Common Clerk Kept Busy With Those Whose Names Were Omitted

INTEREST in the election campaign was at fever heat today and the indications are that a very heavy vote would be polled in Saint John before the closing hours this afternoon.

The weather was threatening but up to noon there had not been any rain and this was a factor in getting out the vote.

A feature of the voting today was the large number of voters who were taken to the polling places in motor vehicles, each seemingly having an unlimited number of cars at their disposal.

The women voters turned out in force and in most of the booths there was a steady stream of voters from that time on. It was said in most cases that the early vote was larger than usual.

INTEREST AT EVER PITCH

HEAVY COUNTY VOTE. A heavy vote in the county was predicted this morning by the workers in East Saint John and Lancaster. Up to noon there had been a much larger vote polled than usual and both sides were working hard to get every available ballot. Both sides were quite confident that the majority of ballots cast were for their candidates and both were optimistic of the final result tonight.

BABE AT BOOTH. "The Babe in the Wood" now becomes "The Babe at the Booth" as the vote out—and get it early! must have been the slogan of one serious worker this morning. The worker went to a city home and found that the mother of the family could not leave because of the need of caring for her baby. Nothing daunted the worker, he said filed a nursing bottle, placed both mother and baby in an auto and drove them to the booth, where, while the mother duly exercised her franchise, the worker held the baby. Needless to say, the baby's chief concern was not so much whether the Government would win, but whether the bottle was tipped at the right angle for feeding.

DRINK OF ANOTHER KIND. Two men from whom wafted odors reminiscent of a distillery were holly discussing the pros and cons of the election yesterday afternoon about 8 o'clock in King Square. Just as they were settling the fate of the two parties one said to his friend, "Got anything to drink?" "Sure," remarked the friend, "any cops in sight?"

A survey revealed all well, so a flask appeared from a hip pocket and both men tipped the bottle and the gurgles of the liquid refreshment could be plainly heard by satiated citizens. The flask disappeared and the discussion was again resumed although the points made were not new. The man with the flask remarked to his companion, "You're drunk." "Ten hot as intoxicated," but some might be "Gimme 'nother swig."

The flask was again produced, this time without any search for officers, and between them they "killed" it and the "dud" was tossed behind a tree. After warning his friend to walk on the bench, the owner of the flask staggered off, with the avowed intention of visiting a "particular" friend and securing another bottle of "hot" to make hay while the "lection lasts," was the parting shot.

OTHER INCIDENTS. There comes a report from the Lech Leonard picnic, held on Saturday afternoon, that there were strong demands made upon those in charge of the distribution of ice cream cones from the copious supply that had been taken to the picnic grounds. They may have been exaggerated, but some of the reports said that one attendant at the picnic disposed of 25 cones and voted the picnic a pronounced success from that standpoint at least.

A lady stopped outside the Court House this morning, fumbled in her purse and remarked in a dejected tone, "I can't vote, I've lost my ticket." When assured that she could obtain another "ticket" inside she was much relieved.

It was reported from Hampton that one of the polling booths all the ballots were of one brand.

AT FREDERICTON. Canadian Press. FREDERICTON, Aug. 10.—More activity than ever before known was in evidence today in connection with the provincial general elections at the polls in the capital city. Both sides had large numbers of voters, and men and women, at the polls.

The weather was dull, with rain in the evening, but this was said to be conducive to a large vote being polled in the country districts throughout the province, because there had been fine weather many farmers would have hesitated, perhaps, to leave the hay fields long enough to go to the distant polls. The use of thousands of automobiles was said to be a factor in bringing out an unusually large vote throughout the province, and the belief is expressed that the heaviest vote ever recorded in a provincial election in New Brunswick, will be polled today.

JAPANESE ALPINISTS CLIMB

Headed by Yuko Maki, under secretary of the Japanese Alpine Club, six noted Japanese alpinists have left Jasper, Alberta, on their twenty-five days' trip into the Columbia icefield, one of the least-known portions of the Canadian Rockies. Their trip will take them to the headwaters of the Athabasca and North Saskatchewan rivers, and an endeavor will be made to climb Mount Alberta, a virgin peak which has so far defied all efforts to conquer its higher slopes. Members of the party state that if the territory lives up to their expectations it will attract hundreds of Japanese alpinists annually. The expedition is elaborately equipped with modern alpinist gear and includes a camera and a complete dark room. Three Swiss guides, Heinrich Fuhrer, Hans Kohler and Jean Weisler, from Jasper, are accompanying the party and five guides and forty horses are being used on the trip. This is the first party of Japanese alpinists to tackle some of the untried fields of the Canadian Rockies.

PILOT ABBOTT LOST IN WOODS

Unable to Find Road and Spends the Night in Forest

Saint John Man's Friends, Anxious, But He Gets Safely Home.

