WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1893.

He stood like a statute a adorning
The world with a background of skies.
There were courage and grace in his beautiful face.
And hope in his glorious eyes. "I come from Time's boundless forever,"
He said, with a voice like a song.
"I come as a friend to endeavor,
I come as a foe to all wrong.
To the sad and afraid I bring promise of aid,
And the weak I will gird and make strong. 'I bring you more blessings than terrors, I bring you more sunlight than gloom, I tear out your page of old errors, And hide them away in Time's tomb. I reach you clean hands, and lead on to the Where the lilies of peace are in bloom."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox. One Afternoon.

Papa and mamma went out to row,
And left us alone at home, you know,—
Roderick, James, and me.
"Now dears," they said, "just play with e stolid unbelief of the natives. Bundy and his friend Burke remained at your toys, Like dear little, good little, sweet little boys, And we will come home to tea." which is only acquired after years of practise in watching dumb animals feed all day We played with our toys the longest while! on the prairie or a side hill. At last Nancy We built up our blocks for nearly a mile,
Roderick, James, and I.
But when they came tumbling down, alas!
They fell right against the looking-glass,
Oh, how the pieces did fly!

Then we found a pillow that had a rip, And all the feathers we out did slip,
Roderick, James, and I.
And we made a snow-storm, a glorious one,
All over the room. Oh, wasn't it fun,
As the feathery flakes did fly!

New Year.

I saw on the hills of the morning, The form of the New Year arise,

But, just as the storm was raging around,
Papa and mamma came in and found
Roderick, James, and me.
Oh, the terrible, terrible things they said,
And they put us all three straight to bed,
With the empty pillow case under my head,
And none of us had any tea.

Our village has been unusually quiet during the Christmas season. I presune the weather here does not differ widely from that of other villages near, yet we cannot boast of any snow as they do in other places. We hear the tinkling of merry bells occasionally, and whether this is indicative of sleighing we are unable to say.

Notwithstanding the severe cold of the season, the fishermen are still at work ensaring "the finny tribe." This is an unusual occurrence in our village for this season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz: a season of the year; and again "the oldest inhabitant of the year; and year the year of the year in the substitute of the splicits of the plant the substitute of the splicits and friends here. This is an unusual occurence in our village for this season of the year; and again "the oldest in habitant" comes to the front, with the same opinion as that regarding the weather, viz. "the like of it is beyond remembrance." The verdict of this personage—so often called into question—is generally deemed infallible; yet, with all due respect to anopinion given so freely for the benefit of the present generation, would it not be wise to make some allowance for forgetfulness. Several of our young people have come home from the border terr. ory; some of them full of patriotism and wondering why so many people, leave "the beautiful land of Evangeline." We are glad to learn that this spirit of patriotism is growing in the minds of our young people, and we hope that the same spirit of Old Scotland will continue to grow in her namesake, until Dreary would December be did it not bring with it Xmas Eve., old Santa's night, when the little stockings are hung beside the mantels and the juveniles are snug in bed not daring to speak for fear of disturbing their old tried friend who has never failed through wind or storm to put in an appearance; and then at the dawn of day, to hear the patter of tiny feet on the stair as they rush to see in what way they have bern remembered. What happy hearts shine through those bright eyes. Who would destroy their confidence in such a benefactor. In our eye, Xmas never looks benefactor. In our eye, Xmas never looks so beautiful as when it had been ushered in by snow and frost; when the roofs of cot-tages are whitened over, and the branches of the trees are laden with feathery flakes; when the ivy that covers the weather beaten cot is half covered beneath the weight of accumulated snow. Such was our Xmas at Spa Springs.

There was no parson that afternoon in church at New Boston—but that was no minute, outside; They stood for a moment on the steps of the little house. The stars twinkled and shone from the black sky, and there was no sound save the steady beating of the hoofs of Burke's harse, now far off towards the whiskey.

The three drove to the hotel, where the purson married Naney and the gambler, with the proprietor and housekteper as witnesses.

The same night the purson left Mericans and jogged slowly over the mountains to the next town. He continued to carry on the work he had began and the people of New Boston failed to notice any change in him or his mode of life except that now he took his dinner every third Sanday at Barkele half-way house instead of at the Bandy

Making walks and carriage drives of graand broken stone placed loosely in positio renders them deficient in smoothness an solid character. They are soon uneven and be more or less displaced. To prevent this result the material should be placed in successive layers, and each one beaten hard be fore the next one is applied. It is here that broken stone, with its angles, has a great advantage over rounded and worn gravel, the smooth pebbles of which roll over each other and do not remain in place.
