Minister of Finance mentioned a day or two ago that he had brought down certain volumes of the Auditor General's Report and that only one remained to be tabled. The one remaining is the really important one inasmuch as most of the matters that are controversial or contentious appear to be included in or referred to in volume 4. Parliament has placed before it statements which may be passed upon more or less without considerable discussion, the really important controversial subjects are necessarily held over until volume 4 is down. They arrive then for discussion at a time in the session when business has already been continued for a considerable period, the Government starts its late sittings at nights and on into the mornings, and an intelligent and careful discussion of public matters becomes next to impossible. Let me cite just one example. I have here volume II of the Auditor General's report for the present year, part K to SS. Under the summary of expenditure and revenue of the Department of Militia and Defence the following figures are given:

Salaries under statute	$ 18,849 43
Civil Government salaries and contingencies	208,797 00
Militia and Defence, general	4,616,781 00
Miscellaneous	1,394,825 00

The details for these particular summaries are given in this report. But here is the next item:

War appropriation, $247,997,725.

And the reference to the particulars under that heading is Part ZZ; in other words, volume four, which as yet we do not know when we are likely to receive. This expenditure of $247,000,000 odd on account of War Appropriation at this particular time cannot be scrutinized too carefully either in this House or before the Public Accounts committee, and I submit that Parliament is helpless in discussing that expenditure without having before it the reports, which it is entitled to have.

This delay on the part of the Government is the less excusable inasmuch as the matter was expressly brought to its attention on two or three occasions during our last session. When we were discussing Supplementary Estimates on June 7 last I took occasion to address the hon. Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) as follows:

> I want to say, not by way of threat but simply that hon. gentlemen opposite will understand the position of the Opposition, that if the Government of the day should by any possibility be in office next year we shall not be willing to make these advances.

I was referring then— and I think the Government would do well to consider this particular feature at the moment—to the practice which my hon. friend asked us to adopt of voting a portion of the Supply en bloc at the end of the fiscal year before there had been any opportunity of considering the Estimates. I was pointing out to my hon. friend that there were very strong reasons for taking exception to that practice, and I drew his attention to the circumstance that while we were ready to concur last session to oblige the Government, we would not do so at a subsequent session if the Government was negligent in calling Parliament together at an early date and in providing the reports which we were entitled to have before us. I said to my hon. friend:

> We shall expect the Government to call Parliament earlier than was done this year and to have public business sufficiently under way to enable the due control to be exercised over public expenditures which Parliament ought to have.

My hon. friend made this reference to my remarks:

> I hope that next year the session will commence in the month of January.

Then the the very last day of the session the matter was again brought up, because we on this side of the House realized the significance of the Government's attitude in appearing indifferent to the demands of the law in the particular mentioned, and on the first day of July, the day Parliament prorogued, I again took occasion to draw the Government's attention in the following words to the wisdom of presenting the Estimates at an earlier date:

> Might I take advantage of this moment again to suggest to the Government that if by any possibility they should be in office this fall they consider the advisability of calling the session at an early date, so that we will not again be confronted with a situation such as we have had on this occasion, of reaching the month of July with a very large proportion of Estimates to be hurriedly passed in the last remaining twenty-four hours. I trust the Government will make a point not only of bringing down its Estimates as early as possible, but of affording early opportunity for a consideration of them. We of the Opposition—if we are still in opposition—will not agree to give the Government any votes on account if that can be avoided. The public interest in these matters must be protected as far as possible.

My right hon. friend the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster), who was acting Prime Minister at the time, gave the House this quasi assurance:

> But the Government, as it always has done, will try and get the session on as early as conveniently possible; and, as it always has done, it will have a body of Estimates ready for the Opposition almost from the time that the House gets into working order.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I submit that assembling Parliament in February when it is contemplated that Parliament shall assemble in November, is not bringing Parliament together "as early as conveniently possible".

Let me conclude with a reference to what was said by my hon. friend the member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding). It was, I think, practically the last word spoken in the last session. At page 4589 the hon. gentleman is reported as follows:

> It is one thing to have a body of Estimates laid before us; it is another thing to have a proper opportunity presented to discuss them. It is the opportunity to discuss the Estimates that has been delayed in many cases.

That is the point of which we are complaining at the moment. There is not an opportunity intelligently to discuss these Estimates until we have in its completed form the Auditor General's report of the preceding fiscal year, and until we have several other reports which have already been asked for, and concerning which we can get no definite information from the Government. I think, Sir, that until we get a definite assurance from the Government that we are going to have a proper opportunity of discussing the Estimates with reports in their complete and full form we would not be justified in proceeding at the present moment with the consideration of any portion of those Estimates.

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I hope that I will not again be misinterpreted if

I say that I see nothing in the remarks of the hon. gentleman that would warrant the high tone of voice and apparent indignation with which they were delivered. It is quite true that the law calls for the presentation of the Auditor General's report within a week of the opening of each session; and it is quite true that that is most desirable if it can be procured; and, further, it is quite true that the presence of the Auditor General's report for the preceding year is of much value in the discussion of the Estimates for the succeeding year. But alongside those considerations must be set the fact that the Auditor General's report is not prepared by the members of the Government or by officers directly under them. That report is prepared by the Auditor General and his officers, and they bear a relation to the Government of any day under the constitution of this country that I think hon. members fully understand. Nothing has been done on the part of the Government, and nothing has been withheld so far as I am aware—and I am sure I am right, for I think I know all the facts connected with the case—designed to deter the presentation of the Auditor General's report. What would be the object of the Government in so acting? And if we had none, does the hon. gentleman want to insinuate that the Auditor General would withhold his report at the instigation of the Government? It is merely a matter of getting through the physical labour that must be accomplished before the Auditor General's report comes down.

Now, while it is better and, indeed, essential, that before we proceed far with the materials which we are presenting to the House by way of Estimates we should have the Auditor General's report relating thereto before Parliament at the time, that is the case now. Three volumes of that report are down, two of them have been down for some time, and we are quite content that those departments —and those alone—as respects which the Auditor General's report is down shall be now considered by the House in the way of Estimates.

My hon. friend says there are certain estimates—if I understood his remarks correctly in connection with a quotation he made from some reports that have been brought down—there are some items in the report which bear reference to volume 4. If that is the case, certainly the Government would not ask, if anybody objected, that anything relating to that item be gone on with in the Estimates. Indeed, it is not necessary that we should go on with them; we have three volumes here and we have ample reason to proceed. Surely the time has come when we should start upon the Estimates. I am not able to understand the logic of my hon. friend's argument when he says: "In previous sessions we have not had time to discuss the Estimates, therefore this session I am going to hold up the House and not let it get to the Estimates."

Mr. PARENT: Hear, hear.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I am glad to have the approval of my hon. friend from Quebec; I know that would appeal to his good judgment.

Now, one would really think that some innovation had been risked by the Government in launching upon a career of violation of law, and the hon. gentleman selected two or three years during which the late Liberal Government were in power to show that they had complied with the law, as opposed to this Government, which did not comply with it. In order to be fair in the presentation of the facts I am going to adduce, let me say that the Auditor General's Department held exactly the same relation to the government under preceding governments in Canada as it holds to-day. But the delay of which my hon. friend now complains so bitterly and in language of rather amusing indignation was exceeded three times over under the government of which he himself was a member; and while it was exceeded the Estimates were gone on with in the House at the request of the government of which he was a member. I have not been able to find a single year —my search has necessarily been hasty, because I had no notice from my hon. friend that he intended to launch this attack— I have not been able to find a single year in which the Government of which he was a member did comply with the law. It may be that a year can be found, but I could not find any in going hastily through these figures furnished by the Finance Department. I will read them exactly as they are, and the House can judge for itself.

The House met on the 8th of March, 1906. The second volume was brought down on the 28th of March, 1906, or three weeks afterwards, whereas the law requires that it be brought down within one week. That was a violation of the law in respect of very volume except volume 1. The House met again on the 22nd of November, 1906; volume 1 was brought down on the 4th of February, 1907.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: If my right hon. friend will pardon me, he must be misinformed, because the figures which I quoted show that volume 1 was brought down on December 2, 1907.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I am talking about 1906-07. The hon. gentleman made a careful selection of his years, but there are other years besides those he gave.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I do not wish to interrupt my right hon. friend, but he was referring to the time when I was a member of the Government, and I was confining my remarks to that period.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I said, the Government of which he was a member. He became a member in 1908. We will see how they lived up to the law in 1908, 1909 and 1910.

Mr. JACOBS: We are now having some ancient history.

Mr. MEIGHEN: It is not so very ancient. At all events, 1906 is not so very much more ancient than 1908.

For the year 1906-07 the House met on November 22; the first volume was brought down on February 4, 1907. This year the first volume was brought down not long after the opening of the session. I have not the exact date; perhaps the Minister of Finance will give it later. I might add also that that volume brought down on February 4, 1907, was only a portion of the first volume; the other portion was brought down on February 8, 1907—that is the way my notes read. The second volume was brought down on the first day of March, three months and eight days after the opening of the session. The third volume was brought down before the first—on the 9th day of January, 1907, nearly two months after the opening of the session, and the last volume, relating to the Post Office Department and the Mounted Police, was brought down on the 22nd of February, 1907, or exactly three months after the session opened. We are now at the end of the first month of this session, and my hon. friend comes into the House in this great state of indignation—

Mr. BUREAU: Hear, hear.

Mr. MEIGHEN: My Hon. friend from Three Rivers appears to follow in every particular and to share the indignation of my hon. friend. If I am not wrong, the hon. member for Three Rivers was a member of this Government that delayed three months in bringing down the report of 1906-07. Moreover, he was Solicitor-General, I believe—legal adviser—so that he would know they had to bring it down in a week or be branded as violators of law.

In the following year, 1907-08, the House met on the 28th of November, 1907. The first volume was brought down on the 29th of November; the second on the 17th of December, almost a month after; the third on the 28th of November. The first and the third were apparently brought down together.

Mr. PARENT: The same year?

Mr. MEIGHEN: The same year, of course; did the hon. member think they would bring them down a year after?

For the year 1909-10 the House met on the 20th of January, 1909. The first and third volumes were brought down on the 22nd of January, 1909; I think that is the date given by my hon. friend. The next volume—it is marked here "P.O."; I assume that figures relating to the Post Office Department were contained in it—was brought down on the 22nd of February, 1909, a delay of a month and two days longer than in the present instance. That was the first year in which my hon. friend was himself a member of the Government. It would have been peculiarly appropriate if he had waited on this occasion for two days more and then he could at least have said that the delay was one day longer than was the case when he himself was a member of the Government. But the next volume was brought down on the 23rd of February, so that, in the case of two volumes out of three, the same period exactly had elapsed of which he complains to-day. In the first year in which he was a member of the Government, only one was brought down and two remained after the expiration of the same time of which he complains to-day. Now three are down and only one remains, and my hon. friend is filled with indignation. Moreover, the expenditures, operations and activities of the Government are not only far greater to-day than they were in 1908 and 1909, but they spread over a far wider area and necessitate much greater delay in the preparation of these publications than was the case at that time.

For the year 1909-10 the House met on November 11. Two volumes, the first and third, were brought down on November 12. Volume 2 was not brought down until the 12th of January, or over two months after the House met. That was the next year in which my hon. friend was a member of the Government; still he upbraids this Government for delay and violation of the law, and says that in the interests of the taxpayers of Canada he cannot allow one dollar of supply to be voted until the Auditor General's report comes down. It is very unfortunate for my hon. friend that he was for these three years a member of the Government.

Mr. EDWARDS: And for the country.

Mr. MEIGHEN: It may have been unfortunate for the country, but on that subject I am not speaking now.

Now, in respect of the years to which my hon. friend refers, those since 1917, it must be remembered that during that period this country was at war; that there was an overseas ministry of militia; that the returns from that department particularly could not be in at the same time as the returns from other departments, and, furthermore, that every department of this Government was being conducted under difficulties of which the Government preceding it knew nothing at all. There would, therefore, be abundant reason, abundant necessity, for delay in these years that did not exist in his time by any means. Even yet there are returns from overseas—I cannot speak authoritatively on this, but I am very much disposed to think that this fourth volume is not down at the present time because of delayed returns that even yet must come from overseas. I understand that the fourth volume refers chiefly to war appropriations; but the fourth volume will be down; we have reason to believe that it will be down in very good time. In the meantime it is suggested only that the House shall go on with such Estimates as are fully covered in the volumes already on the Table. I do not think one single year can be pointed to during which my hon. friend or the hon. gentleman beside him were members of the Government when Estimates were not gone on with before the complete set of volumes of the Auditor General's Report were on the Table. If this be the case, by what show of reasoning does my hon. friend ask this House to block the Estimates and even to refuse to go into Supply before the last volume of the Auditor General's Report is on the Table? The only reason is that there is no better one to present, that there is nothing better to fight with—

Mr. PARENT: Good enough.

Mr. MEIGHEN: —and consequently it is "good enough," because something must be found. It is surely important that we arrive at Supply at an early date. It is complained that Parliament did not meet in time. Again references could be made to previous meetings of Parliament, but it has been the practice for some time to call Parliament after the New Year, instead of before, and many hon. members—and they are not all on this side of the House either —have urged that that practice be followed, because of the delay and loss of time entailed in going and coming for the very short period prior to the Christmas holidays. It was hoped that this year we could meet earlier that last. We have met earlier than last year; indeed, we met almost two weeks earlier than last year. We met on a Monday, and no time whatever of the representatives of the people was lost by adjourning until the next week. We immediately got down to business; the debate on the Address was proceeded with; it was not rushed through by the Government; all the time asked for by the Opposition was given, and the debate continued at considerable length after members of the Government had desisted,—it continued at the length it did because hon. gentlemen opposite determined that it should so continue and they themselves conducted the debate. After the debate on the Address was closed, there was abundant material before Parliament for the consideration of Parliament. Already only a week or so afterwards, the Estimates are laid on the Table, and we ask the House to proceed to a consideration of those Estimates, in order that the very thing of which my hon. friends complain shall not take place; in order that Parliament may early in the session get to those Estimates, consider them fully and without haste, and conserve the public interest thereby. If that be desirable, surely then it is not desirable that, for reasons such as my hon. friend has adduced, the consideration of Estimates should be deferred.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Shelburne and Queens): Mr. Speaker, we are told by Shakespeare's Dogberry that "comparisons are odorous." They are sometimes interesting though they may not be helpful. I have been gathering some information from the speeches of the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Mackenzie King) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Meighen). They have been giving me some dates, and from those dates I learn—I am assuming that the figures given by my right hon. friend are correct—that in times past, some years ago, the Auditor General's Report was rather slow in coming down; but whether it was due to the criticism of hon. gentlemen opposite or the pious resolve on the part of the Minister of Finance at that date, I cannot say, but, according to the Prime Minister a great change came about, and in the last Parliament which was in the time of a Liberal government, according to the dates given by the leader of the Opposition and not disputed by the leader of the Government, it appears the Auditor General's Report came down very promptly.

Mr. MEIGHEN: No, nearly two months after the opening of the House.

Mr. FIELDING: In one case only.

Mr. MEIGHEN: In two, if not three

Mr. FIELDING: I understood from my right hon. friend that the dates given by the leader of the Opposition were very favourable; but he said that there were other dates, and so he went back to ancient history. There is, however, a more serious point than that. It appears to me that my right hon. friend has failed to appreciate adequately the importance which, not only these public documents, but others as well, have in regard to the business of the House, and I should be glad if I could assist him to get a better appreciation of the importance, the necessity, of having public documents brought down at an early date, without the need of commenting upon times past and without undertaking to make any comparison of one government with another.

The leader of the Opposition has truly said that the first and chief function of Parliament is to control public expenditures, and the documents relating to public expenditures are of paramount importance. We must first have the Estimates; we must have the Public Accounts; then we must have the report of the Auditor General for the year that is past. Before Parliament is asked to vote additional Supply to the Government, it is reasonable that Parliament shall have an account of how the money previously voted was spent, so that those three series of volumes, the Estimates, Public Accounts, and the Auditor General's report, are of vital importance. Irrespective of what anybody is doing now or has done in the past, I should like the Government to appreciate the great importance of so adjusting public affairs that those reports will come down at the earliest possible moment. I do not emphasize the fact that the law requires that the Auditor General's Report shall be brought down within so many days of the opening of Parliament. That is always found to be difficult and, perhaps, impossible. I do not insist on the Auditor General or the Government being tied up to the days mentioned; but an effort should be made to bring down those reports, and other reports as well, at an early date of the session. The whole basis of the business of the Government and of Parliament is that we shall have before us the reports of the various departments of the Government and when days, weeks and months roll on and we do not get those reports, the purpose of Parliament is defeated.

4 p.m.

[Mr. Fielding.]

My right hon. friend says that the Auditor General is not responsible to the Government. That is true only in a measure; it is true that the Auditor General is an independent officer; that he can be dismissed only by a vote of the House. But it is not true that the Auditor General's department is so absolutely disconnected as my right hon. friend suggests. The Auditor General is my right hon. friend's own appointee, and he has a reasonable right to ask that that official shall attend to his duties. I am not suggesting that the present Auditor General, who was a clerk in that department in my own days and who is, I believe, a very capable man, is in any way in the wrong. But when my right hon. friend says that he is not responsible for the Auditor General, he is getting away from parliamentary responsibility which should extend to the Auditor General. I understand the Auditor General's complaint is that he has not a sufficient staff. Whose fault is that? It is the business of the Government to see that he has the staff that he needs, and that he is facilitated in bringing down his report at the earliest possible moment, and no arguments that the Government can make can absolutely absolve them from responsibility in that regard.

It has been said that there has been difficulty in regard to the printing, but there should not be any difficulty now. The Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) told us the other day of the immense improvement that had been made in the Printing Bureau by the dismissal of four hundred and fifty men after many years' service. Well now, if they have improved it so much, if, as he says, the business is done more efficiently, might we not reasonably ask that these various public reports should be ready at an early date? Behind that, is the question of the date when Parliament shall meet. I know that is a question on which there is some difference of opinion, but I want again to put forth my views in favour of carrying out what was the design of Parliament when the fiscal year was changed. Formerly the fiscal year ended on the 1st of July, and Parliament usually met in the month of January or February. That gave a period of seven months in which to get the public reports ready, a reasonable time, and when Parliament met in January or February, as a rule most of the reports were ready, or were shortly afterwards. But then there was this great difficulty: when Parliament met in January or February business men complained that they were kept here all through the summer until the hot weather, and many a business man who would be willing to give his time through the winter to the affairs of the nation was not prepared to sacrifice his time and neglect his business affairs away on until midsummer. So in the interests of efficient government, and to encourage men of the right stamp to give their time to the public service, it was decided to change the fiscal year, and by common consent on both sides of the House it was changed so as to end on the last day of March instead of on June 30. There was a gain of three months there in which to get the public documents ready. You could have seven months under the old system. You now have your fiscal year ending on 31st March, and you could meet in November or December and have just as much time in which to get the public documents ready as they had in former times when they met in January or February. Why cannot we do it? I am not making this a matter of party controversy, for I know we had some difficulty ourselves in doing it. But I think this Parliament could very well meet in November and dispose of the debate on the Address and a great deal of formal business, and make a good start on the business of the House before Christmas, when a reasonable adjournment could be had. Then after the Christmas vacation we could come back and end our business in May. This year—I do not know what plans are in the minds of the Government or hon. gentlemen opposite—all the indications are that if business drags along as it is doing now we shall be here in May, June, and July, and Heaven knows how much later. My hon. friend says that members on both sides of the House prefer to meet after the New Year. Notwithstanding that, the merit of the system itself should commend itself to the House. It is desirable that these public documents should be got ready earlier, and I think we should agree that it is desirable Parliament should meet earlier and not be kept sitting here until July, August or later, as sometimes is the case now. Unless we can agree to meet at an earlier date and get the business well advanced at an earlier date, I do not see how we are going to carry on the business of the country efficiently, and make the conditions of Parliament satisfactory to a large class of the best type of men in the country whom we should desire to have co-operate with us in Parliament. Therefore, the thought I would give to my right hon. friend, without finding any fault or entering into comparisons between now and the old days, is that he should appreciate in larger measure the great importance of having these documents ready in time, and, if necessary, get a large staff for the Auditor General and for the Printing Bureau. Let him get back these 450 men if it is going to give us the documents in time, so that Parliament may be able to meet earlier and have the documents ready at a reasonably early period in the session.

Hon. Sir HENRY DRAYTON (Minister of Finance): I confess that I have a good deal of difficulty in reconciling the present debate with the hon. gentleman's great anxiety that business should be proceeded with and the House adjourned at an early date. There are one or two faults which are laid at the door of this Government. The hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's (Mr. Fielding) gives two concrete suggestions. He makes a concrete suggestion as to the staff of the Auditor General, and another concrete suggestion as to the staff of the Printing Bureau. Now, if we have any ground for complaint in the matter of these criticisms it is rather to be found in the suggestion of the leader of the Opposition that the Government are responsible for what the Auditor General does; because the Government responsibility so far as the Auditor General is concerned is to supply him with the means wherewith to carry on his work, and, having done that, to refrain from interfering with him in his work in any way, to turn him either this way or that. And we are not interfering with him.

Let us deal first of all with the questions of staffs. I would like to make it perfectly clear to the House that there is no trouble about the printing of this report. The delay is not in the printing. So far as the staff of the Auditor General is concerned, I do not know how much larger a staff the hon. gentleman thinks the Auditor General should have.

Mr. FIELDING: Enough to get the work out.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: It might get to that point where there would be so many that they would be tumbling over each other and the work not be got out. It might be like conditions at the Printing Bureau at one time. We had employed in the Auditor General's department for the year 1920-1921, 114 employees; we have for this year 158 employees, or an increase of 44 permanent employees in that comparatively small department.

Mr. ROBB: Is the minister satisfied that the new employees are just as competent as the old ones?

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: I am not going to say anything as to any personal knowledge I have as to the competency of the staff of the Auditor General. We are relying upon the Auditor General. In the main there have been but very few changes, but so far as the new appointments are concerned, the Government have received no complaint from the Auditor General as to their efficiency. But the publishing of the fourth volume of the Auditor General's report does not depend so much on the size of the staff, as upon whether the necessary information has come to hand. The Auditor General says he has not got all the information yet, and that he cannot get it before the end of the month.

Mr. MURPHY: Who is in default? That is the point.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: I do not know that I can say that he is in default or not. If he has not the information, he cannot very well get on with that work. It must be remembered that the Auditor General is an entirely independent official. There has been no interference with him. On the other hand, he has been urged to get the report out. He reports that some information has not yet been received. He has to-day a task of infinitely greater difficulty than in pre-war days. The volumes are greater, and the weight of the burden is infinitely greater. But even in pre-war days, when there was not quite as much reason for delay as there now is, hon. gentlemen then in charge of affairs thought it would be a good thing that progress should be made with the Estimates as and when progress could be made. It was thought it would be a good thing that the reports of the Auditor General should be brought down from time to time when they were ready. I note for example, that the hon. member for Shelburne and Queen's is thus reported in Hansard of 1906, at page 6,126. There had been a discussion as to the advisability of bringing down the Auditor General's report in instalments, and this is what my hon. friend said:

> In regard to the next session, the circumstances are so exceptional that we can hardly hope to have the ordinary blue books ready for the early part of the session. But, as to our practice generally, I think that the most that can be said is that, where there is a probability of delay in the presentation of the Auditor General's Report, it would be better to have it brought down in instalments.
>
> But if in ordinary sessions there is likely to be delay in presenting the completed volume, and if the business of Parliament is likely to be retarded on that account, I think it would be better to present the report in instalments.

It would seem to me, Mr. Speaker, that perhaps the greatest charge against us is that we have followed not only the action but the advice of the hon. member; and, frankly, I do not think that we have committed any grave offence in doing so. The hon. member went on to say:

> I think that an examination of the records will show that there has been little delay in any case—the Auditor General's Report has been brought down within a few days of the time specified by law * * * If, in future, there is danger of delay which will impede the business of the House, I agree that the report should be brought down in instalments, because it is the basis of much of the business of the House.

Mr. FIELDING: Had there been any complaint that the reports were delayed, to which this was a reply? It might be curious to know who was complaining at that time.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: I much regret that owing to the fact that we have had somewhat hurriedly to prepare for this discussion I have had no opportunity of reading Hansard myself. I merely give to the House the extract from my hon. friend's remarks with which I have been furnished. Now, Mr. Speaker, what real difficulty is there? The public accounts have been tabled for some time—since the 8th March. We have already got the first three volumes of the Auditor General's Report and they are very largely complete in themselves. They are not complete in so far as demobilization items are concerned. The demobilization items are contained in volume 4, and it is because of those items that there is a delay in connection with that volume. The demobilization votes refer only to certain items in the Estimates. Militia and Defence, Labour, Justice, Marine and Fisheries, Agriculture and Privy Council, the report of the Soldiers' Settlement Board, and of the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Department, are contained in the fourth volume; and as the right hon. leader of the Government (Mr. Meighen) has pointed out, we are not now seeking to go into Supply in connection with any of those matters which are dealt with in volume 4. Almost the whole of the Estimates can be dealt with without the slightest reference to, or the slightest help from volume 4. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the objection is one calculated to delay the proceedings of the House, and it can serve no useful purpose.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: There is a discrepancy between the Prime Minister and myself in regard to some of the statistics given. In quoting for the year 1907, I wish my right hon. friend would mention the dates he has in connection with the presentation of reports that year. I find a difference between his dates and mine:

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Do you mean 1906-7?

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: No, 1907-8.

Mr. MEIGHEN: The House met on November 28, 1907, Volume 1 was presented on November 29; Volume 2, on December 17; Volume 3 on November 28.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: When my right hon. friend spoke before, I did not think he gave November 28.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: That was the date given; I took down the items as he read them.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Then his figures are correct.

Mr. J. H. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I have listened with a great deal of interest to the statements of the Minister of Finance and of my right hon. friend the Prime Minister, but no good reason has yet been given to the House why the Auditor General's report should not be on the Table. There is one fact that we must not lose sight of, and that is that owing to the change in the fiscal year all the items to be found in the Auditor General's report, when presented, will be at least one year old. The Auditor General's report will give us information only up to the thirty-first day of March, 1920, and as it is now bordering on the thirty-first of March, 1921, all the items that will be contained in the Auditor General's report, when we receive it, were expended one year go. Consequently, there can be no fair argument, if the department is awake at all, why the report should not be placed on the table of the House, as required by law, within one week after the opening of the session. In the old days, when Parliament was supposed to meet in the autumn, the case was different. The Auditor General had only six or seven months to prepare his report. Under the present system, when we meet in February, he has practically a year in which to get his report ready. The Auditor General was a witness last year in an investigation before the Public Accounts Committee. He was asked why he delayed so long in preparing his report, and he gave very unsatisfactory answers. One of the questions asked him was this:

When was the first manuscript sent by you for that current year to the King's Printer to be printed?

What do you suppose was his answer? Now, it was his duty to begin the report immediately after the 31st of March of the previous year, and his answer was that it was on the 17th of November, 1919, that he sent in his first copy to the King's Printer. He appears to have slept for eight months after the close of the previous fiscal year before sending a line to the printer. Now, Mr. Speaker, that is unpardonable; it shows, for one thing, that the department is not doing its duty. I appreciate what the Minister of Finance says, that the Auditor General is a responsible officer and that no interference must be made with his duties. That is all right. But for that very reason, my hon. friend will not go so far as to say that he is not accountable to this Parliament. If the Auditor General decided not to send us his report at all, would Parliament stop sitting? Would it discontinue the consideration of expenditures altogether? Surely that is not the intention of the law. While the Auditor General is a responsible officer and is supposed to look after the details of his own department free from interference, still the head of the department has a duty to perform; and if it is true that the Auditor General delays for six or seven months, or eight months, in sending his copy to the King's Printer to be printed, until Parliament is to meet, then it is the duty of the Minister of Finance to draw this matter to his attention and to see to it that the department of the Auditor General does its work.

Now, my right hon. friend, if I heard him correctly, stated in his speech—which consisted largely of post mortems—that the details of the Estimates which the Government are now asking the House to deal with had already been presented to Parliament, and that he was not asking the House to deal with any Estimates that are not already detailed in the Auditor General's report. I think that was the substance of what he said. Now I have the Auditor General's report on my desk and I took occasion to look the matter up. From the Hansard report of last night's sitting I find that it was proposed to deal to-day with the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Justice. Taking first the Department of Agriculture and referring to volume 1, of the Auditor General's report of this year, page A2, I find the item: Canada Food Board, $48,656.71. Now the Canada Food Board has always been a contentious matter; members of this House will want to know all the details of the expenditure in connection with it. And yet we are told that those details are set forth in part ZZ of volume 4 of the Auditor General's report. So much for the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. MEIGHEN: There would be no need of that item going on, or any expenditure connected with the Food Board, if hon. gentlemen opposite want it deferred.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I am speaking of the announcement as to the business to be taken up to-day which is contained in Hansard. According to Hansard my right hon. friend said that the Estimates for the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Justice were to be dealt with first.

Mr. MEIGHEN: My point is this: If there is any item in the Auditor General's report which refers to something in the Estimates, and volume 4 of the report is necessary in connection with its discussion, that item can be deferred; there is lots of other work to do until the remainder of the Estimates for the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I think it will be difficult for my right hon. friend to find any item with which we can deal in that case.

Mr. MEIGHEN: Then why defer consideration?

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I turn up the Auditor General's report containing items of expenditure in connection with the Department of Justice, which is volume 2, page L2, and at the foot of the page I find the sum of $1,644,168.28 as to which we are told the details are set out in volume 4. These are the two Departments whose estimates we are supposed to deal with to-day. Now I think my right hon. friend could not have been looking up the details of the expenditures when he made the announcement that the Estimates of these two Departments are set forth in the Auditor General's report, because the Estimates for both Departments contain items, and large items, which are detailed in volume 4 of the Auditor General's report. It has already been stated in the discussion which has so far taken place that the practice—

Hon. H. S. BELAND (Beauce): Will my hon. friend allow me just one word? I merely wish to remark that the consideration of certain items could, of course, be postponed, but last night when the House adjourned the Prime Minister, answering a question as to what business would be taken up to-day, spoke as follows:

> Supply: Estimates of the Departments of Agriculture and Justice. If we get beyond that, we shall take up the other Government Orders.

The Prime Minister last night expected that we would pass all the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture to-day.

Mr. MEIGHEN: We might get beyond them without passing them.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I must draw the attention of hon. members to the fact that the House is not in committee, and that it is absolutely irregular for one hon. member to interject remarks while another hon. member has the floor.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I consented to my hon. friend from Beauce making a remark. As a matter of fact I have nearly concluded my speech.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member for Antigonish and Guysborough had no right to give such consent.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): Mr. Speaker, your admonition will apply to the future. It is not applicable in the present case because it was given too late. The fact has already been remarked that the contentious items in the Estimates are apparently relegated to volume 4 of the Auditor General's report. I have been endeavouring to keep track of the Auditor General's report for some years past, and in other years we have had the same experience, namely that the items which the Opposition desire to investigate are generally placed in volume 4 of the report, and that volume comes down very late in the session when there is not sufficient time to make any investigation into the expenditures. That was the case last year, and the same experience occurred the year before. If we could induce the Minister of Finance to place volume 4 on the Table first we would have very little discussion of this kind. I would therefore make the proposal to my hon. friend that he should print volume 4 before he prints volumes 1, 2 and 3. If he does that, we would get along much better and not have so much discussion about the date on which the Auditor General's report is presented. In practically every department of the Government there are items which are referred to in volume 4. The gross amount will be found in the summary of expenditure in volume 1, and it amounts to more than one-half of the total expenditure of the Government for the year. It reaches the enormous total of $346,612,954.56. Now that is a very large sum as to which we have no details at the present time, and we shall not have those details until volume 4 is presented to Parliament. As I have said, that sum represents about one-half of the total expenditure for the year and it is composed of items related to almost every department of the Government.

Right Hon. Sir GEORGE FOSTER (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Just one moment in order to make a remark or two in reply to my hon. friend (Mr. Sinclair). He says that if the House really wants to get into Committee on Supply as soon as possible, the Government should make it easy to do so. The Government asks for Supply. The leader of the Opposition says, "You shan't go into Committee of Supply". The Government's position is: Let us get to work as quickly as possible and give a chance to every member in the House to dig in in the matter of Supply. The leader of the Opposition says "No, I am going to stop you from going into Committee of Supply". We say, "Very well, what is the reason?"

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: Will my right hon. friend permit me to make a correction?

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: I am not going to state the case unfairly at all. The leader of the Opposition says: "I am going to stop you from going into Committee of Supply". We ask "Why?" My hon. friend replies, "Because there are some portions of the field that we cannot dig over properly owing to the fact that volume 4 of the Auditor General's report has not yet been brought down." Now, if a man is a farmer, and the spring time comes, and the Deity and the weather conditions are favourable to commencing farming operations, and the call is to the farmer to get to work, an obstinate farmer like the leader of the Opposition would say: "No, good Lord, no. Because there is a little bit of land here on my farm that from which you have not yet taken the ice, I am not going to do a stroke of digging until you do take that ice off."

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: My right hon. friend stated that he wished to present my argument correctly and I am sure he will permit me to repeat exactly what I did say. I have never said that the House should not proceed to go into Committee of Supply, but I have said that it was impossible to proceed intelligently with Supply until we had information that is lacking. I have also said that we ought to be assured that we are going to have a full opportunity of discussing the Estimates in a comprehensive and intelligent way before we go on. That is what I have said; but I have not tried to delay the House from going into Committee of Supply in any way.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Mr. Speaker, the delay of the proceedings is apparent if my hon. friend intervenes and a long discussion takes place when the Government is anxious to go into Supply. Then we come to look at the pertinence of his observations as to why the House should be precluded from going into Supply. His first objection is: You have broken the law, and because you have broken the law I am putting in this protest and my party is going to stand behind it. Well, there are only two grounds upon which the hon. gentleman can take that stand—the ground of conscience; and the ground of expediency. As to the former, when we go back to the record of the hon. gentleman himself, we find that he does not stand upon that consistently, because when he was a member of the Liberal Government the Auditor General's reports were late in coming down. That means that he was a breaker of the law. Then on the ground of expediency and intelligent work in committee on items of the Estimates, I do not think my hon. friend would strain the point to say that if one-half of his field was absolutely fit for cultivation, with all the utensils at hand necessary to carry it on, he could not intelligently farm that part of his property, but would wait a day or two, or a week or two, until the sunlight had made the other part sufficiently dry for cultivation. He works just as intelligently on the portion that he is tilling as if all the rest of the field was prepared for tillage. So it is with regard to this field. The Government brings down Estimates which cover a certain number of items and a certain total of expenditure. The hon. member for Guysborough (Mr. Sinclair) has just admitted that only one-half of the total expenditures of the Government has reference yet to volume 4, and so could not be intelligently undertaken. Granted that that is so, his own admission goes to show that there is one-half of all the expenditures of the Government upon which the Auditor General's reports are already down and which we can intelligently carry through. With reference to the Department of Agriculture spoken of by my hon friend from Guysborough, he found one item of about $40,000 which had relation to a Food Board, and opposite that were tacked the letters "ZZ." That is, out of 123 pages in the Estimates referring to expenditure on agriculture there was one item of about $40,000 for which he could not account until he had volume 4. For most of the other expenditures of the Government we have the Auditor General's report already down. If there be any one item, as the Prime Minister has said, on which explanations as to last year's expenditures will only be available when the fourth volume of the Auditor General's report comes down, that can stand until the volume is ready. But there is not any rhyme or reason at all, is there in our refusing to go on with those portions of the expenditures of next year in their relation to the volumes that are already down when we take them into consideration with the proposed expenditures for next year? Every Government since I have had experience of governments has always been fortunate in having its ideals a little ahead of its practice. It was so with my hon. friend's Government, and it has been so with all other governments; there is always a little space left in which we may excel over former usages; and I will venture to say that if my hon. friend goes back to the beginning of Confederation he will find examples in every Government.

There are three stages in connection with the issue of the Auditor General's report. There is the preparation of the accounts in the different departments. Then those are sent to the Auditor General, and his department is responsible for the auditing of those accounts, and reporting thereon. His report is then sent to the printing department which is responsible for its prompt printing. Now, I am quite certain that all through the administration of all governments there will have been lapses, greater or less, in all these three stages. it is impossible to have perfection. But at the present time the difficulty is not in the printing department—of that I am certain. The Auditor General is, as has been stated, an officer of the House. While you can recommend to him and urge upon him, he is still master of his own department. I am not aware that he has called for a single clerk to be added to his staff and has been refused, and the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) has shown that there were forty-four more members of the Auditor Generals' staff last year than there were the year before. Consequently it is not because of an insufficient staff that the Auditor General's report has been delayed. I think the real reason for the delay, such as it is, in the completion of volume 4 is that that volume has to do very largely with expenditures in relation to the war, for instance, demobilization, chiefly—there were two ministers of war, one overseas and one on this side—and then those other military operations in which several of the other departments were concerned as to expenditures.

But, after all, when we come to think of it, we will reach the conclusion on both sides of the House that after having had this conference the thing to do is to go on with the Estimates—and they will not be pressed where explanations are not forthcoming because of the fact that volume 4 of the Auditor General's report is not yet before the House. We will make progress in that way, we will do our work intelligently, and we will not be subject to any criticism from the country that we are unnecessarily delaying the business of the House.

Hon. CHARLES MURPHY (Russell): Mr. Speaker, the sweet reasonableness of the right hon. gentleman's contribution to what he calls this "conference" impels me to say a word or two. If this discussion is to serve any purpose at all, it ought to be in the way of securing an improvement in the future in the bringing down of the Auditor General's report. Now, much of what we have heard from our hon. friends on the other side of the House is designed to shift the real basis of this discussion. The point really at issue, I submit, Sir, is not so much a comparison between the practices of the two Governments as to the dates at which they brought down the Auditor General's reports with reference to the date of the opening of the session, but as to the dates upon which these reports were brought down with reference to the end of the fiscal year; and from that point of view the odds are altogether in favour of the late Liberal administration. If the House will refer to the dates that have been given they will find that under the Liberal administration all reports were down long before the end of the fiscal year, while in the case of our hon. friends opposite several numbers of the Auditor General's reports were brought down only after the end of the fiscal year—some of them several months afterwards. I submit, Sir, that an improvement in that direction ought to be the outcome of this discussion.

Now, having had some experience in connection with these matters a few years ago, I am not any more enamoured about increasing the staff in this or that department than some of my hon. friends opposite. My experience was not that better work or more speedy results were obtained by increasing the number of employees. I think my hon. friend the Minister of Finance has indicated exactly what the trouble is in the present instance: that delay has been caused the Auditor General by reason of his not getting the material for this report which has not yet been brought down. I may suggest to the Minister of Finance how that difficulty can be overcome, and I can do it by referring him to the method that was adopted in years past. I understand that at present, my hon. friend, in addition to a few other duties, is Acting Secretary of States. If he is, I would refer him to the records of that department for the years 1909, 1910, and the beginning of 1911. He will find that in those years, immediately upon the prorogation of Parliament, notices were sent out to each of the departments reminding them of the date upon which their annual reports had to be presented to Parliament, requesting them to send in the manuscript of these reports upon a certain day, and notifying them that if the manuscript was not sent in a follow-up system would be instituted and they would be given no peace or comfort until the manuscript was fully in the hands of the Auditor General in the first place, and afterwards in the hands of the King's Printer. It was because that follow-up system was pursued literally that my hon. friend the leader of the Opposition was able this afternoon to cite the dates upon which the reports were brought down, showing that, if not strictly within the period required by law, those dates were at least very close to it, during the years of the late Liberal Administration. I would suggest in all kindness to my hon. friend that he see that the same system be adopted and pursued in the future.

Sir HENRY DRAYTON: If I may be permitted, Mr. Speaker, I would say this: I shall certainly have pleasure in looking into the matter, but I think it will be found that the same procedure has been followed. I find Mr. Mulvey a very attentive and efficient deputy; the matter is in his hands.

Motion agreed to, and the House went into Committee of Supply.

SUPPLY

The House in Commitee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

Civil Government — Agriculture — Salaries, $541,955; contingencies, $135,000.

Mr. McCOIG: Will the minister explain the increase?

Mr. TOLMIE: It is due to statutory increases.

Mr. MURPHY: I observe that there is an increase in the number of employees; while there were 318 last year, 359 are to be provided for this year. Will the hon. gentleman explain what this increase is for?

Mr. TOLMIE: It is due to an extension of the work generally throughout the country.

Mr. MURPHY: If my hon. friend will refer to his printed Estimates he will see that the explanation which he has just given cannot be of general application. I understand that the expenditures under Civil Government relate to employees here in Ottawa. Now, under the head of clerks there is an increase of 5; under the head of junior clerks, an increase of 3; clerk stenographers, an increase of 7; junior clerk stenographers, an increase of 10; office appliance operators, an increase of 2; messenger clerks, an increase of 2. These increases surely must be here in Ottawa, not throughout the country.

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes, the increases are as the hon. member has stated. But there has been a great extension of agriculture throughout the country. Our experimental farms are extending their scope; our live stock is extending its scope; and it has been necessary to put more men in the field, and, therefore, to increase the staff at headquarters to carry on the general business of the department. I think it will be found also that the revenue from agriculture has increased very materially in the last few years.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Is it not a fact that some experimental farms have been closed?

Mr. TOLMIE: No.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Has not the experimental farm at L'Assomption been closed?

Mr. TOLMIE: That was rented only for one year to carry on some tobacco experiments.

Mr. P. A. SEGUIN (L'Assomption-Montcalm): (Translation.) Mr. Chairman, the hon. minister argues that no experimental farms have been discontinued these last years, and, in answer to the hon. member from Chambly-Verchères (Mr. Archambault) who told him that the tobacco experimental farm at L'Assomption had been closed last year, he stated that it was only a venture which had been abandoned. I must say to the hon. minister that he is mistaken, as the experimental farm of L'Assomption had replaced the one which existed for a number of years at Saint-Jacques de l'Achigan, where it did so much towards furthering the tobacco industry of that district. Without consulting me, the department thought fit to close that farm at St. Jacques, and it is then that L'Assomption was selected as the most suitable place for that experimental farm. But, last year, it was wiped out. And yet the location seemed to be so good that it had been thought proper to send the principal officers of the department to the college authorities to induce them to sell the property which had been rented for the establishment of this experimental station. The chief of the Experimental Farms branch and the Deputy Minister of Agriculture had come to L'Assomption to see whether the location would be suitable. It was found to be so suitable that they immediately went to the college authorities to find out whether it could be bought at a reasonable figure. The prices of neighbouring farms were even inquired into, and it was realized that even in the matter of price this property was the most desirable. The officers of the department above named together with the head of the tobacco growing industry, thereupon went to the college authorities and told them: "The price you ask the department is altogether proper, and you can depend upon the Government keeping this farm." This was done with so little hesitancy that the college authorities, counting upon a sure sale, said to the Government representatives: "There is a part of this farm which we could sell at a much higher price than what we have asked from the Government; would you allow us to sell that part? You would still have enough left." This was peremptorily refused. Permission was denied to sell that part of the land. Then the college corporation, feeling that the Government would not fail to buy after such formal understanding, refused to sell the remainder of the farm at an advenced price, and took steps to stop work on the premises. They sold their herds of cows—which were considerable—their agricultural implements, and disposed of everything they used in the working of the farm, and expected to deliver the latter to the Department of Agriculture without delay, as had been understood with the deputy minister and the chief of Experimental Farm branch. Months passed, the college heard nothing further, the project came to naught, the department causing thereby to the corporation damages to the extent of several thousand dollars. As an excuse the department now says: "We would buy willingly enough, but the Minister of Finance will not let us have the requisite amount; there are, in the Cabinet, ministers who will not hear of the purchase of this experimental station." And the experimental station at L'Assomption is closed.

I have come to the conclusion, although this was not said in plain language, that the location was wrong, that if this experimental farm had been situated in another province, it would have suited the Government better. I do not want to insist too much upon this, but when we see the experimental farm grants increased, when we are asked for more money for them, I ask myself why this curtailment in the province of Quebec, in the region which I have the honour to represent, certainly an important district, especially in the matter of tobacco growing; I ask myself why this experimental farm is done away with, which contributed to develop this industry among us to the point which it has reached to-day. Even a rented experimental station is dispensed with which was so useful to the tobacco planters, after the department having so obviously humbugged the L'Assomption College Corporation with the prospect of the purchase of their farm.

The CHAIRMAN: Before this matter goes further, I beg to draw the attention of the committee to the fact that this discussion would be absolutely in order under item No. 40, but it is not in order under item No. 14. If the committee will allow item No. 14 to carry, we can continue the discussion. Is there any objection to the passage of item No. 14?

Mr. BELAND: What is this item?

The CHAIRMAN: Item No. 40 is the item on experimental farms, about which the hon. member for L'Assomption-Montcalm (Mr. Séguin) has been speaking.

Mr. COPP: What item have we been considering?

The CHAIRMAN: Item No. 14.

Mr. FIELDING: Do you not think, Sir, under the item of salaries, the whole question of experimental farms comes up?

The CHAIRMAN: Not the question of the establishment or the failure to establish at any particular point a particular experimental farm. The general question of experimental farms would, because the general question of experimental farms is related to the number of employees required in the head office. But the establishment or closing of any one experimental farm would come very much more properly under the item by which money is provided for experimental farms.

5 p.m.

Mr. SEGUIN: (Translation.) I accept your ruling, Mr. Chairman, but if I deemed it advisable to touch upon the question of the tobacco illustration station situated at L'Assomption, it was because the hon. minister had just explained he was asking for much larger appropriations for salaries on account of the increase in the number of experimental farm officials all over the country.

The CHAIRMAN: (Translation.) That may be germane to the question, but barely so.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: The minister stated in answer to my question that no experimental farms had been closed. I pointed out that the experimental farm at L'Assomption had been closed. I was sure there were some employees there receiving salaries from the Government. We are now considering the question of salaries of employees on experimental farms as well as other employees of the Government, and it is perfectly in order to discuss the salaries of these men.

The CHAIRMAN: We are not considering the salaries of employees on experimental farms throughout the country.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Does the item not refer to salaries of all employees of the Department of Agriculture?

The CHAIRMAN: The item which we are now considering refers to salaries paid to all employees of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Sir GEORGE FOSTER: Civil Government is what we are discussing now.

Mr. FIELDING: I bow to your ruling, Sir, but may I suggest this for your reflection? I think in the English House of Commons it is not an uncommon thing to move a reduction of salaries and on that basis to discuss the whole department. I grant, however, it would be much more convenient if your ruling could be carried out.

Mr. MURPHY: Perhaps the discussion was brought about through a reference of the minister to an increase in the work of experimental farms. I am not questioning the ruling at all.

The CHAIRMAN: It was precisely on that feature that the discussion came up, and it was also for that reason that the Chairman did not interrupt the hon. member (Mr. Séguin). He merely drew the attention of the committee to the matter after the hon. member had concluded his remarks.

Mr. MURPHY: May I suggest to the minister that he go over the increases item by item and explain to the committee the increases in the work or other necessities justifying the increase in the number of employees.

Mr. TOLMIE: What item?

Mr. MURPHY: I would suggest beginning with the first item of that class, head clerks, increase three to four, principal clerks, increase four to six, and so on, each one in sequence.

Mr. TOLMIE: That was due to a change in the classification. This man is a very efficient officer, one of the best we have in the department, one who is thoroughly versed in his work and one whom I have found, in my brief time in the office as minister, a very valuable man.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I see by last year's Estimate that there were only three head clerks, now there are four. I admit this clerk may be very intelligent, but he cannot double himself.

Mr. TOLMIE: This man has been promoted, and a position beneath him filled, making four instead of three.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: The work which was done last year by three man cannot be done now by three?

Mr. TOLMIE: No, if we wish to obtain the efficiency we desire.

Mr. BELAND: Has the minister before him the names of these four head clerks with rather good-sized salaries?

Mr. TOLMIE: No, but I shall be glad to furnish them later.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: In what branch is this new head clerk?

Mr. TOLMIE: In the deputy minister's office.

Mr. JACOBS: I notice the salary of the deputy minister is fixed at $5,500. I understood that the salaries of other deputy ministers had been fixed at $6,000. Why is this deputy minister receiving $500 less than other deputies?

Mr. TOLMIE: He has a house allowance, which accounts for the difference.

Mr. JACOBS: Does that house belong to the Government?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes, it is situated on the Experimental Farm. The present deputy minister was Director of Experimental Farms, and resides there in the house he had before, and is always available for giving his valuable advice in the work of the farm.

Mr. JACOBS: Would it not be better to fix the salary at $6,000 and charge him $500 rent?

[Mr. Tolmie.]

Mr. TOLMIE: The deputy minister seems to be quite satisfied with the present arrangement, and we have found no objection so far.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I would be disposed to be very generous to the Department of Agriculture, because I do not think we have been spending enough money on that department as compared with other departments of the Government. I find by the Auditor General's Report that there has been an apparent extravagance in travelling expenses. The travelling expenses shown at page A-14 of the Auditor General's Report, referring to the headquarters' staff I presume, amount to the large sum of $55,276.70. I think the minister ought to give some explanation of that. In looking over the names, I find that in one case, at all events, the amount spent in travelling expenses exceeded the amount of the man's salary, and in other cases the travelling expenses are quite large. Why is it necessary to spend such a large sum as $55,276.70 in travelling expenses?

Mr. TOLMIE: We have recognized that travelling expenses have become a very important item, particularly on account of the increased railway fares, the great increase in hotel bills these men have to pay, the increased rates on dining cars, and for hiring cars to take them from place to place about the country, and so forth. Several of our divisional officers have necessarily to do a lot of travelling in order to carry on their work. In the Health of Animals branch, for instance, the men have to travel from place to place. In Alberta and Saskatchewan, in connection with clearing up the mange, we had a large number of men travelling over an area of 2,600 miles. We have fruit inspectors moving from one part of the country to the other, and livestock promoters out in the field working up the live stock business, encouraging breeders to co-operate in their methods of marketing their stock to the very best advantage, and so forth. Then there are the Experimental Farm superintendents and the inspectors of Illustration Stations. All these men require a large amount for travelling expenses. It has become a very large item, and we have given a great deal of consideration to it, but until there is a general fall in prices, I do not see how we can reduce travelling expenses very soon.

Mr. MORPHY: Instead of having men travelling from Ottawa to different parts of the country, would it not be possible to have men located at different points throughout the country, who at the same time would be in constant touch with the authorities at Ottawa? Why could not that be done to save travelling expenses? I would think that men on the spot would understand the conditions better.

Mr. TOLMIE: We have men on the spot now, but the "spots" are very big. For instance, a fruit inspector in British Columbia has to move about among the other inspectors who are permanently located at different points. The chief inspector goes about exercising general supervision over their work. The same is true of the Health of Animals Branch. A man might be located at Ottawa, and there might be an outbreak of hog cholera 200 miles away. There is nobody closer to that point than himself, and so he has to travel that 200 miles and back again, and pay his hotel bill while he is engaged there. We are attempting to curtail travelling expenses as much as possible, so far as is consistent with rendering efficient service to the live-stock and other agricultural interests.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough): I do not think this item of $55,276.70 covers the travelling expenses of the inspectors who are out in the field, because provision is made in different parts of the Estimates for that. I think this large item refers to the head office staff here in Ottawa.

Mr. TOLMIE: We have a number of heads of different branches located in the city of Ottawa, such as the Director of the Experimental Farms, the Veterinary Director General, the Assistant Veterinary General, the Livestock Commissioner, the Chief of the Fruit Markets Branch, and many others. We find that to keep these men up to date and thoroughly abreast of the work being carried on throughout the country, and so that the field inspectors may benefit by their better knowledge of the whole situation, it is necessary for the branch heads to visit the different parts of the country at least once during the year. We find that has a very stimulating effect on the work being carried on. The chief inspectors in the different provinces are very glad to see the man from headquarters. I speak with a good deal of feeling on that point, because I was Chief Inspector of the Health of Animals Branch and representative of the Livestock Commissioner in British Columbia for many years. One or two years might elapse without my ever seeing anybody from headquarters, and I know how a person is inclined to drift from the ordinary lines under those circumstances. We find it very beneficial to have a headquarters man going around throughout the country to keep everything working uniformly.

Mr. JACOBS: I notice that on page 89 provision is made for a Chief, Poultry Division; Chief, Sheep and Goats Division; Chief, Cattle Division; Chief, Horse Division; but no provision is made for Chief, Swine Division. Not because I am personally interested, but for the good of the country, I would like to know what has become of the swine.

Mr. TOLMIE: The swine are included with the sheep and goats.

Mr. JACOBS: When the minister comes to separate the sheep from the goats, where will he find the swine?

Mr. MAHARG: The minister has told us that the deputy minister is occupying the house he occupied as Assistant Director of the Experimental Farm. Might I ask what housing provision has been made for the present Assistant Director?

Mr. TOLMIE: The deputy minister occupies the house he occupied as Director of the Experimental Farms, not Assistant Director. The present Director occupies the house he occupied as Assistant Director.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: There is no assistant director?

Mr. TOLMIE: There is an assistant director, Dr. Shutt, of the Experimental Farm system. He resides at the Central Farm in Ottawa.

Mr. MAHARG: Does the gentleman who took the place of the present deputy minister reside on the farm at present?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes.

Mr. McCOIG: Would the officials of the department be entitled to lower transportation rates over Government roads?

Mr. TOLMIE: We used to get a rate over different lines, at one time as low as a cent a mile. Later on it was increased somewhat. That concession has been discontinued entirely now.

Mr. McCOIG: I want to direct the attention of the minister to the present expensive cost of food on dining cars. I think this matter should be brought forcibly to the attention of the Minister of Railways. Members of the House, and citizens generally who travel to any extent, will quite appreciate what the minister says in regard to the cost of meals on dining cars throughout the country. It might be possible for the Minister of Agriculture to take this matter up with the Minister of Railways. Something should be done, at any rate, because the dining car rates to-day are more exorbitant than they should be in view of the amount of food supplied the patrons of the different railways for the prices charged. The people feel strongly on this question, and I am glad that the minister has referred to it. It is one that could be dealt with very satisfactorily between the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Railways, and if something could be done to reduce the rates on dining cars, it would be highly appreciated.

Mr. EULER: What disposition is made of the products of the Experimental Farms?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are sold, and the money is turned in to the Receiver General.

Mr. ROBB: Before we leave the question raised by the hon. member for Kent (Mr. McCoig), with regard to travelling expenses of officials, now that Canada owns such an immense mileage, are instructions given to Government officials as to what roads they should travel over when going from one part of the country to another where both roads run?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes, in our department they are instructed to use, as far as possible, Government roads, Government express, and Government telegraph service.

Mr. ROBB: Are those instructions carried out?

Mr. TOLMIE: Wherever practicable, but in some parts of the country it is impossible to avoid the use of the other roads.

Mr. JACOBS: When they want to get from one place to another in time, what are they instructed to do?

Mr. DEVLIN: I certainly do not rise to encourage any extravagance at this time; I know that the country cannot afford to spend too much. But I see that a great deal is being expended in agricultural salaries one way and another, and I desire again to call the attention of the Minister of Agriculture to the fact that year in and year out, on the floor of the House, I have been asking his careful attention to the study of the agricultural condition in the northern part of the county of Wright,—I do not mean its extreme north, because it extends almost to the North Pole. The county is very large, and it afforded me much pleasure to be present last fall at an exhibition held in Maniwaki, which is about 98 miles from Ottawa. The exhibition was a great credit to the place. It brought numerous exhibitors together and demonstrated just what could be produced in the way of agricultural products as far north as anything could grow. They have put up a building there, in the construction of which I understand the Government has aided. I marvelled at the building they were able to erect for the sum of money which it actually cost. In another portion of the county, in the town of Aylwin, there is always a splendid exhibition, but, of course, it is the most populous part of the county. At that exhibition they show stock, poultry, and field products, and it has been of immense benefit it the people living in the lower end of the county. I have found that agricultural lectures serve a great purpose, and I have particularly requested an experimental station, or rather two. There could be a station at one end of the county, and another up north. It seems a lot to ask for, but it would result in incalculable good. I do not want to increase expenditures unnecessarily, for I believe in economy; but owing to the varied conditions in that county, to its altitude in certain parts, at least two experimental stations are necessary, one in the northern, and the other in the lower part of the county. I speak now for the county of Wright; not for that part of the county which, up to 1917, was included in Wright, and which is known to-day as the county of Hull.

Mr. TOLMIE: I shall be glad to look into the matter carefully. Perhaps illustration stations would be more suitable than an experimental farm, because they could be located at a small expense, and would be useful in demonstrating to the farmers of the immediate vicinity under what conditions the best results in agriculture could be obtained.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I do not want to repeat a question asked on a previous item, but will the minister please indicate in what branches there has been an increase in the number of employees? At page 90, for instance, we have head clerks, of whom there are four now as compared with three last year. The minister has given a reason for that increase. In the next item there are six instead of four, then eight instead of seven, twenty-one instead of sixteen, and so forth. Will the minister indicate in what branches there have been increases in the number of employees, and for what reasons?

Mr. TOLMIE: In the first one there is one increase, a senior clerkship. That was in the Health of Animals Branch. The Health of Animals Branch has extended a good deal during the last year on account of the development of the Accredited Herd System, and the outbreaks of hog cholera this year have also been much more numerous, making it necessary to carry on a great deal more record work than in the past. The next increase of clerks has been in the Experimental Farm system, as well as in the Health of Animals Branch system. With reference to the latter branch the same answer that I gave before to the hon. member applies.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Do I understand that it is at the Experimental Farm that the increase has occurred?

Mr. TOLMIE: In the Health of Animals Branch, and also in connection with the Experimental Farm. The two together would account for the increase. Does the hon. member require any further information?

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I want the whole list.

Mr. TOLMIE: The next item with respect to junior clerks is relative to the Health of Animals Branch. In the item dealing with senior accountant clerks the changes have been in the accountants branch of the Department of Agriculture. The item relating to senior clerk stenographer applies to the Health of Animals and Livestock Branches.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I notice there is an increase of seventeen stenographers.

Mr. TOLMIE: In the case of the clerk stenographers this applies to the Health of Animals Branch, the Livestock Branch, and the Seed Branch. The junior clerk stenographers that are referred to are in the Seed Branch, the Livestock Branch, and the Experimental Farm. The clerk typists referred to are in the Seed Branch, the Livestock Branch, and the Health of Animals Branch. The item referring to office appliance operators has to do with the Publications Branch.

Mr. CANNON: Would the minister be kind enough to inform me who is in charge of the cattle which are distributed throughout the country by the Department of Agriculture. I would like the minister to state the name of the official, his salary, and where his headquarters are located?

Mr. TOLMIE: The Live Stock Branch is under the supervision of Mr. H. S. Arkell, Livestock Commissioner, whose salary is $4,200 a year.

Mr. CANNON: Were any cattle distributed by the department last year? If so, in what localities did the distribution occur?

Mr. TOLMIE: I will give the hon. gentleman all the details. A large number of cattle have been distributed throughout the whole of Canada, because the system is a very popular one. I shall be very glad to state the places to which they have been sent but at present we are discussing an altogether different item.

Mr. CANNON: Upon whose recommendation is the distribution made?

Mr. TOLMIE: The applications are sent into the Livestock Branch by various clubs under certain conditions, and the applications are carefully looked into by the representatives of our branch. Mr. Hamer represents Mr. Arkell in this matter, and if the application made is in strict conformity with the regulation and the conditions are found to be satisfactory, a distribution is made. If such is not the case, the application is refused.

Mr. CANNON: When the animals are thus distributed are they given away by the department, or must they be returned after the expiration of a certain length of time?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are simply loaned.

Mr. CANNON: Can the minister tell me if the cattle which were distributed in my constituency in 1917 have been returned to the department?

Mr. TOLMIE: To what part of the country does the hon. member allude?

Mr. CANNON: I am very much surprised that the minister should have to inquire the name of my constituency. Since the minister has taken charge of his department he has shown great efficiency, and has also displayed great devotion to the interests of the farming class in Canada. I would advise my hon. friend to be kind enough, after the recess, to come into my constituency and then he will learn that it is one of the best farming constituencies in the province of Quebec. In that connection, and referring to the question which I just put to the minister. if my hon. friend does come to the county of Dorchester he will find there lots of cattle that belongs to his department. Those cattle were placed in my constituency by a very generous government during the election a few years ago.

Mr. BUTTS: A bad recommendation for your county.

Mr. CANNON: It is a very bad recommendation for the Government, not for my county. The minister has inquired as to the name of my constituency. Now that I have told him, and also informed him where the constituency is situated, I hope he will show towards that county the same interest he has displayed towards the rest of Canada, and especially towards his own province of British Columbia.

Mr. TOLMIE: If time permits I will be very pleased indeed to accept the kind invitation of the hon. member for Dorchester to visit his constituency next year and look into its agricultural prospects. When I make that visit I sincerely hope I shall find the hon. member at home.

Mr. CANNON: I am always there.

Mr. TOLMIE: Since last session I have made every effort to visit as many parts of the Dominion as I possibly could. I have been in Quebec on several occasions, but I have not seen half enough of that province. I hope at the first opportunity to extend my visits to those parts of the country that I failed to reach on previous occasions. As regards the distribution of these bulls and other livestock, the distributions are made absolutely free of any political considerations. I have worked in this particular line myself in British Columbia, and in every instance we considered whether the group of men or club had fully complied with the regulations, and if we found they had not they got no animals, if they had met all the regulations, we gave them the best animals we could get for the money. We have 266 bulls at the present time in the province of Quebec, distributed there by the Livestock Branch. I could not give details of their distribution at the moment, but I will be very pleased to furnish this information if my hon. friend wishes it.

Mr. CANNON: Have horses been distributed by the department?

[Mr. Cannon.]

Mr. TOLMIE: Under the old system we used to distribute horses under the same conditions as we distribute cattle, sheep, and swine, but that system has been changed.

Mr. CANNON: When was it changed?

Mr. TOLMIE: I think about three years ago.

Mr. CANNON: Were any complaints received by the department from the district of lake St. John as to the distribution of horses there by the department?

Mr. TOLMIE: Not that I know of. It was before my time.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Might I inquire what item is before the committee? I am sorry I was not in the House when these Estimates were taken up.

The CHAIRMAN: The item before the committee is No. 14 on pag 8 of the Estimates, but the explanation of that item is to be found on pages 89, 90 and 91.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Then I assume that the matter that has been under discussion is not pertinent to the item before the committee.

The CHAIRMAN: The discussion on the distribution of livestock would be more in order under item 49, where a special amount is provided for livestock.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I presume that this item applies to the inspectors of livestock throughout the country who are on the permanent staff. Are these inspectors, who I believe are graduates of the veterinary school, appointed by the Civil Service Commission?

Mr. TOLMIE: The inspectors in the Livestock branch and the Health of Animals branch are appointed by the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: This item of $541,955 is very large, and in connection with it I want to say a word or two about some of the inspectors of livestock. It is quite evident that a considerable change comes over some people when they get permanently in the service—they become very autocratic and domineering. I have in my constituency a man who considers that he has been very badly used not only by the inspectors but also by the Department of Agriculture itself. This man raises hogs. An inspector from the department examined the hogs and said they were diseased and that he would come around in a day or two and destroy the whole herd. My constituent denied that there was any disease in his herd, that on the contrary he had not lost a hog for two years, and that if any cholera existed among them surely there would be some evidence of it through the hogs dying, because the disease works very rapidly as a rule. A number of the animals were fit for market and the owner asked to have the privilege of dressing the carcases and disposing of them if the animals were going to be destroyed, The inspector gave him the privilege of dressing all he could in one day. Thirty-three of the best finished hogs were dressed and hung up for the inspector's examination. He examined the intestines and did not find any disease, and the carcases were disposed of for food. But the inspector destroyed every other animal—there were 245 in the herd—and refused to give the owner any compensation. Now, we have been passing legislation in regard to compensation, but I do not think there is anything in the statutes covering such a case as I have represented. It is true that certain authority is given to the department to make regulations, and I am informed that it is under those regulations that this action was taken. I am merely calling the attention of the minister to the very peculiar manner in which some of the inspectors in his department acted in this particular instance. All the aggrieved party asks is that a commission be appointed to investigate the matter, and he will abide by their decision. But the department will not consider the suggestion. I even had the temerity to write a letter to the Veterinary Director General, and I am told that one of these understrappers in the department made the remark, that Mr. Sutherland had better attend to his own business and they would attend to theirs. Now, if that is correct, and they are the class of men that we are voting salaries to to-day, I think we should know something more about them before we pass this item of over half a million dollars, particularly in view of the statement made by the head of the Civil Service Commission yesterday, and published in the press this morning, in which he practically dictates to the members of this House what they shall do, and imputes motives to them that no employee should be permitted to impute and remain in the service of the Government.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Mr. Chairman—

The CHAIRMAN: I think the minister should have an opportunity of replying to the question.

Mr. TOLMIE: In reply to what the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) has said, it must be borne in mind that hog cholera is not a disease which shows itself very clearly in all cases. Where the disease is very acute the animal dies within a few hours and the symptoms are clearly defined; but should the animal be suffering from chronic cholera there would be no external symtoms and to the eye of the layman the hog would be apparently healthy. So far as our Health of Animals branch is concerned, I want to say that it is the most efficient, not merely on this continent, but in the whole world. Our men are all graduates of recognized veterinary colleges and in addition have passed a stiff Civil Service examination as well as an examination under the Health of Animals branch, with a view to ensuring their qualification for the important work they have to undertake. Having myself been one of these men, I know the ups and downs of the business very well. In many cases where a man's animals have been destroyed he sees that there is a loss of money and he is very much hurt. He cannot, perhaps, trace the source of infection; he cannot understand why the animals should be sick, and in some cases it is very difficult to please him. But I am quite sure that the reports of these inspectors could be depended upon if they made a diagnosis and found hog cholera, because my deputy minister has mentioned some of their names and I find that among them are one or two of the best we have in the Health of Animals service. I shall be very glad, as long as I have the honour to preside over this department, to receive complaints from anybody regarding any of our officials who are not courteous or who do not carry out their duties in the proper way. If any such cases are brought to my attention, I promise to make very careful investigation of the circumstances. The member for South Oxford has already mentioned this particular case to me. I have sent for a report, but it has not yet come to hand; I expect it at an early day.

Mr. EDWARDS: I would like to say just a word in regard to this matter of appointment of officials. If I could not make any better appointments than some that are made by the Civil Service Commission I would consider myself absolutely incompetent to give an expression of opinion upon anything. In regard to these inspectors, I do not know how many there are in connection with the Health of Animals branch, but it would appear to me that the staff cannot be a very large one, or else they take things very leisurely. There was an outbreak of glanders in the northern part of my county last year, and on the 14th of October inspectors came out to that district, quarantined three or four farms, shot half a dozen animals or more, and gave strict instructions as to the carrying out of certain regulations, telling the farmers that they might not under any circumstances allow a horse to come on their farms until the Government lifted the quarantine. They also informed the farmers that they would be back in thirty days to make a further inspection and that they would then inform the farmers whether or not they could be freed from the quarantine regulations. The 14th of November came around, but no inspector appeared; the 14th of December passed, and still no inspector. These farmers wrote me in regard to the matter. I called up the department by telephone, and apparently it was only then that they remembered that there was a place out in the north of Frontenac which had been visited by their inspectors and in which some animals had been shot and a quarantine established. Indeed, it was only after they had been reminded of the matter several times over the telephone that they got busy and did anything; it was not until well on in January that the quarantine was lifted. What I complain of, and what these farmers complain of, is this: if there are not enough of these inspectors to attend to the business at the proper time, then more should be appointed. When these inspectors said they would return in thirty days, they should have returned in thirty days. As it was, the farmers could not prepare their ground for the next year's crop; they could not even get out their potatoes or anything of that kind, and on the whole they were left in a very bad position as regards their crop for this year. I think that was absolutely unnecessary; it would not have occurred had these inspectors cared, as I submit they should have cared, about the way in which they performed their duties. The trouble with a lot of people in the Civil Service to-day—and we have repeated instances of it—there is no use shutting our eyes to the fact—is that they feel that they are absolutely independent of this Parliament and they do not give a hang what we say or what we think. They hold their meetings; they say through the head of their commission and others the most impertinent things. They impute to members of this House motives that they have no right to impute to them, as did, according to the papers, the chairman of the commission the other day. What right has Hon. Dr. Roche, even though he was a member of this House and a member of the Government at one time—what right has he to say that because I choose to take a view in regard to this matter which differs from his view, I am actuated by a motive to hold the whip hand over people in my county? I resent any such attitude or any such words on the part of the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission. If the gentleman had not occupied a seat in this House and a seat in the Government at one time I do not think he would have felt that he could go quite as far as he has gone in expressing opinions derogatory to members of this House. With any person not so high up in the scale as the Chairman of the Civil Service Commission we would have no hesitation at all in characterizing such words as absolute impertinence, and even though he does occupy the position of Chairman of the Civil Service Commission I want to say here and now that I so regard the words which he made use of in speaking in the city of Ottawa, if he is correctly reported in the papers of yesterday and to-day.

Something is wrong in regard to this Health of Animals Branch. These men should have returned when they said they would. It seems to me that they were indifferent; that is the only way that I can look at it—they were indifferent as to what the effect would be upon these farmers in my county. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, through you to the Minister of Agriculture, as I will to the minister of any other department of this or any government while I hold a seat in this House, that no department or government in Canada will show indifference to any of the people of the county I represent and get away with it.

Mr. TOLMIE: Perhaps a word of explanation, Mr. Chairman, will throw a little light on the subject. I am very sorry indeed if the farmers of any part of Frontenac have been inconvenienced in any way owing to the fact that inspectors could not reach their premises and release them from quarantine just when they promised to. But there are extenuating circumstances, I think. For instance, in undertaking the accredited herd work throughout the whole of Canada we were astounded how popular the work was with the farmers; a great many more went into it than we had anticipated. In addition, the big work was on in Alberta in connection with the elimination of mange, and we had an extra number of hog cholera outbreaks last year, so that there was an extreme shortage of qualified veterinary inspectors. To give you an idea, Mr. Chairman, as to what changes have taken place in the veterinary profession as a result of the fall in the price of horses, let me say that there graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College last year, the largest college of the kind in Canada, only twenty-five men or thereabouts, whereas in 1891 I remember quite distinctly that 225 men graduated from that institution. The field of operations for the veterinary is not so large as it used to be. Consequently, many of our young men, with the high prices prevailing and the good opportunities offering in other lines, have not taken up veterinary work, and we have a good deal of difficulty in securing qualified veterinary surgeons to carry on the work of the health of animals branch. In this connection we are not entirely alone because, while we are, I think, one or two hundred herds behind in the way of applications, in the United States, with their accredited herd system, they are many thousands of herds behind in their applications. Their work thus shows that there is a shortage there also. I am sorry to hear that these men were inconvenienced, and I will use my best efforts to see that that sort of thing does not occur again.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Last year I succeeded in obtaining for certain farmers in my constituency certain books called "Farmers' Account Books." Some were in English, and I had to apply to the Commission of Conservation to have them translated into French. I succeeded in having that done, but I am told that now the Commission of Conservation is going to be abolished. Will the minister tell us to whom we shall now have to apply to obtain these books, which are very valuable to farmers especially in view of the fact that they have to make income tax returns like anybody else.

Mr. TOLMIE: I cannot give the hon. member exact information now, but that is a matter that will be taken up in the event of the Commission of Conservation being eliminated.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Will those books be in French?

Mr. TOLMIE: We will do what is right.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

After Recess

The House resumed at eight o'clock.

PRIVATE BILLS

SECOND READING

Bill No. 24 (from the Senate) for the relief of Frank Alexander Staunton.—Mr. Smith.

Bill No. 29, respecting The Essex Terminal Railway Company.—Mr. Kennedy (Essex).

Bill No. 30, respecting The Ottawa, Northern and Western Railway Company. —Mr. Devlin.

SUPPLY

The House again in Committtee of Supply, Mr. Boivin in the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN: When the House rose at six o'clock we were considering the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture. We had reached and quite fully discussed item No. 14 on page 8 of the Estimates, the details of which are to be found on pages 89, 90, and 91 of the Estimates for the current year. Shall item No. 14 carry?

Mr. J. E. SINCLAIR: With reference to the footnote on page 9, would the minister inform the committee what part of the salaries are carried under the War Appropriation and Demobilization votes?

Mr. TOLMIE: These contingencies are for clerical and other assistance, printing and stationery, sundries and travelling expenses. The details will be found on page 91.

Mr. COPP: My hon. friend wants to know what part of these salaries comes under War Appropriations and Demobilization.

Mr. TOLMIE: None of it.

Mr. COPP: Then what do the asterisk and footnote mean?

Mr. TOLMIE: There is still some correspondence in connection with the Food Board that is being carried on by Mr. Stephens, the principal clerk to the deputy minister. He received no extra salary for that work.

Mr. COPP: I do not think the minister yet understands my hon. friend's question. Opposite the item of salaries for the Department of Agriculture there is an asterisk, which is explained by the footnote on page 9, "These votes include salaries and contingencies carried under the War Appropriations and Demobilization votes." If that is correct a certain part of the item for salaries comes under the War Appropriations and Demobilization votes, and we want to know just how much.

Mr. TOLMIE: The only work that would come under that is the answering of correspondence in connection with the Food Board, for which no extra salary is given to the principal clerk who does that work.

Mr. COPP: Then why is this reference made to the footnote?

Mr. TOLMIE: I presume a portion of his salary is attributed to that. He spends from one to three hours a week in connection with the work of the Food Board.

Mr. COPP: How much would it be in dollars and cents?

Mr. TOLMIE: Probably from $30 to $50 a year, roughly speaking.

Mr. COPP: That comes out of this vote?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes.

Mr. MICHAUD: Is that extra salary?

Mr. TOLMIE: No.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: How much of the whole appropriation for civil government is to be expended in connection with the Dominion experimental farms?

Mr. TOLMIE: I could not give that as a total, but I could give it item by item, which would take some time.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Can the minister say what proportion will be expended in connection with experimental farms in the province of Ontario? My reason for trying to get this information is that I made quite an effort last session to get it, and I was told that the per capita expenditure for the province of Ontario was greater than that of any other province in Canada. My observations would lead me to the conclusion that the province of Ontario was doing this work itself and paying for it, as well as contributing to the expenses of the other provinces. In answer to a question I placed on the Order Paper last year as to what was the amount paid in salaries at the Central Experimental Farm under the head of Civil Government for the year 1918-19, the total given was $93,295.95. There is a very large expenditure on this farm that has evidently been charged against the province of Ontario, although it is well known that the work of the farm is not confined to Ontario, but is carried on for the benefit of the whole Dominion. The farm is the centre of the whole system in operation throughout the Dominion, and I for one must refuse to have the total expenditure for this central farm charged up against the province of Ontario, and to be told that the per capita expenditure is greater for Ontario than for any other province. I have for years strenuously objected to the manner in which Ontario was being discriminated against in the matter of experimental farms.

Mr. MICHAUD: How many experimental farms have you in Ontario?

Mr. SUTHERLAND: There is a small tobacco farm at Harrow, about 487 miles from the central farm at Ottawa. There is another farm at Kapuskasing, 542 miles to the northwest of Ottawa, in the bush in northern Ontario. So far as I know, those are all that are being carried on in the province, with the exception of the central farm, the work of which is, in my opinion, more beneficial to some of the other provinces than it is to Ontario. We were told this afternoon that even a part of the salary of the deputy minister is charged up against the expenses of this farm. The salary of the deputy minister, I understand, is more than that of others in view of certain perquisites which he has in connection with the farm. Before this item passes, I think we ought to know exactly whether the expenditure for the experimental farms, particularly under the head of Civil Government, is anything like equal throughout the Dominion. My own view is that it is not. Ontario has been continually discriminated against in this matter, although it is doing the work and payng for it besides contributing to the expenses of the other provinces.

Mr. WHITE (Victoria, Alta.): Does the hon. member think that the experiments conducted by the farm here would benefit the other provinces, particularly in the West, where climatic conditions are different, to the same extent as they would the province of Ontario? I think that these expenditures should be charged against this province. The experiments conducted at this farm would be of no particular benefit to us, because our climatic conditions are different.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: The headquarters of the whole system of farms are situated here; the officers are here all the time, and the work is beneficial to Western as well as Eastern Canada. The work on the farm here serves the adjoining province of Quebec much more than it does the province of Ontario.

Mr. WHITE: I was not speaking of Quebec but of the western provinces.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I was speaking of both Western Canada and Quebec. I was informing the hon. gentleman that this was the headquarters for the whole system, operating in Western Canada as well as in other parts of the Dominion, and he says that this ought to be charged up against Ontario because the work is of no benefit to Western Canada.

Mr. WHITE: The experiments conducted here are of no use to Western Canada. At all events, it is obvious that they are more beneficial to Ontario than to a province where conditions are different.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: The item under discussion is Civil Government expenditures; it is not a matter of experimental farms at all.

Mr. TOLMIE: About three-quarters of it would come under the head of Civil Government. The whole staff of the experimental farms comes under the head of Civil Government. I regret that we cannot give the total. I could give it item by item, but that would take a good deal of time. In connection with the Central Farm, we have appropriated $396,858.50; in connection with Kapuskasing, in northern Ontario, $35,405; and in connection with the Harrow tobacco farm, $6,231. The experiments conducted at the Central Farm are beneficial to many other provinces. A good deal of general work is done, such as experiments in connection with new plants—as, for instance, varieties of wheat, such as Marquis and Ruby wheat, different kinds of oats, and one or two varieties of barley—and while this is beneficial to Ontario, it is also useful to the whole of Canada. Take, for instance, the sunflower experiments this year. We have produced from twenty-seven to thirty-two tons of sunflower to the acre, and put it into the silo at $2.70 per ton. That is something of the greatest benefit to the people of the whole country; it is useful to farmers all over the country who are interested in these special lines of experiment. It must be remembered, however, that the mere fact that the farm is located here is of immense benefit to the province of Ontario, because it is easily accessible to the farmers of that province who can take the train, or in summer, come down in their motor cars and see the work being done, thus benefiting directly.

Mr. MAHARG: What are the qualifications and responsibilities of those designated head clerks?

Mr. TOLMIE: These are men who assume a certain amount of responsible work in their various departments. They carry on important correspondence and also investigation, to some extent, and they usually have three or four clerks under them. In a limited way they are supervisors.

Mr. MAHARG: I asked what their qualifications were.

Mr. TOLMIE: They have to pass a Civil Service examination, and a good many of them are university men.

Mr. MAHARG: I asked this question because I see that the salaries paid run up to $3,200. On page 89 the salary of the superintendent of the farm is, however, only $2,340. Does the minister think that these salaries bear any proper relation to the qualifications and the responsibilities of the respective officers?

Mr. TOLMIE: What particular officer does the hon. gentleman refer to?

Mr. MAHARG: I was saying that the salary of the superintendent of the farm is only $2,340, whereas the salaries of the head clerks go as high as $3,200. What relation is there between those salaries and the responsibilities of the men engaged in the different classes mentioned?

Mr. TOLMIE: The superintendent of the farm is, of course, immediately under the director. The clerk the hon. member speaks of is a man who, as I say, assumes a certain amount of the responsibilities of the office. It is very difficult to state exactly whether one is more valuable than the other. If that farm superintendent were left to his own resources I should imagine his responsibilities would be very much greater; but I think we all now realize pretty well that these matters are fixed by the Civil Service Commission. There are, perhaps, a good many things done of which we do not approve but we cannot help it.

Mr. MAHARG: We have had considerable discussion about the Civil Service Commission, and the only way in which we can determine the value of the work that it is doing is by making inquiries of this kind. Personally I cannot see any relation between the qualifications required from, and the responsibilities incurred by, a man who has charge of an experimental farm and a clerk in an office. It seems to me that the salaries paid in this case are not relatively proportionate to the responsibilities incurred.

Mr. TOLMIE: I may say that the salary of the superintendent of the farm will finally go up to $3,000. He also has a free house, which is heated for him, and that is an added advantage.

Mr. DUFF: I notice there is a gentleman who separates the sheep from the goats. He is paid $3,000, whilst the superintendent of the farm only receives $2,300. Why is there that much difference?

Mr. TOLMIE: These salaries are all fixed by the Civil Service Commission. The man who "separates the sheep from the goats," to quote my hon. friend's words, does work throughout the Dominion. He has to be familiar with local conditions in various parts of the country, and a great deal more general knowledge is demanded of him than of another man who may be an expert in a particular department.

Mr. DUFF: Has he been successful in separating the sheep from the goats?

Mr. TOLMIE: I have not heard of any quarrels among them yet.

Mr. GOULD: I would like to know the reason for the increase of $8,000 in the Entomological branch? My reason for asking the question is that for years in the West grain growers have been suffering from certain insect pests. One is the sawfly which attacks our wheat; in fact the ravages of this pest have reached such a stage that some growers have about decided to forego the growing of Marquis wheat in my area. The ravages of the sawfly are largely responsible for this determination among the farmers. Then the grasshopper pest has worked havoc for the past three years in a large area out there. I was wondering whether this $8,000 additional was to be applied to the solution of the problem of combatting evils such as those I have alluded to. I believe that in certain parts of my constituency no less a sum than $10,000,000 has been lost in the last three years owing to the depredations of these insects; and we have been very much interested in learning whether the Dominion and provincial governments would not endeavour to provide some remedy that would successfully combat the attacks of insect pests. I would like to have an expression of opinion on the subject from the minister.

Mr. TOLMIE: The crusade against grasshoppers in Western Canada is carried on under the provisions of the Destructive Insect Pests Act, and the vote for that purpose will be found in the Estimates. I may say that we have been in the past few years co-operating with the provincial departments of agriculture in the carrying out of measures for the eradication of these pests, and I think that last year very satisfactory work was done. We have a number of experts who devote their whole time to that work out in the West. We have one in particular who accompanies a moving demonstration train throughout the western country giving lectures, and affording other information, in connection with the measures for dealing with these pests. Last summer, with the co-operation of our men the provincial governments were able to substitute sawdust, and other things, for bran in connection with the poisoning of grasshoppers. They also conducted experiments with poison gas and found that putting poison in bran and other materials was far more satisfactory than the use of gas promised to be. We are still continuing that work. I would like to extend the scope of the work of the department a good deal because I think there are a good many opportunities to do so, but of course we cannot carry out all our wishes having in view the financial situation in Canada. We therefore have to work with the brakes on, so to speak, in connection with this matter.

Mr. CRERAR: I notice, Mr. Chairman, a considerable increase in the number of the employees under the item we are considering. Under the vote for Civil Government in connection with the Department of Agriculture, 318 employees were last year provided for. This year the Minister is seeking to make provision for 359, an increase of 41. Now I quite recognize the very great importance of the Department of Agriculture to the welfare of the Dominion; but at the same time consideration should be given to the financial position of the country and the fact recognized that it is time to exercise economy. We should therefore keep our expenditures, if possible, within the limits of what they were last year. I was just wondering if it would not be possible for my good friend who presides over the Department of Agriculture to get along with the same number of employees that he had a year ago, and thus reduce the expenditure under this particular heading by anywhere from fifty to sixty thousand dollars.

Mr. TOLMIE: I fully realize the financial condition of the country, and on any occasion when I find myself inclined to be a little neglectful of the fact in my enthusiasm for further expansion, I am promptly reminded of it by my colleague the Minister of Finance. With respect to the particular items to which the hon. member has referred, I may say that I explained them all in detail shortly before six o'clock. If my hon. friend reads to-morrow's Hansard he will there find all the details of our work as it is carried on throughout the country. We have been as economical as possible, but we feel that these increases are absolutely necessary if we are going to maintain the progress of agriculture in Canada.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I would like to say a word or two before we get away from the subject of the experimental farms. Some hon. gentleman opposite drew the minister's attention away from this particular matter, but I would like to institute a comparison between the two old Provinces of Ontario and Quebec where the conditions are very similar. At one time the Central Experimental farm served both these provinces, and there was no other Government experimental farm in existence, At the present time, however, I notice that in the province of Quebec there are five central farms and fourteen sub-stations. Four of these farms are very much closer to the Central Farm than are the two farms located in the province of Ontario. I have noticed the expenditure for labour on these farms and I presume that the votes for a good many of these men come under the head of civil government, for the men are permanent and are employed from year to year. I also notice that for the two farms in Ontario the expenditure was $17,521, whereas the expenditure for the same purpose in the province of Quebec was $65,869. This does not include the $93,000 paid out in connection with the administration of the Central Farm at Ottawa some of which I presume will be charged up against the province of Ontario. There is a large item in the Estimates for travelling expenses incurred by officers employed on this farm. I am not finding fault with the number of the men, or the work they are doing but I have contended in the past—and I still contend—that Ontario is being very unfairly dealt with in this regard. We contribute about one-half of the revenue of this country, and we are either paying for or doing ourselves the work that the other provinces are having done for them by the Dominion. If the Government is going to continue in that course we should, I think, consider whether it would not be better to hand this work over to the different provinces and let them conduct their own affairs. Then we should have an equitable distribution in connection with this matter.

Mr. TOLMIE: I may explain that none of these farms were located in the province of Quebec during my term of office, and the moneys to which the hon. gentleman refers as moneys paid out for the carrying on of the various farms do not come under the civil government vote and consequently not under the item which we are discussing at the present time.

Mr. GLASS: I would like to ask the minister if the department is taking steps to rebuild the experimental flax mill which was destroyed by fire some time ago. So far as I can see there is no item in the Estimates providing for a continuance of that experimental work. I would like to know what the attitude of the department is towards this industry.

Mr. TOLMIE: We are having plans prepared for a new flax mill to replace the mill that was destroyed. We have a certain amount of money in these Estimates which might be used towards re-building, and if it is decided to go ahead with the new mill we may have to get more money in the Supplementary Estimates to complete the work. I fully realize the importance of the flax industry and its possibilities, and I can assure the hon. member that I shall be very glad to render every asistance possible to its development.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Do I understand that the item under discussion does not cover the branch experimental farms at Kapuskasing, Harrow, Cap Rouge, Lennoxville, Ste. Anne, and Farnham?

Mr. TOLMIE: No.

Mr. MAHARG: While on the question of salaries, I think it has been recognized for years that officials in the Department of Agriculture are very much underpaid in comparison with officials in other departments. I am not going into the question to-night, but I want to make one comparison. I notice that in some of the other departments a filing clerk receives a higher salary than professors in the different branches of the Department of Agriculture, such as assistant chemists, field husbandry men, and other technical men who have to spend years to qualify for their positions. I think there must be something radically wrong when a filing clerk is paid $100 more a year than the men I have described, and I would draw the minister's attention to the situation. I shall be willing to give him my support in any efforts he may make to place the salaries of these technical men on as attractive a basis as that obtaining in the other departments of the Government service. Perhaps the minister would like to voice his opinion on that point?

Mr. TOLMIE: I think good men are always worthy of their hire, and undoubtedly we have in the Department of Agriculture many men who are rendering very valuable service to this country—service which could never be put in dollars and cents. Dr. Saunders, who created Marquis wheat, made a very valuable contribution to the country at a time when an improvement in our wheat was very badly needed, and I am sorry that there is no way of recognizing his ability. I think that, generally speaking, the hon. gentleman is correct and that the merit of our technical men in the Department of Agriculture has not been recognized as fully as it has been in other departments of the Government. So far as I am concerned, I shall always be glad to do all I can to the end that these men may be paid as liberally as possible. We must make their positions attractive if we expect to retain good men. By underpaying them we are simply making the department a training school for the benefit of other governments; we find our best men are taken by the provincial governments and by the government of the United States after we have trained them for three or four years.

Mr. MICHAUD: Is every man employed at the experimental farms classified under the Civil Service Commission?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are all classified except the labourers.

Mr. MYERS: Is it the intention of the Department of Agriculture to expend any money during 1921 in experimenting on the treatment of flax fibre in the West.

[Mr. Maharg.]

Mr. TOLMIE: It is the intention of the department to expend money on the experimental farms in the Prairie Provinces in connection with the development of the flax industry.

Mr. PARENT: What are the average hours that men employed on the experimental farms are expected to work?

Mr. TOLMIE: The average is about nine hours in winter and ten in summer.

Mr. PARENT: I am informed that men employed on the experimental farms are sometimes obliged to work from twelve to fourteen hours per day without extra remuneration. I would like to know the policy of the Government in respect to these men.

Mr. TOLMIE: Men like herdsmen and teamsters and others engaged in various lines of work where it is necessary for them to give attention to animals after their regular working hours are paid salaries, and they work on an average about eleven hours a day, but those are exceptions.

Mr. PARENT: I think the minister ought to be in a position to give this committee his definite views so far as the employees of the experimental farms are concerned in regard to how much they are paid for a ten-hour day, and how much they are entitled to if they work extra hours.

Mr. TOLMIE: Day labourers work by the day and in Eastern Canada are paid about thirty to thirty-five cents an hour. If they work overtime they are paid at the same rate. In Western Canada they are paid from forty to forty-one cents an hour.

Mr. PARENT: What is the policy of the Government in regard to these men, and how much are they paid when they work extra hours? I do not refer particularly to those engaged on the experimental farms in the province of Quebec, I am referring to those engaged on all the Government farms.

Mr. TOLMIE: The rates as I have stated them; they are not the same all over the country. If the men work an extra hour they are paid at the same rate.

Mr. CANNON: I notice that in this item a special sum is allotted to the library. Where is that library, what books are in it, and to whom are the books distributed?

Mr. TOLMIE: The library is located in the West Block. It contains a large number of books dealing with agriculture. Books and publications are also kept there which are received in connection with the International Bureau of Agriculture, with headquarters in Rome, to the meetings of which we send a delegate every year. We secure from that source very valuable information concerning crop production all over the world, the production of animals, and so on, and we are able to keep in close touch with market conditions and, in general, prospects for the future in agriculture. Improved methods in agriculture are also noted and those that we think suitable to our needs and conditions are tried out on our experimental farms.

Mr. CANNON: I am well satisfied with the answer given by the minister. Are these books published in both languages?

Mr. TOLMIE: Some of them are. Some, too, are published in more than two languages.

Mr. CANNON: Are the books distributed throughout the country, and if so, to whom?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are for the use of the Agriculture Department. Of course, any reliable person can communicate with the department and take out one of these books for a time and subsequently return it.

Mr. McMASTER: I notice a strange anomaly on page 90: "1 translator, $1,500; 1 junior translator, $1,550." Apparently it is best to be a junior if you are in the translating business.

Mr. TOLMIE: That is fixed by the Civil Service Commission. It can be explained by length of service in the department.

Mr. McMASTER: To try to palm this off on the Civil Service Commission does not seem to be satisfactory. "Junior translator" connotes, to my mind, the idea that he is junior in the service to the translator, yet he gets $50 more. There must be some explanation of this, or some mistake has been made which should be corrected.

Mr. TOLMIE: There are a great many anomalies in the Civil Service re-classification. Under the old classification this junior translator was entitled to run up to $1,560. According to the ruling of the commission, employees could not be paid less than they were receiving before. This translator has come in under the new classification.

Mr. VIEN: What is the name of the translator and what is the name of the junior translator?

Mr. TOLMIE: I regret I cannot give the names just now, but I shall be glad to get them for the hon. gentleman.

Mr. VIEN: How long have they been in the service and what are the reasons given by the Civil Service Commission for the salaries assigned to each?

Mr. TOLMIE: The junior translator has been in the service about six years, and the translator about two years. I cannot personally account for any action of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. VIEN: Is the minister positive that the Civil Service Commission is accountable for the fixing of this salary?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes, as far as my information goes.

Mr. VIEN: But we want to know whether or not the minister is prepared to state definitely that the Civil Service Commission is responsible for fixing the salary of this translator at $1,500 and of the junior translator at $1,550.

Mr. TOLMIE: The Act is responsible for the $1,550, and the Civil Service Commission is responsible for the other one.

Mr. CANNON: I note that there is provision for two junior zoologists at $1,295. I do not see any senior zoologist in the list. Why should there be two juniors and no senior?

Mr. TOLMIE: There are no senior zoologists, and these two employees do not work in the same office. Both are women.

Mr. PARENT: Will the minister inform me whether the men employed at the experimental farms are entitled to a holiday of fifteen days or so each year without reduction of salary, even if they are absent one or more working days throughout the year?

Mr. TOLMIE: Those who work by the hour lose their time if they remain off. Those who work on salary are entitled to the usual holiday period. If a man misses a day through sickness or something of that kind, it is not deducted from his holiday.

Mr. PARENT: Do I understand then, that if a man employed at the experimental farms is absent, say, ten days, and later, at different times, absent another five days, he will still get his fifteen days' holiday without suffering any reduction of salary?

Mr. TOLMIE: In all those cases he must get permission from the Civil Service Commission before he is permitted to take those days.

Mr. PARENT: Not at all. The minister is not serious there.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not know whether we should blame the minister for the further anomalies I purpose setting forth before the committee, or whether the Civil Service Commission is to blame but I would draw this to the attention of the minister, as it seems to constitute a grave injustice. A senior file clerk gets $1,525; one file clerk gets $1,600, or more than the senior; a junior file clerk gets $1,250, and junior file clerks are paid more than a great number of stenographers. I should imagine that the work of a filing clerk was purely mechanical, requiring only carefulness and industry, while to be a good typist one has to have a very substantial degree of education. Perhaps the minister is not to blame for this, but certainly it does not reflect great credit on whoever is responsible for drawing up these grades in the service.

Mr. TOLMIE The same explanation that I gave a short time ago under the same conditions apply to that.

Mr. McMASTER: That is that the Civil Service Commission is responsible, but that is really no explanation to the committee for these very startling anomalies. The higher grades of service are being paid on a lower scale of remuneration than the lower grades. That is not fair.

Mr. PARENT: I should not like the minister to go on record as saying that employees on experimental farms are entitled to a holiday whenever the Civil Service Commission declares them to be entitled to one. I do not think the minister meant what he said a minute ago, and I should like him to give an answer again so that the committee will know exactly his position in the matter.

Mr. TOLMIE: What I said is that they should get the authority of the Civil Service Commission before they could get a holiday. Those working by the hour are not entitled to holidays with pay; they lose their pay if they take a holiday. Those on salary are entitled to the regulation holidays given to any other members of the Civil Service.

Mr. PARENT: That is not the point I am aiming at. I should like the minister to state whether, if a man happens to take only five days at one time and then takes one day after another, he is entitled to fifteen days altogether without having his salary reduced.

Mr. TOLMIE: As I understand the matter from the Civil Service Commission, it is not necessary for him to ask for the whole fifteen days if he wants five days, he can get them. If he is sick, he can get sick leave. The hon. member will find the provision in the regulations of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. COPP: The minister, in giving or attempting to give explanations regarding the items of the Estimate we have before us, has exposed the weakness of the Civil Service Commission. He blames, and, I think, rightly so, all these anomalies that the hon. member for Brome (Mr. McMaster) speaks of, on the Civil Service Commission but in spite of the time spent by Arthur Young and Company, Griffenhagen and Company and the Civil Service Commission, there is still in the department of the minister, one poor unfortunate who has failed to be classified at all. Surely the minister will be able to tell us something about this person, what he does and what his salary is.

Mr. TOLMIE: What item is the hon. gentleman referring to?

Mr. COPP: The last item on page 91 a civil servant not classified at all, with a salary of $1,600. What does he do?

Mr. TOLMIE: I can get that information for the hon. gentleman in a few minutes.

Mr. PARENT: With a view to pointing out to the minister that I am not talking simply for the purpose of embarrassing him, because I do not believe I could, I will give him a concrete case which is reported to me and which is a justification for my interfering at this particular point of the discussion on the Estimates. I am told that at some experimental farms, employees are working ten hours and sometimes twelve or more hours a day, and they deserve a good deal of credit for the time they spend on these farms in the interest of the people at large. When the time comes to take a holiday and they ask permission from the superintendent of their farm, he will say to them: "You may have this day, but it will be deducted from your salary." Therefore, these people complain that they have no opportunity to have a holiday outside of the ordinary holidays of fifteen days in the year. While some of them may take their fifteen days at one time; others would rather take ten days and then keep five or six days during the year for other purposes, taking a holiday whenever they want it. If it happens that they do not take their fifteen days at one time, but keep a few days for their own pleasure or purpose afterwards, when they take such a day, a day's pay is deducted from their salary. Whatever there is in the complaint, all I can say is that I have received it, and these people say that a strong injustice is being done to them by their salaries being reduced for a day's holiday although they spend so many hours working for the country. That is why I am asking the minister to state whether, if a man is entitled to fifteen days' holiday in the year, if he takes these fifteen days at one time or a day now and then, he is entitled to full pay and not to have his salary reduced because he takes a day or two now and then.

9 p.m.

Mr. TOLMIE: As I pointed out before, there is no objection to these men obtaining their holidays from time to time as may suit their convenience, but on every occasion, they must receive authority for doing so. If they use up their fifteen days in that way, their pay is not reduced.

Mr. PARENT: That is just the point I wanted the minister to come to. There is, for instance, employed on an experimental farm at Charlottetown, a man who has a brother dying, for instance, in Quebec, and he has to leave at once. According to the view that the department is taking now, this man has to write to Ottawa in order to receive authority for one or two days' holiday. That is what happens, that has happened, and the minister should see that a situation like that is not tolerated any longer.

Mr. TOLMIE: That is not exactly the case. In an emergency of that kind, he has no trouble. He does not even have as much trouble as other people have under similar circumstances. He gets permission from the superintendent and is allowed to go at once.

Mr. EULER: In the various classifications of stenographers, clerks and so on, are men and women doing the same class of work?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes.

Mr. EULER: Is any distinction made as regards salaries?

Mr. TOLMIE: No distinction for similar positions.

Mr. CANNON: Referring to translators, I notice that the senior translator of the department secured this year an increase of $120. The translator is not classified as either senior or junior, but is simply put down as translator. He gets an increase of $60, while the junior translator gets an increase of $100. I should like to ask the minister, who fixes the amounts of these various increases, and what is the reason for making these distinctions between people who are apparently doing the same class of work. Why should the junior translator get a bigger increase than the translator?

Mr. TOLMIE: The junior translator is under the old classification and his salary is practically fixed by the Act. It could not be reduced to a lesser amount than he was receiving, and it goes on increasing at the old rate. The increases under the new classification, under which the others come, are fixed by the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. CANNON: Am I to understand the minister to mean that the Civil Service Commission has the right to fix the wages that shall be received by the civil servants in the employ of the Government, without the head of the department having anything to say about the matter?

