CHAPTER IX.
IN BITTER MISERY.

"What have I done? Oh! my love, come back!"

But it is too late; wicked Sir Cyril is halfway down the street and out of hearing, even of the voice of his bride—the one voice he loves best in the whole wide world.

Outside the "Grand" the usual small group of idlers are congregated; it is the half hour before dinner, and the well-dressed men and women who patronize the best hotel in Lucerne, are lounging about, gossiping with the half-abstracted air which is noticeable about the man or woman waiting for dinner.

Cyril, blind to everything and everybody, filled with this, the first misery of his life, is striding past, heedless and indifferent to the little buzz and flutter of the fashionables, when a richly dressed woman, who is standing near the end of the ornamental forecourt, bargaining for some ripe figs with the dark-haired Swiss girl from the market, utters an exclamation at sight of him—or his face really—and puts out her beringed glove to stop him.

Cyril stops dead short with a start, and then seeing who it is that has stopped him, turns an ugly red, and with something like an oath shakes his arm free from her light grasp, and goes on—but only for a few steps. A sudden resolution sends him back, and walking past her, he makes a gesture toward the little English church that stands in the hotel grounds.

"Go—somewhere out of sight—I want to speak to you."

Molly Glitters hesitates a moment and pouts, then obeys and follows him.

"So," says Cyril, standing opposite her, his hands clasped on his stick, a scornful scowl upon his face, "you broke your promise, as I might have expected."

The fiery contempt in the latter words raise Miss Molly's ire.

"Now, Mr. Daredevil, I didn't come to be insulted!" she exclaims, angrily, eyeing him with mingled surprise and some honest concern, for there is a look on his face which she intimately as she thinks she knows—or has known—him has never seen before. "And what's the matter? Have you been lifting your elbow?" she meant drinking—"already this morning? That's unlike you, Sir Cyril."

"What is that to you?" says Cyril, with haughty roughness. "Answer my question—why did you break your promise? Was it impossible for you to be truthful in small things as it is in more important ones?"

The bitter sneer touches her and takes her breath away.

"You have been drinking!" she says, under her breath, and with a passionate nod, "or else you wouldn't insult me like this—unless you're quite changed since I knew you—and—oh, my promise eh? And who says I've broken it?"

"Don't lie!" he retorts, savagely. "I have just come away from some of your—with—"

A light breaks in upon her and she smiles—not sweetly—but the smile dies suddenly under the scorching fire of his eyes.

"Oh, that's the matter. You don't like to be interfered with. Let me tell you, Mr. Cyril, I don't care what you say, and how you look. I'm not a bit sorry; in fact, I'm very glad if I've balked you for once, and saved that poor little thing."

"Silence!" says Cyril, between his teeth; "don't take her name upon your lips."

Molly flushes. "I don't know her name, and I don't want to! So I'm not good enough to speak it. It strikes me I should do less harm to her than you would. Oh, your black looks won't frighten me;—but she trembles a little nevertheless—I've spoiled your game, and there's an end of it, and it's no use your coming and wanting to knock me down, because you can't do it! If you had any proper feeling about you you'd thank me rather, and get out of the way, glad that I've stopped it from being any worse."

"Hold your tongue!" says Cyril, hoarsely; "you don't understand—you talk of harm! Harm! You think I meant harm!"

She breaks in upon him with her sharp and not unmusical laugh.

"When did you mean anything else?"

The retort strikes home so sharply that he winces, and Molly, seeing her advantage, goes on, quickly:

"Come, Cyril, what's the use of carrying it off high with me? I've done a good action—the first in my life, perhaps, and you ought to be glad of it! For all your black looks now you'll forget her in a week, and—"

taking no notice of the dark frown that greets her assertion, she continues: "And it isn't half as bad as it might have been, for, as to my promise, I don't know that I've broken it after all—I didn't mention your name."

Cyril turns his eyes on her with a glare of surprise and incredulity.

"Ah!" says Molly, shrewdly; "meant no harm, eh? and didn't tell her your name! Well, perhaps it was best, and I've done no harm, for she didn't get it from me, poor little thing, and she never shall, that's more!"

Cyril stands, his hand pressing on his brow, his whole mind concentrated on one thought.

"You didn't tell her who I was?" he says.

"I didn't!" answers Molly emphatically.

"She does not know—"

"Unless you told her."

"And you will keep your promise? Oh, Molly, if I could trust you!"

Something in his voice, for the first time revealing the agony within, touches her.

She looks at him with careful scrutiny.

"Why, you are both as bad as one another! Who'd ever think that you'd be hit like this? Yes, you can trust me; I don't know why you should insult me like this—no one can say Molly Glitters can't keep her word."

"Hold to that, still," says Cyril, with a little anxious sigh; "keep it from her, and I'll forgive you all else you've done. Promise me, once more!" he pleads now.

"I promise, and there's my hand upon it!" she answers, humbly.

Cyril touches her hand with a shudder—it is the hand that has struck down his happiness at one blow—and then turns away.

"You are off now, I suppose?" she asks. "Where to?"

He puts his hat over his forehead again, and looks down with the dark, brooding stare.

"Yes, I am off," he says; "I don't know where now. We shan't meet again, but I trust to you; whatever happens, you'll keep it from her. Good-by."

"I will—good-by," she says.

And then, with his head bent down, he walks hurriedly away.

CHAPTER X.
A LEGAL CONSULTATION.

A chamber in Lincoln's Inn, the private room in the offices of Mr. Richard Burdon, solicitor. Mr. Burdon himself is seated at the writing-table in the center, talking to his friend and brother in the law, Mr. Edward More.

The table at which Mr. More sits is new, of well-seasoned mahogany and the best workmanship; the chairs—well stuffed and upholstered in leather—in which Mr. Burdon and the barrister sit, and their fellows round the room, are luxurious and comfortable to match. There is a handsome, sober-hued carpet upon the floor; dark, expensive rep curtains to the windows; and altogether an air of substantial, well-do comfort that is noticeable at a glance. At one time it was considered that a lawyer's office could not be too musty, dusty and badly furnished; but the lawyers themselves have changed all that; perhaps they have come to agree with the wisdom of the proverbial spider, and deemed it politic to make the ensnaring parlor pretty and enticing for their hapless victims.

The owner of the room, as he sits in the half-cool sunlight of this first morning in September, harmonizes well with the room and its adjuncts. Elderly, white-haired, sharp-browed, close-shaven, he looks, like his chairs and tables, well-to-do and prosperous, and, in addition, offers a striking contrast to the appearance and bearing of his companion, who, as well as differing from him in being small made, thin, dark and dissatisfied-looking, is, at the present moment, ill at ease and suffering from the first effects of a surprise, which he scarcely knows whether to consider welcome or unpleasant. Mr. Burdon leans back in his chair, his hand upon a thick pile of parchment, his placid, yet not unacute, eyes regarding his companion as he fidgets in his chair and gnaws, restlessly, at his three forefingers.

