Lorneville Man Cut a Wide Swath

Victimizing half the farmers in Lorneville, including his father-in-law and a number of merchants in Fairville, and afterwards skipping his bail, are some of the exploits placed to the credit of Mr. Lunt, a former Lorneville resident, who recently fled across the border. The George Tippet, the Maine street saloon keeper, who will on Friday be called upon to make good the bond which he gave in Lunt's behalf. Lunt was arrested by Constable Albert Taylor just as he was about leaving Fairville for the United States, on a capias issued by Mr. J. Stuet, to whom Lunt was indebted for household furnishings. Lunt had no money and Mr. Tippet furnished security for his appearance. It was not 24 hours later before the arrested man had taken French leave. Among the other creditors whom he left behind is Mr. James Masson the Fairville magistrate, who had experience with Lunt to the extent of $70, two ago and married Miss Knox, a member of a highly respected family in the district. He deceived his father-in-law and his neighbors for a time very thoroughly and the former is out the amount he lent security for on his son-in-law's purchase of a farm. The bright young man from abroad was a sewing machine agent as well as a farmer. Another series of suits is to be pulled off in connection with Lunt's sewing machine exploits. Before he could get his money back, some company he had to buy a sewing machine. This he persuaded his father-in-law to do, and the company is now trying to collect from them. The amounts in question total several hundred dollars. The Lorneville residents involved have engaged Hon. E. A. McKenney to act for them against the company. Extensive investigations into Lunt's record have been made since his exploits were uncovered. It is said that he approached Fairville men and asked them to back his note for $50, presenting the paper. When the man who was offered this privilege came to examine the paper he found that it read $500 instead of $50. He did not sign.—Globe.

Fugality as a Virtue

From Imperial Rescript of the Mikado. Ruler and guide of the Japanese people. In order to keep pace with the constant progress of the world, and to participate in the blessings of its civilization, the development of the national resources is manifestly a requisite of prime importance, and it is believed that our country, which has but recently emerged from sanguine war, calls for activity in various branches of administration. We desire all classes of our people to act in unison, to be faithful to their duties, to be diligent in the management of their households, to be obedient to the dictates of conscience and of duty, frank and sincere in their manners, to abide by simplicity and avoid ostentation, and to insure themselves to actions told without yielding to any degree of indulgence. The teachings of our revered ancestors and the record of our glorious history are clear beyond all misapprehension. By scrupulous observance of the precepts thus established, and by directing assiduous and unremitting exertions, the growing prosperity of our empire is assured.

A Monster Battleship

Plans which have been received at Portsmouth, England, for the construction of the eighth "Dreadnought" of the British navy, to be known as the "Neptune" show that she will be 3,000 tons larger than the type ship. She is credited with a battery of ten 12-inch guns, and a numerous antiaircraft armament of 4.7-inch guns. The "Neptune" will be 310 feet long, 85 feet wide, and of 20,250 tons displacement.

CANADA

NOUGHTY CANADA

England will build six more Dreadnoughts. What Canada contributes to the Dreadnoughts.—Toronto Star.

NOT JUSTIFIED

Sometimes there seems to be justification for the thought that the world has ceased to think seriously, but there are great incidents of history which are so treated as to show that such a thought is not justified.—St. John Globe.

WORLD DOES MUCH

And the world owes Lincoln more even than does his own nation. He taught the lesson of humility in high places. He showed the power of simple truthfulness. He left to humanity the record of a lofty character and of great achievement.—Calgary Daily Herald.

WILL BE HARD TASK

It is likely that in assessing the damages the Nova Scotia court will endeavor, so far as is consistent with justice to minimize what is little short of a calamity to the Coal Company, and in a wider sense to the industrial interests of Canada, but in view of the sweeping nature of the judgement it will be no easy task.—Ottawa Citizen.

LOSING HIGH PLACE

A villain leads the world's long business summers. A blue man holds the title of heavyweight champion of the ring. A yellow man may come out of China or Japan and break the heart as well as the bones of the man who now claims to be the world's wrestler. Apparently the white man is losing the high place he long held on the scale of culture.—Toronto Mail.

UNDESIRABLE ALLIANCE

England has been stirred by the desperate attack upon unfeeling citizens by two alien "unfortunates." They seized a school containing $100 from a factory messenger, and being pursued killed two persons and wounded a third. Both Britain and Canada must be on their guard against admitting aliens of this type.—Toronto News.

DE TESTE

And in these uncertain days in the nation-making era of our own Canada we may learn a lesson from Lincoln's life and motto. Not yet may be recalled the right in full. The full facts concerning the future or even the present duty may not be apparent, but to every man shines clear some sentence of the true, some revelation of the right, and to that being true, let each one of us "arrive on."—Ottawa Citizen.

TIRESOME DISSENSING MARKERS

The British people are getting "awfully" excited about Canada. One party says that we are "home-ruled" with American influence and that unless something is done at once to bind us to the Mother Country we will fall like a ripe cherry into Uncle Sam's lap. Dear, dear, we hadn't noticed our own evil condition! These Englishmen who come out and tour Canada and then go back and settle our political destinies in a couple of magazine articles make us rather weary. It may be the attitude, or it may be the attitude, but they certainly do get excited easily.—Calgary Herald.

CANNOT BEGIN TOO SOON

If the history of other countries teaches us anything at all, it is that Canada cannot too soon begin the conservation of her natural wealth. But at present the preservation of resources is chiefly in the educational stage. The people are only beginning to learn its importance and if very strenuous laws were passed, there might be some resentment. It seems to be necessary to get the public to understand that the policy of conservation is a wise policy, and we can see lines in which the proposed committee could do excellent work.—Victoria Daily Colonist.

EFFECT FAR-REACHING

It is only natural to expect that a considerable quantity of the surplus wheat of the West shall, in the year to come, find a market in Japan and China, and that a smaller quantity will be absorbed by Mexico. It is in addition to this, a large part of Western grain intended for European consumption finds an outlet by way of the Pacific Ocean for effect on Eastern Canada will be far reaching. The ships that carry wheat from Vancouver to Europe will bring back European goods in return, and the commercial connection between Eastern and Western Canada will be hardly broken in the middle. In order to render such a contingency impossible something more than the deepening of lake harbors, the improvement of railway facilities between the harbors and tide water, and increase in accommodation at Montreal is necessary.—Toronto Star.

