We proudly call ours government by the people. It is not such when a class is tolerated which arrogates to itself the management of public affairs, seeking to control the people instead of representing them. Parties are the necessary outgrowth of our institutions, but the government is not by the people when one party fastens its control upon the country and perpetuates its power by cajoling and betraying the people instead of serving them. A government is not by the people when the result which should represent the intelligent will of free and thinking men is or can be determined by a shamelass corruption of

be at hand, and of the means to this end not one would in my judgment be more effective than an amendment to the constitution, disqualifying the president from re-election.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, of the allurements of power, the temptation to retain public place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders; with zeal, born of benefits, received and fostered by hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the ineligibility of the president from re-election the most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action which must character.

I accept the nomination with the grateful appreciation of the supreme honor conferred and a solemn sense of the responsibility which in its acceptance I assume. I have carefully considered the platform adopted by the convention and cordially approve of the same. So plain a statement of democratic faith and principles upon which that party appeals to the suffrages of the people needs no supplement as explanation. While a number of boys were bathing near the Humber one of them got above his depth and had gone down when young Short went to his rescue and pushed him into shallow water. This is the second person he has saved from drowning during the last two years.

GOV. ST. JOHN AT MILTON

PRICE ONE CENT.

SPEECH BY THE U. S. PROHIBITION CANDIDATE.

Whisky and Beer Have the Same Effect in Both Countries—Prohibition Must and Shall Prevail.

MILTON, Aug. 19.—In accordance with a long promised expectancy, ex-Gov. St. John of Kansas and presidential nominee of the prohibition party, addressed the largest gathering ever convened in this ounty on the vital question of prohibition. Gov. St. John said one fact in both the countries was similar that whisky and beer had the same effect and the results were the same. License says the only way to regulate an evil is to give it the sanction of the law, but the only way to get rid of an evil is to blot it out. There are only two sides to the question, God's side—the prohibition side—and the devil's side—the whisky side. Total abstinence was the only safe rule for the self-government of the citizens, the only safe rule for the town district or county, because a government is made up by the people. The people can rise no higher than the power who makes it. The governor then referred to the two systems of education, the school system and the saloon system. We pay twenty times as much to tear down as we do to build up. Our schools contribute twenty times as much as we do for all christian missions. Governor St. John then went into the history and details of the prohibition movement of Kansas, tion. Gov. St. John said one fact in both the prohibition movement of Kansas, showing conclusively what prohibition does prohibit. GODERICH, Aug. 19.—The weather con tinues dry and hot. Vegetation is suffering very much for the want of moisture. No rain has fallen in this neighborhood for some time. Serious bush fires are raging through the county. Notwithstanding the dry spell the grain crops are splendid.

The Independence Controversy.

To the Editor of the World. To the Editor of the Words.

Sir: The respectablity of your paper having obtained general recognition, it seems a pity to jeopardize it by the admission of such letters as that of Kanuck in Saturday's World. Of course, no sensible person would expect Col. Denison to notice so scrubby a thing, nor would even I, but that I wish heartily to see the World maintain its present reputation.

CORVUS.

We made room with pleasure for the letter of Corvus on the independence controversy, but in doing so we have a few words to say as to the manner in which the discussion has so far been carried. It is best that a thorough understanding be arrived at, or there will be more of the needlessly strong language which our correspondent deprecates. Of course, if Col Denison from the loyalist point of view heaps uncalled for abuse on those who cannot agree with him, it will be impossible to prevent the Independents from reply ing in kind, and Corvus knows perfectly well that in this instance the gallant colone was the aggressor. Men of standing in the community do not like to be described by names which are not applicable to them, and which are used in an opprobious sense. If the discussion is to be a goodnatured one, as it ought to be, then Col. Denison had better make a public apology to the men he has offended, and we have no doubt they will meet him half way.