"This is a most extraordinary story," he says, at last, in response to the elder gentleman's patient, but "Syrup of Figs" is Child's Laxative.

Look at tongue! Remove poisons from stomach, liver and bowels.

Accept "California" Syrup of Figs only—look for the name California on the package, then you are sure your child is having the best and most harmless laxative or physic for the little stomach, liver and bowels. Children love its delicious fruity taste. Full directions for child's dose on each bottle. Give it without fear.

nevertheless expectant regard. "Most extraordinary! And you say that it is as fresh to you as to me?"

There is palpable doubt in the tone, and still more plainly hinted incredulity in the look which accompanies the question.

Mr. Burdon does not appear to notice, certainly does not resent, either word or look.

"Yes, quite as fresh. I have, of course, never opened the deed until this morning—until just now. Why should I?"

"Why, indeed?" mutters Edward More, rising and walking to the window, where he stands for a moment to beat the devil's tattoo with his finger upon the glass. "Why, indeed, and yet—it is an extraordinary story—such a—a romantic!"—he says the word with a burst of irritable contempt—"business, that I should have thought you would have known something about it."

Mr. Burdon shakes his head. "I did not know till this morning. I might have had some suspicion or idea, but nothing more—"

Edward More breaks in with a sudden, suspicious question:

"I suppose it is all right?"

"How do you mean?" asks the other. "If you mean is the money all right, of course it is. Lord Sunley and myself are trustees."

"Yes, yes, I know," interposes Edward, with an impatient nod. "I don't suppose the money's anything but right; but the deed?"

"Is without a flaw," replies Mr. Burdon. "Look at it yourself—it was drawn up by one of the first conveyancers—Green. Nothing could be clearer."

"I wonder you weren't asked."

"How?" responds the other, with a smile. Then the secret would have been out! No—John Weston was a far-seeing, acute man; he would have made a good lawyer, More; and he took every precaution to keep the thing quiet."

"Of course Green knew?"

"Of course; but there was nothing in that, any more than if the Sphinx had known it. You don't suppose Green would open his lips about a deed he had anything to do with if it was the understood thing that he shouldn't. No, I feel convinced that we three—Green, you and I—are the only ones who know of the existence of the deed, excepting the witnesses. Yes," he added, thoughtfully, "it is strange."

Conference Agrees Regarding German Colonies

Strike Situation Serious -- No Settlement in Sight -- Allies Retire Before Bolshevik in Russia.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

PARIS, Feb. 1. The Peace Conference reached by the Council of the League of Nations concerning the German colonies and the situation in Turkey in Asia has more definite than is generally supposed, and, besides accepting the principle of the American Mandates, it embraces the following main features: The Allied Powers are agreed that the German colonies shall not be returned to Germany, owing first to the management, cruelty, and the general character of these colonies as submarine empires. The conquered regions of Asia, Mesopotamia, Palestine, and the Turkish empire. Provision shall be made for the well-being and development of backward colonial regions as the sacred trust of civilization over which the League of Nations exercises supervision. The administration of these regions is entrusted to the advanced nations, who will be mandated in behalf of the League of Nations. These mandates are not uniform, but vary according to the degree of development of the colonial region and its approach to the stage of self-government. The mandates in Palestine, Syria and other portions of Turkey, where well developed civilization exists, would be comparatively tight and would probably permit of the provisional recognition of the independence of these communities. On the other hand colonies like those in Central Africa would require a mandatory with large powers of administration as responsible for the suppression of the slave trade, the liquor traffic, and the prevention of arms traffic, and the prevention of military authority on the part of the natives except for native police purposes. Other colonies and localities, such as those in German South West Africa and some of the South Pacific Islands, have more sparse and scattered populations and are so separated from other communities that the laws of the mandatory country would probably prevail in these regions. The mandates will report at stated intervals to the League of Nations concerning the manner in which a colony is being administered. The foregoing general outline indicates, on broad lines the terms whereby, it is declared, conflicting views were finally reconciled and a common agreement was reached acceptable to all the great and colonial powers.

THE BELFAST STRIKE.

BELFAST, Feb. 1. The strike situation here is assuming an uglier phase. The strike bulletin gotten out by the strikers announces that because of the refusal of the employers to consult with the Lord Mayor regarding the situation, "serious consideration is being given to the question whether a more drastic policy should be adopted." Strike pickets have intimidated the owners of two of the big shipbuilding plants that they will not be allowed to visit their works without a permit from the strikers' committee. There have been several highway robberies in the fashionable suburbs of the city.

STRIKE SPREADING.

LONDON, Feb. 1. The ship repairers on the Thames side, who have been out during the week without strike pay, have now been promised fifteen shillings per man weekly by their unions, therefore the possibility of a shortness of funds ending the strike has disappeared. The Belfast strike committee having virtually tied up the city is turning its attention to attempts to extend the strike to the rest of Ireland, while the example of Glasgow is being followed by the shipyard workers on the northeast coast and along the Bristol Channel. They are demanding a forty hour week. The meeting of the representatives of 24 trades unions which was originally called to meet at London to discuss the working of a forty-seven hour week will now be occupied in debating whether a demand for a forty hour week shall be made.

NO IMPROVEMENT.

LONDON, Feb. 2. There is no improvement in the strike situation in the United Kingdom to-day. If anything there seems to be a probability of the troubles spreading, although the intervention of the military at Glasgow is considered likely to dampen the ardor of the elements inclined to resort to rioting.

TROOPS SENT TO GLASGOW.

GLASGOW, Feb. 1. Thousands of troops have arrived here and sentries with fixed bayonets are stationed at strategic points about the city. Everything is quiet this forenoon. Councillor Shipwell, one of the strike leaders in the Clyde district was arrested this morning.

ALLIED COLUMN RETIRES.

ARCHANGEL, Jan. 31. Another violent attack by the Bolsheviks on the American, Russian and British positions at Tarevo, compelled the hard-pressed and outnumbered Allied column in this sector to withdraw yesterday approximately forty miles. Its new position is at the village of Srdmakrenka. The Bolshevik attack followed a bombardment in which gas incendiary shrapnel and high explosive shells were used. It was the first time that gas shells had been employed in the new Russian warfare.

WHAT FRANCE AND BRITAIN WANT.

