JERRY COLLINS ON THE STAND
IN LONDON ELECTION CASE*Evidence So Far Fails To Connect the Defendants
With the Alleged Conspiracy.

[From Our Own Reporter.]

Toronto, Nov. 21.—When the London election trial opened today William Craig was the first witness called. He was formerly proprietor of the Craig House, Coleridge. He said Pritchett came to his hotel during the election between McLean and Holmes and registered as Garratt. Craig did not know what business was. He did not know O'Gorman. Craig did not see him, but did not know where. Could not recall whether there were other strangers with Pritchett or not. During Pritchett's stay several called to see him, but who they were witness could not say. He did not remember whether any persons were brought to see Pritchett.

Q.—Where did you see O'Gorman?
A.—I don't know.

Q.—You have seen O'Gorman at the court?
A.—Yes.

Q.—O'Gorman was a traveler?
A.—Yes.

Q.—He might have been in your hotel?
A.—He might have.

Q.—Where is the hotel register?
A.—I don't know.

Mr. John Stacey was next called. He said he was connected with one of the divisions in the Hyman-Gray election. There was no chairman of that division. Witness got some money from Mr. Reid, $15 or $20.

Q.—What was it for?
A.—For a clubroom.

Q.—Did Mr. Reid supply all money for legitimate purposes?
A.—All he supplied was for legitimate purposes.

Q.—Did any person else supply money?
A.—Yes.

Q.—From whom?
A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you tell O'Gorman you were going to "rough up" the whole story?
A.—No, sir. I never discussed it with any person.

Q.—How much money did you get?
A.—About $150, I suppose.

Q.—From whom?
A.—I don't know.

Q.—Did you count it?
A.—I did not. The money was in envelopes.

Q.—How many? A.—Possibly 15 or 20.

Q.—What was in each envelope?
A.—Don't know.

Q.—How did you get the money?
A.—I sent in list.

Q.—Who made up the report?
A.—I presume I did.

Q.—You have not a list?
A.—No, sir.

Q.—Who were associated with you?
A.—Lea and Ryckman.

Q.—These brought you a list of doubtful voters?
A.—Yes.

Q.—To be bought?
A.—To be looked after, I presume.

Q.—Who did you send the list to?
A.—I think it was addressed to the secretary.

Witness said he got a list of doubtful voters, as was customary, and sent it down to the central committee to be canvassed. He did not know money was to be paid to vote. Only a list of doubtful voters was sent to the secretary. Mr. Stacey had no previous communication with any person.

Q.—Did they know you wanted money?
A.—I did not tell them.

Q.—The only procedure was to send a list to the Liberal Club?
A.—Yes.

Q.—And you expected Liberals to send money?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Where there any of the prominent Liberals at the club?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Who?
A.—Mr. Reid, O'Gorman and others.

Q.—Did you see O'Gorman there often?
A.—Many times.

Q.—Did you send for money in any other campaign?
A.—I did not send for money in this.

Q.—Did you expect O'Gorman to give you money?
A.—No.

Q.—The envelopes came back with the names on them?
A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you distribute envelopes?
A.—Yes, some before, and some after election.

Q.—Did you promise these men money?
A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you remember to whom you gave envelopes?

Echo of Crystal Hall Wreck in Court

The following cases were dealt with yesterday at Osgoode Hall, Toronto:

Before Mr. Justice Meredith, in single court, Jeffery vs. McCallum, Casey Wood, for plaintiff, moved for judgment for possession. W. E. Middleton, for defendant, contra. The plaintiff leased part of the premises next to Reid's Crystal Hall, in London, to the defendant. Before the time named in the lease for the defendant to take possession, the building collapsed during some alterations being made to the building next to it. The defendant thereupon refused to take possession until the building was put into a proper state of repair. The defendant had been in possession under a prior lease, but averred that he had given up possession. Held, that the question as to whether the parties were in possession at the time of the collapse, being in dispute, could not be decided summarily, but must be tried.

No order made. Costs of motion to be costs in cause.

In single court, before Mr. Justice Anglin, in the case re Coy, judgment (G. A. B.), on motion (heard at London) for order declaring construction of will of John Coy. The question presented for determination was whether the sum of $1,000 bequeathed to his wife, who predeceased the testator, passed under the gift of all the real and personal estate to the son and three daughters, or whether the testator died intestate as to the $1,000. Order made declaring that John Coy died intestate, as to the sum of $1,000, bequeathed to his wife. Costs of all parties out of the estate, those of the executor between solicitor and client. D. C. Rosa (Strathroy) for the executor, and for the son and daughters named in clause 4. F. P. Betts (London), for the infant, Roy Luce. H. C. Pope (Strathroy), for Richard Coy, a decided summary, but must be tried.

The Case Against G. T. R. Is Dropped

As a result of the death of Mrs. Adeline Robertson recently, an action which was about to be begun by Meredith, Fisher & McDonald against the G. T. R., for the death of Mrs. Robertson's husband, who was killed at Newbury by a boiler explosion, has been dropped.

According to the law no action can be entered in the case of a married man except on behalf of the wife or children of the deceased.

Mrs. Robertson had no children.

ROYALTY WALTZES UNDERGROUND AS GUESTS OF DUKE PORTLAND

New York, Nov. 21.—A London dispatch to the American says: While a group of the ablest lawyers in England is trying to oust the Duke of Portland from his splendid estates in favor of George Hollamby Druce, the duke last night gave a lavish ball in honor of the "King and Queen of Spain at Wellbeck Abbey."

For the first time the wonderful underground apartments, which were constructed at a cost of millions of pounds sterling by the insane duke, were opened to his guests.

The King and Queen of Spain danced in the great subterranean ballroom, the walls of which are covered with priceless pictures, while supper was served in another tremendous underground apartment upon gold plate.

All the aristocracy of England was summoned to honor the Spanish royalties, and danced in the subway ballroom, and 1,200 guests sat down to supper in the underground picture gallery.

No Dumping of American Goods Here

"These scare stories that are being circulated about American goods flooding London are the rankest kind of nonsense, and there is not a word of truth in them," said Collector of Customs Elliott this morning.

"London merchants are not such fools as to buy American goods in the face of the duties imposed by the dumping clause, which was especially aimed to protect Canadian merchants and manufacturers from American competition.

"That no such goods are coming is simply borne out by the customs returns, which are not one bit heavier than is usual at this time of the year."

A Small Grist at the Police Court

Things were quiet at the police court this morning, there being only a few drunks to occupy the magistrate's attention.

John Butt, after a long absence, gave way to his longing for drink, and before he knew it was drunk again. He paid $2.

James Murphy, who has been appearing frequently on charges of being drunk, was fined $1. Fred Fuller, also drunk, was fined $10 or 21 days. He took the days.

Three first-timers were allowed to go.

In the juvenile court two little boys charged with coasting, were allowed to go after being warned not to repeat the offense.

Complaint of Frauds on the Market Sharpeners Beat Purchasers Every Day*Market Clerk Dean Has a Close Shave—Other Cases Noted.

The faking on the local market still continues. Weigh Scales Clerk Dean narrowly escaped being nipped.

Mr. Dean purchased some apples recently. On top were very large ones, but beneath were a lot of worm-eaten little things that would hardly do for cooking purposes. Mr. Dean got wise in time, however, and sent the apples back.

A good story is being told of a certain farmer, who recently sold a load of hay to a well-known liveryman. The farmer was noticed to be very cautious in forking over the hay in a certain corner of the wagon, and the liveryman became suspicious that all was not as it should be. Eventually the man got down to the corner under suspicion.

"I'll just keep that little hay," said he, "for the horse."

"No you won't," replied the liveryman. "I paid for the entire load and I want everything on that wagon outside of the driver."

Developments proved that there were ten bags of oats on the wagon, and as oats are selling at a very high figure the dishonest farmer was out almost as much as a load of hay.

When he saw that he was discovered he attempted to temporize and suggested that the oats be taken to the market and weighed again.

The liveryman, however, was obstinate and the oats were dumped into his bin. He figures that they are about the cheapest oats he ever bought and he also holds the opinion that at least one man will mend his ways in the future.

A Potato Deal.

Another man recently bought ten bags of potatoes. The only bag he opened contained fine potatoes, but when the other bags were opened at his home the potatoes were found to be black with frosts.

The man is poor and the loss means considerable to him. Unfortunately he does not know the name of the man who sold him the bad vegetables, but he declares that if he ever sees him on the market, and he refuses to make good the loss sustained, he will have him arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Market Clerk Maker says that if he had the authority he would arrest a half dozen of these shysters every day.

Niagara Power Will Cost $435,000
If All People Are To Get the Benefit*So Says One of the Aldermen —Ald. Gillean Still Wants an Expert.

Niagara power again held the boards at the city hall today, and, as usual, there was much difference of opinion on the subject.

Strange as it may appear, the committee which last night (with the exception of Ald. Garratt, who voted nay), decided to accept the figures of $435,000 additional debentures, and the whole truth, plainly before them? Why not tell them that the by-law for $235,000 will only provide for the distribution of power and light in the business center, and that if the other parts of the city will have to be treated similarly, the city will have to issue about $200,000 more debentures?

It is understood that despite the fact that he has protested that he knows nothing of Niagara power, City Engineer Graydon is to be sent to Toronto on Monday next to make a report for the city council. Undoubtedly Mr. Graydon is a good civil engineer, but it is not to be expected that he will be able to give an expert electrical opinion on the spur of the moment, as the special committee of the council is proposing.

The indications are that the bylaw will meet with some opposition when it comes up for consideration at the next meeting of the council.

Ald. Gillean did not care to make a statement on the point, but Ald. Garratt said it would mean the issuing of $200,000 additional debentures.

"And yet the workmen of London are told that if they vote for Niagara power they will get cheap light," Ald. Garratt continued. "It is not fair. Why is not the truth, and the whole truth, plainly before them? Why not tell them that the by-law for $235,000 will only provide for the distribution of power and light in the business center, and that if the other parts of the city will have to be treated similarly, the city will have to issue about $200,000 more debentures?"

Oxford St. Resident Badly Injured Fractious Colt Caused Accident*Mr. Phillip Edwards Has a Very Close Call for His Life.

Mr. Phillip Edwards, of 577 Oxford street, met with a painful accident, while driving this morning, which will lay him up for some time.

Mr. Edwards is an elderly gentleman, and was driving a colt which was somewhat fractious.

When near the corner of Adelaide and Oxford streets it jumped suddenly and became entangled in the harness and started to kick.

The aged driver was thrown out, and was severely kicked, sustaining a gash in the leg several inches long, which required a number of stitches.

In addition to this injury the bone was splintered.

He was removed to his home, where the injury was attended to by Dr. Campbell.

His escape from more serious injury is marvelous.

Medical Officers After the Milkmen
Three Hundred Quarts of Milk Seized*An Alleged Peculiar Case of a Butcher and a Diseased Cow.

Medical Health Officer Hutchinson and Dr. Tambling, the city veterinary, have made up their minds to improve the milk supply of London so far as cleanliness is concerned, and for some days past there have been wars and rumors of wars in the camps of milkmen and the men who supply the dealers.

Yesterday Dr. Hutchinson seized about 300 gallons of milk which, it is alleged, had been placed in dirty cans, and brought to the city for sale. When the cans were opened, it is said, there was a strong odor of cattle, and an examination revealed the fact that the cans were very dirty.

The man from whom the milk was taken was, of course, very wrathful, but the city officials being on the watch in full paint and feathers, refused to be bluffed, even when the dealer claimed he would sue them for the price of the milk.

Yesterday afternoon a certain colored gentleman took the milk for food for his hogs.

This Looks Bad.

Another case reported on by Dr. Tambling reveals some rather nauseating facts in regard to the meat supplied London, and at the same time serves as an object lesson for the establishment of a public abattoir.

In Westminster lives a certain man who sells milk in this city. It was reported to Dr. Tambling that this man was selling milk from a diseased cow, and an investigation was at once made.

No Change Regarding Mixed Marriages

The policy of Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, in prohibiting marriages between Protestants and Catholics on pain of excommunication has not been adopted in the Diocese of London, or is it likely to be.

Rev. Father O'Neill, secretary of Bishop McEvay, in an interview with The Advertiser this morning said: "No new rule has been made from the ordinary law which has been in force in this diocese for forty years. Catholics are allowed to marry Protestants, but, of course, a dispensation is necessary. I have heard of no intention to change the law in this respect."

"What about the new law in regard to the validity of marriages contracted between Protestants and Catholics before or after a priest of the Catholic faith?" was asked.

"We have not as yet received the official copy of it," Father O'Neill answered. "It has been delayed for the authenticity of the published reports. It only affects the marriages between Catholics and Protestants. Of course it does not affect marriages of Protestants which are valid in their own eyes and in the eyes of the church."

"You hold that marriage is a sacrament?"

"Yes, between baptized persons."

Protestant baptism is recognized as valid by the Catholic Church.

JUDGE REBUKES
W. KENT MEMBER*Further Disclosures Regarding Removal of Affidavits by Conservative.

