

Loyalists, however, reminded his excellency that they were the "salt of the city," and of much else that would have been as well left unsaid. The reply was made to all in that cordial, kindly spirit that won the good opinion and the hearts of so many. Then there was a good deal of cordiality in the shape of hand shaking—that nerveless proceeding that exhausts both time and muscle.

Before the visitors reached Carleton House again the firemen had started, and silver trumpet filled with flowers. The 62nd Fusilier's band proved itself a good one. The men of the Amherst fire department evidenced that they would make a good fight on the morrow. Union No. 2 company should be proud of their turnout. The engine was beautiful with flowers and evergreens. Red and white roses were twined about the axles of the hose cart. The chief decoration of the cart was a solid pyramid of flowers with a large crown on top. On the back of the men look like men who would be able to put out a fire in double-quick time.

Then there was a break in the procession, and a plain every day barouche, with plain everyday horses attached to it, passed. There wasn't any label on it, nothing to indicate that an ex-mayor of St. John was in it. This was not in accord with the rest of the procession, and the firemen must have overlooked the fact that the concourse of strangers could not be expected to know Mr. T. W. Peters and Mr. Director Wisely, by intuition as it were. There were four seats in the barouche and only two occupants. At some distance on many other occasions, that it is a good one. District Engineer Clark followed the band in a carriage. The hook and ladder truck was next, and had a blue shield with the gilt inscription "H. & L. 3." It was beautifully decorated, and was drawn by three fine grays. The barouche that followed contained District Foreman J. A. Ring of Carleton and Chief Dibble of Woodstock. No. 4 engine had a large six pointed flower star on the smoke-stack. The hose cart had the mottoes, "True to the call," "Ready and willing," "Nunquam Non Paratus," and "Pro Bono Publico," which are all true as they passed along the streets the thousands upon thousands who saw them wondered at the work and skill expended upon and shown on the decorated carts, wagons and engines and cheered at the novel and pretty effect. Then it was that the people remembered the fact, that, but for the firemen the visit of Aberdeen would have been a slow affair, that, after all, the invitation went from them in the first place. And this was all by the way; now that he was here everybody was going to do their best to give him a good time.

There were two chiefs in the procession, Clarke and Kerr, and it was hard to say which one of them led the way. Both of them are paid by the city and so the citizens could afford to feel proud of them, to look at them in their handsome uniforms, to speculate upon their strength and weakness, their faults and follies, just as if they were their children, proud of them in their Sunday clothes but mindful of the fact that they needed correction, rebuke and praise just as infants do. The chief of all the police sat upon his grey charger that pranced and curvetted just enough to make the crowd edge away from the sidewalk and keep their eye upon him. The uncertainty as to his training, whether he knew how to kick or not, created a painful anxiety on the part of those who could but would not pat him as he passed. Yet the chief kept a firm seat and smiled benignly upon the crowd he always has his eye upon.

Staid and sombre on the contrary were the guards that followed, unused to the gait of the uncertain steeds provided for them, insecure in their seats, they had a trying time under the inspection of those who loved no better subject for a joke than a "cop."

Then Chief Engineer Kerr came in a carriage, decorated with pond lilies. The Moncton 7th Battalion band sent twenty men; the Moncton fire department sent twenty three. Their bicycle reel art bore a representation of a Scotch thistle, which looked far better at night, when it was lighted by electric lamps on the cart, than it did in the day time. After the Moncton firemen came twelve from Sussex, with a handsome cart. At the front of the cart sat a red headed boy, who took off his cap and yelled "fire." The joke took. Next there was district Engineer Blake, in a carriage driven by Master Blake. Pioneer No. 1 hook and ladder truck had a large pyramid was the coat-of-arms of Lord Aberdeen. No. 3 hose cart had a floral bell, twenty-four inches across and twenty-six inches high. The flowers used in decorating No. 3 engine and hose cart were nearly all natural ones. The seat of the engine was covered with roses. Four large black horses drew the engine. That the governor-general and lady have a keen sense of the ludicrous was evident from their appreciation of the grotesque costumes of the colored leaders of hose carts No. 1 and 2. Some of them wore dress suits of many colors, following the fashion of the Prince of Wales. The Artillery band followed No. 3 and had thirty pieces. The

