WARSAW'S FATE YET UNCERTAIN ENEMY SILENT

Many Rumors Float About in London in Absence of News.
FIGHT ON BIG SALIENT Critics Discuss Problem of Whether Russians Will Have to Withdraw.

LONDON, July 19, 11.25 p.m.—Can Warsaw be held? With the German Field Marshals, Von Hindenburg on the north and Von Mackensen on the south, whipping forward the two ends of a great arc around the city, it is realized in England that Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, has the most severe task imposed on him since the outbreak of the European war, and the military writers of some of the London papers seem to think that the task is well-nigh impossible.

Colossal Movement. There was sustained confidence that Germany's previous attacks along the Eura-Rawka front would never pierce the Russian line, but the present colossal co-ordinate movement was developed with such suddenness and carried so far without meeting serious Russian resistance that more and more the British press is discounting the fall of the Polish capital, and while not giving up all hope of its retention, is pointing out the enormous difficulty the Russian armies have now under from the start by the existence of such a salient.

As was the case on Saturday, when the Austro-Germans recorded the success of their offensive in the east, no official communication from either Berlin or Vienna reached the London newspapers today. Saturday's communication was released Sunday for publication, and up to nearly midnight tonight no new communication has come to hand. In the absence of additional official information from Petrograd, there is nothing to throw fresh light on the eastern front, but the Austro-German advance could hardly so soon have lost its momentum.

GERMANS CHECKED SOUTH OF SONVAUX

Two Heavy Attacks of Enemy Fail on Heights of Meuse.
BIG BOMBARDMENT Attacks on French Trenches Near Souchez Also Repulsed.

LONDON, July 19.—The only important feature of today's operations in France was the repulse of two German attacks which were launched in the heights of the Meuse this afternoon, the offensive being in the main directed against the ridge held by the French south of Sonvaux. These advances were speedily checked. The enemy then bombarded the French positions and made a series of minor attacks which were repelled without difficulty by the defenders.

BOARD WILL PUNISH ERRING HOTELMEN

Drastic Action Probable in Case of Serving Girls With Liquor.

WILL CONVENE TODAY

Decision is Not Expected for Two or Three Days Yet.

The meeting of the Ontario License Board is expected to be taken up with various transfer applications. In addition to which plans for dealing with the prevention of the sale of liquor to minors, especially in connection with motor parties where young women are serving, Commissioners will take up the question of dealing with the Toronto district hotelkeepers concerned on the basis of the evidence taken last week, or of forcing further testimony before handing out a decision.

The members of the board speak in high terms of the valuable services rendered by the skillful examination of witnesses by their solicitor, Eudo Saunders, and of the public spirit shown by Crown Attorney Corley, in his prompt efforts to place all the information available in the hands of the board, with respect to hotelkeepers found culpable, is to be of so drastic a nature that it will be exemplary, and it is expected effective in stamping out completely the serving of liquor to young women at any licensed hotel under the jurisdiction of the present board.

A LESSON ON THE DIPPER.

The present is an excellent time to see and study the Dipper, as it rises high in the sky, northwest of the zenith, and on a clear, moonless night is so well defined, and conspicuous that even tall buildings and the unfavorable atmosphere of the city are not able wholly to hide it. There it hangs, silent and solitary amid the northern star-lighted firmament, like a veritable sky dipper, indeed, or a sky plow driven around and around the whereabouts of the north star. These two pointers are the northern stars in the Dipper's bowl, and they aim in a northeasterly direction toward Polaris. There are five other stars in the Dipper's handle, respectively, in order from the end of the handle, Benetnasch, Misar, Alloth, Megres and Phecus. We speak of this collection of stars as the Dipper, while abroad it is known as "La Grande Ourse," "Der Grosse Bar," "Orsa Major," and among the ancient Egyptians, who were not acquainted with the bear, it was known as "Hippopotamus."

He believes that Canadian manufacturers are scarcely alive to the opportunity before them in the manufacturing of ammunition.

