RURAL LIFE AT A DISCOUNT

Population in Country Falling Off in Comparison With Urban Statistics—French Ousting English

(Toronto World)

John McDougall's book on "Rural Life in Canada" is attracting attention in England. The fact that the rural population is falling off so notably in comparison with the urban population is regarded as a highly significant fact. It is in fact not only of the east but of the western provinces also. Mr. McDougall's point that Boston and New York are the third and fourth largest cities with 500,000 Canadian citizens, somewhat starts the British imagination.

The fact is that Ontario rural life is still regarded from the point of view of the last generation. The politicians contemplate the question of woman's suffrage from the remoteness of the middle of the last century. The young people do not quite know what is the matter, but they do know they won't stand for life as it is in the country and they flock to the cities. The political machines do not care a straw about questions of policy and advancing views, and the interests of the women of the country. They are concerned with registration and polling clerks and booths and election days and candidates, and matters of the house. Meanwhile the women move to the cities. The men follow them. Farm life goes to the dogs.

There is little use blaming the agricultural department. Of course it ought to be the one department which every farmer in the country should swear by. As it is, he thinks of it at all, it is more frequently to swear at it. The Agricultural College at Guelph is the one bright spot in the departmental record, apart from the admirable routine and red tape, for which few care a straw.

Mr. McDougall's book is issued by the Board of School Service of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Daily Hints For the Cook

Curry Powder: Mix an ounce of ginger, 1 of mustard, 1 of pepper, 3 of coriander seed, the same quantity of turmeric, 1-4 of an ounce of cayenne pepper, 1-2 an ounce of cardamoms and the same of cummin seed and cinnamon. Pound the whole fine, sift and keep in a bottle.

Chocolate Syrup: Put 2 1/2 pints boiling water into a saucepan, add 1 pound cocoa, let stand about five minutes to moisten the cocoa and then stir thoroughly. Add 1 1/2 pints more of water and cook for one hour, stirring occasionally. Add 5 pounds of granulated sugar and stir until dissolved, then cook about half an hour. Remove from the fire and when cold strain through double thickness of cheese cloth. Add two ounces of vanilla extract and store in bottles. This may be poured over ice cream or used in making chocolate to be served as a beverage. For the latter use take 1-8 tsp to 2-4 cup of hot milk.

Taken Literally. One morning while Mrs. Cobb was at her summer home in the country, she decided to go up to town and spend the day with a friend. Her grocer had not called by the time she was ready to leave, so she wrote on a card: 'All out. Don't leave anything and tacked it on the door. Upon her return at night, she found the house had been ransacked and nearly everything of any value had been taken. On the card which she had left on the door, these words had been added: 'Thanks. We haven't left much.'

DYING FROM GALL-STONES

Doctors Said Only An Operation Could Save My Life—"Fruit-a-tives" Enabled Him to Pass Nearly 200 Gall-Stones

J. B. HARDING, Esq. 46 Grove Ave., Toronto, Ont., Jan. 10th 1913. I suffered untold agony from GALL-STONES for the past three years and tried many doctors without getting relief. I also paid $5.00 for one bottle of medicine which was useless. At times the pain from these gall-stones was great that I lost consciousness, and my condition was desperate. I was so satisfied that I was dying and the doctors said I must be operated upon.

"During one of these very severe, acute attacks, I was given 50 'FRUIT-A-TIVES', and after taking a short treatment of this remedy, I passed gall-stones over an inch in length, and as many as one hundred and fifty-two hundred in number. 'FRUIT-A-TIVES' was the only thing that would relieve my pain. They are the greatest medicine in the world, and if there were anyone in Canada, or anywhere else, that suffers from gall-stones, I say 'I then take 'Fruit-a-tives' and be cured."

"If this testimonial will further the good work of 'Fruit-a-tives' published in my full authority."

Are you wondering how 'Fruit-a-tives'—a medicine made from fruit juices, can cure Gall-stones? We will tell you. The Gall bladder is the reservoir for holding the Gall, or bile, secreted by the liver. If there is insufficient bile in the Gall bladder it thick and easily forms stones. When the liver is weak, it secretes very little bile and then the Gall bladder is partitioned with a thick jelly-like mass of bile and thus forms into lumps or softens the Gall-stones and by overfilling the Gall bladder, forces the stones through the Gall duct—and thus cures the disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices, a wonderful process, the medicinal properties of certain fruits are greatly intensified—then valuable tonics and antiseptics are added and the whole is put into the pleasant tasting tablets known in every section of Canada as "Fruit-a-tives". See a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of 3 by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

What She Could Do. Arthur was spending a day with his aunt. "I am going to do something to please you on your birthday," she said, to the little boy, "but first I want to ask you a question. If you really want to do something to please me, Auntie," said the "don't ask the teacher."

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations are heartily extended to Hon. William Pugsley, who today is 63 years of age and is in the enjoyment of excellent health. Although for the time being he is a member of His Majesty's loyal opposition, and does not loom large in the political news of the day, Dr. Pugsley is nevertheless a national figure. At no time in his very successful career has he been regarded with greater interest, or commanded the admiration of his supporters and the respect of his opponents in so large a measure as today.

A St. John paper of July 1st, 1871, which a friend the other day laid on the desk of the Times, contains an advertisement dated June 26th of that year, announcing that Mr. William Pugsley, junior, had just been associated with the law firm of Crawford & Pugsley, of which the other members were Mr. J. Herbert Crawford and Mr. Gilbert R. Pugsley. In these 42 years, Mr. William Pugsley has not only attained eminence at the bar, but in the public life of New Brunswick and the Dominion.

The people of St. John have a special reason for congratulating Dr. Pugsley upon his continued good health, and in expressing the hope that he will soon again occupy a position in which he will be able to carry forward the great projects affecting trade and transportation at the port of St. John, which he inaugurated while a member of the Liberal government at Ottawa. The citizens have had an opportunity in the last two years to observe some contrasts, and to realize how much they need the forceful energy of such a representative as Dr. Pugsley in the cabinet at Ottawa.

It will be remembered that, when the Laurier government was defeated, boats were made by the Conservative press that the department over which Dr. Pugsley presided would be investigated, and he would be convicted of all sorts of political crimes and misdemeanors. The investigation we may be sure was made, but not one solitary charge of any sort has been laid at the door of the late minister of public works. His record as the head of that department has been clean, and those who sought political capital to be used against him were utterly confounded.

During the last session of parliament the country was made aware in such a manner as had not before been illustrated of the splendid fighting qualities of Dr. Pugsley. The triumph of the Liberals in the fiercest battle of the session was Dr. Pugsley's triumph, and proved him to be not only courageous and resourceful, but the most alert and skillful parliamentarian on the floor of the house.

Dr. Pugsley has rendered his country splendid service, as one of her ablest public men, and there can be no reasonable doubt that he will render still greater service in the years to come. He has done more to place St. John on the map as a national port than any other representative of the city has ever had in parliament.

