WHEREAS by an Act passed by the Legislature of this Colony, in the 41st year of the Reign of Her Majesty, entitled, "An Act respecting the fishery of Lobsters," it is enacted, that "The Governor in Council may, after such public enquiry and notice as shall be deemed expedient, from time to either entirely or subject to any exceptions and regulations, the fishing for and taking of Lobsters within any District named in the Order, during such period either in every year or in such number of years as may be limited by the Order fault of payment of any fine, the same may be recovered by distress and sale

A Hero's Death.

Extract from the London "Morning Advertiser":—Colonel Weathers-ley's horse went into action at Blobane about eighty strong, and of these brave fellows we know that forty-five are dead, including the gallant colonel himself and his brave, intelligent, and handsome son, a lad of fifteen, who at an age when many an English youth is celebrated on the cricket field or on the river, had seen more of real fighting than many a veteran in the regulars. Nothing can be more sad than the account I have heard of my dear friend Weatherley's death. At the fatal hour, when all save honor seemed lost, he placed his beloved boy upon his best horse, and kissing him on the forehead, commended him to another father's care above, and implored him to overtake the nearest column of the English horse, which seemed at that time to be cutting its way out. The boy clung to his father and begged to be allowed to stay by his side and share his life or death.
The contrast, I am told, was characteristic; the man, a bearded, bronzed, and hardy Sabreur, with a father's ear upon his cheek, while the blue-eyed and fair-haired lad, with much of the beauty of a girl in appearance, was calmly, and with a smile of fond reliance, loading his father's carbine.
Two noble hearts were cast down, the father wounded to death with cruel assaeges, clasping his boy's hand with his left, while the right outraged the brawny savages who came to despoil him of his charge. Weath-erley was a well-known man in I believe are called the fashionable circles in London, and will leave many an old comrade who respects his chivalry and enterprise to mourn for that friendship which has changed to respect and regret.

Germany's Foreign Policy.

Germany has, until very lately been so engrossed in consolidating and building up her interests within her own borders that those which lay without, with the exception of the rather obscure ones which involved in the settlement of the Eastern Question, have apparently been neglected. Her quiet insular attitude is growing steadily in disfavor, and is now generally regarded as a mistake. The scheme for planting colonies which lately attracted so much attention was no doubt the outcome of this satisfaction. Numbers of her citizens, to escape military duties, which in Germany demand the most valuable years of a man's life, have emigrated and become useful citizens of other nations.
The United States, and even Canada, to a much smaller extent, have benefited by the narrowness of the German national policy. Germany is beginning to recognize her mistake, and though it is hardly probable that her policy will undergo any radical change during Bismarck's life, the way to a change is being gradually prepared even now. Her action with regard to the Samoan Islands difficulty seems to have given her statesman a taste for foreign pie, and they insist upon having their fingers in wherever an opportunity offers.
The amount of German capital invested in Egypt is hardly great enough to account for Germany's interference with the Khedive, and though she is at present on very friendly terms with England, the latter's interest could hardly be expected to be a matter of solicitude, but with her newly awakened taste for furthering foreign interests, the chance was too good to be lost, especially in view of the fact that her action would irritate France, increase her mistrust of England, and perhaps jeopardize the good feeling which has so long existed between those two ancient enemies. The seizure of a German merchantman, off the west coast of South America by the Peruvians gives her the chance of following England's example, and with a better show of right. But she did not await this occasion for interference before taking a step in that direction. It appears that the great nations of the earth are bound to monopolize the right to make war upon one another, and it is not a bad thing for the smaller ones either, if they could only be brought to look upon it in the light of their own welfare. Germaany, therefore, proposed joint action on the part of the great European nations, in order to terminate the struggle, which at present appears interminable if allowed to be fought out by the combatants. There is no good reason why they should not be successful, as there is hardly room for any great jealousy through the clashing of interests. It is well to be wise for others—it is unfortunate that it is not easier to be wise for ourselves.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 11.—A Bodie despatch reports a terrible explosion of a powder magazine near the Old Standard Incline. The works were blown to atoms, and everything near them levelled to the ground.
The Summit Works, a short distance off, were shattered to pieces. The following, as far as learned, are the killed: Frank Fyde, Thomas Flaherty, William O'Brien and several others, names not obtained. The whole town is in a hospital. As far as heard, eight are known to be dead and ever forty wounded, with the prospect that many will die from their injuries. It is impossible to get particulars; everybody is excited, women and children crying and searching for the remains of loved ones. Probably many were blown into the air and their remains scattered broadcast. Everything is being done that kind hearts and willing hands can do. Fortunately the drifts had just been connected, so that no injury was done to any below ground.