Mr. TOLMIE: The salaries and the increases are fixed by the classification.

Mr. CANNON: Does the minister refer to the classification that was made by those American experts imported into Canada, or to some other classification?

Mr. TOLMIE: The classification brought into force about a year ago.

Mr. CANNON: By whom?

Mr. TOLMIE: By the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. CANNON: Last week the Minister of Trade and Commerce explained during a debate in this House that experts brought into the country by the Government, and who were absolute strangers to the Civil Service had made certain changes in the classification of the civil servants. Am I to understand that the changes which appear in the item I refer to were made by the experts or by the Civil Service Commission itself?

Mr. TOLMIE: I understand that these salaries were fixed at the time the classification was made, but what part the American experts played in the classification I could not say off-hand.

Mr. CANNON: What I want to know is who made the classification? The Civil Service Commission, the minister, or the outside experts?

Mr. TOLMIE: It was certainly not the minister, but the Civil Service Commission. Whether they had the assistance of these imported experts or not, I could not say.

Mr. CANNON: The minister states he is not responsible for the classification of these employees?

Mr. TOLMIE: The minister had nothing to do with the fixing of these salaries.

Mr. CANNON: But before the classification was made was not the minister consulted by the Civil Service Commission or by the experts, because, after all, the people who can give proper information in regard to the employees of a department are the head, the deputy head, and the branch heads? Were they consulted, and if so, did they make reports written or verbal?

Mr. TOLMIE: The classifiers had a staff of experts of their own, and also consulted the deputy head before the classification was approved.

Mr. CANNON: Am I to understand that the deputy head of the Department of Agriculture is responsible for the classification of these particular employees. If so, I would like the minister, who is the head of the deputy head, to tell us the reasons for these varying increases.

Mr. TOLMIE: The evidence of the deputy minister was taken by the commission, who came to their own decision.

Mr. CANNON: I should like to know from the minister, now that his deputy is here and can give him the required information, why the junior translator is getting a bigger increase than the translator himself?

Mr. TOLMIE: Although the evidence of the deputy minister was taken, the final decision was in the hands of the Civil Service Commission. Therefore, I do not hold the deputy minister responsible for these increases that appear here. As I have explained before, there is the old classification and the new. This particular class of junior translator begins at a salary of $1,200 under the old system, with annual increases of about $50 a year up to about $1,600. Under the new classification the minimum salary of translator is fixed at $1,440 with annual increases of $60 up to the maximum.

Mr. PARENT: May I ask if the superintendents of the various experimental farms in this country are competent men?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are, so far as I know.

Mr. PARENT: Then if they are, I should like to know why, when a man on one of these farms wants a holiday, he has to apply to Ottawa instead of to the superintendent of his particular farm?

Mr. TOLMIE: In case of an emergency, a holiday is given by the superintendent of the farm, and authority afterwards obtained from the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. PARENT: That just brings me back again to the same question.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I notice that these farm labourers receive a bonus of $420 in addition to their regular salary. About a year ago we obtained the information that the expenditure under the head of civil government for the experimental farm at Ottawa was $93,295.95, and that the wages paid to the farm labourers amounted to $163,831.87. I do not think the hon. gentleman (Mr. Parent) need worry himself so much about the holidays of these men on this little farm out here. They are having a pretty fair time considering the number employed and the wages paid them. Over a quarter of a million dollars is being paid in salaries out here on this farm on the outskirts of the city, and I think the amount is altogether too great considering the results from the farm. I believe that the sooner a radical reform is instituted in connection with the experimental farm system in this country, the better it will be for Canada. I think that an example should be set those who are engaged in agriculture in this country, instead of having a great show place for the whole country when they come to Ottawa. The work carried on at the farm is largely lost to the average farmer. and a quarter of a million dollars, under present conditions, is altogether too much to spend in connection with a farm of this kind. I do not think, furthermore, that these expenditures should be charged up against the province of Ontario, which, we are told, is being benefited thereby. I do not see what ground there is for telling us that we ought to be satisfied, when we have to do the experimental work ourselves on our own farms and pay for it.

Mr. DAVIS (Neepawa): I see there is an increase in the number of messengers from eleven to thirteen. What are the duties of these messengers?

Mr. PARENT: They carry fresh eggs.

Mr. TOLMIE: I shall answer first the statement of the hon. member for South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland). It is true that a great deal of money is expended on the Central Experimental Farm, but it carries on work of great benefit to the whole country. I think that in that Central Farm we have one of the best establishments that can be found anywhere. Only last summer, a prominent and well known agriculturist of Great Britain visited Ottawa, and, with a letter of introduction from me to the Director of Farms, he went to the Experimental Farm and looked over our livestock and the work that was being done. On his return he stated that, so far as he was aware, there was no establishment of this kind anywhere in the world, and certainly not in Great Britain. The farmers here, he said, had a tremendous advantage in having experimental work carried on for them, in having new lines produced, new cereals, new fruits, new vegetables and roots, such as he saw out on the farm, and so forth. All this information, after it is gathered together, the farmers have absolutely free of charge, and we have in Canada a tremendous opportunity for the development of agriculture. There are very many new areas in certain provinces where land and climatic conditions vary to a great extent. A settler may come from England or, say, the state of Alabama, and if he landed in those parts of the country and had no information, it would take him four or five years at least of valuable time getting established and studying the conditions prevaling there. All this time would be lost before he finally could get to work. With our experimental farm system he is able, at the outset, to obtain all the information necessary to take up the line of agriculture most suited to that particular section of the country. In addition to that, he can obtain information as to the best varieties of seed to sow, how and when to sow it, etc. He can find out the best varieties of livestock to keep and the best method of marketing his products. I consider this a very great advantage. Only last summer we had a horticulturist from Oregon who came to Okanagan Valley in British Columbia and visited the station at Summerland. After examining the methods carried on there in connection with dry farming and irrigation, he stated that he was well acquainted with all the various farms in the United States, and that in future he would come to Summerland for his information because the work carried on there was better and more reliable than that of any other farm he knew of on the continent of America. Now, take this particular farm which the hon. member for South Oxford referred to. I may say that we have no fewer than thirteen branches there of various lines of work, from experiments in connection with horse breeding down to the breeding of bees and the production of honey. To give one example of the splendid work done on our farms; I may say that the average Canadian hen is responsible for only 65 eggs a year. Out on the farm at Sidney in British Columbia last year, the hens produced, by careful breeding and selection, no fewer than 300 eggs a piece. If we had failed to take advantage of the opportunities that presented themselves in this matter we should never have got anywhere, and our agriculture in this, as in other lines, would drag along in a listless sort of way. You may take a horse to the water, but you cannot make him drink, and if the farmers of this country have not life enough to take advantage of the opportunities that offer, and to secure all the information they can from our farms, then it is their own fault. I am sure there is no intelligent farmer who can go to the Central Farm, look over the livestock and see the methods of agriculture that are practised there without gaining considerable important information, whether he farms on Vancouver Island or on Prince Edward Island.

Mr. VIEN: How many experimental farms are there in Canada?

Mr. TOLMIE: There are twenty-one regular farms, two tobacco stations, seventy-five illustration stations, and six or seven sub-stations.

Mr. PARENT: What kind of hens—

The CHAIRMAN: Order.

Mr. TOLMIE: I might mention the methods practised in connection with grain and vegetable plots. These plots are only about one-fortieth of an acre in extent, so small that you cannot use machinery to advantage on them. A new variety of grain may be secured from some other place and an experiment is made to find out whether it would be useful in this country. In addition to that particular plot there would be a number of other check plots planted at the same time, and this goes on from year to year. It is obvious, therefore, that a great deal of work is involved in keeping the place in proper condition, and information is not released until such time as the director of the farm is absolutely certain that what he has to impart is perfectly reliable and that anyone may make use of the information he gives, no matter whether he is in British Columbia or in Nova Scotia. This makes necessary considerable very fine work; it entails a great deal of hand labour, and naturally it means a lot of expense. After the experiments have been carried out the results are applied under field conditions, and the information obtained in consequence is published so that anyone may secure it for the asking, either through the mails, or directly from the farm. I feel sure that these farms are rendering a very valuable service, and a great many men derive considerable benefit from them. Of course, one cannot expect any profits from experimental work of this kind, requiring such minute care and attention, although many of the sections, such as our livestock and dairying sections, and the hog, sheep, and poultry sections, frequently yield a profit.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I do not want the minister to misunderstand me. I am not condemning the experimental farm system. I have always upheld that system, and have been a strong advocate of its extension, but when I refer to the Central Farm in Ottawa I have in mind the fact that you can go westward in Ontario and not find another Dominion experimental farm except a small tobacco farm in Western Ontario for the growing of tobacco. Even the operations of that are confined to a part of two counties and consequently its influence does not extend very far. Just a word or two with regard to those people in western Ontario who are so dense that they cannot follow the example that has been set them here in Ottawa and elsewhere by the experimental farm system because they have not had the advantage of visiting the farm, unless they happened to come to this city, although there is a big stretch of the province of Ontario between its western limits and the city of Ottawa that separates the two and consequently conditions are not very similar. I might, for example, refer to the factory output of dairy products in a certain little spot of western Ontario—the county of Oxford—and to the fact that it equaled for the year 1917, which is the last that I have, the factory output of the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, British Columbia, and almost that of Prince Edward Island. So that as far as the farmers of that part of Canada are concerned, they have evidently been keeping pretty well abreast of the times bearing in mind the result of their labours. What I have objected to is that the experimental farm system is not brought home to the people, and that they do not have an opportunity of reaping the advantage they should derive from the money that has been expended here. I do not say that Ontario has been neglected. As I pointed out, and have repeatedly pointed out, we are doing the things that the Dominion ought to do for us, seeing they are doing those very things for the rest of the provinces. That is the exception I take to this enormous expenditure of over a quarter million of dollars on the farm at Ottawa which plays but a very small part in farming operations so far as the province of Ontario is concerned.

Mr. GLASS: I cannot altogether agree with my hon. friend from South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) in his criticism that there has been extravagant expenditure on the farm adjacent to this city. I think the time has passed when it is necessary for any member of this House to defend the expenditures of the Federal Government on agriculture. If I had any criticism to offer, it would be that in my humble opinion the Government have not yet risen to the height which the country should demand of them—and that applies not only to the present Administration, but to Governments that have preceded them. There has always been an insistance upon the curtailment of expenditures when it came to agriculture. I was glad to hear the minister's remarks and his defence of the experimental farm. In his speech he touched on the question of poultry, and having some knowledge of that industry, as well as some interest in it, I recently made a little study of its development in this country. I was influenced to do so more particularly by reason of the fact that last week I was booked to address a gathering of four or five hundred poultry men in the city of London. In connection with the inquiries I made I was informed that the production of eggs in this country last year amounted to 2,244,000,000. Dividing this number into dozens we have 187,000,00 dozens of eggs; and then dividing that number into cases of 30 dozen each it yields a total of 6,233,333 cases, or 15,555 carloads. But, Sir, I find that statistics show that the production of poultry in this country for the year 1920 amounted in value to the enormous sum of $120,000,000. The development of the poultry industry in Canada, and its expansion during the past few years, has been largely due to the splendid work of the experimental farm, and here I give credit to my hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. Crerar) for the legislation that was introduced a year or two ago, whereby the standardization of eggs was brought about, as being a matter of immense value to the poultry industry. I was speaking to the official in charge of the farm here upon the egg production in Canada, and the effect that the standardization of eggs had on our foreign markets. He told me that in the British market the Canadian egg standardized commanded a price of from eight pence to one shilling a dozen more than American eggs from the South. I asked him how the production of eggs in the United States and in the warmer climates compared with production in the colder climate of Canada. He replied that our production was not only better but that the quality of the egg was very much superior. The earliest census of poultry taken in this country goes away back to the year 1695 when in old Acadia there was a total of only 362, but in 1891 we had 12,696,701 in this country. According to the census returns in 1901 the number had increased to 16,651,337; in 1911 it was 29,773,457; and in 1920 the estimated figures of the poultry of the country were 45,000,000 head.

Now we find that this country last year imported a large number of eggs, the total importation amounting to 6,515,928 dozen, having a value of $3,051,833. It would seem to be a most regrettable thing that a country of such enormous resources as ours should have to import eggs for its own consumption. But it must be borne is mind that in 1920 we exported 6,324,838 dozen, having a value of $4,198,430. Our import of eggs showed an average cost of 46.8 cents per dozen, while the export of eggs from this country, by reason of the standardization of our eggs and by reason of their superior quality, obtained for our exporters an average price of 66.3 cents. So that we export our eggs on the basis of 66.3 cents and import them on the vasis of 46.8 cents.

The work done on this experimental farm in Ottawa is not measured by what is produced there, we all know that, and I just simply illustrate the poultry division as only one item amongst many in which the advice given by the management of the experimental farm has been of enormous potential value to this country—a value that it is almost impossible to conceive. I say, success to the experimental farm at Ottawa! I agree with my hon. friend from South Oxford (Mr. Sutherland) that it is desirable to establish demonstration farms in practically every township if possible, but that work comes largely under the purview of the Provincial Governments, and their work, assisted by the Federal Department of Agriculture, has resulted in very great benefits to our farmers. I trust that this department will not in any way relax their efforts. My hon. friend from Marquette (Mr. Crerar), I notice, is somewhat critical of the expenditure and would economize by reducing the staff; but our expenditure here is nothing at all in proportion to the expenditure on agriculture in the United States, and if we are to develop this great country to its fullest possibilities in agriculture it is obvious that there should be no curtailment so long as the money is wisely used in the development of our experimental farm system.

Mr. VIEN: I cannot agree with the previous speaker when he says that model farms in various sections of the country—

Mr. GLASS: I said demonstration farms.

Mr. VIEN: —that demonstration farms should be left entirely to the Provincial Governments. I sympathize with what the hon. member for South Oxford has urged, that we should spend less on these experimental farms and more on demonstration farms all over the country. Why? The minister has just given the reason. On these experimental farms experiments of a very expensive character are conducted, so expensive that the ordinary farmer could not undertake them on his own farm. If

I read correctly the Auditor General's Report, we spent last year $375,000 on the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. In my opinion this item could have been reduced by over $100,000, and still experiments on the scale I have described could have been carried on to whatever degree necessary for the purpose of enlightening our farmers. If instead of spending that $375,000 on the Central Experimental Farm the Government had devoted $100,000 or $200,000 in demonstrating in various sections of the country better methods of agriculture and in encouraging farmers by instruction and premium to grow better crops and raise better stock to suit local conditions, greater benefit would have resulted to the country generally; and even had the expenditure been greater than the amount in question it would have been thoroughly justified, because no matter how well the experimental farm in Ottawa is conducted only a very small number of our farmers can afford to visit it and derive personal benefit from the experiments there being carried on. The minister has told us that a distinguished gentleman from England visited the farm last year and expressed regret that they did not have such a farm even in England. Well, I think this country should be satisfied with what they have in England so far as demonstration farms are concerned. We should not indulge in such luxuries as are exhibited at the Central Experimental Farm. We could easily dispense with a number of these items of expenditure and use the money all over the country for the great advantage of the many rather than as at the present, for the benefit of a few.

In the riding which I have the honour to represent we have an annual exhibition in the month of September which is assisted by the Provincial Government. The provincial department of agriculture send their specialists who give to the farmers very valuable information—information which can be utilized by our farmers to suit local conditions. Prizes are given for the best crops and also for school gardens, and every year the farmers can see the results of the best farming in every parish. But no matter what experiments are carried on at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa, very few farmers can afford to visit the farm even once in ten years. That is one reason why I sympathize very much indeed with the idea put forward by my hon. friend from South Oxford, that we should reduce the expenditure on our experimental farms and apply the money saved to increasing our demonstration farms so that their benefits may be brought home to every locality.

The Federal Department of Agriculture must have at heart the development of agriculture in all sections of the country, and that development is not being promoted to the fullest extent by conducting experiments here in Ottawa where climatic conditions are very much at variance with those prevailing in many other sections of the country. I would urge that the Government reduce their extraordinary expenditure on the experimental farms and devote the money to establishing more demonstration farms.

Mr. BEST: It is very evident that the speaker who has just taken his seat does not know anything about farming. He speaks as though the experimental farm at Ottawa was just for the benefit of a few local people.

Mr. VIEN: Mr. Chairman, I want to correct the hon. gentleman. I never said any such thing.

Mr. BEST: The experimental farm at Ottawa has sent samples of grain and shrubs and seeds all over the Dominion. When the hon. gentleman speaks about school fairs in his riding, I may tell him that we have them in my county, and most of the children who plant their seeds in the school plots get those seeds from Ottawa. While I am opposed to extravagant expenditure in any line, I make the statement that when hon. gentlemen get up and talk respecting farming, it is evident that they never did any farming in their lives, or they would not complain about this expenditure of $350,000.

Mr. VIEN: I wish to correct the hon. gentleman. My father was a farmer; I was brought up on a farm; my ancestors were farmers for three hundred years.

Mr. BEST: It seems strange that most professional men in this House and out of the House claim that they were raised on the farm. I can certainly vouch for the fact that most of them were milked on the farm, anyway. I think hon. gentlemen are making a great mistake when they find fault with an expenditure of $300,000 or $350,000 on an industry which supplies as much as two-thirds of the wealth of this country. When the Government propose to spend three or four times as much on agriculture as was spent by past governments, we should commend, not criticize them. When I came to this House ten or eleven years ago, less than one million dollars was spent on agriculture; now I believe we spend between five and six. If the money is wisely spent, no hon. member should find fault with a policy of that kind.

But there is one thing I do deplore—the fact that, as the minister says, the Civil Service Commission select the men for the different branches of this department and arrange their renumeration. I am sorry that the minister is not in a position to select better men to fill positions in his department than those who never farmed a day in their lives. Why are two or three men selected to sit in Ottawa and carry on the business of branches of which they know nothing whatever? We have a glaring example of that kind of thing in hon. gentlemen who get up in this committee and talk about the hours and the time and the holidays. Of course, a lawyer comes into his office at about ten o'clock in the morning, goes out at four or five and counts it a day, but the farmer has to work all day. These speeches that are being made about hours and time and holidays are doing more to hurt the farmers of Canada than anything else that could be done, because they are causing dissatisfaction among our men on the farms who are hired by the month or by the year. There are times when the people in the towns and cities would go hungry if the hired men on the farm did not work fourteen hours a day. I do not know whether these fifteen days' holidays are supposed to be the legal holidays or whether they are over and above the holidays, but when a man is hired by the month or by the year on the experimental farms he is suposed to work a month or a year and he is supposed to get the legal holidays and no more. Something has been said about a man not being able to get away if a friend had died. Well, I know that in the county which I represent, if a hired man on the farm lost a relative by death the farmer would leave the work in the field and let him go, and our government would do the same. This talk about six or eight hours a day is driving our boys and girls off the farms; making them believe there is pleasure and nothing to do in the cities, and slavery and misery on the farm. I resent that kind of thing. I have spent most of my life on the farm and I say that there is no place where a man can have a better time or enjoy life better than on the farm. I hope that hon. gentlemen who get up to talk about farming and about agricultural matters generally will be men who know something about farming.

Mr. VIEN: My hon. friend intimates that I do not know the first thing about farming.

Mr. ETHIER: Oh, no, he was referring to the member for South Oxford.

Mr. VIEN: Both of us, I think, can give him some pointers on farming. The lecture of the hon. gentleman was quite unnecessary. I did not criticize the expenditure of $375,000 for the farming industry, though my hon. friend sought to create the impression that I did. I would like this Government to cut out some foolish expenditure that is proposed in other departments and use the money for the development and improvement of the agricultural industry in this country. I am not criticizing expenditure in respect to experimental farms, but I would like these experiments to be carried out not merely at one central point, but in demonstration farms all over the country, because that would result in greater benefit to the farming community at large. Coming back to my hon. friend's suggestion that I do not know the first thing about farming, I do not like to blow my own horn as the hon. gentleman has blown his, but I may tell him that my ancestors came to this country in 1657 and were all farmers. My father was a farmer; I was brought up on a farm. I own a farm of my own, and am proud of it.

Mr. SMITH: What about your grandfather?

Mr. VIEN: I have said that all my ancestors were farmers; that should be sufficient for my hon. friend. I think it most improper, therefore, that an hon. gentleman should jump and say that we do not know the first thing about farming. Why, the hon. gentleman himself was ignorant of what he was talking about. He was throwing stones into the garden of his neighbour though he was himself inhabiting a glass house. Let him learn the lesson; let him go a little more slowly when he is impelled to make such remarks with regard to hon. gentlemen on this side.

Mr. DAVIS: Mr. Chairman, if the committee is to understand that the minister accepts the statement of the hon. member for West Quebec that these messengers gather eggs, in approved committee style I shall have to add another question and ask how many eggs they collect. But that is just in line with what I really wanted to ask. I notice in going over the list that there are about 125 stenographers in the department and about 100 clerks. Even the hon. member for Dufferin (Mr. Best) will admit that I know a little about this subject, even though I might not know so much about farming. I would like to ask the minister whether in his department there is any return of the number of letters or pages of typewriting which are turned out by this staff of 125 stenographers? Is any return made to the Civil Service Commission of the number of entries which these clerks are obliged to make? When the chief of staff in a large financial institution is asked whether a certain branch may have an additional junior officer, he can immediately go over the work of that office and determine whether or not the answer should be in the affirmative—and this without making any personal visit to the office. I think some such arrangement should prevail in the Civil Service I have made the suggestion before and I make it again now upon the coming before this committee of the first department's work. I should like and I am sure the committee would like to know whether any return of this sort is made or asked for from the departments, and I trust the minister will not forget my question about the messengers.

Mr. TOLMIE: We can furnish this information, but we cannot do it offhand. If the hon. gentleman wants it, I shall be glad to give it to him. As regards the duties of messengers, they are used in the usual way, in carrying messages from one office to another in the different departments which are scattered over the city. They are used in connection with the mail and so forth, along all the general lines for which a messenger is used. The messengers in our department are all steadily engaged and, so far as I know, they are rendering good service. In answer to the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Vien), as I have explained before, while we carry on these small experiments on the big experimental farm, they are afterwards tried out under field conditions and the information obtained is given out to the country. The hon. member speaks of what is being done now by the provinces in the way of demonstrating agriculture to the farmers. They use what are known as county representatives who travel about from one farm to another. We assist the provinces at the rate of one million dollars a year for improving agricultural education, some of this money being used in the way I have mentioned. As regards the work carried on at the experimental farms, not only can a man go there and look at the plots in which these experiments are being conducted, but he can also see the work that is being done under field conditions. For instance, the production this last year of an average of thirty tons to the acre, of sunflower at a cost of less than $3 per ton placed in the silo, is a demonstration that any practical farmer can benefit by. In addition to that, the crop of oats ran about eighty or ninety bushels to the acre grown under certain conditions. Clover was also grown under different conditions and calculations made as to the cost of production. Therefore, the experimental farm, in addition to demonstration work, is of great use to the practical farmer who wishes to visit it. The money expended at the Central Experimental Farm covers a wide scope in addition to what is done on the farm. For instance, it covers the tobacco farms at Farnham and Harrow. It covers the work at the illustration stations, of which there are seventy-five scattered throughout Canada. It covers the flax extension work, the potato inspection work, the rot investigation work, and it also covers a very important work we carry on for the education of the farmers. It covers the exhibits which are taken from our experimental farms to all the principal fairs in Canada, and we have with those exhibits demonstrators who describe the methods under which the plants are grown or the way in which wool is cared for after it is taken from the sheep and carded. We also demonstrate the candling of eggs and so forth. Any hon. member who has attended any of our large fairs in recent years will probably remember some excellent exhibits from those forms, and that is taking the demonstration to the doors of the farmers. On those seventy-five illustration forms scattered throughout Canada very excellent work is done, showing the farmer exactly how to use the best methods under actual farming conditions, and the experimental farms and illustration stations are cooperating very well together. In addition to that, we cooperate with the governments of the various provinces in many lines of work, and we oftan afford them great assistance which they use to good advantage.

Mr. McCOIG: I wish to say a word or two in connection with this expenditure of $375,000. I may differ from some hon.

members on both sides of the House in regard to this matter. My opinion is that the Central Experimental Farm should be the best, not only in the Dominion of Canada, but in any part of the world. When we are expending a few hundred thousand dollars on the Central Experimental Farm in the city of Ottawa, we are only carrying out a policy that has been laid down by the great ministers of agriculture that we have had, not only in the Liberal party, but in the great Conservative party, ever since Canada has been a nation—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Mr. McCOIG:—Or a young nation. As regards the argument that we should cut down this expenditure, I say to hon. gentlemen who are objecting to it, that we might as well be conducting the affairs of Canada in the Museum a few blocks away as conducting the affairs of Canada in this magnificent Parliament building which we have caused to be erected at a cost to the people of Canada of millions of dollars. When we stand up in this Parliament to-night and object to paltry expenditures of this kind, we are simply playing into the hands of the big interests of the country who are standing back and laughing; we are giving them a certain amount of amusement to think that we, as supporters of agriculture in Canada, are differing in regard to backing up the Minister of Agriculture as long as he carries on the affairs of his department honestly and well. When the hon. member for Dufferin (Mr. Best), whose views and ideas I have supported on many occasions, speaks about patronage, I say that the agricultural department should be conducted in the way in which it is being conducted, namely, by the Civil Service Commission; that patronage should be cut out, and that men who are qualified and who are deserving of promotion should be given the preference, instead of some partisans whose position or advancement may be advocated by hon. members opposite or by members on this side after members on this side come into power. I am in sympathy with giving the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Tolmie) every assistance possible, because I am convinced that when he is fighting his Estimates through Council, he has his troubles, and while other ministers may smile, I believe they will agree with me that what I say is absolutely right. There is a great work for the Minister of Agriculture to do in this country, not merely for the general encouragement of greater production, but for bringing that production to such a point that there will be a reduction in the cost of living to the people of Canada, and without giving such assistance, we shall be unable to achieve that result. As regards extravagance in connection with our experimental farm, I am in favour of giving the minister every possible assistance, even if he does spend a few dollars more than we might see fit to endorse at this particular time. Experimental plots are absolutely necessary. This Parliament, not the Government, has already voted $1,000,000 to be distributed amongst the various provinces in order that they may carry on experimental farms so as to encourage the growing of crops that are particularly adapted for different sections throughout Canada. We have given that money; we are voting it to-night without discussion, and then we are hesitating to say that we stand behind the minister in carrying out the work he is going to do for the great purpose of agriculture which we all profess to be behind to the last. I am in sympathy with this expenditure, even if it may seem extravagant, because I believe the minister is doing the best he can under the circumstances.

10 p.m.

Mr. CASGRAIN: As a representative of a rural constituency I think I ought to say something on this subject. I agree with almost every word that has been said by my hon. friend from Kent (Mr. McCoig). I would ask the minister to consider a proposition which has been put before him on many occasions by myself and others on behalf of the people of the County of Charlevoix-Montmorency, and that is to reopen the demonstration farm which was established there some time ago, in 1913, or 1914, if I remember correctly, but which was discontinued. I have never yet been able to find out why it was discontinued, but since I have been a member of this House I have tried on many occasions to get the farm opened, without success.

Mr. MOLLOY: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. CASGRAIN: I should like an answer from the minister.

The CHAIRMAN: I must point out that questions concerning the establishment or re-establishment of demonstration farms have already been ruled out of order on this item. If any question concerning the expenditure of the Department of Agriculture may be asked on item No. 14, the entire discussion can be started over and over again every time the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture are before the committee. Item No. 14 which we are now considering deals solely with Civil Government expenditure here in the city of Ottawa. I would not call an hon. member to order for discussing upon it any matter concerning agriculture that is not specially covered by another Estimate, but where there are specific items in the Estimates I would ask hon. members to wait until they are reached before discussing matters pertaining to them.

Mr. MOLLOY: On page 89 of the Estimates there are two items: "Veterinary Director General, $5,040" and "Chief Veterinary Inspector, $3,900." I understand that these are two separate positions occupied by two different men. I should like to know when the office of Chief Veterinary Inspector was established, where the official lives, and what his duties are?

Mr. TOLMIE: The name of that officer is Dr. George Hilton. He resides in Ottawa and has occupied the position for about 12 or 14 years, roughly speaking. This particular office was created before I became minister; I cannot say how long it has been in existence. The duties of the office are to assist the Veterinary Director General, and to act in his absence when he is out of town. Dr. Hilton assists in a great deal of the outside work at the various quarantine ports, and in connection with the field inspection work that is carried on throughout Canada.

Mr. SEXSMITH: The minister has told us that there are 70 odd illustration stations in Canada. How many are in Ontario, and how many in Quebec?

Mr. TOLMIE: The Department of Agriculture has no illustration stations in the province of Ontario. The Commission of Conservation has been carrying on some work along that line, and so long as they were doing that the department did not interfere. The proposed changes will perhaps result in a new policy in that direction. We have 30 illustration stations in the province of Quebec at the present time.

Mr. PARENT: Before this item passes I should like to satisfy my curiosity with respect to one statement made by the minister in his very eloquent and interesting remarks a few moments ago. He stated that years ago hens in this country were producing 65 eggs per year, and that now in some cases they are producing 300 per year. That is very important, I think, and I should like the minister to tell the committee, so that the country at large will know, what special strain it is that produces this large number of eggs per year.

[The Chairman.]

Mr. TOLMIE: The particular breed that made the big record was a special strain of Wyandottes at the Sidney Experimental station, 16 miles out of Victoria, B.C. The average hen in this country at the present time has been producing 60 and 65 eggs per year.

Mr. CANNON: Who looks after the apiculture work of the department?

Mr. TOLMIE: Mr. Sladen.

Mr. CANNON: Has this branch taken part in any recent exhibits or fairs throughout Canada?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes, we had a number of exhibits of bees, queen bees, bee products, and various bee supplies, hives, and so forth, at many of the fairs throughout the country during the past year.

Mr. CANNON: Is the minister in a position to state whether this Government has had any communication with the Provincial Governments, and particularly the government of my province, concerning this matter?

Mr. TOLMIE: We have been working together in connection with the eradication of bee diseases, but have had no correspondence of any particular note.

Mr. ETHIER: May I ask whether this item of $1,245,639 includes the minimum grant of $2,500 which the agricultural societies are entitled to receive in connection with the exhibitions in the different provinces. I understand the regulations of the department provides for these grants.

Mr. TOLMIE: Those grants are not included in that item. We pay something over $90,000 for that purpose, in addition to this item. It comes under the heading of livestock.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: On page 89 is an item, "Dominion Agrostologist, $3,120." Perhaps it is my lack of proficiency in the English language that makes it necessary for me to ask the minister what this gentleman does?

Mr. TOLMIE: His name is Dr. Malte. He is an expert of very great ability in that line?

Mr. McMASTER: But what is the line?

Mr. TOLMIE: I was just coming to the line. His business is the study of grasses and different varieties of plants, and there are some very interesting examples of his splendid work on the farm. He crosses various kinds of grasses, plants, etc., the general business being the production of fodder plants. He has done most excellent work in improving timothy and clover.

Mr. CANNON: An hon. member on the other side said to-night that the frequency of our questions to the minister might be interpreted as an opposition to the agricultural estimates. I do not consider that I have to give any explanation of my attitude, because what I have done to-day is only what I do every day; I have performed what I consider to be my public duty by my constituents and by the people of the country at large. But should our attitude on this side, and the attitude of the committee, have had only the result of giving to the minister an opportunity to explain, as fully and as lucidly as he has done, every item in regard to which he has been questioned, I think that we have reason to be very well satisfied. My hon. friend from Kent (Mr. McCoig) has said that hon. members on both sides would gladly support the minister in the administration of his department, and with that statement I fully agree. Agriculture in this country, as the member for Kent has said, is not only important, but essential. We all understand that. I represent a farming constituency, and although I have not the honour to be a member of the farming community of Canada, I have great sympathy with the farmers. I understand their needs and try to help them to the best of my ability. Let us hope that so long as we have a government in Canada we shall always have as competent a minister as the hon. gentleman who now holds that office. The ministers at the head of the Department of Agriculture in past years were most remarkable men in many ways. We had the Hon. Sidney Fisher, who has left a name for himself. That hon. gentleman administered his department in such a way that he has shown the road that has been followed ever since by his successors. I have nothing to say in the way of compliment to the former Minister of Agriculture, who is now leader of the Agrarian party (Mr. Crerar). He stayed in the Government for a few years, and while he was there I think that all the farmers whom he represented were quite satisfied with his administration. On his departure from the department, my hon. friend from British Columbia was called to the Cabinet. To-night we have asked the minister many questions and he has very frankly and good-naturedly answered them, and I say that he has shown our country that the present Minister of Agriculture is just as efficient and competent as any minister we have had before.

Mr. COPP: My hon. friend intended to give me some information. Will he give it to-night or at a later date?

Mr. TOLMIE: The unclassified man referred to, Mr. Cochrane, is an employee of the Dairy Commissioner's Branch, and it is just possible that we are considering his position at the present time.

Mr. COPP: How long has he been in the service?

Mr. TOLMIE: About twelve or thirteen years.

Experimental Farms, $1,245,639.50.

Mr. CASGRAIN: I put a question a few minutes ago to the minister regarding experimental farms, which, I understand, include illustration farms. I am told that there was an illustration farm in my constituency some years ago, and I should like to know to-night why it was discontinued. Is it possible to have one started again?

Mr. TOLMIE: That farm was closed up before I assumed my present position. I regret that I cannot give my hon. friend an answer off-hand, but I will try to get information on the subject.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Would it be possible to have a station established in that district? What are the prospects?

Mr. TOLMIE: It is possible. We are contemplating the establishment of some illustration stations in many parts of Canada at the present time, and I assure the hon. gentleman that his district will receive attention.

Mr. CASGRAIN: In the very near future?

Mr. TOLMIE: Well, in the near future.

Mr. CANNON: I do not wish to burden my hon. friend with faults that may have been committed in former years before he entered the Cabinet. But in my constituency a member of the former Government ran an election and, rightly or wrongly, with or without authority, but in his capacity as a member of the Government, he promised the electorate of that place that an experimental farm would be established in the County of Dorchester.

An hon. MEMBER: He had some pull.

Mr. CANNON: This promise was accomplished by a most generous shipment of bulls, which have not, however, been located, and I am sorry to say that the minister seems to have forsaken them. Evidently he considers that they are lost for good. But, talking about experimental farms, let me say that my constituency is most conveniently adopted for an experimental farm, and the people there were given the impression, by the gentleman to whom I have referred, who was a member of the Government at the time, that the Government intended establishing such an institution there. At the time of the election that gentleman was not very positive as to the exact parish in which the farm would be opened. Wherever we addressed the people the farm seemed to be most desirable, and as we went through the county the proposed experimental farm accompanied us. There are in my constituency some twenty-five parishes and when we were through with our tour we had practically twenty-five experimental farms in prospect.

Mr. LAPOINTE: Did the bulls accompany you?

Mr. CANNON: Mr. Chairman, I do not expect the minister who is a serious business man, to establish twenty-five farms in my constituency, or one farm in each parish; but I should be most grateful to this Government if it would redeem the promise made to my constituents a few years ago by one of its former members. The county was expressly promised an experimental farm. I do not care where it is to be located; I want a farm and the constituency is entitled to one because it has received promise to that effect from a Cabinet minister and from the Government itself. This Government, Mr. Chairman, has forgotten lots of its promises and has broken lots of its pledges unfortunately; but for once let it give the example of an Administration which fulfils its promises and respects its pledges. Let the Government, as regards my county, keep for once the promise and the engagement entered into by a former member of the Cabinet. If this promise of an experimental farm for the county of Dorchester had been made by an ordinary candidate, a private individual free from responsibility who tried to carry his election by making lavish assurances, I would not hold the Government responsible; but the promise referred to was made to the county of Dorchester by a minister and the pledges given by him at the time were not only endorsed and ratified but publicly approved of by the then Prime Minister of Canada, the right hon. member for Kings (Sir Robert Borden). I think, Mr. Chairman, the Government has a duty and an obligation towards my constituency. I am quite sure it will only be necessary to draw my hon. friend's attention to the fact that such a promise has been made and such an engagement entered into to immediately cause that promise to be carried out. Then in my county we shall see the present Government build an experimental farm which will result in the realization throughout my constituency, and throughout the neighbouring constituencies, of the great benefits and advantages so eloquently set forth tonight by the minister himself.

Mr. SEGUIN: (Translation.) Mr. Chairman, the hon. member, in answer to the hon. member for Charlevoix (Mr. Casgrain stated a moment ago that he could not explain how it was that the experimental farm at Baie St. Paul had been closed, in view of the fact that the thing occurred before he entered the Government. The tobacco experimental farm at L'Assomption was closed during last year, when the hon. minister was at the head of the Department of Agriculture. I am sure that the hon. minister knows perfectly well the reason why it was abolished. While rather anticipating on the time at which I should have spoken on that experimental farm, I stated this afternoon what occurred in connection with the purchase of that farm. Now, while I do not wish to repeat what occurred in connection with that purchase, I would like at least to point out to the minister that, had they dispensed purchasing that farm, they might have continued to rent it from the college for the purpose of illustrating in tobacco growing and thus continue to the farming community of that district of L'Assomption-Montcalm the encouragement which they need and all the facilities required to better themselves in the cultivation of tobacco. I think the hon. minister has not been wanting in good intentions. He did his best to carry out the suggestions made to him for the establishment of an experimental farm at L'Assomption on a farm that would belong to the department. He could not get the necessary funds, but I do not see why they have not continued to lease that farm, as was done for some years, in order that the farming community could enjoy the advantage of having a tobacco illustration farm at L'Assomption, at a nominal rent. I believe that this would have been only fair to the people in the counties of L'Assomption and Montcalm, who engage so eagerly in that agricultural specialty, and make great sacrifices so as to be able to develop that industry and who are entitled, I think, to every encouragement that the minister can give in that kind of farming.

Mr. PARENT: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. SEGUIN: If my hon. friend will pardon me I would like to have an answer from the minister. Perhaps he has understood my remarks. In that case I will state in a few words that I wish to know the reason why the Department of Agriculture has closed the experimental station at L'Assomption which was of great value to the farmers and the tobacco growers of that part of the country.

Mr. TOLMIE: I am very sorry indeed that there was any misunderstanding in connection with the establishment at L'Assomption. I believe that representatives of the Department of Agriculture visited a farm for the purpose of examining the property and investigating as to its usefulness as an experimental station with a view to making a purchase. They were quite satisfied with the conditions there but, of course, that in no way placed upon the Government the responsibility of making the purchase, nor should in anyway have led the owners of the property to believe that a purchase of the land had been determined upon. Such at least is the report made to me by the officers of my department. In such cases it is customary to obtain the approval of the minister, and afterwards the approval of Council, before the land could be purchased. I am very sorry indeed if the owners of that property misunderstood what occurred, or took certain things for granted, in connection with that investigation, and, that in consequence they disposed of their livestock. That is a very regrettable thing indeed. However, as I pointed out earlier in the evening, motives of economy have been held in view as much as possible. There are many directions in which I would like to extend agricultural work throughout Canada, but under the existing financial conditions of the country we are merely spending what we think is absolutely necessary until such times as we shall be in a better position to expand our operations. The location at L'Assomption, I understand, is a very excellent one, and in the event of our opening up more experimental farms or illustration stations, in the near future I can assure my hon. friend that the location in question will receive our careful consideration. It has been recommended as a very excellent place for tobacco culture, suitable in every way, and consequently, being satisfactory, will receive consideration among the first of the places on the list.

Mr. CASGRAIN: I would like to ask if the same thing will be done for my county?

Mr. TOLMIE: I have a note of the hon. member's county in connection with the applications for experimental farms.

Mr. SEGUIN: If the money for the purchase of the farm is not at present available, why not continue the station in operation, because the people of the county are suffering very much by reason of being deprived of it.

Mr. TOLMIE: Of course in carrying on the experimental farms there is a demand from time to time for new buildings and other improvements, and if we decided to establish the farm in question I would prefer to own the property in order that we might be free to carry on such development work as the situation would seem to call for.

Mr. PELLETIER: I would like to remind the minister of a promise that he made to me last year. If I am not mistaken, he assured me that demonstration farms would be located at Matane and Causapscal, two such farms being necessary by reason of the fact that the constituency is divided by a chain of mountains. I asked the minister at that time if he would kindly look into the matter and he promised that he would surely do so. Since then I have not heard anything further, and therefore I would like to know if the minister will give this matter his attention and see if he can possibly locate one, if not two, demonstration farms in the county of Matane where they are absolutely necessary.

Mr. CAHILL: I would like the minister to detail the expenditure mentioned.

Mr. TOLMIE: I do not recollect having made any such promise. It is possible that I did lead the hon. member to believe that I would look into the matter, but I am very doubtful if I made a direct promise. However, I will be very glad to have the deputy minister give a report on that particular district.

Mr. PELLETIER: I thank the minister and I hope he will keep his word this year. All he has to do is to look up Hansard of last year and he will see that what I say is right.

Mr. STEIN: I think I have been more fortunate than my hon. friends who have just spoken, because in the county of Kamouraska we have enjoyed a very fine experimental farm since 1910. It was established there under the Laurier Administration through the efforts of my predecessor the present member for Quebec East (Mr. Lepointe). I hope the minister does not intend to close it as he has done the experimental farm in the county of Charlevoix. Instead of being closed our experimental farm should be enlarged. The deputy minister of Agriculture, who is very well received every time he visits my county, could give very full information to his minister as to that experimental farm, which is situated at St. Anne de la Pocatière, and is connected with the provincial college of agriculture for boys, where over one hundred and sixty students are studying to become practical farmers. In the village of St. Pascal in the same county we have a school of domestic science for girls. I would very much like to see the minister visit this country, which from the agricultural point of view is, I think, one of the most important in the Dominion, when I am sure he would agree with my description. If he would visit the experimental farm, the college of agriculture and the school of domestic science, undoubtedly he would realize the importance of these institutions.

Mr. TOLMIE: I shall be very glad to accept the kind invitation of the hon. gentleman who has just taken his seat. It has been my object to visit as many parts of Canada as possible since assuming my present office, but unfortunately I have not yet be able to visit the fine district of which he speaks. I want to tell the hon. member for Matane (Mr. Pelletier) that it affords me a great deal of pleasure not only to keep my promise of last year but also to make good my promise of this year, although it is only fifteen minutes old. I can assure him that a site has been selected for an illustration station in his district and it will be started on the farm of Michael Philibert this year.

Mr. ARMSTRONG (Lambton): I congratulate hon. members from the province of Quebec on receiving so many good things from the Minister of Agriculture. But might I call his attention to the fact that I have frequently asked for an experimental station up in the western part of the province of Ontario which is so badly in need of such assistance? I have had part of a promise, but I have not yet succeeded in having a station established there. The minister has been good enough to establish thirty experimental stations in the province of Quebec—

Mr. TOLMIE: Thirty illustration stations.

Mr. ARMSTRONG (Lambton):—thirty illustration stations, while in the province of Ontario we have only one. I have no objection to these illustration stations being established in the province of Quebec, but I think it is about time that the minister began to establish a few such stations in the province of Ontario. I am in full sympathy with their establishment. Years ago I said that I would like to see the day come when there would be an illustration station in almost every county, in these old provinces in particular. So I am not rising for the purpose of opposing hon. gentlemen receiving these illustration farms in their province, but I am merely asking that old Ontario shall receive at least one or two of these stations during the coming year.

Mr. PROULX: I concur with the hon. member from Lambton that the province of Quebec seems to be favoured more than any other province in regard to the establishment of illustration farms. My hon. friend from Dorchester said that a few years ago his county got quite a number of bulls from this Government. Are these bulls distributed under the patronage system or under the Civil Service Commission? And are there enough to go round each county? Is the department still lending bulls to the farmers in the different counties? I know that some farmers in my county would like to take advantage of the system if it is still being continued by the department.

Mr. TOLMIE: That is an item that comes properly under livestock. Under our system pure bred sires are distributed in dis tricts where no such sires are available, usually in outlying new districts. Our system is for the farmers to form a club of ten members and on their showing that they have a proper number of cattle and that their farms are suitable for rearing stock, we loan them a bull and pay the freight on it to their nearest station. One of the farmers maintains the animal during the three or four years it is left in the district, and then it is moved to some ither section. That has been found to work to the very great advantage of our farmers, particularly those in outlying new districts. I have in mind such districts as that on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. A large number of settlers have gone into that country, and under ordinary conditions it would have been a matter of ten years before they would have enough money to purchase a pure bred sire—and they would at the end of that time still have scrub stock on their farms. But under this system of the distribution of pure bred sires we are furnishing sires to such districts as these in the first year of their settlement, so that in five or six years the cattle up there will be high grade cattle, not scrub stock, and the livestock wealth of Canada will be materially increased.

Mr. PARENT: Of this $1,245,000, what amount will go to each of the experimental farms in Canada?

Mr. TOLMIE: Charlottetown, $31,365; Kentville, $41,900; Nappan, $41,338; Fredericton, $40,482; Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, $40,650; Cap Rouge, $44,210; St. Joachim, $18,570; Lennoxville, $44,760; La Ferme, $35,956; Kapuskasing, $35,405; Morden, $30,970; Brandon, $42,880; Indian Head, $42,495; Rosthern, $28,600; Scott, $25,570; Swift Current, $19,450; Lethbridge, $42,-150; Lacombe, $42,150; Summerland, $39,-765; Invermere, $14,500; Agassiz, $36,500; Sidney, $27,090.

Mr. CANNON: In answer to my hon. friend from Prescott (Mr. Proulx) the minister said that sires were being distributed in outlying districts, and the hon. member for Prescott had mentioned my county. I wish to say that my county is not an outlying district.

Mr. TOLMIE: I do not want to cast any reflection on the hon. member's district. Perhaps after I have taken advantage of his kind invitation to visit him, I will know more about it.

Mr. McGIBBON (Muskoka): Will the minister inform the committee what is done at these demonstration stations?

Mr. TOLMIE: They are more properly called illustration stations. The work is done on the farm of some good farmer in a selected district, under the direction of our Director of Experimental Farms. The seed is furnished and the farmer told what to do. The farm is usually seeded along a public road and the work is done in full view of the road so that it may be observed by anyone in the district. The farmer sees the experiments made right in his locality by a brother farmer, and very excellent service is being rendered with but a small outlay.

Mr. COPP: How long have these illustration stations been in existence?

Mr. TOLMIE: Since 1915.

Mr. EULER: How many are there in Ontario?

Mr. TOLMIE: The Conservation Commission has been carrying on certain work in Ontario, and the Department of Agriculture has not interfered or started any other farms of a similar character in that province. If the suggested action with regard to the Conservation Commission is carried out the Department of Agriculture will take up the matter of illustration stations in Ontario.

Mr. EULER: I understand, then, that in Ontario there is simply the experimental farm at Ottawa; there are no illustration farms?

Mr. TOLMIE: We have two other farms, one at Kapuskasing, in the clay belt, and a tobacco station at Harrow.

Mr. CAHILL: What has been the success of the Kapuskasing farm and the settlement in that territory? The minister promised last year to make an investigation of the Kapuskasing farm and of the farm known as La Ferme in the Abitibi district in the county of Pontiac.

Mr. TOLMIE: I regret that I did not have time to visit the Kapuskasing farm; I did pass through that district on a train. But the deputy minister went up and looked over matters at Kapuskasing. We have about 1,280 acres in that farm, about 500 of which are under cultivation and several hundred slashed, not yet cleared. Very excellent crops were produced last year but on account of frost they did not head out as well as might be expected. The production of fodder, however, was very good indeed, and from the experiments conducted up there we are of the opinion that that district has a very good future before it as a livestock district, having regard to the production of fodder plants. It will be what is known as a good hay and grass district, suitable for the raising of livestock. With regard to the settlement in the district, that is a matter with which the provincial government has to deal. I could not give very definite information in that regard.

Mr. CAHILL: Does the minister know whether the population there has increased or decreased since last year?

Mr. TOLMIE: I do not know that there have been many changes since last year, but I understand that the Provincial Government is opening up a very extensive pulp plant up there. They have laid out a town near the farm at Kapuskasing, and with the market right at their door there should be a considerable development of agriculture in the immediate neighbourhood.

Mr. MORPHY: How is it that there are thirty odd illustration stations in Quebec and none in Ontario? Is it a matter of Government policy, or do Ontario farmers not require them?

Mr. TOLMIE: I have pointed out that the Conservation Commission have been carrying on illustration farms in parts of Ontario, particularly in Dundas county. Ontario is one of the most advanced provinces in the whole of Canada; it has perhaps more pure bred stock than any other province. The Central Experimental Farm is in Ontario; some of our largest exhibitions are held in that province, and on these grounds we have not pushed the illustration stations as we have in Quebec. So far as western Ontario is concerned, I do think it is not well served with farms; there should be an experimental farm in that section. Under present financial conditions, however, we have been loath to open up new farms any faster than absolutely necessary. When we feel that we can proceed with safety, the matter will be given attention.

Mr. EULER: In view of what has been said in regard to the number of institutions of this kind in the province of Quebec, does the minister not feel that as a matter of practical justice to Ontario he should locate in that province some of these stations that are to be located? I am not one of those who want to weigh one province against the other, but from the intimation given by the minister to-night it would seem that Ontario is not being rightly treated. We have in the western part of the province the Ontario Agriculture College, a very good institution, but one which is under provincial jurisdiction. Perhaps it is on account of the service given by that college that the Dominion Government has paid so little attention to the province. I would like to associate myself with what the member for Kent (Mr. McCoig) said; I do not think that the expenditure which is being made in connection with the experimental farm at Ottawa is an improper one. After all, agriculture is one of the chief industries in Ontario and I believe the people of the province will be right behind the minister in the expenditures of moneys along these lines—except that I think he is not widening out sufficiently so far as Ontario is concerned. I am not inclined to make a criticism that might come to the minds of some of us from Ontario who are not supporters of the Government. But possibly these experimental farm and illustration stations are located in Quebec, because they are intended to be somewhat of a temptation to the people of that province to support the Government, and on the other hand, perhaps, we do not get them in Ontario because the Government feels sure of that province anyway. I know that is not the case with the present Minister of Agriculture, but possibly it has been the case in the past. I should like to suggest to the minister that he seriously consider whether he is giving Ontario that attention to which it is entitled as compared with other provinces.

Mr. TOLMIE: As I mentioned a moment ago, I think Ontario is deserving of more of these illustration stations than it has, and now that the Commission of Conservation will likely be giving up that particular work, we shall be glad to go into the matter very fully.

Mr. EULER: I presume, in view of that, the minister will seriously consider establishing one of those illustration stations in North Waterloo.

Mr. NESBITT: The minister must bear in mind that the people of old Ontario are probably the best farmers we have in Canada at the present time. In my section of country, we all have experimental farms at the expense, not of the Government, but of private individuals themselves. We have besides that at Guelph, a college of agriculture which is probably the best agricultural college in America. We have also, in probably every county in Ontario, district representatives who are paid by the Dominion Government, and these men take great pains in trying to instruct anybody who requires instruction in any line of farming. While the province of Ontario, I have no doubt, would be very glad to get these experimental farms and illustration stations, at the same time, we are not suffering in the older parts of that province, in that regard. The minister is quite right in stating that in Ontario we nearly all have high-class stock, horses, sheep, pigs and cattle. We do not require any loans of sires; we have the sires; we have some scrub bulls which we can send down to the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Proulx) if he wants them. We are culling them out rapidly at the present time, and we can easily afford to give them to any sections of country requiring something a little better than they have themselves. I am speaking of conditions in southern Ontario in particular. Therefore, I do not think that while the country is so burdened with debt, we should press the Minister of Agriculture or any other minister in this Government to increase expenditures under any possible condition. While my hon. friends from Quebec and other provinces may be anxious to have illustration stations and experimental farms, I hope they will bear with the Minister of Agriculture for a few years yet until we pay off some of our enormous debt. There will not be much use in our raising crops or anything else if the profits are all eaten up in taxes.

Mr. COPP: The hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) is very magnanimous in regard to the amount of money that should go or not go to Ontario in experimental farms or illustration stations. I would remind him that from the Auditor General's Report of last year, the Central Experimental Farm in Ontario consumed something like $385,000 of public money. That is more than one-quarter of the total amount expended on experi-

11 p.m. mental farms and illustration stations in the whole Dominion. Therefore, I would remind my hon. friend (Mr. Nesbitt) and also the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Euler) that the great province of Ontario is being pretty well treated at the present time at the hands of the Minister of Agriculture. The policy which the minister has adopted in regard to illustration stations and experimental farms is the policy which I have advocated in this House ever since I have come here, and I am very glad to see him taking it up. Has he gone down to the gardens by the sea and established any of these illustration stations there? If not, does he propose to do so? Are there any illustration stations in New Brunswick?

Mr. TOLMIE: There are six.

Mr. COPP: I am glad to know that illustration stations are being established in New Brunswick, and I suppose also in the other Maritime Provinces. Like the hon. member for North Oxford, I would draw the attention of the minister to the fact that while we are anxious to have these illustration stations established throughout the Dominion, if that will aid in the development of agriculture, his are the first Estimates that have been brought before the House this session, and I regret very much to see that in item No. 14, which has already been passed, there is an increase of $55,672.50 over last year, and in the item under discussion, there is an increase of $30,639.50 over last year. I also find that in practically every one of the items that immediately follow on the same page, an increase over last year is being asked for. I would remind the minister, as he has been reminded many times throughout this country, in different ways, that a very serious financial situation is confronting the country. As regards the Estimates that have been brought down, there is, in nearly every case, an increase in the expenditures for the different departments of the public service. It does seem to me that the minister could have set a good example to his colleagues and to the people of the country as a whole if in this year of all years he had shown he was prepared to cut his garment according to his cloth, and had tried in some way to reduce the very large expenditures that he is asking of Parliament at the present time. We find increases in nearly every item of this list, and it does seem to me that my hon. friend the Minister of Agriculture and the other ministers who are responsible for the Estimates that are brought down should have pared down the figures to such an extent as to show that for the next few years they were prepared to spend only what was absolutely necessary in the interests of the public service. Let us wait until the financial condition of the country straightens up to a certain extent, and until the people have a little more confidence in our financial position than they have at present before launching on these large expenditures. But we find that large expenditures are being made, and that further large expenditures are being asked for, and that there are very substantial increases in almost every item. It does seem to me my hon. friend could very well have set an example to his colleagues by paring down the expenditures in the different branches over which he has control.

Mr. MORPHY: I understand from the minister that there are over thirty illustration stations in the province of Quebec, and only one in the province of Ontario. The minister frankly admits that Ontario has been poorly served in that respect. He says that he would take Ontario into consideration except for the burden of the national debt. Consequently, I feel that he has burned his bridges behind him, and that for the future western Ontarion may not look for any of the advantages that arise out of the system of illustration stations which the Government has built up in other provinces. To my mind the hon. member for East Lambton is entitled to a great deal of credit for bringing this question before the minister in this committee tonight. I am sorry to say that I quite disagree with the hon. member for North Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt), in his idea that Ontario does not need these illustration stations. I think the reverse is true. The minister himself admits that such stations would be a great benefit to the province of Ontario, and I should therefore like to know whether it is part of the Government's policy that the province from which I come is to be relegated to the back benches so far as financial assistance from this Government for the betterment of our farming population is concerned. The policy seems to be designed for the purpose of passing Ontario by. I wish the hon. minister would be more definite. He has said that Ontario is entitled to these stations, that she needs them, but that owing to the national debt it is impossible to grant them. Ontario has been quiet about this and many other things, while the largess of this Government has been showered without stint upon the province of Quebec. Ontario has sat by and seen it done, perfectly willing to submit until that time comes which is indicated in the old adage, "It is the last straw which breaks the camel's back." I wish the minister would be more definite. If we are to be deprived of these stations because of the burden of debt, I would ask whether the minister is going to stop all improvements because of the debt? It seems to me that the benefit to the agricultural population of this whole country from a policy which I would indicate by the words "full steam ahead" would be inestimable, and I think the minister should say whether or not the present policy is one intended to ignore the province of Ontario and its just rights. The province has not been forward in claiming any special consideration from the Government and I trust that before this item goes through, the minister will intimate that he can find a way to do the square thing by Ontario as to the establishment of illustration stations in that province.

Mr. TOLMIE: I do not see how anybody could have interpreted my remarks as meaning that it was impossible to do anything for Ontario until the national debt was wiped out, or that I had any intention of ignoring that very important province. What I did say was that this work in Ontario, so far as illustration stations are concerned, had been carried on by the Conservation Commission to a certain extent, and in view of the fact that we were spending large sums of money on the Central Experimental Farm, in Ontario, we did not interfere, but that now the Commission was probably ceasing that work, Ontario was to be given immediate consideration. I think that is quite clear enough. Those are my intentions as minister. I have said half a dozen times, I think, tonight that I recognize how important agriculture is to Canada. We have an immense sum of money invested in that industry, about seven billion dollars, and I can assure my hon. friend I fully realize its importance. I should like to see this work developed, and I think it can be done with safety in many parts of Canada, to the very great advantage of the country as a whole. These things, however, are surrounded with difficulties. I may have lots of wishes, but it is another thing to get the money. I fully realize the importance of Ontario, and even admitted to my hon. friend opposite that Ontario might have been better treated. I fully realize the situation, and when we begin to select sites for our illustration stations this year, I can assure my hon. friend Ontario will receive earnest attention.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysboro): The minister stated that there were certain illustration stations in the county of Dundas, and other places in the province of Ontario. Just how many are there in the province of Ontario?

Mr. TOLMIE: About 16 or 17 under the Conservation Commission. Some are in Dundas county and others up near Galt.

Mr. SINCLAIR: How many are there in Nova Scotia and where are they situated?

Mr. TOLMIE: In Nova Scotia there are seven situated in the following places: Kennetcook, Tatamagouche, New Glasgow, Sidney, Big Baddeck, Mabou, and Yarmouth.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I take exception to the remarks of the hon. member for north Perth (Mr. Morphy), in which he conveyed the impression that I considered illustration stations were not of very much value.

Mr. MORPHY: I was referring to the hon. member for north Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt), although it is possible that I may have said South Oxford.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: That makes considerable difference. The hon. member for Westmoreland, (Mr. Copp), made particular inquiries to what was being done in New Brunswick, and when he found that there were a great many more farms in that province than he was aware of, he immediately turned round and said that he thought there was quite sufficient done for Ontario and referred to the large expenditure of about one quarter of the amount for experimental purposes in that province, a repetition of what the minister said. Last year I introduced a resolution dealing with this question, and that was the answer we got on that occasion, and I have been urging as strongly as I could the necessity for something along these lines in that province. Frequent reference has been made to the Conservation Commission and what they are doing in the way of establishing illustration stations. I do not know of a single illustration station that has been under the Conservation Commission. It is true there was one in the county of Dundas, but so far as western Ontario is concerned, I do not know of one. The member for Pontiac, (Mr. Cahill), was inquiring very diligently to-night about what was taking place at Kapuskasing, and as to whether the settlers were remaining there and increasing in numbers. I believe that yesterday he referred to this matter in the House and endeavoured to cast an unwarranted reflection on the late Provincial Government for what they did in this direction. I might remind the hon. gentleman that this farm at Kapuskasing was established to furnish employment for interned prisoners, large numbers of whom were employed clearing the land, and if they are not there to-day it is for the good reason that they were only to anxious to get away. I suppose he would use it as an argument against the colonization policy of the late Provincial Government in Ontario because the interned prisoners are not still on the Government experimental farm there. Had it not been for that government's policy, I doubt whether we should have had a farm there or not. We have a small tobacco farm of some forty acres, and it is almost self-sustaining from the revenue it gets. If you make comparisons between that farm and any of the others you will be convinced that it is an example to all demonstration stations in Canada. Its revenue almost equals its expenditures. Now, as I said before, I emphatically protest against this enormous expenditure on the farm at Ottawa being charged against Ontario, because it is not serving the purpose for which the experimental farms were intended. I do not intend to belittle the work done, but I contend that it is of equal value to all other parts of Canada as it is to Ontario, and when you find so many experimental farms, stations, and sub-stations established years ago, and new ones opened up in various omise, if we cannot do things for the province of Ontario. Do not forget that the parts of the country, there is not much force in the argument that we must econprovince of Ontario contributes about one half of the revenue collected in this country. My colleague from North-Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) made the statement that the district representatives were being paid by the Federal Government. They are not; they are paid by the Provincial Government and the municipalities in the counties in which they are located. It is true that a certain amount of the vote in aid of agriculture, which is divided pro ratio among all the provinces, is applied to pay the salaries of these district representatives; but in no sense is the Dominion Government contributing to the support of the representatives in that province.

Mr. DUFF: Has the minister any information with regard to the kind of agricultural implements which the Government has purchased for the different experimental and demonstration farms throughout Canada? Whether correct or not, my information is that these farms are supplied with implements purchased in the United States and that the Government does not patronize the Canadian manufacturers of agricultural implements. Is this true, or is any percentage of the implements used on these farms of American manufacture?

Mr. TOLMIE: All the implements used on the experimental farms are purchased in Canada. Only in very exceptional cases are implements bought in the United States. They are secured there only when they cannot be got in Canada.

Mr. EULER: The Government, I presume, does not buy from the Grain Growers.

Mr. D'ANJOU: (Translation.) Mr. Chairman, the hon. member from Matane (Mr. Pelletier) reminded the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Tolmie) a moment ago of the promise he had made last year to establish two illustration farms in his county. May I remind the hon. gentleman that he had also promised to establish an experimental farm in the county of Rimouski. I hope I shall not offend my hon. friend from Matane by saying that the county of Rimouski is just as progressive as his own, as far as agriculture is concerned. I have no objection to having two illustration farms in his county, but I would like the minister to keep his promise as regards the establishment of at least one experimental farm in the county of Rimouski, whose agricultural achievements are so great that I do not know of any other county in the whole Dominion which could compete with it and it may well serve as an example to the others.

As the hon. gentleman does not understand the French language, I shall ask his deputy, whose knowledge of both languages is a proof of a keen intellect, to kindly explain to him what I have said. I insist upon an answer from the hon. gentleman.

Mr. SEXSMITH: Mr. Chairman,—

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: Just a moment; an answer is expected of the minister.

Mr. TOLMIE: I could not hear what the hon. gentleman said.

Mr. ARCHAMBAULT: I submit, Mr. Chairman, that is no answer.

Mr. TOLMIE: If the hon. member speaks loud enough for my deputy to hear him I will be glad to give an answer to his question.

Mr. D'ANJOU: (Translation.) Last year, I had the deputy minister, who knows both languages, to act as interpreter. Here is the gist of my demands: I want the minister to keep the promise he gave me and to the hon. member for Matane as well. He promised to start an illustration farm in that county and, last year, he promised to establish one in the county of Rimouski. The hon. minister may say that the financial conditions of the country do not warrant such expenditure, but, in accord with the hon. member for Kent (Mr. McCoig) and many others who have taken part in this discussion on agricultural matters I think that the Government will never spend too much to help develop this industry. Let us have less military schools and more agricultural colleges, more demonstration farms, more experimental farms. Nobody will grumble. I want the hon. minister to answer me and I would like to know, whether or not he intends to establish an experimental farm in Rimouski during the year.

Mr. TOLMIE: I quite agree with what my hon. friend has said with regard to the importance of agriculture. We have had an illustration station at Rimouski but it is being closed up and we are now looking for a more favourable location.

Mr. SEXSMITH: In asking the question a short time ago how many illustration stations were located in the province of Ontario and how many in the province of Quebec, I had not then the thought in my mind that the latter province, or any other province, had too many such stations. I did think, however, that Ontario might have a little more attention. The money spent on these experimental stations, or illustration farms, or whatever you choose to call them, is, I think, money well spent. The minister, in my opinion, in reaching out and trying to develop this experimental work, and educating people in regard to it, is doing a good thing and should receive encouragement from Parliament. He mentioned something about the work that the Conservation Commission has been performing in Ontario. Well, I know they have been doing a little work in the county of Dundas, but the whole of the central part of Ontario has not been looked at so far as I know—there has not been an attempt made by this Government to do anything to encourage the farming industry in that section of the province. I want to impress upon the minister the necessity of taking the district referred to into consideration and giving it his best thought. Before sitting down I would like to ask what has been the nature and the extent of the work carried on by the Conservation Commission in the province of Ontario. We have been told that they had some sixteen or seventeen stations in the province, but what work did these stations perform? These few little experiments carried on by the farmer himself under the direction of the Commission do not compare with the work of an illustration or demonstration farm. Such stations are not of the same nature as demonstration or illustration farms. However, I do not wish to criticize the work of the Conservation Commission. No doubt it has been a good work but is not such as would be done by the farms to which I have referred.

Mr. CASSELMAN: The minister has stated that there are thirty illustration stations in the province of Quebec. Well, there have been sixteen such stations in my county, carried on under the Conservation Commission. The work done by that commission in the county of Dundas has been eminently satisfactory. It is highly appreciated by the farmers there and I entertain the hope that now the commission is going out of existence the work will be done under the Department of Agriculture. When the Conservation Commission undertook these operations in the first instance it was planned that the work would continue for a period of years. That period has not expired; nevertheless, the work is unfinished and unless it is continued on the farms selected by the commission a great part of the work so far accomplished will have lost its value. I would like to ask the minister if the work on these sixteen demonstration farms will be carried on now that the commission is to be abolished.

Mr. TOLMIE: In reply to the hon. member's inquiry I may say that we will go into the whole matter very carefully. It is impossible to say at present exactly what will be done, but no doubt such action will be taken by the Department of Agriculture as will afford an opportunity to carry on illustration farm work in that particular section where work was already being done.

Mr. McGIBBON (Muskoka): It is quite evident that the people who kick the hardest get the most. Apparently that is about the position of certain people in the province of Ontario. According to my hon. friend (Mr. Casselman) there are sixteen illustration stations in his county but to realize what they are doing, or what good they can be accomplishing, rather surpasses my imagination. There are hundreds of miles of Ontario territory north from the city of Toronto where the climatic and soil conditions are absolutely different from what they are in old Ontario, and where we have absolutely nothing of the kind that my hon. friend from Dundas has spoken of. That being so, I think we have a just cause of complaint against the department because of its treatment of that part of the province. The province of Quebec has thirty of these stations. Well, we do not begrudge them those stations and yet I believe Quebec has been promised to-night the establishment of a further number. Nevertheless, when we ask what can be done, or what will be done, for the province of Ontario it appears that nothing can be said. I think that bearing in mind the treatment extended to the other parts of the country the policy of the department cannot be defended. What do a few demonstration or illustration farms in one county amount to, a county where the climatic and other conditions differ entirely from those in other parts of the province. In northern Ontario we have districts where there has never, so far as I know, been one dollar spent by this Government in attempting to solve the difficulties which confront the settlers now located there, and the new settlers who are constantly going in. So far as I know not one dollar has been spent by this Goverment towards solving the difficulties which are confronting the settlers who have been there for years and whose number is being constantly augmented.

Mr. JACOBS: Put them out.

Mr. McGIBBON (Muskoka): No, we will not put them out. That is an important part of this province, and it is going to become a still more important part. But I say those difficulties should not be left to the farmers to solve, and it is the duty of this Government to do something to assist those men.

Mr. SEXSMITH: I am very pleased indeed that the hon. member for Dundas (Mr. Casselman) has thrown some light on the subject of what the Conservation Commission has been doing. He says that sixteen out of the seventeen illustration stations established in Ontario are located in his particular riding down in the southeast corner of the great province. He adds: "Of course, this work is not yet completed and I want the Government to promise to complete it." Why, Mr. Chairman, the Conservation Commission are running a good percentage of the farming industry of his riding if they have sixteen stations in one county. I must sharply criticise the Government for having allowed the Conservation Commission to spend money, and especially to spend it all in one county, and then to come to the House and tell us what they have been doing for the great province of Ontario. We find that those seventeen stations are all located in one little county adjacent to Ottawa where the commissioners can run out in the morning and come back in the evening. Despite my good friend here, I protest against continuing those sixteen experimental farms in the county of Dundas. I have not anything against the member for Dundas, and I exonerate the minister, but the hon. member must have had a great pull with the Chairman of the Conservation Commission. Is there a summer resort in that county?

Mr. CASSELMAN: It is a farming county entirely.

Mr. SEXSMITH: I was asking the Chairman of the Conservation Commission. I was wondering if he had a summer resort there and that that was why the sixteen stations were established in one county. I am strongly opposed to spending so much money in one little locality, for the expenditure cannot possibly give the results that would follow if it were spread out over the province.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: I am glad we are getting light on something that has been rather a mystery to me. Some hon. members may remember that I moved a resolution last session dealing with our experimental farms, and the Minister of Agriculture attempted to refute the arguments that I advanced, but when I rose to reply the hon. member for Dundas got the attention of the Speaker and moved the adjournment of the debate, with the result that nothing more could be said on my resolution. I do not know whether it was because he had been so well taken care of and he was afraid that we would become aware of what had happened in Dundas, but he was apparently very anxious for the debate to close. Now the same arguments that have been advanced this evening for economy were advanced last year by the minister. "Yes", he said, "I realize that something should be done in the province of Ontario, but we must economize." I have been criticised tonight for referring to the enormous expenditure for farm labour under the head of civil government on the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, which farm I contended did not serve our province in particular. To my surprise I see from the Public Accounts that there was an increase for ordinary farm labour on that farm of $54,000 over the amount expended last year. Yet we are told that there is not any money available for a few illustration farms in the rest of the province. The expenditure on ordinary farm labour was $163,831 last year according to the Public Accounts, in addition to the $94,000 paid under the head of civil government to men who are connected with the farm. I do not think the argument that we must economise has much force when we find that sort of expenditure going on. I would like to know if the $420 bonus that most of those farm labourers have been receiving is going to be continued. I do not think some of my hon. friends opposite need worry very much about the holidays those men are entitled to, for this $420 bonus occupies nearly one-half the space on both pages of the Public Accounts, and besides that there is that $54,000 increase over last year's figures for farm wages.

Mr. CASSELMAN: Inadvertently I have succeeded in raising a veritable hornets' nest in referring to the sixteen illustration farms in my constituency. I should have added that those sixteen farms constitute only one scheme. The idea was to experiment in one county, and it just happened that my county was selected. The farms were chosen and the farmers were given advice as to how to best develop their particular farms, but very little money was spent. The work is done entirely by the farmers themselves. It is true they get advice and instruction and some amount of guidance from agricultural experts, but this represents all the assistance given. The experiment has turned out so successfully that I think it might well be extended to other counties, for it constitutes a scheme of education which can be conducted at the minimum of expense and with the maximum of profit.

Mr. SEXSMITH: I am further enlightened on the work of the Conservation Commission and I wish to apologize to my hon. friend from Dundas if I said anything that hurt his feelings, because we were led to believe that there were sixteen or seventeen illustration stations in Ontario. Now we find that it is practically one scheme in one county, although perhaps involving more than one farm. Put in that way, perhaps it does not sound so bad as giving Ontario credit for having seventeen stations when we really have only two. I understand there is one station in the tobacco district, and the other is this system which really constitutes only another station. I am more than thankful to my hon. friend from Dundas for giving us this information.

Mr. EULER: We have delved into this matter to some extent and I would like to get some further information in regard to the facts. I think the minister said the Conservation Commission had some seventeen stations of one kind and another in the province of Ontario, and afterwards we gathered from the hon. member for Dundas that sixteen of those stations were in his county, but he has since explained that they constitute only one scheme. I would like to know whether that scheme is only one of the seventeen stations the minister referred to, or whether the sixteen stations in the county of Dundas comprise sixteen out of the seventeen stations credited to Ontario; and, if so, where the other station is. I never heard that the Conservation Commission had engaged in any agricultural activities in western Ontario.

Mr. TOLMIE: The seventeenth is at Galt.

Mr. EULER: That is, there is only one other in addition to the sixteen stations in Dundas county?

Mr. TOLMIE: Yes.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Queen's, P.E.I.): What crops are grown on those illustration farms, and what system of rotation is followed?

Mr. TOLMIE: The regular system is to follow certain rotations,—four years in Quebec, and three, four and five years in the western provinces. The usual crops produced under a system of mixed farming are grown under the illustration station scheme.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Queen's, P.E.I.): Is more than one kind of crop grown? And do you have more than one rotation?

Mr. TOLMIE: Several crops are grown at the same time. You have your farm conducted under the supervision of a director, who carries on a certain line of work, and you have a chance of seeing the various rotations that are practised on the larger experimental farms.

Mr. JACOBS: I suppose the minister is aware that the residence of Sir Clifford Sifton, former Chairman of the Commission of Conservation, is located in the district from which the member for Dundas comes, and that probably accounts for the fact that sixteen illustration farms are there.

Mr. TOLMIE: I understand it is not a fact.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Queen's P.E.I.): The minister has told us that it has been the custom in these illustration farms to have a rotation of crops on one farm. I understand that the general object of the illustration farms is to give the rural communities the benefit of information gained at the central farms and other experimental stations. I suggest to the minister that he would carry out that purpose better if, instead of having a rotation of crops on one farm, crops were grown on each farm in the community. In that way you would be benefiting four, five, six or seven farmers, according to the rotation in a community; you would be encouraging more farmers and giving information and suggestion to a larger number of people each year.

Mr. TOLMIE: I shall be glad to give consideration to my hon. friend's suggestion. It would be rather more difficult to carry out. In fact, we expect all the farmers in the community to derive benefit from the work done on these illustration farms, through their observation of it.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Queen's, P.E.I.): What proportion of the vote that we are now considering will go to the maintenance of illustration farms?

Mr. TOLMIE: About $33,000.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): I suggest to the minister that as it is now about midnight and the discussion has been rather long—though I have no doubt it has been illuminating—we should report progress.

Mr. DOHERTY: I do not want to keep the committee here at any length, but before we rise I would ask that we take up item number 4. I would like to take it up at all events, and if it should give rise to any prolonged discussion I would be quite prepared to have the committee rise then.

The CHAIRMAN: It is impossible to discuss item number 40 and item number 4 at the same time. Shall item 40 carry?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Carried.

The CHAIRMAN: Carried.

Mr. LAPOINTE: The minister knows that if we take up item 4 to-night we shall be prevented from making any motion when we come to supply on the Estimates of this department some other day. I think it is only fair that we should not take the Estimates of the Department of Justice to-night.

Mr. DOHERTY: Well, I quite understand that that is the fact. On the other hand, is it unfair that we should seek to open more than one department on the same day? I know that we have had a very prolonged discussion; I admit it has been most interesting.

Mr. LAPOINTE: Let us go on with agriculture.

Mr. DOHERTY: I am perfectly frank; there is no disguise about the thing at all. I think it is fair that we should open up the two departments which it was announced we would bring forward to-day. My purpose is exactly what the hon. gentleman says it is; I do desire to have it opened. I do not desire to keep anybody here any unreasonable length of time; I am quite willing that we should report progress just as soon as this item has been regularly and properly brought up. I think hon. gentlemen will recognize that I am not asking anything unfair in that respect.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): I do not think the minister should insist on going into the Estimates of the Department of Justice to-night, for another reason. At the time the announcement was made that the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture and of the Department of Justice would be taken up, it had not been brought to the attention of the Government that the Opposition objected on account of the Auditor General's Report not being down. The Prime Minister stated to-day that he would not insist upon going on with the Estimates of any department in cases where a large number of the Estimates were dealt with in the fourth volume of the Auditor General's Report. In looking at that portion of the report which deals with the Justice Department I find that items amounting to $1,644,168.38 are dealt with in volume 4—about one-half the total expenditure of the department. Under these circumstances, I think my hon. friend should not insist upon going into the Estimates of the Department of Justice at this hour of the night, in the absence of so many members on this side.

Mr. DOHERTY: Will the hon. gentleman let me see what are the particular items that he refers to as being in volume 4?

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): I am looking at the summary of the Department of Justice on page II-2, in which amounts aggregating the sum I have mentioned are referred to as being dealt with in volume 4.

Mr. BUREAU: We have been discussing Estimates of the Agriculture Department all day. I think it is only fair that the Minister of Agriculture, who has been under fire, should have a chance now to pass a few items. With regard to passing items of the Department of Justice at this late hour to permit the automatic working of the Rules of the House, I for one am against it. If the Minister of Agriculture does not desire to go on with further Estimates of his department, we should rise, report progress, and go to bed. The Minister of Justice says that two departments were announced. Well and good, but it was not expected by members of the House at the time that the Estimates of one of those departments would be taken up at five minutes to midnight, so that we would not have any discussion of the department as we generally have, and that they would try to play this—I do not call it a trick because we know what is coming. I for one am going to object to taking up at this time any of the Estimates of the Department of Justice. Let the Minister of Agriculture go on, and we will go through his Estimates.

Mr. DOHERTY: I am sorry to see how the hon. gentleman feels about this—he is not going to call it a trick. I have put the matter in the frankest of language, and I do not see that I have anything to be ashamed of. There is some interest in getting along with the public business, and it is a matter of importance that we should not be left on Thursday or Friday, possibly without business for this House to concern itself with. I am not asking for discussion at this hour of the evening; I am asking to have this item called; that is all. I am not asking to have this item passed.

Mr. LAPOINTE: We know that.

Mr. DOHERTY: Do hon. gentlemen at this stage of the session frankly think that it is absolutely necessary that they should prevent the operation of a rule that was passed in the interest of expediting public business, and thus create a situation where on Thursday or Friday we shall not be free to go into the Estimates?

Mr. BUREAU: Under the rule, with the consent of the House, the minister can go into Supply.

Mr. DOHERTY: If the hon. gentleman is prepared to say now that he is ready to consent—

Mr. BUREAU: I will not consent unless the House consents. I do not stand here speaking for the House, but at five minutes to twelve, it is high time that the Minister of Agriculture should pass a few items or we should go to bed.

The CHAIRMAN: I should like to point out to hon. members that there is now nothing before the committee. Item No. 40 has been declared carried, and unless some other item is called, this discussion is out of order.

Mr. DOHERTY: I asked the Chairman to call item No. 4.

Mr. LAPOINTE: I protest against this method of trying to prevent members of the House from exercising a right which belongs to them. When the new rule was passed, it was specially provided that:

> On Thursdays and Fridays when the Order of the Day is called for the House to go into Committee of Supply, or of Ways and Means, Mr. Speaker shall leave the Chair without putting any question, provided that, except by the consent of the House, the Estimates of each department shall be first taken up on a day other than Thursday or Friday.

That rule was put there to give members of the House an opportunity of moving resolutions whenever the Estimates of one department came before the House for the first time. It is not fair to bring down the Estimates of two departments on the same day. We are quite prepared to expedite the business of the House; let us go on with the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture, and we will go as far as two o'clock if my hon. friend wants to keep us here; but we object that one of the privileges of members of the House should be dealt with in this way.

Mr. DOHERTY: The hon. gentleman gets very warm and talks about things not being fair. It is not my habit to try to do things that are not fair, and so far as my judgment goes, I am not trying to do anything that would indicate any unfairness now. In view of what the hon. gentleman has said, and the item having been called, I am quite prepared that we should revert to the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture and go on.

The CHAIRMAN: In order that there may be no difference of opinion about the matter to-morrow or later I shall call item No. 4, and we may then revert to the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. BUREAU: If item No. 4 is called, the same result is attained, and that is what we are objecting to. I think, with the consent of the House, the minister has a right to withdraw his instruction to call the item; he may tell the Chairman that he does not want to have it called.

Mr. DOHERTY: What I said was that item No. 4 having been called, I am quite prepared to revert to Agriculture. As to what is fair and unfair, we will settle that later on.

Mr. BUREAU: I object to item No. 4 being called. The minister wants to deprive us of a right we have under this rule. He says: "If you will consent now to let us go into Supply on the Estimates of the Justice Department on Thursday or Friday without any debate on the motion, I am willing to revert to the agricultural Estimates. Why does the minister endeavour to prevent a debate on his particular department? It is unfair at this time of the night to try to 12 m. railroad this thing through by brute force, and I want to protest against it because it is not right. Things have been going on nicely; everybody has been satisfied with the explanations given by the Minister of Agriculture, and I understand, from hon. members whom I have consulted, that they are willing to go on and pass items of the Department of Agriculture. I do not see why the Minister of Justice should butt in now and throw fire into the atmosphere. The Minister of Justice ought not to do a thing of this kind.

The CHAIRMAN: There must be something before the committee to justify this debate. Let it be upon the point of order, whether or not the resolution should be placed before the committee. I shall be glad to hear any hon. member before giving my ruling.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): It looks like an extreme step on the part of the Minister of Justice to presume to call an item of his department and thus deprive hon. members on this side of a right which they have under the rule. If the position taken by the Minister of Justice is correct, other ministers can call an item in every department of the Government and the rule will then be equal to being obsolete altogether. In that way the Government could railroad through every department at one sitting of the committee. If the minister's view that he is doing a fair thing in this matter is correct, it follows that the Minister of Public Works, the Minister of Militia and all the other ministers could take the same step now, and then we would have all the departments in the same position. That was certainly not the meaning of the rule and up to this night, it was never understood to be the meaning of the rule.

Mr. McMASTER: I do not want at this time—it is almost early morning—to discuss this matter at any length. I hardly think the Minister of Justice would wish to take in this House, any step that would prevent the Opposition from exercising any right which, under the rules of the House, we may have to discuss public questions. I am not sufficiently familiar with, nor have I studied sufficiently, the rules of the House to say whether the calling of an item by the minister will preclude us, on going into Supply, from discussing any question of public interest. But if there is any possibility of that, I have confidence enough in the Minister of Justice to know that he would not want to use that means of closing the mouth of the Opposition. If there be any chance of that interpretation being placed upon the calling of the item, I think we of the Opposition have merely to ask the Minister of Justice courteously to withdraw that procedure, and I am sure he will be glad to accommodate us—perhaps not exactly accommodate us, but do what I know he always wants to do, that is, preserve the rights which inure to the Opposition and which may possibly have to be exercised by the other side of the House as well as by this at no distant date.

Mr. DOHERTY: If there be a desire to make a motion in regard to this particular department on our seeking to go into Supply on Thursday I would have no desire to object because of the fact that this item had been called, but if the objection is merely to create a situation where we will be thrown back into the position that we will not be entitled to go into Supply without consent because of some question that it is desired to raise about something else I really think I might be free to suggest that there is some unfairness in that. Hon. gentlemen have spoken of me as bringing fire into this thing. I might frankly say that the fire seems to be on the other side. I have no warmth, no feeling, about it. It looked to me a perfectly normal thing to do. How does the business of this House proceed? Last evening we announced that we would take up these two departments and nobody took exception to that. Everybody seemed to think it was a perfectly natural thing that we might take up the two departments on the same day and all I now proposed to do was to carry out what everybody understood last evening was going to be done to-day, I find myself attacked as doing unfair things, unjust things, when I am simply carrying out the programme announced last evening. If we were at a stage of the session where the missing of an opportunity to raise a question of any kind on going into Supply might be involved, I would appreciate at greater value the objection that is made but surely at this stage of the session with but one department open with every day in the week except Thursday and Fridays as regards the department of Agriculture and if my position be correct the Department of Justice open for the making of motions I leave it frankly to hon. genelemen were exposed in many way it can be said that there is any possible injustice involved because we take a step this evening which will open up Thursday for a discussion of Estimates without a preliminary debate. I am perfectly free to say that if I could see that hon. gentlemen were exposed in any way to losing any right or any opportunity to discuss any imaginable question which they wanted to raise, I would not be disposed to insist. My one disposition in insisting on this matter was to expedite the business, and to make quite sure that on Thursday we will be able to take this thing up and go on with the discussion of the Estimates. Now I leave it to my hon. friends: Is there any ground to apprehend lack of opportunity? What will the situation be if we take up this item now? Every time we try to go into Supply, on any day other than Thursday and Friday, they will have the opportunity to make a motion and every day that we seek to go into Supply including Thursdays and Fridays, on any other department than Agriculture and Justice, they will have an opporunity to make a motion. Now, is it worth while getting so warm and bandying charges of unfairness? Is it fair to say that what I suggest is unfair? There may be a difference of opinion as to whether I am absolutely within my right in doing this, but I do not think it raises any question of fairness or unfairness and I would put it to hon. gentlemen whether they are not willing to expedite the business of the House to that extent.

Mr. BUREAU: If the hon. gentleman thinks I am showing too much warmth in accusing him of unfairness I will try and state the case more cooly. The minister has not stated the case fairly. He has been unfair for this reason: the only day on which we can discuss matters generally is Tuesday. We have no other day. Monday is private members' day, so is Wednesday, and on Thursday the House automatically goes into Supply without any opportunity for discussion. The minister takes the ground that he is justified in going on with the Estimates of the Justice Department because it was announced yesterday that the Departments of Agriculture and Justice would be taken up. Now, if that reasoning holds good, the Prime Minister could read off a whole list of departments and say, we will take these up to-morrow, and then on the following day any of the ministers could come along at midnight and take up an item in his department. We would then be in the same position we are in to-day. I say it is absolutely unfair, and I say that without any heat and after thinking it over, because it will only leave us Tuesdays. The minister would deprive us of the opportunity of discussing public matters on Thursdays and Fridays. I think we have made a very fair offer. We told the Minister of Agriculture that if he went on with his Estimates we were willing to pass some items after reasonable explanations had been given, but here is the Minister of Justice seeking to deprive us of our opportunity of discussing public matters. If the minister does not see any unfairness in that, I cannot agree with him. To speak of warmth is beside the question. It is a matter of justice and right that we are asking. We do not wish to be deprived of a right. I am sure that the Minister of Justice, when it was announced last night that his Estimates would be taken up to-day, did not expect that an item would be called at 15 minutes past twelve. Nobody expected that. We expected that it might be called at an hour when we would be in a position to have a general discussion. The minister knows we do not want to start any general discussion at this time, and if he wants to be fair he will let the Minister of Agriculture go on with a few more items, and then the committee can rise and report progress, so we can go to bed.

The CHAIRMAN: I must ask hon. members in discussing the point of order now before the committee to remember that this is a question of interpretation of the rules, and not only a question of fairness. The chairman would be glad indeed to hear the opinion of any hon. member concerning the application of the Rules of the House before he gives his ruling.

Mr. BUREAU: Our discussion was for the purpose of having the minister withdraw his suggestion, so that any question as to the rules would be avoided.

Mr. DOHERTY: As hon. gentlemen seem to be so persistent in their view that there is some unfairness in the suggestion—and frankly I attach more importance to that than I do to the letter of the rule, a great deal more—while I do not see any unfairness involved—perhaps it is my obtuseness—rather than have hon. gentlemen entertain, as apparently they do, the view that I desire to do something unfair, I would prefer to withdraw the suggestion. I do not want, however, my withdrawal to be taken as a confession on my part—no doubt, it is my condition of invincible ignorance, which excuses a great many things—

Mr. BUREAU: Withdraw it without prejudice.

Mr. DOHERTY: I am afraid that when I withdraw it I shall do so with a strong prejudice against the view entertained by the hon. gentleman. Mr. Chairman, I am prepared to withdraw my request that resolution 4 be now read.

The CHAIRMAN: The Minister of Justice having withdrawn his request that the resolution be now read, it cannot be considered as having been placed before the committee. My ruling upon the point of order is that the hon. minister was under the rules perfectly justified in asking that resolution 4 be now read by the Chairman, and thus placed before the committee for consideration.

Mr. LAPOINTE: May I ask you a question, Mr. Chairman? Could all the ministers call the Estimates of their departments on the same day?

The CHAIRMAN: If the hon. member will allow me, I will first cite the rule and then answer his question. Rule 13, paragraph 4, provides that the rules of the House shall be observed in the Committee of the whole House, so far as applicable, except the rules as to the seconding of motions and limiting the number of times of speaking. Rule 31, section 2, provides that whenever Government business has precedence Government orders may be called in such sequence as the Government may think fit. The Estimates are Government business, and when the different resolutions in the Estimates are before the committee they may be called in such sequence as the Government may think fit. In answer to the question asked by the hon. member for Quebec East (Mr. Lapointe), as to whether all hon. ministers could call the Estimates of their different departments upon the same day, I would say that if the committee would consent to dispose of those Estimates with sufficient speed to allow them to do so, the ministers would have that right except on Thursday or Friday when their Estimates have not previously been taken up. This is quite frequently done during the last days of a session. It must be remembered, however, that while any hon. member has the floor, and while any one item is before the committee no hon. minister has the right to propose any other item. When the Minister of Justice proposed that resolution 4 be called, resolution 40 had been carried.

Mr. LAPOINTE: Then the only course which the Opposition would have to follow to prevent a minister from calling the items of any other department would be to keep on discussing the previous item.

The CHAIRMAN: The only course is to continue discussion upon the item then before the committee or move that the committee rise.

Mr. SINCLAIR (Guysborough): May I point out that the Minister of Agriculture had carried his item and there was nothing before the committee? How could the committee continue discussing something that was not before it?

The CHAIRMAN: That is precisely the ruling of the Chair. Item 40 having been carried there was nothing before the committee, and the Minister of Justice, under the rules, had the absolute right to propose item 4.

Mr. DOHERTY: After all, perhaps the best protection of the Opposition lies in the fairness of the minister, and probably the best safeguard against interminable discussion is the good sense of our friends opposite. That seems to be the practical result of the raising of the question. Now, Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise and report progress.

Progress reported.

On motion of Right Hon. Mr. Doherty the House adjourned at 12.20 a.m., Wednesday.

Wednesday, March 16, 1921

The House met at Three o'clock.

REPORTS AND PAPERS

First Report of the Select Standing Committee on Banking and Commerce.—Mr. Cockshutt.

Report of proceedings of the Conference on International Finance.—Sir Henry Drayton.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

GASPE RAILWAY SERVICE

Mr. MARCIL (Bonaventure):

1. Has the attention of the Government been called to the following recommendation made by the Quebec Board of Trade to the chairman and members of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, on February 3rd, 1921:

"We would also ask your commission to lend its influence in favour of the effort now being made by the Quebec Board of Trade, to remedy the painful situation in which the large population of the Gaspé peninsula—nearly 80,000—now find themselves owing to defective railway service and the absence of cold storage and refrigerator car service, needed to give their fisheries, which for two centuries have been amongst the most important in the world, an opportunity to furnish the cheap food of fresh fish to Canadian cities, and at the same time the fisherman of Gaspé coast a fair price for his catch. He now gets one-fifth of the price earned by the fishermen at Prince Rupert, who has these facilities. Our suggestion is that the Dominion Government should take over the 200 miles of railway from Matapédia to Gaspé, which runs for its entire length within sight of the fishing boat, and make it part of the Government Railway System."

2. If so, is it the intention of the Government to take any action?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.

2. The Government is not, at present, in a position to take over these railways.

QUEBEC AND SAGUENAY RAILWAY

Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. When did the Government, through the Canadian National Railways, take possession of the Quebec and Saguenay railway?

2. How many passengers have been carried on the said railway from the 17th March, 1920, to date?

3. What have been the net earnings of the said railway since that date?

4. What are the salaries paid monthly to the different station agents or caretakers along the line of the said railway?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Under Order-in-Council, September 24, 1919, the Quebec and Saguenay railway was transferred to Canadian National Railways for operation. As the road was still under construction and being operated by the contractors, that arrangement continued until completion of construction, October 1, 1920, when road was put into operation by Canadian National Railways management.

2. 39,742 passengers were carried from March 1st to December 31st, 1920.

3. Operating deficit March 1st to December 31st, 1920, $35,869.62.

4. Schedule rates.

Dr. MICHAEL FISET

Mr. LAVIGUEUR:

1. What is the total amount of disbursements made to Dr. Michael Fiset of Quebec by the Postmaster General or any other minister since the 18th April, 1914?

2. How many reports have been issued to the Postmaster General or any other Minister of the Crown by Dr. Fiset since the date of his appointment by Order in Council of April 18, 1917?

3. For what length of time is Dr. Fiset supposed to give his services for which he receives the sum of $2,800 per annum?

4. Are there other officials, in any other part of the Dominion, who occupy a position of a similar nature to that held by Dr. Fiset?

5. Is it the intention of the Postmaster General to keep the said Dr. Fiset in the present position at a salary of $2,800 per annum?

Hon. Sir HENRY DRAYTON:

Departments Generally—

1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. No information.

Post Office Department—

1. Salary, $19,234.44. Bonus, $304.00.

2. None, to the knowledge of this department.

3. Full time.

4. No.

5. Dr. Fiset has been recommended for retirement from the Service, such retirement to take effect from the 31st March, 1921.

Department of Marine and Fisheries—

1. 1914.....$64.50.

2, 3, 4 and 5. No information.

61½

RETURNED MEN AS PERMANENT CIVIL SERVANTS

Mr. MACLEAN (York):

Has the Post Office Department taken advantage of the Civil Service Act passed on September, 10th, 1919, as it applies to making returned men permanent who have given six months' satisfactory service? If not, why?

Right Hon. Mr. DOHERTY: There is no provision in the Act referred to which would make it possible to appoint returned men, who have given six months' satisfactory service, to the permanent staff, except when vacancies occur and where men employed in a temporary capacity have qualified for permanent appointment by passing the necessary Civil Service Examination, and can be recommended.

PRINCE RUPERT LAND PURCHASE

Mr. DUFF:

1. What is the amount which the Government has paid to Vernon W. Smith for a piece of land measuring about 100 by 100 feet at Prince Rupert, British Columbia?

2. What other amount has been paid for excavating said piece of land?

Hon. W. McCURDY:

1. Purchased in April, 1913. Amount paid $95,000.

2. $20,005.51.

MULGRAVE—TENDERS FOR ICE

Mr. SINCLAIR (Antigonish and Guysborough):

1. Whtt are the names of all parties who tendered for supplying ice for the Canadian Government Railway at Mulgrave, Nova Scotia, for the present season?

2. What were the respective amounts of said tenders?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. S. H. Hagerty, Monastery, N.S.; James Dunlap, Leitche's Creek Station, C.B.

2. It is not in the interests of Canadian National Railways to make these tenders public. The contract was let to the lowest tenderer.

TRANSCONTINENTAL ENGINES

Mr. DESLAURIERS:

1. Is the Government aware that several engines of the Transcontinental Railway were seriously damaged by frost on account of having been left exposed to the weather during the month of December last at the roundhouse at Parent?

2. If so, why were the said engines not shunted into shelter at the said works?

3. Are the workmen responsible for this damage still in the employ of the Government?

4. What was the approximate cost of repairing these locomotives?

Hon. Mr. REID (Grenville):

1. No.

2, 3, 4. Answered by No. 1.

INDIAN COMMISSIONER AT REGINA

Mr. CARDIN:

1. Has the Government purchased a house in Regina for the Indian Commissioner?
2. If so, who was the house purchased from and what was the price paid?
3. Does the Commissioner pay rent to the Government for the house?
4. Does the Government supply the said Commissioner with a motor car and chauffeur?
5. If so, what was the cost of the motor car and what salary is paid the chauffeur?

Hon. Mr. TOLMIE:

1. Yes.

2. James F. Bryant, $12,500, which is chargeable to profits of Greater Production.

3. No; the house continues the free residence provided at File Hills before his transfer.

4. The commissioner provides a car, for the use of which, on official business, he is allowed $60 a month for ten months. The reply to the second part of this question is in the negative.

5. Answered by the above.

POLISH IMMIGRANTS

Mr. PEDLOW:

1. Did the Government recently refuse admission into Canada of a large number of Polish immigrants?
2. If so, how many were rejected and for what reasons?

Hon. Mr. REID (Grenville):

From 1st October 1920 to 28th February, 1921, inclusive.

1 & 2. Polish—
Indirect passage	12
Lack of funds	10
Lack of passport	4
Physically defective	1
	27
Polish Jews—
Accompanying	1
Conjunctivitis	1
Feeble minded	1
Gonorrhœa	1
Illiteracy	3
Indirect passage	6
Lack of funds	28
Lack of passport	6
Stowaway	1
Trachoma	1
	49
Total	76

[Mr. J. D. Reid.]

GRAND TRUNK PENSIONS

Mr. TOBIN:

1. Has the arbitrator representing the Government in connection with the arbitration to determine the value of the Grand Trunk Railway System received instructions to take into consideration or make any allowance for the pensions due by the Grand Trunk Railway Co., to the employees of that system prior to the general strike of said employees in the year 1910?
2. Has the Government decided to re-establish for the said employees the pensions from which they were deprived at the time of the said strike?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. The Solicitor representing the Government has received instructions to bring before the Board of Arbitrators the matter of the striking employees of 1910.

2. The Government cannot consider this matter until they take possession of the road after the decision of the arbitrators.

RICHMOND—QUEBEC—RUNNING RIGHTS

Mr. TOBIN:

1. Has the Government received any application from any railway company for running rights over the Grand Trunk Railway tracks from the Town of Richmond to the City of Quebec?
2. If so, from what company?
3. If not, would such an application be considered?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. No.

2 and 3. Answered by No. 1.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS

Mr. TOBIN:

1. What is the average rate per mile paid to the rural mail carriers throughout the Dominion?
2. What is the average rate paid to rural mail carriers in the Province of Quebec?
3. What is the average rate per mile paid to rural mail carriers in the County of Richmond and Wolfe?
4. Is it the intention of the Government to establish a fixed rate per mile for the payment of rural mail carriers in Canada?
5. If so, what will be the said rate?

Right Hon. Mr. DOHERTY:

1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. The rate paid to rural mail carriers throughout the Dominion is decided by the system of public tendering. On account of varied conditions such as scarcity or abundance of labour, state of roads, cost of horse feed, etc., in the different localities, the adoption of a fixed rate per mile would be unsatisfactory, unfair and unpracticable. There being no uniformity in the rates paid, any figures regarding average rates for the whole Dominion or even one particular province or district could not be anything but misleading.

AMALGAMATION OF OFFICES IN POST OFFICE

Mr. CASGRAIN:

1. Is it true that the Government, by way of an Order in Council passed on or about the middle of February last, has decided to amalgamate the Post Office Superintendent's service with that of the Post Office Inspector?

2. Is it true that the whole of the Outside Service of the Post Office Department, including the postmasters, the post office inspectors, etc., has been placed under the control of Mr. George Ross, of Toronto?

3. Is it true that said Mr. Ross occupies a rank similar to that of a deputy minister?

Hon. Mr. DOHERTY:

1. No.

2. The whole of the Outside Service will be under the control of the General Superintendent of Postal Service, who will be responsible to the Postmaster General. The position of General Superintendent of Postal Service has not been definitely filled.

