The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER XX

A dark thunder-cloud suddenly over-spreading a sunny landscape would not cause a greater change than that which came over Evadne's face.

"I am always happy," she said; "what do you mean?"

Small or mean natures can never bear prosperity. Some girls in Evadne's place would have been gentle and more amiable for having had a glimpse of supreme happiness.

"I mean nothing," replied Diana, "except what I said—that you look happy."

"It is a most unusual thing for you to remark. I suppose you have been watching me. Perhaps you thought Lord Clanronald would admire you? I knew he would not; but I can quite understand how very disagreeable it must be to you to see me preferred both to Thea and yourself."

Diana turned pale, and drew back with gentle dignity.

"How you misunderstand me!" she said. "I am sorry that I have intruded upon you;" and she turned away instantly, more wounded than she cared to own.

That same evening she overheard Evadne describing the incident to her sister, adding:

"I am sure she is jealous. She plays the spy. What right had she to tell me that I looked happy because Lord Clanronald had been talking to me?"

Hot anger rose in Diana's heart. She knew how pure her own motive had been, and she was indignant that she should be so cruelly misunderstood.

Her ladyship felt slightly uneasy, though she would not have cared to confess it.

Diana, who had been accustomed to go in and out as she would, who had walked and driven alone all about the lovely country at Ferness, felt freer than she had for some time past.

She had dressed herself very plainly this morning; a black cloak hid the graceful figure, a black veil hid the beautiful face.

When breakfast was over on the morning following, Diana rose quickly from the table.

"I am going out, Lady Cameron," she said, "and shall not be back before evening."

Lady Cameron raised her head and detected the quiet determination, the firm will and absolute and perfect defiance in the girl's face, and she knew that opposition would be useless.

"Where are you going, Diana?" she asked.

"I shall be away for some hours," she replied, determined that Lady Cameron should not know how or where she intended to spend her time.

"Are you going alone?" asked her ladyship, quietly. "I am well aware, my dear, that you despise all conventionalities, and that you pride yourself on being what you, I believe, consider original. But it is not usual in good society for a young lady to go out for several hours without a chaperon."

"I will explain all to papa," said Diana, proudly, "but to no one else."

"You must do as you will, my dear. Remember, I have entered my protest. I would not allow either of my daughters to act in such a manner," added her ladyship, in louder tones.

Evadne laughed aloud as Diana turned and swept out of the room.

"I shall have trouble with her yet," murmured Lady Cameron. "What a spirit! I must break it, or there will be no peace at Ferness."

CHAPTER XXI

Quite suddenly, it seemed to Diana there had been no one near, and she had heard no sound of footsteps—suddenly, and yet looking like part of the picture, she saw another face.

The stranger felt that he must move on, for he knew that it was a breach both of etiquette and of good taste to continue the conversation; but he longed to see the beautiful eyes once more.

"It is one of the great mysteries of life," he replied, "a mystery I hope you will never solve."

The stranger felt that he must move on, for he knew that it was a breach both of etiquette and of good taste to continue the conversation; but he longed to see the beautiful eyes once more.

"It tells a story," he said, "of love and pain. They always go together."

"Do they? It seems to me that love and pain ought never to go hand in hand."

"It is one of the great mysteries of life," he replied, "a mystery I hope you will never solve."

The stranger stood so silent; so motionless by the side of the picture that he almost seemed part of it.

"Thank you," she said simply. And the stranger was as much charmed by the musical voice as by the beautiful face, and was disinclined to move away without further feasting his eyes upon the loveliness before him.

"You have been admiring the Guido," he said, utterly regardless of "the proprieties."

"It is very beautiful," she remarked. "I do not think there are any faces in the world so fair."

He thought to himself that her own was quite equal to that depicted on the canvas in front of them.

"It tells a story," he said, "of love and pain. They always go together."

"Do they? It seems to me that love and pain ought never to go hand in hand."

Gains Ten Pounds, Feels Fine In The Mornings, Now—Tanlac Built Him Up.