Great Petroleum Fire.

Details have been received of the terrible fire which broke out on the morning of the 11th ult., at Point Breeze, on the Schuylkill river, just south of Philadelphia. Point Breeze is entirely covered and surrounded by oil refineries and storehouses and the city gasworks. About ten o'clock in the morning a heavy thunderstorm began, and shortly afterwards two flashes of lightning were seen to descend towards the earth directly over the large storehouse of the Atlantic Refining Company. One appeared to strike the iron-plate pavement in front of the warehouse, and to be deflected towards the building, which was filled with barrels and cases of oil, and which immediately ignited. The other flash descended upon the rigging of the Fa, an Austrian barque, lying at the wharf in front of the warehouse, loading with oil. In a few moments the inflammable stuff had caught fire, and a furious and uncontrollable conflagration was raging. The utmost alarm and consternation were manifested on all sides. Before the arrival of any of the fire department from the city, the store-house, which was about 800 feet long by 80 in depth, was in flames and so was the ship Fa. The two police boats were on hand as soon as possible, with a number of private tugs, and they did their best to remove from danger some eighteen vessels which were lying in the Schuylkill, but five vessels, with their cargoes, were completely destroyed;
while the scenes on shore were exciting in the extreme. The firemen from the city were almost powerless to do anything except to tear down and remove inflammables from the path of the flames. Amongst other buildings the telegraph office was destroyed, so that communication was interrupted. The damage cannot yet be estimated, but a rough guess places it at nearly $2,000,000.

A second fire has occurred at Irkutsk Russia, which destroyed five churches and the convent, the Lutheran church, the courts of justice, the police offices, telegraph office, the post office, the excise, artillery, engineers and medical establishments, three banks, barracks and the town hall.

Madame Grevy's Velvet Gown.

It is said that the wife of President Grevy can ride a steeple chase, paint a landscape, compose a poem, and play the piano like a professional. This lady, and certain of her unostentatious peculiarities and rather lovable ways, continue to be much talked of in the fashionable and diplomatic circles of Paris. Soon after her husband's elevation to the Presidency she drove a hired carriage one morning to Laferrier's, the famous dress-maker and entered carrying a bundle containing an old velvet gown.
She was received with much condescension, and was told to wait, inasmuch as the great milliner was then engaged with a customer—no other, in fact than an actress of the Comedie Francaise.
Madam Grevy sat down humbly with her bundle in her arms until the great artist chose to interview her, when she explained that she wished to have her dress 'done up' and improved. 'Oh,' said the great one, 'we don't do up dresses here; sometimes for our own customers we do such a thing to oblige them, but we do not know madam' 'I am Madame Grevy,' was the reply, 'and I thought I could have this dress arranged for the receptions at the Elysee.' Thereupon the whole establishment fell at her feet and implored pardon, and it is probable that the velvet dress will still rejoice the hearts of ambassadors.

Mount Aetna has, until now, always been looked upon as incorrigible. It is smoking again. It always has smoked and it was thought always smoke, and cause the inconvenience and occasional calamities which have always followed that habit. But the Italian Government have determined to take Aetna in hand and see what can be done. The evil is of course more than usually deep-seated, and the habit has been confirmed by long practice, but the Italian Government are hopeful, and so have appointed a commission to investigate and we suppose report on the best means to be taken in order to put out its pipe, which has so often stained the "blue curtains" of a portion of the art land, and blotted the green carpet of Sicily.
We are not as hopeful as the Italian Government concerning the success of commissioners in their efforts to induce a hoary sinner of a mountain to give up a bad habit and become as other respectable, quiet, well-behaved mountains, even though we find on reading up that the habit is not so confirmed as we had thought. It only commenced in the "later portion of the Tertiary period,"
"which," says a geologist, "does not carry us very far back." The first recorded eruption took place only 476 B.C.
The Italians have already corrected abuses extending nearly as far back as that. Another thing that gives them hope, we suppose, is the fact that Aetna has never yet become enured to smoking,—it always, when indulging, shows the same sign of internal agony which besets the youthful sinner of to-day.
May the commission be successful.

