

CHIGNECTO POST AND BORDER.

SACKVILLE, N. B., AUG. 20, 1885.

The fishing on the Banks of Newfoundland is said to be unusually good this year.

The Duke of Richmond has been appointed Secretary of State for Scotland, with a seat in the Cabinet.

Despatches from St. Petersburg say that there is a strong war feeling in Russia and military preparations are in progress in Finland.

The British Parliament stands prorogued until Oct. 1st, when it is probable that dissolution and the consequent general elections will take place.

The wife of Judge Peters, Charlotte, P. E. I., died suddenly on Tuesday of last week. Deceased was a daughter of the late Sir Samuel Cunard.

Owing to the continued drought in England, it is now thought that the yield of wheat and other crops will fall well below the estimates recently published.

Captain H. Streetfield, A. D. C. to the Marquis of Lansdowne, was married to Lady Florence Anson, eldest daughter of the Earl of Lichfield, at St. Mark's Church, London, last Saturday.

The North-West rebellion is responsible for two knifings of Adolphe Caron, K. C. M. G., Minister of Militia, and Sir Frederick Middleton, K. C. M. G., Commander of the Canadian forces. The honors are well placed.

The committee appointed by the British Parliament to investigate the condition of Irish industries has ascertained, after the examination of an immense number of witnesses, that with the exception of the linen industry all are in a most wretched condition.

The New York World on Tuesday announced that it had accomplished its self-appointed task of raising $100,000 for the Bartholdi fund. Subscriptions were first called for on March 16th last, and on Monday last the total received was $102,006.93.

Dr. W. B. Jack, has resigned the Presidency of the University of N. B., at Fredericton, and is to have a pension of $1,000 for life. Dr. Thos. Harrison, professor of English, is to succeed him, at a salary of $1,000, which is $400 less than the salary paid hitherto.

The revolt against Mr. Blake's leadership has become pretty general all along the Grit line, but that gentleman is equal to the emergency. He has already stopped his subscription to Grays, and has intimated by elections are coming on, it is reported that he is about starting for England.

Hon. McKenzie Bowell, Minister of Customs, and Hon. A. McLellan, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, arrived at St. John on Saturday evening. Hon. Mr. McLellan, accompanied by his colleague, has been on an official tour of inspection of the lights, fog whistles, buoys, etc., on the coast of Nova Scotia.

Amid the pomp and pageantry attending the funeral of Gen. Grant it is a singular fact the riderless horse was omitted in the procession. General Grant was a superior horseman, and it was a remarkable oversight which deprived the greatest American soldier of an honor which is accorded to every private in a cavalry regiment.

The Queen's speech at the prorogation of Parliament contained no allusion to the suppression of the rebellion in the North-West. It is said the omission has occasioned chagrin among Canadians in London. It is thought that the courage displayed and the hardships endured in the campaign under Gen. Middleton were as worthy of recognition as the unsuccesses of the troops under Lord Wolseley to relieve Khartoum and save Gordon.

The greater part of the Grit papers are doing all their power to work up a war of races over Riel. In their reports of the excitement prevailing among the French there is reason to believe that they draw largely upon their imagination for their facts. A war of races or anything else that would enrage the Government would undoubtedly be welcome to the Grit journals, but even with their aid and comfort, the agitation with regard to Riel is not likely to assume alarming proportions.

The Lord Chief Justice of England is the last on the "ragged edge." Lord Coleridge, a venerable widower, visited United States last year, and in returning home met on board a Miss Lawford, a handsome and vivacious brunette, aged 30, daughter of a Bengal civil servant, deceased, with whom she had been struck up a flirtation. Reaching London, he became oblivious of the existence of his fair fellow traveler, until one day her mother waited on him, and, recalling to his mind the tender affection he had shown her, threatened breach of promise or marriage. The venerable trifler, with tender affections, thus brought to book-witted and the marriage was consummated at her house with the utmost secrecy, his own family being induced to the public for information of it. Lord Coleridge is the same gentleman who, a short time ago, was shocked at the prospect of his daughter committing what he deemed a mesalliance. With Sir Charles Dillie's divorce case and Lord Coleridge's extraordinary marriage, the people of England will have enough material to vary the rough current of political agitation during the coming elections.

