THE CHURCH IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The story of a Martyr.

A very valuable and interesting work has just been published by Mr. T. Fisher Owen, London, from the pen of the Hon. A. Wilmot, Member of the Legislative Council, Cape of Good Hope.

Father Silveira is the proto-martyr of Monomotapa, indeed of Southern Eastern Africa, and his labors, sufferings and death form the most glorious chapter in the Portuguese history of that country.

If his novitiate has realized his purpose, he has learned what obedience means—simple, absolute and blind—the bending not only of the will but of the judgment also to the will of his superior.

When the Jesuit enters the scholasticate his religious exercises are shortened. The main part of the day is given to study.

his courtiers to Christianity was looked upon with horror and dismay by the Mahometans at Zambeze, and every thing in their power was done to poison the mind of the king against Silveira and Christianity.

Two servants who were present of what occurred: "After Antonio Cuyada had retired the Father commenced to walk before his lodgings, and that faster than customary. He sometimes raised his eyes to Heaven, where he hoped shortly to see God, and he held a cross in his hands, offering his life for that Saviour who had given His life for him, and breathed forth, heartily, sighs. He subsequently retired to his chamber and prayed before the cross.

A circumstantial narrative of this occurrence exists in a manuscript in the Archives of the nation, and the histories of the Society refer to the fact. Still quoting from the letter in the Royal Library of Lisbon, we find that Silveira with five or six companions, all of whom were Portuguese, went to a village in the Quillimane district, where a Moorish king received them. From this place they sailed for the Zambesi, and when they entered the river they conceived themselves in the country of Monomotapa.

THE WORLD OF ROME.

Unfounded Rumors Regarding Leo XIII's Health.

The Energy Shown by the Holy Father The Prince of Naples' Engagement His Will to Accept the Catholic Faith Consecration of New Bishops

Writing under date August 21 the Rome correspondent of the Freeman's Journal, Mr. P. L. Connellan, sends the following letter:

A baseless rumour, circulated by the Liberal Press here on Thursday evening, to the effect that Leo XIII was at the point of death, has drawn attention to the state of his health. This sort of rumour is frequent during the dead season, and it is quite remarkable how very dead the season can be at Rome. There was not the slightest reason to expect of the Pope's health on this occasion, and, as on the following day he received the usual shouts of the Congregations whose day of audience is Friday and a Missionary Bishop besides, the absurdity of the report became evident to all Rome.

What is remarkable about Leo XIII is the extraordinary vigour with which he fulfills the duties of his office. It was my privilege to see him on Sunday, August 2nd, when he gave audience to the American pilgrims. He was carried in a sedan chair to the entrance of the Pauline Chapel. Here he descended, and though bowed considerably, he walked with a rapid step from the door of the chapel to the altar, blessing the people on either hand as he went. After the rather lengthy preliminary prayers, which he read kneeling at a faldstool before the altar, he was vested and then said Mass. The particular habit that he has always had of emphasizing his speech by slightly raising on the fore part of his foot at the utterance of certain words clings to him still, and this motion is quite evident at intervals during the recitation of the prayers at Mass. After he had celebrated, Mgr. Argenti, one of the Papal chaplains, said Mass, during which the Pope knelt all the time. Then, without partaking of any refreshment, he sat upon the altar platform and had presented to him each of the pilgrims and about a dozen other persons besides. Some few words were said to each individual. His hand was kissed, and he bestowed a special blessing on each. All this was done without apparent fatigue and with considerable energy by the Pontiff, now in his 87th year.

On Sunday last he underwent a more trying ordeal. It was a feast of St. Joachim, the name-day of the Pontiff. In the morning he celebrated his usual Mass and assisted at one celebrated by a chaplain. Then, at mid-day, he received the cardinals, prelates, bishops and others—to the number about 200—in his private library. Here on one side of the altar throne was placed the portrait of the young King of Spain, Alfonso XIII, which was sent to Leo XIII, his godfather, on the occasion of the recent Confirmation of the King. He is represented as dressed in black velvet with lace Vandyk collar and cuffs—a sort of boy's dress. The portrait is full length and life size. The youthful monarch, standing, places his hand upon the throne, as a resting place for his hand and as a symbol of that to which he is born. Against the bookshelves, almost opposite the Pope, is placed a very fine copy, in enamel, of Raffaello's "Madonna della Seggiola," in the Pitti Palace of Florence, bequeathed to Leo XIII by the late Cardinal Monaco la Valletta, to whom it was bequeathed by Pius IX. The Pontiff opened the conversation, which, on such occasions, is more varied and less formal than during the solemn audience. He spoke of the late lamented Cardinal Monaco la Valletta, of his great charity, and especially of his great ability, referring to the works of beneficence he had undertaken and in which, as he said, the late Cardinal had expended more than a million of francs. He had always, he said, been in accord with Cardinal Monaco, save in one thing. "He was ever desirous," said his Holiness, "of bringing me comfort by declaring that the work of the revolution would soon finish, and the Holy See would soon be restored to the plenitude of its rights. But that never deceived me who saw the political movement of Europe and the apathy and indifference of the Italians. I take comfort now, however, in the religious reawakening which is all over Italy, and especially in Rome, where, after being so bitterly undecorated, the people return to God and to His Church." The Pontiff then referred to the many manifestations of this reawakening, its works, and the many Catholic Societies, etc., that were established. Regarding the progress of these he made inquiries of Cardinal Parocchi, Vicar of the Holy See, and of Mgr. Baidini Todeschi. These furnished concise information regarding these Catholic Associations, and Leo XIII said in his great desire that every parish in Rome should have its parochial association. He also recommended that these societies should work more in harmony than they do now.

Continuing in this strain he called to mind the Eucharistic Congress about to be held in Orvieto which promises so well, and at which he said Cardinals Parocchi and Vincenzo Vannutelli, and perhaps some other members of the Sacred College, would be present. He hoped also that the general Catholic Congress, which is about to be held at Fiesole, near Florence, would give a powerful impulse to the religious movement in Tuscany. The conversation then turned to the consecration of the great cathedrals, the strong Catholics of Germany, with the support of the Parliamentary Centre, will hold soon at Dortmund.