Nihilism.

The person who supplied the pistol to Alexander Solovieff with which he attempted to assassinate the Emperor of Russia on the 14th of April, is a medical doctor from Weimar, Germany, who is also proved to have procured the poison with which Solovieff attempted suicide after his failure to kill the Czar, and to have owned the horse by means of which the assailants of Gen. Mesentzoff attempted to escape. A telegram from St. Petersburg authoritatively states that he has been sentenced to be haunted.

It is understood that while the doctor does not deny that he gave the pistol to Solovieff he insists that he was ignorant of the purpose for which he intended to use it, but the secret police brought forward evidence, real or manufactured which tended strongly to show that the doctor was in correspondence and sympathy with several persons who have either been convicted of Nihilism or who have fled from Russia to avoid such convictions, and this sealed his doom.
He is to be hung in a few days, unless his appeal for mercy should receive the favourable consideration of the Czar, which is considered doubtful.

Suicide of an Artist.

READING, P. A., July 5.

The quiet and peaceable Quaker community near Lionville, Chester county, just south of this city, is in a high state of excitement, owing to the tragic suicide of a highly educated young Russian artist, who made his advent among that community a short time ago.

Reading with the family of Fetters was a young lady of prepossessing appearance, named Mary Stine. The young Russian fell in love with Miss Stine, and it appears that she gave him encouragement.

Suddenly he disappeared from the farm and nothing more was heard or seen of him until his dead body was discovered in a neighboring schoolroom, which was closed for the summer vacation.

From the ceiling hung a rope with a noose at its end, showing that Byron first intended to hang himself, and changed his mind at the last moment.

Perilous Balloon Voyage.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.

A despatch from Lathrop, a place about forty miles east of the city across the bay, says that a large balloon in a collapsed and wrecked condition, was caught in the telegraph wires near the village about five o'clock yesterday afternoon.

THE CARBONEAR HERALD

"Honest Labor—our noblest heritage."

CARBONEAR, N. F., JULY 31.

To the Friends and Patrons of the Herald.

We avail of the earliest opportunity to return our heartfelt and sincere thanks to those of our kind friends and patrons, who during our absence northward, by their valued sympathy, support and patronage, have most materially contributed to the success and permanency of the HERALD.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Carbonear Herald," CATALINA, July 24.

Sir,—

Judging from the communication of "Retaliation," recently published in the North Star, it would appear that he is determined to keep, what he considers his advantage by the help of his mask. It is an excellent protection,—it has saved many a man from an untimely end.

As usual at this season of the year a considerable amount of dulness prevails in the various business circles of the metropolis, the different schools are closed for the midsummer vacation; picnics, regattas and excursions are the order of the day, and every one appears determined to enjoy the brief summer season intervening between the present time and the middle of September. Appropos of regattas, arrangements are a ready in progress for the annual Regatta at Quidi Vidi, and I am informed nothing is being left undone to make this popular amusement as attractive if not more so than any of its predecessors.

Yours truly, TERRA NOVA.

To the Editor of the "Carbonear Herald."

Being one of those composing the recent excursion party under the auspices of the British Society of St. John's, which left that port for Harbor Grace on Tuesday morning last I beg to forward you those few brief lines in connection with the subject, knowing that the same will prove interesting to many of your readers.

The morning, like that of excursions generally, was anything but promising. Old Sol obstinately refused to show his countenance through the leaden clouds and curtain of mist which enveloped the horizon on every side.

been paced hors de combat striking up the familiar strains of the "Banks of Newfoundland." It is needless to mention the emotion evoked in my breast by the soul-stirring strains of this truly beautiful air.

