Model Building Contains Comforts for Staff and Best Show Facilities

In connection with the show week which Toronto automobile dealers held during the week of Feb. 22-27, the Ford Company held the formal opening of their handsome and commodous new service plant at the corner of Dupont and Christle streets, and thruout the en-tire week large numbers have taken adthe week large numbers have taken ad-vantage of the opportunity to inspect the new home of Ford in Toronto. The construction of this building is of concrete, steel and brick, with ornamen-tation and cornice of glazed terra-cotta. This building is an excellent example of the latest design in rein-forced concrete construction, which is now becoming very popular in Toronto. One very interesting point about the construction of this plant is the fact that the walls do not in any way assist in the support of the floors, which were all set before the walls were built. The con-crete and steel columns form the sole Ast before the walls were built. The con-crete and steel columns form the sole support of the floors. Passing into the hallway, which is the west of the showroom, we find the well-appointed ladies' lunch room, which is provided so that the ladies on the staff may prepare their lunch with-out leaving the building. Immediately back of this room is the waiting-room for car owners, etc., and the office of service manager and superintendent, connected with which is the office of service clerks. The capacious garage occupies that part of the building back of the offices and extends to the north wall of the build-ing. Below the rear of the garage we find the engine room, which is a model. Here we find the heating apparatus, transformer and switchboard-room Go-ing up the rear stairs to the second floor we enter the loading and unloading room, which takes up the rear hall of this floor and with which is connected and the sured for heating avait. The most up-to-date appliances and machinery are used to enable the repair department to execute repairs in the shortest possible time and at the same time with accuracy and precision. The fourth floor is left for assembling and makes an excellent temporary moving picture theatre, where the latest Ford films were exhibited during the show week. On the fifth floor we find a light, well-ventilated and up-to-date paint shop. To complete the inspection, we will go to the roof of a tiled area, over which cars may be driven for testing purposes. Car owners and employes have been given every consideration, and every de-tall and each piece of equipment testi-fies to this fact. Altho this last week was a special show

BUSINESS BEAMS

New Play to Be Given at the Royal Alexandra.

Welcome to theatregoers is the news of the return of Miss Percy Haswell, who with a replenished repertoire and her ever-abundant exuberance and vitality will begin her season's engagement at the Royal Alexandra this week, when she will appear in the tragical and gripping drama, "Trifling With Tomorrow," fresh from the strong pen of Frank Mandel. The play was tried out in San Francisco, where it ran for two weeks, and will get its premier performance in Canada when presented by Miss Haswell on Monlav evening

"You don't feel the war here nearly as much as they do in the south," Miss Haswell told The World. "Down there the cotton is lying decaying in the fields and all along the railroads. The farmers had borrowed on their crops before they were grown and before war came. Now there's no call for cotton and no cash and things are really in a very bad state. Here things are so different. Business beams all over this place."

SUNDAY MORNING

The law states plainly that "No public laundry work shall be done in a room used for a sleeping or living-room." This is to protect Public Health, and is necessary because the vitiated air from sleeping human beings carries with it un-pleasant, harmful, and, in some cases, DANGEROUS germs.

Now think a moment of some of the Chinese Laundries you can see in every section of Toronto. Many of them are tumble-down 2 or 3-roomed dwellings, too old to be fit for human habitation. These places are TOO SMALL for it to be POSSIBLE to carry out the law's intention. How can from three to six Chinese inhabitants live, eat, and sleep in these buildings in quarters ENTIRELY SEPARATED from the working-rooms? Isn't it a ridiculous supposition?

9 Would you believe that on Yonge Street there is a Chinese Laundry where the sleeping room is merely a roughly partitioned-off corner of the working room, and that in another the sleeping room is a par-titioned-off section between the working room and the front of the laundry, the partition being without doors and not reaching to the ceiling? Imagine your woolen underwear, the most absorbent of all materials, being exposed to the air from these sleeping quarters? Do you care to run the risk? 1 million is 9 This is not a philanthropic or a "knocking" campaign. Our object is to create more business for Canadian Laundries by showing the public what Chinese Laundries really are, and we believe Toronto will eventually follow the lead of many other communities in refusing to tolerate the continuance of non-productive and health-endangering Celestial Laundries.

Richardson of the 9th Battery, C.F.A., stated to The World that Toronto was a wonderful centre for recruiting artillerymen. He pointed out that a six-gun battery went from this city with the first contingent, and are now at the front. Two batteries from here are now at Exhibition Park, ready for the word to start overseas, and in addition, the ammunition section of 200, also for the second contingent, was en-rolled in Toronto. Two of the officers of the 9th Battery, C.F.A., have just feturn-ed from attendance at the Royal Military Institute at Kingston. They are : Lieut. E P. Johnston, adjutant, and his bro-ther, Lieut, F. G. Johnston. Both of them took a special artillery course and passed the examination successfully.

One think which the week in the legislature has abundantly demon-strated to the public is that the new Ontario administration does not lack a vigor and virility of expression. The new broom is sweeping clean in the initial legislation being brought down It is a seldem that a new government the entering on its first working ses-sion is called upon to institute so radical and far-reaching a measure as that of the ware tax which applies allke forcibly to every householder or breadwinner in the province. It is launched by the government from pa-tering and the the ball of the source and the province and the source and the source as the torthe ware tax which applies is the torthe ware tax which applies is the torthe ware tax which applies that the province. collected to form a fund for the relief of those suffering in Great Britain and Belgium. Provision s thus made for future contributions of nearly two millions to supplement the gifts al-ready sent. A levy will be made against citles and towns directly, and fu an equalized assessment will obtain in counties. To derive immediate bene-fit from the tax which is collectible late in the year, the province will bor-row two millions on its strength, and Ontario will not be long in going again to the aid of the motherland.

The levy was announced as inspired thru generosity and patriotism. On-tario's opportunity to make her name as a prop of empire could not be ne-glected. To emphasize the spirit of sacrifice it was made plain that the families of those men who have answered the call to the colors would be relieved of any share in the new obligation. obligation.

Another fact established in the de-bating arena during the week shows that a strong man elevated to a gov-ernment bench can retain his valuable eriment bench can retain his valuable qualities, and hew his way from the very time of his accession. Not in h everal years has a voice thundered if forth from the treasurer's seat with such dominant passion and straight-arm delivery as that which dis-tinguished the arraignment of demur-ring insurance officials by Hon. Thos-McGarry, the new guardian of public moneys. As a member on the floor h moneys. As a member on the floor the Renfrew man has always been known as a hard hitter who placed his blows well. His defence of ministers of the gos-pel who in last June stood by their pel who in last June stood by their convictions irrespective of party sym-pathy, and voted according to the temperance policy hatched in eccless-astical councils long before it attained any political significance, was marked with a sincerity that inspired confi-

The Windsor member made it plain tha the was not a "hide-bound parti-san. He claimed a strain of independ-ence which was manifested in his un-qualified approval of the new war tax. He brings to the little party to the left of the speaker a speaking ability that will be welcomed there and appreci-ated by those sitting opposite.