"Tanlac has simply knocked my troubles winding and I have already gained ten pounds and feel better in every way than I have for a long time," said John D. Nicholson who lives in Glen Martin, Prince Edward Island, while in Kinley's drug store in Halifax a few days ago. "After spending three years overseas with the Thirtieth Canadian Battalion, I returned home about a year ago," continued Mr. Nicholson, "and I have been bothered a great deal ever since with stomach trouble. Everything I ate would sour, then gas would form and would be perfectly miserable for hours at a time. Sometimes this gas would be so bad I could hardly draw a deep breath, and after going to bed at night I would have another spell. It was just out of the question for me to get a good night's sleep. Then at times I would have the worst sort of cramping pains in the pit of my stomach. I was also bothered a great deal with constipation, and had to take a laxative of some kind nearly every day. I lost about twenty pounds in weight and got so weak and run-down that I just felt miserable all the time."

"Then I began to read and hear about Tanlac, and as it was strongly endorsed by so many good, responsible people, I decided to give it a trial. Well, sir, I have only taken three bottles of this medicine so far, and I have actually gotten in such fine condition that I do not feel like I was ever sick a day in my life. Why, I never had a better appetite in my life, and I can eat just anything I want without suffering the least bit afterwards. In fact, my stomach seems to be in perfect condition. I sleep as sound as anybody now, and get up every morning feeling fine and dandy. I have gotten completely rid of the constipation, and never have a sign of those awful cramping pains in my stomach any more. Tanlac is the best medicine I ever saw in my life, and I believe anybody who suffers as I did will certainly be benefited by giving this medicine an honest trial."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

Bennett, Mullaly and Martin

Get an Enthusiastic Reception at the Goulds --- Meeting a Record One With Every Voter of the Settlement Present.

Yesterday afternoon, the Victory Trio for St. John's West, Messrs. Bennett, Mullaly and Martin, visited the Goulds section of the district and canvassed every home there with a most successful and enthusiastic meeting in St. James' Hall on the Goulds Road. The hall was filled by the farmers and others of this section of the district and at 8.15 Mr. Jno. Joyce, Sr., was on motion of Mr. Allan Williams, seconded by Mr. M. Williams, enthusiastically called to the chair. Mr. Joyce the chairman for many elections of the Liberal Party as well as at the last election of the People's Party, and an old and trusted supporter of Sir Edward, now Lord Morris, and his colleague, Hon. J. R. Bennett, in a few well chosen words, stated Bennett, Mullaly and Martin were here to-night to address the people of the Goulds and outline the policy of the Liberal Progressive Party under the leadership of Sir Michael Cashin. He then called on Hon. J. R. Bennett to address the meeting. Mr. Bennett, on rising, was received with the greatest enthusiasm and the hundreds of sturdy farmers of the Goulds and vicinity who crowded the hall, tendered him an ovation that must indeed be gratifying to him, and ably demonstrated the esteem in which he is held. Hon. Mr. Bennett after thanking the gathering for their attendance and the reception accorded him, introduced his colleagues, Messrs. Mullaly and Martin, and assured the electors of the Goulds that in bringing them as his associates to the district, he has done so in the full appreciation of their capabilities to represent St. John's West. Both their records as Municipal Councillors and their general good citizenship was the best guarantee that could be given of their fitness to become representatives of the people, whose outrages they sought, in the House of Assembly. He then called on Mr. Mullaly, who on rising was received with an ovation that fully showed that he will not be forgotten on polling day. Mr. Mullaly gave a very spirited and earnest address and stated he would always display a spirit of loyalty to the cause of the working classes, be they fishermen, farmers, artisans or otherwise. In lucid manner he spoke to the manifesto issued by the leader of the Liberal Progressive Party, Sir Michael Cashin, and expressed the pleasure it gave him to be fighting under his banner and the honor he felt in being the colleague of the tried and trusted representative of the district, Hon. J. R. Bennett. Mr. Mullaly is fast earning for himself a reputation in the district of being a man who means what he says and as he has been designated Fighting Mullaly of the Municipal Council, the electors of the Goulds can look forward with hope to the time when he will be fighting their battles in the House of Assembly. Mr. Mullaly took his seat amid great applause and his colleague, Mr. Martin, then took the platform. It could be seen at once by the reception he received that his reputation had already preceded him in that part of the district of St. John's West. Mr. Martin, by his kindly and gentlemanly demeanor, is winning new friends to six years, and of the extraordinary conditions existing during that period. Clearly and in a manner which defied contradiction he gave an account of his stewardship while acting in the absence of Lord Morris in the dual capacity of Premier and Colonial Secretary, again as Minister of Militia, and while the duties of representative of St. John's West fell on himself alone. The attention of the gathering during his outline of the part he had played and the applause which followed showed that Jno. R. Bennett is still the favorite with the people of the Goulds, and that they will support him and his colleagues solidly on Nov. 8th. All through the campaign in St. John's West, Hon. Mr. Bennett has given an honest, straightforward explanation of his conduct since his last return to the House of Assembly, as the representative of that important district, and so convinced his audience last night and on every other occasion of his sincerity and faithfulness that the people of St. John's West are fully determined he has earned and will receive their fullest endorsement when the ballots are cast on polling day. The independent electors of St. John's West are fast becoming unanimous in their decision that the only safe and proper course is to renew their confidence in those who have been their trusted representatives in the past, and last night's meeting at the Goulds has added but another instance that that old and loyal district whose traditions have been in keeping with the ideals of the Liberal Progressive Party, led by Sir Michael Cashin, will continue that confidence in the future, and have set the seal of condemnation on the attempt made by those trying to usurp the prerogatives of the people by all kinds of questionable means and to discredit their true and trusty representative. The effort of Hon. Mr. Bennett on this as on former occasions had the most telling effect, and the people of the district have fully made up their minds to take no chances in allowing the Conker-Squires combination to get charge of the affairs of this Dominion. The period of reconstruction that must ensue from now on must be placed in capable and experienced hands, and the hybrid combination that is trying to throw dust in the eyes of the people through their hired political assassins that are infesting this district at the present time will receive such a rebuff on polling day that will make them forever regret they tried to trifle with the intelligence and independence of the voters of the historic district of St. John's West. At the conclusion of Hon. Mr. Bennett's address, the gathering rose as one man and cheered him and his colleagues to the echo.

