The Imprisoned Heiress
—OR—
The Spectre of Edremont.

CHAPTER IV.

He was the only son of a widow, who dwelt with him in a small cottage at the farther end of the forest. His position as under-forester had been procured for him by Donald Kay, who had from his earliest boyhood made him the object of his care. Although the Widow Kepp had managed to earn a comfortable subsistence by doing needle-work for the housekeeper at "the great house," as Egremont mansion was termed, yet Donald Kay had insisted upon sending the lad to school with Jessy, who was four years the senior of Kepp, and had always acted toward him the part of a guardian.

"Won't you give me an answer, Jessy," persisted Kepp, as the coquettish maiden pretended to count the stitches upon her needle.

In the depth of her soul Jessy loved her suitor, but she delighted to plague him. At last, seeing that he was becoming angry, she gave a half-reluctant consent to marry him, and he at once brought the matter before the girl's father.

Kay looked from one to the other of the young couple, and then deliberately arose, knocked the ashes from his pipe, laid the latter upon the wooden shelf, and said:

"This is all nonsense, Gosman. Jess don't care for you."

"How do you know that, father?" interrupted his daughter. "I know who I like, and who I don't like."

"But you don't always know what's best for you," returned her father. "I thought you cared for Gosman only as a sister cares for a brother, and here you are wanting to marry. It can't be—it can't be!"

The face of the under-forester flushed deeply as he said:

"But why not, Mr. Kay? You can't refuse me because I'm not as respectable as any young man. I've saved my wages, and have something laid by for wife and bairns when they come. I am steady—"

"I know all that, my boy. But you can't marry my Jess."

"Did I ever do anything to make you think ill of me, Mr. Kay?"

"Never. You are a lad after my own heart."

"Then you refuse me for a son-in-law because my father ran away from my mother twenty years ago, and has never come back? You blame me because he deserted his home? Perhaps you think I should run away from Jessy—"

"I will not give Gosman up for a mere whim of yours, father," said Jessy, firmly, her coquettishness vanishing. "I will wait for him for years, if need be, but I shall not give him up."

Her lover thanked her by an ardent and grateful look.

"If you marry Gosman Kepp," said the forester, sternly, raising his arm menacingly, "you will do so with my curse upon your head. There is a great gulf between you and him, which nothing can ever bridge, and so sure as you attempt to cross it, my bitterest curse shall be upon you both! You shall both be cursed in health and possessions, in the children you may have and in each other! I would a thousand times rather lay my girl in her grave than see her the wife of Gosman Kepp!"

An impressive silence followed, the young couple being too astonished and terror-stricken to speak, but it was broken at last by the forester, who took down his cap from a peg on which it hung, placed it on his head, and left the house.

"What could he mean, Gosman?" said the girl, in a frightened tone, as she crept nearer her lover.

"I don't know," answered Kepp, half stupefied. "Did you see how wild his look was? He was in earnest, and I'm afraid you'll submit to this unjust will, Jessy."

"Never!" cried the girl. "I can't marry you now, Gosman, for I can't disobey my father. But I will try to win his consent, and I'll wait for you all my life, if need be!"

"Heaven bless you for the promise, Jessy! And you will plight me your troth?"

Jessy assented and her lover drew from his pocket a bent sixpence. This he broke in half, giving one piece to the girl. She put it in her bosom, and he placed his near his heart.

This simple act was regarded by each as a solemn seal of their betrothal.

At this juncture the sound of horses' hoofs resounded upon the wintry air, and the young couple hastened to the door, and went upon the veranda, as a party of riders came up and stopped in front of the cottage.

The party comprised Lord and Lady Egremont, their ward, and their guests, followed at a little distance by several grooms.

"Your name is Gosman Kepp, is it not?" asked the earl, abruptly, of the under-forester.

"It is, my lord," was the response, and Kepp shrank back a little from a superior world.

The earl beckoned to one of the grooms in advance of the rest, and he rode up with the gun Lord Ashcroft had captured, and deposited it on the veranda, and then retreated.

"Is that your weapon?" demanded Lord Egremont.

Kepp hesitated a moment, and answered confusedly in the affirmative.

"You acknowledge it, then?"

"Yes, my lord."

"Permit me to observe to your lordship," said Lord Ashcroft, in an undertone, riding up to the earl, "that the man might not have intended to take my life yesterday. It has occurred to me this morning that the shot may have been fired by accident, and that the man took to flight through fear rather than guilt."

"But that theory will not account for the obstructions."

"True, my lord. They cannot be accounted for, except upon the hypothesis that evil was intended. Still, if you please, I would like to have the young man questioned gently. He has not a bad countenance."

"Frequently the worst people are masked under the guise of virtue," said the earl, quoting one of those trite observations he admired. "Still I will act upon your ladyship's suggestion."

Lyle Indor drew nearer with the Lady Alexina, and the earl, turning to the surprised under-forester, said: "You probably know how this weapon came into my possession, Kepp. It was picked up by Lord Ashcroft when he pursued you yesterday, after you shot at him. We would like to hear any explanations you can make about the matter."

"Picked up? Pursued?" muttered the accused. "I do not understand you, my lord."

"Perhaps I had better refresh your memory," said the earl, with ironic emphasis. "You will need, perhaps, to be informed that some distinguished guests arrived at Egremont yesterday; that obstructions were placed across the road running through the corner of the wood, to impede their progress; that, when their progress was thus impeded, a shot was fired from the wood at Lord Ashcroft, who narrowly escaped with his life."

Kepp looked blankly at Lord Egremont, and Jessy gazed upon her lover as though she would read his soul.

"Perhaps, also," continued the earl, in the tone he had before used, "you would like to recall how the carriage stopped, and Lord Ashcroft sprang out in pursuit of the villain who had fired upon him; how the man fled, dropping his gun—the very gun you have just acknowledged as your own."

"I didn't fire," said the under-forester; "I did not obstruct the road. Why should your lordship suspect me?"

"Your gun convicts you. The gun has been acknowledged by you, and who should have carried it but the owner?"

The usually ruddy face of the under-forester grew quite colorless, and he faltered:

"How could I know your lordship's guests were expected? What object could I have had in shooting Lord Ashcroft?"

"That is what we wish to discover. You know very well that Lord Ashcroft was expected, for I sent word to Kay to have the wood in perfect order because of the expected arrival."

The knees of the accused shook under him, and becoming conscious of Jessy's astonishment, he turned away his face.

"What have you to say to all this?" demanded the earl, after waiting several minutes in vain for an answer.

"—I lent the gun yesterday," said Kepp, huskily.

London Letter

By PANTON HOUSE for the Canadian Press.

London, Oct. 25.—After 119 years, Trafalgar Day is still faithfully kept by the British Empire in London, the heart of the Empire. Wreaths are laid each 21st of October, on Nelson's tomb in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral, and on his monument in the great church above, but the Nelson Column in Trafalgar Square is the real centre of the celebration.

Probably no object in the whole of London is so impossible for the visitor to miss as is the column. In the first place, it stands in "the finest site in Europe;" in the second, it is the third highest monument in London, standing, (with the statue on its summit) 170 feet high, as compared with the Albert Memorial, 115 and "The" memorial's 202. England took her time over the erection of this tribute to her greatest sailor's memory; the column itself was not completed until 1843—38 years after his death. The bronze reliefs, one on each side of the base, were added between 1849 and 1852, and Landseer's bronze lions in 1867.

On October 21 this year the base and plinth of the column were decorated as usual with ropes of laurel, and hung and piled with flowers from all parts of Great Britain and the Empire. There were wreaths among them tied with the national colors of France and Spain, our friends of to-day and chivalrous enemies of 1805. Conspicuous among the tributes were wreaths from practically every big ship of his Majesty's Navy, in most of which a cap-ribbon was a characteristic feature; from the Dominion Governments, and from many branches, here and elsewhere, of the Navy League.

From "the government and people of Canada" and from Newfoundland came two 4-foot circles, the first of single scarlet chrysanthemums, with a great bunch of scarlet gladioli, large white incurved chrysanthemums and white heather; the second of white trumpet lilies and incurved chrysanthemums, with a bunch of scarlet carnations at each side, and a bar of smaller white flowers bearing the word "Newfoundland" picked out in violets. Sam Harris, president of the Navy League of Canada, himself brought a maple leaf of pink semi-single dahlias with a centre of pink roses and rubrum lilies.

A six-foot anchor of laurel leaves came from the descendants of officers who fought at Trafalgar. The Wellington (N.Z.) branch of the Navy League had sent a bouquet of 13 kinds of flowers and berries (called lilies predominating) gathered in New Zealand in July, and frozen in a block of ice.

HORSE-SHOES AS RENT.

"What I like about London," said the Canadian friend who has already been quoted in these letters, "it has live fossils." He was not being rude to the inhabitants of this imperial city, but expressing his pleasure in the many little ceremonies and institutions, which are still full of vitality although hundreds of years old. He was delighted to learn the original use of the red line on the carpet of the House of Commons, which no member is allowed to overstep when speaking from the front row. Within that line a speaker is supposed to be out of sword's reach of honourable members on the benches opposite!

This week the Corporation of the City of London sent a representative to the Law Courts, to pay to the King's Remembrancer certain "quit rents" due to the Crown, namely two bundles of faggots and six horse-shoes. The faggots are due in respect of a piece of land in Shropshire; the horse-shoes for a tenement called "the Forge" believed to have been in the neighborhood of Milford Lane, Strand, and originally granted by King Henry III. about 1235, to one, Walter le Brun, a farmer. The exact situation of Walter's forge has long been built over and forgotten, but the quit rent of six horse-shoes is still solemnly paid—and handed back! The shoes used in the ceremony are nearly as old as the original grant.

