CHAPTER I.

"You sent for me, Lord Lyndborough?"

The earl rose—Mr. Bolton had sprang to his feet as she entered—and the girl stood, erect, the taper fingers of one hand resting on the table, and looked calmly, almost regally, from one to the other.

"Yes—yes, Veronica," said his lordship. "Will you sit down?"

Mr. Bolton brought a chair for her and she sank into it gracefully, easily, with that self-possession of movement which we think, rightly or wrongly is the exclusive gift of the highly bred, and waited calmly and serenely.

"Mr. Bolton has been kind enough to ride over and see me on a matter of business," said his lordship in his proudly humble way. "The business is—my will, Veronica, I am going to leave you Wayneford and a sum of money—all I'm worth, in fact."

The girl did not start, did not utter a word; a faint, a very faint colour came to her face, and as faint a surprise shone in the beautiful eyes.

"Yes?" was all she said at last; but the earl seemed to think it sufficient for her nodded slightly and his lips curved in a smile of approval.

"Yes," he said. "Wayneford—ah well, you know it! Mr. Bolton tells me that I shall leave behind me a large fortune; you will be rich—"

"But, why?" she broke in, softly wondering.

"Why do I leave it to you? Well, I might say because it pleases me; but let me rather say because you please me. Wait—for she had opened her lips as if to speak again—"wait before you express your thanks, my dear Veronica. There is a condition—there is always a fly in the amber, you know! I think it a simple one, but Mr. Bolton does not agree with me. We shall see which of us you side with. It is that you marry a man of rank."

She was silent, but her eyes rested on his. They were expressive, and they displayed curiosity but no surprise.

"You think the condition an absurd one? Good! I will not contrade you. Rank is but the guinea stamp and so on! You know your Burns. You are remarkably well-read for a young girl, I know, Veronica. Let us say that I have a vulgar prejudice in favour of my own order and assigns those below me; let us say that I am ambitious, that it would not please me to see a mere nobody master of Wayneford—you know how fond of it I am. Let us say—anything your ready imagination can suggest. Call it a whim of mine. The fact is there sound and substantial. Marry a man of rank, title—I include the baronetcy—and Wayneford and my money are yours; that is the condition. It is yours to accept or refuse. I was hitherto minded to leave you to decide after my death—which our good friend Dr. Campbell, tells me may happen any moment; what cheerful creatures do-

Man Mastered By His Business

When a man cannot forget his business when he lays his head on the pillow at night, it is time to consider the condition of his nervous system. Otherwise his business will wreck his future by undermining his health.

For a time he may keep going on stimulants, but if health is to be restored and old-time vigor brought back the nerve-cells must be revitalized by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

A few weeks' use of this great food cure will do wonders for any business man or woman whose nervous system has failed to stand the strain. Gradually and naturally the blood is enriched and vigor and energy are restored to mind and body. Appetite is sharpened, digestion improves, you sleep well and regain the strength which makes you master of yourself and of your business.

A Paris Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair.

McMURDO HAS IT.

In Paris the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing rats, which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-look-for article is proven every day.

The French are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant dressing, and is sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50 cents. McMURDO & Co., Wholesale Agent.

tors are!—but, if it won't inconvenience you, I should like to know your decision now."

She was still perfectly self-possessed, but the colour had come and gone in her face, and she was frowning slightly. She was silent for a moment or two—to Mr. Bolton, the strain, it seemed quite a long time—then she said in a low voice, and almost as if she were communing with herself rather than answering the earl:

"Wayneford; rich: I should be very rich?"

"So Mr. Bolton says; and he knows, said the earl in a murmur as if he were anxious not to break in upon her meditation.

"When I came here," she went on in a still lower voice, "I did not know what rank, society, meant. I had been poor; there was scarcely enough money when my father died—to bury him."

The earl's hands closed on the arm of his chair, and his lips twitched.

"I did not know, did not understand all they meant. I know now. I am a Denby—your niece, Lord Lyndborough!"

The earl moved his head in courteous acknowledgment.

"I belong to a noble race—is that the way they put it? I had one foot when I came; yesterday my maid said she must have another room for my clothes, there are so many. I have a carriage, horses, of my own, servants to wait upon me; friends of my own class—I used to make a friend of the girl who waited on us at our lodgings—everything I can wish for. But I must give up this, unless—"

She paused. The eyes of the two men were fixed upon her; the lawyer with intense interest, the earl's with cynical scrutiny.