Perhaps Col. Denison - and Corvus also-may think that no language is too strong to apply to men who desire the independence of Canada, on the principle that no terms are to be kept with a traitor. If this is the view they hold, and if the to have a lively time for the next few months or years. Strong language on the one side is sure to provoke strong language on the other, and personal insinuation levelled by him against men as good as himself are sure to be hurled back with a force which bodes ill for any particular glass house that happens to shelter their author. It is better that both sides should regard the question as one of political expediency to be camly discussed and deliberately settled. There need be no passionate taunts, no coarse epithets, no caluminous insinuations. These are not arguments, and they serve only to disgust sensible people who want to get at If Col. Denison chooses to regard the question as one which does not admit of argument we have no fault to find with him for taking this attitude, so long as he does not replace argument by abuse. Meanwhile, he may expect the other side to go on arguing it and we fully expect to see the propaganda making numerous converts. If the loyalists do not want the battle carried against them by default they had better be up and doing, for the cry of "Canadian independence" now taken up by the young men of this country will not be dropped until the flag of the dominion is replaced by the flag of a nation. To paraphrase Col. Denison's own taunt, if he does not like the prospect he can still live under "the flag that has braved," &c., by retiring to England-or to the antipodes, if the Australasian colonies are not ahead of us in asserting their complete independence.

The Chiaese in Toronto. It is one thing to do missionary work among the Chinese who are already with us, it is quite another thing to defend the Chinese invasion of Canada, and to invite more of the race to take up their abode with us. These well-meaning people who try to make good Sunday school scholars try to make good Sunday school scholars of the yellow-faced country-men now in Toronto are to be commended for their zeal and self-sacrifice in the good cause, though and self-sacrifice in the good cause, though and self-sacrifice in the good cause, though we greatly fear that the result will be miserably small in proportion to the efforts

I for one think I got far too much cheap miserably small in proportion to the efforts made. But advocating in the press and on the platforms that more of the Chinese should be allowed and even invited to come in is a very different matter. Ad mitting that we have a christian duty to perform towards the Chinese at our doors who may count a score or two in Toronto, that does not mean we should invite hundreds or thousands more to pile up the burden of our obligations. Our duty to go ing the gospel to every creature, is clear the sacred volume do we find anything of the present Gladstone ministry—a pothat it is our duty to bring the heathen into our own country for the purpose of

There is present reason for reiterating these considerations, already so frequently pressed in our columns. It is now beyond question that the Chinese opium den is already an "institution" in Toronto. How do our religious friends like the prospect? Their plan is to raise John Chinaman up to administration because he was opposed to tue Irish land law, which has been the means of relieving thousands of tenants of an intolerable burden of rack-rent, of putting landlords and tenants on a better footing with each other, and of taking away to a large extent the chief cause of the subjects of scandalous comments. A few of them have been beautiful, some had scorched their wings on ill-lighted torches, and they have generally been very clever. It has been their to so ingratiate themselves with senators and representatives as to control their votes on matters which they have been opinions of thousands of Canadians, chiefly of the younger and better classes, who are voiceless because leaderless. It seems impossible for our leading men of either party to get out of the ruts of place and pay. What we require is a man of might like Ben. Butler, to take the stump and smash the party slates. It may be that Butler's object in founding a third party is to make himself the party of the third part, but whatever his motives his actions must do good by shattering the political superstitions of the past. Heretofore the ostensible or would-be leaders of a new Canadian party have failed either through bad faith or incapacity. A few weaklings are still nibbling at the idea of leadership, but they are not big enough to swallow the bait. There is no use in sending boys upon mens' errands. The raw material of a Canadian third party is forthcoming. There is great dissatisfaction in the camps of both the old political parties. The dissatisfied desire a leader, and mourn because he is not. How long shall it be thus?

It is with renewed and aggravated feelngs of pain that we learn that the oldes mason is dead again. The old man has died ten times within in the last twelve months, and will probably continue to die to the end of the chapter.

Too Much Excursion.

To the Editor of The World. SIR: Allow me to expose through your olumns the outrage inflicted upon over 1200 misguided persons, who availed themselves of the "cheap" excursion to Buffalo yesterday under the auspices of the Emerald Benevolent association. As may be seen by the bills, which still decorate the walls of the city, the "patcons "-that is the word-of the enterprise were promised "ten hours in Buffalo." To the disgust of all concerned, the excursion, which left Toronto at 7.15 a.m., only a which left formula at 7:15 d.m., only a quarter of an hour late, did not reach Buffalo till 2.30 p.m. It having been announced to leave at 9 o'clock, the stay was herefore only six hours and a half instead of ten. That, however, was not the worst of it. That, however, was not the worst of it.

Though the train started from the Erie depot at about 9 15 the international railway bridge was not crossed till after midnight. The entire return railway journey from Buffalo to Port Dalhousie occupied to-day.