Chatham, Nov. 20.—At the court for the revision of the voters' list for Tilbury Township, in Valetta yesterday, further disclosures were made regarding the removal of affidavits from the file by Conservatives. It was brought out that following the closing of the Raleigh Township voters' list revision court last Thursday, when it was acknowledged by the clerk and Conservative representatives that affidavits questioned by the Liberals had been taken from the file after subpoenas had been served on Tory lawyers for the purpose of getting at the facts, Mr. Clements, West Kent Conservative member for the Dominion House, had gone to Valetta, and he acknowledged that affidavits had been taken from the file. The judge rebuked Mr. Clements, and this was the second rebuke after a similar occurrence. Last Thursday, but a few hours prior to taking the affidavits from the Tilbury revision court file, he was rebuked for the Raleigh case, the judge holding the affidavits to be the property of the court.

A TERRIFIC GALE IS SWEEPING LAKES

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 21.—A fierce gale is sweeping the lakes today. The waves are high and flood every wharf in the harbor. The weather is mild. No disasters have been reported so far. Few vessels are moving about. The roof on the newly-renovated curling rink was badly damaged this morning by the wind.

KILLED HERSELF AND TWO SONS

Newton, Mass., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Jessie T. Hodges, wife of William T. Hodges, killed herself and her two sons, William aged 11, and Butler, T. aged 6, by asphyxiation at her home in Newtonville some time during the night. All cracks in doors and windows had been plugged and the gas turned on. Mr. Hodges was away on a business trip.

ST. ANDREW'S BECOMES INSTITUTIONAL CHURCH

Toronto, Nov. 21.—St. Andrew's Church, King street, Toronto, one of the oldest Presbyterian churches in the city, is making a radical departure in many ways. The church, when reopened, will be an institutional church in the full sense of the term. It will erect a young men's home, introduce an employment bureau, have a gowned choir, the ladies wearing black velvet caps designed especially for them. St. Andrew's, Toronto, is the fourth Presbyterian church in the Dominion to have a gowned choir. Others are St. Andrew's, Kingston; St. Andrew's, Ottawa, and St. Paul's, Montreal.

THE HAT WINS

Women Can Keep Headgear on in a Montreal Theater.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 21.—An interesting judgment was given by Judge Piche today relating to theaters and their management. Miss Barry, a woman journalist, recently attended a cinematograph moving picture theater, and, taking a seat, refused to remove her hat when requested to do so by Constable Lefebvre. She was eventually put out of the theater, whereupon she took action against the constable for assault. Judge Piche decided Miss Barry could keep her hat on in the theater if she wanted to.

Municipalities Must Bear the Cost
If Niagara Power Figures Are Wrong*The Hon. Adam Beck Says His Statement at Brantford
Was a Mistake.

In respect to the possible bearing of a portion of the cost of municipal power schemes by the Province the Hon. Adam Beck finds that the statement made by him at Brantford recently was not correct. Mr. Beck made the following statement to the Toronto press yesterday afternoon, and he repeated it to The Advertiser today:

"In answer to the question asked at the meeting of the board of control yesterday in regard to the statement that I made in the city of Brantford a week ago at a meeting held by the board of trade, that the Province, and not the municipalities, would be liable for the cost of power supplied to the municipalities, I am sorry to say that the statement was incorrect."

to the municipalities exceed the estimated cost of power embodied in the bylaws voted on and carried by the different municipalities in January last, I made the statement believing that the act so provided, but since making it the act has been examined by the legal adviser of the Government and the opinion given that my view of the act was erroneous. I hasten, therefore, to correct the misapprehension my statement has caused. I desire, however, to point out and emphasize the fact that there is absolutely no risk either to the Province or the municipalities that the actual cost of power will exceed the amounts set forth in the bylaws, as no contract will be entered into by the commission for the supply of power until, from the tenders received for the construction of the transmission lines, transformers and other appliances, the commission has ascertained that the estimated cost of the work will not be exceeded."

For Forgery and False Pretenses

Can a man acquitted of forgery be convicted on a charge of false pretenses. That is a question which Crown Attorney McKillop, Judge Macbeth and Attorney Scatcherd were worrying their heads over for three hours this morning.

Wm. Scott, of Tempo, was before his honor on a charge of having forged a note for $3 in the name of Eli Shaver, a farmer, of that neighborhood. Under the criminal statute a man cannot be convicted of forgery on the evidence of one witness, and as there was but one to testify against Scott, he was acquitted.

Mrs. McKillop, however, was persistent, and demanded that a conviction be returned on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. After a lot of arguing and quoting of authorities the matter was held over until Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. Scott had been working for Shaver as a farmhand, and had presented a note, purporting to come from Shaver, to the postmistress at Tempo, asking for $3. Shaver repudiated the note, and the arrest followed.

Scott's story was that he lost $3, throwing heads and tails, with competitors at the hotel of Daniel Thody, at Lambeth, the day before the alleged forgery, and that he had merely asked Mrs. Taylor for the loan of $3 to tide over temporary financial embarrassments. He denied having forged a note of any kind, and discredited Mrs. Taylor's testimony entirely.

Judge Macbeth, however, held that the woman's story was the most likely one.

Niagara Power Figures Accepted
Special Committee Appears Satisfied*Alderman Garratt Pled the Hon.
Mr. Beck With Pertinent Questions.

The meeting of the special committee held last night, appointed by the council to inquire into the question of Niagara power, was of considerable educational value to a number of aldermen, who pled both Hon. Adam Beck and Engineer Richards with an incessant stream of question, which kept these gentlemen busy answering. In the end the committee decided to accept the commission's figures, and the council was asked to pass the second reading of the bylaw at once.

In a statement presented, Engineer Richards gave the cost of street lighting by Niagara power in London at $46.37 per lamp per annum.

At the start, Ald. Garratt asked Mr. Beck how much the commission would charge the company that was doing the lighting for the city at present, to distribute power, the commission to supply the power and the company to distribute it.

"That is a question that you have no business to ask," said Mr. Beck, who seemed to take the query as an attack on himself, "and I need not answer it unless I like. No one has any reason to doubt anything that we have told them so far. I believe we will be able to get power in London cheaper than we had expected owing

Sneak Thieves Robbed the Wood Pile

Sneak thieves are again at work in the past few days half a dozen cases of petty stealing have been reported. Amongst those who have suffered is Mr. James Lutman, the genial assistant relief officer of London.

A month or so ago someone stole from the line the best shirt Mr. Lutman owned.

The assistant inspector felt like saying bad things, but he suffered the loss of the shirt in silence.

Last night someone again visited him, and stole nearly half a cord of wood, cut in blocks and stowed away nicely in a corner of the yard.

Mr. Lutman declares that he will give the thief a cord of wood, good measure, if he will reveal himself, so that he can be given the drubbing he deserves.

Runaway Creates a Spill on Market

A runaway on the market this morning caused a rather serious drop in fruit, poultry and potatoes.

A horse belonging to a farmer named Johnson, of Delaware Township, became tired of standing awaiting buyers for his master's produce, and started off at a fire-horse gait through the square.

Everything went fine for a brief spell, and the obstreperous animal apparently had visions of a warm stall and good hay to munch on in Delaware, when something happened.

The runaway collided side-on with another wagon loaded with apples, and there was a spill.

A party of newsboys happened to be passing along King street at the time, and they assisted materially in gathering up the fruit.

It is extremely doubtful, however, whether it all found its way back into the barrels, for boys are universally suspected of being fond of fruit.

The runaway horse was brought to a halt owing to the fact that the wheels of the two vehicles became locked, and it could go no further.

The two farmers had quite a noisy argument, in which Market Clerk Maker, who acted as referee, gave a drawn decision.

BOYD MUST HANG ON JANUARY 8

Toronto, Nov. 21.—John Boyd, the colored porter, who on July 11 last shot and killed Edward F. Wandle, in the latter's place on York street, was found guilty of murder this morning, and was sentenced by Mr. Justice Macmahon to be hanged on Jan. 8. The murder was a most cold-blooded and premeditated one. Boyd called at Wandle's restaurant on the morning of July 11 looking for a woman named Mrs. Naomi Carr, with whom he had been living, and was put out of the restaurant by Wandle. Boyd went away, purchased a revolver, and a box of cartridges, and returned in the afternoon to the restaurant. Wandle was upstairs and Boyd followed him from room to room, until he finally found him in a bedroom, where he deliberately shot him dead.

SEVEN MEN KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Kenora, Ont., Nov. 20.—In an explosion this afternoon on the eastern construction works of the Grand Trunk Pacific at Dryden, Ont., a point east of this place, seven men were killed and four injured. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Kenora, Ont., Nov. 21.—Word reached here last night of a terrific explosion in the G. T. P. construction camp known until they return.

PARTIES WHO OFFERED BRIBES
WERE NOT THE DEFENDANTS

West Londoners Tell of Many Mysterious Payments in the London Election Case.

[From Our Own Reporter.]
Toronto, Nov. 20.—The afternoon session was rather uninteresting. Mulvey was spoken of in a couple of instances, but it was not shown that he took any active interest in the campaign. Sifton figured very prominently on several occasions, and Tom Lewis also figured in witnesses' testimony.

The End in Sight.
The end of the prosecution is in sight. Two or three minor witnesses will be called in the morning, and then Jerry Collins will take the stand. Sifton will follow. It was hoped to finish the crown's case tomorrow night, but that is hardly expected, as Collins alone will take all day. The defense will open Monday. The crown will not call any witnesses from Brockville, West Huron or other places, it was stated here tonight.

On opening of the stand this afternoon, Mr. J. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., crown prosecutor, asked Judge Winchester if he might read the evidence of two witnesses.
"I am instructed that these two witnesses are out of the country," said Mr. Staunton. "The sheriff at London has tried to serve them, but cannot do so. I do not want to go to the expense and trouble of bringing them here. It will not take long to read their evidence. I refer to Mr. John Cox and Mr. Andrew Robson. I am told that they are in the States."

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston objected to the reading of Mr. Robson's testimony, but waived any objection to that of Mr. Cox.
Cox's Evidence.
Mr. J. C. Judd read Cox's evidence. It stated that shortly before the election Mr. W. J. Mulvey came to Cox's hotel, and asked him to hold an envelope for a man named Trudell. Some time after the election Mr. Mulvey came to Cox, and asked for the envelope, and it was turned over to Mulvey. Trudell afterwards came and asked for a letter. This envelope was the only one left with Cox. Witness did not know what was in the envelope, and Mulvey never told him. He never discussed politics with Mulvey.

Mr. Johnston objected to Robson's evidence, as it implicated none of the defendants. Robson acted on his own initiative. He did not object to the reading, but the substance.
"It can be read," said Judge Winchester. "We will know then about the substance."

Found Money in Pocket.
The evidence of Andrew Robson was to the effect that some time before the election he found $35 in his coat pocket. Who put it there he did not know. He expected to get some money for expenses, as he had reported to the committee that he needed some. Witness insisted that he did not know who put the money into his pocket. He spent some money on car fare, refreshments, etc. Nearly all of the money was spent for treating at hotels. Witness admitted that he had paid three voters, by name, Farr, Ackland and Williams. No one had instructed him about these men. He had bribed the same men at the Beck-Rumball election. This lot was his flock. The money came in the same way as the other. It was left in his overcoat pocket. He did not know who put the money there. He had told the committee that he needed the money. He might have spoken to one member. Witness had no means of finding out how the men voted. He also offered a man named Givies $15 for his vote. Witness could not have given Givies the money if he had been offered $10 by the Conservatives, and Robson wanted to go him one better. He thought Givies got the money from the Conservatives.

Examined by Mr. Judd.
Hamilton Ramsey was the first witness after adjournment, with Mr. J. C. Judd in charge of the prosecution. Witness said he was a resident of West London. He had worked in elections. His house had been used as an election booth, several times, and at the by-election, he went to see Mr. Buchner, the returning officer, about using his house. Shortly after, not having heard from Mr. Buchner, he went to Mr. Edgar Jeffery's office, and was told that the polling booth would be situated on Wyatt street. Here he met Mr. George Olmstead, a former cigar manufacturer. After the election Jerry Collins called on him, and told him that there was some money for him at George Olmstead's. Acting on that advice, he went to either Mr. Jeffery's or Mr. Buchner's office, and inquired for Olmstead. Something was said to him to the effect that he had better go to Sifton's office. He went there, and received $10 from someone at the Electrical Construction Company.

On cross-examination, witness said that he was told the reason his house was not used was because he had not gone about it sooner.
Q.—Some friend gave you $10 to make up for the loss of your house as polling booth? A.—Yes, that's right.
Q.—You don't know who gave you the money? A.—I do not.
Q.—Was it Sifton? A.—I don't know him.

Mr. Edgar Jeffery.
Mr. Edgar Jeffery followed. He was secretary-treasurer of the Young Liberal Club during the years 1904-1906. There was a distinction between the Liberal Club and the Liberal Association. Both organizations held meetings in the same building.
The Liberal Club did not hold any meetings during election times. Witness took charge of the legal work in connection with the officers and other work. He also assisted Mr. Buchner.
Q.—You handed in the name of Collins? A.—I did.
Q.—Who suggested him? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Were all deputies who recommended appointed? A.—Nearly all so far as I know.

Q.—Did you know Collins as an active partisan? A.—I know he was a Liberal. I did not know what work he did.