Yours, &c., VIATOR.

July 30th, 1878.

To the Editor of the "Carbonear Herald," CARBONEAR, July 31st, 1879.

Permit me through the columns of your paper, to ask the Road Board if they or any member of their body would be good enough to inform me if all drains, whether for general benefit or otherwise, leading through private property, should be considered as private drains and if so, what was there to justify any former Board in putting a drain through a public road to empty itself into a private drain—in other words, I desire to know the actual difference if any, as regards utility, between the drain through private property for general benefit and that through public property?

Yours respectfully, FAR PLAY.

Local and other Items.

The extensive circulation of the "Herald" throughout Conception Bay and the various outport districts of the colony render it a most desirable medium for advertising purposes.

During the past year 28 vessels have been built in Green Bay, the measurement of the various craft ranging from 35 to 67 tons.

One hundred and twenty-four vessels have cleared for Labrador during the present season from Herring Neck to Twillingate, and adjacent harbors.

At Change Islands, Indian Islands and Fogo 18 craft have been built during the past winter, ranging from 17 to 47 tons.

On Monday last, John Armstrong, who refused to work on board the ship "Merry Heart," was brought before his Worship, and severely cautioned.

ERRATA.—For "Who were these Ministers immediately responsible to," in our last editorial, read "To whom were these Ministers immediately responsible." In the hurry of preparing for press the above error escaped our notice.

The banker "Miriam Bartlett," Grouchy master, arrived at Pouch Cove on the 25th, whither she had come to procure a fresh supply of bait. Up to the 12th inst., the "Miriam Bartlett" had made four trips, her total catch up to date amounting to 700 qts.

Since the first appearance of the squids there has been, we understand, a marked improvement in the fishery in the various harbors north of Bonavista.

At the present date the fishery continues to be dull in the different districts of Conception Bay. Crops, especially hay and potatoes appear abundant and promising. Hay-cutting has already commenced in various quantities in this neighborhood.

Up to the middle of the present month agricultural prospects in the district of Bonavista have been excellent. Potatoes looked well, and hay cutting had commenced about the 15th inst. The hay crop for the present season at Bonavista proper promises to be most abundant.

The subjoined telegram gives the substance of the latest Labrador news per mail.—Straits, generally fair; southern Labrador middling for Cod and Salmon; Pack's Harbor and neighborhood, good; Indian Harbor and adjacent places poor with hook; the north generally good for all having traps and seines. Ice on the 20th from Ailack to Hopedale, but floating craft getting along, many fairly fished, some loaded. Cold fog and bad weather have retarded fishery; on the whole not discouraging; salmon fishery north bad, herring making appearance; caplin done. The official report has not yet come to hand, but will appear in our next.

By recent advices received from Little Bay under date 21st inst., we are informed that Mr. Dooley, of St. John's, has discovered some good specimens of copper and other ore at North Brook, about 13 miles from Southwest Arm, Green Bay. Our correspondent further states, that "the mill at Hall's Bay which had not been doing much for the past two or three years, would be again started in about six week's time, as a new company had purchased it."

We would direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. John Skinner, which appears in our columns to-day. All residents in Conception Bay or other northern districts, who may require monuments or gravestones, &c., can forward their orders to this office for transmission to St. John's.

Religious News.

His Lordship the Bishop of Harbor Grace, who left in his yacht early in June on his pastoral visitation of his extensive diocese, during his progress has been received at various points along his route with the most marked demonstrations of welcome and respect on the part of the people generally. The latest accounts received mention his arrival at Betts Cove and lately at Pitt Cove, where several arches were erected in his honor, decked with evergreens mottoes and flags. His Lordship having subsequently left for La Scie and other harbors further north.

The English Church Mission in Bonny, on the Niger, hopes that the period of persecution is over. The favourite wife of the king, who inspired the persecutions has lately died. The chiefs are yielding very much, and the attendance at the Sabbath service has increased within two months from 120 to 349, including two chiefs, and the richest women in Bonny. The king and chiefs seem ready to yield what they cannot prevent.