There was outrageous mismanagement somewhere, it would be interesting for the victims to know whether the committee of was agement or the Grand Trunk railway were to blame. If the latter, the committee should demand damages for an apparent breach of contract.

I took occasion while the train stood on the bridge crossing the Niagara river, to complain to a railway official of the intolerable delay. His answer was that the company was in no way responsible, for that one of the chief committeemen had been cursing and swearing because the train had started out on time, thereby leaving behind some 150 persons, for whom it was then waiting to follow by special train and the street cars to Black special train and the street cars to Black Rock.

Surely it is about time that people in Canada should learn that "time, tide, Natural Mutual Trade.

To the Editor of The World. SIR: You say in Monday's World that it is wrong to regard the adjacent states of have lots of custom New York and Michigan as the "natural ommercial connections" of Ontario. None of the United States protectionists that I ever heard of would seek to restrict traffic between the servers to the servers of the servers tween the separate states; and if Ontario ome a state of the union the protectionists on both sides would still admit the benefit of free inter-state traffic. admit the benefit of free inter-state traine. What is there in the existence of an accidental political boundary coincident with the St. Lawrence, that can convert a profitable into an unprofitable trade? This is to me a perfect conundrum, and if you can throw any light on the means of solving it you will confer a favor on

housands of People Withdrawing Their Patronage from the Chinese Laun-

From the New York Truth. There is much excitement among the people of Jersey City and Hudson county, owing to alarming reports of leprosy among the Chinese laundrymen. It is rumored that several of the worst cases are secreted in cellars and back rooms of these places and that there is danger to the health of people wearing clothes washed at There have been a number of cases where people have contracted sores upon the neck and body, but this is accounted for by the fact that the Chinese use a preparation of caustic soda to eat out the dirt, and which also eats out the fabric in a short time. This preparation is very poisonous, and if any is left on the shirts poisonous, and if any is left on the shirts or collars is apt to create sores which are hard to cure. This, in connection with the leprosy fever, has caused thousands to discontinue patronizing the Chinese and to send their washing to regular established laundries where the vile compound is not need.

The Chinese do not wash the clothes The Chinese do not wash the clothes, but simply place them in a tub and pour on a quantity of the compound, and after allowing it to stand a certain length of time, wring them out and dry them. This process, it is said, is sure to leave some of the poison upon the clothes, which makes it unsafe to place it upon the skin, particularly if there should be any irruption. Leavesy does not always show upon particularly if there should be any irruption. Leprosy does not always show upon the face, and the medical fraternity are cognizant of several cases where the dread disease has already appeared upon the body. Its progress is slow, but finally affects the entire system.

In doing up clothing the Chinamen have babit of filling the reach with water and a habit of filling the mouth with water and blowing it over them. Should one of these blowing it over them. Should one of these be affected with leprosy it might be trans-mitted to the wearer. The matter causes much comment, and if the Chinese do not mend their ways and adopt a more Melican style in the transaction of their business, they will be obliged to turn their talents in another direction.

The lady lobbyists have played impor tant parts in the social life of Washington, especially since the Buchanan administration. Some of them have been the widows our level; but the greater probability is that he will drag a good many of ourselves down to his. The cause of christianity has far more to fear than to hope from the madness and folly of bringing the Chinese into our own country.

Third Parties.

Several feeble and ill-considered attempts have been made to establish in Canada a third party by men who groaned beneath the yoke of their own leaders, but who saw nothing to be gained by exchanging the tyranny of toryism for the tyranny of gritism, or vice versa. This is the feeling and position of many Canadians to day. They may object to the manifest corruption of both the old parties, but if they go out from these there is no place where they can find standing room. The independent tory can see no reason why he should abandon the errors of toryism to embrace those of gritism. The digusted grit naturally refuses to fly from "the lilies and langours of virtue to the roses and raptures of vice." Black's want of tact, warmth, breadth and policy, he argues, is bad enough, and, I am tired the present colonial relationship. When the people of Canada have the right of elect their governor-general they will are themselves to blame if the choice is a bad one; at present they have to be contented with such ex-whips and retired that the elections. The London World, after reviewing the traffic receipts and the state of the Grand Trunk railway stock on the market, expresses the opinion "that more prosperous days and increased earnings for even the Grand Trunk railway are fast approaching."