A Message From the Dead

So much of the element of fraud is carried into the stories of psychological phenomena that the public is generally sceptic and pays little heed to the rehearsal of cases of alleged communications with the spirits of the dead. Many brilliant scientific men, however, are not sceptics in this manner and are hard at work investigating the alleged messages with which the dead are credited with transmitting to those who are alive. Such men will no doubt read with interest the recent experience of William A. Moore, Vice-President of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company of Montreal. Mr. Moore was residing in his private office and suddenly the spirit of his surroundings was broken by the call, "WILL, WILL." "Who is it?" said Mr. Moore. "Romaine," came back the answer. A Mr. Romaine was a dear friend of Mr. Moore, and he became nervous over the affair. He called up Mr. Romaine's house and received the call information that Mr. Romaine had died only a few moments before. Mr. Moore is not a so-called spiritualist, and never gave any thought to spiritualism or like subjects. He is a prominent business man of Montreal and there is no reason for not having faith in his statements. It is such cases as these coming from responsible people, that give the scientific man reasons to pursue their studies with added enthusiasm. The singular and mysterious experience of Mr. Moore will not lessen the interest of the public in matters of spiritualism, and the insurance man will probably be called upon many times to relate the story to those who are interested in the subject. As near as Mr. Moore can fix it, the communication, if it may be called such, with his dear friend came at about the same moment that Mr. Romaine expired. He is dead Mr. Romaine made no outcry of "Will, Will!" and if those words went to Mr. Moore, so he believes they did, they must have been communicated by thought. This adds to the mystery of the incident. The scientific research work into such subjects is interesting to the public, as are all matters pertaining to the mysteries of life and death, and when the conclusive proof comes, if it ever does, that there may be communication between the living and the living, it will go down as one of the greatest discoveries of man.—New Haven Palladium.

Beware of Ointments for Cuts That Contain Mercury

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold in the case you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co., Dealers. Sold by druggists. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Mr. Todd Talks on Matters of Interest to this end of the Province

In a recent interview in St. John Mr. Todd talked on some matters of interest to this end of the Province. Regarding the exhibition grant Mr. Todd said he thought it should certainly come to St. John and at the close of the meeting last week, when a vote of the New Brunswick members was taken, he had suggested that Hon. Mr. Fisher should send a man down here to report on the relative advantages of St. John and Chatham. If this was done he had no doubt that St. John would be chosen. He could understand, he said, why the North Shore members should try to secure the grant for Chatham, but he could not see why the members from other parts of the province should vote against St. John. He thought that, as Dr. Pugh had taken the attitude he did in not trying to influence the members in their votes, they should be generous enough to rally to his support and vote for St. John. He added that the question was by no means settled as Hon. Mr. Fisher would likely take a hand in it and he was favorable to St. John.

How It Feels to Die

How it feels to die is the remarkable story told to the "Daily Mail" by Mr. James J. Kane, for thirty years a chaplain in the United States Navy. "I have been no fewer than eight times at the point of death," said Mr. Kane, and on three occasions I was pronounced dead by physicians. On one of those occasions I rested in my coffin for twenty-four hours. "During the third year of the American Civil War I was attached as an executive officer to a gunboat of the West Gulf Blockading squadron. Yellow fever was virulent, and ultimately I contracted the disease, and began to welcome the approach of death. "All this time I was perfectly conscious and as the body grew weaker the mental powers grew stronger. I recognized the peculiar distinction between the soul and the body, and made the startling discovery that I was possessed of wonderful faculties belonging to the soul, which were gradually developing as the separation from the body was taking place. "I claim that the act of dying is one of the most delightful and exciting episodes of my life, filled with pleasurable emotions, not only at the thought of meeting long-parted friends, but the increase of knowledge and freedom from earthly elements. When I speak, a coloured preacher, who was very much attached to me, and who was weeping at my bedside, said: "Thank God, you are once more alive," and there was rejoicing at my restoration. My vision became all mine. I murmured over my nature. I soon fell into a deep sleep, and the next morning felt increased vitalization. "I once had a cataplectic seizure in London, when Dr. George W. Callender was in attendance upon me. He afterwards stated that I was the only man in his varied experience who had recovered after being so far gone in the throes of death. Two other medical men were also called, and they concurred with Dr. Callender."

LABOR CONDITIONS

The tendency towards a general increase in industrial and trade activity noted during the past three months was continued during January, though no pronounced increase in activity occurred in any particular branch or locality. Farmers had, on the whole, a good month for the marketing of grain and produce and lumbermen will make a larger net than was at first anticipated, market prices having been upward. Fishing and mining were quiet from seasonal causes, but railway construction was active for the time of year, and a very busy spring and summer season is expected, over 4,000 miles of line being projected. The comparative lightness of the snowfall diminished the amount of work usually available at this season for unskilled labour, through the general situation with regard to unemployed compared very favourably with the corresponding period of 1908. Unusually cold weather during the first half of the month hampered industry, especially in Western Canada and in localities dependent upon water power. Some scarcity in the fuel supply also occurred in western Canada, but had been met by the end of the month. Ice harvesting gave work to large numbers of men. The business outlook for 1909 is regarded as decidedly more favourable than at the corresponding period of 1908, a conservative hopefulness being expressed by most manufacturers and wholesalers with regard to the immediate future. Labor conditions in British Columbia are much more favourable during the present winter than at the corresponding period of 1907-08, when large numbers of unemployed from the United States congested the market at Vancouver and other points.

Both Gaily

The man who prided himself on his keen perceptions, watched the witness on the stand with intensity, and noticed his head vigorously at the closing words of the bewildered witness, under the searching cross-examination of the lawyer. "That man's concerned in it," said the keen observer to his friend. Did you not notice how his eyes shifted around while he was answering the questions? "How about this next one?" inquired the friend, as another witness took the stand to give his testimony. "He's guilty of something," asserted the keen observer. "No man stares at people in that bold, defiant way if he has a clear conscience.—Exchange.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH MEATING

Many citizens will learn with regret of the death of Mr. Joseph Meating, the well known member of the granite firm of Tayte Meating & Co., who passed away Tuesday at Morrell, Texas, where he had gone with the hope that the milder climate of that country would restore him to health. The deceased has been in failing health for the past two years, but has been able at times to take an active part in the business he labored so hard to build up. The death of Mr. Meating is a distinct loss to the business interests of the town, as he was highly respected by all who were associated with him in his work. The firm, of which he was the active member, will keenly feel his loss, and to his bereaved family the heartfelt sympathy of the community, will be extended in the irreplaceable loss of a fond husband and father. The deceased was 50 years of age and leaves a wife and six children, who are bowed down in grief over the great sorrow that has come into their lives.

"NEMESIS"

At one time in his life Abraham von Meyerbeer was a member of that part of the population usually referred to in the newspapers as the common people. Then his father, who was a small grocer of the name of Meyer, received 10,000 marks from an accident policy he carried, and with this money enlarged his business and improved it until he was able to sell it to a stock company for half a million marks. The result of clever trading and unscrupulousness.

But his greatest achievement in the eyes of his son was his sudden death before he had had time to spend any of his savings of forty years and when Mr. Abraham found himself in full possession of his inherited gold he resolved to move to higher life in the future. First of all, he moved into a fashionable part of Berlin, then he married the cousin of a baron's son-in-law, having previously changed his name to von Meyerbeer, bought an automobile and settled down to enjoy life with that personal freedom peculiar to the man who is cut by most of his neighbors.