Ship-building on the Clyde is at a low ebb. During the first seven months of the present year the tonnage has been less than in the same period in any year for the last ten, with two exceptions. In the last seven months the tonnage reached 103,815 tons. In 1883, when the highest figures of the ten years was reached, the tonnage was 27,595; in 1877 the tonnage touched the lowest point 94,400 tons.

The trial of Poundmaker commenced at Regina on Monday before Judge Richardson. Messrs. Osler Scott and Casgrain appeared for the Crown and Mr. J. Beverley Robinson defended the prisoner. On Tuesday Poundmaker was found guilty and sentenced to three years in the Penitentiary. He requested the court to hang him instead, rather than degrade him by sending him to prison. The court has adjourned till the 7th September.

The appointment of commissioners to take the census of the North-West territories is the preliminary step to giving representation in Parliament to the people of that country, whose rapidly increasing numbers and large and varied interests, as well as the spirit of our parliamentary system, require that they shall have representation. The next session will probably witness the introduction of the necessary measure.

Reports from various parts of the Annapolis Valley agree that the apple crop will be below the average. The quality, however, is said to be superior, the fruit being large, of good color and free from blemishes. The most general failure appears to be among the Nonpareils, but in some sections the yield of Baldwin and Bishop Pippins was quite good. Reports of the fruit prospects are apt to be unfavorable at this season, and considering the number of young trees coming into bearing, it will not be surprising if there should be a fair average crop.

The population of Ireland has decreased from 8,000,000 in 1841 to 4,918,000 in 1885. During the same period the people of England and Wales increased from 15,929,000 to 27,499,000, and the population of Scotland has grown from 2,642,000 to 3,308,000. England and Scotland have made a steady advance in population since the beginning of the century, and Ireland showed an increase of nearly three millions in the first forty years, but famine and emigration have brought the number down to a million less than it was seventy-five years ago.

We were surprised to find that a new candidate for public favor—the Halifax Critic—is reckless enough to defend the population of the trea-fre of the Historical Society by one F. Blake Crofton, to whose safe keeping they were entrusted. We could not imagine that any journal could so defy common decency as to justify an outrage that is only paralleled amongst those degraded races that possess none of the instincts bred by civilization. The Halifax, however, lets in a little light on the subject. It states that F. Blake Crofton is a contributor to the Critic. The defence was dictated in his interest, if not written by himself.

New York, animated by a desire to preserve the memory of the great soldier whose ashes have just taken place within her borders, and not being noted for the liberality of her citizens in the way of subscribing to popular objects, as was evidenced in the case of the Bartholdi statue fund, struck on the idea of inviting other cities to contribute to a great national monument to be erected within her borders. The scheme, however, does not seem to take well, and no other cities are that have either have taken up without her monument or be content with one that will show the liberality (or otherwise) of her own citizens.

A movement is on foot in Quebec to save Riel from the gallows. But it is easy to see that the feeling it has evoked is very different from that which, on a former occasion, pronounced strongly in favor of the culprit. The so-called demonstrations of sympathy consist, for the most part, of a party determination to condemn the Government for a judicial act which the enraged citizens foresee, or believe they foresee, is about to take place. There is really nothing to be said against the fairness of the trial or the justice of the sentence, and there will be no revenge in the execution. Only the most bigoted can make the question one of race; it is a question of justice not of race. No one has a desire to see the sentence executed because Riel has French blood in his veins; if he had been of English descent the feeling against him in Ontario would have been precisely the same as it is. —Monetary Times.

The following changes in the faculty of Kings College were made at the monthly meeting of the governing body last week. Rev. Isaac Brock, M. A., of Oxford, and late of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, was appointed Professor of Theology, and acting president, until a definite appointment of president is made. Charles D. G. Roberts, M. A., of Fredericton, was appointed professor of English literature and French. Mr. Hammond, who holds a B. A., of Harvard, and M. A., of Princeton, was appointed lecturer in classics, and was elected to the position of a rising young New Brunswicker who has already made his mark in literature, and Mr. Hammond comes highly recommended from the American universities in which he has studied. A committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions for a restoration fund for the purpose of putting the main college building in thorough repair. The college will re-open on the first of October.

THE CONDITION OF CANADA.

