She was in a thoroughly seaworthy condition previous to the accident; her equipment was complete in every particular according to the regulations of the Canadian steamship act, and her News in a Nutshell. officers were qualined in their screen ratings. The crew in the different departments were sufficient to insure the safe navigation of the ship, and Principal Grant, of Kingston, is the safety of those on board. The customed in the trade she was engaged, the navigation being left alternately with the captain and the pilot. The master had no special instructions relating to the navigation of the vessel from the owners in the distribution, management and discipline of the crew, which was entirely left to him.

THE WRECK.

"The Islander left Skaguay Aug. 14 about 7:30 p.m., and was totally wrecked about 2:15 a.m., Aug. 15, by contact with some unknown sub stance, presumably ice, sinking in deep water in less than 20 minutes after the collision, and resulting in the loss of the lives of the master, 16

THE CAUSE. "It does not appear from the evidence adduced that the master realized the imminent danger in which the accident placed the ship, hence the lack of prompt and resolute means in arousing the crew and passengers, who were asleep in the cabin, in placing an officer and crew in each boat, and enforcing the proper quota of passengers to each boat. The evidence clearly shows that the capacity of the boats was sufficient to accommodate every person on board, but owing to want of proper management and discipline there was a rush to the boats, at the last moment, which was beyond the control of the few officers and men of the crew engaged in putting the boats into the water, thereby preventing the rescue of several valuable lives.

DISREGARDED DANGER. "While due praise must be awarded to those of the officers and crew who remained by the ship until she sank and for assisting so many of the pasended the funeral in New York of sengers to reach the boats, we cannot Fred H. > PILOT CENSURED. "We think that the pilot, Leblanc, is open to censure for his action in keeping the ship full speed, at the rate of nearly 14 knots an hour, after having seen floating ice some time before the accident. We would condemn the custom apparently in vogue in coast waters, of leaving the bridge of any steamer at night, and more especially a passenger steamer, in charge of only one officer. We also find that there is no proof in the evidence that the loss of the Islander was due to the intemperance of the master or others.' GRUESOME VOYAGE AROUND THE HORN.

Mrs. G. H. Reid, North Augusta, Ont., says :- "Being troubled with bronchitis and asthma for a long time, have tried several remedies, but all failed to touch the spot, until I tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. I got relief from the first bottle. I can highly recommend it to all humanity suffering from throat or lung troubles. And you are at liberty to use this testimony as you see fit." Ont., says: -"I feel it my duty to re-commend Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, as I had the Asthma very bad; could get nothing to do me any good. A friend of mine persuaded me to try this remedy, as he had tried it, and it proved successful. I tried it and it cured me. I am thankful to-day to say I am a well woman through the use of this remedy. I keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it."

In Japan there are four regular schools, with 189 boarding pupils and 204 day pupils; two orphanages with 24 children; two day schools for the poor, with 50 pupils; two night schools for the poor, with 78 pupils; two industrial schools with 40 pupils, and two kindergartens with 120 pupils. There were 14 foreign missionaries 33 native teachers. An orphanage had been built at Kanazawa. Five new foreign workers were asked for, one of them be a trained kindergartner. The 20th century fund special services had had a great revival influence on the work. Some of the ladies in the West China field had started back to recommence work after the rebellion, but were stopped at Chungking until the interior was more settled. The French work was not marked by any special features. There had been 50 children in the Crosby Girls' Home during the year, and 83 patients, 23 whites and 60 Indians, in the hospital at Fort Simpson. There was a request for a trained nurse at Morley. HOME MISSIONS.

Mrs. G. P. McKay, Toronto, presented a very encouraging report. The society now comprises nine branches and auxiliaries, with a membership of 17,-276. Of mission circles and bands there were 277, with a membership of 7,696. The income from auxiliaries and bands was $43,975 66. In the number of auxiljaries there is an increase of 14, and an increase of members amounting to 815 The number of mission circles and the membership by 338. The Easter thank-offering this year was unusually large, amounting to $8,146 46, exceeding last year's by $1,998 80. This was a special offering for the work in China.

Washington, Oct. 24.-Records of 20 ourt-martials for murder in the ippines have been received at the war department. Harry Cline, a teamster of the United States army, took a bike ride at Paranaque, and seeing four small native boys gathering grass he indulged in revolver practice, wounding three and killing one. For this he indulged in revolver practice, wound-ing three and killing one. For this he went to the home of a man named Ragudo and tied himself, father and mother, demanding money. Not re-ceiving it they placed oiled rags on the feet of the victims and lighted them, then killed Ragudo's daughter. After frightful torture they left and Rugudo died five days later. The five were sentenced to death.

HELD AT BAY!

By the Brave Express Messenger

His Car Blown Open With Dynamite,

Eugene, Ore., Oct. 24.-The northbound Southern Pacific overland express, due here at 3:42 a.m., was held up by robbers near Walker's station, 15 miles south of here, at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, and the express car badly damaged, but the robbers secured little booty. Two men boarded the train at Cottage Grove as the the blessing of God on past results; After passing Walker's, which second, the lasting nature of the work four miles from Cottage Grove, they climbed over the tender and covered Engineer Burt Lucas and the fireman and his helper with revolvers. The robbers ordered the train stopped, after which the fireman and helper were compelled to uncouple the train between the express car and the first coach. Engineer Lucas was then ordered to pull ahead, the fireman and helper being left behind. After going a short distance the train was stopped and the robbers proceeded to the express car, taking with them the engineer.