Von Meyerbeer, however, found consolation for their contempt in the birth of his only child, though it was not without paying, for the baby cost the mother her life. He was greatly annoyed with her for putting him to so much trouble in a couple of years after their wedding, but in time he forgot her, and with his child lived in more or less solitary grandeur in the big house whose personal attraction to him was that its owner was a count.

In course of time young Abraham grew to be an independent youth in knickerbockers, and the honor of many, which, much to his father's delight, showed unmistakable traces of the blood of the cousin of the baron's son-in-law. He had almost feared that his own blood would predominate. The child looked strong and healthy, but one morning Dr. Sauerbrel informed von Meyer that the air of the city might affect the lungs of the growing child and recommended that he should be placed with a governess in a country cottage some miles from Berlin.

"There is nothing wrong with him, now, is there?" the father asked anxiously.

"Nothing my dear sir," Dr. Sauerbrel replied in the manner he always adopted towards those of his patients in the ten thousand a year class. But you see, it isn't good for the child to spend so much time in a city house in the company of his father. I would advise a cottage in some small village where the air is bracing and where you can run down at any time in your auto."

"Very good," von Meyerbeer said as he took his hat and went to the city, this week.

A suitable home was found for the young child, and the father went to watch the child's progress for the first time in his life.

arrival he realized that even a child of six expects something more than a mixture of benevolence and severity from his parent. He parted abruptly from the lady who had agreed to treat the darling as one of her own for 25 marks a week, on which terms either her own children or the newcomer must have lost something.

Von Meyerbeer jumped into his automobile, blew the horn as a warning to the group of uncomfortable looking children, and started for Berlin, as if he were trying to break all records. In 15 minutes, however, he slowed down, conscious of having made a mistake. He was miles out of his way. This made him more reckless than ever and he laughed at the pedestrians who hurried into safety as his car approached.

But an accident was bound to happen and when von Meyerbeer saw an old man spring back from the side and then collapse in a heap in the road his hands dropped to his side for a moment. Then his own danger revived him and without looking back he rushed on as for dead life.

"After all," he muttered to himself, "it was only one of the common people. Probably the old man didn't have much in his life and it was better that he should end it in some way," he added thoughtfully.

"They couldn't have seen my number, so, all things considered, I'm safe."

Any feelings of discovery were soon shown to have been superfluous. The man had not been seriously injured and not being a person of too good a character the local community blamed him for his accident and so nothing was ever heard of the incident in the newspapers. Von Meyerbeer, however, did not open his paper for a week without feeling nervous for he knew by the experience of others what it meant to act the coward and he found out. The escape, however, did not change him any. He still remained a scorching, a man of no honor, who would never have hesitated to kill and run away. His auto was his only toy and driving it his only joy. Several times he ran away and very soon he became notorious all over the surrounding country.

He never thought of retribution. Fate had not given him imagination and he only began to think when his stomach began to ache. The world according to those who owned automobiles and those who did not were the servants of the other. The rich as he called all who had less money than himself, did not show any gratitude, although, as he pathetically declared, he kept quite a number of them in his money.

Even an extremely selfish man cannot avoid indirectly benefiting a few. He was pondering over these things when he started slowly from his house. He had just received a childish letter from a boy, full of love and desire to breathe a love and desire which made him stare on and on. At last he decided to go to the city limits in his creased his speed until he was going 35 miles an hour. Farmers' boys and girls stumbled out of the way and watched with open mouths what little they could see, but von Meyerbeer never paid any attention as he drove with a skill that revealed the expert.

He was on the outskirts of the little village where his son lived sooner than he expected. It was the cry of an infant that aroused him from his dreams. Mechanically he tried to put on the brake but his fingers missed their object and the car continued to bound forward. Suddenly he turned a corner leading to the street of five houses which formed the principal thoroughfare of the village.

About a dozen children were playing in the street and all but one hurried to the shelter of one of the cottages. The helpless figure laughed gleefully as the car came down upon him and then—

Von Meyerbeer glanced about him wildly. There was only one man in sight for the shrieks of the children were common enough in the village. This was his chance. Hastily releasing the brake he had put on the moment the car had touched the child he drove madly away.

Sheer exhaustion compelled him to slow down about 70 miles away from the scene of the accident. There were blood stains on two of the wheels and he spent an hour removing them. Then he went on to a hotel, ate a hearty dinner and went to bed leaving his troubles for the next day.

It was at breakfast that he tremblingly opened a paper and learned his fate. It was quickly told in big headlines—

Terrible Automobile Accident.
Cowardly Action by Driver.
Grandson of Abraham Meyer.
The Famous Provision Merchant Killed.

He didn't read any further. "My God," he murmured and fell back in his chair dead.

The doctor said it was heart disease. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

A falling fit nerve—no larger than the fine silken thread—takes from the heart its pulse, its power, its regularity. The stomach also has its hidden, or hidden nerve. It was Dr. Shoop who first told us it was wrong to drug a weak or falling stomach, heart or kidneys. His prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—directed straight for the cause of these ailments—these weak and faltering side nerves. This, no doubt, clearly explains why the Restorative has of late grown so rapidly in popularity. Druggists say that those who test the Restorative even for a few days soon become fully convinced of its wonderful merit. Anyway, don't drug the organ. Treating the cause of sickness is the only sensible and successful way. Sold by all dealers.

Love in thy youth, fair maid, be wise. Old Time will make thee colder. And though each morning new arise, Yet we each day grow older.

Thou, as heaven, art fair and young. Thine eyes like twin stars shining; But ere another day be sprung, All these will be declining.

Then winter comes with all his fears, And all thy sweets shall borrow; Too late then wilt thou shower thy tears, And I, too late, shall sorrow.

Have you a pain—of any kind, anywhere? Stop just a minute and think! It matters not whether it be womanly pains, head pains, or any kind of a pain, one of Dr. Shoop's Little Pink Pain Tablets will surely stop it in 20 minutes. Formula plainly printed on the 25c. box. Sold by all dealers.

Humor in Everything

The following incident shows how strongly is the joker's instinct ingrained in Mark Twain. A friend once took him to see a very beautiful and valuable piece of sculpture. It represented a young woman coiling up her hair, and the workmanship was such that the owner's other companions stood open-mouthed in admiration.

"Well," said the host, turning to Mark Twain for his verdict: "what do you think of it? Grand, isn't it?"

"Yes, it's very pretty," said Mark Twain. "But it's not true to nature!"

"Why not?" enquired everyone in surprise.

"She ought to have her mouth full of hair-pins," replied the humorist gravely.

CHASE and SANBORN MONTREAL

Mr. Richard McCallum

A well-known citizen of Stirling, Ont., cured of Chronic Catarrh and irritable throat by Catarrhazone

A remarkable case exciting great interest in Stirling, which, if possible, adds to the popularity of Catarrhazone as a cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Throat Trouble.