And, turning his attention from Europe, Leo XIII spoke of the progress of the missions. Mgr. Germaino, Bishop of the Syro-Melechite Rite, who was present, supplied information concerning the consoling movement of the Schismatics of the East towards Catholic unity. Then attention was given to what was said by the Superior of the Pallottini Fathers regarding the success of their missions in Cameroon, the German colony in Africa. Amongst other things, the Superior related to His Holiness that these Fathers had 1,200 Catholics, 800 neophytes, and four churches here, and he expressed his gratitude to the Prussian Government, which allowed them the fullest liberty. Cardinal Ledochowsky, Prefect of Propaganda, furnished information of the East India Missions, which was very encouraging. The Pope insisted strongly on the necessity of instituting ecclesiastical seminaries in the mission centres, in order to provide the Catholics of these places with priests of their own race. The Cardinal related that several conversions had taken place amongst the highest Indian caste—that of the Brahmins—an unprecedented result.

Finally, the Holy Father thanked the Cardinals for their congratulations to him on this Feast of St. Joachim, and shortly after retired to his own apartments. This "circulo," as it is termed, lasted just two hours. Leo XIII showed no sign of fatigue, though he talked a considerable length on many of the subjects that profoundly occupy the mind of a Pontiff who has on his shoulders the care of all the churches. There is not much cause to fear for the health of the Holy Father while he is still capable of such exertions. The Sovereign Pontiff, on occasion of the Feast of St. Joachim, directed his private almoner to distribute to the poor of Rome the sum of 18,000 francs, 4,000 of which was destined as assistance to poor priests.

The announcement during the past week of the betrothal of the Prince of Naples to Helona Princess of Montenegro has been a surprise to most people in Rome, and has occupied the Press and public attention throughout the whole country. King Humbert, on Tuesday last, officially communicated to the Marquis di Rudini, the Premier, or President of the Council, this betrothal. The matter is not, as in England, submitted to the discussion of Parliament, for in Italy the affairs of the Sovereign and the members of the Royal family are not subjects to be voted upon in the Chamber. The period of the marriage is not yet decided upon, but it is expected to take place in Autumn. It is decided, however, that only the members of the two Royal families—those of Italy and of Montenegro—will also be present. Opinions are divided with regard to the place where the marriage will be celebrated, one placing it at Rome and another at Monza, while a third relates it to Cattinje, in Montenegro, where Prince Victor Emmanuel III. is now staying.

The Prince of Naples has been comparatively lost sight of in considerations on the present and future of Italy. Some people have regarded him as of little account either intellectually or physically, while others hold him to be a paragon of intellect and ability. Probably the truth lies between the two estimates of this future King of Italy—if Italy will endure another King, Victor Emmanuel III. has passed a long apprenticeship to the profession of King. He was but nine years old when his father and mother were called by the death of Victor Emmanuel II—the invader of Rome—to assume the title and position of King and Queen of Italy. Since then, and even before that age, he has been in training for the office of Royalty. When he was very small, his legs were weak and feeble, and every year he was sent to England to be treated by physicians and to be well fed, so that his limbs might be strengthened. One consequence, besides the physical benefits he derived from these visits to England, was that he acquired English speech, and an excellent English master afterwards instructed him in the language, which he is said to know thoroughly.

And, as a child, he always accompanied his mother who, fond of ostentation, went out with the daiming red liveries on coachman and servants, and with blowing of trumpets and saluting of soldiers—all the pomp and state appertaining to her exalted position. The young Prince had not the childish graces which go straight to the heart of the people. He saluted the people on the street who saluted him with waving in unity and harmony, his face was difficult to analyse, and his expression not easy to understand. His lower lip was rather prominent and pendant, giving him an expression of mingled sturdiness and silliness.

It is not improved much in expression since, but the upper part of the face is more intellectual.

In training him for the office of King the mischief has been that he was over-trained. His instruction has been too complete, and he has only half profited by it. His father desired that he should receive a first class military education as the traditions of the House of Savoy require. His mother desired that he should reside at Rome, which contains within its walls the ruins of the Roman Forum and the greatest Art treasures in the world, could not dispense with a good knowledge of archaeology, of literature and of art. While he was yet a delicate stripling he had to endure considerable hardships. He was doomed, not only to be a soldier, but also to become as far as he was able, a living encyclopaedia of all kinds of knowledge. It is related that he nearly died in the process.

Whilst Colonel Ono taught him the military profession, says a writer who admirably sums up the story of the prince, he was also under tuition in the ancient and modern languages, and at the same time he had to study mathematics, physics and natural sciences. His mother interfered for his health's sake, and insisted on his having more physical exercise. He has become a brilliant cavalry officer, it is said, but he does not possess the profoundly military instincts which seem to be in the blood of the Savoy prince. The artistic bearings that Queen Margaret strove to impart to him have only developed, so far, a great love for ancient coins and medals.

His promotion in the army has been rapid. At 25 years of age he was a General. The habit of command, and his taste, recently developed, for worldly distractions, have modified his character. He has departed from his original excessive reserve and timidity. In his manner, when travelling from one European Court to another, was not attractive, and he left a very unfortunate impression of himself in France—an impression not easily forgotten. His reputation for morality has suffered during his residence in Florence and Naples, especially in the latter city.

The Princess Helona will, it is said, become a Catholic in deference to her mother-in-law, rather novel inducement. In France it is considered that it is not improbable that the far seeing Leo XIII. will rejoice at this event. It is well known that one of the favourite projects that have occupied the mind of the reigning Pope is to advance the hour when the Greek and the Roman Churches will be reunited. He has taken up this work of the reunion of the two Churches as the Council where it was left by the Council of Florence, and it cannot be for a moment questioned that in the new field in which he has exercised his indefatigable activity he has not gained some success. It is very probable then that the conversion to Catholicity of the young Montenegrin Princess may be viewed very favourably at the Vatican.

In the meantime the Italian papers which favor Signor Crispi declare that King Humbert will abdicate when his son gets married. The King, it is said, sees no exit but this from the African perplexity. He will not sign a peace with the Negus in the condition of a vanquished sovereign; his son may, however. This is only one of these rumors which lack confirmation, and which only the King can refute.