PARIS, Feb. 2. The delegates of the five great powers are now in a position to compare clearly their own aspirations and those of all their Allied friends and to see the differences that must be reconciled for the Peace Conference to adjust them in accordance with the whole. The desires of France and Britain as presented may be compressed thus: France wants first of all Alsace-Lorraine unconditionally and the right to discuss and ultimately to fix the French frontiers in their relation to the Rhine which may require the creation of buffer states. One of these would be the Palatinate and another Rhenish Prussia. France desires also to annex the basin of the Sarre River which might be called a re-annexation. France will insist that so far as the left bank of the Rhine further to the north is concerned, the Conference should forbid military works of any kind, barracks, bridgeheads, forts and fortresses, in that zone. The feeling is that the people inhabiting that zone should be free to decide for themselves whether they wish to join France forming an independent state or return to Germany. The French bill for repatriation is not yet completed but it has been announced in the Chamber of Deputies that it will be about sixty-six billion francs. The French Government does not ask for a protectorate in Syria in the ordinary sense because it considers that the people there are too advanced to make a protectorate necessary. But France on account of her traditional interests in that country feels that she should be called upon to exercise some sort of guardianship or guidance until Syria should be fully able to govern herself. Great Britain's delegation delivers that as society of nations is desirable and obtainable, and that it must be established by the present Peace Conference. She advances no continental purpose other than those of a permanent and just peace under the principle of self-determination, and that there shall be international freedom of transit by railroads, and waterways, which is Great Britain's general definition of freedom of commerce in times of peace. Great Britain will take mandatory power over the German Islands south of the equator for Australia, and over German South West Africa for the union of South Africa. She will also have the mandate over German East Africa and some parts of Arabia and she has particular claims in this respect over Mesopotamia. Great Britain will enter a pool with the other Allies in the matter of indemnities, especially reparation for air raid damages and shipping losses.

LEFT WITH AUSTRALIA.

PARIS, Feb. 1. In framing the details for a plan for applying the principles of internationalization to the German colonies on the mandatory system, the Peace Conference committee is understood to have agreed that the present immigration laws of Australia should obtain in New Guinea. One of the main claims of Australia for the outright annexation of this territory was that under internationalization she would be unable to maintain her present laws which provide for exclusion in certain cases. The conference decided, it is said, that Australia would have the right to say what immigration was desirable.

NEWFOUNDLAND CASUALTY.

OTTAWA, Feb. 2. The casualty list to-day contains the following name: Died, L. Keeping, St. John's, Nfld.

LEGALLY DEAD.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 1. Speaking to his tenants near Potsdam, on the birthday of the former German Emperor, Prince Eitel Friedrich, the second son of former Emperor William, said, "you will never see the Kaiser again. Circumstances have wiped him out of the world's history. Legally speaking, my father is dead."

THREAT TO GERMANY.

BERLIN, Feb. 1. Germany's eastern frontiers are most gravely threatened by the Bolsheviks and Poles, according to the Tageblatt, which gives the following report in part of the situation: Strong Bolshevik armies stand before the borders of East Prussia, an irruption of Poles threatens West Prussia, and that portion of West Prussia which is still in German hands, is subjected to a renewed Polish menace, which means that the province of Brandenburg is also in danger. Russian Soviet troops occupy a line from Libau to Kovno. The fortress of Kovno is not yet in their hands, but the Bolsheviks stand directly in front of it, and have at their disposal numerous divisions which are held together and led forward by iron discipline. The Soldiers' Council no longer play the role in the Bolshevik army that they did at the beginning of the revolution. Military authority, on the other hand, is vested with the troops and their leaders.

WORRYING ABOUT TERRITORY.

BERNE, Jan. 31. The Sarre Valley and the western bank of the Rhine must be considered an integral part of the German state, according to Herr Weis, a German delegate to the International Labor Conference. Herr Grumbach, another German delegate, said to-day that he would make a declaration concerning Alsace-Lorraine, but added that he saw no connection between the fate of these provinces and that of the Sarre Valley.

The President's Mother and Father.

Many a striking article might be written about President Wilson's visit to Carlisle where his grandfather was a Congregational Minister and where the President's mother was born.

His Grandfather Emigrates.

His grandfather, the Rev. Thomas Woodrow, was the minister of the Independent Chapel from 1829 to 1835, when he emigrated to America, and during that time the President's mother, Jessie Woodrow, was born. Various mementos of this family connection with the city were presented to the President on Sunday last when he visited the city, including a photographed copy of the counterpart lease of the site of the Cavendish Place house from the Duke of Devonshire. This lease bore the signature of Thomas Woodrow, which had in front of it a stamped monogram, an elaborately decorative "W".

"My grandfather," said President Wilson, "went over to America in a packet ship. My Mother was just seven years old. She was standing on the deck of the ship one day, fortunately holding a loose rope dangling from the yardarm, when a sudden squall struck the ship. My mother was swung over the water, but, fortunately for me, when the ship righted she was captured again and came through all right. But I have always felt a thrill on the narration of that story, because of what might have been involved for me."

James Wilson, Printer.

Some interesting facts about the President's paternal grandfather are given by the New York Times:—"In 1807 a County Down youth named James Wilson landed in Philadelphia, and got work as a printer—that old craft of adventurers and wanderers and small purses stuffed with hope. He married an Ulster girl who had "come over" in the same emigrant ship. He thrived as a printer and editor in Pittsburg, whence his son, after learning the trade, went to college and became a Presbyterian minister, after the fashion of so many Ulsterites—"black-mouth Presbyterians," as a phrase of mysterious origin and rancour calls them.

Descendant of Immigrants.

"Woodrow Wilson inherited an intellectual tradition, high standards of life, and the modest or narrow circumstances that are among the spurrs to manly endeavor. He was a born professor, so to speak; the variousness of his academic environment in his early years seemed to bespeak for him that subdued but far-spreading influence which came to him as head of a renowned university. He studied government and politics; he wrote history before he made it; he fitted himself, consciously or unconsciously, for the marvelous career of which no man can have dreamed ten years ago."

Mistaken Diplomacy.

It will be a most remarkable illustration of the Golden Rule if in the general terms of peace there is to be no reference whatever to the payment of any indemnity, by Germany and her associates in the war, to the Allied countries. Late despatches from London advise that this important point has been settled and that Germany is to go scot free in this respect. It is nice to be so forgiving, but the Golden Rule interpretation should have been, in the present case, "Do unto Germany as Germany did unto others." There appears to be a great deal of mawkish sentiment pervading the Peace Conference discussions, and apparently the insidious German propaganda which has been carried on by enemy agents, is having its effect on the assembled diplomats at Versailles. Forgiveness and leniency can be carried too far, and any display of these virtues will be looked upon by Germans of all classes as something akin to fear or what is worse—weakness.

