CHAPTER VI.
At The Wold.

Then as the man left the room he said in a low voice, and with a quiet smile: "I've some news for you, Charlie; news you'll be glad to hear."

"I knew," exclaimed Charlie, with a flush of delight, and springing forward with outstretched hand which grasped Percy's heartily; "I read it in your face."

"Astute Solomon!" laughed Percy. "Yes, I am lucky, Charlie! But softly, all is not settled yet; the letter—will you take it to her?"

"Will it? Won't it?" exclaimed the boy.

"And explain why I cannot call to-day; you can tell me more than I have written, if they want telling; she will not, I think," he added, quietly.

"Leave it to me," said Charlie, delighted and proud of his commission; "and I am so glad! I said so all along—to myself, of course—and she is the most lovely woman in the world; and you've cut all the other fellows out; though that's of course," he added, with supreme confidence in his hero's perfection and supremacy to any other man in the world. "I'm off my head with delight. Percy! and you are going down to the old earl! Don't you tremble, old boy?"

"Not much, as yet," said Percy, rising as he heard his private cab dash up to the door; "I may do so when I am in the cage, but meanwhile I feel quite brave. It is rather a coincidence, the earl's sending for me just now; it will save me a letter," he added. "And now, Charlie, if I'm away more than a day, write a long letter, and—send me any message."

"I'll call every day if she'll see me," said Charlie, eagerly; "and I'll send you every word she says; I will by Jove! and I say, Percy, let me come to the station," he entreated.

"No, no; get to bed, you young vagabond!" replied his cousin, putting his hand on the boy's shoulder. "Get to bed and dream, and don't forget my letter after breakfast."

And after these words he started. He caught the train, got a little sleep, haunted by a very beautiful face, with violet eyes; lit a cigar; and, by the time it was smoked out, had reached Vering station. Beamish had

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering—
Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for telegraphed, and the Vering carriage was waiting; it bore the Vering arms on its panels, but was particularly plain, and almost grim, taken in connection with the dark, somber liveries of the servants.

The footman, with a subdued but reverential air, shut him in, and the thick, sluggish horses bowled off.

A drive of three miles, and the towers of the Wold are in sight. Then the carriage rolled up a long avenue, and suddenly the noble facade of his inheritance unfolded itself to Percy's view.

He would be less than man, and more than a stone, if a thrill of pride had not run through him at the noble view. The Wold was one of the handsomest seats in England, and, in the course of nature, the magnificence and the wealth he saw around him would be his!

The great hall door swung heavily open, and a footman, as subdued in manner, and clad in the somber livery, ushered him into one of the reception rooms.

"Would you like to go to your room, sir?" he inquired.

Percy hesitated.

"The earl is not up yet, I suppose?"

"His lordship is dressing now, sir; he desired me to attend you to your room, and have breakfast prepared. His lordship will be down about one, sir."

It was then twelve or thereabouts.

Percy nodded, and the footman, leading the way, traversed the huge hall, with its dark oak, immense pictures, antlers, quill chandeliers, men in armour, trophies and cabinets, with its mosaic tiles and Gibbons' carving—ascended the broad staircase, up which a mad Vering had ridden a favorite hunter, and passing along a corridor lighted by a stained window, and hung every inch of it with pictures that the "Wild Jack," the present earl, had collected from all quarters of the globe, and were worth a king's ransom—bowed Percy, with all the reverence due to the heir of the Wold and a Vering, into a splendid chamber furnished a la Louis Quatorze. Old-fashioned as the furniture was, the appointments were replete with all the modern luxuries which were to be found in Percy's own chambers, and Percy's critical eye was satisfied.

"Breakfast will be served in the small courtroom, sir, and I will attend you if you will ring, sir," said the footman, and, closing the door with a labored noiselessness, he vanished.

Percy washed and removed the dust of travel, and then, not having forgotten his way to the small courtroom—so called because a king had lunched there on a hunting morning—though he had not entered it since he was a boy of Charlie's age, did not need to summon the footman.

A breakfast which partook of the character of a luncheon, was spread upon an oaken table, near some tall French windows of diamond pane, and a solemn butler bowed low in obeisance, and watched lynx-like for every opportunity of ministering to the guest. Percy, however, trifled with one or two dishes, and confined himself to some Lafitte, which the butler had handled and uncorked as if it were a precious treasure which he had just drawn from the hiding place of years.

"Good wine!" said Percy.

The butler glowed and warmed.

"It is, sir. There are two bins of it, Mr. Percy; two bins, and it is at its prime!" he and he sighed.

Old Stephen Gringe's face lit up for a moment at the good-natured familiarity, but the next instant it had sunk back into its close, reserved impassibility, and, with a gesture of self-deprecation, he shuffled across the hall, and opening a small door under the gallery, stood aside to allow Percy to enter.

The room was a half study, half library, lined with books, and filled with ebony cabinets and massive furniture of the same wood. Although the season was summer, and the day a hot one, a thick log burned on the steel bars in the wide grate, and the windows were closed.

Before the fire, and in a great chair of carved ebony, sat a tall, thin man, with white hair and face pinched and stern-looking, with thick, overhanging gray brows, from under which a pair of restless gray eyes peered, commandingly. This was the Right Honorable the Earl of Vering, Viscount Chester, baron, and the holder of half a dozen other titles and dignities. He wore a long, loose dressing-robe of some dark material, which, with his long, thin, white hands standing out from it in startling contrast, looked like the robe of a Venetian doge rather than the plain, matter-of-fact morning wrap of an English nobleman.

Stephen Gringe shuffled across the room, and in a thin treble said: "Mr. Percy, my lord."

The earl held out his hand.

"Yes, yes; it is he. Did I expect to see a boy?" he murmured, as if irritated by his own surprise. "Yes, it is a Chester; I wanted no one to tell me that. You have come quickly. You are welcome."

Percy took the white, thin hand; it was deadly cold, and held it for a moment.

"Sit down," said the earl. "Are you cold?"

Percy with difficulty suppressed a start. Cold! The midsummer sun fought its way through the thick curtains, and joining issue with the fire, made the room like a baker's oven.

"No, my lord," he said; "it is a warm day outside."

"Ah," said the earl, "I am never warm. I am in my grave already, I think, eh, Gringe," and he turned his eyes upon the retreating figure of the old steward. "Stop, remain here," he said; and Stephen Gringe shuffled back and stood, half at the side, half behind the great chair.

Percy smiled and looked up in his frank way.

"And no one to drink it, eh?"

The butler shook his head.

"No, sir, his lordship drinks nothing," with a woe-begone face; "simply nothing, sir. Ah!" and he sighed.

"That is a pity," said Percy. "And there is no one else?"

"No one but Mr. Gringe, sir, who does not drink a bottle in a month."

The name of the steward recalled him to Percy's mind rather suddenly.

"Ah, Mr. Gringe," he said. "Where is he?"

"He always attends my lord until breakfast is over, sir," replied the servant, "and he told me to beg you to excuse him if you asked for him. He will be here, sir, as soon as he can leave his lordship."

"As he spoke the door opened and a little, bent, strunken, weasoned old man entered.

Percy remembered him in a moment; the thin, parchment face had not changed a whit, the small eyes were just as bright and shrewd, the figure no more bent or aged-looking than when, as a boy, Percy used to torment and plague him.