3. No.

PENSION COMMISSIONERS—USE OF FRENCH FORMS

Mr. POWER:

1. Is the Board of Pension Commissioners provided with forms drafted in the French language for the use of persons claiming a pension?

2. Has Mrs. Marie T. Poiré or Mr. R. C. de la Chevrottière, her solicitor, of the city of Quebec, made application for the sending of such forms in French?

3. If so, has the Board of Pension Commissioners replied to Mrs. Poiré, sending forms drafted in the English language?

4. If so, why?

5. Does the Government intend to take the necessary steps in order that French forms be sent to persons speaking the French language?

Hon. Mr. TOLMIE:

1. Yes. The Board of Pension Commissioners uses forms printed in both languages, and French forms are employed whenever their use is indicated.

2. Yes.

3. Yes.

4. The forwarding of forms printed in English to Mrs. Poiré was the result of a clerical error.

5. Answered by No. 1.

FEEDING STUFFS ACT

Mr. ANDERSON:

1. What steps have been taken to enforce the Feeding Stuffs Act which was assented to July 1, 1920, gazetted December 4, 1920, and authorized effective January 1, 1921?

2. When will service be given under this Act?

3. Has any official been designated official feed analyst, under section 10 of the Feeding Stuffs Act? If not, what is the reason for the delay and when will such appointment be made?

Hon. Mr. TOLMIE:

1. Six inspection districts, each in direct charge of a competent district seed and feed inspector, were organized and inspection service provided from January 1, 1921. Thirty-one seed and feed inspectors have been appointed by the Civil Service Commission to work under the district inspectors. Three hundred and seventy-four certificates of registration of commercial feeding stuffs have been issued. Bulletin containing reprint of Feeding Stuffs Act and regulations thereunder has been generally distributed.

2. Answered by No. 1.

3. By arrangement with the Department of Health, Dr. A. McGill, chief analyst for the Commercial Feeding Stuffs Act, 1909, is continuing to provide analytical service under the Feeding Stuffs Act, 1920.

SANDY BEACH WHARF

*Mr. LEMIEUX:

1. How many tenders were received by the Public Works Department for the repairs to be made at the wharf at Sandy Beach, county of Gaspé?

2. What are the names of the tenderers and the amount of their respective tenders?

3. To whom has the contract been awarded?

Hon. Mr. McCURDY:

1, 2 and 3. As the contract has not been awarded, information cannot be given at present.

ST. VALIER WHARF

*Mr. FOURNIER:

1. Is the Government aware that the wharf situated at St. Valier, county of Bellechasse, was damaged in November, 1918, and that no repairs have yet been made?

2. If so, is it the intention of the Government to recommend repairs necessary so as to prevent complete ruin of said wharf?

3. What has caused the delay in making said repairs?

Hon. Mr. McCURDY:

1. Yes.

2. Matter under consideration.

3. No appropriation being available, work could not be proceeded with.

CANADIAN AIR BOARD

Mr. PROULX:

1. What are the names of the members of the Canadian Air Board and the Canadian Air Force Association?

2. How many departments have been created in the Air Board and Air Force, and what are they?

3. What salaries are being paid to the heads of departments?

4. Is it correct that the amount of salaries for heads of departments is partly dependent upon the number of employees they have?

5. Is it correct that the heads of departments get a raise of as much as $1,000 a year when they have 30 employees or over in their departments?

6. How many departments have 30 employees or over, and in these are so many really required?

7. Who is responsible for saying what number of employees are required in each department?

8. (a) Who is the responsible head of the Air Board, and (b) is he engaged on the work as much as he should be?

9. Why is the pay of certain officers and appointments in the Air Force reduced after they have served a certain length of time?

10. What measures, if any, are being taken to enforce the O.T.A. in the vicinity of Camp Borden?

11. If a man enlists in the Canadian Air Force as a mechanic, how much of his time is employed in actual work on aero engines and aeroplanes, and how much time on fatigues and useless squad drill by incompetent instructors?

12. Are Air Board employees authorized to carry unofficial passengers when flying aeroplanes?

13. Is it permissible to use Government aircraft on joy rides with lady passengers?

14. What has happened to the flying boat used on the trans-Canada flight, which was last heard of as lying in the Red river at Winnipeg? Is it still unnecessarily exposed to the rigours of winter storms and weather?

Hon. Mr. GUTHRIE:

1. The names of the members of the Canadian Air Board and the Board of Management of the Canadian Air Force Association are as follows: Honourable Hugh Guthrie, K.C.; O. M. Biggar, Esq., K.C.; Air Vice-Marshal Sir Willoughby Gwatkin, K.C.M.G., C.B., etc.; Captain W. Hose, C.B.E., R.C.N.; Lieut.-Colonel R. Leckie, D.S.O., D.S.C., D.F.C.; Lieut.-Colonel J. Stanley Scott, M.C., A.F.C.; E. Deville, LL.D., D.T.S.

2 and 3. The administrative duties in the Air Board are distributed under the following officers, whose salaries are as stated: Inspector General, C.A.F., $4,180; Director of Flying Operations, $4,500; Controller of Civil Aviation, $3,500; Technical Director, $4,500; Director of Equipment, $2,400; Secretary, $4,250.

4. No.

5. No.

6. None.

7. The Civil Service Commission in consultation with the Air Board.

8. (a) The chairman, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, K.C. (b) Yes.

9. The Canadian Air Force is organized as a non-professional force, the personnel of which in all ranks from the lowest to the highest undergoes normally one month's training every two years. Certain staff and administrative duties require for their performance a longer term, normally six to nine months, and to secure the services of competent officers and other instructional personnel for these duties which involve absence by the personnel performing them from their ordinary civil occupations for substantial lengths of time, special rates of pay are provided. These special rates do not apply if the service of any individual is prolonged beyond one year, and the pay receivable is reduced accordingly.

10. Under the Canadian Air Force Regulations "No officer or airman shall bring into or have in his possession in any barrack or camp intoxicating liquor." This regulation is being strictly enforced. There have been fourteen arrests made for breach of the Ontario Temperance Act, of whom seven were civilians and were dealt with by the local civil authorities. The fines collected in these cases totalled $1,150.

11. The approximate weekly time-table for an air mechanic in training is as follows: Lectures on engines, theory of flight, rigging and construction of aeroplanes, 24 hours; work in shops and on machines being flown, 20 hours; other military duties guards, drills, etc., 16 hours.

12. No.

13. No.

14. It has since November 21st been safely housed on the shores of the Red river, and has never been exposed to the rigours of winter storms and weather either unnecessarily, or at all.

Mr. CHARLES P. BUCKLEY

Mr. PROULX:

1. Is there an official in the Department of Railways and Canals named Charles P. Buckley?

2. If so, what is his present classification, and what is his salary?

3. From what classification and salary was he promoted?

4. Has this man ever been articled or studied law?

5. What legal right has he to his present classification?

Hon. Mr. REID:

1. Yes.

2. Law clerk; initial salary $1,800, present salary $1,920.

3. Not promoted. Reclassified from old Division 2A., salary $1,700, maximum $2,100.

4. Not articled. Has had over 13 years' experience in Legal Branch.

5. He was classified by the Civil Service Commission.

GOVERNMENT PIER AT CHICOUTIMI

Mr. SAVARD:

1. What was the cost of fitting the Government pier at Chicoutimi with light?

2. What is the annual maintenance expenditure?

Hon. Mr. McCURDY:

1. $4,301.47 for poles, wire, lamps, etc., including $1,750 for plant installed in 1916 and now in use.

2.

1914	$671.25
1915	671.25
1916	512.90
1917	160.23
1918	336.77
1919	466.67
1920	420.31
1921	499.86

BONUS TO GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Mr. DESLAURIERS:

Is it the intention of the Government to grant to the postal employees (letter carriers) the same bonus as that of last year?

Mr. WRIGHT:

Is it the intention of the Government to continue paying the salary bonus to Civil Servants during the coming year?

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: In reply to the first question I wish to state that the matter is under consideration. The same answer applies to the question of my hon. friend from Battleford (Mr. Wright).

RETIREMENT OF CIVIL SERVANTS

*Mr. GAUVREAU:

1. Is it the intention of the Government to bring forward this session a Bill for the retirement and pensions off of civil servants?

2. If so, when will it be presented?

Right Hon. Mr. MEIGHEN: This question, as in the case of all questions relating to legislation not brought down, can only be answered by stating that any information regarding it will be given in due course.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN.

Mr. PARENT:

1. What are the names of the employees of the Money Order Branch in the following Post Offices (Head Offices): Hamilton, London, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S.?

2. What is the rank, according to the new classification, of each one of said employees, and their present salary?

3. What is the number of years of service of said employees?

4. What is the annual actual revenue of each one of the above mentioned Post Offices?

5. Who are the employees in charge of said branch in each one of said offices?

6. Who are the officials in charge of the Registration Branch in the main post offices of the above mentioned cities, the rank and salary of each one of them?

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS—ROUND HOUSE AT ST. FOY

Mr. PARENT:

On the Motion for a copy of all letters, reports exchanged between engineers and officers of the Canadian National Railways concerning the demolition of the round house at St. Foy, opposite the Quebec bridge, the removal from that place of a mechanical staff to a place called Charny on the other side of the St. Lawrence River; the proposed demolition of the station on the main line of the Transcontinental Railway at Quebec bridge

Hon. Mr. REID: There are no letters or reports that were exchanged between officers of the Canadian National Railways in the Department of Railways and Canals with reference to this matter. I would therefore suggest that the motion be dropped.

Mr. ROBB: The hon. member who gave notice of the Motion is not present.

Mr. SPEAKER: The Motion stands.

WHARF AT ST. MICHEL, QUE.

Mr. C. A. FOURNIER (Bellechasse) moved:

For a copy of all correspondence, documents, telegrams, reports, memoranda, tenders and contracts, having reference to or in connection with the repairs of the wharf situated at St. Michel, County of Bellechasse, Quebec, from October 1st, 1918, to date.

Hon. Mr. REID: Is this wharf maintained by the Department of Railways or by the Department of Public Works?

Mr. FOURNIER: It is under the Department of Public Works.

Motion agreed to.

FORTIFICATIONS OF QUEBEC CITY

Mr. C. G. POWER moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the ancient walls and fortifications of the city of Quebec, having for all military purposes become obsolete, it is expedient in order to better preserve these valuable heirlooms as a historical monument for future generations, that their upkeep and control be now vested in the National Battlefields Commission.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this motion came up for discussion on a previous occasion when the Minister of Militia (Mr. Guthrie) stated that he would have an investigation made by his officers into the practicability of carrying out this proposition. In a few words the situation is that the walls and fortifications of Quebec are rapidly crumbling away; that it would require a considerable sum of money to keep them in a fit and proper condition; and that—I think this is generally admitted—they no longer serve useful purpose in so far as military necessities are concerned. I think it is universally recognized that in these days of high power artillery, and other implements of warfare which we now have, the walls of any fortified town, however well protected, cannot resist for any great length of time, so that for military purposes these defences have become obsolete. On the other hand, the associations connected with the walls and fortifications of Quebec, and with the city of Quebec itself, are such that, to my mind, and I think most hon. members will agree with me, it would be a pity to see these monuments of our country's glorious past disappear. It should be our duty, in order to promote a true Canadian spirit to encourage so far as possible a reverence and admiration for the memory of those of our forefathers who have accomplished much on this continent to make Canada the nation which it is and to enable it to reach that higher status to which we hope it will attain. These are the considerations which have permitted me to once more place this motion on the Order Paper. I may say that the proposition has been received by the newspapers of Quebec city and elsewhere, with considerable approval. It is not a matter in which politics intervene, for Conservative and Liberal journals alike have given the project their blessing. The different public bodies in the city of Quebec have also, I understand, on several occasions passed resolutions favouring it. I do not know that there is any more to add except that if the Minister of Militia has not had time on account of his numerous occupations to look into this matter since March 16th, I think it was, last year, when the resolution was first debated, I would like him to give this subject very serious consideration during the coming year. Should he transfer the cost of the upkeep of these walls and fortifications to an independent body such as the National Battlefields Commission he will undoubtedly relieve his department of a burden which should not belong to it and which, from a military standpoint, does not make for the efficiency of our defences in Canada.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (Minister of Militia): The House will well remember the occasion last year on which my hon. friend brought this matter to its attention and the very excellent address which he delivered at that time.

[Mr. Power.]

I remember, too, in replying to my hon. friend upon that occasion I intimated that inquiry would be made into all questions pertaining to the ancient walls and fortifications of the city of Quebec to see if it were possible to meet the suggestions contained in his motion, which was to the effect that the Government should hand over these ancient walls and fortifications to the Battlefields Commission—a Commission which was established a number of years ago and which still continues to function.

During last summer I had the pleasure of looking over those fortifications myself, and I instructed an engineer of the department of Militia and Defence to examine them and report thereon. According to that report I may inform the House that it would not be considered proper, at the present time at all events, to transfer the whole of these walls or structures to the Battlefields Commission. Some parts of the fortifications are still in use, and will continue to be in use by the Department of Militia for a long time to come. There are portions of the fortifications which are not used, and which I agree with my hon. friend are rapidly falling into decay, and considerable expenditure will have to be made at some time in the near future if these walls are to be preserved in their ancient grandeur and strength. Moderate expenditure might be made from time to time which would probably maintain them in a condition suitable for their historical value and associations, but to rebuild them would involve, according to my information, a very large amount of money.

I think I might give the House also a brief report in regard to those portions of the walls which should be handed over to the Battlefileds Commission, and as to those portions which, in the opinion of the engineers of the Militia Department, it would be necessary to retain for the use of the department. For this purpose the walls have been divided into sections, and those familiar with the city of Quebec will readily locate the various portions from the description which I shall now give to the House.

Section 1 is described as a section from Mountain Hill to the intersection of Des Ramparts and Canoterie streets. It consists only of the walls at the top of the cliff and a very narrow strip of ground adjoining the street. This portion is not used for military purposes and might be handed over.

Section 2 runs from the above point to the foot of Palace Hill comprising the walls and face of the cliff. This section is of no use for military purposes and might also be handed over. The property at the foot of the cliff and fronting on Canoterie and St Valier streets is now being valued by the department of Public Works with a view to offering it for sale.

Sections 3 and 4 comprise the Dominion Arsenal site. They form the northern and western enclosures of that site, which is used for ordnance and other military purposes, and possession of these portions should be retained.

Section 5 runs from St John's Gate to St Louis Gate. It consists of rampart walls and the St. John, Kent and St. Louis Gates. It is of no use for military purposes and might also be handed over.

Section 6 comprises that portion from St Louis Gate to the face of the cliff. This section is of no use from a defence point of view. It comprises the walls enclosing the ditch of the Citadel. The Citadel itself, consisting of casemates and buildings, is used for housing the garrison and should be retained; but section 6 might be handed over to the Battlefields Commission, if desired.

Section 7 consists of the ramparts along the face of the cliff to the southeast corner of the Citadel. It forms part of the walls of the buildings of the Citadel, and should be retained.

Section 8 is a section running from the southeast corner of the Citadel to the present site of the Post Office. It consists of the wall facing the Terrace, which is already leased to the city of Quebec. This section is not used by the Department of Militia and Defence and might be handed over to the Battlefields Commission.

To recapitulate, I might say that of the sections I have enumerated, sections 1, 2, 5 and 8 might be handed over to the Battlefields Commission if the House so decides; sections 3, 4 and 7 should be retained for the purposes of the department; and section 6 might also be handed over if there is any special reason for such action.

The question of cost is something that the House will have to deal with. As hon. members are aware, we make an annual grant to the National Battlefields Commission. The grant in the Estimates this year for the purposes of that commission amounts in all to about $51,600. It will be found at page 62 of the Estimates. If the work of repairing these walls is undertaken, a considerable amount of money will have to be provided.

Mr. VIEN: Will the minister allow me a question? Is there any item in the Estimates this year for the upkeep of the walls?

Mr. GUTHRIE: No, there is no specific item in the Estimates of the Department of Militia and Defence, nor in the general Estimates for the upkeep of these walls. Any repairs that have been made from time to time have been defrayed out of a vote for the department under the heading of "Engineers' Services". But as time goes on more extensive repairs will be needed. I have asked the officers of the department to prepare a scheme and as nearly as possible to estimate the annual cost of the upkeep of this property. As soon as that is available I shall lay it before the House, and then I think the time will have come for some definite action to be taken in regard to these ancient walls and fortifications.

Mr. MOWAT: Mr. Speaker, in connection with this motion, I desire to bring before the House something which is so cognate to the subject under discussion that I am sure you will not consider it out of order. I refer to improvements or repairs to the fortifications of the most ancient of upper Ontario's forts—those at Kingston.

Mr. SPEAKER: I am afraid the hon. member would be distinctly out of order in discussing the fortifications at Kingston, because this is a specific resolution having to do wth the fortifications in the city of Quebec. The rules are very clear that under these circumstances the debate must be restricted rigorously to the specific subject before the House. Therefore, I do not think the hon. member would be in order.

Hon. S. C. MEWBURN (East Hamilton): Mr. Speaker, many of the remarks of the hon. member for South Quebec (Mr. Power) have my entire sympathy. I have felt for some time, particularly when I was occupying the position of Minister of Militia, that unless the fortifications of the Citadel of Quebec are put in repair at an early date the walls will entirely crumble away. I think it will be a lasting disgrace to this country if those walls and fortifications are not preserved for future generations. The hon. member spoke of the glorious past. Well, I think we might also consider the glorious future of this country. I feel, as I felt at that time, that something should be done along the lines of the resolution by handing this property over to the National Battlefields Commission. I also realize that a considerable portion of that property is required for military purposes. If the country is in a position to build other barracks or accommodation for military purposes in the city of Quebec, then, indeed, the whole property might with wisdom be handed over. But having regard to the statement made by the Minister of Militia, I am satisfied that the hon. member for Quebec South will view the situation in the same light and will feel that the purpose of his motion will be met when the minister brings down the report to which he has referred.

Mr. THOMAS VIEN (Lotbiniere): Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my gratification at hearing the very comprehensive statement that the Minister of Militia (Mr. Guthrie) has just made to the House. The arrangement that he has proposed would seem to meet the military requirements, and, at the same time, the necessity of maintaining this beautiful landmark as an historic monument for future generations. It is the custom in the older countries of Europe, such as England and France, to preserve such historic landmarks, not only on account of their beauty as architectural monuments, but also as a lesson in history to present and future generations. There are few landmarks which are so instructive or so capable of giving inspiration to the people of our country as those which are the subject of this debate. It is true that we have the fortifications of Kingston and others of Ontario, and also the Citadel at Halifax. These military works at Halifax, Quebec and Kingston should, to my mind, be preserved as a lesson to present and future generations. The best arrangement, I think, would be to transfer to the Battlefields Commission those sections which are not used for military purposes and keep under the department, as suggested by the minister, those that are used. I am sure that the House will vote, and the country will appreciate, any expenditure which may be necessary for the upkeep of these military works, which will be of such value to coming generations.

Mr. GEORGE PARENT (Quebec West): Mr. Speaker, I have just one word to add to the very interesting remarks which have just been made by the member for Lotbiniere (Mr. Vien). The upkeep of the walls of the city of Quebec is a matter of interest to us all, especially to those who happen to represent the constitutency in which they are located. In this connection it might not be out of place to direct the attention of the House to what a former Governor General of Canada, Earl Grey, did for the city of Quebec when he created what we call the Battlefields Park. Earl Grey took an interest not only in the Battlefields, but also in the walls of the city; he made certain improvements in those walls which are much admired by tourists. If it was the object of Earl Grey to emphasize the fact that these walls should be preserved for future generations, he went far toward accomplishing that object, and those who follow in his footsteps will be acting wisely indeed.

Mr. POWER: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member has the right to reply, and I must call the attention of the House to the circumstance that the debate is closed if he does so.

Mr. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the Minister of Militia (Mr. Guthrie) for the evidence which he has given us of the interest which he takes in matters affecting his department as brought before the House by private members. I wish also to apologize to him and to the House for my somewhat premature suspicions regarding the work which he accomplished during the recess in this connection. I had thought that this ministerial promise had met the usual fate and that the work had been neglected. I may say that the minister has astonished as well as pleased me by the able and intelligent report which he has brought down. The report shows that the officers of his department have really done some work; that they have taken into consideration the claims made by members on this side and have studied the question thoroughly. The report seems to be very complete, and I assure the minister that the citizens of Quebec will be grateful to him that he has done good work for his country, and—what is, perhaps, more important to him—that his department will be materially benefited thereby. I suppose that the best I can do under the circumstances is to accept the report and the explanations given by the minister—which I consider to be sufficient—and ask leave to withdraw my motion.

Motion withdrawn.

THE CASE OF W. H. TAPLEY

Mr. P. F. CASGRAIN (Charlevoix-Montmorency) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Governor in Council should cancel the privileges extended to one W. H. Tapley of Montreal, under the provisions of the Ticket of Leave Act, and that he should be re-arrested and sent back to the penitentiary to finish the term of the sentence imposed upon him in the best interests of justice and the community.

He said: Mr. Speaker, last year, on the 5th of May I moved in this House a resolution calling for the production of copies of letters, telegrams, documents and correspondence in reference to the release from the penitentiary of one W. H. Tapley and one E. L. Baugh. At that time the hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty) replied in this way:

It is impossible to assent to the passing of this resolution. It is very well recognized in the House that correspondence with regard to applications for tickets of leave is of a confidential nature and is not to be brought down. There are numerous instances in which the matter has been brought up, and the last time I recollect its being discussed was in 1913, when the subject was discussed on both sides of the House, and when the late Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier entirely concurred in the view that these papers were not of a kind that ought to be ordered to be brought down.

The motion was dropped at that time. As you will see, Mr. Speaker, in a certain way I was balked and prevented from obtaining certain information under the assumption that this was the practice in years past. I have no intention of discussing the practice at that time. There may have been different circumstances, on account of which our late and revered leader thought that at that time, in 1913, it was not proper to put before the House certain correspondence in connection with release under the Ticket of Leave Act. If I present this resolution to-day, it is not that I have any ill-feeling or grudge or something personal against this Mr. Tapley of Montreal, and indeed, I might say that I have none against anyone. I am presenting this resolution in order to bring before the House the circumstances which at present obtain in regard to this matter. Mr. Tapley is very well known in the city of Montreal and the whole district as a usurer and money lender. For years past, before he was convicted and sent to the penitentiary, he was extorting money, against the law known as the Money Lenders' Act, from different persons at exorbitant rates of interest, running as high as 120 per cent, if not more in certain cases. What happened was this. One day in 1914, Mr. Tapley was arrested, and after trial before the Court of Kings bench, he was found guilty of rape and incest upon Lorita Tapley, his daughter, and he was sent to the penitentiary for a term of thirty years, being sentenced by Judge Lavergne on March 25, 1914. Since that time, I might say that many people have been at peace and liberty in Montreal. Last year, however, about the month of February or March, this gentleman appeared in Montreal after having obtained his conditional release under the provisions of the Ticket of Leave Act. Since that time, he has endeavoured to revive all the old judgments standing in his favour against different persons in our city, and lately there appeared editorials in regard to the matter in the press, especially in the Montreal Star, which, by the way, is a good paper—sometimes I agree with it, and most of the time I do not agree with it, but in this case, I think the campaign in that paper was a good one. In different editorials which appeared in the Montreal Star from the end of December to the middle of January, facts were presented to the public which I and some other people in Montreal though ought to be brought to the attention of the House. In the Montreal Star of 23rd December, 1920, the following heading appears:

Montreal shark puts the screws on.

And there follows a compendium of a judgment of the Circuit Court of the city and district of Montreal from which we see that this man, on a judgment for $20 obtained interest at the rate of 120 per cent per annum and five per cent per annum on $79.80. This case, I might say, was handled on behalf of the defendant by one of the friends of the Minister of Justice, Mr. Frank Curran, K.C., of the city of Montreal, who is one of the eminent members of our Bar. This gentleman proposes to discuss this case when it comes up in Court for trial and to try to have the provisions of the Money Lenders' Act applied in reducing the rate of interest charged by Mr. Tapley. Later, on the 3rd January, 1921, some more facts were brought out by the Montreal Star to the public at large under the heading—I will not read the whole article; I shall be satisfied with quoting the headlines:

Three more relate their experiences with Tapley—all cases based on ancient judgments and seek 120 per cent interest.

On January 4, 1921, other facts were brought to the knowledge of the public, one statement being that:

They had fallen behind in their rent and the landlord was already in Tapley's clutches. Cost them great deal to get out.

On January 5, 1921, this heading appeared:

When court was kind to Tapley he revived old game.

At the time Tapley came out, the civil authorities lifted the interdict which took away his civil rights, and he immediately started his old game and practice. On January 8, 1921, we have another editorial in the Montreal Star dealing at length with the judgments he has, amounting to over $40,000 and it states:

All of them are alive and he may proceed to collect. Has been inactive for a week now. A typical Tapley move.

On January 11, 1921, we have an explanation of a case where a loan of $20 grew to $350 thanks to the ways and methods of Mr. Tapley in doing business with different people to whom he had lent money. On January 11 there is another article reporting an interview which a representative of the press had with Mr. Tapley, and in which he said that he did not care an iota—I will not use the other expression, which is more vulgar—for anybody or any court; that he would go on and do as he used to do before, and that he had, while working in a bank, learned how to gauge borrowers. I have received numerous letters from different people in Montreal who have been unfortunate enough to deal with this man. I had many cases to defend against this man a few years ago, and I had given an interview in a newspaper regarding this case. I received one letter which I think it might be of interest to read to the House because it deals with this matter and, in a certain way, with the popularity of certain members of the Government:

Montreal, January 17, 21.

P. F. Casgrain, K.C., M.P.,
Sir: C. J. Doherty—

I would like to put the prefix "Right Hon." but the letter does not bear it.

—C. J. Doherty arrived at G.T.R. station, morning, so popular that not a soul was there to meet him. This is the weakling you want to get after. Leave no stone unturned until you make him tell how he let that —— Tapley out.

I will not use the qualifying expression.

Mr. Casgrain, you are the only man who has the courage in the House of Commons to make him answer you and the public. Every one of us owe you a debt of gratitude for the able way you are handling this case. Keep right at it, Sir. Don't take no for an answer.

And the letter says:

Make this four-flusher answer you.

I will not say that.

[Mr. Casgrain.]

Mr. SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. CASGRAIN: I said, I will not say it.

Mr. SPEAKER: I would draw the hon. members' attention to the circumstance that he cannot read from any letter or document any reference in respect to a minister or a member of this House which he could not say as a member, and I hope he will be very guarded in reading statements reflecting on any member.

Mr. CASGRAIN: I bow to your ruling. The letter goes on to say that it wishes me success and hopes that I will obtain a favourable answer, and it is signed by I. B. Hamilton. Section 12 of chapter 150 of the Statutes of Canada, 1906, the Act which deals with the conditional release of prisoners, or the Ticket of Leave Act, states that under certain circumstances, when a person, who has been released under ticket of leave, obtains his living and acts and does certain things by means which are dishonest—I have not the correct translation in English here; I have the French version in which paragraph (b) reads:

(b) qui lui paraît se procurer sa subsistance par des moyens malhonnêtes.

It may be that the means which this gentleman is taking to obtain his living are legal in a certain way if he can get away with it, but the question is as to the honesty of his methods, and I humbly submit that when such facts as I have brought before the House to-day are known to the minister, he will surely see to it that my motion is granted, or at least that a proper explanation is given to this House and to the people at large if there was any real excuse or reason for letting this man out of jail after having served only a few years of his sentence.

Hon. HUGH GUTHRIE (acting Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member (Mr. Casgrain) who has brought this matter to the attention of the House, may I be permitted to say at the outset that it is my duty to absolve the Minister of Justice (Mr. Doherty) from all knowledge and responsibility in connection with the matter? As a matter of fact, I think that the Minister of Justice was not in Canada at the time action was decided upon in connection with this case. My hon. friend who has moved the motion is fully aware of the practice which has obtained in this Parliament, I suppose I am safe in saying, since the days of Confederation down to the present time, namely, that documents are not laid before Parliament relating to criminal cases where clemency is sought, or in cases where clemency has been exercised by the Crown. It has been stated, and I believe the statement is accurate, that only in three cases since Confederation—very important and outstanding cases—has Parliament seen fit to order that papers be produced. The reports made in connection with such cases are of a highly confidential nature. If they were not treated with the strictest confidence it is very doubtful whether reports could be obtained in many instances.

Now, in the particular case under consideration, representations were made that cast very serious doubt upon this man's guilt in connection with the charge upon which he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of thirty years. The crime was a most revolting and abominable one. Certain public bodies in the city of Montreal took action in the matter, among others the Salvation Army, which, I suppose, was the most active of the participants in this case. The man's two sons, who had served nobly in France, one of them wounded, and the other coming back without a leg, on their return to Canada also took a deep interest in the case. The chief witness, in fact the only witness in the case, absolutely withdrew the whole evidence given at the trial upon which the man was convicted. This evidence was withdrawn in a sworn statement by the only witness in the prosecution. Explanations were given as to why the original evidence had been given in the prosecution against this man, and one very prominent body in Montreal, as I have said, the Salvation Army, went fully into the matter, making an elaborate report, and the officers of the department likewise investigated the case as exhaustively as possible, with the result that there is very grave doubt as to whether the man was actually guilty of the crime with which he had been charged. He had served, including remission earned under our law, some seven years of his term in penitentiary, a very substantial period. His conduct had been good, grave doubt existed as to his guilt and under all the circumstances it was considered a proper case in which to make a recommendation to his Excellency the Governor General, that he be granted a ticket of leave—not that he be free, but that he be permitted to serve the rest of his sentence under the ticket of leave system, which imposes upon him very strict conditions with which he must comply for the next twenty-three years of his life; otherwise, he is liable at any time to be rearrested and made to serve the rest of his term.

My hon. friend's motion asks that this man be rearrested and sent back to penitentiary. When ticket of leave is granted under the Ticket of Leave Act, it is absolutely forfeited and the man must go back to jail if he commits any indictable offence. An indictable offence involves absolute forfeiture of ticket of leave. Revocation of his ticket of leave takes place upon his conviction of an offence punishable on summary conviction under this or any other Act. If he commits an indictable offence, forfeiture takes place immediately; if he commits a minor offence, revocation may take place forthwith; and, in either case, he goes back to prison. But in addition to these facts, if he violates any of the conditions of his ticket of leave, he is liable to go and serve the balance of his term. In connection with all tickets of leave granted, the following conditions are imposed:

1. The holder shall preserve his license and produce it when called upon to do so by a magistrate or a peace officer.
2. He shall abstain from any violation of the law.
3. He shall not habitually associate with notoriously bad characters, such as reputed thieves and prostitutes.
4. He shall not lead an idle and dissolute life without visible means of obtaining an honest livelihood.

And he must comply with any other conditions which His Excellency the Governor General may impose. Then there is the other clause of the statute referred to by my hon. friend, which imposes further conditions. Section 12, subsection 2, provides as follows:

If it appears from the facts proved before the justice—

That is, in the event of the man being rearrested or charged with any offence.

that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the convict so brought before him is getting his livelihood by dishonest means, such convict shall be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act, and his license shall be forfeited.

The law is particularly plain upon this point, and the procedure in such cases is exceedingly simple. If the man whose case is now under discussion is guilty of getting his livelihood by dishonest means, his ticket of leave is forfeited and he goes back to prison. But the fact that he is living dishonestly must be established. From what I have learned from the statement of my hon. friend who moved this motion, this man seems to have been a money lender who holds certain judgments against certain debtors. They are apparently judgments of the court, and so long as they stand I assume they are valid judgments; and I do not think that any one would suggest that a creditor in pursuing his rights under a judgment could be held to be getting his livelihood by dishonest means. I know nothing of the circumstances or conditions in regard to the debts which led up to the judgments. All that my hon. friend has to say on that score may be absolutely true, but this is the question that confronts us: Is the man living a life in accordance with his ticket of leave or his license? Is he free from crime? If he is he will not be molested. Is he obtaining his living by dishonest means? If he is, he will be arrested. There are courts in the city of Montreal competent to try such matters and reach a proper conclusion: I am sure the House is not such a tribunal.

My hon. friend's motion simply asks that the license, or ticket of leave, granted to this man be set aside, and that he be arrested and sent back to the penitentiary to finish his term. The motion asks us to do something in this House contrary to the plain meaning and effect of the Ticket of Leave Act. The Act declares—that is, this Parliament has said—that under these conditions this man shall be permitted to serve the balance of his sentence at large so long as he lives up to the conditions imposed upon him under his ticket of leave and under the Act of Parliament. My hon. friend's motion seeks practically to set aside the provisions of this Act of Parliament, and the license granted under that Act, and re-arrest this man. I think when the matter is clearly placed before my hon. friend, he will see that the position which he has taken is hardly a sound one, much room as there may be for comment upon the actual condition which exists in regard to this matter in Montreal. I know nothing of these facts, but from my hon. friend's statement I take it that the man has obtained judgments in respect of debt against some people in that city, that he is a pretty ardent creditor and is pursuing the debtors unduly or with great vigour as the case may be. But the law gives him that right. If the judgments are wrong they will be set aside in the civil courts. If he is breaking the law, bring him before the magistrate and have him re-committed; but so long as he lives up to the license that has been granted him under the Act of Parliament that man should not be molested.

Motion negatived.

QUEBEC RIOTS OF 1918

On the proposed motion by Mr. Casgrain,

That, in the opinion of this House, the proper measures should be adopted in order to insure to the citizens who sustained any losses on account of the so-called Quebec riots in 1918, proper indemnity for such losses.

Mr. CASGRAIN: I am ready to proceed with the motion, but I am informed that there are other members on this side who would like to be heard in connection with the matter. They are not here at present, however, and for that reason I would like to have the motion continued.

Mr. SPEAKER: The resolution stands. I take it that the resolution next in order, in the name of the hon. member for West Quebec (Mr. Parent), is practically the same motion. Perhaps under those circumstances the hon. member would consent to drop that resolution.

Mr. LAPOINTE: Resolution No. 15 of the hon. member for Charlevoix and Montmorency?

Mr. SPEAKER: No, it stands.

Mr. PARENT: I would like my resolution to remain.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member could not debate it until the preceding resolution is disposed of. As a matter of fact he could not debate it this session at all.

Mr. CASGRAIN: Then I will withdraw my motion.

Mr. SPEAKER: Resolution 15 (Mr. Casgrain) dropped. Resolution 16 (Mr. Parent) stands.

HUDSON BAY RAILWAY

Mr. J. A. CAMPBELL (Nelson) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, work on the Hudson Bay railway which was commenced in 1910 and continued to the end of 1918 should be resumed as early this year as possible, and the project completed without any further delay.

He said: Mr. Speaker, you will recollect that in 1911 an important election campaign was fought in Canada. The main issue during that compaign was the question of reciprocity. In the West, however, there were a few other questions which were very important, in fact not much less important, than the issue alluded to. These were the transfer to the Prairie Provinces of their natural resources, and the completion of the Hudson Bay railway which at that time had been started. Owing to the fact that the Conservative party at that time were not prepared to submit a policy upon the question of reciprocity which met with the approval of the western people, they laid particular emphasis upon the other two issues referred to and gave them much prominence in their platform and in their speeches. I shall not now discuss the question of the transfer to the provinces of their natural resources; that matter is dealt with in another resolution which stands on the Order Paper in my name. However as to the Hudson Bay railway and its completion, I wish to read a clause or plank in the platform of the Conservative party at that time. It is known as the Halifax platform and clause 3 of the document reads as follows:

> Construction of the Hudson Bay railway and its operation by an independent commission.

That was a plank or pledge, in the platform of the late Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden who, during his western tour in that campaign, had this to say about the project.

> The Conservative party has been committed to the construction of the Hudson Bay railway since 1896. The road will be built by the next Conservative Administration without one day's unnecessary delay. It will be operated by an independent commission on behalf, and in the interests, of the people, with full control of rates.

It is hardly necessary for me to say, Mr. Speaker, that that pledge has not been implemented, that the road has not been built, and that delays—both unnecessary and otherwise—have taken place. In brief the situation is as follows: For a period of almost half a century the Hudson Bay Railway project has been before the people of Canada. The history of the enterprise is most unique. There never has been, nor is there now, any party or party leader opposed to the undertaking. On the contrary the construction of the railway has been advocated and promised by all political parties and leaders from the time of the government of Sir John A. Macdonald to the present, the only point of disagreement being as to what party or what government could best and most expeditiously construct the road. The feasibility and practicability of the Hudson Bay route was investigated by different expeditions and commissions. Reports were duly presented and on the strength of these the Government of the day, that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, decided to build the railway and were strongly supported by the then opposition, under the leadership of Mr. (now Sir) Robert Borden. The work was commenced in 1910. On the change of Government in 1911, operations were stopped pending further investigation by the new Government, and re-commenced in 1912, the announcement then being made that the road would be finished in 1915. The outbreak of the war caused no cessation in operations, in fact the work of construction was even accelerated. Most of the work on the road and nearly all that on the terminals was done in the years, 1915, 1916 and 1917. An item of $1,000,000 was in the Estimates of 1918 to complete the road but practically no work was done that year except the small amount to complete the bridge over Kettle rapids.

The war ended in 1918 and so did the work on the railway. The situation was then, and is now, as follows: The grade is completed from the Pas to Port Nelson, a distance of 424 miles. Steel is laid 332 miles involving the construction of two steel bridges at a cost of over $700,000. The total cost to date is approximately $14,000,000 for the railway, and work on the terminals has cost over $6,000,000. It is necessary to lay only 92 miles of steel to connect the railway with the terminals, and the estimated cost is $1,700,000. And now after all these years, after carrying on the work throughout the war period, after about $21,000,000 has been spent, and just when the end is in sight, it would appear that the Government has abandoned, for an indefinite period, the project to disuse, deterioration and decay while deciding to go on with other public works, mainly in the East, an action that on the face of it passes my comprehension.

This project has been before the people of Canada for over half a century. It came up at the time of the entrance of Manitoba into the Confederation in 1870. I well remember when a very young boy in Winnipeg being interested, as everybody was, in the election campaign of 1887, the candidates there being Hugh Sutherland and William B. Scarth, the latter the candidate of Sir John A. Macdonald's Government. The only question at issue was the construction of the Hudson Bay railway, and the only point of interest to the people was which one of the candidates could best bring about that desired end. The Government of the day made a strong bid for support, and as a result their candidate won out by about twelve votes, I think it was, purely and simply on that issue.

In 1896, before the general election was held, the then leader of the Conservative party and Prime Minister of Canada, Sir Charles Tupper, had this to say re the proposed construction of the Hudson Bay railway:

I cannot understand why any hon. gentleman should be induced to denounce and endeavour to hold up to ridicule, as impracticable, a work upon which not only the sentiments of the people of Manitoba and the Northwest are centred to-day as upon no other question, but a work that I believe, having studied it carefully for many years, is of the most vital consequence to the progress and development of that great country. Now, Sir, I have always been recognized in this House as one who believes thoroughly in Manitoba and the Northwest. Indeed, I may say that, in my judgment, the rapid development and progress of Canada as a whole depends more upon the development of that great prairie region between the Red river and the Rocky mountains, than upon any other scheme that can be devised.

All hon. members will recollect the result of that general election. The matter came up in the second session of 1896 by a question from the gentleman who is now member for Springfield (Mr. Richardson), and in reply Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that an investigation would be proceeded with, as it was the duty of the Government to do so, and afterwards the matter would be gone on with at the earliest possible date. That investigation was proceeded with in various ways during the next few years. In 1906 the matter again came up in this House on a resolution by Mr. W. E. Knowles: That in the opinion of this House it is urgently necessary that the Government should take all possible steps for the speedy construction of a railway to the shores of Hudson bay. The hon. Thomas Greenway, speaking to the motion, mentioned the fact that thirty years before he had been a member of a committee that took evidence in this connection. The right hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster)—who I am sorry to see has left his seat—had some very pertinent remarks to make on the question at that particular time. He spoke as follows:

With reference to the special one which has been brought up to-day, I believe the time has come—

That was in 1907.

—when the Hudson Bay railroad should be more than an academic question, just to be talked of sympathetically. I believe it ought to be built, and it cannot be built now any too soon. I believe the best plan for building it would be to add the sympathy of the Northwest provinces to the sympathy of the Dominion Government as the central power, join all these sympathies together and make the sympathy practical, and have the road built on fair conditions up to the great northern port of Canada. I think without doubt that the prophecy that was hinted at by the mover of this resolution, and the sentiment expressed by myself, cannot be held to be true until it is actually put into experiment; but I believe that a four months' season is perfectly feasible for that northern route. If the old Hudson Bay company, a hundred years ago, got their punts in there through the ice and storms, and made their ports with great regularity, and had an average season of between three and four months for a long period, what can be done with modern forces of invention, with vessels built of any degree of strength you wish, and with any amount of motive power you want to put into them, in comparison with those early pioneers? So I believe it is perfectly feasible to have an open route there and a commercial route as well for four months and possibly a good deal longer period, if the proper attempts are made for carrying out the experiment to a practical conclusion.

A little later he said:

The opening up of this route may work as great changes in that section as the Tehuantepec railway which has just been opened across the Mexican peninsula and the Panama canal, ten or twenty years hence when it is completed will work in connection with Atlantic and Pacific trade routes in the central part of this continent. I should like to see Canada get her short line in the north built as quickly as possible, and I believe that it will greatly enhance the value of Canadian products and of Canadian lands and the wealth of the Canadian nation as a whole.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in that debate said:

I agree with every sentiment which has been uttered here that there could be no difference of interest between the East and the West. What is doing good for the West is doing good for the East, and vice versa.

In 1908 there was what might be called a full dress debate in this House in connection with that resolution. Fourteen hon. members, both of Conservative and Liberal complexion took part in it. The West, of course, was represented, as was also Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and the result of the debate showed the House was practically unanimous in the conclusion that the work should be gone on with. If you permit me, Mr. Speaqer, I shall read a few brief quotations from the speeches made at that time. The gentleman who is now Sir Richard Lake, the late Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan, spoke as follows:

Let me also say that which I think has not been called attention to this evening, namely, this route will be most useful from a military standpoint.

I intended to discuss the question from that standpoint myself, but I am going to let the words of Sir Richard Lake suffice:

Should unhappily we ever be in a state of war in Canada, such a line of railway would be most invaluable to Canada and to the Empire, and it would also be invaluable as affording a safer trade route than any now existing for the food supplies of the Mother Country. Even if we look at it from a certain point of view, it would give us an immense advantage over any rivals we may have in the furnishing of that food supply, because there can be no doubt that the northerly route would be the safest for the transport of food products to the United Kingdom. It would afford a short route also, the shortest of all routes, by which Imperial troops could be quickly and expeditiously and safely conveyed to the Far East. . . . We do not look upon that as an enterprise in the ordinary acceptation of the term; we look upon it as an absolute necessity to the continued development of our great provinces in the Northwest.

Mr. A. A. McLean, the then member for Queen's, spoke as follows:

It really seems to me in looking at the map that every man east of the Baie des Chaleurs ought to hold up his hand for the construction of a railway to Fort Churchill, provided they are convinced of the navigability of Hudson straits for even five months in the year. The industrial communities of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island would thereby secure easy access to the northern part of this continent for their manufactured products by securing direct water shipment and avoiding the heavy tolls charged on the different railways, while so far as regards the agricultural interests of Prince Edwad Island and Cape Breton, contiguous to the route, there is every reason to suppose that they would be able to find a ready market among our own people for all they have to sell.

Mr. George W. Fowler, then representing King's and Albert, and now in the Senate, and who recently presided over a committee that investigated this project and made the last report in connection therewith, said:

The question of the Hudson Bay railway is a very important question to the people of the West. I do not believe that a more feasible route for a new transportation line can be found than by way of Hudson Bay. For my part, though coming from the extreme East, I am strongly in favour of the construction of this road.

The late Prime Minister, then Mr. R. L. Borden, made these remarks:

In regard to the general question, the subject is one of intense interest to the people of the West. That is perfectly apparent to any gentleman who has gone to the West and who knows how thoroughly the people of Manitoba and the two other provinces are convinced that the Hudson Bay route will give to them an outlet which is absolutely necessary to the full and complete development of their country.

Mr. McCarthy, who then represented Calgary, spoke along the same lines. And I need not read the speech made by Hon. Dr. Roche, who subsequently occupied a position in the Cabinet of Sir Robert Borden. Dr. Schaffner, now Senator Schaffner, who has been a consistent and persistent advocate of this route all along, also spoke to the same effect. I wish to read in this connection an extract from the speech of Mr. J. Herron, of Alberta, which refers particularly to the benefit that the establishment of such a route would confer on the cattle industry. He said:

I would like, however, to say that one phase of the Hudson Bay route which especially commends it to the favour of the people of Southern Alberta, lies in the advantage that it will offer in connection with the shipment of cattle from that range country. Our wild stock raised on the prairies do not take kindly to transportation by rail. It is the long railway journey from Alberta to the sea-coast that takes practically the cream off the business of cattle raising on the western plains; and if we had a railroad to Hudson Bay, it would give us the advantage of a shorter railway journey by 1,000 miles. For that reason alone the people of Southern Alberta are specially interested in the building of that railroad. I would be glad to see the Government take up the question in a practical way and carry it to a termination instead of simply using it for political purposes from year to year, and letting it end at that. With these remarks I merely wish to state that I will support the resolution.

As I have intimated, we have statements there from six different provinces, all emphatically in favour of this project; and the statements are made by gentlemen on both sides of the political fence.

In 1910 the work was commenced by the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier by the construction of a bridge over the Saskatchewan at The Pas. The question, however, again came up in this House in 1911 on motion of Mr. D. B. Neely, then member for Humboldt. I refer to this as I wish to give two or three more quotations, one of which is from the remarks of the Minister of Railways and Canals at that time, the late Hon. Frank Cochrane—and this is very emphatic and definite:

I want to tell him now that this Government will carry out the promises they made when in Opposition. There has been no change of policy in reference to the building of the Hudson Bay railway... There will be no further delay than is absolutely necessary for the checking up of these surveys.

Sir Robert Borden, then Mr. Borden, Prime Minister, said on that occasion:

We expect to proceed with the construction of this road, to preceed with it as soon as we can possibly do so, having regard to what is demanded by the interests of the country both east and west, namely that the very best route shall be selected.

The only question raised at that time it will be noticed was the checking up of surveys and the location of the route. The House will be interested, I am sure, to hear a quotation in this respect from the remarks of the present Minister of Militia (Mr. Guthrie) on that occasion, he was somewhat doubtful as to the Government's bona fides in the matter. He said:

But the attitude of the present Government with regard to the Hudson Bay railway now appears to be that this road is going to be changed, to be delayed, and perhaps indefinitely postponed. That is not a satisfactory condition of affairs.

If, Mr. Speaker, it was not a satisfactory condition in December 1911, it is certainly no less unsatisfactory at the present time. After the conclusion of the election campaign of 1911 the work was stopped, the reason given being that what had been done by the previous Administration needed investigation, and that the question of the route would have to be looked into further. This was done, and in 1912 the work was recommenced. During 1914, 1915, 1916, and 1917, the war years, the greatest amount of work was done on this road. It has always been difficult for me to understand how it was that when we were straining every effort to bring the war to a successful conclusion the greatest amount of work was done and the most money was spent on this project. I can only explain that by the assumption that the Government thought the war might last a considerable length of time and that it was necessary to get the Hudson Bay railway finished in order that it might furnish one important link in the chain of preparations that were being made for the successful conclusion of the war. A great many people thought that if the Hudson Bay railway had been completed when the war broke out, supplies and reinforcements could have been got over much more quickly and thus have materially assisted in bringing about the desired end. However, without going into the details, I may say that approximately three-quarters of the total amount spent on the project was spent during those years.

In 1918 the Estimates contained an item of $1,000,000 for the completion of the road, and it was intimated at that time that by the use of certain material which the Government had on hand the road could be completed for that amount. At the beginning of 1918 all there was to do before going on with the laying of steel was the finishing of the bridge over the Nelson river at Kettle Rapids which bridge cost approximately $400,000 but the completion of this bridge was all the work that was done that year; the money voted was not expended. Some of us in the House at that time urged that if the work was not completed it should at least be gone on with and the rails laid eighteen miles further on in order to connect up with a couple of trestles over the Limestone river and thus prevent their being washed out by spring freshets. Nothing, however, was done, and these trestles have since been lost.

In 1919 the opinion began to prevail out in the West that the Government did not intend to go on with the railway, and as everyone out there was interested, resolutions were passed by various public bodies and delegations came down to Ottawa from Provincial Governments from boards of trade, from Municipal Councils, from Grain Growers Associations and other public associations throughout the West. Delegations from the Provincial Governments of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, the Winnipeg Board of Trade, the Saskatoon Board of Trade, from Boards of Trade of the Pas, Moosomin, Belford, Yorkton, and other places interviewed the Government. I might say that at this time the western members got together and in a caucus which they held passed a very strong resolution urging on the Government that no further delay be incurred in connection with the completion of this project. I shall not read the resolution in toto; I quote simply a couple of clauses from it:

Therefore, it is resolved that in the opinion of the subscribing members of the House of Commons that to leave the road incomplete is to waste a great part of twenty millions of dollars, and that this and not preceding Governments will be held responsible for such waste.

Further down it says:

That the railway is a national undertaking long overdue and until the enterprise is complete, it will be a disturbing element in western thought and Canadian politics. That the experience gained when in Manitoba the Canadian Pacific monopoly was broken and southern railway connections brought added traffic will be repeated, and the resources to be developed by this railway should assure an increase of traffic on existing systems.

This was signed by all but two of the western members, on all sides of politics who were then present.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, I may say that the construction of the Hudson bay railway was a plank in the platforms of all the Dominion parties. It was a plank in the platforms of the parties of the western provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta. It was supported by all the leaders of both parties from the time it first became a public question until the present, including the present leaders of the three parties in this House; yet in the face of this we have the unsatisfactory condition which exists.

I do not propose to go into the question of the feasibility or the practicability of the route; that would appear to me to be simply a work of supererogation. Investigations have taken place; expeditions have been sent out; evidence has been taken by commissions; committees of this House and of the Senate have reported at different times during these years, all practically with the one result as summed up in the last report of the Senate, which was submitted last year, and which, in epitome, said that the Hudson Bay route was feasible and practicable and urged that it be gone on with. One government commenced the work; another government stopped the work in order to envestigate certain features of the project and the procedure in general. Then, after some delay, the work was again resumed rather briskly, but after a number of years, without any reason whatever being given, the work was stopped.

The West is solid for this project, and I am satisfied that the bulk of opinion in the East is favourable to it. The situation in the East has probably changed in recent years, and I know personally that newspapers which formerly opposed this project are now in favour of it. There is no reason whatever why the East should oppose it in any way. Some say that the territory through which the Hudson Bay railway passes is a barren waste and the idea of its being an overseas route is impracticable. We well remember however the statements made when the Canadian Pacific railway was under contract and construction in the first instance, how papers in the East said that it would never pay and how they generally ridiculed the idea that there would ever be any settlements on the western plains. The same statements are now being made as regards the Hudson Bay railway and the north country generally, with the same reason. The arguments adduced at the time the work was started are still good. The western plains are still 1,000 or 1,500 miles nearer to the markets of the world by this route than by any other. It provides an additional route, as was argued at that time. It also provides a natural and exclusively Canadian route, as was also argued then. The evidence brought out shows that cargoes can be shipped over that route by rail and water; that return cargoes can be obtained, and that the straits can be navigated. A casual glance at the map will show that Hudson bay is still in the same position, and it looks as if it were providentially placed there in order to be a great outlet for the products of the West.

Not only are the old arguments good, but since the Hudson Bay railway has been started, additional arguments and reasons for its completion have come to the fore. It is now known that there are in that district resources of which we had not dreamed at the time the Hudson Bay railway was first projected. And the bay itself is an important asset. A few years ago the Timiskaming and Northern Ontario railway was projected and constructed by the Ontario Government to tap the clay belt in northern Ontario. By means of that railway, discoveries have been made which have put Ontario on the map as a mining country, and the benefits of that railway cannot be overestimated. Some such situation as that may occur, in fact is taking place, with regard to the Hudson Bay railway. There is, within fifteen miles from Mile 82 on the railway an important gold deposit which is rapidly coming into prominence and which may yet take its place as a producer alongside that famous district of northern Ontario. I might say also, to give another instance of what the Hudson Bay railway has done for that northern territory, that one of the engineers on the railway, along with a companion in the year 1915, while on a prospecting expedition in that territory, discovered a body of copper sulphide ore from which 26,000 tons have already been shipped to Trail, B.C., at an expense of approximately $50 per ton, the amount realized being over $100 per ton. Thus it was, that the Mandy mine was discovered and brought to the attention of the public. Within a few miles of that mine, there is a deposit of copper, a similar sulphide ore, not nearly so valuable per ton, but much more extensive, which after two or three years of diamond drilling at an expense of probably half a million dollars, has proven up to the extent of sixteen to twenty million tons of an average value of eight to ten dollars per ton. These are a few items showing the situation with reference to the mineral resources up in that country.

Mr. EULER: Is the hon. member favouring the construction of the Hudson Bay railway because of the resources that may be developed in that northern country and for transportation inland, or because of the facilities for transportation overseas?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The original argument for the Hudson bay route was that it would facilitate transportation overseas. But since the road has been under construction, it has been shown that the natural resources, not only in the district, but in the bay itself, are such as would fully warrant the construction of the railway, simply for the purpose of developing those resources by opening up the country, and connecting with the bay itself if the other questions were left out of consideration altogether. Thus, instead of one argument, we have now three arguments for constructing and completing that route at the earliest possible date.

Mr. EULER: Will the hon. member state definitely for how many months in the year one can count on the Hudson strait being open? Is it not the case that it will be open for two months only?

Mr. CAMPBELL: As I said before, I did not purpose going into the question of navigability of the straits and the feasibility of the route generally, on account of the fact that so many commissions have taken evidence on this matter and there is so much evidence that I could take up the time of the House from now until late in the evening going into this question. But as the hon. member asks me what I think, I will tell him, that from the evidence submitted, it is safe to say that the strait will be open for navigation for a period of four months in the year, and that with modern aids to navigation which were not possible in years past, such as the aeroplane, wireless telegraphy and various other instruments that have been discovered within recent years, that period might readily be extended to five months. Personally, I think I am safe in saying that. There are gentlemen who know the situation, who have lived up in the district, who have investigated the matter thoroughly, who will go further than that. There are others who will not go quite so far. If I were to go into this question fully, I would take up more time than I think would be necessary, and I take it for granted that the Government were fully satisfied on this point before they expended $20,000,000 on the project.

In that northern country, in addition to the resources that I have mentioned, there are extensive water-powers. Those on the Nelson are estimated to amount to between two and three million horse-power. The Hudson Bay railway runs for a great distance almost parallel to the Nelson river, and some of those water-powers could be used in connection with the railway itself. There are great areas of pulpwood in close proximity to the water-powers. Besides—and I just wish to mention this fact—notwithstanding statements that have been made otherwise, there are immense areas of land which are suitable for agriculture and which will eventually be developed. In a government publication issued by the Natural Resources Development Branch of the Department of the Interior, this statement is made:

> One of the principal factors in bringing it into prominence, however,—

That is the district and its resources.

> —was the construction of the Hudson Bay division of the Canadian Government railways.

The House is familiar to some extent with the writings of the Messrs. Tyrrell who have travelled that country extensively during the last twenty-five years, and in a book issued by them a statement is made that the Hudson bay itself will be looked upon in the future as a national asset; that it contains immense fishing resources and in the surrounding lands are to be found iron, galena, graphite, mica and other minerals.

The construction of this railway is of paramount necessity to the West.

Canadian Finance is an independent financial journal published in Winnipeg. It is non political and is edited by men who look upon matters from a sound sensible, and practical standpoint. It says:

> The development of the untold resources of the North is dependent to a great extent upon the railroad facilities which the Hudson's Bay Railway will provide.
>
> For this reason, if for no other, the railways should be proceeded with energetically. Western Canada needs it and desires no unnecessary delay in its completion.

That is another statement that will furnish an answer to the question of my hon. friend from North Waterloo (Mr. Euler). The Hudson Bay railway is to the Western Provinces what the Intercolonial was to the Maritime Provinces and what the Canadian Pacific was to British Columbia. With this difference, that not only were definite promises made but agreements were entered into between the Government of the day and the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia respectively regarding these two railways, whereas in connection with the Hudson Bay railway we have simply the statements of different governments and their leaders regarding its construction. Is the word of this Government as good as its bond? If so, this railway will be constructed just as these other railways have been. But if the promise made to the people of the West is not as binding as the promises made to the people of these other parts of Canada, then presumably the project will be allowed to lapse and nothing further be done. We take it, of course, that the Government has regard for its promises and will go ahead with this railway as it is in duty bound to do.

The West and the Government itself appear to be increasingly confident in the success of this railway. If hon. gentlemen will look at the map which used to hang in the Railway Committee room, hut which I have not seen since the new Railway Committee room has been opened, they will find that nearly all, or a great many at all events, of the branch lines which have been constructed recently and are being constructed in the West have been projected with the idea of ultimately connecting up with the Hudson Bay railway. Delegations were here during the last two years from the different parts of the West, one from Moosomin and Yorkton, with the idea of getting a line from the Estevan coal fields almost straight north to connect up with Hudson Bay Junction and the Hudson Bay railway. The line running out of Melfort northeasterly from that point it intended eventually to link up with the Hudson Bay railway, and Saskatoon, and Calgary. I might quote other instances but these are sufficient for the time being. Hon. members will find by the map I have referred to, that fourteen charters have been granted for railways to the Hudson bay, most of them from the west side, but one or two from the east side. Before concluding I might say that as far as I can make out no real reasons have been given for abandoning this project. The only reason that is put forward at the present time is the matter of economy. You may recollect, Mr. Speaker, having read the statement of Artemus Ward, who intimated that he was at the time of the Civil War, ready to sacrifice all his wife's relations on the altar of his country. That seems to be the attitude taken by the Government at the present time. They are prepared to sacrifice this project but they are not prepared to sacrifice other things nearer home. In view of the lavish expenditure of 1919, and of the proposed expenditures in the Estimates which have recently been brought down, wherein provision has been made for Toronto Harbour works, the Welland canal, the ever present Trent canal, a new dry dock at Esquimalt and St. John Harbour works it would seem that one particular undertaking is being sacrificed in the interests of economy, and other new ones brought forward. I had intended to take up the question of providing rails and ties for this railway but shall defer doing so, except to say that the course of the Government in the last few years has shown some of us conclusively and emphatically that there does not appear to be any intention on the part of the Government to go on with this project, but rather to let it lapse into deterioration and decay. I think I am safe in saying that every year the work is allowed to stand as it is will mean the loss of $1,000,000 at least and possibly more. Hon. gentlemen will readily understand that a railway with 324 miles of steel completely laid, and 92 additional miles of a dump, will, if left to the by no means tender mercies of the elements, soon suffer great depreciation and loss.

In conclusion I wish to say, what perhaps is not generally known, that the West itself is paying for this road. In 1909 in a discussion on an item of Supply there appears in Hansard the following:

> Mr. Lake: It was understood by this House, I think, that the money to be expended on the construction of the Hudson Bay railway was to come from a special fund to be created by the sale of pre-emptions.
>
> Mr. Graham: Yes.

It would appear to me unnecessary to read any more in this connection. I made inquiry last year, and got a statement to the effect that approximately $28,000,000 of these pre-emptions had been sold in Western Canada up to that time. Unfortunately, I have not the statement with me, but that is the amount in round figures. Of that $28,000,000 approximately one-half had already been collected. This money, according to the statement I have just read, is intended to be applied to the construction and completion of the Hudson Bay railway.

If ever there was a case made out for any public work in Canada it has surely been made out for the Hudson Bay railway. If ever solemn promises and definite pledges have been given by any political party or its leaders, they have been given in connection with this railway; but these solemn promises have been broken, and not even a plausible excuse has been given. The only conclusion that some of us can come to is that there must be behind the Government some special interests who are opposed to the construction of this road and are preventing further work being done, such interests being, for reasons best known to themselves, not in position to show their hand at the present time. I now beg to move the resolution seconded by the hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Knox).

Right Hon. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I rise not to discuss the resolution, but rather to raise at this juncture a point of order. It seems to me a resolution of this character comes within the category of those which the rules of the House provide cannot be submitted by a private member. It must be manifest to every hon. member that if the resolution passes, it involves at once either the expenditure of public money or the introduction of an appropriation for the purpose. It virtually amounts to a direction by the House for large immediate commitments. It would occur to me that if it is competent for a resolution of this character to be introduced by a private member, it should be just as competent for a Bill involving the same result to be so introduced. In fact, I do not see any value whatever in the well-known reservation that financial commitments are to be initiated by the Government alone, if resolutions of this character can be introduced and discussed. At all events, I submit that thought to yourself, Mr. Speaker, for consideration. I know that no one will be disposed to dispute the wisdom of the rule that acts of Parliament or resolutions involving expenditure of public money should be introduced only at the initiation of the Government, because otherwise there seems to me to be no restraint which the Government, as those fundamentally responsible, can exercise over expenditure. Furthermore, the members of the House themselves are put in a very difficult position if the House is to be committed, either by resolution or by Bill, to large expenditures at the initiation of a private member.

Mr. SPEAKER: The Prime Minister has raised a very intricate point of order, and one on which I would not care to give a decision off-hand. The hon. member whose name has been submitted as the seconder of the resolution has risen to speak, and I would prefer that for the present he go on with his discussion of the resolution. I would prefer to reserve my decision on the point of order in the meantime, and perhaps I shall be able to give it later on in the discussion.

Hon. W. S. FIELDING (Shelburne and Queen's): If I might be permitted on the point of order, while the general ground as stated by my right hon. friend is correct, I think the rules of the House permit an expression of abstract opinion that does not in itself call for public expenditure, and I am inclined to think, and I submit it for your consideration, Mr. Speaker, that the resolution of the hon. gentleman comes within that rule—that it does not call for an expenditure of public money. On the merits of the question I do not wish to say anything at all. I just wish to submit that thought for your consideration on the point of order.

Mr. SPEAKER: It would be quite competent for any hon. member to discuss the point of order, but I would prefer that discussion to come a little later on when I am prepared to give a ruling. In the meantime I would like the seconder of the resolution to proceed with his address.

Mr. ANDREW KNOX (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, in seconding this resolution I wish very briefly to deal with one or two points which I consider of vital importance to the people of the West, and incidentally to the people of the whole Dominion. The hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Compbell) has gone into the matter very fully, and brought out a number of very important points as to why this project should be completed. He has shown that a great asset of the Dominion of Canada exists in this route up to and through the Hudson bay, and I think there can be no question that this asset is at the present time deteriorating and being allowed to go backward instead of forward. I am intensely interested in the development of the natural resources of this country, and particularly of those resources in the great Hinterland of the Northwest more or less tributary to the Hudson bay. I cannot think of anything that would tend to the development of those resources more than the opening up of that country by the Hudson Bay railway. There is one other reason which impresses itself upon my mind as to the necessity of doing something along the line of opening up this route, and that is the fact that at the present time the West is carrying a very heavy burden in the shape of high freight rates. These freight rates have the effect of causing trade and production to stagnate, in that supplies shipped into the West have to be carried over a most expensive system of transportation, and the products of the West have also to be shipped out over that same system. I believe that the development of the Hudson Bay route would overcome that difficulty to a certain extent.

The belief prevails very strongly throughout the West that eastern interests are in some way opposed to the opening up of the Hudson Bay route. Consequently, we believe that the delay in completing the project has been inspired by those interests. That belief does prevail very strongly throughout the West. The people of the West have been looking forward for this railway for a great number of years. I might state that at the annual meetings of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association we have dealt with this question year after year for probably 15 years. A resolution has been passed at every meeting after discussion, and in every case carried by a unanimous vote.

As to the difference in distance for supplies going into the West or produce coming out of the West, if we take some point in the middle West, say the town of Kindersley, which is a prominent central point, we find that the difference in distance to the ocean outlet from Kindersley is almost 1,100 miles in favour of the Hudson Bay route via Nelson as compared with a point such as Montreal. In the constituency I have the honour to represent, which produces a great deal of produce in the shape of both beef and grain, the difference in distance from almost any point in the constituency is over 1,200 miles. This is something which should surely appeal not only to the people of the West but to the whole Dominion, for the more prosperity we have in the West, the more prosperity we have in the whole Dominion. As to the present state of the road, I have not seen it personally, but I have discussed it with people who have been over it, and I wish to quote a short extract from a western newspaper written by a man who is thoroughly conversant with the road and has been over it. He says:

> The ties under those 333 miles of finished track from The Pas to Kettle Rapids are rotten, so rotten that a slow moving train which creeps out twice each month is derailed time after time from spreading rails. The writer was on this train two trips out this past summer, and saw the box cars turned over on their sides, the ties shattered into rotten bits and the rails warped out of shape, because the track is not being taken care of. It is a disgrace to the railway department to so neglect a priceless asset of the Canadian people, and the time will come when somebody must be called to account for this condition of things.

Hon. members from the West have on many occasions drawn the attention of the Department of Railways and Canals to the state of this road, and are anxiously pressing that some attention be paid to it, so that the present condition shall not continue.

I do not intend to go into the question of the feasibility of the route because that has been conceded by both the old political parties, and has been pointed out by my hon. friend from Nelson. I should like, however, to refer to the fact that a Senate committee was appointed last year, consisting of 12 members and in their final report I find this:

> The committee had in view the securing of information on the following points:
>
> (1) The length of the season during which the bay and strait were reasonably navigable, having in view the presence of ice, the occurrence and persistence of snowstorms, the advantages to be gained by aids to navigation, such as wireless telegraphy, lighthouses, fog signals, and hydroplanes.
>
> (2) The style and size of vessels to be used for the carrying trade.
>
> (3) The relative merits of the two ports, Nelson and Churchill, and the relative cost of the development of each port.
>
> (4) The fishing resources of the bay and strait and of the rivers emptying into the bay.
>
> (5) The mineral resources of the country tributary to the bay.
>
> (6) The utilization of the country for the production of meat and furs to be obtained from the reindeer and musk ox, which would subsist upon the extremely nutritious grasses grown there.

This committee was appointed on April 22 of last year, and, after holding fifteen meetings and examining twenty-one witnesses brought from different parts of the Dominion, who had a knowledge of conditions, they submitted their report on June 4. I shall not read the whole report because it is rather lengthy, but I desire to quote the following:

> Your committee makes the following findings upon the evidence adduced before them:
>
> (1) That the Hudson Bay route is feasible and will probably in time be profitable.
>
> (2) That the season of navigation under present conditions is at least four months in length and may by reason of improvements in aids to navigation be considerably increased.

I would draw the attention of the hon. member for North Waterloo (Mr. Euler), who made inquiries as to the length of the season, to the paragraph I have just read.

> (3) That in the opinion of this committee sufficient care was not taken in the selection of Nelson as the terminus of the railway, and that the Government should not make further important expenditures upon this port without first making a new and thorough examination into the relative merits of Churchill and Nelson as a terminus of the railroad.
>
> (4) That the waters of the strait and rivers tributary to the bay teem with fish and valuable marine animals, and we believe that the bay is equally well stocked but there has not yet been sufficient data collected as to the extent of the fisheries of the bay to enable an authoritative statement to be made as to their value.

(5) That the mines already discovered in the Hudson bay district are of sufficient number and richness to indicate the existence of great potential mineral wealth.

(6) Your committee feel that they cannot too strongly endorse the value of the suggestion of Mr. Stefansson as to the cultivation of the reindeer and musk ox, and would urge upon the Government that the Department of the Interior be empowered to take hold of this matter, earnestly taking advantage of what has been done in this regard by the United States Government.

(7) Your committee, although it is somewhat outside the scope of their mandate, cannot close this report without making some reference to the national value of the explorations of Vihljalmur Stefansson. He has completely revolutionized our ideas of the region within the Polar Circle. He has demonstrated that it is possible for white men to live and thrive in that northern region though drawing from no other resources than those afforded by the country itself, and he has proven that those lands which were looked upon as barren and utterly worthless will eventually be a valuable asset to Canada. The committee ventures the hope that the Canadian Government will not be unmindful of the great services performed by Mr. Stefansson, whose reward so far has not been commensurate with the national importance of the work he has accomplished.

(8) Your committee expresses its thanks to the gentlemen who have voluntarily come forward and given valuable evidence upon the important matters under consideration.

(9) Your committee submit herewith an extract in narrative form of the evidence given before the committee, and beg to recommend that one thousand copies of this report and the extract of the evidence be printed in pamphlet form for general distribution.

All which is respectfully submitted.

GEO. W. FOWLER,
Chairman.

I do not wish to detain the House any further, but I would say that we recognize the necessity of economy at the present time. In looking over the Estimates one is struck by the fact that the Government seems bold enough to put an item there for $5,000,000 for the Welland canal, a project which cannot have any immediate result. Such being the case, surely it is not out of place to request that they consider the completion of the Hudson Bay railway.

Mr. SPEAKER: I am prepared to give a ruling on the point of order raised by the Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Meighen), but if any hon. member desires to be heard, he may speak on the point of order now.

Mr. BUREAU: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the point of order is well taken. The fact that an hon. member introduces a resolution for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the House on the subject with which it deals by no means binds the Government to any action involving the expenditure of public moneys. I think there are precedents in support of this contention. If the point of order were sustained, the effect, in my opinion, would be to preclude any member of the House of Commons from expressing his views on any important subject affecting the welfare of the country, or of learning the opinions of other hon. gentlemen. After all, a resolution dealing with any public work must ultimately involve the expenditure of public moneys. For instance, the resolution of my hon. friend from Quebec South (Mr. Power), asks that the walls of Quebec be maintained; and that, as well as any other resolution having for its object the erection of a monument, say, or the performance of any other public work, would ultimately mean the expenditure of public money, if the proposals put forward in the resolution are to be given any effect at all. Now, I do not think it is the intention of the rule to preclude the expression of views by the House on public questions which might ultimately involve public expenditures. The resolution of the hon. member does not necessarily bind the Government; there would first have to be a mandate from the Governor General in Council before public moneys could be spent. I do not think it has ever been the intention of Parliament to prevent members from merely advocating that certain necessary public works should be done. In this case, very many members of this House have decided that the building of the Hudson Bay railway should be completed. I understand that the works have been suspended. To-day an hon. member gets up and asks the House to concur in his opinion, that operations should be resumed. Of course, the resumption of the work would necessitate the voting of money; but that vote would not be by reason of this resolution; it would be in consequence of a resolution introduced by the Government upon which a Bill would be founded. I submit, therefore, that the rule is not applicable in this instance, and the point of order is not well taken. If the Prime Minister's point of order were upheld, hon. members would be prevented from suggesting necessary public improvements for the good of the country.

Mr. SPEAKER: Bourinot says—

Mr. CAMPBELL: Mr. Speaker, I should like to speak to the point of order. Some of the speeches from which I quoted were delivered in a debate similar to this. The matter under discussion was to the same effect as the resolution now before the House, and I might mention that (as a matter of precedent—

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member will pardon my interrupting him. I think I can very well anticipate his line of argument on the point of order, and possibly it might be well for me to suggest that the contention which he evidently intends to advance is sound. Bourinot says, at page 410:

A practice has grown up in the House of allowing the introduction of resolutions by private members, when they do not directly involve the expenditure of public money, but simply express an abstract opinion on a matter which may necessitate a future grant.

It seems to me that the resolution now before the House is entirely covered in the phraseology of the extract I have just quoted. I also find, in May, 12th edition, at page 468, the following:

In like manner, motions advocating public expenditure, or the imposition of a charge, if the motion be framed in sufficiently abstract and general terms, can be entertained, and agreed to by the House. Resolutions of this nature—

And I call the attention of the House particularly to the following sentence——are permissible because, having no operative effect, no grant is made or burthen imposed by their adoption.

It seems to me that there again the authority points to the resolution as being in order. But in looking up the journals of the House I find two cases particularly in point. In 1892, on the 14th of March, Mr. Denison, seconded by Mr. Tyrwhitt, moved:

That, whereas the new United States canal at Sault Ste. Marie is being constructed of a depth of 18 feet, and whereas it is proposed in that country to deepen their canals on the Great Lakes to not less than 20 feet, and whereas the proposed increase in depth has already been made at the mouth of the Detroit river, in the opinion of this House it is expedient that the Soulanges canal and the other canals in the river St. Lawrence should be deepened to 20 feet.

Obviously that resolution was in almost direct terms an authority to expend public money. There was also in the year 1885 a resolution moved by Mr. White (Cardwell) seconded by Mr. Wright:

That in the opinion of this House, the full sessional indemnity of such members of this House as have volunteered, or may volunteer, for service in the North West, and whose services have been or may be accepted, should be paid on their departure from Ottawa.

That resolution in its terms clearly involved the expenditure of money. Taking the general view, it does seem to me that if the House were unduly to restrict hon. members in moving motions of this character it would serve to circumscribe debate to a very marked degree, because after all very few resolutions are moved which would not in themselves, if carried into effect, involve the expenditure of public money. It seems to me that the better principle would be to widen the rule as much as possible in order that the sense of the House may be taken upon these matters, it being understood in all cases that these resolutions merely involve an expression of opinion on the part of the House and that they do not affect the constitutional method of placing upon the Government the responsibility of initiating all legislation which has for its object the expenditure of money. Therefore, under all these circumstances, I must rule that the resolution is in order.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN: (South York): I just wish to say that from my long experience in the House I think your ruling, Mr. Speaker, is absolutely in the right direction, and does protect freedom of debate. But there is a feature of the subject we are now discussing as to which we should have some information, and perhaps the Government will now tell us why the work has been stopped and give us good reason for such action. I think that is the most important consideration for the moment and I would like to have some information on the matter, if that be possible, at this stage of the debate.

Mr. SPEAKER: The hon. member understands that he has exhausted his right to speak.

Mr. MACLEAN: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I understand that.

Hon. J. D. REID (Minister of Railways): I would like to say a few words on this resolution. The hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) stated that the building of the Hudson Bay railway was a plank in the platform of both parties for a number of years. That is true. The railway was commenced by the previous Government, and the work was continued by the Administration of Sir Robert Borden from the time he assumed office in 1911 until the cessation of operations on account of the war. The hon. member must therefore understand that the Government did proceed with the work, and carried it on just as quickly as possible until the project, in common with others, had to be temporarily discontinued at the time of the war. The hon. member also stated that he could not understand why the work could not be proceeded with and that he could not get any sufficient reason for it. The reason has been given him from time to time. The financial conditions of this country are such that we have been prevented from proceeding not only with the Hudson Bay railway but many other projects. Those financial conditions are entirely different now from what they were in 1910 when the construction of the railway was begun. There is another important fact to be borne in mind. The construction of many other railways in the Prairie Provinces was commenced prior to the war, and it is necessary that these lines should be extended and completed. Quite a few members from the West are pressing for railway extension in their respective constituencies and rightly so for the reason that many settlers are living thirty, forty, fifty and even sixty miles away from a railway. I had a deputation from one of those constituencies yesterday asking for the carrying out of pledges that were made ten, twelve or fifteen years ago. The farmers who composed that deputation told a tale that was really very pitiful respecting the hardships from which they suffered for want of railway communication.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Will the minister give one or two instances of the kind of railways of which he speaks, and also tell us if those have been under construction and abandoned?

Hon. Mr. REID: My hon. friend himself has appeared before me with a deputation urging the continuation of railways that had been started but not completed—railways projected into a territory where the farmers many years ago were promised railway communication but the promise remained unfulfilled. When my hon. friend states that the construction of the Hudson Bay railway has been abandoned he states what is not a fact. The construction of that project has not been abandoned, but its progress has been delayed until the financial conditions of Canada will permit of the resumption of the work. Three hundred and ten miles of the Hudson Bay railway have been built. The hon. gentleman urges that the line for that distance should be operated. We did put a train on twice a week, but even in the case of a train running every two weeks there was not sufficient traffic to pay the wages of the train crew. The revenues from that operation were such that it was a very heavy loss.

The hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Knox) has told us the whole story of what was originally intended and what is expected when we do proceed with the completion of the Hudson Bay railway. That is, the Government and this House must decide, when we are again in a position to continue to build the other ninety miles, to complete the elevators and wharves at Port Nelson, and to build steamships to run from that terminal port to Liverpool. That must be done; otherwise, if we do spend several more million dollars in completing that line to Port Nelson, the very minute that was done, the hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) would stand up here and say: The building of the railway to Port Nelson is absolutely of no use unless you go ahead and complete the elevators and wharves there and build stamships so as to be able to ship your grain from the West right through to Liverpool.

Now, Mr. Speaker, every hon. member has received a copy of the Estimates and he realizes that I have had to submit to this House Estimates to the amount of some $170,000,000 in connection with our railway situation. Hon. members also know that railways are urgently required in the Western provinces to relieve settlers who are many miles from a railway. With the financial condition such as it is, the amount of money to be expended on railway construction must necessarily be limited. My own opinion is that whatever money we may have to spend in further railway extension should be spent in the construction of railways into those settlements where they were promised railway accommodation many years ago, rather than allow those people to continue to suffer and build the Hudson Bay railway on to Port Nelson. That is my judgment at the present time, but I wish to state that so far as the policy of completing the Hudson Bay railway to Port Nelson is concerned and having a water route from there to Liverpool, I have never changed my mind that that should be done whenever the financial condition of the country will allow the work to be undertaken.

The hon. member for Nelson has mentioned the item in the Estimates for the Welland canal. I can quite understand why he did so. There are many other items he could have referred to, but these are works that must be proceeded with and that are of great advantage to the country at the present time. The Welland canal has been in use for many years, and when the deepening and enlarging of that canal is completed great advantage will accrue to the West, and that advantage will be immediate and entail much less expenditure than would the completion of the Hudson Bay railway.

The hon. member also stated that great developments have taken place along the 310 miles of the Hudson Bay railway now in operation. The only way in which I am able to judge of those developments is by the traffic offered to the railway, but so far I have not had any applications for additional cars to handle any traffic from the territory it serves.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Might I correct a statement made by the minister?

Mr. SPEAKER: If the hon. member desires to ask a question he may do so with the permission of the Minister of Railways, but he is not in order in correcting a statement. However, at a later stage, he will have his opportunity to do so on speaking in reply.

Hon. Mr. REID: The hon. member states that there have been many deputations and resolutions from boards of trade urging the extension of the Hudson Bay railway. I might also tell him, what I am sure he already knows, that there have been many deputations and resolutions from boards of trade for a great many other extensions of railways in the West, and they all have good cases. They have waited for the construction of railways that were promised them many years ago, and they certainly deserve a great deal of sympathy. I have every confidence in the West, and I believe that all the transportation facilities that can be given to our Prairie Provinces should be granted. Any route whether via the Pacific or via the Hudson Bay railway or via the St. Lawrence, that can be developed to serve the West should be established, but at the present time I cannot see where it is possible for the Government to undertake many of the works that are being asked for. In 1910 when this railway was started it only required about $130,000,000 to cary on the affairs of this country.

What position are we in to-day? Instead of $130,000,000 we are faced with an expenditure of $300,000,000, and then on top of that greatly increased expenditure we have a big annual loss in connection with our National railway system. And that is not a loss that we are going to get rid of for some time. I intend a little later on to go more fully into that feature, but I want to tell the House now that there is a deficit of at least $20,000,000 per annum on the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Transcontinental that is here to stay for many years, because the earnings are such that we cannot get a sufficient revenue to pay the operating and fixed charges on those roads. Now, it may possibly be that even though there is that deficit it pays the country to have those roads, because we are receiving very large revenues from the industrial and other development along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Transcontinental. But even though that may be, there is a deficit of $20,000,000 that any Government for many years to come will have to make good in the Estimates. Then there is another portion of the road on which there is a very large deficit this year, and that deficit will continue, although I hope it will decrease from time to time.

But what the hon. gentleman now asks is that the Government go out and borrow money at six per cent interest to complete the Hudson Bay railway, and thereby add further deficits to our National railway system, for undoubtedly if we build that road to Port Nelson and operate it there will be a very much heavier deficit. I cannot for the life of me see how any hon. member could support such a resolution, which really means that I must come to the House for a large sum to expend on the Hudson Bay railway this session. If the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) could supply more money for the construction of railways during the present year, I want to say frankly that I would use it to extend some of the railways in the West to the territories where the people have been suffering so long from lack of railway accommodation, instead of continuing the Hudson Bay railway through a country where there are no settlers at all at the present time. That is the policy I would carry out. Therefore, while I am in sympathy with the construction of the Hudson Bay railway, I must ask that the matter be deferred until financial conditions are better than they are at present. When that time arrives, the Government should proceed with the work and carry it to a conclusion, and also carry out a policy of trying to connect Port Nelson with Liverpool by ships that must be specially built for that route. That being the case, I certainly oppose the resolution and hope the hon. member will withdraw it; if he does not, I hope the House will reject it.

Mr. W. D. EULER (North Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to discuss this resolution at any length, because I cannot pretend to have any very extensive knowledge of the matter under debate. I quite understand the desire of western members to have this road built, but I am not so sure that the carrying out of the project would be as great a benefit to the country as a whole as it would be to the western provinces in particular.

I may say at the outset that if the Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid) had stated to the House that the Government had definitely decided not to continue the construction of that railway at any time, I believe he would have met the wishes of a large majority of the people of Canada. We have spent already on that road something like twenty-one millions of dollars, and we have practically nothing for it. We are told that the harbour at Port Nelson, which has been under construction, is an impossible harbour in any case. Some six or seven million dollars have already been expended there, I am informed, and have been practically thrown away.

The member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) has referred to a report that was made by the Canadian Senate during the past year. I read that report with considerable interest when it was sent to me some months ago, and after doing so I could hardly understand why the committee reported in favour of the construction of this railway. There can be only two main objects for the construction of this road; both were mentioned by the member for Nelson. One was that it would develop and open up the country which is contiguous to the Hudson bay; that minerals would be developed, and so on. I agree entirely with the Minister of Railways that if this is the only reason for the construction of the road, the money might better be expended in affording transportation facilities to people in the West who are more entitled to them. The other reason given is that it would provide the means of transporting overseas the grain of the West. Now, in order to do that without great loss, transportation must be possible over a very considerable portion of the year. The hon. member for Nelson stated that the Hudson straits were open some four months every year, possibly five months. I have not had time to look up all the extracts bearing upon that in the report of the Senate committee. I quote, however, from "Authorities quoted and Extracts of Opinions," on page 11 of the report:

[Mr. J. D. Reid.]

Captain Anderson says as to safe navigation during the summer season, year by year, the question is open to individual opinion. The seasons vary considerably. Some are excellent and some are bad. Navigation in Hudson bay may be relied upon from the 15th of July until the 15th of October, with an extension of a week at either end according to the season.

At the most, that would be a period of about three months. I quote further:

Mr. Harling says, for the three midsummer months, any ordinary vessel could navigate the Hudson bay and straits with comparative safety.

Herbert B. Saunders says that in his opinion the season under ordinary conditions should open about August 1, and vessels can remain in safety at Port Nelson until October 27, which practicaly gives a working season of three calendar months.

And so on. Then, there is an opinion here to which I attach considerable weight. Mr. O'Hara, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, says:

Experiences in navigating Hudson bay widely vary. One captain has a favourable voyage and reports few difficulties, and naturally is very optimistic as to the route. Another has a bad voyage and his opinion is entirely the reverse. Some ships have come safely through, though at times, from ice or heavy weather, they report having been in serious situations.

Then he adds:

In all the reports, however, the utmost caution appears to have been the sole cause of a successful outcome. Difficulties in the nature of magnetic variations, varying currents, ice, fog, heavy gales and heavy seas are not infrequently referred to in the reports of Hudson Bay navigators. These conditions may not be so bad as they actually appear and may be regarded by navigators as all being in the nature of their day's work. Yet, it is sufficient to make one hesitate to take a favourable view of that route, even allowing for more than ordinary conditions of navigation.

The last sentence, in the opinion of the deputy minister, should make every member hesitate before committing this country to further doubtful expenditure on this railway. In view of the evidence adduced before the committee it is rather surprising to me that the committee does recommend the construction of the railway.

Mr. REID (Mackenzie): May I ask the hon. gentleman if he will read the evidence of Captain Wakeham, on page 11?

Mr. EULER: Yes, I will read that also if you like. I am not saying that these opinions all coincide, I have read three extracts which state that the period of navigation would be three months. I will read Captain Wakeham's opinion; I do not even know what it is and do not desire to suppress anything. I quote from the report:

> Captain Wakeham says that he agrees with Captain Gordon in fixing the date for the opening of navigation in Hudson strait for commercial purposes by suitable vessels at from the 1st to the 10th of July. I consider that navigation should close from the 15th to the 20th October.

That also would be only three months; that bears out the opinions which I have already quoted. But under all the circumstances, with these opinions varying as they do, I think it is fair to assume that year in and year out one could not even count upon three months of safe navigation. Indeed, you cannot, according to the opinion of the Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, count on any particular period when navigation is reasonably safe. But even if under the most favourable conditions ships can navigate through Hudson straits for three months of the year, while I am not a marine man and know very little about shipping or the cost of doing business of that kind, I question very much whether ships can be operated profitably on that route for such a short period of time. I question very much whether these vessels carrying grain to Europe would have a return cargo in any case; and if they are to be constructed so as to be in a position to navigate these straits in safety they must have a special construction which, I understand, reduces their carrying capacity something like twenty-five per cent and necessarily increases the freight cost.

That brings me to another point of supreme importance at this time; it has been mentioned by the Minister of Railways. Even if this road were built, even if it did relieve to some extent the situation in the West, and even if it did assist in the carrying out of the grain, although it would not carry out the grain in the same season in which it is produced, I believe it would show a tremendous deficit. Sir, we have come to the point where we do not want, with our eyes open, to increase the deficits that are now being shown by the National railways. Another reason why I would oppose this resolution is that I am one of the few members, counting members not only on this side but on the other side, who are favourably disposed towards public ownership of railways. The National railways are showing tremendous deficits and the fact of those deficits is being used day by day by those who are interested, and others, as an argument against public ownership; not fairly, in my opinion, and if we add to the National railways deliberately, railways which can show nothing but a deficit, then we are damning the cause of public ownership for a generation or two, and I for one would not like to see that. I believe, therefore, the continuance of the construction or the completion of this road would be merely throwing good money after bad. It is of no particular consequence to me whether the construction of the road was begun or continued by a Liberal Government or a Conservative Government; in fact, I am inclined to think that both parties were perhaps playing a bit of politics as regards the western country, but I am not concerned with that. This House should now consider whether this road is in the interest of the people of Canada as a whole, whether it is going to be a paying proposition and if it is not, then we should cut it out without any consideration.

The hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) has thrown out a suggestion that there are special interests opposed to the construction of this railway. I do not know what he means by that, but I know he will believe me when I say that as regards myself, there is nothing of that kind at all. The opinions I have formed are from reading reports and public discussions and discussions in the press. I do not claim to have any particular authority to speak on this question, but that is my opinion as I have given it. As I stated a moment ago, I am one of the few members of this House who are in favour of public ownership of railways; but if there is one road that I would like to see private interests take up and construct, it is the Hudson Bay railway. There is little likelihood of that, for private interests are too shrewd to entertain the thought. I wish the Government, instead of making the announcement that it is merely postponing construction, would state that the Hudson Bay railway cannot be considered a practical enterprise and that it is definitely abandoned.

Mr. THOMAS VIEN (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, there are, in the resolution of my hon. friend (Mr. Campbell), two words which make the discussion of it more than an academic one. Those two words are to be found in the third line of the resolution which reads:

> Should be resumed as early "this year" as possible.

What the hon. gentleman wants is that this House should commit itself to a recommendation to the Government that this work should be carried out this year. With that feature of the resolution, I am afraid I cannot agree. We understand clearly the objects which prompted the hon. gentleman and his friends from the Prairie Provinces in advocating the construction of the Hudson Bay railway. The farmers in this country wish to cheapen production and also to cheapen transportation, and in this respect, they are on sound economic grounds. If all the other industries of Canada would, like the farmers, try to cheapen production and also to cheapen transportation, such action would be greatly in the interest of the country. If the Government would develop our natural resources, and particularly our waterpowers, giving the latter as a grant to city industries, this would offset the necessity for protection of city industries, and would thereby facilitate this Government taking measures to protect the farming industry just as well as other industries of the country. But I do not believe the remedy advocated by the hon. gentleman would be of much avail in obtaining for people of the West the relief for which they are looking. We have in this country a vast system of railways, a considerable portion of which has been nationalized and is under Government control. Unfortunately, it has not been put to the best advantage to which it could be put. For instance, I think the Transcontinental railway is not taken full advantage of, and if the Government or the business managers of the Canadian National railways would look into the matter a bit more seriously I think they would find their way clear to assist the western farmers greatly in cheapening the transportation of their products and also in settling various problems which embarrass them in the marketing of their goods.

Many opinions have been cited already by previous speakers. I think nobody will question the authority of a great navigator who was also heard in the investigation on this matter. I speak of the Arctic explorer, Captain Bernier. What did he say, and he is corroborated by other witnesses who have already been quoted? Not only does he say that the navigation season by the Hudson bay route would be limited to three months, but he states that it would be impossible to use that route except with specially constructed ships. I quote from his evidence at page 39 of the report:

> About the end of October ice comes down and closes the straits so that after October there is danger of the ship meeting that old ice during a gale. It is very important that ships should be built especially for ice navigation. The Fram was built for ice navigation and survived. The Guss, afterward called the Arctic, is a ship that has done eleven years and is now as good as ever; also the Roosevelt. These ships were built especially for ice navigation, and they have stood the test, they have done their work, and they are proofs that for navigating in Hudson bay and the Arctic ocean, where there are four different kinds of ice it is necessary to have ships especially built for ice navigation. It is a mistake—

I wish to emphasize this:

> It is a mistake to send in tramp steamers. They may sometimes hit a piece of ice, and if it is old ice the ship is done for. The ship should be double-framed forward and have thicker plates.

As to the length of the navigation season Captain Bernier says:

> I think, with properly constructed vessels you could navigate from the 15th of June until the 1st of November.

I doubt very much if in the face of these facts, established as they are by unquestionable evidence of navigators who know what they are talking about this House should recommend the Government to undertake at this juncture under the present financial conditions of the country further expenditure on this project. I would favour this project if it were clearly shown that it would relieve the situation for the western farmer, but I do not believe that it would afford him proper relief. After constructing the road, you would have to secure specially constructed ships to provide transportation from the end of the rails to the European ports. The argument has been made, and if it were sustained by sufficient evidence it would have some force that the natural resources of the district to be traversed by the Hudson Bay railway would more than offset the sinking fund and interest on the investment, but if we are to take the statement just given to the House by the Minister of Railways, my hon. friend is flatly contradicted in that respect. The minister has just told the House that he tried to put on a twice-a-week service.

Mr. CAMPBELL: It was not properly operated.

Mr. VIEN: I should be very glad to hear from the hon. member when he speaks again, anything which would justify me in changing my opinion, because I am absolutely in sympathy with the farming class of Western Canada in their efforts to cheapen the transportation cost of their products. But surely in the case of a resolution involving such a large expenditure of money as this, we should look at the matter in the light of facts as established by unquestionable evidence.

Mr. CAMPBELL: The evidence is not new.

Mr. VIEN: I do not say that either the argument or the evidence is new, but I belive that if the Minister of Railways had seen his way clear to paying operating expenses on that road he would have been anxious to please that section of the country because the Government have no sympathy to lose in the country at present, and if they could satisfy only one section of the country they would go to it right away. In view of the large railway deficits we have to meet this year, if the Minister of Railways had thought that the operation of this section of the road would have been a paying proposition, he would have taken advantage of the occasion and operated it so as to reduce the deficits, but he did not do it because he found out after his experiment that he could not even meet operating expenses. It may be possible that the hon. gentleman is right in saying that the road was not properly operated and that it did not traverse the country it should have, to get the traffic. It would be illuminating for the House and for the Minister of Railways to hear from the hon. gentleman on that point, but at the present time I do not think this House has sufficient evidence before it to show that the natural resources of the country to be traversed by that road would justify the expenditure. If it were otherwise, I would change my opinion, but even then there would always remain the question whether a three months' season of navigation, and of navigation that is impossible except with specially built ships, would justify the expenditure. For these two reasons I do not believe the House should be ready to express an opinion advocating any further expenditure on the road this year, and until such evidence as I have mentioned has been given, I am very sorry that I shall not be able to vote for the resolution.

Mr. J. F. REID (Mackenzie): I just wish to make a few observations on the resolution. First of all, I wish to quote a short extract from the evidence of Captain Bartlett of Polar fame. He says:

> I would consider navigation on the Hudson bay route safe from the last of July to November, but ships constructed to contend with the ice and with a good ice pilot on board could navigate the bay from early in July until late in November.

I do not intend to discuss the feasibility of the water end of the Hudson bay route because I presume that is a matter that the Government settled before they launched on this enterprise. I understand that the late Minister of Railways himself went up to Port Nelson and selected that site. I jotted down during the debate one or two items which I intended to bring to the attention of the Government. I had intended to ask what was their policy in regard to the Hudson Bay railway, but I need not ask that question now, because I have already been informed on that point by the Minister of Railways. I gather from what he says that even if he had the money, he would rather build other lines of railway, so I take it for granted that the policy of the Government is that the Hudson Bay project is a dead letter. To my knowledge this Hudson Bay project has been a political football at general elections in this country since 1882. I very well remember seeing in the city of Winnipeg in 1882 big placards to this effect "Vote for Captain Scott, who will build the Hudson Bay railway." Now, Captain Scott is dead and gone to his reward, and the Hudson Bay Railway project is still a political football, and I have not the slightest doubt that this Government is keeping this football in readiness for the next general election. I do not intend to take up much more time of the House. While the member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) was speaking, it occurred to me that if he were a supporter of the Government and if his constituency were opened up in order that he might become a Cabinet minister, the Hudson Bay railway would be built.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Promised.

Mr. REID (Mackenzie): Yes, of course. Now, when the Government required a Cabinet minister in Victoria the people there got a dry dock; and when they required a minister in St. John, what did the people get? Why, an expenditure for this year of $1,835,000. The simple fact is that the hon. member for Nelson is on the wrong side of the House. He ought to have got into the Cabinet, and then we should have had the Hudson Bay railway. However, it is too late now. We find that the Canadian Pacific Railway have obtained a charter—I think it was last session—running into Cumberland House. There is no doubt, in my mind, that the Canadian Pacific Railway, that energetic and successfully-managed transportation company, is heading for the Hudson bay, and it is quite probable that it will get there first. My hon. friend, the Minister of Railways, tells us that the Welland ship canal will give relief in the West long before the Hudson Bay railway, but it will take a long time to complete that canal down to tide water at Montreal. I think, therefore, I am justified in coming to the conclusion that so far as this Government is concerned the Hudson Bay railway is a dead letter. However, as I said before, and repeat now, the people of the West will speak for themselves at the forthcoming general election.

Mr. E. W. NESBITT (North Oxford): I should be very glad if the conclusion of my hon. friend (Mr. Reid) were correct; so far as this Government is concerned I hope they will not build the Hudson Bay railway. My hon. friend declares that this railway has been a political football for a number of years. Well, I cannot conceive how that railway could be mooted, unless it were for political purposes, to be made a political football of. The first report we ever had that I know of on the feasibility of navigation in the straits was by a man named Gordon, appointed by the Sir John Macdonald government, who put parties at certain points along the straits and left them there for a year, had the ice measured, and had a look-out as to the time that the straits were navigable. They were exchanged each year. I am speaking now from memory and probably may be wrong, but I believe that in 1896, or 1895, when the Liberal government came into power, these parties were discontinued. The report is most interesting and shows clearly that the straits are not navigable for more than three months of the year—that is to say, of course, reasonably and safely navigable. The captain who has generally gone up with Government ships through the straits and to the bay for the last few years has told me time and again that it would be necessary to keep two dredges working all the time while the water is open in order to clear the harbour at Port Nelson of the silt that washes down from the long stretch of river. If that be the case, and I think it is, any member of this House can calculate for himself what that would cost per year. Then we should have to build elevators if we were to ship wheat through that route, and if we could ship only three or four months of the year, hon. gentlemen will see for themselves what the proposition means. Navigation closes about the first of November, and we all know that we do not get any great quantity of crops from the West in a condition to ship much before that time. It would therefore be necessary to carry crops over until the next year. Some of us at least have an idea what it could cost to carry over that grain in elevators for a year in the form of interest and waste.

Mr. REID (Mackenzie): They do that now at Fort William.

Mr. NESBITT: It is said they do that now at Fort William, but they have the opportunity to move it by rail if they want to, and in this case they would have no such opportunity. I believe it is an established fact, so far as investigation has demonstrated, that you would have to build a particular class of ships for this navigation—to navigate for how long? For three or four months of the year. You would require to have an expensive class of ships, wooden breasted, with a short range, capable of turning quickly in the ice jams, to get clear of the floes. These ships could not possibly compete on other routes with the steel ships built now for carrying grain. They would cost a great deal, purely and simply for three or four months' navigation. They would take out, in the summer months of 1921, wheat harvested in 1920, and in the meantime it would have to be carried over in elevators. I do not believe that it would be possible to reduce the cost of transportation one particle by the Hudson Bay route, and that is why I am opposed to this proposal. As to the feasibility of building the railway from the financial point of view, I absolutely agree with the Minister of Railways that it would be suicidal in the present state of our railway problem to add to the difficulties with which we are already burdened. We can hardly comprehend what this country is up against in the present railway problem.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Mr. NESBITT: It is no fault, let me say, of the present Government.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh!

Mr. NESBITT: Not a bit. They were forced into these conditions. As a Liberal I went out on the platform in 1904 and advocated the building of the Transcontinental, and if I gained any votes by so doing then I ought to be arrested and put into jail.

Mr. HOCKEN: We will give you a pardon.

Mr. NESBITT: It was a horrible mistake, in my judgment. As a Liberal, I voted in this House for the guaranteeing of the bonds of the Canadian Northern from Port Arthur to Montreal. Again let me say that if that vote had helped to guarantee those bonds I ought to be, not arrested, but executed, because there was built a line of railway that was absolutely unnecessary in this country. That is one of the positions in which we find ourselves at the present time. Why have we been obliged to take over the Grand Trunk? Because we owned a great mileage of railways without any feeders and with one end practically sticking up in the air. The Transcontinental railway, the Intercolonial, the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the Canadian Northern were lines without feeders. We are taking over the Grand Trunk Railway which practically touches every hamlet in Ontario and the probabilities are that if properly and capably managed the system will eventually assist in reducing the cost of operating railways in this country. The railway question in Canada is now of such a nature that I would like to see a committee of the House, representative of all parties appointed to thoroughly investigate every phase of the situation and, if possible, endeavour to find a solution of the problem. For it is a problem; and when hon. gentlemen get up here and blame the present Government for the position in which this country now is with respect to railways they are only doing so from political motives. Personally, I am not talking from a political standpoint.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, no.