Late news from the Presbyterian mission in Ooromiah, Persia, states that the revival movement continues. Revivals were in progress in three villages, with two hundred converts and enquirers, and there were calls for evangelists from several places.

Bishop Gobat, of Jerusalem, is dead. The establishment of this missionary see was the result of an agreement between the Governments of Prussia and England. Bishop Gobat was a Lutheran minister and was nominated by the King of Prussia and in part by the London Society for Promotion Christianity among the Jews. His salary was $6,000. The Queen has the nomination of his successor.

Varieties.

Keep aloof from quarrels; be neither a witness nor a party.

It is no shame to be poor, but to be ashamed of being poor.

Let the bent of thy thoughts be to mend thyself, rather than the word.

A good action is never thrown away, and perhaps that is the reason we find so few of them.

The beautiful in heart is a million times of more avail, as securing domestic happiness, than the beautiful in person.

Mohammedans say that one hour of justice is worth seventy years of prayer. One act of charity is worth a century of eloquence.

An unkind word from one beloved often draws blood from the heart which would defy the battle axe of hatred or the keenest edge of vindictive satire.

Love teaches cunning even to innocence; and, when he get possession, his first work is to dig deep within a heart and there lie hid, and like a miser in the dark, feast alone.

The triumphs of truth are the most glorious, chiefly because they are the most bloodless of all victories, deriving their highest lustre from the number of the saved, not of the slain.

What is the cure for gossip? Simply culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Good people talk about their neighbours because they have nothing else to talk about.

Truth being founded upon a rock, you may boldly dig to see its foundation, without fear of destroying its evidence; but falsehood being laid on the sand, if you examine its foundations you cause it to fall.

As there are no laws extant against ingratitude, so it is utterly impossible to contrive any that in all circumstances shall reach it. If it were actionable, there would not be courts enough in the whole world to try the causes in.

Scientific.

THE YENISEI.—We have accounts of Mr. Sebohm's exploration of the course to the Yenisei; the approach to which for trading vessels through the northern seas has been discovered by Professor Norden-sköld. The Yenisei is the third largest river in the world. It rises in the mountains of Central Asia, flows northwards and westwards, and after passing through Lake Bakal enters the Seas of Kara. Its total length is roughly estimated at 4000 miles. During the greater part of the year it is covered with ice; but in May and June the river become free and navigable. Mr. Sebohm traveled over the ice from Yeneseisk, a town in the centre of Siberia, to the mouth of the river, a distance of 1600 miles. The banks are covered with magnificent timber up to the Arctic regions, when the forests diminish and gradually disappear. At Yeneseisk a mast sixty feet long, three feet diameter at the bottom and eighteen inches at the top can be bought for twenty shillings. The wood is of exceedingly small specific gravity, and very elastic, and is said not to lose its elasticity with age. But the most valuable timber is the cedar, which is very abundant and is said, if worked soon after being cut, never to warp, shrink, crack, or rot. The great value, however, of the exploration and opening out of trade of the Yenisei is to be found rather in the means of exit which it affords to the unlimited produce of Southern Siberia. The Russian Government has been urged to make proper surveys of this river and of its mouth; this work, however, is more likely to be undertaken by English enterprise. Many Russians, such as M. Sidoroff, who owns large graphite mines near the river, are naturally full alive to the advantages of further exploration.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

CAUTION.

The PILLS Purify the Blood, correct all disorders of the Liver, Stomach Kidneys and Bowls, and are invaluable in all complaints incidental to Females. The OINTMENT is the only reliable remedy for Bad Legs, Old Wounds, Sores, and Ulcers, of however long standing. For Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, Gout, Rheumatism, and all Skin Diseases it is no equal.

BEWARE OF AMERICAN COUNTERFEITS.

I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the Public generally to the fact, that certain Houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my Pills and Ointment. These frauds bears on their labels some address in New York.

I do not allow my medicines to be sold in any part of the United States. I have no Agents there. My Medicines are our made by me, at 555 Oxford Street London.