Rents even queerer than these are rendered to the Crown to this day by tenants of manors all over England. The Duke of Atholl holds certain lands on condition that he presents the Sovereign with a white rose when called upon; the Munros of Foulis are bound to tender a snowball when the King requires it.

MONKEY VERSUS POLICE AND OTHERS.

Camberwell, a suburb of South London, has been terrorized for some days (and the rest of London amused) by the exploits of a large monkey. Occupying a strong position among the pinnacles and recesses of a church roof, he is defying the whole of London, and living very comfortably on his thievings from shops and larders. Once he was actually enticed into a pigeon-trap, but while the owner ran for the police, the intelligent simian put out a "hand," pulled the string of the trap-door, and escaped. He has already stripped a greenhouse of its grapes, and the other night took a hand in the General Election, pelting the speaker at an open-air meeting with several old tin cans. Thrice shot at, he has escaped unhurt; but Camberwell is getting tired of the joke, and a more systematic campaign will probably be organized by the police.

PLACING THE BLAME.

Once I was a village grocer selling things by pounds a n d quarts, and the sheriff he drew drew closer, with his warrants, writs and torts. "I'll be busted soon," I muttered, "and that is no idle dream; and my bread will not be buttered, and my tea will have no cream. Ruined by the Wall Street robbers I must to the poorhouse go; it would take a prince of duffers to depict my load of woe." Later on I failed at farming in the sad old days of yore, and with majesty alarming came the sheriff to my door. And I charged my tribulations to the heartless, idle rich; "Oh, those Wall Street machinations dump the poor man in the ditch. And his lot cannot be bettered while the barons scheme and prance; till the Wall Street wolves are fettered, honest merit has no chance." Having failed in all I tackled, I approached the poorhouse door, and the barons were unshackled, and the wolves kept up their roar. In a mood of deep depression I began to see the truth; Wall Street was a fool obsession that had ruined me from youth. And since then I have succeeded in whatever work I do; I have pep when pep is needed, I have vim in every throw. I have found the Wall Street sinners do not hinder me a bit; they are glad to welcome winners, glad to see one make a hit. On my industry relying, I have journeyed to success; had I guess.

OWNER OF STOLEN CAR APPEALING AGAINST JUDGMENT OF LOWER COURT.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 30.—The sad tale of an American automobile owner whose car was stolen from his garage in Rhode Island two years ago and who, after recovering possession of it, is required by the Courts to pay more than it is worth in engaging the attention of the Appellate Division here.

James E. McKenna was the unfortunate owner. He discovered his car in the possession of J. H. Prieur, notary, of Alexandria who had purchased it in April, 1923 from Isaac Hope for $1,700.

Isaac Hope had purchased it the preceding December for $1,400 from an automobile mart in Montreal.

McKenna reprieved his car, giving security. He then entered action against Prieur and Hope to secure the return of his car and $1,000 damages, as damages.

Last July, Mr. Justice Lennox gave judgment in which he pointed out

ZAGLOUL RECONSIDERS.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 16. Zagloul Pasha to-day withdrew his resignation as Premier which was presented in the Chamber of Deputies Saturday. Students left their books yesterday and joined with thousands of other persons who ceased work to parade the streets cheering Zagloul. Numerous political speeches were made urging the party leaders to proceed to the Palace and beg the King not to accept the Premier's resignation. One crowd of demonstrators attacked the premises of Al Kashymel, a comic illustrated weekly, which has consistently caricatured Zagloul and his colleagues, and wrecked the plant and set fire to the paper supplies in the building.

GETTING READY FOR ARMAMENT CONFERENCE.

GENEVA, Nov. 16. Preparations for the proposed International Conference for the reduction of armaments were advanced a step yesterday when the military and permanent military commissions of the League of Nations selected the countries which will furnish six experts to sit with the special commissions that are to help in framing the agenda of the Arms Conference. France and Italy will each appoint a military representative, Great Britain and Japan a naval representative, and Brazil and Spain an air expert. Czechoslovakia, Sweden and Belgium will each furnish one substitute delegate for each of the above three groups. The Military Commission drew up a preliminary category of military and civil experts from which will be chosen the Commissions which will later conduct the investigation of the armaments situation in Germany and other central powers under the Treaty of Versailles.

LONDON, Nov. 15. Attention of the Baldwin Cabinet will be drawn at its meeting next Wednesday to the arbitration protocol of the League of Nations, the difficulties in connection with which have not been lessened by the revival on the continent of discussion of the proposed pact between Great Britain, Belgium and France. As has been pointed out in several directions, foreign comment on the relations between Britain and continental nations too often overlooks the part which the British Dominions must play in the settlement of Britain's foreign policy.

Produce and Provisions

(Trade Review.)

Codfish—Owing to the strike dried codfish operations were at a standstill along the waterfront all the week as far as export was concerned. Most of the schooners that arrived from the outports with cargoes had the fish not only discharged by their own crews, but also culled and barrowed and taken to the merchants' stores. In some cases it was even packed in casks and made ready for shipment. The only schooner that got away from St. John's was the Hazel Trahey, loaded with 3,600 qts. by the agents of Lazo & Co., Seville. From the outports the following is the week's record—Schr. Faustina from Penny & Sons, Ramas, with 3,300 qts. for Halifax; schr. Frank L. Spindler to Lunenburg with 4,250 qts. loaded at Twillingate by E. Mack; C. H. Rasmussen for Oporto with 3,150 qts. shore, loaded by the Nfld. Labrador Export Co.; schr. Hennada at Exploits to Lunenburg with 2,958 qts., loaded by J. C. Ellis; S.S. Stella Maris also took 26 qts. to Halifax from Sandy Point for Farquhar & Co. The prices are keeping up well in the local and foreign markets. Oporto consumption increased to 7,357 qts. for the week as against 4,572 the previous week. Norwegian and Danish holdings are dropping off there, and the week ending Nov. 10th were down to 8,714 qts. Newfoundland fish will hold the market from now on, and the stocks there are not extensive, namely, 34,629 qts. on Nov. 10th. This looks healthy for maintenance of good prices. The Mediterranean markets are also keeping up, and the well recognized condition of fish shortage will likely keep Spain, Greece and Italy in line for the present prices.

Common Cod Oil—The market continues to be characterized by a steady tone, and prices maintained at full values referred to recently. Offerings for future shipments are very small, and there is every appearance of coming to an end at an early date. The supply of Menhaden oil is said to be unusually small and prices much firmer. For some reason the fish are remaining in very deep water where the fishing fleet cannot follow. The catches so far will not equal the expense of operation. With such facts in view it is not surprising that the tendency is to advance prices.

Cod Liver Oil—This is the season when the manufacturing chemists are preparing their stocks for winter requirements. Enquiries are numerous, but the difficulty is to get a paying price. The competition of the Norwegian oil will leave no margin for refiners. The time has come when a thorough advertising of the merits of the genuine Newfoundland cod liver oil is in order, and the substitution by competitors of the inferior species such as the livers from haddock, hake and pollock shown up in its right colours. This could be done at small cost by an official organization, and the sooner measures are taken the better will it help this industry.

Pork—Pork continues to be scarce and latest quotations from the packing houses show an increase in values of $2.50 to $3.00 per barrel. This, together with the impending advance in freight rates and strike expenses in the local market, is going to bring all the leading brands up over the $35 level later on. Quotations to-day are $31.75 for Fat Back and S. C. Clear; $23.50 for Ham Butt, and Spare Ribs $29 per barrel.

Beef—The beef market continues quiet and steady at last week's prices, but if pork advances it is likely that beef will follow in sympathy with that market, a circumstance which generally happens. The local market is well supplied. Every steamer that has arrived from New York the past month brought fair consignments of this commodity. The prices, wholesale, in the local market to-day are: Bos Plank, $27; ex Family, $24; Family Special and Boneless, $21.75; and Plate Beef, $21.

Sugar—British refiners are putting beet sugar on the market much cheaper than the Cuban cane sugar handled by the United States and Canadian refiners. As a result of this the Acadia refinery at Halifax is closed down temporarily. Some of the smaller U.S. refiners have also closed awaiting the new Cuban crop and cheaper "raws." The European beet crop was very large this season hence the killing competition with Cuban sugar. The whole situation indicates cheaper sugar in the New York market when the big Cuban crop begins to move. The price in the local market is $8.20 per 100 lbs., wholesale. The decline at Halifax as compared to prices ruling three weeks ago is ten cents.

Molasses—The old molasses is nearly all cleaned up in Canada. The new crop is expected to come on the market early in the new year, and to sell at lower prices than are now prevailing, following the price of new sugar. Producing conditions are very favorable in Barbados this year, and a Barbadian who visited Halifax last week informed the trade there that some new crop molasses would be available as early as the middle of December. The local price of Fancy still holds at 92 cents per gallon, and Choice 87 cents, wholesale.

Tea—The tea market continues strong, according to latest information received by dealers here from London. The principal demand is for the common kinds from 35 cents down and for the finest kinds from 50 cents up to 80 cents per lb. The exhibition at the risk last week, dealers say, gave a great impetus to sales of the brands shown there. The imports this year to St. John's are very heavy, being now about one million and a quarter pounds.

