OVER THE DAM.

Yes, life is a swift-running river,
And it's mighty hard stemmin' its tide,
But the boat glides so smoothly at startin'
That one feels jest like lettin' it glide.
You hear the wild roar of the rapids
That below you now thunder and break,
But you think you can easily pull back
When you see the white foam in your wake.

Well, with me it was mighty smooth sailing Durin' all of life's first summer hours, And the river sang ever so sweetly, And its banks were so brilliant with flow-

While the bow that hung over the torrent Seem'd a halo that becken'd me there, And the white mist that rose from its water Quite conceal'd the black gulf of despair To be sure, I pass'd friends as I drifted,

Pullin' sturdily up 'gin the stream,
But I laugh'd as I saw how they labor'd,
While my boat danc'd along like a dream!
What matter'd which way it was glidin'?—
If I sailed with it up or sailed down?—
Behind I saw only life's struggles,
And before me was pleasure—life's crown,

I say I pass'd friends pullin' up stream And they warned me of danger below But advice is so cheap that when given
It amounts to jest nothin, you know And exper'ence—well, that's of some value, But it ain't always wisdom it brings: I've got it—you're right; 'tis a nettle, And I pluck'd it at cost of its stings

It's tough, lookin' up that bright river, And seein' where I might have turned back,
To think that I took thinks so easy, Lettin' everything go to the wrack;
But I'm here now, jest as you find me,
And I'm—well, you can see what I am:
I drifted, you know, with the current,
And of course I went over the dam:

MEMORY

They live again, those happy hours,
The time of truth and bouyancy:
They bloom again, life's withered flowers,
Revived by magic memory.
They live! My buried darlings rise
From out their long and solemn sleep,
And star-like in life's darkened skies
A gentle radiance ever keep,
O memory, kind memory!

And when my sands of life are run, And here no more my form they'se May I return, at least to one, On radiant wings of memory, Back to my unforgotten home,
Back to one loved and loving heart:
If thus I only hope to come,
E'en now I'm ready to depart,
O memory, kind memory!

BRAVE BOY'S FORTUNE.

An hour later Mr. Blastwood arrived for him, Mr. Cournelius, realizing that the battle was lost, wished to go up to his chamber, to change his clothes or dress for dinner. Mr. Subtille insisted she came with me."

"That lady was my first wife," said Mr. Vanderwent; "and now it appears that my son was saved."

"Saved!" exclaimed Captain Penguin. upon going with him, and guarding his door. When they came down the prisoner seized his hat, and ran down the an old sailor that knowed how to tie a beisoner seized his hat, and ran down the steps to the basement, intending to leave by the back door. The detective followed him, and laid hands upon him. A seuffle ensued, which attracted the attention of all in the house; but in a moment Mr. Subtille had a pair of handcuffs on the wrists of Mr. Cornelius. This disturbance excited the interest of the ladies, and they followed the prisoner into the library. No one objected to their presence, and Mr. Lynmore explained all that had occurred during the day.

"I know that fellow could not be a Vanderwent," exclaimed Mrs. Vanderwent, with a palpable space. "I always to the state of the state of the ladies, and they followed the prisoner into the library. No one objected to their presence, and Mr. Lynmore explained all that had occurred during the day.

"I knew that fellow could not be a Wanderwent," exclaimed Mrs. Vanderwent, with a palpable sneer. "I always told my husband he had been imposed upon."

The magnate glanced sternly at her, and evidently did not relish the remark: The library was full when Captain Penguin arrived. Corny and Miss Fanny had seated themselves together in the night-dress? "asked Mr. Lynmore.

"I never saw another shawl like that one. One night the child didn't sleep, and the lady told me her husband used to walk the room with him in his arms; so I did so in the cabin several times, for the ship pitched so the poor lady couldn't stand up. I saw the mark on the night-gown, and should know that."

The articles were produced, and the captain declared that he could swear to them. To the astonishment of Mr.

"Mr. who?" asked the captain.
"Mr. Vanderwent," replied Mr. Lynmore in a loud and distinct tone. Seems to me I've heard that name before; but I'm an old man, and I've

"But your memory is still good, isn't it?" inquired Mr. Vanderwent.
"Well, no; not very. You see I got a blow on the head in the wreek, and "Yet you remember things that hap-ened before the wreck?" asked Mr.

