Informal Meeting Held Re Fire Alarm System Two Thousand Dollars Would Install an Up-to-Date System in Newcastle

Mr. S. P. Gerow, representing the American La France Fire Engine Co., incorporated, was in Newcastle on Thursday last in the interest of his firm.

While here, his attention was called by Chief Dickson, to an editorial article in last week's Advocate re the need of a fire alarm system for this town, and while Mr. Gerow does not sell fire alarms, he nevertheless is well posted in the matter, and was rather surprised to learn that a town the size of Newcastle, and with an equipment and brigade such as we have, is without this most important service.

British Red Cross Society Appeals to Empire For Help

Cablegram Received by His Honor Lieut. Gov. Wood From Marquis of Lansdowne

I have received the following cablegram from the Marquis of Lansdowne (who from 1883 to 1888 was Governor General of Canada) in his capacity as President of the British Red Cross Society:

"I beg to inform you that the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, in view of the great demands upon their resources, both in France and in the near East, have decided to make an appeal throughout the Empire by street and other collections upon October 21st. The money received from this appeal will be devoted entirely to relieve the sufferings of our wounded soldiers and sailors from home and overseas at the various seats of war. From all parts of the Kingdom Dominion, we have already received generous assistance in our work, but in the increase of British and Overseas forces at the front, there is a corresponding increase in our expenditure and we shall be truly grateful to you if you will help us by organizing an appeal and sending us the proceeds for the objects I have named. I shall be greatly obliged if you will kindly communicate the foregoing to your Government, Their Majesties the King and Queen and Her Majesty Queen Alexandra are giving us their gracious patronage, and I trust that you also will be able to see your way to help."

Signed "Lansdowne, President of the British Red Cross Society, 83 Pall Mall, London."

I have also a telegram from His Royal Highness the Governor General, signifying his approval and endorsement of the appeal. I would request the members of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of New Brunswick, the Mayors of the Cities and Towns in the Province, the Wardens of Counties, and also the officers of all philanthropic societies to co-operate in this work. The services of the ladies should especially be secured and also the Boy Scouts. I would especially request the clergy of all denominations to interest themselves in the success of this appeal and to give it publicity in their churches at the services on the 17th of October inst. It will be noticed by the above cablegram that the appeal of the British Red Cross Society is for "street and other collections" and the day fixed is the 21st of October. While it will be desirable to carry out these suggestions as

Increased Business Through Advertising The Successful Merchant's Motto is Cooperation and Printers' Ink

While The Advocate has always in the past been considered a good advertising medium, and its columns freely used by the majority of the local merchants, the time should not be long before they begin to feel the good effects of the greatly increased circulation that has come to it during the past two months.

Returned Wounded Hero Is Honored by Citizens Private William J. Richardson, Tendered Reception by Nelson Citizens--Was Wounded in Arm.

Private William J. Richardson, of Nelson, who at the outbreak of war was one of Northumberland's first boys to enlist for service, joining with the Princess Pats regiment, and who was wounded in the right arm and invalidated home, arrived in Newcastle on Saturday.

When the citizens of Newcastle became aware of his arrival, they at once proceeded to make arrangements for a suitable reception. A meeting was held on Sunday, at which it was decided to hold a reception on Monday evening. Mr. Percy Burchill, who headed the Committee, sent invitations to Mayor Stothart, Hon. John Morrissey, Rev. S. J. MacArthur, and Ex-Mayor Chas. J. Morrissey, all of whom were in attendance, and who were accompanied by the Newcastle band.

Organized at Boiestown

On the 5th instant Revs. D. MacGuire organized a Local Association at Boiestown, with Rev. Geo. W. Tilly as President; Wm. McMillan, sec. treas., Mr. McNab, Scout Master and Leonard McCuskey, assistant.

Will Rebuild Pulp Mill

According to the Fredericton Gleaner, a Miramichi gentleman who visited the capital last week, stated that he had every reason to understand that a large amount of English capital had been subscribed for the rebuilding of the Millerton pulp mill and after the capital had been subscribed, which he understood was not less than a quarter of a million, the English authorities thought the money might be needed at home, and so it was decided to do nothing in the matter until after the war had been successfully ended.

Big Patriotic Auction One Week From To-day

Another Large List of Donations--Wednesday, Oct. 20th--Biggest Day in Town's History

The Advocate takes advantage of this last opportunity of announcing Newcastle's Big Patriotic Auction Sale which will take place in the rink on Wednesday, Oct. 20th, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continuing until all goods are disposed of.

Two large lists of contributions have already been published in these columns, and now today another large list is given. The contributions are from the farmers, citizens and others, of the western part of the County of Northumberland, who have at heart the good work being done by the Canadian Patriotic Fund. By their donations they have shown their allegiance to the British Empire, and their desire to lend assistance to a fund which has for its object the assisting of the dependents of our boys, who have so nobly shared in the strife into which Canada and the British Empire has been thrown--the Patriotic Fund.

Just bear in mind from now until the day arrives that you owe a duty to your King and Country, if you have not contributed in any form, and that you can make good by attending this Auction Sale and by BUYING. In order to still further swell the receipts of the auction sale, an admission fee of ten cents will be charged.

- Mrs. Michael Sullivan, (Barnaby River)--2 prs. socks. Wm. Fish, (Newcastle)--Cash $5. Nell O'Brien--1 rifle $10. Charles Johnson, (Douglasstown)--2 bbls. turnips, 2 bbls. potatoes. John Alexander, (Douglasstown)--1 bbl. carrots, 1 bbl. turnips, 1 bbl. beets. Miss Mary Murphy, (Newcastle)--3 prs. children's stockings.