"Ah, Stephen!" he exclaimed, stretching out his hand, with a smile. "Glad to see you! You look as well as ever—younger than ever, I think. No, no, altered a bit since the days when you used to threaten to report my manifold sins to the earl."

"The old man had shuffled across the room during this frank, hearty speech and with a gesture of respect and deference, had taken the young man's hand, and now stood looking up into his face with an admixture of affection, cunning, regret, and welcome that was curiously startling.

"Always the same!" he muttered.

"There's no change in you, Master Percy! No change in you, except outside, and, ah, me! ah, me! there's alteration enough there! Why, you be as tall as the earl, and the old face—the old Vering face—a true Vering, every inch of ye!"

Chuckling with a secret satisfaction, then, as if remembering his position and its duties, he glanced at the table, and then drew away a little.

"Have you breakfasted, sir? Is there anything you wish that I can get for you, sir?" he asked, with profound respect.

"Thanks, Stephen. I have all I want—no, nothing. And the earl, how is he?"

"The same as usual, sir," replied Stephen Gringe, looking at the carpet with a reserved, closed-up air—"the same as usual. If agreeable and convenient, sir, I am to conduct you to his lordship?"

"I am quite ready," said Percy; and he placed his hand on the old man's shoulder.

Old Stephen Gringe's face lit up for a moment at the good-natured familiarity, but the next instant it had sunk back into its close, reserved impassibility, and, with a gesture of self-deprecation, he shuffled across the hall, and opening a small door under the gallery, stood aside to allow Percy to enter.

Mr. Adams and the Churchill Complaint

We have received a statement from Mr. Adams in reference to the letter of Ambrose Churchill, in which the latter complained that his son left his work and volunteered, failed to pass the medical examinations and that he went back to his employer expecting to get his job again, but was refused any work or even wages due him at the time.

Nathan Churchill, son of Mr. Ambrose Churchill, Seward's Mill, worked with us last year. He didn't give us very good satisfaction. We decided not to hire him any more. But this spring he came to us three times asking for a job, apparently as we were neighbors, and gave him work for the sake of his father, at $1.50 per day. His pay day was when I'd get the money when lumber was sold, same as last year. There wasn't any work at the time as how long I would give him employment. He worked twelve days and a half; he did not give me one minute's notice that he was leaving until he left. At dinner hour he came to me and said, what about my time. He said he was going to volunteer. I told him I couldn't help it. I had another young man here that had been down to volunteer a short while ago, but failed to pass. I had him engaged for a month, and to make disturbance he had been permitted to go with him, which was useless for him to go. I gave Nathan his time without any hesitation. I told him I couldn't give him any money for a few days as I had to have time to get it. He didn't say anything to me about keeping his place if he failed to pass. He stayed here that he came back shortly after and I had another man in his place. I collected $10 for him which was the best I could do, until lumber was sold. I owe him the balance $6.25.

We are also informed that there are at present in the Newfoundland Regiment, three of the Adams' family and one in the Canadian forces, out of 19 nephews of Mr. Adams, sr. It would appear therefore that the trouble about the wages and the non-taking back of Churchill, was not due to the latter enlisting.

SOME EXPERIENCES OF

I was right round the trenches weeks ago, and as that was in March and the winter has been exceptionally bad, the conditions were intolerable. There is no anxiety, cause everybody is sure that he is strong; but the wet, mud, and exposure make you think that you will get pneumonia and bronchitis yet what mostly happens is frost-foot. I have seen a lot of that in a radiator, where we call it frost-bite, is not, however, the same, that appears to be. I have travelled times in Labrador in winter, where thermometer has been twenty-three degrees below zero, and never had frost-bite except on my life. That was when I was on my dog-team over the ice. The broke and my dogs went into it. They shared a floe with me and out an awful night, and my dogs saved at the sacrifice of their lives. I have told that story in detail where, so I need not tell it now. I saw 150 men from a H.Q. regiment with frost-bite; but the phenomental weather and the inability of relieving the men, their relief was due, because, were fighting continuously for forty-eight hours.

There is another direction in immense strides have been made that is with respect to vermin. At the beginning of the war there were as many as 4,000 men had scabies or itch and were a action for the time being; but hardly see such a case now, and of the wonderful measures which taken to keep the troops clean and fit.

Close behind the trenches in rats have been placed to scrub baths for men, and the happy news I saw were those who were ing and splashing in these hot while their uniforms and gear were being thoroughly cleansed in per-heated steam-chests and off with heavy hot irons.

Just as we got into one of cleaning depots a Jack Johnson very near us; but nobody took slightest notice of it, so accidently one become to the happy of war. Five or six men were hot bath, and something like baths a day are given. The troops come thoroughly clean people, and their clothing also is freed from vermin and filth, so troops look as happy as possible. I was greatly struck by the neatness and courage of all who were these laundries, women as well

We have received a statement from Mr. Adams in reference to the letter of Ambrose Churchill, in which the latter complained that his son left his work and volunteered, failed to pass the medical examinations and that he went back to his employer expecting to get his job again, but was refused any work or even wages due him at the time.

Nathan Churchill, son of Mr. Ambrose Churchill, Seward's Mill, worked with us last year. He didn't give us very good satisfaction. We decided not to hire him any more. But this spring he came to us three times asking for a job, apparently as we were neighbors, and gave him work for the sake of his father, at $1.50 per day. His pay day was when I'd get the money when lumber was sold, same as last year. There wasn't any work at the time as how long I would give him employment. He worked twelve days and a half; he did not give me one minute's notice that he was leaving until he left. At dinner hour he came to me and said, what about my time. He said he was going to volunteer. I told him I couldn't help it. I had another young man here that had been down to volunteer a short while ago, but failed to pass. I had him engaged for a month, and to make disturbance he had been permitted to go with him, which was useless for him to go. I gave Nathan his time without any hesitation. I told him I couldn't give him any money for a few days as I had to have time to get it. He didn't say anything to me about keeping his place if he failed to pass. He stayed here that he came back shortly after and I had another man in his place. I collected $10 for him which was the best I could do, until lumber was sold. I owe him the balance $6.25.

We are also informed that there are at present in the Newfoundland Regiment, three of the Adams' family and one in the Canadian forces, out of 19 nephews of Mr. Adams, sr. It would appear therefore that the trouble about the wages and the non-taking back of Churchill, was not due to the latter enlisting.

SOME EXPERIENCES OF WAR.

I was right round the trenches two weeks ago, and as that was early in March and the winter has been exceptionally bad, the conditions were intolerable. There is no anxiety, because everybody is sure that the line is strong; but the wet, mud and exposure make you think that the men will get pneumonia and bronchitis; yet what mostly happens is trench-foot. I have seen a lot of that in Labrador, where we call it frostbite. It is not, however, the same, though it appears to be. I have travelled many times in Labrador in winter, when the thermometer has been twenty and thirty degrees below zero, and I have never had frost-bite except once in my life. That was when I was driving my dog-team over the ice. The ice broke and my dogs went into the sea. They shared a floe with me throughout an awful night, and my life was saved at the sacrifice of theirs. I have told that story in detail elsewhere, so I need not tell it now.

I saw 150 men from a Highland regiment with frost-bite; but that was quite exceptional and was due to the phenomenal weather and the impossibility of relieving the men when their relief was due, because they were fighting continuously for over forty-eight hours.