HELD THE FORT.

The express car was blown open with dynamite and Express Messenger Charles was ordered out, but he refused to go, and with his shot gun commanded the situation inside the The robbers told him to come out or he would be blown up with the car, but he replied "Blow ahead." A fusillade of bullets followed, riddling the car, but the messenger, who was uninjured, kept up a continuous fire from the inside, which held the robbers at bay. The charge of dynamite was then thrown into the car with a burning fuse. But Charles grabbed it and threw it outside, where it exploded. Next the robbers compelled the engineer to crawl up to the opening, inside of the car, hoping to use him as a protection from the messenger's shots, but the messenger kept up steady fire over the engineer's head. and still held the robbers at bay.

WENT FOR THE MAIL. The robbers then gave up their efforts to secure the express treasure, and went for the mail. They secured the registered mail, then cut the engine from the rest of the train and ordered Engineer Lucas to pull ahead. They ran to Judkin's Point, on the outskirts of Eugene, where they disembarked and ordered the engineer to return and get his train. The train arrived here at 7:30, four hours late. The news was wired from Saginaw and officers were out in search of the robbers early this morning, but as yet

Ross, who was ref characteristic force, expressed his pleasure at the opportunity to meet ace to face with so many Sunday school workers. He recalled his very close identification in years gone by with Sunday school work, although le was fain to admit that in later years perhaps he had backslidden, in that he was not actively engaged as heretofore. He had not, however, lost any degree of interest in the Sunday Toronto is noted for its conventions, but he knew of no gatherwith more important results to the province than the gathering of Sunday school workers, who were training today the masters of posterity in one of the most important lines in which the human mind and more particularly otill the human heart and character can be trained. If anyone held the key of all that is good and lofty in posterity, it was the Sunday school teacher. He

While appreciating the value of the International Series of Lessons, he was old-fashioned enough to desire to impress upon teachers the necessity for seeing that the Bible, out of which those lessons are taken, is placed in the hands of their pupils: he liked th idea of every Sunday school child having its own Bible, and afways had preferred whenever practicable that the lessons for the day be read, not out of the lesson slip, but from the Bible it-

He always felt that the child who has its own Bible and studies the lessons of the day from it will feel there is something still in the Bible to be looked into, and that he has merely baited his taste and interest in the book. This will lead him to further inquiry, and he will read for himself. Second, the outlook for cheese is limited, and everything depends on the quality to induce a large consump-Third, the consumption of ishing, while the consumption of finest creamery butter is rapidly growing. Fourth, the price of butter is higher on an average all the year round than cheese, for the finest qualities. Fifth, the manufacture of butter is more profitable than cheese, not only in the comparative price, but in that farm stock and the land are better sustained. And lastly, in order to maintain high prices there must be a continuous supply of finest butter, and as the flow of milk is lessening now, it is most urgent that the quantity should be kept up as much as possible, and to divert the milk from cheese to this article is the only way to keep up the supply. The circular contains the following addenda regarding butter and cheese: Butter should be shipped fresh weekly to command the best price. It is recommended that all factories should be fitted up so as to make either cheese or butter. Cheese should be held three weeks at a temperature of 60 degrees to insure proper curing. Serious complaints continue to come of cheese being shipped too green. Packages both of cheese and butter are still made of much too thin wood.

Will President Roosevelt Invite a Rebuff.

It is not at all probable that President Roosevelt of the United States will make a favorable response to the Boer appeal for intervention in the South African war. Such intermeddling would not be a return for the sympathetic offices of Great Britain, during the late war between the United States and Spain, and the altitude of the motherland on that occasion is toe well understood by a very large number of the people of the adoining republic to make it a popular move on the part of the President, even were actively oppose the British programme with regard to South Africa.

al law, President Roosevelt would not have a leg to stand on if he were to attempt intervention. Nor could he, looking to the history of his own country, find a respectable precedent on which to base interference with Great Britain at the present time. There are but two items in the British programme upon which the advocates of intervention-and there are some who suggest such a course for the new Presidentmight raise objection: The burning of the premises of various residents of South Africa, and the concentration into camps of the wives and daughters of the Boers, in the fleid. No one who knows anything about the "thorough" campaign of the Union generals in the civil war of the United States, or of the expedients resorted to by those charged with the subjugation of the Philippine Islanders, would imagine, for a moment, the raising of an international question by the United States, because the British soldiers were empowered to burn down Boer premises that were being used to conceal men who were killing off their fellow-men, and who could only be combated in this way. It was, one must admit, an extreme expedient, but war has much of the extreme and horrible in it. There is even less excuse for intervention, or even "friendly" protests, against the system of concentrating in camps the women and children of the Boers in the field or in confinement. If Great Britain were to receive a protest from the President of the United States in regard to this matter, the retort would probably be that the course pursued was the best open-that far from being inhuman, the treatment of the women and children of the absent men was the best possible under all the circumstances. It could be fairly argued, inmane than to have left them to starve has in the Philippines. However, this on the farms, stripped as they were, is President Roosevelt's statement: first by one combatant and then by ford sustenance to life.