Witness said he had appointed Collins merely with the rest.

Q.—Do you know O'Gorman? A.—Yes, slightly.

Q.—Did you know him in connection with elections? A.—I have seen him in the Liberal rooms, but never knew him in connection with elections.

Q.—He told you to look after some man as the Tories were after him? A.—I think so; but I don't remember who.

Q.—How were the Tories after him? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Don't you know anything about that? A.—No, sir, I don't remember.

Q.—Did you know O'Gorman had a room in the Liberal Club? A.—Not by personal knowledge, only by hearsay.

Q.—Now tell me. A.—I only heard so.

Q.—Tell me if he had a room there? A.—I don't know, except what I have heard.

"I must object to this line of questioning," declared Mr. Johnston. "Hearsay is not evidence. We are not interested in what he heard."

"But this witness is an adverse witness," said Mr. Staunton.

"He certainly is not an adverse witness," declared Judge Winchester.

Continuing, witness said none of the defendants had told him that the bedroom in the Liberal Club was O'Gorman's. He had heard it was, but had never seen O'Gorman in it. Witness had been in the room with the caretaker.

Q.—Did you ever see a letter written by Mr. Moore protesting against the appointment of Collins and Milne? A.—Not until the election trial.

Q.—It was never sent to you or Mr. Buchner? A.—I never saw it.

Q.—You heard they were objected to? A.—Yes, on the street.

Q.—Mr. Reid never objected to the appointment of any deputies? A.—No.

Q.—Mr. Reid was the boss? A.—Not a boss. He gave instructions about matters in general, but was not a boss.

Q.—Did you ever get any money from Mr. Reid? A.—I received subscriptions for the Liberal Club, and also $100 for a reception.

Q.—Nothing further? A.—None.

Q.—When did O'Gorman leave London? A.—I don't know. I think it was after 1905.

Mr. J. M. McEvoy, K. C., conducted the cross-examination.

know the man. He could not recognize any of the defendants as the man who gave him the money.
Q.—Do you see anybody in the court room who looks like the man who gave you the money? A.—Yes, that one there, pointing to an astonished newspaperman, and causing a howl of laughter from the audience.

Mr. Staunton tried very hard to get witness to connect some of the defendants with the transaction, but Mr. Cooper could not swear who it was, as the man was a complete stranger to him. The stranger said that Mr. Cooper might as well have it, and Mr. Cooper took the money.

Q.—You thought it was your duty to take the money? A.—Very few would refuse to accept a gift.

"The money was not given you for your vote, or to effect your influence," asked Mr. Johnston. A.—No, sir, I have always been a Liberal.

Mr. Oscar Wootton followed. He got $10 in his pay at Hyman's tannery. Witness denied having seen William Downing about his vote. He took Sifton to see this man about his vote. He took Sifton several places during the election. Sifton asked witness about several voters, and was taken to see them by witness. Wootton took no part in the conversations between the men, and knew nothing of what was said. Daniel Holmes was sent to Sifton by witness. Frank Pryor's residence was also pointed out to Sifton by Wootton. Tom Lewis was a visitor at the West London committee rooms. Downing came to witness after the election, and asked for his money, but he was sent to Lewis' hotel, where he could be told as to Sifton's whereabouts. Sifton and Lewis had been seen together in a few London committee-rooms, but he had not seen them do any work together. He was off three days from Hyman's tannery and his wages were paid just the same.

"This money was paid you by Mr. Hyman in spite of the fact that you had lost three days in canvassing voters?" asked Mr. Johnston. A.—Yes, that was it.

Mr. George Ardy was questioned by Mr. J. C. Judd. Ardy had worked in several elections. In 1904, at the general election, the committee on which he worked was composed of men residing in that division. In the Beck-Rumball election, the same thing obtained. In the by-election, Sifton and Tom Lewis worked in his subdivision. They came over to assist Ardy and informed him of their intention. Sifton came over in a few days and asked Ardy to inquire who were out for money. Witness agreed to do so. He found six, among them being Rose, Johnson, Howe, Jones, Kelly and Tolhurst. He saw them during the week. Ardy was three alone, and Sifton was with him when he saw the other three. They were told if they voted right they would be given some money. After the election Sifton gave him the money for the votes, and it was paid over.

Q.—What outsiders were there? A.—Sifton and Lewis occasionally.

Q.—Now, give me the names of some of those on the committee who would be present. A.—John Hobbs, William Wilson, Spence, Cooper and others.

Q.—Whom did you suggest as deputy? A.—Mr. John Hobbs.

Q.—Why was he not chosen? A.—He refused to act.

Q.—Who was chosen next? A.—Alex Milne.

Q.—When did you talk with Milne about that? A.—About the time Sifton and Lewis came in that division.

Q.—About the time he was told there was money in it for him if he acted? A.—Yes.

Mr. Judd started to read Ardy's evidence at the police court, as it did not jibe with his present testimony and Mr. Johnston objected.

"You can't do that," said Judge Winchester. "This is your own witness and you want me to believe him. Surely you don't want him to contradict himself."

There was no cross-examination.

Mr. Ardy called but did not respond.

George Stevenson then took the stand. He said he was a voter in the Gray-Hyman by-election. Jerry Collins saw witness about his vote in Collins' Hall. Mulvey was there at the time, and Collins offered him a ten-spot if he voted right. He got the money at Lewis' hotel shortly after the election. In the upper room was Mulvey, Collins, Lewis and several others.

"Do you know which election it was?" asked Mr. Johnston. A.—The Gray-Hyman election.

Q.—Was it a local or Dominion election? A.—The local election.

Q.—You would have saved $5 for your vote? A.—No, sir. Nothing but $10.

Q.—How much would you take to sell your evidence? A.—I don't know.

Q.—If the sum was big enough? A.—I guess so.

Q.—Jerry Collins made the bargain? A.—Yes.

Witness admitted having been bought in the Routledge-Robson election. Jerry Collins made the bargain at that time.

Q.—Jerry knew where he could lay his hand on a purchasable man? A.—It seems like that.

Witness was very much befuddled, and could give no evidence on dates or names.

At this juncture, Mr. Staunton informed the court that he had about a hundred witnesses along this same line, but he would not call them.

Mr. Johnston asked for an adjournment after the crown finished its case, in order to give the defense an opportunity of presenting its case. There were several witnesses for the prosecution to be called on whose testimony the defense could get no line.

To this the court agreed. The crown will call two or three minor witnesses, then Collins and Sifton. They will not be finished tomorrow night. Adjournment will be made until Monday.

Court adjourned at 5 o'clock.

R. L. BORDEN ONCE MORE CHALLENGED

Hon. Mr. Pugsley Again Urges Him To Face the Facts.

Frederickton, N. B., Nov. 20. — At a convention of Liberals of York County today to choose a candidate for the federal election Mr. W. T. Whitehead, M. P. P., was nominated on the second ballot, defeating Messrs. E. H. Allen and Alexander Gibson, ex-M. P. P. Pugsley, Mr. P. P. Carvell, M. P., Premier Robinson and Attorney-General McKeown delivered speeches.

Mr. Pugsley, referring to the charge in his speech at Fairville, that a campaign fund of $500,000 had been raised in Montreal to help the Conservatives in the election of 1904, said that he then had taken occasion to express his disapproval of the conduct of Mr. Borden in claiming that all the political corruption is practiced on the side of the Liberals.

He had stated that Mr. Borden, instead of adopting a hypocritical course should use his influence to bring about a better state of affairs. He also stated that of the half million dollars subscribed by influential members of Parliament in Montreal $25,000 had been sent into a single county in the Province to help elect a lieutenant of Mr. Borden. Mr. Borden's reply to that was that he (Mr. Pugsley) had not prosecuted the men who stuffed the Rothsay lists, and that he was a Conservative prior to 1896. People had repeatedly passed on his conduct since that date, and therefore it was hardly necessary for him to enter upon a discussion of that matter now. He noticed that Mr. Borden was anxious to have a royal commission appointed to find out how much money his friends expended in the election of 1904. He would say to Mr. Borden that if he would go to Montreal and consult three or four of his political friends in that city he would have no difficulty in ascertaining the truth of his (Mr. Pugsley's) statements. "And if he is a truthful man he will be able to tell his friends in Ottawa on the night of Nov. 27 that his (Mr. Pugsley's) figures were one or two hundred thousand dollars within the mark."

DUMA PARTIES REGROUP

Breaks Appearing in Both the Octobrist and Conservative Ranks.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 21.—The anticipated regrouping of the parties in the Lower House of Parliament is already in progress, breaks appearing in both the Octobrist and Conservative ranks, pointing to the ultimate strengthening of the constitutional center against the extreme right.

Count Bobrinski, of the Constitutional-Conservative party, today formally proposed the exclusion from the Conservative Club of all deputies connected with the Reactionary League of the Russian people, because they are opposed to constitutional government. This action was inspired by the attitude of the progressive wing of the Octobrists, who, at a meeting last night, threatened to bolt the party, unless it severed connections with the reactionists. The latter, numbering

SOLVING OLD PROBLEMS

Canada at Critical Point in Progress, Says Dr. Parkin.

London, Nov. 20.—Dr. G. R. Parkin, speaking at a great meeting of the Colonial and Continental Missionary Society, said today was a critical point in both church and Empire when Canada, the first great offshoot of the mother country, is rising to a nationhood wherein our paralyzing social problems were being solved. The Bishop of Keewatin spoke against indiscriminate emigration. The papers publish details of a story from St. John's of the Eskimos' cannibalism, among the Eskimos of Ungava who, it is said, are being exterminated by contact with whites.

THE PROVINCE NOT LIABLE.

Hon. Mr. Beck has found it necessary to issue a statement, in correction of one of his public utterances. At Brantford the other evening Mr. Beck declared in explicit terms that the Government would guarantee the figures of its own commission. Here are his words:"We say that we can deliver power at the gateway of the municipalities at certain figures, and the critics reply it cannot be done. Unless we meet these figures we have submitted we will not enter into contracts. If we do enter into contracts we must give the rate stated or the Government must make up the deficiency. The commission must keep within the estimate or the Government must pay the difference."Mr. Beck's promise of a Government guarantee gave rise to much comment, as it was contrary to the Government's power legislation, which enacted that in the event of the commission's figures falling below the cost of delivering power to any municipality, the latter should be responsible for the difference. Mr. Beck now admits that he made a mistake at Brantford. A Toronto dispatch explains that the legal adviser of the Government has examined the act and expressed the opinion that Mr. Beck's view was erroneous. It is somewhat surprising that Mr. Beck should have been unfamiliar with the very legislation which he is supposed to have had the chief hand in framing. He cannot complain if his error creates a suspicion that he has not fully weighed other factors of the problem. He declares, however, that the hydro-electric commission will accept no tenders for the construction of the transmission lines and other equipment, unless the figures are within the estimates.The ratepayers of the city are still largely in the dark. It is safe to say that the aldermen who voted last night to send the bylaw to them are not in a position to throw much light on the matter. They have not even seen a copy of the contract which the municipality is asked to enter into with the hydro-electric commission.
They have not the faintest notion what the cost of Niagara power will be, delivered at the motors of local consumers. They do not know what effect the competition of the London Electric Company or of producer gas engines will have upon the municipal enterprise. They cannot estimate even approximately the financial liability which the taxpayers will incur if the scheme goes through. The shower of questions addressed to Mr. Beck at the committee meeting last night shows how little the proposition is understood by the civic managers who undertake to recommend it to the ratepayers.

DEATH ON THE RANCHES.

Cattle ranching in the Northwest States may be a paying business, but whether it will long continue to be so is doubtful. It is attended during the winter months with much suffering and death among the herds. The loss of stock from exposure and starvation is enormous. A special commissioner of the American Humane Association has been investigating the conditions attending the raising of range cattle, and his report reveals a state of affairs shocking in the extreme. The assertions he makes are borne out by reputable persons on the ground and by photographs. According to Government reports 2,687,027 cattle and over 2,600,000 sheep died from all causes during the year ended March 31, 1905, over one-half of which perished from exposure. The figures for the past two years make little or no better showing. It is therefore probably keeping within the mark to estimate the annual loss of animals from exposure in the United States at 2,500-000, worth about $24,000,000.The report in question contains much information showing the importance of the subject from an economic standpoint. It also indicates how the steady growth of population in the range country is increasing the death-rate to such an extent as to make quite doubtful the future of the cattle-raising industry. The large arous once freely roamed over by the cattle in search of food and water are gradually being reduced in size by fencing, and the animals are in consequence being so restricted in their movements that their always difficult search has now been made, as the report puts it, "little less than a slow march to certain death." Vegetation and water are becoming scarcer each year, and the extent of the springround-up depends upon the mildness or severity of the winter. The special commissioner, whose investigation closed at the end of last winter, found that the average cattle ranger looked for a loss of from 50 to 75 per cent after his stock had experienced the hardships of a winter's exposure, poorly watered, scantily fed and subject to the cold and the piercing winds, not to mention the mange, which causes the protecting hair to fall out and thus intensifies the suffering. If not more than half of what is contained in the report is true there can be no doubt that cattle ranging as carried on in the Northwestern States is most inhuman, and if the report is the means of leading to a speedy correction of the evils, their exposure will have accomplished a good purpose.In the Canadian Northwest, ranching is carried on less extensively than in the neighboring States, but limited though it is thousands of cattle have perished on the Alberta ranches in the winter-time from exposure and starvation. On our side of the line, however, the effect of the growth of population is to turn ranches into farms, thus gradually lessening the grazing area. The influx of immigration would therefore seem to have its humane as well as economic value.