Pilot John F. Abbott, of 83 Britain street, had an exciting experience Saturday night and yesterday morning when lost in the woods between Golden Grove and Rothery and his long absence caused considerable worry to his friends. Mr. Abbott and his family are spending the summer months at a residence on the Golden Grove road, about six miles from the city.

Saturday afternoon he left the house without taking his coat and accompanied by his dog entered the woods for the purpose of picking berries. After traveling for some distance the dog barked continuously and appeared to be so excited that Mr. Abbott thought there was something wrong in the woods and he followed the dog for quite a distance, but being unable to learn the cause of the dog's actions he decided that he would return home.

Tramping through the woods for about an hour Mr. Abbott then learned that he had lost his way and no matter in which direction he walked he was unable to find the road and although he shouted on numerous occasions he received no answer to his calls. With his face scratched and his shirtleeves torn by the branches Pilot Abbott continued to walk until darkness set in when it was useless for him to proceed any further. He broke enough boughs from trees to make a bed and others to cover him, and was so tired that he fell asleep for a time despite the bad weather.

At daylight yesterday morning Pilot Abbott started once more and after tramping for some time was happy when he walked out of the woods and then found that he was on the road near Rothery. Meeting a man he inquired the way back to Golden Grove and was directed to an old road or pathway and in a short time arrived home again much to the joy of his family and friends.

One of those printers was James Colwell and the other Andrew Lipsitt. Last night Mr. Colwell, hale and hearty at 76, walked into the office of the Telegraph-Journal.

65 YEARS A PRINTER.

Mr. Colwell has been a printer for 61 years and is now of the staff of the University Press, of Cambridge, Mass., which was first established as a publishing house in 1869. Mr. Colwell began his apprenticeship as printer at the age of 15 in the office of the Headquarters in Fredericton and John Graham taught him the art as it was then known. Crude implements were used in those days but they were good and good work was done. Mr. Colwell stayed for three years on the composing room staff of The Daily Telegraph and then went to the United States and joined the staff of the University Press in Cambridge. It is almost entirely book work at the University Press and the staff at present varies from 100 in the slack season to 150 in the rush of winter time. The strike of the printers in Massachusetts about three years ago, Mr. Colwell says, was a serious setback from which the printing establishment in that state has not yet fully recovered.

VENIOT SPEAKS TO 3,000 AT CARAQUET

Reiterates Prediction That Government Will Win at Least 29 Seats.

BATHURST, Aug. 9.—Premier Veniot tonight, on the eve of the election, stated that he adhered to his previous estimate and expected the Government would win 29 seats out of the 48 in tomorrow's election. He had received word from all parts of the province on Saturday and today and was confident that the result of the polling today would show the Government had been sustained.

Asked if he could take up the challenge of Angus McLean and prove that Quebec firms were paying more than $20 a horsepower for hydro current, the Premier said that he had not heard of the challenge but that in his speeches at Fredericton and in Bathurst he had already read telegrams from large companies giving the cost of the power they were using. These telegrams, he

Hampton W. I. To Build New Hall

HAMPTON, Aug. 9.—The monthly meeting of the Hampton Women's Institute was held on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Frances Fairweather. Miss Margaret Turnbull, president, occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the singing of O Canada, followed by several songs from the song book. Mrs. Taylor acted as accompanist. The roll call was answered by selections about wild flowers. Several reports were received and were very satisfactory. Mrs. F. V. Wedderburn reported for the hall committee, stating that it had been left in the hands of an architect in Saint John and that sketch plans would be here in a few days.

MR. FORKE IS HEARD FROM

Mr. Meighan having recently paid respects to Mr. Forke, the Progressive leader, in Mr. Forke's own ballroom, Mr. Forke has deemed it necessary to make some observations about Mr. Meighan. Just for good measure he made some about Mr. Mackenzie King also.

According to Mr. Forke the future greatness of this country depends upon the development and prosperity of the three Prairie provinces. Those of us who live east of the Lakes would be disposed to observe that while we regard prosperity and development in the Prairie section as of immense importance, it is not to be overlooked that a little of the same good medicine is British Columbia and even in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces would appear highly essential to a well-rounded and successful Confederation.

Mr. Forke is just as dissatisfied with Mr. Meighan as Mr. Meighan is dissatisfied with him. He says that the Progressives are not under the heel of the Mackenzie King Government, but that when the Government introduces Progressive measures they will be given Progressive support. In a moment of generosity—which Mr. Meighan and his followers will regard as something else—Mr. Forke went on to say that he was prepared to make the same offer to Mr. Meighan, "that when he introduces Progressive measures he, too, will get Progressive support." Of course Mr. Forke feels that Mr. Meighan is hopeless, and Mr. Meighan has just placed on record in the West his belief that Mr. Forke is equally so.