Potatoes—The imports of potatoes by the S. S. Canadian Sapper and Lisar Country last week amounted to no less than 5,212 sacks large and small. There is a lesson in this for all who are interested in agriculture in Newfoundland. The retail prices of the imported are $3.20 to $3.50, about the same as Newfoundland potatoes.

Hay—The price of hay has advanced this week. The new freight rate on this commodity has increased $5.00 per ton on Canadian shipments. The situation has been made worse by the local strike which will advance the price of all imported goods should it continue much longer. The local quotation is $32.50 to $33.00 per ton for imported hay, but the price will likely be higher.

Ons—An advance has taken place in Montreal and P.E.I. district from the higher freight rates now being put into operation on steamers from these ports. The local price is $2.70 to $4.00 according to quality, but higher prices are expected on the advance of the steamship freight rates from P.E.I. and Montreal. The strike also is expected to increase the price.

Road Made of Gold

Parts of the road by which the Devonshire village of Widescombe is approached are metalled with a peculiar type of granite, in which a geologist has recently discovered both gold and silver.

It appears that a ton of this peculiar rock may contain from three to thirty shillings' worth of gold, and as much as two-thirds of an ounce of silver, worth rather less than two shillings. Many tons of similar rock have been built into the walls lining the roads and enclosing the moor pastures in the neighbourhood. Hundreds of tons of it occur among the loose boulders of barren granite strewn over the local moorland.

The "vein" from which these gold-bearing boulders have been derived has not yet been discovered.

Light and Power

The following article taken from the Trade Review, dealing with the position of citizens of St. John's in relation to electric power facilities, is reproduced, not because our weekly contemporary has broken fresh ground, but because it is timely to refer again to a subject that has on several occasions been commented upon by the Telegram, and because of the attitude of the public in such matters is so accurately defined.

We agree with the Trade Review as to the tendency on the part of the public to let matters of this kind slide and to reserve their energy for an outcry until after the opportunity has passed, whereas they might have safeguarded their interests by asserting their rights while matters were pending. At a recent meeting held by the Municipal Council the question of light and power rates was raised, and it was gratifying to learn that they have the matter under consideration, but if the discussion had taken place before the present agreement was made by the Light & Power Co. and the United Towns Electric Co., some definite concessions might have been secured for householders. At present it would seem that we have to rely mainly upon the generosity of the corporation.

A few days ago we clipped from a Canadian paper an account of the experiences of the city of St. John, N.B., in this connection. Charged excessive rates by a private corporation, the Municipality decided to provide power from a source which it controlled. It was found possible to supply electricity at a surprisingly low cost compared with the prices charged by the private company, with the result that the latter were compelled to make a slashing reduction in their rates in order to compete.

All over the Island we have been altogether too generous in disposing of our water power to the first bidder. At Mobile the city has an asset which it is to be hoped will never be allowed to pass out of its control. The suggestion made by the Trade Review in this connection is well worth considering, and from the wealth which seems to be derived everywhere by the development of water power, there seems to be no reason why this should not become a valuable source of revenue for the city.

The Trade Review article reads:—

ELECTRIC LIGHT CHARGES.
 The public of St. John's who use electricity for power, lighting and domestic purposes have about given up the dream of cheaper light indulged in a few years ago by the professions and proposals of the United Towns Electric Co. They were going to cut our light bills in half on the acquisition of certain franchises and privileges from the Government; they were going to extend their lines into the city in competition with the Reid Nfd. Co., and the expected competition would reduce the cost of lighting from 15 cents to 6 cents a kilowatt.

Public sentiment ran so strong in favor of the United Towns Electric Co. that the Government and the City Council dare not put any obstacle in their way; nothing was too good for them for they were going to relieve the over-taxed householders from the eternal burden of fifteen cents a kilowatt and the monthly charge for the meter, which, like Teanyon's brook, goes on forever under the old system.

We were going to get our light as cheap as the people of Conception Bay.

The door is now closed and the dream is over. It is mainly so because the people lie down and put up with it. Nobody agitates for cheaper light, but we all go quietly like sheep and pay our monthly bills at 15 cents a kilowatt, while next door in Harbour Grace the charge is about half this, and in some United States and Canadian cities the rate is as low as three and a half cents.

In our case in St. John's "what is everybody's business is nobody's business," and no one thinks of calling a public meeting to discuss the question of "why cannot we get cheaper electric light?" The City Council should lead in this and they will be backed by the disappointed public, who feel sore at the way they were "fooled to the top of their bent" when the United Towns people having used their sentiment and got all the franchise they wanted, sold out to the Electric Light Co. in St. John's. It is said, at half a cent a kilowatt, electric power for which the people are now compelled to pay 15 cents.

There is one dog of relief open, but an attempt was made also to close that. Fortunately a few years ago the Ellis City Council, looking to the future, secured the valuable water power at Tor's Cove for the city in order to have a weapon to protect the people of St. John's from the unfairness of such a condition as now exists, and which will go on forever if the citizens make no move to get cheaper light.

Mayor Cook and his Council men now have an opportunity to show that they are working in the interest of the public. Let them, without delay, set their earnest attention to the problem of harnessing up the Southern Shore water power to give light and power to St. John's at reasonable rates.

It will, we realize, require considerable finances but the money, we believe, will be forthcoming for they will have the stimulus of public sentiment and public need behind them to accomplish the work. It is a good investment and people who have money to spare will freely buy up any bonds that may be issued.

The Position of City Employees

The comments in the Daily News this morning on the strike of the Municipal employees were of somewhat the same tenor as those which had already been expressed by the Telegram, but the suggestion that those enrolled in future on the sanitary staff should not be Union men opens up another field which bristles with a new crop of difficulties.

In the first place it would be necessary to have non-Union men working together in harmony, a state of affairs which, however desirable, seems altogether improbable under present conditions. The real purpose of a Union, as we understand it, is not to organize strikes, but to protect the interests of the members and generally to render assistance to them or their families in emergencies. In other words it acts as a benefit society.

To say that a city official must not belong to such an organization would be an interference with his personal liberty, and might be the means of inflicting a hardship upon him, particularly in the case of a man applying to the Council for a position after having been for years a paid up member. It is doubtful if any Municipal Council would undertake to make such a proposal, but that body would be justified in taking the attitude that nothing must be permitted to interfere with the work of keeping the city clean, and that in the event of the employees taking part in a strike, their places would immediately be filled by other men. Such a policy would not interfere with the functions of the Union or the privileges of the men, and would at the same time safeguard the rights of the citizens.

Chinese Funeral Yesterday

Supreme Court

King vs. Leonard Gillespie Reid—Before a Special Jury.

The hearing of the above matter began this morning, before the following special jury:—W. K. Mercer, Jabez Snooks, Wilfred Whiteway, Geo. Adams, Jas. Rowe, Jas. Armstrong, Roy Smith, Geo. W. Macklin, Noah Ivany, Walter Vay, Thos. Rins, Victor W. Hillier.

Howley K.C. and L. E. Emerson, appeared for the accused. Mr. C. E. Hunt and Gordon Bradley, appeared for the Crown.

The accused is charged with manslaughter arising out of the death of Mr. King. Gerald Whitty, Geo. Burrows, Clinton Duder, Geo. Harrison, Lt.-Com. O'Callaghan, which occurred on Sept. 15th last, near Donovan's.

Mr. Bradley gave a brief resume of the tragedy and indicated to the jury the various points on which evidence would be given. He then called Mr. Noel, first surveyor of the Crown Lands Department.

Witness went to Donovan's on Sept. 16th, at the request of the Inspector General, and made a plan of the scene of the accident (plan produced). Witness, in reference to grades, said the west of Donovan's there was a steep up grade and east there was a slight upgrade coming to town. At the cross road east of Donovan's he saw two stumps. They were about 1,200 feet from the top of the hill to the westward. The road varies from 22 to 25 feet from grass to grass.

Howley took the position that the plan contained identifications which should not be submitted. Mr. Hunt replied that the plan was only put in as the evidence of Mr. Noel, and the Crown was willing that any marks made on it by others than the witness be removed. The marks were accordingly erased.

Mr. Howley again objected that the grades were not complete enough and asked that another plan be made. Crown Counsel agreed to produce another copy of the plan.

A second plan, showing road to top of hill, telegraph poles and stumps, was produced. This plan, witness said, did not show marks of blood or wheel marks, as were on the first plan.

Witness said he saw automobile marks for about 100 feet west of the stumps. The witness was dispensed with for a period to permit him to put in all marks except the objectionable ones made on the first plan.

Wm. Parsons, witness is a photographer, and on the 16th and 17th of September, he made photographs of the scene of the accident on an order from the Inspector General. (Photographs produced).

Howley objected that the photos were second-hand and that the jury should have primary evidence of a view of the locus.

Crown Counsel said he was the intention of the Crown to bring the jury to the scene. The photo objected to gave a view of the Toppal Road, showing the bus. It was not allowed as evidence. A second photograph was submitted, but vehicles figuring in the accident were not shown in it. A third photograph submitted showed some stumps on the south side of the road. There was no cross-examination.

Robert G. Lovett, R.N. Examined by Mr. Hunt, witness said that on the 16th he went to the house of G. W. V. A., attended a dinner at Donovan's. There were 14 in the party and they went out by motor bus. The dinner finished about 10 p.m. After dinner the party engaged in singing songs. When they came out the motor bus, on the left-hand side of the road, was coming from St. John's. The car was about 60 yards east of Donovan's entrance.