Before the meeting closed, Mr. L. G. Chafe, the chairman of the Liberal Progressive Committee of the city, who has many friends and relatives in the Goulds section, was called on to say a few words. Mr. Chafe's practical exposition of the tactics of the opposition and the contemptible manner in which they are trying to rob Hon. J. R. Bennett of his seat and bring about the defeat of himself and colleagues and party with which they are associated, met with the entire approbation of the audience. After Mr. Chafe's fifteen minutes' heart-to-heart talk, there was no man in the building but was fully convinced that the destinies of Newfoundland would be best left in the hands of those who in the past had proved true and could be fully depended on in the future. The meeting closed at 10.30 with cheers for Sir M. P. Cashin, Hon. J. R. Bennett, Messrs. Mullaly and Martin, and a hoarse round of applause for the venerable and respected chairman. The loyal and true people of the Goulds have declared in no uncertain manner that "Cashin is coming back," and that Bennett, Mullaly and Martin will receive a straight ticket vote on polling day. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close the most enthusiastic meeting ever held in the Goulds.

Notes and Comments.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The old horse bus of London streets, so irrevocably a thing of the past, carried on its box seat a personage who, though sometimes grumpy, was oftener a merry individual with a sharp eye for the fun of the road and, withal, a capacity for imparting his enjoyment. But there are signs that, even in the rush and squeeze of the motor bus, there is opportunity for occasional humor. It no longer falls to the driver to keep his "top" passengers on the grin. It is the conductor collecting the fares who must keep up the old tradition, or, to the public loss, let it perish. One of these men, at any rate, has proved equal to the occasion. About a year ago, when the crowds for the buses were at their worst, he remarked to an old dame, who had manfully fought her way in and sat herself down: "Well done, madam; only the brave deserve the fare."

Perhaps as odd a gift as any that has gone from the United States to Europe was shipped, the other day, from New York City to Antwerp. It consisted of more than 200 different kinds of birds and fifty-three different kinds of reptiles, a present from the New York Zoological Society to the Royal Zoological Garden at Antwerp. Before the war the Antwerp Zoo had one of the finest collections in the world, but war conditions made the upkeep of the Zoo a dispensable luxury, and the end of the war found it depleted. The members of the New York Zoological Society evidently saw an opportunity of helping the Antwerp Zoo to return to normal conditions before the Olympic games, next year, fill the city with visitors.

The Bayonne public have apparently taken the law into their own hands and made it plain to the Spanish organizers of the bull fight that they have had enough of them. The Pyrenees have proved no adequate barrier to the Spanish traditional practice of bull-fighting; the laws of France are just as ineffectual, and so the public adopts its own measures to effect a clearance. The felloshness of crowds makes such a remedy but a transient one. Entire prohibition of the horrible practice is the only real way of dealing with it. As it is, in France, bull-fighting is legal, provided the bull's horns are sheathed in rubber; but, as everybody in France knows perfectly well, the rubber sheath or any other palliative, is, for all practical intents, a mere farce.