Germany provoked the war which has ended so disastrously for her. The Sarajevo assassination was made the pretext. Had not that occurred, some other would have been manufactured for the purpose which the Kaiser and his militarists had in view in 1914 and made to do service for the policy of aggressive warfare upon which the Junkers had determined, in the desire to impose upon the world the stamp of Kultur.

If there is to be no indemnity paid by Germany for the wrongs of Belgium, the rape of France, the martyrdom of Serbia, in what way does the Conference propose to punish the perpetrators of deeds too vile to be written of. The Germans dominated Belgium for fifty-one months, and during their possession of that country they indulged in every form of theft; in the violation of individual rights; the use of forced labor and deportations, and the destruction, after pillage, of towns occupied by them. One of their own writers bears testimony to this, and out of his mouth, or really, by his pen shall Germany be condemned.

Maximilian Harden is no Anglophile. He is German through and through and though at the moment he has adopted a humble tone in discussing the events of the hour, he was one of the men who early in the war was most open in proclaiming German superiority and righteousness, and advocated that Germany should boldly admit, and boast, if necessary, that she had deliberately brought on the conflict, and thereby intended to trample down other nations and compel them to accept German rule. Harden was also the apologist for the German violation of Belgian territory, declaring that the crimes committed were justified because they were a part of military policy and needed neither explanation nor excuse. Today Harden makes a confession, but not the confession of repentance. But, as a confession, it places full responsibility on Germany for every crime committed, every atrocity carried out in the name of military policy. The cunning of the German is again perceptible in the open confession, which Herr Harden believes is good for the German soul, with expectations of absolution being pronounced by the Peace Congress, and no penance imposed for the commission of sins. Other crimes than those we have enumerated are chargeable to the Germans, the worst forms of destruction being, according to Harden, deliberate, an admission which he makes in these words:—

"Then there has been the devastation of Northern France, with the deliberate destruction of cathedrals, monuments, factories and fruit trees; also air-bombardments, such as are contrary to the usages of war, and the torpedoing of steamers and hospital ships. The list of our deeds comprises also secret compacts with peoples under Allied rule, and the introduction of disease bacilli by means of shells. On all sides there has been corruption, fraud, theft, and the open or secret violation of all rights, while entire fields have been soaked with blood, as in the case of massacred Armenians."

This accusation is not made by an enemy of Germany, but by a German of the Germans. We know it to be true in every detail. Let us now quote an unimpeachable witness in further testimony of German atrocities, and after reading, ask ourselves if there is to be no reparation made for all the black deeds done in the name of military necessity by the enemy, no restoration of property and looted valuables, or no indemnity of any kind for the losses which have been sustained in life and treasure by the Associated powers, the smaller nations of which have suffered bankruptcy in men and money. Have the members of the Peace Conference forgotten the high sounding and sonorous phrase of President Wilson: "Reparation and Restitution?" Let them then read the statement of Grant Squires, an American lawyer, prominent in American relief work in Belgium, who says:—

"I saw cities levelled to the ground, civilian populations driven out of their homes with the butt of rifles, old men and women 'brained' because they did not work fast enough to suit their new rulers in the baking of bread. I saw places where babies were cradled on the doors of houses. I have seen the insults of the German soldiery, mostly drunkards, visited on women whom they met in the streets."

And the description of the bestiality and brutality of the German could go on and on. Have they changed since the armistice was signed? Not a whit, and were they occupying the position as dictators of peace, think you that they would show any spirit of leniency or generosity toward defeated foes? On the contrary had the position been reversed the Allies would have been compelled to submit to a German peace long ago, as well as the payment of an indemnity that would have, if necessary, been collected, as in Paris, forty-eight years ago, at the point of a bayonet. There are many ways in which Germany can be made pay, and the world will be astonished indeed if her debt is written off by mistaken diplomacy.

Carnegie Medals for Newfoundlanders.

At the annual meeting of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission held at Pittsburgh, Pa., January 23rd, thirty-one acts of heroism were recognized, twenty-four Bronze and seven Silver Medals being awarded. Five of the recipients were Newfoundlanders, all Bonavista Bay men, the names of whom are here set out:—

Silver Medal.
Hazeliah Abbott, Bonavista, Nfld., helped to save Phillip and Robert Way, fishermen, from drowning at Bonavista, Nfld., April 4, 1917.

Bronze Medals.
David Abbott, Bonavista, N. F., helped to save Phillip and Robert Way, fishermen, from drowning on an ice field in the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonavista, N. F., April 4, 1917.

H. James Abbott, Bonavista, Nfld., helped to save Phillip and Robert Way from drowning, at Bonavista, Nfld., April 4, 1917.

Daniel Butler, Bonavista, Nfld., helped to save Phillip and Robert Way from drowning at Bonavista, Nfld., April 4, 1917.

Isaac J. Butler, Bonavista, Nfld., helped to save Phillip and Robert Way from drowning at Bonavista, Nfld., April 4, 1917.

The deed for which these five heroes won their medals was given in the Telegram, issue April 5, 1917, and tells that three men, who, when in quest of seals, had gone adrift on the ice off Bonavista. A search party composed of the five men mentioned went to the rescue, with the result that two of the three were saved. Newfoundland is proud of all its fishermen heroes, particularly the five whom the Carnegie Commission has thought fit to recognize and reward.

At St. Thomas's.

At St. Thomas's Church last night, Rev. Dr. Jones preached a very forcible sermon on Citizenship—German and Christian. The preacher pointed out that the status of true citizenship is most difficult to sustain, but that nothing is more fundamental, and it is good in every way. One of the important problems at the present time, he asserted, is social reconstruction, and that problem is facing us because of the relation of the state to the individual in the past and now.

Taking Rome and Greece as examples, the preacher illustrated that in these countries imperialism held sway, and that the state was supreme and consequently the individual, under subjugation to his country, thus it was that in these early empires life was largely in a state of slight estimation. Everything made for the state-importance, and peace was rare, warfare being a habit of the state. Then the Christian era dawned for this idea, as it was in accordance with his wishes, that the state should be predominant. The Christian church of that age also upheld the state supremacy, and also the principle of absolute monarchy. As it was with Rome and Greece, so it was with Germany, the state was held as supreme. He could hardly define the German idea of citizenship, but the preacher, he would describe it as efficiency, and not freedom. The German idea was not happiness or perfection, but efficiency of the individual for the state. The Germans failed to see the sacredness of personality. Again, in German citizenship there was the spirit of parochialism, applied to self-centralization, rather than brotherhood. The spirit of nationalism had been carried to an extreme, and barbarism from an ethical viewpoint, had been fostered rather than Christianity. Nietzsche and Bernhard were cited as against Christianity. Thus even in ancient Rome and Greece, so in Germany, the state was over all, and the importance of the life of the individual was not taken into account against the state.