Mr. NESBITT: My hon. friends opposite need not laugh and jeer.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. NESBITT: As a matter of fact, business matters should not be discussed from a party standpoint; I never look at them in that way myself. We are supposed to be business men in this House. Whether that is true or not, and regardless of whatever party is in power, I want to see the country governed in a businesslike way and not in accordance with politics. I care nothing about the getting of votes. I do not like to pretend to advocate something merely because it is popular, and nobody in this House can accuse me of doing anything of that kind during the time I have had a seat here. I was surprised and sorry to hear my hon. friend who has just taken his seat (Mr. Reid, Mackenzie), suggest that there was politics behind this project, and that the road would be built if there was a by-election going on in the West. That may be true, I am not saying it is not, but what I maintain is that politics should not be interjected into the discussion of a business matter in this House. Projects of this kind should be discussed absolutely and purely from a business standpoint; and if any hon. member can prove that the Hudson Bay railway will be a paying enterprise for this country I will vote for it no matter what the ordinary expenditure will be. But I do not believe that such a thing can be proved. I do not believe it is possible to derive a paying revenue from the Hudson Bay railway in the life time of any man in this House.

Therefore, as we now have deficits in the operation of our railways amounting to probably fifty or sixty million dollars, without counting the interest on the investment, we may just as well make up our minds, so far as the railways are concerned, to face the situation. The first phase of the situation we have to face is this: We must ask the labour unions and the railway unions to get together themselves and reduce the cost of railway transportation so that railway rates can be lowered in Canada. Because the rates now charged on the Canadian railways, both freight and express, are such as to render it impossible to make a business enterprise succeed. We have to face the situation and the quicker the railway unions themselves recognize that fact the better it will be. They must recognize the fact that if they do not get together and agree to reduce the wages that are now being paid by the railway companies they will kill the goose that lays the golden egg, because the companies will be forced to cut the railway services to such an extent that thousands of men will be turned out of employment. I repeat that we may just as well face the situation. It is up to this House no less than to the Government of Canada—because we are all in a sense part of the governing body—to face the situation. It is up to this House to see that the transportation charges of this country are in some manner reduced. The wages that the railway companies are now paying under the McAdoo award are impossible if we are ever going to lower the cost of transportation. When any business man in Canada ascertains what the freight rates to Vancouver or to Calgary are he will be astonished. If he is not astonished then it is not possible to astonish him. The railway rates must be reduced in order to lower the cost of living in this country. These charges affect the price of every article that enters into the cost of living no matter what it may be. Let me repeat, hon. members may just as well quit playing politics and get down to business. They may as well face the situation and in some way find the means of making these railways reduce their operating expenses, and thus bring about a reduction in the cost of transportation.

Mr. THOMAS HAY (Selkirk): I wish to say a word on this subject before the close of the present debate which is of very great importance, at any rate to Western Canada. I do not agree with some of the remarks made by the last speaker, particularly his statement that even were this line then completed it would not be possible to take out the grain crop of 1921 over the route. I think that is a mistaken impression, an impression that a great many people in Canada entertain at the present time with respect to the Hudson bay route. I believe that the great bulk of the grain crop of Western Canada could be shipped through this route the very year it was grown. We know, particularly those of us from the West, that this has been one of the established trade routes between the Old Country and Western Canada for something like two hundred and fifty years. During that long space of time the straits and the bays have been navigated, often by vessels of a very antiquated type, and with very few accidents indeed. I maintain, and I think I am safe in making the statement, that in the case of the type of vessels especially designed for a route of this kind, there would be no difficulty in navigating Hudson straits for a period of perhaps five months in the year. The bay itself is accessible for a much longer period of time; the difficulty about navigation is on account of the ice that accumulates in the straits. I do not, however, agree with the mover of the resolution that it is wise to commit the Government to the expenditure of so many millions of dollars in advance of the provision of other facilities. I do not think there would be very much use, for example, in completing the railway unless good terminals were provided. There is very little traffic of a local nature along that line, consequently its completion to the bay would be of very little use to the people of Western Canada unless the harbour was also completed. Therefore I do not think it would be wise in the face of our present financial difficulties and the deficits on our national railway system to commit the Government at this time to a further expenditure of $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 in connection with this work. But I do want to say that I am in favour of the completion at the earliest possible moment of the Hudson Bay railway and terminals, because I am satisfied that the proper development of Western Canada rests largely upon that completion. Therefore I would urge upon the Government the necessity as soon as financial conditions permit of doing something to complete this railway. In view of the reasons given, Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the following amendment:

That all the words after the word "railway" in the second line of the resolution be struck out and that the following be substituted in lieu thereof: "shall be resumed as soon as financial conditions permit, and that the project be completed with the least possible delay."

Mr. F. L. DAVIS (Neepawa): Mr. Speaker, as a Westerner I can remember taking part in an election in the city of Winnipeg in 1886 in which this Hudson bay railway question was the foremost issue. We then had the promise that the rails were on the ocean, telegrams to that effect being produced from the Cumberland Steel company,—which afterwards proved to be forgeries. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. This railway was started by the Laurier Government. It is not going to be finished by the Meighen Government; that is quite evident. This Government has fiddled along with this proposition until some of us have ceased to dance to the music. I have in mind a meeting of a delegation with the Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid), which was highly amusing to some of us western members. He first gave us as a reason why the road could not then be continued that it was then impossible to buy rails. Well, information that had been widely disseminated from a world-wide known firm of New York brokers was produced showing that rails could be bought in unlimited numbers at $64.50 a ton. This information surprised the Minister of Railways and he shifted ground; he told us that even if rails could be got ties were not obtainable. It was then the month of March, 1919, and of course ties were got out in the winter, so we could not get them. Another setback occurred to the minister—a member produced from his pocket tenders to get out a quarter of a million ties and have them on the road by July. We were then told by the minister what to western men was the most surprising thing of all, that all railway contractors had dismantled their outfits in the past five years, and that a track-laying outfit could not be got on the road in time to do anything in 1919. For the benefit of those who have not seen a track-laying outfit, I may say that it is a flat car with a little derrick at one end and attached to it are half a dozen other flat cars with conveyers bolted on their sides on which are carried the ties and rails to be laid. Under pressure any railway contractor would put one together in twenty-four hours, and quite leisurely in six days, so as to be ready for use on the road. Then the minister tried to tell us that this Government was really in earnest in its intention to build this railway. If we went away dissatisfied and incredulous, do you blame us?

Now, perhaps that sort of experience has something to do with the dissatisfaction in the West to-day with regard to the building of this railway. I will say here and now that if we were beginning this enterprise and involving ourselves in an expenditure of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 I would unhesitatingly condemn it, for I yield to no man in the House in my desire for economy. But when we see the Minister of Finance (Sir Henry Drayton) bringing down a Budget which involved a deficit of $50,000,000 to $100,000,000, and expenditures being made, as the hon. member for Mackenzie (Mr. Reid) has stated, for purely political purposes, I think the West has a right to look to this long deferred hope of seeing the railway completed. It is a matter now of an expenditure of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000, and not of $20,000,000 or $25,000,000. And remember, the funds have been provided and are ear marked in the sales of pre-empted lands—$28,000,000, without counting the interest, was provided to look after the financing of this proposition.

At this stage of the matter I am not going to argue that the straits are navigable. That question was looked into by the Government before the project was entered upon, and we have acted upon their judgment. So I will take that question as concluded. Now, it is a question of using what we have got there or else seeing it rot—of preserving it from destruction and making some small use of it—and of finding out whether the resources of the bay and the country that would be opened up are worth an expenditure of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000.

Last year, with two other members of this House, I was out in that country half way from Norway House to Hudson bay. There are great areas of pulpwood. True, the trees are not large, for the country seems to have been burned over within the last forty or fifty years, but with proper fire regulations there is a pulpwood industry available for development. We crossed fifty to one hundred miles of clay belt. There is a clay belt on the Hudson bay railway 100 to 125 miles wide very similar to the land in which Cochrane lies and capable of future development. Only last night I was talking to one of our geological men, and he said: Climb a hill in any part of that country and it looks as though quite half of the expanse that is disclosed to view is water. The waters of all those lakes swarm with fish. At one portage a ground sheet eight feet square was let down a foot or two into the water and lifted up again, and the whitefish were so thick that four of them were brought up on that sheet. The waters there teem with char or lake trout. There is a big local industry available all along the lakes and rivers contiguous to that railway. There is no reason to doubt—indeed there is every reason to expect, from the reports that Mr. Stefansson brought back of life in our northern waters—that the fisheries of the bay will at least equal the fisheries of Labrador, which are among the best in the world. By the carrying out of the Hudson Bay railway project these fisheries will be opened up and will offer traffic.

Now, the criticism has been made that the road is not yielding any return. Well, if you run a road three hundred miles into a wilderness and end it nowhere, what return can you expect from it? The country there is still a wilderness; the road after it leaves the Pas does not serve any settlement. There is a possibility of industrial and mining development along the route, but it will not come until the railway has been constructed. These are the grounds, then, upon which it is sensible to urge the completion of that road. To sum up, we are expending moneys that are not productive. Any expenditure for the completion of this road promises to be productive. We are expending large sums which go to make up our present deficit. If it is practicable to make expenditures on propositions which are new, which have been taken up since the Hudson Bay railway was started, surely it is wise to spend moneys which have been ear-marked and really provided for this venture. If it is contended that by so doing we would be seeking to develop a country that is if no use, then we might just as well say that we have already developed the portion of Canada which is of use, and that we should forget all our foolish talk about natural resources and about the possibility of a great future for Canada.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN (South York): Mr. Speaker, the trend which the discussion has taken and the amendment which has been offered enable me to bring the House one or two thoughts which, I think, are worthy of consideration. The first has been presented to this House to-day by every speaker in the debate and is being presented in the country by almost every newspaper and on every platform; and organizations are at work throughout the country to promulgate and promote the idea—that the Government is under great financial obligations now by reason of its railway deficits, I grant that, Mr. Speaker, and I agree with what the Minister of Railways (Mr. Reid) said here to-day. But the thing that impresses me in this connection is; how long are these deficits unnecessarily to continue? We are running four systems of railways in this country to-day, outside of the Canadian Pacific. We have the Intercolonial—and it is called a system; we have the Transcontinental—and it is mentioned as a system, one whose operation has been attended by enormous deficits—

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I do not want to interrupt the hon. member. He has not yet gone very far from the subject, but I do want to direct the attention of the House to the fact that under the resolution now before the House I do not think it would be in order for hon. members entirely to forget the Hudson Bay railway and to discuss deficits on the Government-owned railways.

Mr. MACLEAN (South York): I am coming to that, Mr. Speaker. We have all these deficits, and what I want to point out is that we must stop them. We have all these systems of railways, and it is incumbent upon the Government—and I believe they recognize their duty in that regard—to put an end to these deficits by a great consolidation and co-ordination of these different systems—practising economics, stopping unnecessary duplication of lines and services of all kinds. When you do that, these deficits will begin to end. I hope, therefore, that we will soon have an early discussion of this whole matter. I was somewhat disappointed to-day when the Minister of Railways did not set a day for the discussion that he said it was intended to have on this question. I hope he will let us all know when that discussion is to take place, and that an effort will be made this session to put an end to the unnecessary deficits which are impressing the people and prejudicing them against public ownership of the railways that we now have.

As to this particular question of opening up the Hudson Bay route, I agree that the road has been promised and that an effort ought to be made to complete it. It may not be the proper thing to do it just now; the minister has given fair reason why the matter ought to be deferred. The mover of the amendment has offered a still better reason, and I intend to vote for that amendment. But the thing that impresses me most of all is the necessity for giving attention to these deficits, and I hope that we shall soon have a statement from the Government that a consolidation of the railway systems which have been taken over will soon be under way.

Mr. C. E. LONG (North Battleford): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say just a few words in regard to this proposal, which is one of interest to every western man, especially to those of us who are farmers. I attended a great number of meetings of the Senate committee that was appointed to investigate the possibilities of the Hudson Bay Railway project, and one thing I noticed in connection with the work of that committee was the great interest taken in the proceedings by the hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell). I do not suppose that any proposal which has come before the House has received such undivided attention on the part of the hon. member as this one did. Certainly, if any of us have interfered in any way with the ultimate success of the hon. member's undertakings, it is not because we lack respect or appreciation of the efforts he has put forth in bringing the matter to the attention of the Government.

I rather resented, Mr. Speaker, the closing remarks of the hon. member for Nelson; they convinced me rather more than anything else of the lack of strength in all his previous arguments. Some reference has been made by other speakers to the Hudson Bay Railway project being used as a political football. I have been watching political events from the western viewpoint more or less closely for the last couple of years, and I seemed to see in my hon. friend's closing remarks that one reflection which we all resent in the handling of political questions—that because some of us dared in the past to oppose the immediate construction of the Hudson Bay railway to Port Nelson, we were under the insidious influence of some great interest; our hands were tied; we were unable to show the reasons for our opposition to the policy which my hon. friend has enunciated in his resolution. Well, that is one thing that would tear me from my seat in the rear portion of this House quicker than anything else, because I realize that I got into trouble with some of my former friends because I dared to refuse to sign a certain petition calling upon the Government immediately to engage in the construction of the Hudson Bay railway to Port Nelson. I am very sorry that the member for Prince Albert (Mr. Knox), closed his remarks with very much the same inference—that we were under the influence of eastern interests. I want, from my place in the House, to refute the allegation just as strongly as I can, and I think, in doing so, I voice the opinion of my fellow members on this side of the House. On the other hand, I can perhaps excuse my hon. friends for that inadvertent attack upon our parliamentary standards, because I know, from what I have seen, that they are becoming overly engrossed with the political success of their movement, although I must say that I am very sorry to see them using such means to further their object.

I attended the meetings of the committee last year, and I have certain reasons for stating that we should not proceed immediately with the construction of the railway from Kettle rapids to Port Nelson. I must confess that, as a farmer, I have become more or less selfish, and we farmers may be excused for becoming somewhat that way. So I acknowledge that one great reason why we, as western farmers, want the railway constructed is because it will give us a shorter route to Europe. It has been used as an argument on many public platforms that it would be a shorter route, and, therefore, naturally more economical, but from what I have read in the committee's report, that is not a proper conclusion to draw.

A few points came out, not so much in the report, as in the investigation, which would show that Nelson harbour, as a harbour, would be absolutely without success as regards transatlantic traffic. The expense necessary to put that harbour into condition for transatlantic traffic is so great that I do not think we are justified in going ahead with the work. One engineer stated that it would require the removal of about 7,000,000 cubic yards of dirt before transatlantic ships would be able to approach that island which those who favour the project speak of as their terminal facility. The price of removing that dirt would be almost one dollar per cubic yard, so that there you have in one item alone an expenditure of $7,000,000 necessary for the removal of dirt. That is of very great importance and one of the things that have not been brought to the attention of our western farmers when these matters have been discussed. The harbour itself is of such a questionable character that it is very doubtful whether I could, at the present time, support the resolution of the hon. member.

I wish to read a few extracts from a certain article appearing in a paper which claims to have a superior class of literature in its columns. I will read this because it gives the conclusion which I arrived at after attending many meetings of the committee. Referring to Henry Hudson it says:

> In the original tragedy only half a dozen or so of men suffered. In the modern tragedy—

Referring to the building of the Hudson Bay railway.

> —being enacted in the clay-mud at Nelson harbour, the entire 8,000,000 people of Canada are to suffer untold burdens of taxation, because of the wanton and criminal waste of money going on there in a weak and futile attempt to make a harbour in the mud flats, while a perfectly good rock-bottom harbour exists at Fort Churchill, 180 miles north, by water, 100 miles north by land.

Then it goes on to speak of the project as political jobbery. It says:

> Aside from the cost of the railway line, almost, if not quite, $10,000,000 has been expended in the harbour mud, and it will require twenty years to build a harbour there, if it is at all possible, and will require constant and heavy dredging to keep it clear of the millions of cubic yards of clay carried down by the river annually. It shows the utter criminal disregard of the present Government for the vital interests of over one-half of the Dominion, which could be beneficially served by this splendid national highway.

That is rather a severe condemnation of this Government in proceeding with the construction of the Hudson Bay railway. I rather think I would agree with that conclusion, were those the facts, but what appears to me to be a difficult task this afternoon is to make that statement coincide with the attitude taken by hon. members opposite in regard to the same matter. They criticized this Government for not going ahead and building the road. This magazine, which I understand assumes a superior position in regard to matters of advice, claims that it is a crime to go ahead with this project. Therefore, I certainly cannot be accused of wrong-doing if I am confused in forming an opinion in regard to this matter. The writer, a man by the name of Bert Huffman—

Mr. THOMPSON (Yukon): What is the name of the magazine?

Mr. LONG: Wait a bit. If I told you now, you might leave the room. The writer goes on to say:

> I am not writing this in political bitterness or projudice. I did not walk from Kettle rapids to Port Nelson and back, 190 miles, for the fun of the thing. I am a producing farmer, owning a fine farm within twenty miles of Calgary, and I am interested in transportation from the standpoint of a western farmer, and I am also interested more deeply as a Canadian citizen, in seeing this splendid national project made a permanent, beneficial property, for the Canadian people rather than to see it bungled by political manipulation into a perpetual curse and bill of expense.

That is precisely the conclusion that I arrived at as regards Nelson harbour. There are many more things that might be said about the matter, but I must not occupy more of the time of the House. That article appeared on the 14th July, 1920, in a magazine known as the Grain Growers' Guide. I believe the conclusions which that gentleman arrived at in his personal investigation of the situation at that harbour are about what one would arrive at if he had followed as carefully as the hon. member for Nelson and myself did the evidence given before the Senate committee. My position at the present time is this: I place great emphasis on the third recommendation of the Senate committee which reads:

> That in the opinion of this committee sufficient care was not taken in the selection of Nelson as the terminus of the railway, and that the Government should not make further important expenditures upon this port without first making a new and thorough examination into the relative merits of Churchill and Nelson as a terminus for the railroad.

It appears to me, Mr. Speaker, that if this road is built to Nelson, so far as the transatlantic feature of the road is concerned it will be an absolute failure. A very good friend, supposed to be, at any rate, of the policy of nationalization of railways, the hon. member for Mackenzie (Mr. Reid), called the attention of this House, inadvertently perhaps, to the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway was now endeavouring to get an outlet on Hudson bay. I agree with him, but the Canadian Pacific railway is not heading for Nelson. If I am not mistaken they are looking to Churchill harbour, and from what little I know I would advise this Government, if they are going to the bay at all to make at once for Churchill harbour. Therein is the only hope of our western farmers obtaining a profitable outlet through the bay to the markets of the world. For that reason, I take the stand that I must certainly oppose the resolution that has been presented by the hon. member for Nelson.

Hon. T. A. CRERAR (Marquette): Mr. Speaker, I think in the few minutes that remain before six o'clock I can say what I wish to say upon this question. I am very largely in agreement with the hon. member for North Battleford (Mr. Long), who has just spoken. There is no doubt of the fact that the building of the Hudson Bay railway has been a very live question in Western Canada for a great many years. The opinion of the people of that portion of the Dominion on this question may have been right or may have been wrong, but back of it lay a strong desire to take advantage of the fact that the greatest inland sea in the world brought its tide water within five or six hundred miles of the centre of the great wheat producing areas of the western prairies. The fact that Churchill is but little further from Liverpool than is Montreal is a striking reason for the faith of the West in the project.

There are undoubtedly strong differences of opinion as to the practicability and feasibility of the ocean route from Churchill or Nelson to Liverpool, but I am convinced that perhaps not in our day, but ultimately, this route will become one of the great trade routes of the world. Unquestionably, great aids to navigation are being discovered almost every year, and I do not think it is too great a stretch of the imagination to conceive that this great natural highway will be utilized in very large measure to carry the commerce of America and Europe.

There is also the question of the development of the natural resources that lie along this railway. They are very great, both in pulpwood and minerals, as recent discoveries have shown, and that factor itself might justify the building of the road even if it were a little ahead of its time. I am in cordial agreement with my hon. friend from North Battleford as to the mistake that was made in making Nelson the terminus. I think a huge mistake was made when this was done, and if it is definitely settled that Nelson is to be the terminal point, an annual expenditure of a large sum of money will be required to keep it in shape for the harbourage of vessels.

However, I am bound to say this, that in the consideration of this whole question we must be governed at the present time by one fact largely, and that is the present financial condition of this country, and it is for that reason I cannot bring myself to support the motion of my hon. friend from Nelson (Mr. Campbell) whose thought I know is very much bound up in this matter. I think, moreover, that no very great harm will come from postponing for a year or two further expenditure on this road until we can get our financial condition in this country cleared up. We have seen by the Estimates that have been brought down recently the vast expenditures that are called for; we know that the burden of taxation will rest very heavily on the Canadian people for a great many years, and the imperative duty lying before this Parliament, so far as the finances of the country are concerned, is to bring our expenditure within our income, and that at the earliest possible moment. I believe this road will ultimately become a great highway, and if the financial situation of the country warranted the expenditure, I would be disposed to support the motion, but on account of the considerations I have mentioned I think it is well to postpone further expenditure for the present. I think the amendment moved by my hon. friend from Selkirk (Mr. Hay) pretty well meets the needs of the situation at the present time.

Amendment (Mr. Hay) agreed to.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The question is now on the main motion as amended.

Mr. CAMPBELL: I have a few words to say but as it is six o'clock I would move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. MEIGHEN: I submit, Mr. Speaker, that an hon. member who has spoken to the resolution cannot move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. FIELDING: But he has the right to close the debate.

Mr. MEIGHEN: He may have the right to close the debate but not to move the adjournment thereof.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) has the right to close the debate but before he speaks it is my duty to advise all other hon. members who have not yet spoken upon the resolution that the hon. member is about to exercise that right and that if they desire to speak, they must do so now.

Mr. MEIGHEN: But the hon. member cannot move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. FIELDING: It being six o'clock there is no need for him to move the adjournment.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: It is a very unusual proceeding for an hon. member who is closing a debate upon a substantive motion which he has introduced to move the adjournment of that debate, but I am under the impression that this has previously been done. The hon. member may prefer to speak now.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Do I understand that my remarks will be in the way of closing the debate?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The hon. member cannot speak without closing the debate. The substantive resolution as amended is all that now remains before the House.

Mr. FIELDING: If the hon. member desires to make a few remarks, there is no objection but otherwise as it is six o'clock, the House must adjourn.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Does the hon. member desire to close the debate now or wait until the House meets again?

Mr. MEIGHEN: If I may speak to the point of order, I would point out that the motion to adjourn requires a seconder. The very fact that it requires a seconder seems to debar the hon. member from making that motion because no other hon. member can rise to second the motion. Although it is of no great importance in this debate, I do not think it would be a good rule to establish that an hon. member closing a debate can move its adjournment.

Mr. W. F. MACLEAN: What is the motion before the House?

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: The resolution submitted by the hon. member for Nelson (Mr. Campbell) as amended by the hon. member for Selkirk (Mr. Hay). The hon. member for Nelson now desires to move the adjournment of the debate in order that he may make his reply when the House meets again. That motion, the legality of which is questioned by the right hon. the Prime Minister, is not necessary as one of the rules provides that if at six o'clock on Wednesday, a motion on the Order Paper is under consideration, that question shall stand first on the Order Paper of the following day. I think there is considerable force in the point raised by the right hon. the Prime Minister that an hon. member who is closing a debate has no right to move its adjournment owing to the fact that no other hon. member has the right to take the floor for the purpose of seconding the motion. If obliged to do so without further consideration, I would feel disposed to so rule, but at this time, the motion to adjourn the debate is quite unnecessary.

Mr. CAMPBELL: I prefer to take your suggestion, Mr. Speaker, and call it six o'clock.

At six o'clock the House adjourned pursuant to rule.

INDEX

FIFTH SESSION — THIRTEENTH PARLIAMENT, 1921

Abbreviations.—1r., 2r., 3r.,=first, second, or third reading. Admn.=Administration. Amdt.=Amendment. Com.=Committee. Dept.=Department. Div.=Division. Govt.=Government. M.=Motion. Neg.=Negatived. Qu.=Question. Ref.=Reference. Rep.=Report. Res.=Resolution. Sec.=Section.

Abbatoirs. See Health of Animals; Live stock

Abitibi District, 3075
Grievances of settlers, 2510

Accounts. See Finance; Public Accounts

Accredited Herd. See Health of Animals

Adams, Capt. Henry C., and Canadian Navy Enquiry, 901; qu. 1237

Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 5, 40, 66, 110, 154, 188, 230, 244, 262, 313, 351, 397, 448, 479. Amdt. to Amdt. (Mr. Campbell), adjournment, neg.; Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) non-confidence, neg. Address agreed to, 561

Ad Hoc Judge, 1084. See also Judges Act Amdt.

Adjournment. See House of Commons

Administration of Justice. See Justice

Admiralty Courts. See Vice Admiralty

Adulteration of Food Act Amdt.
Administration, 3129
Maple Products, 888. See also that title

Advisory Council of Scientic Research. See Research

Aeronautics, etc. See Air

Aeroplanes. See Air

Age of Consent. See Criminal Code Amdt.

Age Limit. See Prisons

Agenda. See Prime Ministers' Conference

Agrarian Party. See Progressive Party

Agricultural Colleges, 1034

Agricultural Gazette, 1074

Agricultural Implements, 91, 492, 417, 583, 666, 3179, 3372, 3394, 3492-6, 3508, 3631
United Grain Growers, and, 418-9

Agricultural Instruction, 1029

Agricultural Machinery (Standardization of Parts) 584; Res. (Mr. McCoig) 666; Amdt. (Mr. Henders) 670

Agricultural Shows, grants to,
M. (Mr. Archambault) 1238; withdrawn, 1247

Agricultural Societies, 1074. See also Exhibitions

Agriculture. See also Immigration; Soldier Settlement; Unemployment
Agriculture Act in Great Britain, 3186
Aids to, 1245
Appropriations limited, 1029
Butter. See Dairying Industry
Cold Storage warehouses, 1038
Conservation Commission, 3964
Cow-testing associations, 1036
Deputy Minister, salary, 950
Dairying. See that title
Decline of in Great Britain, 3186, 3237
Department
Civil Service appointments, 1045
County fairs, assistance to, 1123
Deputy Minister, salary, 950
Estimates, 917, 1024, 1074, 1116, 4506-13
Destructive insect and Pest Act, 4512. See also that title
District Representatives, 1033-4
Duff, the late Hon. James, work of, 1033
Eggs. See that title
Experimental Farms, 4512. See also that title
Fruit inspection, 1041. See also Fruit
Grasshopper plague, qu. 838, 1027
Health of Animals. See that title
International Institute of, 1116
Land suitable for, 845, 872
Live stock. See that title

Agriculture.—Con.
National Dairy Council, 1126
Potato-growing and diseases, 1032-3, 3224, 3442-73, 3525
Production, 135-6, 872
Products, decline in value, 3487
Publications, 1073
Seed and Feed Control, 1125, 4513
Seed fairs, 1126
Seed Grain. See that title
United States, in, 3188
Wright County, condition in, 922

Air Board, estimates, 3776

Air Force,
Camp Borden, qu. 1820, 3777
Preference in Civil Service appointments, 4483

Air Service, 3776
Forest patrol, 4495
Topographic Survey of Northern Canada, 856

Alaska boundary, 4494

Alberta
Coal, price at mine, 1251
Coal production. See Fuel Supply Problem, Natural Resources
Highways, grants, qu. 821
Industrial Research Commission, 1267
Penitentiary. See Penitentiaries
Prohibition plebiscite, 3901, 4374-88
Supreme Court, qu. 576

Alcohol. See also Customs and Excise; Inland Revenue; Prohibition; Proprietary; Special War Revenue
Certificate of provincial analyst, 3786
Customs duty, 3705
Excise duty, 2725-6
For medicinal purposes, 3729, 3957

Alderson, Mr. George B.
Claim of for compensation, 924, 1052, 2270-4, 4508. See also Health of Animals

Algernon Rock pier, qu. 1383

Alice Arm, wharf, 3976

Aliens. See also Canadian Nationals; Dominion Elections; Immigration; Naturalization;
Franchise, and, 3103
Naturaliation, 2441
Wives of British Subjects. See Dominion Election Act Amdt. Bill

All Night Sitting. See House of Commons

All Saints' Day. See Civil Service Holidays

Alpine Club, 4494

Alward, Mr., and Transcontinental, 1657

Ambassador at Washington, 185, 357, 525, qu. 671, 2400-23, 3635. See also Canadian Representation in the United States; Prime Ministers' Conference
Delay in appointment, 786
Fordney Bill, 512. See also United States

Amendments to Supply. See Supply

American Consuls. See Customs and Excise Bill; Trade; Trade Commissioners

American Markets. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade; United States

Amery, Col. L. S., 1532

Ames, Sir Herbert B. (St. Antoine)
Resignation
Enquiry as to date, 1069
Received, 1001
Reported, 464, 469, 478, qu. 577
See also Representation

Amherst drill hall, 2739

Amqui Station, 382, 1176, 1233

Anderson, Mr. R. K. (Halton)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 235. Demand that Government resign—amendment introduces no new issue, 235; congratulations to mover and seconder—tributes to former Prime Ministers—speech of Leader of Opposition—Unemployment insurance—old age pensions—League of Nations; tariff, 238; Alliance with Agrarian party; leader of Agrarians an out-and-out free trader—by-election in Peterborough—principles of Liberalism, 239; invitation to Liberal Unionists to cross floor—mandate of Government—immediate election would delay redistribution; increased representation, 240; seceders should have consulted their electors—Laurier administration and the tariff, 241; Daniel Webster and the clamourers, 242
Budget, 3348. Canada's debt and annual growth of expenditures, 3348; increase in trade, 3349; increase in population, 3349; Canada's present and future growth and progress, 3351; moderate protection necessary, 3351; reciprocity with United States, 3353; home market and transportation, 3354; fruit growing, 3354; Opposition and protection, 3355; Farmers' Party platform, 3356;

Anderson, Mr. R. K.—Con.
Budget—Con.
Grain Growers' Grain Company, 3357, 3360; Winnipeg strike, 3359; Depopulation of rural sections and increased price of commodities, 3361
Feeding Stuffs Act, qu. 965
Inspection districts, qu. 1624
Toronto-Guelph-Sarnia highway, etc., qu. 4252

Andrews, Mr. George W. (Centre Winnipeg)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 469. Congratulations to Prime Minister; free trade and protection—the "yellow peril", 471—markets of the world, 472; exports; Farmers' Platform; abuse of tariff no argument against protection, 473; free trade in England; armaments do not prevent war; Assembly of the League of Nations—the amendment; redistribution; election, 474
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen), 1803
Housing, 1152
Oleomargarine Act Amdt., 3881
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2678
Proportional representation, 1537

Anglo-Japanese Alliance, 2637-9, 2357-60

Animal Contagious Diseases Act
Administration, 1048
Powers under, 4508
See also Health of Animals

Animal Contagious Diseases Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 2031; 1r., 2942; 2r., com., 3r., 3011

Animals, Cruelty to. See Criminal Code Amdt.

Annapolis County
Fruit growing in, 1046
Inspectors, 1041

Annapolis public building, 2741

Annexation. See United States

Annual Drill. See Militia

Annuities Branch, 4524

Anodynes, elixirs, etc., duty on, 3709

Anse Aux Gascons wharf, 3991

Anse St. Jean, wharf, 4536

Antelope in Western Canada, qu. 1134

Anticosti Island, squatters on, 1514

Antigonish Public Works office, 2818

Appendices
Canadian National Railways
Employees' pay, qu. 1737, 1815

Apples. See also Fruit
Export to Great Britain, 1501, qu. 1714
Markets for, 1469
Tariff on, 126

Appropriation Acts
1. Bill No. 42 (for 1921-2, for $71,499,703.70). Res. 1674; 2001; 1r., 2045; 2r., com., 2100; 3r., 2116
2. Bill No. 222 (for 1920-1, for $14,681,810.-14; and for 1921-22, $371,044,471.26). Res., 1r., 2r., com., 3r., 4577

Arbitration. See Grand Trunk

Arbitrations and Awards, Railways, 3015

Arbitrators, Judges as. See Judges Act Amdt.

Archambault, Mr. Joseph (Chambly and Verchères)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 244. Grand Trunk employees' pensions, 244—omissions from Speech—dissolution—election, 1917; "Knots and Lashings"—railway problem, 245; Can. Govt. Merchant Marine—Prime Ministers' Conference, 246; Imperial relations; League of Nations; no mandate—Purchasing Commission, 247—overtures to Quebec, 248; Mr. Gauthier, severance of connection with Liberal party, 250; inconsistent attitudes towards tariff, 251; Lafontaine and Cartier, 252; Minister of Immigration, 253
Agricultural Shows, M., 1238-46; withdrawn, 1247
Auditor General's Report, 1385
Banff National Park, 4495
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2911
Board of Commerce, qu. 599, 602
Budget, 3557. Financial operations, 3557; rigid economy in national expenditure necessary, 3558; military expenditure, 3558; Winnipeg strike, 3560; Grand Trunk shareholders, 3560; Prime Minister playing the game, 3562; Credits to Greece and Roumania, 3563; Members of Parliament directors of companies selling to Government, 3564
Canada Grain Act, 1442
Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill, 2230
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2252

Archambault, Mr. Joseph—Con.
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Proposed Special Committee, 1440
"Squatter" and "Pioneer," Ss., qu. 1382
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 2032
Canadian National Railways
French language, 4331-3
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1767-97
Canadian Press Limited, qu. 564
Civil Service, religious holidays, 1384; qu. 1499
Confidential messengers, 1334
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3007, 3919-36
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Amalgamation of departments, Dr. Cartier, 3821
Debates, translation of French Speeches, Res. 698
Defamatory libel; publication of judicial proceedings, 2149, 3933
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4237-40
French Trade Agreement, 1174
Grand Trunk Railway
Loan, 4138
Shareholders, list of, 3320, 3560, 3740
Harbours and rivers, 3975-81
Highways, grants to provinces, qu. 2098
Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill, 2247
Inland Revenue Collector at St. Hyacinthe, Dr. Cartier, qu. 3904
Inquiry into public services, qu. 604
Interim Supply, voting of, 2011
Kirkwood Steamship Company, qu. 564
Militia supplies, sale to Roumania, 2245
Mondou, Mr.—Yamaska election, 3594
Montreal and South shore bridge, M. 2211-19
Montreal, public service, qu. 604
Naturalization Act, 1914 Amdt. Bill (Aliens who served in Allied Armies) 2441
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4031-34
Oil, leases, qu. 564
Opium and Narcotic Drugs, 2265
Paintings in Senate Chamber, qu. 566
Parliament Buildings, 3994-4002
Pierreville postmistress, qu. 3423
Prime Ministers' Conference, qu. 564; 3320
Privilege, correction of Official Report Société des Artisans, 230
Public Accounts, 1069
Public Buildings, Nova Scotia, 2758
Public documents, destruction of, qu. 599
Purchasing Commission, 2024
Returns, enquiries for, 2009, 2775, 3320
Ross rifle, statement of Rev. Canon Scott, qu. 599

Archambault, Mr. Joseph—Con.
Roumania and Greece
Dominion Canners, purchases, qu. 1001
Interest on loans, 1072
Loans to, qu. 478, 564
Militia stores, sale to, 2245
Tappert, Rev. N., qu. 1673
Welland canal, 2025, 2979-98

Architect. See Parliament Buildings

Archives, 4533. See also Public Records
Biggar, Mr. H. P., qu. 2343
Doughty, Dr. Arthur, 2947
Provision for, 2945

Arctic Expedition, 4106, 4113

Argentine, Beef, competition with, 1039

Argue, Mr. Ira E. (Swift Current)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 367. Congratulations to Prime Minister—Mandate of Government and its supporters, 367; redistribution, representation of West; freight rates; Wheat Board, 368; price of wheat—grain investigation, 369
Canadian National Railways, 3038
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4467
Gravelbourg-Swift Current Railway, 3053

Armistice Day
Shipbuilding contracts after, 1683
Thanksgiving, 2555

Armistice Day Bill (Mr. Mowat) 1r., 2618; Transferred to Govt. Orders, 3207; 2r., com., 3773; 3r., 3776

Armouries for Public Meetings, qu. 901

Armstrong, Mr. J. A. M. (North York)
Civil Service bonus, 2109

Armstrong, Mr. Joseph E. (East Lambton)
Budget, 3424. Western Ontario industries, 3424; Imports of manufactured goods and exchange, 3425; canning factories, 3426; manufacturing industries generally, 3427
Business of the House
Bills reported by Standing Coms., 3761
Butter substitutes, material for, 3745
Canal tolls, 2969
Civil Service Retirement Act Amendment Bill, 4273
Flax Industry, 1401
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Waterway, 744
Highways west of London, 4307
Illustration stations in Western Ontario, 948
Immigrants along national railways, 3070

Armstrong, Mr. Joseph E.—Con.
Inland Shipping
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, qu., 2192
Rates—control, 1497, 2557, 2966-9
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 607
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4193
National Research Council, 2702
Ocean shipping, Govt. control, qu. 3530
Quebec Union Electric Telephone Co., 3343, 3421
Railway Act Amdt. Bill (Inland Shipping Rates), 1497, 2556
United States railways, 1576
Welland canal, 2969

Army Worms, 1028

Arsenic, 1027

Arthur Young Company, 2781, 4465. See also Address; Civil Service; Post Office; Printing Bureau
Employment of, 551
Payments to, qu., 4251

Arthurs, Mr. James (Parry Sound)
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, firearms, 3900-6
Dominion Elections Act Amdt., 309
Imports for home consumption in 1920, qu., 602
Pensions, widowed mothers, 637
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4056
Soldiers' Pensions, insurance and re-establishment committee, final report, 4056

Artisians, Canadiens Francais, La Société des, 82

Ascension Day, 2626, 2775. See also Civil Service
Adjournment. See House of Commons

Ashley, Sergt. T., C.M.S.C., qu., 3090

Assembly. See League of Nations

Atholstan, Lord, 1515
La Presse and, 3248

Atikokan, additional tracks, 1017

Atlin District, B.C., Judge, 1080

Auditing. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canadian National Railways

Auditor, Independent. See Canadian National Railways

Auditor General
Railways, audit by, 1189

Auditor General's Report, 597, 958, 2247
Comparison with Estimates, 1108
Delay in bringing down, 737, 903, 1791
Penitentiaries, purchases for, 1104-5
Travelling expenses of judges, 1088
Unprovided items, 4535
Vols. I and II, 642; Vol. III, 788, 1396; Vol. IV, 737, 1176, 1385, 1388

Australia and New Zealand
Trade and steamship services, 1223, 1468, 1493

Austrian and German Imports. See Customs Act Amdt. Bill; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Authors. See Copyright

Automobiles.—See Criminal Code Amdt.
Driving while intoxicated, 3911
Theft, 3913

Backus, Mr. E. W., 4173-4224. See also Lake of the Woods

Baie Ste. Catherine Steamship Service, 1822, 1971

Baie St. Paul liquor seizure, qu., 696; qu. 1132

Balance of Trade, 97, 3219, 3264, 3366, 3397 See also Address, Budget, Trade

Baldwin, Mr. W. K. (Stanstead)
Budget, 3201. Tariff question, 3201; war indemnity, 3202; Roumanian and Greek loans, 3202; present economic conditions, 3202; financial situation, 3202; Laurier Government, 3204; railway problem, 3204; taxation, 3204; Easterr Townships, 3205; military and nava expenditure, 3205; League of Nations, 3208; military service, 3206; immigration policy, 3206
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4446
De Martigny divorce, 4112
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 741
Housing, 1143-9
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4224
Unemployment and Labour, 1373

Balfour, Hon. A. J., and protection, 3417

Ball, Mr. Robert J. (Southeast Grey)
Pierreville postmistress, qu., 3208

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C. (Minister of Marine and Fisheries and Minister of the Naval Service)

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C.—Con.
Brant, steamer, 1982
British preference, 3485, 3553
Liberals, and, 3616
Budget, 3209. Revenue, 3209; Imaginary letters and Mr. McMaster, 3209; private business of ministers, 3210; tariff revision, 3210; position of Mr. Fielding on tariff, 3211; Naval affairs and expenditure, 3212; fiscal policy of Farmers' and Liberal parties, 3213; boot and shoe industry in Quebec East, 3214; Mr. King's speeches in Eastern and Western Canada, 3214; position of Mr. Gauthier, 3215; Quebec representation in Cabinet, 3216; attitude of Quebec, 3216
Business of the House
For tomorrow, 2148
Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill (Public harbours) 2229
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2259-60
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Balance sheet, 1920, errors in, 1697-8
Canadian Press comment, 1704
Creation of company, 1908
Dominion Iron and Steel Company, 1710
First annual report, 1694
General statement, 1272; shipbuilding, 1272, 1279; shipping rates, decline in, 1273; cost of construction, 1274; operating costs, 1275; routes and sailings, 1275; exports, 1276-77; operating results, 1277; assets, 1277; liabilities, 1278
Halifax-Newfoundland route, 1686
Information, 1440
Operating profit, 1867
Preference to Canadian products, 1280
Quebec port, alleged discrimination against, 1271
Sailing routes, 1275, 1733
Ships on Great Lakes, 1914
Vessels, names of, 1962
Canadian "Inventor" 1890
"Champlain," 1980, 1995
Canadian Nationals Definition Bill, 786
Champlain, steamer, 1980, 1995
Chicago Drainage Canal, 1851
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4475-84
Naval Service, preference, 4484
Dry docks, 1690
"Esperanto," wreck, 4341
Fisheries
Breeding establishments, 4036
Dominion and Provincial jurisdiction, 2105

Ballantyne, Hon. C. C.—Con.
Fisheries—Con.
Inspection of pickled and canned fish, 2183
Lobster hatcheries, 4036
Overseers in Lunenburg, 2179
Salmon fishing licenses, 4342
Icebreakers and steamers, repairs, 1979, 1994
Imaginary letters, 3209, 3174
Johnston, Mr. Alex., re-appointment, 644
Life-saving service, 1990, 1991
Lighthouse and coastal service, 1996, 2174
Signal service, 1997, 4040
Lightkeepers' salaries, 1995
"Marie Lydia," schooner, 1985
"Narbethong," steamer, 2175
Naval Service estimates, 4010-36
Navigation, season of, 1994
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4010-36
Ocean and River service, 1736
Pilotage, administration of, 1999
Pilots, pensions, 2000
Public Harbours, 2229
Repairing of ships at Quebec, 1988
St. Lawrence channel, dredging, 1992
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. (Ministers and directorships) 652
Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., 372, 3484
Shipbuilding, 1272, 1683, 2081
Contracts, 1872, 1884, 1972, 1902
Correction as to value, 1683
Depreciation, 1886
Details of construction, 1874
Dominion Steel Company, 1691
Extra fittings, 1894
Figures, 1931
Imperial Munitions Board, 1869
Interest on cost, 1887
Lemieux, Mr., speech on, 1684
Newspaper comment, 1934
Operating profit, 1866
Opposition to, 1892
Price per ton, 1873
Progress in debate on, 1729, 1931
Sinking fund, 1885
Shipyards, Government loan to, 1883
Swan, Mr. D. D., Consulting engineer, 1997
Tariff—speech, Montreal, Nov. 15, 1920, 363
Welland canal obstruction, 1990
Wrecking plants, 1990
Wrecks, investigation, 1988
Yamaska by-election, 3251

Ballot Boxes, Convicts working on, 1092

Banff National Park, 3986, 4495

Banking and Commerce, Com., 962

Bankruptcy Act Amendment Bills
1. Bill No. 36 (notice to creditors of suspension) 1r., 1069; 2r., com., 2556. (See No. 3)
2. Bill No. 37 (French Version) 1r., 1069; m. for 2r., 2557. (See No. 3)
3. Bill No. 118. 1r., 2618; 2r., com., 3909, 3143; 3r., 3146. Senate amendments. 3772-4068

Subjects and sections discussed:
Additional security by trustee, 2913
Adjustment of rights of contributories, 2929
Affidavit upon registration, 2910
Alternative powers—court to await prior action, 2937
Assignment of book debts, 2922
Available Act of bankruptcy, 2909
Claims, priority, 2935
Commencement of bankruptcy, 2910
Discharge of Trustee, 2934
Dismissal of petition, 2910
Dividend, 2930-31
French version; correction, 4170
Jurisdiction of Dominion and provinces, 2924
Leased premises, 2935
Liability of officer, director or agent of company, 2940
Local newspaper, 2909
New trustee may be substituted, 2916
Penalty for removing goods, 2938
Permission limited, 2920
"Person," 2910
Procedure in Quebec under Civil Code, 2924
Proof, power to admit or reject, 2935
Proposal of composition or management, 2911
Removal of goods; bank deposits, 2920
Remuneration, expenses and costs, 2930
Remuneration of trustee, 2933
Search warrants, 2936
Securities—secured creditor to value, 2935
Stay of proceedings, 2912
Trustee may apply for directions, 2918
Trustee may apply for sale of property, 2920
When misrepresentation or fraud, a defence for contributory, 2928

Bankruptcy Act, Judges under, 1084

Banks. See also Finance; loans
Canadian, deposits outside Canada, qu. 1623
Dominion Notes and gold reserve, qu. 1234
Taxation, and, qu. 2192, 3664

Banner Oats, 1033

Bar Association. See Canadian Bar Association

Barbed Wire, 3328, 3495

Barnard, Mr. C. A., 1846, 1930

Barnhill, Mr. A. P., 1609-10. See also Canadian National Railways
Business interests, 3610

Bass River, wharf, 3989

Battlefields Memorials Commission, competitive designs, 2566

Beatty, Mr. E. W., and immigration, 1127, 1356

Beauce, appointment of Judge, 1081

"Beaver" Canadian, Ss., qu. 1673

Beef Cattle. See Cattle Embargo; Live Stock

Beef, Dressed, export of, 1039. See also Cattle Embargo

Beer Containers, Marking, 3786

Beet Sugar, 301, 3426, 3456

Béland, Mr. H. S. (Beauce)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 157; Election, League of Nations, 157; speeches of Sir George Foster and Mr. Rowell; International Justice; Article X; registration of treaties; expenses, salaries of officials. 158; Canada's share; Imperial federation; centralization; local control; Lord Burnham, 159; unrest and dissatisfaction, 160; Government has outlived mandate; representation, redistribution will not greatly help Agrarians; tariff issue, 161, 162; Quebec situation, 162; Canadian National Railways, Board of Commerce, 163; Board of Pension Commissioners; International Joint Commission; Peace Conference; Assembly of the League of Nations, 164
American implements at Experimental Farms, qu. 492
Auditor General's Report, 914
Brunelle, Sergt. Major N., 1519
Business of the House
Monday, Government business, 2148
Public Bills and Orders, 2819
Second reading by consent, 2889
Saturday sittings, 2818
Canada Year Book, 1425
Canadian Association for Prevention of Tuberculosis, 3142

Béland, Mr. H. S.—Con.
Canadian National Railways
Private ownership, 1498
Canadian representation in the United States, 2400-28
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2780
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2492-2502, 4268-73
Coal importation, 1248
Cocaine and morphine imports, 3130
Coffee, adulteration of, 3141
Conservation Act Repeal Bill, 3146, 3958-71
Dairy Produce Grading Bill, 4437-42
Demobilization, 2285
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4065
French Trade Agreement, 1175
Fuel Supply, Special Committee, evidence in French, 4251
Government railways, boards of management, 1658
Governor General—reported appointment of Lord Byng, 4435
Grain elevators, 1442
Health
Medical officers, 3133
Immigrants, for, 3132
Housing loan, 4552
Immigration, 2575
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4351-5
Income Tax, extension of time, 1272
Maple Products Act Amdt. Bill, 2150, 2193, 2557-60, 2618, 2890
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1652
National Resources, 892
Maple industry, 892
Opium and Narcotic Drugs, 2263-7
Parliament Buildings, 4000
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2096, 2709-11
Polish Battalion for service in French Army, 4055
Pootmans, Mr. G., and Belgian loan, 3379
Purchasing Commission, 2018, 2020, 2024
Quebec riots, 1508
Quebec Union Telephone Company, 3343
Returned Soldiers
Pensions, insurance and re-establishment Special Committee, 732, 4055
Relief for, 2688
Revenue, expenditure and debt, qu. 2099
Scientific Research, 1430. See also Research
Statutory expenditures, 1422
Unemployment, 4551

Belfast, linen yarns. See Linen yarns

Belgo-Canadian Pulp & Paper Company, 3049

Belgium. See also Loans
Credit to, qu. 577, qu. 1001, 3347, 3377
Pootmans, Mr. G., 3379
Purchases in Canada, qu. 736

Bell, Dr. Graham, secretary, 2377

Bell, Major Graham A., 1609-10, 1666, 3610. See also Canadian National Railways

Bell Telephone Company, Signal Service, 1998

Belly River water rights, qu. 2943. See also Irrigation

Bermuda
Steamship service to, 1488
Trade agreement, rejection of, 1271. See also Canada-West Indies
Trade relations, 2253

Berne Convention. See Copyright

Berry Boxes and Currant Boxes
Amendment of Inspection and Sale Act M. (Ethier), 4106, 4114

Berthierville telephone, qu. 1233

Bertrand, Mr. Joseph Tetu, 4079

Best, Mr. John (Dufferin)
Agricultural Shows, 1244
Chief Justice, income tax, 1565
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4468-80
Experimental Farms, 940
Flax-growing, 1392, 1395
Fruit inspectors and Civil Service Commission, 1045
Highway construction in Ontario, 3027, 3033, 4295
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4214-18
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3855-88
Parliament Buildings, 4075

Bi-Cameral System. See Ministers

Bienfait, Briquetting plant at, qu. 673, 4499. See also Coal; Lignite; Natural Resources

Biggs, Hon. F. C. and Highways, 3036, 3037, 4290, 4448. See also Highways

Bills. See also Deputy Speaker; House of Commons; Private Bills Discussed; Speaker. For Public Bills see individual titles

Binder Twine, 3227, 3328, 3365, 3481, 3493, 3505. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt.
Exemption of fibre, 3746

Biological Board, 2189

Birchard, Dr., grain laboratory at Winnipeg, 1228

Birds. See Migratory Birds

Bituminous. See Coal; Fuel Supply

Blair, Mr. William J. (Battle River)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 376; General election unfair to West; no demand; marketing of farmers' grain; at mercy of grain dealer; elevator practices, 377; position of elevator operator; screenings and dockage, 378; overages; Winnipeg Grain Exchange; Wheat Board; participation certificates, 379; Mr. Woods' statement; investigation necessary
Canadian Wheat Board, qu. 1343

Blake, Mr. Matthew R. (North Winnipeg)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 313; Congratulations to Prime Minister; unjust criticism of Government, 313; effective prosecution of war; trade expansion; merchant marine; re-establishment, 314; Soldiers' Settlement Act; soldiers' insurance; expenditure of Ontario Government, 315; trade with United States; exchange; declaration of policy by leader of Agrarians; investigation of grain trade, 316; performances not promises; leader of the Opposition, 317
Alcohol, tax on, 3731
Criminal Code amendment, 3899
Debates, translation of French speeches, 702
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4201
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2267

Blondin, Hon. P. E., 536, 552. See also Postmaster General
Payments to, qu. 567. See also Ministers, Post Office

Blood Indian Reserve. See Indians

Blood-Testing of Animals, 1050

Blouin, Mr. Joseph. See Quebec Riots

Blue Books, printing of, 1485. See also Printing Bureau

Board of Commerce, 163, 401, 441, 3169, 3604. See also Address, Budget
Appointment and work, qu. 602
Total cost, qu. 599

Board of Directors. See Canadian National Railways; Management

Board of Railway Commissioners. See Railway Commission

Board of Trade Reports
French forms, 2819, 3320, 3375

Boards of Trade, 1465. See also Trade

Boivin, Mr. George H. (Shefford). See also Deputy Speaker
James McLaren Company, Limited, 665
Speaker's Chair, presentation, 3688, 3691

Bolshevism, 27, 3451
Pamphlet issued by Labour Department, 4548

Bolton, Mr. Ferris (Lisgar)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 396; Grain trade—drying up of lakes in Prairie Provinces—duration of Parliament, 396

Bombs. See Criminal Code Amendment

Bonds. See also Finance; Loans; Victory Bonds
Canadian Government, qu. 1620, 3289
Comparative return on Dominion and Nova Scotia, 4165
Outstanding War, Victory, tax free and taxable, qu. 2821
Tax-exempt, 3398

Bonus. See Civil Service

Boot-making. See Penitentiaries

Boots and Shoes
Industry, 1222, 3214, 3230, 3386, 3484, 3637
Trade in, 1225

Borax, Manufacture of, 3365

Bordeaux Mixture, 1033

Borden, Right Hon. Sir Robert L. (King's, N.S.)
Archives, provision for, 2947-53
Armistice Day Bill, 3773
Business of the House
Complaint of undue haste, 4452
Prorogation—important business immediately preceding, 4452
Canadian Constitutional Development, 2378
Canadian National Railways, Special Com., reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen), 1777
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2436
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4488
Religious holidays, 4488
Returned soldiers, 4259
Copyright Act Amdt. Bill, 3838-50
De Martigny divorce, 3765-70
Disarmament, views on, 3418
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays, Rule 17c, 2104
Governor General—Address to on retirement, 4435
Interim Supply, 1678
Judges' salaries, 1563

Borden, Right Hon. Sir Robert L. —Con.
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2329
Nauru Island phosphate deposits, 4542
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2626
Privileges and Elections Com., 2373
Speaker's Chair, 3693

Borden, Camp
Air Force, qu. 1820, 3777

Borrowing. See Housing; Loans

Boswell, wharf, 3977

Bosworth, Mr., and value of ships, 1706

Boucher, Mr. Aime, ques. 3422, 3423. See also Pierrevile; Yamaska

Boucher, Mrs. See Pierreville Postmistress

Bounties, 3085. See also Natural Resources; Trade and Commerce
Beet Sugar, 3456
Iron and Steel, 874
Linen yarn, 1389
Petroleum, crude, 1385, 1413

Bourassa, Mr. J. B. (Levis)
Canadian National Railways, superannuation, qu. 2344
Civil Service
Appointments, qu. 572
Returned soldiers, qu. 3259
Dredge Internationale, qu. 2192, 2506
Motor-bus tax, remission, qu. 603
Printing Bureau, destruction of documents, qu. 603
St. Romuald public building, qu. 577, qu. 604

Boxed Goods. See Special War Revenue Act Amdt.

Boyce, Mr. George (Carleton)
Arthur Young Company and Griffenhagen, payments, qu. 575
Housing, 1146
Immigration to Northern Ontario, 3077
Oleomargarine Act Amendment Bill, 3859
Unemployment and immigration, 1362

Boyer, Mr. Gustave (Vaudreuil-Soulanges)
Dairy products grading Bill, 4444
Maple Industry, 887
Natural resources, 887
Road from Cascades Point to Coteau Junction, qu. 576
Tobacco licenses, 2554
War History, qu. 1625

Boys, Mr. William A. (South Simcoe)
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Provincial analyst's certificate, 3789
Still—innocent manufacture of part, 3788
Grand Trunk loan, 4148-58

Bradley, Mr., Vice-Admiralty registrar, 1086

Bran, for destructive insects, 1027

Brandram-Henderson, Limited, 1611

"Brant," steamer, 1982

Brantford-Hamilton Highway. See Highways.

Bridges. See also Canadian National Railways; Public Works; Railways and Canals
Banff, 3986
Bryson-Calumet Island, 3986
Campbellton-Cross Point, qu. 573, 2937
Edmundston, 2810
Grand Etang, 3987
Jacques Cartier County, 3678
Joliette, 4320
Kingston, 3973
Lachine Canal, 3675, 4308
Longueuil, 300
Montreal-South shore, M. (Archambault) 2213
Perrot Island, qu. 576, qu. 603
Quebec highway, 4333
Railway, 1664
St. Annes-Vaudreuil, 3677
Victoria, 300

Briquettes, 1251, 1267, qu. 673, 4499. See also Fuel; Lignite

Bristol, Mr. Edmund (Toronto Centre)
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1288
Cattle embargo, 728
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2464
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 743
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. (Ministers and directorships) 594
Shipbuilding, 1288

British Board of Trade and Immigration, 3133

British Cattle, 1049. See also Cattle Embargo

British Chamber of Shipping, 1716

British Columbia
Buoys and Lighthouse service, 2175
Fisheries, 861, 883
Fruit industry, 9-10
Hog cholera in, 1059
Lumber trade, 1725

British Columbia.—Con.
Natural resources, 861
Poultry, 3750
Shipment of ties to Egypt, 1725
Vancouver Island railways, qu. 3422

British Embassy at Washington, 1221. See also Canadian Representation.

British Empire Steel Corporation, 1691. See also Halifax Graving Dock

British Flag, protection under. See Burnham, Dr.

British Foreign Office. See French Trade Agreement

British Funds, disbursement in Canada, qu. 733

British Goods, importation of. See Customs Tariff Act Amdt. (Marking of Imported Goods)

British Manufacturers. See Trade

British North America Act
Proposed amendments. See Address; Ministers
With regard to Judges, 1082

British Precedents. See Address; Ministers

British Preference, 3699

British Remount Commission, 4341, qu

British Subjects, foreign-born wives of. See Dominion Elections Act

British Traditions. See Ministers

Brookfield, Mr., and Halifax Graving Dock, 1699

Brouillard, Mr. J. O. (Drummond and Arthabaska)
Archives, Mr. H. P. Biggar, qu. 2343
Canadian National Railways, Hornepayne division, qu. 1624
George, Mr. A. D., qu. 1233
Newcombe, Mr. E. F., and G. T. Arbitration, qu. 1002
Printing Bureau, destruction of documents, qu. 1621
Judge Snider's report, qu. 2028
Tilley, Mr. W. N., K.C., qu. 1001

Brown, Hon. George, 172, 1167-8
Letter to Sir John A. Macdonald, 4002

Brown-Tail Moth, 1027. See also Destructive Insects

Brunelle, Sergt. Major N.
M. (Mr. Lemieux) for papers, 1518

Brussells, International Financial Conference, qu. 1237, 3148, 3150, 3157, 3268, 3276, 3452, See also Military Expenditure

Buchanan, Mr. W. A. (Lethbridge)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 475; congratulations to Prime Minister; explanation of personal position; not prepared to support Government; people voted on war not domestic questions; new parties, policies and leaders, 475; redistribution and election; Western Canada entitled to increased representation, 476; tariff; the parting of the ways, 477
Antelope in Western Canada, qu. 1134
Customs revenue by provinces, qu. 1622
Irrigation
Belly river water rights, qu. 2943
Milk river water rights, qu. 2099
Natural resources, 857
Transfer to Western Provinces, 2535
Trade agents in United States, qu. 1001

Buckley, Mr. Charles P., qu. 966

Budget. See also Ways and Means
Date of
Announcement of, 2943
Inquiry, 738, 903, 1270, 1555, 2151, 2568, 2818, 2890
Debate on, 3127, 3146, 3209, 3262, 3322, 3343, 3375, 3423, 3476, 3531, 3584
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 3155; neg., 3686-7; resolution agreed to, 3688
Resolutions, 3121
Speech, 3114

Bud Worm, destruction in spruce forests, 1031

Building Conditions. See Housing

Building Material, tax on, 3734, 3736. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt.

Building Trades. See Labour

Building Trades Conference, 1498, 1556

Bulk Freighters. See Fuel Supply

Buoys. See Navigation, aids to

Bureau, Mr. Jacques (Three Rivers and St. Maurice)
Armistice Day Bill, 3773
Automobile theft, 3916
Business of the House, 1330, 1340
Definite statement as to, 1025
Estimates—method of voting, 1073
Morning sittings—prorogation, 4339
Previous debate, 3562

Bureau, Mr. Jacques—Con.
Business of the House—Con.
Supply
Procedure, 1024, 1025, 1073, 1217
Thursdays and Fridays, 958, 1217
Canada Temperance Act
Cases pending, 3902
Exemption of, 4376
Proclamation, 4876
Retroactive legislation, 4376
Supreme Court case, 4376
Canadian Forestry Association, 4494
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 645, 647, 767
Canadian National Railway Company, damage to property, 3049
Canadian National Railways
Forest fires—Transcontinental, 4335
Operation of, 1004
Saskatoon, switch engines, qu. 3090, 3903
Cattle embargo, 729
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 3901-4267
Conservation Act Repeal Bill, 3959-68
Containers, 3956
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3830-7
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3900-36
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Invoice certificate, 3798
Fee, 3798
Form of, 3798
Proclamation, 3798
Trade agents, 3798
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite), 261
Dates of proclamation, assent and voting, 303
Names eliminated, 304
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4246-8
Election officers, disqualification, 4246
Nomination paper, 4247
Exchequer Court Act Amdt., 624
Fuel Supply Co. evidence in French, 4251
Harbours, and rivers, estimates, 3973
Vote in Com., 3979
Highway construction in Ontario, 4297
Hudson Bay Railway, motion involving expenditure, 984
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4344-54
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, Bill, 608
Interior Department
Messenger clerks, 1333
Salaries, 1330
James MacLaren Company, Limited, Bill, 598
Justice Department
Law officers, 1078
Juvenile delinquents—spanking, 3918

Bureau, Mr. Jacques—Con.
Lake of the Woods Control Bill, 1176
International Joint Commission, and, 1071
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4171-4226
National Research Institute, 2692
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4012-34
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payment to, 4575
Patent Act Amendment Bill, 4456-9
Penitentiary Act Amdt. Bill, 3739
Railway statistics, qu. 3422
West Durham election, 1324
Wines, sparkling, tax on, 3734

Burnham, Dr., treatment of by Serbian Government, qu. 576
M. (Mr. Lemieux), 1520

Burnham, Mr. J. H., resignation of, 1

Burnham, Lord, 159
Suggested appointment as Governor General, 599

Business Depression, 3213. See also Address; Budget; Trade

Business Profits War Tax, 3120, 3253, 3445. See also Address; Budget; Taxation
Expenditure, 4533

Butter. See Dairying Industry; Dairy Products, grading of; Oleomargarine

Butts, Mr. Robert H. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
Budget, 3524. Attitude of Government supporters on tariff, 3524; comparison with attitude of Opposition, 3525; protection and the fiscal policy, 3525; foreign trade development under protection, 3526; steel trade, 3526; Dominion Coal Company and strike—Mr. E. M. Macdonald, 3528
Cost of operation of ships, 1799
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, theft of automobiles, 3917
Ingonish, Macleod's breakwater, 4087
Interim Supply, 2020
Judges, power to suspend sentence, 1857
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2124
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2066
St. Lawrence coal trade, 1495
Wrecks, removal of, 1990

By-Elections. See House of Commons; Representation in Parliament
Bill respecting, 1310
Holding of. See Representation in Parliament

Byng, Lord, New Governor General. See Governor General

Cabinet
French Canadian Minister, alleged offer of position to, 3638. See also Veniot; York-Sunbury
Gauthier, Mr. L. J., M.P., and, qu. 1131
Ministers. See also that title
Post Office Dept. and, qu. 1349
Quebec, representation in, 3216

Cabot Strait, 3297

Cahill, Mr. Frank S. (Pontiac)
Air Board, 3777-83
Annapolis public building, 2741
Binder twine fibre, 3756
Bounties, 1386. See also under this title; Natural Resources; Oil
Bureau of Statistics, 2142
Business of the House, 1344
Estimates
Announcement of business for to-morrow, 1344
Rule 17C
Right to call dept. when in Com. of Supply, 2889
Thursdays and Fridays, 1215, 2889, 3001
Calumet Island bridge, 3986
Canada Year Book, 1425
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 776
Canadian National Railways
Auditing of accounts, 1189, 1668
Board of Directors, 4314
Correspondence with directors, 1003
Lord Shaughnessy's letter, 2503
Management—Information, M. (Mr. King) 1189
Officials, payment of, 1669
Report, qu. 902
Special Committee, reference to
M. (Mr. A. K Maclean), 1615
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1769
Amdt. (Mr. Crerar) 1813
Canadian Northern Railway, Directors, 1664
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2378
Census—appointment of enumerators in Pontiac, 828, 1127
Civil Service and patronage, 828
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Cost of production, 4426
Imports from European countries, 2811-19
Proclamation, 4407
"Reasonable profit in the circumstances" 4415
Valuation for duty, 4415

Cahill, Mr. Frank S.—Con.
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill—Con.
Valuation of currency, 3811-19
Customs Tariff Amdt. Bill, imported goods, marking, 3952
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4245
Dominion Police Force, withdrawal from Mounted Police, qu. 601
Dominion Statistician, 1231
Estimates. See also under this title Business of the House
Consideration of, 1666
Objection to, 1074
Flax industry, 1396
Georgian Bay Canal, 688
Gilmour and Hughson, Limited, 1096
Grand Trunk Arbitration, qu. 2030, 2445-79
Grand Trunk Loan, 4145-68, 4314
Motion to reduce, 4151, neg. 4167
Grand Trunk Railway, directors, 3741
Great Lakes and St. Lawrence waterway, 688
Harbours and rivers, 3973-80
Homesteads, 1346
Housing, 1145
Immigration, 2578-84, 3057
Abitibi country, in, 3075
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3826
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 4499
Interim Supply Bill, 2103-2116
Interior and Immigration Depts. 1331
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 609
Kapuskasing illustration station, 949
Live cattle industry, 1474
Manufacturers, protection, 1492
Militia, annual drill, 2294
Montreal Harbour Commission, 2268
Mounted Police,
Recruits, qu. 601
Strength, 2798-2800
National Research Institute, 2705
National resources, 849
Oil
Bounties, 1418, 1424
Lands, General Lindsay and, 1342
Leases, 1340
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4028-34
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3883-92
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. 2267
Parliament Buildings, 3996-4001
Penitentiaries, 1116
Increase in cost, 1112
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2096
Pontiac Census Commissioners, 1127
Printing of Publications, 1438
Purchasing Commission, 1098, 1102, 1114, 2142

Cahill, Mr. Frank S.—Con.
Railway Commission, 3016
Railway Department, record searcher, 1672
Railways
Deputy Minister of, 1665
Parliamentary control, 1603
Return, inquiry for, 2688
Riding Mountain Park, 1343
Rule 17C (Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays) and Interim Supply Bill, 2103-2105. See also under this title Business of the House
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2155-7
Shipbuilding, 1935
Contracts, 1902, 1911
Export trade, 1927
Sinking fund, 1885
South Africa steamship service, 1491
Steamship subsidies, 1491
Transcontinental Railway
Colonization along, 3075
Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2511
Transportation of grain, 2982. See under this title Georgian Bay Canal; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway
Welland canal construction, 2981-90
West India cable, 1438
West Indies-Canada Trade Agreement, 1467
West Indies Steamship service, 1488, 1490

Calder, Hon. J. A. (Minister of Health, Immigration and Colonization; President of the Council)
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 779
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3207, 3827-9. See also under this title, Immigration
Civil Service
Retirements, list of, 1817
Superannuation
Increased allowances, 4275
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4461-93, 4281-88
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2486-2503, 4119, 4266-78
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 3903, 4062-8
Debates, Official, distribution of, 2224
Esmonde, Mr. Osmonde Grattan, 1557
Health
Adulteration of food, 3142
Department, 3127
Report, 1852
Research work, 3135
Drugs, traffic in, 3130 See also Opium and Narcotic Drugs
Medical officers, 3133
Mental Hygiene Council, 3143

Calder, Hon. J. A.—Con.
Health—Con.
Sick mariners, 3135, 4039
Immigration Act Amdt. (Deportation), 1858
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3007, 3822-7
Money qualification, 3825
Persons guilty of sedition, 3826
Senate amendments, 4343
Immigration
British inspectors, 3067
Care of immigrants, 3069
Chinese, 3207, 3827-9, 4131
Department, 3055
Estimates, 2568-2602, 4127, 4131
Postponement of consideration, 3077
Exhibits decorator, 3066
General statement, 2568
Head tax, 3056
Medical officers at ports of departure, 3132
Mental defectives, 3583
Officials, 3057
Policy, 3063
Railways and, 4130
Typhus fever, precautions, 644
Unemployment, and, 1380
United States, 3065
Women, 3061
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 620
Langley, Hon. George, statement by, 456
Langlois, Mr. George Arnoult, 4128
Military District No. 12, 2797
Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act Amdt. Bill, 2263-8, 2346, 2897, 3009, 4062
Special Committee, report, 2708
Proportional Representation, 1541
M. for Special Com., 1542
References to, 363, 438, 452
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, strength, 2798
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2343, 2481-6
Sales tax, 3757
Sick and distressed mariners, 3135, 4039
Smallpox on Scandinavian, 1499
Tuberculosis, prevention of, 3142

Caldwell, Mr. Thomas W. (Victoria and Carleton, N.B.)
Abattoirs and cold storage plants, 1125
Agricultural implements, 3496
Budget, 3441. Farmers' party, attitude of, 3441. Protective tariff and duty on fertilizers, 3441; potato crop, 3442; Roumanian loan, 3444; revenue from Victory Bonds, 3444; luxury taxes and business profits tax, 3445; Canadian manufacturers and tariff, 3446; sales tax, 3447

Caldwell, Mr. Thomas W.—Con.
By-election, York-Sunbury, 2151
Canadian National Railways, directors, 1672
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2781, 4467-89
Cow-testing, 1037
Customs Tariff Amdt. Bill—imported goods marking, 3950
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4243
Fertilizer Act Amdt. Bill, 1497, 2231
Highways—New Brunswick, 4306-8
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 613
Lumber, tax on, 3744
Militia, Douglas, Mr., dismissal, 2277
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2123
Railway Department, sundries, 1667
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2154, qu. 837
Tobique reserve—timber, 4503
Widowed mothers' pensions, 639, 4370
Woodstock exhibition, 1125

Camp Borden. See Borden, Camp

Camp Grounds, Farnham, Que., 1132

Campbell, Mr. A. W. See Highways, Commissioner of

Campbell, Mr. J. A. (Nelson)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 369; Congratulations to Prime Minister; review of the debate; personal position, 370; tariff, protection not main question before House, 371; adjustment of tariff schedules, necessaries of life; profits; Dominion Textile Company; Sherwin - Williams Paint Co.; duties on agricultural implements; Ford car; mining machinery, 373; Government formed for period of war; redistribution before election, 374; precedents; constituency of Nelson, a concrete proposal; adjournment till fall for redistribution, 375; amendment to the amendment proposed, 376; Amdt. negatived, 561
Aerial patrol, 4495
Budget, 3681. Natural resources of Western Provinces, 3681; tariff revision and protection, 3682; cement industry, 3683
Canadian Forestry Association, 4495
Canadian Wheat Board Bill, 2159
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3915-38
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4233-43
Geological Survey, 2141-7
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 3463
Highways
Manitoba, 4308
Ontario, 4298

Campbell, Mr. J. A.—Con.
Hudson Bay Railway, 2980
M. 974, 1852
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4187-4207
Musk Ox and Reindeer, 4543
National Research Institute, 2699
Natural Resources, 869
Transfer to Western Provinces, M. 2519, 2541-53
Parliament Buildings, 3999
Railway Commission, cases before, 3022
Reference to, 495
Shipbuilding contracts, 1955
Trent Canal, 2606-16, 2953-8
Welland canal, 2966-89
Witness fees, 3937

Canada Evidence Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3318-9; 2r., com., 3r., 3758

Canada, Foreign Trade. See Trade

Canada Grain Act. See also Canadian Wheat Board; Grain; Administration, 1442

Canada Highways Act. See Highways

Canada Shipping Act Amendment Bill (Public Harbours)
1r., 1174; 2r., com., 2228; com., 2555; 3r., 2556

Canada Steamships, Limited, 1914

Canada Steel Company, 3407

Canada Temperance Act, 4533
Importation of liquor into provinces, qu.
Quebec city, petition for suspension, 3584, 4382
Where adopted, repealed and in force, qu. 4253

Canada Temperance Act, Bill. See also Dominion Elections Act Amdt; Prohibition Plebiscite
1r., 3901, 4061; 2r., com., 4373; 3r., 4388
Subjects and sections discussed:
Alberta, probibition plebiscite, 4376
Cases pending, 3902, 4373
Costs, 4377-81
Damages, 4387
Defect in form not to invalidate, 3902
Expenses under, 4533
Gold Seal Liquor Co. v. Dominion Express Co. 4375
Omission of date from proclamation, 4379
Pending litigation not to be affected
Amdt. (Mr. Maclean, Halifax) 4384

Canada Temperance Act Bill—Con.
Proclamation, 3901, 4375
Valid, 4373
Prohibition plebiscite, 4375
Retroactive legislation, 4374
Rights other than those of litigants, 4379
Vote, 4379

Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 1920, 563
Report tabled, 2191. See also Trade

Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 1920, Bill
Res. 1557; 1r., 1557; 2r., com., 2251; 3r., 2263

Canada Year Book, 1231, 1425

Canadian Air Force, qu. 965, 3776. See also Air
Camp Borden, qu. 1820, 3777
Regulations tabled, 350

Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, 3142

Canadian Bar Association, 1094. See also Private Bills Discussed

Canadian "Beaver," qu. 1673. For names of Canadian Government Merchant Marine vessels, see Vessels

Canadian Citizens, War Claims, qu. 1820. See also Germany, Reparation

Canadian Council of Agriculture. See also Progressive Party
Platform, 338, 489, 3356, 3358, 3569

Canadian Council of Women's Immigration, 3058-61. See also Immigration

Canadian Engineering Standards Association, 1426

Canadian Expeditionary Force. See also Returned Soldiers
Disability pensions, qu. 1235
Farmers and farm labourers in, qu. 1349
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4051

Canadian Forestry Association. See Forestry

Canadian Goods, sale of. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade

Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 6, 314, 557, qu. 3089. See also Ballantyne, Hon. C. C.; Canadian National Railways, Special Committee; Insurance Act Amdt. Bill; Returned Soldiers; Shipbuilding; Vessels

Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine—Con.
Assets, 1277
Liabilities, and, for 1920, 1701
Auditing of accounts, 1694
Balance sheet for 1920, 1696
Bosworth, Mr., statement of, 3249
Business brokers, 1713
Coal for, 1861
Competition with other steamers, 1714
Construction costs, 1274
Contracts, proposed cancellation, 1727
Control of, 1908
Crews, 1275
Complaint of treatment, 1891
Depreciation, 1701
Directors, names of, 1934
Dominion Iron and Steel Company, 1710, 1723
Export trade, 1732
Fair wages, 4545
Financial operations, qu. 902
First annual report, 1692
General statement by Minister, 1272; shipbuilding, 1272, 1279; shipping rates, decline in, 1273; cost of construction, 1274; officers and crew, 1274-5; operating costs, 1275; routes and sailings, 1275; West Indies service, 1275-6; export trade expansion, 1276; results from operation, 1277; assets, 1277; liabilities, 1278;
Government shipbuilding programme, 2076. See also Shipbuilding
Great Lakes, ships on, 1913
Hall Engineering Co., Montreal, qu. 695
Information, 1164, 1440
Availability of, 1279, 1290, 1292
Special Committee. See Canadian National Railways, Special Committee
Inland navigation, and, qu. 2192
Insurance, 1278, 1703, 4359
Liabilities, 1278
Manager, 1934
Marcil, Mr. Louis T., compensation for injuries, qu. 2942
Marwick, Mitchell & Co., auditors, 1724. See also that title
Montreal, Bank of, opinion, 1895
Operating account, for 1921, 1969
Estimated, 1717
Operating costs, 1275; and wages, 1933
Operating losses, 1579
Operating profit, 1866
Operation, result of, 1277
Operation of boats, 1579
Press comment, 1705, 1707, 1709, 1718, 1808
Prime Minister, statement of, 1708

Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine—Con.
Quebec port, discrimination against, 1271, 1965
Reported sale of ships, qu. 570
Royal Bank, and, 1719
Sailing routes, 1275, 1732
Sick mariners, and, 3136. See also Health
State-owned fleets sold in other countries, 1718
Steamers, repairs to, 1979
Steamship services. See also that title
Australia-New Zealand, 1493
Canada-West Indies, 1275, 1489, 2259
Newfoundland, 1487
Vessels. See also that title
Cost of, 1799
In service, qu. 568
Liquor cargoes in, 1713, 1715
Names of, qu. 1499
Canadian "Beaver," qu. 1673, 1862
Canadian "Conqueror," qu. 1381
Canadian "Explorer," 1714
Canadian "Inventor," 1890
Canadian "Mariner," 1713, 1715
Canadian "Otter," qu. 1382
Canadian "Pioneer," qu. 1382, 1689, 1722, 1894
Canadian "Planter," qu. 2942
Canadian "Rancher," 1716
Canadian "Recruit," qu. 575, qu. 1381, 1382, 1703, 1868
Canadian "Runner," 1715
Canadian "Sapper," qu. 734
Canadian "Squatter," 1894
Canadian "Voyageur," qu. 1381, 1382, 1716, 1894
Registration of, 1720
Size of, 1732
Wages, 1921

Canadian Government Railways. See Canadian National Railways

Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, 2164

Canadian Law Library, 1090

Canadian Locomotive Company, Limited, 1610-11
Works, 3407

Canadian Manufacturers. See Trade and Commerce

Canadian Manufacturers Association and Tariff, 3445, 3645. See also Address; Budget; Manufacturers

Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 3143

Canadian National Express Company
Expenditure on Eastern lines, 3037

Canadian National Railways, 89, 163, 245, 269, 330, 344, 381, 387, 390, 4561. See also Grand Trunk; National Railways and Shipping; Railways; Reid, Hon. J. D.
Administration of. See under this head Management
Amqui station, 382, 1176, 1233
Annual statement by Minister, 1004
Auditing of accounts, 1669, 1792
Auditor
Independent, qu. 1133
Baie St. Paul—St. Urbain branch line, 4328
Betterments, 1015, 3037, 4316
Bonds
Flotation of in New York, 3288, 3298
Bridge between Montreal and South Shore, 2213
Canadian Government Railways. See under this head Intercolonial, Transcontinental
Branch railways, purchase of, 4338
Vote of $7,000,000 to meet working expenditure, 4335
Canadian National Express Company, 3037
Canadian National Railway Magazine, 4332
Canadian Northern Railway, 245, 3287
Bonds, issue and sale of, qu. 837
Borrowing, 3287
Certificates, issue and sale of, qu. 605
Cost of equipment, 1023
Deficits, 1189
Eastern lines, 1018
Guaranteed bonds, sale of, qu. 604
Loan of $50,000,000, 3037
Quebec-Loretteville, electrification, 4328
Salaried officials, qu. 2942
Vessels, qu. 1348
Western lands, 2583
Western lines, 1017
Cape Breton Coal and Steel, 3295
Car shortage, 512, 549, 3541, 4322
Caraquet-Gulf Shore extension, 4338
Carvell, Hon. F. B., speech of, 1202. See also that title
Cedar posts, tenders for, qu. 1130
Charlevoix county—station platforms, 4329
Claims against, 1657
Claims between Ste. Rosalie and Bagot, qu. 571
Disposition of unoccupied land between, qu. 572
Coal purchases, 1772
Committee proposed, 1201
Company, 3049
Conductors, qu. 569
French-speaking, lack of, 1782, 4329
Correspondence, production of, inquiry, 1003

Canadian National Railways—Con.
Deficit, 996, 1005, 1178, 1185, 1189, 1203-4, 1205, 1597, 1600, 4165, 4319
Payne, Mr. J. Lambert, 3017
Directors, 1664, 3407, 4314
Cantley, Col. Thomas, qu. 1501
Deputy Minister of Railways, 1666
Interested in other companies, 1609
Names, 1609
Private business interests, 1609, 3610
Responsibility, 1594
Salaries, 4315
Divisional points, qu. 574
Earnings, 1006
Eastern lines, Improvements, 1017
Electrification, 4327
Employees, 1011
Conductors and brakemen discharged, qu. 1622
Fraud and malpractice by, 1669
Reduction in, 1851
Remuneration, qu. 1673, 1737
Supplementary answer, 1755, 1815
Equipment, 1007, 1013
Expenditure, 1662
Betterments, on, 3037
Western lines, 3037
Explanation of increase, 1011
Fair wages, 4545
Family compact, 1610
Fences, 4569
Fire claims—Shelburne County, 4569
Fish, transportation of, 877, 883, 890, 962, 1038
Fixed charges, 1006, 1008
Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 4142, 4314. See also that title
Foremen of engines, qu. 1673
Freight
Cars, qu. 568
Nova Scotia points, qu. 1620
Rates, 4562
Tonnage, 1007, 1012
French language in Quebec and New Brunswick, 4328
Gaspé Railway service, 962, qu. 2623
Government business, 4130
Grading and track-laying, 1021
Grading in Western Provinces, qu. 570
Grand Trunk loan, 4131
Halifax and South Western
Extension to Lockeport, 4323
Station accommodation, 4327
Hanna, Mr. D. B., 4315. See also that title
Hornepayne division, qu. 1624
Ice supply at Mulgrave, qu. 963
Immigration, 4129
Improvements and new structures, 1017

Canadian National Railways—Con.
Independent auditor, qu. 1133
Information for Parliament. See under this head, Management; Special Committee
Insurance, 1772
Intercolonial Railways, 3041, 4561
Amqui, piling lumber in railway yard, 382
Auditing of accounts, 1189
Charny and St. Foy, work, qu. 1501
Deficit on, 1800
Expropriation of land at Lévis
M. (Mr. Fielding) for papers, 1846, 1851
Lévis station, 2957
Management, 1189
Maritime Provinces, improved transportation, 4561
Mileage, 1005
Ocean limited, 1976
Pensions, old employees, 387
Railway Board, and, 1655
Section men, dismissal, qu. 2028
Superannuation of employees, qu. 575
Train service, qu. 3903
Joliette bridge, 4320
Kelley, Mr. Howard D., 4315
Lake Superior Branch, 3050
Liabilities, 3300
Liquor, theft of, qu. 1132
Loans
$26,000,000, 4169, 4288, 4334
$89,687,633.39, 4131
Amended item, 4168, 4288, 4313
Locomotives, etc., 1007, 1203, 1611
Damage to at Parent, qu. 963
Lord Shaughnessy's letter, 2503, 2890
McAdoo award, 4325
Maintenance, 1005, 1006
Management, qu. 1132, 1654, 1659, 1668. See under this head Special Committee
Information laid before Parliament, M. (Mr. King), 1178
Neg. on division, 1214-5
Manitoba Government, correspondence, 2777
Maritime Provinces, improved facilities, 4516, 4561
Mileage, 1005, 1012
Ministerial statement by Hon. Mr. Reid, 1004; operation, loss in, 1005; mileage, 1005; earnings and operating expenses, 1006; general railway situation, 1007; Grand Trunk Railway, 1008; summary of operating results, 1010; Grand Trunk Pacific, 1014; new structures and improvements, 1017
Monastery, station at, 4324
Moncton shops, 1851
Montmagny—shed accommodation, 4570
Montreal Locomotive Company, qu. 696
Natural resources, development, 871

Canadian National Railways—Con.
National Transcontinental. See under this title, Transcontinental
New lines, 1023
Operation, 1005, 3300
Cancellation of trains, 1004
Operating deficits, 1013, 1189
Operating divisions
Eastern lines, qu. 1131
Western lines, qu. 1131
Operating expenses, 1006
Operating results, 1010, 4316-18
Parlor car receipts—French language, 4330
Passenger traffic, 1012
Payroll, comparison of, 1011
Political control, freedom from, 2828
Politics, participation in, 4502
Prince Edward Island Railway, 4565
Private cars, 4563
Private ownership, and, 1498
Provincial liabilities, qu. 2942
Publicity, 4332
Purchasing agent at Chicago, 1793
Quebec and Saguenay station agents, qu. 696, qu. 963
Quebec bridge—highway, 4333
Quebec, Oriental & Atlantic and Western Railways, qu. 573
Quebec—Shawinigan service, qu. 573
Questions on order paper, 1763, 1782, 1783, 1798
Rails
Price of, 1852
Transfer to France, 4569
Railway ties, 1772
Rate increases, 1007, 1191
Report, qu. 902
Rolling stock, 1007
St. Alexis station, qu. 2375; qu. 3582
St. Augustine, qu. 695
St. Foy round house, 767
Correspondence, 1502
Res. (Mr. Parent), 840, 967
St. John and Quebec Railway, qu. 837
See also that title
St. Hyacinthe shops, qu. 2821
St. Simon telegraph operator, qu. 3208
Saskatoon, shunting, qu. 3090, 3903
Section men, 1439
Special Committee, proposed reference to M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean), 1573; Amdt. 1582-83
Special Committee on National Railways and Shipping
M. (Mr. Meighen)
Agreed to as amended, 1814
Amdt. (Mr. King) 1761, neg. 1810
Amdt. (Mr. Crerar) accepted, 1812-14
Notice of, 1618

Canadian National Railways—Con.
Special Committee on National Railways and Shipping—Con.
Special Committee appointed, 1845
Reference to, 1817
Report of, 2095
Staff, 4562
Statements and summaries, 1010, 1024
Statistics, qu. 3422
Steamship services, 558
Subsidiary companies, 1907
Sully, Que., 1134
Summaries of operating results and trade statistics, 1009
Superannuated employees
Increase of allowance, qu. 575, qu. 2344
Toronto train connections, 4569
Tourist traffic in Gaspesian peninsula, qu. 2622
Train agents, qu. 1349
Transcontinental Railway, 280, 746, 1949, 3043
Expropriation of land, 1656
Forest protection, 4335
Freight rates on pulpwood and sawlogs, 2511
Management, 1189
Mileage, 1005
Montreal, and, qu. 574
Montreal-Winnipeg passenger traffic, qu. 2376
Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2509
Transportation of grain, 2984
Transfer of rails to France, 4569
Vancouver Island, qu. 3422
Western lines, 1017, 3039
Winnipeg-Quebec and East, qu. 569, 2509
Work done, 1019

Canadian National Railway Company, existence of, 3049

Canadian National Research Institute, 4555. See also Research

Canadian National Telegraphs, 1019

Canadian Nationals Definition Bill
1r., 397; 2r., 585, 644, 767; com., 767; 2031; 3r., 2151
Sections and Subjects discussed:
Canadian Nationals, 767
Declaration of alienage, 2031
Naturalization, 781
Renunication of nationality, 781

Canadian Navy. See also Naval Service
Adams, Capt. Henry C., 901, qu. 1237
Ex-members of, qu. 3422
Sale of "Niobe" and "Rainbow." See "Niobe"
Status of members of, 3686

Canadian Northern Railway. See this title under Canadian National Railways

Canadian North Prairie Lands Company, 1611

Canadian Pacific Railway Company, 1789. See also references in Canadian National Railways debates
Canadian notes refused in United States, qu. 599
Comparison with Government railways, 1780
Competition with Government railways, 1181, 1190, 1200
Patents to lands, qu. 2821
Shares, decline in price, 1195-6
Steamers, 1688, 1730, 1936
Stock, depreciation in, 1882

Canadian Postal Guide, qu. 1349

Canadian Press Limited, 4533. See also Press
Comment on Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1704

Canadian Reconstruction Association, 3312

Canadian Representation in the United States, 2378-2436. See also Ambassador at Washington; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Prime Ministers' Conference; Trade
Correspondence, 2406, 2428
Press comments, 2408
Statement regarding, 2406

Canadian Trade Commission
Roumania and Greece, purchases, qu. 1236

Canadian Vickers, 1884. See also Shipbuilding

Canadian War Mission in the United States, 2388, 2400

Canadian Wheat Board, 240, 277, 343, 368, 379, 390, 487, 1452-63, 3566. See also Grain and Grain Trade; Wheat
Agrarian party and, 1455
Correspondence, qu. 1348
Discontinuance of, 513
Participation certificates, 340-1
Report, 150

Canadian Wheat Board Bill
Res. 2116; 1r., 2117; 2r., com., 2158-59; 3r., 2159

Canadians, Foreign decorations to, qu. 1132

Canal Boats. See Fuel Supply Problem

Canals, 2025, 2602, 2953, 2960, 2966-98
Carillon and Grenville, 2603

Canals—Con.
Chambly, 2602
Georgian Bay, 688, 745, qu. 2625
M. (Mr. Devlin) 679. See also that title
Lachine, 2603
St. Anne's lock; St. Ours lock, 2606
Tunnel, 302
Navigation by coal barges. See Fuel Supply Problem
Perrot Island bridges, qu. 576
Soulanges, 2604
Road from Cascades Point to Couteau landing, qu. 576
Tolls, 2962, 2972
Trent, 3374, 3415
Construction, 2025, 2966
Improvements, 2606, 2953
Nassau dam, 2954
Peterborough dam, 266
Wharf at Lindsay, 2616
Welland, 1968, 3374
Construction, 2025, 2493
Contracts, 2966-98
Cost plus system, 2966-98
Improvements, 2960
Retirement of superintendent, 2493
Sand contract, qu. 600

Cancellation of Trains. See Canadian National Railways

Canned Foods. See Meat and Canned Foods

Canners. See Dominion Canners

Cannon, Mr. Lucien (Dorchester)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 531; Speech of the Minister of Militia; the new Prime Minister, 531; partizans and ultra Imperialists; big interests and protection; Government's mandate; struggle for constitutional and responsibile government, 532; election of 1911; controversial legislation following extension of 1916; the appeal in 1917; measures following the war; railway policy; Imperial Conference, 533; new Government leader and programme—the "Rump Parliament"—by-elections, 534; situation in Quebec—Mr. Gauthier—the Postmaster General—the Minister of Labour, 536—Quebec and the balance of power, 537
Annapolis public building, 2750
Arctic Expedition, 4113
Auditor General's report, 1388, 1396
Bankruptcy Act Amendment Bill, 2915-40
Judges under, 1085
Bounties, principle of, 1425

Cannon, Mr. Lucien—Con.
Business of the House
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays—Rule 17C, 1218
Canada Year Book, 1231
Canadian Nationals, 769
Canadian National Railways
Management and expenditure, 1662
Management — Information, M. (Mr. King) 1197
Canal tolls, 2962
Chief Justice, salary, 1569
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4489-90
Religious holidays, 4489-90
Civil Service Commission, 1336
Outside service, 1653
Civil Service, Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) political patronage in; vicious principle; patronage rampant; judicial appointments, 811; census commissioners; Halifax platform, 813
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3921-29
Dominion Elections Act Amdt., 305
Dominion lands and parks, 1334, 1343
Donner, Mr. W. A., ques. 1624
Estimates
Detail of item, 1226
French, in, 1386
Rule 17C, Thursday and Fridays, 1218
Post Office, date of submission, 4531
Statutory payments, 1414
Exchequer Court Act Amdt. Bill, 625
Expenditure
Necessity for reduction, 1336
Without consent of Parliament, 1415
Experimental farm in Dorchester county, 946
Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 4142
Government Railways, claims against, 1657
Governor General's cars, 3037
Grand Trunk loan, 4132-69
Halifax and Esquimalt dockyards, 4036
Highways, expenditure on, 3024, 3026, 3036
Houses, tax on, 3958
Imperial Oil Company, 1386-8, 1414
Intercolonial Railway, station at Lévis, 2757
Interim Supply. See also under this head Estimates
Discussion out of order, 1680
Notice, 1676
Interior Department Publications in French, 1333
Judges, conduct of, 1571
Live stock, distribution of pure-bred animals, 923
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1165
Montreal-Quebec pilots, superannuation, 1501

Cannon, Mr. Lucien—Con.
Motion pictures, artist, 1225
Parliamentary restaurant, 4536
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2716-36
Petroleum bounties, 1386, 1413, 1420
Point of order
Information, 1229
Statement of Member to be accepted, 2765
Railway Commission, 3020
Cases before, 3021
Chairman, 3017
Railway Congress, 3023
Railway Department
Deputy Minister's salary, 1666
Outside legal counsel, 1656
Solicitors and counsel, 1654
Work of, 1661
Railways. See also under this head Canadian National Railways
Lack of information, 1336
Minister, duties of, 1663
Railway employees, Civil Service Commission, 1653
Responsible Government, 1335
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 2799
Ste. Rose de Watford mail contract, qu. 3209
Secretaries to executives, 1671
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill, 653
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Consideration of, 3956
Statutory expenditure, 1419
Trade with Russia, 1224
Trent canal, 2960
Unemployment and immigration, 1375

Canso
Harbour, 3983-9
Wharf, and, 3983-9
Marine hospital, 3138
Mulgrave steamship service, 1496

Canteen. See War

Canteen Funds, Expeditionary Force, qu. 1133

Cantley, Col. Thomas, qu. 1501, 1609-10, 3407, 3610. See also Canadian National Railways

Cape Tormentine, dredging, 1017

Cardin, Mr. P. J. A. (Richelieu)
Government shipyard at Sorel, qu. 568, 2028, 2618
Indian Commissioner at Regina, qu. 964
St. Lawrence river
Deepening, qu. 2028
Dredges and tugs, qu. 568

Cards. See Criminal Code Amendments; Three Card Monte

Carillon and Grenville Canals. See Canals

Carroll's Landing, wharf, 3977

Car shortage. See Railways

Cartier, Dr. A. P., St. Hyacinthe, 3821, qu. 3904

Cartier Square, Ottawa, storeshed, qu. 3208

Cartwright, Sir Richard, 3645

Carvell, Hon. F. B., Chairman of the Railway Commission, 451, 1202, 1690, 1725, 3017

Casgrain, Mr. Pierre F. (Charlevoix-Montmorency)
- Baie Ste. Catherine-Tadoussac
  - Mail service, 4530
  - Steamship service, qu. 734
- Business profits tax, qu. 576
- Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1907
- Canadian National Railways
  - Baie St. Paul-St. Urbain branch line, 4328
  - Canadian National Railway magazine, 4332
  - Charlevoix station platforms, 4329
  - Directors' salaries, 4315
  - French language, 4329
  - Liquor
    - Seizure at Baie St. Paul, qu. 696
    - Theft at Baie St. Paul, qu. 1132
  - Montmorency county as tourist resort, 4332
  - Quebec and Saguenay station agents, qu. 696
  - Subsidiary companies, 1907
- Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 2032
- Canadian Northern Railway, 1909
- Canadian Pacific Railway
  - Canadian notes refused in United States, qu. 599
- Champlain steamer, 1980, 1983
- Charlevoix County
  - Station platforms, 4329
  - Wharves, 1929, 4536
- Civil Service Commission, proposed abolition, qu. 1381
- Dredging—Baie St. Paul district, 1992
- Embargo on Canadian cattle, qu. 566
- Experimental station—Charlevoix-Montmorency, 943-5
- Foodstuffs, hoarding of, qu. 1347
- Gauthier, Mr. L. J., M.P., qu. 1131
- Grand Trunk loan, 4152-66
- Grand Trunk Railway, reported application for assistance, 1498

Casgrain, Mr. Pierre F.—Con.
- Highways, 3032
  - Grants under Act, qu. 567
  - Quebec-St. Joachim-St. Simeon, 3026, 4313
- Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3824
- Isle aux Coudres telephone line, 4540
- Lightkeepers' salaries, 1995
- Montreal Post Office Mutual Benefit Association, qu. 567
- Murray Bay-Tadoussac steamship service, 1528, 1822, 1828
- Natural resources
  - M. to adjourn debate neg., 894
- Payments to Postmaster General, qu. 567
- Post Office
  - Mail Superintendents and postal inspectors, qu. 841
  - Religious holidays, 2626
  - Superintendents and inspectors, qu. 965
- Public Works at Murray Bay, etc., qu. 604
- Quebec and Saguenay Railway, qu. 963
- Quebec (city) immigration officers, qu. 1131
- Quebec riots, 1507
- Quebec Steamship Company, 2775, 2941
- Railway securities, provincial guarantees, 2619
- Roumania, interest on advances to, qu. 566
- St. Antoine, Montreal, representation, qu. 577
- St. Catherines Bay-Tadoussac mail service, 4530
- St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary, warden, qu. 575
- Scott Act, suspension of, 3584
- Shipbuilding, 1895, 1929
- Tapley, W. H., case of, res. 970, neg. 974
- Three Card Monte, 1439
- Trent Canal, 2607-17, 2972
- War indemnity, Canada's share, 3583

Casselman, Mr. Orren D. (Dundas)
- Budget, 3195. Congratulations to Minister of Finance, 3195; general election, 3196; tariff a political issue, 3196; protection, 3196; milk products, 3197; free trade arguments, 2197; tariff protection increased in foreign countries, 3198; group system of Government, 3199; Farmers' party, 3200; price-fixing, 3200; conscription, 3200
- Experimental stations in Dundas, 954, 956

Catellier, Mr. Ludger J., 1465

Catholic Electorate. See York-Sunbury

Catholic Labour Unions. See Labour

Cattle. See also Agriculture; Health of Animals
Blood Indian Reserve, qu. 1818-19; see also Indians
Feeding, 344
Feeds, exemption of, 3746
Industry, 335
Live, export to Great Britain, 1474
Prize. See Agricultural shows
Shipping, 1039
Slaughtered, compensation for, 1061. See also Health of Animals

Cattle Embargo, 757, 3532. See also Health of Animals; Live Stock; Prime Ministers' Conference
Commission, inquiry, 1072
Promise of removal, qu. 566
Res. (Mr. Smith) 702
Amdt. (Mr. Pedlow) 725
Sub-Amdt. (Mr. Steele) 758, agreed to, 766
Res. (Mr. Lemieux) dropped, 766

Causapscal illustration station, 947

Cedar Posts for Canadian National Railways, qu. 1130

Cement Industry, 3683

Census. See also Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes)
Commissioners and enumerators, qu. 696, 800-12, 1209, 1226, 2098, qu. 3260
Appointment of, qu. 735, 2779, 2843, 2874-82, 3807. See also Civil Service Commission
Missisquoi, qu. 1132, 4113
Moncton, 3972
Officials, appointment of, 527, 597, 813, 827, 828, 830, 832
Pontiac, qu. 1127, 1231
Returned soldiers, as, qu. 2097
Industrial, 3490

Cent Coin, 2161

Central Railway Company of Canada, 3716. See also Private Bills Discussed

Chabot, Mr. J. L. (Ottawa)
Civil Service, Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) patronage in, 796; Civil Service Commission; ill-founded assertions; importance and variety of duties; organization attitude of Civil Service, 797

