There was a mist before the girl's eyes as she looked at him. "I believe you, Monty," she said simply. "I shall not forget."

The curtain rose upon the next act, and something in the opera toward the end seemed to bring the two very close together. As they were leaving the theater there was a note of regret from Peggy. "It has been perfect," she Peggy. "It has been perfect," she breathed, "yet, Monty, isn't it a waste that no one else should have seen it? Think of these poverty stricken peas-ants who adore music and have never heard an opera." "Well, they shall hear one now." Monty rose to it, but he felt like a hypocrite in concealing his chief mo-tive. "We'll repeat the performance tomorrow night and fill the house with them.

He was as good as his word. Bertier was given a task the next day which was not to his taste. But with the assistance of the city authorities he carried it through. The manager of the op-era house was less complacent, and he era nouse was less complacent, and he had an exclamatory terror of the dam-age to his upholstery. But Brewster had discovered that in Italy gold is a panacea for all ills, and his prescrip-tions were liberal. To him the day was short, for Peggy's interest in the penance, as it came to be called, was o keen that she insisted on having a hand in the preliminaries. about five or six ounce weight and the men were warned not to hit in the clinches. There was nothing unusual in the bout until O'Regan began to stagger.

stagger. Dr. J. W. Daniel was the next wit-ness. He testified as follows: "I was a quarter past ten. The man was dead when I got there. Dr. Bentley was in the post there. Dr. Bentley was working with him. With Dr. Bentley I made a post-mortem examination of the body; found the young man had a well nourished body and good muscu-bruises about the arms of recent in-fliction, another over the left chest, an abrasion at the bottom of the left ear, the ear being somewhat swollen. There was a slight abrasion about the mouth and some oozing from the nos-trils. That appeared to be all the evid-ence of external injury with the ex-option of one or two minor abrasions on the left leg. We divided the scalp from ear to ear and pressed it back bying bare the skull. There were no bruises or refuse blood between the scalp and the skull. Removed the top of the skull. The hard outside cover-ing of the brain bulged up consider-aby on the top of the head, and when it was divided a large quantity of venus blood escaped. Took out the brain and found no other evidence of as amall soft clot in the right ventricle. The left ventricle was quite empty. There was no rupture of the stomach. Dr. J. W. Daniel was the next with a small soft clot in the right ventricle. The left ventricle was quite empty. There was no rupture of the stomach, and it appeared to be in a healthy condition. The heart was perfectly healthy. The presence of the clot was no evidence of weakness in that organ. healthy. The presence of the clot was no evidence of weakness in that organ. The lungs, heart and stomach were in a normal condition. There was no evidence of severe external violence. I think compression of the brain was the cause of death. The effusion of the blood might have been caused by violence. A blow on the chin might have caused the rupture. Blows about the ear might cause such effusion. I think the man's staggering might have been due to the gradual pressure of the blood on the brain. This pressure on the brain would render the man coma-tose, and this condition would extend to the other organs. If the man had an effusion of the blood before going into the ring he could not have fought four or five hard rounds. The condi-tion must have-been brought about in the contest. The man in my opinion was sound with the exception of the effusion of blood in the brain. Cross-examined by Mr. Macrae-effusion of blood in the brain. Cross-examined by Mr. Macrae — The external bruises were all slight. A blow of sufficient force to cause the condition found if struck with the glove in evidence here, need not neces-sarily cause any mark at all. A blow struck with anything hard affects the ligatures. A blow causing the effects here described would probably knock the man down. Where effusion is caused by excitement it is generally the ar-teries that are involved.

Wm. O'Keefe who refereed the fatal Wm. O'Keefe who refereed the fatal bout was the next witness. He said he had been engaged by Robert Nixon and no person had any authority to get a license in witness' name. The gloves were shown to the chief and the boxers instructed not to hit in the clinches. Northrup would weigh about nine pounds more than O'Regan and was an inch and a quarter taller. It was a sparring exhibition and with the gloves used witness did not think a man could injure another very much. Witness did not see O'Regan get any blows on the head. Dr. John Bentley was then sworn:

blows on the head. Dr. John Bentley was then sworn: I was called to the Queen's Rink about half-past ten last night. I found the deceased lying on a bench in a small room off the rink. He was unconscious. His eyelids were closed. His pupils were slightly dilated. I tried the effect of light on the pupils, but there was little or no reaction. This led me to suppose there was compression of the little or no reaction. This led me to suppose there was compression of the brain. His pulse was slow and weak. I think that the man died as a result Scompression of blood on the brain, due to concussion. In the present case the concussion was due to a blow or shock. This result might be accom-plished by the man coming down heav-ily on his feet. The chances are that the rupture of the venus veins was caused by a blow on the head. A blow struck with a padded surface in style, they must fit right, they must wear well. It won't do to have the fabric fine and the fit poor, or the fit perfect and the style wrong.