There is another direction in which immense strides have been made, and that is with respect to vermin. At one time, at the beginning of the war, there were as many as 4,000 men who had scabies or itch and were out of action for the time being; but you hardly see such a case now, because of the wonderful measures which are taken to keep the troops perfectly clean and fit.

Close behind the trenches immense vats have been placed to serve as baths for men, and the happiest fellows I saw were those who were rolling and splashing in these hot baths, while their uniforms and clothing were being thoroughly cleansed in super-heated steam-chests and finished up with heavy hot irons.

Just as we got into one of these cleansing depots a Jack Johnson burst very near us; but nobody took the slightest notice of it, so accustomed does one become to the happenings of war. Five or six men were in each hot bath, and something like 2,000 baths a day are given. The men become thoroughly clean personally and their clothing also is perfectly freed from vermin and filth, and the troops look as happy as possible.

I was greatly struck by the coolness and courage of all who worked in these laundries, women as well as men.

life, and deeply impressed by the lavishness with which that life has been laid down by all ranks of King and Country. This remark applies to every rank of life without exception, to the highest of the aristocracy as well as to the humblest private. And very remarkable, too, is the zeal and willingness to serve in quite subordinate positions of men who have had every advantage in life, particularly the University type.

I remember at one place, when we were sitting in the mess, a sergeant brought in a paper which he handed to the colonel to read. It was a most elaborate scientific treatise on the body vermin that so greatly trouble our troops; and it was beautifully illustrated. In addition to that the paper showed the willing endurance of personal suffering for practical purposes that I for one should not have cared to undergo, for the sergeant had made himself thoroughly well acquainted with the effects of the visitation of the pests he described. I was so much impressed by the performance that I said to the colonel, "Who is your sergeant?" and he replied, "Oh, he's the Professor of Entomology in the University of . . ."

New Melbourne Notes.

Perhaps, notwithstanding, all the space required of your paper daily to keep the public informed of the War, and other matters of interest, you will find a little room for a few notes from here which may be of interest to some of your readers.

Allow me to congratulate you on your election as Leader of the Opposition Party. Your appointment, needless to say, has met with growing approval.

We must, thank the Government, and you, sir, for making this and Brownsdale a port of call for the S. S. Petrel. Her visits here have already been of great advantage and will be appreciated. Of course owing to the roughness of the shore and no harbour we cannot expect regular visits, when northerly wind and sea prevail, but the genial and courageous Captain Day will endeavour to call whenever suitable, and do his duty in a manner pleasing to all. We know she cannot take the place of the train, whose smoke can be seen every day from Old Perlican, creating a longing desire in all to have her regular visits here which would be the greatest boon that could be conferred. She is now so near and yet so far. It would not mean a great outlay to build it from Old Perlican, Worthington or Caplin Cove, and we trust the Government graciously considered the petition presented during the session of Parliament, praying for the building of this extension of only a few miles. Perhaps I should say the Government would have the thanks of all the travelling public if they would spend a thousand or two dollars on the main road to Old Perlican which is unfit for travel and a disgrace to civilization. The condition of this road has frequently been brought to the knowledge of the Government by Minister, Doctor, Magistrate, and other leading men but apparently of no service, and thus it goes from bad to worse all the time with a general howl of complaints and sulphurous language poured out upon the Government because of its carelessness and inattention to it. Only a little time since Doctor Plickard was called here on a serious case—which would quickly have had a fatal termination—and he had to avert himself of the use of a motor boat, fearing, as it was evening, to travel over this road, and then owing to conditions had to remain all night, considerably longer than he otherwise would have done.

In speaking of the petition reminds me of that influentially signed petition for the appointment of Mr. J. W. Jones, Magistrate of Bonne Bay, to be transferred to this shore with jurisdiction extending along the S. S. of Trinity Bay. We don't know yet what steps the Govt. has taken in the matter but they would do well to accede to the people's requests, for they want to see Mr. Jones honoured in this respect, and have the privilege of availing of his good office whenever needed; no man along our shore is better fitted and more highly qualified after all his years of business among them. His knowledge of dealing with men in any case that he may have to adjudicate upon will be balanced with good judgment. Mr. Jones has three sons fighting for King and Country. Two went with the first and second contingents and the other enlisted in Canada; all have seen active service in the Dardanelles and now in France. We hope the Government will not be tardy and have no dilly-dallying in appointing their respected father to the position desired by the people otherwise they will indignantly resent it.

We have just had a visit from Mr. R. W. Ritsay the father of the Acadia Motor Engine, he is so mechanical and understands the fixtures of these and every other so well, that he seems only to have to look upon them and they obey him. It matters not whether it is the motor sold by him, or any possibility of harvests and material development.

One is impressed at the front with the apparent valuelessness of human

PILES

You will find relief in Zam-Buk! It eases the burning, stinging pain, stops bleeding and brings ease. Perseverance, with Zam-Buk, means cure. Why not prove this? All Druggists and Grocers.

He is one of Nature's made gentlemen and quite a favourite, this is likely to be attested in 1918. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

Mr. Hiscock representing the Imperial Tobacco Co., has also made his first visit, he appears pleased with the business done since leaving the city.

A short time ago the genial Mr. McNulty, of the Nfd. Clothing Co., visited us. He as ever was quite cheery. War or business, he had the hopeful word. England, my England, land of his birth, would assuredly win out in the titanic struggle.

Three of our young men have enlisted with the Canadian E. F. Archibald Pynn and Selby Harris are now to the front "Somewhere in France" and Abasalom Driscoll, a young married man with a wife and three children here, is still training in Louisiana and intends visiting us ere leaving to do battle with the Huns. We hope that each of them may return safely. Brownsdale has also given seven of her brave sons to the Navy, which out of a population of 150 is a good record. That they will do their part to bring glory to the Empire and to the land of their birth we have no doubt.

Mrs. W. J. Button and her staff of workers are still knitting for the W. P. A. At Easter a successful concert under the management of our teacher, Miss W. Parsons, was held to raise funds for this purpose and was enjoyed by all. Mr. Soper, of Hant's Harbour, was present with his gramophone and did good service.

Miss Parsons has been an untiring worker in Church and Sunday School; her talent is always brought into service, singing, playing, training the choir, to some new tune, doing her part in all, she has always been ready to help. The day school, her special work, will, we believe, speak also of her worth. The amount of fees collected has been in excess of previous years.

Our esteemed Minister, the Rev. G. S. Curtis, since coming amongst us last fall has ever been active for the good of all the people he ministers to. At Brownsdale his efforts are seen in the erection of a large school, 60 x 30, to which much work has been done this Spring. It will be a monument to the place and his memory. Whatever is needed to be done for the moral and spiritual good he is always ready to lead, hold meetings, advise and counsel with. His preaching is of a high order, and it is a source of inspiration to listen to him at all times. He has endeared himself to the people and they have attested this by increased giving, and this part of the Circuit is now able to give a good financial showing.

Revs. Curtis and James (Sup. of Circuit) exchanged pulpits on Sunday, the latter preaching here in the morning taking his text from Col. 4 chap. verse. He presented the old story with as much eloquence and power as in his earlier days. Although bearing the weight of 30 many years, in the pulpit he has all the buoyancy and freshness of a younger man. This is his first visit since January and a welcome was accorded him.

The poems and ballads of your charming songster, Mr. James Murphy, always receive a welcome and are read with cheerfulness and glee. He brightens and cheers in all his writing, something like the rising sun brightens and cheers and gives beauty to the landscape; people of every class and creed know him as one belonging to all.