Catarrh is one of the most disagreeable and at the same time hardest to cure diseases. This has been Mr. McCallum's experience: "For many years," he writes, "I have suffered from Catarrh, and continually hawked and coughed, so that my throat was always in an inflamed irritable condition. "Doctors' medicine did not help in the least, and all other remedies I used were quite useless. In one case it was time wasted in snuffing powder up the nose; in another using a greasy ointment and so on. Not one of them was the least bit good."

"I heard of Catarrhazone favorably spoken of and tried a sample, and it really benefited me more in a few hours than years of treatment with doctors' and other so-called remedies. "Receiving such immense benefit from the sample size, I got the complete outfit, Large Hard Rubber Inhaler, etc., and but a few weeks of its use completely cured me of Catarrh and throat trouble. "I recommend Catarrhazone as the most satisfactory Catarrh Remedy on the market. Every word said about it is true. (Signed) Richard McCallum."

Now perhaps you need a remedy like Catarrhazone. It is the only treatment that is applied locally as well as constitutionally. The Inhaler clears the air passages, stops hawking and spitting, and purifies the breath.

The Ferruzone Tablets which are used in conjunction with Catarrhazone Inhaler drive all the poisons from the blood and builds up the system to a healthy, vigorous condition. "The complete outfit costs $1.00 at all druggists; trial size 50c., by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy Catarrhazone to-day."

Drinking Soap-suds

Miss Mary Kingsley, who made many journeys in the wilds of Africa, used to relate how once, finding it necessary to cleanse a much soiled and stained blouse, she carried it, with a cake of soap, to a neighboring spring, where an interested group of native women watched her wash it. They were much impressed by the way in which the spots disappeared, and it emerged as good as new. The next morning when it was time to break camp, Miss Kingsley missed her soap—a precious commodity in the wilderness. Suspicion soon pointed to a certain woman, who, on being accused, confessed boldly that she had taken it and cast it into the spring, that its extraordinary powers of renewing old garments might be permanently imparted to the waters. She was deeply mortified to learn that her effort had been in vain. The Rev. Peter McQueen, of Charlottetown, Massachusetts, who has recently returned from Africa, tells a kindred story. His soap, however, was not lost, although misused. He still had it with him.

"I told our native servants to be sure and lay in a supply of clean water when we crossed the Taru desert, a scorched belt of sand stretchings some seventy-six miles," he relates. "Tidings had reached us that a British explorer who had attempted to cross that desert shortly before us had perished from thirst, so we wanted to be careful."

"You can imagine my surprise when, upon taking my first draft of water, I discovered that it tasted strongly of soap. All the cakes were similarly tainted, and we rounded up the natives and held a just court-martial. "It was a tough predicament, but I couldn't refrain from smiling within when the leader of them meekly confessed that as the master had instructed him to lay in a supply of clean water, he had seen to it that bars of soap were added, for soap, he said, was used to clean things."

"They did not perish of thirst; but, after sixteen days of drinking soap-suds, which agreed with neither palate nor stomach, no native of that particular gang was again likely to purify water with soap, no matter how clean they wanted it. "The only thing which one can do, and the only thing which any man need do, is his duty. 'Tis a short word, but it covers a vast space. "Know your opportunity and take it. "Thanksgiving is a good thing; thanksgiving is better."

COMING MENACE OF THE AIR

The airship is a factor to be reckoned with at any modern naval conference for since the exploits of Wright and Farman the idea of aerial navies "grappling in the blue" seems, in the opinion of many people to be in a fair way of realization. Before very long it is possible that in time of war the lookouts on board a man-of-war will not only have to "keep their eyes skinned" for the first glimpse of a torpedo-boat or the diminutive periscope of a submarine but will also have to direct their attention to the sky above, into which at any moment a hostile aeroplane might sweep up from the horizon prepared to drop her deadly cargo of high-explosive bombs upon the leviathan of the sea. Possibly at night special men chosen for their acuteness of hearing might be placed aloft at the masts-heads as far as practicable from the noises of the sea and engines to listen for the first whirr and rattle of an approaching airship's motors and propellers. Light guns so mounted as to be fired almost vertically and provided with specially-designed projectiles will doubtless form a part of the warship's equipment, and with their muzzles trained aloft their crews sleeping beside them will be ready to belch fire and destruction at the hovering aeroplane whether seen coming up by daylight or suddenly discovered by the sweeping beams of the searchlights. And it is by no means certain that the battleship would come off second-best. She is built to take punishment—which the aeroplane is not—and though she may be badly damaged she may still bring down her opponent flaming and heading into the sea.

The cause of aviation is being pushed by the Aerial League of the British Empire, apropos of which Dr. Wallace has been stating the case from the humanitarian point of view. The secretaries of the League in reply, state that it does not for a moment suggest that Great Britain should be "in the front rank of aerial assassins," whose work would appear to be to devastate an enemy's capital by means of bombs thrown from airships. They wish entirely to associate themselves and the Aerial League with Dr. Wallace's humanitarian principles in this respect.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who has been for some years interested in plans for the relief of persons suffering from tuberculosis, has decided to spend $1,000,000 upon the building of tenements for the use of families, whose members are affected with tuberculosis. It is said that three hundred and fifty families will thus be able to get housing of that kind and live under conditions most suitable for combating the dread disease. The tenants will be expected to pay. The plan is attracting much attention, and the result of the experiment will be closely observed by all who are interested in fighting tuberculosis.

William T. Stead recently paid the following tribute to Ireland's orators. "The Irish are much the most eloquent of the English-speaking nations. Even in America W. J. Bryan is of Irish descent. In the eighteenth century the great Parliamentary orators were Irishmen. Burke, Sheridan, Grattan, Curran and Flood were all Irish. In the nineteenth Plunkett, Stiel, O'Connell, Magee, A. M. Sullivan and Sexton all stand in front rank. In the present Parliament John Redmond, T. P. O'Connor and T. M. Healey are the most effective speakers."

Sir William Mallock put the case for education neatly and forcibly the other day when he said that "if people do not spend money to put a child in school they run the risk of spending money later to keep him in jail."

BY THE WAY

It's President Taft:
Thirty four dogs in town!
The town budget has been brought down.
Meanwhile the only thing to do is to be hopeful.
At all events we don't need a bigger hall for town purposes.
Considering that the hockey team is a new one, the showing that it made was highly creditable.

A tremendous future lies before any man who can sit at the town council and please everyone in town.

The variety of weather served up by the weather man, beats the repertoire of any stock company to a finish.

If the whole revenue of the Province were expended on the roads, each mile would be entitled to sixty dollars.

During the debate Monday evening some of the young debaters, who have been caught in Cupid's net, depicted the hope of reward in a way that was most flattering to all parties interested.