THE EXODUS TO EUROPE.

The United States is just now experiencing the annual exodus of alien laborers from its shores. This year it appears to be of greater volume than usual. Last week one steamer carried from New York 3,220 steerage passengers; another had over 2,000 on board. The immigration for the year is estimated at over 1,000,000, and it is not unlikely the emigration will total half that number.Although these emigrants take with them millions of dollars to spend in European countries instead of the place where the money is earned, their departure is regarded as not without its compensating advantages, from the fact that in the present instance it operates as a safety-valve to the labor market. Up to a short time ago the demand for labor from all over the United States was so great that it was impossible to meet it. Industrial establishments were filled with orders, but were sorely hampered owing to the lack of skilled help. The sudden check to industrial activity, however, is not the cause of the exodus itself, but only for its unusually large extent. Every spring sees many foreign laborers cross the Atlantic to obtain employment upon great contracts of outdoor work, and towards the close of the year finds them returning home for cheaper living during the winter with their families.
Many of those who are leaving this season will probably never return.
Their object in coming was to earn American dollars to take away with them, but they cling to their old world customs, and have no desire to become citizens of the republic.The bulk of immigration into the United States is from Southern Europe and is made up of unskilled laborers and their families, very few of them being an agricultural class. The bulk of Canadian immigration is from the British Isles. These new-comers, as a rule, come to stay in Canada, to make their homes here, and grow up with the country, and of the comparatively few who return to the old country, the majority come back again, bringing their families with them.Str. Wilfrid Laurier was 66 years of age yesterday. In less than a decade he will qualify for the title of "Canada's Grand Old Man."A local newspaper has recently lent itself, on separate occasions, to spiteful attacks upon two ladies of London, who are foremost in public spirit and good works. This is not decent, and it is not journalism.Heard on the street: "I see that Dr.
McCallum, of the Asylum, has been transferred to a smaller place. What's the matter with him?" "Oh, he's a Grit."A sale of debentures during the present stringency means an additional burden on the taxpayers for thirty years. The city should borrow no more money now than is absolutely necessary.It is easy for the producer gas people to say that their plant will give the city as lights at $30 each per annum.
Will they put up a substantial cash guarantee to that effect? If so the city council would be obliged to consider their offer, as a phase of the power problem.

THE IDEAL WIFE.

[Chicago Record-Herald.]
"What is your idea of an ideal wife?"
"One who will cook the meals, do the washing, look after the furnace, make her own clothes, and—""And what?"
"Keep herself looking as young and as beautiful as an actress who pulls down

LESSON FOR HUSBANDS.

[Ladies' Home Journal.]
The late Mary A. Livermore liked to tell a story of a young friend of hers in Melrose, for she believed that in this Melrose lay a lesson for husbands.Mrs. Livermore's friend was passing a month alone, her mate having been summoned to Europe on a business matter.
"And you are very lonely without your husband, now?" the elder said to the younger woman one morning.
"A little lonely," was the qualifiedanswer.
"But surely," said Mrs. Livermore, "you miss your husband very much, now he is away?"
"Oh, no," she said. "At breakfast I just stand his newspaper up in front of his plate, and half the time I forget he isn't there."

LOOKS AND SOUND.

[Cleveland Plaindealer.]
A teacher in one of the lower grades of the public schools gave a talk to her pupils
the other day about proverbs. After citing several proverbs, such as the one about the early bird and others, she told the pupils that they were each to write out some old proverb and bring it to school next day.The next day when the teacher took up the proverb proposition again, one little girl handed in this: "Ferrick's change is no robbery."
"Did you copy that from a book or from a photograph?" asked the teacher.

THE LONGEST YEAR.

[London Chronicle.]
The longest year on record was the year 46 B. C. This year had 455 days, because Julius Caesar ordered that it should throughout the Roman sphere of influence to clear away all the confusion which had previously existed in reconciling the lunar with the solar year, Julius Caesar, with the help of Sosigenes, an Alexandrian astronomer, undertook a thorough reform of the calendar. He effected it by making the year now called 46 B. C. "the year of confusion," consist of 455 days, and the succeeding year of 46 B. C. with the exception of every fourth year, which was to contain 366 days. Thus was established the Julian calendar as we know it today.

A CANDID FRIEND.

[Toronto News.]
Duplication, involving as it does imposition, to private capital, and as imposing a double burden upon consumers, the News has not regarded favorably. To this general position we adhere, and we do not feel bound to follow Mr. Beck in his shifts and turnings, to accommodate ourselves to his political difficulties, or to get panicky when she shows temper at reasonable criticism. In short, the News throughout has contended for regulation or expropriation, and does not purpose to shift its ground.

TRANSFORMATION.

[Washington Star.]
In June beneath the moon they strayed,
They two, when summer hours were gay.
The branches sang a serenade
As gentle breezes passed that way;
And oh, that night, how sweet and fair,
Looked like a goblet all of gold.
And stars were drops, split here and there,
Of beauty more than it could hold!
But what she said is quite forgot;
The town brings changes and regret.
She passes him and sees him not,
Because he isn't in her set.
And as he seeks the cool, damp air,
And thinks upon her heartlessness,
That moon, an oval shape up there,
Looks like a lemon, more or less!

JOY FOR BALD HEADS, IF—

[Pittsburg Dispatch.]
The bald-head row was all in a flutter today because of the reported discovery by the surgeons of the New York Skin and Cancer Hospital of a means to check and cure the complaint. Baldness is said to have been successfully treated by the application of a leucodescent light of 500 candle-power. While the surgeons are reticent on the subject, it is said that when the light is applied to the shiny surface of the head of a man who keeps his polished like a billiard ball, the hairs begin to sprout like grass in the spring.
No doubt is entertained that if the light will grow hair there is a fortune in store for the discoverer. Any man who can exhibit the head of a prominent citizen known to have been painfully bald, showing a long growth of glossy hair, with the inscription, "Leucodescent grew this hair, and we can prove it," is destined to become the first billionaire. If the light will do all that is claimed for it, it will bring to the occupants of the front rows at the comic opera, and woe to the humorists.

CHEEK FROM OUR OWN SUBURBS.

[St. Thomas Journal.]
A Bridgeburg man dislocated his jaw by yawning. This should be a lesson to sleepy Londoners.

THE MODERN WAY.

[Judge.]
First American Father—I hear your daughter is going to be married?
Second American Father—So I understand.

NERVOUS.

[Life.]
"Yes, sir! I tell you the honest man has nothing to fear."
"Is that the reason the whole country is so frightened?"

EVE.

[Answers.]
Tommy had been punished.
"Mamma," he sobbed, "did your mamma whip you when you were little?"
"Yes, when I was naughty."
"And did her mamma whip her when she was little?"
"Yes, Tommy."
"And was she whipped when she was little?"
"Well," inquired the child, "his brain cleared by the position he had just occupied, 'who started it, anyway?'"

CHEER UP.

[S. E. Kiser.]
Cheer up, cheer up, men and brothers,
Though the winds are blowing chill.
There are trusting ones that love us,
And the sun that shone above us—
Yesterday is glowing still.Cheer up, cheer up, you that grumble.
Though the lark has flown away
Little children still are singing
And their laughter still is ringing
As you heard it yesterday.Cheer up, cheer up, you that sadly
Name the ills you have to bear;
There are prizes worth pursuing,
There is much you should be doing
While you dawdle in despair.Cheer up, cheer up, men and brothers,
As the worthy ever should;
If there's nothing in yourarder
Learn to work a little harder,
It perhaps will do you good.

HIS ADVICE.

[Washington Star.]
"Well, Uncle Josh," said the fond mother
after her daughter had trifled a few times for the purpose of impressing their relative from the country, "what do you think of it? Would you advise me to have Daisy's voice cultivated?"
"Yes, I guess I would. Gilt it cultivated awhile, and then have it seeded down.
Gosh, but you people seem to be warm-blooded here. I'd freeze if I had to depend on them steam pipes for heat."IRISH COMMISSION REPORT IS ISSUEDInquiry Into Congestion of the Emerald Isle Shows a Dismal Picture.London, Nov. 20.—The Government has just issued the voluminous evidence taken before the royal commission on the congestion in Ireland, and many are the gloomy and dismal phases of life in the Emerald Isle which can be picked out of its pages.The Rev. Thomas McAnran, a parish priest of Killinaga, County Cavan, supplies one which is typical of many.
He says that as soon as the youth of the country are able to provide for themselves they fly off to America, thus leaving the aged and the young children to look after the homes, with the result that the lands are not tilled as much as they should be, the children are not sent to school, and all depend for support on the credit given by the local shopkeepers, waiting for the American dollar.The further result is they become loaded with debt, and if the shopkeepers refuse them credit, then, in nothing before them but an emigrant ship to America or the workhouse.
Father McAnran states that anything
it might be called land in Enniskillen, a rural district, is at present under bullock, the people having been banished in and after the famine years to the mountains and America.There are marks of poverty all around. The people are half fed and half clad, the children are degenerate and the surface of the country itself is a barren wilderness.

The Brighter Side.

But a brighter phase of Irish life is to be seen in many parts of Ireland, where the land question is no longer a political but an economic one. A few years ago Danish butter took the place of Irish butter in the markets, and the Danish pig won in death a triumph over his living brother and undersold him at his own sty door.Other countries were no less aggressive, and it was useless for the dairy farmer of Limerick or Cork to have grass so rich you could grease your boots on it when butter, that was its outcome, was rejected by the buyers.
When the darkest hour seemed to have arrived, Sir Horace Plunkett took the burden of his countrymen on his own shoulders. He found that the reasons for the Irish being thrust out of the markets of the world were a scientific, practical knowledge. Science had been at work both on the Danish farm and in the French poultry yard.
It was soon understood how the Danish pig had routed the Irish pig.Irish farmers had co-operated, had formed, practical knowledge, had generated a great quantity of milk for feeding, and afterward co-operative bacon factories. Again the Danish Government had come to their help with technical instruction, expert advice and material support.INDO-AMERICAN TRADE INCREASESImports and Exports Between the Two Countries Show Remarkable Growth.London, Nov. 20.—In the form of a Blue Book the Government has just issued a review of the trade with India in which it is stated that the United States, which in 1904 and 1905 supplied less than 10 per cent of the total importation of kerosene, now sends 54 per cent, her total being 28,835,600 gallons, as against 22,321,800 gallons in 1905 and 1906. Of the total importations of bulk oil America supplied 47 per cent.Imports in cotton in 1906 and 1907 showed a decline of 43,217 hundred-weight, the receipts amounting to 118,259 hundredweight, as against 161-47 hundredweight in the preceding year, and in 1905 and 1904 the imports were only 15,279 hundredweight, so that in three years they increased by 100,000 hundredweight. About 69 per cent of the total quantity imported is American, and of this $1,829 hundred-weight was received by way of the United Kingdom direct.Shipments of tea to the United States declined by 19.5 per cent.
Exports of raw cotton represent 23.94 per cent of the whole value of Indian raw materials exported. The trade is governed primarily by the Indian crop results and secondarily by the relation of textile activity in Europe and the United States to the supplies available in America and Egypt.In all these respects the season of 1906 and 1907 was extraordinarily favorable.
The value of hides and skins imported into America in 1906 is estimated at seventeen millions sterling.
Germany buys the largest quantity of hides, but in skins the United States continue to take three-fourths of the exports, while the United Kingdom takes about 13 per cent.In the district survey of reeled silk the United States took 47,610 pounds, France 519,173 pounds, and the United Kingdom 210,823 pounds.The export of cloth increased from 630.5 lakhs of rupees to 825.87 lakhs of rupees. Of this the United States took 65.32 per cent, with a value of 539.48 lakhs of rupees, as against 377.3 lakhs of rupees in 1905 and 1906, which marks an advance of 42.75 per cent.In the previous year the consumption of metals used for shipbuilding, tin plates, galvanized sheets, steel cutlery, cycles and automobiles was unprecedentedly abnormal, due especially to the United States.