In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the Public against being deceived by counterfeits. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeits they pretend to denounce.

These counterfeits are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one-half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine Medicines.

I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice, which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honorable persons, to assist me, and the Public, as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful Fraud.

Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines, bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT, LONDON," engraved thereon. On the label is the address, 533, OXFORD STREET, LONDON, where alone they are Manufactured. Holloway's Pills and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeits.

The Trade Marks of these Medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence, any one throughout the British Possessions, who may keep the American Counterfeits for sale, will be prosecuted.

LITERARY

The Knight and the Nun.

ANONYMOUS TRANSLATION FROM F. VON SCHILLER.

"Knight, to love thee like a sister, Vows this heart to thee;
Ask no other, warmer feeling—
That were pain to me,
Tranquil would I see thy coming,
Tranquil see thee go;
What that starting tear would tell me
I must never know."

He with silent anguish listens, Though his heart-strings bleed;
Clasps her in his last embraces,
Springs upon his steed;
Summons every faithful vassal
From his Alpine home;
Binds the cross upon his bosom,
Seeks the Holy Tomb.

There full many a deed of glory
Wrought the hero's arm;
Foremost still his plumage floated Where the foe's banner swam Till the Moslem, terror-stricken Quailed before his name;
But the pang that wrings his bosom
Lives at heart the same.

One long year he bears his sorrow,
But no more can bear.
Rest he seeks, but finding never,
Leaves the army there;
Sees a ship by Joppa's haven,
Which, with swelling sail, Wafts him where his lady's breathing Mingles with the gale.

At her father's castle portal
Hark! his knock is heard:
See! the gloomy gate uncloses
With the thunder-word:
'She thou seek'st is veiled forever,
Is the bride of heaven,
Yesterday the vows were plighted—
She to God is given."

Then his old ancestral castle
He forever flees,
Battle-steed and trusty weapon
Never more he sees.
From the Togenburg descending Forth unknown he glides;
For the frame once sheathed in iron
Now the sackcloth hides.

There beside that hallowed region
He bath built his tower,
Where from out the dusky indens Looked the convent tower, Waiting from the morning's glimmer Till the day was done, Tranquil hope in every feature,
Sat he there alone.

Gazing upward to the convent Hour on hour he passed;
Watching still his lady's lattice Till it opened at last,
Till that form looked forth so lovely,
Till the sweet face smiled
Down into the lonesome valley,
Peaceful, angel-mild.

Then he laid him down to slumber,
Cheered by peaceful dreams,
Calmly waiting till the morning Showed again its beams.
Thus for days he watched and waited,
Thus for years he lay,
Happy if he saw the lattice
Open day by day—

If that form looked forth so lovely,
If the sweet face smiled
Down into the lonesome valley,
Peaceful, angel-mild.
These a course they found him sitting Once when day returned,
Still his pale and placid features
To the lattice turned.

The Mowing.

The clock has struck six,
And the morning is far,
While the east in red splendor is glowing;
There's a dew on the grass and a song in the air—
Let us up and be off to the mowing.

Who'dst know why I wait Ere the sunlight has crept O'er the field where daisies are growing?
Why all night I've kept my own vigils, Nor slept?

'Tis to-day is the day of the mowing.
This day and this hour Maud has promised to tell What the blush on her cheek was half showing.

If she waits at the lane I'm to know all is well,
And there'll be a good time at the mowing.

Maud's mother has said,
And I'll never deny
That a girl's heart there can be no knowing,
Oh, I care not to live, and I rather would die,
If Maud do not come to the mowing.

What is it I see?
'Tis a sheen of brown hair
In the lane where the poppies are growing.
Thank god! it is Maud—she is waiting me there,
And there'll be a good time at the mowing.

Six years have passed by,
And I freely decay
That I scarcely have noticed their going Sweet Maud is my wife, with her sheen of brown hair,
And we had a good time at the mowing.

[Original.]