Then taking Christian citizenship, Christ was shown up as the first citizen, and although the Christian ideal of citizenship calls for loyalty, and has its obligatory duties, yet the individual remains free. The basis of Christian citizenship as pointed out by Christ is the infinite value of human life, as instanced in His treatment of the leper, and children, and His command to love everyone, and to evangelize the world. Christ also emphasized the need of the solidarity of the human family as instanced in His precepts, forgiveness and love and fellowship. Likewise Christ dwelt on the responsibility of the community for the individual action and here the sermon became personal as the responsibility of the citizens of this city for the individual was shown. Further Christ taught that if the sins of the past generation were condoned by their children, then both were alike guilty. Lastly in the prayer, Our Father, Christ appealed for universal brotherhood. In fact Jesus himself could be called the standing-by. He was ever ready to help the weak, the suffering, the needy. The preacher added that we had the ideals and principle of citizenship, but we were not adhering to those principles because first, we have looked for the highest satisfaction in things, e.g., money, education, but had not found it; for the highest source of satisfaction springs from within the soul. Secondly, we had taken the wrong standard of success, and as long as we hold to the common standard of success, "get on," we will not reach a state of true citizenship; but when we become humbled with the ambition to serve and live in service to our fellow-men, we shall have reached that stage of citizenship, when it may be said of us: "Our word is peace, and our hope and aim, liberty, freedom and brotherhood."

Presentation to Ricketts.

The National Chapter, I.O.D.E. of Newfoundland, have made arrangements, after the arrival of the U.S. Corsican, to present Sergt. R. T. Ricketts, V.C., with a gold watch and chain, as a memento of their appreciation of his high courage and valor. As soon as the details have been completed a public announcement will be made and the time and place of the function given. We congratulate the Daughters of the Empire on their initiative, no less than on the patriotism and loyalty which prompts their gift to Newfoundland's first V.C.

C. M. B. C.

There was a fairly large attendance at yesterday's meeting of the Cathedral Men's Bible Class. The lecturer was Rev. J. P. Beauchamp, a former member of the class. Mr. Beauchamp returned from Montreal Diocesan college a few months ago, and has since been attached to the Cathedral parish.

The lecturer spoke on Bishop Hannington, and very interestingly outlined the actions of the churchman who was an earnest and persevering missionary.

Mr. Beauchamp leaves this week to take charge of New Harbour mission in Trinity Bay. Notice was given that the annual tea and entertainment would be held on February 19th and all were asked to contribute towards its success. Reference was made to the lectures given every Monday night in Synod Hall, and more people are asked to attend.

The Car of Quality is "THE DODGE"

Dodge Bros. motor car, since its introduction in the motor world, has given universal satisfaction, and is regarded as one of the best cars on the road. Everything entering into its manufacture is of the best and the Company's policy has always been "Is it good enough for the Dodge?"

It is not the extreme freakish one year car, but sensibly built to give years of service and always to look good. Real leather upholstery, 116 inch wheel base, one-man top, 32 x 3 1/2 tires (rear non-skid), electric starting and lighting, all attest to the fact that the car is built up to a standard and not down to a price.

If you are thinking of buying an automobile, it will be worth while to see the Models now on exhibition at the Garage of

OUR 23rd ANNUAL FEBRUARY SALE

BIG CUT IN PRICES on our ENTIRE REGULAR STOCK

Opened Saturday With Encouraging Vim and Enthusiasm.

The manner in which the Ladies of St. John's are appreciating our efforts by their presence here in such large numbers, and by their enthusiastic buying, is most gratifying to us.

NO WOMAN WHO HAS ANY REGARD FOR ECONOMY SHOULD MISS THIS BRILLIANT BARGAIN GIVING EVENT.

You'll Save Money By Coming here for CARPETS and RUGS.

We have a handsome stock of Carpet Squares as you would wish to see. All sorts of effects and new patterns in artistic shades and colorings—Carpet Squares for every design to suit every fancy—priced to suit every purse. We sold thousands of dollars worth of fine Squares in our January Sale. This Sale gives even a better chance, as it covers the whole of our stock. If you are contemplating the purchase of Carpets, you will find this a matchless opportunity to save.

Taking Lessons.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Do you believe in taking lessons?

I recently heard a woman making fun of a woman who had known in her childhood. She had married into a much more sophisticated world than she had been used to, and in order to be at home in it, had promptly engaged a woman who knew all about such things to give her lessons in the etiquette of her new surroundings.

They Thought Her Funny.

The people who criticised her, thought this very funny for some reason or other. One called it absurd. Another stigmatised it as "putting on airs."

To my mind it was an example of simple pure horse sense.

In order to be comfortable in the world in which she must spend much of her time in the future, she must know certain things. Doubtless she would pick up these things in the course of time, but in the meantime she would be very uncomfortable. And to save herself this discomfort she had gone straight to an expert.

How Much Discomfort She Will Save Her Partners.

Another woman whom I know has just taken up bridge. Instead of going at it haphazardly and picking up stray bits of information as she goes along, she, too, is taking lessons. She will probably reach a state of bridge ability in a few weeks in this way that it would take her a year of haphazard playing to acquire. Think of the discomfort that her partners will be saved. No miserable disappointments for them when the new player fails to open with the highest of partners' bid, no bleak surprises when she ignores the sacred obligation of returning her partner's lead. And think of the embarrassments she will save herself.

Lessons in the Art of Exercising.

Her brother, a successful business man, is also taking lessons in the art of keeping well, from a professional in the matter of exercises. Every morning this expert comes and shows him how to get the most out of the half hour exercises with which he begins the day. Can you wonder that a man who goes after even health (which is so generally left to chance) in such a business-like way, has gotten practically everything in life he went after?

Of course, not everyone can afford lessons in every line in which they are interested. But many of us can afford to take advantage of the public lessons of various nature, commonly known as "courses." And when these are not available one can usually find the necessary book in the public library (or even buy it) and give oneself lessons in the subject one wishes to master.

Milady's Boudoir.

YAWNING.

According to the rules of modern etiquette, it is very improper to yawn, but from a standpoint of health it is one of the best things milady can do for her beauty.

For one thing, a yawn ventilates the lungs. When you take an ordinary breath the lungs are not completely filled, nor are they thoroughly emptied by an ordinary respiration. There is a certain quantity of air left in the lungs always—what physiologists call "residual air."