The Pallottini Fathers have just concluded a General Chapter of their congregation at Rome, the chief task of which was to select a new Rector-General in place of Rev. Father Joseph Damin, of the Italian Church, Hutton Garden, London. The choice of the Chapter fell on the Rev. Father William Whitmore, who was Protector of the Order, and is Rector of the Church of St. Sylvester in Capite. Father Whitmore is well known in Rome, where he has resided for many years. His kindly disposition and great charity have made him many friends. During his retorship of St. Sylvester this church has become a centre for people of the English speaking races, and the best preachers in this tongue who have visited Rome have occupied its pulpit.

On Sunday next, August 30th, his Eminence Cardinal Rampolla del Tindaro, Secretary of State of his Holiness, will consecrate the new bishops, Monsignor Aristide Rinaldini, the newly appointed Nuncio Apostolic to Belgium, and the Most Rev. Father Sebastiano Martinelli, Prior General of the Order of Hermits of St. Augustine, recently nominated Delegate Apostolic to the United States in the place of Cardinal Satoli, who comes to Rome to receive the Cardinals' hat, and to be, in all probability, appointed a Cardinal in Consistory next, substitute Secretary of State, and in that position worked daily with Cardinal Rampolla. It is natural, therefore, that it is this Cardinal who should consecrate him. As Cardinal Rampolla is the Protector of the Augustinian Order, whom Father Martinelli had frequently to consult in his role of the Order, it is at the hands of Cardinal Rampolla that the new Delegate to the United States seeks consecration. The Rev. Father Charles M. Driscoll, O.S.A., Provincial of the Order in the United States, has arrived in Rome, in order to be present at this consecration. It is almost certain that Father Driscoll will accompany the new Delegate to his voyage to the United States.

King of England, as James III. and so feels that, as he survived his father sixty four years his reign was longer than hers has been.

Many of her subjects are not likely to take heavy stock in Her Majesty's scruples. In these days the people do not trouble themselves a little about the merits of the claims of this royal house or that. The people are now able to attend themselves to all the business of government that royalty was once supposed to be solely fitted to discharge.

England will stir a finger to protect Armenia she must provide herself an ally. That is her well known policy. She desires Russia for an ally in this matter, and she hopes that will disarm France and leave Germany practically alone to support Turkey.

But Armenia will wait long for any such game of diplomacy to be won. England will not go to war unless the issue is a sure thing. All the resolutions that may be passed until the Russian ally is secured are but so much froth.

was so elaborately cautious. Another worthy of the name of Kearney went to Rotterdam Beyond the fact that the drunken braves slept upon their bombs and failed to farm out the job of trying to make any of the machines explode, there is no evidence of a "plot" such as the Scotland Yard police surprised the astonished world with two weeks since.

There is no doubt that he has lived upon the reputation which he has been trying to establish for himself that he is "No. 1." That reputation would not bring him a livelihood from the voluntary subscriptions of any misguided Irishmen who may be resident in the neighborhood.

themselves and others fresh zeal to strive against it with increased ardour. Over and above all other reasons for which this proposal is worthy of warm approbation, is the fact that it clearly indicates the growth in people's minds of the intimate persuasion and the gravest evils to civilization and religion are prepared by the secret societies.

"No. 1" did the result, indeed, disappoint Our anxious efforts, and amongst the fruits of the project of this Congress, which we warmly trust, both by the number and worth of those taking part in it, will doubtless be treated in it and the utility promised by it require. But above all, in order that the issue may correspond to the desires entertained, it is absolutely necessary that those participating in the Congress should go to the root of the matter, and diligently seek for the best means of efficaciously opposing the progress of the Secretariat forces.

Canada may feel like saying that Mr. Blake makes fresh sacrifices in cutting off his remaining business connections in Canada. It is safe, however, to suppose that if people here could realize as Mr. Blake and his associates do the practical unity of the Irish people themselves, they would see that sacrifice made now for the Irish cause are not destined to be fruitless.

IRISH RACE CONVENTION.

Letter to the Press From the Secretary of the Canadian Delegation.

The following letter appeared in The Globe and Mail and Empire of Wednesday

Sir.—Some of the Canadian delegates to the Irish Race Convention have just returned to their homes to learn that the great gathering which they attended was much misrepresented in the cable despatches to the Toronto papers. As Secretary of the Canadian delegation I have been asked to send you a short communication on the subject.

would be justified in inferring, if not on their guard against the bias, that the Healyites or the Redmondites, as the case might be, were carrying all before them, and that Mr. Dillon and his followers were nowhere. The somewhat important circumstance that the latter are the most numerous of the Nationalist factions, and that they owe this supremacy to the votes of the court of Ireland, who are the best court of resort, is usually conveniently overlooked.

The story of the convention is easily told. The idea of holding such a meeting originated with Hon. Edward Blake and the Archbishop of Toronto. Its purpose was to get together representatives of the Irish people from all over the world to deal with the differences which divide the Parliament ary contingent. It is evident enough that personal ambitions and small jealousies are at the bottom of most of these differences. It was felt that if the representatives of the Irish people from the various parts of the world could be gathered together, the deliverances of such a body would have great weight. There was nothing to prevent all sections of Irish opinion being represented there. Healyites and Redmondites had as good an opportunity of being largely represented on the floor of the convention as any other section of Nationalism, and if they did not take advantage of the opportunity we must believe that it was because they feel that there is no public opinion behind them, either at home or abroad, that would have assured them the necessary representation in the convention. If the Dublin convention had declared against Dillon's leadership and in favor of that of Healy or Redmond, there can be no question that it would have overridden the previous action of the Parliament ary contingent in electing Dillon. As it was, Dillon's leadership was endorsed, and it will be found that the convention's voice will in the end become irresistible. It is of course important that the Nationalist Parliamentary leader should be a man of ability, but that is not nearly so important as that the party should be united. That Mr. Dillon is a man well fitted to the position to which he has been elected is admitted by everyone who may be regarded as unprejudiced, and when he is able to speak in the name of united Ireland the Nationalist party will once more regain its weight in the Imperial Parliament.

Obituary.