What a contrast the silk hats of the party would have made. They represented different ages and different styles, and in this they became the owners, who were not all the same style. What character was in the side tilt of the Stanley ward alderman's head gear? What sturdy exactness in the perfect perpendicular of Director Wisely's, what strait laced rigidity in Chairman Seaton's and what precision of fashion in the well ironed, shining and modern tile of the ex-mayor's? What a show was lost through this negligence?

The Fairville file and drum band was immensely popular and was frequently applauded. The Fairville company was the youngest in the parade. Their engine and hose-cart was decorated with flowers. They had the only hand engine in the procession. The three little girls in white on the Fairville cart were particularly pleasing, it was noticed, to his excellency and party. The Carleton cornet band dispensed sweet music. No. 2 hook and ladder company of Carleton had two large ladders suspended on either side of their cart. The flowers were natural, and there was a profusion of them. Under the big floral bell sat boys dressed as firemen. Carleton hose cart No. 6 deserves special mention, its chief feature being a miniature suspension bridge, with real water beneath it, which ran fast or slowly according to the motion of the wagon. As the suspension bridge is that which brings the west end firemen to the other part of the city, the representation of it was admirably appropriate. District Engineer McLeod had a barouche. So did Chief Engineer Pickering, of Amherst, and Chief Engineer Gamble, of Sussex.

The City Cornet band gave evidence, as when applied to No. 4. No. 5 hose carriage had two miniature firemen represented, who carried tiny lines of hose up diminutive ladders. On the rear of the cart were the words "No. 5, 1894," in red with gilt border. The wheels of engine No. 5 had spruce around their felloes, and the spokes were hidden by red, white and blue paper flowers. The governor-general was well pleased with the No. 5 display, for it was essentially Scotch. The bear's head was on high, and there was plenty of heather and thistles, and the Gordon tartan. On one side of the engine was the motto "Fortuna Sequatur," the letters being in marigolds and sweet peas with a background of pond lilies.

No sooner had the last drum died away on Germain street than the visitors were rushed off to the Protestant orphan asylum! Can any one tell why this useful institution should be included in such programmes? How weary Aberdeen must be of such trips and what infinite patience he must possess. It is an institution that is more remembered when we have visitors than when they are not with us; but the lunatic asylum is also an institution, and yet nobody thinks of giving it a line upon the programme. Then the boys' brigade came next and after that his excellency must have remembered, it indeed he did not think of it before, that he was something like other people and wanted his dinner—lunch would probably sound better but as this was not on the official programme there does not seem to be any correct guide. No matter what it was, depend upon it he enjoyed it.

After dinner—or luncheon—another journey, this time to the Mechanics' Institute, where there were nearly 1000 of the women of the city assembled to hear a woman speak, to listen to an unostentatious leader who has shown her interest in her sex, in their aims, aspirations and rights at home and wherever she has gone, who is blessed in many an Irish home for her work in their behalf, and who above all that has shown herself a good wife and mother in that Englishman's palace—his home. This was an interesting meeting from the few words of Mayor Robegoon, Sir Leonard and Aberdeen to the vote of thanks voted to the countesses at the conclusion of her address.

No rest for Aberdeen—away he went to the Convent of the Sacred Heart—the beautiful grounds of which, as well as the commanding view, must have enchanted him. Then it he listened to the Mayor talk about the city of St John he must have a good deal

LADY ABERDEEN AT AGE OF 13. To think about when he returned to Sir Leonard's.

Nine-thirty saw him at the Royal hotel, ready to review the torchlight procession of the firemen. Those who saw them gain the balcony of that hostelry gained a new view of the governor-general and his party. (Continued on Fourth Page.)

Musical and Dramatic.

IN MUSICAL CIRCLES.