According to expectations the truce has practically dissolved. The prelim-inary greetings well over the house was straightened out into well-defined lines. Apart from purely patriotic measures every move of the govern-ment finds the critics at the fiank. The budget debate has already lasted four days and the respective leaders have yet to measure swords over its contents. contents.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Count Vladimir, de la fitz de Pelleport, aged 59 years, and one of the oldest volunteers in the French army, died at Heiboroun, Wur-temourg, Aug. 27, from wounds re-ceived in fighting at Sarrebourg, Aug. 15. His family has just made public some of the letters written after his incorporation in the army. On Aug. 1 the bells of the little VH-fage of Childde, in the department of Nievre, sounded the toosin, and the ohateau to learn the cause. Returning shortly afterward he met the people ("All of you return homes," he said "All of you return homes," he said "all of you return homes," he said "at a certificate from the mayor, he went to Autun the following day and energetically resisting the objec-tions of the recruiting officers and the examining surgeon, enlisted as a pri-vate soldler. And what is there in the sport ine that appeals to a red-blooded man more than a boxing contest be-tween boys of recognized skill and reputation? Philadeiphia can bid ten thousand dollars for Kilbane and Williams to box six rounds. But the match-makers of big Madison Square Gar-den, with seven million people to draw from can't even think in figures that high for a ten round bout be-tween the same boys. Is it any won-der that boxing is not flourishing here as it should? Why, a man can see better bouts in almost any medium sized middle western city than in Gotham—and at prices that would make local promoters drop in a faint.

While Mitchie has not been seen in the ring in public but once since los-ing the title to Freddy, and therefore may not be at his highest speed, the crowd can depend that he will give them a good run for their money. He is already down near the weight he will have to make for the Weish match, and will enter the ring a fine-ity trained athlete. Ritchie's ambition is to get back his title, and as there is little chance to do that from a clever boy like Weish in a ten-round bout, he is working with the sole idea of making such a showing against the champion in the coming bout that the public will de-mand that Weish meet him in a longer one. one

ASARINI, the clever Futurist, who has made it his business—or an impertant part of his business to study femininity, thinks that there is a needless amount of debate as to the "sphere" of woman. The whole matter is settled in his mind. "Woman has a sphere and a mission," he says. "Her mission is not always what men say it is, or what she herself thinks it is. Simply stated, her mission is to decorate life. "Fancy for a moment a world without the ornament of woman's art—the art of her hair, the art of her physical beauty, the art of her clothes. How stupid it would be, how unthinkable. "Yes, I know that man once was the highly decorated animal, and you know what the world was then. Civilization really dates from the time when women became the decorative element. Man's clothes now are not 'dress' at all. His clothes are a uniform. He has obliterated decoration. Why? Because he doesn't like it? O, no! The yearning is still strong in him. His real reason is the wish and the artistic need to emphasize HER. It isn't a sacrifice, because he enjoys it. His clothes are the low-tuned obbligato to her. She is the melody, he is the accompaniment.

"In this picture," added Casarini, indicating the water-color drawing reproduced on this page, "you get the idea. His straight, blocky lines and sombre, colorless clothes, bring out her curves and riot of color. She is the poetry of life, he the science. It is not whimsical to put it so. This is a high need, an imperative requirement of a tolerable existence. That she ever should make the mistake of overlooking her obligation is as intolerable as that he should sometimes decry her beautiful expression.

"Of course there always will be people who will insist that clothes are merely for utility. Foolishness. Even a man—and certainly a woman—on a desert island would think of clothes as something more than mere covering. In human society clothes become a language. The rashest objector will be found following either a present or a past fashion—talking the clothes language of his kind. Not to do so is to be misunderstood, to be separated. In this language women have charge of the elegances. It is she who adds the higher beauty. It is she who adds the whimsical. Whatever finay be said of her sense of humor, she has a keen sense of humor as to clothes. She grasps the art value, the diversity and surprise value of the whimsical—never committing the absurdity of taking clothes solemnly as so many men do."

No one who talks with the impulsive Futurist can doubt his sincerity. Life to him is a picture. To those who do not look on life as a picture the case unquestionably is different; how different each must decide for himself—and herself.

THE importance of calcium in the human dietary is discussed in a recent article by O. Loew, who urges the desirability of supplying this element, when needed, as an ingredient in bread, The author states that only those adults who use milk and vegetables in abundance secure a sufficient amount of calcium, while those who eat much meat and get their carbohydrates in the form of bread, potatoes and beer do not. The amount of calcium in the diet appears to be related to certain path-ological conditions, such as arterioselerosis. It is proposed to use in bread making calcium chloride and a commercial preparation called "cal-citarin," made from rye flour and calchloride

Mr. Loew thinks it more practice add calcium to fine flour than to tempt to persuade the public to ad whole-grain bread.

STRONG situation, sir, very strong - quite the A strongest one in the play. in fact."

The Red Lamp

"What play?" said a voice from the bottom of the long chair under the bulwarks.

"The Red Lamp." "Oh!"

Conversation ceased and there was an industrious sucking of cheroots for space of half an hour before the company adjourned to the card room. It was decidedly a night for sleeping on deck-warm as the Red Sea and more moist than Bengal. Unfortunately every square foot of the deck seemed to be occupied by earlier comers. and in despair I removed myself to the extreme fo'c'sle, where the anchor chains churn rust dyed water from the hawse holes and the lascars walk about with slushpots.

The throb of the engines reached this part of the world as a muffled breathing which might be easily mistaken for the snoring of the ship's cow. Oc-casionally one of the fowls in the coops waked and cheeped dismally as she thought of tomorrow's entrees in the saloon, but otherwise all was very, very still, for the hour was 2 in the morning, when the orew of a ship are not disposed to be lively. None came to bear me company save the bo'sun's pet kittens, and they were impolite. From where I lay I could look over the whole length of awning, ghostly white in the dark, and by its constant futtering judged that the ship was pitching up and down like an uneasy hydraulic lift, and a few showers of spray found their passage thru the hawse holes from time to time.

Have you ever felt that maddening sense of incompetence which follows on watching the work of another man's office? The civilian is at home among his despatch boxes and files of pending cases. "How in the world does he do it?" asks the military man.

The budding officer can arrange for the movements of 200 men across country. "Incomprehensible!" says the civilian. And so it is with all alien employs from our own. So it was with me. I knew that I was lying among all the materials out of which Clark Russell builds his books of the sea-the rush thru the night, the gouts of foam, the singing of the wind in the rigging overhead, and the black mystery of the water-but for the life of me I could make nothing of them all.

> "A topsail royal flying free, A bit of canvas was to me, And it was nothing more."