Guzzle (after he had succeeded in waking his wife)—open the dora! Mrs. Guzzle (head out of the second story window)—Are you sober? Guzzle—Yeah. Mrs. Guzzle—Then say "reciprocity."

Under existing circumstances many a man, owing to temper or idleness, throws himself out of work on the slightest provocation. How much more common would such an act become among certain sections of the working class community if the individual knew that at any rate he could find work on some municipal or State undertaking, especially instituted for the relief of the unemployed.—Westminster Review, London.

A teacher in the Garfield school was teaching a primary class the beginning of arithmetic.
"Now, I have one pencil in my right hand and one in my left," she said.
"How many pencils have I? Helen you may answer."
"Two," piped a small voice.
"Then one and one make two, do they not?"
"Sure."

The teacher frowned at the disrespectful answer, says the Kansas City Star.
"That's hardly what you should have said," she said. "Will someone in the class tell Helen what her answer should have been?"
There was a moment of hesitation. Then one brown fist shot confidently into the air.
"Ah, James, you may tell Helen what she should have said."
"Sure, Mike!" shouted Jimmie, in a tone of triumph.

An Original Essay

A little boy in town was ordered by his father to write an essay on "Editors" and here is the result: "I don't know how newspapers come to be in the world. I don't think God does for he hasn't got nothing to say about them editors in the Bible. I think the editor is one of the missing links you read of, and stayed in the bushes until after the flood; and then came out and wrote the thing up, and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever dies, I never saw a dead one and never heard of one getting killed. Our paper is a mighty good one; but the editor goes without an overcoat all winter and don't wear any gloves, and paw ain't paid his subscription since the paper started. I askt paw if that was why the editor had to suck the juice out of 'the snowballs in winter, and go to bed when he had his clothing washed in summer. And then paw took me out into the woodshed and he licked me awful hard. If the editor makes a mistake folks say he ought to be hung, but if a doctor makes any mistakes he buries them and people dassent say anything because doctors can read and write Latin. When the editor makes a mistake there is lawsuits, and swearing and a big fuss, but if a doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and a perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anybody else knowing what it means but if the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit; but if the editor goes he gets a charge of brookshot. When the doctor gets drunk and if he dies its from heart trouble; when the editor gets drunk its a case of too much booze, and if he dies its the 'jim jams.'"—Rapid River Hustler.

CORRESPONDENCE

TO THE EDITOR OF "GREETINGS"
I was very much interested in a reference you made a week or two ago, about our Aldermen having up for discussion, taxing the banking institution in our town, and also the Telephone Co., and in the end the matter dropped for the present. Well sir, these concerns must be laughing in their sleeve at the soft snap they have struck.
I have gone to the trouble of making some enquiries, and my answer in each case from towns about the same as our own is "Certainly we tax them." How much? "One hundred and fifty dollars." ($150.00) And why should they not be taxed? Take the bank. Is it here for the accommodation of the people? Let business men reply. A concern that takes our money and allows us 3 per cent. for it and declares a dividend of 12 per cent. is surely able to pay a tax. If our Aldermen are to be generous let them show their generosity where it would be better appreciated or at least more deserving.
It appears to me it is high time our city fathers were looking more after the interest of the town and see that a tax is placed where it should be. Other business concerns pay their tax, and expect to and why should these be exempt? Thanking you for your space,
TAXPAYER.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Another big rain storm and the snow and sleighing will entirely disappear.

The Provincial government has refused the petition of the N. B. Temperance Federation asking for prohibition in New Brunswick.

Mr. E. Holt is making preparations for a telephone line from Bonny River to his residence at Elmcroft. The poles will be cut this winter and erected soon as the frost is out.

Reports from the different lumber concerns in the vicinity of the town indicate that business is reviving and that the work done this winter has been satisfactory in spite of unfavorable weather.

Station Agent Howard of the C. R. R. at Fredericton was recently fined fifty dollars and costs. The charge against him was receiving liquors for delivery. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

The tourists that visited Digby last season left with the tradesmen, livery stables and hotels, an average of $3,600 per day, or a sum aggregating $194,400 for a season of nine weeks. A pretty good trade to cultivate.

Almost the full complement of men are at work in the granite sheds. While orders are not coming in as fast as usual at this season of the year, still the outlook for a good season's work is promising. Shipments of finished stone are already going forward.

Oxford has this year appointed $150 for police protection. A town that only needs a policeman to occasionally do some routine work must be a law-abiding community. The Scott Act Inspector draws a salary of $35 and his chief work is to draw the salary as the town is dry. ---Amherst News.

We must warn some of our correspondents to be very careful and not use our columns to "get even" with a neighbor. We fear that one correspondent has imposed on us, and we regret exceedingly that this has occurred and assure the parties offended that we are innocent of any wrong and the correspondent has simply taken an advantage extended to those whom we consider reliable.

The plant for the conservative morning paper, The Standard, should reach St. John early next week. The press was shipped from New York by Messrs. A. Hoe & Co. a few days ago, and the linotype and type equipment purchased in Upper Canada, is also on its way here. It is figured that the whole can be set up and got in running order in a week or ten days, so that the paper should make its first appearance about the 20th of this month. ---Globe.

John L. Sullivan, the heavy-weight champion of his day, says: "Those 'bracers' never did anyone any good. Stimulants are bad dope, and were I to begin life over again, I would rather die than take my first drink. I am getting along pretty well in years now, and have had lots of trouble in this world, and all that trouble can be laid to the fact I started with whiskey. It took me a good many years to learn that I was out of my class but I have learned it now, and the water wagon will be the only vehicle I will travel on from now until the end."

A hockey match between the Thistles of St. Stephen and Utopias of this place, was played Wednesday afternoon before a good crowd, and resulted in a victory for the Thistles, a score of 4 to 2. This is the first game played by the home team, in fact the first time the team has been together, and their showing, against such a strong aggregation as the Thistles was very creditable. It was evident that they lacked knowledge of important points of the game, but the showing made has encouraged the hockey enthusiasts, who feel that a good team can be developed and made a winning combination.

The Dramatic Club in connection with Red Granite Division, appeared before the members of the Division Wednesday evening, in the play Dot, the Miner's Daughter. Those present enjoyed a very interesting entertainment. The different parts were well taken and the audience received the efforts of the young players by hearty and generous applause.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL

Change of ad. of H. McGrattan & Sons has been received too late for this issue. They are still selling goods at low prices. There has been an advance in flour. Watch ad. next week.

Correction: In the report of Town of St. George, last week referring to School Board being empowered to borrow seven hundred dollars, should have been Seventeen Hundred Dollars.