The Church of England has a strong hold upon the English people, though its actual adherents do not number more than half the population. Still any political campaign against the church would not be popular just now. Those who will help to make it popular again are the bigots who think that the pure and exact type of Christianity is confined to not merely a part of the Church of England, but the section of a part. The British people, Churchmen and Nonconformists, as a whole, love fair play, and they will not stand that kind of nonsense. writes from New York, on the 15th of September last, a long contribution on methods, objects and probable results. I am at least certain we shall do no good by ignoring it. To use an Americanism, it has come and come to stay -it will be a large factor in the history of the century, and in one way or another we have to reckon with it." As we are situated on this continent, and as Canadians have manifested considerable interest in the latest symbol of Pan-Americanism, namely, the Buffalo Exhibition, we naturally wish to know what is meant by Pan-Americanism. This writer tells us that "the he personally inclined to interfere, to Pan-American is the advocate of the Monroe doctrine in its widest signification. To the practical American On the broad principle of internationpolitician he is what the Irredemtist was to the Italian statesman. He cannot be disavowed, but he is distinctly inconvenient." Speaking of the late President's speech, delivered just before the tragic end, he says: "On this side, at all events, it was regarded as indicating not only a coming reversal of the strictly protectionist tariff, but can't get Bobby to go at all.—Detroit also in spite of its peaceful tone, as a closer approximation to the views of the Pan-American." Mr. Blaine is referred to as the earliest prophet of Pan-Americanism, and his words of eleven years ago quoted: "It is not an ambitious destiny for so great a country as ours to manufacture only what we can consume or produce only what we can eat." Capt. Mahan is put in the same class, and he is reported as saying, "Independently of all bias for or against protection, it is safe to predict that when the opportunities for trade abroad are widened the course of American enterprise will clear a channel by which to reach them." All these are respectable statesmen who would have a clear idea of what is possible and fair in the dealings of nations with one another. But we are afraid that the "Pan-American" of the coarse limited kind will look upon it as a policy of keeping America for the Americans, and getting as much as possible of the outside world as well. This would easily degenerate into jingoism and imperialism of a very bad kind. The new President believes in expansion, as a world-policy and worldduties, yet his statement of the Monroe doctrine is clear and firm enough. He evidently sees no inconsistency in these two ideas, but it is not certain that the world will accept his position. We can quite conceive circumstances deed, that to comfortably house, clothe under which some European power and feed these unfortunate victims of might have as much right and duty war, collectively, was far more hu- in South America as the United States

But it appears that many of the most intelligent and humane people of the State maintain that for certain classes of crimes, the pillory and the whipping post are the just punishment and the most effective corrective. Here is the argument of one of their high authorities:

"Experience teaches that the whipping post has kept criminals out of the State, and has tended materially to keep persons living in the State from the commission of crime. Nothing acts upon the perceptions and motives of brutalized man like whipping."

"I firmly believe in the reforming influences and power of love and gentle treatment rather than fear of harsh punishment; but there are certain natures, some it may be, irreclaimable, whose conscience and conduct can be best governed by the rod. To such and spoil the child,' still applies." this subject, concluding with the However, this authority goes on to say words: "But whatever opinion we that the suffering is not severe. The sting is in the public disgrace and brace her ignominy of the whipping, and in this lies its efficacy." But one would not expect the thoroughly "brutalized man" to feel so keenly the sting of public disgrace. Many facts are given to show that whipping is a powerful deterrent, and, so far as Delaware is concerned, effi-

Average Yield of Wheat in Manitoba and the Territories.

Winnipeg, Oct. 24.-Railway officials recently wired to their agents at the grain stations in every part of the province and the Northwest Territories to furnish reports as to the results of threshing, so far as it has gone. These have now been received, and with but a few exceptions in the Red River Valley, they greatly mini-mize the damage done by the recent bad weather. The quality of the wheat, as a rule, grades No. 1 northern. The yield has turned out from 15 to 50 bushels to the acre, and the average will be about 32 bushels per acre. An announcement has been posted at the grain shipping office notifying the grain trade that on and after Nov. 1 the charges on wet or condemned bin burnt wheat for storage at King's elevator, Port Arthur, will be one cent for the first fifteen days, per bushel, and 11/2 cents thereafter. The charges for tough wheat will remain the same as last year.

BRANTFORD'S SENSATION!

Mrs. Josephine White's Trial in Progress.

Mrs. Partridge Swears That Witness Said She Hated Her Husband-Doctor Says the Husband Died From Strychnine.

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 23 .- The trial of Mrs. Josephine White for the murder of her husband last April is still in progress. So far the evidence produced is much the same as that taken at the coroner's inquest. The court house is filled with spectators to hear the trial.

Mrs. Partridge, of Hamilton, a relaive of the dead man, gave evidence that Mrs. White was visiting with her in Hamilton about Good Friday last. Witness and prisoner had talked together. Prisoner said she hated her huband. There was a man in Brantford, she said, whom she would marry if White were dead, but such men do not die easy. Cross-examined as to the life led by Mr. and Mrs. White, witness said it was a pitiful one, as far as she knew. Never saw Mr. White under the influence of liquer. She had asked Mrs. White why she did not live with her husband, and she said they could not agree together. Mrs. White also said that wherever she went White would follow her.

