Protection for

—THE—

Watch Buyer.

Whoever buys a Regina Precision Watch—for which we are this city's official Selling Agents—is absolutely protected against original construction defect of any sort. Nearly every sizable city in Canada has an official Regina Agent. If you moved to some other city after buying a Regina of us, and defect developed with use, you should take it to the Agent there, and he would honor the guarantee the same as if you brought it back to us. Wherever you travel, this universal, interchangeable guarantee is good. Should a mainspring break or anything go wrong, the fault of the Watch, it costs the wearer nothing to have matters put right for three years from date of purchase. Only a few Reginas received at present, as manufacturers do not supply the demand of these now celebrated Watches fast enough. Be one of those to take advantage of the opportunity now offered, and carry a Regina Precision Watch. Prices from $8.00 according to style and material of case.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Work brings us bread, but singing may bring us a thousand dollars a night. Happy is the man who sings at his work!

Mrs. De Ruffe—If you ever did any good in this wide world I'd like to know what it is.

Mr. De Ruffe—Well, for one thing I saved you from dying an old maid.

"Do reason some of us don't get along, said a negro philosopher, "is that we sit down dreamin' of automobiles when we ought to be pushin' a wheel barrow."

"Then you have no sympathy for the deserving poor?" said the charity worker.

"Me?" reported the self-made man. "Why, sir, I have nothing but sympathy."

She—Women may gossip sometimes, but they have better control of their tongues than men have.

He—You are right. Men have no control whatever of women's.

Keep Minard's Liniment in the House.

The Gaffer—You must acknowledge that it requires a great deal of skill to drive a ball a hundred yards.

Farmer—Don't require half so much skill as to drive a pig fifty feet.

"Never tell a secret, dear. It would be a great breach of confidence."

"What must I do with it, mam ma."

"Well—Bring it to me!"

St. Martin, Que., May 16, 1895. C. C. RICHARDS & Co.

Gentlemen—Last November my child stuck a nail in his knee causing inflammation so severe that I was advised to take him to Montreal and have the limb amputated to save his life.

A neighbor advised us to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which we did, and within three days my child was all right, and I feel so grateful that I send you this testimonial, that my experience may be of benefit to others.

LOUIS GAGNER.

"He's an unfortunate man of letters."

"Why, I never heard he was an author."

"Well, he was the author of several letters that lost him a breach of promise case."

Butcher.—I tell you, ma'am, that bacon's as right as you are.

Customer.—I tell you it's bad.

Butcher.—How can that be? Why it was only cured last week.

Customer.—Then it must have had a relapse, that's all.

Ascum.—Another baby, and a girl his time, eh? How does it make you feel to have a daughter?

Popley.—Great! One of the first things you think about is how a foreign nobleman will come courting her some day, and how you'll turn him down good and proper.

A BAD CASE

KIDNEY TROUBLE

CURED BY

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Kidney Troubles, no matter of what kind or what stage of the disease, can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of these wonderful pills. Mr. Joseph Leland, Alma, N.W.T., recommends them to all kidney trouble sufferers, when he says:—I was troubled with dull headaches, had frightful dreams, terrible pains in my legs and a frequent desire to urinate. Noticing DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS recommended for just such annoyances as mine, it occurred to me to give them a trial, so I procured a box of them, and was very much surprised at the effectual cure they made. I take a great deal of pleasure in recommending them to all kidney trouble sufferers.