"Unless I consent to this condition! But—but you are not ill, Lord Lyndborough, you will not die—"

Her voice broke.

"Any moment, I assure you," said Dr. Campbell assures me."

Her beautiful eyes grew softer and her lips quivered.

"Oh, I hope not! You—you have been very good to me."

"You have been very good to me, my dear," he retorted, with a smile. "You have taken the place of a daughter."

She gazed at the fire for a moment or two, then she turned her glorious eyes upon him.

"Why are you so—proud?" she said in a low voice.

The earl laughed sardonically.

"I'm no prouder than you," he retorted. "Come, Veronica, you know that I couldn't hold a candle to you in that respect. Oh, no denial! I have watched you! The family fault—it is a fault, isn't it, Bolton?—runs through you! That's why I call the condition simple—I said 'simple,' didn't I, Bolton?—I've no son of my own—" His voice faltered, but only for one instant, the next it was so hard and unemotional as usual. "I don't take a very great interest in my nephew, Talbot. I want Wayneford—it was my mother's—to have a proper, suitable master. In fact, my dear Veronica, I am the victim of sentiment. Laugh at me if you like—Mr. Bolton is smiling—"

"My lord!"

"Yes, you are. I know it, feel it; but there it is. Come, Veronica—but no; I won't press you. You shall have a day to make up your mind in—"

She moved her hand in a gesture so like his that the old lawyer was struck by it.

"Thank you; I will decide now," she said. "I have a good memory, Mr. Bolton." She turned to him with a smile. "I know what poverty means. Poverty is a crime. I saw my father die." Her eyes filled with tears, her lips quivered. "I know what wealth means. After all, I need never marry."

Her voice died away, her eyes grew meditative.

"Decide!" said the earl, almost sharply.

She turned her eyes on him and drew her slim, graceful form erect.

"I have decided, my lord, she said. "I will abide by the conditions."

"Good!" exclaimed the earl gently. "We will not trouble you any further, Veronica."

Mr. Bolton moved towards the door, but the earl was before him and opened it for her, and with a slight inclination of her shapely head, she passed out. And, even to the old and blase lawyer, something of the sunlight seemed to have passed out with her.

His lordship got back to his chair and sank into it.

"I knew I could count upon her," he said, with the cynical twist of his thin lips. "Draw up the will, Bolton, I'll sign it to-morrow."

CHAPTER II.

Veronica went up the great staircase to her room; rooms, it should be written, for she had been given a suite in the best position, facing south and looking over the Italian garden and the park and meadows which stretched beyond. They were palatial rooms, furnished in the latest mode "according to Waring," with all the luxury which practically unlimited wealth could supply. This luxury, this wealth had at first confused and bewildered her—she had been summoned to it from a "first-floor-front" in Camden town; but there is nothing to which one so soon gets accustomed as luxury, and Veronica had grown so used to it that, if she had not quite forgotten the old days of semi-gentility—what a hateful combination of words it is!—the splendour of her surroundings had ceased to impress—and oppress her. Now, as she looked round at all the evidences of wealth and position, innumerable in detail and large in the gross, she could not help feeling that they were not transient but perpetual.

Wayneford, which had seen and which had seemed to her a rural palace, and enormous wealth were to be hers on one, and the simplest, condition. She was to marry a man of rank. Well, why not?

No woman was more free from small vanities than Veronica, but even she could imagine it as possible that she would be able to comply with the condition. In the circle the county circle, that revolved round Lord Lyndborough, its acknowledged centre, there were many men of title—some of them of historical title—and most of them had expressed an admiration for Miss Veronica Gresham, the niece of the Earl of Lyndborough. It seemed such an easy condition; she had, so to speak, but to choose.

At the thought, the straight brows, the Denby brows, came together, and she made a little moue of distaste. Girls are supposed to be always thinking of marriage; Veronica thought of it but seldom; no man of the many she had met since she came to the Court had made any impression on her. They called her cold, and perhaps she was; most girls are until their hearts are warmed by the glance of the man for whom they have been waiting since time began. Then the strange thing happened. The snow melts and reveals the flower-gemmed plains beneath, smiling in radiance for his delight. After all she need not marry; it would be grand to be the mistress of Wayneford, to be rich, to be a kind virgin queen, a modern Elizabeth.

She laughed softly and stretched out her shapely arms. She need no longer dread the future—and how she had dreaded it!—she was secure against the buffets of Fortune! Mistress of Wayneford!