Witness came to the bus with a number of other persons who knew if the lights were on or not. Himself, King and Capt. Whitty decided to cross the road. No others of the party crossed over. The second motor bus, at an angle of 45 degrees from the head of the bus. Witness was on the right. Whitty was in the centre, and King was on the left. Witness was on the right hand side of the road coming to town. They were all facing St. John's at the particular moment and it was dark. Witness heard the sound of a motor car engine and jumped to the right. He saw no lights nor heard any horn. There was no singing or shouting on the road. After jumping he saw the motor. It passed him and about 20 yards beyond it overturned. Witness did not see the car strike King or Whitty. Fifteen minutes afterwards he saw King's body on the road about 15 yards from where they were standing at the time the engine was heard. He saw Captain Whitty's body on the left side of the road practically on a line with that of King's. (Witness pointed out the spot on the plan to the jury). Witness did not notice how the car went. It was capsized off the road on the right hand side. He rushed right on to it and assisted in getting the people from underneath. Midshipman Mellor was the first to get out of them. Mr. Burrows, witness worked to get life into Burrows. He saw Harrison lying in the woods with Capt. Long working on his body. Witness reiterated that he saw nothing or heard nothing beyond the sound of the engine up to the time the car passed him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Emerson, witness said there was no question about the sobriety of himself or the members of his party on the night of the accident. He affirmed that he was perfectly sober. Asked who went out with him on the day following the accident, witness said some members of the police and G.W.V.A. There was a lot of traffic on the road that day. He did not notice on the night of the accident the telegraph pole stumps. He remembered he was standing on the corner of the main road and the by-road that runs from the Station. He did not pick out the position he occupied on the night of the accident because of the stumps or the lane. He did not know at the time that the lane was there. Witness did not realize that the lights were on when the car passed but he saw them go out when the engine stopped. He did not realize that either King or Whitty had been hit. It was after it was found that he saw Capt. Whitty's body. It had then been brought to the road side. The members of the Reid motor car party assisted in collecting the bodies.

ADEQUATE TERMINALS TO CARE FOR BUSINESS SHOULD BE ERECTED HERE.

Commissioner Given Data by Trade Board.

City Merchants Impress on Col. Brown Port's Need of Terminals.

Colonel Brown, travelling trade commissioner for the federal government who was in the city during the past week looking over the site of the proposed ocean terminals has left for Newfoundland, where he will go into the matter of docking and freight handling facilities there, before reporting to Ottawa on the project. This was the gist of a progress report of the terminal committee presented at last night's meeting of the Sydney Board of Trade. Col. Brown's visit was made as the result of the agitation carried on by the Board during the past year. On his arrival here, he was met by Mr. Buckley, president of the Board of Trade, and taken on an inspection trip to the proposed site, in addition to being supplied with much data concerning Sydney's fast growing trade with Newfoundland.

After a preliminary committee meeting at the Sydney end, Col. Brown left for Newfoundland and on his return will prepare a full report. He is expected to arrive in Sydney on the 20th of this month, when he will meet with a committee of the Board, who are at present engaged on preparing additional data in support of Sydney's claim for terminal facilities.

Vast Opportunities.

Mr. O. N. Mann reported the receipt of a letter from the C. N. R. freight department requesting this additional data for Mr. Brown, and read a copy of a letter sent in reply which set forth Sydney's argument in an admirable manner. Stress was laid on the fact that this city is the centre of population of the Island and the bulk of the export wholesale houses were located here, that Sydney has more meat packing house branches than any city east of Montreal and that their opportunities for trade with Newfoundland, were limited owing to inadequate transportation facilities. It is the contention of the Board, that even granting that at the present time, the water carried trade from and to Sydney was not great enough to warrant the expense of installing terminals, the potentialities for trade with Newfoundland demanded that facilities be installed here. The Board however is emphatic in stating that there is sufficient trade with Newfoundland and other ports at the present time to warrant the expenditure. This was evidenced by figures obtained from local business houses showing the amount of business transacted with Newfoundland last year. The figures will be placed at Col. Brown's disposal.

The election of officers resulted as follows:— Manager—Gus Herder. Captain—J. Paterson. Vice-Captain—R. Herder. Secretary—S. Lumsden. Arrangements were made to begin training at once, and two nights each week will be devoted to various athletic exercises at the Seamen's Institute, so that the players will rapidly get in form. #### BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

B.I.S. Players Leading By 53 Points. The Inter Club Billiard Tournament, between the B.I.S. and Masonic, was continued on Saturday night last, in the Masonic Club rooms, before a large attendance of enthusiasts. Only one game was played, viz: G. Halley (B.I.S.) vs. H. Foster (Masonic), and resulted in a win for Halley by a margin of 82 points. Foster was not in his usual form, failed to get the balls running, making only four breaks in the game. Halley, on the other hand, gave a very creditable exhibition, and by good play secured a lead from the start which he gradually increased to the end. The breaks were:— Halley (B.I.S.)—350—12, 15, 12, 18, 13, 18, 17, 12, 76, 15, 16—164. Foster (Masonic)—268—10, 11, 21, 18—60.

The B.I.S. are now leading by 53 points. The players for to-night are:— 7.30—J. Wornell (Masonic) vs. C. McKay (B.I.S.). 9.00—G. Knowling (Masonic) vs. J. Carberry (B.I.S.).

LAURIE JACKSON FINISHES THIRD.

Laurie Jackson, former Halifax runner, now located at Boston, was third in a six mile race in the Hub recently. Jimmy Hennigan, Dorchester veteran marathoner, was first, in 22:42. Jackson went off his course on the outskirts of the city and lost considerably. Jackson, it will be remembered, won against both Bell and O'Toole in the Prince's Rink in November, 1922.

WORLD'S AMATEUR CHAMPIONS ENTER PRO. RANKS.

"Dunc" Munro will captain the new professional hockey team in Montreal this winter. It is reported that his hockey earnings which have been arranged for him to operate, will run well over $25,000 for three years. He is the highest priced hockey player in Canada.

"Hooley" Smith made his name as a star hockey player with the Granite, and as a member of Canadian Olympic Hockey Team, the world's amateur champions. He will chase the elusive rubber disc in the interests of the Ottawa professional team this year. The pros. are hard after Harry Watson, the Granite's left-wing player, who is regarded as without a peer in both Canada and the United States.

Stanton Jackson, Amherst-Imperial hockey star, will leave this morning to rejoin Toronto St. Pat's of the National Hockey League. Press Hambley telegraphed Jackson yesterday that the first practice would be held next Monday at 11 o'clock at Arena Gardens. Jackson was one of the best young players in the League last year, and his Maritime friends are pulling hard for him to catch a regular berth. He is a splendid type of athlete and is bound to succeed. Stanton Jackson is a brother to Laurie, the runner, who also visited this city two years ago.

"I Will Repay"

THE GREATEST STORY EVER FILMED AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY.

To-night the Majestic management offer its patrons a wonderful feature, entitled "I Will Repay" which has been designated the greatest story ever screened.

Many of the millions who have enjoyed the exploits of the Scarlet Pimpernel must often have asked themselves whether that dashing adventurer ever lived in real life. The dashing adventures of the League of the Scarlet Pimpernel, banded together to save the doomed, have been a modern counterpart of the deeds of the Age of Chivalry—but shorn of the heaviness of the medieval knights, and sparkling with a romance that age never knew.

The great story, whose readers are to be found by the million not only in Great Britain, but in Canada, the United States, the Continent of Europe, and even as far afield as Cuba and India, has now been done into a film, and the only wonder is that a story so full of excitement and charm has not reached the screen ere now.

The part of Juliette de Marny—the girl sworn on her brother's dead body to avenge his murder—is played with exquisite charm and spirit by Miss Figa Le Breton; Pedro de Cordoba—the well-known American "star"—is her victim and lover; while Holmes Herbert, another popular player on both sides of the Atlantic, carries off the part of the Scarlet Pimpernel with great dash.

Produced by so capable a director as Henry Kolker, "I Will Repay" is at every inch a romance to reveal in.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

BELGIUM'S ATTITUDE MAY BE RESENTED BY FRANCE.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 17. The Belgian Government is reported to have decided to concede Germany most favored nation treatment. If the report proves true, it is believed the decision will arouse resentment in France, following on the difficulties raised by Belgium in enforcing higher tariffs without having previously informed France.

NEW JERSEY'S SECOND VISITATION.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Nov. 17. The entire waterfront to-day was seriously menaced by fire which assumed such proportions that two large Erie railroad piers, fourteen river barges, a steam lighter and much valuable freight were destroyed before the combined forces of this city and Hoboken, together with two fire boats from New York, succeeded in bringing it under control. It was the city's second million dollar blaze in three days, two blocks in the downtown industrial section having been laid waste Friday in a fire which raged unchecked for five hours. Officials of the fire department and an Erie Railroad spokesman said it would be a difficult task to estimate to-day's loss off hand because of the value of the freight destroyed, but declared it will probably reach, if not exceed, $1,500,000.

WEMBLEY MAY BE RE-OPENED.