The persistent efforts of the Grit organs to depreciate the progress and prosperity of the Dominion can only be explained on the supposition that they believe their own condition and the prospects of their party will improve in inverse ratio to the injury they may be able to inflict upon the country. It is doubtless true that the cold shames of opposition have a depressing effect upon the Grits, and that many of them are unable to see any hopeful signs in their political horoscope, but these facts alone are not sufficient to account for the constant reiteration of the cry that the country is going to the dogs, or for the persistence with which they close their eyes and ears to every indication of prosperity and progress. The conclusion which is forced upon the student of Grit literature is that a large number of the organs of the Dominion have deliberately set themselves the task of preaching ruin and desolation, of disparaging every effort that is made to develop the resources of the country and of depicting their credit at home and abroad, in the hope of gaining thereby a political advantage. It is refreshing to turn from the dismal jeremiads of these prophets of evil and examine the actual condition of the country, and it cannot fail to give satisfaction to every true patriot to find that the real state of affairs is far from being as deplorable as it is represented.

The Dominion of Canada has existed but little more than eighteen years, and during that period its progress has been such that its extent is only exceeded by the British, Russian and Chinese empires. The population has increased nearly fifty per cent., and the wealth of the people has augmented in a far greater ratio. The country is placed in a position to be regarded as an indication of prosperity, the people of Canada have no cause for discouragement. The deposits in the Government savings banks at the time of confederation only aggregated $572,218, but on the first of last May they had reached the handsome sum of $31,715,347. In 1885 Canada had $4.63 assets for every $1.00 of liability, and in May, 1885, her financial position had improved to such an extent that her assets amounted to $6.13 for every $1.00 of liability. This does not appear to indicate a very rapid approach of national bankruptcy.

The enormous increase of taxation "is one of the principal bugbears" of Grit writers, and strenuous efforts are made to convince the people that they are groaning under an unbearable burden of taxation. What are the facts? Taking a population of 5,000,000 as a basis of calculation, taxation in Canada reaches $5.10 per capita. Subtracting from this the sums paid as subsidies to provinces, the taxation for Federal purposes amounts to $4.38 per capita, which is less than that of the United States and of the majority of European countries.

The figures in connection with the growth of trade are worthy of consideration. In the year ending June 30, 1888, the first year after confederation, the total exports of Canada amounted to $27,267,888, and in the year ending June 30, 1883, the exports had reached $100,000,000. Not a very bad showing for a ruined country. Since confederation the Dominion Government has expended $150,000,000 on public works of immense utility. This sum includes an outlay of $85,000,000 in the construction of the Canada Pacific Railway and loans to the company, nearly $30,000,000 in the purchase and equipment of the Intercolonial, and more than $30,000,000 upon a magnificent system of waterways, of which the chief links are the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals. All this has been done without adding more than $50,000,000 to the public debt. At the same time the credit of Canada stands higher than ever before, and she has secured the confidence of the shrewdest financiers in the world. This is abundantly proved by the fact that a few weeks ago Sir Leonard Tilley, the Hon. Charles Dillie, and the London money market a $20,000,000 loan bearing four per cent. interest at a fraction below 102. Taking it altogether, the condition of Canada is not quite so hopeless as the Grit papers would like the people to believe. It is estimated that by the first of January, 1890, the net debt of Canada will have reached its maximum. After that time it is probable that the expenditure upon public works will be comparatively small.

The C. P. R. will have been completed, the work required to perfect the canal system will have been provided for, and the necessary outlay upon public works and the various branches of the public service will be met by a revenue which is even now increasing in greater ratio than the expenditure. The people of Canada have reason to take courage in spite of reiterated prognostications of evil, and to press forward with hopefulness and confidence in the future. The wise legislation which has done so much to develop the resources of the country can still be trusted to guard the interests of the people. With the steady increase of trade and commerce and the wealth-producing power of the country, the burden of taxation, instead of increasing, will grow lighter and easier to bear. But the Grit organs will continue to prophesy ruin and disaster in the hope that the people will be induced by their pessimistic preaching to entrust them with the management of the ship of state.

An Anglo-Turkish agreement has been proposed, which provides that British war ships shall be allowed to pass through the Dardanelles in time of war.

The crack shots of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia are seeking fame and prizes at the Provincial Wimbledon this week.

The Ladies' Academy.

This popular institution re-opens to-day with a considerable number of changes in the teaching staff since the close of the last academic year. These changes have been noted in the Post from time to time, but a brief glance at the personnel of the staff will not be out of place at present. Rev. Byron C. Borden, A. B., Principal and Professor of English Language and Literature, is a native of Kings County, N. S., and member of the Mount Allison graduating class of '78. He had considerable experience as an educator before entering the ministry, and is believed to be eminently fitted for the responsible position to which he has been called.