The Winnipeg Sun suggests that the only remedy for the five-mile belt of suburban land round Winnipeg "lying fallow in the grip of speculators" is to raise the assessment value for taxation purposes up to the value asked by the speculative owners. This is supposed to be written with the view of bringing the land under cultivation, but it seems into selling.

Nestling in her gold-brown hair were rose-tipped apple blossoms, and clustering over her dress were the same sweet-scented blooms which she had gathered from the queenly trees of the orchard not far away, where each stood out a perfect dream of beauty against the pale blue sky. Not more fairy-like were they, not more beautifully tinted, than Alene Ellerby herself. So at least thought the man who joined her-Raymond Ogere.

"I had quite forgotten the significance of apple blossoms. 'Preference!' What a mockery that she should give them to me a mockery that she should give them to me when her preference is given to another!'

so Alene stayed on for awhile with her aunt in Ellerby hall. Alene's mother was living, but her father had long been dead, and left them but a scant income.

Her aunt, Mrs. Ellerby, was also in moderate circumstances, for the hall had now a heavy mortgage upon it, and it cost the old lady a struggle to maintain the old old place that had grown so dear to her.

So Alene was not an heiress, or even a young lady with rich relatives. The men who liked her at all, she had every reason to believe, loved her for herself alone. And as for Alene—well, she was altogether too heedless and frank even to think twice when sho fell in love.

The creature of romance, possessing the keen love of pleasure natural to youth, whether her lover owned bonds or estates, would be thought of only as belonging to that surrounding halo of circumstances which made him great in her eyes.

Adjusted, to take a run over to Switzer. It land as discovers had said she should do. But instead, he took up his newspaper and looked at the steamship list. Within twenty-four hours he had engaged a stater. Within twenty-four hours he had engaged a stater room as teamer bound for New York.

A jar, a crash, a shudder, felt from stem to stern, and Alene was wide awake in a trice. People were rushing on deck—every-body was frantic—what had happened?

They had collided with another steamer and their own ship was slowly filling and sinking.

At length it was discovered that the old old boats were put out and the throng of the rified passengers were conveyed as rapidly as possible to the other ship.

With no baggage and little clothing, just as they had fled from their state-rooms, they were conveyed on board the waiting strength of the state of the state which made him great in her eyes.

Her aunt had called Raymond Ogere a "cultivated gentleman." Again, she had called Bob Willis a "foolish fop."

Two days after Raymond Ogere's de-parture Alene astounded her aunt by say-ing she wished to go home. This announceing she wished to go home. This announcement set Aunt Ellerby to pondering many things, for her niece usually wished to prolong her visits to the hall. Bob Willis had been there only that afternoon, and she had seen him going down the graveled walk with a remarkably crest-fallen air for such a young braggart as she considered him.

"He is a prodigious numbskull, but his father is worth a mint," Aunt Ellerby had said to herself. Whatever conclusion the good lady arrived at concerning the state of affairs, she said to Alene the next morning at

"You see, dear, I am thinking of selling the hall (I have had a fair offer for it), and going to live with Bess."

Bess was her daughter, married, and living in Paris. Alene started. Why, Aunt Nan, I thought you never meant to sell the place."

"Well, Bess urges me to come, and the care I have here is ageing me, so I think I shall go. And, child, you may go along if your mother can pay the expense of your voyage there. After that, between us, your mother and I will manage to keep you there a season at least."

So within six weeks Alene and her aunt were well off on the dark blue see. It was

So within six weeks Alene and her aunt were well off on the dark blue sea. It was the month of July, a little past the popular season for travel, yet the steamers were still crowded, and almost the first person they encountered on board ship was Mr. Bob Willis. Whatever "set down" Miss Alene had once given him, she was civil to him now, and his esteem for the young lady seemed in no wise lessened from the fact that she was en route to the old fact that sne was en route to the old One day Mr. Bob found it necessary,

She only left the other papers where she had found them, retreating into her anteroom, with the one clenched tight in her little fist. Then she set her lips, stamped her slim foot once, and ejaculated, with her cheeks burning bright:

"I will never, never speak to the mean little wretch again!" "Dear me, what sad language, Miss Alene! Yet you said that by yourself, and we had no right to hear." That night Alene astonished the worthy relative who accompanied her by asking Still a very attractive woman—for the

For here she was speeding away over the Atlantic, every minute bearing her farther and farther from the man she loved, and with no means at her command by which to communicate with him.
A year would doubtless elapse before they would return, and what things might not happen in a year?

not happen in a year?