THE ROGERS METHOD

Hon. Robt. Rogers, in one of his recent speeches in the province of Saskatchewan, made a savage attack upon the Liberal government of that province, and practically intimated that the way for the province to get from the Borden government control of its natural resources would be to place a royal government in charge of provincial affairs. He charged the existing Saskatchewan government with most of the crimes in the political calendar. The Winnipeg Tribune makes some comments which ought to be of special interest to Mr. Rogers. It says that in the lack of responsible government and of British justice, Saskatchewan is entirely outclassed by the province represented by Mr. Rogers and his pal in politics, Sir Rodmond Roblin. To prove its case the Tribune reviews the MacDonald by-election inquiry. Another journal, commenting on the remarks of Mr. Rogers, adds the by-election in Richelieu and Antigonish to that in MacDonald as evidence that it is the Tories who have the most shameful record, and who have "outraged the public sense of decency and fair play." Mr. Borden, when in opposition, made very solemn professions of his determination to purify elections in Canada. Instead of doing so, he has profited politically by the methods of Boss Rogers.

SELLING BONDS LOCALLY
 There has been some talk in St. John about offering city bonds to local investors in small parcels rather than placing them upon the outside market. The town of Stratford, Ontario, recently adopted this plan, offering 5% per cent debentures at ten, twenty and thirty years, and it is said that $86,000 worth have been taken up, the bonds being issued in sums of $500 and $1,000. The Ottawa Journal finds in this method of civic finance a hope for the future of civic administration, inasmuch as people who have made an investment in city bonds would naturally be more interested in good city government. It says:
 "As the bonds of a municipality come to be held more or less largely by the

There is more ostentation in this section of the country than all other diseases produced by the most costly medicines to be had. For a great many years doctors pronounced that the most efficacious treatment was by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has discovered a new method, however, which requires no constitutional treatment. Hal's Family Pills, manufactured by J. J. Chase & Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., is the only preparation of the kind. It is taken internally in doses from one to four pills, three or four times a day, and it cures the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: J. J. CHASE & CO., Philadelphia, Pa. Sold by Druggists, 7c.

SOME OF THE TITLES THAT NOBODY CLAIMS

Romances of the Peerage—While Some People Spend Immense Sums For Such Honors, Others Who Have Them Forget Them

The betrothal of the Duchess of Fife to her relative, Prince Arthur of Connaught, is a reminder that the late duke's grandson, Mr. Duff, who resides in Australia, Mr. Kidd, Melbourne, has so far not troubled to establish his right to the Fife earldom. It is a curious claim, but realizing that there is no property attaching to the title, Mr. Duff has no objection to the Earl of Fife without adequate means to sustain the dignity. Though people are apt to be eager to obtain honours to their names, immense sums being contributed to the party funds by ambitious individuals in the hope of getting a knighthood, baronetcy, or peerage, a good many titles are awaiting claimants. On the death of the seventh Earl of Milltown in 1891, the honor became dormant, as no heir came forward, but one, it is alleged, to be found in the person of a guard on an Indian railway, who married a native, and has, rumor alleges, a dusky family. Possibly one day, therefore, the House of Lords may possess a dusky peer from India.

Through another peerage this potentially is a likely one. Since the death thirty years ago of the third Lord Gardner, the barony has been dormant, but it is undoubtedly extant, and the rightful possessor is possibly a Gardner whose mother was a native princess of the Delhi family, and whose grandmother was a Begum. The latter was her husband's cousin, and daughter of another native princess by marriage to a Gardner of a previous generation whose parents were Colonel W. L. Gardner, of Gardner's Horse, and a dark but beautiful Princess of Cambay.

The ancient barony of the Lords Scrope, who owned historic Bolton Castle, in Yorkshire, where the ninth baron had the hapless Mary, Queen of Scots in his custody, might be successfully claimed by a descendant living in South Africa, a Lord Willoughby of Parham could, it is thought, be found in America; and there, too, are the rightful owners of two ancient baronetcies—those of Peyton, of Iqbalim, Cambridgehire, and Norwich, of Brampton, Northants, two ruined families, whose representatives sought new fortunes across the Atlantic.
 A Warwickshire squire, the late Mr. Marmion Ferrers, of Baddeley Clinton, was the descendant and male representative of the Ferrers, Earls of Derby, and in the opinion of experts he could have Established to the satisfaction of the Lords a right to the possession of that earldom, which dates from 1188, and is older in creation by over three centuries than that of the King's host at Knowlsey the other week. These are only a few of many titles which may some day figure in the extant peerage.

 All these dormant honors are landless, so their possession would confer no pecuniary benefits, and this is the principal reason why they are not claimed, another being the great cost of prosecuting a claim, for the fees of peerage lawyers are heavy; so, too, are those of pedigree hunters, whose charges for searches are by no means light.

JOSEPH MCKINNEY
The death of Joseph McKinney following the accident on Thursday afternoon on the site of the new post office in Prince William street has caused much regret about the city from friends by whom he was very well liked. He had been engaged as tender with the Rhodes, Curry Co., at the time of the accident which caused his death. When a huge derrick fell upon him, his skull was fractured, and though all possible attention was given in the hospital, his life could not be saved and he died about 5.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His wife and one child survive him.

NEW BRUNSWICK LOOKS BETTER THAN THE WEST

Many Men From This Province Anxious to Return - Publicity Campaign Would Pay

A St. John man showed the Times today a letter he had received from a friend who is engaged in business in British Columbia. Among other things the writer of the letter says:

"Have been chatting with quite a number of old New Brunswick boys who are located here in the west, and that the east is holding out better inducements than can be found in either Vancouver or Victoria, and the rapid advancement now being made in St. John is making a strong appeal to those who are acquainted with the fact, and who are fighting against the present high cost of living in the west."

This letter is said to be typical of many that come from the western country and from the New England States. Many former residents of the province would be glad to come back if they could be assured that the conditions here were such as to promise them opportunity to gain a comfortable livelihood.

It would pay the city of St. John and the province generally to conduct a publicity campaign such as would attract the attention and arouse the interest of former New Brunswickers everywhere and encourage them to return to their native province. There can be no doubt whatever that the publication in newspapers throughout Canada and the New England States of letters telling of the awakening in this city and province has some good fruit, and is responsible to a large extent for the very wide interest that is now taken in New Brunswick affairs.

REDEMPTORISTS WILL CONDUCT MISSION

Two Weeks in Cathedral and Then in Other Churches - Bishop Announces Changes in Clergy

For the first time in several years a mission will open in the Cathedral tomorrow, to continue for two weeks, the first of which will be for the women and the second for the men of the parish. The mission will be given to the children during the first week, and at the close in the Cathedral will be held in the other Catholic churches about the city, closing in St. Peter's, North End, in November. The missionaries having charge of the exercises are members of the Redemptorist order from Toronto. Rev. Father William Hogan, John Kane and Edward Walsh.