The donors having done their share, it now rests with the people of this western part of Northumberland County to gather at Newcastle on Wednesday next, and make this day one worthy of mention in the pages of history. The day will be a public holiday--every store and office will be closed. There will be

RUSSIA AND THE WAR A Lesson in Economics—The Value of Our Industries

One result of the war in Russia is that wages remain low and that Russian commerce is now like a broken machine, because imports have largely ceased. With great financial resources she is impotent—because she has no industries! Canada has industries that supply her internal needs, and can export if need be, and Canada has no vodka problem to solve. Does not the thought strike one that home industries are a source of infinite strength to any nation? With all her resources, Russia could not make her binders, boots or clothing. In a thousand ways the individual Russian to-day feels the lack of imported goods—and he has no source of home manufacture. The lack of implements, binder twine, etc., has hampered Russian agriculture; the lack of munitions and equipment has hampered Russian military operations. Yet in Canada there exist individuals who decry the making of goods in Canada, who sneer at the policy of buying goods made at home. They talk of the exploitation of the consumer, but evade the whole idea of the importance to a nation of its industries, the economic benefit that comes from exporting goods, not importing them. In Canada we wanted to take a short cut to wealth. We laid out sub-divisions instead of building factories; we operated in land deals instead of raising industrial centers; we borrowed foreign money instead of keeping our own wealth at home. What money we had we diverted to other nations by buying goods that we could have produced ourselves. We were riding for a fall, but surely the war will teach us that strength lies within ourselves. Let us not forget that, save for the deathly of nations, we might be isolated to-day as is Russia. Had it been so we would have realized the foolishness of spending money on imported goods; we would have realized the importance of supporting Canadian industries, we would have purchased made in Canada goods—and thanked Providence that we had, at least to some extent, developed our home industries.—Country Life in Canada.

The Food in the Workman's Pail The money that bought the food and the pail itself can be made in Canada. Help the workman to earn the money to fill his Canadian dinner pail. Do not drive him to a foreign country by purchasing foreign products. It's useless to waste hints on narrow minded people.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HEALING, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy. If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE END OF THE WAR

The war has now been in progress for nearly a year and a quarter, and has so far resulted only in the bloodiest and most fruitless deadlock known to history. Four millions of men lie dead in the trenches, and the slaughter has hitherto swayed backward and forwards, losing today what was gained yesterday; regaining tomorrow what is lost today. A continuance of this state of affairs can only result in automatic exhaustion.

The war has resolved itself into a struggle, which side has the most men to be killed? second, which side has most shells to do the killing? and lastly, which side has most money to buy the shells? On all three of these factors, automatic exhaustion is at work, though some of the belligerents are nearer it than others.

Next to so appalling a disaster for Europe, and indeed for all mankind, as would be involved in a complete Teutonic victory, the most deplorable consummation would be a stalemate on both fronts, and a cessation of hostilities because both combatants had fought themselves to a standstill. All the ingredients to make further trouble at a future date would remain, with the imminent risk of a flare up at any time. Shere of this calamity, what is to be expected? In view of the adamant determination of the Allies, it is generally conceded that, come what may, Germany must be beaten.

Though the issue of the war is dubious and uncertain and though in the outlook at the present time, there appears to be an appreciable advantage for the Allies, it is one that can only be made use of by the most strenuous and determined efforts. The moral for the Allies at all events is patent. It is that they must go on creating new armies, and adding to their stores of munitions, the latter especially. It is most unwise to lay any stress on problematic hopes, which may, or may not, materialize. Definite facts are the only safe guide. It not only looks at present that the war will be very protracted, but as if its main theatre of decision must be found on the Western front. The Allies must conquer in the West if anywhere, and a conquest there will be decisive.

The enormous wastage of men and material in this tremendous campaign is an appalling feature which carries with it its own consequences. Germany has put all her strength into the field; France has devoted to the war all her manhood. Russia's available levies are large, but necessarily slow, and it will be some time before the pressure which she can exercise on the eastern frontier becomes really formidable for Berlin. Great Britain alone of all the warring nations, has not yet tapped the full reservoir of her strength and it is more than probable that she may ultimately be called upon to give that final exhibition of her strength, her tenacity and her resources which may be needed to bring victory to the Allied standards.

Indications are that the Allies are in the ascendant, though their progress is slow. If their final triumph is to be assured, Great Britain's task is to mobilize every soldier and every workman, in order to prove that whoever may ultimately fall, she at least does not intend to desist until the final triumph is won.

Sonnie's Prayer
Listen Saviour, while I pray
For my daddy, far away;
Gone—as mother says—to fight
For our Country, King and Right!
Shield my daddy, Saviour, shield
On the distant battlefield.

When the shells are falling near,
Wounding, killing, front and rear;
When his trench is bullet-swept,
Safety may he then be kept;
Shield my daddy, Saviour, shield
On the distant battlefield.

Take away my mother's fear,
Bid her dry each big warm tear.
Thou canst guard him to the end
And from every foe defend;
Shield my daddy, Saviour, shield
On the distant battlefield.

Answer, Saviour, while I pray
For my daddy, far away;
Grant us victory, send us peace,
Let this cruel war-time cease;
Until then my daddy shield
On the distant battlefield.