"Oh, that a man should have but one poor little life and one incomplete set of experiences to crowd into it!" 'I sighed as the bells of the ship lulled me I slept far into the night, for the clouds gathered over the sky, the stars died out and all grew as black as pitch. But we never slackened speed; we beat the foam to left and right with clanking of chains, rattling of bowports and savage noises of ripping and rending from the cutwater ploughing up to the luminous sea blasts. I was roused by the words of the man in the smoking-room: "A strong situation, sir, very strongquite the strongest one in the play, in fact; "The Red Lamp,' y' know.' " I thought over the sentence lazily for a time and then-surely there was a red lamp in the air somewhere, an intolerable glare that singed the shut eyelids. I opened my eyes and looked forward. The lascar was asleep, his face bowed on his knees, tho he ought to have been roused by the hum of a rapidly approaching city, by the noises of men and women talking and laughing and drinking. I could hear it not half a mile away. It was strange that his cars should be closed. The night was so black that one could hardly breathe; and yet where did the glare from the red lamp come from? not from our ship-she was silent and asleep. The officers on the bridge were asleep: there was no one of 400 souls awake but myself. And the glare of the red lamp went up to the zenith. Small wonder. A quarter of a mile in front of us rolled a big steamer under full steam and she was heading down on us without a word of warning. Would the lookout man never look out? Would their crew be as fast asleep as ours? It was impossible, for the other ship hummed with nopulous noise and there was the defiant tinkle of a plano rising above all. Sho should have altered her course or blown & foghorn. I held my breath while an eternity went ty, counted out by the throbbing of my heart and the engines. I knew that it was my duty to call, but I knew also that no one could hear me. Moreover, I was intensely interested in the approaching catastrophe: interested, you will understand, as one whom it did in no wise concern. By the light of the luminous sea thrown forward in sheets under the forefcot of the advancing steamer I could discern the minutest details of the structure from cathead to bridge. Abaft the bridge she was crowned with merrymakers-seemed to be, in fact, a P. & O. vessel given up to a ball. I wondered as I leaned over the bulwarks what they would say when the crash came-whether they would shrick very loudly-whether the men and women would try to rush to our decks or whether we would rush on to theirs. It would not matter in the least. for at the speed we were driving both vessels would go down together locked thru the deeps of the sea-It occurred to me then that the sea would be cold and that instead of choking decently I might be one in a mad rush for the boats-might be crippled by a falling spar or wrenched plate and left on the heeling decks to die. Then terror came to me+-fear, gross and overwhelming as the bulk of the night-despair unrelieved by a single ray of hope. We were not fifty yards apart when the passengers on the steamer caught sight of us and shricked aloud. I saw a man pick up his child from one of the benches and futilely attempt to climb the rigging. Then we closed-her nameplate ten feet above ours, looking down into our fore hatch. The ponies grunted as they felt the raking spurs. They knew that an all-night gallop lay before them, and woe betide the luckless cayuse that stumbled in that ride. Then tell the hall—blinding and choking and flogging in one and the same stroke. The herd opened like a fan. The red steer headed a con-tingent he knew not whither. A man with a whip rode at his right flank. Behind him the lightning showed a field of glimmering horns, and cf muzzles flecked with foam; a field of red terror strained eyes and shaggy frontlets. Then, being only an overworked cayuse, Whiskey Peat fell and the red steer fancied that there was something soft on the ground. It was Michigan, Jim and Lafe who at last brought the herd to a standstill as the dawn was breaking. "What's come to the Corpse?" quoth Lafe. Jim loosened the girths of his quivering pony and made answer slowly: "Onless I'm a blamed fool the gentle-man is now livin' up to his durfed appellation 'bout fiteen miles back—what there is of him and the cay-use." "Let's go and look," said Lafe, shuddering slightly, for the morning air, you must understand, was raw. Let's go to—a much hotter place than Texas," responded Jim. An Under-Sea Attack as the Submarine Sees It

Vivid Description of a Dramatic Moment in Modern Warfare, by Baron Hrolf von Dewitz, Formerly of the Danish Navy, Who Reveals the Marvellous Detail of the Deadly Mechanism of Destruction.

THAT modernism in war has produced a realm of terrible enchantment will be the acknowledgment of the lay reader of Baron Hrolf von Dewitz's contribution to the literature of the world's greatest conflict, "War's New Weapons." With full technical equipment for such a task the author combines a gripping power of visualization, a gift that is of the highest value in making a general appeal. The magical things-the demons and genii of science-that work the earth, in the air, on the sea and under the waters, all are described with ample authority and high descrip-tive color. The author tells his stories both from within and without. Hudson Maxim, in reading the advance sheets of the work, gave this testimony: "You have a masterful knowledge of military tactics and the philosophy of warfare." Baron von Dewitz was educated at the Royal Naval Academy, the Nautical College and the Royal University at Copenhagen, and is a retired officer of the line in the Danish navy. He was a member of the Nansen expedition to Greenland in 1888, and military observer, commissary agent and mobilization officer in the Spanish-American and the Russo-Japanese wars. With Lieut. E. R. Scott he is co-inventor of the torpedo outfit for aeroplanes. The description of submarine attack is given by special arrangement with Dodd, Mead&Co., publishers, and nothing written thus far concerning the sea terrors, even by men in contact with the reality or first hand information from the field of war, has surpassed this vivid picture of one of these great modern naval tragedies.

The chief gunner stands in the torpedo breech, in the prow, clasping the central hand wheel. A filing of this wheel and all the torpedoes dart away simultaneously. Other men stand by other wheels, commanding port and starboard torpedoes for single shots. The quartermaster is posted at the wheel control of the horizontal rudders, intent on gauges showing the inclination degree and depth level of the craft. His movements are curbed to the fraction of an inch; he works as carefully and minutely as a jeweler-an awkward move of the wheel means disaster to all hands. Shoulder to shoulder with the com-

> HE haze of early dawn broods over Marye the harbor. A pale and chilly sunrise peeks cautiously over the Friesian dunes. outlining the crags of the island fortress crested with cannon. Slowly the pale beams filter thru the vaporous curtain, lifting a cover in places like a housewife making up her bed. The sea sleeps calm and frigid, like a great, undulating jelly sealed under a blanket of haze. The stillness is oppres-

BARON HROLF VON DEWITZ sive. ominous.

It is broken at intervals, but not relieved by gruff, muffled thuds from the inner harbor-from the dim, hidden distance of warlike mystery and menace. Were it not for the portly, Fubicund buoys that gasp and cough their warning notes, swaying lazily in the tide, one would fancy a school of sea dors barking a salute to the sun.

Beyond the cordon of buoys, a row of painted poles sail in the inlet marking the channel that is loaded with anchor mines. The poles are bobbing gently up and down like floats in some giant's fishing tackle-

One of the poles seemed to be drifting away from the line. It is of dark grey color. Curiously enough, it moves against the tide, leaving a thin, keen wake of froth, and is lost to view in the haze. Faster and faster the pole travels; sharper and sharper waxes the wake.

Commander of the Terror.

Under the runaway pole, hidden safely below the sleeping Surface, stands a man in a conning tower. His eye is glued to a periscope. To the right and left are speaking tubes. dials, gauges and levers. He is the commander of that muchdreaded of all naval craft, the submarine, the stiletto of the high seas.