During the days and nights in the early part of this week—a period that will be recognized by the future historian of New Brunswick as among the memorable periods of this province—the air was filled with music.

The parade of Tuesday night I thought it was rather to be regretted—to whatever cause it was due—that when the halt was made in front of the Royal Hotel, it was not arranged so that it should occur when the City Cornet Band was playing its appropriate selections of Scotch airs—so that the band at the moment of the halt would be in front of the hotel.

Among these bands the Carleton Cornet Band, considering the handicap of inferior instruments and its youthfulness among the Bands received much favorable comment. There is a noticeable brassiness in one of the other bands which gives it a German characteristic that is foreign to the object of its existence.

It is predicted that Lillian Russell will not be a success in London. It is said that Marie Tempest will not sing in America next season. "Prince Pro Tem" will be revived for the opening of the Boston Museum.

The American burlesquer has added another note to her voice and she now has six. The London letter says that May Yobe, the American burlesquer has added another note to her voice and she now has six.

Among actors and actresses who are married there is a tendency to call their children after the favorite parts they have played. Mrs. Beerboom Tree, we are told, has called her little girl after her favorite Shakespearean heroine, Viola.

song cannot be sung too often, that his manager had difficulty recently in preventing him from singing it in a performance of "The Bohemian Girl."

Jean Gerardy is a violinist 14 years old, and Frieda Simonson is a pianist nine years old. They will tour America next season.

Theatre goers will remember Miss Jessie Villars who was here with "Bradley's players" a few summers ago. She is this season a member of DeWolf Hopper's Opera company.

Calve will sing in almost every section of Europe next year, but she will not come to America. Her tour is said to be laid out with the purpose of increasing her bank account, as she is to be married next year, and wishes to take her husband a considerable dowry.

TALK OF THE THEATRE.

A literary-dramatic event of much importance will be the appearance of the St. John Amateurs at Mechanic's Institute Thursday evening Aug. 23. Besides a double comedy bill, Act 3, Scene 1, of Hamlet will be produced, costumed after the custom of Shakespeare's players.

Readers of PROGRESS will be pleased to learn that arrangements are being made for the re-appearance of Mrs. Mountford in her "Oriental entertainments" in this city September 13th and 14th.

There are fifteen theatres in Boston. Sadie Martinot is coming back to America with new plays.

Augustus Daly is credited with having cleared $30,000 in Europe. Alf Hampton is reported playing at Keith's Union square theatre, N. Y.

The late Fati Rosa in private life was Mrs. John W. Danne, the wife of the well known theatrical manager.

The new play for Charles Dickson is called "A Jolly Good Fellow." It will be first produced in Washington D. C., 3rd September.

The "Roedale" company for next season will open in New York on 10th September. Miss Estelle Sylvane will play the part of Lady Adela.

W. A. Whitecar, who, while last in our city, was a patient in the hospital for a time, has entirely recovered and is again with "The White Squadron."

Miss Madeline Pollard, who has already acquired fame (?) through her breach of promise suit against Senator Breckenridge of Kentucky, is going on the stage.

"The Girl I Left Behind Me" will be played in England next season under management of Charles Frohman. The cast will be made up of American actors who have played this piece in the United States.

Miss Jennie Yeamans is suffering from nervous prostration and has been ordered to rest for several months. She was to tour with her mother next season.

Speaking of Mary Anderson, the Boston Times of recent date says, "Mary Anderson was never an artist; that she succeeded was due to her perseverance and steady work."

work. This, together with judicious advertising, and her beauty of form and face carried her through."

During the rehearsals of Romeo and Juliet at the London Lyceum, Mrs. Sterling, who is the most venerable of actresses, took occasion to remark that the nurse was not necessarily old, that she should be represented as middle-aged, etc., and she appealed to Mr. Irving. "My dear Mrs. Sterling," said the manager, with delicate satire, "you may make the nurse just as youthful as you can."

