Jumped over the Falls.

Niagara Falls, June 25.—A strange man, probably a tramp, about 45 years old, jumped over the Falls from Prospect Point at 12:40 o'clock to-day. The body was not seen afterwards.

The man was of medium build, sandy, and had a slight mustache. He was dressed in a shabby brown suit and wore a soft hat. He was a stranger and probably drifted into this city for the purpose of ending his life. He left a note, which reads as follows:

"God bless all on earth and have mercy on my soul."

It is folly to build upon a poor oundation, either in architecture or nealth. A foundation of sand is insecure, and to deaden symptoms by nar-cotics or nerve compounds is equally dangerous and deceptive. The true way to build up health is to make the way to build up health is to make the blood pare, rich and nourishing by taking Heod's Sursaparilla.

MODES OF THE SPRING

FOULARD GOWNS OF MANY COLORS ARE POPULAR.

Effects in Trimming Muslins Seeming Simplicity and Expensive ossibilities-Cordings and Tuckings

Special Features in Decoration.

Dress as it appears in the streets in the first warm days is a medley of the old and new in fashion which is decidedly picturesque, but demonstrates the importance of a new spring gown in the most convincing and practical manner. Every gradation of fashion, every sort of material, is represented in this daily parade; but the new foulard gown is conspicuously in the foreground of the panorama of dress. The new designs in this material are especially striking as to size and peculiar combinations of color, and the various fashionable modes of decorating the gowns add much to the striking effect.

color, and the various rashionable modes of decorating the gowns add much to the striking effect.

It is evident that foulard is one of the most popular materials of the senson, and the use of green on a divident experience contrast. Black with blue and white is another, and the black satin belt is admissible on any gown, without regard to the mixture of colors. One blue and white model has a yoke of perpendicular rows of black and white lace insertion, a black satin belt, and a full bodice of silk with fine cordings an inch apart running around below the yoke. The skirt is plainly hemmed and made loose from the lining, as all the new skirts are, and eight fine cords are set in around the ginning at the front breadth. Cording, and tucking are special features of fashiou, particularly in the thin gowns, and the finer the tucks the more up-to-date they are. Tiny tucks drawn up in shirrings close together in groups are one of the favorite effects for muslin gowns, and they are arranged around the hips on the skirts and for the yokes on the waist.

and they are arranged around the hips on the skirts and for the yokes on the vaist.

Fortunately, there are no infallible rules of fashion this season, and almay form of decoration that can be vised will pass muster. The secret of distinction in dress lies, nevertheless, in pretty harmonies and telling contrasts of color, or in adopting neutral tints for the gorgeous colors that characterize the most generally worn style of costume. Pale gray, biscuit color, and black are most successfully, and the tonet of some bright color on the waist adds the necessary chie effect without making the gown conspicuous. The opposite effect is found in the new foulards, of course, showy. One of them in pink and black and white is rimmed at the bottom of the skirt, with two rulies of cert lace. The bottice is of fine ecru canvas coverworked with gold thread, and full braces of silk, edged with narrow lace extend the belt and large bow at the back, and the bott. Black satin forms the collar of embrodery has a little full of pink silk and another of cream lace at the back. the hips. A bodice of white mouseline de sole over white silk is sewn around with rows of narrow cream lace an inch apart. The full braces of silk are very pretty over the wfite, and the collar and belt are of white satin ribbon.

White chiffon vests trimmed with black velvet ribbon are effective in the foulard bodices. Miles of ribbon and yards upon yards of lace are used in trimming silk as well as muslin gowns, and embroideries in all sorts of arabeage designs figure largely among the dress trimmings. The latest sovelty, however, is the revival of narrow silk fringe, which is lavishly used to trim crepe de chine dresses, and those of a new silk very much like crepe de chine, except that it is thicker. Embroidery on jique is another kind of decoration. On pique is another kind of decoration. On pique is another kind of decoration. Thickly is it covered with jet and colored silk in both open and close patterns, but it serves its purpose as a groundwork. Gold thread is very much used in all the embroideries this season, and steel seems to be next in importance.