Price 50c. per box, or 3 for $1.25; all dealers or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Great Scientists and Religion

Dr. James J. Walsh, in the Catholic World for July, tells us some very interesting and comforting things about the great men to whom we owe our familiar use of electricity in so many ways. Ampere, Ohm and Coulomb are introduced to us as Faraday and Volta were in a former article from Dr. Walsh—proving that "The greatest scientific geniuses, on close inspection of their lives are seen to be what in derision is sometimes called medieval in their adhesion to the great principles of faith." Volta, Faraday, Ampere, Ohm, Coulomb, Clerk Maxwell and Lord Kelvin are the names that shine in the latest discoveries and applications of electrical science—all great scientists—all honest, simple, humble minded men, no scoffers at piety among them—no cynic or pessimist. Of Ampere, Dr. Walsh tells us:

After his discoveries in electricity he came to be acknowledged as one of the greatest of living scientists, and was honored as such by most of the distinguished scientific societies of Europe. His work was not confined to electricity alone, however, and late in life he prepared what has been well called a remarkable work on the classification of the sciences. This showed that, far from being a mere electrical specialist, or even a profound thinker in physics, he understood better probably than any man of his generation the relation of the sciences to one another. He was a broad-minded, profound thinker in the deepest sense of the words, and in many things seems to have had almost an intuition into the processes of nature, though he was at the same time an untiring experimenter, eminently successful in arranging experiments to answer questions he put to nature. "In addition to his scientific achievements," says Ozanam, "this brilliant genius has other claims upon the admiration and affection of Catholics. He was our brother in the same faith. It was religion which guided the labors of his mind and illumined his contemplations; he judged all things, science itself, by the exalted standard of religion. * * * This venerable head, which was crowned by achievements and honors, bowed without reserve before the mysteries of the faith, down even below the same altars before which Descartes and Pascal had knelt; he side the poor widow and the small child who may have been less humble in mind than he was. Nobody observed the regulations of the Church more conscientiously—the regulations which are so hard on nature, and yet so sweet in the habit. Above all things, however, it is beautiful to see what sublime things Christianity wrought in his great soul, this admirable simplicity, the unassumingness of a mind that recognized everything except its own genius; this high rectitude in matters of science—now so rare—seeking nothing but the truth and never rewards and distinction; this pleasant and ungrudging amiability; and, lastly, this kindness with which he met every one, especially young people. We know several towards whom he showed the thoughtfulness and the obliging care of a father, I can say that those who know only the intelligence of the man, know only the less perfect part. If he thought much, he loved more. * * *

The religious exercises to which Ampere was most devoted were the rosary and the reading of the Imitation of Christ. Ozanam relates two incidents with regard to these which are exemplary indices of Ampere's religious character. Ozanam himself on one occasion was troubled very much by doubts with regard to the mysteries of Christianity, and in the midst of them went into a Church in the hope that prayer would help him, or at least that the quiet and seclusion of the holy edifice might be an inspiration. In a quiet corner of the edifice he found Ampere all by himself reciting his beads. It can readily be understood what an effect the sight of this distinguished old scientist thus humbly and religiously employed would have upon the young man. Ozanam's doubts vanished at once.

With regard to the Imitation, Ozanam tells that Ampere, when dying, was asked whether they should read a chapter of the Imitation to him. He said no, that he knew it by heart, and that he was at the very moment engaged in repeating to himself some of the chapters which he knew by experience would prove a source of consolation to him now.

This characteristic incident of Ampere's devotion to what he considered his religious duty is related also by Ozanam. The latter was, of course, a much younger man and considered that he was under the obligation of fasting. He was surprised, however, to find that Ampere also fasted, and very scrupulously. Ozanam asked him whether he considered that a man doing as much work as he was at his age was bound by the obligation of fasting. Ampere's reply was the simple argumentum ad hominem. "You fast; why shouldn't I?" Ampere had what Americans might consider, a peculiar habit, but one that is very common among Frenchmen, or at least was a generation or two ago, especially among those who lectured often. Even now it is not uncommon to see beside a lecturer's table a glass of water, into which the lecturer puts as much sugar as is suited to his taste, making that favorite drink, can scarce—sugar water. Though Ampere had contracted the habit of taking this frequently, he considered that on fast days this was not in accordance with the strict observance of the precepts of abstinence. With all his pietistic devotion, Ampere was full of the deepest human sympathy. He had the greatest enthusiasm for the inhabitants of South America in their various struggles in order to establish independent republican governments. News from South America was always very welcome to him, and he followed with the intensest interest the efforts of Bolivar and Casaris to obtain the independence of their countries. He was indeed deeply interested in everything that could possibly make life more livable for his generation. He laid down the principles for what he considered a new science, which he called cosmobiologie, or the science of public felicity, a very different thing from our modern sociology, and one that treated not of the rights of men, and especially of the upper classes, as regards their fellow-men, but rather of the duties of men towards one another, in order to secure for them what we in America are apt to speak of as the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Ampere was much more, then, a merely devotional Christian, or one who sought only his own personal satisfaction in religious feelings. He wrote a book, in which were collected all the historical proofs of the divinity of Christianity, and devoted not a little of his time to every form of effort calculated to bring the great truths of Christianity prominently before the men of his generation. It is no wonder, then, that in accepting the dedication of Valseon's life and works of Ampere, the Archbishop of Lyons said that "Ampere was at once a great scientist and a great Christian."