At the Debating Club Monday evening an interesting debate was on the program. Resolved: That fear of punishment has a greater influence on human conduct than hope of reward. The affirmative side led by S. L. Lynott, with K. B. Watson, C. H. McGee, Leo McGrattan and H. R. Lawrence supporting was given the decision. The cause of the negative was presented by H. McKenzie leader, supported by Rev. H. I. Lynda, Dr. Taylor, Edw. McGrattan and A. C. Toy. Dr. Alexander was judge. The victory was celebrated by the winners in the usual way, and after eating a few cloves they went home and settled down with that peace in their hearts that they were told is always associated with "hope of reward."

St. Andrews, N. B., March 3.--For love of Rosie Black, a pretty table girl at Kennedy's Hotel, Fred Nason, 24 years old, of Debec Junction, twice attempted suicide. Last night he took carbolic acid, and then sent for the girl to see him die. The hotel manager sent for Dr. O'Neill instead, and was able to take effective measure. This morning, following a conversation with the town marshal, Nason put a revolver to his left breast and discharged it. The bullet struck the bone and was deflected, and although it was thought at first he was going to die, he is now considerably better. He had the revolver hidden between the mattresses, and it is thought that he intended killing the girl if she had gone to his room as requested. The girl says she has given the young man no encouragement and that his trouble was due to drink.

On Tuesday evening, March 2, a public temperance meeting was held in the Baptist church at Beaver Harbor, Charlotte County. Fred Eldridge presided. During the evening an efficient choir sang appropriate music, addresses were delivered by the chairman and E. Bates, Colin McNichol and the C. W. P. of the Sons of Temperance. At the close of the meeting a large number remained and a division of the S. of T. was organized, with the following officers:
W. P.--Fred Eldridge.
W. A.--Mrs. Dakin.
R. S.--Miss Paul.
F. S.--Thos. Holmes.
Treasurer--Albert Cross.
Chaplain--Mrs. Paul.
Conductor--Colin McNichol.
A. C.--Mrs. Berry.
I. S.--Miss Dakin.
O. S.--Ralph Holmes.
P. W. P.--Mrs. Thos. Holmes.
D. G. W. P.--Albert Cross.
The officers were installed by G. W. P. Henniger. The division will be known as Harbor Light Division. The weekly meetings will be held on Thursday evening. The large number who have joined is taken as evidence of strong temperance sentiment in the community.

TOWN COUNCIL

The Town Council held the regular monthly meeting on Monday evening. Mayor Lawrence was in the chair and Aldermen Dewar, Bogue, Craig, Johnson and Murphy, were present.

Mr. Simon Boyd was appointed Alms House Commissioner in place of R. A. Greason. A number of bills were passed and ordered paid. A communication from Messrs. Webster and McIntyre was read. They have acquired the sole right to manufacture and sell the Fenwick Carbide Feed Acetylene Generator, in Charlotte Co., and asked exemption from taxation for ten years on the plant which they propose to establish in St. George. Messrs. Webster and McIntyre are negotiating for the exclusive right of manufacturing these generators in the Maritime Provinces and should they be successful will employ five hands in the work. Mr. Webster addressed the Council in support of their communication and after a discussion by the Mayor and aldermen, the Mayor, Aldermen Dewar and Craig were appointed a committee to look into the matter and report at the next meeting. The company also expects to engage in the building of steel boats.

The four wards of the town were joined in one for election and town clerk O'Brien appointed Clerk.

After some discussion the position of Marshal was abolished. The opinion was expressed, by many of the aldermen that in this law-abiding community the services of an officer were not required. It is understood that at a future meeting some provision will be made to have the street lamps looked after, and an officer appointed to do special duty.

What Dreams Mean

Roses--To dream of roses, to the married foretells loss of children; to the lover, infidelity in his sweetheart.
River--To dream you see a flowing river, and that the waters are smooth and clear, presages happiness and success in life.
Loses--To dream you lose something of great value, denotes that you will hear of something which will give you great pleasure.
Mansion--To dream you inhabit a mansion is not good. It foretells some calamity to yourself, or some relative, or your lover.
Tomatoes--To dream of tomatoes indicates that you will have a prosperous life.
Nuts--To dream you see clusters of nuts denotes riches and happiness. To the lover, success and a good-tempered sweetheart.
Funeral--To dream of a burial denotes a speedy marriage, and the acquisition of wealth.

Rheumatism

I have found a brief and sure cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will strengthen the diseased parts of chronic rheumatism, but one that grows back to health again. That is impossible! But I can now surely kill the pain and remove this deplorable disease.
In Germany--with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt--I found the last ingredients with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient I successfully treated many many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all movable cases of this heinous and much dreaded disease. Those small granular wafers, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need--no actual need--to suffer longer with out help. We sell, and in confidence recommend.

Reasoning in Captive Animals

(By William T. Hornaday, Sc.D., Director of the New York Zoological Park.)

I have never considered that the question as to whether animals think is debatable. The men who have had the most to do with wild animals, either in a state of nature or in captivity, believe that the animals think, and that among individuals of the same species there are quick-witted individuals and dullards. I have made what I might call the personal acquaintance of 100 species, ranging from the elephant to the mole, in the wilds, and I have known between 200 and 300 species in captivity. I certainly credit them with powers of reasoning.

My views are based on a correlation of the behavior of these species in their natural state and in captivity. This combination of study is necessary, for we find out much more about them in captivity than we ever could know, however closely we watched them, in their native haunts. I know that instinct or inherited habit plays a great part in the life of animals, as it does in the life of men. The ability to reason differs in different species of animals, and I think that for the highest place in intelligence the ape and the elephant run a dead heat.

REASONING IN A BEAVER

Some persons talk of birds teaching their young to fly, but that is nonsense. Here in the park we have reared young loons and other water fowl by hand, and when they were turned loose they performed a considerable number of the functions of their kind although they never had an opportunity to learn any of these functions by observation. That was a case of instinct or inherited habit. On the other hand, an example of reasoning from cause to effect is afforded in the case of an animal like a beaver, that has been caught by one foot in a steel trap. Occasionally a beaver in that predicament will gnaw off its foot and thus escape. Before he resorted to that extreme the beaver in each case tried to break the trap or sever the chain. At last he reached the conclusion that he must inflict upon himself the pain of amputating his foot. I look upon that as reasoning, for surely the beaver was never in such a position before, and he could not have inherited the knowledge from his ancestors, since most of those that were caught in traps ended their careers as soon as the trapper made his rounds. Therefore I look upon the beaver's action in biting off his foot as an instance of reasoning.

Another proof of reasoning powers is furnished whenever a bear that has just been captured is placed in a box for shipment. The bear has had no previous experience with boards or planks but he searches the sides of the box carefully until he finds a knothole or weak plank, and there he begins to try to scratch and bite his way out. Lions and tigers show a lower grade of mind, for they bite at the iron bars in a senseless sort of way, instead of trying to break out through the wood.