A few days before Alene sailed for the Old World Raymond Ogere sat upon the balcony of his notel in Paris.

Whatever he had thought of the countess, she was now forgotten, and in her place he saw a fresh, slim girl in white, with pink cheeks and pink flowers peeping out behind them. But Alene, from the moment Ogere had spoken, ceased her weeping, and was now staring into the face above her own with had not Bob Willis intimated he was engaged to this girl, and even shown him her Yes, Mr. Bob had done all this in order to rid himself of a formidable rival, and he had succeeded; but his vanity had overleaped itself, and he had not found the poor but beautiful Miss Ellerby so much in love with himself or his money-bags as with her memory of the absent.

After all, in these modern days, it is refreshing to meet with a little sentiment, though there are those who are totally un-"Will you be my wife?" he whispered, as they sat down. And now his tone is soher enough, goodness knows!

And for answer Alene turns her poor, foolish, tear-turned face and hides it on his sleeve; for between laughing and crying, she despairs of trusting her voice.

But she does not turn upon him the look of scorn she had sent after Bob Willis, look of scorn she had sent after bob wills, and the movement bespeaks some little interest in his companionship that is remarkably satisfactory to Raymond Ogere.

Not until they were all on shore, and Mr. Willis well away from them, does Alene enter into the explanation her lover

By his side to night sat a lady, who had been a great surprise to him, for in his acquaintance with Alene he had studied well her character, and, having seen somewhat of the world and women, Raymond had felt she inclined kindly towards himself, and some day he had hoped to win her for his wife.

"I have come to bid you good bye," he said, "for I am going away. Business requires me again in the city."

She had turned away her face when he lifted his eyes to meet hers. For in the way people will, each looked while the other was not looking, and he had not seen the expression of her face when he announced his departure. The soft twilight was gathering about them, and though Raymond could see but little, he felt that her manner had grown reserved and quiet. "Good-by," he said again as he held out his hand.

"Good-by," was the reply in a low formal voice, as he laid her slim cool fingers."

Life on the Good Ship Magnet-The Noble Red Man—At Whishy Bay—A Trip of Health and Enjoyment.

The Toronto, Grey and Bruce railway must have changed mightily since the time when Archibald Forbes spoke unsparingly of it, saying that whenever he wanted to stretch his legs he got out and walked for a mile or two beside the train. The loco-Sound Steamship company, waters of Owen Sound bay on board the waters of Owen Sound bay on board the good ship Magnet, Pete McNabb captain, at a few minutes past 10 that night The day had been hot and dusty, and the at a few minutes past 10 that night. The day had been hot and dusty, and the cool breeze which stole in under the moon from the expanse of Georgian bay was particularly refreshing to one jaded with the moil and toil of city life. I let my bag gage to take care of itself and made my way to the forward deck. Here a few passengers who had got on earlier in the day and had made their peace with the purser and got the steward to give them the best state-room on the boat were seaded about for the most part, looking first our the counterfeit presentment of the starry skies on the bosom of the waters and by a natural progression up into the blue vault itself. Every one was pretentially quiet. Any conversation that was carried ou was in whispers, and the pulsation of the boat's might yengines and the strift of the puddle-wholes and the waters are almost the only sounds that brokes the actilizers. Even the most fivilous have bone in on them a sense of awe when their contemplation of nature is confined to two objects, the solemn waters and the endless heaven. Straight ahead, that was the only prospect before the little crowd of watchers who leaved on the rail of the forward deck of the Magnet and the realth was sightly engines and the endless heaven. Straight ahead, that was the only prospect before the little crowd of watchers who leaved on the rail of the forward deck of the Magnet and the realth was sightly engines and the endless heaven. Straight ahead, that was the only prospect before the little crowd of watchers who leaved on the rail of the forward deck of the Magnet all through the probability of the contemplation of nature is confined to two objects, the solemn and stray. Right before us the seven stars of the Great Bear blazed in the lower between the seven stars of the Great Bear blazed in the lower between the seven s if the officer of the watch and the wheelsman be excepted. The night still remained calm and starry. Right before us the seven stars of the Great Bear blazed in the blue, and this familiar constellation told us that our barque was steadily and swifty traversing the waves towards the land of the polar star. With this reflection which was much assisted by the cool breeze I went to bed.