FACTS ABOUT THE WAR

A Bulletin of Information Published by the Paris Chamber of Commerce

German Peace—Whilst, on the occasion of the anniversary of the Declaration of War, the Allies have once more affirmed their steadfast union and unshaken determination to carry the struggle through to the end, and never to lay down their arms till they have ensured for the world the triumph of Liberty over Teutonic tyranny, Germany has been circulating rumours of peace, and her press has been discussing them as if, in reality, such a question had been mooted by all parties concerned. However, such is not the case; and Germany, will not find, at the present time, any authorized intermediary ready to begin a conversation with her which can have no object or purpose. Besides, the mere fact that she is hoping for peace may naturally inspire her adversaries with confidence, and strengthen their determination. And to increase this confidence as well as to induce salutary relaxation amongst those countries remaining outside the conflict, it would be well to examine, in the light of recent German proclamations, what, in point of fact, this "Peace with honor" which the Kaiser promises his subjects, would be.

On March 20th last, an address which has just recently come to light—was sent to Mr. V. Bethmann-Hollweg, Chancellor of the Empire, by six large industrial and Agricultural Associations; the Agriculturalists' League, and the Manufacturers' Central Union being amongst the number. These Associations exercise very considerable influence throughout Germany—in the country, where they represent the Junkers, the great manufacturers, the middle classes and the peasants, at the same time;—in Parliament, where they hold complete sway over two of the most important parties, the Conservatives and the National Liberals;—with the Emperor, the arbitrator of parties, who has always great regard for the desires of these different parties which number several hundred thousand members. The above-named Address, and a recent proclamation drawn up in the same spirit, by a notable group of German University men, merchants and traders, fully confirm all that is already known of the exorbitant expectations which Pan-Germanism has for a long time past aroused in the German mind. "We require, say they, the possibility of extending our culture and our industrial and commercial power all over the world; such is the fixed determination of the German people."

in their eyes, the requirements of agricultural and industrial expansion necessitate the annexation of the coal fields and mining districts in the North of France, of the fortresses of Longwy and Verdun, of a part of Poland, as well as an outlet to the Atlantic Ocean by the possession of a part of the coast along the English Channel. "Landed property and enterprises should be transferred from anti-German into German hands, after the original properties have been indemnified by France. No political influence should be permitted to annexed populations." As for Belgium, there is no longer any question of allowing her the slightest compensation for the immense injury done by the violation of her neutrality. "We must keep her politically, commercially, and in a military way, in our hands. The people all believe that such a naval base against any attempt made by England, is unique and not to be found elsewhere, and the ever-increasing commercial power of the Belgian people, will be beneficial to the growth of our own power, when the Finnish have returned to their Germanic origin."

In short, "German Peace" signifies nothing less than the end of the independence of peoples and the inauguration of a regime of force upon the ruins of civilization. It threatens nations indiscriminately, all free nations whose future is at stake to-day. And, on account of the respect with which the nation, whose Zeppelins daily fly over Holland on the way to bombarding undefended towns on the English coast, professes to regard the neutrality of small States, the Allgemeein Handelsblad of Amsterdam very rightly says: "Not a Dutchman will be able to contemplate German ambitions without disquietude. The total superiority of a country which sets at naught the claims, desires and rights of other States, shows that the independence of our own Country will only subsist in so far as the interests of the stronger power will allow of its doing so." Who, indeed could withstand the will of a Germany holding the mouths of the Rhine and the Scheldt, extending from the English Channel to the Adriatic Sea, which would make Turkey a tool for the furtherance of her pushing forward into Asia, and which would soon aspire to enslaving the whole universe under the domination of her Kaiser and Kultur. So, in order to save the world from the horrors of this German Peace, the Allies are more than ever determined to fight till final victory is obtained. It is for the liberty of the World they are contending; this is the glaring truth which all the falsehoods uttered in self interest will never succeed in obscuring.

How Germany respects the Right of Neutrals—Germany feigns not to understand why a free and neutral country like the United States should claim freedom for traders regarding the sale of munitions to belligerents. President Wilson's reply to the Note sent by the Austro-Hungarian Government was how ever sufficiently categorical: "The principles of Right, the customs and practices of nations, the national security of the United States, and other countries not possessing large military or naval establishments, the adopting of pacific methods for the settlement of international questions, and lastly, neutrality itself, are all opposed to the prohibition by a neutral country, of the exportation of arms to belligerent powers, during the war." Even before the German Chancellor thought right to reply to the American Notes of May 7th, and July 23rd last, warning the German Government that "the repetition of acts contrary to the Rights of neutrals, on the part of the Imperial Navy would be considered by the United States Government as 'deliberately unfriendly, if they affected American citizens, in the least.'" On August 15th, a German submarine torpedoed a White Star liner, the Arabic, without previous warning, off the coast of Ireland. The steamer was sailing from Liverpool to New York, and therefore could not be suspected of carrying war supplies. The vessel having kept aloft a few minutes after she was struck, rendered it possible to save the greater part of the passengers and crew, in the life boats. Nevertheless forty-four people, amongst whom were three Americans, perished.

To this fresh act of piracy on sea which chance alone prevented from being as murderous as the sinking of the Lusitania, Germany and her Allies are adding veritable deeds of plunder and robbery on land. The documents published by the New York World, and the Providence Journal, and which have just led to the opening of a judicial inquiry by the Government of Washington, prove the existence of a wholesale German plot on American soil: the Kaiser's official orders, supported by the German military attaché, von Papen, have endeavored to drag the United States into a conflict with Mexico; to stir up public opinion against President Wilson; to provoke strikes in the factories for war material; and to impede by bribery and wilful destruction the exportation of chloride, carbonic acid, flying machines and horses, for the benefit of the Allies. Direct pressure has been brought to bear upon Congress with a view to obtain an embargo on munitions. The disclosure of these criminal manoeuvres carried out by the agents of a foreign Government on the territory of a sovereign and neutral country, has roused public indignation throughout the United States. Norway, Denmark and Spain find themselves no better treated at the hands of Germanic brutality. On August 15th a German submarine stopped the Norwegian steamer Jaakon VII, when sailing from Bergen to Newcastle, and seized all the mail bags. On August 19th the British E-13 ran aground on the Danish island of Saltholm. While it was endeavoring to get off, some German men-of-war fastening up from Kiel, opened fire and mercilessly shot the crew with their machine guns, in spite of the gallant efforts made by the Danish torpedo boats to save them. Some Spanish vessels, amongst which was the Isidro, have just been sunk in the Atlantic Ocean by German submarines. The Norwegian, Danish and Spanish Governments have made energetic representations at Berlin, protesting strongly against these flagrant violations of their neutrality, and of the Conventions of the Hague.