The Progressive leader is not at all satisfied with the Liberals, asserting that they have deserted the platform of 1919. He tells the Prime Minister that if he had stood by that platform in the House of Commons he would have received the support of the Progressives. Hon. Mr. King would not be disposed to deny that he has received that support in the Commons on those occasions in which the life of his administration might have been terminated had Mr. Forke and Mr. Meighan been able to join forces.

TALKING WITH MARS

Some of the scientific gentlemen who attended the sessions of the International Astronomical Union at Cambridge, England, a few days ago recorded their belief that Mars is inhabited by beings of some sort and that communication between the earth and Mars is among the possibilities. One of the speakers even said that "in view of Mars' presumed advanced civilization, it is likely that it tried signalling the earth thousands of years ago, and has long since given up the attempt as hopeless." In his opinion the earth must make the next attempt at communication.

Thus it seems that we have been missing a lot, and also that we are very much behind the times here on earth. At all events, some of the theories and statements, in regard to which the ignorant layman must walk warily, suggest that there is less reason than had been supposed for the spirit of mortal to be proud of his position here on earth. We may, perhaps, comfort ourselves with the assumption that, if we are a bit behind the times in comparison with the Martians, it may be because they had early advantages which we did not enjoy.

Canada and the United States both had several representatives at this meeting of astronomers, and it is to be noted that while an exchange of messages with Mars was not discussed as something likely to come about at any particular time, the theory that life exists on Mars has many learned and highly serious advocates. The President of the Union is given authority for the statement that speakers at Lick and other American observatories believe that Martians exist "under conditions not very different from our own." According to a cable to the Christian Science Monitor, Professor G. H. Hamilton, an American astronomer of note, says that his studies have given him what he considers conclusive evidence of the existence of sentient beings on Mars. He believes there is a civilization there "far in advance of that of the earth."

Other astronomers are quoted as saying that in recent years estimates of the atmosphere of Mars have increased greatly, "so that it is now placed at about one-third of that we breathe. Such a density might easily support some forms of animate existence." When it comes down to actual communication, the statements tend to become vague: "Believers in the Martian theory of life on that planet believe that radio will eventually be the means of establishing communication, but it is conceded that the present development of radio gives little hope of an early realization of this hope." In which sentence there is too frequent mention of hope and too little to believe that hope upon it. It seems, in fact, that we shall not be "listening in" for some time yet, to put it mildly. But in the house of astronomy, which is said

Two Theories of Living

(Chicago Journal of Commerce.) The bald truth is that the savers, economically speaking, are the best spenders, because they create the means to spend; their spending is of a substantial and far-reaching nature, their resources are not frittered away on ephemeral indulgences—in buying what they can do without. Instead, their means are put into good things, into shoes for their children, into furniture and furnishings. More important still, what they do not spend is put into savings banks, there to be invested in mortgages and bonds for the creation of more wealth.

Denouncing the Courts

Whether Russell Scott be regarded as innocent or guilty, sane or insane, one clearly outstanding result of his escape from the death penalty through a verdict of insanity is increasingly sharp condemnation of American court methods by Americans. Because of its sensational features the Scott case secured a great deal more publicity than the ordinary murder trial, and it is not at all surprising that the verdict of insanity should be subjected to sharp criticism. The Boston Post says of the case:

"The decision of the Chicago jury declaring that Russell Scott, the convicted murderer, is insane is a disgrace to the American courts. The whole insanity move was sheer bluff on the part of the attorneys for the defence and a glib judge was soft enough to allow them a jury trial. The jury was not allowed to hear the details of the murder for which the prisoner was sentenced to death, but could save his life by coming to the rescue with an insanity verdict. 'Scott' is no more insane than the weak-kneed jurors who voted to let him off. If people wonder why crime answers to the increase, they can find an answer to the question in this ridiculous mockery of justice."

This critic, it will be noted, attacks the judge, the jury and the medical experts with the same vigor. Whether or not such criticism is fully warranted, it is obvious that cases like that of Scott are tending more and more to bring the whole American criminal procedure into disrepute. The Chicago Tribune says that "the machinery for the defeat of the law against murder is elaborate and efficient." In view of the fact that the chances are nearly a hundred to one that a murderer in Chicago will not be executed, it would seem that the Tribune's startling indictment cannot be successfully challenged.

AN UNFORTUNATE CAMPAIGN

Several publications in Great Britain continue to hammer Canada because of the alleged injustice of its treatment of the owners of Grand Trunk securities. The language they employ is violent and many of the statements they make are not only misleading but false. These attacks are beginning to elicit a return fire from Canada. The Toronto Star refers to the London campaign as the deliberate attempt of a small circle there to make it appear that the Dominion has been guilty of unjust, confiscatory and treacherous conduct. "Whatever may be behind this newspaper offensive," says the Star, "it has the unfortunate appearance of a deliberately planned campaign of deliberate lies which would hardly appeal to the people of England if its nature were realized. Its apparent purpose is to blackmail Canada into giving the English holders of Junior Grand Trunk securities some financial recognition which they are not entitled to, and which a board of arbitration refused them. The supposition is, apparently, that Canada will tax Canadians so as to provide a compassionate allowance for English shareholders rather than incur the hostility of British capital looking for investment."