HAS DAME NATURE
YIELDED TO ART?Professor Delage Artificially Produces Life in the Sea Urchin.Paris, Nov. 20.—A miracle that the old alchemists never contemplated in their wildest dreams, has just been performed by Professor Yves Delage.
He has artificially produced life.Professor Delage has had photographed one of the sea urchins which he obtained by artificial means, and he has also given a clear account of his experiments and the origin of the ideas which have germinated into this amazing result.Professor Delage, who is director of the Government biological station at Roscoff, on the coast of Finisterre, almost at the extreme northwestern corner of France, first announced his amazing achievement in an address to the Academy of Sciences in Paris.The first idea on this line of discovery came from Professor Loeb of the University of Chicago, who observed that if the heart of an animal be placed in a solution of salt it continues to beat for many hours, although when plunged into sterilized water it very soon stops beating.The result of Professor Loeb's further researches was told four or five years ago. He succeeded in obtaining the larvae of sea urchins from eggs which he had fertilized artificially.
Professor Delage, who had been experimenting along the same lines, noticed that among the artificially hatched larvae there were a few which showed a tendency to transform themselves into adults, and he undertook to carry the development further than Professor Loeb had done.The process of forming a theory which he had to put to a test, that processes which take place in the development of an egg after fertilization are nothing but a series of coagula-tions and liquefactions of the colloidal substance of the egg. But to produce artificially this series of coagulations and liquefactions in the order required and at the appropriate times seemed to be beyond possibility of accomplishment. Further study, however, convinced Professor Delage that the first step was the essential.The shock of the first step—or fertilization—acts like turning a key in a complex machine, which then proceeds in regular movements without external stimulation. Professor Delage, therefore, in order to obtain the first step, plunged the eggs into sea water to which he added an acid to produce coagulation and a base to produce solution.Success With Cyanic Acid.
Some months ago the professor used cyanic acid for the first test of coag-ulation and liquefaction. This was extraordinarily successful, for while for five years at this laboratory at Roscoff, he had obtained only a few sea urchins, yet since the month of June he had produced thousands.When he came to examine his precious babies under a magnifying glass they looked perfect; there were their mouths, armed with the five pointed teeth that are familiar to every haunter of the seashore; but these sea urchins had no appetite, never was he able to detect them in the act of eating anything. They moved their spines in the orthodox way and by combining these motions they crawled up and down the glass walls of their homes—but they never ate! Behind those teeth there should have been a stomach and a way in intestine, but these juvenile sea urchins made no use of these organs.Nature Laughs at Effort.
When he at last admitted to himself that he has such a doubt, he felt as if he heard Dame Nature laugh with scornful chuckle, as if to say:
"Your art can make sea urchins, but how are your sea urchins to live and grow and reproduce themselves if they have no stomachs and cannot eat? Ha, ha!"So the victory of art over nature was rather a hollow triumph after all.
But Professor Delage has not despaired. The remaining three of his interesting flock are still alive and doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances. He is continuing his experiments, confident that he is on the right track and that he will soon discover why artificial sea urchins have no stomachs and how to rectify the defect.

HAS KING IN TRAINING

Queen Victoria of Spain Is Improving Alfonso's Manners.London, Nov. 21.—Queen Victoria is making a man out of "her lord and master," King Alfonso is fast losing his boyish and impulsive manners in company with any save sovereigns like himself. But the process of training the King—of ageing him, of getting him under her thumb—does not seem to add to his good temper, nor to his wife's.Besides, report goes, the Queen's mother, Princess Henry of Battenberg, is playing to perfection the traditional role of the mischief-making, interfering, mother-in-law.The Spanish royal party certainly had a tiff, because the Queen positively refused to attend a dinner the King gave at the Ritz Hotel last Thursday evening. Some of

THE GUARDED SECRET

"Where?" cried Effie, with painful anxiety.
"Where?" asked Max, with boyish curiosity.
But to all of these anxious questions and the more anxious looks that accompanied them, Aline Rodney answered not a word.
Her dark head still rested against her father's breast, and one arm was drawn lovingly around his neck. There was a smile of ineffable joy and peace in her face, but at Mrs. Rodney's reference to the little room, and the wound a look of wonder came into the dark-blue eyes.
"Mamma, who has told you all that?" she exclaimed.
"We have heard it all from Dr. Anthony," cried Mrs. Rodney. "Oh, Aline, who was it that told you so cruelly, my dear, and where were you, and why did you not send for me?"
A look of sorrow and regret flashed over the sweet, white face.
"Mamma, I cannot tell you," answered Aline.
They gazed at her in amazement. What was this? Aline never told where she had been these three months? What could she possibly mean?
"Aline, darling, you do not perhaps understand your mother. She is asking you where you have been. You must tell her, my child," said Mr. Rodney, gently.
Aline answered him in the same words.
"Papa, I cannot tell her."
Something very like anger came momentarily into Mr. Rodney's kind face as he looked down into the sweet young face that lay nestled lovingly against his arm.
"No more willfulness, Aline," he said, almost sternly. "You have run away from us and caused us a lot of anxiety and sorrow. You have broken my heart, and your mother broken my heart, and you do not deserve that we should receive you back with so much love and forgiveness. But now that we have done so, you must be frank and explicit with us. You must tell us where you have been, and how you have been seeking us everywhere at so great an expense and trouble, to say nothing of our sorrow and anxiety."
"Papa, it does not matter where I have been so that you have me back again, safe and secure," cried simple Aline.
She could not understand the dark frown that clouded his brow.
"It matters everything," he declared. "What new whim possesses you, Aline, that you should deny us this? Do you not suppose that we should be anxious to know where you have been, and how you have been seeking us everywhere at so great an expense and trouble, to say nothing of our sorrow and anxiety?"
"Papa, it does not matter where I have been so that you have me back again, safe and secure," cried simple Aline.
She could not understand the dark frown that clouded his brow.
"It matters everything," he declared. "What new whim possesses you, Aline, that you should deny us this? Do you not suppose that we should be anxious to know where you have been, and how you have been seeking us everywhere at so great an expense and trouble, to say nothing of our sorrow and anxiety?"

face as it looked down upon her. She rather liked its expression, it was so cheery and handsome, with its brown eyes, brown mustache, regular features and expression of good nature. He looked steadily and admiringly at the beautiful young face.
"I could swear to her identity," he said, firmly. "It is the face of the wounded girl in the mysterious blue room."
"I have never seen you before," cried Aline. "How do you know these things which you assert?"
He smiled. Aline could find no fault with that smile. It was so kind and reassuring. He answered pleasantly: "You have never seen me, Miss Aline, because I wore a mask when I dressed your wound that night. But I remember your face distinctly. It turned to Mr. Rodney. 'May I tell her the story of that night?' he asked.
Mr. Rodney answered, 'Yes.'
Aline lay listening, with dilated eyes, to his strange story.
"I was full of sympathy for you," he said. "I felt quite sure that there was something wrong. I did not like the strangeness of it all. I have tried again and again to find your strange prison, that I might rescue you from the bondage. I have been your friend, your bondslave. If anyone has maltreated you, Miss Aline—if you have been detained in that strange house against your will, tell me where, and I will punish him for you."
"You are very kind, but I have nothing to say," Aline answered in a low voice of unconscious regret.
He looked at her in surprise.
"Do you mean to make a secret of it?" he asked her, in his clear, frank way.
"Yes," she answered calmly, and looking straight into his face with her blue, resolute eyes.
"But my dear, young lady, why should you do that?" he said, perplexed.
"That is my own affair," she answered, with something of her old imperious temper rising in her voice. "My business cannot concern you—a stranger. I consider that you are talking to me in a very impertinent fashion."
Mr. Rodney put his hand hastily over the willful red lips.
"Your temper is not improved by your sojourn away from us," he said in a tone of marked displeasure. "Listen, Aline; this gentleman is not to be treated as a stranger by you. He is a valued friend, and, moreover, he is engaged to your sister Effie. He will be grieved to hear of your ill-treatment, but I hope you will never cause him as much anxiety as you have done the rest of us."
Aline put out her white hand frankly to the doctor.
"I congratulate you," she said. "Effie is the dearest girl in the world."
"So I think," said Dr. Anthony, frankly, adding, gaily: "I think a great deal of you, too, Miss Aline, since but for you I might never have seen your sister."
They all laughed. Aline made up her mind that he would be a charming brother-in-law.
"I should say that my running away has proved quite advantageous to the family," said she, archly, as she kissed the blushing Effie.
She thought that everyone would agree with her. She could not understand why they all looked so grave. She had been brought up so simply and innocently in this quiet country town she had no knowledge of evil.
"Why do you all look so grave?" she said, pettishly. "If you aren't glad to see me, perhaps I had better go back where I came from."
"Where did you come from, Aline?" exclaimed her father.
"You dear, curious old papa, I shan't tell you," replied Aline, with her merry laugh that sounded like music.
"You are jesting, Aline, but it is not an appropriate subject for a joke," said her mother. "Come, dear, I do not like to be kept in suspense. I am waiting to hear why you ran away from us, and where you went."
She lifted her head from his arm and looked up into his face with her bright, wide-open eyes. She saw that he was not jesting; that he was in intense earnest. She was inclined to resent his curiosity, as she termed it to herself.
"Really, papa, I cannot imagine why you make such a fuss over it," she said, with all the freedom of a spoiled child. "I should think you already knew why I went away. It was because I didn't wish to stay in that hot, stuffy chamber all day while you were enjoying yourselves at the picnic, so I went out for a little while. I meant to return directly, but—" she stopped short, and a sudden flush mounted to her white forehead.

"And why did you not return, Aline?" her mother cried out quickly.
"What reasons did you have for staying?"

"I had the very strongest of reasons, mamma," said the girl, and now they saw that she was half-laughing, half-crying. "The very strongest reason, for I could not return."
"But why, dear?" asked Effie, leaning on her lover's arm and looking deeply interested.
"And, why, why?"—how you all do ring the changes on that one word!" cried Aline, in pretty petulance. "When I say that I do not mean to tell you, why cannot you leave me alone?"

She was in the most palpable earnest. They all saw that. They did not know what to say to her. She was so childish, so innocent, she could not understand why it was really so necessary that she should explain her absence to them.

"Tell me one thing, Aline, my darling," said her father, coaxingly. "How did you get out of your locked room?"
She looked her white hands around his arm and looked up into his face. There was a deep, warm, color on her face, and her eyes were misty as with tears that she bravely held back.
"Papa, darling," she said, with a sudden quiver in her fresh young voice, "do not be angry with me, dear. I do not want to be naughty or willful or unkind to you. But I cannot tell you how I left my room that day any more than I can tell you how I came back to you to-night."

There was a dead silence. Aline did not know how strangely her words sounded to them all. She did not know that there was anything so strange and reprehensible in her silence. She did not realize that she was no longer a child, but a woman, every day of whose life should lie fair and open like a spotless page to everyone.

Her father put her suddenly out of his arms into a chair by his side.
"Aline, you are tired tonight. Perhaps you will tell us your story to-morrow," he said, half-inquiringly.
"Neither tonight nor tomorrow, papa," she replied, in a vaguely troubled tone, for she began to feel alarmed at their persistency. "No, no, never!"

"Do you realize what you are saying, Aline?" he asked, inquired, in a strange, measured tone, and gazing deliberately into her grave, sweet perfectly frank blue eyes.
"Yes, papa, I realize it," she replied, innocently.
"You will stain the whiteness of your life, of your young womanhood, with a secret at whose nature no one can guess—you will deliberately place yourself under a ban. You will not reveal this strange secret even to your parents—do you mean all this, Aline?" he asked, agitatedly.

"Yes, papa, dear," answered Aline. To Be Continued.

DESIGNED BY MARTHA DEAR.

A SMART LITTLE COAT—4269.

Cape coats are decidedly smart for little people this season, and one that is especially attractive is here shown. The front closes in double-breasted fashion, so that extra warmth is afforded the chest for cold weather. The neck is finished with a high collar, which, together with the deep cape collar, gives quite a military effect. If desired, however, the cape may be omitted and the mandarin band used instead. The coat is not at all difficult to make, and is appropriate for modeling in any of the new coatings. The 6-year size requires 1½ yards of 54-inch cloth.

4269—8 sizes, 3 to 10 years. The price of this pattern is 10c.

DIVORCE CASES STATUS

British Columbia Confident Jurisdiction of its Court Will Be Upheld.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 19.—The full court will immediately hear arguments on the appeal which the Attorney-General has entered against Justice McClement's decision that the British Columbia courts never had jurisdiction in divorce cases. While the Government is confident that the decision will be reversed, divorce legislation will be one of the subjects to be taken up at the next session at Victoria, as it is the Government's intention to create a special divorce court as in England, jurisdiction having always been exercised in British Columbia by all the supreme court judges at the various civil sittings of that court. Meanwhile, if the full court should agree that the province has not and never had jurisdiction, the Government will ask Ottawa to legalize all the divorces that have been granted, as well as the remarriage of divorced persons.

Victoria, unlike Ottawa, takes the matter seriously. The dispatch, supposed to represent the opinion of the department of justice, is about 3,000 miles away from the point. It states that the act of confederation expressly stated that British Columbia should retain all its laws and courts existing at the time of the union, and so would retain its right then exercised to grant divorce, but the real point is, did British Columbia ever have a divorce law, or more technically, did the proclamation of Sir James Douglas, adapting the English law and courts to British Columbia, include the special divorce court of England. The act of union really has no bearing on the question.

On Tuesday evening an old-fashioned tea-dancing was held in St. Andrew's Church. The weather was all that could be desired and the programme was varied and well received. After a bounteous supper, which included all the dainties of the season, Donald Sutherland, M. P. P., for North Oxford, one of St. Andrew's own men, ably occupied the chair. The speakers for the evening were Rev. Messrs. Murphy and Agnew, of our village, and Rev. Mr. Bright, of Ingersoll, each of whom was listened to with well-earned attention, as they were full of interest to even the youngest. Solos were rendered by Miss McKenzie, of London; Reeve McCarty, F. O. Kester and W. E. Routledge, of our town, and as was remarked by the audience—all the singers were at their best, and there was no need of going for outside talent. The church choir also gave some excellent selections. Mr. Alex. Wallace and company, which included all the dainties of the season, were the Traders' Bank, looked after the finances and report receipts of upwards of $65. Miss McCarty and Mrs. G. A. Hogg accompanied the soloists on the piano.