This air in time becomes foul and affects the blood, and through the blood the nerves centre. Then at certain times nerves get tickled as it were, and the result is a long-drawn-out yawn, which has the power of stretching the lungs to their fullest extent, driving out all the foul air and drawing in a supply of fresh pure air.

Yawning, too, is beneficial to your hearing. When you give an extra big yawn you hear a cracking sound inside your head. That is due to the stretching and opening of certain tubes which connect the ear and the back of the throat. If they are congested, as happens when you have a bad cold in the head, you complain of deafness.

If you do not feel inclined to yawn, by all means do so, regardless of what your book on etiquette may say. It is Nature's way of cleaning out your lungs and the air passages in your head.

THE FAULT OF MAN.

Seems to me there's beauty here in all things if we'll find it. No cloud goes drifting 'cross the sky but has the sun behind it. The Lord ain't making ugliness to mar His marvelous plan; When something spoils the landscape here the work's been done by man.

Since Eve and Adam first went wrong and told themselves they knew Much better than did God Himself just what they ought to do, The human race has kept right on in that bull-headed way, Quitting the paths that God mapped out and wandering astray.

In one way or another we are Eves and Adams still. We pile up debts of vain regrets and sadly pay the bill; We listen to the serpent's words (they're easy to believe) And then we wonder, when we've sinned, why we were born to grieve.

Don't think I'm preaching to you now; I'm noticing a fact: What mars the beauty of the world is how we mortals act. God made this earth a garden spot, but since the race began I'm forced to say it hasn't had the best of care from man.

Fads and Fashions.

Judge green crepe and silver lace form a fairy-like combination. Dark colored linens and crashes are used for fashionable waists.

Chains of beads reaching almost to the hem of the skirt are worn.

Frills and flounces are dominant on the frocks for the younger set.

High belts of black velvet ribbon appear on rose pink taffeta gowns.

The dainty crochet drop buttons may be seen on many smart blouses.

The new sleeves are wide at the wrist, and are trimmed with buttons.

Restaurant hats and toques are made of iridescent sequins and beads.

The two most popular trimmings now are buttons and fancy stitching.

Marriage Traps for British Girls.

Twelve hundred British girls are being lured to a life of married slavery—to a life of polygamy. Twelve hundred British girls have been persuaded by lying agents to embrace Mormonism. They have had drawn for them rosy pictures of a life of ease and luxury in Utah; of congenial work and plenty of money; of prosperous and happy marriages; of work for the Church which will bring them all peace and content.

The Mormon agents and elders—unprincipled, polygamous seducers—are rubbing their hands with glee. Not for a long time have they had such a harvest, and now they only await the withdrawal of the "emigration" restrictions to ship these "converts" to the Utah harems.

A Blasphemy.

That is what it really means. Never have unsuspecting women and girls stood in greater peril. Never was it more necessary to warn them against the machinations of—not men—but unscrupulous scoundrels, who, under the guise of religion, seek to ruin their lives and reputations.

Mormonism is a hideous blasphemy, and a creed so revolting that no protest could prove too strong. Missionaries, or rather agents, as "Latter-day Saints," have been visiting from house to house in towns and country villages, seeking to make converts of religiously-disposed young women and to persuade them to emigrate to Utah, where polygamy is taught and practiced.

The power of Mormonism is stupendous. It has a fighting fund of $20,000,000. It employs over four hundred "lady" missionaries in this country. It has distributed nearly a million and a half pamphlets and books during the last year. At the head of this wealthy and powerful organization was Joseph Fielding Smith, the supreme ruler, who died a few days ago leaving five wives and forty-six children. He was said to have an income of $200,000 a year. It was he who started the latest Mormon propaganda "stunt"—a demand for polygamy so that young women may not be deprived of husbands owing to the great loss of man-power caused by the war.

Beware of New Sects.

Mormon agents are as wily as the Hun. Their favorite dodge is to start new sects, under all sorts of innocent-sounding names. They secure a building in a populous neighborhood and start a movement or society of a semi-religious and social character. Young girls and lonely women are attracted, and so insidious are the Mormon methods that they have no idea they are being lured into the Mormon fold.

The poisonous teaching is slowly instilled. Sly and seductive, these Mormon agents creep and crawl into the confidence of women and girls, telling in honeyed words the marvelous prosperity of America as compared with life here. Thus are the "converts" attracted and induced to emigrate. And once in Utah they are lost. It would be easier to escape from a Chinese Temple than for a girl to leave Utah, if the "Latter-day Saints" willed it otherwise.

War Widows' Peril.

The war has provided the agents with their great opportunity. They have sought out the women and girls sorrowing for the death of husbands and sweethearts. It was easy enough to watch the casualty lists, track the mourning relatives, and if the soldier killed had left a young widow, or may be an attractive daughter, to worm their way into their confidence by hypocritical sympathy, and point the way to what they described as "a happier life."

I will cite you a case which is typical of scores of others. Some months ago the widow of a soldier who had been killed, was living in a small midland town, and was approached by a man who posed as a friend of her late husband. The widow was young, pretty, with one child, and quite naturally she turned in her sorrow to this supposed friend of her husband, who was so kind and sympathetic. In a cunning, subtle way he worked on her feelings until he persuaded her that she would only find happiness by leaving her friends and her native town and starting afresh on the other side of the Atlantic. The widow, without any warning to her friends, disappeared, with this supposed friend of her husband, who was in reality a Mormon agent. What has become of her no one knows.

The Arch Priest.

This is no isolated or exaggerated story. Cases which I have personally investigated show that the Mormon peril is greater to-day than it has ever been since that lying hypocrite, Brigham Young, the founder of Salt Lake City, who left a fortune of $500,000, seventeen wives and fifty-six children, died just over forty years ago.

We have of course, been told by the Mormons that polygamy is no longer practised among them. Then why is this paragraph printed in one of their poisonous pamphlets, which the elders are circulating broadcast: "If any man take a wife and desire to take another, and the first give her consent, then he is justified and does not commit adultery."

Once she is in Utah a woman is forced to give her consent when her husband wishes to add another wife to his household. And he escapes the law by not keeping all his wives under the same roof. He provides them with separate establishments. But the fact remains that any poor, unfortunate woman or girl who listens to their arguments is forced into a life horrible and degrading to any right-thinking, respectable British woman.

—Tit-Bits.

THE GRIEF HOG.