LONDON, Nov. 17. Leaders of the Conservative Government are of the opinion that the re-opening of the British Empire Exhibition next year constitutes a necessary background for Empire trade revival, which the party claims will follow its assuming office, are expected to ask Parliament shortly after the opening session for a grant of money to carry on the show another year, on condition that the Dominions are also willing to bear their part of the financial burden. It is pointed out that the cost of re-opening the Wembley Exhibition will be only about a tenth of the original expenditure, while the leaders believe that the benefits will be as great as those this year, and will also allow thousands of people from the Dominions another chance to visit the commercial heart of their Empire. All permanent exhibits at Wembley were being kept intact on the supposition that Parliament will readily appropriate the sum requested.

NEW DEVICE ADOPTED TO MAKE CREWS UNNECESSARY.

LONDON, Nov. 17. The Hamburg-American Steamship Company is so convinced of the importance of Anton Pletner's "rotor" system which controls vessels without crew or sails, that it has decided to build immediately ten freighters of this type of 10,000 tons each, says a Berlin dispatch to Lloyd's Shipping Gazette. The company will also convert other ships to the "rotor" principle for freight service on the Asiatic route. Herr Pletner informed the correspondent that sixty per cent. of oil fuel could be saved on the Asiatic route, while the saving on the Rio Janeiro route would be fifty per cent. and on the New York route between 35 and 40. The regions of trade winds and monsoons, he explained, were the most favorable for the exploitation of wind power by "rotors." For a license to use the "rotor" patent companies will be charged ten per cent. on the tonnage value of the ship in which they are installed, and the inventor maintains that such vessels will save the cost of the license in a single year.

GERMANY'S RAILWAYS HANDED OVER AHEAD OF TIME.

COBLENZ, Germany, Nov. 17. The Rhineland railways to-day were handed over to the new German railway company which was established in accordance with the London Protocol. The transfer was made a full fortnight earlier than the time provided for in the Protocol. To-day's action marks the conclusion of the turning over of organizations seized by the Allies as guarantees for the payment of German war debts.

LONDON, Nov. 17. Leaders of the Conservative Government are of the opinion that the re-opening of the British Empire Exhibition next year constitutes a necessary background for Empire trade revival, which the party claims will follow its assuming office, are expected to ask Parliament shortly after the opening session for a grant of money to carry on the show another year, on condition that the Dominions are also willing to bear their part of the financial burden. It is pointed out that the cost of re-opening the Wembley Exhibition will be only about a tenth of the original expenditure, while the leaders believe that the benefits will be as great as those this year, and will also allow thousands of people from the Dominions another chance to visit the commercial heart of their Empire. All permanent exhibits at Wembley were being kept intact on the supposition that Parliament will readily appropriate the sum requested.

KING vs. JAMES WHITEFORD McNEELY.

The trial of James Whiteford McNeely on a series of charges of larceny of monies, the property of His Majesty the King, and for falsification of accounts, concluded Saturday evening, when a verdict of not guilty of larceny, but guilty of falsification of accounts on four counts was rendered.

There were 24 separate charges, twelve of which were for larceny. The particulars of the remaining counts are that James Whiteford McNeely is charged with falsification of accounts contrary to Falsification of Accounts Act of 1875 in that on May 31st, 1916, he omitted with intent to defraud, to make entry on the counterfoils of receipts of the department to show that certain sums had been paid into His Majesty's exchequer.

The particulars are:—

May 31, 1916—J. C. Hepburn.	$ 93.00
May 31, 1917—J. C. Hepburn.	4,120.00
May 31, 1918—J. C. Hepburn.	3,195.00
Sept. 9, 1916—R. B. Job.	356.42
Oct. 18, 1917—R. B. Job.	378.84
May 31, 1919—R. B. Job.	348.50
Dec. 2, 1920—Terra Nova Sulphite Co.	1,296.00
June 1, 1921—Terra Nova Sulphite Co.	512.00
April 20, 1922—Terra Nova Sulphite Co.	1,812.00
Feb. 22, 1923—Terra Nova Sulphite Co.	1,812.00
May 31, 1920—J. C. Hepburn.	3,193.00

It was in the charges of committing to enter the Terra Nova Sulphite Co. payments that the prisoner was found guilty.

The examination of the witnesses concluded before 3 p.m. Mr. Hart, Accountant of the Department, resumed his place on the stand after recess. He said that he had made a search of the office files and found that the Deputy Minister as well as the accused had made deposits at the Bank and almost anybody in the office might make up the deposit slips. The deposits were not made at regular periods.

Mr. D. Carmichael, examined by Mr. Winter, said he was assistant accountant at the Bank of Montreal. He had prepared a list of the deposits made by the department from 1916 to 1919. The list was put in evidence. Cross-examined by Mr. Dunfield, witness said that it would be very difficult even for a Minister to get a department cheque cashed. All such cheques were invariably placed to the credit of the Exchequer Account.

Mr. Dunfield called no witness and was directed by Mr. Justice Kent to go to the jury. He asked the jury to consider the circumstances surrounding the case, the accused did not come before them as an angel, or one with an unblemished reputation, but what ever he may have done, he was always punished. In this case whether found guilty or not guilty, he had lost his job and means of sustenance of his family. They were not to try the case on rumours or stories heard outside, but only on the evidence, as given before them in the Court. He pointed out that the receipts, in evidence did not count for much, as the evidence had showed that it was not necessary for the money to come in, when the receipts were issued. The custom of the Department was to issue receipts formally the day the payment was due and sometimes the receipts were made out days ahead. As to the cheques, Mr. Carmichael had showed that at the Bank cheques payable to the Department could not be cashed by even the Minister himself. They had to be credited to Exchequer account owing to the conditions set out in the Audit Act. The evidence had showed that at times the Deputy Minister of the Department had prepared the deposit slips for the Bank, as well as the accused. There were two charges against the accused, and as for the falsification of accounts; they were not asked to say that Mr. McNeely did any act, but that he omitted to do it, and the charges extended over a period of eight and a half years, and they were asked to believe that in all that time, Mr. Hart, one of the witnesses, had never made a mistake. The Account submitted by Mr. Carmichael is a record of all money handled by every person in the Department and this he submitted, could not have a material evidence against the accused would be in the production of the counterfoils books, and these were not in court. What was here was only hazy circumstantial evidence of what happened. Mr. Dunfield closed his address with an appeal for consideration of the case only on the facts submitted, and, on the result would be.

Mr. Emerson for the Crown, felt the responsibility that rested on the shoulders of the Crown, and was glad that it would be shared by the jury. All cases of this sort have a tinge of sadness, but these things should be considered by the accused before the act was committed, if he was guilty. The charges against the accused were not communicative, but alternative; they must not consider two charges only, but twelve. The accused was not charged with stealing the cheques in evidence, but with money to the equivalent of these cheques, and because no entry was made for the cheques, Mr. McNeely was charged with falsification of accounts. Mr. Hart had stated that all money received by the Department for Crown lands is accounted for on pink slips to which are attached counterfoils, and on these all particulars appear.

The counterfoils in question were not available, but if documents are lost, it is not proof of the innocence of the accused. Mr. Hart had stated that all counterfoils filled in were accounted for, and it would be curious if Mr. Hart had made the same mistake three or four times. In the case of the Hepburn cheques of $3,000, to correct $6,000 should be accounted for, and Crown states that money was taken from the cash and the cheques put in to account for it. He is not charged with taking the cheques, but money to their value, either before or after the cheques were received. It was not possible for the Crown to examine the mind of the accused in these transactions, but it is beyond the bounds of possibility that the acts were not done deliberately. Mr. Emerson briefly reviewed the evidence as it applied to the charge, and asked for a consideration of these facts, as they had been proven.

Mr. Justice Kent then summed up the case, which he said had been dealt with in all the brevity possible. The charges must be considered only on the evidence that had come before the Court. The charges contained in all, 24 counts and each of these must be considered separately. The accused was not charged with taking cheques, put in evidence, but was charged with stealing money to their value. It was, however, the duty of the Crown to prove beyond all reasonable doubt, that the charges were sustained. As to the falsification of accounts, the Crown states that it was part of the scheme for obtaining money. Accidental or careless omission is not a criminal offence, it must be done deliberately or fraudulently. To omit wilfully to make any entry is an offence, and in this case it must be remembered that the whole system of book-keeping depended on making these entries in the counterfoils.

To omit to make these entries was an offence on the part of whoever was responsible and the jury must be satisfied that it was the duty of the accused to make these entries, and secondly that he omitted to do so. The accused had given no explanation in evidence as to the receipts put in, and he had the right to do so. The evidence was reviewed and the jury were instructed to consider separately every charge.

At 4.25 the jury retired and returned to court at 5.55 bringing in a verdict as above.

The prisoner being asked if he had anything to say as to why he should not be imprisoned, Mr. Dunfield, on his behalf, argued that the verdict ought to be set aside and a verdict of not guilty entered, upon the grounds that the charge is falsification of intent to defraud. As the only ground on which it had been shown that the prisoner could have been guilty of such intention was larceny as charged in the other counts and as the jury had negative put in evidence as to the receipts that charge, he could not reasonably find a verdict as they did, there being no evidence of intent to defraud in any other way. As it was a complicated question and a little difficult to argue, Counsel asked for an adjournment in order to consider it. Judge Kent thought the case should go on; but Mr. Winter, for the prosecution, stated that the point came quite new to him, and the case was thereupon adjourned until 2.30 on Wednesday. In the meantime accused was granted the same bail.

The Old Colony Club

Saturday afternoon last the second of a series of four addresses dealing with different forms of public welfare was given.