Her maid knocked and entered.

"Your horse is waiting, miss; shall I send it back?"

"No, no, Goodwin!" replied Veronica. "Get me quickly into my habit—quickly! I am longing for a gallop!"

In a few minutes she was downstairs and mounted, and with a light but firm touch, was holding the high-spirited mare in hand. As she passed up the avenue she heard the sound of wheels, and, looking round, saw the great landau driving up to the entrance: Lord Lyndborough was going for his daily drive.

Half way down the avenue she put her mare at the low railing and got onto the grass of the park; the groom thundered after her, but presently she heard him pull up and saw him dismount and examine his horse's shoes.

"What is the matter, Brown?" she called back.

"Cast a shoe, miss!" he said. "Must a-done it getting over the rail."

She stopped and hesitated. Lord Lyndborough disliked her riding without a groom; but the morning was so fine, she wanted a gallop so badly, that she was disinclined to go back.

"You may go home," she said. "Tell his lordship, if you see him, that I shall not go far."

The man touched his hat and led his horse away, and Veronica, rather pleased to be alone, rode on. She left the park presently by one of the lodge gates, and, calming the mare into a trot, went down the high-road towards Halsley, the market town.

The Mediteranean Question.
Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, To-day. In the course of his speech on the Supplementary Naval Estimates Churchill declared it would be necessary to make large additions to the personnel during the next four years and he foreshadowed an increase rate of pay. The Admiralty abandon the idea of maintaining any local superiority of the British Navy in the Mediterranean over the navies of Italy and Austria. The six older battleships will be withdrawn from that sea and replaced by four battle cruisers of the invincible type. The armoured cruiser squadron would be replaced by more powerful armoured cruisers and a torpedo station would be established at Alexandria. It will be necessary to provide two extra destroyer flotillas one this year and the other next year.

Mixed Parties; a New Kind.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"When young and old come forth to play On a sunshine holiday."—Milton.

Did it ever occur to you that there is too much segregation of ages in present-day society? It seems to me that the occasions when young and old come forth to play together are not half so common as they should be for the good of either.

The young folks have their good times, and the older folks have theirs, and very seldom does it occur to either generation that they could have a better time if they joined forces once in awhile.

The mother of one of the college girls who graduated last year gave her daughter a series of parties last fall. And the list of guests comprised not only the girls of her daughter's age, but also many of these girls' mothers and of her own personal friends.

People wondered somewhat at this and the hostess said: "That is the way things should be. There are many fine personalities among the women of my age that it will do my daughter good to meet, and I want her to meet them. I think each generation flocks by itself too much. It makes us both narrow to do that; we don't get each other's point of view. It does girls good to meet older women and it keeps older women young to meet young girls. Henceforth I am not going to have any special age limits for my parties. They will be made up of congenial people of every age."

What a pity it is that more mothers do not have this spirit. Incidentally, it should be added, these parties were a notable success.

At a little informal gathering of young people which I attended the other evening, the hostess was inspired to send across the street and ask the father and mother of one of the guests to come in and swell the number. These older folks were very jolly, interesting people, and let me tell you we had just about twice as good a time after they joined us as we did before.

These are two instances where wise people on either side of the gap of years bridged it, and were rewarded by finding what a very good time one generation may have with another.

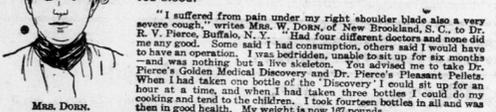

Let us have more instances. I am sure they will be followed by more such rewards.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

Mrs. Dorn.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Dorn, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advise me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took thirteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 117 pounds.

Household Notes.

A pinch of salt added to cream will make it whip more easily.

Clean greasy skillets while they are hot, and use a little soda in the water.

To scald tomatoes easily, place them in a thin bag and dip in boiling water. Turpentine mixed with black lead and brushed over a greasy stove is very effectual in cleaning it.

To save grease when frying doughnuts, put half a teaspoonful of ginger in the grease when hot.

Chopped preserved ginger added to the sauce served with cottage pudding is a delicious accompaniment.

To keep salt meat from molding, rub every fortnight with white of egg in which has been mixed a little salt.

To give a very delicate scent, place a large piece of orris root in the water in which lingerie is washed.

To wash fine lace, soak it in suds in the sun for two or three days. Change the water and rub gently every day.

To render children's clothing fire-proof, dissolve a level tablespoonful of sal ammoniac in the last rinsing water.