Deep down in the bottom of the human heart there lies an instinct purer and holier than aught else in the world,—the instinct of the love of home. Nor is it in the human heart alone; it is as wide and as universal as creation. There is nothing living which is not swayed by this gentle longing. The bee has no sooner sucked the nectar from the drooping flower than she wings her rapid flight to her home. Take the bird. Imprison him. Give him the most delicate food, and bring him water from the coolest fountain. Have you made his bars less irksome? No. He can not be happy, for the cage is not his home. He may pour forth his wildest woodnotes; but they are merely a prisoner's song—tuneless souvenirs of a bye-gone freedom, which caught its inspiration from his forest home. Leave his prison door ajar, and he will not fail to profit by your oversight. But he will not forget your tender kindness. He will perch himself on some neighbouring gable, shake his little feathers, sing you a kind farewell—then, bursting into a wild hymn of liberty, he will wing his way to the forest, his free, his happy, his native home. So it is with man,—imprison him, drive him by dire necessity to a foreign strand, and still the yearning of his heart after its earliest home, is as strong as ever. It is well that it is so,—it is well that we have all of us had a home, and a springtime whose joys are imperishable and whose very recollection calls up the tenderest feelings of our nature. We cannot, it is true, recall departed youth, nor act again the games of childhood. But we can revisit the home made sacred by the one, and the places hallowed by the innocent happiness of the other. All classes of society feel this—the shepherd of the valley no less than the enthroned king, but none, perhaps, feels so keenly the happiness of such visits as the student. Shut up for ten months within the college walls and wearied in mind from the toil of study, he looks forward with quite a pardonable pleasure to the day of breaking-up. Long before it has come it is the subject of his nightly thought, and the one topic of his daily conversation. Each night ere his eyes close in sleep, his lively fancy pictures with a thousand new beauties every nook and corner of his favorite haunts, and during the day time it is his secret pleasure to plan how he shall employ his hours at home. The night before the breaking up at length arrives. Every student is in his room. Books, papers, and linens are spread about in every direction. He is packing and thinking the while, of the happy morrow. A few short hours and his mother's arms will be pressing him to her breast. Oh! how his heart is burning with the thought of looking at the love of her heart beaming from her eyes—of feeling once again the warm clasp of his father's hands, and of seeing the tears of welcome stealing down the cheeks of his brothers and sisters. Oh! he thinks, "how true it is that the three sweetest words in the English language are mother, home, and heaven," a loud shout of laughing assails his ears. He raises his head, and for the first time is aware that while he has been revelling poor fellow, in anticipated home pleasures, he has wrapped his boots up in his finest linens, and hidden poor Virgil and Hugh Blair in the leg of an old stocking. I shall not attempt to portray the disorder of this night. Suffice it to say, that after much packing and unpacking, his trunk is at last fit for the journey; when he retires to bed to snatch a few hours' sleep. The lights are extinguished in the corridors. The last soft foot-falls of the watchful Dean have died away in the distance. There is not a sound, save the ticking of the clock, nor a breath, except a cool gust of night air through the hidden chink in some window-pane. All is hushed—all is still as the grave. He is dreaming of home. Perhaps even now his nerves are twittering from the jolting of some fancied cab. The morning comes, and then, behold the bustle. What an array of trunks, hat boxes, and carpet bags! What jingling of voices, what a motley group of cabmen! Soon they are whirled off to the train. After a last "good-bye," and "take care of yourself," from some city friend, the train whistles, he takes his seat, the train starts, and in a few seconds the College has faded away in the distance. I should perhaps weary you, were I to describe the various thoughts called up by each well remembered scene on the way home. I need only say that after many stoppages, marked with the usual unnecessary bustle, he finds himself at last in the village nearest home. Here the indispensable cabman is once more employed, this time to drive him to the dear old roostree. What a crowd of strangely beautiful thoughts come trooping from the past, as the hill that hides his home appear in sight. What delightful memories come dancing along when he sees the garden-trees—the silent witnesses of the gambols of his childhood. How inexpressibly sweet are the reminiscences of childhood which in wild but beautiful disaster press and cling to his mind, when between the knarled branches he catches the first glimpse of the dear old house. And what happiness inundates his soul as he sinks into his mother's long and loving embrace. There let us leave him, such joy is too holy to disturb. Let some homely British fire-side tell him the story of Alfred, and of the glory that surrounds the field of Runnymede; let Caledonia speak to him of Bruce of Wallace and of noble Douglas, and the land of the Shamrock fascinate him with the legends of her Chieftains, the flowers of her valleys, and the fairies of her streams.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Go to the dishonest grocer, consider his weight, and be wise enough to avoid him. —Steuenville Herald.