Germany thus shows to Neutral countries, as she has done many a time to the Allies, in the course of the present war, what the future peace of the world would be if German Kultur, and the "Deutschland war alles" theory, ever came into force.

The war from August 1st to 31st
—On the Western Front, the situation on the whole has undergone no change. From the sea to the Vosges, artillery firing has been continuously intense. The efforts made by the Crown Prince's army in the Aronne, to drive back the French troops, covering Verdun on the west, have given rise to a series of sharp encounters with no important results, for the fighting line is in no wise altered. In the Vosges, operations have been successfully achieved in the regions of Lincourt, Reichenkopf and Barrenkopf. We have always continued to gain ground in spite of the repeated attempts made by the enemy to recapture their lost positions.

On the Eastern Front, the situation has been characterized by the evacuation of Warsaw and of the fortresses of Poland, all of which were of a kind already out of date, and unfit for withstanding the fire

Empire in the Mediterranean and the Black Sea.

On the Italian Front, the operations on the Taro are developing slowly, which is accounted for by the powerful offensive organizations by the Austrians in this region. However the advance is continuous, and the regularity of their successes proves the excellence of the training and material of the Italian army. The latter, along the other parts of the front, has occupied either on the frontier or on enemy ground, a series of positions protecting the North of Italy from any attack.

In the Dardanelles, the attacking movements with the Turkish positions as objectives, are systematically progressing. A fresh contingent of English troops having landed on the Northern coast of the Gallipoli Peninsula, will facilitate operations. The Italians have just declared war against Turkey, and the effective organization of the coasts of the Ottoman Empire have routed the Turkish troops in Oity, and along the shores of the Aegean Seas has just been decreed. 'THE BROKEN COIN'
THE SERIAL PHOTOPLAY SUPREME
30 REELS 15 WEEKS
THE AUTHOR EMERSON HOUGH
THE LEADING WOMAN GRACE CUNARD
THE LEADING MAN AND DIRECTOR FRANCIS FORD
EMERSON HOUGH has been the most consistent performer that the Saturday Evening Post ever produced. Year after year, from the inauguration of George Horace Lorimer's editorship of the Saturday Evening Post, until the present time he has repeated successes in that magazine. His greatest Saturday Evening Post success, of course, was "Heart's Desire," then there were the "Curley" stories, the "Willy Lou" stories, "The Singing Mouse" stories, and innumerable others as well as serials. His two greatest book successes were "The Mississippi Bubble" (over a million copies sold, and to be reduced this year as a six-reel feature film) and "34-40 or Fight," which was almost as successful as the former, and which, too, will be produced as a six-reel feature film in October of this year. Many other of Emerson Hough's successful novels date back to the early 90's, as "The Girl at the Half-way House," "The Way to the West," "The Law of the Land," "The King of Gee Whizz," "The Way of a Man," "The Siding," "The Puritan," "The Lady and the Pirate," etc. Emerson Hough has just closed contracts for his serial output for the next three years. Munsiey are featuring "Meriwether Lewis" early this fall, and have paid $10,000 therefor. "The Pictorial Review" will make his serial, "Dewdney," their feature to follow Gilbert Parker in 1916. He is also now at work on "His Bonnie Bell," a serial for the Saturday Evening Post, and has an order for "John Randolph of Virginia," which is to be serialized in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The price for these serials runs from $10,000 to $15,000 each. Because of his highly specialized ability to write wondrous stories of love and romance, Emerson Hough was paid an immense sum to write the story of "The Broken Coin."
Call Grace Cunard "The Most Wonderful Girl on the Screen" is merely to give an extra shade of color to the Lily.
Whether for her beauty, clever acting, splendid costumes, diversity of talent or any of a hundred other qualifications, she stands alone on a pinnacle of her own greatness.
To millions of fans all over the world, the mention of moving pictures brings up the thought of Grace Cunard so associated is she in their minds with everything that is best in the photoplay world.
Backed up by the wonderful skill and versatile talents of her co-partner and director, Francis Ford she has attained a position from which nothing can dislodge her.
Her beauty and superb acting in such gems as "Smugglers' Island," "The Mystery of the Throne Room," "A Study in Scarlet," "The Call of the Waves," "The Ghost of Smiling Jim," "Naubes" and hundreds of other motion picture masterpieces, have placed her in a class by herself.
If she had done nothing beside her wonderful work in the great "Lucille Love" stories, she would have made herself famous by this one great performance alone.
In addition to all this, Miss Cunard is herself a Scenario writer of renown with many of famous Photo-plays to her credit. She knows the motion picture business from A to Z and is never at a loss for either action or incident.
Miss Cunard plays the leading woman in "The Broken Coin," opposite Francis Ford.
FRANCIS FORD is the most versatile member of the great Moving Picture world today.
Not only is he a star of the first magnitude but as a writer of the highest type of scenarios, as director and producer, he has made an undying mark in every branch of the game.
His great sensational success in "Lucille Love," the first great serial Photoplay ever produced, stamped him as a past master of the 33rd degree in the production of the highest grade of masterpieces of photoplay art.
Since then he has added to his reputation with such triumphs as "The Doorway of Destruction," "The Hidden City," "The Phantom of the Violin," "Three Bad Men and a Girl," "The Heart of Lincoln," "The Madcap Queen of Gretzhaffen," and hundreds of other photoplays, famous wherever the Moving Picture is shown.
Wherever films are shown, Francis Ford is unanimously hailed as the "Uncrowned King of the Screen." Not only is he an actor of marked brilliance and versatility but his productions are far and away beyond those to which the ordinary producer, usually confines his efforts.
Movie Fans know him as a brother and look for his productions with an interest born of the knowledge that whatever Francis Ford does is bound to be brilliant.
Not only will he play the leading male part in "The Broken Coin," but he will direct every phase of the production of this great serial.