The well-remembered names of Henry B. Bradley, Ernest Hastings and William D. Hanbury appear as members of M. B. Curtis' "Sam'l of Posen" company for next season. Every theatre-goer knows Harry Bradley, who played with Harkins in "Jim, the Penman."

John Drew is a great favorite in San Francisco. He will open his New York season at the Empire theatre next month with "Christopher, jr." In this play he marries a girl without seeing her. Years afterwards in India he meets her, woos her and marries her.

LIFE WITHOUT LOVE.

I was first attracted to my future wife by a song. Have you ever tried to remember by what means you were drawn toward the object of your affections? I assume that you have affection, and are lucky enough to possess an object who reciprocates them. If you have not, pitiable indeed is your lot. It was doubtless something she said, or did, or looked, the first time you saw her; for, believe me, all true love is born at first sight, although the victims of the tender passion may not even themselves be aware of it.

ets, I drew them forth full of gold, and cast the shining pieces in her lap.

"It is mine. No one can dispute my right to it. Heaven knows, I have paid dearly enough for it! It has been bequeathed to me. I can explain no more; but be satisfied with this, Mary, that we shall always be rich, and never want for anything again."

REPENTANCE.

False ideas of this are the Basis of All that is Deploable in the Church.

False and miserable ideas of repentance are at the basis of all that is deplorable in the church. The inconsistencies of its professing members have their origin in a misunderstanding of that word. The idea is prevalent that the man who weeps and trembles in terror under a powerful sermon is "under repentance." He may be repenting, but it is a great deal more likely that he is afraid he is going to be righteously punished for his sins and is terrified at the thought of the extent of that punishment. A child may have the same feeling when he has been caught in a lie, or in some other misconduct, and is obliged to bear the castigation which is to be administered. The thief has the same feeling when he stands up to receive his sentence, and the murderer has it when he is going to the scaffold.

THE SOCIABLE MAN.

Some of His Characteristics and Why We Love Him.

The sociable man is the most favored of mortals, if he who is always cheerful and happy can be said to be favored, and who shall hold to the contrary?

It does not necessarily follow that the sociable man is always a source of cheerfulness or happiness to those with whom he comes in contact. On the contrary, a very little of him is sometimes quite enough, while very much of him is cloying, not to say weary.

But the sociable man is ever upon the best of terms with himself, and it is impossible for him not to be a pleasure to those with whom he comes in contact. He does not seem to be a comfortable man to know, but one is not in the mood to read the most interesting or the most diverting of books, and so with the sociable man—his sociability is at times untuned to our feelings, and then is a distraction rather than a diversion, an annoyance instead of a benefit.

It is true he always has to say what he considers the proper thing for the occasion. If it is a sweltering summer day, he remarks how hot it is, which cannot be otherwise than comforting to one who is nearly melted. If you are pale, or abnormally flushed, he very appropriately informs you that he never saw you looking so bad, and then perhaps endeavors to reassure you by narrating how Mr. So-and-so was taken the same way you seem to be taken only a week ago, and that he was buried yesterday.

All this is told in his own sociable way, and if it does not immediately interest you it is a pleasure, or should be, to see how it interests him.

The sociable man has a way of warming out of you the story of your daily life, with all its care and concern, and in doing this he seems to be performing a disinterested service, inasmuch as it is a relief to have an ear at hand into which to pour the tale of our troubles and disappointments, and the sociable man in thus casting his bread upon the waters, has it all returned to him, not after many days, but immediately, and he has the wherewithal to be more sociable than ever to others in rehearsing what you have told him.

THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

David's Name at the Root of the English Royal Family Tree.

Even queens have their ungratified desires. Her Majesty the Queen has so far been denied a pleasure which many women have had. It has been a dream of hers to look down upon Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives. Books on the Holy Land have always been a delight to her. Appropos of this fondness of hers a curious little story is told.

It is said that her Majesty has a certain faith in the theory that the Ten Lost Tribes can be proved to be the British people of today. Consequently she must have some sort of faith in one branch of the remarkable problem—that which professes to prove her direct lineage from David through the eldest daughter of Zedekiah, who, with her sister, fled to Ireland in charge of Jeremiah, the prophet, then an old man, to be married to Heremon, the King of Ulster of the period.