The grate art of contentment consists in being perfectly satisfied with that year hair t' go.

Better bare feet and contentment therewith, than patent leather boots and a corn on each toe.

It is more reputable to adapt yourself to circumstances than it is to fit yourself with another man's new felt hat, when he is taking dinner at a crowded hotel.

The zinc statue of Tom Moore at Dublin has a crack in his head, and is half full of water. Which is a thing that never happened to him during his lifetime.

The boy who says it's my "turn" as the short cake is being passed rarely makes the same remark when the mowing machine knives have to be ground after dinner.

"None of us is safe," said a Grand Opera House "super," gloomily, after reading about the attempted assassination of Edwin Booth.

A level-headed poet signs: "The time the time is short! Old part, shake! You are the best kind of right. We gave it only last week for three months, and the bank says it falls due to-morrow. The time is short, but it isn't shorter than we are."

A lady, not accustomed to raising poultry set a hen on some eggs and in due course of time a brood of chickens was hatched. A friend coming in four days afterward, noticing that the little things looked weak and puny, asked how often they were fed. "Fed!" was the reply, "why, I thought the hen nursed them."

An Atlanta youth, says the Constitution, gotten up in the latest style, left a West End car and tripped across to a house, where a little boy sat whistling with a Barlow knife. The boy looked up and said:

"I say, young man, yer don't want to be comin' around here any more, yer don't."

"Why, Charley, what's the matter?" "Cause, there's a feller what wears a diamond breast-pin and rides in his own horse and buggy a comin' here to see Sis now, and a feller like you, what has to ride round in a bobtail kyar hain't got no show 'cept to take a front seat on the fence and watch 'em fixing things for the wedding!"

The young man turned away looking like a sweet potato vine after a black frost.

A junior met a rival who was somewhat advanced in years and wishing to annoy him, inquired how old he was. "I can't exactly tell," replied the other, "but I can inform you that an ass is older at twenty than a man at sixty."

Never believe a man who is always telling what he used to do, who always deals with the past tense, for the past tense is a pretense.

When a young class orator arose to speak it was remarked that "there were fifty pairs of beautiful eyes riveted on his countenance." In that supreme moment he should have had his picture taken, before the rivets unloosed and the eyes dropped.

Kankakee has a justice who beats them all in the way of doing up a job of matrimonial splicing with neatness and dispatch. This is his formula:
"Have'er?"
"Yes."
"Have'im?"
"Yes."
"Married: $2."

FASHIONS.

Bonnets are worn very high. Some of the new caps are shaped just like a baby's bonnet.

Petunia is a new color half way between lilac and mauve.

Square visiting cards are the fancy just now, but look odd.

Veils of plain, dark grey tulle are very popular and proper.

It is no longer the correct thing to display bridal presents.

The muslin bows, intended for morning wear, are very small.

Some of the new vests are oval in outline, and stop at the belt.

Myrtle, sky blue and buteroc are mixed in long looped bows.

The newest boots for dancing are made of satin, with high heels.

The side gores of some overskirts are laid in eight lengthwise plaits.

The polka basque, as it is made this year, is the old-fashioned chateleine waist.

A variety of belts are coming into vogue, leather, linen, and other materials.

Lustrous blue turquoise is thought to be exceedingly becoming to fair complexions.

Black and white lace over colored silk forms the vest worn with black silk gowns.

English women wear and like the little bonnets made of clusters of flowers lying on black lace.

Morning and travelling dresses and seaside costumes become more and more masculine in appearance.

A kilt-plaited skirt and a frock coat, opening over a high vest, compose one of the newest French walking dresses.