The visit of the Methodist Supt. of Education, Rev. Dr. Curtis, is looked forward to with pleasure. The good work he is doing in the Recruiting Campaign (with two soldiers accompanying him) has reached our ears, and is the topic of conversation. Success to the good Dr. in all his endeavours.

All the people are now busy gardening, getting out traps ready for the fishery and so forth. Zeppelin bombs and other terrors of this cruel war have no dread for them, thanks to the security afforded by the Motherland. That the end of it may soon hasten on when the butchery will cease and the world enjoy peace again is the outstanding desire and prayer of the people.

THE MENAGERIE

All living creatures seem to throng the road that I would tour along in my tin chugmobile; they'll leave their homes and travel far, to throw themselves beneath my car, and bust a costly wheel. All thoroughfares, with yonder hills, and break the slats of dogs and ducks and geese and cats, and and calves and shoats, forevermore are packed; I just collided with a cow—against her adamantine brow, my radiator cracked. The cows will leave the tender grass to block the road where I must pass, upon my road to town; the hogs will leave their sparkling swill to make a stand on yonder hill, and turn me upside down. Amos I squash a farmer's hen, that surely wasn't worth a yen, when it was in its prime; but now I hear the owner howl, "You killed my rare imported fowl, of pedigree sublime!" I jog along and break the slats of dogs and ducks and geese and cats, and always, when they die, the price goes up to beat the band; "They were the finest in the land," I hear the owners cry. The way the farmers' beasts run loose is certainly a great abuse. It is no more a joke; and if I travel west or east, at every corner, there's a beast that suffering to croak.

Haig's Despatch.

The first despatch from General Haig, the Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in France, is a modest document. He pays in it two well-merited tributes to others. He has nothing but the highest praise to bestow on the resolute gallantry which the French have displayed during the past three months in defending Verdun against the continuous and fierce onslaughts of the Germans. This brilliant defence is one of the finest pages in French military history, and well deserves the praises which have been bestowed on it by the British Commander-in-Chief. It is by far the most notable military action on the Western front during the past three months. General Haig states the British forces were called upon to aid only indirectly. The British took over part of the French trenches elsewhere, and enabled the relieved soldiers to be utilized in the defence of Verdun. This transfer was very successful owing to the way it was carried on, and, particularly so, General Haig says, to the fact that the Germans were too much occupied elsewhere to give attention to it. He speaks of it as a delicate action, which might have been seriously disturbed had the Germans shown themselves on the offensive. The changes were taking place. Outside of this the British forces since General Haig's accession to the Chief Command have been engaged in a very large number of what would appear to be minor operations as compared with the mighty operations around Verdun, but which were large undertakings as compared with battles of the past. Another well-merited tribute is bestowed on Field Marshal French, who was General Haig's superior in the earlier stages of the war, and to whose position General Haig succeeded. It is very pleasing to find that the General who is best fitted to judge of Field Marshal French's work in France has nothing but praise to bestow on it. This tribute will silence any detractors to which the recall of Field Marshal French to the home command might have given grounds.

Gallipoli Hero Here.

Private Jas. Tobin is on Six Weeks Furlough.—Tells of Brother's Hair-Breadth Escape. By last night's express there arrived Private James Tobin, of the First Newfoundland Regiment, having come across country second class. He is here on a six weeks' sick furlough and is staying with his uncle, Mr. William Cox, Duckworth Street. Private Tobin left here with the first contingent of volunteers in October, 1914, and was attached to A Company. He went through the Dardanelles campaign and recounts some interesting, though thrilling, episodes of historic Gallipoli, notably was the incident where his younger brother, Walter, who left here with F Company of "C" Coy, had a hair-breadth escape. Walter was engaged bringing provisions to the front and was in company with the Indian troops at the time. He was fired at by a Turk. The bullet reached him, but shot through his clothes, without touching his flesh, shattered his haversack, thence striking an Indian soldier in the head and killing him outright. Private Tobin also tells of the death of Capt. Wighton, who was killed in action, the latter part of last year. The remains of the deceased officer was interred by Pte. Tobin, assisted by Lance-Corporal Jno. Reardigan, another St. John's East boy and son of Fire Constable J. Reardigan, L.C. Corp. Reardigan has since gone to France, having come out of the Dardanelles with a feather cut of him, and when last heard of "somewhere in France" was as fit as a fiddle after being in the firing line. Pte. Tobin took Hill at Cape Helles and was in hospital under treatment for jaundice and dysentery. He last came from Aberdeen, Scotland, crossed on the "Athens" from Glasgow to Quebec, and thence to Halifax, where he took the I. C. R. train en route for St. John's.

Private Phil. Jensen's Lecture To-Morrow.

Under the Patronage of the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland. Private Phil Jensen is returning to give this extra lecture to oblige all those who were unable to hear him before. He is willing to speak, but his strength is not great. So we ask all to seize this opportunity of hearing him, and so help the hospitals to which he and so many of Newfoundland's sons already owe their lives, and in this way honour the men who, wounded and suffering, risked his life that another man might be rescued. Mrs. King will recite "The Day." Mrs. King will delight the audience with a patriotic song, and a new item, a duet by Private Gordon Green and Writer Ashworth, R. N., will add to the programme. The doors of the College Hall will be opened to-morrow evening at 7.30, the lecture beginning at 8.30 p.m.

McMurdo's Store News

TUESDAY, May 30, 1916. We wish to announce that, owing to the unprecedented state of the cabbage plants from Grove Hill, we are compelled temporarily to suspend the taking of orders for the Spring Cabbage Plants, and no more such orders can be considered this week. We shall have more in the course of a few days, and on Monday or at any rate, early next week, we hope to be able to resume the sale of these plants. We are still accepting orders for Cauliflower Plants, as well as for annuals—Pansies, Carnations, Foxgloves, etc.—and for Rose Trees. Take a bottle of Red Cross Oil north with you; it will relieve all kinds of aches and pains, and may save a good deal of suffering for you. Price 25c. a bottle.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Netta Malcolm Jones, Wife of Rev. Dr. Jones. At the lonely hour of midnight, When the moon was shining high And the gleaming stars were twinkling Through the clear ethereal sky Then it was the Master summoned Her pure soul with Him to be In the mansions of the Holy. There to dwell eternally. Now her worldly trials are over. Peacefully she here them all; She was ready and contented When upon her Death did call. She was kind and ever faithful As a mother and a wife, And her friends will sadly miss her Bright companionship, through life. To Him who rules the sky above us And the universe below; We must be sincere, subservient, He does all things best, we know. Every trial which Heaven sends us, We should take without allow; For they come disguised as blessings To prepare us for on high. To inspire our souls with courage, Like that dear departed one, Whom with God to-day is dwelling, And we've heard the glad "Well Done!" May her husband, in his sorrow, Be sustained to bear his loss, By the kind and loving Master Who for us had bore His Cross. And when this brief life is ended, May he meet with her once more, Where there is no sorrow reigning, On that bright and happy shore. JAMES MURPHY, St. John's, May 30, 1916.