Among the new silk gowns is one of checked pitrple and black, trimmed on the skirt with black velvet set on in rows pointing down below the kace, and raised much higher at the back. The bodice is of black glace silk with lace-trimmed revers and a lace vest. Black net over checked silk makes a very stylish dress, and the net is usually accordion-pleated and trimmed with black satin stripes over the check. The skirt is mised at the sides to show bias folds of silk and bands of black velvet ribbon, which also trim the waist and sleeves. The bolero is a combination of string-colored plue, lace frills, and white satin, which gives a very novel effect. Another model in a black and white check has two kitted trills of checked silk, with a band of lace insertion over white satin stropes over the check of green mirroir velvet. The vest of white satin is veiled with white cheffon, and the small revers and elongeness with three covered with guiner.

is veiled with white chiffon, and the small revers and chemisette are covered with guipure.

A blue and white creep silk shows corded frills of the same material on the skirt some distance apart, with three cords around the hips. The sleeves and bodice have one cords set in around, and below the yoke of white silk covered with lace is a wide collar of white glace silk, tucked and trimmed with steel and jet, and finished with a hem put on with open hemstitching. Another model in foulard silk of rose color with a black pattern, has black velvet edged ruffles rows of the velvet ribbon above, and a trimming of lace insertion and crosswise bands of velvet on the bodice. Rows of black canvas over a purple red silk, and a frill of chiffon in the same color finishes the neck and side of the bodice. A pretty idea for a simple dress is sarried out in brown nuns' veiling three rows Frills of the bodice, with an inch-wide hemstitched border, which is formed into a yoke band front by putting three rows Frills of the bodicy, with an inch-wide hemstitched border, which is formed into a yoke band front by putting three rows Frills of the bodicy, and a firll about an inch apart for the without one one ond a knot and falls in two long accordion-platted ends fringed lat the bodicm. STYLES OF HAIR DRESSING. lish Wemen All Using the Victorian nadian Women Have More Latitude.

1897 STYLES IN HAIR DERSSING.

English women this season it must demonstrate something beside a becoming and passing fancy, for their tresses have caught the Victorian infection, and victorian modes in coiffures have been resuscitated with all their old-time quaintness. English women are not renowned for arranging their hair becomingly, yet they have developed some very successful manifestations of the old styles, with the aid of all sorts of devices in wire coils and various other arrangements for securing the upstanding loops in the desired position. It is fortunate for Canadian women that no especial style of dressing the hair prevails here, for so much depends on suiting the coiffures to the shape of the head and contour of the face.

much depends on sulting the coffures to the shape of the head and contour of the face.

In general outline, however, the present mode of hair dressing is high on the head, especially for evening frees, and the Victorian loops and perfectly defined bows of hair can be arranged rees, and the Victorian loops and perfectly defined bows of hair can be arranged rees, and the victorian sign of hair be controlled to the control of a knot, arranged directly across the head, on the crown, with one upstanding loop in the centre to show welf room the front, is very effective, and then contained to the making the centre loop in the form of a twist. The hair may be parted in the middle or not, as is most becoming the tit is in all cases waved all around the head, and arranged very rull and soft at the side. The pompadour style has the lead, however, and a few curling the coming to most faces.

The pompadour is not confined to the front this season, as it extends all around the head, and the cushion put underneath in front is often arranged in the back as well. One loop and cold of hair with waved ends is not of the prettiest Victorian siyles shown in the illustration, and in all confirmes pretty hair ornaments are a conspicuous feature. Side combs are universally worn, and tortoise shell, either plain or set with gems, is the most favored. Varising the silver set with Parisian diamonds, and anaber pins and combs are extremely pretty in dark hair. A gery unusual mode of hair dressing, fashionable in England just at the moment, shows a parting in front, and a very wary effect down over the cars. This is a reproduction suggested by some of Gainsborough's pictures.

Bouquet of Sweet Herbs. Bouquet of Sweet Merbs.

In French cooking the "bouquet of sweet herbs," which is so often given in recipes, is composed of a few spriss of parsley, a piece of thyme, a clove of garlic, a bay leaf, a couple of cloves, and some perpercorns. Wrap the parsley around the other herbs and tie a thread around them. Put into soups or sauces in this shape it is then more easily removed.