His Lordship Bishop LeBlanc, who returned to the city today after a very satisfactory trip through eastern section of the province on a confirmation tour, announced several changes amongst the priests and parishes of his diocese, amongst them the following:—Rev. Joseph Ouellet, of St. Mary's, Kent county, who has retired, will be succeeded by Rev. A. Poirier, of West Quaco; Rev. Paul Dufour, of Notre Dame de Kent, who has also retired, will be succeeded by Rev. Joseph Lapointe, formerly pastor of St. Anne de Kent; Rev. Phillip Hebert, curate to Very Rev. John Hebert, V.G., of Buctouche, will succeed Rev. Father Lapointe.

LADY DENTIST FROM LABRADOR

Dr. Perry Tells of Her Work in the North WITH GRENFELL

Words of Praise For Other Members of Mission and Modest Account of Her Own Activities —A Great Work

Miss G. B. Perry, D.A.S., who went from there to Labrador early in July on the mission ship George B. Clewett in company with Dr. Little and his family who were returning to Dr. Grenfell's mission on the Labrador coast, is now returning to Boston and, in passing through St. John, was given a hearing by the city as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Purchase, Duke street.

Speaking to a Times reporter, Miss Perry, who is a graduate dental surgeon, told of her experience in that out-of-the-way country and of the splendid work being done by the mission there in charge of Dr. Grenfell.

After leaving Boston on the night of July the party went as far as St. Anthony, Nfld., on the "Clewett." Dr. Perry remained there for two days and visited the hospital which is in charge of Dr. Grenfell, and is the largest in the mission, having a capacity for more than eighty patients, most of whom are men. A most common disease among them is tuberculosis, beri-beri, which is a painful muscular disease is also very prevalent among them, to say nothing of scurvy. Most of these diseases are due to great exposure to cold and to lack of proper nourishment.

Dr. Perry went from St. Anthony to Battle Harbor on the Labrador coast, the Duchess which was wrecked on the same coast about a month afterwards. At Battle Harbor, where Dr. Perry spent most of her time there, is another large hospital which is in charge of Dr. Wickfield. Some remarkable cases have been effected there, patients having been successfully operated on for cancers and many skin grafting operations having been successfully performed.

A Northern Heroine

Dr. Perry also paid several visits to Forto and told some interesting stories of Sister Bailey, who is stationed there, and to whom she referred as a heroine, going about with her dog teams or rather the teams led by the dog when neighbors whenever they are called upon. These long journeys are often very dangerous and several times the good sister of charity has come very near to losing her life. At one time in driving along a ledge of ice she fell and was struck and it was with great difficulty that she saved herself from sliding over the steep precipice into the ice cold water twenty feet below. She also told of Sister Bailey's work among the people in evacuating children, as there are very few government schools in that district. Her chief work, however, lies in the hospital.

Dr. Perry spoke of the great need of surgeons in that country, owing to the number of cases of freezing, and told of one case where a little girl had both her feet frozen and, being so far away from the mission, the father had to take an axe to remove them and save the girl's life.

Dr. Perry said that the fishermen had a very poor season this year, and that this coming winter would be a particularly hard one for the season. They are able to raise very few vegetables there, she said, and depend almost entirely on the fishing for a living. Sister Bailey, she said, had a garden and raised such things as lettuce and small vegetables, including potatoes, with which she seemed to have better success than the people living there. Even here were very small, but she said they were much more delicious than our potatoes.

Her Own Work

In speaking of the good work of the mission, including the splendid work done by Dr. Grenfell himself, who goes about everywhere and does the work of a doctor as well as a clergyman and teacher. Miss Perry omitted to mention her own work. But on being pressed she told how she became interested in the work of the mission by a doctor lecturing on the subject in Boston and gave up her practice in that city and went up there to relieve the suffering of these people from their aching jaws by filling and extracting teeth. She said she had only taken silver as filling with her, as she thought there would be no demand for anything better, but she said if she went another year, which she hopes to be able to do, that she would take some gold fillings, as there were some well-to-do people there, and not only Eskimoes, as many people think. For the most part they are fishermen of British descent, and there are few Eskimoes there at all, most of them being farther north.

Dr. Perry says that the work of the mission is not assisted by the Newfoundland government in the least, but depends entirely on subscriptions and that the merchants of Newfoundland are not in sympathy with the work, as Dr. Grenfell has established several co-operative stores which have taken away the trade which the merchants of Newfoundland would have received.

In returning from Labrador Dr. Perry left on Friday of last week, arriving here the following Thursday. One of the medical students who had been spending the summer up there accompanied her, bringing with him a boy from Labrador whom he had taken a fancy to, and was taking to Boston to have him educated. This little boy, she said, was a great source of amusement to her. He would stop and look at the horses, having only seen one horse before in his life, but when he saw the automobiles running about he was speechless with wonder and delight.

Dr. Perry said she had never been in St. John before and was delighted with the city. She is a great friend of Miss Jean Purchase, who is secretary of the Associated Charities in Boston, and she was persuaded to spend a few days here on her way through, and visit Miss Purchase's relations and will remain here until Monday.

THE STAGE AND ITS PEOPLE; MANY WELL REMEMBERED HERE

Attractions That Will Attract in Saint John

A Review of Some Recent Bookings—Their Success or Otherwise—No Lack of Support in Some Cases at Least

The question has often been asked "Is St. John a poor show town?" Various answers have been given, largely dependent upon success or failure of productions...

It is within the memory of all stage-goers that productions have played to large receipts during the last couple of seasons, in particular, in St. John. They have not only been in contrast to the higher class article that is very cheap both as to merit and price...

St. John theatre-goers speaking in the majority, show by their non-attendance that they are not anxious to pay $2 to hear grand opera singers, it possibly shows that there is a lack of love for the best in music amongst theatre-goers here...

There is a certain lawyer whose quick wit is said never to desert him either in the court room or elsewhere. Not long ago a client entered his office and throwing back his coat, exclaimed: "Why, sir, your office is as hot as an oven!"

There is nothing anybody broken that SECO-TIME will not repair. It is the only medicine that will not even show. Heat, cold or moisture will not affect it.

NEWS OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Lynn Harding In The Great Adventure

DREW IN SHAKESPEARE Edmund Breeze Co-Author In New Play—Deborah In Disguise—A Change Since The Toronto Sensation

An interesting interview is published in this week's New York Mirror with Lynn Harding, who played here as lead with Grace George in "Just To Get Married"...

Edmund Breeze, co-author in the new play "Deborah in Disguise," is a change since the Toronto sensation. An interesting interview is published in this week's New York Mirror with Lynn Harding...

Rehearsals for "The Love Leap," a comedy by Anna Steele Richardson and Edmund Breeze, have begun. Grace Filkins will be featured when the play is given in New York early next month by the New Era Producing Company.

Thomas Wile opened his regular season in the Orpheum circuit in Memphis, Tenn., on Monday, in the one-act play, "Like Father Like Son," by Guy F. Bragdon.

Home allurement has wooed Emma Eames from the glamour of the foot lights. The singer, who returned last week with her husband, Emilio de Gogorza, from Europe, gave out the statement that she had left the stage forever.

The success of John Drew in the revival of "Much Ado About Nothing," does not appear to be assured by any means. It is now stated that he may fall back on a revival of the clever little comedy, "The Tyranny of Tears," if the Shakespearean effort fails to draw.