There are many reasons why a campaign of this kind is unfortunate. The Star warns these London financial critics that Canada has been guilty of their clubbing process, and that the country is not dependent upon the British market for capital. It suggests that when these facts are realized by the people of England the party battlers will be cut off. In his retirement he can look back upon a career full of honorable achievement, joy of battle, and pleasant relations with friends and

A stout fighter, but a fair one, Hon. Mr. Fielding as he retires commands the respect and goodwill of the whole country. The Toronto Globe says of him: Partyism has its merits as well as its faults, and in Mr. Fielding the system is seen at its best. He makes no claim of his preference for the Liberal party, and in his days of physical vigor he enjoyed the party battle and was one of the most skillful of men in the Parliamentary arena. But he was never bitter nor mean. He could see his opponent's point of view, sympathize with him, and to some extent sympathize with him. In his retirement he can look back upon a career full of honorable achievement, joy of battle, and pleasant relations with friends and

Two Canadian Novelists

The literary reviews are praising strongly two novels written by present resident in Canada. "Glorious Apollo" is by "E. Barrington" and "The Search" by Constance Lindsay Skinner. There is a marked contrast between them in respect to subject matter, while in one case the writer uses a pseudonym and in the other her real name. We are informed by several reviewers that, while they know who "E. Barrington" is, they are not permitted to go further than to say that she has lived in British Columbia for some time. She was instant recognition years ago with the "Divine Lady," based on the life of Lady Hamilton, and her new book deals with the marriage tragedy of Lord Byron. Well as she handles these themes and perennial though the interest in them is, much more useful work is being done by Miss Skinner, who has found her inspiration in Canada. She is the daughter of a Hudson's Bay factor and was born at a post in British Columbia. All are agreed that her novel affords an unusually convincing interpretation of frontier life.

The Perils of Benevolence

(Boston Transcript.) A gentleman in New York, wealthy and evidently lonely with most creditable loneliness, that of one who would be a parent, advertised a little while ago for a young girl whom he might adopt. Cases of this kind are not infrequent, so far as the adoption goes, but it is what happens, now a selection has been made, that interests us. His choice has fallen on a young sixteen-year-old girl, a native of Prague and the daughter of poor parents who on coming to America seem to have succeeded in doing fairly well. The girl herself, from what we can judge, seems a sensible enough young person with decidedly healthy tastes. The question now would seem to be, how long she will retain them? We say this because of the plans which her adoptive father is said to be making for her. She is to have, according to the press, forty or fifty acres, a pearl necklace and a little later a high-power motor-car as well as an airplane. "More curlicues" set to jazz is the comment that arises in the mind of one living in an age when the greater the material resources developed, the more acute the economic and social problems. The indulgence of a marked kindness is a most pardonable thing, it is seldom that giving hurts the giver, but it strikes us that this girl who tomorrow will be a woman, is being put to an unfair test. The time approaches, the time is here when in the United States poor women and more men who understand living needs and living conditions will be a political necessity. Here is this child, honest and wholesome though she plainly be, pitched into a luxu-

BAXTER ADDRESSES THRONG AT SUSSEX

Reviews Attitude Towards the Grand Falls and Workmen's Compensation.

SUSSEX, N. B., Aug. 9.—One of the largest political gatherings in Sussex in many years assembled at the Imperial Theatre Saturday night and gave a good reception to Hon. Dr. J. B. M. Baxter, leader of the provincial Opposition, and two of the Opposition candidates, A. J. Brooks and H. V. Dickson. N. Garfield White was chairman. Mr. Brooks deprecated the alleged unfair canvasses by Government agents and criticized the Foster-Venot administration for alleged extravagant expenditure and heavy increase of the public debt. Dr. Brooks eulogized Dr. Baxter, saying Dr. Baxter had come back from his Federal House where he was one of the biggest men in Canada and in a position to receive almost any honor should the Conservative party be returned to power.

COURT AND INDIA OFFICE. The emotion aroused the other day in Court circles by the splendid India Office reception given by the Earl of Birkenhead as Secretary for India in honor of the Earl of Reading as viceroy has not subsided.

SCENE IN THE HEART OF LONDON

London children playing in the park beside the Houses of Parliament make a picture which it is difficult to realize is in the heart of the world's greatest city.

Office reception given by the Earl of Birkenhead as Secretary for India in honor of the Earl of Reading as viceroy has not subsided. In issuing his official invitations to the function, one of the most notable of the London season, Lord Birkenhead had the intention "leaves dress" put on the cards, and the guests carefully observed these instructions, generally to the neglect of the spectacle in the India Office quadrangle.