Chair. See Speaker's Chair

Chairman. See Deputy Speaker; Mr. Steele

Challies, Mr. J. B., 1346

Chambers of Commerce. See Trade

Chambly Canal. See Canals

"Champlain" steamer, 1980, 1983, 1995

Charlevoix County
Station platforms, 4329
Wharves, 1929, 4536

Charny, work at, qu. 1501

Chartered Banks. See Banks; Finance

Charters, Mr. Samuel (Peel)
Budget, 3410. Comment on Speech of Mr. W. C. Kennedy, 3410; Rural depopulation, 3411; production per man in agriculture, 3412; tariff and free agricultural implements, 3413; sales tax, 3413; outside capital, 3414

Chaudiere Junction, 1017

Cheese. See Dairying Industry

Chemicals for Fertilizers, 3441-2

Cheticamp Fishing station, 1991

Chicago Drainage Canal, 185, 1851, 2225

Chicoutimi
Customs collections, qu. 698
Labour Convention. See Labour
Pier, qu. 967
Wharves, 1921

Chief Electoral Officer, 4534. See also Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Reports, qu. 577
To be printed, 731

Chief Justice. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Chief Whip. See Ames

Child Prisoners, 3011

Child Welfare, 3130

China, Importation of Eggs from, qu. 568

Chinese Immigration, 4131. See also Immigration

Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3207-3208; 2r., com., 3827; 3r., 3830
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Identity to be established, 3827
Power to arrest, 3829
Prohibited persons, 3839

Chippewa Power Canal, 2444

Chisholm, Mr. Alexander W. (Inverness)
Alcohol for medical purposes, 3729
Bernasconi, Mr., 4088

Chisholm, Mr. Alexander W.—Con.
Canadian "Spinner," "Leader," etc., qu. 1382
Census commissioners—returned soldiers, qu. 2097
Chartered banks, taxes paid by, ques. 2192
Cheticamp station, 1991
Dredging, 3983
Fraser, Mr., Collector of Customs, 3082
Grand Etang
Bridge, 3987
Light, 1997, 3987
Harbours and Rivers, estimates, 3975
Highways inspectors, 3023
Illicit liquors, 3082
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 622
Inspectors under Destructive Insect and Pest Act, 1043
Inverness
Fishery overseer, 2178
Harbour, 3985
Public building, 2817
Lobster hatcheries, 4037
Marine hospitals, 3138
Port Hood, wharf, 4104
Port Margaree wharf, 2174
Public Works—Engineering Branch, 4088
Relief of distressed seamen, 4039
Roy Building, Halifax, qu. 3089
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation, 4503
Trent canal, 2958

Chlorine Gas, 1027

Churchill, Right Hon. Winston and Shipbuilding, 1288. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Cigars and Cigarettes, duty on, 3698. See also Tobacco

Citizens' Liberty League, 304

Civil Aviation, 3776. See also Air

Civil Service. See also Arthur Young & Company; Griffenhagen; Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill; Civil Service Political Patronage; Supply
For individual departments see their titles
Appointments
As result of notices sent Members in Quebec, qu. 572
Competitive principle, on, 798
Distribution of, 1045
Dominion Lands Act, under, 4062
Dorchester penitentiary, Warden, 1092, 4467
Fruit inspectors in Nova Scotia, 1042
Gas and Gas Meters Act, Inspectors, 618, 619
Health of Animals, Inspectors, 1057, 1067

Civil Service—Con.
Appointments—Con.
Justice Department—lawyers, 1077
Member's recommendation, on, 2851-60-79
Militia appointments and dismissals, 2234
Order in Council, by, 1114
Purchasing Commission, 1100
Toronto post office, qu. 734
Trade Commissioners, 1464. See also Trade; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill Veterinary inspectors, 925. See also under this head Health of Animals
Woman Supervisor of Immigration, 3058-62
Bonus, qu. 901, qu. 967, 1176, qu. 1350, 1463, qu. 1623, 1948, qu. 2029, 2108-2115, 2236, qu. 3089, 3531, 4120, 4534
Health of Animals, Inspectors to, 1057, 1067
Lightkeepers, qu. 1622
Statement by Prime Minister, 1233
Classification, 817, 1660, 2236, 2842-8, 4465, 4475. See also under this title, Reorganization. For classification of the several departments, see their titles
Arthur Young Company, 551, 793, 799, 802, 816, 833, 2781
Board of Hearing, 823, qu. 2820
Bonus and, 1463
Civil Service Executive, 1671
Employment of foreigners, 825
Griffenhagen and Associates, payments to, qu. 575, 793, 833, qu. 4251. See also that title
Increase in salaries, 4541
Justice Department, in, 1076
Lightkeepers' salaries, 1995
Public Works, engineers, 2682
Record searcher, 1672
Commission, 825, 829, 835, 836. See also Civil Service Act Amdt.; Res. (Sir Sam Hughes); Retirement
Abolition, proposed, qu. 1381
Administration of Retirement Act, 2486-2503
Appointments by, 814, 822, 824. See also under this title, Appointments
Bland, Mr. C. H., 2861
Buffer, used as, 830
Certificate of competency, 2832
Cost, 794
Curtailment of jurisdiction, 815. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Establishment of, 798
Fraser, Mr. Roy, 2860-8
Good work of, 817
Information from, 1336
Nelson, Mr. Christian, 2880

Civil Service—Con.
Commission—Con.
Organization and duties, 797
Outside Service, and, 794, 815
Promotions, and, 827, 2833-9, 2847-50, 2867-2878, 2885, 4125
Removal of power to make certain appointments, 2778
Report tabled, 4449
Secretary, 2860-9, 2875-81
Competitive examinations, 817
Disabled soldiers, preference, 4049
Dismissals, 2234, 2884
Economy in, 3194, 3439
Efficiency and discipline, 2865
Employees, number, name and classification, 4255
Employment of women, 2286
Examinations, 2178
Competitive, 798, 817
Federal Union No. 66, 795
Fishery overseers, Lunenburg county, 2179
Grain inspectors, 1444
Griffenhagen and Associates. See under this title Classification; Reorganization
Halifax platform, 2844
Holidays, religious, 1384, qu. 1499, 2626, 2775, 4484. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Interim Supply and. See Interim Supply
Labour employment bureau, 2852
List, qu. 1349
Manual labourers, 2830-9, 2841-69, 2877-84, 4278-4460
Meetings in Government buildings, qu. 3421
Naval veterans, and, 3686
Organizations, 797, 2850
Outside Service, qu. 2820, 2876-80
Cost of placing under Commission, 794
Railway Department, 1653
Should be taken from Commission, 815
Political partisanship, 828
Political patronage, 2778-81, 2824-40, 2843-6, 2855-83, 3248. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill; Speeches on Res. (Sir Sam Hughes)
Census appointments, 800, 806, 808, 809
Committee to investigate, 790
Declaration against, 822
Opposed to, 797
Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) 789; withdrawn, 836
Preference to disabled soldiers, 4049
Prevailing rates of pay, qu. 3089
Printing Bureau, qu. 1234, 2827. See also that title
Professional, scientific and technical officers, 2830-43; 2866-84

Civil Service—Con.
Reform, 2844-71
Religious holidays, 1384, qu. 1499, 2626, 2775, 4484. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Reorganization, 1335, 4465, 4541, 4555. See also under this title Classification
American firm, employment, 517
Griffenhagen and Associates, 551, 799, 802, 813, 816, 2242, 2623, 2781, 2827, 4117
Officers detailed to assist, 600
Post Office Department, 4514. See also that title
Retirement, 2826, 4266. See also Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill
Barsalou, Mr., 2490
Customs and Inland Revenue Dept., 4117
Postmaster at Montreal, qu. 566
Provincial service, 2487-98
Report of Commission on, 1817
Survey staff, 2143
Returned Soldiers and, qu. 963, 2828, qu. 3259, qu. 3531, 4257, 4482. See also that title
Rural postmasters, 2829, 2833-41, 2866-84. See also Post Office
Superannuation, qu. 734, qu. 967, 2489, 2820. See also debates under Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill; Retirement Fund, taxation of, qu. 1237
Increased allowances to meet cost of living, 2112, 2491, qu. 3903, 4275, 4541
Application for, qu. 2099
Permanent Superannuation Act, 4277
Postmaster at Toronto, 566
Transfers, 2847-85
Unrest in, 795
Federal Union No. 66, 795
Whitley Councils, qu. 2820
Women in, employment, 2286

Civil Service Act, 1918, Amendment Bill
1r., 2865; m. for 2r., 2778, 2823; amdt. (Mr. Maclean, Halifax) 2835; neg. 2887, 2r., 2887; com., 4278-80; 4460; 3r., 4493
Special Committee
Appointed, 2776
Discussed, 2778
First report, 2940
Concurred in, 3005
Second report, 3088
Third and final report, 3901
Discussed, 4278-80
Subjects and Sections Discussed:
Air Force, preference, 4483
Annual report, 4473-81; Amdt. 4482
Commission, jurisdiction of, 4460-82
Commission may make regulations, 4461
Customs officials, 4268

Civil Service Act, 1918, Amdt. Bill—Con.
Subjects and Sections Discussed—Con.
Dorchester penitentiary, appointment at, 4467
Employees on railways and ships, Act not to apply, 4278-83
Evidence before Special Committee, 4469-80
Exclusion of certain positions from operation of Act, 4281
Foran, Mr. William, 4286
Health Department—Research, 4464-78
Holidays, religious, Amdt. (Mr. Trahan) 4484; neg. 4492
Manual labourers, 4278-4460
Method of procedure, 4257-9
Naval Service, preference, 4482
"Nor in the public interest" Amdt. (Mr. Euler) 4283; 4460-81
Political patronage, 4280
Postmasters, 4278-4460
Professional, scientific and technical officers, 4279-4460
Provisions recommended by Pensions Committee, Res. 4257
Returned soldiers, preference, 4577
Amdt. (Mr. Cronyn) 4482; agreed to, 4484
Roche, Dr., 4287
Section 38, 4460
Senate amendments, 4577
Stayner, postmaster, 4470

Civil Service Association of Canada, 797. See also Civil Service

Civil Service Federation of Canada, 797. See also Civil Service

Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 2486; 1r., 2503; 2r., com., 4275; 3r., 4278
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Commission to report, 4266, 4277
Continuous employment, Res. 4266
Customs officials, 4268-72
Employees in post offices, 4268
Militia and Defence Dept., 4267-70
Notification of retirement, 4275
Officer, 4277
Officers of House of Commons, 4274
Officials
Permanent Superannuation Act, 4277
Receiving daily wage, 4267-70
Senate amendments, 4544
Sessional employees, 4268-71-74
Special circumstances, 4277
Working part time, 4267

Civil Service Retirement Act, qu. 734

Clapp, Miss S., 1332

Clark, Mr. Hugh (North Bruce)
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4485
Holidays, religious, point of order, 4485
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4350
Payments to Justices Riddell and Latchford, qu. 1500

Clark, Mr. Michael (Red Deer)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 397; sympathy with and congratulations to Mr. Bolton; the home market argument, 397; congratulations to Prime Minister—protection, narrow, sectional and local; "National Policy" a misnomer, 398; condition of the country—request for Grain Commission, 399; League of Nations—relations with United States—finance, trade, tariff, "luxury" taxes; production, markets; daylight saving; Board of Commerce; direct taxation; free wheat; Prime Minister's speech on Budget, 1920, 401; taxes difficult to collect, 402; rural depopulation, 403; fiscal policy of Great Britain; excess imports not necessarily adverse balance of trade; excessive borrowings, 405; labour conditions in Great Britain and United States; industries of Ireland; emigration from British Isles; iron and steel, 408; fiscal policy of United States; statement by Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, 409; antiquity of protection; Solomon a free trader; Britain has blazed the trail, 410; amendment to the amendment (Mr. Campbell); the amendment want of confidence in Government; redistribution; proportional representation, 411; the tariff issue, 412; sinking ship, 413; election; Progressive platform; the question before the country, 414
Agricultural publications, 1074-5
Bounties, principle of, 1424
Budget, 3218. Raises a clear issue; Canadian strawberries and grapes, 3218; fiscal condition of Britain; adverse balance of trade, 3219; National policy, debts, and deficits; tariff revision, 3220; taxes upon consumable commodities; three main principles of taxation, 3221; Mr. Fielding's amendment; Protection and Toryism, 3222; needs of the country; trade, increase in necessary, 3223; British trade increased, 3225; cost of living, 3226; building up of in-

Clark, Mr. Michael—Con.
Budget—Con.
dustries, 3227; taxation of land values, 3229; income tax, 3229; direct taxation, 3230; boots and shoes, 3230; tariff burdens, 3231
Business of the House
Complaint of undue haste, 4451
Duration of sittings, 1330
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1830
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2253-9
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1283
Canadian National Railways
Management, Information, M. (Mr. King) 1191, 1806
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1769, 1801
Canadian representation in the United States, 2396-2436
Cattle embargo, 704, 728
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Holidays, religious, 4492
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4268-73
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill
Crime and sin, distinction between, 3910
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Expense, 4395-4400
Fee, who pays? 3806
German reparation, 4429
Imports and exports, 4397
Increase in tariff, 4398
Invoice certificate, fee, 4397
Officials, appointment of more, 4398
Prohibitive legislation, 4420
Prohibitive tariff, 4429
Reparation Act in Great Britain, 4429
Restriction of trade, 4398
Roumania, 4429
Trade agents, 3805
Trade of other countries, 4430
Trade with United States, 4397-4400
Valuation for duty, 4419
Valuation of currency, 4429
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods, marking of, 3724, 3939-51
District Engineer's Office, Edmonton, 4543
Estimates, Committee on, 2201
French Trade Agreement, 2131
Highways, 3029, 3032
Construction in Ontario, 4294, 4305
Immigration, 2579-93, 3056-66
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4344-54
Latitude in debate, 1451
League of Nations, contribution to, 2370

Clark, Mr. Michael—Con.
Maisonneuve and Gaspé representation, 2315, 4437
Naval holiday, 4020
Naval Service, 4016-19
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale—point of order, 4031
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3853-88
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2902
Polish battalion for service in Frency army, 4059
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2639-58
Privilege—report in Ottawa Citizen, 448
Protected industries and export, 3631
Protective policy, 1288
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2045
Reparations—difficulties between Allied Powers and Germany, 599
Representation in Parliament, 1314
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships), 655
Shipbuilding, 1283, 1683, 1866, 1874, 1880, 1917, 1924
Closure, 1931
Newspaper comment, 1934
Progress in discussion, 1938
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4059
Taxation, incomes of $200,000 or over, qu. 838
Wheat Board, 1453, 1458

Clarke, Mr. W. A. (North Wellington)
Criminal Code Amdt.—docking animals, 3923

Clark's Harbour, public building, 2817

Classification. See that title under Civil Service

Clay. See also Natural Resources
Crockery for, 3384-5
Deposits in Saskatchewan, 846

Clements, Mr. H. S. (Comox-Alberni)
Fisheries of British Columbia, 890
Halibut industry, 891
Natural resources, 890

Closure, Rule 17B. 1844. See also Interim Supply; Shipbuilding
Government Shipbuilding Programme, 1979-2094
Interim Supply, 2025
Formal motion, 2026; agreed to, 2076
2 a.m. rule, 2094

Clover and Grass Seed, 1109

Coal. See also Fuel Supply Problem; Lignite; Mines and Minerals; Natural Resources

Coal—Con.
American competition with Nova Scotia, 3295
Canadian-owned railway mines in United States, 4316
Carriage of. See Fuel Supply; Railways; Transportation
Consumption in Canada, 1249
Deposits, Alberta penitentiary, 1092
Development, 842, 848
Maritime Provinces in, 1281, 3295
Prices at mine, 1251
Production and value, 3515
Railway rates on, 390. See also Railways, Freight rates
Railways, duty on, 1184, 1187
Reserve, 1247-8
Resources in Alberta, 857
St. Lawrence route, by, 1731. See also Great Lakes-St. Lawrence
Scarcity of. See Fuel Supply Problem
Trade, 1936. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipbuilding
Wales, from, 1716
Wasting of. See Fuel Supply Problem
Water carriage, 2963. See also Great Lakes-St. Lawrence

Coastal Trade, 1494. See also Shipping

Coats, Mr. R. H., 801, 1231. See also Census; Dominion Statistician

Cocaine Imports, 3130, 3170. See also Opium and Narcotic Drugs

Cockshutt, Mr. W. F. (Brantford)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 91; tribute to new Prime Minister, 91; speech of Mr. Gauthier, a "family fight"; stability and self-respect of Quebec, 92; price of agricultural implements, 93; Opposition—amendment—the Government's mandate, 94; census, redistribution and appeal to country, 95; Agrarian party; expenditure of Ontario Government, 96; tariff and exchange situation—League of Nations, 97; disarmament, reparations, indemnities—taxation, 98; relations between Canada and the Mother Country—Judicial Committee of Privy Council—Governor General; agitation and unrest, 99; modern fads, 100
Binder twine, 3746, 3493
Brantford Customs office, 3086
Budget, 3488. Congratulations to Finance Minister, 3488; taxation severe, 3488; Leader of Agrarian party and manufacturers, 3489; co-operation between Cockshutt, Mr. W. F.—Con.

Budget—Con.
farmers and manufacturers, 3489; industrial census, 3490; agricultural implements and Western Grain Growers, 3492; Binder twine and free trade, 3493; home market, 3494; free trade with Britain, 3494; agricultural implement industry, 3496
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee, reference to, M. (A. K. Maclean), 1612
Canadian representation in the United States, 2402-11
Cattle embargo, 718
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Express parcels, 4403
Fee—who pays? 3802, 4402
Invoice certificate, 3802, 4401
Toronto Board of Trade, 4402
Trade
Agents and commissioners, 3802, 4402
Extension, 4403
Director of exporting company, 3564
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 308
Dr. Graham Bell's secretary, 2377
Housing, 1150
Income Tax Act Amdt Bill, 4350-3
League of Nations, contribution to, 2360-7
North American Trust Co., 1128
Parliament buildings, 3999
Pensions, widowed mothers, 637
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2724
Proportional representation, 1546
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2058
References to, 451, 491
Senate and House of Commons (Ministers and directorships) Act Amdt. Bill, 660
Shipbuilding, 1878, 1881

Cocoa
Cocoa paste and chocolate, 3703
Duties on, 3170

Coffee Adulteration, 3141

Coinage. See also Currency Act Amdt. Bill
Cent coin, 2161
Gold, melting down, 2160, 2269
Gold, standard, 2269
Nickel, five cent coin, 2160, 2269
Redemption of, 2160

Cold Storage. See also Dairying Industry; Health of Animals
Foodstuffs in, qu. 1347
Fruit, 1041
Meat of, 1125
Plants. See Live Stock
Warehouses, 1038

Collingwood breakwater, 3973

Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, 1884, 1890, 1902. See also Shipbuilding

Colonial Conferences, 3432. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Combines, 3293-5, 3382

Combines and Fair Prices Act, 3606

Commercial Exhibits, director of, 1225

Commercial Feeding Stuffs. See also Stock feed

Commercial Intelligence, Director of, 1219

Commercial Museum, 1227

Commercial Relations. See Address; Budget; Canadian Representation; Customs and Excise; Reciprocity; Trade

Commercial Treaties, 2378. See also Canada-West Indies; French Trade Agreement; Reciprocity

Commission of Conservation. See Conservation Commission

Commissioner of Patents, 623
Report, 107

Commissioners, Judges as. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Commissions of Inquiry. See Printing Bureau; Grain Trade

Committee of Supply. See Supply

Committee on Imperial Defence, 2637-49. See also Imperial Defence; Prime Ministers' Conference

Committee on Railways and Shipping. See Canadian National Railways

Committees, Standing. See House of Commons

Commodities, Taxes on, 3221. See also Special War Revenue Act

Compensation for Slaughtered Animals. See Health of Animals

Condensed Milk, tax, 3737, 3956

Confederation. See Ministers

Conference on International Finance, report tabled, 962

Confidence Games. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Confidential Documents. See Canadian National Railways

Confidential Information. See Canadian National Railways—Management

Confidential Messengers, 1079-80

Conscription, 3200, 3517, 3528. See also Military Service Act; Quebec riots

Consent of the House. See House of Commons; Deputy Speaker; Speaker

Consequential Amendments. See Corrupt Practices at Elections

Conservation Act Repeal Bill
1r., 3739; 2r., 3958; com., 3970; 3r., 3971

Conservation Commission
Abolition of, 2, 875, 3146, 3739, 3958, 3970-1
Illustration farms, 949-954

Consolidated Revenue Fund, surplus from Grain Board, 1447

Constituent and Subsidiary Companies. See Canadian National Railways; Railways

Constitutional Development. See Address; Canadian Representation; Ministers; Prime Ministers' Conference

Consular Agents. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade

Consular Certificates. See Trade, Agents and Commissioners

Consuls. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Serbian, at Montreal, qu. 605
United States, in Canada, 2405

Contracts. See Purchasing Commission; Shipbuilding

Controverted Elections Act. See Corrupt Practices at Elections

Convicts. See Penitentiaries

Cook, Mr. Fred, 4541, 4557-60. See also Printing Bureau

Cooper, Col. John A., qu. 697, 1713

Cooper, Mr. Hugh L., of New York. See Chippewa Power Canal

Cooper, Mr. R. C. (Vancouver South)
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, report, 4055-60

Co-operative Marketing. See Live Stock

Copp, Mr. Arthur B. (Westmorland)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 445; Minister of Militia; his

Copp, Mr. Arthur B.—Con.
Address—Con.
position from 1911 to 1917; an exponent of free trade in natural products; speeches of mover and seconder, 446; the amendment—constitutional position of Government; the written and unwritten laws—Bourinot; moral obligation to appeal to people; Ministers in disagreement—public opinion demands election; the precedent of 1911, 449; War election of 1917—formation of Union Government—retirements, 451; responsibility implies public confidence; Mr. Calder; Mr. Spinney; Postmaster General; Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue, 452; St. John Standard, 453; political conditions 1891 to 1896, 454; returned soldiers calling for election; Great War Veterans Association, 455; strength of the Liberal party, 456
Agricultural estimates, increases in, 951
Air Board, 3783
Amherst drill hall, 2739
Canadian National Railways, 4561, 4338
Employees, reduction in number, 1851
Freight rates, 4562
Maritime Provinces, 4561
Private cars, 4563
Staff, 4562
Census enumerators in Moncton county, 3972
Census officials, 830
Civil Service, political patronage, 830
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2489-90
Customs
Belyea, Mr., retirement of, 3082
Offices, amalgamation of, 3083
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Amalgamation of departments, 3820
Inland Revenue Act—administration, 3820
Customs Tariff Act Amdt., marking of imported goods, 3949
Debates, translation of French speeches, 701
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4068
Dorchester penitentiary
Purchases for, 1108
Salaries, 1096
Warden, 1092
Dredging, 3982
Forts Cumberland and Moncton, care of, 4540
Fredericton experimental farm, qu. 1131
Grand Trunk loan, 4136-67
Harbours and rivers, 3973

Copp, Mr. Arthur B.—Con.
Highways, 3023, 3034, 4290, 4303
Immigration, salaries, 3059
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 2166
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill
Intercolonial Railway, 4561
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 2119-20, 2151
Justice Department, private secretaries, 1079
"Laurentian," Government steamer, qu. 1348
Marine signal service, 1998
Moncton, examining warehouse, 2815
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4031-2
Parliament Buildings, 4070
Partridge Island quarantine station, 2810
Pilotage, 1999, 2001
Railway Department
Purchasing agent, 1670
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2153, 4564
St. John Rolling Mills. See "Niobe" and "Rainbow"
Sackville public building, 2816
Shediac and Cape Tormentine Railway, 4564
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation of, 4505
Shipbuilding, 1905, 1931, 1935
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1837
Welland canal, construction, 2996

Copyright Amendment and Consolidation Bill, 2, 649
1r., 350; 2r., ref. to Special Com., 2909; com., 3830. 3r., 3850; Senate Amdts. concurred in, 4256
Special Com. appointed, 2941
Report, 3761
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Acts of United Kingdom, 3833-46
Berne Convention, 3833
License to print, 3831-7
Phonographic discs, 3832
Publication in serial form, 3844
Royalty, 3831
Second or succeeding editions, 3840
Suppression of works, 3838

Corn Borer, 1025, 1027, 1031

Corning, W. H., cattle purchases, qu. 1624

Cornmeal, 3546

Correspondence. See also Canadian National Railways
Availability to Parliament, 1290-1

Corrupt Practices Inquiries Act
Bill withdrawn, 1126

Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill
1r., 1126-7; 2r., 2036; com., 2036; 3r., 2151
Subjects and Sections Discussed:
Avoidance of election, 2037
Exoneration of candidate from consequence of illegal practices, 2037
Exoneration of any person from consequences, etc., 2037
Illegal practices, 2036
Judge's report published, 2037
Presenting petition, 2037
Punishment of corrupt or illegal practices, 2037

Cory, Mr. W. W., and Immigration Department, 3056

Cost of Living, 3169, 3226, 3256, 3548, 3606, 4551. See also Address; Budget; Civil Service Bonus; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Superannuation, Increased allowances

Cote, Hon. Mr., Provincial Secretary, Alberta, 1266

Coughlan Shipbuilding Company, 1890

County Fairs. See Agricultural Shows; Live Stock

Courtenay Bay, improvements, 4097. See also St. John Harbour

Cowan, Mr. G. H., K.C., legal expenses, 2187

Cowan, Mr. Walter D. (Regina)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 165; Canada at Assembly of League of Nations—election—agitation and unrest, 165; abnormal business conditions—visit of leader of Opposition to western provinces; the tariff, 166; newspaper comment; opinions of business men and returned soldiers, 167; omission of tariff from amendment; unfair to hold election before redistribution, 168; duty on fruit; express rates; Scientific and Industrial research, 164
Agrarian party and Wheat Board, 1455
Briquetting plant at Bienfait, qu. 673
Budget, 3375. Congratulations to Minister of Finance, 3375; attitude of Opposition and Agrarian party, 3376; Agrarian party and free trade, 3376; loan to Belgium, 3377; agricultural machinery and the tariff; 3379; Customs duties and manufacturers, 3380; free trade and combines, 3382; price-fixing ring in Great Britain, 3383; protective tariff and Western Canada, 3384; agricultural implements, duty on, 3386-7

Cowan, Mr. Walter D.—Con.
Canadian Northern, Craven line, 3053
Canadian Wheat Board, qu. 340, 341, 1452, 1455
Flax-growing, 1396
Fuel Supply Problem, 1266
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 685
Natural resources, 845
Saskatchewan militia organization, 2795-6
Trade commissioners, 1392

Cow-Testing Associations, 1036

Creamer, Dr. J. P., qu. 1236

Creameries. See Dairying Industry

Cream Separators, 3328, 3364, 3495, 3481, 3508. See also Agricultural Implements

Credits. See Finance; Housing; Loans

Crerar, Hon. T. A. (Marquette)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 262; congratulations to Prime Minister; to mover and seconder; the Speech a meagre bill of fare—freedom from unrest; Speeches of the Prime Minister; fishing in Quebec; unemployment insurance and old age pensions; tariff revision, 263; protection to agriculture; revenue, 264; finances; necessity for economy; expenditures, 265; naval and militia votes; trade and exchange; Great Britain, Australia, and United States, 266; need for extended markets; reciprocity, 267; commercial agents, 268; national railways; deficit; special committee suggested; reorganization of board of directors; immigration, 269; Prime Ministers' Conference; Imperial defence; the amendment; Government has lost confidence of country; by-elections; reorganization of Government, 271; redistribution; serious problems, 272
Archives, provision for, 2951
Budget, 3476. Reference to previous speakers in debate; national debt and Finance Minister's surplus, 3476; revenues and expenditures, 3477; maturing loans, provision for, 3478; Agrarian party—"servile tools and minions"—3479; York-Sunbury election. Government platform, 3480; Binder twine industry, 3481; cream separators, 3481; tariff revision, 3482; adverse exchange and protection, 3482; export trade, 3483; boot and shoe industry, 3484; Sherwin-Williams Paint Company, 3484; sales tax, 3485; income taxes in Crerar, Hon. T. A.—Con.

Budget—Con.
Canada and Great Britain, 3486; land taxation, 3486; agricultural products; restricted market and decline in value, 3487; rigid economy in expenditure necessary, 3487
Business of the House
Audibility of debates, 1625
Saturday sittings, 2818
By-elections
Medicine Hat, 2151
York-Sunbury, 3480, 3628
Canada Temperance Act, 4379
Canadian National Railways
Lord Shaughnessy's letter, 2503
Management — Information, M. (Mr. King) 1187
Special Committee
M. (Mr. Maclean) 1184
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1776, 1804
Amdt. 1812, 1813
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2412-17
Canal tolls, 2964
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2835-66
Deceased members, tribute to, 153
Destruction of documents, 2951
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4239-41
Additional courts, 3111
Alien wives of British subjects, 3106
Certificate of naturalization qualification, 4240
Forms, 4240
Government terminal elevators—overages, 3634
Governor General, address to on retirement, 4434
Grain Growers Grain Company, 3180
Grain inquiry
Proposed commissioners, 1674
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2449-59
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 689
Highway construction in Ontario, 4294-6
Hudson Bay Railway, 998
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4345
Judge Snider's report, 4436
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2351-2
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4184-4224
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill, 2891
Natural resources—transfer to western provinces, 2529-46
Navigation, season of, 1994
Owens, the late Thomas P., Editor of Debates, 259
Post Office Department, 4519

Crerar, Hon. T. A.—Con.
Proportional representation, 1545, 1546
Railway Commission, vacancy, 3021
References to, 367, 372, 390, 395, 438, 450, 515. See also Speeches on Address; Budget
Resignation of, letter, Sir Robert Borden, 516
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. (Ministers and directorships) 662
Senate Committee, leave to attend, 3207, 3259
Shipbuilding, attitude on, 1978, 2082
Speaker's Chair, presentation of, 3694
Trent canal, 2971-8
Welland canal, 2974
Wheat Board, position with regard to, 1452
York-Sunbury election, 3480
Debates, official report of, changes in, 3628
Reference to by Mr. Stevens, 3627-8

Criminal Cases
Appeals, 3006
Procedure, 3006

Criminal Code Amendment Bills
1. Aliens and Firearms (Mr. Currie) 1r., 2373; Bills withdrawn, 2560; (See Bill No. 7)
2. Excessive or Inadequate Punishments (Mr. Tweedie) 1r., 695; M. for 2r. stands, 1856, 1857, 2228
3. Defamatory Libel. (Mr. Archambault) 1r., 2149, 3933
4. Probation of Offenders. (Mr. Mowat) 1r., 2097. (See No. 7)
5. Three Card Monte (Mr. Lafortune) 1r., 1439; 2r., 1857; com., 1857-58; 2555; (See No. 7)
6. Warrant of Commitment (Mr. Mewburn) 1r., 2686
7. Age of Consent; Firearms; Motor Car Theft; Recorder's Court Jurisdiction; Seduction; etc. (Mr. Doherty) 1r., 3005-7; 2r., 3830; com., 3830-96; 3906; 3r., 3938; Senate Amdts, concurred in, 4342

Subjects and Sections discussed:
Animals, docking, 3922-36, 4343
Carnally knowing, 3912, 4342
Chattels, $25 in value, fraudulently burning, 3922, 4343
Clerk or Deputy Clerk of Peace, 3936
Commencement of Act, 3932
Concealed weapons, pistols, ammunition, etc., 3900-33
Disorderly house, 3925
Dogs—docking, 3936
Driving motor vehicles while intoxicated, 3911

Criminal Code Amendment Bills—Con.
Subjects and Sections Discussed—Con.
Falsely registering at hotel as man and wife, 3909
Feeble-minded, 3896-3932
Forms, 3932
Horses, docking, 3923
Illicit connection with Indian woman 3907
Indecent assault—age raised from 14 to 16, 3911, 4342
Location of land, 4343
Marks made on public stores, 3921
Metal tokens used as money, 3923
Offender under suspended sentence may be placed on probation, 3931
Officials stealing fares, 3925
Penalty for injuring oil wells, etc., extended to gas wells, 3922
Publication of Judicial Proceedings—Defamatory libel, 3933
Rape—whipping added to punishment, 3912
Reading depositions on preliminary inquiry, 3924
Recorder's Court, 3899
Revising of sentences, 4343
Seduction and carnal knowledge, 3899, 4342
Spanking—persons under 21 and guilty of theft, liable to, 3918
Stealing automobiles, minimum sentence for, 3913
Three Card Monte, 3921
Whipping for robbery and assault with intent to rob, 3922
Witness fees, 3937

Cromwell's Navigation Act, 1872

Cronyn, Mr. Hume (London)
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2922
Civil Service Act. Amdt. Bill
Air Force, preference, 4483
Returned Soldiers, preference, Amdt. 4482, 4493, 4577
Housing, 1146
National Research Institute, 886, 2695
Natural resources, 885
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4366-73
Pensions, widowed mothers, 633, 4369
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4055
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4262, 4356
Returned Soldiers
Special Committee on Pensions, Insurance and Re-establishment

Cronyn, Mr. Hume—Con.
Returned Soldiers—Con.
Motion for adoption of report, 4041-55.
See also Returned Soldiers, Special Committee Civil Service
Quorum, 901

Crop Reports, 1116

Crops, Loss of through insect pests, 1028

Crowe, Mr. S. J. (Burrard)
Currency Act Amdt. Bill, 2269

Crown, taxation of the, 3742

Cruelty to Animals. See Criminal Code Amendment Bill

Currant Boxes. See Berry Boxes

Currency Act Amendment Bill
Res. 2160; 1r., 2162; 2r., com., 2269; 3r., 2270

Currie, Mr. J. A. (North Simcoe)
Adams, Capt. Henry C., qu. 1237
Armistice Day Bill, 3776
Australian and New Zealand trade, 1223
Automobile theft, 3914
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2925
Berry Boxes, 4115
Business of the House, 1831
Supply, procedure,
Discussion not in order, 1217
Hypothetical questions, 1217
Canadian Manufacturers and American markets, 1223
Canadian National Railways
Management—Information, M. (Mr. King) 1194
Cattle embargo, qu. 714
Chief Justice, income tax and, 1566
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3828
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2825-48-83, 4283, 4466-93
Annual report, 4473
Holidays, religious, point of order, 4485
Returned soldiers—preference, 4493
Stayner postmaster, 4471
Copyright Amendment and Consolidation Bill, 3835-41
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3900-34
Firearms, 2373, 2560
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Commercial agencies, 4408
Consular certificate, 4408
"Dick Turpin"—point of order, 4421
Dumping of goods, 4412
Invoice certificate, fee, 4391

Currie, Mr. J. A.—Con.
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill—Con.
Trade, extension, 4408
Valuation for duty, 4412
De Martigny divorce, 3764-9
Destruction of documents, 2950-3
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. 309
Dredging, 3982
Foreign trade commissioners, 1223
French Trade Agreement, 1175
Gaspé Peninsula, railway facilities, 2509
Geodetic survey, 2806
Geological survey, 2145-7
Grain
Grain Growers Grain Company, 1462
Open market in, 1452
Harbours and rivers, 3979
Highland regiments, 2307
Highway construction in Ontario, 4296
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4353-5
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2355
League of Nations, contribution to, 2365-73
Letter rate, 4517
Linen trade, 1391
Maple Products Act, 1920, Amdt. Bill, 2558, 2890
Militia
Command pay, 2292
Purchasing Commission, 2239
Topographic Survey, 2806
National Expenditures Committee, 1835
National Transcontinental Railway—Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2516
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale,—point of order, 4030
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2899-2905
Parliament buildings, 4076
Letter of Hon. George Brown, 4001
Post Office, Col. Verret, 4525
Potato growing and diseases, 1033
Press—publication of court proceedings, 3933
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2669
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4059
Spruce forests, bud worm, 1031
Trade agents, 1478
Trade with Fiji Islands, 1465
United States, exports to, 1222
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1831
Welland canal, construction—point of order, 2989
Wheat Board, loss under, 1457-9
Wheat, purchase by Great Britain, 1449

Customs. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill; Tariff

Customs—Con.
Brokers'
Licenses, 3786
Payments to by departments, 1090
Drawbacks, qu. 2375
On fish from United States, qu. 600
Entry, 3786
Foreign monetary standards, qu. 1133
Importations
Foreign goods, 3119
From Germany, qu. 696
Marking of, 3120
Reported increase in, 597
Revenue by provinces, qu. 1622
Value for duty, 3786-3819
Valuation of currency, 3786-3818

Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Res. 3785; 1r., 3822; 2r., com., 4388; 3r., 4453
Subjects and sections discussed:
Certificate, form of, 3788
Certificate of trade or consular agent, 4389
Commission, 4388
Consular agents, 3791
Cost of production in foreign country, 4411
Customs house brokers, 4432
Department constituted, 4388
Entry, 4389
Exchange—tariff rates on foreign goods, 4421
Express parcels, 4400
Fee for invoice certificate, 4389
Who pays?—3792-9, 4391-5, 4400-9
German competition, 4423
German mark, depreciation, 3810-19
Invoice certificate, 3786-3809, 4391-5, 4400-9
Minister's duties, powers and functions, 4389
Molasses wash, for hog feed, 3787-3820
New or unused goods, 3813
Proclamation of Act, 3798, 4391-4
Provincial analyst, certificate, 3786
"Reasonable profit under the circumstances," 4415
Restriction of trade, 4398
Letter of Gillies Bros., Limited, 4418
Revenue, expenditure, 4397-9, 4403
Still—innocent manufacture of part or possession, 3788-3820
Third reading, complaint of haste, 4449
Trade agents, 3786-3809
Trade, extension of, 4389
United States Customs regulations, 4417
Valuation for duty at not less than wholesale price, 4411
Valuation of currency, 4420

Customs and Inland Revenue
Department
Board of Customs, 4126
Consolidation of offices, 3083
Estimates, 2889, 3077, 4117
Inspectors, 4126
Officials
Merchandise, branding of. See Customs Tariff Act Amdt. Bill
Overtime, 4123-5
Reorganization, 804
Retirement, 2490-7, 2502, 4268-72
Salaries and contingent expenses, 2889, 3081, 4117
Staff, reduction, 4117
Toronto, 1351
Revenue cruisers and preventive service, 4127
Minister, private business connections, 3077, 3172

Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Res. 3121, 3698; 1r., 3725; 2r., com., 3938; 3r., 3955
Subjects and sections discussed:
Anodynes, elixirs, etc., 3709
Imported goods to be marked, branded or labelled, 3711-19, 3938
Spirituous liquors, 3708-8
Sugar, 3699
West Indian importations, preference, 3698
Wines
Medicinal, 3709
Other than sparkling, 3710
Sparkling, 3711

Dairy Cattle. See Health of Animals; Live Stock

Dairy Herds, testing of, 1118

Dairying Industry, 1036, 3118. See also Address; Budget; Dairy Produce, Grading; Oleomargarine
Butter
Material for substitutes, 3745
Price of, 3190, 3256
Production, 3118
Butter and Cheese
Exports and imports, 1037, 1470, 1471, 3747-50, 3852-88, 4438
Cheese factories, 1472
National Dairy Council, 1126

Dairy Produce, Grading Bill
Res., 1r., 3760; 2r., com., 4439; 3r., 4448
Subjects and sections discussed:
Butter and cheese, export, 4437
Complaint of undue haste, 4449
Definitions, 4437

Dairy Produce Grading Bill—Con.
Subjects and Sections Discussed—Con.
Demand for legislation, 4437
Regulations, 4448

d'Anjou, Mr. Emmanuel (Rimouski)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 137; right of Mr. Mackenzie King to lead Liberal party—overtures of Government to Province of Quebec; the French language, 138; Government without authority to carry on administration; Prime Minister the author of iniquitous laws, 139
Agricultural shows, 1240
Debates, translation of French speeches, 700
Experimental station in Rimouski, 954
Lightkeepers' salaries, 1995
Military expenditure, 2801
Shipbuilding, 1924

Dark Lantern Brigade, 1187, 1192, 1209, 1282

Davidson, Mr. A. L. (Digby and Annapolis)
Annapolis public building, 2743
Apple-growing counties of Nova Scotia, 1046
British preference and free trade, 3666
Canada Temperance Act—relevancy, point of order, 4383
Canadian Wheat Board, participation certificates, 341
Guernsey cattle at Nappan, qu. 2686
Highways expenditure, 2555
Proportional representation, Special Com., 2027
Reference to Hon. Mr. Mackenzie King in speech, 2443

Davie Shipbuilding Company, qu. 1348, 1846, 1972

Davis, Mr. F. L. (Neepawa)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 483; congratulations to Prime Minister; "no man's land"; formation and composition of Government; out of touch with electorate, 483; Progressive platform; Liberal party; tariff "opportunism"; transportation; Committee on Estimates; Imperial relations; excess profits tax; demand by western provinces for natural resources, 484; redistribution and election, 485
American immigration, 3064
Budget, 3262. Business and financial depression, 3262; business profits and income tax, 3262; heavy freight rates, 3263; adverse balance of trade, 3264; exchange variation, 3264; debts and

Davis, Mr. F. L.—Con.
Budget—Con.
obligations, 3265; United States, borrowings from, 3266
Canadian National Railways
Management—Information, M. (Mr. King) 1193
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1793
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4283
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Cost of production, 4413
English bankers on trade restriction, 4412
Exchange, 4413
Foreign goods, cost of production, 3814
German goods via Holland, England and the United States, 4427
Money—purchasing power and exchange value, 4427
New and unused goods, 3815
Valuation for duty, 4412
Valuation of currency, 3816, 4427
Wages, 4428
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill, imported goods, marking, 3940
Estimates, Committee on, 484, 2197
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2458-70
Grand Trunk loan, 4146
Hudson Bay Railway, 994, 2969
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4220
Militia—reduction of staff, 2241
Natural resources—transfer to western provinces, 2537
Proportional representation, 1542
Welland canal construction, 2967-8
Wheat Board, unified buying, 1459

Dawson, Judge at, 1088

Daylight Saving, 401, qu. 1817
Ottawa, in, qu. 2687, 2776

Dease and Stikine Rivers, qu. 1133

Debates, Official, Report of. See House of Commons

Decayed Pilots, 2000. See also Pilots

Dechene, Mr. A. M. (Montmagny)
Agricultural Gazette, 1076
Agricultural shows, 1243
Board of Trade forms in French, 2819, 3320
Budget, 3466. Government system of taxation; war profits tax and large companies; income tax, 3467; Yamaska election, 3467; railway administration, 3469; fire insurance in foreign firms, 3469

Dechene, Mr. A. M.—Con.
Butter
Exports, 1037
Price of, 3256
Butter and cheese exports, 1471
Civil Service
Bonus, 4535
Classification, 4541
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4446
Government shipbuilding programme, 2094
Immigration, salaries, 3057
Militia employees, 2241
Montmagny—railway shed accommodation, 4570
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3759, 3860
Post Office, Isles aux Grues-Montmagny service, 4529
Potato diseases, 1032
Public Works—Nova Scotia, 2754
Special War Revenue Act Amdt.
Missals and prayer books, 3756
Prayer beads and crucifixes, 3756
Sales tax, 3757
Supply—point of order, 2759

Decorations, foreign, to Canadians, qu. 1132

Defamatory Libel. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bills

Delinquent Children, 3012. See also Juvenile Delinquents

Delisle, Mr. M. S. (Portneuf)
Cabinet Ministers and Post Office Dept., qu. 1349
Canadian National Railways
Conductors and brakemen discharged, qu. 1622
Post Office Department—reorganization, 3772

De Martigny Divorce. See Private Bills Discussed

Demers, Mr. M. J. (St. Johns and Iberville)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 232; congratulations to mover and seconder; general election, inevitable, 232; circumstances under which Government was formed; manipulation of soldier votes in 1917; no relief until constitutional government restored; Prime Minister's attitude towards Quebec, 233; all classes anxious for general election; necessity for rigid economy, 234
Budget, 3437. Financial and economic condition of country, 3437; railway deficit,

Demers, Mr. M. J.—Con.
Budget—Con.
3438; shipbuilding, 3438; military expenditure, 3440; economy in public affairs, 3440
Deposits outside Canada in Canadian banks, qu. 1623
Fort Lennox, Isle-aux-Noix, sundial, qu. 2097
Pecuniary Claims Convention, qu. 736, qu. 1817; qu. 2027
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2718-22
St. Jean Post office, receipts, qu. 576

Demobilization, 2285, 3523. See also Soldiers Civil Re-establishment; Special Committee on Pensions, Insurance and Re-establishment.
Canadian claims against Germany, 4534. See also Germany
Enemy debts, 4534
Public Works, 3989

Democratic Government. See Ministers

Demography, Chief of, 1232

Denis, Mr. J. J. (Joliette)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 539; French language; speech of Prime Minister a document without fragrance, flavour or taste, 540; the new Government and the old; Prime Minister's tour; general election; position of Government precarious and humiliating, 541; province of Quebec, 542; League of Nations; French speaking representatives; International Labour Conference, 544; financial position of Canada, 545; amendments, 546; ten years without an election; the one issue of 1917; fiscal policy, 547
Alcohol, tax on, 3732
Budget, 3575. Approved by industrial interests, 3575; sales tax bears heavily on working classes, 3576; tax on spirits, 3576; railway situation, 3577; immigration policy, 3580; military expenditures, 3580
Business of the House
Duration of sittings, 3733
Private Bills, 3971
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2257-8
Canadian National Railways
Joliette bridge, 3038, 4320
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2419-21
Census commissioners in province of Quebec, 832

Denis, Mr. J. J.—Con.
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3828
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2865
Civil Service, political patronage, 831
Criminal Code Amendment Bill, 3830
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Valuation of currency, 3818
Dairy Produce, grading Bill, 3760
Debates, official, distribution of, 2221
De Martigny divorce, 4002-6
Estimates in French, 1385
Grand Trunk loan, 4159-62
Highways, Quebec, 4308
Immigration, 2598, 3088
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3825
Income Tax Act Consolidation, 2819, 3905
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3759, 3877, Amdt. to 2r., 3879, neg. 3886
Privilege—Immigration, remarks on, 3088
Proportional representation, 1543
Quarantine stations, 2811
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Amendments, 3755
Lumber, tax on, 3756-7
Sales tax, 3755

Departmental Expenditures. See also Supply, Depts.
Detailed information, 1186-7

Departments
Purchasing Commission, 1099
Supply, right of discussion, 1215. See also Supply

Deportation of Undesirables. See Immigration Act Amdt. Bill

Depot Harbour, wharf, 3973

Deputy Governor General, 1559

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committees (Mr. George H. Boivin)
Rulings and Statements of. See also House of Commons; Speaker
Amendment
Changing destination of vote, 4169, 4289
Mover may not speak second time without consent, 727
Sent across floor, 764
To Public or Government Bill, 4485
Announcement by Minister in Committee, of Governor General's assent, 4169
Bills
Amendments
Involving or increasing charge on public revenue, 4359, 4485-91
Negativing principle, 3895
Which do not alter principle, 4355
Committee
Discussion of principle in, 779
Notice of amdt. to public or government Bill not required, 4485

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee (Mr. George H. Boivin)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Bills—Con.
Committee—Con.
Principle having been adopted discussion must be relevant to clause 4466
Question put and declared carried, 4488
Title cannot be changed in, 2033
Two questions cannot be considered at same time, 4229
Consideration of clauses en bloc, 3956
Introduction of
No debate allowed, 3007
Motion to strike out section not in order, 3952
Permissible to move consideration clause by clause, 3956
Private
Com. must first report progress and motion to refer back will be in order, 1130
Precedence only for first hour on Friday night, 4010
Recommendation for change of title, 1096
Right
To hear evidence, 3768
To refer back, 1130, 3768
To review action, 4004
Senate amendments, non-concurrence in, reasons, 3010
2r.,
Analysis of clauses on, 2832
Objection to Bill not being printed in both languages must be raised before, 1095
Order for, stands, 1857
Questions and comments not in order, 2834
3r.,
Amendment, notice of, 3421
Change of title, 1096
Chair
Cannot oblige Minister to give answer unless he so desires, 1908
Rulings of subject to judgment of House, 3562
To be addressed by Members, 1066, 1896, 3468, 3530
Closure. See that title
Minister's right to speak exhausted, 2080
2 a.m. rule, 2094
Committee
Discussion must be strictly relevant, 1570, 1995

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee (Mr. George H. Boivin)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Committee—Con.
Evidence taken in Court not to be used as argument, 3769
Forms adopted can only be reconsidered by unanimous consent, 4229-49
Having agreed to report, member's opportunity to speak has passed, 4275
Item declared carried after question put, 1091
No item before Com., debate not in order, 1090
Principle of Bill may not be discussed, in, 779
Vote in, 2756
Correspondence reflecting on members, 2176
Debate
Confined to specific items in Com. of Supply, 944
Details of railway administration, 747-8
Interjection of remarks during, 914
Limitation on Appropriation Bill, 2103
Motion for adjournment negatived, mover precluded from continuing, 894
Motion to adjourn by member closing discussion, 999
Debates, Official report of
Statement not read, insertion of, 472, 3270
Decorum—conversation, 272, 528, 3619, 3832, 3982, 4145
Interruptions—members should ask permission, 3215
Language
"Flippant" and "disrespectful", 2746
"Gentlemanly", 3553
"Misstatement", 2321
Letter already read may not be read again, 3080
Member
Attack or reflection on, 4297
Exhausting right to speak, 1650
Has no right to consent to irregularity in debate, 914
Lecturing another, 4078
May comment on letter but not read it again, 3080
May not question ruling, 3003
May speak to point of order, 1217
Minister having floor, member may not ask questions, 1867
Misstatement or untruth, 3615
Must accept statement of Minister, 3080

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee (Mr. George H. Boivin)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Member—Con.
Must not entirely forget subject under discussion, 996
Must rise to ask questions, 3216, 3553
Putting question without giving opportunity for reply, 4471
Right to close debate, 1528
Right to state point of order, 2322
Should speak to question, 1898
Sitting not entitled to answer question until member speaking yields floor, 4402
Two members cannot occupy floor at same time, 4467
Message from Governor General, 4169, 4289
Ministers
Comparison between, 3944
Official conduct of, 3079
Motions
Amended
Purchasing Commission, 2020
In absence of notice require unanimous consent, 3088, 3259, 3582
Mover to close debate, 2206, 2210
Negative, not in order, 2920, 3952, 4411
Non-debatable
Adjournment, for, 2148
That Committee rise, 2230, 2774, 4203
That further consideration be postponed, 1389, 2025, 3716
To refer back, 1130
Non-debatable subjects
Already debated, 2406
Notice of Motion
Action on does not imply acceptance of principle, 584
Order—Point of
Attacks or reflections on judiciary, 1570
Denial does not constitute, 2322
Discussion, 1218
Interim Supply, 2011
When raised members must confine remarks to it, 2009
Pairs—none in Committee, 4531
Previous debate, 3533, 3562, 4212, 4401
Questions
Not relevant, may be asked by consent, 2113
Not in order on item, 3065
Relevancy, 1035, 1345, 1571, 1772, 1898, 2113, 2175, 2405, 2747, 2751-59, 2761, 2916, 2966, 2990, 3003, 4158, 4313
Canadian National Railways, directors, 1667

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee (Mr. George H. Boivin)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Relevancy—Con.
Discussion of "Niobe" and "Rainbow" on estimate for Royal Canadian Navy, 4031
Highway construction in Ontario, 4293-6
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4354-5
Interrogation of Govt. on estimates to be taken up, 1218
Question not in order on item before Chair, 1669, 3065
Resolutions
Amendments to not reported, 3755
Consideration, item by item, 3026
Ruling may be appealed but not questioned, 779
Speaker's Chair, speech on presentation, 3691
Notice of presentation, 3688
Statement not a question, 4056
Supply
Agreement as to contentious items, 4538
Amendment changing destination of vote, 4169, 4289
Amendments in—discussion must be relevant, 1191, 1583
Announcement of consent of Governor General, 4169, 4289
Discussion confined to specific item, 944, 919, 3066
Government orders may be called in sequence as Government think fit, 962
Individual items, motion to strike out, 3015
Interim
Further consideration of item postponed, 1682
Motion, 1674
Notice not required, 1676
Resolution can only be considered by unanimous consent, 1680
Item by item, 3014, 3132
Item disposed of discussion not in order, 1090
Latitude of discussion, 3014
Liberty to discuss any subject on item allowed to stand, 4033
Minister in order in asking that item be called, 961
Mounted Police not to be discussed on Militia Estimates, 2799-2801
Motion that item be struck out, not in order, 2617
Questions not in order, 1653, 3056

Deputy Speaker and Chairman of Committee (Mr. George H. Boivin)—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Supply—Con.
Railway items to be considered separately, 3048
Reverting to previous item, 2163
Rule 17C, Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays, 959, 961, 962, 1677
Unanimous consent, 1026, 1074-6, 1677, 1680, 3088, 3259, 3582, 3725, 3849, 3936, 4245, 4489-92
Vote in Com., hearing question, 2756
Vote, to be counted, five members should rise, 1068

De Salaberry, Miss, 4070

Desaulniers, Mr. Arthur L. (Champlain)
Military Service Act—Mr. R. A. Stewart, qu. 2028
Privilege—name omitted from division list, 4255
Rural Mail routes, qu. 605
Stewart, Mr. R. A., qu. 2028, qu. 2343

Desjardins, "Ti-Noir," 1515, 3562

Deslauriers, Mr. Hermas (St. Mary)
Bonus to letter carriers, qu. 967
Canadian National Railways, locomotives at Parent, qu. 963
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2554, 2672
Shipbuilding, 1966
Unemployment, suspension of immigration, M, 1351

Destructive Insect and Pest Act, 1027, 4512. See also Entomology

Destruction of Public Documents. See Printing Bureau

Desy, Mr. Justice, 1569

Detroit River, 1996

Devlin, Mr. Emmanuel (Wright)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 57; complimentary reference to Minister of Trade and Commerce, 57; official languages, League of Nations; reply to Prime Minister; status of the Government; no precedent for present situation; the tariff, 58; financial, agricultural and industrial conditions consequent on war; Government by Order in Council; voice of the people stifled; agricultural growth of Quebec, 59
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 260
Experimental Station in Wright, 922
Georgian Bay Canal, 679
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 679

Devonshire, Duke of. See Governor General

Dick Turpin, 4421

Dillon, Mr. Gerald, Purchasing Agent, 1079

Direct Taxation. See Taxation

Directors. See Canadian National Railways

Directorships. See Ministers and Directorships

Disarmament, 98, 3150, 3418. See also League of Nations

Discrimination in Rates. See Railway Act Amdt. Bill

Diseased Herds. See Health of Animals

Disfranchising Act, 1r., 1126. Bill withdrawn, 1126

Disputed Accounts. See Pecuniary Claims Convention

Disraeli, Benjamin, and Proportional Representation, 1552

Divisions. See House of Commons

Divorce, 228, 4474. See also De Martigny

Dockages, 3633-34. See also Grain and Grain Trade; Wheat

Docking Animals. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Dockyards, 4017-36. See also Drydocks

Documentary Evidence. See Canada Evidence Act Amdt. Bill

Documents
Access to, 1286
Production of. See Canadian National Railways
Public, destruction of. See Printing Bureau

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J. (Minister of Justice)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 188; speech of Mr. Lemieux; Canada's status; a voice in foreign affairs; Mr. Asquith's declaration, 189, 190; development of inter-imperial relations, 190; equality amongst the nations of the British Commonwealth; signature of Peace Treaty, 191; consular service; Ambassador at Washington; the ghost of Imperial centralization; declaration of Prime Minister, 192; general election before Prime Ministers' Conference, 193; Assembly of the League of Nations, 195; alleged violation of constitution by continu-

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Address—Con.
ance of Government, 196; authority derived from people and parliament; countries in which elections have been held, 197; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 198; by-elections, 199; requisitioning of ships; cattle embargo; merchant marine; the Gold Coast and Nigeria, 200; "deadly parallels"; reciprocity; election in England after South African War, 201; declaration of Prime Minister at Montreal, 202
Ambassador at Washington, 185. See also Canadian Representation
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation of, 1323
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2914-39
Judges under, 1085
Business of the House
Adjournment, 1173
Closure,
Motion under Rule 17B—Govt. shipbuilding programme, 2076
Notice of, 2026
Estimates, Rule 17C, Thursdays and Fridays, 958, 3001
Interim supply, 2011
Morning sittings, prorogation, 4338
Order of, 1672
Supply, procedure, 1073
Justice Dept., 1073
By-elections Bill, 1310
Canada Evidence Act Amdt. Bill, 3318
Canada Temperance Act Amdt. Bill, 4061
Alberta Court of Appeal, decision, 4375
Constitutional question, 4375
Costs, 4378-81
Court cases pending, 4374
Gold Seal Company vs. Dominion Express Co., 4375-8
Pending litigation not to be affected Amdt. (Mr. A. K Maclean) 4384
Prohibition plebiscite, 3901
Public vs. private interests, 4374
Canada Temperance Act
Quebec, petition for suspension of Act, 3584, 4382
Canadian Bar Association, 1095
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 397, 585, 644, 768
Declaration of alienage, 2031-2033
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1598
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1766
"Champlain" steamer, 1980
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2835-72, 4467-89

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Civil Service, Political patronage in, (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) 809
Conservation Act Repeal Bill, 3146
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 350, 649, 2908, 3830-50
British Copyright Acts, 3833
Explanation of provisions, 3830
License to print, 3831
Phonographic discs, 3832
Royalty, 3831
Criminal Code Amdt. Bills, 3005, 3830, 3896-3901; 3906-38
Automobile theft, 3913
Defamatory libel, publication of judicial proceedings, 3934
Firearms, 3900-6
Juvenile deliquents, spanking, 3918
Senate amendments, 4256, 4343
Witness fees, 3937
Excessive or inadequate punishments, 1856
Exchequer Court Amdt. Bill, 563, 623
Extradition treaty, 3008, 3319, 3740, 3741
Hearst publications, 4171
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 614
Judges
Exchequer Court, 1083
Judicial district of Quebec, 1081
Resignation of, 1093
Retirement and superannuation of, 1082
Vice-admiralty, 1084
Yukon, 1088
Judges Act, 1920, correspondence, 1851
Judges Act Amendment Bill, 1559, 1561, 3009
Free Conference with Senate, 3972, 4061, 4250
Retiring allowance, 1562
Judge Snider's report, 3905
Judicial districts, division of, 1083
Justice
Administration of Northwest, 1080
Yukon, 1087
Department
Litigated matters, 1089
Private secretaries, 1079
Purchasing agent, 1079, 1115
Salaries, 1076
Juvenile deliquents Act Amdt. Bill, 3319, 3758. See also under this head Criminal Code Amdt. Bill
Law stamps, tax, 1090
League of Nations. See also under this title Address
Contribution to, 2362-9
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2096. See also that title under this head

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Legal expenses, 4497
Madrid Postal Conference, 3001
Maisonneuve and Gaspé representation, 2315
Marine estimates, closure notice, 1988
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt., 2892
Militia Dept., sale of surplus supplies, 1098
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1160
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1650
Natural resources, transfer to western provinces, 2551
Nauru Island phosphate deposits, 4255, 4542
"Niobe" and "Rainbow" sale, 4018
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2905-8, 3009
Park St. Charles Company, 4571
Patent Act Amdt. Bill, 4456-60
Penitentiaries Act Amdt. Bill, 3738, withdrawn, 3973
Penitentiaries. See also that title
Alberta, closing of, 1115
Ballot boxes, labour on, 1092
Detailed statement of expenditure, 1105
Dorchester
Purchases for, 1109
Salary and retiring allowances, 1096
Warden, 1092, 4467
Flour purchases, 1107
Increase in crimes, 1091
Maintenance and cost, increase in, 1111
Prisoners, remission of sentences, 1094
Purchasing system, 1108
St. Vincent de Paul, warden, 1078
Salaries and retiring allowances, 1097, 1110
Saskatchewan, 1091
Stony Mountain, release of prisoners, 478
Supplies for, 1104
Pensions, widowed mothers, 638
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2708-36, 2096, 3014
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 1619
Post Office Department
Annuities Branch, 4524
Fiset, Dr. Michel, 4523
Isles aux Grues service, 4529
Letter rate, 4519
Maritime Provinces, 4522
Outside service, 4529
Parcel post rates, 4527
Purchasing agent, 4527
Railway mail service, 4519
Reorganization and administration, 4518
Griffenhagen and Associates, 4519
Rural mail carriers, 4524

Doherty, Right Hon. C. J.—Con.
Post Office Department—Con.
St. Catherine Bay-Tadoussac mail service, 4530
Verret, Col. Hector, 4525
War tax, 4519
Prisons and Reformatories Act Amdt. Bill, 3011
Privy Council appeals, 1090
Proclamation—enforcement of Acts of Parliament, 3758
Provincial legislation, reports on, 2373
Public Works estimates, 2737
Purchasing Commission, 1080, 2015, 2021
Appointment, date of, 1102
Authority appointing, 1098
Civil Service Commission, and, 1100
Details of contracts, 1104
Reduction, 2024
Staff, 1113
Statutory authority, 1113-1114
Tenders—statute applying, 1106
Quebec riots, 1512
Representation in Parliament, 1321
Scott Act, suspension of, 3584, 4382
Three Card Monte, 1837. See also Criminal Code Amdt.
Vice-Admiralty Courts, registrars, 1086
Winding Up Act Amdt. Bill, 2095
Yorkton judicial district, 1080

Dollar, Mr. Robert and shipbuilding, 1707, 1725

Dominion Alliance, 304
Use of armoury at Windsor, 902

Dominion Arsenal, Lindsay, 2439

Dominion Canners
Greek and Roumanian purchases, qu. 1001, 1072

Dominion Coal Company, 3528

Dominion Controverted Elections Act. Bill withdrawn, 1126

Dominion Elections Act Amendment Bill. (Prohibition Plebiscite in Ontario). See also Prohibition Plebiscite. 1r., 150-2; 242; 2r., com., 244; 259; 3r., 313
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Agents, names of eliminated, Amdt. (Mr. Bureau) 304
Lists, preparation of, 307
Proclamation, assent and voting, 303, 311
Residential requirement, Amdt. (Mr. Steele), 306; neg. 311

Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 2775; m. for 2r., 2994; 2r., 3090; com., 3090-3114; 4227; Amdt. (Mr. Euler) to 3r., 4249; 3r., 4250

Dominion Election Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Subjects and sections discussed:
Administration of oaths, 3091
Advance polls, 3099
Amendment to writ, 3100
Certificate, 3100
Certified copy of list, 3094
Chief Electoral Officer, 4288-48
Consent of person nominated, 4246
Election officers, disqualification of, 4245
Foreign born wives and children of British subjects, 4229
Forms, 4227-40
Hours of polling—Amdt. (Mr. Fraser) 4245
Indexed copies of Act for election officers, 3094
Name added to list, 3092
Naturalization—certificate of qualification. Amdt. (Mr. Euler) 3103, 4249
New forms substituted, 3100
Nomination day, postponement of, 3094
Nomination paper, 4246
Oath of qualification, 4228-39
Oath of secrecy, 3095
"Personally naturalized", 4244
Polling divisions, urban, 3091
Polls, holding of, 3095
Qualifications, 3096
Recount, application for, 3097
Returning officer's report, 3098
Revising officers, 3091, 3101, 4250
Smith, Mr. Alexander, 4228-40
Voting, if disqualified, 3098

Dominion Elections Act
Chief Electoral Officer's reports, qu. 577; 731

Dominion Express Company. See Canada Temperance Act

Dominion Franchise Act, 361

Dominion Iron and Steel Company, 1710, 1723
Contract for ship plates, qu. 733, 1233. See also Shipbuilding

Dominion Lands, 1334
Aerial exploration and survey, 3778
Oil leases and, 1340. See also Oil
Pre-emptions and purchased homesteads, qu. 2506
Reclamation, 4495

Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill (Appointments). 1r., 3903; 2r., com., 4062; 3r., 4113

Dominion Lands and Parks, 1334, 1343, 4494
Antelope for parks, qu. 1134

Dominion Linens, Limited, 1398. See also Flax

Dominion Notes
And gold reserve, qu. 1234
Circulation of, qu. 1001
Securities, qu. 1383

Dominion Securities
Assignments of grain and produce, 1443

Dominion Shipbuilding Company, 1884, qu. 3423. See also Shipbuilding

Dominion Statistician
Census commissioners and enumerators, 801, 1232. See also Census

Dominion Textile Company, profits, 372

Donner, Mr. W. A., qu. 1624

Don Pacifico, case of, 1522

Dorchester Penitentiary. See Penitentiaries

Douglas, Mr., dismissal of from Militia, 2246, 2277

Douglas, Mr. J. C. (Cape Breton South and Richmond)
Canadian National Railways—rails, 1852
Fuel Supply Problem, 1270

Douglas, Mr. James M. (Strathcona)
Oil and Gas rentals, qu. 672
Unemployment and immigration, 1366
As Chairman
Member must show what bearing question has on estimates, 3078

Doukhobors, 1365

Dourine among range horses, 1050

Drainage. See Reclamation; Irrigation

Draper, Mr. P. M., and Labour, 1632, 1637

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry L. (Minister of Finance)
Auditor General's Report, 737
Delay, 911-17
Fourth volume, 1385
British taxation of spirits, 3706
Budget
Date of, 738, 903, 1555, 2151
Speech, 3114. Luxury taxes, 3114; exports and imports (aggregate trade) 3115; trade with Great Britain, 3116; revenue and expenditure, 3116; liabilities, 3117; revenue and expenditure estimated, 1921-22, 3117; Grand Trunk acquisition, 3118; tariff changes, 3119; imports, marking of, 3120; Business profits war tax, 3120; excise taxes, 3120; sales tax, 3120; resolutions, 3121

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry—Con.
Business Profits War Tax, 2100, 3120
Canadian loans in New York, 3289
Canadian National Railways
Directors, responsibility of, 1604
Special Committee, reference to
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1602
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1762
Civil Service
Bonus, 2108-10, 4535
Superannuated officials, payments to, 4541
Coal prices, 3295
Combines, 3293
Comparative return on Dominion guaranteed and Nova Scotia bonds, 4165
Currency Act Amdt. Bill, 2160-2, 2269
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Dumping clause, 3815
Exchange, 4424
German
Agents of exporters, 4426
Competition, 3811-19, 4424
Labour, cost of, 4425
Mark, 3810, 4423
Policy, 4423
Reparation, 4423
New and unused goods, 3815
Roumanian loan, 3811
Unemployment, 3811
Valuation of currency, 3810, 4423
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill, 3698
Alcohol, 3705, 3725
Cocoa imports, 3704
Date of coming into force, 3724
Imported goods, marking of, 3711, 3714, 3719, 3722, 3938-54
Date of coming into force, 3724
Liquor, tax on, 3708
Medicated wines, 3709
Whiskey, 3706, 3707
Estimates, Committee on, 2202
Grand Trunk loan, 4165-6
Income tax, 2102, 2107
Exemptions, 3466
Forms, 1176
Penalties, 2100
Returns, 2625
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 3905, 4251
Consolidation, 4353
Penalties, 4343
Self-assessment and payment, 4344-50
Provincial Ministers' salaries, and indemnities, 4352
Railwaymen's expenses while absent from home, 4353
Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Alcohol, 3727, 3729, 3732
Distilled spirits, 3726

Drayton, Hon. Sir Henry—Con.
Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Molasses, 3726
Patent medicines, 3728
Spirits, excise duty on, 3726
Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 2625, 4339
Insurance Conference, 3088
Interim Supply, 1675, 1680, 1681, 2095, 2100-10
Former votes, 1681
Necessity for voting, 2002
Notice, 1676
Payments due, 2025
Montreal Harbour Commission Bill, 2159, 2268
Reciprocity agreement with the United States, Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 2041
Reduction of drink consumption, 3705
Returns, inquiries for, 1176
Roumania, Canadian loan to, 3811
Interest on, 478, 1072
Repayment of, 3811
Russian currency, 1072
Sales tax, 3120, 3372
Senate Committee, attendance of Mr. Crerar, 3259
Special War Revenue Act. Amdt. Bill
Alcohol, tax on, 3957
Amendments, 3742
Binder twine, 3751, 3756
Butter importations, 3749
Containers, 3754, 3956
Farmers, no tax on sales by, 3956
Fishing boats, 3745, 3751
Houses, tax on, 3959
Lumber, tax on, 3743
Farmers exempt, 3744
Missals and prayerbooks, 3756
Mixed grains, 3744
Sales tax, 3735, 3752, 3754
Change in clause, 3957
Tailors, 3955
Sparkling wines, 3734
Spirits, 3742
Sugar, duty on, 3699
Supplementary estimates, 3741
Supply, partial, 2019
Tariff revision, 903
Taxation. See under this title Business Profits; Income; Special War Revenue
Tobacco, duty on, 3698
United States tariff and Canadian duties, 4255
Whiskey, importation and taxation, 3706, 3707
Young Emergency Tariff, 3905

Drayton-Acworth report, 3042

Dredges and Dredging, 3982. See also Harbours and Rivers; Marine; St. Lawrence Channel
Baie St. Paul district, 1992
Cape Tormentine, 1017
"Internationale," qu. 2192, qu. 2506
Inverness harbour, 3985
Maritime provinces, 3982
Ontario and Quebec, 3985
Quebec dredging fleet, 2605
St. Lawrence river, qu. 568. See also that title

Druggists. See also Customs Tariff; Inland Revenue Act Amdt.
Alcohol tax, and, 3727
Prescriptions, 3725

Drugs. See Customs and Excise; Customs Tariff; Health; Inland Revenue; Opium and Narcotic Drugs

"Druid" steamer, repairs, 1980, 1984

Drury, Hon. E. C., and Drury Government, 96, 315, 335, 421, 3199, 4172-4221, 4301. See also Address; Budget; Highways; Lake of the Woods
Patronage, 2876
Position on tariff, 421

Drydocks, 1690, 3987, 4017-36. See also Shipbuilding
Esquimalt, 3149, 3648
Expropriation of, 1698
Halifax, qu. 567
Montreal Dry Docks and Ship repairing, limited, qu. 2191
Prince Rupert Dry Dock Engineering Company, qu. 3423
Victoria, contract for, qu. 565

Duff, Mr. Justice, 1561

Duff, the late Hon. James, 1033

Duff, Mr. William (Lunenburg)
Air Board, 3782
Apple-growing in Lunenburg county, 1042
British Chamber of Shipping, 1716
Canadian citizens' war claims, qu. 1820
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1686
Assets and liabilities, 1920, 1701
Balance sheet for 1920, errors in, 1698
Business brokers, 1713
Depreciation in value of vessels, 1701
Dominion Iron and Steel Company, 1711
Hall Engineering Company, qu. 695
Insurance, 1703
Officers, and seamen, 4357-60
Operating account, 1717

Duff, Mr. William.—Con.
Canadian Govt. Merchant Marine—Con.
Prime Minister and, 1708
Registering of ships at Halifax, 1720
Reported sale of ships, qu. 570
State-owned fleets in other countries, 1718
Vessels, qu. 1499
"Canadian Conqueror," qu. 1381
"Canadian Explorer," 1714
"Canadian Inventor," 1890
"Canadian Mariner," 1715
"Canadian Pioneer," 1689
"Canadian Recruit," qu. 575
Canadian National Railways and Montreal Locomotive Co., qu. 696
Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk bonds, qu. 837
Cantley, Col. Thomas, qu. 1501
Civil Service Commission
Appointments, distribution of, 1045
Fruit inspectors, 1042
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2496-2502
Cold Storage, 1040
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Consular certificates, 4404
Invoice certificate, 3791, 4407
Fee—who pays? 4399, 4403
Proclamation, 4407
Trade agents, 3791-4, 4404
Drydocks
Halifax, ques. 567
Expropriation of, 1698
Victoria, contract for, qu. 565
"Esperanto," wreck of, 4341
Fish and Fisheries
Canned and pickled, inspection of, 2182
Cold storage for, 1039
Drawback on from United States, qu. 600
Fish breeding establishments, 2188
Lunenburg overseers, 2179
Tax on fishing boats, 3745
French speech by Sir George Foster, translation, 1230
Fruit inspectors, 1041, 1047
Halifax-Newfoundland service, 1713
Highways, 4303
Johnston, Mr. Alexander, re-appointment, 644
Marine hospitals—Lunenburg, 3139
Montreal Drydock and Ship-repairing, Limited, qu. 2191
Natural resources, 881
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," qu. 671
Prince Rupert
Public building, qu. 567
Purchase of land from Mr. V. W. Smith, qu. 963
Railway Department, salaries, 1671

Duff, Mr. William—Con.
Railways, auditors, 1661
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4355-60
Shipbuilding, 1710, 1867, 1932
Advances at Victoria, qu. 599
Contractors' percentage, 1902
Contracts, 1689
Depreciation, 1886
Dominion Steel Company and Government, 1691
Exchange, 1894
Interest, 1869, 1886
Operating costs and wages, 1933
Opposition to policy by newspapers, 1892
Point of order, 1898
Programme, 2091
Trade routes, opening of, 1888
Sick mariners, 3129, 3139
Steel plates for ships, qu. 1233
Steel ships, contracts for, qu. 565
Trade and Commerce estimates, 1231

Duguid, Mr., naval architect, 1280

Dumping Act. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Du Tremblay, Mr. P. R. (Laurier-Outremont)
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2921-7
Budget, 3191. Tariff revision, 3191; congratulations to Minister upon moderate changes, 3192; public debt, 3192; golden era of Liberal party, 3193; get rid of railroads, 3193; merchant marine, 3194; military and naval expenditures, 3194; Civil Service, 3194; war indemnity, 3195
German reparation, Canada's claim, qu. 643
Loan to shipyards, 1883
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4032
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3881
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2266-8, 2903
Tobacco, duty on, 3698

Easter Adjournment. See House of Commons, Adjournments

East Elgin, 1293. See also Address

Eastern Car Company, Limited, 1611

Ebert, Mr. Justice, report of, qu. 4254

Economic Development Commission, 869

Editorial Committee, 4557. See also Printing Bureau
Printing of Civil Service list, qu. 1349
Statement, 4551

Edmonton
Deputy postmaster, 827
District Engineer's office, 4535-43

Edmundston
Bridge, 2810
Post office, qu. 3422

Educational Statistics, 1231

Edwards, Mr. J. W. (Frontenac)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 126; congratulations to Prime Minister; the tariff on apples, 126; speech of the leader of the Opposition; right of the Government to hold office; resignation of Ministers or defection of supporters no reason for dissolution, 127; Liberal party a thing of shreds and patches, 128; by-elections, 128; leader of the Opposition a usurper; issue of the 1917 election, 129; right of Parliament to deal with tariff; the soldier vote, 130; analysis of civil and soldier vote in Ontario and Quebec, 131; the amendment not specific, 131, 136; record of Liberal party on the tariff, 132; Government defeat would mean accession to power of leader of the Opposition, 133; province of Quebec, 134; record of the Government, finances, debt, expenditure, agricultural and industrial production, loans, savings, 135, 136
Agricultural shows, 1239, 1241
Budget, 3175. Liberals and free trade, 3175; Ministers of the Crown and business enterprises, 3176; German goods, 3177; public debt, 3177; other budgets, 3178; budget of 1919, 3178; tariff reductions on agricultural implements. 3179; Progressive party, attitude of, 3179; Mr. Crerar and Grain Growers Company, 3180; Prime Minister on tariff, 3182; member for Red Deer and free trade, 3182; Liberals and tariff reduction, 3183; fiscal policy of Great Britain, 3185; agriculture in Great Britain, 3185; pig iron industry, 3188; Ontario, progress in, 3188; United States, progress in farming, 3188
Business of the House
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1840
Butter and cheese, imports and exports, 3852, 4438. See also under this title, Oleomargarine
Cattle embargo, 715
Chief Justice, salary of, 1562
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2874, 4286
Air Force, preference, 4483
Holidays, religious, 4490
Returned soldiers, preference, 4483
Civil Service (res. Sir Sam Hughes), political patronage in; Judicial appointments; Halifax programme; Lib-

Edwards, Mr. J. W.—Con.
Civil Service—Con.
eral platforms, 1893 and 1919; census enumerators, 813; Civil Service Commission; an illogical and undemocratic system, 814; outside service; inside service, 815
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4274-6
Collins' Bay, wreck, 1989
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4438-46
Debates, translation of French speeches, 700
De Martigny divorce, 4203
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 680
Health of Animals—glanders in Frontenac, 926
Hearst publications, 4170
Highway construction in Ontario, 4290-4303
Interim supply, 2008, 2020
Judges Act Amendment, 1560
Judicial appointments, 813
Kingston, bridges and wharves, 3974
Langlois, Mr. George Arnoult, appointment, qu. 2505
Lightkeepers' salaries, 1995
Main Ducks life-saving station, 1991
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 1302, 2247, 2310-2339
Militia
Annual drill, 2295
Military expenditures, 2792
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1171
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3852-88
Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act Amdt. Bill, 2904
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4061
Privilege, Maisonneuve-Gaspé representation, 2247
Proportional representation, 1537
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2048
Representation in Parliament, 1316
Royal Military College, 2803
Shipbuilding, 1953
Soldiers Pensions, Insurance and Re-establishment, 4054-61

Eggs, 1122
Chinese, importation of, qu. 568, 3751
Export and marketing of, 1122
Production, 3190, 3473

Egypt, shipment of railroad ties to, 1725

Elections. See also By-elections; Canadian Nationals; Controverted Elections; Corrupt Practices; Dominion Elections; Proportional Representation; Representation in Parliament

Elections—Con.
Foreign agitators at, qu. 903
General, necessity for. See Address; Budget; Representation in Parliament
Officers' fees, 188
Yamaska, arrangements for, 4534. See also Yamaska
York-Sunbury. See that title

Elective Senate. See Ministers

Electoral System. See Proportional Representation

Electric Power. See Fuel Supply; Great Lakes and St. Lawrence; Lake of the Woods, Water Powers

Elevators, 1442. See also Canada Grain Act; Canadian Wheat Board; Grain and Grain Trade; Terminal Elevators

Eleven O'Clock Adjournment. See House of Commons

Elkin, Mr. S. E. (St. John City and Counties of St. John and Albert)
De Martigny divorce, 3764
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2156
Shipbuilding, 1888
Sick mariners benefit fund, 4039

Embargo on Cattle. See Cattle

Empire Cabinet, proposed, 1385. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Empire Insurance Company. See North American Insurance

Empire Parliamentary Association. See also Speaker's Chair
Address by Sir Herbert Ames, 1311

England. See also Great Britain
Linen manufacturers, 1390
Railway situation in, 1008

English River. See Lake of the Woods

Entomology, 1024. See also Destructive Insects

Epiphany, 2626. See also Civil Service, Religious holidays

Esmonde, Mr. Osmonde Grattan, 1556

"Esperanto", wreck of, 4341

Esquimalt
Dockyard, 4017-36
Drydock, 3149, 3648, 3651
Naval College, 4010-16

Essences, tax on, 3709

Estimates. See also Deputy Speaker; House of Commons; Interim Supply; Speaker; Supply. For departments, see their titles

Estimates—Con.
Closure. See that title
Consent of House necessary, 1073
Consideration after midnight, 2736-75
Current necessities—Redlich, 1675
Discussion of, opportunity for, 1026. See also Labour Dept.; Ministers; Post Office Dept
Form of voting objected to, 1674
Holding up of, 1941. See also Shipbuilding
Lengthy debate, 1832
Main (1921-22) tabled, 644
Notice of amendment in Com., 4168
Obstruction in. See Shipbuilding
One-sixth of amount, 1674 See also Interim Supply
Passing of without information, 1616
Procedure in, 1676
Railways, deferring of, 1652
Right of Opposition to attack items, 1678
Scrutiny of by Special Committee, 484, 1503. M. (Mr. Lemieux) 2193
Statutory payments, 1414
Supplementary, tabled, 3901, 4170, 4453
Inquiry as to, 3741, 4070
Thursdays and Fridays, Rule 17C. See House of Commons
Unreliability of figures, 1203-4
Voting en bloc, 2006, 2012
Voting, method of, 4538, 4540

Ethier, Mr. J. A. C. (Laval-Two Mountains)
Berry Boxes, 4106, 4114-16
Canada Temperance Act, 4383
Central Railway Company of Canada, 3715, 3716
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4277
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4278-85
Classification and reorganization, 4465
Dorchester penitentiary, appointments at, 4467
Exemption of certain classes from jurisdiction of Commission, 4460-83
Returned soldiers, preference, 4358, 4483
Special Committee, evidence, 4461
Civil Service
Bonus, qu. 1350
Number of civil servants, names, and classification, 4255
Daylight saving, qu. 1817
De Martigny divorce, 3766-8
Griffenhagen and Associates, qu. 1821
Highways—Montreal—Hull, 4306
Inspection and Sale Act Amdt.—Berry Boxes, 4106, 4114-16
Veniot correspondence, 3719

Ethyl Alcohol, 3705. See also Inland Revenue

Euler, Mr. William D. (North Waterloo)
Air Board, 3777-85
Bounties, principle of granting, 1423
Budget, 3569. Business profits tax and sales tax, 3570; economy in expenditure necessary, 3570; income tax, 3570; methods of raising revenue, 3571; national railways, 3572; Mr. Fielding's amendment, 3573; Prime Minister's remarks on Budget, 3574
Canadian Nationals, 647, 770
Canadian National Railways
Independent auditor, qu. 1133
Canadian Press, Limited, 4533
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4280-5, 4469-82
"Nor in the public interest," amdt., 4283
Returned soldiers, 4258
Civil Service Bonus, 2110-15, 3531
Coal consumption, 1258
Convicts, increase in number, 1091
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3844-6
Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill—imported goods, marking, 3953
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (prohibition plebiscite), 259
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4227-49
Foreign-born wives and children of British subjects, 3103, 3113, 4209. See also Naturalization
Forms, 4227-46
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4229
Amdt. in Com., 3103, 4227; neg. 4342
Amdt. to 3r., 4249
"Personally naturalized", 4244
Fuel Supply Problem, 1263
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2461-3
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 694
Highways, 3028
House of Commons Chamber, temperature of, 1071
Hudson Bay Railway, 979, 988
Illustration stations in Ontario, 950
Immigration, 2574-92
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4344
Income Tax returns, 2567, 2625
Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 4549
Kingston penitentiary, 1097, 1107
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4175
League of Nations—labour, 4547
Linen yarn factories, 1397
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1161
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4025
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3870
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt., 2267
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, 2483-4
Royal Military College, 2802

Euler, Mr. William D.—Con.
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2154
Shipbuilding, assistance to, qu. 603
Smith, Mr. Sydney, qu. 1236
Suggested resignation of Opposition, 223. See also Stevens, Mr. H. S.
Surplus war supplies, disposal of, qu. 736
Trent canal, 2613-15, 2989
Welland canal, construction, 2988-96; amdt. 2989

European Corn Borer. See Corn Borer

European Credits, 3160. See also Belgium; Greece; Loans; Roumania

Excessive or Inadequate Punishments. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Exemptions. See Taxation

Exchange, rate of, 96, 267, 316, 416, 545, 3087, 3160, 3167, 3264, 3571, 3599. See also Customs and Excise; Finance; Loans
Comparative return on Dominion guaranteed and Nova Scotia bonds, 4165
German mark, 3810-19
Money—purchasing power and exchange value, 4427
Shipbuilding, 1894
Tariff rates on foreign goods, 4421
Trade with Russia, 1003
Valuation for duty, qu. 733
Valuation of currency, 3786-3818
Valuation of the pound and dollar, qu. 577

Exchequer Court Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 563; m. for 2r., 623; com., 625; 3r., 644
Subjects and sections discussed:
Appeals, 623
Commissioner of Patents, 623
General rules and orders, 258
Judges, 1083

Excise. See Customs and Excise; Inland Revenue; Special War Revenue

Exhibitions, 1123. See also Agricultural Shows; County Fairs; Live stock; Trade Film productions, 1558
Seed fairs, 1126

Exhibition Train, 1557-8

Exhibits Branch, 1466

Expeditionary Force. See Canadian Expeditionary Force

Expenditure in Departments. See Ministers

Experimental Farms, 922, 928, 931, 932-36, 945, 1949, 4215. See also Agriculture: Live Stock
American implements at, qu. 492
Charlevoix-Montmorency, 945
Distribution of, 1076
Dorchester county, 946
Fredericton, qu. 1131
Hours and pay, 932
L'Assomption, 918
Nappan, Gureney cattle, qu. 2686
Ontario, 948
Rimouski, 954
Ste. Anne de la Pocatière, 948
Seed inspection, 1125
Wright county, 922

Explosives, 2162

Exports. See also Address; Budget; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade
Canadian, for last year, 3483
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, by, 1276-7
Freight rates, 1224

Export Trade, Expansion of. See Shipbuilding; Trade

Express Companies, 3469

Express Rates, 169

External Affairs
Conservation Commission, 3960
Department, creation of, 2388
Estimates, 2437
Legal adviser, opinion as to correspondence re Canadian Representation in the United States, 2406, 2428
Passport office, 2436
Report of Secretary of State for, 397

Extradition Convention with the United States, Bill
1r., 3319; withdrawn, 3741

Extradition Treaty with the United States (Wife desertion.) See also Extradition Convention
Copies tabled, 3207
Inquiry, 3008, 3740

Fabian Pamphlets, 1034

Fafard, Mr. J. Fernand (L'Islet)
Algernon Rock pier, qu. 1383
Bonus to lightkeepers, qu. 1622
County fairs, 1123
Fruit inspection, 1043
St. John harbour, qu. 1383
Upper Crossing St. Roch light, qu. 1383

Fares, theft of, 3925

Farm Implements. See Agricultural Implements; Machinery

Farm Labour, 3412. See also Labour; Unemployment

Farm Lands, price of, 1034

Farmers
Agricultural publications, and, 1075
Canadian Expeditionary Force, in, qu. 1349. See also Military Service Act
Exemption, 3597
Income tax collections, 569, qu. 838
Organizations, 791
Prosperity of, 1035
Protection for, 3748-49

Farmers' Clubs, 1034. See also Live Stock

Farmers' Movement and Party. See Progressive Party

Farming, competition in, 3188

Farnham, Que., camp grounds, qu. 1132

Fat Stock Shows. See Live Stock

Federal Housing Board. See Housing

Federal Union No. 66. See also Civil Service
Agitation by, 825
Organization of, 795
Policy of, 823

Feeding Stuffs Act
Enforcement, qu. 965
Inspection districts, qu. 1624

Feeds, Mill, 1126
Adulteration of, 3589
Exemption of, 3745
Stock, 289
Mixed grains, 3745
Transportation charges on, qu. 2686

Female Suffrage, 173, 527, 4474. See also Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill

Ferrer, Execution of, 1523

Ferries. See Marine

Ferryman. See Post Office

Fertilizer Act, 1909. Administration of, 4513

Fertilizer Act, 1909, Amdt. Bill, 1r., 1497; 2r., 2231; ref. to Com. on Agr., 2234

Fertilizers, duty on, 3441

Fielding, Hon. W. S. (Shelburne and Queen's)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 518; political possibilities—Liberal, Farmer or Tory Government—congratulations to Prime Minister; leaders of Liberal and Farmers parties; League of Nations, 518; Canada's participation; independence; expenses of League, 519; difference between British and Canadian representatives, 520; Article X, 521; the Government's mandate; change of leadership, name, party and policy, 522; individual understandings and experiences; conclusion of war ends Government's mandate, 523; Cabinet reorganization; Government's record, 524; Ambassador at Washington, 525; Imperial Conference, Cattle embargo, 526; votes to women; patronage, 527
Alcohol, tax on, 3705, 3727, 3730, 3732
Armouries for public meetings, 901
Auditor General's report, delay, 909
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2919-34
Bolshevism, pamphlet, 4548
Budget, inquiry as to date of, 1270
Approximate date, qu. 738
Speech, 3127, 3146; severe depression result of war, 3146; advantage of direct taxation, 3147; income tax returns, 3147; disposition of public funds, 3148; naval and military expenditures, 3149; disarmament, 3150; tariff revision, 3150; protection of industries, 3153; American tariff, 3154; free trade, 3155; Amdt. moved, 3155; neg. 3686-7
Business of the House. See also under this head Estimates; Interim Supply; Supply
Adjournment moved by member closing debate, 999
Agriculture Estimates, proceeding with, 1074
Announcement of, for to-morrow, 1026, 1073, 2148
Division after a recess, 1383
Easter, after, 1270
Further discussion, 1068
Meeting at two o'clock, 447
Motion requires longer notice, 1672
Prorogation, 4068
Sittings
Saturday, 2777
Wednesday, 1384
Adjournment at eleven o'clock, 1828
Evening sittings, 1174, 1844
Two o'clock rule, on, 447
Undue haste, 4449
Butter "dumped" into Canada, 3750
Canada Shipping Act. Amdt. Bill (Public Harbours) 2230-1

Fielding, Hon. W. S.—Con.
Canada Temperance Act Amdt. Bill
Cases pending, 3902, 4373-6
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 1557, 2254-63
Canadian Government bonds, qu. 1620
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 647, 768, 2033
Canadian National Railways
Board of Directors, 1653
Correspondence with directors, 1003
Fire claims—Shelburne County, 4569
Halifax and Southwestern line, 3052
Extension to Lockeport, 3054, 4323
Station accommodation, 4327
Management — Information, M. (Mr. King) 1184
Special Committee, reference to
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1606
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1764, 1846
Amdt. (Mr. King) 1794
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2391-2436
Cattle embargo, 713, 729, 762
Chief Justice, income tax, and, 1566
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2780, 3901
Religious holidays, 4491
Returned Soldiers, 4259
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2489-90, 4268-78
Civil Service, political patronage, Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) 807
Clark's Harbour, public building, 2817
Conservation Act Amdt. Bill, 3959-71
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3834-48
Currency Act, 1910, Amdt. Bill, 2161
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Brokers' fee, 4432
Cost of production, 4411-14
Dick Turpin, 4421
Dumping clause, 3816, 4412
Exchange—tariff rates on foreign goods, 4421
German trade, 3813
Invoice certificate, 3801
Fee—who pays? 3801-3, 4389
New or unused goods, 3813
Tariff, increase, 3813
Third reading; undue haste, 4449
Trade agents, 3800-13, 4389
Valuation for duty, 4411
Valuation of currency, 3813, 4420
Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill, imported goods—marking, 3712, 3714, 3722, 3953
Dairy Products Grading Bill—undue haste, 4449

Fielding, Hon. W. S.—Con.
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 243
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 2944
Revising officers, 3092, 3101
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4063-5
Dredging, 3984
Election petitions, 3934
Entomology Bureau, 1025
Estimates
Expenditures not appearing in, 1423
Statutory, 1417-18
Thursdays and Fridays, Rule 17C, 1676
Voting of fixed sums, 1417-18
Extradition Treaty, 2687, 3008, 3740, 3741
French Trade Agreement, 1351, 1558, 2127-41, 2152
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2376, 2448-80, 2777
Harbours and Rivers
Estimates, 3976-82
Nova Scotia, 3990
Highways, 1664, 3023
Hudson Bay Railway, M. involving expenditure, 982
Imports, regulations, 3709
Income tax, Chief Justice, and, 1566
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4344-52
Intercolonial Railway—land at Lévis, 1846
Interim Supply. See also under this title, Estimates; Supply
Motion out of order, 2009
Procedure, 1677, 2012
Resolution should have schedule, 2015
Unanimous consent required, 2002
Urgency of, 2003
Judges' Act Amdt, Bill, 2118, 3010
Judges as revising officers, 3092-3101
King's birthday, 4450
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4224-6
League of Nations, Assembly, request for papers, 188
Lighthouse signal service, 4040
Lobster season, 2188
Lockeport-Froude's Point service, 1496
Lockeport railway extension, 3054, 4323
Luxury taxes, abolition, 1185
Macallum, Dr., 1432
Manufacturers and protection, 3660
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill, 2891, 4496
Montreal Harbour Commission Bill, 2159
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1649
National Research Institute, 1432, 2701-07, 2893-6. See also Research
National resources—transfer to Western Provinces, 2549

Fielding, Hon. W. S.—Con.
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4011
Nova Scotia harbours and icebreakers, 1994
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3531, 3863-90, 3906
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2898-2903
Ottawa Improvement Commission Act Amdt. Bill, 2941
Parliament Buildings, 3992-8
Pensions to pilots, 2000
Pensions, widowed mothers, 638
Pensions Act Amdt. Bill, 4365-73
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2097
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4061
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2637-8
Privileges and Elections Committee, 2373
Protection and, references to former speeches, 3332
Public Accounts Committee, information, 1805
Public Works Engineering Branch, 4083-4
Railway Commission, 3019, 3022
Railway estimates, deferring of, 1652
Reciprocity agreement with the United States, Amdt. to Supply, 2038
Representation in Parliament, 1318
Research Council, 1432. See also under this title National Research Institute
Returned Soldiers, 4365
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4261
Right of Dominion to tax provinces, 3742
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2482
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2155-6
St. John harbour, 4079
Soldiers pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4061
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Alcohol, 3705, 3730, 3727, 3732
Fishing boats, 3737, 3745
Patent medicines, 3728
Sales tax, 3754
Spirituous liquors, 3711
Sugar, duty on, 3699
Supply. See also, under this title, Estimates, Interim Supply
Amendments, non-confidence, 1184
Comprehensive items, 3015
Motions in, 1683
Tariff revision, 3749
Taxation, right of, 3706, 3742
Trade agents in United States, 1476
Trade with United States, 1468
Unemployment, 4549

Fielding, Hon. W. S.—Con.
Vacancies, 1324
Victoria Day, 3697
Vote on capital account, 1464
West Indies importations, 3704
West Indies steamship service, 1488
Westport signal service, 1998
Women workers, 4547

Fiji Islands, trade with, 1465
Catellier, Mr. Ludger, 1465

Films, Educational. See Trade and Commerce; Exhibitions

Finance. See also Address; Banks; Bonds; Brussels International Financial Conference; Budget; Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canadian National Railways; Currency Act Amdt. Bill; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Exchange; Grand Trunk; Housing; Loans; Taxation
Accounts with Great Britain, qu. 2191; qu. 2622
Canadian currency discount, 3115
Canadian dollar, value in United States, 3087
Canadian Government bonds, 3289
Chartered banks, taxes paid by, qu. 2192
Credits, 3160. See also Loans
Roumania and Greece, to, qu. 1236. See also Roumania
Department
Purchasing Commission, and, 1102
Deposits outside Canada in Canadian banks, qu. 1623
Dominion Notes
Circulation, qu. 1001
Gold reserve, and, ques. 1234
Issues, qu. 2621
Securities, qu. 1383
Expenditure accounts, qu. 2621
Expenditure and debt per capita, 2013
Expenditure, revenue and debt, qu. 2099
Foreign monetary standards and Customs, qu. 1133. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Government bonds, purchase of, qu. 1620
Investments, "other" and "non-active," qu. 2691
Minister
Miscellaneous estimates, passing of, 1116
Public debt—non-active, miscellaneous and banking accounts, qu. 2621
Repayment of, $25,000,000 loan, qu. 2622
Revenue accounts, qu. 2620
Revenue, expenditure and debt, qu. 2099
Victory bonds, 1920
Expenses, qu. 1620

Firearms, possession of. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bills

Fire Insurance, 3469

Fiscal Policy of Government. See Address; Budget; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Tariff

Fiset, Dr. Michel, qu. 963, 4523

Fish and Fisheries
Biological Board, 2189
Breeding establishments, 2185, 4036
Saskatchewan, in, 2185
British Columbia, 882, 890
Conservation Commission, 3965-9
Cowan, Mr. G. H., K.C., legal expenses, 2187
Development of, 856, 861
East Coast Fisheries drawback, qu. 600
Ebert, Mr. Justice, report, qu. 4254
Fish bait, 1038
Fish consumption, 1038
Gulf, Gaspé and Magdalen Islands, 877
Halibut industry in British Columbia, 883
Halifax award, qu. 2191
Inspection, 2182
International Fisheries Commission, Fraser River, 2189
Jurisdiction of Dominion and Provinces, 2104
Lobster hatcheries, 2188, 4036
Net fishing in Missisquoi Bay, qu. 570
Officers and guardians, 2177
Oyster culture, 2177
Patrol service, 2177
Problems, scientific investigation, 2188
Protection service, 4036
Quebec fisheries reference, 4040
Refrigerator cars, 1038
Salmon licenses, 2104, 4341. See also Privy Council
Quebec, qu. 1381, qu, 2506
Transportation of fish, 883, 877
Gaspé, 962

Fishing Boats, exemption of material, 3737. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill

Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 4142, 4314. See also Canadian National Railways

Flax. See also Bounties; Linen Yarn
Bounty, 1389
Decline in prices, 1389
Growers, Convention, 1391
Industry, experimental work, 931-2
Patent process of retting, 4455

Fleming, Sir Sanford, 3046

Florence & Son. See Printing Bureau, Destruction of Documents

Flour. See also Wheat
Moisture in, 1446
Penitentiaries for, 1107
Price of, 1448

Flour Bags, tax on, 3754. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill

Flynn, Mr. Harry, 217

Fontaine, Mr. J. E. (Hull)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 210; congratulations to new Prime Minister, 210; change in name of Unionist party; the tariff; neglect of agriculture; the working classes; consumer finally pays the taxes; the cost of living, 211; Georgian Bay Canal; national debt, expenditure; old age pensions and unemployment; insurance; province of Quebec, 212
Alcohol, tax on, 3725, 3728, 3732
Georgian Bay Canal, 745
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 745
Hull-Wakefield road, 3033
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1646
Patent medicines, 3728
Shipbuilding, 1941

Food Adulteration of. See Health
Maple Products, 887. See also that title

Foodstuffs, 3589, 3734
Hoarding of, qu. 1347
Tax on, 3546. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill

Foran, Mr. William. See Civil Service

Ford Motor Company, 3409

Fordney Bill. See Budget; Tariff; United States

Foreign Agitators and Elections, 903

Foreign-Born Wives and Children of British Subjects. See Dominion Elections Act Amdt.