MRS. MARY LACY. One of the oldest residents of Toronto—the venerable lady whose name appears above—peacefully passed away at her home, Backview street, on Sunday last, aged 78 years. Mrs. Lacy lived in this city when it was incorporated in 1824. She witnessed its many changes from the primitive surroundings of Little York to its present proud position, and contributed her share in laying the foundations of its future prosperity. During her long life Mrs. Lacy was distinguished by her thrifty and industrious habits, to which she added kindness of manner and a most charitable disposition. She was a devout Catholic and a devoted wife and mother—a fine type of the race proverbial for its piety and virtue. Her remains were interred in St. Michael's Cemetery. May they rest in peace.

MRS. JOHN LYDON. The death of Mrs. John Lydon formerly of Port Hope—occurred in this city on the 25th September. While quite young she left her native county, Kilkenny, Ireland, and settled in Montreal, where she married, and subsequently moved to Port Hope, and remained there for 82 years, respected by all classes. Her husband, Mr. John Lydon, was for 20 years a trustee of St. Mary's Church in that town, in which he did a large business as vessel-owner and merchant. Mrs. Lydon gave generously of her means to the church and to the poor, and aided every good work of a benevolent purpose. Early on Wednesday morning the body was taken to Port Hope or burial. May it rest in peace.

MR. WILLIAM J. FITZHENRY. At the early age of 24 years William J. Fitzhenry has been summoned to his last account, to the inexpressible sorrow of his relatives and all who knew him. The deceased was son of the late William Fitzhenry, distiller of this city, and grand-nephew of the late Rev. Thomas Fitzhenry, for many years the beloved pastor of St. Paul's parish. He was a general favorite in aquatic circles, and admired for those qualities which mark the young man of honest and upright character. May his soul rest in peace.

Confirmation at the Gore.

On Friday, the 25th inst., His Grace the Archbishop of Toronto gave Confirmation at St. Patrick's church, Gore of Toronto. His Grace was accompanied by Rev. Fathers Murray and Treacy of the city, and was met at the station by the pastor, Rev. Father Reddin, Fathers Kilcullen, Whitney, Garvey and numerous contingent of the influential members of the parish, who were anxious to show their respect for the chief pastor. Arrived at the church High Mass was celebrated Coram Pontifice, by the Rev. James Carbery, Schomburg. During Mass Rev. Father Murray presided at the organ and Miss Nellie McCann ably assisted the loal choir by some exquisite solos appropriate to the occasion. After Mass His Grace addressed the congregation on the sacrament of Confirmation. "The sacrament of Confirmation," he said, "was calculated to impress us with the ineffable goodness and mercy of Almighty God to the children of men. Surrounded by enemies powerful and cunning we are liable at any moment to succumb to their attacks were it not that a good and merciful Lord who knows how prone to evil is man had instituted the sacraments as channels of grace to give light and health and spiritual strength to the souls of men, elevating them above the evil influences of human passions and worldly allurement and bestowing a supernatural vigor that shall never quail before the combined attacks of the world, the flesh and the devil."

His Grace examined the children on the Catechism and afterwards took occasion to compliment the pastor, Rev. Father Reddin, on the high proficiency which they had attained under his earnest supervision. Over 60 children, including some adults, received Confirmation.

St. James' Adjala.

Leaving the Gore on Saturday morning His Grace proceeded by train to Tottenham, where he was met at the station by the Rev. Fathers Kilcullen, Kiernan and a numerous and influential deputation from the united parishes of Adjala, Tottenham and Achill, who accompanied the local priests. Confirmation took place in St. James' church, Adjala, on the following Sunday. From early morning the church was crowded to the doors, many Protestants from the neighboring parishes being among the congregation. High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Treacy. Immediately after Mass His Grace the Archbishop gave an able and eloquent sermon on the Sacraments of the Church, and particularly on the great sacrament he was about to administer. He dwelt feelingly on the fact that a great many of the grand old pioneers had departed from among them. He had missed their faces in the congregation to-day. They had gone before to the Eternal Home while their bodies reposed in the adjacent churchyard, but they had left behind them a legacy more precious than great riches—the inheritance of the solid Irish faith and many virtues which they had brought from the old sod to the virgin forests of Canada.

The Archbishop gave Confirmation to over 110 children whom he had examined the preceding evening. Great praise must be given to the Rev. Pastor Father Kilcullen for his zealous labors in instructing the children in which he was so ably assisted by Rev. Father Kiernan. Amongst the priests who came to meet the Archbishop at Adjala, were Very Rev. Dean Egan, Barrie; Father Gibney, Alliston; Father Moyn, Stayner; Father E. Kiernan, Collingwood; Rev. Father Reddin, the Gore; Father Whitney, Galesburg; and Father Carley Schomburg.

Quehlp Notes.

Quehlp, Sept. 28.—The Roman Catholic colony in Chesley and vicinity are not very numerous, but they are among our most enterprising and respected citizens and for a long time have labored under the disadvantage of not having a place of worship nearer than the church in North Brant, some four or five miles distant. They determined to put an end to this inconvenience and have succeeded. The building of a new English church here has left that body with a superfluous church on their hands, and negotiations soon ended in its being purchased by the Roman Catholics. A very interesting and instructive sermon was preached by Rev. Father Kenny, S.J., on the "Forgiveness of Sin" on Sunday last. The church was well filled, amongst those present being a large number from other congregations who listened attentively to the eloquent discourse. After the late service in the morning the meeting of the League of the Cross took place in the basement, a large number being present. The President, Mr. P. O'Connor, occupied the chair. Two members from the boys' branch of the League were transferred to the men's branch. On motion of Messrs. J. E. McElderry and James Mays a resolution of sympathy, expressing the sorrow of the members in the death of their late brother and member, Mr. John Murphy, was adopted, and a copy of the same ordered to be sent to the family by the Secretary. The Catholic Union received the attention of the members for a short while. It is, however, decided that the Union will continue, as before, with some reconstruction of the rules. Rev. Father O'Loane, S.J., the spiritual director, was present.