Mary Cravine, an important witness in the case, cannot be located. The prosecuting attorney moved that evidence taken at the police court be accepted. Counsel for Mrs. White objected to this. He said sufficient effort had not been made to locate Mary Cravine. His lordship ruled that her evidence in the police court should not be admitted until every effort had been made to find the missing wit-

Charles Williams was in Strowbridge's livery stable office on the morning of White's death, and Mrs. White came in and telephoned to Dr. Marquis to come, as White was going to die. Later on Mrs. White called him over, as White was ill and she was alone. He went, and White was sitting in his room, complaining of pains, but quite conscious. White said he had taken a drink of whisky Saturday night, and asked if that would hurt him. He went to the fire hall for Frank White, a son of the pris-oner's; also for the doctor. On his return White was lying across Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the bed. His legs and hands were stiff.

Dr. Marquis testified that he had treated White in February for grip. Mrs. White telephoned for him, and There is nothing equal to it for williams came after him. At the home of James Baker, he was a frequent visitor. Baker warned him away, but he did not heed. The result was that Baker separated from his wife and sued her for a divorce, charging her with unfaithfulness and naming Wallace as corespondent. The case was to have come to trial this week, but it has been dismissed, the wife bringing forward indisputable proof that Wallace was in reality a woman masquerading in

ALLAN'S CASE FELL THROUGH.

Cigar Traveler Charged With

Cecil J. Allan, the cigar traveler, arrested Tuesday, on a charge of obtaining $20 by false pretenses from Wm. Carroll, a Hamilton tobacconist, was before the magistrate at the Hamilton COFFEE.

New York, Oct. 23.—Coffee values took a decided drop today, and trading at the decline was the liveliest of recent times. The market opened steady in tone at a decline of 20 to 30 points under an avalanche of selling orders from everywhere, following rumors to the effect that rain was reported in Argentina, and would soon reach Brazil crops. This news also affected European markets, and on the whole tended to throw a scare into the bulls, which they did not get over all day. On very aggressive bear hammering, prices sagged further, and the final phases of the market were irregular, with the close weak in tone at a net loss of 35 to 45 points. Europe sold heavily, while the buyers of previous days were to be seen unloading extensively today. Brazilian receipts, which were heavy, helped to weaken the local market. Sales on call were 34,000 bags; up to noon they were 68,000, and total transactions reached the enormous total of 180,250 bags. including: Nov., $6 30; Dec., $6 25 to $6 50; Jan., $6 45 to $6 55; Jan., $6 55 to $6 75; April. $6 75 to $6 85; May., $6 70 to $6 95; June, $6 95; July., $6 95 to $7 10; Aug., $7 05; Sept., $7 10 to $7 30. police court yesterday morning. He decided to allow the magistrate to dispose of his case and pleaded not guilty. Mr. Carroll said that on the representation that he was still employed by the Canada Cigar Company of London, Allan induced him to indorse a draft on the firm for $20. The firm declined to accept the draft and notified him that Allan had been discharged a week before. After Mr. Carroll had given his evidence, the crown attorney and magistrate got into an argument about the case. Mr. Crerar did not think that an offense had been committed under the statute, and as Allan was willing

The magistrate was of a very different opinion, but said that if the crown had no further evidence to offer it was not for him to try to make a criminal of the man, and he therefore discharged him.

Allan lives on Ellen street in this city, and is wanted here on several charges, one of them being that of stealing $2 from William Fountain, of 30 Adelaide street west. Detective Cuddy went to Hamilton for the pris-oner yesterday morning. He is a cigar traveler in the employ of Fred Hasel-grove, Dundas street, London.

Morley's Address - Defense Against the Charge of "Following the Crowd''-The Statue a Gift From William Roberts.

Manchester, Oct. 24 .- Manchester is ing and directing public opinion. fortunate in obtaining, without public subscription or prolonged effort, a spirited and characteristic statue of home rule bill in the House of Com-mons, Mario Raggi, an Italian scuip-cessary, war. If Gladstone had not ternoon at 3 o'clock from his late restor, was among the spectators, and done anything else except the Geneva sketched the orator during the delivarbitration he would have deserved a services will be conducted by Rev. G. ery of his speech. The clay models statue of marble, bronze, or even pure Albert Square, near the main entrance was followed with enthusiasm. French-Canadian Lady Furnishes an the expression of face and the vigor-Old Man in his most earnest mood.

THE STATUE. The statue is ten feet high, and stands on a simple pedestal. One arm is outstretched in masterful gesture, the sculptor having reproduced with striking effect the orator's abnormally long forefinger. The other hand clasps with a strong grip a roll of manuscript. The figure is finely posed, one foot being slightly raised, and the weight being carried by the other leg. Above the high collar and familiar crumpled cravat rises the massive and majestic head in epical dignity. It is a stronger work than Raggi's work of Beaconsfield in Parliament Square, Westminster, and one of the best examples of sculpture in Eng-

THE CEREMONIES. The ceremonies were simple and unpretentious. Mr. John Morley was quietly entertained at luncheon by the civic authorities, and unveiled the statue with a few words of eulogy in the presence of a large open-air audience. He delivered subsequently in the great room of the town hall, where he could be heard, an eloquent and scholarly tribute to the greatest of English Liberals.

There was a tremendous outburst of applause from the vast audience when he was introduced with a brief sentence by the lord mayor.

HIS ADDRESS.