The loud orders of the captain and the waves that four meals a feeling of "end of all things" which lasted some hours. In a trip like this the difficulty is to record even the meagrest incident, and as that is impossible it were better to waste a few fines on the benefits accruing to a passenger on such a journey. One of these is an escape from the hot and dusty lity to a land where overcoats are at a premium, and where a hatful of dust takes the form of an island.

The loud orders of the captain and the grating of the rudder chains overhead awakened me out of a sleep so profound that I could hardly believe the evidence of my watch when I found its hands pointed to half past six But nevertheless that was the time, and the noise which had disturbed me was occasioned by the arrival and departure of our vessel at Civil. disturbed me was occasioned by the arrival and departure of our vessel at Club island, one of the most prominent fishing stations in the northern lakes. It is stations in the northern lakes. It is gale of the Bon Marche, stations in the northern lakes. It is otherwise a rather insignificant island, being covered with a stinted growth of bushes and timber which while having no commercial value has yet high claims to scenic beauty. It has also indisputable claims to an ancient and fishlike smell. The next place we landed at, Killarney, was as marked in the matter of scent as Club island. Here we had our first view of the descendants of the aboriginal inhabitants of this country. A big Injun received the "line," and as we sailed in, a couple of boats filled with squaws and papooses sailed out on a blueberry picking expedition. It was observed that while the squaws tugged at the oar and steered, their lords and masters lay supine in the breeziest position, drawing joy and nicotine out of black clay pipes. The women arc, for the most part, blowsy females; some possess pleasing features, while the greative of their faces in remose. Leaving Killarney the steamer ran for Manitowaning, the largest white village on the island of Manitoulin. Leaving Manitowaning we touched at Little Current, Spanish river, Gore bay and Algoma Mills, see sawing across the North chanmel through a perfect maze of islands. The day was not favorable for seeing these at their best however. The wind blew pretty fresh and at the close of the day, far as the and at the close of the day, far as the eye could reach the white caps were racing along with angry speed. The margins of the rocky islets were fringed with a lace work of seething waters forming a savage contrast to the dark-green tossing branches of the low trees. The majority of our passengers were sea-sick and looked very miserable. Those whom the "cradling did not effect enjoyed the diving and soaring of the gallant ship. Algoma Mills, Thessalon river and Bruce Mines were called at in the order named, and at full noon we sailed between the rugged banks noon we sailed between the rugged banks of the St. Mary river. The whole trip up this gateway of the waters is a succession of beauties. Islands of all sizes,

Berlin Wools, finest quality ranging from bare rocks to bowers of greenery, rose before, behind and on each side of us. At one time we were skirting almost close enough to the solid rocks of the river's eternal banks to touch them, at the next we plunged into the peaceful expanded waters of Lake George. It is indeed a panorama of nature in all her works. About tea time we ranged up the docks of the Canadian Sault, but only a few minutes were spent there, the boat bene ing ating to a utilitarian Canadian in a com-parison of these places. In the one the lethargy and Acadian calm; in the other hustle and bustle, the world and the devil. The Canadian boats invest cents in milk and ice on the Canada side but they invest dollars in coal and all other expensive stores across tike rapids. On the yankee side the stars and stripes were floating from every available point. The union jack was nowhere to be seen on the other. An election trial was in progress on the Canadian side and the Canadian judges put up at American hotels on the other side of the water. And so it is on to the end of the chapter. On our return journey we struck the Sault on a Sunday. In Canada heaven's peace prevailed over all in the states, sharp-nosed merchants were at the receipt of custom ready to sell you a suit of clothes or bad whisky at 10 cents a glass. We weren'tin need of either.

His lordship promptly replied that a good musical instrument always soothed the savage heart of the females; some possess pleasing features, while the gravity of their faces in repose gives them an air of tender melancholy which greatly assists the romantic-minded in conceiving that they are an ill-used race, across whose features the doom of extinction and oblivion in the near future has cast its gloom. But the practical setter who has got Mr. Lo's manner and customs down fine does not take a romantic view of him or his surroundings. The fact that he owns large tracts of the best land and does not cultivate it alienates him from the sympathy of his white brother.