Carpets.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of John Kay, Son & Co., which appears in to-day's Register. The statement it contains is simply a truism that is already well known, not alone in Toronto, but by all whom the firm have had business relations. A larger or finer stock of Carpets cannot be found anywhere, nor are the prices lower for the value received. A call at the warehouse, 34 King Street West, is respectfully suggested to intending purchasers.

The Late Mrs. Charles McSorley.

The sad affliction which has overtaken our fellow citizen, Mr. Charles McSorley, first engineer of the steamer Glangary, was learned with much regret throughout the city. On Saturday his wife passed away after a short illness from heart failure. She was 27 years of age and a daughter of the late Mr. John Melville, cabman. It was only in February last that the happy couple received the congratulations of many friends on their wedding day, and started out on life's journey with nothing but sunshine in view. But, alas! the reaper Death was lurking near and in a few short weeks turned the joyful ode in February into a house of mourning in September. Mr. McSorley was made aware by telegraph of the weak condition of his wife, and arrived home at noon on Saturday, some hours after death had taken place, which made the bereavement still more sorrowful. Deceased was a member of the various ladies' societies in connection with St. Mary's Cathedral. The funeral took place Monday morning, when a solemn requiem mass was sung and the Libera chanted by Rev. Father O'Brien for the repose of her soul. The bereaved husband has the sympathy of all classes of citizens in his sad bereavement.—Kingston Freeman.

First Communion at Urmishy.

On last Sunday 27th inst there was First Communion in Grimsby for the children of the parish. About twenty singers came on Sunday morning by special trolley from Hamilton and under the leadership of Mr. Scheltor rendered High Mass in excellent style. They are accompanied by Nelliga's orchestra with Mrs. Cochrane at the organ. Rev. Father Crimmon addressed the children on the happy day of their First Communion, and afterwards read the Archbishop's eloquent pastoral on the supremacy of the Pope. There will be First Communion in Smithville on the 11th October, the 2nd Sunday in October.

A Rare Work.

"Ancient Missions and Churches of America," is an educational fine art series of superb pictures by artist W. H. Jackson, the finest scenic photographer in the world. The text, briefly covering the history, romance and life of the people concerned, has been graphically written by Stanley Wood. This series contains 8 parts—4 pictures, 14 x 17 inches in size, in each part—and one page of text, so arranged that when the 8 parts are complete, one has 24 pictures and the entire story—ready for binding or for preservation in album form. Each part will contain four plates as follows:

- Part I.—Oldest Church in America, Mission of San Gabriel (Interior), Mission of San Gabriel (Exterior), Cathedral of Mexico.
- Part II.—Cathedral of Lagos, Plaza de las Aguas Calientes, Mission of Santa Barbara (Garden), Mission of Santa Barbara (Corridor).
- Part III.—Mission of San Antonio de Padua, Mission of San Juan Bautista, Church of San Diego de las Aguas Calientes, Church of Santa Cruz.
- Part IV.—Mission of San Diego, Old Church at Pueblo San Juan, Mission of San Luis Rey, Church of Cruz de Queretara.
- Part V.—Mission of San Juan de Capistrano, Mission of San Juan de Capistrano (Ruins), The Pyramid of Cholula, Mission of Santa Ines.
- Part VI.—Mission of San Carlos, San Luis Rey, Cathedral of Chihuahua, Altar of Church, Guadalupe.

The plates are ornamented by a delicate French tint border, and will not be bound, but are left unmounted in the folio where they may remain, or whenever they can be removed and framed in appropriate and artistic mural decorations. The subscription price for the six parts is $3.00. Parties remitting this sum to THE CATHOLIC REGISTER office, 40 Lombard street, Toronto, will be supplied with the work, and a copy of THE REGISTER for one year.

A TRAPPER'S STORY.

A CALLING THAT ENTAILS MUCH HARDSHIP AND EXPOSURE.

One Case in Which the Exposure Brought on A Grippe and Nervous After Trouble—How the Victim Recovered Removed Itself.

Rockport is but a small hamlet, but it has achieved a wide reputation owing to the fact that it is situated in the very heart of the far famed Thousand Islands, and for this reason attracts during the summer months hundreds of pleasure seekers. Amongst the residents of the village none is better known than Wilson A. Root. During the summer months he follows the occupation of an oarsman, and none knows better than he the haunts of the gamey bass and pickerel. In the winter and spring months Mr. Root follows the occupation of trapping, and thus pursues a life of exposure, and in all sorts of weather, and in the water frequently at a time of the year when the water is none too warm. As a result of a wetting Mr. Root took a severe cold which developed into a grippe, which took such a firm hold upon his system that for a time he was unable to leave the house. His kidneys became affected, and he suffered from severe pains across the back. There was a feeling of continuous tiredness, which no amount of rest or sleep seemed to relieve. The appetite was tickle, and there was an indisposition to exertion or work. A number of remedies were tried, one after the other, but without any beneficial results. At this juncture a friend strongly advised that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills be given a trial. They had cured thousands of others, and why not he? Acting on his friend's suggestion Mr. Root procured a single box of the Pink Pills, and before all were used felt such improvement. This encouraged him to persevere with the treatment, and after the use of a new more boxes of the pills, Mr. Root found his health fully restored, all the pains and aches had disappeared, and with their disappearance came a renewed vigor and activity. Mr. Root says—"I firmly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to be unsurpassed as a medicine, and I advise any who are ailing to give it a fair and honest trial." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills strike at the root of the disease, driving it from the system and restoring the patient to health and strength. In cases of paralysis, spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles, etc., these pills are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the troubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and speedily restore the rich glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men broken down by overwork, worry or excesses, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail postpaid, at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. Beware of imitations and substitutes alleged to be "just as good."

The Syrian Archbishop of Diarbekir, Monsignor Gregorios Abdulla, has been received into the Catholic Church by Father Barnier, S.J., a missionary in Syria. This is the first fruit of the Pope's appeal to the Eastern Churches. Leo XIII., it is stated, has expressed a wish to see the distinguished convert.

Piles Cured in 8 to 6 Nights.—Dr. Agnew's Ointment will cure all cases of Itching Piles in from 8 to 6 nights. One application brings comfort. For Blind and Bleeding Piles it is peerless. The cure is Pile, Salt Rheum, Eczema, Barber's Itch, and all eruptions of the skin.