Visitors' Suggestions For Local Theatres

Patrons of Moving Picture Houses Would Approve Enforcement of Rules Against Spitting and Large Hats

American visitors to the city during the last few weeks have frequently asked the question, "Should not ladies attending the motion picture entertainments be compelled to remove their hats?"

Apparently he made in the piece since it caused such a row in Toronto, but the general idea still remains the same. From the summaries given by the Boston reviewers the final act seems to have been considerably altered.

ORD NORTHCLIFFE--A LIFE STORY

nce of the Rise to Power of Distinguished Newspaper Man—Has Made Many Enemies, But His Friends Swear by Him.

As a distinguished visitor in the present is the Irishman who, million Englishmen every morning should think and every what they believe—Lordcliffe. The William Randolph of London, some call him, an irascible agitator, a panacheur to publicity. A master mind, a genius, say others. It is easier to form an estimate of Northcliffe if you are a Conservative, because Northcliffe is of that party. It is as easy to decide from the stand of a confirmed Liberal; he is an enemy to that party. But for the man as no prejudices it is as hard to the Lord Northcliffe, as to hazard as on tomorrow's weather.

Years of Age
 Eight years ago he was born in a Irish village close to Dublin. His father was an Irishman, his mother an English baronet. They were their names was Harmsworth, son was called Alfred Charles Harmsworth.

erty granted on the son. As he sought means of providing himself with money to gratify his sometimes five tastes. He was inclined to be a sportsman. He wanted things above station. There were no limits to what he could wish for. In his early days he had not too much of it, but he could wish for more. In his early days he had not too much of it, but he could wish for more.

nothing between him and starvation. It is said he often went without meals and that when he had to face his creditors he was obliged to borrow a top hat and decent clothes to keep up his appearance before them.

Has Knowledge of Poor
 It was during this kind of existence that Harmsworth gained a peculiarly close and sympathetic knowledge of the poor of England and of the great classes to which today so many of his papers are addressed. He slept among them, ate with them, wrote of their tragedies and comedies—in not a very brilliant way and learned their likes and their dislikes, what would please them and what would displease them. The result was that before he had been very long in England he started a cheap paper called Answers. His capital was borrowed money. Since Harmsworth began one small paper his success in journalism has been steady and consistent.

Bought Fowley-Stricken Paper
 An acquaintance was formed. Out of it came a suggestion from Kennedy Jones that Harmsworth buy what was then a poverty-stricken paper, the Evening News, Conservative. This was done before the year was out the paper had paid more than half of its original cost to Harmsworth back again, and was soon a big money-maker. The success of this venture led directly to the establishing of the Mail. State Registration Of Nurses in England

Delegation to Premier Brings Matter Into Realm of Practical Politics—Arguments for and Against Proposals Which Have Aroused Controversy

(London Times)
 As a result largely of the deputation that recently visited Mr. Asquith the question of the state registration of nurses has again become a matter of practical politics. There exists, apparently, a considerable difference of opinion as to the desirability of the proposed measure. For the time being the deputation that in view of the hostility shown to the bill in which it was proposed to introduce the measure, it was not possible to have it passed through the House of Commons as a non-controversial measure. For the time being there is no immediate prospect of legislation on the subject being forthcoming.

He holds this more heroic view of the man are by no means in the minority.

Much of Intellectual Russia Now Under Sway of Poisons, Particularly in Moscow—Awful Revelations of Conditions There

(Times' Special Correspondence)

Moscow, Sept. 15.—Easteric Moscow is soaked with drugs. The whole wealthy West end which lies between the university and the Dorogomysh suburbs spends its days consuming and injecting cocaine and morphia, and indulging in orgies of "sulphurism." This sounds somewhat exaggerated, but it is the conclusion drawn from recent revelations. From the evidence given and the reports of doctors it would seem that only cabmen, muskies, and yard dromiks escape the general craze, and that the whole "intelligentsia" covers everyone who reads, writes and has a black coat to pawn, is made up of drug maniacs. No wonder the harvest of Moscow doctors grows rapidly; no wonder the annual doubling of the crop of suicide and crime.

There are plenty of girls without titles, who are as beautiful as any of the royal ones. But in the case of the lovely princess Elisabeth there are two things which are not to be taken for granted. Besides being pretty, she can sew well, cook, bake, ride, play golf, write stories and even run a typewriter. It is more than likely that she is the only princess in all Europe who has this accomplishment.

WHAT FOSTER SAW IN THE FAR EAST

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—The East as the future market for Canada, its millions of gaping mouths turned towards the dominion to be filled with No. 1 Hard, the East as our coming competitor in every line of manufacture, when education should leave its countless masses; the East again, as the tourist knows or would if he had the eye to see and the power to describe.

Such was the subject with which Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Canadian minister of trade and commerce, dealt with at the Canadian Club luncheon today. Hon. Mr. Foster has just returned from a 45,000 mile trip in which he visited Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan and Korea.