Foreign Business. See Trade

Foreign Currency Inflation. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Foreign Decorations to Canadians, qu. 1132

Foreign Imports, value, 3310

Foreign Loans. See Greece; Loans; Roumania

Foreign Manufacture. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Customs Tariff, imported goods—marking

Foreign Monetary Standards and Customs, qu. 1133. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill, Valuation of Currency

Foreign Shipments, Invoice Certificate. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Foreign Tariffs Division, 1437

Forest Reserves
Porcupine, 538
Winter grazing, 383

Forestry. See also Natural Resources; Research
Aerial patrol and survey, 3776, 4495
Bud worm, 1031
Canadian Forestry Association, 4494
Conservation Commission, 3960-9
Director of, 1346
National Transcontinental Railway, forest protection, 4335
Protection of forests, 870, 4335, 4494
Spruce forests—bud worn, 1031

Forfeitures and Penalties. See Inland Revenue

Forman, Mr. H., 1672

Fortier, Mr. H. A. (Labelle)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 169. Amendment — duty of Government to hold election; the Agrarian movement; West Peterborough; attitude of Quebec; National Liberal Conservative Association in no sense national, 170; change of electoral map will not change sentiments of the people; western representation; unconstitutionality, tyranny and despotism, 171
Air Board, 3785
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2912-34
Budget, 3417. Deplorable condition of finances, 3418; military expenditures, 3418; national debt, 3420; tariff revision, 3420
Canadian Bar Association, 1094
Canadian Wheat Board, 2116-17
Civil Service bonus, 2112
French, Bill not printed in, 1095
Highways projected in Quebec, 3025, 3029
Judges—reorganization of districts, 1083
National Research Institute, 2897
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3876
Railway Commission, French secretary. 3018

Fortier, Mr. H. A.—Con.
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2486
Shipbuilding, 1946

Fort Cumberland and Fort Moncton, care of, 4540

Fort Frances Post Office site, qu. 1233

Fort Garry Hotel, Winnipeg, qu. 1348

Fort Lennox, Isle-aux-Noix, sundial, qu. 2097

Fort Smith Railway Company. See Private Bills Discussed

Fort William
Harbour improvements, 4536
Terminals, 3050

Fortifications of the City of Quebec. See Quebec

Fortin, Abbe. See Labour, National Catholic Labour Unions

Foster, Mr. A. De Witt, 90, 3509

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George E. (Minister of Trade and Commerce)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 46; the tariff; First Assembly of the League of Nations; work and purpose of League, 47; development of national life; enlarged ideals and sympathies; the problem of world peace, 48; Covenant of League of Nations and Treaty of Versailles; Peace Treaty signed by 47 nations; the United States; duties and obligations of League; its organization; the Council, 49; respective jurisdictions of Assembly and Council, 50; the Secretariat, reduction of armaments and arbitration of differences; registration of Treaties; mandatories, 51; social and economic reforms; technical organizations; meeting of assembly in Geneva, 52; election of permanent president; rules of procedure; official languages, 53; spirit of courtesy; the smaller nations, 54; publicity of proceedings; financing of the League, 55; Article X; Permanent Court of International Justice, 56
Auditor General's Report, delay, 915
Bounties, 1386
Flax and linen yarn, 1389, 1393, 1394
Brunelle, Sergt. Major N., 1519
Budget, 3156. Income tax, 3156. Brussels Conference, 3157; League of Nations, 3157; debt, increase in, 3158; tariff revision, 3159; exchange and credits

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George E.—Con.
Budget—Con.
system, 3160; Young Emergency Bill, 3160; protection, 3161
Business of the House
Announcement of for to-morrow, 1026
Legislation pending, 4068
Progress in, 1230
Butter and cheese exports, 1470
Canada Grain Act, administration, 1442
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 1557, 2191, 2251-62, 3703. See also West Indies steamship service
Canada Year Book, 1231, 1425
Canadian Engineering Standards Association, 1426
Canadian National Railways
Management — Information, M. (Mr. King) 1207
Cattle embargo, 711
Census commissioners and enumerators, 597, 696, 735, 806, 1209, 1226, 2098, 3260, 2843, 2874, 3807
Missisquoi, 1132, 4113
Moncton, 3972
Pontiac, 1127, 1231
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2842-74
Civil Service
Bonus, 1463
Griffenhagen and Associates, 1555, 4555
Reorganization, 4555-6
Civil Service, Political Patronage, Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) 802-3
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Invoice certificate, 3791-3809
Fee—who pays? 3792-9, 3804, 4389-95
Form of, 3799
Imports and exports, 4398
Proclamation of Act, 4394; Amdt. 4407
Revenue and expenditure, 4399
Trade agents, 3791-3809
Certificate of, 4389-94
Trade commissioners, 4394
Trade, extension of, 4394-8
Debates, translation of French speeches, 701
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 307
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4062-6
Editorial Committee, 4559
Estimates
Committee on, 2206-8
Procedure, 1385
Statutory payments, 1414
Exhibitions, 1466
Canadian goods, 1227
Flax bounty, 1403. See also under this title Bounties
Fox breeding, 1429
French Trade Agreement, 1174, 1573, 1557, 2125-41, 2152

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George E.—Con.
French Trade Agreement—Con.
Printing, 1380
Fruit, co-operative effort, 1470
Grain Act, administration, 1442
Grain
As security for Dominion notes, 1443
Chemistry—Dr. Birchard, 1228
Elevators, 1442
Grading, 1230
Inquiry, remuneration of Commissioners, 3972
Griffenhagen and Associates. See under this title Civil Service.
Hides, inspection, 1437
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4345-51
Industry
Encouragement of, 1469
Government aid to, 1397
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 351, 607, 2944
International Customs Tariff Bureau, 1437
International Trade Conference, 2151
Judge Snider's Report, 3761, 4062
Labour—Mr. Lapointe, 3584
League of Nations, 47, 2356-73
Macallum, Dr., 1433
Motion picture films and exhibits, 1232, 1466
National Research Institute, 2688, 2708, 2892-7. See also Research
Newfoundland railways, 1485
Patent Act Amdt. Bill, 4453-60
Patents of Invention Act Consolidation Bill, 303, 2890-1
Pensions Act Amdt. Bill, 4368
Petroleum bounties, 1413
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2662
Printing Bureau, destruction of documents, 4559
Publications, printing, 1438
Research, industrial and scientific, 1426
Research Council Act Amdt. Bill, 2566; 2688, 2892. See also under this title, National Institute
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4355
Searls, Mr. George, Chief Grain Inspector, 1444
Shipbuilding, 1938, 1972
Statistical Department, 1231
Statistics Act Amdt. Bill, 3007
Statutory expenditure, 1420
Steamship Services
Australia-New Zealand, 1493
Murray Bay-Tadoussac, 1826
West Indies, 1488, 1491
See also under this title Trade
Terminal elevators, 1463, 1464, 1442
Timber culling, 1426

Foster, Right Hon. Sir George E.—Con.
Trade
Australia, 1468
Russia, 1003, 1072
South Africa, 1491
United States, 1219, 1468, 1475. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Trade and Commerce
Department
Director of Commercial Exhibits, 1226
Educational films, 1225, 1466, 1558
Patent and Copyright Branch, 1496
Salaries, 1218
Tariffs division, 1226
Weights and Measures, 1485
Trade Commissioners, 1219, 1224, 1391, 1464, 1479. See also under this title Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Trade Mark and Design Act Amdt. Bill, 229; 2891
War Indemnity—Canada's share, 3583
West Indies
Cable, 1438
Steamship service, 1488, 1491
Trade agreement. See under this title Canada-West Indies
York-Sunbury, French-Canadian Minister, 3638

Foundation Company of Montreal, payment to, qu. 4541

Fournier, Mr. C. A. (Bellechasse)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 203; speech from the Throne a "negligible document"; Government incapable of dealing with pressing issues; unemployment and soup kitchens; 203; League of Nations an ideal distant and unattainable; disarmament, 204; Administration's arguments for retaining office; inconsistency of Minister of Immigration; issue not the tariff but vindication of constitutional rights, 205; no general election held on last redistribution; crime of the junkers, fire-eaters and reactionaries; assault on national unity, 206
Agricultural expenditures, 1029
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2910
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1799
Civil Service, Political Patronage, 836
Highways in Quebec, 3030
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2266
Parliament buildings, expenditure, qu. 4341
St. Michel wharf, Res. 967, 3991
Weekly bulletins, 1231

Fox Bay, squatters, 1514

Fox-Breeding, grant for, 1428

France
Amount of credit to, qu. 2622
Ministers, appointment of, 1154
Senate in, 1165
State-owned fleet sold by, 1718
Treaty with. See French Trade Agreement

Franchise. See also Canadian Nationals; Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill; Naturalization; Proportional Representation

Franco-Canadian Commercial Agreement. See French Trade Agreement

Fraser, Mr. Evan E. (Welland)
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Hours of polling in municipalities near international boundary, amdt. 4245
Returned Soldiers, employment on Welland Canal, 3001

Fraser, Mr. Roy, 2860-8

Fraser River
International Commission, 2189
Snag boat, 3978

Fredericton Experimental Farm, qu. 1131

Free Trade, 4419. See Address; Budget

Freight Rates, 214, 484, 3474. See also Railways; Transportation; Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canadian National Railways
Discrimination in, 1232
Increase in, 341, 389, 538, 3263
Ocean, 1734, 1946
Pulpwood and saw logs, 2511

Freight Ships. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipbuilding

French Canadians, 3594
Appointments to office, 355, 510
League of Nations, representation on, 552
United States in, 1483, 3675

French Language, 3824, 3972, 4543
Address not moved or seconded in, 138, 223, 280, 385, 539.
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, French Version. See that title
Bill not printed in, 649, 1095
Board of Trade reports, forms, 2819, 3320-75
Canadian National Railways
Conductors,, waiters, printing, 1782, 4329-33
In Quebec and New Brunswick, 4328

French Language—Con.
Debates, Official Report of, translation of French speeches M. (Mr. Archambault) 698; agreed to, 702
Election proclamation, 553
Estimates, printing and discussion in, 1386
Fuel Supply, Special Committee, evidence, 4251
Income tax instructions, 2626
Interior Dept. publications, 1333
Parliament buildings
Inscriptions
Central column, qu. 568
Tower, 3995-8, 4543
Pensions, application forms, qu. 965
Questions to immigrants, 779, 3824
Use of in debate, 539

French Parliament. See Ministers

French Purchasing Commission, 3172
Letter of Minister of Customs to, 3079

French Trade Agreement
Copy of
M. for, 578, 607, 766, 2193
Tabled, 1271
Inquiry as to date of, 1174
Printed copies, 1351, 1380
Terms and signature, 1185

French Trade Agreement Bill
Res. 1557; 1r., 1573; 2r., com., 2125; 3r., 2152

French Version, 3144. See also Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill

Fripp, Mr. A. E. (Ottawa)
Canada Highways Act, qu. 1237
Cartier square, Ottawa, stores shed, qu. 3208
Civil Service
Political patronage in, Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) 792; Civil Service Act; patronage not abolished, 792; classification, Arthur Young & Company; Griffenhagen; Printing Bureau; Mr. Wolffe; destruction of documents; patronage exercised by irresponsible persons, 793; outside service; cost; efficiency not increased, 794; unrest; Federal Union No. 66; reorganization by deputy ministers, 795
Reorganization, qu. 600
Superannuation, application for increased allowances, qu. 2099
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4481
Daylight saving in Ottawa, qu. 2687
De Martigny divorce, 3715, 4004
Gilmour and Hughson Bill, 1096
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4010-15
Right of House to review action of Private Bills Com., 4004

Frontenac Breweries, Limited, 1611

Fruit. See also Apples
Berry boxes, 4106, 4114
Cold Storage, 1041
Duty on, 126, 164-8
Growing, 1469, 3354
In British Columbia, 9-10
Inspectors, 1041, 1042-3, 1045
Preserved, 3703

Fruit Marks and Sale Act, 1041

Fuel Control, 2944. See also Coal

Fuel Supply Problem. See also Coal; Lignite; Mines and Minerals; Natural Resources
Special Committee, M. (Mr. Steele) 1247; appointed, 1439; withdrawn, 1857; Mr. Chisholm substituted for Mr. Lemieux, 2148; Evidence, printing and distribution, 2027, 4250

Fulton, Mr. F. J. (Cariboo)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 206; issues proposed by Opposition, 206; congratulations to mover and seconder; reasons for opposing amendment; no demand for immediate election; assertion that Government has usurped powers, 207; war not only issue of 1917 election; problems arising out of war; changes in personnel of Government; constitutional right of Government to carry on; British and other precedents, 208; conduct of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1911; the reciprocity question, 209

Fumigation of Nursery Plants, 1028, 1031

Fur-bearing Animals, Conservation Commission, 3965

Furness-Withy Company, 1712

Gambling. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Game
Conservation Commission, 3965. See also Migratory Birds; National Parks

Gaols. See Prisons

Garbage Feeding. See Hog Cholera; Health of Animals

Gas and Gas Meters, Inspection of. See Inspection

Gaspé
Railway facilities, 2507
Railway from Amqui to Gaspé Basin, 876, 881
Service, qu. 962
Timber and mineral resources, 875

Gaspé and Bonaventure
Fishing communities, 1038

Gaspé and Maisonneuve. See Maisonneuve

Gauthier, Mr. L. J. (St. Hyacinthe-Rouville)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 74; comment on remarks of Mr. McMaster; demand for election in advance of redistribution; free trade, protection and the tariff, 74; fiscal policy of the Liberal Government; the late Hon. M. Tarte, 75; the Government's mandate ; increase of indemnity; precedents for retaining office; Liberals members occupying dual positions; member for Maisonneuve and Gaspé; "traitors and renegades"; Agrarianism a class movement, 79; Labour element, 80; isolation of Quebec; alliances of Laurier and Cartier, 81; Ontario natural ally of Quebec, 81; accusations answered; La Société des Artisans Canadiens Francais, 82; a "solid bloc" no longer possible; Quebec must have representation in public affairs, 86; the hour of Quebec has struck; Lafontaine, Cartier, Laurier; the Baptist preaching the coming of the Saviour, 87; gospel of toleration and self-respect, 88
Canadian National Railways
Management, Information — M. (Mr. King) 1196
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1583
Highways; Quebec-Montreal-Sherbrooke, 4305
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2338
References to, 421, 446, 514, 535, 559, 3215

Gauthier, Mr. L. J., and Montreal Progressive Club, qu. 1131

Gauvreau, Mr. C. A. (Temiscouata)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 385; address not moved or seconded in French; Government has not confidence of country; voice of the people; the Press and by-elections, 385; unpopularity of Government; usurpation of power; Prime Minister's attitude towards Quebec, 386; Canadian National Railways deficit; treatment of old employees; clamour for general election, 387
Business of the House
Monday, Government business, 2148

Gauvreau, Mr. C. A.—Con.
Canadian National Railways
Intercolonial
Section men, qu. 2028
Superannuation of employees, qu. 575
Section men, 1439
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 2033
Census officials, 597
Civil Service Retirement Act, qu. 374
Civil Service Superannuation, qu. 734, qu. 967
Customs officer, Riviere du Loup, 3083
Farmers' sawlogs, 3743-4
Indians at Temiscouata, 2168
Macdonald, Hon. Senator, appointment of, qu. 577
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2121
Sully station, 1822

Geodetic Survey, 2806
Report, 4340

Geological Survey, 2141-62. See also Mines and Minerals
Below normal strength, 870
Survey of Northern Canada, 856

George, Mr. A. D., qu. 1233

Georgetown wharf, 4564

Georgian Bay Canal, 212, 298, 679, 688, 745, 751, 755, qu. 2625, 3678. See also Great Lakes-St. Lawrence
Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Company, 229, 598, 1270

Germany
Commodity prices, 4431
Competition from, 3177, 4424
Cost of labour in, 4425
Enemy debts, 4534
Exports to Canada, 4426
Imports from, qu. 696, 838
Holdback, qu. 1350
Marking of. See Customs Tariff, Imported Goods
Labour conditions, 4425, 4428
Mark, 3810-19, 4421, 4431. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Reparation, 98, 599, 4423-9
Canadian claims, 643, 3583, 4534
Trade with. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Gervais, Mr. Theodore (Berthier)
Berthierville telephone, qu. 1233
Tobacco
Excise taxes on, qu. 1236
Growing, qu. 1500

Gilmour and Hughson, Limited. See Private Bills Discussed

Gladstone, Mr., and Thrift, 1169, 3640

Gladu, the late Mr. Joseph E. O., tribute to, 3, 153, 292, 430

Glanders. See Health of Animals

Glass, Mr. S. F. (East Middlesex)
Experimental farms, 938
Flax industry, 931, 1399, 1408, 4455-8
Imports, per capita, 3415
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4349-52
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3868-95
Patent Act Amdt. Bill
Flax, process of retting, 4455-8
Nolan Act, 4454
Right to continue to manufacture, 4454
Right to revive patent, 4454
Treaty of Versailles, 4453
Poultry industry, 939

Glass Industry, 3484

Gold
Melting down, 2160, 2269
Reserve, Dominion notes and, qu. 1234
Standard, 2269. See also Currency

Gold Seal Liquor Company, 4375. See also Canada Temperance Act

Good Roads Convention, 4300. See also Highways

Goods, new and unused. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Gordon, Mr. G. N. (West Peterborough)
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2915-22
Budget, 3543. Will affect milling industry, 3543; packing business in cereals, 3544; sales tax and package business, 3545; Minister of Immigration and Liberal party, 3547; Mr. W. F. O'Connor, 3548; Peterborough strike, 3549; unrest and wages, 3549; inconsistency of taxation, 3550
Civil Service Bonus, 2111
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3910-20
Juvenile deliquents, spanking, 3920
Military and civilian caretakers, qu. 4340
Militia Department
Employment of women, 2286
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4024
Oatmeal and package foods, 3543, 3736
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2727
Shipbuilding, 1968
Trent Canal, 2953-9, 2976
Unemployment relief to returned soldiers, qu. 4253

Gouin, Sir Lomer, 1825

Gould, Mr. Oliver R. (Assiniboia)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 335; speech of Mr. Scott; quotation from speech of Mr. Clark (Red Deer); Premier of Ontario; dissolution, 335; speech of Mr. Crerar; congratulations to Prime Minister; members elevated to Cabinet rank, 336; Mr. Stacey; Tariff Commission, 337; the amendment; "want of confidence" argument; faith with the people broken; suggested fusion of Liberals and Progressives; platform of Canadian Council of Agriculture; Liberal platform of 1919, 338; agreements and differences, 339; Canadian Wheat Board; decline in price of wheat; participation certificates, 340; freight rates; Advisory Council of Scientific 3666; manufacturers and United Farmers, 3667
Budget, 3662. United Grain Growers, 3662; Mr. Steven's remarks on York-Sunbury election, 3662; new methods of taxation, 3663; taxation and large banking institutions, 3664; land taxation, 3664; agricultural losses from insect pests, 3665; Tariff Commission, 3666; manufacturers and Grain Growers' Association, 3667
Export liquor licenses in Saskatchewan, qu. 838
Farmers in Canadian Expeditionary Force, qu. 1349
Grasshopper plague, qu. 838, 1028, 3665
Horse clubs, 1120
Income tax, 2107
Insect pests, 930, 3665
Military district No. 12, 2379
Military expenditures, 2792
Military preparations, 2298
Natural Resources, transfer to western provinces, 1339
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2072
References to election, 368, 391, 438
Saskatchewan Militia organization, 2792
Smallpox on Scandinavian, 1498
Wheat Board and Progressive party, 1455

Governor General
Acknowledgment of address in reply to Speech, 3830
Address to on retirement, 4433, 4493
Cars, 3037
Lord Burnham, suggested appointment of, qu. 599

Governor-General—Con.
Lord Byng—reported appointment, 4435
Announcement of appointment, 4541
Message from, 4169, 4289
Prorogation, 4577
Speaker's Chair, speech on presentation, 3696
Speech on opening of Parliament, 2; relative prosperity of country; revenue maintained; taxes remitted; measures to relieve unemployment; unemployment insurance and old age pensions; British West Indies; Assembly of League of Nations; Tariff revision; Commission of Conservation; Dominion Elections Act; Canada Temperance Act; Copyright; Income War Tax Act; Scientific Research, 2

Governor in Council, specific power to pass Orders in Council, 1098

Government
Attitude of in regard to information, 1739
Borrowing from. See Housing; Loans
Buildings, Civil Service, meetings in, qu. 3421
Control of steamships, qu. 3530
Policy with regard to Estimates, 1026
Railways and ships, 1895. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canadian National Railways
Responsibility to Parliament, 1197, 1098, 1192, 1213, 1186
Shipbuilding programme, 1858. See also Shipbuilding
Ships. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Grade Cattle. See Health of Animals

Graham, wharf, 3978

Graham, Mr. A. M., 2618

Grain Act. See Canada Grain Act

Grain and Grain Trade, 316, 335, 390, 395, 396, 399. See also Agriculture; Address; Budget; Canada Grain Act; Canadian Wheat Board; United Grain Growers
Assignments of grain and produce as note securities, 1443
Car shortage, 512, 549. See also Railways; Transportation
Carriage on Great Lakes, 1915, 3371. See also Great Lakes
Certificates, 1451
Commission to investigate, 342, 493, 510, 513, 539, 549, 2247. See also Grain Inquiry Commission
Crushed grain, 3745
Dockages, 3633-34
Elevators, 277, 278
Country, 278

Grain and Grain Trade—Con.
Elevators—Con.
Overages, 3634
Quebec, 282, 1443
Saskatchewan So-operative Elevator Co., 391
Terminal, 278, 1442
Weed seeds in, 289
Exchange, 277. See also Winnipeg Grain Exchange
Export, 3045
Freight rates, 999, 3392
Lake, 1915, 2963, 3371. See also Canals; Canadian National Railways; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence; Hudson Bay Railway
Grain Growers' Grain Company, 288, 391, 3180, 3357, 3587, 3662, 3667. See also Address; Budget; Progressive Party; United Grain Growers
Agricultural implements and, 418, 491, 3372, 3492
Grain Growers' Guide, 391, 420, 3360, 3393
Inspection. See Canada Grain Act
Marketing, 346, 377, 383, 438
Moisture in grain, 1445
Montreal, handling at, 3371
Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, 277, 297, 379
Overages, 316, 1463, 3181, 3634
Screenings, 3182
Seed Grain Advances, 4498, 4506
Shipments
By American ports, 1975
Freight cars for, 3541
Staples, Mr. W. D., 3260
Supervisors, 439
Surplus fund, 1446
Tests, 1228
Transportation, 999, 2962, 2963, 2984, 3370. See also Canadian National Railways; Canals; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence; Hudson Bay Railway
United Grain Growers' Company. See under this title Grain Growers
Winnipeg laboratory, 1228

Grain Inquiry Commission, 278, 279, 441, 493, 1447, 1674, 2116, 2295, 3417
Counsel, Secretary, cost of, qu. 2625
Remuneration of Commissioners, 3972
Staples, Mr. W. D., qu. 3260
Winnipeg laboratory, 1228
See also Grain and Grain Trade

Grand Etang
Bridge, 3987
Light, 1997

Grand Trunk Arbitration
Board, salary of, qu. 1130

Grand Trunk Arbitration—Con.
Correspondence, 1619
Exchequer Court, Chief Justice, 1084
Expenses, 4335
Extension of time, 1498
Newcombe, Mr. E. F., qu. 1002
Obligations under agreement, 2030
Pensions, qu. 964
Progress of, 3321
Revival, 4436
Subsequent correspondence tabled, 3738
Taft, Hon. W. H., 4158
Tilley, Mr. W. N., K.C., qu. 1001
White, Sir Thomas, 464, 1294

Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill
1r., 2247; M. for 2r., 2346; 2r., 2445; com., 2450, 2560; 3r., 2566; Senate amdts. 2977, 2821
Agreement to revive and continue Arbitration to be made before May 16, 1921, 2474
Extension of time, 2450
Immediate possession and control, 2248
Letter of Messrs. Kelley and Phippen, 2454
Power to continue arbitration, 2248
Powers and duties of arbitrators to continue if Governor in Council extend time, 2476
Preamble, 2450
Request for delay, 2376

Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. See also Canadian National Railways; Grand Trunk
Betterments, 1015
Borrowing, 3291
Cost of, 1614
Deficit, 1005
Equipment, details of, 1015
Improvements, 1018
Loan of $89,687,633.39, 4331
Amended item, 4168, 4288, 4313
Loan of $26,000,000, 4169, 4288, 4334
Mileage, 1005
Operating results, 1014

Grand Trunk Railway
Acquisition of, 3118
Alleged request for assistance, 1498
Amount due by United States Government, 4135
Board of Directors, 4142, 3741
Bonds, issue and sale, qu. 837
Building of, 1584
Coal mines in United States, 4316
Control, qu. 697
Details of expenditure of $25,000,000 advance, 4143
Employees
Pensions, qu. 964

Grand Trunk Railway—Con.
Equipment trust certificates, qu. 604
Estimated cash requirements, 4140
Estimates for, 1864
Guaranteed advances to, 4139
Guaranteed bonds, sale of, qu. 604
Interest, alleged default, 1498
Lines in the United States, 4326
Central Vermont, 4327
Loan of $89,687,633.39, 4131, 4334
Amended item, 4168, 4288, 4313
Details of, 4144
McAdoo award, 4143
Management and details, 1008
Operating charges, qu. 1132
Operating results, 4319
Portland terminus, 1384, 4316-27
Running rights Richmond to Quebec, qu 964
Shareholders
List of, 3320, 3560, 3740
Voluminous return, 3697

Grasshopper Plague, qu. 838, 930, 1027, 3665. Insect Pests. See also Destructive Insect and Pest Act

Graving Dock Company. See Halifax

Grazing
Blood Indian reserve, qu. 1817-19, qu. 2098, 2618, 2374. See also Indians
Leases, 335
Forest reserves, 383

Great Britain. See also Shipping; Trade
American wheat, sale to, 1449
Apple exports to, qu. 1051, qu. 1714
Butter and cheese exports, 1471
Cattle, live, export to, 1474. See also Cattle Embargo
Decline of agriculture in, 3185
Tonnage, disposal of, 1718
Trade agreement with Russia, 1003

Great Lakes
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, and, 1913, 2192, 2969

Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Waterway
Chicago Drainage Canal diversion, 186, 2225
Motion (Mr. Keefer) for Special Com., 674-95, 738
Withdrawn, 757

Great Northern and Lake St. John Railways, 281

Great War Veterans Association, 105, 214
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2855-81. See also that title
Dominion Housing scheme, 4049. See also Housing
Early General election, 455

Greece and Roumania. See also Roumania
Dominion Canners, purchasers from, qu. 1001
Loans to, qu. 1236

Grenville Canal. See Canals

Griesbach, Mr. W. A. (Edmonton West)
Alberta Supreme Court, qu. 576
Canadian National Railways
Provincial liabilities, qu. 2942
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4284-7
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) political patronage; present system preferable; Civil Service Commission; Federal Union No. 66, 825
Disability pensions, qu. 1235
Immigration, 3070
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill, 2891
Military preparations, 2299
Militia staff, 2793
Oil and Gas leases
Bounties, 1387, 1413
Delay in issuing, 2029
Payments under, qu. 734, qu. 673
Surface rights, 579
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2639
Ross Rifle, 2784
Royal Military College, 2805
Y.M.C.A., qu. 1625

Griffenhagen and Associates, 1555, 2781, 2827, 4277, 4465, 4514, 4555. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill; Civil Service, Reorganization, Post Office, Printing Bureau
Employment of, 517, 551, qu. 1821
Officials detailed to assist, qu. 600
Payments to, qu. 4251
Penitentiaries, 1111

Griffin-Boscawen, Sir Arthur, 1156

Gulf of St. Lawrence Navigation Company, 1981

Gutelius, Mr., Intercolonial Railway, 1847

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh (Minister of Militia and Defence and Acting Solicitor General)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 415; divergence between reasons advanced by leader of the Opposition and Mr. Clark (Red Deer) in support of amendment; the fiscal question, 415; trade policy of Great Britain; adverse balance of trade; exchange situation, 416; purchasing from United States; United Grain Growers; tariff, policy of Farmers' party; South York speech; Mr. Rice Jones; statement

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Address—Con.
compared with evidence before Tariff Commission; United Grain Growers machinery almost all from the United States, 418; farmers demand for free implements; millions going out of country; why not buy in Canada; 419; did not say Farmers party a "menace"; tariff; position of Farmers' party, 420; Mr. Drury; the official Opposition; Mr. Gauthier; balance of trade; Canada's indebtedness largely to her own people, 421; Liberal Convention of 1919; tariff plank; Liberal Government was protectionist, 423; the amendment; British and Canadian precedents for Government's continuance in office, 424; who is clamouring for election? 426; by-elections; leader of Opposition represents only remnant of Liberal party, 427; amendment to the amendment (Mr. Campbell) 428; redistribution; rural and urban representation, 429
Air Board, 3776-85
Armistice Day Bill, 3773-5
Armouries for public meetings, 902
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2618, 2909-40, 3143, 4170
French version, 2557
Budget, 3267. Congratulations to Minister on financial showing; former surpluses did not reduce national debt, 3268; Brussels Conference; military expenditure, 3269; comparison of military expenditure by countries, 3271; returned soldiers and military training, 3279
Chief Electoral Officer, reports, 731
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2780
Civil Service classification and bonus, 2237
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4270
Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill, 1126, 2036
De Martigny divorce, 3771, 4203
Demobilization, 2286
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition Plebiscite) 244, 259, 303
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill 2775, 2944, 3091, 4228-48
Advance polls, 3099
Amendments to writs, 3100
Certificate to women voters, 3111
Disqualified voters, 3099
Election officers, disqualification, 4245
Foreign-born wives and children of British subjects, 3109, 4233

Guthrie, Hon. Hugh—Con.
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Naturalization—certificate of qualification
Amdt. (Mr. Euler) 4233
New forms, 3100
Nomination and polling day, 3096
Nomination paper, 4246
"Personally naturalized," 4244
Polls, hours of, 3095
Qualified voters, 3096
Recount, 3097
Returning officers' report, 3098
Revising officers, 3091, 3101
Voters, identification of, 3093
Franchise Act—foreign agitators and elections, 903
Judges' Act Amdt. Bill, 2118
Military expenditure, 2301, 3269, 3551
Military Service Act, claim for services, 2807
Militia
Annual drill, 2294
Cadet services, 2296
Command pay, 2290
Employees, increase in number of, 2014
Employment of women, 2286
Estimates, 2234-46, 2275-2310, 2781
Permanent Force, 2239, 2788
Purchasing Commission, 2239
Record Office, 2280
Sale of supplies, 2244-5
Staff, 2787-95
North American Trust Company, 1094, 1129
Pensions
Deduction from pay of Permanent Force, 2236, 2275
South African, 2278
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4052
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2120-25
Quebec citadel, 1442
Fortifications, 968
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4261
Ross rifle, 2783
Royal Canadian Mounted Police, strength, 2800
Royal Military College, 2802
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4052
Tapley, W. H., case of, 972
Winding-up Act Amdt. Bill, 2158

Halbert, Mr. Robert H. (North Ontario)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 500; criticisms of Farmers' party; Colchester and East Elgin; election demanded by people; by-elections, 501; redistribution; great Halbert, Mr. Robert H.—Con.

Address—Con.
issues at stake; farmers' part in national development; unity and agreement as to national ideals, 502; equal rights to all; protection and class privilege, 503
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2485

Half Island Cove, breakwater, 3981

Halifax
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, registration of vessels, 1720
Dockyards, 4017-36
Explosion, 1699
Fisheries award, qu. 2191
Graving Dock Company, qu. 567, 1690, 1698, 1861. See also Drydocks; Shipbuilding
Harbour, government ships at, 1940
Naval College, 4010
Newspapers and merchant marine, 1705, 1706, 1928
Ocean terminals, 1017
Quarantine station, 2754
Roy Building, qu. 3089
Shipbuilding at, 1689, 1921. See also Shipbuilding
Shipyards. See Shipbuilding

Hall Engineering Company, qu. 695

Halladay, Mr. H. H. (Bow River)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 334; congratulations to Prime Minister; the amendment; mandate of the Government; election; the ins and outs; redistribution; Grain Commission, 334; price of wheat; the cattle industry; grazing leases, 335
Canadian Northern Railway, Hanna-Calgary line, 3048
Destruction of documents, qu. 604
Immigration, 2590

Halladay, Mr., Canada Cycle and Motor Company, address, 1227

Hamilton-Brantford Highway. See Highways

Hanna, Mr. D. B., 381, 1191, 1609, 1658, 1774, 1801, 1852, 3051, 3406, 3499, 4315, 4328. See also Canadian National Railways
Business interests, 3610

Hansard. See House of Commons, Debates

Hanson, Mr. R. B., and York-Sunbury election, 3639. See also York-Sunbury

Harbours. See Canada Shipping Act. For Individual harbours, see their titles

Harbours and Rivers, 3973-82, 4097, 4536
Estimates, amdt (Mr. Pardee) 3979
Manitoba, 3975
Nova Scotia, 3979
Ontario, 3973
Prince Edward Island, 3990
Quebec, 3991

Harding, Mr. R. T., payments to Judges, qu. 1500

Harling, Mr. Thomas, 1981

Harold, Mr. John (Brant)
Binder twine fibre, 3746, 3756, 3505
Budget, 3500. Canada's financial position; manufacturing industries, 3501; tariff problems, protection and free trade, 3502; manufacturers' profits, 3503; tax upon profits, 3504; customs tariff, binder twine, 3505
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Express parcels, 4400
Impediment to business, 4400
Invoice certificate, fee, 4399
Trade agents, 4399
Proportional representation, 1544
Sales tax, 3754

Harrison, Mr. Charles R. (Nipissing)
Address in reply to Governor General's speech, 230; Grand Trunk strike in 1910, 230; the tariff; effect of Opposition policy on wage-earner; United States industries in Canada; unemployment, insurance and old age pensions, 231; what Government has done for labour; the Mathers Commission, 232
Canadian Northern Railway
Salaried officials, qu. 2942
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill
Railwaymen's expenses while absent from home, 4352

Harrow Tobacco Station, 1076

Hawkins, Dr. Charles, and immigration, 3068

Hay, Mr. Thomas (Selkirk)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 393; congratulations to Prime Minister; no great demand for election; side-stepping of Opposition, 393; tariff; office seekers and usurpers; the home market, 394; the grain trade; commission of inquiry; old age pensions and unemployment insurance; Prime Minister should carry on, 396
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4242
Disfranchising, 3112

Hay, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Naturalization—certificate of qualification
Amdt. 4242; agreed to, 4245
Hog cholera, compensation, 1065
Hudson Bay Railway, Amdt. 994
Imaginary letters, point of order, 3173
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3883

Hay and Straw Inspection. See Inspection and Sale Act

Hayter, Mr., auditor, 1668

Head Tax. See Chinese Immigration

Health. See also Immigration; Opium and Narcotic Drugs; Quarantine
Adulteration of food, 3129
Estimates, 2940-3127
Minister's statement, 3127
Medical inspection of immigrants, qu. 573 3128
Opium and Drug Act Amdt, convictions under, 3134
Quarantine stations, 3128
Report of, 1852
Research, 4464-78
Salaries, etc., 3127
Sick mariners, 3129, 3155
Smallpox on Scandinavian, 1498, 1556
Typhus in Europe, 643, 4534

Health of Animals, 926, 1048, 4506-13. See also Agriculture; Cattle Embargo; Live Stock
Accredited herd, 4506-13
Alderson, Mr. G. B., claim of. See that title
Compensation for slaughtered cattle, 1061
Glanders outbreak in Frontenac, 926
Hog cholera, 1050-9. See also Alderson
Increase in amount of item, 1064
Indemnity for diseased herds, 1048
Motions (Mr. Sutherland)
To reduce item, 1068
To strike out item, 4513
Tuberculosis, 4506-13
Veterinary system, 1058, 4508-13. See also Alderson

Hearst Publications, 4170

Heating. See House of Commons, Chamber

Henders, Mr. Richard C. (Macdonald)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 272; protection of agriculture; tariff changes in the United States; the tariff, 273; the Government's mandate, issues of the election of 1917, 274; record of the Government; important measures passed, 275; the "want Henders, Mr. Richard C.—Con.

Address—Con.
of confidence" cry; no popular demand for an election; no charges of maladministration or corruption; progressive legislation, 276; Canadian Wheat Board; Grain Exchange; Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, 277; uniform price quotations; elevators; profits; overages, screenings; enquiry suggested, 279
Agricultural machinery, standardization of parts, 669; Amdt. 670
Binder twine, 3748
Butter and oleomargarine, 3748
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2868-83
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4232
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4187
Wheat Board, 1454

Hepburn, Mr. W. B. R. (Prince Edward)
Dairy Produce Grading Bill, 4441

Hewitt, Dr. Gordon, the late, 1030

Hickman, Mr., alleged deportation of, qu. 575

Hides
Inspection, 1437
Prices of, 3317, 3370, 3491, 3667. See also Budget Speeches

High Commissioner in London, 2437

High Cost of Living. See also Address; Budget; Civil Service Retirement; Customs and Excise
Superannuated civil servants, 2491, 4275.

Highland Regiments. See Militia

Highways
Alberta, grants to, qu. 1821
Canada Highways Act, administration of, 4289
Approval of projects in Ontario, qu. 1237
Grants, qu. 567, qu. 2098
Commissioner, Mr. A. W. Campbell, 3023-4289
Expenditure, 2555
Good Roads Convention, 4300
Manitoba, proposed, 4308
Metapedia valley, qu. 2505
New Brunswick, approved, 4306
Nova Scotia
Approved and applied for, 4307
Highways Board, 4304
Ontario
Approved, 4295
Biggs, Hon. F. C., 4290, 4448
"Charge of the Road Brigade," 4300
Dundas Street, qu. 4252, 4299

Highways—Con.
Ontario—Con.
Dundas-Waterloo, 4298
Expenditure, 4289
Extravagance, charges of, 4304
Hamilton-Brantford, qu. 3582, 3904, 4252-3, 4290
Hamilton-Dundas, 4290
Hamilton-Kitchener, 4292
Hogarth, Mr., 4298
London-St. Thomas, 4307
London-Stratford-Sarnia, 4307
Maclean, Mr., 4298
Peel and Halton, qu. 4252
Price paid for expropriated land, 4291
Purchase of trucks, 4292
Relevancy of discussion, 4293-6
"The Roads that Biggs Built," 4302
Toronto-Guelph-Sarnia, etc., qu. 4252
Toronto-Kingston, 4306
Town of Dundas, 4298
Wages, 4291
Warren Paving Company, qu. 4252; 4291
Ottawa-Point Fortune, 4306
Overhead charges, qu. 4252
Prince Edward Island, aid to, qu. 2345
Projected roads, 3025
Quebec
Approval of, qu. 2098
Federal aid to, qu. 2344, 2375
Hull-Montreal highway, 3029, 4306
Hull-Wakefield highway, 3033-34
Lachine bridge, 4308
La Salle, repairing road in, 4313, 4333
Montreal-Sherbrooke, 4305
Quebec-St. Joachim-St. Simeon, 4313
Rougemont-St. Hyacinthe, 4305
St. Hyacinthe-Richmond, 4305
Saskatchewan, approved, 4307
Grants to, qu. 1820
Statement of highways under agreement or consideration, 4309
Width of, 4306

Hillsboro river dredging, 3984

Historical Publications, Board of, 2947

Hobson, Mr. Robert, 1609-10, 3407, 3610. See also Canadian National Railways

Hocken, Mr. H. C. (West Toronto)
Chief Justice, salary of, 1565
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2859-66
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3844-50
De Martigny divorce, 4006-8
Fraser, Mr. Roy, and Civil Service Commission, 2860-8
Fuel Supply Problem, 1261

Hocken, Mr. H. C.—Con.
Housing, 1134, 1136, 1857
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 1565
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4209-18
Parliament Buildings, book on, inquiry, 1175
Printing Bureau employees, qu. 1234
Quebec riots, 1510
Toronto post office, promotions, qu. 1673
Unemployment and immigration, 1378
Wednesday evening adjournments, 1838

Hog Cholera. See Health of Animals; Alderson

Holt, Sir Herbert, and shipbuilding, 1900

Home Brewing, 3788

Homesteads. See Dominion Lands

Hooper, Mr. Ronald, 1539. See also Proportional Representation

Horses. See also Live Stock
Blood Indian reserve, qu. 1817-19
Diseased. See Health of Animals
Docking of, 3922
Purchase of by British Remount Commission, qu. 4341

Hospitals
Alcohol, use of by, 3726. See also Inland Revenue
Marine. See Health

House of Commons. See also Deputy Speaker; Speaker
Adjournment to discuss matter of public importance, 4106
Adjournments
Ascension Day, 2688, 2941, 2998-3000
Easter, 1002
Victoria Day, 3531, 3698, 3738
Audibility of debates, 1625, 2252, 2269, 2385, 2892, 2941, 2989, 3998-4000, 4307, 4381, 4489
Bills
Introduction by consent, 2247
Private
Extension of time, 1625
Placed on order paper same day as reported, 3971
Procedure, 1128
Suspension of rule, 3582, 3715
Reported by Standing Com., 3761
Second reading by consent, 2889
Senate, delay in 1r., 1619
Business of the House
Alleged desire to hasten prorogation, 4068
British Practice to announce, 1026

House of Commons—Con.
Business of the House—Con.
Closure. See that title
Complaint of undue haste, 4068, 4449
Definite statement necessary, 1025
Division after a recess, 1383
For to-morrow, definite statement, 1025
Government, 1318, 1384, 2148
Legislation pending 2150, 2818-9, 4068
Mondays and Fridays, 1830, 1845
Government business, 2148
Order of, return incomplete, 2250, 2270
Progress of, 1842
Public Bills and Orders, 2819
Restriction of discussion, 1318
Rule 17C—Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays. See under this title Estimates
Saturday, on, 2777
Suspension of Rule, 103, 3582
To-morrow, for, 1025, 2148
By-elections, 217. See also under this title Vacancies
Dates, 903
East Elgin, 1293
Medicine Hat, 1174, 1293, 2151
Peterborough, 504
Yamaska, 4534, 4572-6. See also that title
York-Sunbury, 2151. See also that title
Chamber, temperature of, 1071
Closure. See that title
Committees, Select Standing, 3, 107, 303, 2776. For proceedings and reports, see titles of the several Committees
Liberty to sit during sessions of the House, 4338-40
Powers of, 110
Correspondence, unsigned, 2175
Debate, motion to adjourn by member closing discussion, 999
Debates, Official Report of,
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, errors in, 1697-8
Changes and corrections in 3716
Crerar, Hon. Mr., 3628
Documents not read, insertion of, 4308. See also Deputy Speaker; Speaker
Distribution of, M. (Mr. Prevost) 2220
French speeches, translation of, M. (Mr. Archambault) 698; agreed to, 702
Motion in different form from Votes and Proceedings, 1130
Owens, the late Thomas P., Editor, 258, 430
Speaker's Chair, address to be printed in, 3696
Staff—strain of long sittings, 2887
Decorum, conversation, 528. See also Deputy Speaker; Speaker

House of Commons—Con.
Divisions
Address, Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) non-confidence, neg. 561
Budget, Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) neg. 3686-7
Canadian National Railways
Management, Information—M. (Mr. Mackenzie King) neg. 1215
Special Com., reference to M. (Mr. Meighen); Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) neg. 1810; Main motion agreed to as amended, 1814
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Amdt. (Mr. Maclean, Halifax)—six months' hoist, neg. 2886
De Martigny Divorce Bill
M. (Mr. Stein) agreed to, 4107
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Mr. Guthrie)
Amdt. to 3r. (Mr. Euler) neg. 4249
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill
Amdt. to 3r. (Mr. Pardee)—six months' hoist, neg. 4226
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill
Amdt. (Mr. Denis) 3886—six months' hoist, neg. 3886
Prime Ministers' Conference
Amdt. (Mr. Mackenzie King) neg. 2679
Reciprocity—Amdt. to Supply (Mr. Fielding) neg. 2075
Representation in Parliament Amdt. (Mr. King) neg. 1329
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Mr. McMaster) 665
Estimates. See aslo that title
Method of voting, 4033, 4117, 4569
Post Office, late date of submission, 4531
Rule 17C—Thursdays and Fridays, 958, 1004, 1073, 1215, 1217, 1385, 1682, 2103-4, 2887, 3001, 4544
Effect of passage of Interim Supply Bill, 2103, 2105
Right to call department when in Com. of Supply, 2888
Supplementary, inquiry, 4070
Imaginary letters, 3172. See also that title
Indemnity of Members, 4450-52
Internal Economy Commission, 3
Members
Attendance of, 1829, 1832, 1838
Deceased, tributes to Gladu, the late Mr. Joseph E. O. (Yamaska) 3, 153, 292, 430
McLeod, the late Col. H. F. (York-Sunbury) 4, 153
Sifton, the late Right Hon. Arthur (Medicine Hat) 3, 153

House of Commons—Con.
Members—Con.
Deceased—Con.
Wallace, the late Mr. Thomas G. (West York) 152
Money resolutions, and, 1135
New
Election and introduction
Gordon, Mr., 258
MacKelvie, Mr., 1
McCurdy, Hon. Mr., 1
McDermand, Mr., 1
Wigmore, Hon. Mr., 1
Non-attendance on Mondays and Fridays, 1832-8
Resignation of. See also Representation in Parliament
Ames, Sir Herbert, 1001. See also that title
Maharg, Mr., 4340
Rowell, Hon. Mr., 4340
White, Sir Thomas, 1619. See also that title
Ministers to sit in either Chamber. See Ministers
Motions
For returns in general terms, 1555
Notices of sent in Advance, 1307
Pairs, correction of list, 563. See also under this title Divisions
Parliamentary Restaurant. See that title
Privilege
Archambault—Société des Artisans, 230
Clark, Mr., (Red Deer)—Address, incorrect report in Ottawa Citizen, 448
Denis, Mr.,—Immigration, misinterpretation of speech by Quebec newspapers, 3088
Desaulniers, Mr.
Correction, Montreal Gazette, 644
Name omitted from division list, 4255
Edwards, Mr.,—representation of Maisonneuve-Gaspé, 2247, 2310
Kay, Mr.,—Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, vote on, 3971
Lapointe, Mr.
Alleged statement of Mr. Davidson regarding Liberal leadership, 2443
Correction of report in Ottawa Journal, 477
Explanation of remarks on Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4543
National Catholic Unions, 3584
Meighen, Right Hon.,—York-Sunbury election, Hon. Mr. Veniot, 3716
Pedlow, Mr.,—Amendment incorrectly printed in Votes and Proceedings, 737

House of Commons—Con.
Privilege—Con.
Power, Mr.,—Withdrawal from Special Committee, Returned Soldiers, 789
Robb, Mr.,—Quebec bloc, 3261
Turgeon, Mr.,—Hon. Mr. Veniot, 3740
Wilson, Mr., (Wentworth)—Challenge to Hon. F. C. Biggs, 4448
Questions
Inquiry as to, 2943
Not answered, 1621, 1502
Returns
Alleged disobedience or neglect of order, 3320
Alleged imperfect, 2250-70
Inquiry for, 1176, 1499, 1502, 2688, 2775, 2777, 3008, 3320, 4255
Motions for in general terms, 1555
Reason for delay, 1555
Rules
Suspension of, 3582, 3715
Bills, first reading, 3716
17C. See under this title Estimates
Sergeant-at-Arms; Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms, 3
Sittings
Attendance at, 1844. See also under this title Wednesday evening
Duration of, 1330, 1828, 2438, 2736, 2750, 2772, 2887, 2998, 3000, 3900, 4169, 4420, 4449, 4531
All night
Government shipbuilding programme, 1858-2026
Saturday, 2777, 2818, 2941, 4338-40
Two o'clock, 2941, 3737
Wednesday
Two o'clock, 447
Evening, 1002, 1174, 1384
M. (Mr. Fielding) 1828; withdrawn, 1845
Staff
Law Branch, changes, 2685
Long sittings, 2887
Organization and compensation, 2441, 2685
Retirement Act, 4266-78. See Civil Service Retirement Act
Women workers, 4547
Supply. See also that title
Interim—Redlich, authority on, 1675
Procedure, 1215
Thursdays and Fridays—Rule 17C
See under this title, Estimates
Vacancies. See also under this title By-elections
Filling of, 1293. See Representation in Parliament

House of Commons—Con.
Vacancies—Con.
Leeds, 1293, 1619. See also White, Sir Thomas
Medicine Hat, 478, 1174, 1293
St. Antoine, 1001, 1069, 1293. See also Ames
Yale, 1
Yamaska, 478, 643, 1293. See aslo that title
York-Sunbury, 478,643, 1293
York, West, 478, 643, 1293
Writs, 643

House of Lords. See Ministers

Housing, 4362-8. See aslo Labour; Returned Soldiers; Unemployment
Dominion Housing scheme, 4049
Loan to provincial governments, 4552
Proposed establishment of a Federal Housing Board
M. (Mr. Hocken) 1134, 1152
M. as amended withdrawn, 1857

Howard, Mr. See Purchasing Commission

Hudson Bay Railway, 330, 538, 1578, 1961, 1966, 2969-80. See also Canals
Early resumption and completion, M. (Mr. Campbell) 974
Amdt. (Mr. Hay) 994; agreed to, 999
M. (Mr. Campbell) as amended, withdrawn, 1852-6
Expenditure actual and estimated, qu. 2623
Fort Churchill, 1966
Port Nelson, 1966
Selection of lands, qu. 672

Hudson, Hon. A. B., 4184-4213

Hughes, Hon. Sir Sam (Victoria)
Civil Service—Res.—Political Patronage in; fads and freaks, 789; uplifters; Outside Service; Civil Service Commission; Inside Service; Committee to investigate, 790; trust and mistrust; autocracy, 791

Hungry Bay road, 1661

Hunter, Dr. Andrew, fox-breeding, 1428

Hydro-Electric Power. See Fuel Supply Problem; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence

Hyndman, Judge, and Grain Inquiry Commission, 1674

Icebreakers, 1979
"Lake Champlain", 2174
"Montcalm", 1985
New, 1994
Thunder Bay, at, 2174

Ice-cream, tax, 3737, 3956

Iles aux Grues-Montmagny mail service 4529

Illegal Practices. See Corrupt Practices at Elections Bill

Illicit Still, innocent manufacture of part, 3788-3820

Imaginary Letters
Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, 3174-3209
Mr. McMaster, 3173
Speaker's ruling, 3260

Immaculate Conception, 2626. See also Civil Service, Religious Holidays

Immigration, 269, 3580. See also Canadian Nationals Definition Act; Chinese Immigration; Health; Unemployment
British, Inspector of, 3067
Central European, 2575-85
Chinese, 4131. See also Chinese Immigration
Continuous passage, 2580-6
Co-operation of railways, 4129
Emigration to the United States, 3068
Esmonde, Mr. Osmonde Grattan, arrest for sedition, 1556
Exhibitions, 3067, 4129-31
Expenditure, qu. 2943
German and Austrian, 3206
Halifax Quarantine Station, 2754
"Hand picking" of immigrants, 3203
Head tax, 3056
Hickman, alleged deportation of, qu. 574
Immigrants rejected, qu. 1624
Infection, danger of, qu. 272
Inspectors, 3067
Land settlement policy, 2581, 2588-9
Liberal administration, under, 3245
Loss of in Western Canada, 3373-4
Medical inspection of immigrants, 3128
Medical offices at ports of departure, 3132
Mental defectives, of, 3055, 3583
Money qualification, 2579-85
Nationality of, 3071
Oriental, 2584-94, 2595. See also Chinese Immigration
Partridge Island Quarantine station, 2808-15
Policy, 850, 861, 872, 879, 3205, 3249, 3256, 3580
Polish immigrants rejected, qu. 964
Restriction of, 507, 1127, 2568-77, 2585
Statistics, 3071-3073
Suspension of. See Unemployment
Typhus fever, precautions, 643, 4534
Western Canada Colonization Association, 2583

Immigration Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3007; 2r., com., 3822; 3r., 3955; Senate amdts. 4343

Immigration Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Bill of health, 3824
Costs of appeal, 3823
Deportation after five years—cost, 3827
Hearing of cases, 3823
Investigation of complaints—deportation—cost, 3826
Landing of passengers, 3824
Medical examination, 3824
Non-immigrant classes, 3822
Possessing prescribed amount of money, 3825
Powers of Board exercised by officers in charge, 3823

Immigration Act Amdt. Bill (Deportation of Undesirables)
1r., 1497; order for 2r., stands, 1858. See above Bill

Immigration and Colonization
Department
Contingencies and general expenses, 4127
Deputy Minister, 3057
Estimates, 2568
Contingencies, 4131
Postponement of consideration, 3077
Quebec, officers at, qu. 1131
Salaries, 2568-2602, 3055, 3068

Imperial Bureau of Entomology, 1025

Imperial Conference, 526, qu. 564, 1073. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Imperial Defence, 228, 270. See also Prime Ministers' Conference
Committee on, 2637-49

Imperial Federation, 159, 2423. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Imperial Institute, 4499

Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 2164, 4498

Imperial Munitions Board, 1284. See Research
Shipbuilding, and, 1730, 1859, 1875

Imperial Oil Company, 3206. See also Oil; Petroleum Bounties

Imperial Relations, 247, 484, 519. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Imperial War Conference, 1917, 2389
Res. 2626-36-48. See also Prime Ministers' Conference

Implement Manufacturers, 91. See also Agricultural implements

Imported Goods, Marking of, 3120, 3938. See also Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt Bill

Imports. See also Budget; Customs; Trade
Foreign, value of, 3310
For home consumption, 1920, qu. 602
From Germany, qu. 838
From United States, 3409
German goods, holdback, qu. 1350
Invoice Certificates. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Marking. See Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill

Income Tax, 98, 402, 3229, qu. 3260, 3422. See also Budget; Taxation; Ways and Means
Canada and Great Britain, in, 3486
Chief Justice and. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Corporations, on, 3262
Exemptions, 1567
Forms, inquiry, 1176
Regulations, 1272
Returns, difficulty of making up, 3147

Income Tax Act Consolidation Bill, 3905
1r., 4251; 2r., com., 4343; 3r., 4355
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Administration, 4533
Direct taxation, 4344
Members' travelling expenses, 4349
Method of self-assessment and payment, 4345
Notice of assessment, 4353
Penalty for failure to file returns, 4343
Penalty for short payment, 4344
Railway men, expenses when absent from home, 4352
Salaries and indemnities of provincial ministers, 4351
Tax upon tax, 4349
Victory bonds, taxation of, 4353

Indemnity of Members. See House of Commons

Independence of Judges. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Independence of Parliament. See Representation in Parliament

Indian Affairs

Department of
Estimates, 2167, 2171, 4501

Indian Ford, 1055

Indians
Blood Reserve
Grazing leases, qu. 1817, 1818, 1819, 2098

Indians—Con.
Blood Reserve—Con.
Live stock, starvation of, qu. 2618
Sale of cattle, qu. 2374-5
Commissioner at Regina, qu. 964
Muscowegan reserve, 2171
New Brunswick, 4501
Prince Edward Island, 4505
Riding Mountain reserve, 2172
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 2173, 2618, 4501-5
"Shows" for distinguished visitors, 2169
Tobique reserve—timber cut, 4503
Women, 3907

Indirect Taxation. See Taxation

Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 4549

Industrial and Scientific Research. See Research

Industrial Councils. See Labour

Industrial Production. See Fuel Supply Problem

Industrial Property, International Convention for protection of, 230

Industrial Research Commission, Alberta, 1267

Ingonish-MacLeod's Breakwater, 4087

Inland and Coastwise Shipping Rates, 1497, qu. 2192, 2969. See also Railway Act Amdt. Bill

Inland Navigation, qu. 2192. See also Great Lakes-St. Lawrence

Inland Revenue. See also Customs and Excise Dept.; Customs Tariff

Inland Revenue Department. See also Customs and Excise Dept.; Customs Tariff
Excise taxes on tobacco, qu. 1236
Montreal officers, qu. 1820
St. Hyacinthe—Dr. Cartier, 3821, qu. 3904

Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill. (Forfeitures and Penalties—Mr. Archambault)
1r., 2247

Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 3726; 1r., 3733; 2r., com., 3r., 3955
Subjects and Sections discussed.
Beer containers—marking, 3786
Illicit stills, 3786-3820
Increased jurisdiction in proceeding in summary convictions, 3786
Liquor, tax on, 3708
Tobacco and cigars—unlawful sale, 3786

Inquiry for Returns, House of Commons. See Returns

Insecticides, 1027

Insect Pests, 930, 1024, 3665. See also Destructive Insect and Pest Act; Entomology; Grasshoppers

Inspection and Sale Act
Administration, 1437

Inspection and Sale Act Amdt. Bills
Berry Boxes, 4106, 4114
Hay and Straw. 1r., 3319-20; 2r., com., 3r., 3759
Root vegetables, 4343

Inspection of Animals. See Cattle Embargo; Health of Animals

Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill
1r., 351; 2r., 607; 3r., 2944

"Insular" Tribunal of England, 1090

Insurance. See also Fire Insurance; Returned Soldiers; Unemployment
Canadian, in foreign firms, 3469
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1278
Officers and seamen, 4359
Canadian National Railways, 1772
Fire, 3469
Fort Garry Hotel, Winnipeg, qu. 1348
La Société des Artisans Canadiens Français, 82
Marine, 1703. See also Shipbuilding
Registered mail matter, 2120-24
Registered parcels. See Post Office Act Amdt. Bill
Returned Soldiers, 4041. See that title; also Pensions
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4260, 4355. See also that title
Sickness, 2554
Taxation of Mutual Companies, qu. 605
Unemployment. See that title

Insurance Act
Proposed amendments, inquiry, 2625
M. for res. 4339; withdrawn, 4453

Insurance Conference, 3088

Intercolonial Railway. See that title under Canadian National Railways

Interim Supply. See also Supply
Closure. See that title
Debate postponed, 1682
Former votes, of, 1681
Motion withdrawn, 1683
Point of Order—Res. to be preceded by notice, 1676

Interim Supply Bill. See also Appropriation Acts
Res. 1674; objected to, 1674; notice, Rule 17B, unanimous consent, 1676-82; withdrawn, 1683; Res. 2001; Amdt. (Mr. Lemieux) 2018-20; closure, notice of under Rule 17B, 2025-6
1r., 2095; 2r., com., 2100; 3r., 2116

Interior Department
Draughtsmen, 1334
Minister, necessity for presence in Commons, 1155
Salaries, 1330
Surveys Branch, 1332
Surveyor General, 1342

International Association of Railways Congress, 3023

International Boundary Commission, 1342, 4494
Joint report, 4340

International Commission, Fraser River, 2189

International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property, adherence to, 230

International Customs Tariff Bureau, 1437

International Financial Conference. See Brussels

International Harvester Company, 3394. See also Agricultural machinery

International Institute of Agriculture, 1116

International Joint Commission, 164, 2388, 2421, 2435. See also Great Lakes-St. Lawrence; Lake of the Woods
Appointment of Sir William Hearst, 510
Lake of the Woods Control, 1071, 1176, 1233, 4172
St. Lawrence waterway, 691, 3960-70

International Justice. See Permanent Court

International Labour Conference, 544. See also Labour

International Labour Union. See Labour, National Catholic Unions

International Trade Conference, qu. 2029. See Trade

"Internationale," dredge, qu. 2192, qu. 2506

Inventors. See Patent Act Amdt. Bill

Inverness
Fishery overseers, 2178
Harbour, 3985
Public building, 2817

Invoice Certificates. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Ioco, wharf, 3979

Ireland, Parliament for South of, qu. 603

Iron and Steel Industry
Development of, 873-4. See also Natural Resources; Steel

Irrigation. See also Natural Resources
Belly river water rights, qu. 2943
Milk river water rights, qu. 2099
Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan, 858

Isaac, Mr. See French Trade Agreement

Italy
Cargoes of wine from, 1715
Lira, exchange value of, 3816-4227
Trade with. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Jacobs, Mr. S. W. (George Etienne Cartier)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 503; congratulations to Prime Minister; by-election in Peterborough, 504; National Liberal and Conservative party; Mr. Bourassa, 505; Mr. R. B. Bennett; Government saturated with war spirit, 506; shipbuilding; immigration; restrictive loans and regulations, 507; railways and public ownership; Department of Trade and Commerce, 508; Departments not directly represented in House; military expenditures, 509; Royal Commission to investigate grain trade; conciliatory overtures to Quebec; appointments that violate the traditions, 510
Agriculture Dept.—Salary of Deputy Minister, 950
Air Board, 3780-3
Alpine Club, 4494
American immigration, 3065
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 1327
Animal Contagious Diseases, 1048
Armistice Day Bill, 3773
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill (Mr. Jacobs)—French Version, 1069, 2256
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill (Mr. Guthrie) 2910-39, 3144
Bankruptcy Act, Judges under, 1085
British Remount Commission, qu. 4341
Canada Temperance Act
Damages, 4387
Invasion of the province of the courts, 4379
Proceedings pending, 4378
Canadian Bar Association, 1094
Canadian Forestry Association, 4494

Jacobs, Mr. S. W.—Con.
Canadian National Railways, Special Com., reference M. (Mr. Meighen) 1785
Cattle embargo, 1072
Chief Justice, salary of, 1568
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3896-8, 3906-30, 4342
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Commissioner, 4388
Reflections on legal profession, 4406
Trade commissioners, 4406
De Martigny divorce, 3763
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Foreign-born wives of British subjects, 3105
Esmonde, Mr. Osmonde Grattan, 1556
Foundation Company of Montreal, payments to, qu. 4341
Fox-farming, 1433
Governor General's cars, 3037
Grand Trunk Arbitration expenses, 4335
Grand Trunk loan, 4158
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 749
Immigration, 2574-92, 3055
Exhibit decorator, 3066
Officials, 3057
Juvenile delinquents—spanking, 3918
League of Nations, contribution to, 2357-69
Liquor, tax on, 3708
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 1325, 2333
Medicinal preparations, 3709
Militia, cadet services, 2297
National Transcontinental, Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2513
Natural Research Institute, 2894
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4018-31
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3880-2
Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act Amdt. Bill, 2898-2905
Amdt. to amdt., 2903
Parliament buildings, 4075
Patent Act Amdt. Bill, 4456
Penitentiaries, 1092
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2709-35
Permanent Force, 2278
Private Bills—extension of time, 1625
Quarantine, typhus, 4170
Representation in Parliament, 1327
Roumanian loan, interest, 1441, 2030
Supreme Court and Privy Council appeals, 1089-1090
Tariff revision, qu. 903, 2346
Trade commissioners, 1219, 1465
Trent canal, 2607
Unemployment and immigration, 1358
Wines—British colonies, 3710

James MacLaren Company, Limited. See Private Bills Discussed

Jameson, Mr. Clarence, 799. See also Civil Service

Japan
Foreign credit, balance of, 1227-8

Johnston, Mr. Alex., 1280
Reappointment, 644

Johnston, Mr. J. Fred. (Last Mountain)
Address, 437. Congratulations to Prime Minister, 437; Canadian Wheat Board; statement of Minister of Immigration at Regina; attitude of Progressives, 438; definite stand taken on "enabling legislation", the farmers and wheat control; report of grain supervisors, 439; objections to Wheat Board, 440; scarcity of cars; increase in freight rates; commission to investigate grain trade; Board of Commerce, 441; Mr. G. M. Murray and the press, 442; the West anxious for an election, 444
Agricultural shows, 1245
Budget, 3550. Military expenditures; shifting of taxation, 3551; tariff revision, 3552; Government policy of moderate protection, 3553; agriculture, area and revenue, 3553; Soldier Settlement Board, operations, 3554; natural resources of prairie provinces, 3555; Ambassador to Washington, 3556; Farmers' party, 3556
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4469-72
Cow-testing, 1037
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4241
Naturalization—Certificate of qualification, 4241
Grain Commission, 1449
Grand Trunk Railway, operating charges, qu. 1132
Immigration, restriction of, 1127
Indian Commissioner at Regina, 2167-9
Live stock breeding, 1117
Muscowegan reserve, 2171
Oil development in Mackenzie district, 2162
Post Office, outside service, 4528
Public Works, expenditures in Saskatchewan, 2818
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2070
Stayner postmaster, 4470
Wheat Board, 1454

Joliette Bridge, 3038

Jones. See Rice Jones

Judge Snider. See Printing Bureau

Judges. See also Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill; Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, Revising Officers

Judges—Con.
Appointment of, 801, 811, 813
Chandler, Judge, Moncton, 2119
Chief Justice, Supreme Court, exemption of salary, 2188
Exchequer Court, 1083-4
Latchford, Judge, payment to, qu. 1500
Macleod Judicial district, qu. 2344
Number of, 1081
Riddell, Judge, payments to, qu. 1500
Salaries, 3680
Saskatchewan King's Bench, additional Judge, 1559
Travelling expenses, 1559, 2118
Vice-Admiralty, 1084
Wilson, Judge, qu. 1622
Yukon Territory, salaries and living allowance, 1087-8

Judges Act, 1920
Correspondence, M. (Mr. Lemieux) 1851

Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 1559; Amdt. (Mr. Lanctot) neg. 1572; 1r., 1573; 2r., com., 2117; 3r., 2151; Senate amdts. 3009; Free Conference with Senate, 3972; 4040-61; 4250

Judicial Committee. See Privy Council

Judicial Districts, Quebec, 1081-3

June Bugs, 1030

Justice
Administration of, Yukon Territory, 1087
Department
Counsel employed in, 1077, 3523
Legal cases referred to, 1655
Litigated matters, expenses, 1089
Newcombe, Mr. E. F., qu. 1002
Purchasing agent, 1079, 1115, 2017
Salaries, 1076
Taxation forms, revision by, qu. 1237
Law stamps, tax, 1090
Penitentiaries, estimates, 1091, 1096. See also Penitentiaries
Privy Council appeals, 1089. See also that title

Juvenile Courts. See Juvenile Delinquents

Juvenile Delinquents, 3013
Spanking, 3918

Juvenile Delinquents Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3319; 2r., com., 3r., 3758

Kamouraska, plum-growing, 1048

Kamouraska and Temiscouata Telephone Co., 2175

Kapuskasing Illustration station, 949

Kay, Mr. W. Fred. (Missisquoi)
Camp Grounds, Farnham, Que., qu. 1132
Canada Temperance Act, qu. 4253

Kay, Mr. W. Fred.—Con.
Census enumerators, qu. 735, qu. 1132, 4113
Income tax forms, 1176
Missisquoi
Census enumerators, qu. 735, qu. 1132, 4113
Net fishing in Missisquoi Bay, qu. 570
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3854
Privilege—vote on Oleomargarine Bill, 3971
Special War Revenue Act—condensed milk and ice-cream, 3956
Victoria Day, 3531

Keefer, Mr. Francis H. (Port Arthur and Kenora)
Africa, trade with, 1965
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2925
Canada-West Indies Trade agreement, 2259
Canadian representation in the United States, 2424-6
Canal tolls, 2963
Cattle embargo, 730
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2487-8
Fuel Supply Problem, 1257
Grain transportation rates, 2982
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2479
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, Res. 674, 753
Kingston, wharves and bridges, 3973
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2346-54
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4184-98
Parliament buildings, 3999
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2483-4
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 593

Kemp, Hon. Sir Edward (East Toronto)
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 590

Kenora
Board of Trade, 4184-6
Dam, 4172

Kennedy, Mr. J. Wilfred (Glengarry and Stormont)
Cattle, embargo, 720
Cattle feeds, 3744
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
New and unused goods, 3814
Grading of cheese, 1037
Hudson Bay Company, selection of land, qu. 672
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3866
Unemployment and immigration, 1372

Kennedy, Mr. W. C. (North Essex)
Budget, 3404; deficit and annual debt; militia expenditures; mercantile marine, 3405; railway situation, 3406; Canadian National Railways, directors, 3407; manufacturers and home and foreign markets, 3408; importations from United States, 3409; amdt. of Mr. Fielding, 3410
Canadian National Railways, Board of Management, qu. 1132
Civil Service bonus, 2111-13
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 684

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie (Leader of the Opposition)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 10; congratulations to Prime Minister; usurpation of authority by Government; changes in Ministry; elected as a war administration—has it a mandate?—comparison with former administrations, 12; retirement of ministers principally responsible for Government's war record, 13; aims of present and former administrations different, 15; the tariff, 17; issue excluded in formation of Union Government, 19; no right to legislate without consulting the people; grounds for continuance of Government examined; limitation of parliamentary term, 20; supremacy of Parliament, 22; no pledge given in 1917, 23; withdrawal of Ministers who believed administration had fulfilled its mandate, 24; desire of Leader of Opposition for an election; significance of by-elections, 25; Canada alone in denying to people right of general election, 26; violation of fundamental principles of free government, 28; non-confidence amendment, 28
Air Board, 3782
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 478, 1069, 1295
Archives, provision for, 2949
Arctic expedition, 4106
Armistice Day, 3775
Auditor General's Report, 737, 903, 915
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2909
Budget, 3596. Tariff revision and the Government; tariff inquiry, 3598; Republican party in the United States—barriers to trade between two countries; exchange rate, 3599; comparison of Budget speech and policy and principles of National Liberal and Conservative party, 3600; inter-Imperial trade, 3601; association between interests and Government during war period, 3602; political power united with plutocracy of self-interest, 3603; Board of Commerce—Mr. Murdock, 3604; lack of constructive legislation, 3607; protection of the interests, 3607; expenditure on National Railways and Merchant Marine, 3608; directors of National Railways and business interests, 3609; loans to foreign countries, 3611; Members of Parliament and sales to foreign countries, 3611; Minister of Crown soliciting business from foreign government, 3612; Prime Minister and misrepresentation of attitude of Opposition, 3612; free trade and protective tariffs, 3613; methods of taxation, 3614; downward revision of tariff, 3616; election necessary, 3618

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Budget—Con.
Budget, date of, inquiry, 1555, 2151
Business of the House
Estimates—alleged agreement, 4569
For to-morrow, 2145
Interruption of debate on Address, 151
Legislation
Pending, 2150, 2819, 3972
Undue haste, 313
Lengthy discussions, 1230
Monday—Government business, 2148
Order of, 1619
Prorogation, 4069
Sittings
Duration of, 897, 900, 1330, 2887
Saturday, 2818
Wednesday evening, 1002
Supply, procedure, 1216
Victoria Day, 3689
By-elections, dates, 903. See also under this title Representation in Parliament
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1292
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, Bill, 585, 648
Canadian National Railways
Government-owned railways, correspondence, 1004
Information—attitude of the Government, 1759
Management, 1440
M. that information be laid before Parliament, 1178
Special Committee, reference to
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1188, 1594; M. (Mr. Meighen) 1758; Amdt. (Mr. King) 1761; Amdt. (Mr. Crerar) 1813

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2378-2429
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3828
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2486
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Amdt. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 2844; M. for 2r., 2778
Commission
Annual report, 4477
Jurisdiction of, 4286-8
Returned soldiers, 4258-9
Special Com.
Quorum, 2940
Reference to, 2776
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 2908, 3843-50
Cost of Living, 4551
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3830
Date of summoning Parliament, 311
Daylight saving in Ottawa, 2776
Deceased members, tributes to, 4, 153
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition Plebiscite) 151, 309
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Bill not printed, 2944
Certificate of qualification, 3090, 3107-10, 4238-9
Foreign-born wives and children of British subjects, 3090
Forms, 3100
Voters' lists, registration, 3092
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4062-6
Estimates. See also under this head Business of the House, Interim Supply
Committee on, 2207-9
Time of taking up, 1330
French Trade Agreement, 2125
Governor General—address to on retirement, 4434
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill
Agreement of March 8, 1920, 2377
Committee of five, 2479
Legal consequences, 2451
Liquidation, 2451
Position of Opposition on taking over Grand Trunk, 2560
Ratification of new agreement, 2450
Request for delay, 2346
Senate amendments, 2777, 2823
Submission of agreement to Parliament, 2476
House of Commons staff, 2887
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4343
Interim Supply, 1679, 2115
Attitude of Opposition, 2004
Objected to, 1674
Obligations for payment, 2025

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Judge Snider's report, 3697, 3761, 3905
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 2117-18
Kamloops, speech at, 3623
Labour Department
Alleged combines, 4551
Bolshevism—pamphlet, 4548
Fair wages, 4545
Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 4552
Minister—letter of in Gazette, 1643
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2033
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 3903, 4211-17
League of Nations, contribution towards, 2356
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1163
Montreal Harbour Commission Bill, 2159
National Research Institute, 2894. See also Research
Natural resources
Adjournment of debate, 894
Transfer of to western provinces, 2546-52
Nauru Island, phosphate deposits, 4255, 4541
Newsprint, alleged combine, qu. 2099
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2898-2907
Owens, the late Thomas P., Editor of Debates, 258
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payment, 4573
Peterborough speech, 134
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2123
Press Gallery, 2887
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2631
Amdt. to Supply, 2634-58
Prisons and reformatories, 3011
Privilege—alleged statement of Mr. Davidson regarding Liberal leadership, 2443
Privileges and Elections Committee, 2373
Proportional representation, 1552
Public money, accounting for, 1292
Purchasing Commission, 1099
Statutes
Limiting power, 1101
Providing for tenders, 1105
Representation in Parliament
Vacancies (Amdt. to Supply), 1293, 1300, neg. 1309
By-elections, 1306
Rockefeller Foundation, 2443
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2481, 2801
Shipbuilding, 1292

King, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie—Con.
Speaker's Chair, 3693
Supplementary Estimates, inquiry for, 3741
Tariff inquiry, 3055
Tariff revision, 3622-3
Unemployment, 4549
Vacancies, 478. See also under this head Representation
War Times Election Act, 4238
White, Sir Thomas, qu. 477

King's Bench. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Judges, 1081

King's Birthday, 4450

King's County, fruit inspectors, 1041

Kingston
Fortifications, 969
Penitentiary. See Penitentiaries
Wharves and bridges, 3973

Kino Hill, silver discovery, 856

Kirkwood Steamship Company, qu. 564

Knox, Mr. Andrew (Prince Albert)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 537; congratulations to Prime Minister; the amendment; Soldiers' Settlement Board; Porcupine Forest Reserve; lack of transportation facilities—freight rates—Hudson Bay Railway, 538; investigation of grain trade; farmers' movement
Budget, 3414. Government has reverted to indirect taxation, 3414; militia expenditures, 3415; expenditures on canals; northern Saskatchewan transportation facilities, 3416; protection and the farmers; grain inquiry, 3417
Canadian National Railways, passenger traffic, Montreal-Winnipeg, qu. 2376
Chinese immigration, 3056
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2855
Cordwood for fuel, 3748
Credits to Roumania and Greece, qu. 1236
Hudson Bay Railways, 538, 982
Immigration, 2589-90
Income tax payers—farmers, qu. 838
Saskatchewan railway lines, 3054
Senate representation—Saskatchewan, 2567
Trent canal, 2608-9, 2958

Kuskanook, wharf, 3979

Labour. See also Building Trades Conference; Housing; Immigration; Industrial Disputes; Shipbuilding; Returned Soldiers; Unemployment
Alleged combines, 4551

Labour—Con.
Bolshevism, pamphlet, 4548
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, wages, 1921
Civil Service, prevailing rates, qu. 3089
Conditions in Great Britain and United States, 408
Discontent and unrest, 3439
Department
Emergency relief, 4535
Employment offices, 2852, 4363
Estimates, 4170, 4535
Draper, Mr. P. M., 1632, 1637
Fair wage clause, 1910, 2955, 4545
Germany, cost in, 4425, 4428
Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 4549-52
International Conference at Washington, 544
Status of Canada, 2629
Unemployment insurance, 4547
Washington and Geneva, conventions and recommendations, 4041
Women workers, 4547
League of Nations, 4547
Manual labourers. See Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Mathers Commission, 232
Minister in Senate, criticism of, 1154-5, 1162, 1169, 4544
Moore, Mr. Tom, 1627, 1632, 1636
National Advisory Council, 4363
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1625, 3584
Chicoutimi Convention, 1626
Letter of Minister in Gazette, 1642
Minister of Labour and, 1625
Platform of, 1627
Wright, Mr. A. A., letter of, 1647
National Industrial Conference, 2101, 4549
Railways, and, 1179, 1190, 1587. See also that title
Shipbuilding, Government, 1273, 1727, 1889, 1897, 1902, 1909, 1974
Strikes
Cape Breton in, 3528
Grand Trunk, 230
Number of, qu. 569
Peterborough, 3549
Winnipeg, 3359, 3360, 3560
Trades and Labour Congress, platform of, 1634
Unemployment relief, 4535. See also Unemployment
Wages and prosperity, 3514
Women workers—overtime, 4547

Labour Gazette, 1155

Lachine Canal. See Canals

Ladysmith, wharf, 3980

Lafleche, Col. See Purchasing Commission

Lafortune, Mr. D. A. (Jacques-Cartier)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 292; tribute to late Mr. Gladu; the debate reviewed, 292; Mr. Gauthier, 293; the amendment; Government's mandate executed; Prime Ministers' Conference, 294; Government in danger when it turns to Opposition for help; new name of Government party, 294; change of Government in 1896; issues of the election; promises made and kept; Manitoba school question; St. Lawrence river channel; revising barristers; contracts, men's wages; deficits; Sir Wilfred Laurier; the tariff, 296; reciprocity, 297; things the Liberals will do when returned; Georgian Bay canal; bridge between Vaudreuil and Ste. Anne, 298; will demand accounting; Quebec not isolated but badly represented, 299; widening of Victoria bridge; bridge at Longueuil; tobacco growers, 300; sugar beet industry, 301;
Automobile theft, 3915
Budget, 3669; historical and political review, 3669-70; Mr. Bourassa, 3671; Laurier administration; prosperity of manufacturers and agricultural interests under Liberal Government, 3673; Post Office Department—deficit, 3674; Lachine canal bridge, 3675; immigration of French Canadians to United States, 3675; protection of tobacco growers, 3676; Ville Emard tunnel, 3677; bridge at Ste. Anne's-Vaudreuil, 3677; bridges in Jacques Cartier county; Georgian Bay canal, 3678; Military Service Act, 3678; Liberals returning to Opposition after war, 3679; Judges' salaries, 3680
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3910-32
Lachine canal bridge, 3675, 4308
La Salle—road repair, 4313-33
Perrot Island bridge, qu. 576, qu. 603
Pointe Claire, wharf, 4312
Three Card Monte, 1858

"Lake Champlain", icebreaker, 1985

Lake Freights, 3371. See also Canals; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence; Transportation

Lake of the Woods and Other Waters, 3903. See also Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill

Lake of the Woods Control, International Joint Commission, 1176, 1233

Lake of the Woods Control Board, estimates, 2437

Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill
1r., 788; 2r., com., 2033, 2346, 3r., 2445
Subjects and Sections Discussed:
Board
Creation of, 2033-2346
Immunity from actions, 2355
Powers—enforcement of
By order of court, 2350
By taking possession of property, 2353
Purposes, 2350
Correspondence — International Joint Commission, 1176, 1233
Norman dam, English river, Winnipeg river, 2347
Statement by Prime Minister, 2033

Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill
1r., 3903; 2r., com., 4171; Amdt. (Mr. Pardee), six months' hoist—to 3r., 4226; 3r., 4227
Subjects and Sections Discussed:
Backus, Mr. E. W., 4173-4224
Boundary award, 4181
Concurrent legislation, 3903
Correspondence between the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Drury, 3971, 4170, 4182
English river, 4172
Hudson, Hon. A. B., 4184, 4213
Kenora dam, 4172
Norman dam, 4173
Rivers and Streams Act, 4174-4225
Sioux Lookout, 4191
Statement by Prime Minister, 4171
Technical Board, 4173
White Dog Falls, 4172
Winnipeg river, 4172

Lalor, Mr. F. R. (Haldimand)
Budget, 3656. Change in official Opposition, 3657; free trade and farmers, 3658; manufacturers help to lower prices, 3659; Roumanian and Greek loans and contracts, 3661; protection proper policy for Canada, 3661
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2492-4
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Dumping clause, 3817
Invoice certificate, fee, 4391
Position of Agrarian group, 4400
United States Customs regulations, 3817, 4417
Valuation for duty, 3817, 4417
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 307

Lalor, Mr. F. R.—Con.
Highway construction in Ontario, 4300
Hon. F. C. Biggs, 3037
Immigration, 2582
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4351

Lambert, Mr. Norman P., 289, 3329, 3363, 3685. See also Grain Growers' Grain Company

Lanctot, Mr. Roch (Laprairie and Napierville)
Budget, 3516; tariff revision; Canada's participation in the war, 3517; imports and exports, 3518; revenue; expenditures, 3519; military expenditure, 3519; railway situation, 3520; Grand Trunk Railway, 3522; lawyers and Justice Department, 3523
Chief Justice, income tax, 1572
Civil Service bonus, 2107, 2114
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4352
Interim Supply Bill, 2107
Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Amdt. to res. neg. 1572
Montreal and South Shore traffic bridge, 2216
Post Office, outside service, 4531
Shipbuilding, 1959

Land.—See also Soldier Settlement; Immigration
Settlement, western, 3249
Location, 4343
Tax, 3229, 3317, 3453, 3486, 3511, 3634-35, 3664

Lang, Mr. Norman (Humboldt)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 342; the amendment; desire for election confined to one side; questions affecting West; investigation of Grain Trade, 342; marketing conditions; series of unfavourable years; Wheat Board; Wheat pool; better understanding between East and West; live stock industry harvest help; National Railways, branch lines, 344

Langlois, Mr. George Arnoult, appointment, qu. 2505, 2875, 4128

Lapointe, Mr. Ernest (Quebec East)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 457; congratulations to Prime Minister; special circumstances under which Parliament meets; House must reflect national will; public confidence withdrawn from Government, 457; justification of amendment; Union Government formed for duration of war—continuance in office injustice to Canada; democracy; the soldiers' vote;

Lapointe, Mr. Ernest—Con.
Address—Con.
war mandate used for other purposes, 458; new Administration without public endorsation; origin of National Liberal and Conservatice party; no mandate given in 1917 to present Government, 459; withdrawal of Ministers who gave prestige to Administration; sincerity of Liberals who support Government, 460; Government no longer in harmony with public opinion; by-election, 461; the Government's majority, 463; Sir Thomas White; Sir Herbert Ames; constitutional duty of Government; British precedents, 464; Imperial conference, 467
Alcohol, tax on, 3705
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 464, 1296, 1310
Business of the House
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays—Rule 17C—958, 1073, 1218, 1385, 2103-4, 4544
Canadian Nationals Definition Bill, 769
Canadian National Railways
Board of directors, 1605
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2429
Cattle embargo, 727
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2779, 4487-90
Religious holidays, 4487-90
Civil Service (res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political Patronage, 800; census commissioners and enumerators, 800; Judges, 801; commissions, 802
Closure, 2025
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3907
Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods—marking, 3939-41
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 310
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4246-50
Nomination paper, 4246
Revising officers, 4250
French Trade Agreement, 2137-8, 2152
Harbours and Rivers, estimates, 3977-80
High Commissioner's Office, 2437
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill—(Deportation) 1497, 1858
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 2165
Interim Supply, 2010-11; 2101-4
Judges
Judicial District of Quebec, 1081-2
Justice Department
Counsel employed, 1076
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2033
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4210
Lapointe, Mr. Ernest—Con.
League of Nations, contribution to, 2357-67
Maisonneuve and Gaspé representation, 2314, 2342
Marine estimates, length of debate, 1988
Minister of Labour, 4544
National Catholic Labour Union, 1625, 3584
National Industrial Conference, 4549
Naval policy, 4023
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3891
Order, point of, word of member should be accepted, 1641
Parliament buildings, 3994, 4075-8
Inscription on tower, 4544
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4060
Prime Minister's Conference, 2505, 2637-67
Naval defence—contribution of Dominions to, 4256
Privilege
Alleged statement of Mr. Davidson regarding Liberal leadership, 2443
Correction of report in Ottawa Journal, 477
Explanation of remarks on Dominion Elections Bill, 4543
National Catholic Labour Unions, 3584
Provinces as traders, 3706
Purchasing Commission, 2015
Negative motion, 2019
Quebec riots, 1506
Railway Department employees, 1654
Representation in Parliament, 1307
Revenue from duty on wines, 2711
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4055-60

Laporte, Sir Hormidas, 1609-10, 4315. See also Canadian National Railways
Business interests, 3610

La Presse, 3217
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, criticism, 1709
Lord Atholstan, and, 3248
Yamaska by-election—Mr. Mondou, 3251

LaRochelle, Mr. M. G., 799. See also Civil Service; Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill

La Salle road, 4313-33

L'Assomption Experimental Station, 918, 946

Latchford, Mr. Justice, payments to, qu. 1500

"Laurentian", Government steamer, qu. 1348, 1863

Laurentide Pulp & Paper Company, 3049

Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, 3670. See also Address; Budget; Prime Ministers' Conference
Imperial Conferences, and, 3431-34
South African War, 1527
Tariff, 3614, 3642

Laval University. See Research

Lavigueur, Mr. Henri E. (Quebec County)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 280; congratulations to Prime Minister; the French language; demand for general election; changed attitude towards Quebec; unfulfilled obligations to city of Quebec; equipment for Transcontinental railway; grain elevators, docks, workshops; Great Northern and Lake St. John railways; St. Charles river dam; the Quebec riots of 1918, 282
Canadian National Railways
Directors, 4315
Quebec bridge—highway, 4333
Civil Service bonus, 2112-13
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 686
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3977
Income tax, 2106
Marine estimates, 1987
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1649
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payment to, 4575
Post Office
Fiset, Mr. Michel, 963, 4523
Loretteville, 4523
Quebec elevator, 282, 1443
Quebec-Loretteville line, 4328
Shipbuilding, 1971
Telegraph line, Loretteville-St. Gerard, 4539

Lavoie, Mr., and Canadian National Railways, 1659, 1670

Law Library, Canadian, 1090

Law Stamps, 1090

Lawyers. See Canadian Bar Association; Justice Department

League of Nations, 97, 110, 125, 157, 164, 186, 188, 195, 204, 227, 229, 237, 247, 285, 357, 400, 435, 474, 2629-50-52, 2789, 3157, 3205. See also Canadian Nationals Definition Act; Prime Ministers' Conference; Permanent Court of International Justice
Ames, Sir Herbert, 464. See also that title
Article X, 158, 1967
Elimination of, qu. 575
Assembly, 164, 436, 2629, 2710, 543
Canadian representatives, 188, qu. 602, 785

League of Nations—Con.
Assembly—Con.
French Canadians unrepresented, 552
Request for papers, 188
Aviation, 3782
Burnham, Dr., case of, 1521. See also that title
Canada's participation, 519
Canadian Nationals, 397. See also that title
Constitutional questions, 113
Council, 2709
Expenses, Canada's share, qu. 1235, 2356
Labour, 4547. See also that title
Nauru Island, 4255, 4541
Permanent Court of International Justice. See that title
Permanent Secretariat, maintenance, 2356

Leases of Federal Oil Lands. See Oil

Lecours, Mr. A. J. See Quebec Riots

Leduc, Mr. J. Alfred (Westmount-St. Henry)
Budget, 3463. Comparison of present with Liberal administration; Government economy in expenditure necessary, 3464; methods of taxation, 3465; income tax, 3465
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3882
Public buildings, Nova Scotia, 2770

Lee-Enfield Rifle, 2783-7. See also Militia; Ross Rifle

Leeds
Status of member for, 464, 1294, 1326. See also White, Sir Thomas
Resignation of member for, 1619
Vacancy, 1293

Legal Responsibility. See Quebec Riots

Leger, Mr. A. T. (Kent, N.B.)
Agricultural publications, 1074
Beef production, 1039
Cold storage—delegation from Maritime Provinces, 1038
Dairying, 1036
Dredging, 3982
Fruit growing, 1041
Harbours and rivers, 3990
Lightkeepers' salaries, 1994
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3759
Partridge Island quarantine station, 2206-14
Public Works—transfer of district engineer's office from Chatham, 4081-5
St. John harbour, 4078
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement of, 1499, 2173, qu. 2618, 4501-5
Veterinaries in New Brunswick, 1050

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe (Maisonneuve; Gaspé)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 177; Mr. Mowat; platform of Liberal Convention of 1919; Speech of Mr. Gauthier a "degrading incident", 178; the amendment; Government possible only with consent of governed; the "Khaki" election in England; Balfour administration, 178; no general election for ten years; issue in 1911; dissolution and election; only issue in 1917 was "Win the War"; that election a "sham" and "official debauchery"; tariff, 181; coalition illogical after the war; Cabinet changes; distinction between Tory and Liberal, 182; justification of amendment; Imperial Conference, naval defence; British foreign policy; Canada will never surrender rights; Government without mandate to discuss naval defence; organic change in constitution, 183; Canada a nation? Right denied to conclude commercial pact; consular agents, 184; Ambassador at Washington, 185; Chicago Drainage Canal; levels of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence river; League of Nations; increasing desire for national unity, 187
Air Board, 3778
Archives, provision for, 2949
Arctic expedition, 4106
Ascension Day, adjournment, 2688
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2916
Belgian Immigration, 4128
Berry boxes, 4116
Bertrand, Mr. Joseph Tetu, 4079
Brunelle, Sergt. Major N., 1518
Budget, 3241. Tariff Commission; free trade and protection, revenue, raising of, 3242; income tax; two normal periods of recent history, 1879-1896, 1896-1911, comparison of, 3243; British preference, establishment of, 3244; relations with the United States, 3245; benefits of Liberal administration, 3245; war loans, debts and deficits, 3246; a free press, 3247; naval and military expenditure, 3248; vigorous policy of immigration and land settlement, 3249; mining industry; attitude of Quebec, Yamaska by-election, 3250
Burnham, Dr., and Serbian Government, M., 1520, 1528
Business of the House, 1851
Morning sittings, prorogation, 4338-40
Previous debate, 3627

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Business of the House—Con.
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1833
Canada Temperance Act Bill
Costs of litigation, 4385
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 1557, 2254-7
Canadian dollar in the United States, 3087
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1286
Canadian National Railways
Deficit--Mr. J. Lambert Payne, 3017
Foremen of engines, qu. 1673
St. Hyacinthe shops, qu. 2821
Special Committee, reference to M. (Mr. Meighen) 1774
Train agents, qu. 1349
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2396, 2430
Cattle embargo, 710; motion withdrawn, 766
Chicago Drainage Canal, 185, 1851, 2225
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3827-9
Civil Service
Bonus, qu. 901, 1176
Griffenhagen and Associates, 799, 4555. See also under this title, Post Office
Outside Service, qu. 2820
Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) Political Patronage in, 798; Liberal principles; Civil Service Commission; competitive principle; worries of patronage system; experience in England, United States and India; Hon. Sydney Fisher; confidence in Commissioners; Arthur Young and Company; Griffenhagen and Associates, 799
Reorganization, 4555
Superannuation, increase of allowances, 2112
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2855-71, 4258-60, 4280-88, 4466-86
Religious holidays, 4485
Returned Soldiers, 4258-60
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2490-2; 4275
Copyright Act Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3838-49
Customs
Minister of
Letter to French Purchasing Commission, 3079
Private business connections, 3079, 3080
Montreal port officers, 3086
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4448
De Martigny divorce, 3767-71, 4008, 4203, 4477
Destruction of documents. See also under this title Printing Bureau

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Divorce evil, 4474
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 3092, 4246
Naturalization, 3112
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4064
Editorial Committee, 4557-9
Estimates, Scrutiny of, Special Committee, M., 1503, 2193, 2210
Expenditure
National Committee on, 1835
Statutory, 1557
French Trade Agreement, 1557, 2127-41, 2193
Gaspé Peninsula railway facilities, 2507-9
Georgian Bay Canal, qu. 2625
Germany
Canadian claims against, 4534
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2450-80, 2564
Highways
Construction in Ontario, 4290-3
In Quebec, 3029
Housing
(Amdt.) 1135-36
Point of order, 1135
Immigration
Central European, 2575-85
Deputy Minister, 3057
Exhibits, 3067
Inspectors, 3067
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3822-7
Income tax
Instructions in both languages, 2626
Penalties, qu. 2100
Regulations, 1272
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4345-53
Insurance Act, proposed amendments, 2625, 4339
Insurance Conference, 3088
Interim Supply, 1679
Bill, 2101-2112
Motion to reduce, 2095
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 1561, 3010
Judges Act, 1920, Correspondence, 1851
Judge Snider's report. See under this title Printing Bureau
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4207-10
Langlois, Mr., 4128
Magdalen Island steamship service, 767
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2328
Military expenditure, South Africa, 3273
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, M., 1152; withdrawn, 1172
Murray Bay-Tadoussac Steamship service, 1825
National Research Institute, 4555. See also under this title, Research

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
National Transcontinental, Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2509-19
Natural resources, 874
North American Trust Company, 1129
Oil and Gas permits and leases, 899
Oil bounties, 1421
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3883-94
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2906, 3009
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payments to, 4570
Parliament buildings, 4077
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4367
Pensions
Etienne, Mde., claim, 4367
Martel, Mde., claim, 4367
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2712-14
Pierreville postmistress, qu. 2624
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4053
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 1619, 2123-25
Post Office Department
Anderson, Mr., 4556
Annuities, 4524
Griffenhagen and Associates, 4556
Letter rate, 4515
Postmaster General, 4514
Railway mail service, 4516
Reorganization and administration, 4514-24, 4556
Verret, Col., 4525-56
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2642
Printing Bureau—destruction of documents, 2950-3, 4557
Judge Snider's report, 1625, 2444, 2943, 3905, 4062, 4436
Private members and money resolutions, 1135
Prohibition, 4474
Public moneys, expenditure of, 1678
Public Works in Gaspé, 4088
Purchasing Commission, 2021, 2018-22
Motion to strike out item, 2018
Quebec riots, 1514
Question not answered, 1621
Railways
Freight rates on, 2018
Refrigerator cars for fish, 1038
Revenue and expenditure, 4515
Salmon fishery licenses, 4341
Sandy Beach wharf, qu. 965
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 591
Senate Bills, delay in first reading, 1619
Shipbuilding, 1286, 1686, 2078

Lemieux, Hon. Rodolphe—Con.
Shipbuilding—Con.
Speech referred to, 1684
Soldiers pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4053
Speaker's Chair, 3694
Stony Mountain penitentiary, release of prisoners, 477
Thanksgiving day, date, qu. 2098
Trade with United States, 1481
United States tariff, Canadian duties, 4254
War tax, 4515
Woman suffrage, 4474
Yamaska election
Speech at St. François du Lac, 3528
Unsatisfactory arrangements for, 4534
Young Emergency tariff, 2905

Le Pas wharf, 3975-6

Letter Carriers. See also Post Office
Bonus, 2109-15. See also Civil Service, Bonus

Letter Rate. See Post Office

Letters. See Imaginary Letters

Levels, Great Lakes, 186. See also Chicago Drainage Canal; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Waterway.