A palette knife is a great help in the kitchen for cleaning cake dough from the mixing bowl, and for many other uses.

To clean and tighten cane seats, soak them well in hot water, and use soap if it is needed. Then dry in the open air.

If the cellar is dark, it is a good plan to have the bottom step painted white, so that it can be seen in the dim light.

To get the best results from dried fruits, put to soak in warm water to which a generous pinch of salt has been added.

A tasty dessert is made of squash or pumpkin, prepared as for pie. It is baked in a pudding dish, like a baked custard.

A little molasses put on the roosting place of sparrows when they become a nuisance over the windows will drive them to other quarters.

A rag sponge can be bought at any paint shop, and is the best thing that can be used for keeping the bathtub and lavatory clean and dry.

To remove iron rust, wet the spots with salt and lemon juice, hold the material over the steam of the tea-kettle, and then put out in the sun.

Individual tarts are much served nowadays with fruit or pumpkin filling and with ice cream or whipped cream on top; with them serve coffee.

Never boil a silk handkerchief or rub soap on it. Wash in suds made of fine white soap, squeeze out, half dry in the sun and iron while damp.

again over the same route to their hall.

At 2.30 in the afternoon the society again met in the Cathedral and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was imparted by the Spiritual Director, Rev. Fr. Sheehan, after which several new members were professed into the society. The singing of the Holy Name Choir at Benediction was exceptionally fine and Mr. John Hanlon is to be highly complimented on his beautiful rendition of the "O. Salutaris."

After the Spiritual exercises were over, the members repaired to their hall where the transacting of business is carried on. Here they were addressed by the Spiritual Director, who first of all congratulated them on their first parade to Holy Communion.

He said it gave him great pleasure to see such a large number respond to the call of duty and as these parades will be held each month in the future he hoped to see still larger numbers attending, thereby making the society strong in membership. He also referred to other minor matters in connection with the society, which are to be carried out in future.

Amongst us to-day was Mr. F. Ryan, one of our most worthy members who has been away studying for the Priesthood, but is back again spending his vacation. It is a source of great pleasure to the society to see him again in our midst and proves that he by his presence amongst us, is always ready to forward the interests of the Holy Name Society. In addressing the society he briefly referred to many changes which had taken place and as these changes had been for the better he earnestly exhorted the members to work in harmony together, so as to keep the Holy Name Society at that high standard which it now attains and show by their example that they are following in the footsteps of their Divine Master.

His address was learned and instructive, and was listened to with great attention. Mr. Ryan who has been working laboriously since his departure from amongst us, is looking nothing the worse of it, and the members of the Holy Name Society will embrace this opportunity of making his short stay amongst them as happy and as pleasant as they can.

The President also addressed the gathering in a few words of congratulation and hoped to see them still continue on their good work. The closing prayers then adjourned one of the most pleasant meetings in the history of the Holy Name Society.—Com.

Gas is Coal

With the Trouble Taken Out.

Gas is really nothing more than coal, only with gas you have the coal less the dirt, ashes and smoke. These have been taken out by the Gas Company. The weight, too, has been taken out, for when you use gas you don't have to carry it up from the cellar in buckets, straining your back in the attempt. All of the drudgery has been removed. The gas company has taken everything out of the coal but the heat—and that's the one thing you want. This they deliver to you right to the burner of your range. You only have to turn a tap and strike a match in order to have it.

If your mind is half made up to buy a GAS RANGE, remove the remaining doubt by thinking of last summer and the many days when your kitchen was like a burning furnace. The gas range never overheats the kitchen.

Phone the gas company, or call at their showrooms and get full particulars.—June 20, 1912, t.h.s.t.

How the Contractor Got the Better of Financier Morris!

Premier Morris and his mouth-piece still maintain silence about the terms of the underwriting of the 1910 and 1912 loans. We gave a straight answer to their query of yesterday, but they have not answered our question as to the exact rates of the underwriters' commission being paid for these loans. There must be some strong reason for refusing to disclose these rates after the Premier had held himself out as the authority, who could and would give information about every detail of the loan negotiations.