DYNAMITERS FINANCED BY WEALTHY GERMAN

British Government Has Evidence Against a Resident of Detroit.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The British Government today informed the state department it has evidence that a wealthy German resident of Detroit, Mich., has supplied money to certain persons in Windsor, Ont., which was used to destroy property of the Canadian Government. The British Government has enquired if the department would not regard the case, if fully substantiated, as one of military activity, constituting a breach of neutrality. Pending investigation, the name of the man accused is being withheld. The case is connected with recent attempts to dynamite an armory and an explosion in a factory making clothing for British troops.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Dance of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $1000 by the M. T. Turbell and S. S. McClure as judge.

And So—

OUTSIDE, beyond the old farm-house windows, the rain had abated. The sky yellowed. Then the sun came gloriously forth upon a rain-sodden world and touched into eager sparkle pools of rain and drooping grass.

"Foolish," I said to Mary, "but look, I wonder if that glorious sun is perhaps a harbinger of our future life together—a promise of life-adjustment."

"I hope so, Peter. I'll do my best!" "And so will I."

My wife's name met mine in the clasp of friendship which is after all a bigger thing than love. Love is but part of it.

Age-Old Dreams. "Peter," she said, "once, ages ago it seemed to me, I had you. I wanted no children in my life. I was rebelling at the animalism of that part of woman's existence. I don't suppose you can understand for responsibility is so different. But I felt then that it would fret me into insanity always to feel that there was some one helpless hanging upon me—to go wherever I went—always to be considered first, but—"

"Yes."

"It's the little girl next door," said Mary. "I don't know why, but for weeks and weeks I can't look at her without a choke in my throat. I want to twine my arms around her and love her—she's such a dear, dear little kid. Something always seems to rise in my heart and then in my throat and choke."

"It's the age-old maternal instinct, Mary," I said. "It comes to every woman sooner or later."

"I must be that," said my wife. "For when she runs in away from play I feel lonely."

"And then I begin to think how wonderful it would be if she were my little girl," Mary cried a little.

The Vision Wonderful. So the dawning something in Mary's pretty face was the primal instinct of maternity. I had always wanted children. It had been the tragic rock upon which my wife and I had almost come to shipwreck more than once.

It would sparkle out at the sun and wet trees. I could not realize the great happiness that suddenly flooded over my life.

THE HOLD-UP :: :: By Will Nies

I'm all very wonderful and smooth, that floating on the glistening bosom of the water. Everything is forgotten but the sweetness of the moment. Then up pops Love with his relentless challenge. He wants to KNOW. How about it, young man? Where are you bound? What are you CARRYING away down your heart? Have you thought out everything? Do you know how much

I looked ahead. I saw a life peaceful with affection, home, children, all the quiet things of domesticity which some affect to despise and some, wiser, know for the real virtues of existence. And hand in hand my little wife and I would climb the hill together, like John Anderson in the poem. And we would sleep together at the foot mourned sincerely by our children.

It was a big moment. Unreal in a way. The farm kitchen seemed but a maze. There was vision in the moment and happiness. I knew that my life would never be quite the same again. It had broadened in a flash. It would go on broadening. And I saw in Mary's eyes, too, the Vision Wonderful. We said nothing at all. Words would have spoiled it.

And then I bent and kissed my wife. THE END.

What's the Matter with Your Clock?

By WINIFRED BLACK

SOMETHING is the matter with the little white and gilt clock that stands on the little white mantel in the blue room. It strikes regularly and it seems to be in perfect time, but when you look at it, somehow—oh, I see, it is twisted in its frame a bit and the 1 looks as if it were where the 12 ought to be. And, when I looked at it quickly just now, I thought that it was a quarter of 3 instead of a quarter of 2—because the habit of years had made me believe that the 3 was where it really ought to be.

I shall have to do something about that clock, for nobody knows what appointments we all will miss, and what pleasant opportunities we will be cheated out of, just by the twist in the frame of the clock—that puts the numbers on its face into the wrong place.

What a nuisance it is—this getting things out of focus. I have a friend who ought to be very happy—a good woman, a clever woman, a fine woman in every way—but, she lives at present with her niece—and the niece being a strong-willed person, as well as a niece, wants things in her own house—her own way.