Mr. Glover, a clergyman in the Anglican Church, made the interesting discovery of the Queen's belief when in 1869 he addressed her on the subject of the connection between the British people and the Lost Tribes. Her Majesty sent for him to Windsor, and, to his astonishment informed him that what he thought he had been the first to discover had been known to herself and the Prince Consort for many years. The Queen then caused the Royal Family tree, which is a very sacred object to Her Majesty and her sons and daughters, to be shown him; and there Mr. Glover found various missing links that he had been vainly seeking. David's name he discovered engraved at the root of the tree, and the name of Victoria in a remote top-most branch, yet for all that in an unbroken straight line, all other links having apparently ended centuries ago.

THE FIELD FLOWERS' TEXT.

Silence everywhere, and shadows, save where the red glow of the sanctuary lamp and the pale gleam of flickering tapers faintly illumined the shrine. Stately palms standing ghostly in the shadowy background, roses and lilies of regal beauty, trailing sprays of lustrous blossoms twining the pillars of the tabernacle, and just at the door a cluster of field flowers, buttercups, cloverblossoms, and daisies, in lowly reverence paying homage to their Maker. Common field flowers, nearest of all to the living Presence! "The lowly shall be exalted," murmured a worshipper, as the message of infinite love entered the heart; "it not here, dear Lord, then at the eternal door of thy tabernacle, shall the lowly be exalted?"

A Policeman's Mother.

It was cruelly cold for a mother and her children to be thrown upon the world. The policeman on his rounds saw the dark forms under the leafless trees in the public square. It was long past midnight. The electric light flickered and snapped and dimmed, as if to hide the sight. A flood of brilliancy poured out of the big windows of a club not many yards away, and fell almost at the feet of three sleeping forms. The children were very young. The little girl nestled close to the side of the mother, with her hands buried deep in the folds of her mother's worn cloak. The boy's arm was thrown across his mother's neck, and the lower part of his body was buried in the folds of his skirt. His little round hat had fallen off, and rolled bottom up a little way off. The policeman paused. He thought he had discovered more tramps to rouse up and pass on to the nearest shelter. Then he saw his mistake. He scratched his head for a precedent. Must he arrest them, and send them the way of other prisoners convicted of vagrancy? Then he looked down into the sleeping faces once more. His hand played nervously with his trousers pocket. Then he decided. He dropped them into the hat of the child; and as he walked away he wondered why the electric lights flickered and dimmed and danced so much more violently than they did a few minutes before.

It isn't in the Bible.

The oft quoted proverb, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," frequently and wrongly ascribed to the Bible, occurs in Laurence Sterne's "Sentimental Journey." The Inter-Ocean explains, however, that it is but a rendering of a proverb much older than Sterne's time. The "Sentimental Journey" was written about 1767. But Bishop Hebert, nearly 100 years before in his "Jacula Prudentum," uses the expression. "To a close shorn sheep God gives wind by measure." Etienne, a French writer, in 1694 said, "Dieu mesure le froid a la brebis tonduë" (God measures the cold to the shorn ewe). Etienne gives another form of the proverb as "Dieu donne le froid selon la robie;" that is, "God will not let the cold exceed the warmth of the fleece," or, as it is less poetically rendered by another French writer, with a different and more practical meaning, not so frequently falsified by the actual facts of life, "God cuts a man's coat according to his measure." That this proverb is French in origin there seems no doubt, as various versions of it are found in different writers.

eat alligator's flesh; his answer was, 'No, sahib; I have made it my Deo, but many in my village eat it.' 'But do you not get angry when they kill and eat your Deo?' 'No, Sahib, I make another,' he replied.

We walk here, as it were, in the crypts of life; at times from the great cathedral above us we can hear the organ and the chanting choir; we see the light stream through the open door, when some friend goes out before us, and shall we fear to mount the narrow staircase of the grave that leads us out of this uncertain twilight into eternal life?—Longfellow.

Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of the First Baptist church at St. Paul, bids fair to be among the leaders of the local clergy in more ways than one. Aside from his faculty of conducting the attentions of a congregation by a clear and logical analysis of the points under consideration, he is a story-teller of no mean ability, and his illustrations are often amusing and always to the point. At the last ministers' meeting he was raking over the croakers who, as he said, are pleased at every calamity as a premonition of impending ruin, and he told of an individual named Stewart who would keep the good people of his town in an extremely nervous condition by prophesying the end of the world. One day an unbeliever asked Mrs. Stewart, the prophet's wife, if she really believed the world was coming to an end on the date he had named. "Well, I don't know," she replied, "but I do hope it will, for it will do Mr. Stewart so much good."

A BOON TO ALL SICK ONES

Cures When Other Medicines and Doctors Have Failed.

RESTORES THE SICK TO HEALTH.

"I Can Attribute My Restoration to Health Solely to South American Nervine." Says C. J. Curtis, of Windsor.

C. J. CURTIS, WINDSOR, ONT.

When one has climbed a high mountain it is not difficult to mount the ordinary hill. A medicine that will cure when the case is a desperate one, may be safely taken as a good all round medicine in ordinary cases, and it is not alone the very sick who need medicine.

The statement is borne out by a multitude of facts, thousands of testimonials from reputable citizens, that South American Nervine cures, after what are considered the best medicines in the country have failed, and where the skill of the ablest physicians has come to naught.

The acknowledged scientific principle of disease is weakness and disorganization at the nerve centers. These nerve centers are the main spring of the whole system. When the stomach is out of order the certain remedy is to set the nerve centers in right condition again, so with every other trouble. Thus it is that it may be liver complaint, nervousness, indigestion, heartburn, sour stomach, loss of appetite, impoverished blood, somnolence of the lungs, catarrh of the stomach, sick or nervous headache, sleeplessness, pains in the kidneys, or other ailments from which a person is suffering, South American Nervine will cure, and cure quickly, and best of all cure effectually and lastingly in every such case.

Much as we were disposed to laugh at La Grippe as a trifling complaint when it first made itself known in this country, later developments have proved that it is a serious malady. The after effects are such that very thorough measures need to be taken to ensure perfect restoration to health. South American Nervine has proven wonderfully efficacious in giving back health to the victims of La Grippe. Mr. C. J. Curtis, a wealthy and well known farmer near Windsor, Ont., suffered from a severe attack of this malady, leaving him exceedingly weak and with no appetite. No medicine seemed to do him any good until he was influenced to try South American Nervine and his testimony is this: "After taking one bottle I found very great benefit from it, my appetite improved wonderfully, and I felt my strength returning very fast." Mr. Curtis then purchased five bottles, and after taking only three out of the five, to use his own words: "I am feeling as nearly well today as I ever did, and I can attribute my restoration to health and strength solely to South American Nervine."

REAL ESTATE AGENTS. $1.25 per yard. 8c. per yard. C. J. CURTIS, WINDSOR, ONT. Province. Water, etc. WRITING of them. JOHN, N. B. June 28th, 1894. We have a "YOST" machine in our stock for about four months, and it has given us satisfaction as to its durability, and the improvement over any other type-writing machine we have used. We have had a clear view of what was essential and what was not essential. He refused to be entangled in disputes about minor things. The question of whether a man might eat meat publicly sold, was in his time a burning question. Some said it was possible that had been offered in sacrifice to an idol and they were horrified at the thought that they should eat it. Paul scorned all such silly notions. The Kingdom of heaven, he said, was not meat or drink. Still, if the consciences of others were disturbed by it, he would abstain altogether and eat no meat while the world stood. He would not allow such a question to diminish his influence. So with baptism, which separates the church. He congratulated himself on having kept out of that controversy. He thanked God that he had baptized none of them; God had sent not to baptize but to preach the Gospel. He wanted to live with men as a brother that he might bring them to Jesus. He would accommodate himself to their ways, respect their weakness, sympathize with their trials, make himself one with them and save their souls. His example gives us the key to success. The Salvation Army has won its way by this means. It went to the slums, it rescued the fallen and sent them to win others. It occupied no pulpits, but sat with the sufferer in his chamber, knelt by the drunkard in the gutter, showed human sympathy and brotherliness, and so accomplished its purpose. And the purpose—what was that? We have too much forgotten it in our day. We have sat at the feet of eloquent and learned preachers to learn of them, but Paul's desire was that men should learn of Christ. His mission was to bring them to