Those who talk of the "American standard of living" must heretofore, if they take cognizance of an official investigation of the real meaning of the phrase, modify their remarks to an extent that makes the familiar expression practically worthless. The investigation deduces that there is no such thing as an "American standard of living," in the sense of a "very superior standard giving all the necessities, many of the comforts, and a goodly supply of the luxuries of life." The "American standard" has been a convenient and plausible idea to evoke in comparing living conditions in America with those of Europe; but now that nearly 33,000 family schedules have been obtained from seventy-one large cities and twenty small cities and towns in the United States, and the figures compared, the "standard of living" apparently vanishes and, instead, one finds many "standards," according to the income of the families.

Church Lads' Brigade.

The Brigade paraded last night as usual, in charge of Lieut.-Col. Goodridge and Major Raley, M.C., Adjutant, with the following officers present: Capt. Outerbridge, Lieut. Phil Rendall (Recruits), Paymaster Ash, Lieut. Miles, Rev. E. Fletcher, Rev. J. Brinton and others.

The usual drill was given and routine business transacted. A pleasant feature of last night's parade was the presentation of a handsome silver mounted engraved walking stick to Major Raley, M.C., Adjutant, by the W.O. and N.C.O. Mess, in appreciation of his service to the Brigade as Adjutant and to the Brigade as Camp Commandant. Major Raley is working with great enthusiasm, which augurs well for the future of the Brigade generally, which is rapidly being placed on an army system, and the Major is an expert at his job.

A new Chief Staff Officer has been appointed in London—Lieut.-Col. T. Mastyn Foulkes, a war veteran. He replaces the late Col. W. M. Gee, the founder of the Brigade—in the year 1891, and established in Newfoundland in 1892.

The Orderly Officer for next week is Lieut. Fletcher. Next for duty, Lieut. Hayward, Orderly Sergeant—Sergeant Rendell, Duty—Company A, Chaplain Rev. J. Brinton. The following lads will be sworn in next week: Private Walter Lacey, Cyril Cornick, Edward Thorne, S. LaFosse and John Gillingham.

Mr. Max Colton has rejoined the Brigade and has been posted to A. Co. with the rank of School Master Sergeant. H. Rendell has been promoted to be Acting Company Sergeant Major. Congratulations.

THE FINE ART

One never ceases to read helpful articles on how to make money or how to save it, which are of course good. But why not more on the third branch of the subject—how to spend money if he only had it. But not successfully, not as an art.

"Savoir vivre" is the art of living, and since how we spend our money determines the material end of how we live, the art of spending money successfully is a main branch of this supreme art of "savoir vivre."

It is often said that we Americans are first in the art of making money and last in the art of spending it. The older civilizations have built up a better technique in the art of living and spending.

But They Had Learned the Art of Living.

Now there is in our town a certain family who once had much money and lived for many years abroad. Then they lost it and came back to us. And not to their beautiful home but to an upstairs apartment in a rather unattractive two apartment house. And yet so thoroughly had they learned the art of living that they would not let their change of circumstances make life ugly. They immediately built a screened-in porch on the best side of their house long before the day when screened-in porches were commonplace (in fact, I think theirs was the first in town). They furnished it attractively, (in those days porches used to be furnished with three rockers and a rustic table) had the electricity connected, put in the first Gloucester hammock seen in town, and proceeded to live on the porch. That does not sound so much nowadays when these things are commonplace but then it was a revelation of "savoir vivre."

THE FINE ART OF SPENDING.

RUTH CAMERON

One never ceases to read helpful articles on how to make money or how to save it, which are of course good. But why not more on the third branch of the subject—how to spend money. On first thought it seems as if anyone could spend money if he only had it. But not successfully, not as an art. "Savoir vivre" is the art of living, and since how we spend our money determines the material end of how we live, the art of spending money successfully is a main branch of this supreme art of "savoir vivre."

It is often said that we Americans are first in the art of making money and last in the art of spending it. The older civilizations have built up a better technique in the art of living and spending.

But They Had Learned the Art of Living.

