THE HERALD

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1890. TOPIC OF THE DAY.

These Lectures, Conservative was declared elected to the Commission of Terrestrial, Quebec, on the 10th inst., owing to the alleged informality in the nomination of Bohannan the Opposition candidate. The election was filled by the appointment of Hon. Mr. O'Brien to the Commission of Terrestrial, Quebec.

Matters political in France are far from settled yet, as a matter of fact they hardly ever are settled there. In consequence of disturbances and anarchy elements in M. Ribot's Cabinet, he was ordered by President Carnot to reconstruct the same. He therefore resigned and was immediately charged by the President with the task of forming a new ministry. This he did, and with two or three exceptions took in his former colleagues. The new ministry was constituted in the chamber of deputies by a good majority. So far good, but there are now indications of dissatisfaction, because the ministry had not been sufficiently purged of the objectionable elements. What extraordinary characters those French politicians be!

The Catholic Weekly Review and the Irish Catholic, both of Toronto, have been merged into a new paper called the Catholic Register. The first number of this publication has come to hand. It is a handsome 16 page paper, four columns to the page. The editor in chief is Rev. R. T. Kelly, B.A., Superior of St. Michael's College, who has the assistance of other able writers. It contains a letter of recommendation from His Grace, the Archbishop of Toronto, who says the Catholic Register will have for its mission the vindication of Catholic rights—religious, educational and civil, as well as to defend the Church against the falsehoods and calumnies of which she is too frequently the object. While thoroughly loyal to the form of Government under which we live and devoted to the welfare of the country it is to be independent of political parties. We wish the Catholic Register every success.

The Boston Herald, thus refers to the death, at the time of the recent Boston fire, of a Transcript reporter: "There is no doubt as to the death of 'Joe' Barker. The body of the missing Transcript reporter was Thursday night found under the debris at the ruins of the big Federal street fire, which he was assigned to cover on Tuesday morning, but from the scene of which he never returned. Away in the rear, under the ruins of the old storehouse, the workmen found him, wrapped in his big ulster, on the lapel of which was pinned the reporter's circular fire badge, which procured for him admission beyond the fire lines. Cradled in his hand was a pencil, but his notes could not be found. He probably had them in his hand at the time he fell, but the water probably washed them away. He was lying face downward on the pavement, and on top of him was piled the ruins of the storehouse which had been crushed by the falling walls on the day of the fire."

By virtue of a proclamation, published in an extra of the Royal Gazette, the Legislature of Nova Scotia meets to-morrow. The date of meeting is much earlier than usual, and the proclamation intimates that, should the special business for which the Legislature is convened, be quickly disposed of, an adjournment may take place till the usual time of meeting. The special business referred to is said to be the ratification of a deal by means of which all the coal mines of Cape Breton and perhaps Nova Scotia, are to be handed over to a combine, the principal members of which live in different parts of the United States. It is said they are prepared to invest seventeen million dollars in the undertaking. What effect such a deal would have on the coal trade of Nova Scotia it is very difficult to conjecture, and would largely depend on the conditions entered into with the Government. When the matter comes before the Legislature for discussion the public will have a better opportunity of judging.

It is gratifying to observe that one leading member of the old liberal party of Canada, one of the errors of his friends. Hon. David Mills, speaking the other day, took occasion to remark that the people of Canada "have not so far departed from the path of rectitude as to put their honor in the market." "You see," he said, "the people of the United States have pronounced in favor of tariff reform. They cannot carry out their schemes without approaching the ground which we occupy. Does not every Canadian see that every speech made and every article written in opposition to the tariff reform is an invitation to our neighbors to delay the reform which we are contemplating with a hope that we may be impelled to move along revolutionary paths?" Mr. Mills, who is a proponent of international law, offers another observation on the benefits of the tariff reform. He says that the tariff reform is a "revolutionary path" and that it is a "revolutionary path" and that it is a "revolutionary path".

Among millions for persons either in or out of authority to discuss schemes for the dissemination of their own state. The adoption of this scheme of international reciprocity by a Canadian party has introduced some new elements on both sides of the line. Not unscrutinized reciprocity, we believe, has been abandoned. Mr. Mills and some of his comrades are getting back to their old grounds, and early come more in line. When they do, the present Government will have less reason to despise its opponents than it has now.—(St. John Sun.)

