In the Imperial House of Lords on the 4th, Marquis of Lansdowne, secretary of state for war, explained the vernment's scheme for reorganization of the army with the view of bringing the battalions at home to a higher state of efficiency and augmenting those abroad in respect of tuliness of ranks and numbers of organizations. The scheme the government had for-mulated, he said, included among other changes the addition of two battalions of the guards, making nine battalions in all, and the employment of three of them abroad. It was in tended to add one battalion each to the Highland, Malta and West India regiments and 3,600 men to the gar-

The presence of posters in the lobby of the Harlem N. Y. Opera House, announcing a coming lecture by Robert Ingersoll caused trouble a few evenings ago at an entertainment given for the Catholic Church of St. Thomas and Apostle, at 18th Street and St. Nichelas Avenue. Many prominent Oatholics gathered in front of the Opera Rouse and refused to have the entertainment begun until the objectionable posters were removed. Finally the bills were torn down and thrown into an alley in the rear of the theatre by order of Mr. Blumenthal, the manager, and the entertainment proceeded. Mr. Inger-

Davies, minister of marine and fisheries, the commission sent by the liberal government of Canada to Washington to sound the republican leaders on the subject of reciprocity, arrived in the city today. The two commissioners declined to see visitors during the evening. Their object in coming to Washington and what they expect to do is set forth in the following official statement is sued by the commissioners and for warded to the press. Our object in coming to Washington is in the first place to see Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, and to confer take advantage of the opportunity to see as many of the public men as possible and discuss with them the existing trade relations between Canada and the United States, and the possibility of making these trade re-lations broader and freer. The liberal party, which came into power in Canada last June, has always favored the freest possible trade relations be tween the two countries, consistent of course, with their own fiscal independence, and before introducing their tariff at the next session of parliament, we desire to ascertain as far as possible the views of the American people, through their representatives, with respect to these trade relations. We propose to discuss the matter with them very frankly and very fully, because we believe it is a matter which should be approached and disposed of in the best way. We see no reason why the difficulties which heretofore stood in the way should not be overcome, nor why the discussion should not embrace such out the mischief of it myself, and she would have been right. I did find it out, and I am undoing it to this day. I closed my book when I finished it, and burried into the waiting tasks. It was a rush and unsstisfactory makeshift. Nothing went quite right, and some delight ful things I had planned had to be abandoned, crowded out. But the worst of it was that, having once put pleasure before work, I found it so easy to do it again. I yielded again and again to the same temptation, a new book. No one ever objected to me reading, and my only safeguard lay in my own conscience, which I trained to self-indulgence. In the thoughtless years that came before the chasti-ement of sorrow, I even set aside duty for pleasure without much compunction, not to its absolute neglect altogether, but until a more convenient season. And I am only just now doing real penance by striving hard to reform. and by strictly confining my work. my leisure, my pleasant tasks and unpleasant recreations to the exact limit I assgn to each." Father de Ravignan had no such weary task in his old age. He had no such sadd-ning retrospect. If we have, we must do penance in reforming ; if we are, happly, too young to look back, we must spare ourselves this misery. A rule of life, a set time for everything that comes into our lives, and then-a strict observance of the rule and the time. Nothing else can so order life as to get

We are not accustomed to think

Mother Goose as a very wise woman, but there is a true story hidden in the rhyme of "Little Jack Horner," which proves that the good old dame was in one instance good old dame was in one instance at least better informed than we $1.00 a Year in Advance who have been accus omed to con sider her lines all nonsense. There was a Christmas pie, and there was a Jack Horner; and a very amusing little fellow he was, too. It was in the troublous days of Henry VIII. that cruel monster who has left such a trail o blood and ruin on the history of Merrie England,-and he was engaged in the spoliation of religious bouses, and in driving the monk forth juto the world to seek a living as best they could. But in the head of one monastery he met his match; for the abbot of Glaston-Henry would demand the title-deeds of the Abbey of Mells, resolved to send the documents to London for safe-keeping. But how to transport them was the question. The oads were infested with thieves, well informed as to the marke value of title-deeds; and there was good reason to believe that the papers, if packed in any way ever before heard of, would be the booty of some canny knight of the road. But the Abbot knew a way worth trying. He ordered a savoury pie to be made, and inside its toothson contents the documents were hidden. Then he called a boy named Horner, who, doffing his cap and making a low bow, promised to deliver the pie to the proper London adress, not to tarry on the way, and to run very fast if he saw suspicious characters approaching or following. But it was a goodly walk to London and the air was biting; and Jack, being a boy, was hungry. So he broke off a corner of the pastry, pulled out some plums and was having a fine feast, when he discovered that there was something in the filing not usually found in such a concoction, and drewlout the title-deeds carfully packed in a water proof cover. When the big pie reached its destination something besides the plums was missing; for the papers were stowed away in Jack's pocket. The rage of the King's commissioners knew no bounds, and kept his secret; and years after, peace in the land, he produced the papers and laid claim to the estates.