This last is a method very much in vogue with the women who are reveling in the joys of entire renovation of their summer homes, and have taken a hint from the decorators. It is a nice idea if not repeated in too many rooms, as then the house reflects a most monotonous scheme of color. Yet it is hard to risk falling into the entiting trap. ance to the theory and practice of draping windows in green. Green, they boidity assert, is the one and only tone to use for hangings intended to shads one from the light, not only for reasons of beauty, but hygiene as well. Therefore, we are having one of three things done, by persons who can afford to follow what old-fashioned folk may call a fad. The lower sashes of nursery and bedroom windows are being glazed with green glass, or draped in green Persian gause, or having fixed to them carved Indian window screens of wood stained a shade of duli, sort green. An equally high point of taste and precaution is to have, as the sketch shows a window all in green.

Ottawa, June 16.—At the morning session Sir Heari Joly's bill to amend the simple and Safe Process of Generaling Vast Power.

One of the greatest discoveries in the generation of power may soon be announced to the world.

It has been known for some months or a year that Professor Linde of Berlin had invented or solved a process of producing at a low cost liquefied air.

Liquefied air may be described as 700 cubic feet of atmosphere condensed into one cubic foot. The temperature of the substance may be reckoned as 700 degrees below zero. In appearance it resembles water, and to the touch feels like mercury. It may be possible for a small cylinder.

The invention in its usefulness to mankind may fall but little below the inventions of steam and electricity.

Liquefying air is not a new thing. It has been performed by exerting enormous pressure, or by freezing air to an unusual degree, or by a combination of pressure with refrigeration. There are so many uses to which liquefied air can be put that scientists hardly know where its usefulness will end if it can be produced at a low rate of cost in commercial quantities.

Among other advantages air in the portable cheap form of a liquid as it passes back to its ordinary state can be used for illuminating purposes by mixing its escaping gases with armospheric air in certain definite proportions. Moreover, as a driving force in the way of detonators, or explosive material to drive engine, liquid air is orbviously a power that can be under given conditions property applied.

Litherto the classic example of a lither to liquefied air can be liqued air and belian oxygen.

adjourning at 11.45.

Ottawa, June 16.—At the morning session Sir Henri Joly's bill to amend the Petroleum Inspection Act was read a first time, as was Mr. Davies' bill respecting judges of provincial courts. Mr. Pitisgerald's bill restricting appeals to the Bupreme Court from the Province of Ontario was passed through committee. The debate on the contract for a fast Atlantic service was resumed, and was continued into the next session of the House, when the motion was carried by yeas 136, asy 22. Sir Oliver Mowat's interest bill, making it illegal for usurers to collect more than six per cent, unless the rate of interest per annum is clearly stated in the note, was fread a third time and passed. A hot debate then ensued on Mr. Blair's motion to go into committee on the resolution to confirm the agreements with the Grand Trunk Railway and the Drummond County Railway Company for the extension of the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal, and the proposal that the discussion take place in committee. Aft 2 o'clock a.m. the motion was carried, and the House adjourned at 2.15 a.m.

Ottawa, June 17.—After routine, the Hitherto the classic example of a method to liquety air and obtain oxygen was invented by Beatty and Cailletet in 1877. With their machine one began by Carbonic acid gas. By means of a pump this gas was condensed in a tube round which lay water at 10 degrees to keep the tube cool. The earbonic acid gas, being reduced to a very low temperature, passed from the first tube into another chamber with a tube in it, and in so doing fell to a lower temperature. Into this second tube was pumped at high pressure ethylene gas, which h turn fell to a low temperature, owing to the coldness of the carbonic acid gas bathing the tube. The whylene gas was then passed from the second tube into a third compartment and fell further in temperature in so doing. The third compartment had likewise a tube with an airpump attached. Into this third tubewas pumped oxygen gas and from the ethylene gas bething it the oxygen gas reached a temperature of 192 degrees below zero. Finsly the oxygen was let out into a fourth compartment, in which was a fourth tube. The airpump attached to this first tube having filled it with condensed atmospheric air the latter was so reduced in temperature that when it in turn was released from the tube its temperature was 273 degrees below zero and it appeared in the form of drops like water.

This product, which is called liquid or fluid air, has a milky appearance from the presence of some carbonic acid gas, bubbles constantly, and from its enormous cold admits a smoke or cloud, like the top of a very high mountain, and will only gradually resolve itself ngain into air when exposed to the ordinary atmosphere.