Except for the intense drone of the electric motor there is no sound within the steel skin of the great mechanical fish. There is no splashing of water against the sides, no waya motion, only the tremendous pressure of the occan depths, and the "crusher" gauge shows it.

Back in the stern is the chief engineer, with his assistants, standing by the switches and levers, cocks and valves. This is a "split-second" crew, ready on the instant to stop or reverse the motors, to disconnect them altogether or start the gasoline engines in place of them, to blow out or force water into the ballast tanks, to draw oxygen 'and expel carbonic gases, to load storage batteries, to tend compressors, to watch pressures in pistons and chambers, to make quick repairs when necessary-to do more engineering and do it efficiently, in the smallest and compactest engine-room ever devised, than was ever done before.

Conversation is forbidden. Martial discipline governs every action. Speech is reduced to words spoken in the performance of duty. The electric lights are so arranged that the tools and appliances needed are distinctly visible. 'Everything is in its proper place, from the potash cartridge chamber that absorbs the foul air to the refuse ejector that blows waste out into the water.

At the ear of every man is a speaking tube. From the officer in the turret comes an occasional command-a wheel is turned, a lever is moved, a switch is thrown-and the big mechanical fish continues its daring course, gliding thru hostile depths dotted with floating mines and ploughed by, the swift forefoot of a hundred cruisers whose smallest gun could send the dauntless diver to the bottom with a single shot.

Sighting its Prev.

Availing itself of the haze, the submarine ventures to the surface and runs awash at its cruising speed of 16 knots until the enemy's coast heaves in sight, when the course is laid northeast. At six bells in the afternoon the lookout at the omniscope signals a fleet of fishing smacks on the port bow. The helm is laid down, and the big mechanical fish bears down upon the dowsed smacks. The haze has cleared . On the fringe of the horizon is a spot, a dark spot, getting ever darker and bigger. With his binoculars fixed in the periscope the officer gleans the blurred outline of three large funnels belching black smoke.

There is a sharp command. The gas engine stops. The speaking tubes commence to rattle with words of commandsharp, precise, staccato-answered by the quick, "Aye, aye, sir!" of the crew.

The commander takes an observation, the distance between the enemy is measured mathematically, the course is laid by compass, the rate of speed is timed to the distance, there is a rapid inspection of all gears-and the final dive is ordered.

Sinking for Attack.

The engine tube speaks. At once the electric motors strike up, sending the craft on its course. The trimming tank tubes speak and hand wheels are set spinning as the forward tanks blow their ballast. .. The quartermaster has already clasped his wheel. The tube talks and he digs in with a gleam in his

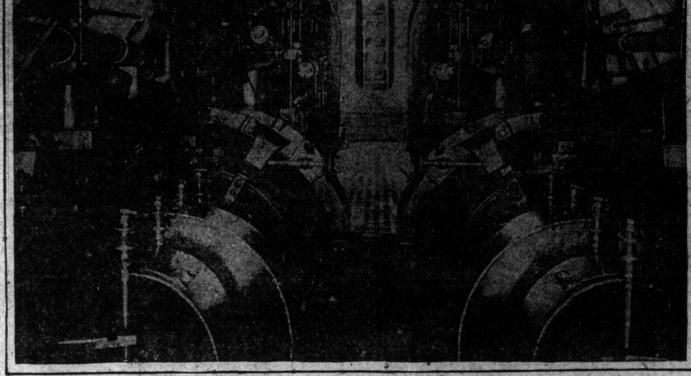

The dial of the inclinometer shows how smartly he is pointing the craft on its downward dive. The cnief gunner is at his post in the torpedo breech. Presently his tube speaks. He spins a small wheel, a piston snaps with a hollow thud, and the warhead of the torpedo chamber clicks into fighting trim, pointing three savage-looking missiles at the enemy.

And thus, to the hum of throbbing motors, punctuated by snapping pistens, speaking tubes croaking with commands, the war-head gleaming with torpedoes at the ready, the mechan-ical fish plunges thru the foaming brine downward to its fighting level of 20 feet below the surface, bearing down upon an enemy it cannot see with uncanny precision-relentless, irrestible.

Avdiling itself of the fishing fleet as a screen, the sub-marine is able to take one more peek over the surface without being detected by the enemy, which develops to be a superdreadnought.

The experienced eye of the commander observes at a glance that he shall miss his target unless—the emergency command rings out; "Starboard helm! Forward trim!"

The submarine destroyer swerves from its courso, rising at the same time to a somewhat higher level. By this manoeuvre her commander hopes to cut the course of the immeasurably swifter dreadnought, and intercept her before she can pass. "Port torpedo-ready!" rings the tube.

Interior of a Modern Submarine, Showing the Large Amount of Space Occupied by the Engines and the Limited Space the Crew Have in Which to Move About.

A great, monstrous shadow comes bearing down upon the little craft. With incredible swiftness it approaches, seemi-ing almost to draw the craft toward it with the suction of its nacing bottom.

The plunging bilge keels are visible now. A collision means death, not only to the dreadnought, but to the destroyer as well.

Just as the great armored ram of the ponderous hull, rip; ping thru the foam, gaunt and grim with barnacles, seems to aim a death blow at the little craft, the main tube in the torpedo breech screams: "Fe-eu-rrr!

A hand wheel spins, pistons click in the war-head, there is a hollow pop as of a huge cork being pulled, and a glittering torpedo, charged with superheated energy, darts out, cutting the brine at a mile-a-minute clip.

Submarine distance is always deceptive; the dreadnough, is fully a cable length away.

"Starboard torpedo-ready-Fire!" follows the command. But before the second missile can cut the water there is a thunderous explosion. The whole forefoot of the huge war-ship is lifted clean out of the water.

Before its yawning freeboard is buried in the swirling foam the second torpedo knocks a hole amidships, exploding her magazines with the roar of an erapting volcano.

magazines with the roar of an erapting volcano. The huge leviathan of armor plate and the giant gur, fleet as a scout, strong as a fort, representing $12,000,000 in the mint of the realm, and 900 lives in human flesh and bone, has been scrambled into a horrible, tottering wreck—steam whis-tles screaming for help, boilers exploding like a field of mines, flames bursting from hatches, masts snapping in two, monster cannon rousing their turrets overboard, the crew jammed like squealing rats in a hundred traps, lashed by jets of scalding steam, the scuppers oozing blood like the nostrils of a wounded buil.

In short, a capital ship, the pride of the ravy, has been vanquished by a small marauding craft, looking very like a mechanical fish; a little marine toy, a poor skate of a craft, engineered by a boat's load of dare-devils, the joke of navat messrooms, and sometimes derisively referred to as the, "tin sardine."

THE street life of London is modifled nowadays to some extent. but it is safe to say that there is no phase of it more completely lacking than that pictured harewith. These German "gutter bands" - were far more pretentious in their aspirations than their Canadian prototypes. They always carried a full supply of music with them, and folding music stands, and were capable of offering a very decent program. They had definite routes and could be counted on to appear at certain times as regularly as the postman.