POWER FIGURES ACCEPTED

to the reduction in the cost of copper. As far as the Government is concerned, the power scheme is not possible unless all the municipalities go into it. Anyway, this is a question for next year's council to deal with, and not for you gentlemen. The Government never intended to sell power to companies to distribute, but wanted to sell power to the municipalities."

Issued a Warning.

Mr. Beck went on to warn the committee against taking any steps to prevent the people from voting upon the measure in January. They (the commissioners) were intentionally high in their estimates.

Ald. Garratt—You know very well the commission would not undertake to erect and put the plant in operation for the figures in the estimate. "We are not tendering," said Mr. Beck, warmly. "Anyway, I know as little about it as you do."

"Supposing the present company is put out of business as a result of the introduction of Niagara power," said Ald. Garratt. "There are over three thousand people using electric lights in the city, and your estimate only calls for supplying from five to seven hundred."

A Poor Outlook.

Mr. Beck intimated that as they were only providing to supply from five to seven hundred people, the others would have to do the best they could.

Ald. Cooper—That is not fair. There will be a lot of people vote perhaps for power expecting to get their rates reduced, and they will not get it. The majority of people will have to pay as high a rate as before. I do not think that if the mechanics and other people understand this they will vote for it.

Mr. Beck replied that as the commissioners did not know how many people were going to install Niagara power, they could not put the installation item in their estimates. If more people used it than from five to seven hundred, there would have to be a corresponding increase in the estimates. He did not know how much more.

Objected to Peak Load.

Ald. Stevely stated that in talking the matter over with the Southwestern Traction Company, the company had objected to having the power it used measured by the peak load. It would be most unjust to the company, in the month of May, for instance, to have to pay for the whole month at the rate of the amount of power it used on May 24, when the holiday traffic would be exceptionally heavy, and the railway would use a great deal more power than on any other day in the month.

Mr. Beck said that in Montreal the city is paid for 75,000-horsepower, and is only getting about 40,000. London's affairs would be poorly managed if it did not get paid for 7,000-horsepower when they were only getting 5,000-horsepower from the commission.

The people could rest assured that the Government is not going to sell them power at what it costs. The business must maintain itself, and there would have to be a profit.

Means Increase.

Ald. Stevely—The estimates then would have to be very much larger if the number of customers was increased?

Mr. Beck—Certainly. Ald. Saunders asked if the Government would pay for any extra poles or equipment that would be necessary.

Mr. Beck replied that the city could have all the power from the Government that it wanted up to 100,000-horsepower.

Compile a List.

Ald. Garratt thought it would be wise to have a list of those who would take Niagara power for certain prepared, although, in his opinion, there was no guarantee that anybody would continue to use it. They might not like it.

Ald. Stevely asked Engineer Richards if those taking Niagara power would not have to change their machinery, and Mr. Richards explained that all those who at present were using an alternating current would be obliged to make provision for the use of a direct current. This would mean some expense, he could not say how much.

Important Statement.

Asked as to whether the city lighting system could connect at once with Niagara power were it available, Mr. Richards stated that the system would have to be changed entirely.

He then explained the magnetic light, which it was proposed to use, because it gives one-third more light at about one-half the consumption of electricity and requires very little attention.

To Ald. Stevely he explained that in case of a break there would only be one circuit put out of business. It was proposed to have seven circuits for lighting the city.

Second Set of Poles.

Ald. Cooper elicited the information that a second set of poles would be required, although Mr. Beck thought some arrangement might be arrived at with the present company, so that the poles might be utilized.

Ald. Stevenson asked if the Government is to be the guarantor for the necessary money.

Mr. Beck's reply was that under no circumstances could the citizens be taxed. The enterprise must be self-sustaining.

Invalid Ladies
This Is For You.

There are thousands of females who suffer untold miseries common to their sex.
This is largely due to the peculiar habits of life and fashion, and the improper training of girlhood. Then, too, the physical changes that mark the three eras of womanhood (the maiden, the wife, and the mother) have much to do with their sufferings, most of which are endured in silence, unknown by even the family physician and most intimates friends.

To all such whose hollow cheeks, pale faces, sunken eyes and feeble footsteps, indicate nervousness, palpitation of the heart, weak, faint and dizzy spells, we would earnestly recommend a course of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. Jos. Sharp, Brighton, Ont., writes:
"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, weak spells and nervous trouble, and found no relief until advised to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I got one box and that helped me so much I sent and got five more. I am now cured completely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c.
per box or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price
by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Latest News From Far and NearLocal Hockey This Winter
Should Be Good Brand

Members of the Hermitage Club say that all this talk about there being no city hockey league is all rubbish. What if the Orient don't place a team on the ice?

The Ramblers could fill in nicely for one, and the Seventh Regiment could drum up a team without any trouble.

As a matter of fact, although the City League brand is not of the best, it is the only method of developing players, and should be encouraged in every way.

Last year there were too many teams for the league. And by the way one of the best of the lot was left out. That was the Rambler team.

However, if it is found impossible to have a senior city league of four teams it might be a good idea to form a junior league, one game to be played each night there is a senior city league game played.

At all events London will have its fill of hockey this winter, for the O. H. A. games will occur at least one and perhaps two nights a week.

The Hortons and Midgets
In Some Fast Bowling

The Hortons last evening gave the Midgets the hottest battle of their career on the ideal alleys, and the latter only won by a narrow margin.

In the first contest the stunted ones took first honors by one pin.

In round two the Hortons won out by two pins, while the third went to the tiny fellows by an easy margin.

A good crowd was present to see the fun, and great excitement prevailed at all times.

Primeau was among the minus ones, but Bryce performed nicely in his absence.

High honors were equally divided among the Sheere family. Chester took high aggregate, while Alf took high individual score.

The bowling all around was very low.

Moir Laughed at Tommy Burns
Burns Says He'll Laugh LastA Little History of the Great Canadian Boxer—Came Up
Very Fast.

Tommy Burns is living like a king in London, they do say. Wembley House, Middlesex, is his training quarters. It's an old, old mansion, they say, and the former Detroit house painter and pride of Delray has taken full charge of it.

"When Gunner Moir saw me he put his hand to his face and laughed," says Noah Brusso, or rather Tommy Burns, recently. "Well, I'm over here now, and it won't be long before I'm champion of the world. Dec. 2 isn't so far away."

Sounds big, doesn't it? What a joke that would have been out at Hand-losers' hall just a few brief years back, if the announcer stated that Noah Brusso, "future heavyweight champion of the world," was about to step into the arena.

Tommy has sure come up fast. It wasn't two years ago that he was drawing the bottom page notice with one-line heads. The cartoonists used to have lots of fun with him. The joke writers grew fat at his expense.

And one man especially found great joy in thinking of him. That man was Marvin Hart. Marvin was big and from a state where fighters are produced. Tommy Ryan had him over at Benton Harbor, across the state, training him and telling of what a wonder he was. In 1905 he had beaten Jack Johnson, the same colored gentleman who is now claiming the title, and had knocked out Jack Root.

Tommy Ryan told him he was a champion, and the big Kentucky lad believed it. So he laughed every time he thought of Tommy Burns.

Tommy got him into the ring and made him forget his keen sense of humor. He killed him as a ring act. He spoiled the pristine beauty of Marvin's facial expression. Then he claimed the title, and everybody laughed. He has as logical a claim as anybody, but everybody laughed, anyway.

Jack O'Brien was never known to miss an easy thing, and he took up Burns. He figured he would win some nice change. O'Brien and Burns were the two logical men to claim the title. A fight between them was a big drawing card. And so they fought.

Burns chased the elusive Jack all around the ring. He pounded him for almost 20 rounds. He broke his nose and closed his eye. But they called it a draw, as Jack showed remarkable class in coming back strong for the last few rounds.

And still the people laughed. Jack O'Brien was a wonder, anyway. A draw with him was nothing. He was just stalling to make the odds big in the next fight.

Then came that ugly fake. Jack O'Brien was a wonder, anyway. A draw with him was nothing. He was just stalling to make the odds big in the next fight.

Tommy Burns was in no one's good condition. But Burns stripped without a surplus ounce of flesh. He was ready to fight the best battle of his life if he had to. The club officials were suspicious. Maybe they knew, anyway. Nobody knows for certain. Anyway they declared all bets off.

Brusso chased O'Brien about the ring, but the nimble Jack managed to keep out of reach. After the farce was over Burns told it all. O'Brien is still confessing and telling of other fakes. The sporting public as angry as was O'Brien. The stigma was still heavy upon him when this poor dufer, Bill Squires, blew over here, the most out-pugilist the game has ever known.

The Western and Toronto
To Clash on SaturdayThe Intercollegiate Soccer Game Promises to Be a Fast Exhibition.

It isn't very hard to guess that when Western and Toronto bump against one another in the great intercollegiate game Saturday, there will be something doing all the time. The make-up of the teams is just such as should produce the hardest, fastest and closest kind of a game. Western is particularly strong on offense and Toronto is rumored to be especially speedy on the forward line. The local collegians think, however, that it will take a pretty speedy line to get around Hawkins, Downing and McMillan, and even if they should be passed, Keeler, "Rasp" Walker and "Hutch" are pretty much of a stone wall. Lovers of the association game may, therefore, anticipate a genuine treat on Saturday, and if the college game doesn't provide them all the thrills they want, there is the extra event, Bolt Works vs. McClarys.

Arts and Meds are usually found fighting with each other like cats and dogs, but for once, in the presence of an outside college team, they are sinking all their differences to howl for their university. The rosters from the two faculties are going to occupy a reserved section of the stand, and from this point of vantage they will render, under capable leaders, some stunts in the way of college yells that will make London sit up and look on. Just wait till you hear the skyrocket. Out of courtesy to the visitors the boys have also mastered the Varsity yell of the opposing team, and any old Toronto man who wants to revive memories of his college days had better get to the stadium by 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon. And let everybody come and boom Western. The city council has done the right thing by the college; now let the local sports come up to the scratch.

INTERNATIONAL
WOULD GO FINESecretary of the City League Believes It Would Be an Unqualified Success.

There seems to be no doubt that the proposed international baseball league in this city next year will be a decided success.

There is perhaps no better-posted baseball man in town than Joe De-ward, secretary of the City League, and Joe says that it will go right off the reel.

The only question which remains to be settled is that of the number of games to be played each week.

London can support Wednesday and Saturday ball, and possible could get away with Monday, too, but no more.

The general impression seems to prevail that the team would have to be made up of outside professionals. There is no apparent reason for such a supposition, however. London has a host of clever tossers, and with a new twirler or two should get along splendidly with the home players.

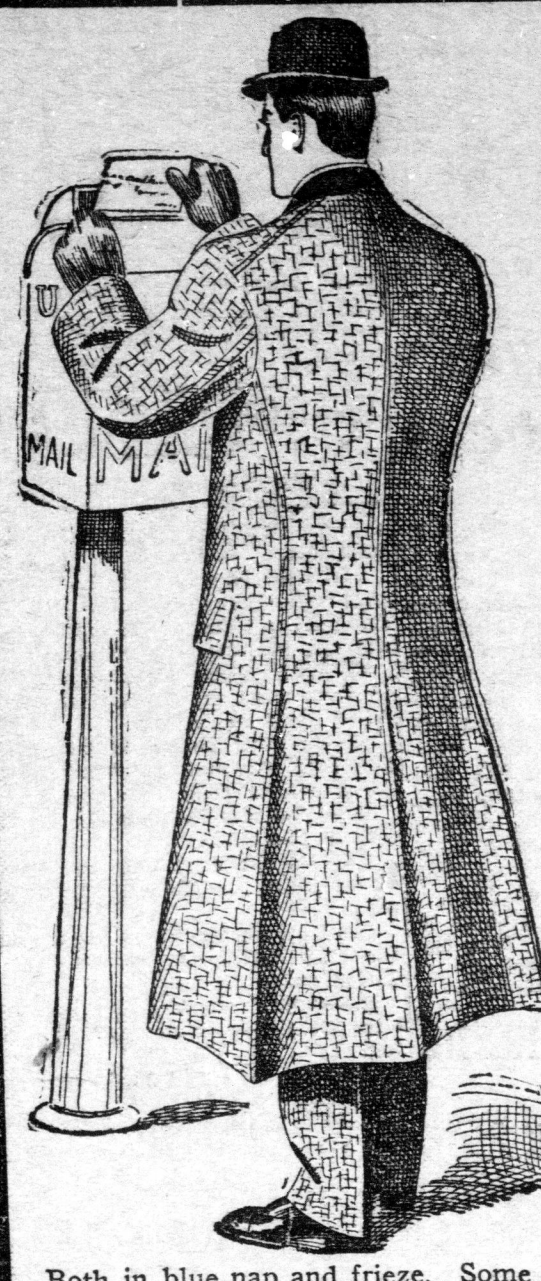

Mr. De-ward said last evening: "The new league is going to make a hit. We have had some splendid pro teams here in the past, and should have no trouble in getting together another equally as good. The greatest drawback, however, is such towns as St. Thomas, Hamilton and places of that kind are all right."