THE CHIMPANZEE'S LEVER

As an animal genius I might mention Donhong, a chimpanzee we had at the park about three years ago. He discovered the principle of the lever just as truly as did Archimedes. There was a trapeze in his cage with a three foot bar suspended by long chains. Also there were horizontal bars attached to the sides of the cage for his use in exercising. He often tried to tear off these bars, but was not strong enough to do so. Finally, one day, as he was swinging about on the trapeze, the end of the trapeze bar caught between one of the horizontal bars and the side of the cage. In trying to clear the trapeze, he accidentally used the trapeze bar as a lever, and by its power tore the horizontal bar from the wall. That was an accident, of course, but he had grasped the idea, and at once started to apply the new principle. With the trapeze bar he pried off every horizontal bar in the cage.

He did not stop there for when we put up stronger horizontal bars, supported by skeleton brackets, he tried the lever principle on them. Failing

MAN'S WEAKEST POINT

Over one Quarter of the Civilized Races Die of Lung Diseases.

Careful records, extending over many years, show that from one-third to one-third of the deaths of young and old, in any community, are caused by consumption, pneumonia, bronchitis, asthma, or some other disease of the throat or lungs. No other organ or system of organs is responsible for half as many deaths.

Scientists explain that the air contains millions of germs of these different diseases, ready to pounce upon us the moment our defence is weakened. A run-down condition or a neglected cold is in thousands of cases a sufficient opening for a deadly attack.

The way to be safe is to keep on hand a bottle of Father Morrirey's No. 10 (Lung Tonic) and use it at the first symptoms of even a common cold. It clears out the mucus from the passages, allays the inflammation and brings a speedy cure.

More than that, it tones up and strengthens the lungs and the whole system to resist further attacks. Trial size, 25c a bottle. Regular size 50c. The Father Morrirey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B.

to dislodge them with the trapeze bar, he tore off a strip of tongue-grooved board, thrust this long lever through one of the skeleton brackets, and tried to pry it off. He failed, and summoned a smaller female chimpanzee in the cage to help him. All of this was in keeping with the character of Donhong, for he was naturally inventive and differed from the average individual of his species by avoiding imitation.

DIFFERENCE IN INDIVIDUALS

I don't want to steal any of the thunder of Mr. Haggerty, of Harvard, who was experimenting with the mental qualities of monkeys at our Primate House last summer, but I might say that some of the most interesting tests he applied were with two orang-utangs. He placed a banana in the middle of a lead pipe, about four feet long, and gave the orangs a stick. One of them immediately thrust in the stick and pushed out the banana. The other did not grasp the idea and could not get the prize. The same pair showed an equal difference in intelligence when a banana was placed on a table in front of the cage. The banana was out of reach of the animals, but one of them used a stick to draw it into reach of his hand, just as a would have done. The other, anxious for the food, but did not know enough to use the stick.

LaGrippe Coming Again

Europe is now in its grasp, and in a short time America will be over run with this awful epidemic. Get ready, use preventive measures. Build up a surplus of vigor by Ferrozone, and intake Catarrhozone three times each day. Nothing destroys the gripe germ like Catarrhozone. It cures the cold, breaks up the fever, relieves the headache and destroys every vestige of catarrh and sore throat. For Bronchitis, Grippe and winter influenza Catarrhozone is best. Sold by all dealers 25c. and $1.00.

Living Thoughts

Pleasure is very seldom found where it is sought; our brightest blazes of gladness are often kindled from unexpected sparks.

Better to strive for the pearl of great price than the price of a great pearl.

When a man acknowledges the source of his blessings he is not likely to see their end.

Happiness depends, not on what we have but on our attitude towards what we have.

Just because a man can't set the world on fire is no reason why he should be a wet blanket.

Straining and striving may starve the soul.

In prayer close your eyes, not eye your clothes.

Faith is not a balancing pole for the man on the fence.

Refuse another's burden and you lose your own blessing.

A great sorrow may be the fitting for some great service.

That is not a good life which does not find living a glad thing.

The real relish in success is to deserve it.

Paradoxical as it may seem, the standing of a believer is determined by his "walk."

Content earnestly for the faith; but beware of having your contention become contentiousness.

Be charitable before wealth makes covetous.

RHEUMATIC TREATMENT

Some Simple Precautions Which Will Prevent a Recurrence of Attacks.

A prominent citizen, who had for years suffered from rheumatism and rheumatic gout, has been giving his friends the benefit of his experience, and incidentally a copy of the prescription which was of material assistance in effecting a cure.

In the first place, he found that every time he partook freely of acid fruits his old trouble returned; and, secondly, he learned that it was absolutely essential to keep the kidneys active. To do this it was necessary to drink plenty of water. Occasionally he would dissolve a little tablet in the water to assist its action on the kidneys.

The treatment is as follows: Preparation from your druggist: Fluid Extract Cascara, 1/2 oz.; Compound Syrup Rhubarb, 1 oz.; Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla, 1 oz.; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, 5 oz.

Take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime. This is valuable information. This can be mixed at home. Save the prescription.

THEIR WIVES

From the Chicago News

Brownly had a good memory. That was why when he ran into Mulpepper on the street he knew the man at once, although it had been ten years since they had met.

Blocky Mulpepper's way he called out a "What are you doing here of all places on earth?" that bade fair to cause a blockade of traffic. Mulpepper being slower of mind than Brownly, stared suspiciously a moment, though the light of recollection soon began filtering across his countenance.

"Sunny Brownly, by all that's good," he shouted. "Who'd a thought it?"

Some hours later, when Brownly was taking Mulpepper out home with him for dinner and to stay over night reminiscences still flew thick and fast. They had successfully canvassed the old swimming hole and the way they used to rub Chub Haskin's hair dry so his mother would not detect and lie him. They had discussed the way they invariably fought the umpire in the baseball games. They had remembered Sim Jenkin's graduation speech at the old high school. They had gone to different colleges after graduation and gradually as the years went by had been less and less of each other.

"Remember Daisy Parker?" Brownly inquired, suddenly.

"Daisy, oh, yes, I should say I do!" said his friend. "Wasn't she a cute little thing? And she always wore blue ribbon. She was your girl all right. Remember how we teased you at Willetts' party and you got so hot about it afterward and told me it was all rot, that you for one intended being an exception to the rule that tall men always fall in love with rolly-polly women? I remember you described the sors of girl you intended to marry. She was to be almost as tall as you, with level straight brows and a calm manner. You wanted good judgment and common sense in your wife, above all else. You said Daisy was a nice little creature and you liked her well enough, but she was too littenish for your taste and that you would soon tire of that sort of thing."

"Did I say that?" Brownly asked, a trifle blankly.

"You were always talking that way, insisted Mulpepper. "You surely have not forgotten all our confabs? I used to think in spite of it that you'd marry her sometime."