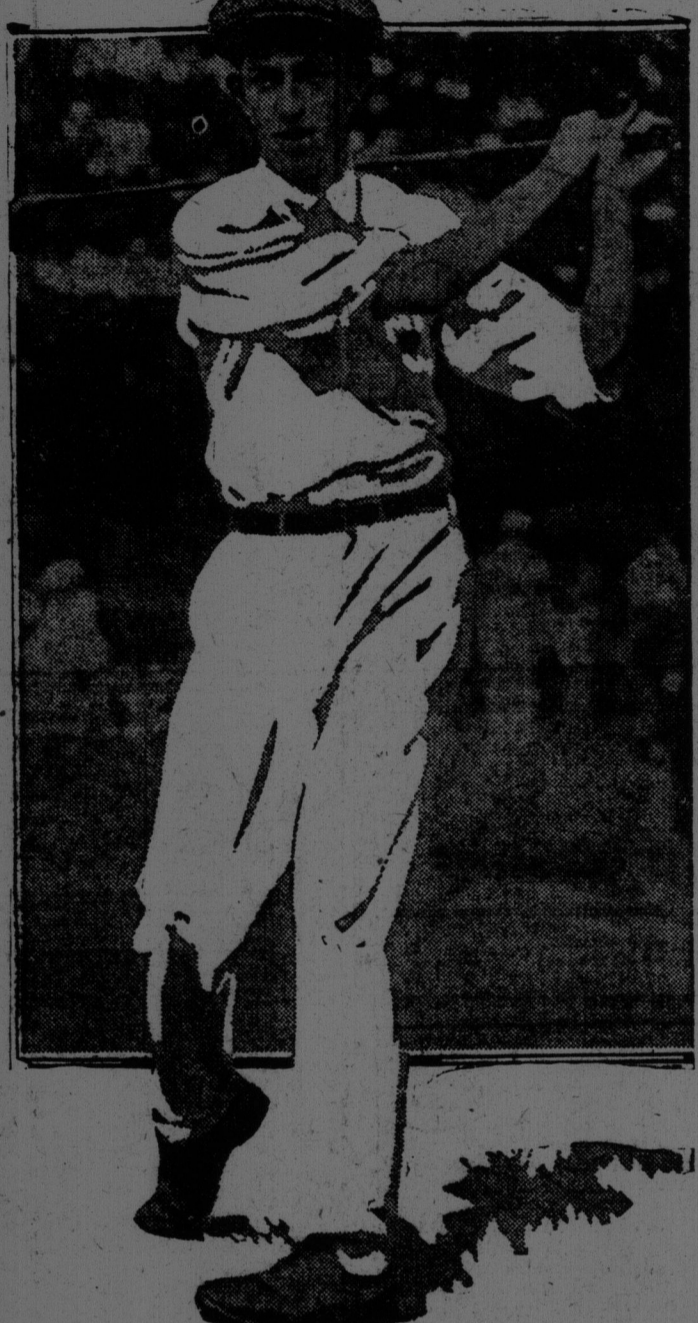

His direct results his visit to Australia, China and Japan, Mr. Foster did not refer to, but he was not wanting in emphasis in pointing out the extent and nature of the trade possibilities of the eastern and Antipodean empires. China and Japan had done wonderfully in the way of intensive cultivation of their half-acre farms, and that was just the reason why, with their growing industrial population, they would not be able to do any more to supply their own insatiable demand for their own necessities.

However, prevalent the notion might have become they were not Anglo-Saxons, the ideas were not and their aims were not. They were going to be neighbors and, in view of the improving facilities of transportation, comparatively near neighbors, and therefore must Canadians seek as the first step to understand them as they must understand us.

The picture the minister drew of China was one of many millions of people—presently ruled by a misbegotten, misdirected, mismanaged government; misbegotten in its aims, misdirected in its policy, mismanaged in its execution.

That of Japan, on the other hand, was almost the reverse of the coin, a race, a people, capable of anything, carrying out their aims and ambitions through a splendidly systematized administration and a bold bid for a business efficiency that would in time make them formidable competitors of our own.

BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW IN CONFERENCE

Sixth Maritime Conference Began Yesterday—Programme For Today and Sunday

That great interest is being taken in the sixth maritime conference of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which opened yesterday afternoon in Trinity parish hall, was manifested by the large attendance of delegates from all parts of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick at both sessions yesterday.

The conference opened at 2:30 o'clock with the president of the conference, W. A. Stepler, in the chair. The subject of the evening was Ways to Win Men and Boys, the meeting being addressed by Rev. R. F. McKim, Mayor Frink.

At the opening of the conference, His Lordship Bishop Richardson spoke a few words of welcome to the delegates and expressed his confidence in the success of the meeting.

At the close of the address, the meeting was thrown open for a discussion of the subject referred to, and several practical suggestions were made by the delegates.

visitors welcome and hoped they would enjoy the short time they would be here.

Bishop Worrell, in acknowledging the hospitality extended to the visitors, said that he was very pleased with the large attendance and that he was glad to hear his lordship say that Halifax was being improved.

The principal event of the evening was the address of the Very Rev. Dean Lloyd, of Halifax, who took as his subject Our Responsibility.

At the close of the address, the meeting was thrown open for a discussion of the subject referred to, and several practical suggestions were made by the delegates.

The delegates gathered at 8:30 in St. Luke's parish hall, where a tempting supper was served by some of the ladies of the congregation.

EVIDENCE LOOKS BAD FOR SULZER

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Governor William Sulzer tried to persuade contributors to his campaign fund not to testify against him, according to evidence adduced at his impeachment trial today.

He asked Duncan W. Peck, state superintendent of public works, who gave $500 to the fund, to violate his oath on the witness stand in the event that he should be called to testify before the Frawley investigating committee.

Peck refused. The governor, Peck asserted, had told him that he, too, would deny having received contributions. This conversation, he said, occurred in the governor's office at the Capitol.

It was further brought out that Richard Croker, Jr., son of the former leader of Tammany Hall, had contributed a $2,000 check payable to the request of Sulzer, to the order of "cash" and that the check was cashed by Frederick L. Colwell, alleged to have been the governor's agent in his Wall street transactions.

The prosecution brought in today, for the first time, evidence to support the charges that the governor used some of his campaign funds to pay for the expenses of his private secretary, Philip Boyer, head of the New York Stock Exchange, of the firm of Boyer, Griswold and Co., and his employees.

At the close of the trial, evidence was adduced that the governor intended to pay for the expenses of his private secretary, Philip Boyer, head of the New York Stock Exchange, of the firm of Boyer, Griswold and Co., and his employees.

The most recent Pittsburgh sensation, Henry M. Hyde, special writer for the Chicago Tribune on topics relating to social welfare, tells in the issue of August 25 of the Godsend in store for the workers of Pittsburgh in the prospective partial application of single tax in that city.

It has come to pass that the value of land within the city limits of Pittsburgh is higher than in any other city in the United States, with the single exception of New York, and there the excess is only fractional.

Philadelphia, Sept. 25.—The Pennsylvania Railroad through the Susquehanna Coal Company and affiliated companies produced and shipped approximately ten per cent of the hard coal.

At the close of the trial, evidence was adduced that the governor intended to pay for the expenses of his private secretary, Philip Boyer, head of the New York Stock Exchange, of the firm of Boyer, Griswold and Co., and his employees.

MAY SPEND $175,000,000 ON CANALS

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—As a preliminary to the enlargement of the Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie to a depth of 81 feet, the government is arranging for the expropriation of Whitefish Island and an additional strip of land along the south side of the present canal.

The actual work of enlarging the canal must, of course, wait until sanctioned by parliament, but it is understood that a vote will be asked at the next session of parliament for a preliminary survey and for the preparation of plans.

The enlargement of the Soo canal is the logical sequence to the enlargement of the Welland canal. The next step will be the enlargement of the whole St. Lawrence canal system so as to give a continuous thirty-foot channel right through from the head of the lakes to the Atlantic.

For political reasons the government does not wish to commit itself to the enlargement of the canal until after the next general election.

Outfighting and Infighting A British Review of Modern Boxing

That the technique of many pastimes, more especially those which can be made to produce gate-money, has been developed further in the United States than in this country is a demonstrable fact. It would be foolish of us to ignore the unanimous opinion of friendly pupils in the matter of sport, that Englishmen are no longer the best teachers, by precept or by practice, even of the games that their forefathers invented. There are, of course, ways and means of compensating ourselves for our lost hegemony. We can still boast that our champions are no longer supreme in this or that sport; though, to be sure, such boasting is apt to be countered by some vaunting of Mr. Dooley's characteristic retort: "Good losers? Indeed they are, for they lose every time!" Again, so far as amateur sport is concerned, we need not admit our inferiority at all; not because in rowing and golf, for example, we are still a little better than our best rivals (judging by results, that is to say), but because the English system aims at creating an athletic nation rather than producing a few specialists of outstanding ability. In the United States the moderate performer is laughed out of court. Baseball is the national summer game there just as cricket is here, but for every American practitioner of the glorified form of rounders we could muster at least a score of cricketers, good, bad, and indifferent. The American golfer (handicap about ten who was asked by an English friend if he played golf, and replied very seriously: "I should not like to say I could play the game") unconsciously revealed the unfathomable gulf between the American and the English conceptions of the sport should hold in the modern art of living, which is, after all, a much more inclusive business than the art of earning one's livelihood. In America you simply dare not say you play a game if you play it only moderately well; the horrid maxim of "Get on or get off" is as tyrannical on the golf links as in a business office. But in England you are called a cricketer even if you are just a choice for a village team - and, what is more, the keenness which survives failure after failure is rightly prized as a sportsmanlike quality.