BIG THEATRICAL EVENT OF THE SEASON

At the Newcastle Opera House Next Week—"Bought and Paid For"

"Bought and Paid For" the most remarkable play of the age will be the initial offering of the Gladys Klark Co., when they open their 3 days engagement at the Opera House next Thursday evening. It is a truthful dramatization of the most talked of novel ever written. Brilliant and fascinating, and it fairly bubbles over with Heart Throbs, tears and smiles. It is by far the Greatest Drama ever presented by any company at popular prices. Beautiful and correct scenic effects and electrical embellishments are used entirely in this wonderful production. Seats are now on sale at Dickson & Troy's Drug Store.

Died in the West

Word was received here last week of the death of John Marquis which occurred at Lasvegas, Nevada October 6th. He is survived by his wife who was formerly Mrs. Sadler of Chatham; four brothers, Andrew, Hugh, George and Thomas, and one sister, Mrs. Geo. J. Dickson of Napan.—Commercial.

Pale, Feeble Girls

Weakness Generally Comes on as Womanhood Approaches

Girls upon the threshold of womanhood often drift into a decline in spite of all care and attention. How often one sees girls who have been strong and lively become suddenly weak, depressed, irritable and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—a crisis in the life of every girl—and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood pure and rich with the red tint of health. If the blood is not healthy at this critical stage the body is weakened and grave disorders follow. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls from what might have been life-long invalidism or an early death. They are a blood purifier of unequalled richness, strengthening weak nerves and producing a liberal supply of red, healthy blood which every girl needs to sustain her strength. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved their great value over and over again to young women whose health was failing. Miss Minnie Duffield, Eramosa, Ont., says:—"It gives me great pleasure to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. When I was approaching the age of womanhood I suffered greatly from bloodlessness, or anaemia. My work was a drag to me, I had no appetite and never felt rested in the mornings. I could scarcely walk for five minutes at a time without taking a rest. I was troubled with severe headaches, and things looked gloomy indeed. I doctored for a long time and got but little, if any, benefit. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and did so and after taking them for a time felt better. I continued taking the Pills until I had used six boxes, when I felt like a new person, and was again enjoying 'splendid health.' I should strongly advise any girl who is weak or run down to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"The Broken Coin A Grand Success"

The following was clipped from the Moncton Transcript of Thursday last.

"The show at Dreamland last night, taken as a whole, was the finest seen at this popular house in many months and the expressions of enthusiasm and delight which marked the initial performance of 'The Broken Coin' at once presaged success for this, the peer of all serial plays—Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, these popular screen stars, found instant favor with the audience who were at once captivated with the 'want more' epidemic. If you missed last night's performance, be on hand this evening. Let nothing keep you from seeing the beginning of the world's greatest serial. 2 shows to-night."

This high-class picture will be shown at the Happy Hour next Tuesday and Wednesday, and every following Wednesday for fifteen weeks two reels each night.

BOIESTOWN NEWS

Oct. 8—A small animal of the deer family caused some small excitement the other day by taking a promenade through the yards and streets of Boiestown. At length some of the boys thinking it just a little too saucy, started in pursuit of it, but came back from their chase unwarded.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Whittemore are spending a few days with Mrs. Whittemore's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moss Pond.

Miss Pauline O'Neill from Carroll's Crossing was calling on friends here on Saturday.

Mr. Joseph Norrad had the misfortune to cut his foot very badly the other day.

Mr. Melvin Murphy started his crew of men in the woods on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Whalen has gone for a visit at her mother's, Mrs. Hovey of Holtville.

Mr. and Mrs. William MacMillan and family took in the Doaktown Exhibition on Wednesday last.

Miss Alice Delaney has been confined to her home for the past week with a heavy cold.

HEALTHY CHILDREN

A child's health depends upon the state of his stomach and bowels. If they are kept regular and sweet the little one is sure to be healthy. Baby's Own Tablets are the mother's best friend in keeping her little ones well. They act as a gentle laxative; are absolutely safe and are pleasant to take. Concerning them Mrs. David Label, St. Perpetue, Que., writes:—"My baby was so troubled with constipation that he could not sleep day or night. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and now he is a big healthy boy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Advertising Where It Counts

The Union Advocate has always been noted as a medium that reaches the right people, and during the past few months hundreds of new names have been added to its subscription lists. This means that the advertising message it carries home will come to the notice of more people who are in a position to buy than ever before—satisfying itself and satisfying the advertiser.

These facts, obvious as they are to the experienced advertiser, should be noted by every reader who has anything to offer the public. Advocate advertisements pull for the advertiser who has something of real merit to offer.