Now there is in our town a certain family who once had much money and lived for many years abroad. Then they lost it and came back to us. And not to their beautiful home but to an upstairs apartment in a rather unattractive two apartment house. And yet so thoroughly had they learned the art of living that they would not let their change of circumstances make life ugly. They immediately built a screened-in porch on the best side of their house long before the day when screened-in porches were commonplace (in fact, I think theirs was the first in town). They furnished it attractively, (in those days porches used to be furnished with three rockers and a rustic table) had the electricity connected, put in the first Gloucester hammock seen in town, and proceeded to live on the porch. That does not sound so much nowadays when these things are commonplace but then it was a revelation of "savoir vivre."

She Hasn't Enough Imagination to Want Things.

Here's an example of the opposite. A friend of mine has been a semi-invalid for years. She could afford every convenience to make invalidism easier for herself and others and yet she has almost none of them. She hates the weight of the tray on her knees yet she never thinks of buying one of the invalid tables, that stretch over the bed and make reading, eating, writing, etc., so much easier. She is always having hot water bottles filled, yet it never occurs to her to get an electric pad. She knows these things exist. She just hasn't the imagination to want them and have them.

They Don't Make Their Money Bring Them Luxury.

Again I know a family who are very fond of candy. In the summer they are always complaining about the candy the country store carries. And yet it never occurs to them to put in an order with some good candy firm (as they could well afford to) to have a regular supply of good candy sent them.

FLIES.

WALT MASON

They say that everything on earth was made for purpose. What is the purpose of flies? There's nothing that's devoid of worth—but what's the good of flies? They keep their merit so concealed we can't discern the same, the while our swatting sticks we wield, and cuss the endless game. Ah, happy thought—perhaps the flies were dumped upon the land that we might have some exercise, a swatter in each hand. That may explain it, in which case, let's make the combat hot; enjoy the pleasures of the chase, and swat, and swat! Now is the time to swat them hard, before they get too thick; pursue them through the house and yard, and soak them with a brick. The fly that now escapes its doom will rear a countless brood; so let no fly sidestep the tomb—with the deadly feud! Rise, then, O sluggard, from your chair, from lounge and downy cot! Go forth, all brave and debonair, gird up your loins and swat! Let no foul fly escape your search! If one's left on the floor, that fly will lead a bride to church, and raise ten millions more. So take your hauberk and your helm, and like a knight arise; put on your greaves and overwhelm about ten thousand flies.

Fashions and Fads.

Chemille dots are frequent in fashionable veillings. Chemise frocks made with kimono sleeves are still smart. A small frock of brown tricollette has orange pipings. New white sweaters have broad borders of colored stripes. Brocaded fabrics are an important feature of Fall wraps. Wrapped effects are pronounced features among evening coats. A wrap of black satin has a deep collar of ivory tinted Irish lace. Rooster tails and coque feathers are popular millinery trimming. The evening gown is prone to exaggerate the distended hip line. Tinsel embroidery is a very frequent feature among trimmings. There is a new satin ribbon edged with fringe, which is used for girdles. Ostrich and coque feathers are used to trim dresses as much as hats. Fussy willow taffeta is among the best of linings for fine simple cloaks. Silver ribbon is combined with claret-colored satin for evening gowns. Silk and chenille embroidery are much used on both gowns and wraps. Beads on evening gowns are often strung and arranged in clusters of loops. Both dinner and evening gowns have sleeves which are hardly more than caps. Collars and narrow girdles are both made of flatly pleated silk bound at both sides. Beaver hats of the old-fashioned coaching type are making a decided bid for favor. Black frocks are worn merely as backgrounds for brilliant brocade vests or girdles. Many of the smart evening gowns use as a trimming large wreaths of flowers and foliage.

WHAT WINS.

It's the everlasting climbing that gets you to the top.
And the everlasting sticking to the task you'd like to drop.
It's the grit and vim and muscle in the rough and tumble tussle that will bring you home to victory and the distant goal you seek.
It's the ever up and working. Never lying down and shirking. That eventually will land you on the mountain's sunny peak.
It's the patient perseverance to the plan which you have made. That will bring you through the dangers and the pitfalls which are laid.
It's the steady, constant driving to the goal for which you're striving.
Not the speed with which you travel, that will make your victory sure. It's the everlasting gaining, without whimpering or complaining. At the burdens you are bearing or the woes you must endure.