Mrs. Macpherson presided, and Mrs. Hector McNeil read the paper. The address was written by Mrs. Gordon—the originator of the Chelsea Dinners for Nursing Mothers—at the request of Mrs. Hollis Walker, who, amongst others, had assisted Mrs. Gordon in her work. From small events great happenings take place and it was through an account printed in the Times, referring to the success of experimental welfare work in Paris that Mrs. Gordon was inspired. She went to Paris in order to study the movement, which, though a small organization, had already proven the value of pre-natal care, in the form of nourishing dinners for mothers.

Mrs. Gordon, impressed and encouraged by what she saw, returned to London and immediately procured a fund with which to organize a small kitchen of her own. This was in 1913, and only five mothers from the very poorest slums (and recommended by district visitors) sat down to the first dinner. Appreciative mothers soon made the dinners popular, and the work became quite extensive. While adhering strictly to its original form in every other way, the work was soon augmented by the addition of a Clinic, as well as other kitchen in different parts of London. At last the value of this pre-natal care became so apparent in the children, that doctors from the other large towns visited London to see the work for themselves. During the war the kitchens were kept going through voluntary contributions, and the Chelsea Dinners for Nursing Mothers only came to an end in 1921, having fully demonstrated the outstanding benefits to be derived through pre-natal care.

At the conclusion of the paper, Mrs. Hiscock spoke of the urgent necessity of imparting knowledge of food to the needy, so that money might be spent to fullest advantage and economy.

Miss Southcott deplored the fact that while there are hospitals for adults in St. John's, there is no provision for sick infants, and she stressed the need of a children's hospital, or else a ward for children only, in connection with one of our hospitals.

Before the meeting closed, Mrs. Macpherson called for a standing ovation of thanks to Mrs. Gordon for her valuable address and to Mrs. Hollis Walker for the kind interest shown to the Club in having procured it. This mark of gratitude met with the hearty accord of all present.

Mrs. V. P. Burke and Mrs. Alan Fraser then served teas.

Allen, Miss S. Howell, Miss Lena Lock, M. Connelly, Miss A. St. George, Sir Joseph Outerbridge, Mrs. Perry, Miss G. Blandford.

Workman Had Narrow Escape

On Saturday night, just as the working of the Rosalind's outward cargo had been completed, one of the workmen, named Garland, who was helping to put the hatches on No. 3 hold, overbalanced himself and fell into the hold, some fourteen feet below. Some of the men rushed to his assistance and brought him to the deck where Dr. Macpherson was called to his aid, and after a brief examination ordered him to the General Hospital. Yesterday an examination was held at the Hospital but there was nothing to show that he had sustained any injuries of a serious nature. During the afternoon Mr. Garland was discharged from the institution.

BIGGEST SEND-OFF EVER KNOWN IN CASINO THEATRE.

The biggest audience on record that ever attended a farewell performance, was in evidence at the Casino Theatre on Saturday night when the Young-Adams Company played their final play of the present engagement. The hall was jammed to the doors and many extra chairs had to be brought in to accommodate everyone. Among those present in the audience were Mayor Cook and party.

The play of the evening was that wonderful moral lesson, which so many of us have heard so much about and which is always new, namely "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room." H. Wilton Young as Joe Morgan gave a splendid performance and aroused his audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Marjle Adams, the popular favourite proved to her audience that not only is she an interpreter of drama and emotion, but is also a very clever comedienne, her characterization of Melitabile Sartwright caused roars of laughter and thereby delighted a faithful Marguerite Young have a faithful portrayal of Mary Morgan and won the hearts of her many admirers. The remainder of the cast were excellent.

At the conclusion of the performance, Mr. Young requested that all remain in their seats as each member of the company wished to say a few words to them expressing their appreciation of the many courtesies bestowed upon them during their stay here. Each player was accorded a hearty reception and St. John's theatre-goers look forward with interest to again seeing their favourites the Young-Adams Company, which we hope will be next fall.

With the exception of Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry, the cast was selected entirely in Europe, and includes some of the most famous of players of the old world: among them, Maxudian, a leading figure on the French stage who toured the United States as leading man for Sarah Bernhardt; Count de Lamur, Italian packed full of thrills, picturesque Romanian beauty; Giuseppe de Campo, son of the Marquis de Campo, and Gerald Robertshaw, long distinguished on the British stage.

"The Arab" is one of the biggest productions of the year. ### Motor Car in a Brook

Occupants Killed in Their Seats—
Died Chaffeur Collapse at the Wheel!

(News of the World.)

To account for a motor tragedy involving the loss of three lives a startling theory was put forward. It was suggested that the chaffeur had a seizure at the wheel, thereby causing the car, out of control, to crash over an embankment on a steep hill into a stream, with the loss of three lives. The victims were:

John Hamilton Walker, 49, contractor, of Oak Cottage, Eccles, New-road, Pendleton, Manchester.

J. Thorley Smith, 52, architect, of Grosvenor House, Edge-lane, Strretford, Manchester.

Walter Downs, 20, chaffeur, of Palmerston-road, Bewick, Manchester.

The only survivor, Frank Joule, butcher, of Belmont-avenue, Pendleton, Lancashire, was treated for severe injuries. The party in a motor car belonging to Mr. Walker, were bound for Beaumaris, Anglesey, and the accident occurred on the Cholmondeley-Malpas road.

At that spot a turning leads to a steep and dirty lane, beside which is a stream at the bottom of a 12-foot embankment. For some reason the driver turned down this road, and a skid sent the car crashing through a fence. It toppled down the embankment and fell into the stream upside down.

The hood was up, and Walker, Smith, and Downs were imprisoned inside. Joule was thrown clear, and scrambled up the bank. After making frantic efforts to rescue his companions, and finding his own strength unavailing, he ran across some fields to a farm, crying, "For Heaven's sake, come and help us! Our car is in the brook." The farmer, Mr. W. A. Robinson, with others, hurried to the scene, and found the car so tightly wedged that it had dammed the flow of water in the brook, which is 6 feet wide at this point. In the ordinary way the stream is only about a foot deep, but it had risen to such an extent that the vehicle was almost covered. The rescuers pulled open the car, but found those inside dead. Curiously enough, despite the overturning of the car, they were in practically the same position as they ordinarily occupied. The chaffeur was at the driving wheel, and his employer was seated by his side. He had received severe injury to the head through coming into contact with the wind-screen. Mr. J. T. Smith was on the rear seat. Horses were unable to pull the car out, and 40 or 50 people hauled it on to its side to liberate the occupants. On Mr. Joule's arrival home he was found to be more seriously hurt than at first anticipated. For some time he lay in a semi-conscious state. He was able to make a statement to the police, which the coroner read at the opening of the inquest. According to this narrative, Joule remembered the car skidding when turning a corner close to Egerton Hall, beyond Cholmondeley, and running down the bank at the side of the road. He did not remember it turning over, but recollected crawling from underneath it. He tried to get his companions from beneath the car, but failed, and then went to Egerton Hall, for assistance. At the time of the accident the speed would be from 25 to 30 miles an hour. Dr. John Rowland, of Malpas, stated Walker had sustained injuries to the head and face sufficient to cause death. Smith's skull was fractured, but there was no marks on Downs. His condition was consistent with death from drowning. Questioned by Mr. R. W. Leach, for the executor of Mr. Walker, as to the possibility of Downs having had a seizure just before the accident, Dr. Rowland declared it was impossible to say without a post mortem examination. Even then it was not certain that a post mortem could establish anything definite. In view of this suggestion, the coroner intimated that he would adjourn the proceedings for three weeks for a post mortem examination and for the attendance of the sole survivor.

Horses were unable to pull the car out, and 40 or 50 people hauled it on to its side to liberate the occupants. On Mr. Joule's arrival home he was found to be more seriously hurt than at first anticipated. For some time he lay in a semi-conscious state. He was able to make a statement to the police, which the coroner read at the opening of the inquest. According to this narrative, Joule remembered the car skidding when turning a corner close to Egerton Hall, beyond Cholmondeley, and running down the bank at the side of the road. He did not remember it turning over, but recollected crawling from underneath it. He tried to get his companions from beneath the car, but failed, and then went to Egerton Hall, for assistance. At the time of the accident the speed would be from 25 to 30 miles an hour. Dr. John Rowland, of Malpas, stated Walker had sustained injuries to the head and face sufficient to cause death. Smith's skull was fractured, but there was no marks on Downs. His condition was consistent with death from drowning. Questioned by Mr. R. W. Leach, for the executor of Mr. Walker, as to the possibility of Downs having had a seizure just before the accident, Dr. Rowland declared it was impossible to say without a post mortem examination. Even then it was not certain that a post mortem could establish anything definite. In view of this suggestion, the coroner intimated that he would adjourn the proceedings for three weeks for a post mortem examination and for the attendance of the sole survivor.

Colours From Rubbish

Even such an ordinary thing as coal tar has a romantic history.

For a long time tar was looked upon as almost valueless refuse, the disposal of which caused manufacturers much trouble and expense. Then experiments were made to see if any use could be found for it, but at first nothing much was done.

Later it was found that coal tar could be split up into about ten primary products. From these in turn, roughly three hundred other substances could be obtained. The most important of these coal tar substances are benzina, oxylene, naphthalene, phenol, creosol, and so on.

Purified phenol is known to the public as carbolic acid. The importance of the other materials is that they are the basis of many aniline dyes and other products of much value in medicine and commerce.