WOMAN and HER WORK.

Though the rather exaggerated incroyable bows are no longer as universally worn as they were in the spring, there are still numerous devices in the shape of neckwear which serve to give a style and distinction to the simplest costume at a very moderate expense. Few of these new ties reach below the waist, and the ends are therefore less in the way, and less likely to get soiled than the very long ones. One very handsome tie which is suitable for an elderly lady, is of black moire ribbon five inches wide. The collar is two and a half inches deep, and covered smoothly with moire, in front, set on the lower edge is a large soft bow of the ribbon, with ends fifteen inches long. On these ends and also on the knot of the bow is set an applique of duchesse lace. It made a very rich looking and elegant decoration, to be worn with either the plainest, or the handsomest dress.

PRETTY AFTERNOON DRESSES.

The gown on the right is of seal crepon with black ribbon loops and bows over fans. There are wide moire revers, with black jet guimp over shirred pink ribbon. The vest front is of white chiffon and lace. The center figure shows a white serge suit, tailor finished, with white satin vest, cuffs and revers. The bonnet is to be a leading style this fall, and is of cheney ribbon and gaufered silk. The gown shown on the left is of pink figured challis trimmed with black silk.

Another, and more striking neck decoration was in cravat style, with fitted dog collar covered with folded cherry velvet, the folds held in place by a large rhinestone buckle in front. From beneath the lower edge of the front, fell a deep frill of of three inch Valenciennes lace, which was carried up to the front in a jabot fold to the top of the knot, where it returned over the bow in the centre.

Descriptions of these pretty trifles could be multiplied to an utmost unlimited extent, but the few I have mentioned will serve as examples, and they can be varied to suit the taste and the purse of the wearer.

I never can understand how women with a particle of taste, or even the average allowance of vanity, can disgrace themselves with some hideous garment simply because it happens to be the fashion! The skirted basques, especially those with the additional monotony of a "double ripple basque," that is two skirts instead of one, and both hanging in fluted folds, is one illustration of this weakness; the long coat basques of three years ago were pretty and had a certain style of their own, but the ungraceful flapping draperies attached to some of the bodices worn this summer are a disfigurement of the female form divine, and should be discouraged by all women who wish to be really well dressed. They destroy the outline of the figure, and I firmly believe make the waist look large, though they are supposed to have the very opposite effect.

FOR COUNTRY MORNING WEAR.

A deep frill of lace falling from one of the very short basques so much worn now, is not so bad, but even that will give a homely appearance to any but the most slender figures.

Another illustration of our slavery to the goddess of fashion, is the manner of headgear we are to adopt during the coming autumn and winter, if the advanced models of millinery are to be depended upon; because nothing so perfectly hideous, and wickedly dowdy has been seen since the coal scuttle horrors of our grandmothers' day.

It may sound like exaggeration, but according to a very up-to-date fashion writer, some of the new designs resemble the bonnets of fifty years ago, coming close down over the ears, and well over the nape of the neck. The materials of which these models are composed are almost as ugly as the bonnets themselves, being a mixture of horsehair and straw, in open work patterns and with scalloped and notched edges. Around the upper edge of the crown of these graceful creations is a sort of chevaux de frize of the fancy braid standing up sharply like a miniature picket fence,

NEW SUMMER BLOUSES.