There is no trouble here below for ordinary mortals; ex-kaiser Bill has cornered us, and we have naught but chores. The kaiser a l w a y s was a pig, when he was b u s y reigning; unless he got the portion big, he sat around complaining. And now that he's no longer chief, he's hogged the stock of sadness, he's cornered all there is of grief, and we're condemned to gladness. I try to dig up some despair, but there is none to gather; the kaiser's got it in his lair, he has the whole blamed slaughter. Perhaps you think you have a woe, but it's an imitation; there's isn't any, that I know, in all this blooming nation. The kaiser has it stored away, in boxes, bales and cases; it's all in his old castle gray, there's none in other places. It's really useless scratching round for any brand of sorrow; you cannot buy it by the pound, no gallon can you borrow. The kaiser has it salted down, it's in his safe deposit; old Bill the king without a crown, old Bill the great what was it. So don't pretend you're in despair, and sprinkle teardrops many; for Bill has cornered all the care, and he won't part with any.

100,000 Revenue Surplus--Horrible Story of Cannibalism.

1000 A. M.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—(Reuters Ottawa Agency)—The question of Mandatory Palestine is pointed out that a mandate was issued by the Government in establishing a long time ago. France is the only country that will be lucky if they can maintain strong garrisons in the Asiatic countries, for the mandate must be accepted. The British rule, a beneficent rule, has been made in the general interest of the world. The mandate of Palestine is a matter of international law. CANNIBALISM AT MOSUL.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 2.—(Via Reuters Ottawa Agency).—The little news that has been received from the Asiatic provinces of Turkey, indicate that there is considerable distress among the population, owing to the shortage of foodstuffs, high prices, and great insecurity and lawlessness prevailing. The winter has, fortunately, held mild, but far, which tends to alleviate somewhat the precarious situation of the poor people. Four American relief ships, bringing large cargoes of flour and clothing are on their way. Reuters correspondent reports a terrible story of cannibalism which occurred eight months ago at Mosul, where six small children were sacrificed and their flesh roasted for food. There would seem to be no doubt as to the truth of the story which is confirmed by a photograph, showing the execution of the man and woman, at Mosul, who perpetrated this horrible crime. The heads of the unfortunate little victims were found in the house of the two culprits.

Service and Sacrifice, the Religion of To-day.

Can We Get Religion Into Our Politics?

"And He That Taketh Not His Cross and Followeth after Me is not Worthy of Me.

For Whosoever Will Save His Life Shall Lose it, but Whosoever Will Lose His Life for My Sake, the Same Shall Save it.

For What Shall it Profit a Man if he Shall Gain the Whole World and Lose His Own Soul."

There are to-day many serious problems confronting the world. We have been sometime considering some of them, and they have led us a long way ahead. We have gone back to the beginning, (or as far as we can imagine) far beyond the birth of Christ, and have considered the possibility of earlier civilizations utterly blotted out, because they had not considered, or properly tackled their problems.

War on a large scale, Bolshevism, famine and pestilence may have wiped them out, and the world knows them no more. At times archaeologists unearth traces of ancient civilizations of which nothing is positively known.

To-day we have seen war on a large scale; it has troubled us. Famine we have heard of and hunger may even yet touch us. Pestilence we have with us and we may have more of it, and we may have even greater and worse pestilences.

Our civilization has been, and is to-day being broken to its very roots and the question is its our civilization strong enough to weather the storm that is upon us, and that is yet certain to come? For the storm is not yet past. With these thoughts we have mooted "Religion in Politics," as the remedy.

We can imagine some folk raising their eyes and saying that is the trouble now—we have always had too much religion in our politics. But we say, no brother, that is not religion, that is sectarianism, or denominationalism you are thinking about.

But in any case we are not altogether discussing local politics to-day, as what affects our politics also affects more or less those of other countries, but our politics appear to be different, in that, in those of other countries we seem to find more independent men who have the respect of their community, despite, as a rule, their party convictions.

In mentioning the word civilization something moved us to look up Webster to see his definition, and we find he gives it as,—national culture, refinement. He also gives us a quotation from Burke as follows:—"Our manners, our civilization, and all the good things connected with manners and with civilization, have in this European world of ours, depended for ages upon two principles—"the spirit of a gentleman, and the spirit of religion."

As according to Burke we cannot have proper national culture without religion, or the spirit of a gentleman, similarly we cannot have proper politics or statesmanship if the same spirit is not in evidence.

It is therefore only by religion or the spirit of gentlemanliness that we can get clean politics. Can the Church to-day get religion, into politics? Why not? If the Churches are to-day going to go forward they will have to do something big; we even go so far as to say something religious.

The Churches in Nfld. at least, have always more or less interested themselves in politics. They have in the past supported certain candidates from them seeking election, according to their lights.

The Churches know to-day that they have big problems to face, that the world has big problems to face and that Nfld. has more than its share of them. They know that they want the best men possible to direct the course of Government and, the handling of intricate problems for the next few years at least. They know that a man is not a better man because he is a member of one particular church, that he is not a better man on account of a particular position he holds in society or even in a Society.

There has been no particular inducement of late years to take any public-spirited man or woman into politics in Newfoundland. Some of the causes you all know. If this same thing continues the country is going to suffer, and only chaos can be the result.

And besides there being apparently no honour to be gained, or anything, in fact, by a man in politics in Nfld., who did not wish to make any money out of it, or who has no axe to grind. Such a man, if one with a business or occupation to attend to, feels that it may suffer severely even to disruption, through lack of attention. Even still he might be willing to take a chance, but a thing which looks like absolute failure at the outset, nobody feels like tackling. And to add to all of these things, we have for many years been in the Commercial Age, in which the Mighty Dollar reigns as our god.

This worship has not been confined to one class of society but has permeated all. Possibly the rich have more of it, as they have more of the germs. On the other side, we have seen voters self-interested to nauses, and on the other politicians merely and entirely self centered. In the past four years the greater part of the world has passed through an extraordinary experience. We do not make our adjective, stronger than extraordinary, as on the face, it might appear as if some had passed through no experience, worth while.

It has been said that war brings out the worst in men. This is true in some cases, but in many cases it brings out the best. You have seen this or heard of it. You know of or have heard of unprecedented, almost unbelievable self-sacrifice made in the late great struggle. Men have given their lives freely. They have faced certain death in the cause of liberty and the advancement of the world. They have given their lives to help their chums, have returned from looking death in the face, and have gone back again to save a friend and not returned. They have placed their feet, or thrown themselves, upon bursting bombs to save their companions. Though badly or mortally wounded they have given up their turn for medical assistance, and possibly the chances of their lives, to their friends. They have pressed their life-belts upon others, or calmly given others their places in the life-boats, themselves facing certain drowning.

The V.C. has been gained by but one member of our Nfld. fighting forces but we can believe it was won hundreds of times for unprecedented bravery. If only each of the little white crosses over the heads of our heroes in France, could speak, or if we only knew what the sad sea waves were saying as they sang their dirge over the heroes of our naval reserve, we should have a story of practical religion, stronger than any number of sermons we have yet heard.