The process of extracting these products from coal tar is technically known as "fractional distillation." The separating of one substance from the other depends on the fact that each has a different boiling-point. A special boiler is required for heating the tar. This has an elaborate thermometer connected with it, which is extremely sensitive at high temperatures.

Ten Minutes' Sentence

MAGISTRATE CREATES RECORD FOR WOMAN THIEF.

Possibly the shortest sentence of imprisonment ever passed in an English court was imposed by the Tottenham magistrate upon Edith Morpew, 27, of Nag's Head-road, Ponders End. She was charged with stealing sheets and blankets from a house at Edmonton, and had been on remand for medical examination. As she had already been in custody for some time, the magistrate told her that he would order her to be kept in the cells only until the hands of the clock pointed to 12, which meant ten minutes.

"STAFFORD'S DRUG STORE NEWS" RESOURCEFULNESS

M. Coty, the head of many great perfume factories in France, experienced great difficulty in making his start toward success. When only a poor chemist he discovered a new mixture of unusual merit, but he peddled the process in vain to all the leading perfume makers.

Turned away from his last chance, he instantly decided upon an unusual plan of action. Just as he was leaving, he dropped on the floor a small unopened bottle containing his entire stock of the precious liquid. A few days later he received a brief letter from the company. It said:

"We cannot longer refuse to help you. That illustrious fluid has made of this office a veritable paradise. Come and see us."

To this interesting incident M. Coty attributes his success. Those who look beneath the surface, will understand that the dropping of the bottle simply manifested an ability to think clearly, decide positively, and act immediately. In short, M. Coty possessed the qualifications for an executive. Why not make your home, office or any place you may be working be also a veritable paradise. It's very hard to do this without you are enjoying good health and strength, and thousands of people are neglecting themselves everyday by not being careful enough over their bodies. If you require perfect health and strength you will find nothing better to restore it than Bick's Tablets. The proof of this being the very best preparation on the market is that by the end of this year the sale will be over Ten Thousand Bottles.

Wolves Increase in Algoma Wilds

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 30.—(Canadian Press)—That the wolves are becoming more numerous in Algoma is attested by hunters in the bush this year. Already several have been shot, and reports are coming in almost daily of the animals being taken in traps.

Though there is considerable small game in the bush the wolves have already started their annual crusade against the deer, and half-eaten carcasses are being found.

Rhubarb Used to Fix Color

Rhubarb is divided into two kinds according to its use—medicinal rhubarb and garden or common rhubarb. Both are grown in China. Szechwan, Tibet, Kokonor, and Kansu are famous for the medicinal variety, while Chili and Kiangsue furnish the garden variety. The medicinal properties of the roots of this perennial herb have been utilized in China since ancient times. In Chili and Kiangsue, the extract of rhubarb is used as a mordant to fix a color on silk.

When it Rains Ink

Some time ago a shower of black rain in Hampshire occupied the attention of scientists. Such an event is not without precedent. In November, 1819, ink-black rain fell steadily for several hours in New York, and at least twice during the last century a similar phenomenon has been observed in England.

Red rain is fairly common, and in May, 1885, there was a heavy fall of blood-red hail at Castlewellan, in Ireland. The red hue was not merely on the surface, for when one squeezed the ice pellets, the fingers were deeply stained. On one occasion there was a shower of red rain in London. When it was analysed it was found that the peculiar colour was due to the presence of a minute water plant.

Black snow has been reported in the Alps, and red snow in Germany, the Tyrol, and in the Arctic regions. A learned professor states that the red snow occasionally noticed in the Alps bordering on the Mediterranean sea is due to the presence of minute particles of Sahara sand blown across by gales.

Showers of small frogs have very often been reported, but science is still sceptical concerning this phenomenon. It is certain, however, that thousands of tiny frogs have been observed on many occasions hopping about after a heavy shower of rain, and the mystery has never been solved as to whence and how they came in such numbers.

Chicago News: No enlightened labor leader should seek to extend public ownership at the expense of private or semi-public and regulated industry. The freedom of the wage-worker is bound by with the reasonable freedom of the employer. In modern industry there are many difficult problems, but they will not be solved by State despotism or State Socialism—two names for the same thing. They will be solved by intelligent self-interest and friendly co-operation between employers and employed.

Kipling Comes Out of His Retreat

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 7. (Can. Press)—When the wedding took place at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, of Miss Elsie Kipling and Capt. George Bambridge, Mr. Rudyard Kipling, who is rarely seen in London and who lives and works at his country home at Burwash, Sussex, gave his daughter away and seemed at a loss when her train filled up the width of the aisle as it was spread out by her only bridesmaid. At length, however, Mr. Kipling took his place by her side and Miss Peggy Leigh followed, wearing an autumn brown velvet dress with curious cuffs and hanging collar. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin followed Mr. and Mrs. Kipling into the vestry to sign the register, and lent their house for the reception.

The Cost of Home Bank Prosecution

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—(By Can. Press)—It is costing about $1,200 a day to try the Home Bank directors accused of conspiracy to defraud before Judge Coatsworth at the Toronto City Hall. The trials of the eight directors, the accountant and auditor of the ill-fated Home Bank will cost approximately $175,000 before they are finished, with a prospect of another $25,000 added to the cost by proceedings at the Assizes afterwards.

The trials began on Sept. 9, with Ocean G. Smith, accountant of the bank, the first to appear before County Judge Coatsworth. At that time a period of two weeks was estimated for each trial, and there were ten men to be tried, which would run the trials to the middle of February, 1925. It has taken seven weeks to try the accountant, the bank auditor, Sydney H. Jones, and the first director, Clarence F. Smith, and the trials of the remaining seven will take 14 weeks, it is expected. The process is a tedious and intricate one, hampered with countless legal and technical details.

Why $1,200 a day? There are four Crown counsel in addition to the representative of the finance department of the Dominion Government. The leading counsel receive at least $300 a day each. The chief prosecuting counsel was specially appointed by the Province of Ontario, which pays his fees. Expenses of the defence counsel are, of course, paid by the accused. There are the ordinary witnesses, who are paid $1.00 a day, and the professionals, at $4.00 a day, and in the first three trials 108 witnesses were examined. There is the cost of the stenographic report, no small item. The salaries of the judge and permanent officers of the court, etc., are of course paid out of the public purse.

The stenographic report of the first three trials contains, approximately 1,290,000 words. Proceedings are pending in the Assizes which will likely add $25,000 to the total cost if they take place following the present trials before Judge Coatsworth.

The history of the trials of the Home Bank directors and officials arising out of the Home Bank crash in August, 1923, shows a strong contrast to the usual speed with which justice is administered in Canada under the British system. Police Court proceedings in the fall of 1923 were brief, due to the action of the Crown in preferring an indictment in the Assizes, but there followed as a result of the latter move the hearings before County Judge Coatsworth, Mr. Justice Middleton, the Appellate Division and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. All this ran the costs of the case up a considerable extent. And the end is not yet in sight.

Duchess of Devonshire ON EMPIRE RECIPROCIITY.

London, November. (C.P.)—Stockton-Tees in Lancashire was won for the conservatives in the recent election, by Captain MacMillan, son-in-law of the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire. In the last parliament Major R. S. Stewart, Liberal, held this seat. The Duchess of Devonshire, during the campaign, opened a bazaar in aid of the funds of the local Conservative Party. From time immemorial, said Her Grace, mothers-in-law were supposed to have been most captious and critical people in their judgment, so that when she told them that this particular son-in-law was a very hardworking and extremely thorough and efficient young man, she hoped that, coming from a mother-in-law, they might believe it to be strictly true. If they did him the honor of choosing him as their candidate, and if they had the good fortune to return him to Parliament, as she sincerely hoped they would, she really did not think they would ever have cause to regret it. He would never let them down, and if they asked any of those who served with him in the war, his brother officers or his men, they would be told he never lacked that personal courage to do what was right, regardless of the cost.

The country most particularly wanted people in the House of Commons who would exercise their judgment and do what, they thought was right without any thought of mere expediency for the moment, continued the Duchess. The opportunity had come to turn out what she said she really believed was a very dangerous government—particularly dangerous because by an appearance of moderation, it had lulled people into rather a false sense of security.

The Duchess said that the 10 years she had spent in Canada had given her the opportunity of judging the enormous importance of these great dominions in relation to the future of this country, with its ever-increasing population, and she felt perfectly convinced that the only home for our people, and the market for our goods especially, was within the Empire. All who stood for conservative principles felt the enormous importance of doing all they could to knit together the whole empire in one great brotherhood, and of doing everything they could to further trade, and reciprocity of all sorts in our dominions.

Snow Used for Refrigeration

In some foreign countries, where natural difficulties have stimulated human ingenuity, it is quite usual for snow to be collected during the coldest part of the winter and buried, well-pressed down in specially dug pits. So intensely cold do these blocks of compressed snow become under this treatment that after a few hours, they freeze into solid lumps of ice, which keep almost indefinitely and can be dug up when required.

Especially in very hot countries these pits are frequently situated on mountains. Macedonia is one of the countries which adopted this method of insuring an adequate supply of ice during the summer. It is a remarkable fact that an ice supply laid down in this way at the beginning of the winter will last right up to the end of a summer consisting of many months of almost unbearable heat.

Wembley, Alberta

The giving of the name of "Wembley" to the latest railway station in Canada, fifteen miles south west of Grand Prairie, Alberta, is another illustration of the homely method the Dominion has often adopted of naming new towns after persons and places in this country. Ontario, for example, has a Windsor, a Woodstock, and a Chatham, as well as a London-on-the-Thames in Middlesex County.