Lévis, expropriation of land at, 1846

Libel. See Criminal Code Amendments

Liberal Bloc, 3216

Liberal Convention, 1919, 73, 175, 218, 338, 3637. See also Address; Budget
Fiscal policy, 3213
Tariff resolution, 3643

Library of Parliament
Joint Committee, 110
Joint Librarians' Report, 3
Noise, 4000

Life Assurance Companies. See North American

Life-saving Service, 1990

Lighthouses and Lightkeepers, 1994, 2174
Bonus, 1622, qu. 1623
Signal service, 4040

Lignite. See also Coal, Natural Resources
Briquetting plants
Bienfait, qu. 672, 673, 848, 4499
Estevan, 2689
Conservation Commission, 3965
Utilization Board, qu. 672, 673, 1269, 4499

Lindsay
Arsenal, 2782
Wharf, 2616

Lindsay, General
Oil lands, 1342
Tar sand rights, 671

Linen Yarn, Bounty on, 1389. See also Flax

Liquor. See also Alcohol; Canada Temperance Act; Customs and Excise Dept. Act; Inland Revenue; Prohibition; Special War Revenue
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2258-9
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, cargoes, 1713, 1715
Export licenses in Saskatchewan, qu. 833
Illicit traffic, 4388
Seizure of at Baie St. Paul, qu. 696
Tax on, 3705, 3708
Theft of at Baie St. Paul, qu. 1132

Lira, exchange value of. See Italy

Live Stock, 344, 846, 923, 1116. See also Agriculture; Health of Animals
Abattoirs and cold storage, 1125
Accredited Herd, 4506-13
Breeding, aids to, 1117, 1245
Cattle embargo. See that title
Corning—cattle purchases, 1624
County fairs and exhibitions, 1123
Dairy herds and cow testing, 1118
Distribution of pure-bred animals, 923, 948
Eggs and poultry, 1122. See also Eggs
Farmers' Clubs, 1117
Feed. See that title
Guernsey cattle at Nappan, qu. 2686
Health of Animals, 4506-12. See also that title
Marketing, 1039, 1119
Molasses wash for hogs, 3787-3820
Saskatchewan, distribution, qu. 1236
Transportation charges on feed, qu. 2686
Wool grading, 1121

Living Conditions. See Housing

Loan Companies. See also Housing

Loans. See also Address; Budget; Credits; Finance; Housing
Belgium to, qu. 577, qu. 1001, 3379. See also that title
Canadian National Railways, 4131-68, 4288, 4313, 4334
Canadian Northern Railway, 3037
Domestic, qu. 566
European credits, qu. 2622
Foreign, 3286, 3347, 3611
Grand Trunk Railway, 4131-68, 4288, 4313, 4334
Grecian, 2812
Roumanian, and, qu. 564. See also under this head Roumanian

Loans—Con.
Maturing, 3478
Repayment in New York, $25,000,000 loan, qu. 2622
Roumanian, 478, 564, qu. 566, 1072, 1441, qu. 2030, qu. 2344, 3811, 4430
Tax exempt, qu. 575

Lobsters. See Fish

Lockeport-Froude Point
Steamship service, 1496
Railway extension, 3054, 4323

Locomotives. See Railways

Long, Mr. C. E. (North Battleford)
Hudson Bay Railway, 996
Live stock commission men, 1123

Longueuil Bridge, 300

Loretteville, post office, 4523

Lowther, Right Hon. J. W.
Speaker's Chair, presentation, 3689
Expression of thanks, 3697

Lumber
Pacific coast trade, 1725
Piling of near stations, 1177
Profits on, Grain Growers' Grain Company, 3180, 3633
Sales tax on, 3449, 3736, 3742-3, 3751-7
Ties, railway, for Egypt, 1725
Tobique reserve, cutting on, 4503

Lunenburg County
Fishery overseers, 2179
Fruit inspectors, 1041, 1047

Luxury Taxes. See Taxation

Lynch, Mr. Frank, 4541

Macallum, Professor, 1328, 1432, 2144, 2688, See also Research

Dacdonald, Mr. E. M., 3529

MacDonald, Hon. Senator, appointment of, qu. 577

MacKelvie, Mr. John A. (Yale)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 7; (seconder) retirement of Hon. Mr. Burrell; acceptance by Hon. Mr. Tolmie portfolio of Agriculture; new Prime Minister; unrest; agitation and unemployment; re-establishment of returned men; old age pensions and unemployment insurance; the tariff; fruit-growing industry; amicable relations between two great races forming bulk of population, 10

Mackenzie and Mann, 1960, 3206, 3288. See also Canadian National Railways

Mackenzie District
Oil Development, 2162. See also Oil, Petroleum

Mackie, Mr. H. A. (East Edmonton)
Cattle embargo, qu. 714
Civil Service—(res. Sir Sam Hughes)—Political Patronage in; abuses of system; promotions; deputy postmaster at Edmonton; census commissioners, 827; transfer of patronage to officials; political partisanship, 828
Debates, official, distribution of, 2224
Natural resources, 878
Oil and Gas
Expenditure for discovery, qu. 695
Permits and leases, res. 894
Leases, issue of, 598
Rights, 2555
Point of order—member reading speech, 544
Tar Sand rights, qu. 671
General Lindsay, qu. 671

Mackie, Mr. H. J. (North Renfrew)
Pembroke wharf, 4539

Maclean, Hon. A. K. (Halifax)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 318; Prime Minister, congratulations to; tenure of Parliament; early dissolution desirable; life of Government measured by war, 319; attitude of members towards dissolution; Military Service Act and coalition, 320; understanding of electorate in 1917; War Times Election Act; redistribution, 322
Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill (Public harbours) 1174, 2228-30, 2556
Canada Temperance Act
Pending litigation not to be affected (Amdt.) 4384
Rights of litigants, 4377
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2255-61
Canadian National Railways
Management, Information—M. (Mr. King) 1204
Proposed reference to Special Committee, M., 1573
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2823-75
Amdt. to M. for 2r., 2835, 4464-93
Commission—exclusion of certain positions, 4477
"In the public interest," 4477
Naval Service—preference, 4484

Maclean, Hon. A. K.—Con.
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Returned Soldiers—preference, 4492
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2490-2502
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Consular agents, United States, 3792
Consular certificates, 4390
Invoice certificate, 3792, 4389
Fee—who pays? 4390
Proclamation of Act, 4391
Trade agents, 3792
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods—marking, 3954
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 307
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4240-5
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4240
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4067
Fuel supply problem, 1264
Grain inquiry—remuneration of Commissioners, 3972
League of Nations—Canada's contribution, 2362
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1154-9
National Research Council, 2896
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3895
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2264-5, 2898-2908
Parliament buildings, 3995-7
Public harbours, 1174, 2228-30, 2556
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2482-6
Unanimous consent, 1173
War Times Election Act, 322, 4240

Maclean, Mr. W. F. (South York)
Canadian Nationals Definition Bill, 769
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 3113
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 747
Hudson Bay Railway, 985, 996
National railways and telegraphs—Government business, 4130
Railways and immigration, 4129
Returned soldiers in Civil Service, qu. 963
Toronto post office, appointments, qu. 734

MacLeod Judicial District, qu. 2344

MacLeod's Breakwater, 4087

MacNab's Island. See Halifax Quarantine station

MacNutt, Mr. Thomas (Saltcoats)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 527; congratulations to Prime Minister; tariff; new Prime Minister but same old policy; position of parties uncertain; fusion; "moderate protection," 528; settlement of soldiers on the land, 529; high prices for seed and stock—low prices for products; suggestions for relief of returned men; housing; exchange, 530; amendments; no confidence in Government, 531
Budget, 3685. Budget a protectionist one; eminent men changing political opinions; Canadian navy, status of officers and men, 3686
Canadian navy, status of officers and men, qu. 3422, 3686
Census appointments, qu. 3260
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4234-5
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4234
Hudson Bay Railway—expenditure, qu. 2623
Immigration, 2584
Pre-emptions and purchases of homesteads, qu. 2506
Soldiers' Land Settlement Board, dismissal of Mr. Graham, 2618

MacPhail, Mr. E. S., 1232

McAdoo Award, 1588, 4325

McCallum, Miss Mary P., 3108

McCoig, Mr. A. B. (Kent, Ont.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 88; reply to Mr. Gauthier—almost identical argument by Mr. his attack on Hon. Mr. Lemieux; anxious to be taken into the Government; almost identical argument by Mr. Gauthier and Prime Minister; election, census, and redistribution, 89; Canadian National Railways; Mr. De Witt Foster, 90; Board of Commerce; profiteering; combines; Tobacco Buyers' Association; agricultural machinery, 91
Agricultural machinery, standardization of parts, 584, Res. 666
Apple exports to Great Britain, qu. 1501
Budget, 3506. Taxation of necessaries of life, 3506; rural mail contractors' remuneration, 3507; agricultural implements, 2508; military expenditure, 3508; Government war scandals, 3508; tractors, 3509
Civil Service, bonus, 2029, 2109, 2115
Experimental farms, 943
Flax industry, 1397
Highway construction in Ontario, 4293-5
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 622
Interior Department—salaries, 1333

McCoig, Mr. A. B.—Con.
Militia
Annual drill, M. to reduce, 2296
Pensions, 2278

McCrea, Mr. F. N. (Sherbrooke)
Amherst drill hall, 2752
Grand Trunk loan, 4166
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4348
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4221
Military preparations, 2298
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4013
Shipbuilding, 1944

McCurdy, Hon. F. B. (Minister of Public Works)
Bryson-Calumet Island bridge, 3986
Clark's Harbour, public building, 2817
Commons Chamber, temperature of, 1071
Courtenay Bay improvements, 4097
Dredging, 3982
Drydocks, 3987
Fort Cumberland and Fort Moncton, care of, 4540
Halifax quarantine station, 2754
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3973-82
Montreal-South shore traffic bridge, 2217
Parliament Buildings, 3992-4001
Partridge Island Quarantine station, 2808-15
Pembroke wharf, 4536-8
Port Hood, wharf, 4104
Public Works
Amherst drill hall, 2739
Annapolis public building, 2741
Demobilization, 3989
Engineering Branch, 4080-90
Estimates, 2737-73, 3973
Expenditures, 4102
Nova Scotia, 4086
Return, inquiry for, 3008
St. John harbour, 4078
Telegraphs and Telephones
Isle aux Coudres, 4540
Loretteville-St. Gerard, 4540

McDermand, Mr. S. S. (East Elgin)
Apples, profit on, 1470
Encouragement of fruit-growing, 1469
European corn-borer, 1031
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 613

McDonald, Mr. Angus (Timiskaming)
Civil Service
Board of Hearing, qu. 2820
Bonus, qu. 3089
Meetings in Government buildings, qu. 3421
Prevailing rates, qu. 3089
Reorganization—Griffenhagen and Associates, qu. 2623

McDonald, Mr. Angus—Con.
Civil Service—Con.
Superannuation, qu. 2820
Whitley Councils, qu. 2820
Judge Snider's report, 3209
Returned Soldiers—civil servants, qu. 3531
Shipbuilding, 1884
Unemployment and immigration, 1377

McGibbon, Mr. Peter (Muskoka)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 154; the amendment; Opposition has no policy and no case against Government; taxation, debt, railways, repatriation, pensions; unemployment insurance; old age pensions; the tariff; vacillation of Opposition on question of the tariff, 155; the Government's record; war taxation, repatriation, pensions, expenditure, production—election; mistakes—who has not made them? 156; Government justified by its record—redistribution and representation—congratulations to Prime Minister, 157
Agricultural shows, 1242
Automobile theft, 3914
Budget, 3510. Business conditions of country; revenue by taxation; direct and land taxation, 3511; protection and industries, 3512; iron and steel industry; plate glass; pineapples; wire nails and sugar industry, 3513; prosperity and wages, 3514; exemption of farmers, 3516
"Canadian Inventor," 1891
Cattle embargo, 727
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2829-67, 4478
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill—firearms, 3907-14
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Home brewing, 3788
Restrictive legislation, 3790
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 308
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4239-41
Revising officers, 3102
Farmers, protection for, 3748
Health Department
Report, 1852
Scientific branch, 3134
Highways, construction in Ontario, 4293
Hog cholera, compensation, 1060
Illustration stations and farms in Northern Ontario, 955
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 618
Military preparation, 2304
National Research Institute, 2895
Ontario timber limits, 3391

McGibbon, Mr. Peter—Con.
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2264-7, 2901
Convictions under, 3134
Pensions Act Amdt. Bill, 4373
Pensions
Widowed mothers, 634
Record of member for Lunenburg, 1903
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4356
Shipbuilding, 1903, 1904
Trent canal, 2955-65

McGibbon, Mr. Peter R. (Argenteuil)
Questions, inquiry as to, 2943
Railway bridges, 1664

McGill University. See Research

McGilvray, Dr. C. D., 1055

McIntosh, Mr. J. C. (Nanaimo)
Fisheries—Mr. Justice Ebert's report, qu. 4254

McIsaac, Mr. James (King's, P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, moved, 5; congratulations to Prime Minister; tribute to Sir Robert Borden; after-war problems and conditions; Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 6; Customs Tariff, 7
Budget, 3397; congratulations to Minister of Finance; Canada's trade; financial position of country, 3398; revenue, raising of, 3399; sales tax; tariff revision, attitude of Opposition on tariff, 3400; Fielding, Mr., former speech on tariff, 3401; Amdt. of Mr. Fielding, 3403
Georgetown wharf, 4564
Harbours and rivers, 3990
Highways, expenditure, 4306
Prince Edward Island Railway, 4564

McKean, Mr. Melville, 4083

McKenzie, Mr. D. D. (Cape Breton North and Victoria)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 40; mover and seconder; congratulations to Prime Minister; tribute to leader of Opposition, 40; disappointed in speech of Prime Minister; should place himself in the "hands of the country"; election before redistribution; position of West, 41; quotations from Calgary Albertan and Montreal Gazette; newspaper comment on by-election results, 43; amendment necessary to expression of views; the tariff; wait until report of Tariff Committee of Cabinet produced,

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Address—Con.
44; a government of the "big interests"; restoration of confidence in parliamentary institutions impossible while Government remains in power, 45; position and policy of Liberal party, 46
Agricultural publications, 1075
Alcohol, tax on, 3957
Alderson, Mr. George B., claim for compensation, 2273
Amherst drill shed, 2739
Australia-New Zealand service, 1494
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2925-9
Budget, 3280. Minister of Militia and military expenditure, revenues and expenditures, 3283; speeches on Government side of House, 3284; luxury taxes, 3285; unfairness of taxation, 3286; foreign loans; Canadian Northern system borrowings, 3287, 3288; Grand Trunk borrowings, 3291; trade outlets; railway business, handling of; shipbuilding, 3292; combines, Nova Scotia coal, 3295; lack of railway facilities in Cape Breton
Burnham, Dr., treatment of by Serbian Government, 1526
Canada Temperance Act, costs, 4381-88
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, shipbuilding, 1280
Canadian Nationals Definition Bill, 778
Ruling of Chairman, 779
Canadian National Railways
Management — Information M. (Mr. King) 1210
Operating expenses and receipts, 4316
Special Committee
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1600
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2416
Cattle embargo, 763
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2781, 2844, 4287
Civil Service bonus, 4120, 2236
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage; election officers in North Cape Breton and Victoria; census officials, 832; service overmanned and underpaid, 11,000 dismissed, 25,000 appointed; classification and reorganization, 833; Printing Bureau; Civil Service Commission, 834; patronage and the party system; appointments, 835
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4274
Coal supply in Maritime Provinces, 1281

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Comparative return on Dominion guaranteed and Nova Scotia bonds, 4165
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3912-38
Currency Act Amdt. Bill, 2269
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Invoice certificate, 3806
Fee—who pays? 3807
Preventive service in Victoria county, 4388
Customs and Inland Revenue—payments for overtime, 4123
Customs officers, 3086
Customs Tariff, 1907, Amdt. Bill—imported goods, marking, 3947-55
Dairy products grading, 3760
Delinquent children, 3012
De Martigny divorce, 3766
Destructive insects, 1027, 1032, 1075
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 311
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill 3091, 4243-6
Election officers, disqualification, 4246
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4243
Nomination day, 3096
Recount, 3097
Revising officers, 3102
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4066
Flax industry, 1402
Flour, high price of, 1448
Fruit inspectors, location in one county, 1046
Fuel supply problem, 1260
Gas and Gas Meters, Inspection of, Bill, 609, 2944
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2458-80, 2446
Position, 3321, 4436
Grand Trunk Railway
Coal mines in the United States, 4316
Default of interest, 1498
Loan, 3291, 4152-69, 4315
Portland terminus, 4316
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 695, 738
Immigration, 2584-96
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 4343-55
Ingonish-Macleod's breakwater, 4087
Insect pests, 1027, 1032, 1075
Judges Exchequer Court, 1083
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2350-5
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4224-6
Lignite, 4500
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill, 2891

McKenzie, Mr. D. D.—Con.
Military Service Act, claim for services, 2807
Montreal Harbour Commission, 2269
National Research Institute, 2703
Naval policy, 4034
Newfoundland railways, 1485
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4032-6
North Sydney, removal of Public Works officials, 2817
Nova Scotia judges, 1572
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2264-5, 2908
Partridge Island Quarantine Station, 2813-15
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4372
Pensions, widowed mothers, 639, 4372
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2720-33, 3014
Prisons and reformatories, 3011
Proclamation—enforcement of Acts of Parliament by, 3758
Public buildings—Nova Scotia, 2736-71
Public harbours, 2229-31
Public Works—Engineering branch, 4083
Purchasing Commission, 1102
Quebec riots, 1511
Reid Newfoundland Company, 1486
Relief of distressed seamen, 4039
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4262
Ross Rifle, 2783-7
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2484
Russian currency, 1072
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 659
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 4503-4
Shipbuilding, 1280
Statistics Act Amdt. Bill, 3758
Steamship routes, new, 1494
Welland canal, construction, 2994
West Indies steamship service, 1490
Wharves and breakwaters, Cape Breton, 4103
Wheat Board, loss under, 1461
Witness fees, 3937

McLean, Mr. H. H. (Royal)
Chief Justice, salary of, 1562
Income tax, Chief Justice, 1561

McLennan, Professor, 1428. See also Research

McLeod, Late Col Harry, tribute to, 3-4, 153

McMaster, Mr. A. R. (Brome)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 65; congratulations to mover

McMaster, Mr. A. R.—Con.
Address—Con.
and seconder; criticism of speech of Mr. Nesbitt; unemployment insurance; the tariff, 65; Minister of Trade and Commerce and League of Nations; speech of the Prime Minister, 66; right of the Government to carry on—pledged to hold office only during war and demobilization; evidence of the agreement, 67; no difference between parties in desire to win war—conditions in 1904 and 1917 not comparable; Brown-Macdonald coalition; National Liberal and Conservative party, 70; Ministry not united on tariff question; position of the Minister without portfolio (Mr. Spinney) 71; election of Minister of Customs; a portfolio for Quebec; tariff attitude of Liberal party, 72; platform adopted at Liberal Convention of 1919, 73; parliamentary institutions on trial—the Prime Minister a usurper; Liberal Unionists elected for war only, 73; fate of Government in their hands, 74
Air Board, 3779-83
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 1301
Automobile theft, 3913
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2934-9
Bounties on oil, 1387
Budget, 3164. Income tax; League of Nations, 3165; war expenditure; protection of industries, 3166; debt and revenue; exports and imports, 3167; exchange rate; tariff schedule, raising of, 3168; short-sighted uneconomic policy, 3169; sales tax; cocoa, duties on, 3170; public men and private interests; St. John city, representation of, 3172; foreign governments; Ministers soliciting business, 3173; Imaginary letters
Business of the House
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays—Rule 17C, 960
Progress of, 1230
Canada Temperance Act Amdt. Bill
Costs, 4377
Pending litigation, 4377-86
Rights of litigants, 4377
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2251-9
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 649, 767
Canadian National Railways
Board of Directors, 1667
Questions on order paper, 1763
Special Com., M., (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1608

McMaster, Mr. A. R.—Con.
Canadian Northern Railway
Certificates, issue and sale of, qu. 605
Guaranteed bonds, sale of, qu. 604
Canadian representation in the United States, 2395
Cattle embargo, 765
Compensation for slaughtered animals, 1062
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3900, 3913-17
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Purchasing power of European countries, 4430
Valuation of currency, 4430
Valuation for duty, 4412
Customs brokers, payment, 1090
Customs—foreign monetary standards, qu. 1133
Customs Tariff, 1907, Act Amdt. Bill—imported goods, marking of, 3944-54
Delinquent children, 3012
Documents placed on Hansard without being read, 1539
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4247-8
Election papers, 3098
New forms, 3101
Expenditures, curtailment of, 2978
Flax bounty, 1393
Fox breeding, 1428
French Trade Agreement, 2130-39
Fruit growing in Eastern Townships, 1043
Grand Trunk
Equipment trust certificates, qu. 604
Guaranteed bonds, qu. 604
Halifax Shipyards, Limited, 1698
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3973-8
Health of Animals, diseased herds, 1048
Highway construction in Ontario, 4290-4302
Imaginary letters, 3173
Good taste, 3174
Immigration, 2572-82
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 4499
Income tax, qu. 3260
Interim supply, 2012
Interior Department, reduction of estimates, 1334
Justice Department, purchasing agent, 1079
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2355
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4204-24
League of Nations, contribution, 2359-70
Lignite, 4499
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2328
Maple Products Act, 1920, Amdt. Bill, 2559
Military preparation, 2295, 2303

McMaster, Mr. A. R.—Con.
Ministers of the Crown and directorships, 2228
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1169
Naval Service, 4022
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4013-29
Parliament buildings, 3998
Penitentiaries
Saskatchewan, increase in, 1091
Point of order—irrelevancy, 1066
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2120-22
Prisons and reformatories, 3012
Privy Council, limitation of appeals, 1089
Proportional representation, 1548
Purchasing Commission, 2016
Railway Board and Intercolonial, 1655
Reciprocity agreement with the United States, 2054
Research, 1427
Return, inquiry for, 3008
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4360
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 258, 585, 662
Statutory expenditures, 1423
Trent canal, 2953
University professors and scientific research, 1436

McNeil, Archbishop, and Housing, 1137

McPhail, Sir Andrew, 1353-55-60

McQuarrie, Mr. W. G. (New Westminster)
Farmers, protection for, 3748
Fisheries of British Columbia, 861
Housing, 1144
Natural resources, 861
Poultry industry in British Columbia, 3750
Unemployment and immigration, 1364

Machinery. See Agricultural machinery; implements

Madrid Postal Conference, 3001

Magdalen Islands
Steamship service, 557, 767

Magill, Dr., 1451, qu. 1624

Magrath, Mr. C. A., and Fuel Supply, 1256

Maharg, Mr. John A. (Maple Creek)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 485; congratulations to Prime Minister—statement attributed to Prime Minister; allegation that farmers in alliance with Bolshevists; what farmers did in the national crisis, Wheat Board, 487—results of discontinuance, 488; platform of Canadian Maharg, Mr. John A.—Con.

Address—Con.
Council of Agriculture, 489; fiscal policy of Great Britain—Government's record—elections; United Grain Growers, sale of agricultural implements; pamphlet attributed to Mr. Cowan, 491; Government supplies purchased in the United States, 492; Canadian manufacturers refuse to sell to farmers' co-operative organizations; Commission to inquire into grain trade, 493; British Columbia apples, 494; the amendment, 495
Agriculture Dept., salaries of officials, 1036
Budget, 3362. Reference to Prime Minister's speech; Mr. Norman P. Lambert and his article, 3363; cream separators and the free list, 3364; protection and Great Britain, binder twine industry, 3365; imports and revenue, adverse balance of trade, 3366; tariff reduction, 3368; home market, 3369; western grain shipments, 3370; freight rates, 3371; implement manufacturing, 3372; sales tax, 3373; railway situation; canal expenditure, 3374
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, West Indies trade, 1913
Canadian Wheat Board, 1449
Flour, cost of, 1450
Fruit inspection in the West, 1043
Government marketing of wheat, 1460
Grain
Chemistry expert, 1228
Commission, 1447, 1462
Overages, 1463
Transportation rates, 999
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 749
Great Lakes, ships on, 1913
Ocean freights, 1936
Magill, Dr., and Agrarian group, 1451
Point of Order—political sagacity, 1066
Resignation of, 4340
Returned soldiers, employment on Welland canal, 3001
Saskatchewan
Co-operative Elevator Company, qu. 391
Militia organizations, 2794-6
Searls, Mr. George, grain inspection, 1445
Shipbuilding, 1920
Steamship subsidies, 1492
Terminal elevators, 1463
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1842
Welland canal, construction, 2999-3003

Mail Bags, repairing of. See Penitentiaries

Mail Contracts, 1823. See also Post Office; Rural Mail

Mail Contracts—Con.
Ste. Rose de Watford, qu. 3209
White Horse-Dawson contract, qu. 2686

Mail Subsidies, 1485. See also Steamship subsidies

Main Ducks, life-saving station, 1991

Maisonneuve and Gaspé, Representation of, 2247, 2310, 4437
M. (Mr. Edwards) 2314; agreed to, 2343
See also Privileges and Elections

Majority of Votes. See Proportional Representation

Management. See Canadian National Railways

Mange. See Health of Animals

Manion, Mr. R. J. (Fort William and Rainy River)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 351; congratulations to Prime Minister; Liberal-Unionists not weak-kneed, servile or subservient, "Liberals" and "Conservatives", 352; the tariff, historical alignment of parties on, 353; the Farmers' party and free trade; position of Mr. McMaster; agricultural and industrial interests; the Government's mandate, 354; demand for election; no criticism of policies, principles or legislation; personal criticisms of Prime Minister and Quebec, 355; representation of French Canadians on Boards and Commissions, Supreme Court; friendship between Quebec and rest of Canada; Military Service Act; sane elements do not want election; the Government's record, 356; Canada's status, League of Nations; no charges against Government; the country prosperous, 357; social conditions; Canada's problems, 358
Alcohol and medicinal preparations, 3731
Budget, 3231. Speech of Mr. Clark (Red Deer) 3231; taxing of necessaries of life, 3232; attitude of Mr. Fielding on tariff; free trade policy in the United Kingdom, 3233; tariff policy for Canada a vital one, 3234; tariff and revenue, 3235; cheap countries; moderate tariff, 3236; carrying trade of Great Britain; adverse balance of trade; Great Britain's exports and imports, 3237; agriculture declining in the United Kingdom; United States manufactures and shipping, 3238; Great Britain suffering under free trade policy, reciprocity and the Fordney Bill, 3239
Canadian National Railways
Lake Superior Branch and Fort William, 3050
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2414-32
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill
Religious holidays, 4491
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2474
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 682
Macallum, Professor, 1435
Natural resources, Res, 841
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3879; Amdt. 3886
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 7, 2903

Manitoba
Grasshopper plague, 1027
Harbours and rivers, 3975
Highways, 4308
List of candidates and votes polled, 1539
Transfer of Natural Resources to. See Natural Resources

Manson's Landing, wharf, 3980

Manufacturers. See Address, Budget, Canadian Manufacturers Association, Customs and Excise, Labour, Trade Commissioners, Unemployment Agricultural implements and United Grain Growers, 418, 491, 3372. See also that title

Maple Products Act Amdt. Bill
M. for leave to introduce: Speaker's ruling, 2150
Res. 2193, 2557; 1r., 2618; 2r., 2890, 3141, 3720

Maple Sugar, 887, 1047, 1474

Marcil, Hon. Charles (Bonaventure)
Baie des Chaleurs, steamship service, qu. 2506
Bonaventure-Gaspé mail service, qu. 577
Bonaventure wharves, 3992
Campbellton-Cross Point
Bridge, qu. 573, 3987
Ferry, qu. 573
Canadian Nationals, 777
Canadian National Railways
Gaspesian peninsula, train services, qu. 2623
Tourist traffic in Gaspesian peninsula, qu. 2622
Intercolonial—Campbellford train service, qu. 3903
St. Alexis, qu. 2375, qu. 3582

Marcil, Hon. Charles—Con.
Census commissioners and enumerators, qu. 696
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4284
Dredging, 3985
Gaspé Railway, qu. 962, qu. 2623
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 608
Marcil, Mr. Joseph, pension, 3903
Marcil, Mr. Louis T., compensation for injuries, qu. 2942, qu. 3531
Metapedia valley highways, qu. 2505
Parliament buildings, 3993-8
Pensions, payment to Messrs. Louis T. and Joseph Marcil, qu. 2942
Quebec, Oriental and Atlantic and Quebec and Western Railways, qu. 573
Quebec salmon net licenses, qu. 1381, 2506

Marcil, Mr. Joseph, qu. 2942, 3903

Marcil, Mr. Louis T., qu. 2942, qu. 3531

Marcile, Mr. J. E. (Bagot)
Canadian National Railways
Ste. Rosalie-Bagot
Claims between, qu. 571
Disposition of unoccupied land, qu. 572
League of Nations, Canadian representatives, qu. 602

"Marie Lydia," schooner, 1985

Marine. See also Canada Shipping Act; Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipping. For vessels, see that title
Department
Estimates, 2190
Johnston, Mr. Alex., reappointment, 644
Marine insurance, 1703
Salaries, 1617
Shipbuilding, 1683. See also that title
Dredging
St. Lawrence Channel, 1991. See also that title
Hospitals, 3135. See also Health
Life-saving service, 1990
Lighthouses. See that title
Montreal Dry Docks and Ship Repairing, Limited, qu. 2191
Navigation
Aids to, 1996
Schools of, 1989
Ocean and river service, 1736, 1979
Pilotage, 1999
Shipbuilding. See that title
Signal service, 1997
Wrecking plants, 1990
Wrecks, investigation, 1988

Mariners, Sick, care of, 3129. See also Health

Maritime Provinces
Railway facilities, improvement of, 4516, 4561
Wooden ships, 1711

Marking of Goods. See Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill

Marquis Wheat, 1033

Martin, Mr. Peter F. (Halifax)
Highways—Nova Scotia, 4304-7
Parliament buildings, 3993
Public Works—Engineers' Branch, 4090

Marwick, Mitchell and Company, Auditors, 1278, 1694, 1704, 1724, 1866, 1933. See also Canadian National Railways

Massey-Harris Company, 3393, 3496. See also Agricultural Implements

Massey, Hon. Mr., Prime Minister of New Zealand, interview with, 3008

Masters and Mates, Examination, 1736

Matane
Illustration station, 947
Wharves, 3992

Meat and Canned Foods Act
Administration of, 1048

Medicated Wines, 3709

Medicinal Preparations, 3709

Medicine Hat. See also House of Commons
By-election, 2151
Vacancy, 1174, 1293

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur (Prime Minister)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 28; mover and seconder of Address; personal and public relations with leader of Opposition; position of the Government; proposed amendment to the Address; right of the Government to retain office, 30; successor to and continuation of preceding government; issue in 1917; Government's duty in regard to war problems not yet done; the Government's right to retain office after principle upon which it was elected has been decided; appeal to people after Armistice, 32; no departure from policy justifying an appeal, 33; by-elections; reasons for the amdt., 35; leader of the Opposition seeking alliance with Farmers' party, 36; where Government stands on tariff; leader of Opposition evades issue, 37; no departure from historic policy proposed; challenge to dissolve Parliament; representation of the West, 38; duty of the Government to carry on; Opposition invited to make

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Address—Con.
clear and specific statement on issue to be decided, 39
Agricultural machinery, standardization of parts, 584
Alderson, Mr. George B., claim for compensation, 2274
Amalgamation of departments, 1331
Amendment to Address, 348
Amendments, want of confidence, 1199
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation of, 478, 1071, 1298, 1300, 1311
Archives, provision for, 2952
Arctic, expedition, 4106, 4113
Ascension Day adjournment, 2688, 2941
Audibility of debates, 1625
Auditor General's report, delay, 903
Bermuda, trade with, 1271
Board of Trade reports, forms in French, 2819, 3320, 3375
Bolsheviki and wreckers, 3451
Budget, 3322. Congratulations to Minister of Finance; revenue and expenditures; Mr. Fielding's amendment, 3323; Farmers' party servile tools and minions of Opposition, 3324; tinplate industry, 3325; Liberal party and free list, 3328; binder twine; Mr. Clark and free trade, 3330; Mr. Fielding's amendment and tariff reduction; protectionist speeches of Mr. Fielding, 3332; Liberal press and protection, 3336; Government's attitude on tariff matters, 3338; Prime Minister's speech at Sherbrooke, 3339; moderate protection the policy for Canada, 3341; United States tariff revision, 3342
Building Trades Conference, 1498, 1556
Burnham, Dr., treatment of by Serbian Government, 576, 1523
Business of the House, 1340. See also under this title, Estimates, Interim Supply
Adjournments, 1841
Ascension day, 2688, 2941
Eleven o'clock, 1841
Victoria Day, 3531, 3698, 3738
Agriculture and Justice estimates, procedure, 1074
Announcement, 1073
Closure, notice, of, 1979
Complaint of undue haste, 4450
Delay, 1618
Distinction between Ministerial statement and Amdt. in Supply, 1308
Estimates, lateness of hour, 1330
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays—Rule 17C, 1074, 1215, 1682, 2103-6, 2887, 4544

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Business of the House—Con.
Legislation pending, 2150, 2819, 3972
Monday—Government business, 2148
Non-debatable motions, 1320
Order of, 1618
Procedure, 1345
Prorogation, 4068, 4340, 4451
Public Bills and Orders, 2819
Second reading by consent, 2890
Questions
Inquiry as to, 2943
Subject matter of, 1071
Sittings
Long, 897
Morning, prorogation, 4340, 4451
Morning and Saturday, 4451
Saturday, 2818, 2777, 2941
Two o'clock, 3737
Wednesday, 1384
Evening, 1002, 1841
Supply, to-morrow, 1270
By-elections
Dates, 903
Medicine Hat, 2151
York-Sunbury, 2151. See also this title,
Canada Temperance Act Bill
Costs, 4386
Damages, 4387
Effect of proposed amendments on plebiscite, 4386
"Having in view the provisions of this Act", 4386
Pending litigation, 4386
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 563
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1290
Insurance of officers and seamen, 4359
Special Com. proposed, 1440
Statement referred to, 1708
Canadian National Railways
Amqui station, 1177, 1233
Correspondence
Directors, with, 1004
St. Foy round house, 1502
Lord Shaughnessy's letter, 2503, 2890
Management, Information, M. (Mr. King) 1180
Private ownership, and, 1498
St. Foy round house, 767, 1502
Special Committee, reference to
Amdt. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1589
Notice of, 1618
Reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1755, 1817, 1803
Amdt. (Mr. Crerar) 1812
Special Committee appointed, 1845
Sully, Que., 1134

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Transcontinental, Winnipeg-Quebec service, 2514
Canadian Representation in the United States, 2378-2431
Cattle embargo, 725, 730, 761, 4543
Commission, inquiry, 1072
Chicago Drainage Canal, diversion, 2226
Chief Justice, salary of, 1567
Chippewa Power Canal, 2444
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2776, 2778, 3901, 4485-7
Religious holidays, 4485-7
Returned Soldiers—preference—provisions recommended by Pensions Com., 4257, 4577
Civil Service
Bonus, 901, 1176; statement, 1233; 2029, 2113-15, 3531
Number of civil servants, names, classification, 4255
Religious holidays, 1384, 2776, 4485-7
Superannuation, 2820
Allowances, 2112
Churchill, Rt. Hon. Winston, reported statement, 2567
Conservation Act Repeal Bill, 3958-70
Cost of living, 4551
Crerar, Mr., and attitude on shipbuilding, 1978
Customs, Minister of, private business relations, 3081
Dairy Produce Grading Bill, 3760
Daylight saving in Ottawa, 2776, 2800
Debate
Motion to adjourn by member, closing discussion, 999
Debates, translation of French speeches, 701
Deceased members, tributes to, 3, 152
Destruction of documents, 1625, 2943, 2953, 4558. See also under this head Judge Snider's report
District Engineer's office at Edmonton, 4543
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 150, 152
Motion to vary order of House, 152, 242
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 2944
Dominion Parks, 1343
Editorial Committee, 4558
Empire Cabinet, proposed, 1385
Estimates. See also under this title Business of the House
Opportunity for studying, 1290
Scrutiny of by Special Com., 1503
Supplementary, inquiry, 4070
Extradition Treaty with United States, 2687

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Fertilizer Act Amdt. Bill, 2231-4
Foreign trade, 3224
French Trade agreement, 767, 1271, 1351, 1559
Fuel Supply problem, 1268
Special Com. appointed, 1439
Evidence in French, 4251
Gaspé peninsula railway facilities, 2509
German reparation—Canada's claim, 643
Governor General
Address to on retirement, 4433-5
Lord Byng, reported appointment, 4436
Appointment, 4541
Grain inquiry, 1674
Grand Trunk Arbitration, 1498
Correspondence, 1619
Further, tabled, 3738
Progress of, 3321
Revival of, 4436
Grank Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2247, 2346, 2397, 2447-80, 2560-4; Senate amdts. 2777, 2822
Grand Trunk Railway
Assistance, 1498
Default of interest, 1498
Directors, 3741
Interest, alleged default of, 1556
Shareholders—return, 3697, 3740
Highway construction in Ontario, 4300
Homesteads, 1347
Housing, expenditure
Loan, 4552
Point of order, 1135
Hudson Bay Railway, M. involving expenditure, 982
Immigration, Restriction of, 1127
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill, 2819, 4352
Regulations, 1272
Returns, 2568
Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, withdrawn, 4453
Interim supply, 1682. See also under this title Estimates; Supply
Necessity for, 2004
Point of order, 2009, 2010
Procedure under, 1676
Interim Supply Bill, 2101-2116
Interior Department
Editors, 1331
Employees, dismissals, 1345
Surveyor General and International Boundary Commissioners, 1343
International Joint Commission. See also under this title, Lake of the Woods
Lake of the Woods Control, and, 1072, 1176, 1233, 4172
Judge Snider's report, 1625, 2943, 2951, 2445, 3209, 3697, 3905, 4436-53. See also under this head Destruction of documents

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 2117
Labour Department
Alleged combines, 4551
Bolshevism, pamphlet, 4548
Fair wages, 4545
Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 4549-52
Minister, 4545
Letter of in Gazette, 1642
Lake of the Woods Control, 1233. See also under this title International Joint Commission
Board, 789
Inquiry, 1176
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2033-36, 2348-55
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 3903, 4171-4226
Correspondence, 4170
League of Nations
Canada's contribution, 2356
Labour, 4547
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2321-9, 4437
Massey, Hon. Mr., 3008
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1157
Ministers of the Crown and directorships, 2228
Musk-ox and reindeer, 4543
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1638
National Industrial Conference, 4549
National Research Institute, 4555.
Natural resources, adjournment of debate, 894
Transfer to western provinces, 1337, 2541-50
Natural Resources Branch, 1343
Naval Service, Capt. Adams' alleged statement, 901
Newsprint, alleged combine, 2099
Northwest Territories Act Amdt. Bill, 3903, 4113
Oil
Leases, 1340, 2377
Surface rights, 583, 666
Oil and Gas permits and leases, 898
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3759, 3889
Ottawa Improvement Commission Act Amdt., 2941
Owens, late Thomas P., Editor of Debates, 258
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payment to, 4574
Parliament buildings
Book on, inquiry, 1175
Inscription on tower, 4543
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4262, 4361-5

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Pensions. See also under this title Soldiers; Returned Soldiers
Deductions for insurance, 629
Widowed mothers, 632
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4054
Prime Ministers' Conference, 564, 1073, 2504, 2634-42, 3320
Naval defence—contribution of dominions to, 4256
Reported statement of Mr. Churchill, 2567
Printing Bureau. See under this title, Destruction of Documents
Privilege
Veniot, Hon. Mr., alleged offer to, 3688. See also under this head York-Sunbury
Privileges and Elections Committee, 2373
Proportional Representation, Special Com. appointed, 1554-5
Quarantine, typhus, 4170
Quebec Steamship Company, 2941
Railway Commission, alleged statements of Chief Commissioner, 2030
Reparations—difficulties between Allied Powers and Germany, 599
Representation in Parliament, vacancies, 1300
Research. See under this title, National Research Institute
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4260, 4356-60
Returned Soldiers. See also under this title, Soldiers
Housing, 4362
Relief for, 2688
Review of question, 4361
Special Committee, 732
Unemployment, 4361-4
Returns, inquiries for, 3321
Loans to Greece and Roumania, 3009
Motions for in general terms, 1555
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 1499, 1555
Riding Mountain Park, 1343
Roumania, loan to, 1441
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 657, 2228
Senate representation in Saskatchewan, 2567
Shipbuilding, 1290, 1976
M. that further consideration be postponed, 1979
Soldiers' insurance, pensions and reestablishment, 4054
Speaker's Chair, 3692

Meighen, Right Hon. Arthur—Con.
Statistics Act Amdt. Bill, 3758
Supply. See under this head Business of the House; Estimates; Interim Supply
Tariff Commission report, inquiry, 1127
Tariff Revision, 2346. See also under this head Budget
Unemployment relief, 4549
Vacancies, 478, 1304. See also under this head By-elections
Victoria Day adjournment, 3531, 3698, 3738
Water powers, director of, 1345
West Indies Trade—Bermuda, 1271
Western provinces, natural resources, 1338-7
White, Sir Thomas, 477
York-Sunbury election, 2151
Government platform, 3481
Hon. Mr. Veniot, alleged offer to, 3638, 3716, 3688
Correspondence, 3716
Reference to by Mr. Stevens, 3627-8

Meighen, Mr. William, Warden of Dorchester penitentiary, 1092

Members. See House of Commons

Mencius, political economy of, 3228

Mental Defectives, Immigration of. See Immigration

Mental Hygiene, 3143

Merchandise, Branding of. See Customs

Merchant Marine. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Merchant Shipping. See Railway Act Amendment

Merchant Ships. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Meredith-Duff Commission, 1788

Metal Tokens. See Criminal Code Amdts.

Metropolitan. See North American

Mewburn, Hon. S. C. (East Hamilton)
Battlefields Memorials Commission, competitive designs, 2566
Canadian National Railways and Shipping, Special Com., first report, 2095
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill (Warrant of Commitment) 2686
Fortifications of Quebec, 969
Militia
Cadet services, 2297
Command pay, 2291
Record office, 2281
Patent Act Amdt. Bill, 4457
Pensions
Widowed mothers, 635
Withdrawal from Government, 451

Mexico, compensation, 1507

Michaud, Mr. Pius (Restigouche and Madawaska)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 436; Assembly of the League of Nations; Canada's war sacrifice; nations that profited should help the sufferers; immigration and repatriation; the tariff; early appeal to electors, 437
Canadian National Railways—cedar posts, qu. 1130
Cattle embargo, 566, 4543
Crosspoint-Campbellton bridge, 3987
De Martigny divorce, 3762
Dorchester penitentiary—farm, 1097
Dredging, Restigouche river, 3984
Edmundston post office, qu. 3422
Exchange, value of pound and dollar, qu. 3770
Fertilizer Act Amdt. Bill, 2233
Fisheries—Dominion and provincial jurisdiction, 2105
Grain elevators, 1443
Grand Trunk, Portland terminus, 1384
Madawaska, public building required, 2809
Parliament buildings, 3994
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4368
Potato seed inspectors, 1033
St. John and Quebec Railway, qu. 1501
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2031
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 4502
Shipbuilding, 1944
Tariff Commission, report, 1127
Transcontinental Railway
Claims against, 1656
Wilson, Judge, qu. 1622

Middlebro, Mr. W. S. (North Grey)
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 1296
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2934
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage, 831
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2467-71
Pairs—Correction of list, 563
Privileges and Elections Committee, 2373

Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 2442; 2r., 2891; 3r., 2892
Enforcement, 4496

Militarism, 2294-2305, 2789-93. See also Military Expenditures

Military Authority. See Quebec riots

Military Districts, 2788-92
No. 12, 2279

Military Expenditures, 266, 509, 2294, 2305, 2792, 3269
Comparison by years and countries, 3270
Defence figures of various countries, 3275

Military Preparation, 2294, 2305

Military Service Act, 320, 356, 2807, 3200, 3678.
See also Quebec Riots
Employment of Mr. Stewart, qu. 2028
Exemption of farmers, 3516, 3592

Military Stores Shed, Cartier Square, qu. 3208

Militia and Defence
Annual drill, 2294, 3405
M. (Mr. McCoig) to reduce amount, 2296
Armouries for public meetings, 901
Associations, grants to, 2439
Cadet services, 2296
Command pay, 2290
M. (Mr. Power) to reduce amount, 2292
Department
Anderson, Mr. A. H., qu. 735
Ashley, Sergt. T., qu. 3090
Black, Mr. A. H., qu. 755
Brackenbury, Mr. G. B., qu. 735
Central registry, 2281
Chief Engineer and Controller of Military lands, 2241
Douglas, Mr. H. S., dismissal of, qu. 735, 2246, 2277
Employees
Female, 2286
Increase in number, 2014
Quebec, in, dismissal, 2237
Retirement of, 4267-70
Engineer services, 2439
Permanent force, strength, 2278, 2797, 2800
Photographers, 2245
Record office, 2241, 2278-80
Salaries, 2234, 2275
Separation Allowance and Assigned Pay Branch, 2281
Supplies, 2239, 3244-5
Sale of to Roumania and Greece, 2245, 3564
Transfer to other departments, 1098
Survey Division, 2243, 2284
Topographic Surveys, 2806
Estimates
M. (Mr. Pedlow) to reduce amount, 2287-8
Highland regiments, 2307
Lee-Enfield rifle, 2783
Military and civilian caretakers, qu. 4340
Military district No. 12, 2279, 2792-97
Ordnance Arms and Lands, 2441, 2781
Permanent Force, 2278, 2797, 3279, 3405
Pensions, 2278, 2236
Strength, 2235
Purchasing Commission and Supplies, 2239
Ross rifle, 2783

Militia and Defence—Con.
Royal Military College, 2802
Staff
Pay, 2787
Reduction, 2234-46, 2282
Warlike stores, 2807

Milk, Prices of, 3197

Milk River, water rights, qu. 2099

Milk-Testing, 1037

Mill Feed, 1126. See also Feeds, Live Stock

Milling Industry, 3543, 3544

Mines and Minerals, 2141, 2162, 3250. See also Coal; Geological Survey; Natural Resources; Lignite Research
Alberta penitentiary mining rights, 1092
Conservation Commission, 3965
Development of, 841
Federal mining legislation, 871
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 4498
Machinery, duties on, 373
Returned soldiers, prospecting, 871
Zinc deposits of Gaspé, 876

Minister of Customs and Excise, 3785

Ministers and Directorships, 258, 585, 650 2228. See also Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill

Ministers
Cabinet, and Post Office Department, qu. 1349. See also Blondin, Hon. P. E.; Minister of Labour; Postmaster General
Personal business, 3079, 3173-6, 3612
Proposed right to sit in either Chamber
M. (Mr. Lemieux) 1152; withdrawn, 1173
Upper Chamber in, 1154

Minority Representatives. See Proportional Representation

Missals. See Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill

Missisquoi Bay, net fishing, qu. 570

Missisquoi County
Census commissioners, qu. 1132. See also Census
Income tax forms in, 1176

Mitchell, Mr. A. J., 1609-10. See also Canadian National Railways
Business interests of, 3610

Model Villages. See Housing

Molloy, Mr. J. P. (Provencher)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 495; congratulations to Prime Minister; demand for an election; the sub-amendment; redistribution and representation, 496; the amendment; soldiers, farmers, and business men; women against the Government; changed conditions, 497; danger in Government delaying; the Minister of Militia; Liberal and Agrarian platforms; the recall, 498; the acid test; Government must satisfy the manufacturers; tyranny and terrorism in 1917; people calling for an election, 499
Blood Indian reserve, qu. 1817, 1818
Live stock and grazing leases, qu. 1819, 2098, 2374, 2618
Fort Garry hotel, Winnipeg, qu. 1348
Grain Inquiry, Counsel, Secretary, cost, qu. 2625
Health of Animals
Glandered horses, 1054
Hog cholera, 1053
Inspectors, 1054
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4199
Manitoba harbours and rivers, 3975
Western farmers, 1035

Molasses
For destructive insects, 1027
For hog feed, 3787

Monastery station, 4324

Moncton
Canadian National shops, 1851
Census enumerators, 3972
Engine terminal site, 1017
Examining warehouse, 2815

Mondou, Mr. A., and Yamaska by-election, 3251

Monetary Standards, qu. 1133. See also Finance

Monsarrat, Mr. C. N., and Quebec bridge, 1653, 1670-71

"Montcalm," icebreaker, 1985

Montenegro Hospital Mission. See Burnham, Dr.

Montizambert, Dr., 3133

Mont Joli, 1800

Montmorency County, Tourist traffic, 4332

Montreal
Bank of, and Government ownership, 1895
Customs revenue, 3086
Grain handling at, 3371. See also Grain and Grain Trade

Montreal—Con.
Inquiry into public services, qu. 604
Post Office, Mutual Benefit Society, qu. 567
Registration of Government ships at, 1720
Revenue offices, qu. 1820
Transcontinental railway, qu. 574. See also Canadian National Railways

Montreal and South Shore Bridge, M. (Mr. Archambault) 2211

Montreal Dry Docks and Ship Repairing, Limited, qu. 2191

Montreal Gazette
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, comment on, 1707
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1627. See also Labour
Shipbuilding, criticism, 1893, 1900, 1917

Montreal Harbour Commission
Cold storage plants, 1041

Montreal Harbour Commission Bill
Res. 2151; 1r., 2160; 2r., com., 2268; 3r., 2269

Montreal Locomotive Company, 1203

Montreal Progressive Club and Mr. L. J. Gauthier, M.P., qu. 1131

Montreal-Quebec Pilots, superannuation, qu. 1501. See also Pilotage

Moore, Mr. Tom, and Labour, 1627, 1632, 1636

Morley, Alberta, air station, 3780

Morphine Imports, 3130. See also Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act Amdt. Bill

Morphy, Mr. H. B. (North Perth)
Air Board, 3780
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2931-3
Budget, 3454. Congratulations to Minister; free trade and protection; United Kingdom and Customs duties, 3455; United States protective tariff; beet sugar industry, 3456; Great Britain and world trade, 3457; protection of industries, 3459; trade with the United States, 3460; trade agents; Canadian Merchant Marine, attack on, 3462
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2261-2
Canadian Nationals Definition Bill, 768
Canadian National Railways, Toronto train connections, 4569
Canadian representation in the United States, 2404-30
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2827-79

Morphy, Mr. H .B.—Con.
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4119
Copyright Amendment and Consolidation Bill, 3841
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3923-31
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Invoice certificate, fee, 4393
Molasses wash for hog feed, 3787
Trade agents, 3788-95
United States consular service, 3796
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods, marking of, 3952
Customs officer at Listowel, 3084
Debates, Official, distribution of, 2223
Entomology Bureau, 1025
Fuel Supply Problem, 1265
Geological survey, 2144-7
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2457
Great War Veterans, qu. 455
Highways
Construction in Ontario, 4304
London-Stratford-Sarnia, 4307
Hog cholera—Alderson claim, 1063
Illustration farms and stations in Ontario, 952
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 615
Linen yarn, bounty on, 1389
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2331
Militia—photographers, 2245
Military districts, 2788-9
Polish battalion for service in French Army, 4056
Rulings and statements as Chairman
Estimates, vote to be dealt with as a whole, 2750
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 654
Stratford customs office, 3085
Trade agents and commissioners, 1475-77, 3460, 3788-95
Tuberculosis and pleuro-pneumonia in cattle, 1051
Wednesday evening adjournment, 1835
Wheat market, 1452

Morrison, Mr. J. J., rural depopulation, 403

Mortgages. See Housing

Motor Cars, Theft of. See Criminal Code Amendment Bill

Mounted Police. See Royal Canadian Mounted Police

Moving Pictures. See Trade and Commerce

Mowat, Mr. H. M. (Parkdale)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 171; Liberal-Unionists; conditions of 1864 and 1917; George Brown; no difference in principle between parties, 172; municipal and common rights v. rights of corporations; temperance legislation; woman suffrage; Liberal measures sponsored by Government; nationalization of railways; the game of politics, 173; amendment; election; leader of the Opposition wants power; ambitions that came to naught, 174; no reason for want of confidence vote; the tariff; policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier; tariff resolution of Liberal Convention of 1919, 175; "substantial reductions", 176; National Liberal and Conservative party; Canada's status as a nation, 177
Armistice Day and Thanksgiving, 2555
Armistice Day Bill, 2618
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2926
Canada Temperance Act
Costs, 4378
Rights of litigants, 4378
Commercial agents in the United States, 1473
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3834-48
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3931-36
Probation of Offenders, 2097, 3931
Dogs, docking of, 3936
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. (Prohibition plebiscite) 311
Fortifications at Kingston, 969
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2465
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 687
Housing, 1148
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 3010
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2350-2
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4225
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1167
North American Trust Company, 1127-8, 1130
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3865
Parliament buildings, 4000
Private Bills, extension of time, 1625
Probation of offenders, 2097, 3931
Railway Commission—alleged statement of Chief Commissioner, 2029
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 595

Mulgrave
Ice tenders, qu. 963

Mulgrave-Canso Steamship services, 1496

Municipal Cold Storage Plants, 1040

Murdock, Mr. James, 3603-4. See also Board of Commerce

"Muriel W.", steamer, 1990

Murphy, Hon. Charles (Russell)
Ambassador at Washington, qu. 671
Budget, date of, qu. 903
Budget, 3635; comment on speech of Mr. Stevens, 3636; Liberal Convention and Liberal platform, 3637; Mr. Crerar and York-Sunbury election, 3637; Budget born of necessities of Government, 3639; burden of taxation, 3640; Tariff Commission, 3640; speeches of Hon. Mr. Guthrie and Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, 3641; Hon. Mr. Calder and the Tariff, 3644; Canadian Manufacturers Association—Mr. G. M. Murray, 3645; newspapers—manufacturers, editorial control of, 3646
Building Trades Conference, 1498
Business of the House
Saturday sittings, 2941
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 771, 2032
Canadian National Railways
Employees remuneration, qu. 1672, 1737
Lord Shaughnessy's letter, 2890
Management, Information — M. (Mr. King) 1198
Special Committee
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1573
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1806
Chief Electoral Officer's reports, qu. 577
Chippewa power canal, 2444
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2779, 2833-70, 2940
Returned soldiers, 4260
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill, foreign consular service, 3808-3995
Debates, translation of French speeches, 702
De Martigny divorce, 3765
Empire Cabinet proposed, 1385
Entomology—increase in item, 1024
Expeditionary force—Canteen funds, qu. 1133
Fox-breeding, 1430
French Trade Agreement, printing, 1380
Governor General, suggested appointment of Lord Burnham, qu. 599
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 1498, 2448-77
Grand Trunk loan, 4135-7
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 751
Griffenhagen and Associates, 1555. See also under this title, Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill

Murphy, Hon. Charles—Con.
Hickman, alleged deportation, qu. 574
Highways
Construction in Ontario, 4295
Hull-Wakefield, 3034
Imaginary letters, 3261
Immigration, 2570-5
Mental defectives, 3583
Officials, 3060
Woman supervisor, position, 3058, 3062
Imperial Conference, 1073
Income and Business Profits Taxes, qu 837
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 609
Interim Supply, granting of, 2007
Judge Snider's report, 4436
Lake of the Woods Control Board Bill, 2034-36
Lord Byng, appointment, 4541
Luxury tax, qu. 600
Macallum, Professor, 1431
Massey, Hon. Mr., 3008
National Gallery, 2684
National Research Institute, 2962-2708
Naval Service, Capt. Adams, alleged statement, 901
Parliament buildings, 4071-6
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4373
Prime Ministers' Conference, reported statement of Mr. Churchill, 2567
Printing Bureau
Employees in, qu. 1131
Extension to building, qu. 1383
Quebec riots, 1510
Questions, inquiry for, 1502
Research Council, industrial chemistry, 1434
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2481-2
Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Thorold, qu. 574
Royal Military College, 2805
Trade with Russia, 1003
Veniot, Mon. Mr., 3637, 3688
Welland canal, obstruction, 1990

Murray, Mr. G. M.
Editorial control of newspapers, 330, 442, 2622, 3645-7

Murray Bay public works, qu. 604

Murray Bay-Tadoussac Steamship Service, M. (Mr. Casgrain) for papers, 1528, 1822, 1825, 1930

Musk Ox and Reindeer. See Reindeer

Musselman, Mr. J. B., 3382

Myers, Mr. E. T. W. (Kindersley)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 388; Amendment to amendment (Mr. Campbell); congratulations Prime Minister; tariff; policies of the parties; alliance between Liberals and National Progressives; reform of Senate; freight rates, 389; Canadian National Railways; coal; the grain trade; Wheat Board, 390; Royal Commission to inquire into marketing; shipment through Canadian ports; no urgent demand for election; redistribution, 392
Canadian Wheat Board, qu. 340
Income tax collections in Saskatchewan, qu. 2028

Nadeau, Dr., 3133

Nagle and Wigmore, 3077, 3172. See also Customs, Minister of

Nantel, Hon. Mr., 3019

Napier, Mr. J. J., qu. 1624

Nappan, Gurnsey cattle at, qu. 2686

"Narbethong," steamer, 2175

Narcotic Drugs. See Opium and Narcotic Drugs

National Advisory Council, 4363. See also Research

National Assets. See Fuel Supply Problem; Natural Resources

National Battlefields Commission
Fort Cumberland and Fort Moncton, 4540
Fortifications of Quebec, 967

National Catholic Labour Unions. See Labour

National Dairy Council, 1126

National Expenditures, Committee on, 1835. See also Estimates

National Gallery, 2684

National Industrial Conference, 4549. See also Labour

National Liberal Convention. See Liberal Convention

National Parks, 4495. See also Dominion Lands and Parks

National Policy, 3220, 3569. See also Address; Budget

National Progressive Party. See Progressive

National Railways. See Canadian National Railways

National Railways and Shipping, Special Com., reference to
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1755; names substituted, 2776. See also Canadian National Railways

National Research Institute, 886, 2566, 2688, 2892, 4555. See also Research Council Act Amdt.
Annual report, 2897
Bequests and donations, 2896
Bursarships and studentships, 2894
Co-ordination, 2892
Council, 2892
Discoveries and inventions, 2895
Establishment of, 886
Materials, investigation and standarization, 2893
Trade agents, 2893

National Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National Railways

Natural Gas, 879. See also Gas; Oil and Gas

Natural Resources. See also Coal; Fuel Supply problem; Mines and Minerals; Research
Aerial explorations and surveys, 3776
Canadian hinterland, 852
Conservation Commission, 3961
Control of, 857
Development of, Res. (Mr. Manion) 841; neg, 894
Drainage of flooded areas, 871
Intelligence Bureau, 1343
Investigation of, 845
Mackenzie Basin, 879
Maple industry, 887
National Research Institute, 886. See also that title
Ownership of, 879
Timber and minerals, 893
Western provinces, of, 3555
Transfer to, 1336-40
Demand for, 484
M. (Mr. Campbell) 2519-84

Naturalization, 781. See also Canadian Nationals; Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill

Naturalization Act, 1914, Amdt. Bill (Aliens who served in Allied Armies)
1r., 2441

Nauru Island, phosphate deposits, 4541, 4253

Naval Defence, 183, 227, 266. See also Naval Service; Prime Ministers' Conference
Contribution of Dominions, inquiry, 4256

Naval Service. See also Canadian Navy
Adams, Capt. Henry C., inquiry, 901, qu. 1237
Air stations, 3780
Appropriation, 4017-19
Cost of maintenance, 2107
Estimates, 4010
Esquimalt, Naval College, 4016
Fisheries protection, 4036
Halifax and Esquimalt, dockyards, 4017-36
Halifax naval college, 4010
Naval cadets in Imperial navy, 4017
Naval holiday, 4020
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," disposal of, qu. 671, 4010-36, 4041
Pacific coast, vessels on, 4016
Preference in Civil Service appointments, 4482
Royal Canadian navy, estimates, 4010
Vessels presented by British Admiralty, 4016-23

Navigable Waters, obstructions, 1989

Navigation. See also Marine
Aids to, 1996
Schools of, 1989

Navy. See Naval Service

Navy League of Canada, grant, 4535

Nelson, Mr. Christian, 2880

"Neophyte", steamer, 1966

Nesbitt, Mr. E. W. (North Oxford)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 60. Government's term of office; no reason to seek re-election; group government versus the two-party system; War Times Election Act; Quebec most stable province; unemployment insurance; the labour situation, 61; extravagant living followed by curtailment; work the only salvation, 62; the "interests" all must work together; the Government not responsible for unemployment; the tariff—reasonable protection, 63; members not elected to promote partisan, selfish interests, 64
Agricultural shows, 1245
Alcohol for hospitals, 3706
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2933-6
Budget, 3252. Sugar, price of; congratulations to Minister of Finance, 3253; income and business profits tax; tariff

Nesbitt, Mr. E. W.—Con.
Budget—Con.
revision, 3254; reciprocity; free trade England, 3255; revenue and expenditure; cost of living, 3256; immigration; Great Britain and free trade, 3258
Canada Temperance Act
Cases pending, 4377
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2253
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee, reference to
M. (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1607
M. (Mr. Meighen) 1784
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2863, 4267-73, 4493
Consular agents, 1479
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Dumping, 4414
Invoice certificate, fee, 4393
Trade agents in United States, 4393
Trade commissioners, 4393
Valuation for duty, 4415
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods, marking of, 3712, 3724, 3942-55
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 306
Experimental farms and stations in Ontario, 950
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2460-75
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 741
Health of Animals, 4508
Hog cholera, compensation, 1060
Housing, 1142
Hudson Bay Railway, 992
Immigration, 2602
Imported goods, marking of, 3712, 3724, 3942-55
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 612
National Research Institute, 2693
North American Trust Company, 1130
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4367-73
Pensions, widowed mothers, 636
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4057
Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4262, 4357
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 651
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4057
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Containers, 3755
Sales tax, 3735
Unemployment and immigration, 1357

New Brunswick
Minister of Public Works and York-Sunbury election, 3480. See also Veniot; York-Sunbury

Newcombe, Mr. E. F., and Grand Trunk Arbitration, qu. 1002

Newfoundland
Sick mariners, 3139
Steamship service, 1485, 1686, 1712

Newport News, Canadian vessels at, 1689, 1722

New York
Immigration officers at, 3131
Loans on Canadian bonds, 3288
Shipping pool, 1713

New Zealand
Steamship service, 1493
Trade with, 1223

Newspaper Comments on Shipbuilding. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Montreal; Press; Shipbuilding

Newspapers. See Press

Newsprint, alleged combine, qu. 2099

Nickel, Coinage, 2160
Five cent coin, 2160, 2269

Nicholson, Mr. Donald (Queen's, P.E.I.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 556; congratulations to Prime Minister; speech of Mr. Cannon; the Government's mandate; soldiers' vote in 1917, 556; the charge of coercion; majorities of Mr. Wigmore and Mr. McCurdy; Prime Minister's Truro speech; Canadian Mercantile Marine, 557; Magdalen Islands, Prince Edward Island; revenue, expenditure and taxation; highway expenditure in Nova Scotia; Mr. Maclean, Halifax, 558; revenue requirements; Mr. Gauthier; Quebec and other provinces, 559; stand by the national policy; toleration, 560
Highways, Prince Edward Island, qu. 2345

Nicholson, Mr. George B. (East Algoma)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 283; congratulations to Prime Minister; a unique debate; no constructive criticism by Opposition; "bloodless neutrality"; programme of legislation; unemployment insurance and old age pensions, 284; League of Nations; the tariff; the Government's mandate, 285; unrest amongst business men and soldiers, 286; suggestion that leader of Opposition should form Government a "flagrant insult" to returned men; election, 287; policy of Opposition; Farmers' party, 288; United Grain Growers; stock feed; attitude towards farmers and milling industry; Mr. Norman Lambert, 289; flour, agricultural implements, profits—Mr. Rice-Jones; payments to newspaper for educational propaganda; campaign of "blatant hypocrisy", 290; increased representation for Quebec; the Prime Minister and Quebec—harmony, not discord, 291

Nicholson, Mr. George B.—Con.
Address—Con.
Budget, 3299. Flotation of Canadian National Railway bonds in New York; foreign loans, 3300; Canadian National Railways; railway merging, 3308
Canadian National Railways
Special Com., reference to M. (Mr. Meighen) 1794
Canal tolls, 2975
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Foreign-born wives of British subjects, 3103, 3106
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2565
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 690
Interim supply, reduction of items, 2023
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2797
Railways and ships, 1730
Research, 1432
Supply—point of order, 2757
Trent canal, construction, 3975

"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale of, qu. 671, 4010-36, 4041. See also Naval Service

Nolan Bill, 3008

Non-Confidence Motions, 1184. See also House of Commons, Divisions

Non-Political Operation of Railways. See Canadian National Railways

Norman, Dam. See Lake of the Woods

Norris, Hon. Mr., 4198

Norrish, Mr., 1226

North American Trust Company, 1094, 1127. See Private Bills Discussed

Northcliffe, Lord. See Gulf Pulp and Paper Company

North Sydney
Port of, 1282
Public Works—removal of officials, 2817
Terminus, 1487

North West Grain Dealers Association, 277, 297, 379

Northwest Territories Act Amdt. Bill (Council)
1r., 3903; 2r., com., 3r., 4113

Northwest Territories Explorations, 4494

Nova Scotia
Canadian National Railways
Freight to certain points, qu. 1620
Coal supplies, 1261, 3295. See also Fuel Supply
Fruit inspectors in, 1041, 1045
Highways, 4304-7
Mines. See Fuel Supply; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence

Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, 1611, 3407

Norwegian Boats and coastal trade, 1494

Nursery Plants, fumigation of, 1028, 1031

Oatmeal, tax on, 3735

Oats, 3395
Banner, 1033
Quaker, 2954-76, 3455. See also Grain; Trent Canal

Obregon, General, 1507

Ocean. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipbuilding; Steamship services
Freight rates, 1936-61
Decline, 1273
Pacific steamship service, 1493
Shipments by United States ports, 1975
Shipping—Government control of, qu. 3530
Trade routes, 1888

Ocean and River Service, 1736, 1979

Ocean Limited, 1800

O'Connor, Mr. W. F., and cost of living, 3548, 3606

Ogilvie, Messrs. D. W., and Company, 1846

Oil. See also Oil and Gas; Natural Resources; Petroleum
Bounties, 1385, 1413. See also Trade and Commerce
Development, 844, 2162-4
Expenditure for discovery, qu. 695
Government regulation, 3539

Oil—Con.
Leases, qu. 564, 3539
Issuing of, 598, 2377
Delay, 2029, 2377
Payments under, qu. 673
Mackenzie district in, 879, 2162, 3206
Purchase from Great Britain, 1253
Regulations, 1340
Rentals, qu. 672
Stability of title, 854
Surface rights, res. (Mr. Griesbach) 578; withdrawn, 666
Wells, penalty for injuring, 3922

Oil and Gas
Leases and permits, qu. 734
Res. (Mr. Mackie, Edmonton) 894; withdrawn, 901
Rights, 2555

Oil Burning Steamers. See Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill

Old Age
Pensions, 2, 9, 231, 237, 263, 284, 395
Provision for. See Housing

Oleomargarine, 3384. See also Dairying
Importation of, 3852, 4439
Inquiry, 3531
Inspectors under, 1068
Materials for, importation, 3747

Oleomargarine, 3384. See also Dairying
Res. 563, 3759; 1r., 3760; m. for 2., 3850; Amdt. (Mr. Denis) 3879; neg. 3886; com., 3886; 3r., 3905
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Label with statement of ingredients
Amdt. (Mr. Robb) neg. 3896
Manufacture, importation and sale
Amdt. (Mr. Manion), limitation of one year, 3886
Agreed to, 3896
Amdt. to amdt. (Mr. Sutherland), oleomargarine not to contain milk or cream, 3887, neg. 3896

Ontario
Drury and Drury Govt. See that title
Duff, the late Hon. James, Minister of Agriculture, 1033
Government, expenditures, 3495. See also Drury
Highways, work on, qu. 1237. See also Highways
Prohibition plebiscite, 303
Referendum Committee, 304
Renfrew returning officer, 820
Voters' lists, 150, 242, 259, 303
Timber limits, 3391

One-sixth Vote. See Interim Supply

Open Market. See Canada Grain Act

Operation of Railways. See Canadian National Railways

Opium, imports of, 3130. See also Opium and Narcotic Drugs

Opium and Narcotic Drug Act. See also Health Department
Administration of, 3130
Convictions under, 3134

Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 1069, 2263; 1r., 2268; 2r., ref. to Special Com., 2346; com., 2897; 3009; 3r., 3009
Report of Special Committee, 2708
Senate amdts. concurred in, 4062
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Failure to pay fine, 2908
Household remedies, 2902
Indictable offence, 2897
Penalty, 2897-2907
Possession, 2903-6
Prescriptions not to be filled more than once, 2897
Sale or gift to minors, 2897
Whipping, 2897

Orders in Council. See also Purchasing Commission
Appointment of representatives to Assembly of League of Nations, 188
Immigration, 2585
Peace Conference, 397

Oriental Immigration. See Chinese

Ottawa
Cartier square, stores shed, qu. 3208
Daly building, rental, 4094
Daylight saving, 2687, 2776
Hunter building, 4094
Lighting roads and bridges, 4090
Noon gun, 4091
Newspapers and shipbuilding, 1925
Parliament buildings, 3992. See also that title
Public buildings, 4101
Rental of buildings in, 3989, 4092-6
The "Reno" of Canada, 4474

Ottawa Improvement Commission Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 2941; 2r., com., 3r., 3759

Overages. See Grain

Owen Sound, wharf, 3974

Owens, the late Thomas P., Editor of Debates, tribute to, 258, 430

Oyster Culture, 2177

Pacaud, Mr. L. T. (Megantic)
Belgium, credit to, qu. 577, qu. 1001
Purchases in Canada, qu. 736
Budget, 3343. Importance of debate; inefficiency of Administration, 3344; extravagance and economy, 3345; control by Parliament of necessary expenditures, 3346; credits to foreign countries; amendment of Mr. Fielding, 3347
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
"Canadian Ranger" and "Seigneur", qu. 1382

Pacific Ocean
Steamship service, 1493
Trade, 3649

Pacific Salvage Company, Limited, 1990

Packing Houses. See Health of Animals; Oleomargarine
Cold storage plants, and, amount collected, 607

Pagè, Dr., 3133

Paintings, in Senate Chamber, qu. 566

Pairs. See House of Commons, Divisions

Palmerston, Lord, and Don Pacifico, 1522

Panama Canal, Canadian shipments by, 3047

Panet, Mr. L. C., appointment as Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms, 3

Paper, Newsprint. See Newsprint

Papineau, Mr. L. J. (Beauharnois)
Canadian National Railway vessels, qu. 1349
Canadian Postal Guide, qu. 1349
Parliament buildings, furniture, qu. 2192
Staples, Mr. W. D., qu. 3260
War, adjustment of accounts, Canada-Great Britain, qu. 2191

Parasites. See Destructive Insects

Pardee, Mr. F. F. (West Lambton)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 479; congratulations to Prime Minister; Minister of Militia, chameleon-like change of policy; the tariff red-herring; favoured free agricultural implements in 1914, 479; the Farmers' party, 480; reprisals against the United States; dissolution and appeal; by-elections; the "remnant" of Liberalism, 481; rural and urban representation; resignations of ministers; trust the people, 482

Pardee, Mr. F. F.—Con.
Budget, 3497. Tariff revision; luxuries tax; Great Britain, 3498; foreign trade; shipbuilding; railways and public ownership, 3499; position of Liberal and Agrarian parties, 3500
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2840
Civil Service bonus, 2111
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3908-28
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill, brokers, 4432
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 743
Harbours and rivers, amdt. 3979
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3826
French language, 3824
Interior Department, draughtsmen, 1334
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4177-4226
Amdt. to 3r., 4226
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale of, 4018-32
Representation in Parliament, 1326

Parent, Mr. George (Quebec West)
Agricultural shows, 1242
Amherst drill hall, 2739
Annapolis public building, 2764
Boots and shoes, Canadian, 1225
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 779
Canadian National Railways
Agents, 1605
Cancellation of trains, 1004
St. Augustin station, qu. 695, 3018
St. Foy round house, Res. 840, 967, qu. 1501
Correspondence, 1502, 1659
Shawinigan service, qu. 573
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3829
Compensation for slaughtered cattle, 1050
De Martigny divorce, 3762-9, 4006
Director of Commercial Exhibits, 1226
Dominion Shipbuilding and Repair Company, qu. 3423
"Druid," steamer, 1984
Experimental farms, hours and pay, 932
Fruit inspection, 1047
Fuel Supply, Special Com., evidence in French, 4251
Highways, amount of vote, 3024
Icebreakers and steamers, repairs, 1979
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3822-5
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 608
Intercolonial Railway
Work at Charny and St. Foy, qu. 1501
Interior Department, dismissal of employees, 1345
International Customs Tariff Bureau, 1438
Liquor, tax on, 3707
Militia
Dismissal of employees in Quebec, 2237
Surveys division, 2244

Parent, Mr. George—Con.
Montreal Harbour Commission, 2269
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1646
National Research Institute, 2896
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4011-13
Pilotage, 1999
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2120-24
Prince Rupert Dry Dock Engineering Company, qu. 3423
Printing, Government, 1439
Quebec riots, 1918, Res. 974, 1503
Railway Commission—jurisdiction, 3017
Railways, law costs, 3015
St. Augustin Station, qu. 695, 3018
St. Lawrence dredging, 1992
Supply—procedure, 3014
Surveyor General and Boundary Commissioners, 1342
Trent canal, 2606-16
Waterpowers, director of, 1346
Welland Canal, construction, 2990-3001
Wrecks, investigation, 1988

Paris Agency, 2437

Paris Green, 1030

Park St. Charles Company, Limited, proposed payment to, 4570

Parks. See also Dominion Lands and Parks
Antelope for, qu. 1134

Parliament
Availability of Information. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canadian National Railways
Earlier sessions of, 1843
Information for. See Ministers
Prorogation. See that title
Representation in, 1293. See also House of Commons, Vacancies

Parliament Buildings, 3992, 4040, 4070-8
Acoustics, 3998-9, 4000
Architects' commission, 3995-4000
Brown, Hon. George—letter to Sir John Macdonald on former buildings, 4002
Building stone, 3994
Commons Chamber, 3996
Concrete, 3997
Cost, 3993-7, 4000
Draughts, 3998
Expenditure. qu. 4341
Furniture, qu. 2192
Inscription on central column, qu. 568
Inscription on tower, 3995-8, 4543
Library, 4000
Probable date of completion, 3992
Purchase of materials, 3994
Tower, 3993-9

Parliamentary and Departmental Printing, 1438. See also Printing Bureau

Parliamentary Control of Railways. See Canadian National Railways Special Committee

Parliamentary Elections. See Proportional Representation

Parliamentary Government. See Representation in Parliament

Parliamentary Guide, purchase of copies, 4533

Parliamentary Procedure. See Deputy Speaker; House of Commons; Speaker

Parliamentary Restaurant, 4536
Additional vote for, 4535
Joint Committee, 303
Manager, 2027

Participation Certificates, 340. See also Address; Canadian Wheat Board

Partridge Island Quarantine Station, 2808-15

Party Politics. See Canadian National Railways, Management

Passport Office, 2436

Pas, The, wharf, 3976

Patent Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3007; 2r., 4453; com., 4456; 3r., 4460; Senate amdts. 4544
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Alien enemies, 4456
Fee, 4456
No patent void by failure to make or import between August 1, 1914, and Jan 10, 1922, 4457
Return of fees, 4457
Rights of those who have commenced to make, use, or sell, 4459
Time extended, 4457
United States legislation, 4454-60
Validity of patents protected during war, 4459

Patent Act Consolidation Bill, 4456

Patent Medicines, tax on, 3120, 3727-28

Patents, Commissioner of, 623. See also Exchequer Court Act Amdt. Bill

Patents of Invention Acts Consolidation Bill
1r., 303; M. for 2r., 2890; withdrawn, 2891

Patronage. See Canadian National Railways; Civil Service

Peace Conference, 164, 2629. See also Address; League of Nations; Permanent Court of International Justice; Prime Ministers' Conference
French Canadians, unrepresented, 552
Orders in Council, 397

Peat Industry, 2689. See also Supply problem

Peck, Mr. C. W. (Skeena)
Australian steamship services, 1495
Burnham, Dr., case of, 1526
Dease and Stikine rivers, qu. 1133
High Commissioner's office, 2438
Military districts, 2789
Militia, command pay, 2292
Rulings and Statements as Chairman
Decision of Chair must not be questioned, 1904
Members, reflections on, 1903
Shipbuilding, 1923
Interruption in debate, 1898
Special Committee on Returned Soldiers, 788

Pecuniary Claims Convention, qu. 736, qu. 1817, qu. 2027

Pedlow, Mr. Isaac E. (South Renfrew)
Air Board, 3778-82
Alberta penitentiary, 1115
Armistice Day Bill, 3773-6
Canadian National Railways
Purchasing agent, 1659
Cattle embargo, Amdt., 725, 758
"Champlain", steamer, 1995
Chief, Foreign Tariffs Division, 1437
Civil Service Classification
Filing clerks, 1660
Griffenhagen, 2242
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2488-2500
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage; Liberal platform and administration, 815; defeated candidate should not control patronage; condition of civil service; discontent, dissatisfaction and unrest; classification and reorganization; Printing Bureau, 816; Civil Service Commission, competitive examination; census commissioners and enumerators, 817; prohibition plebiscite, returning officer at Renfrew, 820
Coats, Mr. R. H., salary of, 1232
Cocoa preparations, 3703
Confidential messengers, 1334
Customs and Excise Dept Bill
Currency inflation and commodity prices, 4431
Fines, 4392

Pedlow, Mr. Issac E.—Con.
Customs and Excise—Con.
German bounty on sugar, 4432
German mark, 4431
Imports and exchange, 3810-12
Invoice certificate, 3799, 3803-04
Fee—who pays? 3804, 4391-4409
Obstacles to importation, 4410-16
Restrictions on trade—letter from Gillies Bros., Ltd., 4418
Trade agents, 4410
Valuation of currency, 3809-12-19, 4430
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Imported goods, marking of, 3938-55, Amdt. 3955
Customs estimates, 3087
Demography, chief of division, 1232
Fisheries, 2177-90
Flax industry, 1398, 1401
Free trade—Mr. Cockshutt, 3747
Halladay, Mr,, and Canada Cycle and Motor Co., 1227
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3976-9
Horse-breeding, 1121
Imported goods, marking, 3712, 3720-23, 3938-55
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters, 612
Interior Department, employees, 1343
Lignite, 4499
Militia
Estimates, 2239
M. to reduce, 2281-8
Purchasing Commission, 2239, 2287
Salaries, 2287
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4015-19
Parliament buildings, 3994
Pembroke wharf, 4536-9
Penitentiaries, increases in estimates, 1109
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4051
Polish immigrants, rejected, qu. 914
Post Office
Letter rate, 4526
Parcel post rates, 4526
Purchasing agents, 4527
Rural mail carriers, 4527
Stamps, postage and revenue, 4526
Preferential tariff—West Indies, 3704
Preserved fruits, 3703
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2482
Shipbuilding, 1956
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4051
Special War Revenue Bill
Consideration en bloc, 3956
Houses, tax on, 3958
Lumber, tax on, 3743, 3957, 3958

Pedlow, Mr. Issac E.—Con.
Special War Revenue—Con.
Sales tax, 3755
Change in clause, 3957
Wholesalers opposed to, 3752
Steamship "Narbethong", 2175
Sugar imports, 3703
Trade and Commerce employees, 1226
Trade commissioners, 1399
Trent canal, 2606-16

Pelletier, Mr. F. J. (Matane)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 381; previous arguments for dissolution endorsed; public ownership; Canadian National Railways; Board of Directors; employees and elections; sections granted privileges denied to others; Intercolonial, piling lumber in yard at Amqui; financial obligations due to nationalization; world-wide liquidation, 382; Prime Minister's duty to dissolve Parliament, 383
Canadian National Railways
Amqui station, 382, 1176
Illustration stations at Matane and Causapscal, 947
Matane, wharves, 3992
Quebec Union Telephone Company, 3343

Pembroke wharf, 4536

Penitentiaries, 1091, 1096. See also Justice; Prisons and Reformatories
Alberta, 1092, 1115
Appropriations for, 1104
Convicts
Number and cost of, 1092
Dorchester, 1092
Purchases locally, 1108
Salaries of officials, 1096
Warden, 1092, 4467
Flour purchases, 1107
Kingston, 1110
Staff and inmates, 1097
Trades at, 1092
Maintenance cost, increase in, 1111
Purchases, system of, 1108
Purchasing Commission, 1104
Report, 2027
Salaries and retiring allowances
Increases in, 1109-10
St. Vincent de Paul, 1078, 1091
Convicts, number of, 1091
Warden, qu. 575, 1078
Saskatchewan, 1091, 1110
Stony Mountain, release of prisoners, 477

Penitentiaries Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 3738-39; withdrawn, 3973

Pensions, 164, 2236-78. See also Returned Soldiers, Special Committee
Application forms in French, qu. 965
Assignment in payment of insurance premium, 4355
Board of Commissioners, 4366
British funds, disbursement in Canada, qu. 733
Brunelle, Sergt. Major N., 1518
Deduction from widows' pensions, 4369
Deductions for insurance premium, Res. (Mr. Power) 629; withdrawn, 630
Disability, qu. 1235
Etienne, Mde., claim, 4367
Marcil, Mr. Joseph, qu. 3903
Marcil, Messrs. Louis T. and Joseph, qu. 2942
Martel, Mde., claim, 4367
Old age. See Address
Permanent force, deductions from pay of, 2275
Refusal to soldier disabled by accident, 4366
Scale for deaths, 4266
Scale for disabilities, 4264
South African, 2278
Special Committee, final report, 4041
"Unmarried wife," 4369
Widowed mothers, Res. (Mr. Power) 630; withdrawn, 642, 4047, 4368

Pensions Act Admt. Bill
Res. 4262; 1r., 4266; 2r., com., 4361; 3r., 4373
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Board of Pension Commissioners, 4366
Deduction from widowed mothers' pensions, 4369
Housing, 4362
Increased sale, 4361
Interpretation of Act, 4366
Military Service, "as such," 4366
Statement by Prime Minister, 4361
Unemployment, 4361
Widowed mothers, 4368

Pentland, Mr., and Quebec Admiralty district, 1086

People's Representatives. See Ministers

Per Capita Expenditure and Debt, 2012, 3246

Permanent Court of International Justice Bill, 56, 285, 645. See also Canadian Nationals; League of Nations; Prime Ministers' Conference
1r., 2096; 2r., com., 2708; com., 3013; 3r.,

Permanent Force. See Militia; Pensions

Perrot Island bridge, qu. 576, qu. 603

Peterborough
By-election, 504
Milling industry, 3544
Trent canal, 2953. See also that title

Petitions. See Private Bills

Petroleum. See also Oil
Bounties, 1385, 1413
Government regulation, 3539
Leases, 3539
Natural gas, and, lease rentals, qu. 672

Pharmaceutical Compounds, 3726-7

Phonographic Discs. See Copyright

Pictou-Georgetown steamship services, 1496

Pierreville Postmistress, qu. 2624, 2858, qu. 3208; qu. 3422; qu. 3423. See also Yamaska

Pig iron industry, 3188

Pilotage, Administration of, 1999

Pilots, 1999
Montreal-Quebec, superannuation, qu. 1501

Pin, Mr. J. E. A., and Labour, 1642

Pipes, Mr., and Dorchester Penitentiary, 1093

Plate Glass Industry, 3513

Playing Cards. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill—Three Card Monte
Tax on, 3126

Pointe Claire, wharf, 4312

Poisoning of Insects, 1028

Police Magistrates. See Judges

Polish Battalion for service in French Army, 4051

Polish Immigrants, rejected, qu. 964

Political Control of Railways. See Canadian National Railways

Political Patronage. See also Canadian National Railways; Civil Service
Lawyers selected by Government, 1077

Pollution of Harbour Waters. See Canada Shipping Act Amdt. Bill

Pontiac
Census commissioners and enumerators, 828, 1127

Population, increase of, 843

Pootmans, Mr. G., Vice-Consul for Belgium, 3347, 3379. See also Belgium, loan to

Porcupine Forest Reserve, 538

Portage du Fort, war record, 1928

Port Arthur and Fort William harbour improvements, 4536

Port Aux Basques, 1468

Port Colborne, breakwater, 3974

Port Hilford, dredging, 3983

Port Hood, wharf, 4088, 4104

Port Margaree, wharf, 2174

Port Nelson, dredging, 1853

Porter, Professor, 1427

Porter, Mr. George, Maycroft, Alta., 384

Portland Terminus, 1384, 3291. See also Grand Trunk

Postmasters. See also Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill; Post Office
Montreal and Toronto, qu. 566
Rural. See also that title
Appointment of, 2779, 4278-4460

Postmaster-General. See also Blondin, Hon. Mr.; Post Office
Election of, 1171
Necessity for presence in Commons, 1155, 4514
Payments to, qu. 567
Yamaska election, and, 3468

Post Office, 3003. See also Civil Service; Mail Carriers. For individual post offices, see their titles
Annuities, 4524
Canadian Postal Guide, qu. 1349
Department
Anderson, Mr., 4526
Cabinet Ministers, and, qu. 1349
Mail superintendents and postal inspectors
Res. (Mr. Casgrain) 841
Outside service
Maritime Provinces, Inspection Branch 4528
Parcel post rates, 4526
Postmen, bonus to, 3549
Purchasing agent, 4526
Railway mail service, 4516
Religious holidays, 2626

Post Office—Con.
Department—Con.
Reorganization, 804, 4514
Moon, Mr., 4518
Northrup, Mr., 4518
Retirement of officials, qu. 3772
Smith, Mr. Sydney, qu. 1236, 4518
Troop, Mr., 4518
Verret, Col., 4525
Superintendent and inspectors, qu. 965
Employees in post offices, retirement, 4268
Letter rate, 3571, 4515
Madrid Postal Conference, 3001
Montreal Mutual Benefit Society, qu. 567
Offices in Canada, qu. 1235
Parcelpost rates, 4526
Railway mail service, 4516
Bonaventure-Gaspé, qu. 577
Revenue and expenditure, 4515
Rural mail carriers, 4523. See also that title
Bonus, 2115
Saguenay district service, 1825
Stamps, postage and revenue, 4526
Statistical schedules, 3758
War tax, 4515

Post Office Act Amendment Bill
1r., 1619-20; 2r., com., 2120; 3r., 2944
Subjects and sections discussed:
Insurance of registered mail matter, 2120
Obligations of ferrymen, 2122
Unpaid or underpaid letters, 2121

Potato Bug, destruction by, 1932

Potatoes, 3224, 3525
Diseases, 1032
Export, 3442
Market for, 3473

Poultry Industry, 939, 1122
British Columbia, in, 3750-51
Egg production, 1242-3. See also Eggs
World's Poultry Congress, 4513

Power. See also Fuel Supply Problem; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence

Power, Mr. C. G. (Quebec South)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 100. The new leader of the Government, 101; dissolution of Parliament and appeal to the people; different schools of thought; House of Commons "express image of the feeling of the Nation"; present parliament not representative, 102; history of the Government; power despotically used; Cabinet reconstruction: by-elections, 103; defections among Ministry and Government supporters, 104;

Power, Mr. C. G.—Con.
Address—Con.
Government has lost confidence of country; deficits from public ownership; Great War Veterans Association, 105; enforced isolation of Quebec, 106; the public conscience, 107
Administration of Justice, 1325
Alpine Club, 4494
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2918
Burnham, Dr., treatment by Serbian Government, qu. 576, 1525
Cabinet-maker, Interior department, 1342
Canada Temperance Act
Quebec petition for suspension of Act, 4382
Canadian Government Merchant Marine Vessels, names of, 1962
Canadian Nationals Definition Act, 782, 2033
Canadian National Railways
Employes, fraud by, 1669
Canal tolls, 2976
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2780, 2881
Returned soldiers—preference, 4483
Superannuation—increased allowances, qu. 3903, 4541
Coats, Mr. R. H., 1232
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 304
Expenditures on public works, 2983
Fiji Islands, Mr. Catellier, 1465
Foreign agitators and elections, 903
Forestry
Canadian Forestry Association, 4494
Director of, 1346
Immigration, medical inspection, qu. 572
Interior Department law clerks, 1332
Ireland, South, Parliament for, qu. 603
Judges, Admiralty, 1086
Lights, repairs to, 1996
Marine signal service, 1998
Militia
Ashley, Sergt. T., qu. 3090
Command pay, 2290
M. to reduce, 2292
Estimates, 2275, 2310
Permanent Force, M. to reduce estimate, 2797
Record office, 2278-81
Staff, 2787-91
Military preparation, 2305
Miniature natural resources cabinets, 1342
Moving pictures, 599
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2265
Pensions Act Amdt. Bill, 4366-73
Pensions
Application forms in French, qu. 965

Power, Mr. C. G.—Con.
Pensions—Con.
Deductions for insurance, res. 629; withdrawn, 630
Permanent Force, deductions from pay, 2236, 2275
Widowed mothers, res. 630, 640; withdrawn, 642, 4369
Public Works—Quebec district, 2983
Quebec
Citadel, 1441
Fortifications, res, 967
Port and Merchant Marine, 1271
Riots, 1509
Ship repairing, 1986
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4355-7
Ross rifle, 2782
Serbian Consul at Montreal, qu. 605
Shipbuilding, 1962
Soldiers Civil Re-establishment
Loyola college building, Montreal, qu. 569
Supply—Public Works, point of order, 2758
Trent canal, construction, 2983-94
Unemployment relief, qu. 570
Union Service Fund, qu. 2192
Welland canal, construction, 2983-94

Prairie Provinces
Grasshopper plague, 1027
Transfer of Natural Resources. See Natural Resources

Preferential Vote. See Proportional Representation

Presentation of Speaker's Chair. See Speaker's Chair

Press
Bureau in New York, 2400
Canadian Press Limited, qu. 564, 4533
Comment on Shipbuilding. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipbuilding
Defamatory libel, publication of court proceedings, 2149, 3933
Murray, Mr. G. M., and, 330, 442, 2622, 3645-7
Propaganda, 290

Press Gallery
Long sittings of House, 2887

Preston, Mr. W. R. T., 3383

Prevost, Mr. Jules E. (Terrebonne)
Budget, 3427. National Liberal and Conservative Government; railway policy, 3428; expenditure, public debt and re-

Prevost, Mr. Jules E.—Con.
Budget—Con.
venues; taxation, 3429; military expenditures and conscription, 3430; Canadian policy and Imperialist doctrine, 3430; Laurier and Colonial Conferences, 3431; Prime Minister and Quebec, 3435; fiscal policy, 3436
Canadian National Railways
Montreal-Transcontinental, qu. 574
Census, appointment of officials, 696
Debates, Official, distribution of, M. 2220-5
Highways
Approval of in Quebec, qu. 2098
Federal aid to, qu. 2375
League of Nations
Article X, qu. 575
Canada's contribution to, 1235
Postmasters, Montreal and Toronto, 566

Price-Fixing, 3200

Prime Ministers. See Ministers

Prime Ministers' Conference, 183, 193, 227, 246, 254, 270, 294, 467, 526, qu. 564, 2626, 3320, 4304, 4449
Agenda, 2504, 2638-47
Anglo-Japanese Alliance, 2637-9-57
Canada and the United States, 2653. See also Canadian Representation in the United States
Canada's status, 2642
Committee on Imperial Defence, 2637-49
Constitutional conference, 2637-8-47-49
Constitutional development, 2626-47
Imperial Conference, 2628, 2633-36
Imperial defence, 2633-44
Imperial War Cabinet, 2636-48
Imperial War Conference, 1917, res. 2626-36-48
International relations, 2651
Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill, 2633-44
Military, naval and air defence, 2640-50
Naval defence
Contribution of the Dominions to, 4256
Peace Conference at Paris, 2637
Proposed instructions to Prime Minister, 2554
Reparations, 2653
Reported statement of Mr. Churchill, 2567
Statement by Prime Minister, 2504
Wireless Communications, 2640

Primeau, Mr., and Railway Commission, 3018

Prince Albert, Soldier Settlement Board, qu. 673

Prince Edward Island
Harbours and rivers, 3990
Highways, Federal aid to, qu. 2345

Prince Edward Island—Con.
Railway, 4565
Steamship service, 558

Prince Rupert
Dry Dock Engineering Company, qu. 3423
Public Building, qu. 567
Purchase of land from Mr. V. W. Smith, qu. 963

Princess Creek, wharf, 3980

Printing Bureau
Bailey and Wolffe, Messrs., qu. 603
Building, extension to, qu. 1383
Destruction of Public Documents, qu. 599, qu. 603, 793, qu. 1621, 1625, qu. 2028, 2943, 2950-3, 4062, 4436-53, 4465, 4557
Canadian Postal Guide, qu. 1349
Judge Snider's Report, qu. 2028, 2444, 2943, 2951, 2952, 3209, 3697, 3761, 3905, 4062, 4436-53, 4557
Statement of Messrs. Fred Cook and Frank Lynch, tabled, 4541
Statutes, plates of, qu. 603
Employees in, qu. 1131, qu. 1348
Additional, qu. 1234
Long sittings of the House, 2887
Reorganization, 793, 802, 816, 834, 836, 2827-79, 4465. See also Civil Service

Printing, Joint Committee, 110, 2618, 2889, 4041

Printing of Parliamentary and Departmental Publications, 1438

Prisons and Reformatories Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 1069; 2r., com., 3011; 3r., 3013

Private Bills. See House of Commons, Bills

Private Bills Discussed
Canadian Bar Association, 1094
Central Railway Company of Canada, 3715, 3716
De Martigny divorce, 3715, 3761, 4002-10, 4078, 4107, 4203, 4477
Fort Smith Railway Company, 3771
Gilmour and Hughson, Limited, 1096, 2442, 2503, 2800
James MacLaren Company, Limited, 598
North American Trust Company of Canada, 1094, 1127
Quebec Steamship Company, 2775, 2941
Quebec Union Electric Telephone Company, 3343, 3421, 4105

Privilege. See House of Commons

Privileges and Elections Committee, 2314, 2373, 2617, 2685, 2775
Representation, Maisonneuve and Gaspé, 4437
Substitution of names, 2441

Privy Council, 99, 2105
Appeals, limitation of, 1089, 1090
"Insular" tribunal of England, 1090
Judges. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Law library, 1090
Salmon fishery licenses, qu. 104, qu. 1381, 2104, qu. 2506, 4341

Prize Money. See Agricultural Shows

Probation, system of. See Criminal Code Amendment

Progressive Party, 331, 539, 1531, 1546, 3324, 3356. See also Address, Budget, Canadian Council of Agriculture, Crerar, United Grain Growers
Abolition of patronage, 822, 3163
Attitude on Tariff, 3212. See also Budget Speeches
Canadian Council of Agriculture. See that title
Railway problem, and, 1789
Wheat Board, and, 1451. See also Grain and Grain Trade; Canadian Wheat Board

Prohibition, 4474

Prohibition Plebiscite, 303. See also Canada Temperance Act; Dominion Elections Act Amdt.
Alberta, 3901, 4374-88
Ontario
Renfrew returning officer, 820
Voters' lists, 150, 242, 259, 303

Proportional Representation, 346, 411
M. (Mr. Sexsmith) for adoption of, 1528
Amdt. (Mr. Calder) for Special Com., 1542
M., as amended agreed to, 1554; Special Com. appointed, 1554-5
Special Com., authority to print report, 2027

Proprietary and Patent Medicines, tax on, 3120

Prorogation, 4577
Alleged undue desire to hasten, 4068
Governor General's Speech, 4579
Probable date of, 4238-40, 4551

Protection. See Address; Budget; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill

Proulx, Mr. Edmond (Prescott)
British funds, disbursement in Canada, qu. 733
Buckley, Mr. Charles P., qu. 966
Canada Temperance Act
Pending litigation, 4384
Canadian Air Force, qu. 965
Canadian Bar Association, 1095
Cattle embargo, 766
Chief Justice, salary of, 1571
Civil Service
Bonus, 2115
List, qu. 1349
Res. (Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage; amendments to Civil Service Act; Civil Service Commission; appointments in cities and rural districts; census commissioners and enumerators, 829
Clapp, Miss S., 1332
Condensed milk, tax, 3737
Cooper, Col. John A., qu. 697
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4442
De Martigny divorce, 3765
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4247-8
Elections in France, 1552
Highways
Construction in Ontario, 4290-4306
Width, 4306
Judges
Exchequer Court and Grand Trunk arbitration, 1084
Superannuation and retirement, 1082
Justice Department
Lawyers in, 1077
Purchasing agents, 1079, 1115
Live stock breeding, 1116
Militia supplies, sale of, 1098
National Catholic Labour Unions, 1647
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2121
Roumanian loan, interest, qu. 2344
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 593
Unemployment and immigration, 1356
Welland canal, sand contracts, qu. 600

Provinces doing business, and taxation, 3705-6, 3742

Provincial Legislation, reports on, 2373

Provincial Responsibility. See Housing

Provincial Rights. See Canadian Bar Association; Lake of the Woods

Publications, Government, 1438
Editorial Committee, annual report, 901

Public Accounts Committee, 3582, 4105
Motion for reference to Com., 1069
Report, 397

Public Buildings
Estimates, 4090
Ottawa. See also that title
Charwomen, 4092
Elevator attendants, 4090
Nova Scotia, 2737-42
Toronto customs house, 4095
Yukon, 4096

Public Documents, Destruction of. See Printing Bureau

Public Harbours. See Canada Shipping Act; Harbours and Rivers

Public Money, voting of. See Canadian National Railways; Estimates; Supply

Public Ownership of Railways, 381, 1187, 1196. See also Canadian National Railways

Public Printing and Stationery Department. See Printing Bureau

Public Records, provision for, 2947

Public Service Retirements. See Civil Service Retirement

Public Works
Bridges. See Bridges
Demobilization, 3989
Department
Accounts, paying of, 1606
Salaries, 2680, 2736, 2808, 2945, 4070, 4079
District Engineers' Office, Edmonton, 4535
Engineering Branch, reorganization, 4079
North Sydney, officials, 2817
Expenditures, 4101
Property, protection of. See Criminal Code Amendment Bill
Rents, repairs, etc., 3989
Shipbuilding, 1858. See also that title
Transfer of District Engineer's Office, Chatham-St. John, 4081

Pulp and Paper Industry, 873, 875. See also Natural Resources; Research
Freight rates on, 2511
Pulpwood, exportation, 3513, 3744

Punishments, Excessive or Inadequate. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Purchasing Agents, 1079
Canadian National Railways, 1659

Purchasing Commission, 1080, 2015, 2142, 2163, 2190, 2287
Authority for appointment, 1114
Canadian National Railways, 1659

Purchasing Commission—Con.
Closure, notice of, 2025
Creation of by Order in Council, 551
Limit of $5,000 without tender, 1101
Members of, 2016
Militia supplies, 2239
M. (Mr. Lemieux) to strike out item, 2108; amended 2020
Penitentiary supplies, 1097, 1108
Post Office, 4527
Public Works, 2681-3
Staff of, 1113
Surplus War supplies, disposal of, qu. 736
Tenders, statute providing for, 1105

Pure-bred Cattle. See Health of Animals; Live Stock

"Pussyfoot" Johnston, 902

Quaker Oats Company, 2954-76, 3544. See also Trent Canal

Quarantine. See also Health; Immigration
Stations, 3128
Halifax, 2754-68
Partridge Island, 2808-15
Typhus, 4170

Quebec (City)
Arsenal, bonus to employees, 2113, 2782
Canada Temperance Act, 4382
Citadel, 1441
Elevators, 282, 1443
Employees, Militia, dismissal of, 2237
Fiset, Dr. Michel, qu. 963, qu. 4523
Fortifications, ancient. Res. (Mr. Power) 967; withdrawn, 970
Immigration buildings, 2757
Immigration officers, qu. 1131
Mail collection and delivery, qu. 576
Post Office, 4523
Riots of 1918
M. (Mr. Casgrain) 974
M. (Mr. Lavigueur) for compensation, 282
Mr. (Mr. Parent) 1503; neg. on division, 1518
St. Charles dam, 281
Transcontinental Railway workshops, 281

Quebec (Port)
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Discrimination against, 1965
Unfair treatment by, 1271
Elevator, 1443
Equipment, 687
Park St. Charles Company, proposed payment, 4570
Repairing of ships at, 1986
Shipbuilding, 1972
Transcontinental Railway facilities, 280
Wharves, 3977

Quebec (Province), qu. 570
Attitude towards Government, 551, 3216. See also Address
Census commissioners, 832
Highways in, 2098, 2344, 3025, 3029-34, 4305-13-33
Increased representation, 391
Judicial district, judges, 1081
Vice-Admiralty district, 1084-6
Labour in. See National Catholic Labour Unions
Natural resources, 875
Salmon fishery, qu. 1381, 2104, qu. 2506, 4040, 4341

Quebec and Saguenay Railway
Mileage, 1005
Station agents, qu. 696, 963

Quebec and Western Railway, qu. 573

Quebec Bloc, 3216

Quebec Bridge, 1653, 1670

Quebec Conference. See Ministers

Quebec-Montreal Pilots, Superannuation, qu. 1501. See also Pilotage

Quebec Oriental and Atlantic Railway, qu. 573

Quebec Salvage and Wrecking Company, Limited, 1990

Quebec Steamship Company, 2775, 2941
Petition presented, 3005

Queen's University. See Research

Questions, inquiry as to, 1502. See also House of Commons

Questions Passed as Orders for Returns, 578, 605, 606, 698, 839, 967, 1002, 1238, 1350, 1625, 1674, 1821, 2029, 2099, 2376, 2625, 2687, 2821, 3090, 3830, 3905

Quinlan and Robertson, 1972

Railway Act Amendment Bill (Inland Shipping Rates)
1r., 1497, order for 2r., stands, 2557