Mrs. A. N. Archibald assumes the position of preceptor vacated by Miss Emma Sharpe. Mrs. Archibald was preceptor under the principalship of Dr. Inch and is well-known in Sackville and elsewhere as a lady of refinement and culture and the possessor of great teaching ability. Probably no better choice of a preceptor could have been made.

Prof. Albert A. Mack, who succeeded Prof. Grant as instructor in instrumental and vocal music, comes with the highest recommendations. He has spent fifteen years in Stuttgart, where he studied under the celebrated Prof. Spiegl, of the Royal Conservatory, in which institution he was afterward assistant teacher. Since his return to America he has been musical instructor and organist in the cathedral schools of St. Louis, which were founded by Mrs. A. T. Stewart. He will be assisted by Miss L. E. Black, a member of the former staff, and Miss Minnie Bishop.

Mrs. M. E. Townsend, who takes Miss York's place as teacher of Drawing, Painting, etc., has had five years experience as teacher of the art department of Cook's College Institute, Poughkeepsie, and brings the best of recommendations.

Miss Jessie F. Freeman, teacher of Mathematics and Latin, and Miss Annie R. Trueman, of the English Department, were both members of the former staff, and have won a high reputation in the past which is a guarantee of success in the future. These combined make a strong staff, and give abundant promise of a continuance of the efficiency and prosperity which have been marked characteristics of the Ladies' Academy.

To Cut Across Nova Scotia.

A Ship Canal Project that Greatly Interests the People Down East. (New York Sun.)

Boston, Aug. 16.—A ship railroad project of singular interest is absorbing the attention of men away down East, though little is heard of it in the United States. The scheme is modeled on the Canadian coasting traffic of the maritime provinces and develop the resources of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy. The railway is designed to connect Cumberland Basin, at the head of the St. Lawrence, with the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The isthmus which it is to span lies between Westmoreland county, New Brunswick, and Cumberland county, Nova Scotia, and is the boundary between these two provinces.

The Liberal Conservative Convention at St. John last Thursday evening was a large and thoroughly representative gathering, and was characterized by the utmost unanimity and good feeling. Mr. Charles A. Everett was unanimously selected to be the standard bearer of the party in the coming election, and it is extremely doubtful whether the choice of the committee could have fallen upon a better man. Without any intention of doing in the prophetic line, we think it safe to assume that Mr. Everett's chances for election are excellent. The electors of St. John are deeply interested in the progress and prosperity of the country, and are not likely to be swayed by the old party lines and traditions. The village yesterday presented a most animated appearance, all available accommodation being taken up by the numerous incomers.

The investigation commenced at 10 o'clock, and the object to be the payment of the claims against the companies, but primarily, in order to bring into operation the act of the Nova Scotia Legislature, it would be absolutely necessary that the laborers' claims should be paid at once or secured. Some 40 claims, involving about $80,000, were very fully gone into. The greatest good spirit seems to prevail among all—all are exceedingly pleased with the able manner in which the Commissioner is dealing with the several cases, and when a case comes up concerning a defaulting contractor, he takes the pleasantest means to inform the claimant he cannot deal with such claims. The $125,000 voted by the Dominion Government has been placed to the credit of Judge Clark, and cheques will be issued to-day to those who proved their claims yesterday.

The Presentation to Mr. Price.

The committee in connection with the presentation made to W. W. Price, Esq., at his residence on the evening of July 31st, have thought best to furnish a complete list of the names of those who contributed towards making up the amount presented at that time; and at the same time beg to tender their thanks as well as those of Mr. and Mrs. Price for the very many good wishes which accompanied their liberal donations.

THE LADIES of

Kitty and I.

Down by a brooklet's mossy brink,
Whose fair face mirrored a bit of sky,
The thrifty leaves stooped low to drink,
As the singing waters went rippling by,
And filling near in a quiet nook,
Where Kitty and I sat fishing for trout,
We watched the wooing of leaf and brook,
Till the light of a golden day went out.

'Twas a beautiful picture of sweet content!
The brook could do nothing but sing
and smile,
The indolent shadows came and went,
And the leaves kept whispering all the while.