Prime Ministers are commemorated in the same way. There is an Asquith post office in Saskatchewan, a Bonar Law station in Ontario, and a Beaconsfield and a Gladstone in Manitoba. Eitchener, in Waterloo County, Ontario, earlier known as Berlin, was renamed in 1916. Lethbridge, Alberta, bears the name of the first President of the North Western Coal Company, who was once a partner in the firm of W. H. Smith and Son; whilst Revelstoke, British Columbia, commemorates the first Lord Revelstoke, of Baring Brothers, whose taking over of the first bond issue of fifteen million dollars of the Canadian Pacific Railway was an event of importance in the history of the Dominion.

HAVE YOU A VISITOR IN YOUR HOME?

"What a world you do!" asked a friend of mine, "if you went into a friend's house and saw a book on the table that you had loaned her seven or eight months before and really wanted back?"

"Do?" said I, "why I'd tell her I wanted it, of course."
"She'd never in the world forgive me."
"Forgive you for what? I should think it was she who needed to be forgiven."

"Yes, of course it is in one way. But everyone does that sort of thing more or less. What she has to forgive me for is harder because it's for making her feel embarrassed and ashamed. People hate to feel that way and think they're apt to hold it against the person who makes them even if it is perfectly unreasonable."

Excellent psychology, don't you think?
"People shouldn't be that way but lots of them are."

Your Measure Is Wrong.
If you go about trying to measure human nature by the foot rule of logic you will get all your measurements wrong. You've got to use the foot rule of what is.

Just the same I am inclined to think I should ask for the book.
And I hope if I do that to anyone (and I won't guarantee I never will) he or she will ask for his or her book. What a queer laxity there is among otherwise conscientious people on the subject of books. I believe umbrellas are supposed to have a similar effect on the morals of those who borrow them. Personally, I haven't had quite so many experiences along that line.

But books, well, I wonder how many there are among those who read this who haven't a single gap on their shelves waiting for the book that never comes back from the borrower, whose identity they have forgotten.

And also I wonder how many folks there are who have not a single visitor on their shelves which has outstayed its leave of absence from its proper home.

Can You Blame Him?

I have a friend who has made it an ironclad rule that he will not lend books out of a set, not even to his dearest friend. "If I loaned to one the rest would have reason to be offended, but if I do not loan to anyone I don't see how anyone can be offended," he says. When he showed me two beautiful sets mutilated by the absence of a volume from each set, I certainly did not blame him for formulating that rule.

Yet I think it would be a pity not to lend books at all. A book has a right, it seems to me, to be read by more than one person, or one family. It almost seems as if a book would be disappointed if it had no more readers than that. Besides, if I like a book I am eager to know what the people I like think about it and I want to lend it.

But I do have a hankering to have it back sometime within six months or a year, say—if only so that I may lend it again.

A Sporting Way To Borrow.

A friend of mine never borrows a book without saying: "I want you to promise that if you want this before I return it, or if I forget to return it within a few weeks you will call me up and let me know."

Twice I have done that and she has shown her good faith, not only by thanking me, but also willingly accepting the loan of another book. If she had felt the least bit stuffy about it she might have thanked me but she would probably have refused her second book.

That's what I call being a good sport. I wish every one would lend and borrow books in that spirit.

"Eyes" That Can Pierce Walls

MARVELS OF A NEW X-RAY INVENTION.

The discovery of hidden treasure, the detection of contraband, however carefully concealed, and absolutely fool-proof X-ray photography are a few of the developments that will follow on Dr. W. D. Coolidge's invention of a portable X-ray apparatus. It weighs thirty pounds, is no larger than a wireless battery and more compact, and is worked by ordinary electric light current.

Key To Mysteries.
The new X-ray "camera" has an enormous advantage over its cumbersome predecessors, since it can easily be taken anywhere and everywhere. Whereas previously whatever was to be examined had to be taken to the rays, now the rays come to it. The many complicated "gadgets" necessary to their use, too, have been abolished.

The apparatus is enclosed in a neat little case with a lead cone for concentrating rays. The operator has only to connect it with an ordinary electric plug and it is ready for use. "Seeing through a brick wall" with this apparatus is an easy operation. Thousands of secret cupboards, some containing old treasure, are known to be in existence in this country. Efforts to trace their location have been fruitless.

Now, however, the X-rays can clear up the mysteries of centuries. The operator holding the apparatus stands on one side of the wall. On the other side the observer, who holds a fluorescent screen before which a film is placed.

On The Smuggler's Track.
When the rays are projected on the wall they reveal on the film any difference in its density caused by a cavity. If coins or metal objects were hidden in it they would immediately appear on the film.

Another romantic possibility of this wonderful instrument concerns the subterranean of the smuggler. If, for instance, contraband were hidden in a hole of wood, the mysterious "eyes" in the little box would pierce through the hiding place and reveal the presence of something within.

Plumbers who wish to locate hidden pipes in walls, and dentists who desire to make a photograph of the teeth of their clients, will benefit easily.

When Shadows Remain.

PECULIAR FACTS AND FIGURES.

If you allow your shadow to be cast for a short while on one of the great pools where oil is stored in California, and then move away, the shadow will remain. The explanation is simple. The heat of the sun causes gas to rise in minute bubbles in the oil. The shadow cools a part of the surface, decreasing the gas formation, causing a difference in refraction.

The air contains some very rare gases. Neon, a gas used to fill electric bulbs required to give an orange-colored light, is so scarce that St. Paul's Cathedral would only contain enough to fill a nutshell.

A roll of Egyptian papyrus fifteen feet long is being translated by an expert. It deals with surgery and medical treatment as practised three thousand years ago by quack doctors.

Japan is the only country where seaweed is cultivated for human consumption.

The fastest flowing river in the world is the Rutled, in India, which rises 15,200 feet above the sea and falls 12,000 feet in 180 miles.

In many parts of China, the women attribute magical properties for the cure of certain diseases to water drawn after midnight of the seventh day of the seventh month.

Billinggate, London's great fish market, covers 39,000 feet of floor space, while 182,000 tons of fish were handled there last year.

London's meat ration, according to what passes through her markets, is about 2 1/4 lb. per head of the population every week.

In Madagascar, silk is the cheapest form of clothing material.

Two hundred and seventy tons of rails are required to build one mile of railway.

A Luxury in the Home

It is a real pleasure to wash in Ivory Soap. This fine cleansing, soothing toilet soap does all that the most expensive soap can do, yet its costs far less than most toilet soaps. Truly, has it been said that a cake of Ivory is a luxury in the home, for the delightful, natural fragrance of this pleasing soap makes it a real pleasure to use. There is a certain distinctiveness about Ivory Soap that other soaps lack. You will love to wash in Ivory and all the family will like it too. Ask the grocer for Ivory and try a real sensible, and economical toilet soap. oct13,m,1f

How Dynamite Explodes

Big dynamite blasts are more and more frequent items of news, says Charles S. Hurber, writing in Municipal and County Engineering (Indianapolis). Charges are buried deep in the face of a cliff, an electric switch is turned, there is a deafening roar, and thousands of tons of rock come crashing down. What the inquiring observer asks, produces this explosion? What actually happens when dynamite explodes? He continues:

"To answer this question it is necessary to explain briefly what dynamite is. Reduced to its essentials, dynamite is a mixture of nitroglycerin with wood meal and nitrate of soda or nitrate of ammonia, or both. Nitroglycerin, in turn, is composed of several different elements—namely, carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, the molecules of which are grouped in such a way as to form a heavy, oily, yellow liquid. Now these same molecules are capable of arrangement in other groups to form several different substances instead of the one, and the bonds which hold them together in the particular arrangement which makes nitrogen are very weak.

"Consequently, when the electric current sets off the detonator imbedded in the dynamite and this imparts a sharp shock and very high temperature to the nitroglycerin, the bonds between the molecules which compose the nitroglycerin break down. The nitrogen and some of the oxygen remain free—both of them gases—while the other molecules instantly combine to form two compound gases, carbon dioxide and water vapor. The breaking down of the nitroglycerin and rearrangement of its molecules generates a great deal of heat—enough to raise the temperature of the gases to 5,500 degrees F. or thereabouts—and this high temperature causes the other ingredients of the dynamite to decompose into gases, or to burn, with the release of still more heat.

"All of this takes place in a single instant and the highly heated and rapidly expanding gases, which would normally occur a much greater volume than the dynamite, exert a sudden tremendous pressure on the walls of the bore hole. The rock gives way and the escaping gases set the air into violent vibration. To the beholder, the explosion consists of the roaring noise and the rending of the rock, but in reality these are only the audible and visible results of the rearrangement of the molecules of the dynamite when subjected to a shock from the detonator, this conversion of the nitroglycerin and other ingredients of the dynamite into gases constituting the actual explosion."

Stafford's ESSENCE OF GINGER WINE

will be in greater demand this year than ever, judging by our sale last year which beat the three previous years combined, and we would suggest that you place your order either through your wholesale house or from us direct during the next couple of weeks so as we can have same delivered to you the early part of December. Last year lots of orders were received too late and goods could not be sent out in time for the Xmas Trade.

We have STAFFORD'S GINGER WINE ESSENCE packed in cartons of 3 dozen, and we guarantee absolutely no breakage in transit.