Germans, of any calling would be extremely conspicuous at present in London, and these men are not there. They are without doubt wearing uniforms and furnishing martial music to their prothers in arms,

When the patron enters a new restaurant he is likely to look about him with an appraising eye. It is a new nut to crack and from its shell he seeks to learn of the kernal of which he is to eat. He might better look at the waiter, and, even then, much of the matter rests with himself. If he has the appearance of a tight-wad he might better tip in advance or find some way of letting the aproned one know that he intends to loosen, for, while he has been looking over the place, he may be sure that the waiter has not overlooked him. He has been weighed in the balance, and woe unto his stomach and palate if he has been found wanting.

WIT AND WISDOM OF A TWELFTH-CENTURY IEW By JOSEPH BEN MEIR IBN ZABARA.

Joseph Ben Meir Ibn Zabara was a famous Jewish philosopher, traveller and writer, who lived in Barcelona in the latter half of the twelfth century, a time when all Europe was keenly acquir-ing the learning of the Arabs and that has been called the Golden Age of Jewish Thought. His book, the Sepher Shaashuim, or "Book of Delight," is a storehouse of mediaeval lore. - It has just been published by the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, from the original manuscripts, and the following anecdotes and proverbs are culled therefrom:

MAN said to a sage, "Thop braggest of thy wiedom, but it came from me." "Yes," replied the sage, "and it forgot its way back."

Said a king to a sage, "Sweet would be a king's reign if it lasted forever." "Had such been your predecessor's lot," replied the wise man, "how would you have reached the throne?" A man laid a complaint before the king; the latter drove the suppliant out with violence. "I entered with one complaint," sighed the man: "I leave with two."

A bore visited a sick man. "What ails thee?" he asked. "Thy presence," said the sufferer. A man of high lineage abused a wise man of lowly birth., "My lineage is a blot on me," retorted the sage; "thou art a blot on thy lineage." To another who reviled him for his lack of noble ancestry, he retorted, "Thy noble line ends with thes, mine begins with me."

Diogenes and Dives were attacked by robbers. "Woe is me." said Dives. "If they recognize me." "Woe is me," said Diogenes, "if they do not recognize me." A philosopher sat by the target at which the archers were shooting. "It is the safest spot," . said he.

Death is the dread of the rich and the hope of the poor. An Arab's brother, died. "Why did he die?" one asked, "Because he lived," was the answer. "What has thou laid up for the cold weather?" they asked a poor fellow. "Shivering," he answered. A dolt sat on a stone--"Lo, a blockhead on a block," said the passerby.

Which is the most beautiful of the beasts? Woman. Rather a wise enemy than a foolish friend. Not every one who flees escapes; not every one who begs has need.

A dwarf brought a complaint to his king. "No one." said the king, "would hurt such a pigmy." "But," retorted the dwarf, "my injurer is smaller than Lam." Take measure for this life as though thou wilt live forever; prepare for the next world as though thou diest tomorrow. All things grow with time except grief. Which cover fits man best? The grave.

Do not swallow-poison because you know an antidote. Endurance spells success, covetousness deprives men of peace, knowledge will make thee master over fate, passion will make thee her slave.

New York Herald and The London Sphere, describes the incident in the following terms: "It was a very desolate scene in northern France. During a recon-naissance we met a wrecked armored automobile, which appeared to be abandoned. After the first glance, however, we noticed dead bodies all around the car, and inside, in the tra-veling fortress, three dead French soldiers and one wounded. It is from the latter that I got the following de-scription: 'We were running along a frightfully muddy road when our front tire burst. We stopped to re-pair it, and while at work a German patrol suddenly attacked us. It was impossible to retreat, so we imme-diately determined to give battle. Then for a whole hour we continued the heroic struggle. The reception of the Germans was so hot that they could not approach the car without being killed. All this time no help came. The Germans began to creep up to the car. Three of my comrades were killed and I was repidly failing; I fired at the last remaining German and then fainted. The moving fort was safe, and help came_unfortu-hately, only for me.'" Mr. Thiriat's picture shows the unequal duel at its height.

★ boatload of the survivors of H.M.S. Formidable were landed at Lyme Regis. One of the crew, W. S. Cowan, A.B., was placed on the floor of the hotel, believed to have died from exposure, all efforts to restore him having apparently failed. All he had on was a thin pair of pants and a vest, and he had passed thru all his terrible experience in this meagre dress for about 22 hours. As he lay there unconscious, attention of course, being concentrated on those who showed any signs of life, the dog "Lassie" came on the scene and laid alongside Cowan's body, displaying uneasiness and whining, and began licking the lad's face. At the expiration of 30 minutes a movement of the body and signs of joy on the part of the dog attracted the notice of one of the attendants. The warmth of the dog's body against Cowan's heart and the constant licking of his face had induced circulation. Willing assistance was immediately forthcoming and in a few minutes Cowan revived and sat up. There is little doubt that "Lassie's" action saved the seaman's life.

But of the Grasp That the Spirit of the Day Has Taken Upon the Imagination of the Toronto University Student. BY CYRIL GREY. STORY teaches that when nations begin to resound with the clash of arms one of the first insti-ns to suffer is the university. There is no graduating class which does not contain its quota of weak-lings—men who have been smothered in their quest for learning, whose lives have been dwarfed by too close tions to suffer is the university. Someone of quick vision has said that universities and libraries have their dangers; that they are careless mothers and often smother as many babes as they rear. This is quite true. There is no graduating cleas which student are more happily placed. Their yearly courses are clearly-chiselled steps to carry them to their goal. The degree marks a stage of real impor-tance in their progress Graduation to them means apprenticeship completed to the arts man it means apprentice ship begun.

A Problem to Face

Here, then, is where the problem be gins to work on the many minds which yearly face it, and it is the ultimate attitude acquired that causes most of the trouble. There is the man who says "Well, it's to my interest to make says "Well, it's to my interest to make the most possible out of these four years, and to develop steadily." He does it by becoming an all-round man, a credit to the university, and the best product of modern higher education. His fellow, however tacks off on another course He exploits all the many channels of diversion which are offered, potters a little in this field offered, potters a little in this field and dabbles a little in that. None of his attempts are serious enough to lead him much beyond "a safe puss" in any year, and perhaps a respectable owing on graduation. He says to himself, "Weil, here are four years that I have to put in. guess I can make - the time pass pleasantly enough." Any serious hought of the future he shelves until the time comes.

And yet when that time does come he faces the same proposition as his more serious-minded associate, and but little worse off as to equipment. They are all alike novices facing the world. This is the moment when the "babe" of the university is most liable to feel that he has been "smothered" by his Alma Mater.

These things are being thought upon in college halls today. The graduates of 1915 may prove a more sanely-philosophical aggregation than their predecessors. Certainly environment and circumstances would warrant it. Those of 1916 will be even more dis-tinguished in this regard.