"I figure it out that we would have to import some players, although there are a number of our boys who could make good in faster company. Gibson, for example, is ready to graduate to a league a notch higher than the City League, and there are others

LONG DISTANCE COMPRESSED AIR.

An example of how a big construction company economizes on its various jobs is afforded by present operations by the concern building the Belmont tunnel under the East River at Forty-second street, which also is doing a section of the new Sixth avenue tunnel. At the foot of Forty-second street the company has a compressed air plant. Instead of erecting another plant, for its Sixth avenue contract, it ran a line of pipe along Forty-second street to the subway at Park avenue, where a connection was made with a line used by the company when it was helping to build the subway. At Sixth avenue the connection was picked up again and the pipe carried on the elevated structure down to Thirtieth street, where the company's men are working now. Thus the air that drives the drills deep underground at Thirtieth street originates at the foot of East Forty-second street, almost two miles away.

All the Latest British Sporting Gossip of Note

Mr. C. C. Singer, the famous golfer, to be dead. The deceased was 25 years of age, and his greatest performance on the links was at Holyake last year, when he reached the final round of the amateur championship, and was defeated by Mr. James Robb (Prestwick St. Nicholas), by 4 up and 3 to play.

A meeting of the international selection committee decided to play the amateur international England vs. Ireland on Dec. 7, on the ground of the Tottenham Hotspur football club. The England team will be chosen on Nov. 25. The "international" with Belgium is fixed for Brussels on April 18, and to the encroachment of a wild rabbit.

On its arrival at Adelaide the M.C.C. team was welcomed by a deputation representing the South Australian Cricket Association.

We have heard of rabbits in cricket, but an incident at Chatham is unique. During the Gravesend Charity cup tie, in which Rochester beat the B. N. D. by 4 to 6, play was suspended owing to the encroachment of a wild rabbit.

Lord Kinnaird and a host of other football celebrities were present at the opening of the new grand stand at Park Royal. At the luncheon which followed, Lord Kinnaird, referring to the amateur split, said: "It would be a bad day, indeed, for the empire, when there are not two opinions. The F. A. is still alive."

He added that it would be a good thing for the game if the colonials could send over some first-class teams, although he should be sorry if they ill-treated the code of rules, as the All Blacks had done the sister code.

Suggestions have often been thrown out in the past by many of those interested in the games of tennis and racquets that there should be some central authority for the control of these games in the British Isles, and it is gratifying to know that the task of forming an association has at last been practically completed.

The preliminary work has been undertaken by Major A. Cooper Key, a leading tennis player, and some few years ago a first-class racquet player.

A regrettable amount of ill-feeling exists in Midland Rugby circles, and various clubs have long been at variance. The game between Stratford-on-Avon and Nuneaton, at Stratford, was so rough and unpleasant that Stratford cancelled the return fixture, and declined to play Nuneaton next season. Nuneaton have held a special meeting and decided to suspend one of their forwards, Clarke, for kicking Horton, of Stratford; but they urged that, apart from that incident, both clubs were equally blameworthy, and the referee was accused of not having the players in hand.

At Highbury the New Zealanders defeated the home team by 9 points to 7.

OTTAWA STRIKES FROM SHOULDER;
SHOWS UP FLANAGAN AND I.C.A.A.A. N. Payne Prepared to Make Affidavit Flanagan Pays His Men.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Mr. A. N. Payne, of this city, addressed the following letter to Tom Flanagan, the Toronto hotelkeeper, who pays Tom Longboat's "board and lodgings," and that of a dozen other athletes, to run for him at C. A. A. U. meetings:

P. O. Department, Ottawa, Nov. 15.—Thomas Flanagan, Esq., Toronto: Dear Sir,—You will forgive me, I feel sure, after you have read this, and feel that I am writing this in a spirit of fairness and giving to you more consideration than was allowed me in the matter of sport. I have been a "sport" all my life, and indulged myself in all its various branches, and there is not a man living who can say I have ever accepted a cent so far as engaging in sport is concerned. Yet he compels me to compete with their very eyes, then I feel it is going too far. Hence this action.

When you were here during the carnival you will remember we had several chats, and you will also remember I told you what was going to happen across the line. You laughed, but subsequent events proved I was in fairly close touch with such events. You also said that if I could show you that it was to your interest to drop the C. A. A. U. you would do so. It appeared to me that this was the way you were in the game for what there was in it, and one would naturally conclude that those who were training and working on your string were either born idiots or else they were getting sufficient compensation. Else why should they fill the coffers of "one Flanagan"? I mentioned to you at the time that it would be better for you to pull away from the C. A. A. U. then, but you thought otherwise, and you now find your string closed out from all the meetings of any importance across the line. So you see again my word came true. And as matters now stand you will find on consulting Messrs. Stark, Grierson, Crowe and Lee, that there is as much chance of Longboat going to England as your humble servant—and why? Gradually the net is closing around that body, the C. A. A. U., and it must die sooner or later.

But I must be brief and state my intention. As you know, I was a member of the carnival committee, and know every step that was taken in the matter of your engagement, and you must know that such information is sufficient to put your men out of business, including your water carrier, Lou Marvone, either horn idiots or else they were getting sufficient compensation. Else why should they fill the coffers of "one Flanagan"? I mentioned to you at the time that it would be better for you to pull away from the C. A. A

London Is a Cap Manufacturing Center

"London is fast becoming one of the leading cap cities of Canada," remarked a leading cap manufacturer this morning. "The city's only rivals at present are Toronto and Montreal, Toronto is a recent rival, though, for up to a few months ago London led Toronto in the amount of output and number of firms manufacturing."

"Toronto, however, recently secured a couple more firms, and now London and Toronto have the same number of cap manufacturers."

"London's output is very much greater than Toronto's."

"The month of September was a record month for sales, and it is estimated that over one hundred thousand caps were shipped out of London."

"They go all over the country, although the market in the west is a large and growing one."

"American competition does not affect the trade materially, the duty imposed being too high for the Yankees to compete on favorable terms with goods manufactured in Canada. Most of the cap manufacturers have a great deal of trouble to secure help and are generally ready to take on girls and pay them well."

Aylmer Amateur Burglars Raid Four Residences

[Special to The Advertiser.]
St. Thomas, Nov. 21.—Four Aylmer residents were entered and burglarized sometime during last night and the robbers, although evidently amateurs at the work, succeeded in escaping without leaving a single clue as to their identity.

At the house of J. D. Herter, grocer, the robbers secured a small amount of cash, probably $10 or $15, and a partook of a hearty lunch. The burglars were less fortunate at the home of Miss Teeple, on Pine street west, not being able to locate the cash box. They contented themselves with a small amount of cash from the home of Henry Lambert, on South street west, but at Charles Clarke's they secured a valuable overcoat and a quantity of silver. The burglars worked quickly. No one can be found who saw any trace of the robbers, but Mr. Herter claims he heard a noise around the house during the night, but believed at the time it was made by the high wind which was blowing. The midnight marauders were amateurs in appearance from the fact that Mr. Clarke's residence they used a shade borrowed from Mr. Boker's house next door to pry open a window. Entrance in every case was made by prying open the windows. There is not the slightest clue as to the identity of the men, but the police are at work on the case.

The Citizens and the Draft Agreement

The publication of the draft agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway looking to the elevation of the tracks in London was much discussed around the city hall today.

It is admitted that now that the public have been let into the secrets of the agreement, which were kept so closely guarded for a year, the atmosphere will be cleared, and the ratepayers will be able to get a line on just what their representatives wanted from the Grand Trunk.

It is pretty well agreed, too, that the width of streets deemed necessary is all right, and that the overhead bridge at Egerton street in East London is badly wanted, but there is some criticism of the committee for attempting to induce the railway to remove the depot from its present site to a point near Waterloo street.

The union depot idea meets with favor all along the line.

As regards the indemnity clause, the citizens appear to be behind the committee, while the concession to a year in the way of a fixed assessment of $500,000 is taken as a matter of course.

For many years the company had only been paying taxes on a fixed assessment of $275,000 in London.

Track elevation is, however, a dead issue at the present, so far as the city is concerned, but it is expected that something will be heard from the railway commission very shortly.

Troubles of the Weigh Scales Clerk

Weigh Scales Clerk Dean has troubles of his own.

Doubting Thomases are to be found in abundance among the market frequenters, and notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Dean has never been known to make an error in weighing, his word is frequently disputed by persons who fancy that their produce should weigh more than he says it does.

Great trouble, too, is experienced in making out tickets for loads of hogs, which are sometimes sold among a dozen different buyers.

One man wants a 75-pound hog. He sometimes gets an 80-pounder. Then there is "kick." He wants what he wants, when he wants it, or he won't pay.

Mr. Dean makes out a new ticket, and sometimes a half a dozen before matters are satisfactorily arranged.

Another Example.

A liverman gives Mr. Dean directions to purchase for him a load of hay at the lowest price. When the client thinks the market price is as low as it is going to be, he buys.

Possibly there is a further slump of 25 or 50 cents. Then there is a kick from the liverman.

Approximately 50 women leave baskets of butter, eggs and other purchases if the scales house on Saturday while they go about making other purchases. This means disputes as to ownership and blame on Mr. Dean. If anything is missing.

One farmer allowed his dog to remain on the scales while his hay was being weighed recently. He was brought to account.

Mr. Dean is jack-of-all-trades on the market, and Saturday as well as many other days is the busiest man in town.

Local Items

A regular meeting of the board of works will be held tonight.

Mr. Wm. T. Nutt, of Cleveland, Ohio, is in this city, the guest of Mr. George Bentall, secretary-treasurer of the London street railway.

A public missionary meeting will be held in the First Congregational Church this evening. The meeting will be addressed by the Rev. Hilcomb Peckley and Dr. Patton, of Boston.

The "Glee Club" of the Y. W. C. A. will hold their opening meeting in their new rooms, corner of Dundas and Talbot streets, on Thursday evening, with Miss Hall as director, and Miss Miller as accompanist.

The Teachers' Club of the London Conservatory of Music held the second of their series of lectures last evening, when Dr. Hadley Williams, F.R.C.S., gave an interesting demonstration of the nerves, their centers and their relations to the pianist's art in seeing, hearing and executing in technique. The next lecture will be given by Dr. Merchant on "Acoustics."

Mr. John Stewart, of this city, has secured a position in the freight offices of the Grand Trunk in Montreal, and left this morning for that city.

Came to Washington.

Mr. Stanley Brent, physical director of the local branch of the Y. M. C. A., has left for Washington, D. C., where he will attend a convention of that body.

A London Lady.

With "The Burgomaster" Company which played the Grand last night was Miss Louise Rockwell, formerly of London, and who it is understood was for a time a student at the Academy of the Sacred Heart here.

Important Sale Choice Furniture.

Joseph Brown will sell for Miss Stewart, at 255 Talbot street, Monday, Nov. 25, at 2:30 p.m., one upright piano, parlor suite in odd pieces, walnut center table, rockers, mahogany and clock, brass jardiniere and 12 chairs, sideboard, extension table, 20 yards Brussels, rag and wool carpets, an exceedingly busy time, and their efforts will be amply rewarded in the offers considerably. The ladies in charge are well satisfied with the success that the bazaar is meeting with and expect that when it closes this evening they will have disposed of everything and have a good round sum to their credit.

Hickson-Fewings.

A pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. C. H. Fewings, 132 Elmwood avenue, yesterday afternoon, when his daughter, Miss Flossie L. Fewings, was married to Mr. George Hickson, in the presence of about thirty friends and members of the contracting parties' families.

The ceremony was performed by Very Rev. Dean Davis. Miss Dora Lye, of Stratford, assisted Miss Fewings, while Mr. William Frederick Hickson, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The bride carried white roses, while pink roses were carried by the bridesmaid, Miss Lorene Fewings made a charming little flower girl. Mr. and Mrs. Hickson left later for Toronto and other eastern points, and on their return will reside at 531 St. James street.

JERRY COLLINS ON THE STAND

I knew two, Lee or Lake, but was mistaken.

Mr. Stevens was asked to go into that subdivision to work. By whom he could not state, although he did not promise any money.

Q.—Was there anything on the list to show how much each was to get? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—In your police court evidence you said the amount was specified. A.—I cannot remember that.

Q.—Who sent the money? A.—It was left in the office.

Q.—Did the clerks know anything about that? A.—Not that I am aware of.

Q.—How many times were you in the club during the campaign? A.—Twice only.

Q.—Defendants had nothing to do with envelopes or money? A.—Nothing.

Q.—You never talked money to them? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Mr. Reid gave you money for hall rent and regular expenses? A.—Yes.

Q.—Not enough to pay your expenses? A.—Hardly.

Q.—Others helped preparation of doubtful lists? A.—Yes, the committee.

Q.—No one in authority ordered you to run your division? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You ran it on your own authority and initiative? A.—Yes, sir.