Concomb, whose name is given to the unit of quantity of electricity nearly a hundred years after his discovery of how to measure magnetic attractions and repulsions, maintained a humble belief and trust in Providence. Ohm also was a great genius whose scientific studies led him nearer to God. James Clerk Maxwell and Lord Kelvin, leaders of scientific thought in England and leaders in the wise handling of electricity saw or said nothing of "the opposition between science and religion." Only the mediocre philosophers discover that science kills the fear of God, thus emphasizing the old proverb:

"A little learning is a dangerous thing."

It is no wonder, then, that Father Karl Alois Kneller, S. J., in a recent number of the Stimman aus Maria Lysach, the periodical of the German Jesuits, says: "When the half-educated man is carried so easily through the streets in electric cars, which are lighted so brilliantly by electric lamps, when from his room he is able to talk to friends who are hundreds of miles away and to recognize their voices—when he considers these wonders, how readily will a contemptuous smile cross his lips for the old woman who still says her prayers on her rosary, or even for the sermons and for church services. How easy it is for him to despise old times and to consider that anything that previous ages have given us is practically obsolete; that even Christianity itself cannot be expected from this condemnation. It is not, however, only his own precious ignorance and superficiality which make him think so and is not his contempt really an index of his own lack of correct knowledge? The great intellectual men, to whom above all we owe our modern scientific advances, have been satisfied to take their places as humble Christians and to bow before Christianity. The skilled hands which first, on the experiment table demonstrated the existence of the latent forces of electricity have often been folded in prayer, and man like Volta and Ampere have also been proud to say their rosaries.

"However it may be, then, in other branches of science, this much is certain, that in the department of electricity, which has attracted the greatest attention on the part of the popular mind, the supreme authorities cannot be used as a cloak by those who would be but too glad to cover up their own hostility to Christianity by the examples of distinguished scientists." —N. J. Freeman's Journal.

The father superior of the Grande Chartreuse believed he had been blackmailed by the Prime Minister is certain. "Plus de Chantage," Dom Michel wrote in his letter to M. Combes on the eve of the dispersion, "plus de Chantage—no blackmailing when you and I appear before God's judgment seat."

The Sisters of the Presentation convent, Cathericeen, County Kerry, Ireland, have sustained a grievous loss in the death of Mother Mary Stanislaus Royston, a venerable and much loved member of their community. The deceased, who was in the seventy-third year of her age, served for two terms of three years each as superioress of the convent.

"A Polish priest who spoke French very fluently and who was collecting at the Charoh door for the building of a Catholic church in Tashkand told, writes Mr. Michael Davitt from St. Petersburg to the 'Dublin Freeman's Journal,' that he did not know any Irish Catholics in Russia. There were a few English he thought, living in St. Petersburg, who were employed in banks. He informed me that there were about 20,000 Catholics in St. Petersburg; that the new metropolitan, who had just come from Rome, was a Polish count; that the Emperor had received him kindly two days ago (before Sunday), and that the present Emperor 'was a very good man, who gave every liberty to Catholics.' My reverend friend knew absolutely nothing about a country called—Ireland! But it is only fair to add that he has lived in Tashkand for many years.