On Monday, the 9th inst. Mr. Cleveland was elected president of the United States. This may be said to be a very important event in the history of the world. But the fact remains that the men elected on November 10th were some 444 gentlemen called "electors," whose names nobody knows or cares anything about. These 444 gentlemen met in the capitals of the respective states they were elected to represent on Monday, and cast their ballots for president and vice-president. The result for president was as follows:

Cleveland.....277
Harris.....145
Wheeler.....23

So that Mr. Cleveland has a clear majority of 110 in the electoral college. But in the country he has no majority at all, lacking nearly a million of the votes. The popular vote is given as follows:

Cleveland.....5,542,800
Harris.....3,172,340
Wheeler.....1,040,600
Total.....9,755,740

In 1888 the popular vote stood:

Cleveland.....5,450,279
Harris.....4,439,925
Stewart.....262,225
Total.....10,152,429

Yet in 1888 Mr. Harrison, whose electors had 100,000 less votes than Mr. Cleveland's, got 233 votes in the electoral college while Mr. Cleveland only got 163. Which goes to show that in the United States it is one thing to get a majority of the votes and quite another to get elected.—Halifax Herald.

The Minister of Finance appears to have started the progress of the Greit editors by revealing a few secrets of the Trade and Navigation returns for 1892, which have not yet been made public, but which, if the said editors speak truly, ought to reveal a very true picture of dwindling trade and commercial depression. The figures are not to be published until Tuesday morning, but from the some of which he never returned. Away in the rear, under the ruins of the old storehouse, the workmen found him, wrapped in his big ulster, on the lapel of which was pinned the reporter's circular fire badge, which procured for him admission beyond the fire lines. Cradled in his hand was a pencil, but his notes could not be found. He probably had them in his hand at the time he fell, but the water probably washed them away. He was lying face downward on the pavement, and on top of him was piled the ruins of the storehouse which had been crushed by the falling walls on the day of the fire.

The political demonstration in the Auditorium, Toronto, on Friday evening last, in favor of the Ministers from Ottawa, is described as the most significant and enthusiastic public meeting held in that city since the memorable occasion on which the late Sir John A. Macdonald made his last appearance there, accompanied by Sir Charles Tupper. The meeting was under the auspices of the Young Men's Liberal Conservative Association. Seven thousand tickets had been issued and by half-past seven o'clock every inch of room in the building was taken and the seats were made to obtain admission. The Minister present were Sir John Thompson, Sir A. P. Caron, Hon. Messrs. Tupper, Bowell, Smith, Anger, Haggart, Patterson, Ives, Daly, Carson and Wood.

He had inaugurated a policy of building up home industries, of developing the Northwest and of developing Canada's mining interests. Continuing this line of argument he showed that, during the last ten years the number of operatives in Canada increased 115,000. The capital invested in Canada increased $190,000,000 in the last ten years and the amount of wages paid increased $41,000,000 in the same decade. The policy the Government intended to pursue for the future was the national policy they had followed in the past, not a mere tariff arrangement, but a policy which would unite and build the people together while they progressed in the future as they had in the past. (Applause.) To make Canada a united nationality in itself (applause)—they needed this more than ever before, because pressure was being brought to bear against them from across the border.

Referring to the question of tariff reform, he said "His Government intended to take up tariff reform at the coming session, and they would continue in the work of tariff reform if the condition of the country seemed to require it. They had more than a year ago begun to make changes in the tariff. The Liberals talked of having free trade, as they had in England, and at the same time talked of reciprocity with the States. They could not have free trade and reciprocity with the States at the same time and any one who tried to make them believe they could in Canada had no sense. Mr. McKintley at the same time was like one who might tell them they could at once ride two horses going in different directions. He emphasized the statement that the present Government intended to adhere to the policy under which Canada had been built up in the last fifteen years."

In reference to the Manitoba school question he said "he had nothing to conceal in respect to this question. The Government in this matter would stand strictly by the constitution of Canada as provided. The Government in council and the Government had been asked to interfere with the system of education in Manitoba as was passed a year ago. The right of the Government in respect to any thing of the policy in the matter would be discussed by both sides in about ten days and discussion would be open and before the whole public. All would be able to judge for themselves. The whole matter rested on constitutional grounds, and there lies, he said, no secret design to interfere with the rights of any Province. (Prolonged applause.) The Government could not interfere with the rights and powers of any Province, but they would carry out any duty imposed upon them by the constitution. It was not a matter of party politics. It was a matter of right. All would be able to judge for themselves. The whole matter rested on constitutional grounds, and there lies, he said, no secret design to interfere with the rights of any Province. (Prolonged applause.)

From the foregoing it will be seen that the general Professor has a high appreciation of the food producing capabilities of our Province. And who knows better than he what our soil and climate are best adapted for? He has visited the Island several times, and has arrived at his conclusions by the results of his observations and scientific investigations. These encouraging words stimulate our farmers in the work of establishing cheese factories wherever possible.