Speaking without notes and with occasional signs of hesitation, he gave the impression of thinking aloud out of a full mind on the one subject which he considered of supreme importance in a history of the times. His gestures were frequent. There were passages of quiet irony, and there was a deep undertone of earnestness. Disclaiming any intention of making a partisan of the occasion, he invited the audience to enjoy something of the peace and perspective of history in re-flecting on the career and character of the great man who had swept like

GLADSTONE AND PUBLIC OPIN-

ION. Mr. Morley contended that detraction from Gladstone's work would be nothing les sthan a slur on the English people, since he had during a generation a flood-tide of popularity. He dissented strongly, however, from Huntley's bitter remark, "Here is a Europe, and he debases it by following majorities and crowds." Mr. Morley asserted that the exact opposite was truth, and that the flowing tide was often against Gladstone and that he struggled against it. He gave several illustrations from financial legislation and Irish land tenure of Gladstone's power of creating, transform-

THE GENEVA ARBITRATION. Finally Mr. Morely referred, amid tremendous applause, to the Geneva arbitration as a noble reparation for Mr. Gladstone. A Welshman named misreading the civil war in America. 'TWASN'T HER HONEY

A young married woman from the south who was visiting New York a few days ago with her husband left him in their hotel room one morning while she went on an errand. She was not accustomed to big hotels nor to big New York, but she got back without mishap in half an hour and knocked at the door. There was no re-

"Let me in, honey," said the young woman knocking more vigorously. Still no response. "Honey, let me in," called the young

"Honey, aren't you there? I want to get in. Honey open the door.' Then arose from the other side of the door a deep, bass voice with a resentful note in it. "Madam," it said, "this is not a bee-This is a bathroom."-New

HORSE SLIGHTLY HURT.

A delivery horse belonging to J. Tanton & Son started to kick while being driven past the postoffice this morning. 'It got its right hind leg wedged between the body of the vehicle and the cross-piece of the shafts. With the assistance of two or three policemen and half a dozen spectators the animal was extricated from its uncomfortable position with no other injury save a severe strain to the tendens of the leg. The shafts and harness were broken.

Warden Meade, of the prison, has selected Tuesday so that final arrangements may be made on Monday. In doing this he is following the general custom of the state prison relative to electrocutions. The sentence was that execution should take place during the week commencing Oct. 28, leaving to the warden full power to select the day. This latitude is given the warden because of the uncertainty of electrical apparatus. The witnesses will assemble at 6:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning. There have been 26 invitations isto hold a weekly sitting of the high sued, and they are non-transferable. Each witness must be identified to the satisfaction of the warden as being the man to whom the invitation is issued, or he will not be admitted.

The Effect of Sudden Riches on People of Humble Birth.

The Desire for Titles-Colonial Militarism-Democracy in New Zealand-A Description of Ob-

noxious Customs. Of course, there are some people, men and women alike, who consider themselves better than others, because they are in more affluent circumstances than their neighbors, and it not infrequently happens that persons of this description are amongst the most vulgar in the community. Like beggars mounted, they ride their horses to death, and render themselves contemptible in many ways. As a rule they have had very humble beginnings, but opulence turns their heads, and, like all upstarts, they are invariably found "putting on side," as the colonial saying goes, and making themselves generally ridiculous. This self-assertiveness on the part of some City Clerk's Office, 24th October, A. D. October, A colonials who have acquired wealth renders them very objectionable, and the most intolerable specimen of colonial you can possibly meet with is the woman who has graduated from the washtub or the kitchen to a big mansion in a fashionable suburb, and lolls about in her well-cushioned landau, and has a liveried footman to open the carriage door when she drives out to do some shopping or to call at Government House, as the case may be. Miss Stevenson went ahead of the others, and mimicked Miss Stanly's walk. She was rewarded by shrieks of laughter. But Elsie had not made anybody the wiser respecting her encounter with the cousins Hammond in the wood. While all the schoolgirls sat merrily drinking tea and heartily devouring bunsend breed and hutter in the long schools. and bread and butter in the long school-room at Coome Hill House, the family and visitors at Charteris Court were assembled in the amber drawing-room, waiting for the ringing of the gong that was to summon them to dinner. Now that the Earl was in London attending to his parliamentary duties the Countess had inaugurated a somewhat simpler mode of life as regards hours and other arrangements. The dinner was at six instead of at eight, the breakfast at nine, the lunch was at one. fast at nine, the lunch was at one.

It was something past five on the lovely spring evening when Miss Phillipson had taken her pupils into the primrose wood. It had been so warm a March day that the sweetly-scented wood fire had been allowed to smolder low in the exquisite porcelain fireplace. The long windows commanded a delightful view of the wooded park of Charteris. The trees, still bare, looked incongruous in the warm, rich light of the sinking sun. The purple far-famed Surry, hills stood out against a background of pale amber flecked with roseate cloudlets. High above it all the heaven was pure blue, the color of turquoise.

The air came in from the garden below, laden with faint fragrance of the gemladen with faint fragrance of the gem-like spring flowers, the crocuses glowing like yellow topazes, and others like pur-ple amethysts in the borders. There were golden daffodils, blue hyacinths, and Chase loved air. She had thrown un one of the windows, and she sat close to it. An open book lay on her lap; but she was not reading, she was looking at the purple hills and the amber heaven. The beauty and the calm acted on her sensitive spirit like a spell. How lovely she still was! a woman long past youth, whose feet were on the downward slope of the hill of life, but whose steps were surrounded by the sweet blossoming flowerets of her good deeds.