Dr. Daniel Murphy, Archbishop of Hobart, the capital of Tasmania, entered on his ninth year on June 18. He is the only living prelate who was raised to the episcopate by Pope Gregory XVI., who died on June 1, 1846. Born in Cork, educated at Maynooth and ordained in 1838, Dr. Murphy went to India as a missionary, and was consecrated Coadjutor Bishop of Calcutta early in 1846. Two years later he became Bishop of Hyderabad, and there he remained until 1865, when, owing to failing health, Pope Pius IX. transferred him to the salubrious climate of Tasmania. He had some exciting experiences during the Irish Mutiny.

As is fitting in the case of a see such as Armagh, the ceremony of the consecration of its Cathedral will bring together a gathering representative of the Catholic world. Not only will the Holy Father be represented by his deputy, Cardinal Vincent Vanutelli, but Bishops, priests and leading laymen, will be present from the principal nations of Europe, and also from Canada, the United States and Australasia. Probably the gathering will be the most representative that has ever come together in Ireland.

A notable incident connected with the recent annual distribution of prizes in Maynooth College, his Eminence Cardinal Logue presiding, was the conferring of the doctorate in theology on Rev. P. Toner, of St. Paul, Minnesota, a brilliant past student of the college. Father Toner defended seventy-five theses and also a treatise on original sin, written by himself, against four objectors.

One penny is the price of a new Irish prayer book published by the Catholic Truth Society of Ireland. It contains all the usual features of a Catholic prayer book, and has been compiled from the most approved sources by Father Manru, the prior of Mount M. Mary Abbey.

Lord Ayles, son of the late Lord Aton, was married recently at the Brompton Oratory to Miss Dorothy Lyon, the Bishop of Shrewsbury's (official) bride. The bride is a descendant of a long line of Protestants, noted for their intolerance. Her conversion to Catholicity, it is said, was brought about by a Catholic trained nurse, who won the regard of the whole family.

MILITIA IS ROTTEN TO CORE.

Lord Dundonald has done much to expose the rottenness of the militia department. An attack upon the system by Col Thompson, one of the strongest Liberal supporters in the Commons, opened the eyes of those who imagined that the millions of additional expenditure incurred in connection with the force had resulted in improvement.

MR. HAYS IS THE WHOLE THING.

It is a somewhat ludicrous spectacle to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his associates dancing attendance on Mr. C. M. Hays. Ever since the first hitch in the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, Mr. Hays has played a very important part in the affairs of Canada.

Capt. J. Taylor, the noted blockade runner during the American War died at Halifax yesterday. He was a nephew of President Jeff Davis.

LONDON advices of the 16th say that King Edward has approved the appointment of Sir Wm McCreger to succeed Sir Cavendish Boyle as governor of Newfoundland.

A man named McKimick, shot and killed a young man named Willie Dougerly, because the latter was keeping company with his daughter against his will and set fire to Dougerly's house, destroying it at Bristol, Carleton County, N. B.

The Grand Trunk Express from Montreal for Portland due at Garham about three o'clock on Thursday last was derailed one mile west of Gorham Village owing to the spread of the rails. The engine and four cars plunged down a thirty foot embankment.

TEA parties will be held next week as will be seen by advertisement in this day's issue, at Little Pond on Tuesday 28th, and at St. Teresa's on Thursday 29th. Extensive preparations are going on in these places and large gatherings are confidently anticipated.

We had a pleasant call on Monday from Captain Jerome McDonald of Gloucester, Mass, who is here on a short visit to his friends. He is at present visiting relatives at St. Peter's. Captain is a large ship owner and may be set down as one of the successful Islanders abroad.