Measles are very prevalent in town now, but fortunately of a mild type. Many people contend that this dangerous disease should be kept under check by quarantine as is the case with other contagious diseases. At the Presbyterian Sunday School yesterday Miss Ruth Duff, the four-year-old daughter of R. M. and Mrs. Duff, sang very touchingly that beautiful hymn, "Jesus Lover of my Soul." Miss Butt, the talented teacher, accompanying her on the organ. A number of waitresses visited the trout resorts on Wednesday last, Empire Day, but owing to the cold weather lately prevailing the "beauties" were scarce and small—many of them however would weigh a pound. Miss Annie Pike, of Carbonear, was in town Saturday, the guest of Miss S. Parsons. The schrs, Nelson and Peerless arrived from the bay last night. The former with coopers' lumber and the latter with fence stuf, etc., for Mr. E. Simmons. Tag Day at Harbour Grace was very successfully carried out and the handsome sum of $168.00 was realized. Mr. John Keefe arrived from Trinity last night in the schooner Margaret R., which schooner Mr. Keefe will prosecute the fishery in this summer. We wish him and all our other fishermen a most successful season. There is a fairly good sign of fish in the bay at present, but salmon is scarce. Constable M. Gronchy has been transferred to Holywood, and is now only waiting his final order to move with his family to his new station. Constable Gronchy is a most efficient officer, and we wish him much success in his new charge. People from Bryant's Cove are complaining of the disagreeable state of the road leading from the south side to the hill. The new Road Board, if it wants to make a good name for itself, had better attend to this and other bad places in the road. CORRESPONDENT. Hr. Grace, May 28, 1916. EMPLOYERS DISCUSS INCREASE

The Employers' Protective Association met at the Board of Trade Rooms at 1 p.m. to-day, to consider a request from the Coopers who are asking for an increase of wages ($2.75 a day); No definite action was taken, but we understand, and another meeting will be held. GOES TO HOSPITAL.—The ambulance was at the station to receive a young man named Bugden, 18 years of age, belonging to Smith Sound, T.B., who arrived on last night's express to enter hospital, suffering from tubercular hip. Mr. LeDrew, Cupids, also reached the city yesterday for medical treatment at the hospital.

DOOR BELL ANNOYANCE.

Despite the fact that three small boys were arrested for ringing door bells, and the severe manner in which the Court dealt with the matter, the nuisance is becoming intolerable in the vicinity of Springdale and New Gower Streets. Householders have secured the names of several boys, whose conduct in this respect will be dealt with by the police.

Obituary.

MRS. (DR.) JONES. There passed to her eternal rest after an illness of several years, Mrs. Netta Malcolm Jones, wife of the Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Thomas's Church and daughter of the late Dr. Malcolm, of Fogo. Death came not unexpected, as for many weeks the end was looked for at any moment. Not dead but sleeping, for death is vanquished and the life immortal reigns supreme. The sympathy and prayers of the congregation of St. Thomas's Church together with the members of many other churches throughout the country and a vast number of friends of other denominations will go out to the bereaved husband, mother and little ones in this their deep hour of mourning. But with the assurance that in the life hereafter they shall meet in God's Kingdom where none but happiness is known. The funeral will take place from St. Thomas's Rectory to-morrow afternoon.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them. A heavy "Cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phorotone Cough Cure" on hand. Stafford's Drug Store (Theatre Hill) is open every night from 7.30 to 9.30. The above preparation is manufactured only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld.

A Birthday Cake. How to Make One Which is a Real Cake. Weigh seven large eggs (fresh), take their weight in dry flour and a little sugar. Break the eggs, separate the yolks from the whites. Beat the former in a bowl, add the sugar to them very gradually, together with a little grated lemon rind, a spoonful of orange flower or rosewater or other suitable flavoring. Add the flour a little at a time and continue to beat the mixture for twenty minutes. Butter a mould, sprinkle powdered sugar upon the butter, and shake off all that will not adhere. Tie a strip of buttered paper round the top of the mould to keep the preparation from rolling down the sides while it is baked. Pour in the cake, three parts; fill the mould with it. When done enough let it stand a few minutes, shake it well to loosen it, turn it out carefully, cut it in slices when cool one-quarter of an inch thick, spread some jam over these and place five or six or more slices together, one on top of the other. Whisk together the whites of two or more eggs, according to size of cake; add half a pound of finely sifted sugar (to the eggs), a dessertspoonful of orange flower water. Whisk the mixture until quite smooth and spread it over the cake with the back of a spoon. Mark the shape of the piece into which it is afterward to be cut. Place the cake in a very cool oven to dry the icing. Time half an hour to prepare. Two or three drops of coloring will give it a rose tint. Send to table with lighted candles. Blazer stripes are used as trimmings on children's coats. A fashionable fantasy is a tulle frilled cape for summer wear.

NEW YORK, To-day. The majority of New York delegates to the Republican National Convention, favor the nomination of Justice Hughes for President, according to a statement given out to-night by Frederick C. Tanner, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and delegate at large. The canvass of the New York delegation just completed, shows a clear majority for Justice Hughes, Chairman Tanner declared. This notwithstanding the high regard for Senator Root's ability and experience, and in spite of Justice Hughes' refusal to take any part in the contest.

REDUCING OUTPUT OF BEER.

LONDON, To-day. The Commons yesterday, passed the second reading of the Bill which would reduce by fifteen per cent. the output of beer. The object of the Bill is to relieve the room in ships, required for importing foreign hops, unless the home-grown supply is insufficient to meet the requirements, when licenses for importation will be granted.

CREW AT ALGIERS.

ALGIERS, To-day. The crew of 26 men of the British steamer Trunkay, sunk by a submarine of unknown nationality, arrived here.

DUTCH VESSEL CAPTURED.

LONDON, To-day. A Berlin message received at Copenhagen, says the Exchange Telegraph's Copenhagen correspondent, reports the Dutch vessel Holland, was captured by a German warship and taken to Borkum Island. The despatch adds the vessel was arrested on suspicion of being engaged in spying.

BUDGET OF WAR NEWS.

LONDON, To-day. The Verdun region of France and in Southern Tyrol continue the theatres where the most sanguinary battles are taking place. While the Italians are holding back the Austrians from further advances and inflicting heavy losses on them in counter attacks in Tyrol, their German Allies have been able to make another gain and capture of about three hundred metres of French trenches northwest of the village of Cumieres, on the left bank of the Meuse near Verdun. Fighting of great intensity has been in progress around Hill 304 between Le Mort Homme and Cumieres, but except near Cumieres the vicious German onslaughts have all been set at naught by the vigorous counter-offensive of the French. In the sector east and west of Fort Douaumont and northeast, attacks were launched. Artillery on both sides have been busy along the remainder of the front in France and Belgium. In Tyrol the Austrians in Lagarina Valley, south of Posna torrent, threw heavy assaults against the Italian positions, but the Italians stood their ground and repulsed the attackers with considerable losses. On the Asiago Plateau, the men of two batteries which were surrounded on Monte Moseleto, by the Austrians, were relieved by the Italian regiment and their guns brought safely away. Except for a report from Petrograd that the Germans repeatedly bombarded the railway line east of Riga, no operation of moment has taken place on the Russian front. Minor successes have been obtained by the Russians over the Turks in Rivandou Sea region on the Caucasus front. Nothing new came through with regard to the manoeuvres of the Bulgars and Greeks in Macedonia, where important events are expected to transpire by reason of the west.

of the Bulgarian advance in Greek territory.

FEEDING THE GERMANS.