The only conclusion to which the public can come from Sir Edward Morris's lapse into silence is the London correspondent of the New York Post, who gave a correct forecast of the reception which the 1912 loan would meet at the hands of the public, was right also in assigning the high rate of commission for underwriting as a reason for the shyness of the investing public, who took but 12 1/2 per cent. of the 1912 debentures put on the market last week. The reason advanced by the Premier for his resort to the market at a time which was unpropitious and when there was no immediate urgency, as he had over a million dollars in hand from the 1910 loan, is that he preferred the ill he knew of rather than wait for the greater ill he knew must come in the future. We pointed out that these greater ill which loom in the future and overshadow his prospects were of his own making. He deceived the people. He told them that the proceeds of the loan of 1910 would cover the liabilities of the Railway Extension Act of 1910. The event has laid bare the deception. The proceeds do not meet those liabilities. Nor will the supplementary proceeds of the 1912 loan cover them, and that truth will be more and more potent as day succeeds day. Sir Edward Morris had good ground for his fear of delay, and he determined to take what was offering at present rather than the smaller consideration which would be extended to him when it was clear to all the world that he had deceived them a second time and that the provisions of the Loan Act of 1910 and 1912 were insufficient to meet the liabilities he had copper fastened on the country by his Railway Extension Act of 1910.

Before the Branch Railway Bill became law, we pointed out the risks Sir Edward Morris was putting on the country by paying the Contractor $15,000 a mile in cash instead of $16,500 in debentures. The Country was called upon to face the fluctuations of the bond market instead of the Contractor. He forced the Country to take the risk of a fall in the price of debentures and relieved the Contractor of it. The Government is now forced to turn these bonds into money and to take what they will fetch. They are realizing now on the £400-

000 debentures and will probably get £37 or £38 for what eventually they will have to pay back £100. If the contractor had been kept to the old bargain of $16,500 in 3 1/2 p. c. and was realizing to-day on the last lot of debentures, he would be getting in cash about $14,500 a mile on the mileage of the railway, instead of the $15,000 cash the Government has contracted to pay him. Morris has blundered and blundered badly and the country must pay for it through the pocket of the contractor. The contractor has been shrewd, calculating and far-seeing. Morris has been the typical lamb which the financial cartoonist depicts as frisking in its folly in the money market before it is shorn.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—Permit me space to suggest to the Regatta Committee the need of having competent and fearless men in the boats that will accompany the swimmers in their dash across the Lake on Regatta Day. The contest is, to those who are capable of judging, a hard one, fraught with danger and excitement, especially to the boys of the Brigades who will each make a desperate struggle for first place. To my mind the various Regatta Committees of the past have never given due care and consideration to this very important event. I say very important as far as the lives of the juvenile competitors are concerned. It is true that the requisite number of guard boats are provided which time and again have been manned by incompetent and nervous men with one or two exceptions, such as was the case last year. My suggestion is to have half a dozen protection boats each containing three persons (not more) two of whom should be competent and fearless swimmers, in readiness to plunge in the Lake should any of the boys be suddenly taken with a heart spasm. In such a case all the life buoys, ropes, etc., provided are no avail if such a thing should happen which I sincerely trust will never occur. But as in the past, all is well that ends well. Let us use every precaution in the future as long as the swimming contest is on the Regatta programme. Further I think it is the bounden duty of every parent interested to demand this from the gentlemen composing our Regatta Committee each year.

Trusting my humble suggestion respectfully submitted may meet the approval of President Hiscock and his Committee, as I feel certain that he will have no trouble in securing the services of the necessary number of competent and fearless swimmers.

I remain yours sincerely,
CAUTION.

The Tale of Perfect Time in a Watch

From Mainspring to Hairspring, between them lies the secret. The Mainspring is the power which it transmits to the active parts of the watch. The Hairspring has the control and regulates the motion. The fitting is most delicate, imagine a 100th part of a hair, (impossible to see!) Yet it is enough to interfere in its performance, so wonderful is the adjustment. The friction from accumulating dirt; lack of oil, etc., destroy these perfect fittings. Do not let your watch run to ruin from neglect! Remember our business is the care of watches, and our opinion costs nothing.

WIRE WOUNDS

My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT diluted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until after three weeks, the sores have healed, and best of all, the hair is growing well, and is NOT White as is most always the case in horse wounds.

NO ARRIVALS YET.—None of the Wesleyville schooners have arrived from the straits yet owing to the ice interfering with the fishermen getting their traps out.

BELL ISLAND RACERS.—The fine new race boats built by Mr. R. Sexton were shipped to Bell Island to-day. They will run in the coming regatta and are named the "Eclipse" and "Doctor."

SICK U.S. FISHERMAN.—Last night Mr. Eli Whiteway had a wire from Capt. Wolf of the Gloucester banking schooner Montana, which arrived at Bay Bulls yesterday, saying that one of the crew was dangerously ill. He received a reply saying that the man should be sent to Hospital at once.