The blouse at the top is of halaine taffeta, and is shirred closely around the throat. There is a collar and also a belt of blue ribbon loops. The draped balloon sleeves reach to the elbow. The lower figures represent a waist with gathered polka and huge draped sleeves of velvet striped silk and a large incroyable bow in front. Two bands of white insertion cross the bust and back. That on the left shows a waist with polka and a cord around the waist line. The short figure is of surah with Bulgarian embroidery. The sleeves are coat shape with large draped caps.

and by way of trimming a plain ribbon is folded around this crown, ending on each side with a small bow without ends. The ribbon is then brought forward and continued into strings which tie beneath the chin. Immediately on the top is a small bunch of flowers, set amongst upright loops of ribbon. Inside the brim, and around the face like the "bonnet caps" of the fifties is a puffing, or shirring of crepe lisse or tulle in some pale tint. The whole bonnet is lined throughout with silk of the same color as the puffing, which of course shows slightly through the semi-transparent openwork of the bonnet itself.

Another model is a sort of cross between a salvation army poke and a wide sun hat of the present day slightly tied down over the ears. It has a wide brim which is slightly narrower at the back and forms something very like an old fashioned bonnet "curtain" when it is on the head; the brim is lined with silk or velvet and the trimming is a folded scarf of silk around the crown, ending in front in a cluster of soft bows and loops, the strings are set on the outside of the brim, quite far back, and tied under the chin. I know just how hideous this description must sound, but it really falls far short of the models themselves, if the illustrations do them anything like justice. I only hope they may be merely a Parisian "scares" as it were and that none of us will ever reach the length of wearing anything so ugly and so unbedays of bicycles, trolley and cable cars, they are really dangerous, covering the ears so that the sound of bells warning of both these sources of danger would be muffled, and the wearer's life in constant jeopardy, especially as the wide brim comes so over the face that it will have somewhat the same effect that blinders have upon a horse, and prevent the wearer from getting that quick side glance which is often the only warning she gets of the silent approach of a bicycle.

"My friends, there may be something in it!" so let us band ourselves together and make a determined stand against the deadly coal scuttle bonnet of our ancestors' day!

A little four-year old girl friend of the Gossiper astonished all at the tea table by remarking "Well, I'm not going over to the — any more," naming a very estimable family with which "she had been quite intimate." "Why not, pray?" asked her mamma. "Oh, I've found out all about them," was her evasive reply. "But what have you found out about them?" persisted her mother. "They're democrats," reluctantly confessed the child.

The popular material for Ladies' waterproof garments is Priestley's Cravenette, fine in texture, impervious to water but porous to air, you cannot tell by its feel or appearance that it is rain repelling, but when it is stamped "Priestley's Cravenette" and rolled on Priestley's Varinised Board you can depend upon it.

THE AMERICAN $8.00 Typewriter,

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

- Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all. Easy to understand—learned in 5 minutes.
- Writes just like a $100 machine. Weighs only 4 pounds—most portable.
- No shift keys. No Ribbon. Compact, takes up but little room.
- Prints from the type direct. Built solid and simple, can't get out of order.
- Printing always in sight. Capital and lower-case keyboard alike—easily mastered.
- Corrections and Insertions easily made. More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work.
- Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8 1/2 inches. Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price—$8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information.

TOADSPOOLS AND MUSHROOMS.

W. Hamilton Gibson, the Artist-Writer, Talks About Them.

Walking in the woods, recently, with a country friend, we were discussing this "toadstool" topic...

"What would you call these?" I inquired. "Those are toadstools, unmistakably," was his reply.

"Well, toadstools or not, you see there about five pounds of delicious vegetable matter for it is the common species of edible Boletus-Boletus edulis."

A few moments later we paused before a beautiful specimen, lifting its parasol of pure white above the black leaf mould.

"And what is this?" I inquired. "I would call it a mushroom," was his instant reply.

This mushroom proved to be a fine, tempting specimen of the Agaricus Amanita bilobosa, the deadliest of all the mushrooms...

How are these popular notions sustained by the facts? Many, indeed a majority of the most delicious species will not "peel" at all!