BERLIN, To-day. Feeding the masses of the population in large cities by means of central kitchens under municipal auspices, is the solution selected by the Government to meet the problem of food supply and the distribution during the period of the war. The President of the Food Regulation Board, Adolph Von Batocki, announced the ways and means to a committee of the Reichstag yesterday. The appropriations for the funds to assist the municipalities to organize and operate kitchens, would be immediately submitted to the Reichstag. The municipality of Schoeneberg, the second largest in the Berlin suburb, has already arranged to feed 30,000 persons by such institutions. Similar organizations for Berlin were called into life by a conference to-day, which was notable for the presence of two women, Frau Hedwig Hoyle, and Fraulein Landsberg, among the members of the conference.

HAIG PRAISES THE DEFENCE OF VERDUN.

LONDON, To-day. General Sir Douglas Haig, the Commander of the British forces in France and Belgium, in a despatch covering the operations of the British army in that territory from December 19th last when he took over command, until May 19th, pays a high tribute of praise to the French defence of Verdun. He says the only offensive effort made by the enemy on a great scale, was directed against our French Allies near Verdun. Fighting in that area has been prolonged and severe. The result has been worthy of the traditions of the French army and of their great service to the cause of the Allies. The efforts made by the army have caused him heavy losses both in men and prestige. He has made these sacrifices without gaining any advantage to counter balance them. During this struggle our troops have been in readiness to co-operate as they might be needed, but the only assistance asked for by our Allies was of an indirect nature, namely the relief of French troops on a portion of the Verdun front. This relief I was glad to be able to afford. Its execution on a considerable front, everywhere in close touch with the enemy, was a somewhat delicate operation, but it was carried out with complete success, thanks to the cordial co-operation and good-will of all ranks concerned, and lack of enterprise shown by the enemy during the relief. While no action comparable with that at Verdun has been fought on the British front, General Haig says the struggle has been continuous, that there have been many shares in the actions. There were sixty local actions during the period under review, at some of which, says General Haig, although individually insignificant in war on such an immense scale, would have been considered worthy of a separate despatch under different conditions. General Haig mentions the arrival of the Anzacs and South Africans and additional Canadian forces to France, and says this made possible the taking over of a greater extra front. He then tells of improvement in different branches of the army in health. In the armies, he says, the sick rate has been consistently low. There has been no serious epidemic. Enteric fever has almost entirely disappeared owing to the preventive measures and energetically carried out. The despatch closes with a tribute to Field Marshal Viscount French, who, says General Haig, in starting the war with our small Expeditionary Force, faced an army far superior in numbers and fully prepared for this great campaign. During the long anxious time needed for the improvisation of the comparatively large force now serving in this country, generally he overcame all difficulties, before laying down the responsibility. He had the satisfaction of seeing the balance of the advantage swing steadily in our favor and these who served under him appreciate the greatness of his achievement.

Germany's Commercial Fleet

London Telegraph.—What action is Great Britain to take in order to safeguard its commercial fleet? The German merchant navy was first able to raise its head when, under the treaty of 1824, Prussia obtained exemptions from the provisions of the British Navigation Laws. Treitschke went so far as to describe that treaty as "the first real blow struck at the balldark of British sea supremacy since the restoration of peace." Our yards afterwards built vessels to German order under German flag, and the inspectors returning home to become the pioneers of the German shipbuilding industry which was based on Canadian practice. In the early days of active German emigration, the shipowners carried over the Atlantic emigrants at the market price, and brought back tobacco and cotton in free charge. By similar methods trade and shipping were fostered in all parts of the world. The Germans are laying plans to-day for regaining that "place in the sun" which they had already attained when war broke out. It behoves us to be on our guard.

The Spirit of France

New York Herald.—The greatest thing in the world to-day, the most inspiring and the most uplifting, is the spirit of France. For all that Americans hold most dear the men and the women and even the children of France are fighting. They are fighting, and as one man, to drive an invader from their land. They are fighting for liberty—the same liberty that people who so long have kept the torch of liberty burning in Europe. They are fighting for republicanism as they fought side by side with our forefathers for the establishment of republicanism on this continent in the war that brought this republic into existence. Whatever we may owe to our peoples, as Americans we owe most to the people of France, to whose sympathy and assistance this nation is indebted for its being. With the same splendid courage they have shown upon the battlefields in defence of their beloved land the sons of France—all who can—will face the problems of life when peace comes. There will be many who can do nothing for themselves. They are the hopelessly crippled. It is to aid in the care of these that this fund will be used.

WAR ON ECONOMY BATTLE GROUND.

HAMBURG, To-day. Albert Ballin, War minister of the German railroads and Director of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, characterized the war as the greatest, bloodiest and most ideologic war of all time. In an address delivered to-day at a general meeting of the Woermann Shipping Company, Herr Ballin declared the German shipping interests, after the successful termination of the war, must be prepared to conduct a new war on the economy battle ground, against competitors extraordinarily strengthened by war profits of fantastic height.

British Officers Trained For Front in Four Months.

Army Gets Highest Class of Men — Artists' Rifles Contribute Officers Overnight — Millionaires Work as Common Soldiers — College Men Prominent.

London, April 24.—Lord Charles Berosford once informed me, with considerable certainty, that it takes eight years to train an officer. If he is not already aware of the fact, I could now take him to a place where an efficient officer is created in four months.

There are several such establishments scattered through England. The one I was privileged by the War Office to visit is situated within 20 miles of London. Its official title is the Artists' Rifles Cadet Unit. Before the war the Artists' Rifles were one of the crack battalions of the territorial army. The men were drawn from the upper middle class and their pride was their esprit de corps and their efficiency. Most of its members were fairly well to do. But money counted for nothing. Merely amateur and inefficient soldiers were not wanted.

A few months after the outbreak of war the Artists were sent to the front. They did their turn in the trenches. Then came the battle of Ypres, when the British army suffered its heaviest losses. The 7th Division in particular had been almost cut to pieces. Some regiments had scarcely an officer left.

Artists Filled the Gap.

General French sent across to the Artists and asked the colonel if he could supply fifty officers from among his men. Without any trouble the colonel made his selection. In their "Tommies" uniforms the men went and took charge of the units assigned them and they made good. The next week fifty more were asked for and sent. A week or two afterward the Artists were taken from the trenches and turned into an officers' training corps for turning out trained officers in the shortest possible time.

At present one battalion of the Artists trains men in France. There is a further detachment in London. Another battalion is stationed near here at their headquarters in a hut camp. About 200 of them live in an old Elizabethan mansion. Others in groups of twenty occupy vacant new "art" houses in a new "Garden City." They are fed like fighting cocks and, on the whole, their quarters are enviable.

All join as privates. They are dressed like the ordinary recruit and largely treated as such, whatever they may have formerly been used to. Discipline is of the strictest. For the first week or two it is probably likewise the majority. But then this battalion is schooled on two principles. The first is that only the man who has learned to obey without thinking and without finching can secure obedience from other men. The other is that the corps must be self-supporting. If a hut has to be built or some engineering work performed, it must be done by men of the regiment. This is not difficult, because every profession is represented. But just as an instance, I saw a lecture hall constructed at a cost of $600—the price of the material—which ordinarily would have cost three times as much.

The Battalion and the School.