GAUDY WHITE WAISTCOATS. Evening dress for men gets brighter and brighter. A young man was dancing last night at one of the smartest hotels in a white waistcoat with scarlet enamel buttons on the chest, and these were very close together, which is now the fashion. It is a double-breasted white waistcoat is gradually becoming more and more popular, and some of them are decorated with even brighter buttons.

WEMBLEY FIASCO. The comparative failure of the Wembley Exhibition last year from the point of view of popular attendance was explained by the very bad summer of 1924. Unfortunately that explanation can no longer be held valid. So far the present summer has been exceptionally fine, but notwithstanding this the average attendance at Wembley has not been more than about half what it was last year.

MORE SENILE DECAY. It is a remarkable fact that just at this time so many London buildings of note should be showing signs of senile decay. We have a formidable list of them now—St. Paul's Cathedral, Waterloo Bridge, London Hospital and Westminster. None of these famous architectural works is of any real antiquity, and yet they show clear signs of old age.

NAVY AND FASCIST. The Admiralty has issued an order, similar to that recently circulated by the War Office, forbidding officers and men enrolling as members of the British Fascist. In both cases objection is based on the general ground that association of serving officers and men with political organizations may be subversive of discipline.

THE IMMORTAL CHINK. A solicitor practicing in the Dutch East Indies tells me that in Java the income tax laws work in strange ways. A Chinese merchant, to the amusement of the whole place, has recently accepted payment of close on £20,000 in income tax, thanks entirely to the system. The income tax authorities have the right to demand books of account, and can inspect them at their leisure. They did so in the case of this Chinese, giving him the usual receipt for the books. A month later...

WORK OF CHURCH ARMY ENDS HERE

Gathering of 800 or 900 Addressed in Imperial Theatre.

Capt. A. Hanson Tells of Prison Work in England—Contrast With Old Days

The mission of the Church Army was brought to a close here yesterday. In the afternoon yesterday between 800 and 900 people gathered in the Imperial Theatre for the address by Captain Arthur Hanson, veteran of the Crusaders' group who told of his experience in 25 years of work as a church worker.

MEETING IN IMPERIAL. Captain Hanson while speaking in the Imperial theatre yesterday afternoon kept his audience in great good humor with witty sayings while he pictured vividly the work of the Church Army. That army, he said, had been established 43 years ago by Prebendary Carlile, to seek the non-church goer. It was 26 years ago that the Home Secretary in England first permitted the Church Army officers to assist the prison chaplains.

THE MONOMARK. A scheme which may have an important bearing on British trade was expounded at a lunch held at the Victoria Hotel, London, under the auspices of the British Monomarks, Limited. This organization has instituted a system, devised by Mr. Wilfrid Ingham (managing director) for abbreviating and facilitating commercial and private communications.

DIPLOMATIC TRAGEDY. The select circle of London's corps diplomatique has been shocked indeed today by a tragedy rare within its orbit. Despite Mr. Galsworthy's "The Show," with its indictment of ghouliah curiosity, there is natural speculation as to the cause, be they tragic or humorous, which will result. This is made possible by arrangements which have been concluded with the G. P. O. Under the new scheme one of these monomarks may be obtained for a fee of five shillings per year.

HUGE CASH DEAL. The sensational insurance deal announced today—principally sensational because the sum involved is £1,000,000—the biggest cash transactions ever put through in City of London. The Norwich Union Life Company is paying over £5,500,000 in cash to the Phoenix for the company's share in the value of £11,000,000, of which considerably more than half consists of Government stocks.

A SCOTCH GIRL. Lady Mary Campbell, the Earl of Breadalbane's sister whose engagement is announced to Lieut.-Commander R. V. Barton, R. N., is a typical Scotch lady, intelligent and high-spirited, and could wear on her bridal dress the ribbon of the Military Medal. Lady Mary served in France with the Red Cross, and was a nurse at Etaples when the German airmen bombed out the hospital base, according to the experts, will entail the expenditure of a million sterling!

FEMININE PSYCHOLOGY. A friend who was in Etaples hospital at the time of the raid, with one leg suspended in splints from a beam, tells me he was not conscious of any panic, but found to his amazement later that his hair was as wet with perspiration as though it was being shampooed. His hut had an excellent Irish sister in charge, and, on his advice, during the raid she lay down on the floor. Though the room of the German raiders sounded overhead, and shattering explosions lifted the hut inches from the floor, the Irish sister stuck it out bravely. But suddenly a frightened rat scampered down the floor. This frightened the sister more than all the German bombs, and she jumped up with a little scream. A wounded man in the hut, with both legs amputated, somehow managed to get underneath his bed.

The Church Army Crusade through the Eastern States of the Union and New Brunswick will conclude at the end of this month, and the two groups of Crusaders will sail for England early in September. Their crusade will have cost about $10,000, and has as its ideal the establishment of Church Army work in Canada and the United States.