OLD GUIDE DEAD.—The death occurred last week at Salmonier of Mr. Jas. Roach, the veteran guide and fisherman of that section. Mr. Roach was the first to make a path to Pinpoint's Falls and was well known to all the old time sports as well as those of latter days. He was a great friend of the late Justice Piusent and reached a ripe old age.

LOST HER ANCHOR AND CABLE.
Capt. E. P. Burdock's banking schooner "Hilda Belle" arrived in port yesterday. She came from the Grand Banks to get a new anchor and some cables to replace those which were lost on Saturday last during heavy weather. Captain Burdock reports fish very scarce and the weather for the past week has been boisterous. Capt. Burdock has his second voyage under sail and hopes to rank among the high liners when finish up time comes. On his present trip 150 quintals, which is now on board the vessel, were taken from the trawls for five days work. After getting supplied the vessel will probably go to Torbay or Outer Cove to replenish her ball stock and then proceed to the Flemish Cap.

Crowded House.

Veede Demonstration Great Success. Last night the Casino Theatre, T. A. Hall, was packed to the doors with an audience deeply interested in the demonstration of the Veede Health Treatment. An able lecture on the efficiency of the treatment was given and quite a number who suffered from various bodily ills and nervous and other diseases were treated. These several were relieved of complaints of long standing. The demonstrator declared that complete cure might not be effected in one treatment but that if it were persistently availed of cures would be complete and lasting. The audience were very pleased with the proceedings.

Another Fatality.

Mr. Colbourne, J. P., of Bishop's Falls, wired the following message yesterday to the Justice Department:—"Drowning accident happened here at noon. Jonathan Reid and John Powell, crossing the river in a canoe about two miles west of Bishop's Falls, and when fifty feet from the shore the canoe capsized and Reid was drowned. Powell had a narrow escape. Reid is a young man, belonging to New Harbor, T. B." Magistrate Fitzgerald, of Grand Falls, will hold an inquiry into the affair.

Deserve Credit.

Sunday morning when Mr. Skanes and his friend were driven off in a gasoline launch, when Capt. Strong, of the Tug Co., was informed of the affair he hustled through the city and after an hour's hard work had the men of the John Green together and dispatched the tug at 1.30 a.m. The men were found about 5 miles to the S. E. of Cape Spear. It was fortunate that the tug was available, or another marine tragedy would have resulted. A W. N. W. wind blew and the boat was driving quickly off the land when picked up. The Tug Co. do not lose sight of the fact that when emergencies occur their tugs are always available, but when the Government require special work to be done vessels are secured in Halifax or some other port of Canada. Newfoundlanders are employed by the Tug Co., and if tugs are to be hired the Government should give ours the preference.

A Serious Loss.

Besides losing his home and most of his furniture in the recent big fire at Bell Island, Mr. Patk. O'Brien also lost cash to the amount of $420. While he was busy saving what furniture he could, he told his son and daughter to secure the money which was secreted in one of the rooms. In the excitement they overlooked the matter and when Mr. O'Brien again thought of the cash it was impossible to get into the room where it was. The loss of so much money is a serious blow to him. The outbound train at 6 p.m. yesterday took about 50 passengers. Over 100 persons arrived here by the local last night, having been out in the country on the week end excursion.

Objects to Supervisor.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—I beg to direct the attention of the Council of Higher Education to the report current here that the Supervisor of the C. H. E. Exams at Branch, a part of this parish, was the assistant teacher of the school. I have no objections to Mr. English having his assistant teacher supervisor if it is allowed, but I think it is contrary to the rules and regulations of the Council. What would be thought if a teacher from St. Bon's or any of the colleges of St. John's were appointed to the post of supervisor at his own centre? Yours truly, FAIR PLAY. Men—An O-P-C