Fluid air costs about ten marks (say $2.25) for five cubic meters, and it yields the product either as a gas or fluid as one wishes. This is one of the most ingenious pleces of meters, and it yields the product wither as a gas or fluid as one wishes. This is one of the most ingenious pleces of meters, and it yields the product wither as a cock and the liquid air runs out at a temperature of 273 degrees

The often ugly and always chilling and unresponsive-looking white marble has long ago been banished, when possible, by comfort-loving people from their rooms in many a delightful house, however, mantels still remain to be wrestled with. The speediest transformation the writer has seen in this line is in a certain cosy little library sitting-room. In the morning, a visitor who dropped in, was asked for advice is dealing with the mantel of this room, in the old-fashinod wide house into which her friends were settling down, they hoped, for life. The family exchequer did not permit of calling in an experienced workman or advising with an artistic furnishes, but said the owner of the room: "If I could only have the comfortable-looking ane altogether satisfactory red mahogany mantel you have in your pet room, I would ask for nothing different were I a millionaire." A pot of red mahogany pajut and an ordinary comb, only this and nothing more, changed shabby white marble into what even the family have now torgotten as ever being anything but wood. Tyrocats of paint and before the second on dries the comb is to be drawn over it in imitate the graining of wood. Practice on a bit of board first, as the comb must discretion."

This hint was carried out, and the evening of the same day found the mantel transformed.

A fireplace in the room of the young daughter of this same house, which was surrounded by impossible looking material, was "treated" by the owner who lad merely a schoolgirl's knowledge of painting and sketching. Added to this knowledge, however, was a practical turn of mind, the lack of which accounts for the fact that there is so little "applied art" in our homes.

This is the way this practical girl set to work. The marble surrounding the grate was measured into squares to imitate tiles, the dividing lines painted black, then with a wax pencil, the same as is need to draw on chinaware, bold designs were traced. As these were afterward painted over a delft blue, corn flowers and ragged salors were chosen, and as these legal themselves beautifully to rose sprays the effect is charming. If the hearth is treated in the same way, conventionalised daisies and the like will be less trouble and will answer admirably. If the old marble is painted a dark color the tiles will appear as if set in and the contrast may be made very telling.

Lovely artistic tints may now be bought in minitation leather. "Imitation" has a bad sound, as of something that is the tworth expending time and labor upon, but in this case the material is painted admirably that he contrast may be made very telling.

Since his death the baroness has not only supported the great charity organization which the philamthropist founded, but she has enlarged her own special work and has extended her charities beyond Europe, and has invaded Asia and even the United States. Baroness Hirsch has a representative in New York who watches her interests in that country and handles large sums of her money in assisting poor Hebrews from abroad who find the new world a rather difficult place in which to begin a new life. Her great gift to the Christian charity in Paris is characteristic of her unbiased liberality.

Home-Made Ginger Beer.

An old family recipe for ginger beer that is easily made is this:

Put one and one-half pounds of granulated sugar in a large crock or bowl, add two ounces of pure ground ginger and one lemon sliced thin. Pour over these eight quarts of boiling water and occasionally stir until the liquid becomes lukewarm; then add one-quarter of a yeast cake that has been dissolved, mix well, and when perfectly cold strain into bottles and fasten the corks securely. Except the bottles in a moderate temperature twelve hours and then put them in a cool place. This beer will be ready to use in four or five days. Home-Made Ginger Beer

I said I are going that well have a soling that would do the business. The subject, and the subject, and the subject with the subject of the subject o thought that would do the business. Papa merely laughed, and said he'd buly me a bank to put my pennies in, and Charlie, the big idiot, shegged me to allow him to purchase the she bank, not the camera. And, of course, I couldn't do a thing but smile and say pretty things; profess I liked to be independent and that sort of chatter. I never do know when to hold my tongue.

"So, last night Charlie brought the bank to me, and what do you think, girls! It was one of those hand-painted china affairs which won't open, and it's quite too pretty to break, so you see what a fax I'm in. And papa and Charlie both put in a $5 gold piece, too. And then this morning mamma told me that if I hadn't said so much about wanting to buy the camera myself Charlie was going to buy me a lovely one. Now, what do you all think of that for luck?"