GROUCHY FOLK DON'T LIVE LONG

SOME folk seem to get good solid comfort from being grouchy. They are grouchy when they get out of the bed in the morning, grouchy at work, grouchy at noon, grouchy in the evening and most likely have grouchy dreams. It is a habit, and it grows. After a bit the person develops a grouchy face, a grouchy walk, and a grouchy tone of voice. At play the grouchy is a poor loser. He snarls at other players. He invites suspicion of unfairness. In the race of life he is an everlasting nuisance, falling over his own feet, and cluttering up the track with his obstructive tactics. If you are a grouchy, get out of it. You can do this by cultivating a more cheerful attitude toward things. Read funny stories. Force yourself to laugh at times. After a while you will be able to laugh naturally. Remember grouchy people live short lives. Don't be a grouchy.

VERY STRIKING EFFECT An attractive day coat is of black kasha cloth lined with red with one large pocket of red embroidery. A white chiffon dance frock, with a very full skirt is trimmed with garlands rather aimlessly scattered about.

back with a snap like a rolled-up tape measure. "That's right," he said. "I made no mistake. It really is Movie Land. But you have magic shoes and I have magic buttons, so we should be safe enough. There is another thing that I forgot to tell you. If you two take my hands, whenever one of my buttons is pushed, you become the same as I do. If I stretch, you stretch, and if I shrink, you shrink. If I blow up, you blow up. It buttons as possible. Then they followed Jugie Jump who was moving very fast by this time. If they hadn't had the magic shoes which the Fairy Queen had given them, they never would have been able to keep up. But the magic shoes were so marvelous that each step they took moved them forward about a hundred yards. Before many minutes the three travelers stood on top of the high hill over which Puff's button had gone. "I thought so," said Jugie Jump slyly, nodding his head up and down like a China mandarin. "This is the Land of the Movies. That button couldn't have come to a worse place." "That sounds all right," said Nick. "Oh, but this is different," said Jugie Jump. "They haven't a moving picture theatre in the whole place. This is the land where everything moves all the time. Nothing ever stops—not even the street cars. The people never go to bed, but take their naps on roller skates, and even the clocks wiggle on the walls. If you go beyond that fence, you also will have to keep moving. And as for the button, it has probably rolled ten miles since it arrived. Just wait a minute and I'll see."

TYPOS' PICNIC IS GOOD OUTING

Union Members Spend Afternoon and Evening at Crystal Beach.

Baseball and Other Games, Supper and Dancing, Make Hours Happy

Saint John Typographical Union, No. 85, had their annual picnic at Crystal Beach on Saturday. Accompanied by St. Mary's Band they left Indiantown about 1:30 on the steamer Majestic. After a pleasant sail up the river they arrived at the picnic grounds where the different committees immediately started their activities. A baseball match between the single and married men was won by the former team. Edward Kennedy captained the single men, while the forces of the married men were headed by Bert Finamore. Silas Preece, of St. Mary's Band proved to be an acceptable umpire. Races for girls and boys and men and women were run off on the green and were the source of much pleasure to all. Prizes were given to all the winners. The usual bean toss board and air gun were set up and well patronized. Miss Phyllis Sage was the winner on both these, winning a lap robe on the bean board, and a lady's umbrella at the air gun contest, while the successful men were H. Barton on the bean toss, who was presented a gentleman's umbrella, and Ernest Toole, the highest scorer on the air gun, winning a pass to the Imperial. Then there was the ladies' could guess the number. This was won by Miss H. Warnock, who guessed the exact number, 194. After the games had been run off the party sat down to supper in the pavilion, and were served in a very efficient manner by a committee of the women under the leadership of Miss May Long, who had as her assistants Miss Gertie Parker, Mrs. Herman T. Campbell and Mrs. E. Stillwell, as well as a large number of the men.

MILLIONAIRE SHIPS AS COMMON SAILOR

Sails Half Way Round World Without Being Identified—Now Home. PASARENA, Calif., Aug. 10.—Three months ago a millionaire youth shipped from the port of San Francisco on the freighter West Jester as a deckhand, lowest job on the schooner. None of the crew suspected his identity, and he was accorded no special privileges. Recently the youth returned to his home here, a quartermaster, his identity still unrecognised to the captain and crew. He had sailed half way round the world, touched every port of call in the Orient, and gathered a wealth of human interest material which he plans to incorporate in a novel.

The sailor was Hunter S. Kimbrough, 26, son of Judge A. C. Kimbrough, Mississippi millionaire, and brother-in-law of Upton Sinclair, Socialist.

MAN IS TAKEN IN RUNNING GUN FIGHT

Forger Makes Desperate Attempt to Escape From St. Louis Police.