Often Doubles a Man's Capacity. Nothing else known can increase a man's energy like an O-P-C suspensory. Yet it does nothing but conserve your vitality. It stops a wicked drain on the nerve force. This saving alone can make tired men tireless. It makes languid men alert. It gives you the benefit of all the vim which men who don't wear it waste. You can prove this in a week. You can be a different man in a month. For work or play, walking or riding, every man who values energy needs an O-P-C. And you need it for comfort too. The O-P-C is the scientific suspensory, famous for 30 years. Our book tells why you need it—what it does. Write for it now. All druggists guarantee you satisfaction with an O-P-C. Canon Smith on Historians.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—The Rev. M. J. Ryan, D. D., Ph. D., is an old and valued friend of mine. He is a Newfoundland of whose acknowledged worth and literary ability every "son of the soil" may well feel proud. All of his writings that come my way and especially the article in the Newfoundland Quarterly are read by me with the greatest interest. They are generally the first things in that publication that I read, well knowing before I read them that the reading will be most attractive and interesting and that the perusal will well repay me for the time spent upon it. I am particularly interested in Father Ryan's last contribution to the Quarterly—especially in that part of it in which he deals with the historian Lord Macaulay, and King James II.

One matter to which Doctor Ryan especially calls public attention, and of which he would have us take notice is the fact that historians are not infallible. That they one and all profess to profess such strong feeling for some one view of the things that they record as to make it impossible for them to be impartial judges therein, or to give any but a one-sided representation of them to the public. This caution is much needed at the present day, and the learned doctor deserves our best thanks for having given it. For this, unfortunately, is an age when most people are in too great a hurry to think, and are therefore apt to "jump" at conclusions without taking time to weigh the pros and cons in connection with the subject brought to their notice. I read at all, they read some favorite author whose views appear on the surface to coincide with their own crude conception of what history ought to be, and they swallow his sayings holus bolus. As to digesting them—they never think of that. I may be rank poison, but they swallow all the same and only find, when perhaps it is too late to take an antidote, that they have been poisoned. Some smart writer pens something that even by the extraordinary manner of its presentation attracts attention, and just because it is smart and nothing better, it is, by the unthinking, received as gospel truth.

I take it what the Rev. Dr. Ryan would have us do is to read all history that is worth reading no matter by whom written. Then to weigh all that we have read and form our own opinion of it, aided by such other information; for instance, from state papers; for instance, from state papers and other reliable documents. It is true that there are some vain people who would fain pose as cynics. They think that to be cynical and throw doubt upon everything is to place themselves upon a plane higher and more intellectual than other people. For such people history has no instruction that they think worth having. It is all false and foolish—a pack of lies. That it is only fools who take any interest or place any faith in it. No notice need be taken of such people. In number they are comparatively few; and in mind they are but inflated jack asses—devout believers in their own braying, but in nothing else.

There is another kind of people many in number, who declare themselves to be "utilitarians." Some of these people are cranks. Their utility is only apparent to themselves; the public doesn't believe in its existence. But the greater number of so-called utilitarians are not of this stamp. They are sincere in their profession, and as far as that goes merit our respect. All the same, they are mistaken in their view of things. Their cry is, "Don't talk to us of the 'musty past.' Tell us of something that will meet present day need. Show us how to make two blades of grass grow where one only has hitherto been present, and how a single stalk of wheat can be made to produce a threefold measure of corn." Well, to obtain this information they must apply to a genuinely scientific agriculturist. But a scientist knows well that in order to cure an evil, or to remove a hindrance to progress, he must trace the evil or hindrance right back to its source and origin. In a word—study its history. And that history may be either of brief or lengthened duration. He has to do the same thing, viz., study its history. If he would improve or make more productive that which is already good and in a measure fruitful. He will not only want to know how the soil has been marred by man's bungling in its cultivation, but also what was its condition as virgin soil; was it covered with trees or was it prairie land. Was it originally mud at the bottom of a great lake or what? Did volcanic upheaval have anything to do with bringing it to the surface? or was the process by which the soil became fit for cultivation gradual, extending throughout ages of time? To obtain this knowledge he must study geology. The geologist is one who studies very ancient history indeed—the oldest that the world knows. If any one digs into the "musty past," the geologist does so to a certainty. Ah! my utilitarian friend, if you would be equal to your title and therefore genuinely utilitarians, you too must study history and dig deeply into the musty past. Otherwise you will find yourself entirely "behind the times," and being so, able to bring no assistance whatever to ministering to present day need. My worthy friend, can you tell me how it was that a hundred—and even as late as eighty—years ago every settlement of importance in Conception Bay, Bell Isld. and Portugal Cove included, was a veritable paradise in reference to the fruitful gardens it contained. Not only did these gardens abound in fruit-bearing currant, gooseberry and raspberry bushes, but they were also well stocked with equally prolific fruit-bearing cherry, apple and plum trees. I remember that all this fertility had not altogether disappeared, though on the decline as late as fifty years ago. Are things so now? If not, are they worth revival?