The drone has been gradually dis-appearing from university life. The keen minds which have battled in the Hets of learning will be seizing with a new avidity on the problems of prac-tical life, and the country stands to

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

.For a long time I have been in love with a boy who is also in love with me. One night I asked him to my house, and he accepted the invitation. Without letting me know he could not come, he never appeared. One flight later I met him at the rink, and he asked me to skate with him, but I refused.

Up. I still love him dearly and pine for him day and night. What shall I do to bring him back to me? Don't tell me to let things take their course—I only hope my lover will come back to me. L. H.

You haven't very much pride, have you L. H.? Your "lover," as you call him, certainly does not love you very much. Why should you love him? If a man humiliates you in such a fash-ion, you certainly are silly to give him another thought. Brace up and stop "pining day and night." Take an interest in other things besides a man who has proved himself so thoughtless and so discourteous. ANNUE LAUREE.

ANNIE LAURIE.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am keeping company with six note young men—one for each werning. They all seem to love me very much, but I don't know which one I love best. They are all fair and all are about 20 years old I, myself, am 30. One of them asked me to marry him—he is the one I like best. So i told him my age, thinking it would make a difference to him, but no, he said that didn't matter in the least. Should I marry him?

GoodNESS, gracious, Bridget, you certainly are running a kin-dergarten. Don't you think it is very silly for a woman of your age to be out every night in the week with a different boy so much younger than you? As for the idea of marrying even the one you like best, and the one to whom 10 years difference in ages seems to make no difference, don't think of it if you value your happiness and his. If you like him even the least little bit, save him from what would most certainly turn out to be a most un-happy marriage appy marriage-

WELL, Miss Anxious, I do not think that you are as anxious as you are piqued at not being able to announce "the day" to your friends in your office. The young man might have been rather short in his answer when you seemed to be trapping him into naming the day, but remember, little girl, that while it is considered the girl's privilege to fix the date for an event which means so much to her, the man resents any appearance of being urged. However, I do not think that there has been any harm done. He either wants you or he does not, He either wants you or he does not, and if not he has no right in mon-opolizing your company. If your just let the matter rest, I think that it will all come out right. ANNEE LAUREE.

Now he pesses me on the street and doesn't even speak to me, but looks as if he wanted to. I don't know the reason for this. I want to speak to him but don't know whether it is right for me to do so. How can I regain his friend-ship without making it too plain that I want to do so? WORRIED. DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: WORRIED.

DEAR Leffie, why don't you have a straightforward talk with your employer? If you know him well enough to have dinner with him, and go out mo-toring with him, you certainly know him well enough to have a frank talk. Tell him that you like him, tell him that you do not want to leave his employ, and tell him that you are em-ployed to do your work, and that work only. WORK THIS PUZZLE!

I am fourteen years old, and some of the boys speak to me on the street. Do you think that I am too young to stand and talk to them as I do? Kit.

F I were you, Kit, I would speak pleasantily to such boys as I knew and wanted to speak as I knew and wanted to speak to on the street, or wherever I chanced to meet them, but as for standing and holding long conversations on the street, I would not. It isn't considered nice no mat-ter if you are fourteen or twenty-four. Remember that you are only a little girl yet. After two or three more more when you let your hair in girls' society.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of sixteen, and am invited out quite often to at-homes, and little affairs like that. I chum with five girls, all of whom are a year or two older than I, but I am taller than they. There but I am taller than they. There are also four or five boys with whom we go around, and each girl has the bunch at her home for an evening. My mother does not approve of my going out as I never get back until 11 or 12 o'clock, and my mother wants me to be home at 10 o'clock. Now there is not much use of going unless one cen stay later than that, and I don't like to be the first to leave every time. Do you think it is right for me to stay out that late? I am in company of which my parents approve. I out that iste? I am in company of which my parents approve. "The very first thing I noticed was that New York audiences do not consider going to the theatre such a state occasion as do Londoners. There are fewer men in evening dress, and only a few of the women, even in the boxes, wear low-cut evening gowns. In London, evening dress is almost compulsory, wear low-cut evening gowns. In London, evening dress is annot comparely don't y' know. "Then there is another point;; audiences here are far younger than ours. They not only look younger—they are younger. Even your famous men, who have been pointed out to me, look younger than our famous men. The people are a youthful race, even in age they are youthful, and they take their theatre-going as part of their youthful enjoyment. To me they never seem to take it seriously, rather joyously, and as a part of the fun of living. "As the Coster said when he beheld a view of New York's skyline at a penny movie: 'Hit ayn't real, no hit ayn't.' When I look out and see the youth of the audiences I feel much as he would feel. Fanny Crosby, the blind hymn writ-er, who died recently, was the author of over 8000 hymns which have been sung in Protestant churches thruout the world. In fact her contributions were so numerous that hymn book publishers gave her 200 different pen names in order to make it appear that the hymns were the work of other authors authors.

One of the nicest vocal recitals of the senson was that given by pupils of Edgar Fowliston at the Toronto Conservatory of Music last Thursday svening, when those singing were Edith St. George, Freda Manning, Leslie J. Hughes Charles Mereland, Kathieen Johnson, Hazel Thurston and Holly Whitking. The program was uncommonly well chosen and included songs and arias by Schumann, Strauss, Gounod, Mendelesohn, Handel, Arditi, Konsid, German and Finden, and quar-tets by Hatten Sulfivan and Pinsuti . . .

Hasel Workman of St. Joseph's Academy, Lindsay, gave her gradua-tion recital at the Toronto College of Music on Monday evening. In the following program this young student displayed brilliant technic and execu-tive gower that promise well for her future as a planist: Bach, Prelude and Fugue in C Minor; Beethoven, Sonata, Op. 57 (Allegro); Dennec, Sprites of the Glen, Chopin, Chopin, Berceuse, Op. 57; Vogrich, Staccato Caprice: Mendelssohn, Rondo Capric-cioso; List, Rhapsody, No. 12; Hil-legro). The orchestral accompani-ment on the second plano was effici-ently played by Miss Beatrice Collins, also of the Lindsay Academy. Miss Workman was assisted in her program by Miss Dorothy McGann, whose num-bers, Sanderson's "The Valley of Laughter" and Verd's "Ernani Invol-ami," were much appreciated. Miss McGann is a pupil of Dr. Torrington, who played har accompaniments on this occasion.

this occasion. Pupils of Lily Crossley gave an un-usually fine recital at Foresters' Hall on Tuesday evening before a crowded house. The program opened with a duct, "The Maybells," very nicely sung by Maud Farr and Elsie Grainger, then followed songs by Agnes Collett, Anna Tait, Elsa Mitchner, Ethel Milnes, Edna Collett, Edythe Lewrence, W. Bonar Gibbons and Elsie Gibbons. The outstanding numbers were the Noel Johnson song, "The River and the sapets" and "Ah, non creda mirarti." by Miss Tait; "Ah, Rendimi," by Ethel Milnes, "The Angel's Serenade." by Edna Collett; "Jewel Song." by Miss Mitchener; "The Trumpeter," Mr. Gib-bons; "Boat Song," Edythe Lawrence. A noticeable characteristic of the whole recital was the excellence of the voice production, distinct ennetiation and those qualities which denote com-petence and special care on the part of the teacher. Kathleen Reid, pupil of Miss Adamson, played two violin shigatos with skill and good taste. . . .