It follows, that we are justified in regarding defeats in the Olympic games and other international contests with a measure of equanimity - more especially if the foreigner's victories are to some extent due to the unofficial professionalism which is paid with a post-dated cheque, so to speak. But when our professional athletes are systematically beaten by the foreigner, these blows for a wounded amour propre are ineffectual and the only patriotic course is to find out the weak points in our methods, and how they may be remedied.

The Men Who Will Fight For the World's Championship

JOHN J. BARRY, THE ATHLETIC'S SHORTSTOP
New York, Sept. 27.—When folks get talking about the Athletics' infield, they generally mention Collins, McInnis, and Mack, and then, as a kind of afterthought, they say: "Oh yes, and Jack Barry."
"All players will tell you a different story. Men on rival teams maintain that Barry is as important a part of the Philadelphia infield as any of his three co-workers and that he does not receive as much credit as he has coming to him for his playing. John J. Barry is a tireless toiler, and judgment is his middle name. He is one of the shortest of shortstops in the league, and while the moving picture rights to him off the field would have no particular value, "Connie" Mack, rated as considerable authority, asserts that when Barry is out of his infield, it is all topsy-turvy. This was proved in late August this year, the Athletics being forced to go for about three weeks without Barry because of a strained leg. It was feared for a time that the Cleveland Club would overtake them because of the resultant shaky condition of the inner defences. Barry is equipped with one of those quiet running engines which makes little noise but which gets results. He is in no sense a display player. You seldom know he is around until you take a look at the box score. His appearance is not prepossessing, either in street or on the field. He has one of those beards which discourages the barber. It is the sort that, while one side of his face is being shaved, the vegetation on the other portion grows a creditable amount of himself there ever since. Barry has followed continuously in the footsteps of his predecessor on the Athletics and is unusually fast both off and on the ball field. When "Monte" Cross, the famous Philadelphia shortstop, was in the Big League, nobody was ever known to beat him into a dining car or into a Pullman to pick the first berth. That is a habit among ball players. They all want their berths made up first although they may not go to bed for hours afterwards, and each desires to be the first one into the dining room. But so enviable a record did "Monte" Cross make in this respect, that it is still called pulling a "Monte Cross" when some one dives into a diner. Probably it will be called pulling a "Jack" Barry after the Athletics' shortstop passes on.

John J. is married and spends his winters running a garage in Woonsocket, Mass., and talking baseball to the home folks. They insist on him talking baseball, and he sells many a gallon of gasoline while he explains how the boys won the world's championship in 1910 and 1911. If Collins had only been named John instead of "Eddie," the Athletics would have an infield made up entirely of four "Jack"s—John Franklin Baker and John J. McInnis being the other two. Cross, Mr. and Mrs. Collins with an error worse than no practice at all, since he who gives the "turn" has to fight down to an inferior boxer. But their ignorance of the face and personal art of in-fighting is the chief cause of their present inferiority to the intelligent foreigner. English boxers are at a disadvantage, as compared with their American rivals, owing to (1) the difficulty of obtaining frequent contests once they have reached the championship class; and (2) the necessity of exhibition work, which is issued: Guns, Rifles, Ammunition, Fishing, Tackle, Baseball, Golf, Tennis, Lacrosse, Camping Outfits, All Summer and Winter Sports. OUTLOOK FOR BLACK WINTER IN GERMANY
Berlin, Sept. 27.—From all parts of the empire come reports of large cities and local government bodies beginning to make provision against unemployment in the coming winter. In Berlin a strong committee dealing with the subject has already made arrangements for building works, drainage, &c., and also for the more perfect working of Labor Exchanges. Similar steps are being taken in Frankfurt, Breslau, Cologne, Munich, Leipzig and other cities.

It seems to be the universal opinion that the trade boom of the past few years is at an end and that lean years are now inevitable. Efforts are being made to induce the Railway Department to forestall work on various lines. A remarkable article in the "Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" draws attention to one class of work for the unemployed, which has been too much neglected, namely, the cultivation of moors and waste places. The article points out that all systems of insurance decrease as this expenditure increases year by year. But close to one's hand are the means of giving ample employment to thousands of the unemployed. Germany expends fifty millions sterling every year on its poor. Instead of decreasing this expenditure increases year by year. But close to one's hand are the means of giving ample employment to thousands of the unemployed. AN ENGLISH OPINION
There is nothing that our self-governing dominions prize so jealously as their autonomy and independence of Downing street control. In questions such as naval defence, Canada must decide for herself. Co-operation between Great Britain and the colonies is admittedly desirable. But co-operation is a very different thing from dictation. Mr. Borden's supporters in the Canadian press do not attempt to conceal Mr. Churchill's object, and devote themselves mainly to aspersions on the patriotism of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party. The Toronto Daily Star quotes Mr. Churchill's statement that the Canadian ships were "extras" and that it was Canada's wish that they should be "extras." "Why, then," they say, "this presence of Canada's proposed gift was an understanding that will have to be made good by someone?" It would serve no good purpose to multiply these quotations. Enough has been said to show that Mr. Churchill, in catering for the armor-plate press, the Navy League, and the scaremongers, has embarrassed our Foreign Office at Berlin and our Colonial Office at Ottawa. Speaking at the Imperial Conference in 1911, Mr. Asquith said "Canada has never given us a naval contribution, and we have never tried to exact one from her. Of course, we know our business better than that." If Mr. Asquith adheres to this statement, he must admit that Mr. Churchill does not know his business. For, although the latter might

Without the patronage and gracious presence of ladies, sport would have made slow progress in England. All through the days of chivalry their active participation was not great—for many pastimes of the period required

Erskine was able to continue diving Handy Jim in the 2.11 pace. Judges hesitated about declaring the 2.11 pace completed after the fifth heat, done in 2.18 1/2, with a sprint through all but the last quarter in 39 1/2 seconds, had been won by Colonel Franklin. Hydric won the fourth heat, but was out-brushed in the fifth. After a delay, the race was held to be ended.

Great Scott, except in the second heat, when a path along the rail was blocked, had no trouble in leading the 2.18 paces home. He was second choice, Lady Richmond being the favorite.

of process. The victorious knights returned to the barriers, and called out the names of their ladies before again facing the charge. At the end of the struggle the lord of the tourney ordered the banners to be folded, and the victor called out the name of a lady, who, as queen of love and beauty, presented the prizes. In the sixteenth century the last tournament was held at Westminster, the prizes being distributed by Queen Mary, her husband, Philip of Spain, being one of the combatants.