ST. LOUIS MO. Aug. 10.—A downtown lunch hour throng was thrown into confusion and two policemen, a deputy city marshal and an unidentified check forger were wounded in a running revolver fight here. The forger, who had just attempted to cash a bogus check at the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, was captured.

Many shots fired. The pursuit, which was taken up by policemen at each corner, and in which many shots were fired, caused great excitement.

The trouble began when the man presented a check for $87.51, which was found not genuine. He escaped James O'Neil, Trust Company watchman, who was summoned, knocked him down and took his revolver. He then ran into the street.

A traffic policeman started after the man, who returned the policeman's fire. From the court house nearby, Deputy Large heard the shooting and ran toward the man just as he jumped on the running board of an automobile. The man was brandishing his revolver, and as Large jumped on the opposite running board of the same machine, the man fired, wounding Large.

Threatening to shoot the driver of the machine, the man ordered him to continue. Policemen and others took up the chase.

The commandered machine dashed away, narrowly missing other cars and trucks. At Washington avenue, Patrolman Falkenberg, directing traffic, exchanged shots with the man. Both were wounded, and at the next cross street the man ran into a barber shop, which soon was surrounded by officers who entered.

The man fired, wounding Patrolman Dugan, but was quickly overpowered. He was taken to the City Hospital, but refused to talk. None of the policemen was wounded dangerously.

C.P.S. MONTROSE IS DAMAGED

Strikes Sunken Obstacle in St. Lawrence and Returns to Quebec

350 Passengers and Freight Will be Transferred to Other Steamers.

QUEBEC, Aug. 9.—The Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, outward bound from Montreal and Quebec, with about 350 passengers and a general cargo of grain and hay, as well as mails, for Liverpool, returned to port here today, after striking an unknown obstacle during a dense fog on Friday.

The fog was encountered between Crane Island and Cape Salomon, about 60 miles down the river, and Captain Landry ordered the anchors cast out. This was done, and the ship, in coming to, fouled her aft end on the obstruction, according to the captain.

RUDDER DAMAGED.

It was found that the vessel's rudder had been damaged and that oil tank No. 2 was leaking.

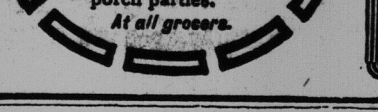

The wrecking steamer Lord Strathcona was dispatched from here to help the Montrose, but the latter returned to Quebec under her own steam.

Electric Lights In Sacred Buddha City

CALCUTTA, Aug. 8.—The electric light, symbol of modern civilization, has at last invaded the great temple itself in the sacred city of the Great Lama.

Parts of an electric generator and turbine are being carried on mules back to Lhasa, forbidden city of Tibet. The temple where only prayer wheels have ever turned will soon be lighted by modern electricity.

Foreigners, however, will not be permitted to accompany their invention. All wiring and installation will be accomplished by the monks.

Thirteen Miles Out at Sea

By F. V. Williams in Red and Gun. AN OILY swell undisturbed by any breeze rolled in from the Atlantic, sending great green billows crashing against the masses of rock that raised the boulder-strewn ridge above the swift flowing tides of Fundy. A wise old herring gull perched atop one of the highest boulders on the Yellow Murr Ledge; half asleep he seemed, sitting there balanced on one foot. Suddenly he came to his wide awake with a start, stood at attention on both feet, head up, and with a great flapping of white pinions he went sailing out and upward from his perch. Up he went, and around, in an eye widening circle, and as he went he called hoarsely a warning to every living thing within hearing, that all was not right out there in the fog that hung low over the sea.

As his first warning cry a seal that had been sleeping raised his head and glanced nervously about, and the gull continuing its cries at last succeeded in alarming the seal so that he sounded down to the water's edge where he paused, and glanced back; and others, their light slumbers disturbed by their companion's panty flight at once roused up from their sleeping places and went helter skelter for the sea, into which friendly element they all slipped as noisily as so many great fish, reappearing off shore at distances varying from sixty to one hundred and fifty yards, from which vantage point they continually rose up in the water, gaining inquisitively back at their late resting places.

INDIANS CREEP OUT. The gull disappeared in the fog that covered the surrounding sea. The surf broke with a monotonous crash on the seaward side of the ledge; the tide rushing in from the Atlantic, had just turned-foed, and gave to the seaward side of the ledge in appearance of being much rougher than it really was, but truth to tell that particular side of the ledge was no place for a small boat or canoe to attempt a landing. On the seaward or land side, however, it was an altogether different looking place; the eddy caused by the ledge made the water here comparatively smooth, and here in a little cove was to be seen the cause of the big gull's warning—four canoes, one birch bark, three canvas, two green, and a red, were silently approaching the rocks. They had approached from the seaward side, what light draught of a breeze that was moving was directly in their faces, and the Micmac Indians that paddled those canoes had the wind in their favor for the stalling of the seal that they were morningly certain would be on the Yellow Murr Ledge that foggy morning.