Now, the way of my friend is undoubtedly a much better way than the way of her niece. She is neat, orderly, strictly accountable. When she promises to go somewhere at 10 o'clock—9:30 finds her laying out her gloves and brushing her hat.

If she decides to stay at home and read, on a particular afternoon—she stays at home and reads and has a good time doing it, like the sensible woman she is. But the niece is different.

If you want to see the niece at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, do not telephone on Monday and make an appointment, for the moment the niece promises to be anywhere at any certain hour she begins to think up reasons why she cannot possibly keep that promise.

Why Not Adjust Yourself? If the niece really ought to read any particular book, the way to get her to do it is to arrange two or three little affairs which are really important for her on a certain day, and on that day that niece will stay at home and read that book—through the heavens fall.

All this worries my friend and she nags her niece about it, and every time she nags the niece the niece gets more reprehensible—for so it is her nature to be.

My friend frets and frets, and she is making herself, from a cheerful good-natured, friendly creature, into a pessimistic person with a grievance.

To all so simple—if she'd only look at her niece philosophically and pain-takingly, just as I looked at the little clock, just now, to find out what was really the matter with it—it would be so easy to adjust things.

The niece is twisted just a bit in her make-up—she was born so, and there is no use trying to change her. If you are going to deal with her at all, you must look at her as she is, and make the best of it. Of course you can quite rightly refuse to bother with any of her strange doings—you can say to her, once and for all, "I do not approve of your way of doing things," and then have nothing more to do with her.

Twisted in the Frame. The fourth brother is an upper clerk in his eldest brother's office—and he ought to be very glad to get the job.

He has short hours, easy work, a fairly good salary and very little responsibility.

He would be rather happy in his work—if his wife would let him. But his wife is ambitious—she wants a big house and several servants.

Most of all, she wants to feel that she was clever enough to marry a successful man.

Now, the brother—the doctor—makes love to every woman he sees, and his wife knows it and is broken-hearted.

The brother—the lawyer—is more than a bit of a roguish and nobody trusts him beyond the absolute letter of the law.

And his wife, who is a proud woman of fine old traditions, knows it, and is humiliated almost to the earth by the knowledge.

The brother—the man of affairs—is a cheat and something very much like a thief, and he is a miser in his own home.

And his wife is afraid of him, and very often she looks as if she envied the wife of her husband's chauffeur.

The upper clerk is a good fellow—he's honest, he's loyal—he's true hearted and he's generous.

He hasn't much brains—he never will have, and so his wife says that her husband's brothers and their wives have conspired to keep her husband and his wife—down—as she calls it. And she is not only miserable herself, but she is beginning to make her husband so miserable about it that I'm afraid some day the poor, stupid, well-meaning, inefficient creature will run away somewhere and be a tramp.

What a Corn Really Is; How It May Be Cured

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins University)

ERRING man may spurn the rage of gain, but not a corn that gives anguish. If his feet are forgotten, if they yield him no ache, he may save himself from folly, vanity and vice, and every low pursuit; he may feed his soul with knowledge, conscious peace and virtue pure. Sacred, substantial, never fading bliss may be his. But not, if he has sore feet.

Like the soldiers in the European strife, the feet are always digging trenches. Unlike them, however, the pedal extremities receive little attention or comfort from their commanders. Fashion usually does violence to the feet, and what that fickle dame omits to do, tradition and boot-makers lay on.

Of all the barbaric misdemeanors of alleged civilization the supreme abomination is the stiff, leather shoe. These abhorrent straitjackets of what were once prehensile feet, keep them the useless and tormented inhabitants of the slough of despond which you know so well.

Added to these incomprehensible, if not unreasonable terrors, is often the human ambition to possess a number 11-D foot into a 10-A shoe. Could even a Torquemada wish anything more diabolical? Not the whole Spanish Inquisition could devise more wretched, stinging, excruciating, galling pains than those which attack the foot more than that which attacks the shoe.