THE Pillar of Light

By Louis Tracy

"I entered on an active and useful career with no such halo of glory," broke in Constance. "I am just plain English, born in England, parents not poor but respectable. Mother died a year after my birth, I didn't see her."

"You were thirteen months old when we lost her," he answered, bending over the clock-work attachment of the fog bell and the other things of dust. "Since his first term of service on the rock the light had changed from an oceanic to a fixed one."

"She is horridly nice, isn't she?" the girl went on. "How strange that, amidst our many journeyings, we have never visited Brighton."

"If it were able to take you to her grave-side, I would not do it," said Brand. "I do not encourage morbid sentiments, even of that perfectly natural kind. You mother is dead, Constance, is like Enid's to her, a dear but visionary legend. In a degree, it is always so between loved ones. Truth, honor, work, these are the highest ideals for the individual. They satisfy increasingly. Happy as I am in my companionship, you must not be vexed when I tell you that the most truly joyful moment of my life was conferred when my little friend here first responded accurately to external influences."

He laid his hand on an object resting on a table by itself. It looked like an aneroid barometer, but the others knew it was the marine anemometer which he had devoted so many patient hours.

"Is it in working order now?" asked Constance instantly, and Enid came nearer. Together they examined the small dial. It was equipped with an arrow-headed pointer, and Enid will be divided into the past but without the distinguishing letters.

These three understood each other exactly. By inadvertence, the conversation had touched on a topic concerning which Brand was always either vague or silent. Both girls were quick-witted and keenly interested in Constance's motor was never willingly allowed to either by the light-house keeper or by the elderly Mrs. Sheppard, and was now the housekeeper of Laburnum Cottage.

Constance was annoyed. How could she have been so thoughtless as to cause her father's moment's suffering by bringing up painful reminiscences. But he helped her, being master of himself.

He adjusted a switch in the instrument.

"I had no difficulty in constructing a diaphragm which would record all sounds," he said. "The struggle came when I wanted an agent which would distinguish and register a particular set of sounds, no matter what additional din might be prevalent at the same time. My hopes were wrecked so often that I began to despair, until I chanced one day to read in a technical light-toned induction coil could be tuned to discard electrical influences other than those issued at the same pitch. My anxiety, until I had procured and experimented with a properly constructed coil, was very trying. I assure you."

"I am wondering what you mean by a mathematical snake," said Enid. "And I am sorry to say that even yet I am profoundly ignorant as to true invariance," smiled Constance.

"Yet you girls delight in poets who bid you barken to the music of the spheres. I suppose you will admit that the car of, say Ben Pollard, is not tuned to such a celestial harmony. However, I will explain my anemometer in a sentence. It only listens to and indicates the direction of foghorns, sirens, and ship's bells. A shrill steam whistle excites it, but the breaking of seas aboard ship, the loud flapping of a propeller, the noise of the engines, of a gale, or all these in combination, leave it unmoved."

"I remember once, when we were going from Falmouth to Porthalla in a fog, how dreadfully difficult it was to discover the whereabouts of another steamer we passed en route," said his daughter.

"Well, with this little chap on the bridge, the pointer would have told the captain unerringly. I don't suppose it will be thick what you are here, or you would see it pick up the distant blast of a steamer long before you can hear them, and follow her course right round the arc of her passage. It is most interesting to watch its activity when there are several ships using their sirens. I have never had an opportunity of testing it on more than three vessels at once, but as soon as I could deduce a regular sequence in the seemingly erratic movements of the indicator, I marked the approach and passing of each with the utmost ease."

"Would that stop collisions at sea?" "Nothing will do that, because some ship's officers refuse at times to exercise due care. But with my instrument on board two ships and a time chart attached to the drums, there would be no need for a Board of Trade inquiry to determine whether or not the proper warning was given. To the vast majority of navigators it will prove an absolute blessing."

"You clever old thing!" cried Enid. "I suppose you will make heaps of money out of it."

"The inventor is the last man to make money out of his inventions, as a rule," said Brand. "I suppose I differ from the ordinary poor fellow inasmuch as I am not dependent for a livelihood on the success of my discovery."

"There's not the least little bit of chance of there being a fog to-night?" queried Enid, so earnestly that a wave of merriment rippled through the room.

"Not the least. In any event, you two girls will be in bed and sound asleep at ten o'clock."

"Perish the thought!" cried Constance. "Bed at ten, during our first and only night on a lighthouse?"

"You will see your father."

"You cannot imagine how the clock dawdles in this circumscribed area."

work none conquers it. Otherwise, men would quit the service after a month's experience."

"Ship ahoy!" screamed Enid. "Here comes the Lapwing round Carn du. Mr. Lawton must have lost her to bring the relief. How kind of him."

"The Lapwing cannot approach the rock," said Brand. "I will signal 'Landing impossible to-day.' It will save them a useless journey."

He selected the requisite flags from a locker, the phrase he needed being coded. Soon the strong breeze was trying to tear the bunting from the cordage, and though they could not hear the three whistles with which the little yacht acknowledged the signal, they could easily see the jets of steam through their glasses.

Constance happened to overlook the table on which stood the anemometer. "This thing has actually recorded those whistles," she cried in wonder. "What sort of whistle has the Lapwing?" asked Brand.

"A loud and deep one, worthy of a Leviathan. It was a fad of Mr. Lawton's. They say his siren consumes more steam than his engines."

Her father laughed.

"Anyhow he is sticking to his course," he announced. "I may as well take in the decorations."