SYDNEY advices of the 18th say:—The passing of the seventh week since the inauguration of the great Steel Works strike, sees the possibility of a settlement satisfactory to the men more remote than ever. The discharge of several motormen and conductors, may lead to a strike on the tramway.

LONDON advices of the 15th say:—An agreement was reached between the British and Newfoundland Governments regarding the fisheries regulations and the provisions of the Anglo-French Colonial treaty. The final draft of the regulations will be signed today by Premier Bond on behalf of Newfoundland.

This settlement formerly known as Sparrow's Road, has been changed to Greenfield. A new post office under that name will be opened there in the course of a few weeks. This accommodation will supply a much needed want in that thriving community. This office will have a tri weekly service via Summersville. Jas. Luns is postmaster.

The Dominion Government has concluded a contract with the Armstrong White Worth firm in England to erect in Ottawa an ammunition factory capable of turning out ten million rounds of ammunition per year. Working night and day, the factory will be capable of turning out twenty million rounds. It is understood that the company also agree to erect factories of small capacity in Manitoba and British Columbia wherever required by the Canadian authorities.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier made an important statement when the House met on Friday last that there would be no new railway subsidies granted this season. The Prime Minister said that all the legislation proposed and was on the Order Paper except the Bill dealing with the Canada Eastern which the government intends to purchase from the owner Mr Gibson. There might be some legislation affecting existing subsidies to railways but no new aid of any kind will be granted and the supplementary estimates will be down on Tuesday.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

PAUL Kruger former, President of the Transvaal Republic, died at Clarens, Switzerland on the morning of Thursday last the 14th inst, from pneumonia and supervening heart weakness. He had been unconscious since the 11th Stephen J Paul Kruger was born at Rostenburg, Cape Colony, on October 10th, 1825. He became commandant General of the South Africa Republic in 1862 and was appointed a member of the Executive Council in 1872. He visited England as a delegate from the Transvaal in 1883. In 1882 he was elected President of the Transvaal Republic, and re-elected in 1893, 1894 and 1898. He fled from the Transvaal, leaving his wife behind and taking with him all the gold he could secure in 1900 and sought refuge in Holland. Later he went to Switzerland where he remained till his death. A request was made to the Imperial Government to allow his remains to be interred in the Transvaal, and this has been granted. He will probably be buried beside the remains of his deceased wife.

At Sydney on last Wednesday night in Roslyn rink, at the largest demonstration that ever took place in Nova Scotia, the P. W. A. unanimously decided to throw aside the yoke of the two great political parties, and pledged themselves to support a candidate at the next general election who would be selected from its ranks. The demonstration is certainly without a parallel in the past history of Nova Scotia, and it is doubtful if anything approaching its magnitude has ever taken place in Eastern Canada. There were at the beginning of the parade two thousand members of the Association, including a large delegation from the mining districts. The procession gathered force as it marched through the principal streets of the city. The demonstration wound up with a monster mass meeting in Roslyn rink which was attended by nearly four thousand people. John Moffatt will be the candidate. The Government is greatly blamed for the presence there of the regular soldiers.

The Rain-Song of the Robin.

Oh, the rain-song of the robin! How it thrills my heart to hear! The rain-song of the robin in the summer of the year!

A Visit to a Home for the Blind.

(Mabel E. Moore in the Orphan's Messenger and Advocate of the Blind)

From the days, centuries ago, when our Divine Lord opened the eyes of the blind, until our present time, blindness has been universally considered the greatest of physical afflictions.

Month of the Precious Blood at Nazareth House.

The Servants of the Poor, who conduct Nazareth House near the Falls of Niagara, observe the pious custom of offering up to the Sacred Heart of Jesus all their prayers, mortifications, good works, special Masses, etc., during the entire month of July, for the spiritual and temporal welfare of all persons who may seek their aid in this way.

Religious Vocation.