Physiologically the foot should, like the hand, be ever unshod. The ancient Hebrews, Egyptians, Greeks and the holy fathers of the early Christian Church went either barefooted or sandal-shod. The innocent babes of today, who lightly draw their breath, seize objects with friction and supple little toes. Older children who retain this magic grasp wear only sandals.

Leather Shoes Evil. Miss Biffin, the distinguished painter of miniatures, was raised to adult life in this fashion, and was equally eminent with her exceptionally clever production of the feet, unlike the frail craft that puts to sea, need not be encased in sounding brass, ribs of steel and multiplied caresses. But, if you live in the same house—since you cannot adjust her as she should be adjusted, why not try the experiment of adjusting yourself?

I wish I had the courage to ask my friend to tell me the answer to that question. I think it would be illuminating.

I know a man who comes of a family of clever brothers. One of the brothers is a lawyer and one is a doctor and one is a man of large financial affairs.

How She Made a "Picnic Blouse." WONDER why picnic are, a rule, such disappointing affairs? You live in blissful anticipation of the fun in store for you, spend hours making a paintable lunch and select the clothes you are to wear with a care worthy of a presentation at court, and, as on previous occasions, you are doomed to have a stupid time.

Each year, when I come home tired and jaded after a day on the mountain, I never again to be among those Cleely's enthusiasm, and before I knew it she found myself as anxious to go as picnicking as she.

We left this side of the lake at 3 o'clock, so that we could have the long climb up the mountain in the cool morning. We both wore white linen skirts and blouses and Panama hats with striped ribbon bands.

Cleely has suddenly taken a fancy to my appearing like the Siamese twins. When I selected a sports blouse of white linen with the collar and cuffs of green and a white blazer striped linen, none of her blouses seemed appropriate, and she concluded that the only thing to do was to duplicate mine.

Accordingly, she cancelled her engagement to go motoring with Fred Heller and spent the afternoon making the blouse. Of course I helped and donated enough blue and white striped linen, left from my beige linen frock, for the trimming.

Fortunately Cleely and I are about the same size, so I used my blouse for the pattern, cutting the front and back exactly the same. There wasn't enough the linen to make long sleeves like mine, so we concluded to extend them just below the elbows. They are fitted into the normal armholes without fullness, and I made the oddly shaped cuffs of the striped linen with the stripes running in horizontal lines.

The back section extends over the shoulders to give a yoke effect in front. I knotted it through the two embroidered eyelets at the base of the collar.

Cleely thought that a patch pocket would improve the blouse and give her place to keep her "hanky," and after I saw the pocket neatly stitched in place I made a similar addition to my blouse.

We went to the picnic arrayed in the pristine freshness of our white linen costumes, and after spending a day sitting upon pine needles and moss and eating picnic fare over which the little woody bugs crawled to their hearts' content, came home looking as bedraggled as Fourth of July decorations after a shower.

Cleely has lost her enthusiasm for picnics—until the next one is proposed. It is impossible not to absorb some of

The Good-Night Story

The WASTED WISHES :: By Vernon Merry

ONCE upon a time there lived a poor peasant and his wife who were very discontented with their lot in life. When she went to town she saw the noble women clothed in gorgeous silks and jewels and longed to own such luxuries for her own adornment, and every time the peasant passed the grand castle belonged to the ruler of the province he envied the wealthy man his good-fortune.

Now, one day, there came to the peasant's cottage a woman selling laces who looked very tired and hungry. The good wife had no money with which to buy lace and besides she had no use for such trimming on her plain clothing, so she gave the stranger what refreshment her larder afforded.

It happened that the stranger was nothing less than a fairy in disguise and when she had finished eating, she said to the peasant's wife: "Because of your kindness I wish that supper was ready, no matter what they are."

Then she disappeared. During the good wife thought of the wonderful things she would wish for and then decided to wait until evening to consult her husband. At last he came home weary and hungry after the day's work, and the fire was low and the supper would not be cooked for an hour or so.

"I wish that supper was ready," he said.