Raphael McNabb, of Brockville, followed. He was a worker in the White-Comstock election, and spent $30 for voters. He could not identify John O'Gorman as the man who gave him the money, although he thought the man's name was Gorman or O'Gorman. He received some ballots from the same man to be used in the election. Witnesses said that there has been an agreement among defendants, such admissions certainly are not evidence against others. You will have to prove connection among defendants, Mr. Staunton.

"That's correct," added Judge Winchester. "Until it is settled that it can be inferred that there has been an agreement among defendants, such admissions certainly are not evidence against others. You will have to prove connection among defendants, Mr. Staunton."

The admissions of Mulloy as to where he got the money would be evidence against Mulloy, but not against other defendants, as no connection has yet been shown," continued Mr. Johnston.

"That's correct," added Judge Winchester. "Until it is settled that it can be inferred that there has been an agreement among defendants, such admissions certainly are not evidence against others. You will have to prove connection among defendants, Mr. Staunton."

"Your lordship admitted the evidence," protested Mr. Staunton. "Yes, but merely to show overt acts," continued his lordship. "No connection has been shown among defendants. If evidence of a meeting, deduced showing meeting of defendants, this sort of evidence could be used to the fullest extent."

I only ask your lordship to receive this evidence, and I will undertake to show connection between defendants," said Mr. Staunton.

"If the evidence is not admissible it is not admissible," returned Mr. Johnston.

"Mr. Staunton must show connection very shortly," said Judge Winchester. The question was allowed subject to the objection.

There did Mulloy say he got the money? A.—From O'Gorman.

In the Beck-Rumball election, Collins said he did not work much. He was seen by Serviss and Sifton. Collins refused to have anything to do with the election. However, a parcel was left at the Queen's Hotel, and shortly after he had a conversation with Sifton. Collins was informed by Sifton that the people in West London would have no one but him (Collins) to hold money for him at the Queen's Hotel. There was $125 in the parcel. All the money was paid, Collins keeping his list.

Q.—Who wrote names on cards? A.—I don't know.

Collins said he had a conversation with Mulloy about this election, and the latter said he had given up election matters and had turned the list over to Sifton.

Q.—Did you talk with Sifton or Spence about opening a ballot box? A.—No, sir.

Q.—With Serviss? A.—Yes, after it was done.

The by-election was next dealt with. Q.—Who came to see you? A.—Lewis phoned me and came afterwards.

Q.—What did he say? A.—Told me O'Gorman wanted to see me at the Liberal Club.

Collins said O'Gorman was in the billiard room of the Liberal Club, waiting for him. The election was talked over by O'Gorman and Collins. Collins to get a larger representation at Mr. Hyman's West London meeting. Collins said he was given $20 to assist in celebrations. Collins said he spent $18 of his own money in addition. Shortly before Collins and asked him to act as deputy. He said O'Gorman gave him $100 for services. Collins consented and began to work with Mulloy. Mulloy brought a majority of the voters to him. Jones only held one envelope, that of White. The money was deposited with Jones in front of White.

A book was produced at this point, which Collins said was a copy of the original book, which he swore he turned over to Wiley. It had the names of the canvassers and who had the money. Mr. Johnston objected to the book being admitted as evidence, as it was only a copy.

Collins said he used to go every night to the general committee rooms, where he saw O'Gorman and Mr. Reid. O'Gorman never had any conversation with Collins as to the number bought or anything of that nature. Only general questions as to the progress of the canvass in the district were discussed. Collins and Wiley had no conversations before election.

Q.—Did you have a talk with Mr. Reid? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—Saturday evening before election.

After much persuasion Mulloy gave witness $100 to hold the voters and Collins consented. Collins refused to work in West London and held back $200 and $500.

Collins informed the court that voters were brought to his hotel and arrangements were made. They were to vote right, and come to Collins for the money.

Q.—Who else held money? A.—Geo. Arty and a man named Sherry.

Q.—Who furnished the money? A.—Mulloy.

Q.—Did West London give a Liberal majority? A.—About 65.

Q.—What did Hodgins get? A.—About 40 majority.

Q.—To whom did you give receipts? A.—Tom Lewis, because he told me Mulloy and Lewis. He held about the same amount of money as before.

Collins said that in the Hyman-Gray general election he also took part. He did not work until two or three days before the election.

Mulloy came in, b: Collins said he was out of the election business.

Q.—Did you see O'Gorman take part in the elections up to this time? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Did you see O'Gorman take part in the elections up to this time? A.—No, I did not.

After much persuasion Mulloy gave witness $100 to hold the voters and Collins consented. Collins refused to work in West London and held back $200 and $500.

Collins informed the court that voters were brought to his hotel and arrangements were made. They were to vote right, and come to Collins for the money.

Q.—Who else held money? A.—Geo. Arty and a man named Sherry.

Q.—Who furnished the money? A.—Mulloy.

Q.—Did West London give a Liberal majority? A.—About 65.

Q.—What did Hodgins get? A.—About 40 majority.

Q.—To whom did you give receipts? A.—Tom Lewis, because he told me Mulloy and Lewis. He held about the same amount of money as before.

Collins said that in the Hyman-Gray general election he also took part. He did not work until two or three days before the election.

Mulloy came in, b: Collins said he was out of the election business.

Q.—Did you see O'Gorman take part in the elections up to this time? A.—No, I did not.

Analysis of Strong's BAKING POWDER

by the analytical chemist of the Dominion of Canada:

Strong's Baking Powder is found to have very high aerating power. It is a cream of tartar powder, containing no alum or phosphate, and it is not adulterated.

Alum baking powders are sold to compare with from 10c. 15c to 20c a pound. So detrimental to health are alum baking powders considered that in many countries their sale is prohibited.

Q.—What was said? A.—I was appointed deputy and I heard there was an objection to me. McIntosh told me about it and warned me not to say a word to Mr. Reid. I saw Mr. Reid, and told him what McIntosh had said. Mr. Reid told me that as I had the ballot box they could do nothing.

Collins said Mulloy asked him to act as a deputy returning officer because he held so much money.

Q.—Did Mr. Reid ask you to be deputy? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did O'Gorman speak to you about being deputy? A.—I can't say that he did.

Q.—You got your instructions in the Liberal Club? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was there at this meeting? A.—Wiley, Sifton, O'Gorman, Mulloy, Mr. Reid and myself.

Q.—What did O'Gorman say? A.—He told me how to fold ballots so that I could see how each voter voted.

The time of the court was taken up with Collins. His examination was not over at adjournment. He will be on the stand all day.

ARE AFTER THE MILKMEN

When the doctor visited the premises, he found a diseased cow all right, but the owner had her in a separate shed, and said that he was not selling milk from her. But he made a statement regarding a butcher which made the officer wince.

A certain butcher wanted to buy her for beef," said the owner. "I asked five dollars for her, but he would only offer three. And when I would not sell her at that figure, he went to you and informed on me. That's what he did."

Dr. Tambling says that the cow is civered with ulcers. It has one leg which is useless, and she is very old. The question now is, who is the butcher who wanted the cow for beef?

Another Case.

Dr. Tambling went to the farm of another man on the broken front of Westminster, and ordered him to bed his cattle properly with straw, but the man refused.

"It will cost $25 for straw," he said, "and I will quit selling milk to the dealers rather than pay out this money. There is no money in selling milk to the milkmen, anyway."

The man has fifteen cows, Dr. Tambling says, and thirteen of them are very dirty, and they are never given any bedding.

"We are going after every dealer and man who supplies milk," Dr. Hutchinson said. "This is only the beginning."

Chatsworth Farmer Charged With Carrying Concealed Weapons.

William Mitchell, a Chatsworth farmer, was arrested yesterday by Constable McLeod on a charge of having created a disturbance on a G. T. R. train recently, and of having carried concealed weapons. Squire Chittick remanded the prisoner pending investigation as to his sanity. Mitchell has already served two months in the Toronto Asylum for the Insane, and is supposed now to be demented.

KERNOHAN--ELLIS

A Pretty Home Wedding Solemnized at The Grove.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. Wm. Ellis, "Glenrowen," The Grove, when his daughter, Miss Hattie S., was united in marriage to Mr. W. T. Kernohan, promptly at 3:30, to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Wm. Dunn, of London, the bride entered the drawing-room, which was tastefully decorated with an arch of evergreens with red, white and blue trimmings and Canadian flags, and stood under a horseshoe of red, white and blue.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in cream chiffon tulle with all-over lace and chiffon applique trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of cream roses. She was attended by Miss Annie H. Tackabury, who wore white embroidered mulle with Valenciennes lace and Dresden ribbon trimmings, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Little Miss Ena Smith, niece of the bride, made a charming ringbearer, the ring being carried in a basket of violets. Mr. Chester McLeod, London, acted as groomsmen.

The only ornament worn by the bride was a crescent and star of pearls, the gift of the groom. To the bridesmaid the groom gave a back-comb with brilliant settings; to the groomsmen a sickle tie pin, and an emerald ring to the ringbearer. The presents to the bride were both numerous and costly, among others being a set of cutlery from the Helena Costume Company, and a china shower from her Helena friends. After a dainty repast, the bride and groom left on the 6:53 Eastern Flyer for Toronto, where they will reside at Willow Grange, The Grove.

THE BURGOMASTER AGAIN WON FAVOR

Frank Pixley and Gustave Luders' musical comedy, "The Burgomaster," visited the Grand once again last night, and it was welcomed back to London by a large audience.

The tuneful old piece is far ahead of nine out of ten of the newer productions, and other samples of rank foolishness.

To tell the truth, there were many "knockers" out in London for "The Burgomaster." The fact that Gus Weinberg and Ruth White of the original cast, were in the piece, did not serve to silence the hammers, and no doubt many people were kept away from the Grand last night through fear that the cast would be a poor one.

True, the cast was not in every particular up to the original standard, but it was nevertheless one of the most satisfying and best-balanced companies of players seen here in many moons.

Weinberg and Ruth White carried off the honors, of course, Miss White again won the house with her rendition of that sweet old lyric, "The Tale of the Kangaroo."

"Cupid Doesn't Marry," also found favor with the audience.

The chorus boasted of some of the most beautiful girls ever seen on a local stage, and by way of contrast there were a number who were not so very beautiful.

The scenery is the same as that carried by the original company.

The "Poor Mr. Rich" comedy will appear at the Grand for one performance on Saturday evening. The play has several amusing situations and plenty of good music.

BARRIE TO PLEAD
Novelist To Present Petition To Abolish Play Censor.

London, Nov. 20.—Agitation over the censorship of plays still continues just why, nobody seems to know, unless it is the agitators, and they do not explain it very clearly.

What strikes one as being rather odd is that when the petition is presented to the Prime Minister next week asking for the abolition of the censor, Mr. J. M. Barrie is to be the spokesman.

Why Barrie? He has never written a play that has been censored, and it is not believed that he ever will. If there is any dramatist in England who has no quarrel with a censor it is Mr. Barrie.

It is noticed that Mr. Pinero, of dancing doll fame; Mr. Henry Arthur Jones and Mr. Alfred Sutro, of problem play fame, do not come to the front and center in this movement to any marked degree, but it is left to the author of the innocuous and nursery room story of "Peter Pan" to demand the privilege to give immoral plays.

VALUES LOVE AT $1,500,000

Coachman-Husband of New York Belle Sues for Alienation.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 20.—Stating that he had brought three suits, each of $500,000, against those whom he charged with alienating the affections of his wife, formerly Mrs. Burke-Roche, and also with conspiracy against him, Aurel Batonyi made a flying visit to Newport today. He said also that he had come to seek an interview with Mrs. Batonyi, but that in this he had been unsuccessful.

Mr. Batonyi said that he had brought one suit against Frank K. Sturgis, former partner of Frank Work, Mrs. Batonyi's father, whom he charged with alienating the affections of his wife. Another suit, he stated, had been brought against Mr. Work, also for alienating the affections of Mrs. Batonyi, and the third, in which the charge is conspiracy to separate him and his wife, had been brought jointly against Frank Work, J. H. Work, Mr. Sturgis and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, the latter Mrs. Batonyi's sister. These suits, Mr. Batonyi said, had been entered in New York.

Mr. Batonyi said that he had also brought two suits against his wife. One was a counter action for divorce, another was to recover two horses, furniture, carriages, harness and pictures which were at Two-Mile Corner Farm, near Newport, where Mr. and Mrs. Batonyi made their home.

Mr. Batonyi claimed that he and his wife were several months ago offered $24,000 a year by Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt and Mr. Sturgis if they would leave the country and reside abroad. He showed a letter dated Aug. 18 last, which he said was a copy of one he had sent J. H. Work declining the offer. This money, Mr. Batonyi said, was to come out of the estate of Frank Work.

The blue-grass region of Kentucky and Tennessee was the first national park and game forest preserve in America. It was so set apart before the white man had come with profane foot and conquering firearms by the great Iroquois tribes of Indians—the Six Nations. They forbade any settlement or agriculture in the great region, and it became known as the "hunting grounds."

Recent careful surveys on the Isthmus of Panama prove that Gatun Lake, the great storage reservoir, which will be formed by the building of the Gatun dam near Colon, will have an area of 155 square miles. The former estimate was 110 square miles. The result will be beneficial to the canal, as the greater quantity of water stored up will allow of 56 lockages a day instead of only 26, the former estimate.