It's the holding to a purpose, and the never giving in.
It's in cutting down the distance by the little that you win.
It's the sure and firm endeavor. Not the brilliant stroke and clever.
That shall bring you home to gladness and to days of joy and song. It's the iron will to do it. And the steady sticking to it. So whatever your task, go to it! Keep your grit and plug along!

Cashin Will Come Back.

A Little Knowledge is Dangerous.

It is no insult to any American to poke fun at his ignorance of Europe and its history, in view of George Creel's confession that as late as the Ukraine was a musical instrument. But the time has come for Americans to get rid of their ignorance. Their government in future must deal more and more with European questions and its attitude will usually be very much influenced by American public opinion. If ignorance instead of knowledge should shape that opinion, heaven save us!

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Sept. 15. PRINCESS MARY'S MODESTY. Princess Mary was more surprised than gratified by the newspaper statement that her diligent care of a child in hospital had saved the little one's life. It was indeed gratifying to know that her former charge had been saved and it is true that her care of this and other patients was both tender and assiduous while she had them under her charge. But, as she herself modestly puts it, "the child would have had less chance had its case depended on me alone. I attended at the hospital for about an hour on each of two days a week."

WHY THE KING DID NOT SHOOT. From Balmoral I hear that although the King did not shoot during the war his skill with the gun has not diminished. His eye is as keen, and his aim as true and steady as ever, and he is still among the dozen best game shots in the country. Incidentally, his abandonment of his favorite sport during the war was an illuminative instance of his sound common sense. He was urged to do a little shooting, "if only for the hospitals," but declined to entertain the proposal. "What would my soldiers think of me," he asked, "if they heard I was amusing myself by shooting grouse and partridges while they were engaged in a life and death struggle with the common enemy?"

THE FUTURE OF THE NAVY. No one will yawn over Lord Fisher's naval disclosures in the "Times," which are assuming the character of an event as the veteran develops his story. One day, for example, he chides—the word a lot of weight to contemporary pamphleteers.

POLAND AND THE LONDON POLICE

A high compliment has been paid to the Metropolitan Police by the request of the New Police Government for an Informal Commission of experienced London police officers to visit Poland to advise as to the lines on which a permanent policing scheme for that country should be based. A small party of officers have been selected from among those who have volunteered for this purpose, and they will shortly embark for Poland, under the charge of Colonel Macready, son of the Commissioner of Police. On their arrival they will make a general survey of the country, and make a report with recommendations to the Polish authorities. It is hoped that this pioneer party will be followed later by a larger Commission, which will lay the foundations under the guidance of a scheme for the general control and administration of justice. It is thought that the inception of the idea is due to M. Paderewski, Poland's first Premier, who is acquainted with the London police system at first hand from his frequent visits to this country, and is known to be a great ad-

COVER THE BARE BACKS.

The audiences at London theatre first nights are often as good as the play. A new fashion—it comes from Paris and is as old as Pauline, the beautiful sister of Napoleon—has seized the feminine soul. It lies in the exhibition of all the superficial area of the back from the neck to the waist, the surface highly polished with mysterious compounds invented by the beauty doctors of the town. Invisible flesh-tinted stripes pass over the shoulders to the waist, and faintly suggest where the bodies ought to be. The style is not suitable for ladies with very sharp shoulder blades, nor to ladies too abundantly endowed with adipose tissue. Indeed, it may be doubted whether it is suitable for a lady at all, or whether it ought to be tolerated even in a night club. The arms are sleeveless, and are worn close-pressed to the sides. Our climate being rather chilly, the new fashion necessitates the use of a cloak at times. These are of a most luxurious and beautiful and costly character, and in the manipulation of their coquettish art is employed. Cavaliers who assist need to exercise a most delicate care in handling this precious garment. It would need an Addison to do justice to the theme. The bare-back fashion is not nice.

TOWN MANSIONS DOOMED.