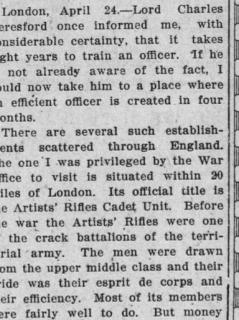

For general training purposes the unit is divided into the "battalion" and the "school." The former consists of four companies, each of some half dozen platoons graded according to progress. The best platoon in each company is known as the "probationary platoon" and consists of the best trained men, who are put through musketry courses, machine gun instruction, range finding, etc. Before a cadet can be admitted to the "school" he must pass through this probationary platoon and be finally approved and recommended by his company commander. He is then drafted to the school for the further training that will benefit him for commission. The usual time spent in the battalion is nine weeks and in the school six weeks.

In the school men are taught trench and open fighting, map making, topography and the numerous small things that go nowadays toward the training of an officer. Naturally, in a course such as this, almost everything depends on the instructors. I found these of exceptional quality. This major in command of the school is a professional soldier who has seen service in many parts of the world and made his profession his life's study. Other officers mainly comprise those Millionaires as Privates.

Much could be written about the types that go to make up a corps of this kind. A private was working in a garden attached to one of his houses. An officer remarked that this soldier was worth nearly $5,000,000 in hard cash. We were driven about all day in a very up-to-date automobile by an orderly. Incidentally I discovered the car was his own. Some discussion arose about the age of the Elizabethan mansion. "Ask Sergeant Mace to come," said an officer. Sergeant Mace came and delivered a little archaeological disquisition. Some one mentioned later that he held an important position at the Metropolitan Museum until the war broke out and had been in charge of the Museum's excavation work in Egypt for some years.

Peace With Victory Only, Says Briand.

Paris, May 22.—"Peace can only come through a decisive Allied victory," Premier Briand told a delegation from the Russian Duma to-day. "The Allies can regard the future with confidence," said the French Prime Minister. "Peace must not result from diplomatic intrigue but can come only through a decisive Allied victory, which alone can and will restore recognition of international law and right."

Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen

FIGHTING FOR THEIR KING. Faith! what is all this bother that belies the Irish name? That says we've turned our backs on right, and bowed our heads to shame? Go tell this truth for Ireland's sake till hills and valleys ring: Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King!

'Tis true that in the olden days the Saxon sword and fire Swept thru the fields of emerald green and slaughter the red and sire; But St. Patrick taught the Irish that forgiveness is the thing. So Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King!

We love old Ireland's golden harp a-setting in its green. We love the songs of Tara's halls, the smile of sweet colleen; But to save our sacred liberty from the Teuton's savage spring, Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King!

When Scotsmen and Australians and brave Canadians, too, King! Are mingling with Old England's sons to fight for what is true; Sure Ireland will not stand aside, so wide this message fling: Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King!

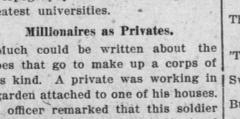

And when her fighting blood is up, she spurs the rebel brood That keeps alive the bloody past, the Ireland on the Road, And with-undaunted bravery she joins the Iron Ring. Where Three Hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King!

From Belfast Town to Skibbereen, from Connemara's Hills To Limerick and Donegal and sweet Killarney's hills, "The King!" Tell every loyal Irish heart to catch the lilt and sing: Three hundred Thousand Irishmen are fighting for their King! —W. B. Rogers Taylor, in the "New York Sun."

"Engineers know how to get the best work out of their engines and they have learned that it pays to take care of the machine. Man's digestive apparatus is more delicate and complicated than any machine and yet he treats it with indifference, neglect, and even contempt. He uses it without trying to understand it and blames everything but himself if it gets out of order."—Ellen Richards.

"It's too much bother to get myself a lunch when I'm alone," says a neighbor of mine. "I just nibble a cracker when I feel faint."

She is an anaemic-looking person and she is always bewailing the fact that she cannot accomplish as much as some of her energetic friends.

"There's no use talking," she says sometimes, "I haven't got the strength."

Where Does She Think Strength Would Come From.

Of course she hasn't. Where should she get it? She eats next to no breakfast and no lunch. Would an engineer expect to be able to take his engine on a long run with half the coal usually used for the distance.

She seems to think her lack of strength is something constitutional and inevitable. It is simply lack of fuel.

A relative of mine is the other side of the picture. She always gets up a tempting, well-seasoned meal even when she is alone and sits down and eats it with leisurely relish. Not long ago she underwent a serious operation. When she was out of danger the doctor said to her, "There are mighty few people who would have come out of that. You owe your life to the fact that you have always eaten regularly and well."

Mothers Are Apt To Neglect Themselves.

The habit of careless eating is one that mothers especially are addicted to. Not only do they fail to get good meals when they are alone, but when they eat with the family they destroy their appetite and digestion by taking all the least appetizing food. Or they are so anxious to see the others properly helped that they neglect themselves. In the long run this is not kindness to the children, for whatever means loss of strength and efficiency for the mother means loss of some sort for the child.

No one knows better than I what it is not to want to eat, but I think it is just as much our duty to keep efficient by eating enough as by abstaining from alcohol. There are times when it seems as if a trap door closed in my throat after I have eaten a few mouthfuls. That means not that I do not need the food, but that I need more rest and outdoor air. It also means that I must try and eat or drink something nourishing, for if I let one meal time go by without eating enough I shall be faint by the next meal and have even more aversion to food.

Of course there are a great many people who eat too much. Needless to say this is not for them, but for those who do not eat enough and who do not realize that giving the human engine enough fuel to keep it efficient is a duty.

Tonight the League will meet for the purpose of receiving an application from a new team for admission into the League and to consider a large amount of other business as well. Whilst most of the teams have been depleted on account of enlistments, we understand that four of last year's teams have again decided to enter the arena. This number in addition to the proposed new club makes a total of five. The season's fixtures will be drawn up shortly. Practices are now being held by the respective teams each evening.

The Municipal Bill

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE MEET.

The ninth regular meeting of the Citizens' Committee was held in the Board of Trade Rooms last night. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

A communication from the Colonial Secretary guaranteeing payment of bills accrued by the Citizens' Committee was read; also a letter from the Secretary of the Municipal Board forwarding plans of the city as outlined in the new bill. Sub-committee on Sections 10 and 11 reported progress. Sub-committee on legal advice dealing with Section 1 reported progress.

Mr. Mews proposed that a memo. of the following be sent to the Truckman's and Cabman's Unions asking their opinion on same:—

Section 8.—Nuisances shall include:— "Salt or any matter placed on any street which works an injury to horses or other animals, or which hinders anyone from pursuing his lawful occupation in a free and satisfactory manner."

Discussion on the new Bill was then taken up. Sections 24 to 29 was considered. After much diversity of opinion it was decided that the Citizens' Committee stands for paying Mayor and Councillors salaries, the Mayor to get $1,000 and the Councillors $500 per annum. It was also the opinion of the Citizens' Committee that the matter of forfeiture of salaries for being absent from Council meetings be left in the hands of the Councillors themselves.

The matter of allowing Councillors, members of firms, to contract for work under the city's control was deferred.

The meeting closed at 10:30 to meet again Thursday evening.

GOES TO STRAITS.—The S. S. Diana leaves here to-morrow for the Belle Isle Straits, bringing along Grant's fishing crews.

Salmonier High Liner.

Good fishing continues to be had on the Cape St. Mary's grounds. Salmonier crews, we learn, are high-liners to date. One crew had 200 qtls. of cod landed up to Saturday last. What accounts for the excellent fishing is that herrings are in abundance daily and inconspicuous fishermen are able to secure a plentiful bait supply.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Should a widow use her husband's initials or name or her own on her cards?" asked the young widow.