The Franciscan Servants of the Poor, whose Mother House, Novitiate and Scholasticate, under the superintendence of the Right Reverend John Lancaster Spalding, D. D., is connected with Saint Joseph's Home, No. 401 Smith street, Peoria, Illinois, is an American foundation, with branches in various dioceses, and is composed of English-speaking members.

Jesuit Gardens in Alaska.

Somewhat we do not associate fruit and flowers with Alaska, yet we are told by the Northwest Review, whose information is gathered from unimpeachable sources, that "fine gardens, which excite the wonder of all travelers, are to be found at two missions along the Yukon, Nulato and Koserefsky. Nulato is near the 64th degree of north latitude, Koserefsky near the 62nd. The church name for the former mission is St. Peter Claver's where Father Lette was stationed and whither he returns this summer; the name for the other mission is Holy Cross, which is about 240 miles [by river] southwest from St. Peter Claver's.

What a blessing to instruct the blind in ways of usefulness, to educate them, to open the enchanted realms of music to them and seek to soothe by sound what has been denied by sight.

Condemned to perpetual darkness, how could they remain sane unless their minds were occupied, their hands trained, their remaining faculties educated, so as to, in a measure at least, compensate in some degree, for the loss of the greatest faculty of all?

Let us, the children of good fortune, possessed of every faculty, blessed in this world's goods, let us remember our afflicted brothers and sisters in Christ, and the daily self-sacrifice, the unceasing labor of the Sisters, in their Home for the Blind.

Life has often been pictured as a battle through which one must fight one's way. This, in a sense, is true. We must fight against the evil influence of many wicked, who are thrown, and we must battle against our own nature so prone to evil, but we must offer to the world, nevertheless, as far as in us lies, a serene and untroubled face.

That life is a fight may be true, but it does not follow that we are to go out into the world, moodily, looking for trouble with every one who crosses our path. There are more dangerous enemies to conquer than our neighbors, and one of our longest and most serious fights is the fight against our own pugnacity, irritability, suspicion, uncharitableness.

We do well to be on our guard against the treachery and unfairness of the world, for treachery and unfairness abound therein; but we do it if we fail to see that many apparent slights, slurs, insults even, are the result not of malice, but of thoughtlessness, of ignorance. Let us examine our own conduct, and see whether we are often doing wrong unintentionally to others. Are not others as human as we? May not they also do wrong to us out of no evil motive?

In the relations of men there is bound to be friction. Opinions will clash, sometimes; but we ourselves are not infallible, and our opinions are as likely to be wrong as are our neighbor's. Why fly into a rage because some little difficulty, some difference of opinion arises in the doings of the day?

To say nothing of the injury done to the soul by such an attitude toward our neighbor, it is a material worldly viewpoint. It is very foolish. In young men just starting out in the world it is a barrier in the path. There may be in this or that nature so afflicted some other super-eminent qualities which command success, but for the majority of us, this pugnacity is fatal to advancement.

To use a homely expression, "life is too short" to be wasted in wrangling. As Edmund Burke once wrote to the Irish painter Barry, whose pugnacious disposition was involving him in furious quarrels with the artists and dilettante of Rome:— "I have not the time to quarrel with you, but I have time to quarrel with my neighbor."

Excited lady (at the telephone)—I want my husband, please, at once. Telephone Girl (from the Exchange)—Number, please? Excited lady (snappishly)—How many do you think I've got, you impudent thing?

Mrs. Hibbert Beck, Newburn, N. S. writes: "I was in bed for weeks with Rheumatism and could not move without help, I began using Milburn's Rheumatic Pills and one box relieved the pain and six boxes completely cured me."

Minard's Liniment cures Dandruff.

It purifies and enriches the blood. Acts on the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach and Bowels. Cleanses and invigorates the entire system from the crown of the head to the soles of the feet.

the afflicted ones they have gathered together under their tender care. Truly, this is no light task or easy burden these Sisters have taken upon their shoulders. Moreover, we must remember that this is not an institution where, after a set term of years, the inmates are sent out to struggle for themselves.