I have had some conversation about the sale of Devonshire House with one who may be described as an authority on West London Society mansion life of the past two generations. He thought that the Duke of Devonshire was selling Devonshire House (5 million dollars are said to have changed hands as the purchase money paid to the Duke for this building and site) for the usual reasons that were reducing the West End to flats and hotels—high taxation and death duties. There was a third reason. It was becoming unwise for the big territorial grandees to have such a display before the eyes of the people as a great house and gardens in the middle of a city where thousands were finding no room to live. Devonshire House was the most signal example of that. Other big men were selling their country houses, but the Duke was known to be determined to keep Chatsworth, and even the richest peers could not hold on to two such places in these times. The family were now married and the future was rather uncertain for territorial lords. One could now live near town and go out in it by motor car, and enjoy the space and advantage of a country house near London and the advantages of the town. There would probably never again be a great town mansion built in the West End. For support to this informant's theory one has only to remember how many of the great town mansions have in the past ten years passed to other uses. Stafford House, the finest private palace in London, was sold by the Duke of Sutherland to Lord Leverhulme (the soap magnate) who presented it to the nation for the London Museum. Crewe House, in Curzon Street, was demolished for an hotel site. Montagu House, in Whitehall, after a service of war, is no longer the residence of the Duke of Buccleugh; and Harrington House, in Craig's Court, Charing Cross, the most easterly of the big London houses, has been taken over for a bank. Harcourt House, Cavendish Square, was pulled down and flats built in its stead. Lord Salisbury and Lord Warwick have given up their houses facing the Green Park. Many other instances could be given. The last big town house built in London was the elegant stone building in Mayfair given by Vanderbilt to his daughter after her marriage to the Duke of Marlborough. It has also changed hands.

FLIP-FLAP AEROPLANE.

Flying men are hardly likely to be pleasantly excited over the revival of experiments with an aeroplane which flaps its wings like a bird. M. Passat, a Frenchman, recently experimented with a "flip-flap" aeroplane on Wimbledon Common, and now announces that the Air Ministry are taking an interest in his experiment. His machine appears to have been of the monoplane type. It had two canvas wings on a bamboo framework which were flapped by hand by means of a lever on each wing. It is claimed that this strange machine flew a distance of 50 yards six feet from the ground, which, considering the initial performance of present-day aeroplanes, is not by any means discouraging for the inventor, though he had no explanation to give why, by flapping his wings a little more, he was not able to fly further. M. Passat has now constructed another machine with two pairs of wings, which are to be flapped by means of a 25-horse power A.E.C. engine. An experiment of the performance is interesting, but it is not yet apparent what advantages will accrue to outweigh the obvious disadvantages of this form of flight. It may to a certain extent, as M. Passat points out, solve the problem of direct lift, and thus enable aeroplanes to rise without a long preliminary run across the ground, but if aeroplanes are to have engines it seems to be much more desirable that propulsion should come direct through the thrust of the propeller rather than through interference with the general stability

The "Captain" of Koepenick.

On October 15, 1906, at 1 p.m., a captain in uniform appeared at the Ploetzense rifle-range and ordered soldiers just relieved from service to follow him to the adjacent town of Koepenick, in Germany. Then he ordered them to load and fix bayonets, and then occupied the town hall, carefully guarding the exits. To the police he explained that he was acting under an order from the Emperor's Cabinet—and that sufficed. Next the "captain" had the offices of the mayor and the treasurer opened, ordered the mayor to close his accounts, and took over the municipal treasury, amounting to 4,000 marks. With the presence of mind maintained throughout, the "captain" had a statement drawn up and ordered the cashier to seal the bag containing the money, which by superior orders he had to remove to Berlin. The mayor and treasurer were then escorted home, where cabs, called by an obedient police, waited to take them to Berlin. The wife of the mayor, refusing to be separated from her husband, went in his cab with a brigadier of police seated in front of them and a grenadier beside the cabman. The same procedure was adopted with the treasurer, and the cabs started for the Berlin army headquarters, where the "captain" arranged to join the prisoners, as he was going by rail. But, when the cabs stopped in Berlin before the sentry at Unterden Linde, their arrival created a sensation, and the officer on duty immediately telephoned to headquarters. The commander of Berlin, the late General Von Moltke, hurried to the scene at once, and the audacious hoax was discovered. Meanwhile, the "captain" had disappeared, but he was discovered and sentenced to a term of imprisonment—while all the world, outside Germany, wondered at the length to which passive and unquestioning obedience to military despotism could be carried in the very heart of a State claiming to represent the fairest flower of Kultur.

A new idea is to drape a one-piece frock so that the bodice and skirt appear to be separate.

Long-waisted princess dresses are relieved by clusters of pleats set in the skirt from hips to hem.

A QUESTION.