Jousts and Archery Frequently the end of a tournament consisted of a friendly joust, or joute, around the range of sport, were patronized by the ladies, despite the fact that on occasions a defeated knight on refusing to surrender was slain on the spot. To the credit of the ladies be it said that the friendly joust, in which blood did not flow, was much more to the taste than the more dangerous contest. The sheer sport of the affair commended itself to ladies, and it is improbable that the knights would have shown any degree of warmth or enthusiasm without the stimulus provided by the fair supporters who encouraged jousts by their presence and appreciation of skill and dexterity. Ladies in the days of chivalry had ample occasion to spend much of their time in the open air. What with tournaments, jousts, archery, and hunting, they were indeed merry days for men and women.

Archery was one of the most highly esteemed accomplishments. Though extinct, it cannot now be called a popular sport in England. Incidentally there are ladies today who are enthusiastic toxophilites, and whose skill in archery is amazing. At one time England's prowess as a nation in the art was demonstrated at Flodden Field, where the "arrows a cloth-yard long" were used with great effect. Indeed, it has been said that love of archery and love of country were inseparable, and ladies of the fifteenth century thought little of a man unacquainted in the warfare accomplished. This is not a statement that womenfolk were far from sympathetic in matters of sport and outdoor pastimes in the days of chivalry. A man of the present day who is a devotee of the bowmen—a fact which was demonstrated at Flodden Field, where the "arrows a cloth-yard long" were used with great effect. Indeed, it has been said that love of archery and love of country were inseparable, and ladies of the fifteenth century thought little of a man unacquainted in the warfare accomplished.

A Queerly Toxophilite With the introduction and spread of the use of firearms became less popular. In the wars between Charles I and his parliament the arquebus had almost entirely taken the place of the shaft. As a national sport archery survived for many years later, and Charles II and Catherine of Braganza often practiced at the butte. The queen was very generous to the gentlemen who were proud of their skill in shooting with bows and arrows, and at Westminster, Arlington and Mile-end many keen contests took place on festive occasions. Those places are not now associated with merry sport.

MRS. MAUD SMITH AND THE SCOTT ACT Sackville Park.—Maude Smith of Altonahagan has been violating the Scott Act. It seems Maud has been getting a case or two of gun occasionally to supply the wants of some of the people in that section of the county. It would seem as if she had been doing a better business than usual of late, for complaints have been made, and the matter brought to the attention of the inspector who had the naughty Maud before Magistrate Geo. A. Fawcett at Middle Sackville a few days ago. Several witnesses were examined, and the majority admitted that Maude had relieved their thirst on one or more occasions lately, and as a result of this information Maud was condemned to pay a fine of $50 for selling and a similar amount for keeping for sale.

American Magazines Are Dropping Out

LITERARY GOSSIP

Oscar Wilde's Literary Executor Doing All He Can to Prevent Publication of Lord Alfred Douglas' Book

(Times' Special Correspondence) London, Sept. 19.—It is reported that W. W. Elsworth, president of the Century Company, who has just sailed for America, made arrangements while here to stop the publication of a new edition of an English magazine after January 1 next, as it is more convenient and economical to say only the American rights of the work of some of the big English authors with whom the Century has dealings...

This leaves Harper and Scribner's as the only American magazines separately published here and catering for English sales. There is, to be sure, an English "World's Work," but that has practically no connection with the American periodical of that name. Evidently there is going to be a coming book to be entitled "Oscar Wilde and Mabel," Ronald Ross, Wilde's literary executor, is doing his best to prevent its publication, knowing that Lord Alfred has no great affection for him, and will probably make a bitter attack on him. It is reported that the book is now finished and is being revised under legal advice to make sure that it is free from libels, and that it will be published this autumn. Lord Alfred has announced that he proposes to make a spirited defense of his reputation.

No one who read "Elizabeth and her German Garden" will have forgotten the April and May babies who figured in that delightful book, and the Countess von Arnheim's readers may be surprised to learn that these have now arrived at their twenties and are studying at Giron, the English Vassar.

A sweet girl graduate tells me that they are fair-haired, clever without being brilliant, and altogether "nice little things" really called after the months in which they were born. Their mother, the now widowed Countess von Arnheim, does not encourage them to be luxurious or extravagant, and, aided and abetted by her, they always spend their long vacation in some original manner—tramping, caravanning, or camping out.

That phenomenally successful lady, Mrs. Florence Barclay, is one of the favored few among authors whose books invariably are reviewed on the day of their publication. Truth to tell, however, Mrs. Barclay's latest story, "The Broken Halo," has had only a very receptive reception at the hands of the English critics, most of whom, in fact, demand who it can be that reads Mrs. Barclay's novels? Says the "book whacker" of the "Daily News": "If it were not for its probable enormous sales, it would be easiest to say nothing about this kind of writing. Yet what is read so widely must have some good quality in it, though, frankly, we cannot discover it."

The all-conquering cinematograph is now making a conquest of the British people. The Marchioness of Cornwallis, who has been turning out film dramas for years and now the Countess of Warwick announces that she has made an arrangement with a British moving picture company to do nothing. The Countess declares that her chief object in so doing are to educate the masses and to give the British film an impetus in the competition for supremacy with foreign films, but the fact remains that the Warwick is in extremely low water financially, having followed the sale of its town house, so one suspects that L. S. D. has ship. It appears, moreover, that not only the Countess, who once became known the world over as the Babbling Brooker, contracted to write dramas for the aforementioned house, but has placed at their disposal Warwick Castle and its historic environs, and her own estate at Easton, Essex, which boasts many thousands of acres of deer-park, gardens and woods, to afford a setting for the filming of her plays.

"I have written my first play in a highly sensational vein," said Lady Warwick in an interview yesterday. "It is called 'The Great Pearl' and, therefore, is extremely topical. But in time it may be proved that things of a far higher character be filmed."

"I have listened to Mr. H. G. Wells' views on the future of the cinema as an instruction medium, and it is in this direction that I hope to lift my work to a more elevated plane."

"I have decided to do several things in the field of historic drama. There is much history that is practically unknown in the Warwick archives, and I have two incidents now in mind that will form admirable subjects for dramatic treatment."

"They concern Piers Gaveston and Isabel, one of the daughters of the king-maker who married that Duke of Clarence who was drowned in the butt of malmsey, and they will have Warwick Castle as a setting."

Tightens Her Skin—Loses Her Wrinkles

(From Social Mirror)

"I want to tell you how easily and quickly I got rid of my wrinkles," writes one of our correspondents. "While in London a friend, much envied because of her youthful appearance, gave me a formula for a home-made preparation which has the effect of instantly tightening the skin, thus smoothing out wrinkles and furrows."

"Where are the other dressing-rooms?" he wanted to know. "There aren't any others," returned the local impresario. "Well, what are we going to do? I have a large company of ladies and gentlemen, and they cannot dress in this one room."

"What's the matter?" returned the Missourian. "Ain't they speakin'?" "Have you asked your fashin' consultant to inquire that young man?" "More than that. Mother and I have dared him to refuse."