As Clara, Countess of Chase, had passed from childhood to worth from whith

As Clara, Countess of Chase, had passed from childhood to youth, from youth to womanhood, from womanhood into that sadder region which poets call the sere and yellow leaf, she had sown the precious seed of her good works on either side of the way as she walked along. Had she reaped the fruits herself? Not guite-not yet-not as her heart desired.

"Her eyes are homes of silent prayer," but some of those prayers are yet unanswered. She has patience, she has faith, but she has erred in loving too much, in trusting too much; her grasp has been gentle when it should have been

has been gentle when it should have been firm. She has spoken loving, sweet words, rather than the wholesome bitter ones of just reproof. In these respects she has shown the weakness of our poor humanity, even at its best and noblest. Still, she is a lovely and tovable woman. How pure are the contours of her pale face! what a divine light is in those face! what a divine light is in those still brilliant eyes! She wears her hair, streaked with "silver threads among the gold," under a dainty lace cap, with a single rich feather of palest pink; her dress is a black brocade, with trimmings of old lace, fastened by a single diamond of great size and luster; this is her only ornament.

"What a long time Arthur is!" she "What a long time Arthur is!" she said at last, starting suddenly out of her reverie. Then she looked at her costly little gold watch, and, glancing up, smiling, met the flashing yet soft eyes of Lady Mary Montague.

All the mystery of the incognita was over and done with now, and Lady Mary and her mother were on a visit to Charteris. The brother of Lady Ben Nevis had gone again to the continent, but the foreign lady—the companion Mademois

Chase had cherished a wish, and it had not been granted; she had made a plan, and hitherto it had failed. She was not saddened, she was not depressed; she still ventured to hope that in time the heart of this lovely Mary would furn towards her self-willed, impatient, spoiled Arthur. How she had striven to bring about this marriage! not because Lady Mary was a great heiress, a won-drous beauty, a gifted, highly-cultivated creature, but because she knew that all her life she had been subject to good influences, that she had been reared carefully by a saintly mother—a woman of a high order of intellect, whose aims were all noble, whose life was an ex-ample of good. And willful Arthur had always declared that he hated saints and prodigies. The very name of this Lady Mary, who he had not seen since child-hood, he declared made him ill, and then Lady Chase had schemed to introduce the young people to each other unawares charity ball.

Hammond had fallen head over cars into a tremendous passion for Lady Mary; and Lady Mary, cool, grave, criti-cal, had not fallen in love with Lord

"She could not love a man." she told mother, "who was wrapped up in-hunting and pleasure-seeking—a man who never read and never thought; his piteous, deep love did not even flatter her, for she was no coquette. She was sorry for him, that was all; and when he

sorry for him, that was all; and when he made desperate love to her, she told him that it "could never be."

Lord Arthur fumed and fretted; he made some mad speeches; he said once in his mother's hearing that he "didn't bee much good in living."

Lady Chase soothed him, as a good mother can; she urged him to work, to study, to go into parliament and make a name. She told him that if he lived a nobler life he might yet win the love of this wonderful Lady Mary; but Lord Arthur had no patience. He told all whom he considered as his friends of his troubles; he even told Pauline, who turn-whom he considered as his friends of his troubles; he even told Pauline, who turned pale when she heard his confessions, and shut her lips tightly, but who smiled nevertheless, and told him that "faint heart never won fair lady."

The marriage between Pauline and Paul was now fixed for May. This was by the wish of the countess was now fixed for may. This was by the wish of the countess.

"You will both be happier," she said, "and I will double Paul's salary. You shall live with me for a few years, until Pauline has won her laurels as a reciter Shakespeare." So it was all fixed, and life seemed smooth outwardly at Charteris Court. Lady Mary wore white silk on this spring evening; a necklace of pink coral, from which hung a cross of the same, was her only adornment; the exquisite dress showed all the graceful contours of her noble young form; her face was more beautiful than a poet's dream of a fair woman, pale, pure, pensive, lighted by those etoquent eyes, crowned by that rich, dusky hair.

those eloquent eyes, crowned by that rich, dusky hair.
"And to think she cannot love him!" sighed the countess.
The door opened and Pauline Brace-girdle glided into the armber drawing-room, attired in dinner costume. How had Pauline endured the knowledge that had grown upon her day by day, ever since that ball at the County Families Hotel at Farley? that ball whereat Arthur Hammond first met the Lady Mary, in her incognita, and thereupon surrendered his wild heart at once and for ever to a maiden titled and patrician, and nearly as rich as himself—a maiden who was undazzied by the worldly splepdor of Miss Bracegirdle's hero, and who could not give him love for love? How had Pauline the indomitable endured that 'pitiless logic of facts' which made itself manifest to her day by day?

She ought to have learned by this time that she, Pauline Bracegirdle, was as interesting to Lord Hammond as was stout Mrs. Hobbs, the superintendent good wife at Allanbury, of Mrs. Kinnard, the slim, smooth-spoken, black-silk-robed lady housekeeper at Char eris Court; and having learned that she, Pauline was of no moment to him, she should, for her dignity's sake, have hidden her bitter disappointment and smothered her imperious, all-demanding love. Had she done these things, or was she still secretly clinging to a vain hope, as a ship-wrecked man might cling to the narrow shelf of rock on which he stands—the narrow, slipperv shelf which the cruel waves of the advancing tide are hastening to engulf?