THE SALARIED MAN'S LOT.
The high price at the present time bear heavily on the salaried classes. The fixed income that was ample five years ago falls far short of being adequate now. Yet the man who is drawing a salary that would ordinarily be considered high in his occupation finds it difficult to ask for or secure the increase sufficient to make up to him for the reduced value of the dollar. Instead of improving their positions, most salaried men find themselves much worse off than five years ago.—Toronto Star.

Pass Along "Good Cheer."

Catch and radiate the sunshine. Pass along the word of cheer. Give a tender smile or token To the sad ones far and near. Gather up each passing painbeam And reflect it far and wide. Sending forth its rays the brightest Where the darkest shadows hide.

To the weary, heavy laden, Walking lonely down the road, Lend a hand to help them onward. It will lift a heavy load. To the aged and the care-worn, Grown so weary on the way, You can be a very sunbeam, Bringing life and joy to-day.

Not alone in crowded alleys Do we find the sorest need; There is sorrow in the palace, There are hearts that break and bleed. Scatter sunshine, brother, sister, Sympathize with smiles or tears— Make this whole wide world the brighter For your tender words of cheer.

At the City Hall.

The Municipal Council held its regular weekly session last evening. The Mayor presided, and Councillors Ayre and Vinnicombe attended. After reading of minutes, etc., the following business was gone through: The Secretary of the Public Works Department wrote that the Council's letter re lights near the limits of the city was having the consideration of the Executive Council.

F. G. Bradley wrote in connection with J. Vatcher's application to extend his house at the Battery that a plan was submitted some time ago. This was referred to the Engineer for enquiry.

Application of Tessier & Co. to build on Livingstone Street, was referred to the City Engineer for enquiry and plan of locality.

James Murdock complained of an overflow from Bennett's Dam which was damaging Sudbury property, and also wanted street line on Cockpit Road.

Regarding the first matter, the proprietor will be written to remedy defect, and in the latter case the Engineer is to submit plan of the ground in this locality, and Mr. Murdock to be informed later of the Council's decision.

A Pearl was given permission to lay plank sidewalk New Gower St., under the Engineer's supervision.

S. A. Darby's plan of shed to be erected on Marshall Brook wharf, passed, as also B. Harward's plan to extend garage, Water St. West. Permit for repairs to Parade Store, Freshwater Road, was ordered to be given R. C. Hopkins.

W. F. Kenny's plan of garage, Henry Street, was approved provided the law is carried out in connection with gasoline storage.

Mary Ann Vosey was given permission to repair roof of dwelling, Pleasant Street.

Tender to supply oats for the Sanitary Department was accepted from E. J. Horwood.

The City Engineer reported on Sudbury property that some alteration had been made by the owner in the original plan agreed upon. It was decided his attention be called to the original agreement.

The City Engineer's report for the week was read. It dealt with road work, service repairs, sewerage and curb and gutter work, and routine matters generally.

In connection with a building on the Southside, started without the Council's permission, it was decided the Solicitor be instructed to take the necessary proceedings to have operations stopped at once.

Regarding old employees who are unfit for further work, the matter of pensions was left over for consideration at a special meeting to be held shortly.

The Health Officer's weekly report was read, and after passing the usual pay rolls and bills, and disposing of other routine matters, the meeting adjourned.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Cold facts often cause hot arguments.

Nothing beats a good wife—except a bad husband.

A man who gets his pay in advance never works overtime.

Fear not the bold man who uses his tongue instead of a sword.

Don't imagine that a man can talk on any subject just because he does.

A man who is making a night of it never thinks of the morning after.

Beware of the man who speaks of the shortcomings of his neighbor with careful eyes.

Many a man after laying down the law to his wife is compelled to pick himself up.

Take care of the pennies while young and give some chap a chance to hunkie you out of the dollars when you get old.

When two persons tackle a duel it, looks as if they ought to sing it in half the time one could—but they can't.

Marriage is a rank failure when a woman has to play ragtime on a washboard in order to support the alleged man who poses as her husband.

Who's Who

AND WHY IN NEWFOUNDLAND AND CANADA—1919-20.

"Who's Who and Why" is designed to provide a record of the men and women who in one capacity or another are contributing to the building up of Canada and Newfoundland.

In the brief account of their career in these pages their relation is shown to the outstanding events of the history of the sister dominions, and the book, therefore, has a value for the historian quite beyond its use as a current work of reference. Included also are portraits of persons dealt with in the biographical sketches, thus adding to the permanent value of the book. Only a few copies on sale.

PRICE $8.50.