So we left them happily wondering there,
For we were so busy with-bait and hook,
And the slippery fish (?) that we hoped to snare,
Pray, how could we list to the leaves and brook?

With her beautiful face so close to mine,
And her dainty mouth with its tempting point;
What wonder that, dropping hook and line,
I fished for Kitty instead of trout?

But all in a moment, when she caught
An inspiration from leaf and brook;
I was captured for life by her pitiful look.

And she held me her slave till the sunset's glow
Had tinted her beautiful face and hair;
For the wind and the sunbeams love her so.

They have their tenderest kisses there!
So the light of the golden day went out,
Leaving love's blessing on brook and tree;

I had fished for, and captured, a silver trout,
While Kitty, poor Kitty, caught nothing but—me.

the church to let it out a little on the

his trust in earthly things.

A lawyer addressing a jury on a case proved by strong circumstantial evidence, repeated often that "ninety-nine guilty men should escape rather than that one innocent man should suffer." The Judge, in charging the jury, told them that the "ninety-nine guilty
had long since escaped."

adored his Madonna, clasping his boy with an ardour that satisfied even Mrs. Dent. But when she was again, over the baby's name, and the baby's medicine, and the baby's clothes, and the baby's nurse, there were chances enough of agreement between the proud grandmother and the pious aunt.

We were homestead, and Mrs. Dent insisted on an old-school
allopath whenever the baby sneezed;
and we couldn't help saying one day, seeing the shelf of medicines
he was accumulating, that it was a pity he had the Graham constitution.

We wanted him named for his grandfather, a good Scriptural name that had always been in the family; but he had to be Harold, straight out of a novel. Letty had said, and when we called him Pat and Blossom and Prinseling, half to avoid that detestable name, half because he was so sweet, Letty declared that we despised her and her baby, and he wasn't worthy, she supposed, to be called after her grandfather unless he was called Mark,
and presently we were as badly off
as ever.

We laughed over the trifles that made our miseries; but it was no trifle when, with only a few days between us, she wouldn't let Rob come to see us for a month. It ended in our going down to the mills morning when he was there, and so getting to know the new superintendent.
Presently Pam asked him to the house, the Lady Boreham way, she had toward friendless people of all sorts and conditions. She never thought that he was no match for our Annie, the youngest and prettiest of us, and though she called her
"my little girl," she was only twenty-five, and not looking that.
But when she saw what she had done, and that something serious might come of it, though nothing had yet, for Frank Truman was as proud as he was poor, she put the blame where it belonged—on Letty's shoulders.

"For if it hadn't been for you,
my dear, we should never have known him. I never before knew a superintendent—socially, I mean."

"I don't think that is deplorable,"
said Letty, flushing, and taking it wrong, as I might have known she would—"to Annie, I mean—that she is only following in her brother's steps, but I should think, out of regard to both to him, and courtesy to me—"

"Why, I never meant to reflect on you," I cried. "We never disapproved of him, and he is a very good man."

"You never had a chance; and it wouldn't have done the least good if it had," she cried, defiantly.

"No, indeed," Pam said, coming to my rescue. "Rob was too thoroughly in love to mind if we had talked all day at him."

"I'm much obliged, I'm sure," Letty said, picking up Harold; "but if you mean to intimate that I tried
—that we tried—to capture my husband—"

"I only meant to intimate," Pam said, sweetly, "that you were then, as you are still, so very pretty that Rob—"

"Oh, then, I've nothing but my pretty face to thank for this," I put in. "Really, dear, the child grows more like you every day of his life."

"He's the image of his father," cried Letty. "Eyes, mouth, everything, would you say that if he were not. And you know you only say he resembles me to tease me."

That was perfectly absurd, for the child was Dent all over, more's the pity; but you might as well have tried to reach with a turkey-cock just then. She was up the baby and was out of the house while we were laughing at her vehemence.

We never could get into Letty's feelings about it, I suppose. We thought by this time, married two years, that we knew her, and so inclined to let things take their course,
not to take things more lightly;
but it was plain she did not. For she talked so to Rob about the certainty of marital shipwreck if a rich woman married a poor man—though it was all very well to say that, but she wouldn't let him do it, and she discountenanced the whole thing. He sent Frank Truman off to the West for a few weeks to look after some business of the firm, and in the meantime he brought down all Talbot's trunk. She was up the baby and was out of the house while we were laughing at her vehemence.