Our fighting men have made their sacrifices, they have lived up to their religion.

But the world still calls for its daily sacrifices, as it has called for thousands of years.

Religion still calls for its daily sacrifices, as it has called for thousands of years, and its message still is; that whosoever will save his life for his own sake will lose it, or is already losing it.

The world has had put before it a wonderful sermon of unselfish sacrifice during the past four years.

Our Churches have had put before them a wonderful sermon of practical religion.

Will our Churches benefit by it, or if they consider that for a group of laymen, we are preaching too much, we ask are they going to benefit by it as much as they should or might?

IT IS ASSERTED OPENLY TO-DAY AT EVERY STREET CORNER IN ST. JOHN'S THAT THERE IS NO PUBLIC OPINION IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

We do not believe this, but we believe that public opinion throughout Newfoundland has been, for alas! too long a time at a very low ebb.

We believe to-day that it is rising, but to get to a full tide it needs help and possibly considerable help. There are two methods of raising public opinion. One is through the press, and the other by the platform, or perhaps it may be plainer, if we say by public speaking. We shall say nothing as regards the Press here, as it speaks for itself. As regards "The Platform," the percentage of it through which the Churches in this country hold the possibilities of elevating public opinion, and bringing forward public spirited men, is enormous. The Churches know that to-day Civilization in Newfoundland has many large problems to face, as the Churches have also their share in facing these problems. The Churches know that big problems must be faced by big men, not by little men.

Big hearted men faced the problems in France, and upon the great waters, and the Churches did their share in helping forward the half-hearted ones, and raising them to the full measure of their manhood.

Bighearted men are wanted to-day to face the after-war problems that we have and will have, but there does not seem to be enough in sight.

The Churches to-day have a golden opportunity to work upon the minds of men, as they were never in a more receptive mood. Though many men may seem to be, cursed with a weak spirit of self-consciousness and diffidence, we believe that all they need is a good waking-up both from a mental and spiritual standpoint.

Will our Churches wake them up, and say—"Go forth, quit yourselves like men and do your duty in public life, as your brethren did in France and upon the great waters?" Will the Churches say to them "It is up to you now to make your sacrifices for your Country and for democracy," and as a proof that your religion is a real one? Give your money, but give what is far more value than that, give yourselves.

There are people to-day who think the Returned Soldiers should give a lead in Politics. We do not think this, or at least that they should do so as a party. The Returned Soldiers and the Returned Sailors have their own problems to face and they deserve a spell, or time to rebuild both their frames and their fortunes. It is up to the men who have made big money in their absence, to get busy now and do something for their country. They can show a practical religion, such as their brothers in arms have shown, by perhaps making some sacrifices of their money, time and ability, to give us clean politics and build up their country, which their brothers-in-arms have put upon the map, where before we were surrounded by, and lost in, a fog.

You can depend that the Returned Soldiers and the Returned Sailors are only going to follow good leaders and they now know "white men" from "wash-outs."

The citizens of the country are to-day awaking, North and South, Bonavista Bay and Placentia Bay, from St. Barbe round to Burgeo and St. George's. They will pick "the white men" from "the wash-outs."

Volunteers are wanted to-day for strenuous Public Service. Public-spirited voters are wanted to back them up. This means voters who will not consider entirely their own interests but that of their country.

The Churches have to-day a golden opportunity to raise these public-spirited voters, and the time is right now. We believe we can depend upon our Churches to raise up men for us.—ALPHA.

MILNE'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

As the first supplies of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring of the fall pack have not found the demand that was expected and the quality of the fish, particularly that from the west coast, is not at all satisfactory, the trade appears reluctant to venture further into the purchasing field in the Ancient Colony. Although tempting offers have been coming to importers here within the past few days, it is understood that few if any have taken advantage of them, or will. Among these offerings are several lots at $15 per barrel, at St. John's, probably herring packed at Trinity Bay, and some small quantities at $18 and $19. It is reported, however, that packers on the east coast are holding their prices firm, contending that they cannot afford to sell at less than $22 @23, in many cases because of the high cost of the herring from the fishermen. It is estimated that New York importers have purchased little more than 12,000 barrels of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring altogether, and "drop in" buckets, as compared with the supply of other years. The halting, uncertain demand for all herring, coupled with the fact that Lent comes late this year, and the prospects of heavy sales of salt fish are none too bright, has led to heavy purchasers generally, particularly of herring which is of questionable quality.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Jan. 18.

Market Notes.

CODFISH.—No buying was done last week, and no offers are being made until an improvement shows in the European markets. Labrador soft is nominally quoted at from $10 to $11 and No. 1 Shore $13 to $14 per quintal.

COD OIL.—But few transactions have taken place in Common since the year opened, and the price has, consequently, slumped to $150 per ton, a depressing figure indeed, compared to $400 in November. Refined is dull in sale at $2.20 per gallon.

HERRING.—About 11,000 barrels of Scotch Pack are in stock in St. John's, to which may be added 3,500 barrels remaining over from shipment in Green Bay. Local prices stand at $21 for S. P. and $7 to $7.75 for No. 1 Split.

PROVISIONS.—The Food Control Board regulations regarding the use of substitutes with Flour were lifted on Saturday, and from now on we hope that this vexed question will give rise to no more criticism and controversies. War Standard prices remain unchanged, being $14.25 to $14.40 wholesale and $15 to $15.80 retail. Ham Butt Pork is quoted at $48; Meat and Short Cut Clear at $50, wholesale, with no prospects of a cheaper price in sight. Beef may also be placed in the same category, as the wholesale prices in the city are Bos Flank, $47.50; Bos Packet, $46.50; Boneless, $46. The Food Control Board continues to regulate the market, and much hostility has been aroused over the regulations regarding the compulsory purchase of Brown, a shipment of 800 bags of the latter being due from Barbados, which has to be used up before any change is made in the existing law. 1,500 barrels of White are coming from New York. The wholesale quotations are—White $12.70 and Brown $11.25 per hundred pounds.

Supreme Court.

(Before the Full Bench.)
On Saturday morning Mr. Justice Kent handed down a decision in the case of the Government vs. The Commercial Cable Co. Judgment went in favor of the Government for the full amount claimed, $12,000, and costs, with interest from the date of claim. Morine, K.C., for the Government; Howley, K.C., for the Commercial Cable Co. M. Winter vs. The Standard Oil Co.—This was an action for breach of contract. Mr. Justice Kent, who tried the case, gave judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $2,522.97, about half the amount claimed.