"Legally, a widow has no right to use her husband's initials or name, but public sentiment is in favor of allowing her to do so," said her social mentor.

McKENNA'S RESOLUTION.

LONDON, May 29.

In the Commons to-day, Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moved a resolution of which he gave notice last week, the purpose of which is to compel the sale to the Government under the mobilization plan of American securities hitherto withheld by their owners.

McKenna's measure imposes an additional income tax of two shillings to the pound on American securities, exempting the American market. The Government measure imposes an additional income tax of two shillings to the pound on American securities, exempting the American market.

resolution was applicable to any foreign securities, but that the Treasury must be willing to buy a security before it could be affected by a tax.

William Watson, Rutherford, Unionist, said that the tax was sheer robbery, and he declared the tax not for revenue, but for punishment.

He said the Government should be honest and bring in a bill compelling the sale of securities. That would be coercive, but not mean.

Sir Frederick Banbury, Unionist, denounced the Chancellor's proposal as a very modest one. These were times when it was not possible nor desirable to draw nice distinctions about equality and sacrifice.

Unless the war was prosecuted vigorously there would be equality of ruin for all.

WILL ACT WHEN REQUESTED.

BERNE, May 29.

The Budapest Assesta, a copy of which has been received here, publishes a despatch from its Madrid correspondent in which Premier Roumanous is quoted as having said concerning peace proposals, that Spain desires to see an end of the war, but the hour for negotiations has not yet arrived.

We will gladly contribute to the re-establishment of peace if we are invited to do so by belligerent powers.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

LONDON, May 29.

An official statement was issued by the War Office to-day, as follows: Brigadier General Northey, commanding the British forces in the northern borders of Rhodesia and Nyassaland, reports that on Thursday he advanced twenty miles into German territory on the whole front between Lakes Nyassa and Tanganyika.

The enemy retired from Spianana twenty-one miles north of Karomka Impaba, and eighteen miles northeast of Fort Hill, towards Langenberg. The South African Nyassaland troops bridged and crossed Songale River during the night. General Smuts reports that the railway station and lines have been occupied by a column of his troops moved down the Tangarie River, by way of Marago Opuni, 18 miles S.W. of Sara.

CASEALTIES FROM SEA AND AIR.

LONDON, May 29.

In the attacks on the British Isles from the sea and air during the war, 2,156 persons were killed or wounded, and the number of deaths was 559.

These figures were given out in the Commons to-day by Herbert L. Samuel, Home Secretary, as follows: In three attacks from sea 61 men, 40 women and 40 children were killed, and 611 persons injured. In 44 air raids 222 men, 114 women and 73 children were killed, and 1,005 persons injured. The number of soldiers and sailors killed is only comparatively small, and but a fraction of the total.

GERMAN ASSAULTS FAIL.

PARIS, May 29.

Two attacks were made by German troops advancing last night from Corbeaux Wood, on the Verdun front. The French War Office report of to-day says that these assaults resulted in failure. East of the Meuse the night was comparatively calm, except for heavy artillery action in the vicinity of Vaux. Fifteen aerial encounters occurred, and two German machines were brought down, one of them falling in flames.

CLOSING IN THE GERMANS.

LONDON, May 29.

The British, Belgians and Portuguese, who have invaded German East Africa, are slowing but surely forming a ring around the Germans, while General Smuts, Boer Commander of the South African forces, is rounding up the Germans who are defending the Usambara railway, and has occupied one of the important stations on that line as well as other towns in the district. According to an official report issued to-day, a British force has penetrated twenty miles into German territory on the front between Lakes Nyassa and Tanganyika. The Germans have retreated toward New Langenberg. The Belgians are advancing from the northeast and Portuguese troops are occupying the southern frontier.

BRITISH CONSULAR OFFICERS WARNED.

WASHINGTON, May 29.

British consular officers in the United States have been instructed and warned by the British Embassy to avoid being drawn into anything that might be construed as interference with American politics with the approach of the national elections.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 29.

South of Roye in Beauvaisnes district our artillery destroyed the first line German works. On the left bank of the Meuse both artilleries were very active during the night. Our curtain and infantry fires completely shattered a German attack debouching from Crows Wood at 7 p.m. yesterday. A second attack, launched in the same district at midnight, also failed. On the right bank of the Meuse it was relatively a quiet night, except in Vaux Fort district, where very sharp artillery action occurred.

In Lorraine we shattered a German strong reconnoitering party in rocky forest. Yesterday our aviators engaged German planes in fifteen attacks. Two of the latter were brought down, one falling in flames near Monthois on the border of Argonne; the other fell in the region of Mifontaine, north of Berry au Bac. During an experimental flight one of our aviators was attacked north of the Aisne by a German fighter, which fired at him over a thousand cartridges. Under this rain of projectiles, and although his machine was riddled with bullets, our pilot succeeded in reaching our lines, chased by his adversary. A French plane flying at full speed, opened fire at a distance of less than thirty metres on the German machine, which fell in the vicinity of Bourgoigne, west of the Meuse. On the left bank of the Meuse our armoured biplanes brought down two German machines. The first fell north of Avoucourt and the second fell in the direction of Forges.

PRESIDENT HILL DEAD.

James J. Hill is dead.

Gas Co's Annual Meeting.

The Seventy-second Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the St. John's Gas Light Company was held yesterday in the Board of Trade Council Room, 2407 Shares out of 4000 being represented by the Shareholders present.

The results of the year's business were much more satisfactory than the previous year, there being a substantial increase in gas sales and sales of residuals, Fittings, and Gas Stoves, etc., also showed a good increase. A promising feature was the large reduction in leakage from mains, which was only half that of the previous year.

A substantial amount was placed to reserve out of the year's earnings, the balance being carried forward.

In view of the existing high freight rates, which will involve a large additional expenditure this ensuing year, and the uncertainty as to the duration of adverse conditions resulting from the war, especially the difficulty of obtaining tonnage except at extremely high rates, the Directors recommend that no dividend be paid for the past year.

The management of the Gas Works by Mr. F. M. Ruggles had been very satisfactory, and the results obtained as good as could have been expected, under adverse conditions. The use of Sydney coals during February and March upset normal conditions, and made it difficult to maintain a good supply of gas to the city.

The S. S. Kilmount is now discharging 2,500 tons of Pennsylvania Gas Coal for the Company.

The same Directors were re-elected, viz.:—Sir E. R. Bowring, President; J. W. Withers, Vice-President; W. H. Pennie, Secretary and Managing Director; James B. Selator, John S. Munn, Hugh Baird, A. S. Rendell.

A New Novel by a New Writer.
 The Honey Pot by Countess Barycynka. It is a story of the stage, and never perhaps have the expectations and disappointments of the aspirant for a successful stage career been more naturally described. Two girls, Maggie and Lexie, hold the interest throughout. They are excellently contrasted. Maggie, the daughter of an actress, having been associated with the stage from her earliest childhood and influenced by its freedom, while Lexie has been brought up in refinement and wants a career for the use of her talent. It is not too much to say that Maggie, the lovable and loving girl who, with all her worldly wisdom, falls a prey to the man who captures her fancy, is a triumph of characterization. Natural and human, she is the heart of the book; but hardly less interesting is Lexie's stubborn fight with its happy ending and the many intimate pictures of the life of the chorus girl. The whole story rings true. Paper, 65c.; Cloth, 90c.