A forlorn hepe—most certainly a forlorn hope—but Pauline had clung to it with all the tenacity of a determined soul—the unconquerable resolve of an audaclous spirit. Lady Chase looked up at her, smiling a kindly smile. She believe her to be high-minded, noble and sifted with extraordinary abilities.

London, Oct. 24 .- J. C. Kelly, an Otta-London, Oct. 24.—J. C. Kelly, an Otta-wa promoter, at the back of the chil-lenge on behalf of the unknown Canadian eager to row George Towns for the world's championship, didn't come up to the mark when he met Towns and his backer, Tom Sullivan, at the Sportsman office yesterday morning, for the purpose of arranging the match. Kelly, in a most unsportsmanlike manner, dropped out, giving as an excuse that he thought the Sportsman cup was included in the Sportsman cup was included in the world's championship when he issued the challenge. He declined Sullivan's challenge on behalf of Towns, for £590 a side lenge on behalf of Towns, for £500 a side and the world's championship. Mr. Kelly, however, claimed that he could name three Canadian carsmen, members of reputable clubs, any one of whom he would select to row Towns. When he found that it was absolutely necessary to submit the name of the competitor to the trustees before a contest for the Sportsman's cup could be arranged, he positively declined to divulge the name of his man, and the proposed match was off. In sporting circles here Kelly's challenge was never taken seriously.

"Charlie" Barr's Stirring Exploits

While we are beaten in the international races again this year, the knowledge that one of the chief knowledge that one of the chief agencies in administering the blow was "raised" by ourselves, is bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, namely, Charley Barr, skipper of Columbia—should tend to soften the bitterness of the experience. Few men in any walk of life have been animated by more honest aspirations, more determination to conquer all obstacles lying between him and his goal, or more tireless tenacity be forced to turn down the offer of $25,000 made for his services by King Edward. Maher has consulted a lawyer, James J. Quinn, of Hartford, but he cannot get away from the fact that he is bound to the estate of Pierre Lorillard and the racing partner of the tobacco millionaire, so it is not entirely certain that Maher will be open to ride for King Edward. The contract made by Maher's father and the Lorillard stables provides that Maher will receive $15,000 annually and ride as his employers may direct. They have an option on his services for another season under the same terms, provided that will be open to ride the value and option of his provides that when the contract made by Maher's father and the Lorillard stables provides that Maher will receive $15,000 annually and ride as his employers may direct. From the very first young Barr became so keenly enamored of the Barr became so keenly enamored of the sea that a summer with his brother on the highly successful racing ten-tonner Ulerin, so impressed him with the possibilities of his new calling that, instead of going back for the winter to his comfortable shop, he engaged to go flounder-trawling on the middle reaches of the Clyde in an eight-ton smack—the wettest, coldest, dirtiest work to which a man can doom himself—so that he might the quicker and the better perfect himself in the difficult art of sailing a cutter-rigged vessel.

rigged vessel. Young Barr had not been long on board the smack till it became abundantly apparent that fate for once wasn't blind when she beguiled this man to the sea. With the exception of himself, the men in the smack were comparatively elderly men, and one bitterly cold winter morning the little boat was caught in a shricking nor'easterly gale off Portincross, the fishing hamlet on the Ayrshire coast, three or four miles south of Feirlie, that produced the Hogarths Eleata (2:08%), the fine 4-year-old trotting mare that has proved to be the greatest money-winner of the grand cirsuit, has been one of the chief sensations of the light harness racing season. Having seen how hopeless it was attempting to beat the boat to a place of safety, he boldly put her before the wind and started to run her to Ardrossan. The boat was only half-decked, and he had an awful time of it to prevent her from pooping the bigger of the seas. Off the entrance to Ardrossan harder in spite of all his skill.

The wild baptism of that winter day seemed to make Barr absolutely indifferent to facing the perils of not only the seas around our own shores, but of the Atlantic as well, in small boats, and soon after he saved John Campbell's smack and her company, he formed one of the crew who took the last of the noted Clyde plank-on-edge 20-tonners (Clyde) to America. The passage was a (Clara) to America. The passage was a most tedious affair, occupying, as it did, between 30 and 40 days. When a skipper between 30 and 40 days. When a skipper was required to take the Fairlie 40-footer Minerva (the hardest nut the Americans were ever set to crack in the way of a racing yacht) to America, Barr was forthcoming, and he took the tiny craft across the Atlantic pretty much as he would have raced her in the land-locked waters of the Clyde; aye, even to giving her the spinnaker whenever the wind was favorable. The Minerva made the passage from Fairlie to Boston in 28 days. As she ran two-thirds of the distance in As she ran two-thirds of the distance in eleven days, there can be no doubt that if she had not got held up for a time in an awful storm (which she swam through like a duck), 50 miles off Cape Cod, she would have made a passage of something

A LOCAL BUDGET.

-Several parcels of property belonging to the Levi Lewis estate, in South London, were offered at auction yesterday afternoon by Mr. J. W. Jones. No sales were made.