THE GREAT SEPTEMBER FAIR. An Electric Tower 150 Feet High to be

The industrial fair board met last night and rushed through a large amount of routine business. President Withrow occupied the chair. S. Hamburger's offer to erect an electric tower 150 feet high with six electric tower 100 feet high with six electric lights thereon, each one of 5000 candle power, was accepted. This will be in addition to the 120 lights provided by the Canada company. The consumers' company offered to erect a Turnbull (Hamilton) hoist outside the main huilding to be maded by wilderness of wild growth. Not a bird, even, testified that the creative word had been heard on these pathless shores. This is the sentiment of these silent miles. Men may maunder as they please about cultivation and skilled labor, but at present the desolation of rock, of air undisturbed but by the sea-gull's wing, and of the terrible silence that nature asks for her most secret works seems to put a bar upon every labor but that of the rown wondrous alchemy. Here indeed she holds her court. We went ashore at a little landing place, called Gros Cap.

On the shore was the same uncrompromising region of rocks, rocks, rocks. And still through the interminable coast the same story of unconfined irre.

We are informed of a case which of curred in this city last week, and which, if correct, shows plainly that the great pabulum of British rights are well respected in this part of Canada. As we heard th this part of Canada. As we heard the matter, it appears that some time last year a widow with a small family was in dis tress. She wanted a roof to cover her lit tle household effects, and on the facts becoming known to a widowed lady here, the woman was permitted to occupy, free of rent, an untenanted cottag; on her property, where she has since lived undisturbed. During the spring the woman in the cot-tage planted a little garden, the gross value of whose products would, at current prices, amount to about $10. A few nights ago amount to about $10. A few nights ago the cows owned by the proprietor broke into the garden and did some damage to the crop. The woman who was so well treated had the cows promptly impounded, and the son of the owner had to pay $6 to free them, as well as $8 for a writ of ejectment to get rid of their free commoner

Two Jewelery Robbers Who Played it

Very fine.
London Correspondence The cleverest thing that ever was done was the jewelry robbery in the Strand. A "professional" goes into the store, selects £500 worth of rings and watches, pays for them with real money, the goods are them with real money, the goods are packed, and he is about to leave when there enters his confederate in the character of a detective. At sight of him the buyer looks miserable.

"At last," says the detective; "you don't escape me this time."

Then addressing the storekeeper, he says: "I have been after this gentleman for two years, the cleverest thief in town; he has bought watches and rings of you."

"Yes."

"Yes."
"And paid you in five one hundred yound notes?"

"Let me see them." They are handed to the detective who picks up both money and jewelry, makes a memorandum in his note-book, handcuffs the thief, requests the storekeeper to follow him down to the police station (Scotland Yard) in a few minutes.

"I have a cab at the door with another officer inside." he continues, and he hauls off his prisoner, while the storekeeper goes for his hat and coat, and in due course proceeds to Scotland Yard, to find they had not heard of the robbery or the

During his short stay on the island, Mr. Loranger said, as far as he could ascertain; that the whole population is to a man opposed to entering the confederation, on the ground especially, that on account of the distance, the inhabitants of Newfoundland could in no way benefit from their connection with the dominion. In fact without the islanders seemed much more disposed towards annexation with the United States than towards joining our confederation. As it is, however, with their extensive fish trade and the promising prospects of their rich and numerous mines, the people do not seem to look for a change from their present condition. As an instance of the general prosperity of the country, it may be stated that the "Union bank" has lately declared a dividend of 12 per cent., plus a large bonus to its shareholders. THE GENUINE PIANO-MANUFACTURED BY RAINER & CO.,

Guelph, Ontario.

The undersigned respectfully announce that on the 9th any of April, 1884, Joseph F. Rainer dissolved partnership with Frank Sweetnam and John Hazelton, as piano manufacturers, and that said Joseph F. Rainer, in connection with his son, will continue to manufacture the original cross-scale Pianos, of which the said Joseph F. Rainer is the sole inventor.

These Pianos have now been before the public for 23 years, and have always ranked among the very best, and are celebrated for quality of tone, great power and durability of action, prompt elastic touch, fine finish and elegant style of case, combined with every known improvement. The most complete and unbroken list on record, embracing a period of 39 years, and made up of 28 first prizes, medals and diplom2s received at the principal exhibitions in Canada—Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton and London. At the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, in 1876, we secured a medal and diploma for our piano. The great favor with which the cross-scale pianots have been received for so long a period, and the reputation they bear, has induced others to imitate them. We therefore caution intending purchasers and dealers wishing to obtain the original cross-scale piano to see that the name of "Rainer & Son" is on each instrument. We make the Upright and Square Grand Pianos.