English As a Setting For Grand Opera

The successful effort of the Century Theatre, New York, to present grand opera in English has revived the old controversy regarding the fitness of the English tongue for musical settings. Most of the opinions on this topic, either in favour or otherwise, are the expressions of laymen, and of little value in determining the question, which may be briefly answered in a few lines.

A libretto originally written in English by a competent librettist conscious of the difficulties of his task as a singable as German or French. A translated libretto is not. English is probably the least flexible of the modern languages, while German presents the least difficulties for the purpose of translation, owing to its extreme flexibility.

But the translation of a grand opera book is technically more difficult than that of the translation of a poem. There can be no consistent style of metrical writing in a libretto. The composer is usually a judge-judge of the singable vowel sounds capable of being articulated with an open throat. In this modern English lacks the flexibility. It might much better have been done with the language employed by Shakespeare, less rigid and formal than that of today; but the comparative paucity of rhymable adjectives and adverbs of more than one syllable, and their invariable position in a sentence, will always constitute a difficulty which none but an experienced adapter can fully appreciate.

TRUST FUNDS FOR CANADA

England's Public Trustee Impressed

BIGGEST SINGLE INVESTOR

Favorable Report Follows Investigation—A Great Market For Municipal Securities

(Times' Special Correspondence) London, Sept. 17.—After six months' quiet enquiry in Canada, a member of the staff of the Public Trustee, who is probably the biggest single investor in England, has returned to London, concluding that the Dominion offers excellent opportunities for the investment of trust funds, and although his private judgment would not be transfused into official views, it is hardly possible that his opinion will not exercise some influence.

In Great Britain as well as in Canada, British trustee investment legislation comes in for abuse; and a growing body of responsible opinion maintains that to exclude Canadian provincial securities is the essence of financial shortsightedness. Attention has been drawn to this subject recently by a private trustee who details the result of the investment of £25,000 in Canadian securities, the market stood about 76 and the net result of this investment was that very little over the original amount was produced. This is, of course, not an isolated example.

Every strong case has been made out for the amending of trustee legislation. The trustee list, of course, represents what was assumed to be the best selection available at the time it passed into law. There was reason then why the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, for example, should not be included because they were undeveloped, but that reason no longer exists, and the advantages of reform. A more marked anomaly of the cities or boroughs having an express right to provide for education. An amendment of the act, widening the sphere of trust investments which would be attended by increased revenues would be enthusiastically accepted by trustees who now have difficulty in making proper provision for their purposes. Revenues which sufficed even a few years ago are no longer sufficient owing to the rise in all classes of expenditure.

Unlimited Powers To return to the Public Trustee is not limited in his powers of investment to trustee securities, though which he must do so in some specified in the instrument under which he invests. It is, in fact, a common practice for trustees to follow the policy of spreading his investments as much as possible, and to invest in a number of any low rate of capital or of income is diminished, and the stability of both quickly and to the advantage of the education given to the Public Trustee has found it possible to secure a return of 12 per cent. The marked success which has attended his work and the rapid increase in the number of public trusts which he handles indicates that the scale is turning against the old system. That the public trustee will have very little in his custody which has not yet matured is one of the reasons for his success.

Some people believe that the time is not very far distant when trustee investment legislation will have to be completely revised or the private trustee will become extinct because the success of the public trustee will have very little alternative to a conscientious testator. It is understood that the Public Trustee contemplates a personal visit to the Dominion to amplify the knowledge already gained concerning the opportunities for investment there. Whatever opinions some London capitalists may have as to the solidity of Canadian municipalities and their creditworthiness, the Public Trustee has returned in this country under the supervision of government and has already secured a number of investments.

FISH MATCHES BIRD FROM HOG

Unusual Tale of Adventure Brought Down From Salt Spring Island by Hunter—Grouse Are Plentiful

Further evidence tending to upset all theories concerning the inhabitants of the deep has come to light. When the serpent years was young, recently, there was a noticeable inclination to grin amongst the general public, and to account for this there was a period of general health of a healthy member of a family long faded to be extinct. This in fact of the fact that the party who claimed to have sighted the beast was of known temperate habits.

Now for the story. A couple of days ago a certain Dr. Young was over-seen by a group of Salt Spring Island. Making his way along the seashore, he flushed a covey and, justly lifting his trusty weapon to his right shoulder, he blazed away and got to prove beyond any doubt that what is to follow is not fact but the fruit of his morning's labor. At this juncture the presence of some honor-bored intruder, who was undoubtedly a member of the "bureau of investigation," had influence in this decision. The chief thinkers in the Dutch party favored the plan of Bos and Troetsla, this on the ground that without socialist support the projected universal suffrage bill, which was in the socialist interest, could not possibly be passed. The result was the summoning of a general socialist congress at Zwolle. Here, it was expected, that the large towns and the country took the opposite view. The intriguants won by a small majority. German socialists, especially Karl Kautsky, the "brain of the intriguants," had influence in this decision. IS SOCIALISM BECOMING TAME?

The "Left" victory was the fruit of united electoral tactics. In forty-seven "second" elections, made necessary because the first elections were nullified, the Liberals and socialists fought side by side. The socialists compromised with the "bourgeois" Liberals in this way because the Liberals had a sufficiently democratic programme, including reform, and progressive measures of education, social insurance and taxation.

The result was a government resignation. The succeeding cabinet had to be formed out of the "Left" parties, no one of which taken alone had a majority. One of the first politicians whom Queen Wilhelmina took counsel with was a socialist lawyer, Troetsla, who has always stood strongly for collaboration in creative politics. Troetsla, much to the disgust of the stadholders, had long been a socialist and had not the first plan was that the Radical leader, Dr. Bos should form a cabinet, and having her decision on what Troetsla said, Queen Wilhelmina authorized Dr. Bos to take socialists into his cabinet.

Bos offered the socialists three seats. After a discussion which revealed division in the party, Troetsla was overruled, and Bos' offer was rejected. A result followed. Many socialists favored the plan of Bos and Troetsla, this on the ground that without socialist support the projected universal suffrage bill, which was in the socialist interest, could not possibly be passed. The nearness of Holland and Denmark to having socialist ministers among prime ministers, convinces observers that within a few years the smaller European states will as often have socialist governments as today they have Liberal and Radical governments. The socialist ministers, however, will not be at all like the present socialist agitators. When brought into relation with imperious political facts, they will be found to be a force for the good.

RESPECTING ORE GRINDING

(Engineering and Mining Journal) The fact that the Homestake mine, in the Black Hills, uses stamps for crushing has long been a strong argument in their favor. A little attention is given to circumstances which alter cases. That a large mill uses stamps is no reason why a smaller or larger one should do the same. That a crushing machine best adapted for a particular service, no reason why the same machine should be best for performing a different function. It is interesting to note that the new McGill mill, which is to be built in the Black Hills, will use the crushing machines formerly installed in the old plant, chilean mill.

Willie's Success Willie had not been very bright in his studies, and his father was very surprised when his son, on his arrival from school, announced: "Father, I was next to head in my class today."

"Indeed?" surprisingly exclaimed his father, "and how many are in your class?" "Two," unobtrusively answered Willie.