-A Toledo dispatch says: The managers of the Everett-Moore syndicate, at a meeting held here, have decided that all the cars in Toledo, Cleveland and Detroit should be of standard color and size. The color will be yellow with black stripes and black numbers. The Toledo Railways and Light Company, of the Everett-Moore system, has purchased valuable down-town realty, for the purpose of establishing a union depot for electric roads.

-The programme of organ music to be played by Mr. Hewlett at the regular monthly organ recital to be given in Dundas Center Methodist Church on Saturday afternoon next will be of a request nature, the numbers having been selected by ballot at the last recital. The following will be the programme: Overture to Tannhauser (Wagner); serenade and Marche Militare (Schubert); Introduction to Third Act of Lohengrin (Wagner); Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni); Overture to William Tell (Rossini); and War March of the Priests (Mendelssohn).

-On Tuesday evening the following interesting programme was presented by the York Street Mission Hall Epworth League, the chair being occupied by the first vice-president, Miss Theresa Axt: Opening hymn, 287; prayer, Mr. Fred, Whallar; Scripture reading, Mrs. Howe; instrumental se-lection, Mrs. T. L. Belcher; reading, Mr. Hyman Bloomgarden; recitation, Miss May Smith; solo, Mr. W. P. On Thursday, Oct. 10, the Missionaries' Home of the New York Foreigners' Mission was the scene of a pleasant and happy event, when Miss Ruth A. Finch, of this city was married to Mr. Harry Lee, formerly of London, England. Both the contracting parties were graduates of Union Missionary Training Institute of Brooklyn, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. Stoddard, pastor of Strong Place Baptist Church, in the presence of a select number of guests. The bride was attended by Miss Smith and the groom by Mr. Janes. The parlors were very beautifully decorated with goldenrod. Mr. and Mrs. Lee are engaged in the Foreigners' Mission, and their many friends will wish them every

COURT OF REVISION IS NOW IN SESSION

Nearly One Hundred and Forty Appeals Have Been Entered for Hearing,

The court of revision, composed of strong. Mr. J. W. Jones (chairman), Sheriff Cameron and Adam T. McMahen, held its first session last night for the pur- he made a place for himself last evening pose of considering the appeal against in their estimation. That he has ability assessment, of which nearly 140 have been entered. A number of the applicants were heard, and a decision in their cases will be rendered later.

The chief source of the complaints entered seems to be the new method of assessing land values, separately, which has led to numerous increases in assessment, where no expenditure or improvement has been made.

Mr. T. H. Smallman was one of last night appellants. He said that he re-ceived a notice of assessment for $23,-000-the value fixed for several years past-upon his residence. Four days later, after he had left for England, a notice came through the mails placing the assessment at $24,000. Assessor Andrus said it was not four days later that the change in assessment was made. The two notices were produced and the dates confirmed Smallman's statement. Mr. Cy Warman, the well known writer, when asked what he would take for the property, against whose assessment he was appealing, answered that he would not sell so long as he could pay the taxes, as London was the best city in the world in which to live. The street railway company's appeal will be heard this afternoon.

ROSY COLOR Produced by Postum Food Coffee.

"I found it was caused by drinking coffee, which I never suspected for a long time, but found by leaving off coffee that the disagreeable feelings "I was brought to think of the subject by getting some Postum Food

Coffee, and this brought me out of trouble. "It is a most appetizing and invigorating beverage, and has been of such great benefit to me that I naturally speak of it from time to time as opportunity offers.

A lady friend complained to me that she had tried Postum, but it did not taste good. In reply to my questions she said she guessed she boiled it about ten minutes. I advised her to follow directions and know that she boiled it fifteen or twenty minutes, and she would have something worth talking about. A short time ago I hear one of her children say that they were drinking Postum now-adays, so I judge she succeeded in making it good, which is by no means

Charles W. Gatecliff Stopped Maddened Team of Horses, Saving Driver's Life.

At the risk of his own life, Charles W. Gatecliff, a former London man, stopped a team of maddened horses in Detroit yesterday, and by so doing saved the life of an old man. Mr. Gatecliff, who is a son of Mrs. Joseph Gatecliff, of 267 Dundas street, went to Detroit some time ago, where he is employed as a street car conductor. In last evening's issue of the Detroit News the story is told as fol-

"Car No. 202 was going east on Warren avenue, and at Twentyseventh street the motorman brought the car to such a sudden stop that all the passengers were excited and some alarmed. Up the road was seen a powerful pair of young horses coming at a frightful speed, and evidently running away. An old man in a heavy farmer's wagon was vainly trying to stop them. They had got beyond the farmer's control, and in one fierce lurch of the wagon, as the frightened animals made a fresh jump, the old man was seen to pitch forward between the wagon and the horses. "A cry of horror went up from all on the car who witnessed the thrilling incident. The motorman jumped from his car and made a grab for the horses, but he failed to reach them, and they swept by like the

"The conductor, however, was more fortunate, or more skillful, for he got a good hold of the bridle, and hung on for his life. He was dragged for a block, but his weight on the horse's bit finally turned the team into the curb, and at last they were brought to a stand, quivering with excitement. "A dozen ready hands soon reached out to hold the horses, and others pulled the old farmer out from his exceedingly dangerous position. He was lying on the whiffletrees, his head resting on the wagon's tongue, and in this uncomfortable place had traveled for more than a block, every second in danger of a violent death."