"Well, I didn't," Brownly said, hastily. "I don't know what became of her, in fact. A fellow does talk a lot of idioecy when he's a kid. You were just as strong the other way. I've heard you argue by the hour, fat, square, short fellows like you were ninies for invariably picking out women taller than themselves. You said they made themselves ridiculous by the contrast and always looked like little boys trotting with their mammas when they walked out with their wives. You broke my best pipe one time by almsing down your fist as you yowled you never would do such a foolish thing. Remember?"

"It's been so long ago," stammered Mulpepper, apologetically. "You certainly have a memory, haven't you? I don't think I ever said—"

"Yes, you did?" insisted Brownly. "Think I'd forget? It was funny, because you always danced with the tallest girls at the parties. I remember Addie Fiske was your favorite and she was the tallest of the lot. Why, Addie must have been almost six feet, wasn't she?"

Only five, ten and a half, said Mulpepper, a trifle defiantly.

"Anyhow," Brownly said, "she towered head and shoulders above you. Addie would have been pretty, if she hadn't been so blooming big. She wasn't only tall, she was broad. She had nice eyes, though."

"You bet," said Mulpepper. He stared out of the street car window and seemed ill at ease. There was a frown on his rosy face.

"Yes, Addie was a nice girl," went on Brownly, with condescending praise, "but you and she were a sight together in the old days. The long and short of it! I suppose that was what made you so fierce against marrying a tall woman. By the way, Mully, I suppose you are married, aren't you? I thought so. Well, whom did you marry, old boy?"

"Addie," said Mulpepper in a loud voice and stared Brownly in the eyes. That person never blinked.

"Good for you!" he said, brazenly. "Wasn't I just telling you what a fine girl I always thought she was? Why, that's splendid! I always knew you were too level-headed to believe all that nonsense you spouted when you were a boy—as though a woman's height had anything to do with character or ability or cleverness! Addie. Well! Well!"

Mulpepper looked less ferocious after that, but he still had the defiant air of one caught stealing apples when he walked up Brownly's steps with his host. He was proud of his wife, and it irritated him to have fallen into such an absurd position that Brownly had practically to apologize for his entirely natural supposition.

As he and Brownly deposited their hats and gloves he noticed a queer expression on the face of his lanky host. It was a sort of shame-faced amusement mingled with a politely threatening defiance that grew when the swish of skirts was heard. Presently Mulpepper found himself being introduced to Mrs. Brownly. Instinctively he had raised his eyes to a level with Brownly's head when he turned and then he dropped in jerks to exactly five feet, one, which was the top of Mrs. Brownly's pompadour. She was a dumpling if ever there was one, with a turned-up nose and a kittenish expression.

"I am delighted to meet you," Mulpepper murmured.

Mrs. Brownly never knew why when her husband and his friend at last looked at each other they grinned and shook hands with an air of everything being squared at last.

Great Danger in Headaches

It is often dangerous to consider headache a trifling ailment. If the headache, the stomach is out of order and some serious disease may be impending. To tone up the stomach, to give it healthy action, nothing in modern medicines is so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The concentrated vegetable extracts in Dr. Hamilton's Pills have a quieting healthful effect on the stomach and remove all disorders. Your headache will be cured and they won't return, if you use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Sold everywhere.

Cleopatra's Code

Drain nothing to the dogs, neither sorrow nor happiness. Remember that men always like to be amused, never instructed. Seems transparent, yet be not so in friendship or love.

Always tell the truth, but not the whole truth. Never tell your troubles to a man, but always be ready to hear his. Keep to yourself the inner secrets of your art. Never be monotonous—vary your mode of action. Don't be too much of a dove—even sweetness palls. Keep expectation alive. Put up with fools for the malice of a fool can do more harm. Keep the extent of your accomplishments unknown. Avoid explanations. Your friends don't need them, your enemies won't believe them.

Meddling Mothers

There is one thing that really annoys the poor little Cupid. He hates to see so many girls in the world unmarried. It isn't right, he grunts. Every woman ought to sit at the head of her husband's table, and if he had his own way the woman who might marry and won't, would be exported to an island in the far Pacific.

Of course, Cupid is aware that there are plenty of women who have loved a man and lost him, and never care for anybody else again. He sympathizes with these women. But the number of really nice girls who never have a husband or dear little children and are yet fitted to be such excellent wives and mothers is appalling.

Cupid complains and looks round. He wants to find out the cause, and from enquiries he has caused to be made he finds that the meddling mother is at the bottom of the trouble as a rule.

THE TACTLESS MOTHER

There are three kinds of meddling mothers, and I really don't know which is the worst.

First on the list comes the tactless mother and when I think of her she seems to be the most annoying of the lot until I come to remember the other two.

I am quite sure you have met dozens of tactless mothers. I only hope you have not one yourself. She is one of those good creatures who always say the wrong and never does the right action. A man comes to the house. She rakes up all the things that are likely to annoy him. She asks him was it his sister who was expelled from school, or young Brown's sister? It doesn't matter which it was. She has said the wrong thing. If it were his sister, he will hate her for mentioning the fact; if it were young Brown's sister, he will be furious with her for confusing the girl with his sister.

She will, just at a time when he is feeling very sentimentally inclined towards her little daughter, say, "Oh, Maudie dear, do you remember the day you got into such an awful temper and kicked the cat?" And poor Maudie, who is really in love, did not want him to know that she could ever be tempted to kick a cat or get in a naughty temper.

"LEAVE THEM ALONE" MOTHER

I wish I could persuade every mother that there is one very critical period in a man's or girl's life when they do not want to be talked at. There are plenty of cases in my own knowledge where a happy marriage has never got beyond the courtship stage because the girl had a "leave them alone" mother.

You know the kind of mother I mean. She is always pairing off her girl with a man. Now, there is no doubt that before a man has quite made up his mind he does not want to have opportunity made for him to propose. He gets the idea into his silly head that it is what he calls a "put up" job. He feels that he is being had." He begins to wonder if the dear girl is not very amiable at home, as her mother is in such a hurry to get rid of her.

I have seen a man writhing because a mother has said in front of a whole roomful of people, "My dear, take Mr. Smith into the dining-room and show him your postcard album."

THE CHAPERON MOTHER

The chaperon mother goes to the other extreme, and does just as much harm. She is always tying her poor child to her apron-strings, and always on the lookout for the monster who would dare to untie those strings.

I was talking to such a nice woman the other day, and in a moment of unpardonable curiosity I asked her why she had never married.

"My mother never gave me a chance," she said sadly. "If a man wanted to propose to me, he would have had to propose to mother first, and then she would have waited in the room to see that he asked me to be his wife in the correct language."

The chaperon mother is dreadful.

She is White as a Ghost

Is it a matter of pride to be pale as a lily,—serenely so? What every woman wants is strength, color, vigor. Always keep a box of Ayer's Pills in the house. Just one pill at bedtime, now and then, will ward off many an attack of biliousness, indigestion, sick headache. How many years has your doctor known these pills? Ask him about them.