Railway Act Amendment Bill (Discrimination in rates) 1r., 1232-33

Railway Adjustment Board, 4547

Railway Commission
Cases before, 3021
Chief Commissioner, 451, 1690, 1725, 3017
Speech of with reference to Canadian National Railways, 1202, qu. 2029
Fuel Control, 2944
Inland Merchant Shipping, and, 1497. See Railway Act Amdt. Bill

Railway Commission—Con.
Maintenance and operation, 3016
Members, 3016
National Transcontinental Railway, fire protection, 4337
Railway mail service, 4517
Railway rates, and, 1803

Railway Problems. See Canadian National Railways, Special Committee

Railways, 484, 3014, 4131. For individual railways see their titles
Canadian National Railways. See that title
Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk bonds, qu. 837
Car shortage, 512, 548, 3541, 4322
Charges on dining cars, 921
Coal for, duty, 1183-4
Coal mines in the United States, 4317
Competition, 1181
Deficit, 1577, 1585, 1946
Employees, income tax, 4353
Employees' wages, 1803
Export freight rates, 1224
Financial condition of, 1574
Freight cars for coal, 1254
Freight rates, 1009
Coal on, 1249, 1976. See also Fuel Supply
Government. See also Canadian National Railways
Auditing by Auditor General, 1189
Lack of information, 1336
Ships, and, 1730
Grand Trunk. See that title
Locomotives
Cost of, 1587
Obsolete, 1587
Roumania and Greece, for, qu. 1236
Losses generally, 1008
Mail Service. See Post Office
Management. See Canadian National Railways
Merging of, 3308
Minister of and administration of Canadian National Railways, 1190
Party politics, and, 1179
Public ownership, 508
Quebec, Oriental & Atlantic and Quebec and Western Railways, qu. 573
Railway Commission, under, 3017
Requirements for, purchasing, 1610
Securities, provincial guarantees, qu. 2619
Situation generally, 1007, 3406
Statistics, qu. 3422
Taxation, 1008
Tourist traffic, 4495
Traffic and government ships, 1936
Utilization of, 844

Railways and Canals, Department of, 3014
Annual report, 697
Buckley, Mr. Charles P., qu. 966
Law costs, 3015
Minister of, duties, 1663
Outside service, 1665
Printing and stationery, 4335
Salaries, 1652, 3014, 4131, 4288

Railways and Shipping Committee. See also Canadian National Railways, Special Committee
M. for Standing Com. on (Mr. A. K. Maclean) 1555, 1582-3

Railways, Canals and Telegraph Lines, Committee, 1174, 2247, 2708, 3005

"Rainbow" and "Niobe." See Ballantyne; "Niobe"

Rates. See Railways, Freight; Shipping
Discrimination in. See Railway Act Amdt. Bill

Real Estate. See Housing

Reciprocity Agreement with the United States, 268, 297, 1487. See also Address; Budget, Customs and Excise Dept. Bill Amdt. to Supply (Mr. Fielding) 2038; neg. 2075, 2393

Reclamation. See also Natural Resources
Dominion lands, 4495
Moose Range area, 871

Recorder's Court Jurisdiction. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Record Office. See Militia

Redemption of Gold. See Currency; Gold

Redistribution. See Address; Budget; Proportional Representation

Redlich on Procedure, 1675

Redman, Mr. D. L. (East Calgary)
Fuel Supply problem, 1253
Highway grants—Alberta, qu. 1821
Oil bounties, 1418
Tobin, Mr. W. J., qu. 1133

Re-Establishment, 314. See Returned Soldiers; Housing
Special Committee, final report, 4041

Referendum. See Prohibition Plebiscite

Reformatories. See Prisons and Reformatories

Refrigerator Cars for Transportation of fish, 1038

Regina
Indian Commissioner at, 2167-9

Regional Exhibitions. See Agricultural Shows

Registered Parcels, Insurance, 1619. See also Post Office Act Amdt. Bill

Registrars. See Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill; Judges

Regulations, Oil and Gas, 894. See also Oil and Gas, Petroleum

Reid, Hon. J. D. (Minister of Railways and Canals)
Annual railway statement, 1004
Business of the House
Estimates, alleged agreement, 4532, 4569
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1702
Statement to be made, 902
Canadian National Railways
Betterments, 4317
Board of Directors, 4314
Box cars ordered, 331
Canadian Government railways—vote of $7,000,000 for working expenditure, 4335
Canadian Northern Railway Company, 3049
Loan of $50,000,000 to, 3037
Car shortage, 4323
Claims against, 1658
Coal mines in the United States, 4317
Correspondence with directors, 1003
Deficit, 4319
Electrification, 4328
Employees, 1735
Reduction in number, 1851
Expenditure, 1616, 1662
Fire claims in Shelburne county, 4569
Flavelle, Sir Joseph, 4142, 4314
Fort William terminals, 3052
French language, 4331
Halifax and South Western line, 3053
Lockeport extension, 4324
Hudson Bay Railway, 985
Information, 1782
Intercolonial Railway, 1655
Land at Lévis, 1849
Transcontinental, and, management, 1189
Joliette bridge, 4322
Joliette county, 3038
Loan of $50,000,000 to Canadian Northern, 3037
McAdoo award, 4325
Management of, 1440, 1654
Manitoba, construction, 3053
Maritime Provinces, improved facilities, 4568

Reid, Hon. J. D.—Con.
Canadian National Railways—Con.
Monastery station, 4325
Operating results, 4318
Operation, cancellation of trains, 1004
Portland terminal, 4317
Rails, price of, 1852
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1771-4
Tenders for coal and ties, 1772
Transcontinental, forest protection, 4337
Transfer of rails to France, 4569
Western lines, 3039, 3048
Canal tolls, 2962
Fuel control, 2944
Government ships, 1731
Governor General's cars, 3037
Grain transportation rates, 2967
Grand Trunk arbitration, expenses, 4355
Grand Trunk loan, 4131-69, 4314-34
Grand Trunk railway
Lines in United States, 4326
Portland terminus, 1384
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 690, 740
Halifax Graving dock, 1698
Highways, 3030, 4289-4313
Construction, 3127, 3036
Expenditure on, 3024
Inspectors, 3023
Projected roads, 3026
Work on, 1661, 1664
Purchasing agents, 1660, 1670
Questions, answers to, 1502
Railway Commission, 3016, 3020
Cases before, 3021
Railway department
Auditors, 1661-70
Deputy Minister, 1665
Estimates, procedure in, 1666
Officials, 1654, 1660, 1672
Staff reduction, 1672
Travelling auditors, 1661
Railway estimates, 1652; 2953
Railways
Annual report, 1770
Congress, 3023
Items in supply, 3015
Law costs, 3015
Politics, 1771
Railway Commission, under, 3017
Traffic and Government ships, 1936
Red Deer river line, 3048
Returned soldiers, employment on Welland canal, 3001
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, extension of time, 2030, 2152-7
Soldier Settlement Board, Maritime Provinces, 4532

Reid, Hon. J. D.—Con.
Tariff investigation report, 3055
Trent canal, 2953-60, 2606-17
Welland canal, 2025, 2966-3003

Reid, Mr. John F. (Mackenzie)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 329; congratulations to Prime Minister; leaders who were born on the farm; new name for an old party; Government allied to big interests, 329; Mr. G. M. Murray and the press; Hudson Bay railway; Canadian National Railways, scarcity of cars, 330; grain blockade, United Grain Growers, Limited; National Progressive party, 331; business methods of the company; Mr. Guthrie's charges, 332; Mr. Rice Jones; names and birthplaces of directors; American settlers and goods, 333; Progressive movement not confined to Western Canada, 334
Agricultural implements, 3492
Bonds, War, Victory, tax free and taxable, qu. 2821
Briquetting plant at Bienfait, qu. 672
Budget, 3388. Comment on speech of Mr. Cowan; Agrarian and Liberal parties, 3389; economy in expenditure, 3390; tariff on agricultural implements; Canadian National Railways and freight rates, 3392; tariff revision; Grain Growers Guide, 3393; attitude of Government towards big interests, 3395; sales tax, 3396
Canadian National Railways
Grading in western provinces, qu. 570
Canadian Wheat Board, 2117, 2158
Cattle clubs, 1120
Cattle embargo, 717
Civil Service
Bonus, 2110
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2879-80
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage in; Civil Service Federation; Saskatchewan Customs Association; National Progressive party; Federal Union No. 66, 822; Board of Hearing; Printing Bureau, 823; British Civil Service, no fault to find with appointments, 824
Cold storage plants, 1040
Distribution of pure-bred stock in Saskatchewan, qu. 1236
Emigration, United States to, 3068
Hudson Bay railway, 991
Immigration
Expenditure, qu. 2943
Immigrants, care of, 3069
Income tax, qu. 3422

Reid, Mr. John F.—Con.
Live stock commission men, bonding of, 1124
Natural Resources, transfer to western provinces, 2539-45
Opium and Narcotic Drugs, 2266
Parliament buildings, 3995
Pensions Act Amdt. Bill, 4365-71
Pensions, widowed mothers, 4371
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2123
Public buildings—Nova Scotia, 2771
Returned soldiers, housing, unemployment, 4365-8
Ross rifle, 2784
Sales tax collections, qu. 2506, qu. 3830
Trent canal, construction, 2987
United States, emigration to, 3066
Vancouver island railways, qu. 3422
Yorkton Judicial district, 1080

Reid Newfoundland Company, 1486

Religious and Racial Questions. See York-Sunbury

Religious Holidays. See Civil Service; Post Office

Reindeer and Musk Ox
Arctic regions, report on, 2940, 4543
Economic value of, 841, 871

"Reno" of Canada, 4474

Rentals, of buildings, 3989, 4092-6

Reorganization. See Civil Service

Reparations. See Germany; League of Nations; War

Reports Tabled, 3, 39, 107, 150, 188, 229, 258, 350, 397, 562, 597, 643, 788, 836, 962, 1001, 1069, 1174, 1347, 1380, 1496, 1619, 2027, 2095, 2247, 2566, 2889, 3146, 3259, 3582, 3697, 3971, 4041, 4105, 4340, 4449, 4541

Representation. See Proportional Representation

Representation in Parliament, 1293
Amdt. (Mr. King) in Supply, neg. 1329

Research. See also Natural Resources; National Research Institute
Advisory Council, 150, 341, 1426, 2688
Scientific and Industrial Research Bureau, 169, 2144

Research Council Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 2566; 2r., 2688; com., 2701, 2892; 3r., 2897

Resignations. See House of Commons

Responsibility to Parliament. See Government

Restaurant. See Parliamentary Restaurant

Retail Merchants Association and Sales Tax, 3446

Retiring Allowances. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Returned Soldiers. See also Civil Service; Dominion Lands; Pensions; Re-establishment; Soldiers' Settlement; Unemployment
Canteen funds, 4050
Census commissioners, 2097
Civil Service and, 963, 2828-38-49-53-68-81, qu. 3259, qu. 3531
Preference in, 4482
Civil Service Act, Amdts. proposed by Pensions Com., 4257
Employment on Welland canal, 3001
Gratuity—estimate of cost by Mr. Thomas Cox, 3559
Handicap, problem and tuberculosis cases, 4050
Highways, employment on, 3033
Housing, 4362-8
Loan, 4552
Insurance, 4355, 4361
Insurance Act, 629. See also Pensions
Land for, 1344
Military training, 3279
Pensions, 4361. See also that title
Prospecting for minerals, 871
Re-establishment, 4361. See also that title
Relief for, 2688
Shipbuilding and, 1273, 1727, 1903, 1921, 1974. See also that title
Special Committee moved, 731, agreed to, 733
Mr. Sutherland substituted for Mr. Peck, 788
Quorum, 901
Statement by Prime Minister, 4361
Sympathy with, 1903-4
Unemployment, 4048, 4361. See also that title
Relief in Peterboro, qu. 4253

Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 4260; 1r., 4262; 2r., com., 4355; 3r., 4361
Sections and subjects discussed:
Annuity, 4356
Assignment of pension, 4355
Commencement of Act, 4357
Death of beneficiary during lifetime of insured, 4355

Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill—Con.
Sections and Subjects discussed—Con.
Insurance and limits thereof, 4355
Mercantile Marine, officers and seamen, 4357
Old age and sickness insurance, 4357

Returns. See House of Commons

Reuter's and Imperial News Service, qu. 564

Revenue Bills
1. Customs and Excise Department Bill
Res. 3785; 1r., 3822; 2r., com., 4388; 3r., 4453
2. Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
Res. 3698; 1r., 3725; 2r., com., 3938; 3r., 3955
3. Income Tax Act Consolidation Bill. 1r., 4251; 2r., com., 4343; 3r., 4355
4. Inland Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 3726; 1r., 3733; 2r., com., 3r., 3955
5. Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 3733, 3741; 1r., 3758; 2r., 3955; com., 3955-3958; 3r., 3958

Revising Officer. See Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill

Rhodes, Hon. Edgar N. See Speaker

Rice Jones, Mr. Cecil, Vice-President and General Manager, United Grain Growers, 289, 290, 333, 417, 3180, 3492

Richards, Mr. T. H., veterinary inspector, 1063

Riddell, Mr. Justice, payments to, qu. 1500

Right of Ministers to Sit in Either Chamber. See Ministers

Riley, Mr. R. T., 1609-10, 3610. See also Canadian National Railways

Rimouski
County Fairs, 1240
Customs office, qu. 839
Experimental station, 954

Rinfret, Mr. Fernand (St. James)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 120; Prime Minister—right of Government to retain power, 120; formation of a new party to take place of Unionism—its misleading name, 121; the Prime Minister's Sherbrooke and Granby speeches, 122; by-elections; non-confidence amendment, 124; argument of Prime Minister analyzed; census and redistribution, 125; tariff; League of Nations; clamor for general election

Rinfret, Mr. Fernand—Con.
Budget, 3651. Dr. Tolmie and dry dock at Esquimalt, 3651; Prime Minister's discussion of the tariff, 3652; Tariff Commission and revision of tariff, 3653; St. James by-election, 3655; customs duties and rate of exchange; deficits and expenditures, 3656
Copyright Amdt. and Consolidation Bill, 3835-49
Dominion Iron and Steel Company contracts, qu. 733
Exchange, value for duty, qu. 733
Excise officers and sales tax, 3955
Foreign decorations to Canadians, qu, 1132
German goods, holdback, qu. 1350
Government candidates, 3336
Immigration, 2579-2602
Importations from Germany, qu. 696, qu. 838
Income tax collections
For 1919, qu. 3422
For 1920, qu. 2821
Insurance against sickness, 2554
Loans, tax exempt, qu. 575
Member making serious charge should retract, 1904
Montreal Inland Revenue offices, qu. 1820
Taxation, mutual insurance companies, qu. 605
National Research Institute, 2894
Naval Service, maintenance, 2107
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," sale, 4012-30
Pierreville postmistress, qu. 2624
Post offices in Canada, qu. 1233
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2677
Sales tax, 3955
Shipbuilding, 1898, 1908, 1926, 2094
Estimates, manner of bringing down, 1937
Holt, Sir Herbert, comment on, 1900
Unemployment, and immigration, 1367

Riordon Company. See Gilmour and Hughson

Riots. See Quebec Riots

Rivers and Streams Act. See Lake of the Woods

Roads, 3986. See also Bridges; Highways

Robb, Mr. James A. (Chateauguay-Huntingdon)
Agriculture, grasshopper plague, 1028, 1030
Business of the House
British practice as to, 1026
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Preference to Canadian goods, 1280

Robb, Mr. James A.—Con.
Canadian National Railways
Transfer of rails to France, 4569
Canadian Wheat Board, 2116
Cattle embargo, 730
Cattle feeds, exemption of, 3746
Chief Justice, income tax and, 1565
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2778
Crushed grain, 3745
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill, brokers, 4432
Customs duties, increase in, 597
Dairy Produce Grading Bill, 3760
Estimates, supplementary, inquiry, 4070
Flax industry, 1404
Foodstuffs, tax on, 3736
Freight losses, 1658
Fruit inspectors, 1046
Grain trade, investigation of, 2116
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2563
Hungry Bay road, 1660
Immigration, 2582-94
Imported goods, marking of, 3714, 3723
Indian "Shows" for distinguished visitors, 2169
Interim Supply Bill, 2115
International Trade Conference, qu. 2029, 2151
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 2118
Maple Products Act, 1920, Amdt. Bill, 2559
Montreal Harbour Commission Bill, 2160
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3759, 3850-96; Amdt. 3896
Politics—participation in by railway employees, 4502
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2120
Province trading subject to taxation, 3705
Quebec Union Electric Telephone Company, 3421
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 656
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 2173, 4502-5
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Containers, tax on, 3754
Flour, 3755
Lumber, 3751-2, 3756
Trade agents, 1225
Trent canal, 2610-12
Unemployment and immigration, 1363
West Indies trade, 1271

Robertson, Hon. Senator G. D., 536. See also Labour, Minister of; Ministers

Roberval, air station, 3779

Robson, Judge, 3606. See also Board of Commerce

Robson, Mrs., and Immigration Department, 3058

Roche, Dr. See Civil Service Bill

Rockefeller Institute, 1433. See also Research

Rockefeller Interests and Mr. King. See Lapointe, Mr.

Rodrique, Mr. Didace, qu. 3208

Rondeau Harbour, 3975

Root Vegetables.. Res. withdrawn, 4343

Ross, Mr. D. C. (West Middlesex)
Budget, 3531. Reciprocity agreement great boon to Canada, 3532; attitude of various members on Budget, 3533; Minister of Militia and tariff reform; military expenditure, 3537
Customs—Strathroy office, 3085
Fuel supply problem, 1255
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3980-1
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 618
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4187-91
Newfoundland steamship service, 1486
Parliament buildings, 3995
Railway Commission, members, 3019
Steamship passengers, 1495
Trade with Australia and South Africa, 1468
West Indies steamship service, 1490

Ross Rifle, 2783-7
Statement of Rev. Canon Scott, qu. 599

Rotation of Crops, 1033. See Agriculture

Roumania. See also Loans
Loan to, 478, 1441, 3444, 3811, 4430
Greece and, qu. 1236, 3563, 3611, 3620, 3661
Dominion Canners, purchases, qu. 1001, 1072
Interest on, 1072, qu. 2030, qu. 2344
Sale of military supplies to, 2245, 3564

Routhier, Late Judge, 1085-6

Rowell, Hon. N. W. (Durham)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 110; League of Nations and Assembly at Geneva, 110; co-operation to prevent armed conflict; Covenant of League; public rights and wrongs in international affairs; war, or threat of war, concern of all nations, 111; purposes and functions of League; some phases of the work at Geneva, 112; constitutional questions;

Rowell, Hon. N. W.—Con.
Address—Con.
budget to be submitted annually; Council to report to Assembly; relations between Council and Assembly; Article XXIII, 113; vote to be not of a delegate but of the state he represents; proposed amendments to Covenant, 114; monopolies in and distribution of raw materials; admission of new states, Austria and Bulgaria, 116; questions of principle; case of Albania; minorities treaties, 117; Russian situation, 118; United States; attitude of representatives of self-governing minorities, 119; admission of Germany, 119
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2257
Canadian representation in the United States, 2394-2408
League of Nations, 110
Contribution towards, 2357
Letter of International Joint Commission, 691
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2722-24
Prime Ministers' Conference, 2647-67
Resignation of, 4340

Roy Building, Halifax, qu. 3089

Royal. See North American Insurance

Royal Assent, 486, 2160, 2899, 4578

Royal Bank of Canada
Canadian Government Merchant Marine and, 1719

Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill (Fines and forfeitures)
1r., 2343; 2r., com., 2481; 3r., 2486

Royal Canadian Mounted Police
Dominion police force, withdrawal from, qu. 601
Recruits from England, qu. 601
Strength, 2798-2800
Thorold, qu. 574

Royal Canadian Navy. See Naval Service

Royal Commissioners. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, 1712, 1714, 1870. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Royal Military College, 2802
Road, 3973

Royalty. See Copyright

Ruddick, Mr. J. A., 1036

Rule 17C. See House of Commons, Estimates

Rulings. See Deputy Speaker; Speaker

Rural Homes. See Housing

Rural Mail. See also Post Office
Boxes, number of, qu. 1235
Carriers, qu. 964
Contractors, 3507
Delivery, 1156
Routes, qu. 605
Rural postmasters, 2829-33-41-84. See also Civil Service; Post Office

Russia
Currency, 1072
Flax. See that title
Trade with, 1003, 1072, 1224

Ruttan, Dr. See Research

St. Alexis, station, qu. 2375, qu. 3582

Ste Anne de la Pocatiere
Destruction of library at, 1075
Illustration station, 948

St. Antoine, Montreal, representation of, qu. 577, 1069, 1070, 1293, 1295. See also Ames

St. Antoine, wharf, 2616

St. Augustin station, qu. 695, 3018

St. Catherine's Bay-Tadoussac service, 4530

St. Charles de Bellechasse, 1801

St. Charles River dam, 282

St. Croix wharf, 2616

St. Foy
Artesian well, 1659
Engine house, 767, 840, 967, qu. 1501, 1502, 1659. See also Canadian National Railways

St. Francis Harbour, 3990

St. Francis River, 1992, 1995

St. Francois du Lac
Electoral list, 3468
Lemieux, Mr., Speech at, 3528

St. Hyacinthe
Inland Revenue collector, Dr. A. P. Cartier, 3821, qu. 3904
Shops, qu. 2821

St. Jean post office receipts, qu. 576

St. Joachim-St. Simeon highway, 3026

St. John (City)
Belyea, Mr., retirement of, 3082
Representation, 3171-2
Vacancy, 1293

St. John (Harbour and Port) 4097
Facilities for potato shipments, 3443
Harbour, 4097
Improvements, qu. 1383, 4078
Partridge Island quarantine station, 2808

St. John and Quebec Railway, qu. 1501, 4564

St. John and Quebec Railway Bill (Extension of time)
1r., 2030, 2097; 2r., com., 2152; 3r., 2157

St. John Rolling Mills. See "Niobe" and "Rainbow"

St. Lawrence, Gulf of Fishing in, 1038

St. Lawrence Navigation Company, 1981

St. Lawrence River. See also Canals; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence
Coal trade, 1494
Conservation Commission, 3960-8-70
Diversion of water, 186
Dredges and tugs, qu. 568. See also Dredges
Power development, 1252, 1263
Route and Channel
Deepening, qu. 2028
Development, 674, 691, 1252-63
Dredging, qu. 568, 1991, 4541
Navigation for coal vessels, 1260, 1854. See also Fuel Supply; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence
Sorel shipyards, qu. 568, 1992, qu. 2618

St. Malo shops, 1017

St. Michel wharf, res. 967, 3991

St. Pascal, domestic science school, 1075

St. Roch, Upper Crossing light, qu. 1383

St. Romuald post office building, qu. 577, 604

Ste. Rose de Watford, mail contract, qu. 3209

St. Simon station agent, qu. 3208

St. Thomas de Pierreville, postmistress. See Pierreville

St. Valier wharf, qu. 965

St. Vincent de Paul. See Penitentiaries

Sackville public building, 2816

Saguenay river, crossing of, 1822

Sailors, Sick, care of, 3129. See also Health

Sales Tax. See Special War Revenue; Taxation

Salmon. See Fisheries; Privy Council

San Jose scale, 1028

Sandy Beach wharf, qu. 965

Saskatchewan
Clay deposits for pottery, 3384-5
Co-operative Creameries, Limited, 1040
Co-operative Elevator Company, 391
Fish-breeding, 2185
Grasshopper plague, 1027
Highways, qu. 1820, 4307
Penitentiary. See Penitentiaries
Pure-bred animals in, qu. 1236
Representation in Senate, 2567

Saskatoon, Canadian National engines, qu. 3090, 3903

Saturday Night, comment on shipbuilding, 1968

Savard, Mr. Edmond (Chicoutimi-Saguenay)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 554; speech a "meagre dish"; non-confidence amendment justified; Government has lost confidence of country; by-elections—Government's mandate exhausted; precedents, 555; Liberal leaders record; Borden Government, 556
Chicoutimi
Customs collector, qu. 698
Pier, qu. 967
Murray Bay-Tadoussac steamship service, 1824
Rimouski customs office, qu. 839
Shipbuilding, 1969

"Scandinavian," smallpox on, 1498, 1556

Scientific Institutions, 4494

Scientific Research. See Research

Scott, Mr. F. S. (South Waterloo)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 324; congratulations to Prime Minister; speech of Mr. Crerar; railway situation, economy in administration; financial situation in Ontario; Government's mandate; general elec-

Scott, Mr. F. S.—Con.
Address—Con.
tion, 325; business men opposed to dissolution; the amendment; confidence of the country; defections from Government; dissolution should be decided by Government not by leader of Opposition; Opposition and Agrarian party; Mr. Gauthier and province of Quebec, 327; Mr. Clark (Red Deer) and Liberal party, 328

Scott, Mr. W. D., and Immigration Dept., 3058

Scott Act, petition for suspension, 3584, 4382. See also Canada Temperance Act

Scottish Canadian Trust Company. See North American Trust

Screenings, 3182. See Elevators; Grain

Scrub Cattle. See Live Stock

Seamen, Sick, care of, 3129. See also Health

Search Warrants. See Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill

Searls, Mr. George, Chief Grain Inspector, 1444

Secretary of State. See also External Affairs
Enemy debts, demobilization, 4534
Estimates, 4557

Sedition
Esmonde, Mr. Osmonde Grattan, arrest for, 1556

Seed and Feed Control, 1125, 4513

Seed Fairs, 1126

Seed Grain
Advances, 4498
Inspectors, qu. 1624
Purchase, 4506

Seed Purchasing Commission, 1126

Seguin, Mr. P. A. (L'Assomption-Montcalm)
Budget, 3668. Administration of public business, 3668; tariff commission; tobacco-growing, 3668-9
Income tax—instructions in French, qu. 2624
L'Assomption
Experimental station, 918, 946
Pierreville postmistress, qu. 2624
Point of order—attack on members, 1904
Religious holidays, qu. 1499
Shipbuilding, 1916

Select Standing Committees. See House of Commons

Selkirk wharf, 3976

Senate
Age limit, 1171
Committee, leave for Mr. Crerar to attend, 3259
Free Conference—Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 3972, 4040, 4061, report 4250
Government representation in. See Ministers
Governor General—Address to on retirement, 4493
Macdonald, Hon. Senator, appointment, qu. 577
Members of to have seats in Commons. See Ministers
Members should be elected, 1163
Ministers in. See Labour; Postmaster General
Paintings in, qu. 566
Printing of Senate Bills, 3938
Reform, 389. See also Ministers
Representation of Saskatchewan, 2567

Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships)
1r., 258; M. for 2r., 585, 650, neg. 665

Serbia
Consul at Montreal, qu. 605

Serbian Government, Dr. Burnham and M. (Mr. Lemieux) for papers, 1520

Sessional Employees. See Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill

Settlers' Relief, 4498

Sex Offences. See Criminal Code Amdt. Bill

Sexsmith, Mr. J. A. (East Peterborough)
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4283
Dairy Produce Grading Bill, 4442
Highways, 3031
Metal, 4307-8
Illustration farms and stations in Ontario, 954, 956
Proportional representation, M., 1528
Toronto-Kingston highway, 4306
Trent canal, 2959, 2971-3

Shaughnessy, Lord, 1195, 1896, 3046, 3572
Letter on railway situation, 2503, 2890

Shaw, Mr. H. M. (Macleod)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 383; investigation of grain trade; winter grazing in forest reserves; letter from Mr. George Porter, Maycroft, Alberta; the Government's mandate, 384

Shaw, Mr. H. M.—Con.
Blood Indian reserve, qu. 1818, 1819
Canadian Wheat Board, qu. 340
Macleod judicial district, qu. 2344

Sheard, Mr. Charles (South Toronto)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 253; Mr. Gauthier; Imperial Conference; Lord Beaconsfield; Imperial Council, 254; isolation of Quebec; pledges of 1917; no discontent regarding Government; urban and rural representation, 255; the tariff issue; seceding Liberal Unionists; Mr. Pardee; railway policy; Agrarians and free trade, 256; by-elections; union and harmony; Opposition policy, 257

Shediac and Cape Tormentine Railway, 4564

Shell Contracts, 1788

Sherbrooke, Prime Minister's speech at, 3339

Sheridan, Mr. John, Indian Agent
Resignation and reinstatement, 1499, 2173, qu. 2618, 4501-5

Sherwin-Williams Paint Company, profits, 372, 1897, 3484, 3565

Shipbuilding. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Labour; Unemployment
Advances at Victoria, qu. 599
Amount required for, 1683, 1858
Assistance to, qu. 603
Auditing, 1933
British Government policy, 1865
Closure, 1979-2094. See also that title
Continuation of after the war, 506
Contracts, 1683, 1689
Cancellation, 1726
Cost plus basis, 1910
For steel ships, qu. 565
Details of construction, 1874
Dominion Iron and Steel Company, qu. 733, 1233
Freights, lack of, 1284
Government programme, estimate, 2076
Government shipyard at Sorel, qu. 568, 1992, qu. 2028
Interest on cost, 1886
Labour for, 1889. See also Labour
Newspaper comment, 1893, 1900, 1917, 1925, 1934, 1968
Returned soldiers and, 1727, 1909
Royal Bank, remarks of President of, 1900
Sinking fund, 1885
Steel and, 1876, 1884
Tonnage depreciation in value of, 1734
Trade routes, 1888

Shipbuilding—Con.
Unemployment, 1882, 1897, 1902, 1909. See also that title
Victoria, qu. 599
Wooden ships, 1711

Shipping. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Canals; Great Lakes; Shipbuilding
British Chamber of, 1716
Flag, recognition in foreign waters, 786
Great Britain and, 3236
Inland, 745, 1497, 2192
Rates, 2963-9
Ocean, decline in, 1273
Special Committee. See Canadian National Railways
Tonnage into Canadian ports, 3650
United States discrimination in tonnage dues, qu. 697

Ships
Deadweight value per ton, 1702
Private control of, 1717
Publicly-owned, disposal of, 1718
Repairing at Quebec, 1986
Steel plates for, 1233

Shipyards. See also Shipbuilding; Sorel
Construction at, 1927
Government loans to, 1883
Vickers, 1967

Shortt, Professor Adam, 799. 2948. See also Civil Service

Sick and Distressed Mariners, 3129, 4039

Sickness, Insurance against, 4357
M. (Mr. Rinfret) withdrawn, 2554

Sifton, Late Right Hon. Arthur, tributes to, 3, 153

Sifton, Sir Clifford, and immigration, 3245

Silver, discovery at Kino Hill, Yukon, 856

Simpson, Mr. T. W. (West Algoma)
Natural resources, 872
Pulpwood, 3744

Sinclair, Mr. J. E. (Queen's, P.E.I.)
"Brant," steamer, 1982
Budget, 3470. Liberal party's record when in power; comparative tables of imports, 3471; average customs duty on imports, 3472; tariff issue; Prince Edward Island, potato growing, 3473; high freight rates, 3474; York-Sunbury election; record of Government during war, 3475
Cold storage plants, 1041

Sinclair, Mr. J. E.—Con.
Co-operative marketing of live stock, 1124
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4439-48
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4066
Dredging, Hillsboro river, 3984
Government shipbuilding programme, 2076
Health of Animals, 4506
Highway construction in Ontario, 4306
Migratory Birds Act, enforcement, 4496
Post Office, Maritime provinces reorganization, 4528
Prince Edward Island Railway, 4566
Soldiers Settlement Board, Maritime provinces, 4532
World's Poultry Congress, 4513

Sinclair, Mr. John H. (Antigonish and Guysborough)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 358; congratulations to Prime Minister; duty of Opposition to criticise; National Liberal and Conservative party; same old party; "strange bedfellows"; Cabinet changes; retrenchment, 359; practical suggestions; nation builders and nation wreckers, 360; Dominion Franchise Act; withdrawals from Government, 361; tariff of special interests, revenue, protection; Mr. Calder's change of heart, 363; Liberals and Farmers; hazards of the farmers' calling; prices of farm produce, 365; price-fixing; forces of progress must unite; big interests behind Government, 366; amendment a challenge to Government, 367
Air Board, 3785
Alcohol for medicinal purposes, 3957-58
Amherst drill hall, 2739
Auditor General's report, 597, 913
Blue books, printing of, 1485
Camp Borden, aeroplanes, qu. 1820
Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement, 2259-62
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1729, qu. 3089
  Information, 1440
  Trade routes, 1733
  Vessels
    "Canadian Beaver," qu. 1673
    "Canadian Otter," qu. 1382
    "Canadian Recruit," etc., qu. 1381
    "Canadian Sapper," 734
Canadian National Railways
  Coal purchased, 1763
  Freight, Nova Scotia points, qu. 1620
  Monastery station, 4324
  Mulgrave, ice supply, qu. 963

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Canso
  Harbour, 3983-9
  Navigation school, 1989
Civil Service
  Bonus, 2109-10
  Payments to Arthur Young and Griffenhagen, qu. 4251
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2487-2503, 4270-77
Coal trade, 1936
Commercial exhibits, 1227
Copyright Amendment and Consolidation Bill, 3840
Corning, Mr. H., cattle purchases, qu. 1624
Currency Act Amdt. Bill, 2269
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
  Valuation of currency, 3812
Customs and Inland Revenue, overtime, 4123
Customs Tariff Act, 1907, Amdt. Bill
  Imported goods—marking, 3712, 3941-54, 3954
Debates, Official report, distribution of, 4560
Dominion and provincial jurisdiction over fisheries, 2105
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
  Polls, hours of, 3095
  Qualified voters, 3096
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4065
Dominion notes
  Circulation, qu. 1001
  Securities, qu. 1383
Dominion securities—grain, 1443
Dredging, 3983
Drydocks, 3987
Editorial Committee, 4560
Estimates on Thursdays and Fridays, Rule 17C, 958, 1026
Export trade, development, 1732
Fish—breeding establishments, 4036
French Trade Agreement, 2135-40
Fumigation of nursery plants, 1031
Grand Trunk Arbitration Bill, 2452-69
Grand Trunk loan, 4162-5, 4317
Grand Trunk Railway, lines in United States, 4326
Half Island Cove, breakwater, 3981
Halifax fishery award, qu. 2191
Harbours and Rivers, estimates, 3976-82
Hoarded liquor, tax on, 3706
Horse breeding, 1120
Intercolonial branch railway in Guysborough county, 4567
Interior Department, editors, 1331
Job printers, taxation, 4123
Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 2118

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
League of Nations, Canada's contribution, 2357
Marine hospitals, 3130-36
Maritime Provinces, improved transportation facilities, 4567
Mercantile Marine, insurance of officers and seamen, 4359
Migratory Birds Act, enforcement, 4497
Military expenditure, 3278
Militia—surveys division, 2243
Montreal Harbour Commission, 2268
Moving picture films, 1226
Mulgrave, ice tenders, qu. 963
Murray, Mr. G. M., qu. 2622
Natural resources and western provinces, 1338
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4012-14
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3851-94
Parliament buildings, 3994-8
Partridge Island quarantine station, 2808
Pension Act Amdt. Bill, 4366
Pensions, refusal to soldier disabled by accident, 4366
Permanent Court of International Justice, 2717-21
Pilots, pensions to, 2000
Port Hilford, dredging, 3983
Post Office Act Amdt. Bill, 2124
Post Office
Expenditure, 4521
Reorganization in Maritime Provinces, 4521
Rural mail, carriers, 4523
Public Works engineering branch, 4082-90
Purchasing Commission
Staff of, 1113
Statutory authority to appoint, 1113
Quebec riots, 1516
Returned Soldiers Insurance Act Amdt. Bill, 4359-60
Returns, inquiries for, 1176
Russia, trade with, 1003
St. Francis harbour, 3990
St. John and Quebec Railway Bill, 2152-4
St. Lawrence channel, dredging, 1992
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 591
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 4504
Shipbuilding, 1858, 1869, 1920, 2085
Contracts, 1683, 1872
Excessive tonnage, 1873
Newspaper comment, 1932
Progress of debate on, 1727
Ships under construction, 1927
Sick mariners, 3130-36
Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Hospital supplies and medicines, 3957

Sinclair, Mr. John H.—Con.
Steamship services, 1493, 1489, 1495
Sugar, importation of, 3702
Swan, Mr. D. D., consulting engineer, 1997
Toronto Customs building, 3772
Trade with Russia, 1003
Trent canal, 2609-13
United States discriminatory tonnage dues, qu. 697
Vessels commandeered, qu. 2943
Victory bonds, expenses, qu. 1620
Whitehead life-saving station, 1991
Wrecking plants, 1990
Wrecks, removal of, 1990

Sioux Lookout, 4191

Six Months' By-Elections. See Representation in Parliament

Six Months' Hoist. See House of Commons, Divisions

Smallpox on "Scandinavian", 1498, 1556

Smith, Mr. Alexander. See Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill

Smith, Mr. Sydney. See Post Office Dept.

Smith, Mr. William (South Ontario)
Cattle embargo, res. 702
Eggs, importation from China, qu. 568
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3893

Smuggling
Aerial preventive service, 3778

Snider, Judge. See Printing Bureau, Destruction of Documents

Societè des Artisans Canadiens Francais, 82

Soldiers. See also Returned Soldiers
Pensions, Insurance and Re-establishment, 315
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4051
Settlement on land, 529
Special Committee, final report, 4041

Soldiers Civil Re-establishment
Department of, report, 836
Disabled unemployed, 4364
Estimates, 4532
Loyola College building, Montreal, qu. 569
Operating expenses and working capital, 4532

Soldier Settlement Board, 314, 529, 538, 3554, 4532
Advisory and Qualification Board at Prince Albert, qu. 673
Estimates, 4532
Graham, Mr. A. M., qu. 2618

Soldier Settlement Board—Con.
Maritime Provinces, 4532
Operation of, 529
Tobin, Mr. W. J., and, ques. 1133

Solicitor General. See Ministers

Sorel Dockyard, qu. 568, 1992, qu. 2028
Shipyards, qu. 568
Superintendent, qu. 2618

Soudan War, 1882

Soulanges Canal. See Canals

South Africa
Steamship service, 1491
Trade with, 1468

South African War, 1527
Pensions, 2278

South Gabriola Wharf, 3981

Soviet. See Russia

Speaker, Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes. See also Deputy Speaker, House of Commons Rulings and Statements of
Address, debate on,
Tariff not excluded from discussion, 58
Adjournments
For purpose of discussing matter of urgent, etc.; question may be discussed on motion for Supply, 4106
Amendments
Must amend, not merely negative, 561
Put subject to consideration, 376
Ames, Sir Herbert
Resignation of, 469, 1001
Member (Hon. Mr. King) may go into matter on motion for Supply, 1070
Bills
Additions to, proposed, 4259
Com., referred to after second reading, 2776
Details properly discussed in Com., 624
Preceded by resolution
Notice not necessary, 2942
Trade Bills should be, 2150
Press interview not germane to principle of, 2870
Printing of Senate Bills, 3938
Private
Notice not required, 3971
Reference back by Com. of Whole, 1094
Suspension of Rules for, 3716
Second reading, order must be proceeded with or stand, 650

Speaker, Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Bills—Con.
Senate, motion for first reading not debatable but rule relaxed for Prime Minister and leaders, 151
Senate amendments, correction of error, 4068
To be disposed of by consent without discussion, 2890
1r.,
Senate Bills, unusual to explain, 151, 1619-20
3r.,
Debate on, 3343
Chair
Good taste, 3174
Ruling—exception to must be taken in constitutional manner, 3174
Should be permitted to exercise jurisdiction, 1308
Com.,
Standing, competent to consult Law Clerk, 598
"To-morrow" means next Government day, 563
Debate
Adherence to rules, 649, 2333
Closed by mover, 900, 2447, 2518, 3968
Questions not to be asked as in Com., 2450
Restriction of, 969, 2067
Debates, Official Report of Insertion of documents
After reading, 1539
Not read, 2067
Unanimous consent necessary, 1009
Decorum, 3174
Conversation in Chamber and galleries, 2053
Debate cannot be conducted from seats, 287
Debate, in, 286
Good taste, 3173-4
Governor General
Acknowledgment of Address, 3830
Address to on retirement, 4493
Imaginary letters, 3173, 3260
Minister of Crown and, 3174
Substitution of names, 3174
Interruptions, 3228
Language
"Coward", 287
"Deliberately false and untrue", 2444
"Flagrant insult", 287
"Mean appellation", 463
Unparliamentary, 1516
Members
Asking question may not make statement, 77, 987, 1308, 2865

Speaker, Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Members—Con.
Comment on speech in other House not in order, 536
Debating, should be mindful of rule, 1758
Discussing principle of Bill on second reading restricted to one speech, 649
Having already spoken no right to speak again, 1307
How to be referred to, 69, 444
Leeds (Sir Thomas White) 69, 469
Limited to one speech on motion, 1177
May not reflect on judiciary, 812
Must be seated when Speaker rises, 3228
Not to be put on trial in House, 2443
One may give his own interpretation to remarks of another, 1197
Promises made by subject to rules of order, 4204
Reading from documents or newspapers when asking question, 736, 972
Reading speech, 544
Resignations, 1619. See also House of Commons
Ames, Sir Herbert, 469
Right to reply, 1245
Right to reply to reflection implied in question, 1172
Right to speak exhausted, 985, 1812, 2780, 3859, 4113, 4116
Should confine remarks to question before House, 816
Sitting, may ask question but may not make remarks, 127, 2225, 2867
Speaking, may not interrogate members sitting, 126, 2333
Speaking when no motion before House, 4203-4
To speak only once on motion, 2889
Speaking, has floor, 1794
Statement of must be accepted by House, 1197, 1641
Motions
Adjournment
Competency to withdraw, 1173
Adopted as amended, 1846
Amendment must amend not merely negative, 561
Committee
Not in order to discuss general railway problems, 1782
Error in, 1810
Involving expenditure
Housing, 1135
Hudson Bay railway, 985
Not in proper form, 4052

Speaker, Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Motions—Con.
Notice not given—unanimous consent necessary, 732, 1439, 2027, 2776, 2940, 4250
Notice not required with respect to Private Bills, 3971
Practically identical, 974
Strict application of rule would leave only portion debatable, 1758
To adjourn for purpose of discussing matter of urgent, etc., 4106
Withdrawal by unanimous consent, 2554
Non-debatable subjects
Evidence before Committee not reported to House, 2881
Subjects already debated, 2824
Orders of the Day
Debate limited, 110, 1271, 1439, 2250, 2377, 3972
Alleged incomplete return may not be discussed in detail, 2250
Appropriateness of matter, 2626, 2776
Argument improper, 1070
Argument under guise of question, 901
House reverting to certain motions, 1851
Latitude allowed, 1070, 4254
Local questions, 110, 1271
Member not to be put on trial in House, 2443
No cross-examination of Ministers, 1004, 1441, 3321
Optional with Government to give information, 478
Questions reflecting on Government's policy, 1441
Questions unanswered, attention directed to, 1621
Summarizing newspaper articles, 1441
Pairs, correction of list, 563
Parliament buildings, inscription on tower, 4544
Petitions, manner of presenting, 562
Previous debate, 2824
Privilege. See also this title under House of Commons
Matter not affecting member personally, 2443
Questions
Answer of Government to be accepted, 1004
Deferred until Com. of Whole, 1024
Reflecting on Parliament, improper, 736, 1441

Speaker, Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes—Con.
Rulings and Statements of—Con.
Questions—Con.
Supplementary answer to, 1755
Unanswered, member should direct attention to on Orders of the Day, 1621
Reference by way of illustration and not reflection, 3261
Relevancy, 1172, 1193, 1196
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2865
Resolution
Amended by avoiding mention of money, 1136
Latitude of discussion, 1135
Money, 1135
Propriety of form, 1146
Rules of the House
Discussion, widest possible measure of, 1135
17C, Thursdays and Fridays. See House of Commons, Estimates
Senate
Committee
Leave for Mr. Crerar to attend, 3207
Debates, reference to, 3968
Free Conference on Judges Act Amdt. Bill, 4040
Members of, reference in terms of disrespect, 536
Supply
Amendments to Discussion confined, 2067
Irrelevancy, 1193
Questions of detail should be withheld for, 1280
Rule 17C—Thursdays and Fridays, 1004. See also House of Commons, Estimates
Unanimous consent, 1009, 1233, 3715, 4433, 4453. See also under this title, Debates, Official Report
Canada Temperance Act, 3902
Minister making statement while Speaker in Chair, 1024
Votes and Proceedings, correction of, 737
Warrant for election writ—Durham and Maple Creek, 4340

Speaker's Chair, presentation of, 3689, 3691
Addresses to be printed in Official Report of Debates, 3696
Expression of thanks to Empire Parliamentary Association, 3696
Presentation of, notice, 3688
Speeches, 3689

Speech from the Throne debated. See Address

Special War Revenue Act Amdt. Bill
Res. 3733, 3741; 1r., 3758; 2r., 3955; com., 3955-3958; 3r., 3958
Subjects and Sections discussed:
Amendments, 3742
Binder twine fibre, 3746, 3756. See also that title
Boxed goods, 3735
Condensed milk and ice cream, 3737, 3956
Containers, 3737, 3754, 3956
Excise taxes, 3955
Fishing boats, 3745
Foodstuffs, 3589, 3734
Lumber, tax on, 3734, 3736, 3742-3, 3756-57
Missals and prayer-books, 3756
Mixed grains for feed, 3745
Oatmeal and rolled oats, 3735-6
Oleomargarine, materials for, 3745-6
Package goods, 3735
Sales tax, 3120, 3170, 3399, 3996, 3735, 3752, 3957. See also Taxation
Opposition to change, 3752
Sparkling wines, 3734

Speedways. See Highways

Spinney, Hon. E. K. (Yarmouth and Clare)
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2685, 2778, 4278-80
Annual report, Amdt. 4482
Special Com., report, 3901
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4271

Spirits, Tax on, 3120, 3506, 3576, 3705, 3726. See also Alcohol; Customs Tariff; Customs and Excise; Liquor

Spirituous and Alcoholic Liquors, 3705-8

Sprays. See Insects

Spruce Bud Worm, 1031

Stacey, Mr. F. B. (Fraser Valley)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 140; examination of reasons advanced in support of amendment; pre-election pledges of Government fulfilled or in process of fulfilment; no charge of maladministration, 141; Government policy in interest of country; unification of Canadian people, 142; class consciousness; by-elections in British Columbia; the Agrarians, 143; no demand for a change, 144
British Columbia, fishing regulations, 2180

Stacey, Mr. F. B.—Con.
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4268
Ministers to sit in either Chamber, 1163

Standardization. See Agricultural machinery

Standing Orders Committee, first report, 3005

Staples, Mr. W. D., and Grain Inquiry, 1674, qu. 3260

Statistical Department, 1231, 1672

Statistics Act Amdt. Bill, 1r., 3007, 2r., com., 3r., 3758

Statutes, destruction of plates, qu. 603

Statutory Officials. See Purchasing Commission

Stayner, postmaster, 4470

Steamers. See Vessels

Steamship Services
Australia-New Zealand, 1493
Baie des Chaleurs, qu. 734, qu. 2506
Baie St. Paul-Tadoussac, qu. 734
Halifax-Newfoundland, 1485, 1686
Halifax-St. John-Newfoundland, 1712
Magdalen Islands, 557, 767
Mulgrave-Canso, 1496
Murray Bay-Tadoussac, 1528, 1822, 1825, 1930
Newfoundland, 1485, 1686, 1712
Pacific, 1493
Pictou-Georgetown, 1496
Prince Edward Island, 558
South Africa, 1491
Supervision, 1496
West Indies, 1275, 1488, 1712, 1714, 2253-62

Steamships. See also Vessels
Government control of, qu. 2530
Subsidies, 1735

Steel
Nova Scotia, 3295
Plates for ships, 1283, 1884
Shipbuilding contracts, 1876. See also that title

Steel and Iron Industry, 3526

Steel Company of Canada, Limited, 1611

Steele, Mr. Michael (South Perth)
Cattle embargo, debate adjourned, 731
Sub-amendment, 757
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2497
De Martigny divorce, 3769
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill (Prohibition plebiscite) 306

Steele, Mr. Michael—Con.
Fuel Supply Problem, Res. 1247
Special Committee, evidence to be printed, 2027, 4251
Highways in Ontario, 3034
Immigration
Immigrants rejected, qu. 1624
Typhus fever, precautions, 643
Point of Order, letter reflecting on Minister, 2176
Proportional representation, 1550
Strikes, number of, qu. 569
Rulings and statements as Acting Speaker and Chairman
(as Acting Speaker)
Member not precluded from quoting from same debate, 3627
Member must accept statement of another, 3628
(as Chairman)
Conversation, 4307
Debates, Official report of
Insertion of documents not read, 4309
Discussion not relevant to item, 1665
Interim Supply
Schedule customary, 2015
Language
"Misleading the House", 1457
Relevancy, 1451, 1452, 1456, 1665, 3766, 3808, 3821, 4090, 4123-4, 4306, 4312
Letter from Gillies Bros., Ltd., 4418
Supply motion to strike out item not in order, 2018, 4513

Stefansson, Mr. Vilhjalmar, 871
Northern lands, possibilities of, 841. See also Reindeer and Musk Ox; Natural Resources

Stein, Mr. Adolphe (Kamouraska)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 550; charges of maladministration; war contract scandals; Purchasing Commission; feeling in province of Quebec; French Canadians not represented at Peace Conference; Assembly of League of Nations; other instances of discrimination; election proclamation in French, 553; election, 554
Agricultural publications, 1075
Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill, 2914-16
Bankruptcy Act Judges, 1084
County fairs, assistance to, 1123
De Martigny divorce, 3715, 3761, 3769, 4004-10, 4107
Illustration station at Ste. Anne de la Pocatière, 948
Judges, local, in criminal cases, 1085

Stevens, Mr. H. H. (Vancouver Centre)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 212; the amendment; argument of the Opposition; Liberals and Agrarians, 213; Leader of Opposition's incentive is accession to power; redistribution before election; increased representation for West; freight rates, relative representation of urban and rural districts, 214; no general demand for an election; War Veterans, Mr. Harry Flynn; Peterborough by-election; Yale, Colchester, St. John, East Elgin; War Time Elections Act, 217; the tariff—Opposition dare not make it an issue; National Liberal Convention, 1919, 218; statement of leader of Opposition at Kingston; tariff a matter of vital interest; Opposition resolutions of 1919 and 1920, 221; Government will welcome campaign on fiscal policy; coalition between Liberals and Agrarians; leader of Opposition lacks sincerity in proposing amendment, 222
Average duty during Liberal regime, 3471
Budget, 3619; speech of Mr. King, comment on; Canadian National Railways, administration, 3620; loans to Roumania and Greece; members of Parliament and sale of goods to foreign countries, 3621; comparison of this year's expenditure and expenditure under Liberal administration, 3621; position of leader of Opposition on tariff, 3622; American tariff a factor in tariff revision, 3623; tariff for revenue only, 3625; Mr. Fielding and protection, 3626; Mr. Crerar and York-Sunbury election, 3627; Hansard, changes in Mr. Crerar's speech as delivered, 2627-8; tariff question, boot and shoe industry, 3631; agricultural implements, 3631; United Grain Growers and lumber combine, 3633; grain overages, 3634; taxation, 3634; land tax, 3634-35; Canadian representative at Washington, 3635
Canada Temperance Act, qu. 736
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1721
Dominion Iron and Steel Company, 1723
Canadian manufacturers and export trade, 1222
Canadian National Railways
Special Com. (Mr. Meighen) M., 1805
Chinese Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3828
Customs, Minister of, 3081
Private business of, 3078

Stevens, Mr. H. H.—Con.
De Martigny divorce, 3770, 4203
Government shipbuilding programme, 2088
Harbours and rivers, estimates, 3978-9
Immigration, 2595
Deputy Minister, 3056
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 2166
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 619
Interim Supply, Purchasing Commission, 2021
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4195
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill Amdt. (Penalty—whipping) 2901
Oriental immigration, 2594
Railway Act Amdt. Bill (Discrimination in rates) 1232
Senate and House of Commons Act Amdt. Bill (Ministers and directorships) 596, 650
Wednesday evening sittings, 1829
Wheat Board, qu. 489

Stewart, Mr. J. A. (Lanark)
Alcohol, tax on, 3729, 3730
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 4268-73
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Commercial agents, payments to, 4405
Dumping clause, 4413
Ports of entry, 4414
Trade extension, 4405
Valuation for duty, 4414
De Martigny divorce, 3765

Stewart, Mr. R. A., qu. 2343

Stewart, Mr. T. J. (West Hamilton)
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill (Automobile theft) 3916
Highways, 3028
Construction, 3036

Stikine and Dease Rivers, qu. 1133

Stock Feed. See also Feeds; Live Stock

Stockyards, 1124. See Live Stock

Strathroy
Customs, 3085
Destruction of pasture lands, 1030

Streams Bill. See Lake of the Woods
Strikes. See Labour

Submarines. See Shipbuilding

Sugar, 3699
Beet industry, encouragement to farmers, 301, 3426, 3456
Canada-West Indies trade, 2255-7, 3699
Customs tariff on, 3698, 3725, 3938, 3955

Sugar—Con.
German bounty on, 4432
Imports, 3703
Industry, 3513
Refiners, prices, 3245
Season, vessels for, 1489
West Indies, from, 2255, 3699

Sully, Quebec, station, 1822

Summary Cases, Fees, 3006. See Criminal Code Amdt.

Superannuation. See Civil Service, Superannuation; Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill

Supplementary Estimates, 1618. See also Estimates
Inquiry for, 3741

Supplementary Extradition Convention with the United States. See Extradition

Supreme Court. See also Canada Temperance Act Bill
Appeal to in Criminal cases, 3006
Appointment of Mr. Mignault, 356
Exemption of Salary of Chief Justice, 2118
See also Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Gold Seal Liquor Co., appeal. See Canada Temperance
Judges. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill
Privy Council appeals, 1089. See also that title

Supply Bills. See Appropriation Acts

Supply. See also Interim Supply
Committee of, 562, 917, 1215, 1330, 1385, 1442, 1617, 1652, 1736, 1979, 2076, 2234, 2270, 2275, 2356, 2378, 2568, 2680, 2736, 2781, 2800, 2889, 2940, 2945, 3014, 3055, 3068, 3127, 3776, 3973, 4010, 4070, 4117, 4288, 4494, 4544

Supply, Committee of Amendments
Canadian National Railways—Information—M. (Mr. King) 1178, neg. 1215
Prime Ministers' Conference
Amdt. (Mr. King) 2626, neg. 2679
Reciprocity with the United States
Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 2038, neg. 2075
Representation in Parliament
Amdt. (Mr. King) 1293, neg. 1329
Closure. See that title
Concurrence, 4541, 4576
En bloc, 2006
Estimates. See also that title
Committee on, 2193
Justice—without consent estimates cannot be considered, 1073

Supply—Committee of—Con.
Interim Supply. See that title
Non-confidence motions. See Representation in Parliament
One-sixth vote. See Interim Supply
Procedure in
Business for "to-morrow", 1025
Resolution introducing money bill should be preceded by notice, 1676
Rule 17C. See House of Commons
Subjects and items discussed:
Accredited herd, 4506-13
Agriculture, 4506
Entomology, 1024
International Institute of Agriculture, 1116
Live stock, 923, 1116
Publications, 1074
Salaries and contingencies, 917
Air Board, 3776
Alderson, Mr. George B., claim of. See that title
Archives, 4533
Canada Grain Act, 1442
Canada Temperance Act, 4533
Canadian Forestry Association, 4494
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, 1272, 2076
Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, 2164
Canadian National Railways, 1004, 4131, 4169, 4288, 4313, 4334, 4561
Canadian National Research Institute, 4555. See also under this title Scientific Canadian Northern loan,, 3037
Canadian Press, Limited, 4533
Canadian representation in the United States, 2378
Canals, 2025, 2602, 2953, 2960, 2966-98
Civil Service
Bonus, 4534
Reclassification, 4541, 4555
Courtenay Bay improvements, 4097
Customs and Inland Revenue, 2889, 3077, 4117
Destructive Insect and Pest Act, 1027 4512
Dockyards, 4036
Dredging, 3982
Entomology, 1024
Exchequer Court, 1083
Experimental farms, 922, 928, 931, 932-36, 945, 4512
External affairs, 2437
Fish-breeding establishments, 2185, 4036
Fish inspection, 2182
Fishery officers and guardians, 2177
Fisheries patrol service, 2177

Supply—Committee of—Con.
Subjects and items discussed.—Con
Fishery problems, scientific investigation, 2188
Fisheries protection service, 4036
Flax, 931
Geological Survey, 2141-8, 2162
Government Shipbuilding Programme, 2076. See also under this title, Shipbuilding
Grand Trunk Loan, 4131, 4168, 4288, 4313, 4144, 4334
Harbours and Rivers, 3973-82, 4097, 4536
Nova Scotia, 3989
Prince Edward Island, 3990
Health, 2940, 3127
Health of Animals, 926, 1048, 4506-13. See also under this title, Live Stock
High Commissioner's office, 2437
Highways, 4289
Housing, 4552
Immigration and Colonization, 2568-2602, 3055, 3077, 4127, 4131
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 4498
Indian Affairs, 2167, 2171, 4501
Interior, 1330
International Fisheries Commission, Fraser River, 2189
Justice, 1076
Labour, 4170, 4544
Emergency relief, 4535
Lake of the Woods Control Board, 2437
League of Nations, 2356
Lighthouse and coastal service, 1994, 2174, 4040
Lignite, 4499
Live Stock Branch, 923, 1116. See also under this title, Health of Animals
Marine, 1617, 1736, 1979, 2190
Marine Biological Board, 2189
Marine estimates, notice of closure, 1979
Migratory Birds, 4496
Militia, 2275, 2438, 2781
Annual drill, 2294
Cadet services, 2296
Clothing and necessities, 2305
Command pay
M. (Mr. Power) to reduce, 2291
Permanent Force, 2797-2800
Salaries, 2234, 2275
Mines, 2141, 2162
National Parks, 4495
Naval Service, 4010
"Niobe" and "Rainbow", sale, 4010-36
Northwest Territories, explorations, 4494
Ocean and River Service, 1736, 1979
Oyster culture, 2177
Paris agency, 2437
Parliament buildings, 3992, 4040, 4070

Supply—Committee of—Con.
Subjects and items discussed.—Con
Passport office, 2436
Penitentiaries, 1096
Pensions, 2236-78
Post Office, 3003, 4514
Outside Service, 4528
Public buildings, rents, repairs, etc., 4090
Public Works, 2680, 2736, 2808, 2945, 3973, 4070-9, 4535
Quarantine stations, 2754-68
Salaries, 2680, 4079
Shipbuilding, 1858
Railways and Canals, 1652, 3014, 4131, 4288
Railway Commission, 3016
Relief of distressed seamen, 4039
Roads and bridges, 3986
Royal Canadian Navy, 4010
Royal Military College, 2802
St. Lawrence Ship Channel, 4541
Scientific institutions, 4494
Secretary of State, 4534, 4557
Shipbuilding, 1857, 2076
Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, 4532
Soldier Settlement, 4532
Telegraphs and Telephones, 3987
Telegraph lines, 4539
Trade and Commerce
Bounties, 1385
Canada Grain Act, 1442
Salaries, 1215
Trent canal, 2025, 2606, 2953, 2966
Welland canal, 2025, 2493, 2960-98
Yukon Territory, 1087

Sutherland, Mr. Donald (South Oxford)
Alderson, Mr. George B., claim of, 924, 1052, 2270-4, 4508
Animals slaughtered for export trade, 1051
Budget, 3584. Railway construction, 3585; industrial enterprise; class organization, 3586; Prime Minister and Progressive party, 3587; Grain Growers' Company, 3587; mill feeds, adulteration, 3589; foodstuffs and free list; farmers' sons and military service; Mr. King and the Government, 3593; Liberal platform of 1919, 3594; Farmers' party and record of Prime Minister, 3595
Butter importations, 3749
Cattle embargo, 706, 764
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4441-8
Experimental farms, 928, 931-6
Agricultural publications and, 1076
Flax industry, 1395
Grasshoppers, destruction of, 1030
Health of Animals, 1052-67; 2270-4

Sutherland, Mr. Donald—Con.
Highway construction in Ontario, 4296-4306
Illustration farms and stations in Ontario, 953, 956
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 610
Lake of the Woods Regulation Bill, 4219
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 3872-95; amdt. 3887
Oleomargarine, importation of materials, 3747
Parliament buildings, 3996
Return, alleged incomplete, 2250, 2270
Returned Soldiers, Special Committee, 788
Tubercular cattle, slaughtering of, 1051
Unemployment and Immigration, 1369
Veterinary Director General, 4508-13. See also under this title, Alderson
White grub, destruction by, 1030

Swan, Mr. D. D., consulting engineer, 1997

Tadoussac-Murray Bay Steamship Service
M. (Mr. Casgrain) 1528, 1822, 1825, 1930

Taft, The Hon. William H., 3205

Tailors, Sales Tax, 3955

Tampico, Government vessel at, 1716

Tappert, Rev. N., qu. 1673

Tariff, 7, 96, 125, 130, 132, 136, 147, 155, 161, 162, 167, 175, 181, 211, 218, 238, 241, 251, 256, 263, 272, 285, 296, 315, 322, 337, 350, 353, 371, 388, 394, 398, 412, 528, 559, 417, 437, 432, 570, 476, 479, 484. See also Address; Canada-West Indies; Customs; French Trade Agreement; Special War Revenue; Ways and Means
Changes, 2938-55, 3119, 3121, 3696, 3725. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Commission, 3055, 3241, 3640
Rice Jones, Mr. Cecil, evidence before, 418. See also Rice Jones
Report, inquiry for, 1127, 3055
Legislation, 3118
Policy, 1878
Preferential, with West Indies, 2251
Protective, 1285
Reciprocity Agreement with United States —Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) 2038, neg. 2075
Reduction of—Amdt. (Mr. Fielding) to Budget, 3155, neg. 3686
Resolutions, 3121. See also Customs Tariff; Ways and Means
Revision of, 2, qu. 903, 2346, 3150, 3159, 3160, 3220, 3342, 3392, 3420, 3482, 4254. See also United States, Young Emergency Tariff

Tar Sand Rights, General Lindsay, qu. 671, 834

Taxation. See also Revenue Bills
Banks, qu. 2192, 3664
Burdensome, 1292
Business profits, 484, qu. 576, 3120, 3253, 3445
Cost of collection, 2100
Direct, 3147, 4344
Excise, qu. 1236, 3120. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Forms—revision, qu. 1237
Income Tax. See also that title
Appointments to staff, 2106
Collections in Saskatchewan, qu. 2028
Farmers from, in each province, qu. 569
Incomes of over $200,000 qu. 838
Instructions in French, qu. 2624
Penalties, qu. 2100
Preparation of return and computation of tax, 2567
Regulations, 1272
Returns, 2625, 3147
And penalty, 2101
Tax-payers—farmers, qu. 838
Taxes for 1920, qu. 2821
Income and Business Profits, cost of administration, qu. 837
Inconsistencies in, 3550
Indirect, 3221
Land. See Land Taxation
Law stamps, 1090
Job printers, 4123
Luxury, qu. 402, 600, 1191, 3114, 3285, 3445
Abolition, 1185
Motorbus, remission, qu. 603
Mutual companies, qu. 605
Postal war tax, 4515
Provinces, 3705-6, 3742
Railways, 1008
Sales, 3120, 3372, 3485, 3545, 3735-52-54, 3957. See also Special War Revenue Act Amdt.
Collections, qu. 2506, qu. 3830
Sales by farmers, 3956
Three main principles of, 3221

Taxation of Judges. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Teakle, Mr. R. B., 1934

Telegraphs and Telephones, 3988, 4539
Cape Breton, 3987
Government business, 4130
Isle aux Coudres, extension, 4540
Loretteville-St. Gerard, 4539

Telephones. See also Marine Signal Service
Berthierville, qu. 1233
Kamouraska and Temiscouata Co., 2175
Service, 4093

Témiscouta
Indians 2168
Telephones 2175

Temperance Act, prescriptions under, 3730. See also Canada Temperance Act

Tenders. See Purchasing Commission

Terminal Elevators, 277-79, 1442. See also Canada Grain Act; Grain; Wheat
Maintenance, 1463
Overages, 3634

Textiles. See Trade

Thanksgiving Day, date of, qu. 2098. See also Armistice Day Bill

Theft, Motor cars of. See Criminal Code Amdt.

Thessalon wharf 3975

Thompson, Mr. Alfred (Yukon)
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill 4480
League of Nations, 55
Mail contract, White Horse-Dawson, qu. 2686
National Research Institute 2698-2700
Natural resources, 851
Proportional representation, 1553
Rulings as Chairman:
Member in order in reading from newspaper, 1891
Tedious repetition, 1892

Thompson, Mr. T. H. (East Hastings)
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4441-7

Thomson, Mr. Levi (Qu'Appelle)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 345; congratulations to Prime Minister; country's obligations to returned soldiers; conscription; United Grain Growers, Limited, 345; marketing of grain; sale of implements and other commodities; two party vs. group system; proportional representation 346; the amendment; different premises but same conclusion; confidence of the country; by-elections; consequences of vote on amendment, 348; no confidence in Government; the tariff, 350
Agricultural shows, 1241
Ames, Sir Herbert, resignation, 1317
Automobile theft, 3914
Budget, 3310. Sales tax and valuation of foreign imports; Canadian Reconstruction Association, 3312; protective Thomson, Mr. Levi—Con.

Budget—Con.
tariff for industries, 3315; free trade, 3315; raising of revenue; land tax, 3317
Cattle embargo, 714
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3897-9, 3914-35
Crushed grains, 3746
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Free trade, 4419
Indirect increase in tariff, 4419
Trade agents, 3808
Valuation for duty, 4419
Customs drawbacks, qu. 2375
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill
Candidate, death of, 3095
Disqualified voters, 3098
Foreign-born wives and children of British subjects, 3104
Forms, 4228-47
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4237
"Personal naturalization", 4245
Recount, 3097
Revising officers, 3102
Dominion notes and gold reserve, qu. 1234
Farmers and protected interests, 3751
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 751
Justice Department
Law-clerk stenographers, 1078
Maisonneuve and Gaspé, representation, 2335
Military preparation, 2300
Point of order—member must accept statement, 3629
Proportional representation, 1534
Reciprocity agreement with United States, 2064
Representation in Parliament, 1317
Trade commissioners in the United States, 1465, 1484
Welland canal, construction, 2989
Wheat Board, 1453
Position of Mr Crerar, 1460

Three Card Monte. See also Criminal Code Amdt., 3921

Thunder Bay, Ice-breaking, 2174

Thursdays and Fridays, Rule 17C. See House of Commons, Estimates

Ticket-of-Leave, case of W. H. Tapley, res. (Mr. Casgrain) 970

Tilley, Mr. W. N., K.C., qu. 1001. See also Grand Trunk Arbitration

Timber. See also Forestry
Culling, 1426
Ontario limits, 3391
Tobique reserve, cutting on, 4503

Tinctures and Elixirs. See Customs Tariff

Tinplate Industry, 3326-7

Titaniferous Ores. See Research

Tobacco
Canada-West Indies Trade, 2254. See also that title
Cigars and, unlawful sale, 3786
Duty on, 3698
Excise taxes on qu. 1236
Experimental station at L'Assomption, 918, 946
Growing, 91, 1076, qu. 1500, 3669
Protection, 300, 3676
Harrow tobacco station, 1076
Licenses, 2554

Tobacco Buyers' Association, 91

Tobin, Mr. E. W. (Richmond and Wolfe)
Anderson, Mr. A. H., qu. 735
Black, Mr. A. H., qu. 735
Brackenbury, Mr. G. B., qu. 735
Civil Service bonus, qu. 1623
Douglas, Mr. H., qu. 735
Grand Trunk
Arbitrators, salaries, qu. 1130
Pensions, qu. 964
Taking over, qu. 838
Printing Bureau employees, qu. 1348
Quebec highways, aid to, qu. 2344
Rural mail carriers, qu. 964
Taxation forms, revision, qu. 1237

Tobin, Mr. W. J., and Soldier Settlement Board, qu. 1133

Tobique reserve, timber cutting, 4503

Tofino wharf, 3981

Tolmie, Hon. S. F. (Minister of Agriculture)
Accredited herd, 1049, 4506-12
Agricultural shows, 1245
Agriculture. See also under this title, Health of Animals, Live Stock
Benefits from agricultural bulletins, 1075
Department, estimates, 917
Publications Branch, 1074
Salaries, 1036
Seed inspectors, 1033
Alderson, Mr. George B., claim of, 925, 1052, 1059, 4512
Animal Contagious Diseases Act Amdt. Bill, 2031, 3011, 2942
Banff National Park, 4495
Berry boxes, 4115-16
Budget, 3648; dry dock at Esquimalt, 3648; Pacific coast trade, 3649; tonnage entering Canadian ports, 3650
Canadian Forestry Association, 4495

Tolmie, Hon. S. F.—Con.
Cattle
Embargo, 722
Feeding for export, 1120
Marketing, 1121
Cold storage, 1039
Montreal Harbour Commission, 1041
Municipally-owned plants, 1040
Dairying, 1036
Dairy herds, 1118
Dairy Products Grading Bill, 4437-48
Destructive insects, 1027
Dominion lands, 1334
Entomology, 1024
Esquimalt dry dock, 3648
European corn borer, 1032
Exhibitions and fairs, 1123
Experimental farms, 942
Farmers' clubs and cattle herding, 1117
Flax industry, 931
Forestry, 4494
Forests—aerial patrol, 4495
Fruit growing, development of hardy varieties, 1043
Fruit inspection, 1041
Inspectors, 1042; distribution of, 1045
Grasshopper and insect plagues, 1030
Health of Animals, 4506, 4513
Compensation for slaughtered herds, 1048
Diseases, 1048, 1051
Glanders in Frontenac, 926, 1058
Hog cholera, 1058
Garbage feeding, 1058-9
Procedure in dealing with, 1061
Alderson, case, 925, 1052, 1059, 4512
Increase in amount of item, 1057
Inspectors, 1067-8
Pleuro-pneumonia and tuberculosis, 1048
Slaughtering, 1048, 1051, 1062
Veterinary system, 1058
Horse breeding, 120, 1118
Illustration farms in Ontario, 952
Illustration station at L'Assomption, 947
Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, 2166, 4498
Indian affairs, 2167-71
Insect and Pest Act, inspectors, 930, 1044
Inspection of root vegetables, 4343
Interior Department
Cabinet maker, 1342
Clapp, Miss S., 1332
Employees, 1332
Salaries, 1331
International Institute of Agriculture, 1116
Lignite Utilization Board, 4499
Live stock, 1116. See also under this title Agriculture, Health of Animals

Tolmie, Hon. S. F.—Con.
Live Stock—Con.
Commission men, 1122
Marketing, 1039
Pure-bred animals, distribution of, 948
Rescue policy, 1119
Migratory Birds Convention Act Amdt. Bill, 2442, 2891, 4496
Mines and Geological Survey, 2141, 2162-67
Municipalities—cold storage, 1040
Oleomargarine Act Amdt. Bill, 563, 3850-96, 3905
Pacific coast trade, 3649
Politics, participation in by public officials, 4503
Potato diseases, 1032
Refrigerator cars for fish, 1038
Seed Branch, 1125
Seed Grain 4506
Sheridan, Mr. John, resignation and reinstatement, 2173, 4501-5
Spruce bud worm, 1031
Surveyors, pamphlets for, 1335
Tourist traffic, 4495
Wool grading, 1121-2

Tonnage into Canadian ports, 3650. See also Shipping

Toronto
Customs building, qu. 3772, 4095
Customs officials, 1351
Harbour improvements, 687
Post Office
Appointments, qu. 734
Promotions, qu. 1673
Shipyards, 1889
University. See Research

Torrance, Dr. See Hog Cholera

Tourist Traffic, 4495.

Tractors, free, 3509. See also Agricultural Machinery

Trade. See also Board of Trade; Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; French Trade Agreement; Steamship services
Africa with, 1468, 1965
Agents and Commissioners, 525, 1392, 1464-77, 2893, 3460-2, 3785-3809. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Buenos Aires, 3794-8
Europe, in, 1473
United States, in, 512, qu. 1001, 1473, 3460. See also United States
Aggregate, 3115
Australia and New Zealand, 1223-4, 1468
British preference, 3699

Trade—Con.
Chamber of commerce, 1224
Development of, 1466
Export, 1688, 1712, 1732
Canadian Government Merchant Marine, by, 1276-77
Expansion, 1276
Figures, 3349
Foreign, 1221-1225
Canadian enterprise in, 3409
Imports, value, 3310
Invoice certificate, 4389
France, with. See French Trade Agreement
German. See Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Customs Tariff
Gillies Bros., Limited, letter on restriction of, 4418
Great Brtain with, 3116
Imported goods, marking, 3938. See also Customs Tariff
International Trade Conference, 2151
Report, 4541
Restrictions, 4418
Routes, 1888
Rates on. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Russia, with, 1003, 1072, 1224
South Africa, with, 1468, 1965
Treaties. See Canada-West Indies; French Trade Agreement; Reciprocity
United States. See that title
West Indies 1271, 1275, 1870, 2251. See also Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement

Trade and Commerce
Department
Bounties. See that title
Canada Grain Act, administration, 1442
Demography, Chief of, 1232
Dominion Statistician, 1231
Employees, 1218
Moving pictures, 599, 1225, 1467, 1558
Artists and Lecturers, 1225, 1232
Patent and Copyright Branch, 1496
Salaries, 1215
Increases, 1218
Statistical Branch, 1231
Subsidized steamers, 1712. See also Steamship Services
Weekly bulletins, 1220
Weights and Measures, 1485

Trade Mark and Design Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 229; withdrawn, 2891

Trades and Labour Congress. See Labour, National Catholic Unions
Platform of, 1634

Trahan, Mr. Arthur (Nicolet)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 223; disregard of rights of French language, 223; religious holidays; violation of pledge given by Sir Robert Borden; Prime Minister's professed friendship for Quebec, 224; attack on leader of Opposition and his supporters; military imperialism the mailed fist of commerce and industry; agriculture, the basis of industrial stability; industrialism fraught with danger; the "crisis of moral sense"; Pensions Act; the Prime Minister still a "downright imperialist"; Mr. Gauthier and the Minister of Marine; Quebec will remember 1917; War-time Elections Act; Government shows contempt for rights of Parliament and people; Peace Treaty; country's credit involved without the consent of Parliament, 226; Purchasing Commission; Canadian Navy; League of Nations; Prime Ministers' Conference, 227; Imperial defence; divorce; Quebec, 228; Government undeserving of confidence, 229
Civil Service
Ascension day, 2775
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 4484-89
Holidays, amdt. 4484
European credits, qu. 2622
Finance. See also that title
Accounts with Great Britain, qu. 2622
Dominion note issues, qu. 2621
Expenditure accounts, qu. 2621
Investments "other" and "non-active", qu. 2619
Public debt—non-active miscellaneous banking accounts, 2621
Repayment of $25,000,000 loan, qu. 2622
Revenue accounts, qu. 2620
Income tax returns, 2625
International Financial Conference, qu. 1237
St. Simon station agent, qu. 3208

Trains, Cancellation of. See Canadian National Railways

Tramp Steamers. See Canadian Government Merchant Marine

Transcontinental Railway. See Canadian National Railways

Transferable Votes. See Proportional Representation

Translation of French Speeches. See House of Commons; Debates; French language

Transportation, 738. See also Canals; Grain and grain trade; Great Lakes-St. Lawrence; Railways; St. Lawrence river
Difficulties, 3567
Car shortage, 512, 548, 3541, 4322
Rail and water, 484
Res. (Mr. Keefer) 674; withdrawn, 756

Travelling Expenses of Judges. See Judges Act Amdt. Bill

Treaties. See also Canada-West Indies; Extradition; Canadian Representation in United States; French Trade Agreement
Extradition between Canada and United States, 2687
Migratory Birds Treaty, 2892. See also that title
Negotiation of, 2387

Tremblay, Edouard. See Quebec Riots

Trent Canal. See Canals

Tributes to Deceased Members. See House of Commons

Trowers, Miss Catherine, qu. 1131

Trustees, remuneration of. See Bankruptcy Act Amdt. Bill

Tubercular Cattle. See Health of Animals

Tuberculin Test, 1049

Tuberculosis, Prevention of, Canadian Association, grant, 3142

Turgeon, Mr. O. (Gloucester)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 144; congratulations to mover and seconder; the new Prime Minister, 144; the "Great Liberal" dead but spirit survives; the world in an abnormal condition; Prime Minister's reasons for not holding general election; Government has forfeited confidence of country, 145; reasons for formation of Union Government; Government elected for term of war and demobilization, 146; people clamouring for election; tariff; increase of railway rates, 147; redistribution, representation of rural and urban communities, 148; increased production and population, 149
Budget, 3447. Financial conditions and Government policy, 3447; tariff revision, 3448; value of home market, 3449; luxury taxes; taxation of lumber; tariff and protectionist spirit, 3450; income tax, 3451; free trade and Turgeon, Mr. O.—Con.

Budget—Con.
Agrarian party, 3452; Brussels Conference; taxation of unemployed land, 3453
Caraquet Gulf Shore Railway extension, 4338
Civil Service bonus, 2112
Civil Service (Res. Sir Sam Hughes) Political patronage in; Civil Service Commission; classification, 825; exercise of patronage by members; outside service, 826
Grain exported, 3054
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, 745
Intercolonial Railway, 4568
Lumber, sales tax on, 3450, 3743
Maritime Provinces, improved railway facilities, 4568
Privilege—Hon. Mr. Veniot, 3740
Railway situation, 3039
Shipbuilding, 1951

Turnover, Tax on. See Sales Tax

Tweedie, Mr. T. M. M. (Calgary West)
Canada Temperance Act Bill
Costs, 4387
Gold Seal Liquor Company vs. Dominion Express Co., 4379
Proclamation, omission of date, 4379
Rights of others than litigants affected, 4379
Strict compliance with statute, 4380
Vote, 4379
Canadian National Railways
Special Committee, reference to, M. (Mr. Meighen) 1789
Canadian representation in the United States, 2411-14
Cattle, slaughtered, compensation, 1061
Chief Justice, salary of, 1566
Civil Service Act Amdt. Bill, 2833-84
Criminal Code Amdt. Bill, 3926
Punishments, 695, 2228
Dairymen, loss to through destruction of cattle, 1061
De Martigny divorce, 3765-7
Estimates, Committee on, 2202
Excessive or inadequate punishments, 695, 1857, 2228
Inspection of Gas and Gas Meters Bill, 619
Opium and Narcotic Drug Act Amdt. Bill, 2904
Natural Resources—transfer to western provinces, 2547-49
Pensions, widowed mothers, 636
Public buildings in Nova Scotia, 2744
Tubercular cattle, destruction of, 1061

Typhus
Epidemic in Europe, 4534
Precautions, 643. See also Immigration

Under Secretaries. See Ministers

Unemployment, 2, 3203, 3259, 3367, 3811-12, 4361. See also Address; Budget; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Housing; Immigration; Labour; Returned Soldiers; Shipbuilding
Emergency relief for, qu. 2623, 4535
Employment offices, 4363
Extent of, 4549
Housing loan, 4552
Immigration, suspension of
M. (Mr. Deslauriers. 1351; withdrawn, 1380
Insurance, 2, 9, 231, 237, 263, 284, 395, 4547. See also Address
Labour and, 1373. See also Labour
National Advisory Council, 4363
Relief, qu. 570, 4550
Emergency, qu. 2623, 4535
Returned soldiers, 4048
Peterborough in, qu. 4253
Shipbuilding, 1727, 1882, 1897, 1902, 1909
Quebec at, 1986

Unified Buying. See Canada Grain Act

Union Service Fund, qu. 2192

United Farmers of Ontario, 791, 3199, 3592, 4297, 4301. See also Drury
Railway nationalization, 1787

United Grain Growers, Limited, 289, 316, 331, 346, 417, 3662. See also Grain and Grain Trade, Progressive Party
Commercial activities, 516
Dockages, 3633-34
Lambert, Mr. Norman. See Lambert
Lumber business, 3633
Rice Jones, Mr. Cecil, 289, 290, 333, 417, 3180, 3492
Sale of American implements, 346, 418, 491, 3372. See also Speeches on Address; Budget

United States. See also Ambassador; Canadian Representation; Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Reciprocity; Trade
Annexation with, 1483
Attitude of Southern States on protection, 3458
Boots and shoes, Canadian in, 1225
Borrowings from, 3266
Canadian dollar, value in, 3087
Canadian Government Merchant Marine cargoes, 1689, 1722. See also that title
Canadian War Mission, 3388, 2400
Capital invested in Canada, 3219

United States—Con.
Coal from, 1248. See also Fuel Supply Problem
Coal mines owned by Canadian Rys., 4317
Commercial agents in, 1473
Constitution, comparison with, 1166
Consular service, 1475, 3460, 3796. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade
Customs regulations, 3817, 4417
Emigration to, 3068
Exchange rate, 3167
Extradition Treaty with, 2687, 3008, 3207. See also Extradition Convention
Tabled, 3207
Farming, competition in, 3187
Fordney Bill, 512, 3239, 3368, 3442. See also under this title Young Emergency Tariff
French Canadians in, 1483, 3675
Grand Trunk Railway
Amount due, 4135
Lines in, 4326
Immigration, 1360, 3064, 3068, 3072
Commissioner, 3059
Restrictions, 1357
Importation of farm implements from, 417, 492, 3372, 3409
Migratory Birds Treaty, 2892. See also that title
Nolan Act, patents, 4454
Patent legislation, 4454-60
Pecuniary Claims Convention, qu. 1817. See also that title
Premium on American money, 3087
Progress in farming, 3188
Pure bred cattle, 1049
Railways, 1007, 1576
Cost of operation, 1576
Government control, 1583
Systems and freight vessels, 1730-31
Reciprocity with. See also Address; Budget, 268, 297, 1481, 2038, 2045, 2058, 2066, 2075, 2393
Relations with, 400, 3245
Shipbuilding, 1288. See also that title
Tariff, 3456. See also under this head, Fordney, Young Emergency
Canadian duties, 4254
Tariff legislation, 3118, 3342
Tinplate industry, 3326
Trade agents in, qu. 1001, 1219. See also under this title Consular Service
Agents in Canada, 1221. See also Customs and Excise Dept. Bill; Trade Trade with, 1482, 3460, 4397-4400. See also that title
Barriers to, 3599

United States—Con.
Young Emergency Tariff Bill, 2905, 3160, 3115, 3352, 3809
Rumoured new tariff resolutions, 3905

United States Transportation Act, 1007

Universities, Scientific work at. See Research

Unopposed Motions for Returns, 578, 606, 674, 767, 840, 1134, 1238, 1350, 1502, 1625, 1821, 2193, 2346, 2507, 2821, 3090, 3423, 2772

Upper Chamber. See Ministers

Upper Crossing, St. Roch light, qu. 1383

Uruguay, seizure of Nova Scotia vessel, 1527

Vacancies. See House of Commons

Vallée, Dr., case of, 3131

Vancouver Island
Canadian National Railways on, qu. 3422
Returned soldiers and shipbuilding, 1727

Vegetable Insects, 1027

Vegetables, Root, Inspection and Sale, 4343

Venereal Diseases, 3127

Veniot, Hon. P. J., 3637, 3688, 3717, 3740. See also York-Sunbury

Verret, Colonel Hector, 4525

Versailles Treaty. See League of Nations; Patent Act Amdt. Bill

Verville, Mr. Alphonse (St. Denis)
Housing loan, 4552
Income tax collections, qu. 569
Unemployment, 4550
Emergency appropriation for, qu. 2623

Vessel Rates. See Railway Act Amdt. Bill

Vessels. See also Canadian Government Merchant Marine; Shipbuilding
Canadian National Railway, qu. 1348
Commandeered, qu. 2943
Names of
"Brant", 1982
"Canadian Beaver," qu. 1673, 1862
"Canadian Conqueror," qu. 1381
"Canadian Explorer," 1714
"Canadian Inventor", 1890
"Canadian Mariner", 1713, 1715
"Canadian Otter," qu. 1382
"Canadian Pioneer," qu. 1382, 1689, 1722, 1894

Vessels—Con.
Names of—Con.
"Canadian Planter", qu. 2942
"Canadian Rancher", 1716
"Canadian Ranger," qu. 1382, 1863
"Canadian Recruit," qu. 575, qu. 1381, 1382, 1703, 1863
"Canadian Runner", 1715
"Canadian Sapper", qu. 734
"Canadian Seigneur," qu. 1382, 1863
"Canadian Squatter", 1894
"Canadian Voyageur", qu. 1381, 1382, 1716, 1894
"Champlain", 1980, 1983, 1995
"Druid", 1980, 1984
"Esperanto", 4341
"Lake Champlain", ice-breaker, 2174
"Laurentian", qu. 1348
"Marie Lydia", 1985
"Montcalm," ice-breaker, 1985
"Muriel W.", 1990
"Narbethong", 2175
"Neophyte", 1966
"Niobe", qu. 671, 4010-36, 4041
"Rainbow", qu. 671, 4010-36, 4041
"Scandinavian", 1498, 1556
Seagoing, tonnage, 3650
Service, in, qu. 568
Wooden, 1714, 1728, 1871

Veterinary Director General, 4508-13. See also Alderson; Health of Animals

Veterinary Inspector General, 4513

Veterinary Inspectors. See Health of Animals

Veterinary Surgeons. See Health of Animals

Vice-Admiralty
Judges, 1084
Registrar in Quebec district, 1086

Vickers' Shipyards, 1967

Victoria
Drydock, 265
Contract for, qu. 565
Shipbuilding, qu. 599

Victoria Day, adjournment. See House of Commons, Adjournments

Victoria Bridge, widening, 300

Victory Bonds, 1285, 3444. See also Finance
Expenses, qu. 1620
Government investment in, 1704

Vien, Mr. Thomas (Lotbiniere)
Address in reply to Governor Generals' Speech, 430; Tribute to the late Thomas P. Owens, Editor of Debates; the late Mr. Gladu; does majority in the House reflect public opinion?; the Government's mandate, 430; Government elected in 1917 to enforce Military Service Act; the question of confidence; Liberal members of Cabinet; tenure morally at an end; Prime Minister's argument, 431; tariff, 432; fiscal policy of Liberal party; Farmer's platform; refusal of Canadian Manufacturers to sell to farmers' organizations, 434; Minister of Immigration; Canada's status; unity a real element of nationhood; Sir Wilfrid Laurier; dissolution, 436

Vien, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Address—Con.
Administration of Justice, Yukon territory, 1087
Agricultural shows, 1240
Bankruptcy Act, Judges under, 1085
Canadian Bar Association, 1095
Canadian Government Merchant Marine
Administration, 1441
Insurance and value, 1278
Vessels in service, qu. 568
Canadian manufacturers and United States trade, 1222
Canadian nationals, 772
Canadian National Railways
Conductors, qu. 569
Divisional points, qu. 574
Freight cars, qu. 568
Operating expenses, qu. 1131
Policy and history of, not in order, 1773
Service between Winnipeg and Quebec, qu. 569
Special Committee, reference to M. (Mr. Meighen) 1768, 1779
Transcontinental, transportation of grain, 2984
Canadian Record, 1438
Canadian representation in the United States, 2386
Canadian Wheat Board Bill, 2159
Cattle and horse breeding, 1118
Cattle embargo, qu. 709
Civil Service
Bonus and reclassification, 1463
Copyright—Bill not printed in French, 649
County Fairs, assistance to, 1123
De Martigny divorce, 4078
Director of Commercial Intelligence, 1219
Dominion Lands Act Amdt. Bill, 4062-6
Estimates
Before item passes question should be put in Com., 1091
Discussion of, 1230
Experimental farms, 939
Flax industry, 1408

Vien, Mr. Thomas—Con.
Fortifications of Quebec, 970
Gilmour and Hughson Bill, 1096
Grand Trunk loan, 4134-51
Grand Trunk loan, 4134-51
Hudson Bay Railway, 989
Iron ores, 1436
Law stamps, tax, 1090
Linen yarns, 1407
Loans, domestic, qu. 566
Judges
Ad hoc, and Admiralty, 1084
Yukon territory, 1088
Justice Department
Purchasing Commission and, 1103
Maisonneuve and Gaspé representation, 2319
Parliament buildings, 4077
French inscription, qu. 568
Penitentiaries, 1115
Purchasing of supplies, 1097, 1104, 1107
Pierreville postmistress, qu. 3422
Point of order—statement misquoted, 2231
Polish battalion for service in French army, 4058
Privy Council—"Insular" tribunal of England, 1090
Purchasing Commission, 1098, 1103, 1114
Civil Service Commission and, 1100
Railways and Canals, annual report, qu. 697
Research Council, 1436
Russia, trade with, inquiry, 1072
St. Croix and St. Antoine wharves, 2616
Searls, Mr. George, grain inspection, 1444
Soldiers' pensions, insurance and re-establishment, 4058
Trade commissioners in United States, 1220
Trent canal, 2953, 2978, 2606-17
Veniot correspondence, 3719
Vice Admiralty, registrar, salary, 1086
Welland canal, construction, 2978
Wheat Board, 1454, 1463, 2159
Winding-up Act Amdt. Bill, 2158

Ville Emard Tunnel, 3677

Vote on Account. See Interim Supply

Votes. See House of Commons, Divisions

Walker, Sir Byron, 2684

Wallace, The Late Mr. Tom G., tribute to, 152

War. See aslo Demobilization; Germany, Reparations
Accounts, Canada-Great Britain, adjustment, qu. 2191
British Remount Commission, qu. 4341
Canada's share, 3583
Canadian Mission in the United States, 2388, 2400

War—Con.
Claim of Canadian citizens, qu. 1820
History, qu. 1625
Indemnity, 3195
Loans, 3246. See also that title
Reparations. See Germany
Scandals, 3509
Surplus supplies, disposal of, qu. 736
Union Service Fund, qu. 2192

War Measures Act, 4459. See also Purchasing Commission

War Purchasing Commission, 2309. See also Purchasing Commission

War Times Election Act, 217, 322
Perpetuation of, 4238-40

Washington. See Ambassador at; Canadian Representation in the United States; Prime Ministers' Conference

Water Powers. See also Lake of the Woods
Canadian General Electric Company, 2607
Conservation Commission, 3960-70
Development of, 844
Director of, 1346
Films showing, 1467
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence. See that title
Lake of the Woods, 4171. See also that title
Trent canal, 2954-64

Waterways. See Canals; Transportation Commission. See International Joint Commission
Great Lakes-St. Lawrence, 674, 738
Chicago Drainage Canal diversion, 186, 2225

Watson, Dr., Chief Pathologist, 1050

Ways and Means, Committee of, 562, 2100. 3688, 3698, 3719, 3726, 3733, 3741. See also Budget; Tariff
Resolutions, printing of, 3207

Webster, Hon. Senator, 1990

Wednesday Sittings. See House of Commons, Sittings

Weed Seeds, 289

Weekly Bulletins, 1220

Weights and Measures, 1485

Welland, Binder twine factory, 3227

Welland Canal. See Canals

West Durham Election, 1324

West Indies. See also Canada-West Indies Trade Agreement
Cable, 1438
Canadian Government Merchant Marine ships, 1913. See also that title

West Indies—Con.
Canadian ships for, 1870
Conference of 1920, 1870, 2252
Customs tariff, goods under, 3698. See also that title
Importations, preference, 3698, 3704
Preferential tariff, 3704
Proposed union with, 2254
Steamship service, 1275, 1488, 1712, 1714, 2253-62
Sugar imports from, 3699-3700
Trade with, 1271, 1275, 1870, 2251

West Indies Trade Agreement. See Canada-West Indies

Western Canada
Antelope in, qu. 1134
Colonization Association, 2583
Natural Resources. See that title

Western Dominion Railway Company, 3343. See Private Bills

Western Provinces and Natural Resources
M. (Mr. Campbell) 2519. See also Natural Resources

Wharves and Breakwaters, for individual wharves. See their titles
Cape Breton, 4103
Lighting of, 1929
Repairs to, 1971

Wheat. See also Canada Grain Act; Canadian Wheat Board; Elevators; Grain and Grain Trade; Transportation
Consumption and production, 3369
Credit to Belgium for purchase of, qu. 1001
Crop of 1920, 438
Marketing, 342, 346
Marquis, 1033
Milling in bond in United States, 3368
Pool, 391
Price of, 369, 3395
Rust, 341

Whipping. See Criminal Code Amdt.; Opium and Narcotic Drug

White, Sir Thomas, 451, 477. See also Leeds
Resignation of, 1619
Status of, 69, 463, 469, 477, 1294, 1326

White, Mr. W. H. (Victoria, Alta.)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 548; congratulations to Prime Minister; grievances of the West; car shortage; Commission to investigate grain trade, 549; sentiment of the West; the Agrarian group, 550
Agricultural implements, 3394
Blood Indian reserve, qu. 1818, qu. 1819, qu. 2098, qu. 2374
Budget, 3538. Alberta's representation in House; Government regulation of oil

White, Mr. W. H.—Con.
Budget—Con.
and petroleum resources, 3539; inadequate transportation facilities in West, 3540; freight cars for grain shipments. 3541; agricultural implements, 3544
Canadian National Railways
Car shortage, 548, 3541, 4322
Western representation on Board, 4315
Canadian Pacific Railway, patents to lands, qu. 2821
Cattle embargo, 704
Dominion Elections Act Amdt. Bill, 4234-5
Naturalization—certificate of qualification, 4236
Immigration, 2574-9
Immigration Act Amdt. Bill, 3823-6
Reciprocity agreement with the United States, 2071
Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act Amdt. Bill, 2484
Soldier Settlement Board, qu. 673
Transportation charges on stock feed, qu. 2686

White Cross. See Burnham, Dr.

White Dog Rapids, 4172

White Grub, destruction by, 1030

Whitehead Life-saving station, 1991

White Horse, Judge at, 1088

Whitley Councils. See Civil Service

Wholesalers. See Sales Tax

Widowed Mothers. See Pensions

Wife Desertion. See Extradition

Wigmore, Hon. R. W. (Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue)
Civil Service Retirement Act Amdt. Bill, 2500-01
Customs and Excise Dept. Bill
Amalgamation of departments, 3821
Brokers, 4432
Certificate, form of, 3799
Explanation by Minister, 3786
New and unused goods, 3813
Preventive service, Victoria county, 4388
Provincial analysts' certificate, 3788-90
Valuation for duty, 4411
Customs and Inland Revenue Department
Belyea, Mr., retirement, 3082
Consolidation of offices, 3083
Estimates, 3077, 4117
Officers, 3083
Nova Scotia, 3096
Overtime, 4123-5
Retiring allowances, 3084

Wigmore, Hon. R. W.—Con.
Customs and Inland Revenue Dept.—Con.
Job printers, taxation, 4124
"Niobe" and "Rainbow," 4018-32
Personal business, Nagle & Wigmore, 3077, 3079, 3612
Shipyards, 1927
York-Sunbury election, Veniot correspondence, 3718

Wilson, Judge, superannuation of, qu. 1622

Wilson, Mr. Gordon C. (Wentworth)
Highway construction in Ontario, 4289-4300
Hamilton-Brantford highway, qu. 3582, qu. 3904, 4252-3
Privilege—Hon. F. C. Biggs, 4448
Purchase of trucks by Hon. F. C. Biggs, 4291
Warren company, qu. 4252

Wilson, Mr. J. R. (Saskatoon)
Highways—Saskatchewan, 4307
Income Tax Act Amdt. Bill
Prosecutions in Saskatchewan, 4347
Unemployment and immigration, 1373

Winding-up Act Amdt. Bill
1r., 2095-6; 2r., com.; 3r., 2158

Windsor, use of armoury, 902

Wines
Imported, duty on, 3126, 3705, 3710, 3734
Medicinal, 3709
Other than sparkling, 3710
Sparkling, 3711

Winnipeg
Fort Garry Hotel, insurance, qu. 1348
Grain Exchange, 277, 335, 343, 379, 440, 489, 513. See also Grain
Grain laboratory, 1228
Proportional representation in, 1532, 1535, 1538
Strike, 3359, 3360, 3560

Winnipeg river., 2347, 4172. See also Lake of the Woods

Winter Fairs. See Live Stock

Wireless Communications. See Prime Minister's Conference

Wire Worms, 1027

Wolffe, Mr., 793. See also Printing Bureau, Destruction of documents

Woman Suffrage, 173, 527, 4474

Women Voters. See Dominion Elections Act; Canadian Nationals

Wood, Mr. E. R., 1609-10, 3610. See also Canadian National Railways

Wooden Vessels, 1714, 1728, 1871. See also Shipbuilding

Woods, Mr. H. W., 288, 331, 380, 513

Woodstock Exhibition, 1125

Wool Grading, 1121.

Working Expenses. See Penitentiaries

World's Poultry Congress, 4513

Wrecking Plants, 1990

Wrecks, Investigation of, 1988

Wright, Mr. A. A., and Labour, 1647

Wright, Mr. H. O. (Battleford)
Address in reply to Governor General's Speech, 511; Congratulations to Prime Minister; Fordney Bill and its possible effect on Canada; Ambassador at Washington, 511; trade between Canada and the United States; adverse trade balance, 512; shortage of cars; Commission to investigate grain trade; foreign-born in Western Canada, 514; broader national spirit; national classification of census; leader of Progressive party, 515; commercial activities of organized farmers, 516; sale of American goods; purchases by Government in United States; Government's mandate, 517
Budget, 3565. Budget and taxation, 3566; Canadian Wheat Board; Agricultural and transportation difficulties, 3567; low price of farm produce and high price of farm implements, 3568; Farmers' platform, 3569
Civil Service bonus, qu. 967
Fish-breeding in Saskatchewan, 2185
Highways, Saskatchewan, qu. 1820

Yamaska By-Election, 1156, 1898, 3215, 3250, 3467, 4534
Boucher, Mr. Aime, 3422, 3423. See also Pierreville Postmistress; Park St. Charles Mondou, Mr., 3251
Vacancy, 1293

Yarrows, Limited, 3649

York-Sunbury
By-election, 2151, 3475, 3480, 3627, 3630, 3662, 3637, 3717
Catholic Minister, and, 3480. See also Veniot
Vacancy in, 1293

Yorkton Judicial district, Judge, 1080

York, West, vacancy, 1293

Young. See Arthur Young and Company; Civil Service, Classification

Young Emergency Tariff. See United States

Yukon Territory
Administration of Justice, 1087