Mr. Wilson Barrett's extraordinary play "The Sign of the Cross," is rapidly becoming the marvel of the age. Bishops and Bapists, High Church, Low Church, no Church, and Mr. Gladstone has it drawn into the managerial well. House Cleaning A Carpet Suggestion There is little use in seeking to please yourself in buying a Carpet if the assortment is not large. So many things have to be taken into consideration—size of room, character, furniture, paper on the walls and much else. This assortment you find here as nowhere else. It is an advantage to buy a carpet where the designs and colorings are not only new, but not such as you find in every house you enter. The ordinary dealer in Carpets sells stock patterns—they all sell the same. This great carpet house can promise a large range of exclusive patterns. Price is a consideration—don't pay more for a carpet than it's worth. Ordinary observation and common sense tell you that a house buying in the immense quantities that we do must buy better than the man who simply sells Carpets along with a hundred other things. You always find our prices in your favor. JOHN KAY, SON & CO. 34 King Street West.

FARM AND GARDEN.

Not even a large application of manure... worn out land will bring a full crop the first year.

The worst parasites of sheep are taken into them with the drinking water drawn from ponds or sluggish streams.

It is very necessary to keep the garden clear of all sorts of rubbish and refuse. It provides a secure hiding place for the last broods of all kinds of vermin.

It may not be advisable to collect seeds for next year's sowing in the garden. It is in most cases, undesirable on account of the mixing of the varieties of similar plants.

There is much said about special products of the farm and the profit there is in them. All this is delusive and misleading. The fact that these products are special prevents them from becoming general.

It is pursuing an ignis fatuus for the ordinary farmer, unprovided with the means needed for success in any special branch of fancy farming.

FIESIDE FUN.

The trouble with the telling of a joke is that the listener usually insists on telling another one.

Little Johnny Squawh "What is your papa's business?" Little Clarence Penemith "My papa is a poet."

Mrs. Wallace "I wonder if gasoline will remove green paint?" Mr. Wallace "Dunno. Should think it ought to."

We have known older persons to be afflicted in the same way as the little boy told about in the Church Union.

During a heavy storm a vessel was making to the nearest port to obtain shelter. Before it had reached its destination the storm had abated, and the captain, finding it necessary to execute some repairs at the top of the mast, sent a sailor to do it.

Canon Tristram begs the clergy to beware of wrong or unfortunate illustrations. "When a dookyard chaplain, I once," he says, "secured the aid of an eloquent American Bishop, whose sermon certainly rivited me."

He is a quiet, unexcitable man, and when his friend took him home to see the baby he did his best, though not very successfully, to be enthusiastic.

The St. Patrick's branch No. 108 of the C.M.B.A., in conjunction with the Quebec Advisory Board, are about to tender a banquet to the Grand President of the Association, Hon. M. F. Hackett.

DOMESTIC READING.

Let not anyone say that he cannot govern his passion.—John Locke. Falshood is never so successful as when she bails her look with truth.

The frequent intercourse between friends as bad as is too much of any thing else. Its end is weariness and mayhap disgust.—Katherine E. Conway.

If you would be pungent be brief, for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed, the deeper they burn.—Robert Southey.

No man is so foolish but may give another good counsel sometimes, and no man is so wise but may easily err if he will take no other's counsel but his own.—Ben Jonson.

Stiffness of person and steadiness of features are signal marks of good breeding. Vulgar persons can't sit still, or at least they must work their limbs or features.—Holmes.

There are two things, each of which he will seldom fail to discover who seeks for it in earnest;—the knowledge of what he ought to do, and a plausible pretext for doing what he likes.

A devout, pious mother contributes more to the propagation of religion and the strength of a nation than the sermons of Augustine or Chrysostom or the transcendent eloquence of Burke or Webster.—Rev. F. Riordan.

A good conscience is a port which is landlocked on every side, where no winds can possibly invade. There no man may not only see his own image but that of his Maker clearly reflected from the undisturbed and silent waters.—John Dryden.

If a man has a quarrelsome temper, let him alone. The world will soon find him employment. He will soon meet with someone stronger than himself, who will repay him better than you can.

Our besting sin is the sin of ostentatiousness, and with the greatest facility, and the one we forget with the greatest speed, the one from which we turn away our eyes and for which we try to make excuse before God and give ourselves absolution.—Cardinal Manning.

We are daily more and more impressed with the fact that the utmost fraternity of charity should be extended to non Catholic Christians. We must prove to them that we do not gloat over their mistakes and discomfitures.

What we should sorrow over, as Catholics, in this age of distrust, contempt, and hatred of things holy, is that Christianity is so divided, that the one Church, with inflexible standards, that brings her faithful rest and peace, is herself so unknown, misperceived, and misjudged, by the Christian sectarians who themselves must be credited by us as seeking to do the will of God.

How many people would like to be good, if only they might be good without taking trouble about it? They do not like goodness well enough to hunger and thirst after it, or to sell what they have that they may buy it; they will not batter at the gate of the kingdom of heaven, but they look with pleasure at this or that aerial castle of righteousness, and think it would be rather nice to live in it.

There is no greater fallacy than the assumption that a man can measure accurately the value of an opportunity, that he can determine how much or how little truth and excellence he ought to give to an utterance. These are beyond the knowledge of the wisest man. There is but one safe course, and that is always to do one's work in the best way and to put one's powers into every form of activity.

He who refuses forgiveness breaks the bridge over which he must pass, for all need forgiveness. Are there any of us who can look back on wrong and injury done to us by our fellow-men? This, if we were wise, we would not wish to forget. Far more noble is it to remember in full, and yet forgive; to retain our sensitiveness unimpaired, and yet to take the offending brother to our heart as if he had done us no wrong.

"For several months I was troubled with a persistent humor on my head which gave me considerable annoyance, until it occurred to me to try Ayer's Hair Vigor. Before using one bottle the humor was healed."—T. T. Adams, General Merchant, Tuberville, Va.

Chats With the Children.

WYNKEN, BLYNKEN AND NOD. Wynken, Blynken and Nod one night Sailed off in a wood a shoe Sailed on a river of misty light Into a sea of dew.