"Oh! yes. Better than I do what took place since," added the captain with a faint smile. "I owned half of the Albatross, and that was all I had in the world; and when she went down I was a beggar. I have always been sorry I did not go down in her. I lost all I

"She had her child with her, a boy, a fine little fellow. I used to carry him about the deck in my arms in fine weather. The lady was almost distracted when I told her the ship was certainly lost, and that we must take to the boats before she went to pieces but she didn't care for herself; it was only for the child! I took the little fellow from the berth myself when I told his mother how we stood. He had nothing on except his myself when I told his mother now we stood. He had nothing on except his night-gows, but I wrapped him up in his mother's shawl, I had done it a good many times before, when I walked with him on deck. I put Mrs.—Mrs.—"
"Vanderwent," prompted Mr. Lyn—

"I put Mrs. Vanderwent in the stern sheets of the whale boat, and lashed the child to the grating."

"Good Heavens!" exclaimed Vanderwent, no longer able to suppress his emotion.

"I picked a crew for the boat, and we slid her off on the top of a big wave; but, bless you, it was no use; the boat rolled over and over like a log. The seamen were swept away, and I lost my hold of the boat. I grasped a floating spar, and it carried me to the shore. I remember feeling the sands under my feet; but it appears that I was hit on the head by a piece of the wreek, and lost my senses. I don't remember much of anything since that. The poor lady and her child were lost. I was the only one saved, and I was only the wreck of a man." "No, sir! you wan't the only one!" shouted Job Seagrain, in the violence of his excitement. "One moment, Mr. Seagrain," interposed Mr. Lynmore. "How long before you sailed, Captain Penguin, did the lady engage her passage?"

"Not an hour. She was an English lady; I don't remember where she lived."

"Bedford, iu Bedfordshire," added Mr. Vanderwent. "That was it. Did you know lady? Was she a relation?"

"Go on, if you please," said Mr. Vanderwent, trembling with emotion. "She had engaged passage in another ship—the 'Gladwing;' for I remember reading in the record at the Snug Harbor that she went down in the same gale that wrecked the 'Albatross.' But her mother was sick, and gave up going for day or two; then her mother improved, and she went to Liverpool with her child. The 'Gladwing' had sailed only two hours before; but I was just going, and had room for her. That's the reason

Lanny gave him both her hands, which, in the excitement of the moment, he pressed till she blushed crimson.

New Iberia Louisiana Sugar Bowl says:

"At Pattersonville, some days since, when she will Captain N. Keyes was in bed, from the effects of a violent sprain, his wife reached behind a trunk in the room to get a cloth for a bandage, when she declared she believed to be a snake.—
Sick as he was, this brought Captain Keyes to his feet, and sure enough, by the light of the lamp in hand he dissorted an immense moccasin snake coiled up behind the trunk. With lamp in hand he picked up something and ended off at high speed, and the wounded buck limped away out, of sight. Had any one on the train been armed with a pistol or gun the deer might have been easily killed. Quincy Whig:

A measure for this purpose will be submitted for your consideration.

The extension of the bounds of the Dominion has caused a corresponding interease in the work of administration, and seems to call for additional assistance in Parliament as well as in Executive Government. A Bill on this subject will be laid before you.

Your attention will be invited to the consideration of a Bill for the establishment of a General Court of Appeal.

A Brooklyn girl has applied to Wise for passage in his balloon, and the professor declares himself willing to take her if she will take a parasol, and wear a full hoop skirt, so that she may be safely dropped out, if it becomes neces-sary to communicate with the land any where between here and Europe.

We believe that it is not generally known what driveling nonsense and forlorn absurdity most Mormon sermons are made up of. It is usually supposed that Brigham Young is a man of ability, and so he may be in a certain way; but reports of his sermons made under his own eye or by his own stenographers, do not leave an impression of pulpit greatness. In a sermon preached at Franklin, Cache County, last month, Brigham expatiated on "Sealing" in the following way: "Suppose that the father of a dead son wishes to have a wife sealed to his son; if the young woman desired as a wife is dead, and have a mother or other female relative in the Church, such mother is the heir, and she can act in the sealing ordinances in the stead of the daughter. But if the young woman desired as a wife have no relative in the Church to act in her behalf, then the young man can be baptized for her and act as proxy for her in the sealing ordinances." It seems from this that Brigham's jurisdiction is a good deal more extensive than is usually supposed, and that he makes laws for heaven as well as earth. We believe that it is not generally