"Ah," sighed his wife, "I wish that I had a bundle of fagsots to hurry the fire." No sooner had she said the word than a bundle of fagsots rolled in at the door.

Both the woodman and his wife stared at one another, and then she found her speech anchored him about the fairy's visit. "What a foolish woman you are to wish on a bundle of fagsots. I rue the day that I made you my wife."

Then the peasant and his wife quarrelled and before she knew what was her own best, she exclaimed angrily, "I wish that the fagsots were bound to your beds." And in the twinkling of an eye her wish was granted.

Then she tried to take the fagsots from her back, but the more she tried to untie the tighter the knots became. Then the good wife saw that she would have to use the third wish in order to remove the fagsots. This she did and sighed as she thought of the fine house, wealth and handsome dresses that could never be hers. But she smiled bravely, threw the bundle of fagsots on the fire and very soon the supper was ready.

Give Your Hair Extra Care in Summer

By LUCREZIA BORI

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

FEW women will take the time to give their hair the proper attention required to keep it in a healthy, attractive condition during the summer. The instant that you detect a sour odor about your hair it must be washed.

In the first place, the hair must be shampooed frequently to free it from the oils and dust which accumulate so quickly when the head is outdoors. Even more necessary than washing is airing the hair when the weather is warm.

Every morning the hair should be allowed to hang free, and for five or ten minutes exposed to the sunlight so that the scalp will be thoroughly dried. At night braid the hair loosely and never twist and pin the braids about the head unless you desire to thin your hair out. Preparatory to airing, a part should be put through the centre, from the forehead to the nape of the neck, in order to allow the air to circulate where it seldom has a chance to reach. Then take a long bristle brush and divide the hair into small strands, brushing each strand separately. Draw the brush in long, even strokes from the part to the ends. The instant that you detect a sour odor about your hair it must be washed. This may mean that a weekly shampoo will be necessary, but under these circumstances it will not be too often, for nothing is more disagreeable than the effect of perspiration. If there is a tendency to oiliness it is, far better to shampoo the hair once a week than to wait longer and invite thinness. To cleanse the hair use liquid green soap or a simple soap jelly made in the following manner: Scrub a cake of Castile soap and put it into a granite saucepan with a pint of boiling water. Then allow the pan to stand where it will be kept warm until the soap has dissolved. Pour it into a wide-mouthed jar and it is ready for use when cold. For sticky, oily hair use a cleansing mixture made from green soap, 2 ounces, to alcohol, 1 ounce. Mix the two ingredients thoroughly before applying the shampoo to the scalp. As this cleansing is intended to be used only on oily hair only. The hair should be washed through warm water twice and then rinsed a sufficient number of times to remove every trace of the soap. When drying, rub the scalp well with towels and allow the sunlight to strike the hair for 15 or 20 minutes. Keep the hair clean, well aired and dry, and your hair will not lose any of its beauty during the summer.

A Smart Sport Blouse.

Present at our annual picnic, and the following summer I go just the same, hoping that something will happen to make it interesting.

I voiced a strong protest against going this year, but mother insisted that Cleely ought not to be deprived of the outing, and since she wanted to run the motor boat across the lake, that I had better go with her.

Further Consideration of the Mud Wall

The Globe now thinks that it has been too lightly assumed, "perhaps without sufficient consideration," as it remarks, that a mud wall is to be built across the water front of the city.

Chicago has not the reputation for artistic achievement, which no doubt the Globe entertains for its own ideas, but Chicago, having had experience of mud walls on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, and on the South Side also, refused to have a mud wall on its water front.

Every business man will see at a glance that something must be done. The so-called Transcontinental and Winnipeg railroads, half-way across the continent, and does not get within 600 miles of the railway.

Smuggled Alien Enemies. It is stated that a big freighter took on several alien enemies of Great Britain at Windsor and landed them in port in the United States without having them to the work done by others.

Police officials and immigrant inspectors in Windsor are reticent about their operations concerning investigations of charges of treason, but it has been learned on good authority that a surprise that will stir the border city and perhaps the entire Dominion from end to end may be looked for.