The old moon asked the three "We have come to bid for the herring fish That live in the beautiful sea, Note of silver and gold have we."

All night long their nets they threw For the fish in the twinkling foam. Then down from the sky came the wooden shoe, Bringing the fishermen home.

Wynken and Blynken are two little eyes, And Nod is a little head, And the wooden shoe that sailed so skies Is a wee one's trunk and bed.

Not long since an assistant in a warehouse in Melbourne opened a case of socks that had newly arrived from England. Several of the socks were partially destroyed, and as the case itself was sound, and nothing, therefore, could have got into it during the voyage, the contents were turned out.

Lord Holland relates in his memoirs how once the military career of Napoleon I., and therewith to a certain extent the fate of Europe, depended upon a game of hazard.

When Napoleon was appointed for the first time as an independent commanding general of the Italian army, the Directory then at the head of France was not willing, or perhaps not able, to provide enough money to defray the expenses of himself and his lieutenants to the seat of war and make a proper show as Commanding General of so considerable an army at his headquarters.

In the sixteenth century there was a curious law in England whereby street hawkers were forbidden to sell pears and apples, for the reason that servants and apprentices were unable to resist the sight of them, and were constantly tempted to steal.

The Princess of Wales has odd names for her four pet ponies. She calls them Huffy, Pumpy, Bone and Beans. She is very devoted to them, and every day when she is at home goes out to their clean, airy stable and carries her basket of dainties to them.

Pistols and Pestles. The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver.

Good-Bye to Ireland.

By THERESA C. BOYLAN.

Coming from you, Ireland, far beyond the wide, wide seas, the sorrow for my heartstrings is a weary load to me...

Well, good-bye, my good old mother; one more look upon your face; I'll be faithful to Ireland, to your cause and to your race.

THE WIZARD'S CHARM.

In a pretty chalet that nestled high against the shaggy breast of Mount Oghadin lived the widow Neur and her daughter Marie.

his summers in a little house on the mountain very top. The simple villagers called him "the wizard," and told strange tales of how he spent whole nights gazing at the heavens through a long tube...

young man will care to dance with me. "But why?" asked the wizard, in surprise. "Because I cannot talk and laugh with them as other maidens do. My heart beats fast if they do but glance toward me, and I know not what to say, and so—"

Paris that winter, he read a scientific paper before the savants of the Academy. In it he detailed many of his wonderful discoveries and his work during the summer. But he did not speak of the most interesting of all—how, by the aid of a little magnet, concealed in a steel belt, and a rudo ring, he had brought together two loving human hearts, and by so doing had opened a new door to the happiness of Paradise and imprisoned it in a chalet on old Oghadin Mountain.

There must be something in the atmosphere of Ireland peculiarly congenial to poetry and the poetic faculty. For the Irish poets have ever been among the sweetest, the most soulful and the best. The "old sod," it is true, has never produced a Shakspeare, a Milton, a Pope, a Dryden, a Byron, a Shelley—in other words, a towering, awe-inspiring master of the lyre, but it has brought forth a perfect flood of tuneful songsters whose graceful and melodious warblings have echoed around the world and found responsive throbbings in many and many a heart.

Ireland's Poets

There must be something in the atmosphere of Ireland peculiarly congenial to poetry and the poetic faculty.

At Ivrea, an ancient city in the north of Italy, the Salesians of Don Bosco, says The Salesian Bulletin, opened an Irish college some years ago.

IN BELFAST.