Quietly as shadows the Indians crept up to the top of the ledge and peered down. Suddenly a report, a sharp crack, a flash of light, a puff of smoke, and just as the report had hardly died away when to the keeper's astonished ears came an answering report, or did

HISTORIC GROUND

A British Columbia totem pole being erected in an historic corner of the Canadian National Exhibition grounds at Toronto, just beside the monument which marks the site of Fort Rouille, the first white dwelling place in Upper Canada.

he imagine it? He stood and listened for a long time, peering expectantly out across the sea to the very edges of the fast receding fog banks; surety that could not have been a shot in answer to the signal gun.

About that time he discovered away off shore an object on the water, and then another, and another, until he had counted up to four. It was the work of seconds to drive inside the dwelling house and procure the telescope from its hangings in the watch room. Stranding the glass against the corner of the building he watched the first object rise from the trough of a sea, rise jauntily over the crest and disappear in the next hollow—a canoe, off shore there thirteen miles, if it was a foot—and then he studied the others—yes, there were four of them, three painted canoes, evidently canvas covered, two green, and a red, and one birch bark, evidently hunting porpoise.

Watching closely he discovered a group of three porpoise crossing at right angles the course of the red canoe; at just what distance they were from the canoe it was hard to estimate, evidently out of range, as the two Indians having caught sight of their quarry were paddling with might and main to intercept the line of travel taken by the porpoise.

THRILLING RACE. For some five minutes this race was on, the porpoise all unsuspecting were traveling at a leisurely rate of speed, while the Indians were putting forth all the speed it was possible for them to muster. At last the man in the bow thrust his paddle behind him into the canoe, picked up his shotgun which had been lying in the bows, the while the man with the gun held close, and the ready, sweeping the water in front of him from left to right, from right to left.

Puff, Puff, Puff, Puff! Two shiny backs showed for a moment, and they were followed by a third, their dorsal fins just nicely out of water, and just as the back of the leader 'humped' for local Dogfish. For over a mile they had to paddle through them, almost every stroke of a paddle striking the fish, and the canoes constantly grating on their rough backs; they were fearful lest the small sharks should take a notion to attack the canoes, in which case they would have made short work of them. The fish were in no wise disturbed evidently, and were merely basking on the surface, thousands of them.

"And now that you have heard of the Indians hunting porpoise off shore in the fog in the Bay of Fundy tide rip," the light keeper went on, "what do you think I saw on the 'screen' in a motion picture show—just an announcement, before the picture was flashed on the screen, that the Indian seldom went more than a mile from shore in his canoe. An Indian no doubt does for reasons of his own, at times follow the shores of lakes and rivers, but to say that he seldom ventures far from shore in his canoe, is to be laughed at."

Forthwith. He—"That little prother of yours is a bright boy. He just told me he should expect a quarter if I kissed you." She—"The young wretch! You didn't give him anything, did you?" He—"Yes, I gave him a dollar in advance."

HAMLET IN A TOP HAT.

(Ottawa Citizen). Sir Barry Jackson, director of the famous Birmingham Repertory theatre, is going to produce "Hamlet" in present-day costume, a cablegram states. The decision of the director offers a rich field for humorous speculation, and it has already been asked if Hamlet wears a bolero shirt for his scenes with the ghost and during the performance of the play, will Polonius be permitted to wear one of those gaudy King Tut sweaters and the Queen the latest creation from Paris? But Sir Barry is serious, and he gives the following reason for producing "Hamlet" in modern costume. "The whole idea is the belief that when the ordinary person goes to see the play, as it seems unreal to him, he does not realize that the characters, strangely garbed and wigged, are flesh and blood people, so I propose to popularize "Hamlet" for the average citizen. The convenient "average citizen" it seems, is to me the beneficiary of this innovation. But it is extremely doubtful whether "Hamlet" will be more real in present-day habiliments than in the doublet and hose of ancient Denmark. It is true that Shakespeare's pageantry, the gorgeousness of his stage pictures, the beauty and color of his scenes, serve to distract attention

At least reports the child was rapidly improving. No bones were broken.

As Hiram Sees It

"Tomorrow," said Mr. Hiram Hornbeam to The Times reporter, "we'll be wondering whether we got to her another election after the snow comes. I guess we may as well let it go. I don't see how we can all settle down for another four years or so if we find fault with the present one. I see where some folks in Nova Scotia are blin' mad because the strike's been settled. They're mad because the fellows on the other side o' politics done the settling—and they're yellin' away about Premier Rhodes as if he onto be jail. Seems to me, Mister, that's goin' a little too far. Give the devil his due, I say—when it shows he ain't as bad as he's painted. But the some folks wouldn't want to go to Heaven unless they could see another curious thing the last few days—some folks that's yellin' to have prohibition enforced stood round and set their eyes when the lecture was goin' by. Don't it beat all!"