part had infinite postical charm and yet flamed occasionally with the slumberous fires which infuse nearly everything from Techalkowsky's pen. A veritable riot of Coesack vehemence and bravura impetuosity was the finale. The big climax at the end of the concerco seem-ed to lift the player and his plano from the floor, and the audience was stirred literally into a frenzy of approval. No greater success has been scored here this winter than by the gripping and pictur-esque performance of Mark Hambourg. He has the true planisic furore, in the literary sense. The orchestral perform-ance was completely dwarfed by Ham-bourg's monumental reading." Jan Ham-bourg will play the first movement of the concerto in D major, which contains much ornamental passage work for the variations, interspersed with numerous cadenses for the solo instrument and separated by orchestral interludes. The orchestra will be conducted by Luigt von Kunits.

INDIANA AUTO MEN

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 27.-INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 27.-Frank E. Smith, head of the Premier Motor Manufacturing Company, has been electel president of the Indiana Automobile Manufacturing Associa-tion. Henry Campbell of the Stutz afotor Car Company becomes trea-surer of this organization, while Joseph Ward of the United States Tire Com-pany retains the position of secretary. Ward of the United States Tire Com-pany retains the position of secretary. The new officers were chosen at the annual meeting of the organization held in Indianapolis. Mr. Smith was the original president of the LA.M.A. He had charge of the first tour of the organization thru Indiana. Illinois, Missouri and Iowa. Reporting that the organization was in good shape financially, the mem-bers, besides electing officers, out down the number of directors from nine to three, the three executive offi-cers being chosen as directors for the coming year. The newly elected officers will meet shortly to devise a plan for the con-tinuation of national interest in Hoosier automobile and accessory manufacturers.

Beyond the interest taken naturally by Detroiters in a speed event which interest is keeder now than ever ow-ing to the activities in the matter of a Detroit Speedway, motorists of the city are very much interested in the Wanderbill Cup race to be contested Monday, next at San Francisco. The deep interest is due to the entry of four Maxwell cars' and Michigan peo-ple are also interested naturally in the two Chevrolet entries. Barney Cidfield Billy Varison, Eddie Rickenbacher and Harry Grant will drive the Max-well entries, Clifford Durant, son of W. C. Durant and Jack LeCain the Chevrolets. The total entry list for the event is 80 cars with practically all of America's leading speed merchants and some from Europe in the list.

Registration lists in the State of Michigan are to be classified just as soon as the office of the severiary of state finds time to undertake the work as Coleman C. FEBRUARY 28 1915

The Hudson Triangle has become great because of the car behind it.

From the "Triangle on the Radiator" to the electric tail light, every atom of the car has been through the crucible of the Hudson Engineer ing Board.

Only accident or misus can prevent a Hudson owner getting 100 per cent. pleasure and service from his car. In the hands of tens of thousands of users, the world over, its supremacy is demonstrated daily.

The Company Behind the Trade-Mark

The Hudson Motor Car Company is as famous as the Hudson Car. Its marvelous success has come from giving the public what it wants at the price it wants.

The "Triangle on the Radiator" is the signature of the Hudson Motor Car Com-pany. Buyers accept it as a bond guaranteeing in their car everything needed to make it as good an automo-bile as the world's best engi-neering skill can produce.

No Hill Too Steep JACKSON No Sand Too Deep

The New Jackson "44" has met with instantaneous success. Dealers and buyers alike are enthusiastic over the exceptional value of this Jackson at $1500.

Its distinguished appearance and perfect finish have aroused universal admiration. Its full streamline body is the equal, in style and symmetry, of the highest priced cars on the market. And, above all, it has the durability and mechanical perfection for which Jackson cars have always been famous.

All the refinements are complete—flush doors, concealed hinges, one man top, two-piece ram-vision windshield, crowned fenders and rounded radiator front. Ignition and lighting switches, speedometer, ammeter and oil gauge are all grouped on a metal instru-ment plate in the centre of the dash, all illuminated by one dash light. Two other models for 1915: The Jackson line for 1915 also includes the Jackson "48" Six, a medium priced six, and the Olympic "46," a big, powerful four cylinder car. Both offer unusual values in their fields.

A Busy Moment in Film Making

FTER the flirst revision of the scenario has been made, stenographers are busily clicking away in the office, making perhaps a dozen copies of the final list of the sequence of scenes, of the final tinting plots, etc., etc. As soon as these are completed, the scene plots, as they are called, are distributed to the cutters, and the tinting plots

The Shipping-Room

Here each reel of scenario is marked with a long strip of cardboard long enough to go entirely around the rost. This bit of cardboard, with its little string at the end, also serves to carry the name of the producing company, the name of the scenario, and the number of the reel, so that when an operator in a theatre gets the scenario, he knows immediately which reel of which particu-lar play he has. The reels are now placed in shipping cans, and these again, very frequently in boxes, and are shipped to the exchanges, which form a most important part of the motion-picture industry, a part whose scope / is realized by few out-siders.

The Motion Picture Exchange

You, even if you are not a member of, or in any way connected with, th theatrical profession, have heard the expression booking agent. Well, exchange is a booking agent. A booking agent may make it his business supply a dozen theatres with attractions—or there may be a hundred in circuit. He may even see to it that a hundred theatres in smaller towns a larger ones are supplied, some with plays that run an entire week, others who arger ones are supplied, some with plays that run an entire week, others where nly two or three plays come during the week. And an intricate, nerve-racking siness it is. • But the film exchange is a thousand times more complicated than this.

It is very possible that this, also, was done by means of double-exposure. The Call of the Empire

Presiding in London at a recent meeting of the Victoria League, Mr. Lewis Harcourt, secretary of state for the colonies, spoke in highly appreciative terms of what the oversea Dominions and India had done in aid of the Motherland at this supreme crisis. He had done in aid of the Motherland at this supreme crisis. He acknowledged, with deep gratitude, the debt owed to every corner —even the remotest—of the Empire for the unexampled response that had been made. There was, Mr. Harcourt said, no sacrifice – of men, of money, of material which had seemed too great for those of British blood, who were wide-flung thruout the world. And not of British bloor or color only. Some illinformed, blind, misguided fools had thought that when Britain was at war, India would be in mutiny, but they were wrong. However, had Britons mistrusted their Indian fellow subjects of the King, these prophets of evil might have proved to be right, for Mr. Harcourt remarked that he had been told a mutiny would have occurred, had the Indian troops not been permitted to fight with their British comrades in troops not been permitted to fight with their British comrades in the trenches. Men, horses, guns, motors, ambulances, all the par-aphernalia of modern war has been freely placed at the disposal of the state and had crossed the Indian ocean without mishap, and in perfect security under the convoy of the imperial navy.