Undaunted, but much flurried by a sea ever increasing in strength as the force of the ebb tide encountered the resistance of the wind, the Lapwing held on. With wind and sea against her she would have made slow work of it. As it was, there was help forthcoming for both journeys unless the wind went back to the north again as rapidly as it had veered to the south.

She would not be abreast the rock for nearly an hour, so Brand left the girls in charge of the lookout whilst he visited the oil-room. A wick might, such as he anticipated, demanded full pressure at the lamp. If the air became super-saturated, breakage of the glass chimney might take place, and he must have a good stock on hand. Water and coal, too, were needed; the double accident to Bates and Jackson had thrown into arrears all the ordinary duties of the afternoon watch.

Naturally, the pair in the lantern found the progress of the yacht exasperatingly slow.

"A nice Lapwing," said Enid, scornfully. "I will tell Mr. Lawton he ought to rechristen her the Bananam. All her power is in her crew."

When Brand joined them matters became livelier. More accustomed than they to the use of a telescope, he made discoveries.

"The two supernumeraries are there," he announced, "but I cannot see Lawton. Indeed, so far as I can make out, she is commanded by Stanhope, dressed in Ben Pollard's oilskins."

"He has left Lady Margaret?" cried Constance.

"He never went home!" essayed Enid.

"Poor chap! He was going to take us for a drive tomorrow," said Constance.

"To Morvah," explained Enid, with a syllabic emphasis meant for one pair of ears.

"It is very nice of him to struggle on and after a look at us," said Brand. "He can come close enough to us, but that is all. Our small megaphone will be useless."

Indeed, the Lapwing dared not approach nearer than the Trinity no. 7 ring buoy. By that time the three, protected from the biting wind by oilskin coats, were standing on the saltery. The reef was blowing up at them with a continuous roar. A couple of acres of its surface consisted of nothing more tangible than white foam and driving spray.

Stanhope, resigning the wheel to a sailor, braced himself firmly against the little vessel's breast and began to strike a series of extraordinary attitudes with his arms and head.

"Why is he behaving in that idiotic manner?" screamed Enid.

"Capital idea—somebody—clever fellow, Jack," shouted Brand.

Abashed, Enid laid her hands on the light-house-keeper, signaling in turn that he was receiving the message, spelled out the following:

"All well."

"Yes," he answered.

"Bates and Jackson reached hospital," Bates composed a fracture. "If weather moderates will be with you next tide."

"All right," waved Brand.

The distant figure started again:

"Leave to Enid."

Enid indulged in an extraordinary arm flourish.

"And Constance—"

"That spoils it," she screamed. "It ought to be only kind regards to you, Connie. I believe you are a serpent."

"Do stop your chatter," shouted Brand, and he continued the message.

"Weather looks very bad. Little hope for to-night. Language at six. Will see personally that no chance is lost. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," was the response.

The Lapwing fell away astern from the vicinity of the buoy.

"Why is he doing that?" asked Constance, close to her father's ear.

"He is too good a sailor to risk turning her in that brook water. A little farther out there is greater depth and more regular seas."

They watched the yacht in silence. At last her head swung round toward the east. When brandished, she gave a hit her, and the spray leaped over her masts.

"That gave them a wetting," cried Brand, and his calm tone stifled their ready fear. Indeed, there was greater danger than he wanted them to know. But the Lapwing reappeared, sinking herself, and still turning.

"Good little boat!" said Brand. The crisis had passed. She was loaded, at full speed, for the Bay. And not too soon. Ere she reached the comparative shelter of Clement's Island she was swept three times by green water.

Inside the lantern, their faces ruddy with the exposure, their eyes dancing with excitement, the girls were voluble with delight. Could anything be more thrilling than their experiences that day?

"That semaphore dodge is too precious to be lost," cried Enid. "Constance, you and I must learn the alphabet. You shall teach us this very evening, dad. Fancy me signaling you the whole length of the Promenade! Just look at Mrs. Wilson's bonnet, or 'Here come the Taylor-Smiths. Scott! Oh, it's fine!'"

She whirled her arms in stiff-jointed rigidity and mimicked Stanhope's fantastic posing.

"Why should you scot when you meet the Taylor-Smiths?" asked Brand.

"Because Mrs. T.-S. hauls us off to tea and gives us a gallon of gossip with every cup."

"I thought your sex regarded gossip as the cream?"

"Sex, indeed! Old Smith is worse than his wife. He doesn't say much, out no tricks. One of his winks, at the end of a story, turns an episode into a three-volume novel."

"It seems to me I must teach you the code in my own self-defence," he replied. "And you for tea. Let us have it served here."

They voted this an admirable notion. The girls entwined the meal by relating to him the doings and sayings of current interest ashore during the past two months. By a queer coincidence, which he did not mention, his relief was again due within a week, just as on the occasion of Gold's first appearance on the rock. The fact struck him as singular. In all probability he would not return to duty. He had completed twenty-one years of active service. Now he would retire, and when the commercial arrangements for the anemometers were completed, he would take his daughters on a long-promised Continental tour, unless, indeed, matters progressed between Stanhope and Enid to the point of an early marriage.

He had foreseen that Stanhope would probably ask Enid to be his wife. He knew the youngster well and liked him. For the opposition that Lady Margaret might offer he cared not a jot. He still inwardly aspired to the position of a father-in-law, and he reviewed the certain outcome of any dispute between himself and her ladyship. He would surprise her.

Brand, the light-house-keeper, and Brand using the claims of his adopted daughter, would be two very different persons.

Of course, all Penzance knew that he was a gentleman, a scientist in a small way, and a man of means; otherwise Constance and Enid would not have occupied the position they had in local society. Those unacquainted with English ways often make the mistake of rating a man's social status by the means he possesses or the manner of his life in London. No greater error could be committed.