industrial interests of the country. We would even go so far as to say that we do not mean so much Home Rule as the happiness of our people at home. Well, my friends, what would you say to that? I say this and I said to them, "My dear friends, you never can have the industrial interests of your country attended to, you never can have them rightly managed, until you get Home Rule." I said, "That was my assertion, my dear friends. What was my argument? You are my argument, my friends (applause). Here you are, from the industrial capital of this great country, here you are in your thousands to-night, ready to emphasize that your industrial interests, your commercial interests, cannot be sufficiently and perfectly managed, as they ought to be, until you have Home Rule (applause). So I will go back from this magnificent gathering—I will go back from the Belfast of Ireland, to the Belfast of Toronto—for there, too, my dear friends, I find myself upon a commercial centre and an industrial centre, a mixed centre—a very mixed centre, my dear friends (laughter). We have a great many separate brethren of the Orange persuasion (laughter) all of whom I must do with them, and I am here—as every where—free and independent (applause). We give them the hand of fellowship (applause). I had been speaking on one occasion to a large number of men of soil, and of gentlemanly rank, and to one who was speaking to me, 'You have been speaking of the Orange men now that you ever did before.' They were nearly all Orange brethren. Well, in speaking to them I said, 'My dear Orange friends, it is said, you are in the habit of sending your Orange Popes to the United States. Now, if you feel inclined to send him anywhere again send him to heaven (laughter), because, my friends, he is sure to get there anyhow (renowned laughter), and it might be as well if you gave him a helping hand (laughter and applause). But my audience received me gracefully and well (applause). Coming home these Orange men met me, and they said, 'We will shake your hand (applause). We fought of old in Toronto, but we now want to shake your hand. We want to know another better, and to have a knowledge and also appreciation of our good points as well as our bad points—one of the other' (applause). 'The Archbishop of Toronto by his wisdom, his prudence, his knowledge of the people, and by his wondrous charity has done more for the industrial fraternal union which should exist among citizens living in the same country, and working for the same National rights—he has done more than any other man in Toronto or in Canada (applause). Therefore I shall go back and tell him of the magnificent reception I got here to-night, and I shall bear a message of joy and gladness and hope to the great Archbishop of Toronto (applause). I will say to him—'Yes, I have heard the voice of Ireland, and I think Ireland know how to do it now (applause). The Irish people are standing together, and they know their men, and the only thing we have to do is to back up the people of Ireland and in sorrow rank our foes and hope and ambition must not have the same—Home Rule for Ireland' (loud applause). My friends, I thank you most sincerely first for the kind invitation we have received, and also for the magnificent reception we have received at your hands (applause) we came amongst you (loud applause). Dean Harris, who has made a splendid impression both in Dublin and Belfast, followed. He said that he took his position upon the platform at the National Convention with a thoroughly unbiased mind, and with a determination to listen to the speakers and form his own conclusion. He saw around him men who had by his boyhood had learned to love—Michael Davitt (cheers)—the man who stood up to second the resolution pleading to England on behalf of those suffering in the penal fields of England. He saw Wm. O'Brien (cheers), and their illustrious chairman, John Dillon (renowned cheers). Of those men he had learned only by reading and hearing; but above all he saw a man who for fifty years had lived amongst them in Canada, who had been clear as the air to an archbishop, a man who had become the chairman of a great party, a man whose transcendent ability challenged the admiration of even neighbors across the line, the great American people, the Hon. Edward Blake (cheers). He looked at the man whose proof did they require that these men were honest? Father Ryan said, in his courteous and dignified manner, that he bore them a message from the city of Toronto. He (Dean Harris) perhaps was the only delegate that bore a message from the city of Toronto, and from the Catholics of St. Catharines and from the Orangemen of St. Catharines (cheers). At the great meeting which they held to elect our delegates they desired them to bear a message of kind regards, lower of kind lines, but no faction. How comes it that in the Dominion of Canada they find this kindly interchange of brotherly feeling? Two men who moulded public opinion determined years ago that they would do what in their eyes lay to emphasize and to translate into act the motto of our Divine Lord, 'Do unto others as you would they should do unto you' (cheers), and by social friction they had rubbed off the inequality of bigotry; so they found at day in both great parties—the Conservatives and the Liberal parties—they found Orangemen and Catholics standing shoulder to shoulder and fighting for the principles of those parties (cheers). He heard a great deal since he came there about disunion in Ireland, and the impression that was at the time left on his mind was that there more discussion in Ireland than in any part of the world. But that is not so. They all agreed on the advantage of Home Rule (cheers). But, my friends, until the hour of the party is displaced by an overwhelming majority every man is bound to stand by him (cheers). The Hon. John Costigan, who was received with loud and prolonged cheers, said Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I feel it a great honour indeed to be selected to lead the party in the coming night. I feel in an honour, because never in my life have I appeared before an audience exceeding this in influence and numbers (cheers). While it is an honour it is a great pleasure, for it affords me an opportunity of returning my sincere thanks to you, especially to the chairman, who so instrumentally in having us delegates from Canada and elsewhere, afforded the opportunity of visiting this fine city of Belfast (cheers). I assure you that when we said we would do our best to come in this great city we had no idea the people of Belfast were extended to the delegates such a reception as that which we have met. A Voice.—It was too little (cheers). The Hon. Mr. Costigan.—We feel it is more than Mr. Costigan (no, no). We accept this reception in the name of the people in whose name we come to visit you. We came to you from the four quarters of the globe, from nearly every country where Irish exiles are to be found and from nearly every part of the world where the descendants of Irishmen are to be found (cheers). You would not call me an Irishman (cries of 'Yes'), because I was not born in Ireland, I was born in Canada 64 years ago, and I say that I am as much an Irishman as any gentleman I see around me (cheers). I was born in Canada, as I said, but there is not a drop of blood in my body that is not as Irish as the blood of any other man representative of the descendants of Irish men abroad (cheers). From Canada, a young man, young people, blessed as it is with all the liberty a free country can command, we came to you to see why you should not enjoy the same system of government (cheers). I come from a country little in population but vast in territorial extent and resources (cheers). I come from the country which was the first in which a Parliament sent a greeting to you, and passed an address to her Majesty recommending Home Rule (cheers). I not only represent you as a country, but I also come to you to tell you of the good will to Irishmen of the world over, but as the bearer of a message to you, for I am the very man who moved that resolution in that Parliament (cheers). The gentlemen who preceded me have all done their best to come as the friends and intermediaries between your friends across the water and you at home (cheers). We come not committed to any section or any division or political party, but to the people of Ireland (cheers) and for the cause of Ireland (cheers). We were told that the Convention at Dublin was packed, and that it was a fraud (laughter). We were told that there was no one. I care not how it was organized, I exercise my common intelligence. I say, however, it was organized and produced—the result of the feelings of the people and of love of Ireland, but if I am contradicted, I say, on the evidence of my senses, that the influence that brought together that Convention was a strong, powerful, and influential influence, and that it was I say this—I am not going into the motives of the minority; I am not going into the reasons of those who refused to go into it; but I am going to say something that is the contrary, we say that we believe that the Convention is the voice of Ireland, the voice of Ireland in favor of Home Rule and unity (cheers). One part of our mission is to tell you that we are in Ireland, 'You are at unity' (cheers). You cannot expect us to bring back a message of hope or to fight your battles, unless you close up your own eyes (cheers), but the interpretation that there must be absolute union would afford a kind of preliminary to a few men who would stand in the way of union. We are prepared to give the liberal interpretation of the best of us, the people we return to will give the same interpretation, and that when you are practically united there will be no doubt about getting on together. We are prepared to take you in the past, and assistance and sympathy will flow as freely as ever before (cheers). We don't come to make suggestions as to how to obtain the object in view. The object in view is the best of us. I am proud that it has been my lot to visit Ireland once before I die (cheers) I love it better than ever (cheers). I have seen no doubt the brightest side of the picture, but I have seen it in every country; but I say that Ireland—and I thank God for it—is a country that deserves a better condition than the one which she now occupies, and to bring about that end—to bring about a better end and happier epoch in her affairs—what is necessary beyond all things is the power of making her own laws by her own people, in her own country (prolonged cheers). The part of returning thanks to the Nationalists of Belfast on behalf of the visiting delegates was entrusted to Rev. Father O'Donnell, of Montreal. He was received with loud and prolonged cheers. I am proud that it has been my lot to visit Ireland once before I die (cheers) I love it better than ever (cheers). I have seen no doubt the brightest side of the picture, but I have seen it in every country; but I say that Ireland—and I thank God for it—is a country that deserves a better condition than the one which she now occupies, and to bring about that end—to bring about a better end and happier epoch in her affairs—what is necessary beyond all things is the power of making her own laws by her own people, in her own country (prolonged cheers).