If during the past forty years Newfoundlanders in general had taken the interest they ought to have done in the history of their native land, and especially in that part of it which deals with Newfoundland trade and fisheries, Newfoundland would have suffered nothing by that.

On the contrary we should have gained much thereby. We should certainly have learned how it was that up to the close of the 18th century the shipping to market from our shore of a cargo of badly cured fish was a thing unknown to Newfoundland history. Further, we should long ere this have realized and taken steps to prevent its recurrence—to physical health, if not actually also to morals, of permitting our women and especially our young girls to work in the fish stage; and more especially of the (to them) horrible cruelty of even permitting, much less compelling, them to "barrow" fish.

I must postpone comment on Macaulay and King James II, until I write again. To speak of those just now would be like introducing King Charles's head to your readers' notice, with no Aunt Betty present, as David Copperfield, to regulate matters, and keep them within due bounds.

Yours faithfully,
WALTER R. SMITH.

On Second Thought.

BY JAY E. HOUSE.

Names elude us so easily. Who was that clever fellow who described the male quartette as a musical organization of three men and a tenor?

A good many men work hard and unremittingly and achieve no distinction other than that of living to be more than 70 year old.

Baseball makes some progress. There was a time when the best shortstop in the world wore side whiskers. If a sixteen-year-old girl attracts you it is all right to eat her. But do not, under any circumstances, marry her.

A credulous man is one who accepts the theory that a boll is worth five dollars to its owner.

If you know a good recipe for making raspberry jam, keep it to yourself. Do not let it be said of you that you held a grudge against the world.

When the man to whom you are telling the story becomes restive, that is no sign it is a poor story. It merely is an indication that he wants to tell a story himself.

The average woman remembers her wedding day for another reason. It was the last time she rode in a hack.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.

A body of a man lashed to a spar, with fingers grasping ropes, was sighted floating in the ocean about seventeen miles from the scene of the Titanic disaster by the British steamship Hudson, which just arrived here. The body was unrecognizable. In addition, the Hudson reported the presence of a great quantity of floe ice in the direct path of the northern steamship lines. When the spar was sighted, two bergs were floating nearby.

LONDON, July 22.

Churchill, in introducing the supplementary naval appropriations for five millions of pounds this afternoon, said the direct cause of the increase of expenditure for the navy would be found in the new German navy law, the main feature of which was to increase in striking force, ships of all classes. The effect of the new German navy law would, he said, be that nearly four-fifths of the entire German navy would be maintained in full and permanent commission, and instantly ready for war. The first lord continued: "Such preparation is remarkable so far as I am aware, and finds no example in previous practice of modern naval powers." Churchill then announced the British shipbuilding programme of the next five years, saying that five battleships were to be constructed next year, and four in each of the following years.

DUBLIN, July 22.

The nearly completed consumption sanitarium, under construction at Lagan Village, seven miles west of this city, under the auspices of Lady Aberdeen and the Women's Council Health Association, was demolished to-day by irate dwellers in the vicinity. The mob, armed with ropes and pick-axes, first tore off the roof and then threw down the walls, leaving nothing but debris. The inhabitants displayed hostility to the scheme since its inception.

The Also Rans.

I doff my hat to the famous men who bask in the sun and thrive; but as I watch them frolicing by I shed a tear and I heave a sigh for the fellows who don't arrive. So many dreamers have dreamed in vain, so many persons are full of pain and grief in this human hive! So many started with hopes sublime—but the ladder broke when they tried to climb, and the fellows did not arrive. I see great thinkers and gifted bards a-sweating around in the railway yards, and pity them as they strive; they too had dreams of the deathless bays, and they wrote their prose or enchanting lays, but somehow, did not arrive. There are Miltons reaping the farmer's crop, and down in the village blacksmith's shop I've counted some four or five; their souls are full of the singer's fire; they scorn the forge and they love the lyre, but somehow they don't arrive. Alas, alas, for the souls that yearn, for those who must from their visions turn, and into affliction dive! Alas for those who would trot along the glowing peaks of the hills of song, and simply cannot arrive!

Storm at Battle Harbor.

A message received from Battle Hr. last evening stated that a strong S.E. gale was prevailing, and, as a result, much damage was wrought. From Battle Harbor to Blanc Sablon all the local fishermen's gear were more or less damaged and fishing operations will be hampered for the next few days. It is said that the extent of the damage will be more serious than at first thought.