. . . Who, then, are these Indian troops who are making for themselves an imperishable record on the battlefields of

Concerning Our Indian Troops France and Flanders? An answer-was given in an address before the London Chamber of Commerce on "Our Indian Troops at the Front," de-Chamber of Commerce on "Our Indian Troops at the Front," de-livered by a distinguished native of India, Dr. Shaporji Aspaniarji Kapadia, doctor of medicine, barrister-at-law of the Inner Temple and lecturer on the Gujerati language at University College. In-troducing his subject, Dr. Kapadia said that the first man to under-take the work of forming an Indian army on the European model was Dupleix, who in the Carnatic, about 1746, raised several bat-talions of Mohammedan soldiers armed in European fashion. A few years later, Major Stringer Lawrence, "father of the India's army," enrolled the Sepoys in Madras. At that time India was full of adventurers belonging to various Asiatic races, ready to sell their swords to the highest bidder. After each British advance, the conquered race gave its quota to the army. As an example, Dr. Kapadia cited the Nepal war of 1814, when General Ochter-lony's victory was followed by the enrolment of the Gurkhas. So when the Punjab was annexed a force was recruited, now known as the Punjab Erontiar Force. The annexation of Nagnore in 1854 as the Punjab Frontier Force. The annexation of Nagpore in 1854 and of Oudh in 1856, gave rise to the well-known Oudh Irregular Porce. . . .

India's Warrior Tribes and Races

Dr. Kapadia then explained that the existing soldier tribes and races of India were divided broadly as follows: 1. The Sikhs, who came from Upper India (Punjab), from the races of Jats and Gujars: jab), from the races of Jats and Gujars; 2. The Rajputs (literal meaning, "Sons of Princes"), and the Dog-ras; 3. The Gurkhas; 4. The Mahrattas; 5. The Mohammedans from the Punjab; and 6. Afghans, Pathans and Afridis. The Afghans and Gurkhas came from outside the limits of India proper but the remainder inhabited the different parts of the country. Taking first thetSikhs, Dr. Kapadia said a Sikh was baptized into his religion, not born in it, and his value as a faithful soldier de-pended upon his adherence to the simple tenets and hardy life of his forefathers. No non-baptized Sikh soldier was enlisted in the Indian army. The main aim of the founder of Sikhism was to make the Sikhs soldiers. He prohibited tobacco in order that they might not waste their time and substance unnecessarily, and he would not allow them to cut their hair so that they might look like giants and ferocious when arrayed in the field of battle. The military services and courageous deeds of these men had often been recorded in history. They flocked to the British standard in the time of the mutiny, and ever since have formed a conspicuous section of the Indian army relied upon for their adventurous spirit section of the Indian army relied upon for their adventurous spirit even in distant battlefields. . . .

Armies

Lord Kitchener's new armies have been given high praise, not only for their personnel, but for their remarkable and continuously their remarkable and continuously progressive efficiency. Competent observers agree that a wonderful transformation has passed over the men since they came under physical training and military dis-cipline. Members of the French Cabinet, on their recent visit to London, expressed the highest pos-sible opinion regarding the quality of the new armies and their rec-ognition of the part Britain was taking in preparing for the ap-proaching campaign. Both the French and Russian Governments have frankly admitted that the United Kingdom has gone beyond all their anticipations of the share it would take in land operations. One of the principal Italian

One of the principal Italian newspapers, The Messagero of Rome, dedicated an enthusiastic article to Lord Kitchener's men, article to Lord Kitchener's men, describing them as "an army of gentlemen." The article expressed admiration of the ease with which he overcame the difficulty caused by lack of officers, and adds that what seemed a contradiction, has become a reality, for Great Bhitain, with the smallest standing force has been able to produce a propor-tionately greater number of offi-cers - than any other European army. "Never in all her long story army. "Never in all her long story of wars," The Messagero con-tinues, "has Great Britain gather-ed under her colors an army rep-resenting like this, the flower of the nation, all that the ancient Bri-tish race can furnish of the noble and the generous."

Regiments of the once decried Territorials, are now serving in Gibraltar, Malta, Egypt and India, as well as in the trenches. Every-where these volunteer troops have created the most favorable impression. The military authorities in India have been more than pleased by the battalions of the Wesser Division, and of the Middlesex Regiment, holding them as able to do credit to the regular army. Very great praise has been accord-ed the Dominion contingents—the ed the Dominion contingents—the Canadians now at the front, and the Australians and New Zealand-ers in Egypt. to a small tribe living in Gurkha, a small part of Nepal. The Gurkhas were quite a distinct feature of the Indian army. Then religion was Hinduism of the simplest kind bordering on Buddhism. Thickset and muscular they made most active and disciplined soldiers of considerable fighting value and would be specially valuable in this war as they were very enduring and nearly immune from cold. From another tribe in the west of Nepal, the Garhwalis, came other battalions of fine warriors and good soldiers, tho less thickset and muscular than the Gurkhas. the Maharattas had long served with credit and distinction in the the Maharattas had long served with credit and distinction in the Bombay army and had a reputation for great wiriness and endurance. The Dogras were also well-known soldiers from Northern India, coming from the hills between Punjab and Cashmere, and were of Rajput and Brahman tribes, descendants of those old Hindu races who did not embrace Islam and took refuge in the hills. His good behaviour, courtly manners, high courage and physical en-durance made the Dogra a soldier valued by all who knew him. The Dogras had invariably acquitted themselves with distinction The Dogras had invariably acquitted themselves with distinction and provided three regiments, the best class being in the cavalry.

Border Clans and Princely Class

The Mohammendans of the Punjab, Dr. Kapadia continued, were chiefly converts from various Hindu tribes who were compelled to accept Islam in the time of the Mohammedan domination. They fur-the Mohammedan domination. They fur-nished many excellent soldiers. The Pathans and Afghans were a fine strong race and were believed to have a Jewish descent, as their names, like Jacob, Joseph and Isaac showed. The true Afghans, the Durani clan, called themselves Ben-i-Israel, "The chil-dren of Israel." Hardy, active, alert and inured to war, they were endued with co...iderable courage when well led and capable of much elan. To the best type of Englishmen, their open, irrespon-sive manner, their delight in all exercises and sports, with their constant high spirits, appealed greatly, and certain types of English-men appealed greatly to them. Altho all blood feuds were closed in the ranks by custom and discipline, when on furlough these feuds were revived for over the border it was border law. The Afridis from the Khyber pass, were descended from Aryan stock and also claimed Jewish descent. The Rajputs belonged to the princely clan and were descended from the Kshattryas or soldiers, one of the inree great divisions of the Aryans. They were good warriors and had done good service in India. In closing, Dr. Kapadia referred to the enthusiastic rally India had made to the flag and described it as of happy augury for the future of the Empire.