The small, exclusive county town, the community which registers the family connections of many generations, is the only reliable index. Here, to be of gentle birth and breeding—not had credentials even in the court of King Demos—confers a Brahminical rank, no matter what the personal fortunes of the individual.

Brand it is true, did not belong to a Cornish county family, but those were those who counted him shrewdly. They regarded him as a well-meaning crank, yet the edict went forth that his daughters were to be "recolled," and received they were, with pleasure and admiration by all save such startled elderly mamma as Lady Margaret Stanhope, who expected her good-looking son to contract a marriage which would restore the falling fortunes of the house.

All unconscious of the thoughts flitting through his brain, for Brand was busy trimming a spare lamp, the two girls amused themselves by learning the semaphore alphabet from a little hand-book which he found for them.

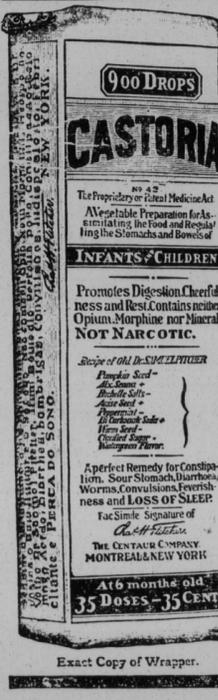

When the night fell, dark and lowering, the lamp was lighted. They had never before seen an eight-wicked concrete burner in use. The three light-houses with which they were better acquainted were illuminated by electricity or on the catoptric principle. A wreath a large number of small Argand lamps, with reflectors, are grouped together.

To interest them, to keep their eyes and ears away from the low-water orgy of the reef, he explained to them the capillary action of the oil. Although they had learnt these things in school they had not realized the exactness of the statement that oil does not burn, but must first be converted into gas by the application of heat. On the Gulf Rock there were nearly 3,000 gallons of colza oil stored in the tanks beneath, colza being used in preference to paraffin because it was safer, and there was no storage accommodation apart from the light-house.

Requiring much greater heat than mineral oil to produce inflammable gas, the colza had to be forced by heavy pressure in the eastern right up to the edge of the wicks, and made to flow evenly over the rims of the burner, else the fierce flame would eat the metal discs as well.

He read them a little lecture on the rival claims of gas and electricity, and demonstrated how dazzlingly brilliant the latter could be on a dark, clear night by showing them the fine light on the Lizard.

"But in hazy weather the oil wins," he said, with the proper pride of every man in his own engine. "Fishermen sailing into Penzance about a course equidistant from the two points tell me that if they can see anything at all on a foggy night they invariably catch a dull yellow radiance from the rock, whilst the Lizard is invisible. The oil has more penetrative power. Its chemical combination is nearer the mean of nature's resources."

At the proper time he banished them to the kitchen to prepare dinner, a feast diverted from the hour of noon by the chances of the day. He adopted every expedient to keep them busy, to tire them physically and mentally, to render them so exhausted that they would sleep in blissful calm through the ordeal to come.

As he could not leave the lamp, and they refused to eat apart from him, the dinner, in three courses, was a breathless affair. Going up and down five flights of stairs with soup, joint and pudding, whilst one carried the tray and the other swung a heavy lantern in front, required time and exertion. They were cheerful as grigs over it.

Enid, whose turn it was to bring up the plates of tapioca, pleaded guilty to a slight sensation of nervousness.

"I could not help remembering," she said, "what an awful lot of dark iron steps there were beneath me. I felt as if something were creeping up quickly, behind to grab me by the ankles."

"You should go up and down three times in the dark," was Brand's recipe. "When you quitted the door level for the third ascent you had cause to worry about impossible grats."

Constance looked at her watch.

"Only eight o'clock! What a long day it has been," she commented.

"You must go to bed early. Sleep in my room. You will soon forget where you are asleep," he added quickly. "I must fasten all the storm-shutters and make everything snug. Don't stir until I wake you in the morning."

"Poor old dad!" sighed Constance. "What a villain!"

He was making new entries in the weather report when she remarked, thoughtfully:

"It is high-water about half past one."

I think so," he nodded, pretending to treat the question as of no special import.

"From all appearances there will be a heavy sea, she went on.

"Just an ordinary bad night," he said coolly.

"Do the waves reach far up the lighthouse in a gale?" she persisted.

Then Brand grasped the situation firmly.

"So that your slumbers may be peaceful," he said, "I will call your kind attention to the fact that the Gulf Rock light has appeared every night during the past twenty-five years, or since a date some four years before you were born. Constance, it contains 4,000 tons of granite and is practically monolithic, as if it were carved out of a quarry. Indeed, I think its builder went one better than nature. Here are no cracks or fissures or undetected flaws. The lowest course is bolted to the rock with wrought-iron clamps. Every stone is dove-tailed to its neighbors, and clasped to them with iron, above, below and at the sides. If you understood concrete sections I could make clearer the scientific aspect of the structure, but you can take it from me you are far safer here than on a natural rock many times the dimensions of this column."

"That sounds very satisfactory," murmured Enid, sleepily.

"I am overworked," said Constance, who grasped the essential fact that he had not answered her question.

Soon after nine o'clock he kissed them good-night. They promised not to sit up talking. As a guarantee of their good behavior, Enid said she would ring the electric bell just before she climbed into her bunk.

The signal came soon, and he was glad he had trusted to the fact that the fresh air, the confidence of the knowledge that he was on guard, to lull them into the security of unconsciousness.
